RATES OF POSTAGE.

To and from all parts of the United Kingdom, for prepaid letters:—Not exceeding 4 oz., 1d; 6 oz., 1½d; 8 oz., 2d; 10 oz., 2½d; 12 oz., 3d; 14 oz., 3½d; 16 oz., 4d. A letter exceeding the weight of 16 oz. is liable to a postage of ½d for every additional 2 oz. British newspapers, magazines, and trade journals intended for despatch to Canada by direct Canadian packet may be sent at a reduced postage of 1d per pound. Packets not exceeding two ounces in weight are still transmissible as heretofore for ½d; but in the case of packets exceeding 1 lb. in weight, any portion of a pound is reckoned as a full pound.

Books, halfpenny packets, circulars, invoices, and other packets not exceeding 2 oz. now pass for ½d. Those exceeding 2 oz. will come under the regulations of letter post. Every book packet must be posted either without a cover or in a cover entirely open at the ends. Samples of any kind cannot be sent at the halfpenny rate.

Circulars can be posted in envelopes left unfastened and open for inspection.

POSTAGE ON NEWSPAPERS.

On each Registered Newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet, the postage when prepaid is one halfpenny; but a packet containing two or more Registered Newspapers is not chargeable with a higher postage than would be chargeable on a book packet of the same weight.

The rate of postage on Newspapers to all places abroad, with the exception of Canada, is ½d per 2 oz.

INLAND PARCEL POST.

The truth is the best advocate.

The Loch of Forfar is a fine sheet of water, about one and a half mile long, and of very irregular breadth, running westwards of the burgh boundaries, and overflowing into the small river Dean, which, through the Kerbet, eventually merges in the Tay. It is the property of the Earl of Strathmore, but Forfarians have little cause of complaint in connection with the exercise of his Lordship's vested rights. Fishing and bathing are at the option of the lieges, who find the walk round the loch a constitutional benefit of the first degree. The angler for perch and pike finds excellent sport at certain favourite portions of the water; and in the winter the devotees of curling and skating find its surface all they could desire. Certainly, their loch is not a sea; but Forfarians would feel curiously like "fish out of water" were it to disappear from their horizon.

FORFAR LOCH.

THERE is a tradition which may be said to give to the Loch of Forfar its chief claim to notoriety, viz., its position as the instrument of vengeance on the murderers of Malcolm the Second in 1034. Pinkerton and all the other serious historians may cast what doubt they may on the statements of the earlier writers, these have got such a hold on the popular imagination that nothing can affect its tenacity. "King Malcolm died peacefully and naturally in his bed at Glamis Castle" they assert, and there is much evidence to support their contention; but, despite it, the old story crops up almost with each generation. Have we not seen the room in which the King was butchered at Glamis Castle? The blood-stain on the floor! is it not there to testify to the cruel deed? The sculptured stones at Glamis and Cossans; do they not represent the murderers fleeing from the avenger? The Loch of Forfar! Have not its depths unfolded such evidence as might satisfy the most sceptical that these "limmaris" were drowned therein? How will you account for these spears, and other accoutrements of war-like men, fished from its waters from time to time? Did not Shakespeare himself make capital out of the dark deed, even though a Duncan were slain by a Macbeth through that sort of error covered by the ubiquitous phrase, "poetic-license?" No matter though this loch lay out of the natural course of fugitives who would seek the wilds rather than the royal borough, they must have perished there, for so it hath been written, and so we must believe.

THE HOUSE OF DUN.

THE House of Dun's close association with sixteenth and seventeenth century history especially invests it with an interest to others than the mere student. Here every-thing savours of the name of Erskine —though the last male of the line died so long ago as 1812—and of Reformation doings. The tenets of the Reformed faith were brought hither from the Continent direct, which was the return made to old mother Church by the worthy John — afterwards Superintendent of Angus and Mearns—a man, "marvulously enlightned, in respect of these times"—for her having packed him off upon a penitential pilgrimage abroad. Wherein one may observe the strain of irony that is often apt to mingle in human affairs. Then comes Knox upon the scene, with a choice repertory of those "excellent sermons" of his, by which he mightily moved the Radical of his day to revolt against the old order of things ecclesiastic. In the church of Dun is still preserved the veritable pulpit in which the great Reformer, as they tell you, harangued the stalwarts of Angus and Mearns.

But the lairds of Dun were men of might and fame centuries ere this, for, as the Chronicle bears, it was "specialy throw the grete helpinge off gud Scher Robert of Erskyne" that the Stewarts were brought to the throne. One of the darker pages of the history of Dun is occupied with the names of Robert, Isobel, Anna, and Helen Erskine, who in 1613-14 were convicted of having "ministratane vennemous and poysoneable drink" to their "tua nephewes" to remove them out of the way of Robert's succession to the estate, and the first three of whom were beheaded at the Edinburgh Mercat Croce, and the last-named banished for life. The "Bonnie Ha'-hoose o' Dun," as seen to-day, is not the original, but only a successor of the ancient baronial edifice whose site is still marked by an ivy-covered fragment within the grounds.

Human nature readily falls into the mistake that those who are making the most fuss and noise in the world are doing the most work.

Adversity is not so strong a trial of virtue as prosperity.

An old Scotchwoman, when hobbling alone down the steps of the kirk, was asked by an expectant coachman—"Hashedone?" "Dune?" said she. "He's dune lang syne, but he winna stop."

An Irishman who was to undergo trial was comforted by his priest. "Keep up your heart, Denis, my boy. Take my word for it, you'll get justice." Troth, yer riverence," replied Denis, "and that's just what I'm afraid of!"

Little that is truly noble can be expected from one who is ever poring on his cash-book or balancing his accounts.

We may fondly talk of Scarborough and its rocky cliffs, of Brighton, and Bournemouth, and Ilfracomb, but give to me the Old Red Sandstone noble promontories that run along the cliffs from Arbroath to Montrose, view the celebrated coves and dens in the recesses of the same, the white shining pebbly beaches, and sequestered sands - where can you find their equal for grandeur and sublimity in storm and tempest, in peaceful calm and quiet retreats, and all placed within easy reach by rail, and coach, and steamboat. Forfarshire may well be called the 'Banner County of Scotland,' for over the length, breadth, and depth of its whole dimensions, there is the impress of nobility in its long historic chronicles of the past, coupled with an attractive beauty entirely its own.

SIR DAVID LINDSAY.

ABOUT the middle of the fourteenth century the Glenesk or Edzell estates came into the possession of the Lindsay family through the marriage of Sir Alexander Lindsay with Catherine Stirling, the erstwhile proprietrix. Sir Alexander was succeeded by his youthful son, Sir David, a regular star in the military arena, who married the Princess Elizabeth Stewart, daughter of Robert II., and who was afterwards elevated to the Peerage. While still on the sunny side of thirty he was the champion of the famous tournament at London Bridge, whereby on the Feast of St George he defeated the celebrated Lord Welles before the eyes of King Richard, his consort, and many celebrities of the English Court. It is probable the contest arose over a conversation between Lord Welles and Sir David when at a banquet as to the prowess of their respective countrymen. To the challenge—"Let words have no place; if ye know not the chivalry and valiant deeds of Englishmen, assai! ye me, day and place where ye list, and ye soon shall have experience," Sir David, feeling that the honour of his country was at stake, replied—"I will assail ye." The date was mutually agreed upon, and the Scottish combatant betook himself to his native heath to make preparations for the encounter. Having secured a reliable retinue of knights, the undaunted Lindsay received a safe-conduct passport into England, and it is believed he sailed from Dundee in the ship St Mary of that port. The great London Bridge was heavily decorated with rich hangings of tapestry and cloth of gold, and other preparations for the event were gone about in an equally lavish fashion, Sir David being received with great ceremony by the King. At the blast of the heralds the caparisoned knights rushed at each other with such force that both spears were broken, but although the Southron's weapon was shivered to pieces on the visor and helmet of Lindsay, the Scottish knight sat so firmly that the spectators cried out that he was locked to the saddle. The fearless Northerner, on hearing his honour challenged, rode up to the platform whereon the King and Queen were seated, and, vaulting out of the saddle, bowed to their Majesties, and immediately leapt back again, although heavily loaded with his armour. Again the combatants rushed at each other, and again the spears were smote to shivereens. Stronger ones having been procured, the attack was renewed, and this time the herculean Lindsay knocked Lord Welles out of the saddle with such violence that he fell "flatlings down upon the green." The spectators were wild when they saw their English champion was likely to be worsted in the fray, and they watched with eager interest the second onslaught. The Scottish knight dismounted, and a desperate hand-to-hand combat with drawn daggers ensued. Again the Northern knight proved his superiority. Fastening his dagger between the joints of Lord Welles' armour, Lindsay lifted him off his feet and threw him to the ground with great force. The King cried out—

"Lyndsay, cousin, Lord Lyndsay,
Do finish that thou should do this day."

This entitled the victor to complete the duel to the death, as the law of chivalry allowed, but instead of killing his vanquished antagonist the noble knight raised his foe and presented him to the Queen, who thanked Lord Lindsay and gave liberty to Lord Welles. Sir David then embraced the wounded knight, to indicate that he had not fought through any hatred of his opponent, but for the glory of victory and the honour of his country. The noble and chivalrous knight died at the age of forty-one, and was buried in Grey Friars Church, Dundee.

The man who wrote on his wife's tombstone -

“Tears cannot restore her, Therefore I weep,” must have had a hard time of it at home!

Dickmont Law, in the parish of St Vigeans, is the highest land in the immediate neighbourhood of Arbroath. The 'law,' crowned with a clump of trees, is the summit of an elevated ridge. It is a prominent landmark all round, and at sea. The view from the Law is extensive, embracing the valleys of the Lunan and the Brothock, the distant Grampians, a wide extent of sea, the Fife coast, the Lomonds, and part of the Sidlaws. The crown of the hill is partly artificial, and there are in it traces of ancient building. Dickmont Law was a primitive seat of justice, and belonged to the Abbey of Aberbrothock.

A FAMOUS MONTROSIAN.

ROBERT Brown, perhaps the most celebrated botanist that Britain ever produced, was born in the house at the corner of the High Street and Bridge Street which was recently demolished to make way for the Free Public Library. The date over the windows was 1688, and it was built in the form of an irregular cross. Mr Brown's father was a minister of the Scotch Episcopal Church, and in the non-juring times he preached in the house where his son was born. Mr Brown preached in the lobby, while his congregation, divided into the legal allotments of four, occupied the several rooms. Robert Brown was born on 21st December, 1773, and received his academical education first at Marischal College, Aberdeen, and was latterly at the University of Edinburgh. For a time he held a commission as ensign and surgeon in the "Fife Fencibles," and in 1801, on the recommendation of Sir Joseph Banks, he embarked as naturalist in the expedition, under Captain Flinders, for the survey of the Australian coasts. After the death of Dynander, in 1810, he received the charge of the whole library and splendid collections of Sir Joseph Banks, who bequeathed to him their enjoyment for life. At a later period these were, with his assent, transferred to the British Museum, where for thirty years he held the appointment of Curator of the botanical collection in that great national establishment. Nearly every scientific Society, both at home and abroad, considered itself honoured by the enrollment of his name on the list of its members, and this honour was shared by the Montrose Natural History and Antiquarian Society, on whose records his name stands as an honorary member from its foundation till his death in 1858. He died in London in June 1858, and was interred in Kensal Green Cemetery.

The spot of his birth is in a most historic locality well worthy of the event, being within a stone's cast of the reputed birthplace of the great Marquis of Montrose. The house which Brown's father occupied was built to the order of Patrick Scott, Laird of Rossie and Craig. The initials of its owner, with those of his lady, A. S., Annie Scott, of Benholm, were entwined above the lintels of the windows, together with the date. The Mill Road was then known as the "Flesh Mercate Wynd," and close by resided the Erskynes of Dun, the Oughterlonys of the Guynd, the Stephens of Letham, the Youngs of Aldbar, and many other burghal families of more or less renown.

LOCAL PLACE BY-NAMES.

RAMES, sometimes "ill-names," have been given to places. "Tay Watter Willie" are Dundee folks, and their Arbroath neighbours are called "Reed Lichties." By the latter hangs a tale, for Dundee at one time having got stained red glass in its harbour light, Arbroath felt itself distinctly being left behind, but an expedition to the "reed" lamp convinced them that all that theirs required was a coat of "reed" paint. They tried it accordingly, with the disastrous effect of completely "dousin' the gliin," and gaining for themselves the sobriquet of "Reed Lichtes." "The Creeshie Wyvers o' Brechin" points back to the day when weaving was a common industry, and these worthies looked with great distrust on the "Gable-enders," so called because the gables of many of the houses faced the road) of Montrose, a feeling which was returned with interest. "Tack in yer sarks, guidwives, for here comes the Brechiners," was a common saying anent the "Creeshie Wyvers"; and a Montrose man once being asked if he thought there were no honest men in Brechin, cautiously replied, "Weel, sir, I'll no' be sayin' that there's nae honest men in Brechin; but I will say this, sir, that it's michty far atween their doors."

Denis grumbled that his wife was very ill to please. "Whin I married her," he said, "she hadn't a rag on her back, and now she's covered with them."

It is generally accepted that honest lawyers are well nigh unknown quantities, but, if we are to accredit the following epitaph on the grave of Strange, the eminent barrister—there was once such a being—although the epitaphist admits the uniqueness of the fact:—

"Here lies an honest lawyer, That's Strange."

Auchmull Castle, in Glencsk, was famous as a refuge of young Lindsay's after his murder of Lord Spynie at the Saltron of Edinburgh in 1607. The stones of the castle were taken by a sapient farmer of the eighteenth century and used in the building of farm adjuncts! Only the site now remains for the pilgrim to gaze upon.

BATTLE OF THE GRAMPAINS.

IN “the Battle of the Grampians,” fought between Agricola, as commander of the Roman Army, and Calgacus, the general of the Caledonian forces, the base of the Caledonian army was the great prehistoric fort on the hill of Catterthun, near Brechin, the most perfect example of the kind in Britain. Its natural position was so strong that it could not have been carried by assault by any force that could have been brought against it. It will therefore be seen that with such a base on the east, and the Pass of Killiecrankie on the west, the Caledonians, strong in their position, could calmly await the advance of the Roman armies. Their line was completely hid from observation by the lower range of the Grampian Hills. I am convinced, from a careful study of the locality, that Agricola proceeded northward through the Pass of Glenfarg, and along by the Bridge of Earn, crossing the west shoulder of Moncrieff Hill, and debouching upon the South Inch of Perth. There the Roman soldiers, first sighting the river, exclaimed Ecce Tiber! Ecce Campus Martius! as they beheld the noble river Tay and the beautiful plain through which it flows. No doubt the eastward movement of Calgacus soon became known to Agricola, who would advance cautiously until he came to Battledykes, and there, protected by the South Esk river, he made a stand and threw up intrenchments. The position at that place was exactly such as the Romans always chose to fortify before risking a pitched battle. He knew that the Caledonians could not long remain inactive on Catterthun awaiting attack, but must descend into the plain, where he was prepared to accept battle. The armies were thus within striking distance, and a conflict could not be long delayed. The positions occupied by both generals previous to the battle were such as might have been expected from so skilful commanders. Tacitus says that the Caledonians commenced the attack by advancing upon the Roman army, which expected such a movement, and had taken every precaution to meet it. The description given by the Roman historian of the different incidents in the details of the battle exactly correspond with what would arise from the configuration of the country; and the name of Battledykes, by which the Roman camp near the South Esk river has always been known, gives colour to the supposition that at that place was fought the famous battle of the Grampians, betwixt the Roman and the Caledonian forces—there, and not westward in Perthshire, or eastward in the Mearns, or still further north. The prehistoric fort on the hill of Catterthun, and the Roman camp at Battledykes, are standing witnesses to this day of the skilful strategy that preceded the wager of battle.

LOGIE-PERT SEVENTY YEARS AGO.

A LOGIE-PERTIAN gave the following succinctly-written sketch of the state of matters that prevailed in that parish 70 years ago:—“Working at Logie Bleachfield; hours from six to seven; a long day and little wages—9s and 10s a week; half holidays unknown. Principal food for working people, meal and potatoes. When milk was scarce treacle ale to our porridge. Newspapers dear and scarce. Could not see to read with the oily cruse, so went to bed early and got up for next day’s work. Went to church on Sundays—very long sermons, very plain church, no paint, nothing in the shape of ornamentation; floor, mother earth. The Chartist agitation going on. The hecklers at Logie Works were disciples of Feargus O’Connor, anxious for the franchise and the repeal of the Corn Laws. Meal, 32s a boll; 4 lb. loaf, 9d; sugar, 8d; beef, 3d and 4d a pound, but no money to buy with. Whisky, 3d and 4d a gill; not much demand at that price—a dram about Yule.”

Societies Act and Trades Unions.

An old copper button, about the size of a threepenny piece, was dug up in a garden some years ago. Around the face of it are the words, "Brechine Volunteers," while in the centre is a spread thistle, surmounted by a crown. In 1803 "The Brechin Volunteers" which afterwards became the "Local Militia," were embodied; while in July, 1795, a corps was formed in the Ancient City for suppressing riots, and for "supporting the constitution of the country."

A country bridegroom, when the bride hesitated to pronounce the word "obey," remarked to the officiating clergyman, "Go on, measter—it don't matter; I can make her!"

Love is the highest multiple of the heart.

A BRECHIN CHARACTER.

JAMIE Williamson, who died in 1897, might be said to be the last of the, at one time, numerous class of "naterals" who were wont to roam at will about Brechin, showing, while crazy and half-witted, not a little deep cunning, and cuteness of mind. Jamie was always at home in the matter of dates, and he was wont to say that he was born in "the year twenty-eight—two year after twenty-sax, the short corn year." In his earlier years he lived with his father at the gatehouse of Rosehill, then the residence of the Rev. Dr Foote, who was always very kind to the lonely old man and his son. Jamie helped his father in the garden, and did "orra trockes o' errants," as he said, till the death of his father, when he removed to the city, and rented a room in various parts for many years. He was far from lazy, and was always glad to be fully employed, and might have been seen daily trundling his carefully-kept barrow loaded with gas cinders or sand. An early riser, he several times a week would be seen entering the city before eight o'clock in the morning with a load of sawmill "bauks," which he had wheeled from Blaikiemill, a distance of over two miles, and which he would deliver to his customers for the low charge of fourpence, including "cartage." His journeys frequently took him many hours, for he had numerous rests, and a crack with almost everyone he met, especially the factory lasses, with whom he was a favourite. He would shake their hands with great glee, give them a pinch of snuff, and a hearty "Foe are ye the day, ma bonnie doo?" But should anyone propose marriage with him, he at once made off, with a "Na, na, this is a guid wife," pointing to his gaily-painted barrow, with its huge sign-board. It was when on his journeys with the barrow that the boys teased him most, which at times made him say words he regretted often afterwards. "Thae laddies wad provoke a saunt," he would say.

The "imperant, ill-brocht-up brats o' laddies" were a source of great vexation to Jamie. He truly led a hard life at their hands. However, in his own peculiar way, he reasoned with them, giving them sound advice, mingled with not a little original philosophy and the use of quaint words. "Ye young rascals," he would say, "foe wad ye like to be ca'd afore yer Makker th' night after moubaudin' wirds like thae." Jamie frequently called on those who would listen to his complaint about the police not locking up "Sautin's goats," as he designated the boys who gave him so much annoyance by crying names after him.

LOCAL HISTORICAL EVENTS.

THE district of Angus and Mearns is intimately associated with many important and stirring events in the history of Scotland. From the twelfth to the sixteenth century Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, and Brechin were centres of great influence, politically and ecclesiastically, and figure prominently in the annals of the nation. It was from Montrose that Sir James Douglas sailed on his fatal expedition to the Holy Land with the precious relic—the heart of the Bruce—in performance of his sacred vow to the king. Then there were the splendid services rendered to the nation by Erskine of Dun, who sent the English fleet about their business when they attempted to land at the mouth of the South Esk. Montrose has also the honour of being amongst the first in the country to embrace Reformation principles, largely through the teaching of Erskine of Dun and others associated with him; while from the same locality there emerged one of the grandest and most heroic characters to be found in Scottish ecclesiastical history, Andrew Melville, to whom, along with Carstares, we owe in large measure the final triumph of Presbytery.

Continual sailing on a smooth sea never yet made a skilful mariner ; it is a storm that awakens power.

Where friends meet hearts warm.

Sir John Gladstone purchased the estate of Fasque from the late Sir Alexander Ramsay, Bart., of Balmain, in 1829, and took possession of it in the following year. William, who was a great favourite of his father, used to spend many of his holidays at Fasque, and became much liked by the tenantry on the estate. The servants at Fasque used to say that Mr William when resident there was the soul of the company. He used to visit Montrose along with his father occasionally. In those days the public fish market was held in George Street, and when Sir John was seen making his way to it there was at once a great rise in the price of fish, and much amusement was afforded to himself and any buyers who happened to be present at his haggling with the Meggie Mucklebuckets to get a reduction.

HOSPITALFIELD.

HOSPITALFIELD, situated about half a mile west from the outskirts of Arbroath, was an early possession of the Abbey of Aberbrothock. It has generally been regarded as having been not a hospice, or guest-house, but an infirmary, possibly a place for the reception of lepers, at a time when that disease and the "pest" were not uncommon in Scotland. Hospitalfield was parted with by the Monastery long before its own legal dissolution. It was one of the possessions of Marion Ogilvy (Lady Melgund), the morganatic wife of Cardinal Beaton, and it descended to one of her sons. The laird of Hospitalfield towards the end of the sixteenth century was Alexander Beaton. Hospitalfield, with Kirkton of St Vigean, was bought by the Rev. James Fraser, a cadet of the family of Philorth, who was minister of Arbroath from 1653 to 1669, and died in 1689. The last male representative of his family was Major Fraser. A kindred spirit, William, Lord Panmure, was a visitor at Hospitalfield, and the house is reputed to have been the scene of some high jinks in those times of somewhat boundless conviviality. A more distinguished guest than Lord Panmure, Sir Walter Scott, was a visitor to Hospitalfield in Major Fraser's time. There are other claimants, but the house is generally regarded as the original of 'Monkbarns.' The estate of Hospitalfield descended to Major Fraser's daughter, who married the late Patrick Allan, Arbroath, and assumed his wife's name. Mr Allan-Fraser largely rebuilt and embellished the house of Hospitalfield. The house contains many artistic and antiquarian and some literary treasures. In the picture galleries there are works by some of the most eminent of the modern school of artists, while some of his own work in portraiture adorns the walls. Mr Allan-Fraser, who survived his wife about twenty years, died in 1890. He bequeathed his estates in Scotland, with the house of Hospitalfield, for a school or college of artists, the college to be at Hospitalfield.

ANCIENT DISTRICT FEUDS.

THE Farquharsons of Brochdarg, and the M'Comies of Forfar, foes of a long standing, found a fresh cause of quarrel in a disposition of property made by the Earl of Airlie. M'Comie was successful in a consequent action raised in 1673 before the Sheriff at Forfar; but Farquharson resisted the "letters of caption," and swore that "no messenger should take him alive." Learning that their enemy lay with his retainers in hiding near Forfar, the M'Comies determined to aid the burgh messenger in effecting his capture. The rival clansmen met near the Burgh Muir, but again Farquharson refused to become a prisoner. He was seized by one of the gigantic M'Comies, a henchman fired and disabled his chief's captor, the same shot killed his brother, and soon all was conflict. In the fight Robert Farquharson of Brochdarg and his brother John were killed, two members of the famous M'Comie family sharing their fate. The elder M'Comie was not present at this encounter, but he pursued a subsequent course of revenge, which has no rival in our local lore. Even in his old age the chieftain was known to declare "he wished he were but twenty years of age again" so that he might "make the Farquharsons thinner, and have a life for ilka finger and toe of his twa dead sons!" For long he kept the reiving caterans of the Grampian glens in check, and these marauders held high jubilation when the stalwart chieftain died. "What news?" runs the local story dealing with this event, "What news?" "News and good news! Blessed be the Virgin Mary! The great M'Comie at the head of the Lowlands is dead, for as big and as strong as he was!"

A good wife is worth gold.

recruit the Kirk Session at Forfar. Eventually four were nominated, and elected on the strength of the left-handed compliment that they "were the finest that could be found in town!"

Roman Catholicism has never secured a footing or a following in Forfar. From time to time missions and services have been held, but these have had no result worth mentioning. The Irish element which has so dominated certain quarters of Dundee and Arbroath has not spread inland and thus the burgh and district is churchless so far as this persuasion is concerned.

Every man is ready to give in a long catalogue of those virtues and good qualities he expects to find in the person of a friend; but very few of us are careful to cultivate them in ourselves.

In 1724 great difficulty was experienced in finding suitable persons to

CROSSING THE BAR.

WEVER a winter passes in Montrose but that the lifeboats are called out several times, and a large number of these services is for the Ferryden fishing boats. When one has had a sharp run down to the lifeboat house, and finds that the rockets are fired for fishing boats in danger, he is apt to say "Oh, only fishing boats; I thought it might have been something." "Only fishing boats," forsooth! Go to the other side of the water, and there you would reconsider your words. The women and children gather along the braes in great distress, anxiously watching the progress of the boats, and great is the joy when they are seen safely across the bar into the smoother water of the river. At the time of one of these sudden storms a woman more anxious even than the rest, had gone along the beach at the foot of the braes, straining her eyes to catch sight of her husband's boat. At last she caught sight of it just as it reached the bar, and as the sea had by this time become very heavy, the poor woman let her feelings get the upper hand of her, and she cried out at the top of her voice, "Oh may the Lord rain down stanes fae Heaven and kill me if my man's drowned crossing the bar the day." A wag at the top of the braes hearing this, and taking advantage of the situation, quickly commenced a sharp fusilade of small stones. "Mercy keep me," cried the astonished woman, her attention for the moment averted from the boat, "ye canna say muckle here but fat its tane in earnest."

WESLEY IN BRECHIN.

TOWARDS the close of the seventeenth century, Brechin was visited by the father of Wesleyan Methodists, John Wesley, whose stirring addresses had the effect of gathering around him a number of adherents. The principles, however, not being favourably regarded by the Scotch Presbyterians, the preacher and the little band was exposed to considerable persecution. A story is related of their meeting in what was then designated "the auld Towbooth," or common jail, situated where the police office till recently existed. The cells, it is curious to note, were in the second flat, and were reached by an outside stone stair, at the top of which was a massive, grim-looking, iron-studded door. Here Wesley is said to have been preaching when a band of young scapegraces, encouraged by older scoffers, fastened the door from the outside with a stick and strong rope. Having collected a heap of boulders by way of ammunition, they commenced an assault, which had anything but a pleasing effect on the assembly within the jail. So fierce, it is said, was the combat that the sparks of fire were seen flying from the big nail heads.

It is truth that makes a man angry.

A letter dated 13th April, 1833, sent from Montrose to Stonehaven, was marked in the first instance 1s for postage. But the letter was overweight, and that cost another 1s, so that a letter between Montrose and Stonehaven actually cost 2s. Now a letter of the same weight could go 10,000 miles for 1d.

For the rocky canyon of the North Esk, extending to about three miles above Edzell, there is only one word suitable—magnificent. What a worker in stone that river is! How beautifully scooped and curved and carved are the sandstone and conglomerate rocks. The river is so solid, the rock so neatly and artistically fitted to its form, that in the onlooker's eyes the elemental qualities of each are exchanged. The stone is the plastic substance, the water the inflexible power moulding the rocks to its own shape as if they were composed of soft clay. Within the three-mile stretch is contained nearly every feature of rocky river scenery ever depicted by the artist. Dead pool, glassy rapid, foaming waterfall succeed each other repeatedly.

A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying in other words that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday.

Nothing is certain but death and taxes.

The Abbey of Aberbrothock presents a contrast between present ruin and former greatness. Thus says a poet :—

Their mony scenes for poet's themes,
 The Abbey O' surroon',
 An' plenteous store o' legend lore
 Within St Tammas' toon.

It is said that the legal lights of old Forfar were convivial to a degree, and there is something in this reputation of theirs if all stories be true. Well: at a time when several schemes for draining the loch were being discussed, a local wit, who was not guiltless of the failing which he made the butt of his sarcasm, proposed that a hogshead or two of whisky should be emptied into the loch, and added, "Juist you set the Farfar wreaters at it syne, and they'll sune drink it dry!"

THE SANDY BRAES.

ABOUT seventy years ago the sand-banks at the Foreshore of Montrose were not nearly so broad as they are now, so when the high tides threatened to do damage to the town the Bailies passed a law prohibiting all and sundry from removing sand from the braes, under pains and penalties. Then the housewives of the town were in the habit of using a good deal of sand by sprinkling it over their floors after washing them. After sending round Willie Reid and Geordie Mitchell, the then Town Officers, with the town's drum, warning the inhabitants against the removal of sand, a watch was put on to see that no one transgressed the law. At first Willie and Geordie were put on as watchmen against the law-breakers. After that an old man was appointed watchman, who was of very little use, and on whom the young men of the town were wont to play many a prank. A practical joke was played on him by two young fellows who worked at Aberdein & Gordon's heckle machines. They had got hold of two bags about the size of those generally used for carrying sand, and filling them with mill dust, they managed to smuggle them down to the braes when the old man's back was turned; when they saw him coming their way, they came out of one of the gulleys walking slowly with the supposed heavy loads of sand on their backs. The old man on seeing them cried to them to stop, but they "heard him as they heard him not" and walked on. He made a race to catch them, but when he was just in the act of putting his hands on them, they made a bolt and ran with him at their heels till they were at the end of the road leading to Union Street, when they flung their bags away. It was a study to see the look on the poor old fellow's face when he discovered the contents of the bags. It was a fine ploy for the young men and women of those days to go, especially in the dark nights, down to the braes for sand. What made it all the more delightful was the spice of adventure in it.

FORFAR AND JACOBITISM.

THE activity of the Lords and Lairds of Angus, in the Rebellions of 1715 and 1745, is a matter of history. Forfar was a stronghold of Jacobitism. The powerful Maules, Carnegies, Lindsays, Lyons, and Ogilvies, and local lairds like Hunter of Burnside and Fletcher of Balinshoe, "declared for Scotland's King and law," and used every means to press the burghers of the county town to "fecht for Royal Charlie." Their efforts needed not to be heroic, for the sutors and tailors danced even before their war-pipes sounded. To tuck of drum and skirl of bagpipes, "James Ramsay, Taylor," scoured the highways and bye-ways of Forfar, and compelled his hesitating fellows to enlist under the banner of the young Pretender. That he succeeded cannot, on the testimony of authentic documents, be doubted. Soon after the clangour of insurrection had been hushed, the Government ordered its Supervisors of Excise in all the affected districts to submit a list of those who had erstwhile proved rebellious. The space occupied therein by Forfar and district is as distinctly respectable as the matter is interesting. Lord Ogilvie of Airlie was the military head of the local contingent, which included men in all ranks of life, and from every parish in the Presbytery. Forfar alone added two dozen stalwarts, a merchant ensign, a late Bailie of the burgh, and a Jacobite Episcopalian minister figuring among the foes of the "German Lairdie."

One's own health is gold's worth.

Red hair, according to Lavater, characterises a man singularly good or singularly bad; and he adds, "a striking contrast between the colour of the hair and the colour of the eyebrows inspires me with distrust."

The Den of St Vigeans has always been a favourite pleasure resort, and has supplied themes to the poets. Alexander Balfour, in his poem on "Contemplation," sings:—

Where the streamlet loves to glide,
Towering high in village pride,
On the green romantic height,
St Vigean's fane allured the sight ;
While above the hamlet nigh
Blue smoke, curling, sought the sky.

It was in the Den of St Vigeans and at Cairnie that women and other non-combatants found shelter during what turned out to be the very ineffective bombardment of Arbroath by the French privateer William Fall on 23rd and 24th May, 1781.

REDCASTLE,

STANDING on a mount at the mouth of the Lunan in Lunan Bay, is probably the oldest ruined house in Angus. The origin of this castle is not known with certainty. It is known that for many a year Norse invaders frequented Lunan Bay, the shores of which presented a good landing place for their war galleys, and it has often been assumed that Redcastle was built as a protection of the land. King William the Lion has been named as the builder, and he is said by John Ochterlony, in his "Account of the Shire of Forfar" in 1685, to have dwelt there when he built his Abbey at Arbroath. But this can scarcely have been, for the Abbey was not founded till 1178, and the earliest authentic fact we have about Redcastle is that thirteen years before the founding of the Abbey the manor of Redcastle, with the lands of Inverkeilor, was given by King William to his chamberlain, Walter de Berkeley. The learned antiquary Chalmers, in his 'Caledonia,' repeats a statement, for which he gives no authority, that the chamberlain was really the builder of the castle. Through the marriage of the daughter of Walter de Berkeley, Redcastle passed to Ingleram of Baliol, an ancestor of John Baliol, whose short-lived sovereignty came to such an inglorious end in the churchyard of Stracathro. Afterwards, Campbells had possession of Redcastle, and on the resignation of Sir Andrew Campbell in 1366-7, the barony was acquired by Sir Robert Stewart of Innermeith, a family who continued in possession down to the seventeenth century.

The grim ruin, a prominent object both by land and sea, had doubtless often been the scene of violence, and as certainly of lawlessness and oppression. In such names of places in the immediate vicinity of the castle as 'Courthill,' 'Gallowshill,' and 'Witchpools,' there is an indication of the extent of feudal power when Redcastle was an inhabited house. The last notable act of violence, was a family brawl that broke out in 1579, and continued more or less till 1587. The Lady of Innermeith, a widow and no longer young, had married as her second husband the youthful son of Patrick Lord Gray. Discovering that she had made a mistake, she raised an action of divorce against him. Meanwhile he besieged her in her house of Redcastle, having the assistance of his father, who was Sheriff of Forfar, as also that of the Earl of Crawford, James Lord Ogilvy, and other persons of distinction. Gray is represented as having burned part of the house and behaved with great brutality. He was outlawed, but afterwards succeeded in making his peace with the law. Redcastle ceased to exist as a strong place after its siege in 1579 and 1581, but it is said, somewhat doubtfully, to have been roofed so recently as 1770. Its last inhabitant was the Rev. James Rait, the Episcopalian minister of Inverkeilor, who was deprived at the Revolution, and on quitting the manse took up his abode in Redcastle. About the middle of the seventeenth century the barony of Redcastle was the property of Ruthven of Gardyne, and it subsequently belonged to the Earls of Northesk. In 1724 it was purchased for the Panmure estate, of which it still forms a part. The mount on which the weather-worn ruin of Redcastle stands is now a resort of picnic parties—a sharp contrast with the ancient history of the castle. It was on this hill also that, more than a century and a half ago, William Imrie, the son of an Aberdeenshire farmer, rested while on his journey southward to seek fortune. Weary and footsore, he fell asleep, and, perhaps having been impressed by the fair prospect before him, dreamed that he was the laird of Lunan. And fortune so favoured him that after many years his dream was realised.

If all the people knew what they were talking about, there wouldn't be nearly so much said as there is now.

From the "Records of the Presbytery of Brechin" we learn that the trial of witches was common in this part of the country about the middle of the 17th century. We hence read as follows:—Dec. 13, 1649—No meeting this day be reason that the Moderator and many of the brethren wer in the burgh of Montrose, at the Committee appointed be the Provinciall assembly anent the witches." "Dec. 21, 1649—This day no doctrin because the Committee appointed be the Provinciall assembly anent the witches wer sitting before noon."

PENNY WEDDINGS.

SIXTY years ago rural dwellers considered a well-attended penny wedding as the fundamental basis of a prosperous married career. At these gatherings all visitors were welcome, provided they paid their way. Usually the charge was one shilling for each person, and this money went into the pockets of the couple about to set up house. The ceremony was usually performed about the hour of 7 p.m. The payment of the entry fees entitled the guest to all the privileges of the meeting, even including the kissing of the bride after the minister had pronounced her the lawful wedded wife of the gentleman in funereal-like coat and unkempt whiskers.

The baker who had an eye to future business would send in a liberal supply of plain and fancy bread, much more, of course, than he would otherwise have done, but his rival in the trade had already sent his boy with a shortie and a bun, and he could not afford to be outdone in the competition. The neighbouring meal miller bent under a half sack of oatmeal, and the doctor's gig would halt, and his lady enter the bride's door to leave a bedcover she had fashioned with her own hands. Farmers who had potatoes to sell in the fall of the year ordered their carts to leave a bag of their "sma' Americans" with Janet, and the message that they hoped "Jeck Lindsay, when he got merried, wid stap the dreels afore the roup day." The village shoemaker sent a pair of slippers, with a pencil note inside giving his name, trade, and lowest prices both for men's and women's boots and shoes. Other tradesmen in the locality acted in a similar fashion.

The marriage feast generally cost nothing to the contracting parties, and all money drawn as entrance fees, &c., went directly into the coffers of the bride and bridegroom. Besides this shilling of entrance fee, it was customary to have a liquor bar improvised in some convenient house or barn, where the national beverage and other drinks could be had. The liquor was sold, and the profit arising therefrom also went to the young couple. Perhaps at the nuptial banquet a round of whisky was served out gratis, but this was more the exception than the rule. The bridegroom himself often presided at the bar, and it was no uncommon sight to find the bride with tucked up sleeves washing the tumblers behind the temporary counter. The more noise and revelry the more liquor consumed, with greater financial benefit to bride and bridegroom. Song followed dance, and dance followed song. Feats of strength, tricks and card playing, speeches and fiddle and bagpipe music all ended in another glass of mountain dew. When the grey morning crept in at the small windows of the biggin' the wedded couple would have a "pigfu' o' siller" to start them on that crooked lane that leads to old age and dotage.

There is nothing keeps longer than a middling fortune, and nothing melts away sooner than a great one. Poverty treads upon the heels of great and unexpected riches.

The lower North Water Bridge is a notable structure. On approaching it from the south one's attention is arrested as he finds himself apostrophised in the first sentence of the inscription on a large slab which rises high above the parapet — "Traveller, pass safe and free across this bridge." This memorial stone gives a concise and interesting account of the bridge-building enterprise, which owed its inception to Thomas Christie, Provost of Montrose. The bridge occupied five years in building, being completed on 18th October, 1775, at a cost of £6500, which was defrayed by public subscription, including £800 given by the King out of the annexed estates.

The truth is the best advocate.

You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose most intimate friends are all good, and whose enemies are decidedly bad.

The scenes in the land of the "lichtsome Lindsays" are redolent of the fame of an ancient name, and deeply tinged with traditionary and historic interest. In their presence the mind well ordered to a love of the "good old times" will be fain to have nothing brought within its purview but what savours of prancing steeds and lordly pageants and warring clansfolks, or even of Covenanter-baiting and witch-burnings and darksome dealings with the father of evil.

DISTRICT HISTORIC GROUND.

GOING towards Edzell, and just beyond Trinity, the traveller will note the Haer Cairn, which marks the spot where the rebel Earl Beardie was overcome by the Royalist Huntly in 1452. How this defeat maddened Crawford, a man of wild passions at the best, will be remembered from his declaration of readiness to 'hang seven years in hell by the breers o' the ee' to have had it otherwise, and by the ferocity with which he subsequently ravaged and plundered the possessions of his offending neighbours of Kinnaird, Balnamoon, and others.

The outlook from this celebrated battle-site upon the surrounding country is both extensive and full of charm. To the north-west appear the tops of the Brown and White Catterthuns — favourite sporting ground of the antiquarian fancy—forming, as it were, but stepping stones to the multitudinous heights beyond as they rise to the two thousand feet altitudes of the Wirrens and Bulg, and away over Glenesk towards the dominating summit of Mount Battock, from which the Grampians roll from east to west in lavish grandeur.

All around through the lands of Dun, Pert, Straeathro, Breehin, and Farnell the scene is one of smiling prosperity—mansion and hamlet and farmhouse alternating with field and woodland and river. With his interests bound up more or less in all these lands one need marvel little at the absolute submission made to the "Tiger Earl" to save them—a submission accompanied, as we are told, with such sighing and sobbing that there "raise sic ruth and pity amang the company that nane almaist could contain themselves from tears."

SHYING AT THE FORD.

SIR David Lindsay of Edzell had a grand-daughter, Magdalene Carnegie, youngest of the six daughters of the first Earl of Southesk, all of whom became the wives of peers. "Mistress Magdalene's beauty had glamour'd the Master of Ogilvy, afterwards the second Earl of Airlie; and there is a traditional account to the effect that, on his way to Kinnaird Castle to make her an offer of marriage, his horse refused to take a ford, and so impressed was he with this, as an omen of evil, that he abandoned his suit and threw a damsel into lamentations. But soon her lamentations were soothed by the young Earl of Montrose—afterwards the great Marquis—in his seventeenth year making her his bride.

There are indications that she did not continue in full sympathy with her husband in his political aspirations, and the Master of Ogilvy was perhaps saved from an uncongenial helpmeet by his horse refusing the ford. But we doubt the truth of the tradition, as the Master was not one likely to be turned from his purpose so easily. There must have been some other cause than the ostensible one. When Montrose, then on the side of the Covenanters, summoned the Castle of Airlie and had a spirited answer from Lord Ogilvy, would we be far out in surmising that some stray thoughts of "Mistress Magdalene," and their respective relations towards her, flitted across the minds of both the summoner and the summoned? And in future years, when Montrose and Ogilvy were fast friends—their friendship tested in battle and danger—fighting in the cause of the King, visions of the "Mistress Magdalene" of the past must sometimes have momentarily stood between them. That horse shying at the ford! How he changed the fortunes of two men!

An old fox doesn't go twice into the trap.

The most manifest sign of wisdom is continued cheerfulness: her estate is like that of things in the regions above the moon, always clear and serene.

Love cannot exist in the heart of a woman unless modesty is its companion, nor in that of man unless honour is its associate.

The Auchmithie lassies appear to have a powerful attraction for the poets :—

Auchmithie braes are bonnie,
Beside th' murmurin' sea ;
There I meet wi' Nellie Swankie,
Th' lass aye dear to me ;
Th' lass aye dear to me,
Oh, nae tongue nor pen can tell,
Hoo I lo'e this fisher lassie, Auchmithie's winsom Nell.

REMINISCENCES OF MONTROSE.

THE vane on Montrose Steeple (wrote one in a reminiscient mood), which has withstood the storms of more than seventy years, if it could but speak, could tell an interesting story of scenes of joy and sorrow that it had witnessed during the many years it had stood on that lofty pinnacle. There were the grand Masonic processions and large gatherings of the public at the laying of the foundation-stones of the Infirmary, Dorward's House of Refuge, and the Wet Dock: the excited meetings of the public in connection with the Corn Law Bill: the carrying through the streets and burning the effigy of Sir Robert Peel, who at first opposed the passing of the Bill, then the reaction when that statesman changed his opinion, and went over to the other side, and did so much in helping to carry the Bill through Parliament. To make amends, the Montrosians put up that fine monument to his memory in the High Street.

It could tell of a sad incident that took place over sixty years ago, when the sloop John Elizabeth was wrecked on the Annat and all hands perished. It was a dark, stormy night; the vessel had got up the river as far as the Lower Lighthouse, but, by wind and tide, was driven down again, and in spite of what Captain Erskine and his crew could do was driven on the Annat. The lifeboat crew had assembled, but had quarrelled amongst themselves about supremacy, forgetting that the waves were hurling the vessel and crew to destruction. By this time a number of people had assembled on the Sands, and they could hear the cries of the drowning seamen, and could shout to them in reply, so near were they to the shore; the last cry that was heard being from a seaman named Largo, who, when shouted to that the lifeboat was coming, cried back in a despairing tone "It's lang, lang i' coming." To them it never came, for at that moment a wave bigger than its fellows swept the whole crew into a watery grave.

It could tell of another mournful scene. It was a stormy day of wind and rain, when a shabby-looking hearse, drawn by a miserable-looking horse, passed along the High Street on its way to the Cemetery, the sole mourners being two blind men, arm in arm, struggling against the wind and rain. They were Willie Gunn and Blind Hughie, whom old Montrosians will remember as a well-known street singer, and the corpse in the hearse was his wife.

A striking contrast to this funeral was that of the well-known Dr Paterson, who had laboured in the town in season and out of season for full sixty long years, and whose name and praise were on every lip, he and his life work being eulogised and commented on in every newspaper in Scotland. His funeral was the largest ever seen in Montrose, his remains being followed to the grave by clergymen and gentlemen of every denomination.

The vane could also speak of the well-known figures of the ministers and public men of some fifty or sixty years ago—the tall, striking figure of the learned Rev. Dr Smith as he walked along the Mall, books in hand; the smiling face of Dr Paterson, with umbrella under his arm, speaking, maybe, to some old lady; the bowed form of the Episcopal minister Peter Cushnie; or the stalwart figure of Mr Nixon; the venerable Andrew Wilson, of the Antiburgher Kirk (now St Luke's), who was passing rich on £70 a year, and who, when not able to stand and preach, did so sitting; the eloquent Henry Hyslop, who, rather than pay the Annuity Tax, allowed his furniture to be sold at the Market Cross; and the then well-known figure of Dr Brewster, of Craig, who did so much for the fishermen of Ferryden. It could speak, too, of many others well remembered who have long ago disappeared off the stage of life.

Previous to 1817 the old Council elected the new; but from 1817 to 1833 the merchant burgesses elected the major part of the Council, the Guildry Incorporation having the right to elect a certain proportion, and the Trades' Incorporation the same. In 1833 the right to elect the whole Council was invested in those paying £10 of yearly rent, and in 1869 the right was extended to all who were rated for poor's assessment within the burgh, who pay the same previous to the 30th of June in each year. Previous to 1833 the Provostship was a biennial appointment; since then the term of office has been three years, subject to death or resignation.

In the Council Chamber there are hung portraits of Provosts Charles Barelay, James Burnes, George Paton, William Jamieson, John Reid, and George Scott; also of Joseph Hume, M.P. for Montrose Burghs from 1818 to 1830, and again from 1842 till his death in 1855; Sir James Duke, Bart., a native of Montrose, who was High Sheriff, and afterwards Lord Mayor of London; John Ewen, a native of Montrose, a successful merchant in Aberdeen, and author of the "Boatie Rows," who left the bulk of his fortune, amounting to about £15,000, to found an hospital in Montrose, but the will, being challenged by his daughter, was found by the House of Lords to have been made in error, and it consequently was cancelled; David White, founder of White's School (now demolished), which was situated in White's Place and several charities; Rev. Joseph Paterson, D.D., for sixty years minister of the Second Charge in Montrose ; and Adam Burnes, a former Town Clerk of the burgh.

SITTING MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT.

For the Montrose District of Burghs (which includes Montrose, Arbroath, Forfar, Brechin, and Bervie)—ROBERT VERNON HARCOURT. Address:—

Malwood, Lyndhurst, Hampshire. He is the second son of the late Sir William Harcourt, who was married to a daughter of Mr J. L. Motely, the American historian, author of the Dutch Republic. Mr Harcourt was born on May 7, 1878. He was educated at Eton and Trinity College, Cambridge, where he secured honours in the history tripos. For five years he was in the diplomatic establishment of the Foreign Office, which he left, and joined the "Tribune" newspaper on its formation as Parliamentary and political correspondent. Mr Harcourt contested a seat in the progressive interest at the London County Council election in March, 1907, when he received the smallest adverse majority, viz., 23. While contesting that seat he lived for six months in the East End of London studying the conditions of life in the poorer districts. On short notice he contested the Parliamentary election at Hastings in March last, the entire contest from the time of his arrival occupying six days. Mr Harcourt has also been connected with literature, and is the author of two three-act comedies. One, entitled "An Angel Unawares," was produced by Miss Fanny Brough at Terry's Theatre in 1906, while the other, "A Question of Age," was produced at Court Theatre in 1907. Mr Harcourt is Parliamentary Private Secretary to the Home Secretary (Mr Gladstone).

For the County of Kincardine—Captain the Hon. ARTHUR CECIL MURRAY. He is a son of Baron Elibank, who is an extensive landowner in Peeblesshire. He is 28 years of age, and has had a distinguished military career. He holds the medal for service in the China expedition of 1900, and has been aide-de-camp to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal and to the General Commanding the Southern Army in the great army manœuvres on the occasion of the Delhi Durbar. He has seen service on the North-West Frontier of India, while he has travelled extensively in Japan and China. One of his brothers was killed while serving with the Lovat Scouts in the Boer War. Captain Murray was at that time in China, and he immediately volunteered by cable to fill his brother's place

Mr Brodrick, then Secretary for War, and Lord Roberts both gave their sanction to this proposal, but Lord Curzon would not agree to sending any more officers of the Indian Army to South Africa. Captain Murray is a keen politician, and in addition to a knowledge of foreign affairs he has interested himself in Scottish questions. He is an omnivorous reader, and has contributed extensively to leading journals on political subjects. He succeeded James W. Crombie in the representation of Kincardineshire in 1908, defeating his Conservative opponent, Sydney J. Gammell, by a majority of 1698.

For the County of Forfar—JOHN SINCLAIR: Mr Sinclair is the son of the late

Capt. J. Sinclair.

Captain George Sinclair, of H.M. Bengal Army. He was born in 1860, and was educated at Edinburgh Academy and Wellington College, and afterwards at Sandhurst Royal Military College, which he entered with the view of adopting the army as a profession. After completing his military education he in 1879 received a commission as Second Lieutenant in the Fifth Regiment of Lancers. He served in the Soudan expedition of 1885, and received a medal and clasp. During the period that the Earl of Aberdeen was Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland Captain Sinclair acted as his aide-de-camp. Having retired from the army as Captain in 1887, he took up his residence in London, and was a member of the first London County Council. In 1892 Captain Sinclair contested Dumbartonshire in the Liberal interest, and was elected member by a small majority. He, however, lost the seat at the General Election of 1895, being defeated also by a small majority. Shortly afterwards he was appointed Secretary to the Earl of Aberdeen, Governor-General of Canada, which position he resigned in order to contest Forfarshire. He was elected in 1897 by a majority of 458; re-elected in October, 1900, by a majority of 248; and again re-elected in January, 1906, by the huge majority of 3519. He holds the office of Secretary for Scotland in the present Liberal Government. In July, 1904, he married Marjorie Gordon, daughter of the Earl of Aberdeen.

OBITUARY OF PUBLIC MEN, NATIVES OF, OR CONNECTED WITH MONTROSE.

JAMES ROSS BROWN.

Died at Edinburgh, the result of an accident, on 11th October, 1907, aged fifty-two. Deceased was a native of Montrose, and was reared to the trade of shipsmith with his father, succeeding to the business at his death twenty years ago. By industry and perseverance he built up a large business, and was just on the point of removing into more commodious and up-to-date premises in River Street. Mr Brown was of an ingenious turn, and as a workman was in the forefront. He was a pioneer of the as yet to be a new industry in the town, namely, art iron work, and rare specimens of his handicraft in this connection are to be seen in the town and district. He likewise invented and patented a number of steel golf clubs for use in bunkers and long grass, and this brought him into considerable prominence among the followers of the royal and ancient game. He leaves a widow and three sons.

JAMES DAVIDSON.

Died at Montrose on 16th October, 1907, aged fifty-nine. Born in the Fraserburgh district, he came to Montrose many years ago. In municipal, political, football, and trade affairs he took a deep and active interest. Politically, he held progressive views, and from the time of its inception he was Secretary of the local branch of the Independent Labour party. Ever since the Trade Union movement was introduced into Montrose he was a willing worker in its furtherance. He was first President of the local Trades Council, a body now defunct. A tailor to trade, he was associated with the Operative Tailors' Association, acting as Secretary of the local branch. The Co-operative movement had also in him a strong supporter. For many years he was closely identified with the conduct of the Montrose F.C. He was President for several terms, and when he represented the Links Park Club on the Forfarshire Football Association he was elected to the Vice-Presidency of the County Association. Mr Davidson was also a prominent Freemason. He was a member of the Incorporated Kilwinning Lodge (182), over which he presided as Master for several successive years. Deceased was a deacon in St Paul's U.F. Church. He leaves a widow and seven of a family.

LIEUT.-COLONEL HOILE, M.D.

Died at London on 18th October, 1907, aged sixty-nine. A son of the late Dr Henry Hoile, Montrose, he was educated at Montrose Academy. He was connected with the Royal Engineers, the Devonshire Regiment, and the 17th Lancers, and served with distinction in the China War of 1860, being especially distinguished for unremitting devotion and effort in the yellow fever epidemic at Barbadoes in 1891. He entered the service in 1858, and retired on pension in 1883, after a service of twenty-five years. During his varied services in China, India, and the colonies, and at home he was very popular. Dr Hoile is survived by his widow and one daughter.

REV. J. C. M'CLURE.

Died at Marykirk Manse on 4th November, 1907, aged seventy-eight. A native of Ayrshire, he was inducted to the church of Marykirk on 3rd December, 1857, so that had he survived another month he would have attained to his jubilee in the ministry. He laboured in Marykirk without a break until eighteen months before his death, when his burden of years compelled him to seek an assistant. Besides attending to the religious side of the village life, deceased associated himself with matters connected with the civil welfare of the community, and rendered service on the Parochial Board, the Parish Council, and the School Board, over each of which he presided at intervals. For nearly twenty years he held the appointment of Chaplain at Montrose Asylum. Interested in antiquarian studies, Mr M'Clure was a contributor from time to time on these matters to the leading newspapers. He leaves a widow, two sons, and two daughters.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM S. COBB.

Died at Tacoma, Washington, U.S.A., October, 1907, aged seventy-one. A native of Montrose, he left forty years ago for Alloa, where he was for a time Harbourmaster. Afterwards he went to Leith, and subsequently to Dundee. For the long period of fifty years he led a seafaring life, thirty-nine of them as master mariner. When the Crimean War broke out he left his ship in order to join the British force. In the Crimea as well as on the high seas he had many exciting experiences. Seven times he was shipwrecked, more than once just escaping with his life. Six years ago Captain Cobb retired from the sea, and settled in Tacoma, Washington, where his son is in residence.

GEORGE MURRAY.

Died at Pitlochry on 18th November, 1907, aged eighty-seven. Deceased was a native of the parish of Fordoun, where his father was a farmer. He served his apprenticeship in Montrose, and afterwards went into partnership, under the firm name of Murray & Willocks, with the late Mr Willocks, and after the death of Mr Willocks he assumed as partner his late brother, Alexander Murray, and carried on business as Murray & Co., silk mercers. The partnership lasted many years. Mr Murray retired from business life in 1888, and settled in Pitlochry. He never associated himself with public affairs. His wife predeceased him fifteen years ago, and he leaves a family.

ANDREW BROWN.

Died at Montrose on 3rd December, 1907, aged 77 years. A native of the parish of Craig, where his father was for a long time grieve on Ferryden Farm, deceased served his apprenticeship as a mason in Montrose. Emigrating to America, he prospered in his trade there, and took an active interest in Masonic affairs. Returning to this country, Mr Brown, thirty years ago, took over the business of the late Wm. Balfour, builder, Montrose. Among several important contracts executed by him were the erection of North Links and South Esk Public Schools and the alteration of S. Mary's Church. Mr Brown never actively participated in public affairs. He is survived by a widow, two daughters, and three sons. Two of the latter are in the ministry—Rev. Andrew Brown, of Queen's Park Parish Church, Glasgow; and Rev. Wm. Brown, Campsie. David Brown the other son, managed his father's business for some years, and now carries it on.

CAPTAIN A. LAWSON.

Died suddenly at Montrose on 9th January, 1908, aged forty-seven. Deceased, who was widely known in shipping circles, was the second son of the late Captain Henry Lawson, Harbourmaster, Montrose. He served his apprenticeship as a sailor on board the local brig Annic Largie. Displaying considerable aptitude in his profession, advancement came quickly. While yet a young man he was entrusted with the command of the Montrose steamer Joseph, and after some years in her was appointed to the captaincy of the Dundee steamer Hungarian. This vessel he had charge of for a considerable time, and then became master of the s.s. Aurora, of Dundee. He leaves a widow.

PETER LAW.

Died suddenly at Montrose on 11th January, 1908, aged fifty-nine. Born in the Glasterlaw district, he followed the plough while a young man, but, coming to Montrose, he joined the police force. After serving a few years in it he resigned, and secured employment with Wm. Gibson, butcher, High Street. Then he acquired the fleshing business at 65 Ferry Street. Some three years ago he took over the butcher's business at 14 Ferry Street, and carried it on in conjunction with his other premises. He leaves a widow and a family of four daughters and two sons.

FRANCIS M. JAPP.

Died at Montrose on 14th January, 1908, aged eighty-one. Mr Japp was the second son of John Japp, of the firm of J. & F. Japp, cabinetmakers. He served his apprenticeship to the cabinetmaking with his father and uncle, afterwards spending some time in London and other large English centres. When his father retired he, along with his brother, ex-Provost Japp, became partners with their uncle, and carried on a successful and far-reaching trade until 1871, when his uncle's connection with the business ceased. Deceased and ex-Provost Japp conducted the firm's affairs for many years, their association continuing until the retirement in 1898 of the ex-Provost. Under the management of deceased and his son the business was carried on until a few years ago, when it ceased. Mr Japp was a Liberal in politics.

Twice he served as a member of the School Board. He was known in his younger days as an enthusiastic golfer, a keen bowler, and an expert angler. A member of the Congregational Church, he at one time held the office of deacon. He is survived by a widow and a son and three daughters.

WILLIAM MITCHELL.

Died at London on 16th January, 1908. He was the second son of the late ex-Provost Mitchell. After being educated at the Academy he entered the office of Messrs Savege & Thomson, solicitors, and received a legal training. He was engaged in assisting his father in his business for some time, and then proceeded to London, where he renewed his study of law, and was entered as a barrister. Deceased had been away from his native town for many years.

AUGUSTUS J. W. H. KENNEDY-ERSKINE.

Died at sea on 2nd February, 1908, aged forty-two. The only son of William H. Kennedy-Erskine of Dun, deceased was educated privately. His love of travel was great. When quite a young man he journeyed round the world, and before he attained his majority he had seen many lands and many customs. He was a great admirer of outdoor life, and devoted much of his time to sport. He was a golfer of ability. He was also a keen curler. Possessing an extreme love for horses and dogs, his knowledge of them was wide and sound. He was also an ardent huntsman, and a splendid shot. At one time he held the rank of Captain in the F. and K. (R. G.A.) Militia. During the last seven years of his life he had spent a good deal of his time on his estate. At the time of his demise he was Chairman of Dun School Board, and he was besides a member of the Parish Council. Deceased is survived by his widow, two sons, and two daughters.

DR A. S. DUNCAN.

Died at Roslyn, near Edinburgh, on 16th January, 1908, aged about forty. Deceased was a son of the late Mr Duncan, farmer, Fricock Mains, and grandson of the late Bailie Adams, Montrose. Educated at Montrose Academy, he proved himself an excellent scholar. Choosing medicine as a profession, he graduated at Edinburgh about 1890. On graduation he filled the post of Resident Surgeon in the Royal Maternity Hospital, and later of Resident Physician in the Royal Infirmary. At this time Dr Duncan had a severe illness from the effects of which he never properly recovered. For a year or two he was surgeon on board several P. & O. liners, and afterwards he settled in practice in Penge, but his health breaking down again, he undertook lighter work as assistant at Mavisbank Asylum. Latterly he had been residing at Roslyn.

WILLIAM M'KENZIE.

Died at Montrose on 20th January, 1908, aged forty-seven. He was a native of Glasgow, but the greater part of his life had been spent in Montrose. A skilful musician, he taught for several years in Aberdeen, but some seventeen years ago he returned to Montrose. He was well qualified in his profession, his natural abilities being fully developed in early life by the well-known teacher, Horace Poussard. Mr Mackenzie was a widower. He left no family.

BAILIE ROBERT J. LYALL.

Died at Montrose on 29th February, 1908, aged sixty-four. Deceased was the eldest son of the late Charles Lyall, a leading Scottish agriculturist, who for long was factor to the late Earl of Southesk, and tenant of the farm of Old Montrose. After being educated at Brechin High School, he proceeded to India for a short time. On returning to this country he entered into a joint tenancy with his brother-in-law, G. Dalziel, of the farm of Powis, on the Southesk estate. In the management of the farm he showed considerable skill, and earned the reputation of being the most generous master in the district. He also acted for a number of years as factor on the Kinnordy and Pitmuies estate, and on the expiration of the lease of Powis he took up residence at Pitmuies House. His education, his business ability, his position, and, above all, his natural inclinations, combined to make it inevitable that he should take a share in the transaction of public affairs. For many years he was a prominent member, first of the Forfarshire Road Trustees, and next of the County Council. While farming Mr Lyall also displayed a keen interest in the Angus Agricultural and the other kindred Associations, and also in School Board work. Nervously active and enthusiastic to a degree, he found time to cultivate his many interests, each of which gave him scope to develop his natural aptitude for public work.

Six years ago he took up residence in Montrose, and the community were quick to recognise the fact that Mr Lyall was specially fitted, from his inherent faculties and experience, to represent them in the accomplishment of civic concerns. At the top of the poll in November, 1904, they placed him, and the promise of extremely useful membership had not been in vain. A ready speaker, possessing the power of lucid exposition, he was quick to seize a point, and never slow to drive it home. But he was ever courteous and kindly in his bearing, and, broad-minded, his views were always fair and moderate. Two years ago he was raised to the Magisterial bench, and there also he showed a splendid capacity for the work, being painstaking and earnest in the fulfilment of the duties that devolved upon him as Bailie. A devotee of the game of golf, he had been for some time Hon. Secretary of the Montrose Royal Albert Club. In other sports and pastimes in which the youth of the community indulged the Bailie interested himself. Politically he was a Conservative, and ecclesiastically he belonged to the Scottish Episcopalian Church. Bailie Lyall was an unostentatious giver; through his death the poor lost a friend. His widow is a daughter of the late John Paton, The Wild, Broughty Ferry, partner in the firm of Messrs J. & G. Paton, millspinners, Montrose.

REV. FREDERICK CRUICKSHANK

Died at Kirriemuir on 29th February, 1908, aged eighty. Deceased was a native of Kirriemuir, and received his early education in the old parochial school, thereafter proceeding to Aberdeen, where he prosecuted his studies, again returning to Kirriemuir to assume the duties of a teacher in Webster's Seminary. In his leisure he still studied with a view to entering the ministry, and eventually gave up his post in Webster's Seminary and entered Aberdeen University. After being licensed to preach, he for a time was assistant to the late Rev. Dr Paterson, Montrose, and was latterly elected parish minister of Lethnot, where he proved a faithful pastor and conscientious preacher for fifty years. Mr Cruickshank took an intelligent interest in the antiquities of the district, and was the author of a history of Navar and Lethnot, as well as other brochures on antiquarian research. On relinquishing his ministerial duties, he removed to Kirriemuir, where his wife, who was also a native of the district, predeceased him.

Rev F. Cruickshank

JAMES M. PEDDIE.

Died at Montrose on 17th February, 1908, aged forty-six. A native of Montrose, deceased was for a number of years a confectioner on his own account in Brechin, and subsequently he was tenant of the National Hotel, Aberdeen. He returned to Montrose about five years ago, and started a business in New Wynd. Mr Peddie, along with his wife, inaugurated in Montrose Chapter Finella of the Order of the Eastern Star. He was besides an ardent Freemason. He left no family, but is survived by his widow

ISAAC EWEN.

Died at Montrose on 18th March, 1908, aged seventy-six. The son of a master mariner, he was born in Montrose. Learning the butcher trade, he commenced business on his own account in New Wynd 50 years ago, and at the time of his death he was tenant of two shops in the burgh. In the conduct of his extensive business his three sons had assisted him for a considerable number of years. Mr Ewen was one of the best known dealers in Angus and Mearns; and was recognised as a first class judge of butcher stock. He never interested himself actively in public affairs. His wife predeceased him some years ago.

WILLIAM COLLIE.

Died at Montrose on 29th March, 1908, aged seventy-two. A native of St Cyrus, he was a joiner to trade, and was employed for a period in Newcastle, London, and Glasgow. He came to Montrose over twenty years ago, succeeding to the business of F. Davie, gunsmith. He was an enthusiastic volunteer, and in his day was one of the finest shoulder shots in the country. He was present at the first rifle meeting held in Montrose, and from 1860 till 1886 was a well-known figure at all the principal rifle gatherings in Scotland and England. A prolific prize-winner, he won many costly trophies. Mr Collie was never married.

RIGHT HON. JAMES A. CAMPBELL OF STRACATHRO.

Died at London on 9th May, 1908, aged eighty-one. The eldest son of the late Sir James Campbell of Stracathro, and a brother of the late Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, he was in his early years a partner of the firm of J. and W. Campbell, warehousemen, Glasgow. In 1880 he stood as Conservative candidate for the representation of Glasgow and Aberdeen Universities, and was elected, and he sat for that constituency till the last general election, when he retired. He was a loyal and generous supporter of the Established Church, and for many years was appointed by the Presbytery of Brechin one of their representative elders to the General Assembly, acting for years as Convener of the Endowments Committee and Business Committee. To all the schemes of the Church at large, as well as to those connected with the Parish Church of Stracathro, he was a generous contributor. A number of years ago the latter church was extended and renovated almost entirely at his expense. The proposal to restore the ancient Cathedral of Brechin found in him a warm supporter, and he initiated the movement with a personal subscription of £1000 and the promise of a like sum from an anonymous friend. In 1904, Mr Campbell was at the Assembly meeting presented with his portrait, painted by Sir George Reid, in recognition of the esteem in which he was held by a large circle of friends throughout the country.

Mr Campbell was greatly esteemed by his tenantry and all connected with his estates. Possessed as he was of ample means, and being naturally of a generous disposition, he was able during times of depression to grant liberal concessions to his tenantry, while the houses—cottars' as well as tenants'—and steadings on Stracathro have ever been regarded as models. Along with the late Earl of Dalhousie, Mr Campbell was one of the original promoters of the Brechin and Edzell Railway, in which he took a large number of shares. He was the first Chairman of the Company, and held that office to the time of his death. He took an interest in antiquarian and topographical subjects. In 1855 he published a small volume on Catterthun, in which he sought to identify that place as the scene of the battle of Mons Grampius. In recognition of his literary attainments the Senatus of Glasgow University a number of years ago conferred upon him the degree of LL.D.

He married in 1854, Ann, daughter of the late Sir Samuel Morton Peto, Bart., who died a number of years ago. They had issue one son and three daughters

REV. GEORGE S. SUTHERLAND,

Died at Edinburgh on 12th May, 1908, aged seventy-seven Deceased was born in Thurso. After spending a few years in business, he won the four years' bursary of the Elder Caithness Association. He proceeded to Edinburgh, where at the University and at the New College he obtained an honourable place, with distinction in several classes. In the third year of his divinity course he went to the Continent, and studied in Germany and Bavaria. He was licensed by the Edinburgh Presbytery, and spent several months in evangelical work in the Shetland Isles. On returning he was asked to go to Montrose Castle Street Mission. He was ordained in 1861, and shortly after coming to Montrose he formed and built up the congregation of St Paul's, in which he laboured until a few years ago. Rev. J. D. Paterson, who was associated with Mr Sutherland in the last years of his ministry, succeeded him in 1904. Mr Sutherland is survived by his widow, one son, and four daughters.

Rev'd G S Sutherland

JAMES ROBERTSON.

Died at Montrose on 29th March, 1908, aged about seventy. A son of the late Mr Robertson, blacksmith, The Lundies, near Airlie, he came to Montrose many years ago, and was for a long period associated in business with his half-brother, the late ex-Provost Lackie, ironmonger. Upwards of a quarter of a century ago deceased purchased the ironmongery business of the late Thomas Middleton, and he carried it on till the last. Mr Robertson is survived by his widow and son, Captain Edward Robertson.

MAURICE FORD.

Died at Montrose on 18th April, 1908, aged fifty-nine. A mason by trade, he was a working man with an intelligence above the average. He was keenly interested in local and national politics, holding advanced views. For many years he was a member of the old Parochial Board, and was elected to the Parish Council when that body came into existence. Co-operation found in him an ardent supporter, and he was at the time of his death President of the Baking and Trading Society. He was also a member of the Ancient Order of Shepherds, being one of the founders of the local Lodge. Deceased is survived by a widow and family.

REV. ROBERT SCOTT, D.D.

Died suddenly at Edinburgh on 24th May, 1908, aged sixty-eight. A native of Perth, he was educated at St Andrews University. He graduated B.A. in 1860, and M.A. in the following year. At St Mary's College he subsequently took his divinity course. In 1865 he was licensed by Perth Presbytery, and then successively held assistantships at the Elders' Church, Glasgow, and at Erskine Parish. He next took charge of the Port Dundas Mission, and a new church was opened during his pastorate. In December, 1869, he was ordained minister of the congregation then worshipping in the Public Hall, Broughty Ferry, and through his energy the Church of St Stephen's was built, and opened in 1871. In 1873 he succeeded the late Rev Dr Mitchell as minister of Craig. Early in 1907 his Alma Mater conferred upon him the honour of D.D. in view of his services to education and to the Church.

In the administration of the public affairs of his parish Dr Scott bore his share. He presided for several terms over the deliberations of the School Board, and besides he acted for long as a member of the Parish Council. Of the Brechin Established Presbytery he was a leading member. In all questions affecting education Dr Scott took the liveliest interest. During 1907-8 he was President of the local branch of the Educational Institute of Scotland. He had been for many years a Manager of Montrose Asylum and Infirmary, and was a member of the House Committee of the latter institution.

Dr Scott's public work was not confined to the affairs of his own parish and Montrose or to the affairs of the Church. For several terms he was one of the four elected members from the General Council to the University Committee of St Andrews University. Dr Scott is survived by his widow, two daughters, and four sons.

WILLIAM HOGG.

Died suddenly on the cricket field at Sunnyside on 23rd May, 1908, aged about fifty. A native of Arbroath, Mr Hogg was appointed headmaster at Hillside in 1892, coming from Skye to take up the post. His interest in the village life was not confined to the walls of the schoolroom. In everything appertaining to the welfare of the community he was profoundly concerned. As a cricketer he excelled, and it was while batting in a match on the Sunny-side pitch that he was seized with apoplexy and expired. He was President of the Hillside Literary Society, and was a landward representative on Montrose Parish Council, in that capacity performing a public service to the villagers. A keen politician, he was a staunch Liberal. In church matters he also deeply interested himself, and was an elder in Logie-Pert United Free Church. Deceased is survived by his widow, two daughters and three sons.

JAMES DUNBAR.

Died suddenly at Montrose on 29th May, 1908, aged fifty. A son of the late Charles Dunbar, grocer, Montrose, he received his early training in his father's establishment. He was afterwards traveller for the late George Low, wine and spirit merchant, and acted in the same capacity for W. A. Scott when the latter took over the business at Mr Low's death. Mr Dunbar was well known in town and district, and was a genial and entertaining travelling companion. He is survived by his widow and three of a family.

EX-COUNCILLOR ROBERT JOHNSTON.

Died at Montrose on 1st June, 1908, aged seventy-three. A native of Bervie, deceased served his apprenticeship as a draper in Montrose, after which he was for six months in Cupar Fife, and then for three years in Arbroath. Coming to Montrose, Mr Johnston started business on his own account in March, 1856. As a general draper Mr Johnston soon acquired a lucrative business in the town and district.

Mr Johnston served three terms as a Town Councillor, and held the office of Hospitalmaster for a short time. He was an ardent Liberal, and for many years was a member of the Liberal Committee. On the eve of the poll of the recent bye-election Mr Johnston occupied a prominent position at the Liberal meeting, and the following day, despite the fact that his bodily infirmities necessitated his being assisted to the booth, he exercised the franchise. He was also at one time a Manager of the House of Refuge. His wife predeceased him 22 years ago, and he is survived by two daughters and two sons.

MISS HOPE PATON.

Died at Montrose on 17th June, 1908, aged eighty-nine. Deceased was a member of one of the oldest families in Montrose and neighbourhood. She was a daughter of the late John Paton, millowner, who, along with her uncle, established in 1828 what is now known as Chapel Works. She was a warm friend and helper of the poor. She provided the money to improve and beautify that portion of the Mid-Links known as the Hope Paton public bowling green and garden. Connected with St John's United Free Church since it was established as a chapel-of-ease in or about the year 1829, Miss Paton, like the other members of her family, was a large giver to the church.

JAMES ALLAN.

Died at Kinnaber, Montrose, on 31st July, 1908, aged eighty-two. Deceased's father was meal miller at Kinnaber before him. There Mr Allan was born, and learnt his father's business, and succeeded him when he died. Mr Allan carried on a large trade, and was recognised as a man of high commercial ability, sterling character, and thoroughly honest in all his business transactions. His interest in public affairs was keen. He sat for a period on the Breehin Committee of the County Council as the representative of Hillside, and he was for another period connected with Dorward's House of Refuge, acting on that body in the interest of the landward heritors. He attended St George's U.F. Church, Montrose, from his childhood, took a profound interest in its welfare, and was an elder at the time of his death, which office he had held for very many years. His wife predeceased him some years ago, and he is survived by his son, James Allan—who for some years had co-operated with him in the conduct of the mills at Kinnaber—and a daughter.

The police assessments for watching, lighting, cleansing, streets and roads, and general charges were (by the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, Sec. 340) leviable from occupiers, and the sewer rate upon owners. Owners are also assessed for the maintenance of the Suspension Bridge, under Sec. 74 of the Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Act, 1878. The Public Health (Scotland) Act, 1897, Sec. 136, levies the rate equally between owners and occupiers. In 1901, the Burgh Sewerage, Drainage, and Water Supply (Scotland) Act, Sec. 2, levied the rate for sewers and also the water rate equally between owners and occupiers. Later, by the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1903, Sec. 22, the streets and roads assessment was also levied equally between owners and occupiers. The adoption of the Free Libraries (Scotland) Act, 1887, imposed the rate of 1d upon occupiers. From the above-mentioned particulars it will be seen that our local rates are imposed and apportioned between owner and occupier under six different Acts of Parliament. The dates given are for the financial years ending on the 15th May of the respective years, and the amount levied is for meeting the expenditure from May 15th of the previous year to May 15th of the year under the date given.

The poor rate is levied under the Poor Law (Scotland) Act, 1845, Section 40, the powers and duties of which were transferred to the Parish Council under Section 22 of the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, establishing Parish Councils (in May, 1895) in lieu of Parochial Boards. The registration rate is levied under the Births, Deaths, and Marriages (Scotland) Act, 1855, Section 58. The education or School Board rate is levied under Section 44 of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1872. The burial grounds rate is levied under the Burial Grounds (Scotland) Act, 1855, Section 26. The Act was adopted by the burgh of Montrose in 1890, and the first assessment made in 1898.

The Museum contains a very fine collection of specimens in geology, mineralogy, and crystallography. In natural history the collection of birds and fishes is an excellent one, as is also the antiquarian collection. Among the paintings and engravings are included fine portraits in oil, by Irvine, of William Beattie, first Secretary of the Society, and James Campbell, the first Curator; James Norval, M.A., by Munro; Dr Mead (life size), by Allan Ramsay; James VIII. (the Pretender); Napoleon I.; and a fine cabinet-size portrait of Ben Johnson. There are three very good old Flemish paintings, besides "The Falls of Trivoli," by Philip Hachert; "A Moonlight View," by Mrs H. Ouchterlony; a collection of Scottish lake scenery in miniature. Three views of Montrose between 1795 and 1832 are also in the collection. Besides a marble bust of William, Lord Panmure, there are a number of busts of men distinguished in science, literature, and art.
