P R E F A C E

THROUGH the kindness of its owner, Mr. W. Moir Bryce, I have been enabled to transcribe and edit the important Scottish liturgical manuscript, the greater part of which is printed in the following pages.

Mr. Moir Bryce, who has already done so much for monastic studies by publishing his monumental work on the Scottish Grey Friars, has now conferred a lasting benefit upon the liturgical student, not only in Scotland, but also in England, through his generosity. For the most significant part of this book, although written for the Scottish Abbey of Holyrood, is a copy of the Ordinale or Directory of some English houses of the Augustinian Order. It contains just the matter that is lacking in the Observances of Barnwell Priory, near Cambridge, edited by the late Mr. Willis Clark,¹ with the learned and comprehensive introduction which helps to make that book indispensable alike for the study of the Black or Austin Canons in England and for that of English monastic life in general. The present volume therefore supplements, and in a sense completes, that work as an account of a house of the order in this country, in addition to providing the student with an Augustinian Manual and other liturgical forms.

In the introduction the book itself is described and the method of editing; something has been said to enable the general reader to understand the reason and use of the various sections it includes, and to stimulate and help him to a further study of the subject. No attempt has been made to tell, much less to rewrite, the story of Holyrood Abbey, and as the book throws no immediate light on the construction of the church or other buildings there, it would likewise be out of place to enter on a detailed discussion of them. At the same time it may be allowable to indicate here that there is room for more work to be done on both these subjects.

For the right placing of the contents in their relation to other Augustinian liturgical forms, it has been necessary to summarise such evidence as exists regarding the service books of the order in England, a subject that, except in the case of the Barnwell Observances, seems to have hitherto escaped attention. Lack of space has made it impossible to deal fully with numerous technical points raised in the ordinale itself,¹ but all matters of local interest, such as the inventory, have been treated at length.

Lastly, while it is hoped that the liturgical student will find the contents of this manuscript sufficiently described in the following introduction, there is much that still remains to be investigated before its real nature and significance are fully understood, in particular its exact relation to other books of the kind. Long and careful investigation, and collation with other similar manuscripts would almost certainly throw a great deal of fresh light upon it, and would no doubt lead to many of its affinities and perhaps the sources of some parts being traced.

Mr. Moir Bryce has freely placed the manuscript at my disposal for the long periods of time necessary for making the transcript and correcting the proofs with the original, and has always been ready with advice and help. With his wonted kindness the Rev. E. S. Dewick has read the proofs and has made many very helpful suggestions, all of which I have adopted. I am also indebted to Mr. E. G. Cuthbert F. Atchley, Mr. William Cowan, the Rev. Dr. W. H. Frere, Mr. J. P. Gilson of the British Museum, and the Rev. G. H. Palmer. Mr. A. Gray, Master of Jesus College, Cambridge, has kindly given me access to manuscripts in the library of that college. I have also to thank Mr. R. Livingstone and Mr. R. Mayall, respectively librarians of Corpus Christi College, Oxford, and Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. To Dr. W. K. Dickson, Keeper of the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh, I am obliged for unfailing helpfulness and courtesy during the time that the manuscript was deposited there while the first part was being transcribed. And I must also express my appreciation of the trouble taken by the printers in carrying out an exceptionally difficult piece of work.

INTRODUCTION

1. METHOD OF EDITING

THE manuscript, which for want of a more accurate and comprehensive title has here been called the Holyrood Ordinale, from the most noteworthy and characteristic section of its contents, was written for use in the chapter house of the Augustinian abbey of Holyrood.

Its principal contents are kalendar, martyrology, gospels and homilies for reading in chapter, the history of the foundation of the abbey, the rule of St. Augustine, an ordinale for services throughout the year, and the manuale or service book of occasional rites, which includes the visitation of the sick, burial of the dead, and various blessings. To these have been prefixed a form of bidding prayer for benefactors, among them several of the Scottish kings, forms of excommunication and absolution, with preces for the day hours. A litany, and an inventory of the goods and ornaments of the church have been added at the end, the latter in 1493.

In the present volume the whole contents are printed, with the exception of the martyrology, the rule of St. Augustine, and parts of some of the gospels. The martyrology is a not very accurate version of the type known as that of Usuard, which is easily accessible in better texts. There is practically nothing in it of Scottish interest, and it is clearly a transcript of a text written for use in England. In the absence of any specially Scottish features, it could hardly be claimed that the present is a suitable occasion for attempting to exhibit the small variations in the different English versions of Usuard's text.

The rule of St. Augustine is also easily accessible, so that it has only been thought necessary to indicate the beginnings and endings of the sections marked for reading upon different occasions. It is printed in full, with a translation, in the Barnwell Observances, pp. 1-23.

To print the longer gospels at length was likewise considered unnecessary, so only the beginnings and endings of the Scripture text have been given. In the cases where the gospels are very short no abridgment has been made.

In reproducing the kalendar, where space is important, the days of the month in arabic numerals have been added for the convenience of the student, while the golden numbers have been omitted, as they can be found in almost any kalendar of the period.

With these exceptions the whole contents of the manuscript have been printed from beginning to end verbatim et literatim.

Contractions have been extended, except in the kalendar, where space did not allow of it. In all cases of doubt, or where the indications of contraction were not clear, letters and words supplied have been placed within square brackets. Unusual readings or apparent mistakes in the original manuscript have been marked by the sign (†) except in the homilies after the gospels, where the text is very corrupt and bristles with doubtful readings. But common mediaeval Latin spellings such as inquit have been left unmarked.

Two stops are used in the original. The first is the period, used (a) at the end of a sentence, (b) in place of the modern comma, when the stop is placed mid-way between two words, and (c) after certain contracted words. The second is something like an inverted semicolon (:), and it is used in place of the modern colon or semicolon. These stops have been reproduced as closely as possible, a supply of the second having been specially prepared for this book. The use of capitals in the original manuscript has also been closely adhered to, even at the cost of making the text less easy to read than it would otherwise have been.

The paragraph mark ¶ has been retained, and wherever it is used in the original, the text has here been broken into a fresh paragraph. This has also been done in a few other cases for the convenience of the reader. For the same reason all liturgical quotations in the ordinale have been printed in italics. In all other cases, the use of italics represents what is written in red in the original.

Explanatory headings of the more important sections of the book have been added in square brackets.

In the reproduction of liturgical forms certain cues and abbreviations have been extended in square brackets, so as to make the meaning of the original clearer. Thus, where only the first word or two of a versicle is given in the manuscript, the whole has been completed here, the portion supplied being included in square brackets. Similarly in the numerous cases where only the versicle, or the cue of it, is found in the original, the corresponding response has been added in square brackets.

In a word, the system of reproducing the minutiae of the original text with the greatest possible accuracy, coupled with the necessary regard for the needs of the student, that has been followed in the publications of the Henry Bradshaw Society, has been observed in this book as closely as possible.

The present owner, Mr. Moir Bryce, purchased the manuscript at the sale of the late Mr. Pringle some years ago in Edinburgh. It had been in his family since before 1836, when the editors of the Bannatyne Miscellany, in which the historical matter and the inventory were printed, wrote (vol. ii. p. 11) that it was then in the library of Alexander Pringle of Whytbank, and that it had been ‘probably for the last two centuries preserved in the family library at Caprinton in Ayrshire.’ In the appendix to the preface to the Liber Cartarum Sancte Crucis (1840), the manuscript was briefly but not very accurately described, with a few short extracts and three facsimiles. The agreement with the canons of Carlisle was printed by the Surtees Society in their edition of the Durham Liber Vitae in 1841, and the late bishop of Brechin, Dr. A. P. Forbes, referred to the book in his preface to Kalendars of Scottish Saints, in 1872. With these exceptions hardly any attention has been drawn to the contents until now.

2. DESCRIPTION OF THE MANUSCRIPT

The manuscript contains 130 leaves of thick vellum, each $14\frac{3}{4}$ inches high and 11 inches wide ; in addition there are 2 leaves of waste at the beginning and ending, with traces of 2 more leaves at the beginning and ending long since cut out, and part of a leaf, also cut out long ago, after folio 72. The leaves are arranged in the following gatherings :—

Waste	One gathering of	2 leaves
Fragments of leaves	„ „	2 „
Kalendar, etc.	„ „	10 ¹ „
Martyrology, etc.	Seven gatherings of	8 „ each
Rule	One gathering of	8 „
Ordinale, etc.	Four gatherings of	8 „ each
	Two „	10 „ „
	One gathering of	6 „
Fragments of leaves	„ „	2 „
Waste	„ „	2 „

The writing is in two columns, except in the kalendar, and occupies a space of $9\frac{3}{4}$ inches by $7\frac{1}{2}$ inches on each page.

The book is bound in oak boards covered with stamped calf, and is $15\frac{1}{4}$ inches high, $11\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide, and about 2 inches thick.

There has been one clasp in the centre, and the back is sewn on to eight bands.

The back is plain ; each side is ornamented with bands of a conventional floral design arranged in a central group of five vertical bands with a surrounding band, forming a central panel $8\frac{1}{4}$ inches by 5 inches; outside a plain band, a border is formed by two more bands carried round side by side. The whole binding has never been either rich or elaborate, and the tooling does not appear to have been very deep. It is now much worn. There is no reason to doubt that it is local work, and contemporary with the manuscript.

In describing the writing, we are faced with the difficulty that so few Scottish liturgical manuscripts have survived the Reformation that it is scarcely possible to reach standards of comparison which can be used to determine Scottish work at different periods. From the scanty material that exists, we can only say that latterly Scottish church hands were somewhat coarse and large, and sometimes seem to imitate English work, sometimes French, sometimes that of the Low Countries. Most Scottish manuscripts appear to contain characteristics drawn from all these sources.

Two different kinds of writing are used in this manuscript, apart altogether from those in which some of the less important additions are written. The martyrology, gospels, rule, and manuale, with the groundwork of the kalendar, are in a large and somewhat coarse church hand of a rather square and upright form, not unlike large and heavy black letter print. The ordinale is in a smaller hand, more pointed and less heavy, and not quite so upright; it is, moreover, much more heavily contracted than the rest of the book. Careful examination shows that it was written at the same time; the coloured initial letters in it are exactly like all the rest in the book, and undoubtedly came from the same writer. The different hand of the ordinale and the greater number of contractions are probably to be accounted for by a desire to save space: not being required for reading aloud, the ordinale is the part of the book where such a saving could be more easily effected.

There is very little ornament in the book. The red and blue initial letters are plain Lombardics, except in three cases, namely at the beginnings of the martyrology, the prologue to the history of the foundation,¹ and the ordinale. In these instances there is a filling in of fine red and blue filigree work of a very common type. An effective but rather crude border of a somewhat unusual kind runs round the first page of the martyrology.

Several additions have been made to the kalendar at different times. Many of these are by the same hand, who carefully imitated the earlier work. Others are by different later hands, indicated in the footnotes as a, b, and c. Others again are added in cursive hands.

The preces for the day hours at the beginning of the book and the litany at the end are in a narrow upright hand, in ink that is considerably faded.

3. DATE OF WRITING

The question of the date of writing is not easy to determine very closely, as there is not much to decide it. The inventory at the end, clearly written as an afterthought, and unquestionably subsequent to the rest, is dated 1493. The bidding prayer at the beginning, in the same hand as the bulk of the book, asks prayers for a single King James among the departed. This indicates that the book is subsequent to the reign of James I, who was assassinated at Perth in 1437, but not later than the reign of James II, who was killed at the siege of Roxburgh in 1460. As far as can be gathered from the character of the writing, the date is not very early. There is a certain amount of liturgical evidence in the ordinale which, taken by itself, would indicate an early date, but this is fully accounted for by supposing that it is a copy of a considerably earlier document. For example, the ordinale omits all mention of Corpus Christi, a feast instituted in 1264, and ordered to be kept by English Augustinian Canons at a General Chapter in 1325.¹ Again, the ordinale takes no account of the feast of the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary (2 July), although it is in the kalender in the original hand. Now this is a feast that came into general observance in England towards the middle of the fifteenth century. In writing the kalender it was included; but in the ordinale, which was evidently copied with as little adaptation as possible from an older book, nothing is said about it. The same lack of adaptation of the ordinale to local circumstances is manifest in the litanies on Easter Eve (pp. 115-118), where there are no Scottish saints, although there are one or two in the kalender in the original hand. Yet it must be noted that the bulk of the Scottish entries in the kalender are subsequent to the rest; some of them may well be as late as the sixteenth century, and due to the stimulus that seems to have been given to the observance of local feasts through the publication of the Aberdeen breviary by the great William Elphinstone, bishop of that see, in 1509-10. The same disparity between kalender and sanctorale is evident in the Arbuthnott missal, and in the breviary, written for Fowlis Easter in the fifteenth century, and printed by the late Marquess of Bute under the title of Breviarium Bothanum. In both cases the body of the book is probably a copy of an English book of much earlier date, and the internal evidence is no indication of the date of the copy. In the case of the Arbuthnott missal, the date of which is approximately known, this becomes very clear if we compare the contents with those of English Sarum missals of the same and of earlier periods.

On the whole it seems reasonable to conclude that the manuscript was written about 1450, or a few years later.

4. THE PURPOSE OF THE Book

Having described the manuscript, the method of editing, and having discussed its date, it may be as well to say something for the general reader on the purpose it served, and the significance of its contents for the study of Scottish and also English liturgical usage, especially in regard to the Augustinian Canons Regular.

In considering the nature and use of any liturgical book, it is necessary to bear in mind that, speaking generally, all Christian worship has centred round the celebration of the eucharist, which has been the chief service of all Sundays and festivals from the earliest times, except among the more extreme of the reformed communions during the last three and a half centuries. In Latin christendom the eucharist came to be celebrated not only daily, but several times a day. The other sacraments, such as baptism, marriage, or orders, have been occasional from their very nature, as has also been the case with such rites as those of crowning a sovereign, consecrating a church, and the like. Beside all these services, there has also existed everywhere (again with the exception of the more extreme of the reformed communions) the series of daily services, consisting chiefly of the orderly and continuous recitation of the psalter and the orderly and continuous reading of holy scripture, with anthems and a few prayers.

Liturgical services have some elements that are fixed, others that change with the season. Thus, while the outline and the essential parts of the eucharist are fixed and invariable, the scripture lessons, the choir parts, and certain prayers change with the season, saint's day, or special occasion. In the ordinary daily services, known as choir services, or technically as the divine service (divinum servicium or divinum officium), the variable parts are very considerable indeed, while in the occasional rites such as baptism or marriage, season or saint's day makes little difference.

In ancient times, as in the East to-day, a number of books were required to carry out the service. Thus for the Latin mass the celebrant had the sacramentary, which contained the prayers, the deacon the gospel book, the sub-deacon the epistle book, while the choir had the graduale or grail. The lessons at divine service were in the lectionary, the psalms in the psalter, the prayers in the collectar, and the choir parts in the antiphonar or anthem book. While most of these books continued in use in great churches with many clergy, there was a tendency to combine their contents in volumes containing the whole text of each service for every occasion. Thus the contents of the different books required for mass were combined to form the missal, and those needed for the choir services were gathered into the breviary. The occasional services were put together in the manual, and the rites peculiar to the bishop in the pontifical.

In great churches with many clergy a service grew up in connection with their chapter, or daily meeting for business in the chapter-house, at which a brief record was read of saints connected with the following day, and founders and benefactors remembered. The book containing the martyrology which was used for this purpose came to include a lot of miscellaneous matter, especially such as would be needed in the chapter-house, including rules of various kinds for carrying out all the services. Such is the present volume, and the most important of its contents is the long and elaborate ordinale for the arrangement of the services, with the necessary variations for every day in the year. This explained very largely what parts were to be taken from each book, and what alterations required to be made in accordance with the changes of season, especially in cases where there might be a doubt as to choice. For example, if a saint's day falls on a Sunday, is the service to be of the festival or of the Sunday, or is the festival to be transferred, or kept on the next vacant day ? The ordinale supplied the answer.

Books of directions for carrying out services varied considerably in their contents. Sometimes they enter into greater detail as to what is said or sung, and almost ignore ceremonial. Other books deal chiefly with ceremonial. The present ordinale includes a great deal of both, but is by no means exhaustive as regards the text of the services. On the other hand, it does not include the ceremonial of the normal and ordinary services, but only the adaptations necessary for special days. It presupposes the existence of another book called the custom book, or consuetudinary,¹ containing the matter we find in the Barnwell Observances edited by the late Mr. Willis Clark, which are more like a supplement to the Rule of the order, and explain the duties of each official of the monastery, and include such work as that of the fraterer, kitchener, or cellarer, as well as of the members responsible for the services in the church. Such books were not always equally distinct as to their contents, and they did not always go by the same name ; but on the whole, judging by the analogy of others, the present series of rules is perhaps best called an ordinale. At Barnwell the companion book, which might be correctly described as a customary, is entitled Observancie Regulares ; it scarcely mentions the text of the services, and says nothing of the special variations of different days, but covers the whole life of the convent. In the case of the Windesheim congregation of Augustinian canons, one book,² called ordinarius, includes the liturgical matter corresponding to what is contained in the Sarum consuetudinary, as well as the adaptation of services for the year. In the visitations of English Premonstratensian or White Canons' houses by Richard Redman, bishop of Exeter, at the end of the fifteenth century, the ordinale is cited as the authority for ritual and ceremonial alike,³ while a fifteenth-century Premonstratensian ordinale, written probably for St. Agatha's, Easby, near Richmond in Yorkshire,¹ is closely confined to the text of services, and its contents are codified under the Sunday letters like the Sarum pie.² On the whole, the term 'ordinale' may be used to indicate most books of this class, regardless of minor variations in their contents.

5. RELATION TO OTHER SERVICE BOOKS IN GENERAL

The Holyrood ordinale adds considerably to our knowledge of mediaeval monastic usages. Although the Austin Canons were very numerous and had more houses in England than any other monastic order, not many of their books have survived. This manuscript, written for a representative and important house of the order, perhaps describes what Augustinians generally did in Scotland; copied, as it certainly was, from English books of the same kind, we may safely regard it as a guide to the usages of some, at any rate, of the Austin Canons in England.

In this book, then, the student has an important contribution to the study of mediaeval Latin rites and their numerous variations. The general reader will perhaps require some explanation of the exact significance of this. The use of liturgical forms is traceable to an earlier period than has often been thought likely or possible, but it is not until after the peace of the Church early in the fourth century that Christian usage began to crystallise into distinct liturgies. Thenceforward, we find with increasing definition a development of different liturgies in different districts, and somewhat

² The pie or directory, dealing wholly with the text of services, was a codified version of the ordinale. The Chapel Royal at Stirling had an ordinarium of Sarum use in 1505; St. Salvator's College, St. Andrews, a book called an ordinain (? ordinair), and at Aberdeen Cathedral, under Bishop Stewart in 1540, we find the order reformetur ordinale et novo scribatur in pergameno.

later we can speak of the East Syrian group, the West Syrian, the Egyptian, the Roman, the Gallican. With Eastern rites we are not now concerned, but with the last two. In early days in the West, the Roman rite seems to have stood very much by itself, and non-Roman or Gallican forms of service, more like the Eastern rites, were very widely spread. They varied much locally. Charles the Great conceived the idea of unifying the liturgy used under his rule. He sent for a copy of the Roman sacramentary of the day, combined it with Gallican elements, and ordered its use in place of the old unmixed Gallican rite throughout his kingdom. Rome itself accepted this book as revised in Gaul, and received certain Gallican elements with it. The Gallican Churches, on the other hand, lost the essential parts of their ancient rites and substituted the Roman, with certain local admixtures. The local elements, though subsidiary alike to the main principle of arrangement and to the most important part of the service—the canon missae, or prayer of consecration—came to have a very definite place and significance. Moreover, the ceremonial used in transalpine countries was largely local and of Gallican character, and it continued to develop along its own lines. So that when we reach the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries, while we find the Roman rite spread over Western Europe, it is really in the form of numerous ‘derived rites’ or ‘uses’ with certain local arrangements, non-Roman survivals and additions, and also with local and more or less Gallican ceremonial. Thus in England in mediaeval times, although the liturgy was Roman in the broad sense as compared with the old Celtic rites, the service books and ceremonies were not those of the local and strict Roman rite, but followed the use and custom of the churches of Sarum, York, or Hereford.¹ Among the religious orders the Austin and Grey Friars were almost alone in using the Roman books ; the White and the Black Friars possessed their own liturgical uses. In the Benedictine order, where each house was largely autonomous, the service books were much influenced by those of the surrounding secular churches. But centralised orders, like the Cluniac or Cistercian reforms of the Benedictine order, whose houses were all subject to one mother house, usually followed their own use everywhere. The Augustinian or Black Canons, not being centralised, had considerable variation in liturgical matters, except in the case of certain centralised groups or reforms, which corresponded to the centralised offspring of the Benedictine order.

6. RELATION TO OTHER SCOTTISH SERVICE BOOKS

It is needless to remark that we do not expect to find any traces of the Celtic rite after the eleventh century in Scotland. The Celtic church fell on evil days, and although there was a recovery after the ravages of the Norsemen, it was not sufficient to save it from drastic reform under Queen St. Margaret and her successors. That reform was needed, but, like other such movements, it was probably carried too far. However this may be, from St. Margaret's time onwards until the English wars in the fourteenth century, the Scottish church found in the other uses, and apparently unconnected with the rites used in England before the Norman conquest. Although the Sarum capitular constitution, certain ceremonial details and parts of the breviary services are traceable to Normandy, the missals of the province of Rouen are allied to the Saxon and non-Sarum English missals, and do not appear to contain the peculiarly Sarum elements. The problem has not yet been solved ; the best contribution to it is Dr. Wickham Legg's discussion of the question in the third volume of the Henry Bradshaw Society's edition of the Westminster Missal, in which he gives a useful collation of English and other missals that is indispensable to the student of the different forms of the mediaeval rites. The use of York probably represents a type less Gallican and more akin to the Saxon and earlier Benedictine books than that of Sarum ; Hereford came first under Rouen influence and then under Sarum, and in course of time Sarum displaced the old use of London, and tended to become supreme all over Great Britain, affecting the rites of some religious houses but not those of others.

became in a general sense more Roman and less Gallican, and in a special sense more and more English in everything, whether law, architecture, or liturgy. And later on, even when the breach with England and closer continental connection had changed the current of art and architecture, the English liturgical connection remained. The earliest post-Celtic liturgical books and fragments we possess in Scotland are of English use. Most Scottish secular cathedral chapters were constituted on the model of that of Sarum. Scottish councils and synods adopted English canons with but little change. The architecture of Scottish Norman and First Pointed churches is, with few exceptions, the same as that of these styles in England. With the end of the thirteenth and the beginning of the fourteenth centuries comes the period of the English wars. Scottish architecture becomes more local in character, and after the wars is more and more under foreign influence, which continued to be very strong down to the Reformation. All this time there was no corresponding change in the liturgy. The English use continued. If the influence were not so strong and direct as before, it was still there. Scottish fifteenth-century books, like the Arbuthnott missal, psalter, and hours, the Fowlis Easter breviary, or the Perth psalter, are really Sarum books with some provision for Scottish saints' days. In the sixteenth century printed books of the English use of Sarum continued to pour into the country in spite of the Privy Council prohibition by which Bishop Elphinstone's Aberdeen breviary was assisted. That book, the first sign of an attempt to make a definitely Scottish use, was still essentially English, although it provided proper forms for most of the Scottish saints' days. And even when the Reformation came, the first liturgical act of the earlier group of reformers was to turn to England and import from thence the Prayer Book of 1552.

Scottish liturgical books and fragments are of great rarity, though more are now known to exist than was formerly believed.¹ Nearly all are of secular use, and very few are from religious houses. Of the latter, a psalter from Culross, a kalendar from Coupar Angus, and a scrap of an ordinale from Deer, are just enough to show that Scottish Cistercian houses, as might be expected, followed the general custom of the order. An obit kalendar of the Grey Friars from Aberdeen, a service for the cattle plague with a copy of the greater excommunication on a fly-leaf of a book that belonged to the Stirling Grey Friars, a manuale of the canons of St. Anthony at Leith, a bible with the lessons marked that belonged to the Arbroath Benedictines, and a fragment of an antiphonar apparently written for the Augustinian Priory of Inchcolm, almost complete the list. There is also a book that belonged to the Dominican sisters in the Sciennes convent close to Edinburgh, corresponding in some respects with the present book, inasmuch as it contains Gospels for reading in chapter and a short customary. But none of these documents can compare in size or significance with this Holyrood book, which is therefore the most noteworthy liturgical relic known to exist of a mediaeval Scottish religious house.

Like the surviving books and fragments of secular use in Scotland, it bears abundant traces of English origin, and, as has already been pointed out, it seems to be copied from similar books drawn up for the same order somewhere in England, with only the very slightest adaptation for local needs; and therefore, as no English Augustinian ordinale or manuale has been printed, the present volume may be regarded as a contribution as much to English as to Scottish liturgiology, and forms a supplement to the Barnwell custom book published in 1897, to which reference has been made before.

Most probably the Holyrood manuscript is a copy of three older books. The first of these was very likely written in ¹ The present writer hopes to treat the whole of this subject with great fulness when publishing the Rhind Lectures for 1913-14 on The Liturgy and Ceremonial of the Mediaeval Church of Scotland.

England and contained kalendar and martyrology, with gospels and homilies and the monastic rule for reading in chapter. As in the case of other books of the kind, local memoranda were afterwards added at the end in the shape of the history of the foundation and the list of abbots. To the beginning were prefixed the prayer for founders and benefactors and other short forms ; the kalendar would seem to have been scarcely touched unless by the addition of a later grading of feasts, but indications of gospels for Scottish saints' days were perhaps added in the margin. The second book was probably an English ordinale of the thirteenth century ; the third a manuale. Somewhere about 1450 the contents of all three books were copied exactly as they stood, so as to make the present volume as we have it. This would explain the curious position of the historical matter in the middle of the book, and that of the bidding prayer and other forms at the beginning before the kalendar, while all were written at the same time. Later on this new book in its turn received additions. In 1493 the inventory was added, and about that time or a little later, the Scottish names were entered in the kalendar, and the preces and litany written on blank leaves near the beginning and end.

7. RELATION TO ENGLISH AUGUSTINIAN USES

We must now examine the contents of the book to see what light they throw on the liturgical uses of Augustinian Canons in general and those of Holyrood in particular.

The Black Canons had more houses than any other religious order, whether in Scotland, Ireland, or England. Yet not very many of their books have survived, even in England. Of the order itself, as distinct from special congregations and reforms, such as the Victorines and Arroasians, besides the White Canons or Premonstratensians, almost the only surviving English service books seem to be the following :¹—

A fifteenth-century missal of the Victorine Canons of Bristol is preserved in the city library there, and has been collated with the printed Victorine missal of 1529, and fully described by Mr. Cuthbert Atchley in the Transactions of the St. Paul's Ecclesiastical Society, vol. iv. p. 277.

An abridged missal of the fourteenth century of the Victorine Canons of St. Thomas, Dublin, is in the British Museum, MS. Add. 24,198, and the summer part of a breviary from Trim, Co. Meath, is in Trinity College, Dublin, MS. B. 3. 12 (84), where is also a book of miscellanea (MS. 97) from St. Thomas, Dublin.

The evidence of all these books is that Augustinian practice varied considerably. Among the centralised congregations or groups there seems to have been greater uniformity, just as in the case of the Cluniacs and Cistercians, orders which were reforms of the Benedictine, in which greater rigidity of discipline was attempted. Thus the Victorine congregation of the Augustinians seems to have followed a fairly uniform rite. Their manuscript Bristol missal is very much the same as the printed missal of the order, and both agree very generally with the early fourteenth-century manuscript missal of St.

Thomas, Dublin. One of the most powerful of continental groups of Augustinian monasteries, those in the Congregation of Windesheim, founded in 1387, followed the Dutch use of Utrecht.¹ The great reformed branch of the canons regular, the Premonstratensians or White Canons, were centralised, and seem to have had a uniform liturgical use.

But the general body of Augustinian canons appear to have availed themselves of much the same freedom as the great houses of the older Benedictines, who in parts of England seem to have been very strongly influenced by the secular use of Sarum, for example at Westminster, St. Albans, Abingdon, and Tewkesbury.² Hence we find churches like Barnwell and Holyrood having their own books of directions, which also show a certain amount in common with the secular practice of the country, besides evidence, to be detailed presently, proving that some Austin Canons adopted the use of Sarum.

An examination of the surviving Augustinian books already referred to shows that the Guisborough missal has great affinities with the manuscript missal of Durham; unfortunately it is an abridged book, which has scarcely any week-day masses in the temporale and practically no rubrics, besides having lost the ordinary and canon. In the Hanley Castle missal the kalendar, canon, and sequences are of much later date than the rest, and it is not certain how far they represent Augustinian practice; the sequences are simply those of Sarum. This missal is attributed to Augustinian Canons by Mr. H. M. Bannister in his list of Sarum manuscript missals printed by Dr. J. Wickham Legg in his Tracts on the Mass.³

But the following was not strict.

² Other Benedictine houses, such as Worcester and Peterborough, do not seem to have been at all affected by Sarum influence.

³ Henry Bradshaw Society, 1904, p. xiv.

Collation with other English rites discloses no special similarity to the group of missals to which one might say that of Durham belongs, and with it that of Guisborough, but rather a distinct leaning to the rites of Rouen and Hereford, especially in the Alleluia verses of the Sundays after the octave of Pentecost. Mr. Edmund Bishop¹ has shown how Rouen influenced Hereford in the twelfth century, and he also points out that the Llanthony canons knew of the Rouen ceremonial through the tractate of John of Avranches, of part of which there is a copy in the miscellaneous MS. which contains their kalendar. It seems reasonable to regard the Hanley Castle missal as representing fairly early Hereford practice before the use of that diocese became fixed, and more assimilated to that of Sarum.

Comparison of the Guisborough missal with that of the Victorine canons reveals a certain similarity, and it may be that both have a common origin, and that while the former came under the influence of Durham, the latter was affected by the secular use of Paris. In the Alleluia verses on the Sundays after Trinity for example, there is a distinct and remarkable correspondence between the Victorine and Parisian rites. The similarity can also be traced elsewhere.

Liturgical research has not as yet produced any collation of the breviaries of different mediaeval rites on the same scale as that of the different English missals added to the third volume of the Henry Bradshaw Society's edition of the Westminster missal.² In comparing the Guisborough and Westacre antiphonars and the diurnal Harl. 2856, it is not possible to speak with such a degree of certainty as in the case of the missals. But so far as it has been possible to test them, the diurnal agrees with Westacre, and both differ from Guisborough, none follow either Sarum or York use. As in the case of the missal, there seems to be Durham influence at Guisborough, and a certain amount in common with York. The Rev. G. H. Palmer tells the writer that the music of Guisborough shows some similarity with that of the Benedictine uses of Worcester and Peterborough.

² In the third volume of the Hereford Breviary, Henry Bradshaw Society, 1913, Dr. W. H. Frere has compared the three English breviary uses of Sarum, York, and Hereford, giving a collation of some of their principal parts, and an index of all parts, which is of very great value.

The St. Osyth processional is imperfect and stands alone ; it contains much local matter, and little that serves for the purposes of comparison.

The groundwork of the kalendars is very constant, and does not differ greatly from that of Holyrood. The St. Osyth kalendar of the twelfth century is almost identical with that of Holyrood, and the same is the case in a slightly lesser degree with the kalendar of Old Llanthony. The Guisborough, Cottingham and Kirkham kalendars show considerable north of England influence, as might be expected.

The grading of feasts in the kalendars which exhibit it has some amount of variation. Oseney merely indicates three and nine lessons. Llanthony has also commemorations. Guisborough has double and common feasts, feasts of nine and three lessons and memorials. A later hand has added to the twelfth-century St. Osyth kalendar a grading of feasts which is very like what we find at Holyrood.

That Victorine customs influenced other Augustinians is shown by the late Mr. Willis Clark in his introduction to the Barnwell Observances, where he explains with the use of parallel columns that parts of the Barnwell custom book are identical with corresponding parts of the customary of the monastery of St. Victor at Paris printed by Martene. This, however, is not in the liturgical portions of the book, which seem rather to have been influenced by Salisbury.

There is evidence that in some places, at any rate, the Augustinian Canons in England followed Sarum use. A Sarum antiphonar used by them exists at Cambridge, probably written for Barnwell; the only adaptation to the needs of the order being in the prominence given to St. Augustine.¹ This is quite compatible with a different use for the mass; the nuns of Barking followed the use of St. Benedict for the hours, but the use of St. Paul's, London, for the mass.

In 1323 Archbishop Melton of York ordered the Augustinian Canons in his diocese to follow the use of the church of York.² The Rev. E. S. Dewick's late fourteenth-century Cottingham breviary, which follows neither York nor Sarum, shows that this order was at any rate not wholly effective.

That the local variation all over England was, and long continued to be, considerable, is proved by the Statutes for Canons Regular set forth by Cardinal Wolsey, and dated 22nd March 1519, wherein, after ordering the Victorines, Arroasiens, and all other Austin Canons throughout England to unite in one general chapter,³ he says :—

Item statuimus quod omnes et singuli canonici regulares iuxta morem singulorum locorum psalmorum et alia ad divinum cultum pertinencia . . . cantent.⁴

The questions now arise, What is the source of the contents of the Holyrood book? Where did the English books come from that were copied when it was compiled? What are the affinities of its contents with those of other Augustinian books?

The kalendar, apart from later additions, seems to have been copied from an English kalendar in which the characteristic York names, like those of SS. Hilda and Wilfrid that appear in the martyrology, were absent. St. Paulinus is there, and SS. Kentigern and Modan are in the original hand. If they represent the original contents of the kalendar from which this copy was made, and not subsequent additions, it might perhaps be suggested that the kalendar came from Carlisle, where St. Kentigern was well known as the patron saint of several neighbouring churches, and St. Modan might have been introduced through the old Glasgow connection. The indication of the new feasts of Holy Cross as prime dignitatis in the original hand, presupposes a certain amount of adaptation to the local needs of Holyrood, though it is strange that the feast of dedication (13 Oct.) should be a subsequent addition. As has already been indicated, the kalendar is very like those of St. Osyth and Old Llanthony.

Practically the same preces for the day hours are found in the fourteenth-century collectar at Corpus Christi College, Oxford, which was written for New Llanthony, near Gloucester.

The martyrology shows traces of general English influence, but has no adaptation to Holyrood, such as we find in the gospels and homilies, where provision for Scottish saints is included. The homilies, as will be shown more fully later, are much the same as those of St. Osyth and Dublin.

The manuale appears to be of a Benedictine type ; it is very like those of Westminster, Evesham, and Bury St. Edmunds, and not akin to those of the Austin Canons of Oseney and Guisborough. But that it came more immediately from some English Augustinian source is nearly certain, as the remaining portion of the burial service in the imperfect manual of the Black Canons of Bodmin is exactly the same as the corresponding part of the Holyrood form.

The ordinale is certainly taken from an English source, with only very slight adaptation. But it shows no affinity with the ordinale of Oseney, which describes different ceremonial and a different rite. For example, the eucharist was not borne in the Palm Sunday procession at Oseney, and the apparatus processionis was carried in a different order.

It must have been originally drawn up with a view to a group of churches, for we find such things as si altare de eo in ecclesia habetur (p. 76) referring to St. Stephen, and si habeatur in reference to the altar of St. John (p. 77). Commemoraciones de sancto loci (the last three words erased) occurs on p. 80. On Good Friday we find si non est populus qui adorare debeat (p. 111), and on Easter Day si parochi[an]orum cura habetur (p. 121). After the list of feasts to be enjoined on the people is added—et ille festivitatis quas singuli episcopi in suis episcopatibus cum populo collauderunt celebrandas (p. 157). These indications are sufficient to prove that one group of Augustinian houses followed the same rites and ceremonies. The question is, which were they? Oseney was not one of them, and if the use of this type of manual can be held as accompanying this form of ordinal, neither was Guisborough. The ordinal does not provide specially for the minor saints' days, so that we get no indication of place in that way; indeed, the only definite local indication is the probable adaptation of the Invention of Holy Cross for the needs of Holyrood, with the consequent insertion of an explanatory remark later on.

Here and there significant cues of the parts of masses are given; for example, on the Vigils of Easter and Whitsunday, and on the Ember days following Whitsunday. An examination of these shows a certain correspondence with the missals of Guisborough and of the Victorine canons, but no special similarity with that of Hanley Castle or with Sarum.

But portions of the same ordinale exist in an imperfect noted breviary at the British Museum (Harl. 5284a), written for an English Augustinian house in the third quarter of the thirteenth century. This manuscript contains most of the sanctorale and common. It follows Sarum use to an extent in the parts derived from the antiphonar, but not so much in the collects and hymns, nor in the lessons, which differ widely. Provision is made for the feasts of SS. Guthlac (11 Apr.), Petroc (4 Jn.), Filibert (20 Aug.), Egwin (10 Sept.), and the Translation of St. Frideswide (19 Oct.).¹ Otherwise the sanctorale is not very full. As far as it goes, the evidence points to the book having been written for the south-west midlands; St. Egwin was the founder of Evesham, St. Petroc's shrine was in the Augustinian priory of Bodmin in Cornwall, St. Guthlac is connected with Lincolnshire, though also in the Hereford books, but saints of the north and of the south-east are absent.

The ordinale is scattered through this book in sections in the form of rubrics. The principal variations from the Holyrood text are exhibited in Appendix I. Mere verbal differences and insignificant omissions have not been noted. An examination of them shows secular influence here and there. In particular this is noticeable in the case of Candlemas, which the Holyrood ordinale requires to be transferred to the morrow if it fall on Septuagesima or Sexagesima Sundays. Here it is not to be transferred, and this is stated twice, the writer apparently altering the extract from the Augustinian ordinale, and at the same time leaving the statement in another rubric which seems to be drawn from Sarum. In another place the word decanus seems to have crept in from the same source. Sometimes the rubrics clearly come from another source, as in the case of those for St. Gregory, St. Cuthbert, and St. Ambrose; in the latter instance the meaning differs. The phraseology is different; 'in serie unius confessoris' or the like is not used in references to the common in the ordinale. The allusion to sermones in magno omeliario albo, evidently a book of sermons in a white binding, shows careful adaptation to the needs of some particular house. In the case of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross the copyist at Holyrood left a blank space, most likely with the intention of filling it in with local matter ; here we probably have the lines he omitted—merely a direction to use the service of the Invention mutatis mutandis. The church¹ for which this breviary was written kept its feast of Dedication on 24th October, for the octave fell on the vigil of All Saints, the rubric for which has had in consequence to be rewritten.

Thus we have abundant proof that the original of the Holyrood ordinale was known and used by English Augustinian Canons soon after the middle of the thirteenth century, and by those whose rite was influenced by Sarum. We have seen that part at any rate of the same manual was used at Bodmin, while we have also seen that this was not the case at Oseney or Guisborough, and that the Sarum books were not used by the canons at either of these places or at Westacre in Norfolk, or at the house near London to which the diurnal at the British Museum belonged. Nor were they followed at Kirkham or Cottingham, or at the west midland house in which MS. Bodl. 547 was used. It is possible that Carlisle may be the immediate source of the Holyrood book ; yet Carlisle was a cathedral priory, and no trace has survived of the adaptation that such a constitution would require. At the same time the word prelatus is almost exclusively used instead of abbas, and there is the evidence already referred to on p. xxxvi of St. Kentigern being in the original hand in the kalendar. Although both Carlisle and Holyrood were colonised from Nostell, near Pontefract, that abbey is not likely to have been the source of this ordinal, seeing that St. Oswald, the patron of Nostell, has no special prominence, and there is scarcely any certain trace of York influence.² It really seems impossible to find any remnants of specially local colouring, and it is most probable that we have an adaptation of a common form for an English group of houses. With the exception of the fragmentary breviary in which portions of the same ordinale occur, careful search has failed up to the present to produce any English document that is so similar as to suggest immediate connection with this ordinale, but a remoter connection may very well be claimed for the Constitutions which Lanfranc issued for Canterbury and other Benedictine houses in the third quarter of the eleventh century.¹ This document is really a customary with very little of the ordinale properly so-called. But it includes directions for the more important ceremonies of the year, such as the Palm Sunday procession, and also general instructions for different classes of festivals. The last certainly have a good deal in common with the corresponding portions of the Holyrood ordinale. Here and there certain phrases are the same, and there is little doubt that the Constitutions of Lanfranc influenced those who compiled the original of the Holyrood ordinale. But the latter is longer and fuller, and most of its contents are drawn from altogether different sources. The evidence, taken with that of the manuale, certainly points to strong Benedictine influence among some of the English Augustinians before or during the thirteenth century.

On the whole it seems probable that while great local variation existed, some groups of Austin Canons' houses were united in their rite, and that the Holyrood ordinale originally belonged to some such group. So far as it goes—and it is so imperfect that no satisfactory conclusion can be drawn from it—the evidence points to the Holyrood ordinal and manual having come from the south rather than from the north of England, and through Carlisle rather than through Yorkshire or Northumbria.

8. THE PRELIMINARY MATTER AND THE KALENDAR

The first item in the manuscript¹ is a form of request for prayer for founders and benefactors, which for convenience has been entitled a Form of Bidding Prayer, on p. 2, although it is much shorter than that usually used before sermons. The following is a translation :

' Let us pray unto God the Father almighty by the merits and intercessions of the unspotted Virgin Mary and of all his saints, that he may grant us to render him such service as may be pleasing unto him and for the health of our souls.

' Let the convent answer. Amen.

' May almighty God preserve the Bishops of St. Andrews, Glasgow and Galloway, our Abbot, and brethren, and all our benefactors, wheresoever they be, from all dangers and adversities. Amen.

' May the almighty Lord keep our lord the King, the Queen, their children, and all the nobles of the realm, and may he grant that their government of the kingdom may be for the honour of God and the safety of the people. Amen.

' May the most gracious God be merciful unto the souls of the kings David, Malcolm, Alexander, Robert, David, Robert and James, and of the Earls Henry and David ; and to the souls of the bishops, abbots, brethren, fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters of our congregations, our parents and friends departed, and to the souls of Fergus, Uchtred, Rolland and Alan, and to the souls of all the departed ; and may he grant them eternal life for his mercy's sake. Amen.'

The entering of this form in a book of this kind suggests that it was for use in chapter, in connection probably with the commemoration of founders and benefactors that followed the reading of the martyrology.

Unfortunately the complete order of the service which began the meeting of the chapter is not given in this book, but in its main features it can be reconstructed from other sources, assisted by the few indications given in the ordinale. Everywhere it began with the reading of the martyrology, and the earlier part varies but little in the different forms. In the latter part we have the authority of the ordinale itself (p. 123) for placing the reading of the tabula before the commemoration of departed benefactors, and for the use of the psalm Laudate on festivals (pp. 74, 123, 151).

The book, the greater part of the contents of which form the present volume, was placed on the desk in the chapter-house. The reader announced the Latin date of the following day, with the phase of the moon, and proceeded to read the entry for the corresponding day in the martyrology, concluding with the words Et aliorum plurimorum sanctorum martyrum confessorum atque virginum. He then added the obits for the morrow, if there were any, saying, to quote the Sarum form—e.g. Eodem die obiit N. de W. qui fuit . . . qui legavit C. libras ad emendacionem operis sancte marie et C. marcas ad usum canonicorum or the like. The prelate or principal person present answered, Anima eius et anime omnium fidelium defunctorum requiescant in pace. R. Amen. He then said the verse Preciosa est in conspectu domini, and the convent replied Mors sanctorum eius. This was said everywhere, and from it the service itself was sometimes called Preciosa.

Then he said :

Ipsi et omnes sancti intercedant pro nobis ad dominum ut mereamur ab eo adiuvari et saluari : qui uiuit et regnat deus per omnia seculorum. Amen.

So Llanthony,¹ Cottingham, and Christ Church, Dublin, with verbal differences. At Sarum a longer form was used, but of similar character.

Then the officiant intoned Deus in adjutorium meum intende, to which the convent answered Domine ad adju- vandum me festina. This versicle and response were repeated thrice and followed by Gloria patri and Sicut erat, with Kyrieleison, the Lord's Prayer, and a few versicles and responses such as ¶. Et respice in servos tuos et in opera tua. R^y. Et dirige filios eorum, and ¶. Et sit splendor domini super nos. R^y. Et opera manuum tuarum dirige super nos et opus manuum nostrarum dirige. Then came the collect following :—

Dirigere et sanctificare [et regere]¹ dignare domine deus [quesumus] hodie corda et corpora nostra in lege tua et in operibus mandatorum tuorum: ut hic et in eternum te auxiliante [sani et] salvi esse mereamur. Per dominum nostrum ihesum christum filium tuum, qui tecum, etc. R^y. Amen.

At Sarum on festivals another collect, beginning Omnipotens sempiterne deus dirige actus nostros, was substituted.

The versicles and responses, Dominus vobiscum—Et cum spiritu tuo, Benedicamus domino—Deo gracias, concluded what may be regarded as the first part of the service.

The reader then asked a blessing from the prelate, saying, Jube domine benedicere; at Llanthony and Cottingham the blessing was Sapienciam suam doceat nos omnipotens et misericors dominus Amen. He then read a chapter of the rule, or, on festivals, the appointed gospel with its homily, which was followed by the versicle Tu autem domine miserere nostri and the respond Deo gracias.

Next the tabula was read, in which different parts of the services for the current week were allocated to those who were chosen for the purpose, and who were thereby reminded of their duties.

Then came the commemoration of founders and benefactors, other than those already mentioned among the obits for the morrow. This probably included or consisted of the Bidding Prayer for the Scottish kings at the beginning of the book. Most likely the prelate answered Requiescant in pace and the convent Amen.

The chapter then proceeded to the business of the day, which generally included the assignment of work to different persons, the hearing of complaints, and the administration of discipline. The Barnwell Observances,¹ referring to the prelate's duties as to the chapter, say :

' It is in the Chapter-House, not in hall or in his own chamber, that he ought to appoint his officers over all matters relating to the church, and, when necessary, to change or release them ; to receive and clothe novices ; to receive friends into brotherhood, and a share in spiritual advantages ; to grant corrodies ; to sign deeds or other writings to which, by common consent of the brethren, the common seal is to be affixed ; to annul, change, or alter general or special letters of procuration, in accordance with the convenience of the church ; to cancel, in the presence of the brethren, bonds for monies repaid to the church ; to read letters from prelates or princes addressed to the Prior and convent.'

On certain festivals, after chapter, the psalm Laudate dominum omnes gentes was sung, followed at Llanthony by the versicles and responses Ostende nobis domine misericordiam tuam—Et salutare tuum da nobis, Domine exaudi, etc., with the collect Actiones nostras quesumus domine et aspirando preveni, etc. The Llanthony collector directs that on other days the chapter is to be concluded by the psalms Verba mea, Domine ne in furore, Dilexi, Credidi, De profundis, and Voce mea, with the versicle Requiem eternam, the Lord's Prayer, more versicles and responses, and the collects beginning Deus qui caritatis dona, Fidelium deus, and Absolve quesumus domine animas famulorum.

The closeness of the preces at the Llanthony little hours to those of Holyrood, suggests that the chapter formulæ were similar, though it must be remembered that the Holyrood preces are a later addition in the manuscript.

On the whole question of such forms as the Bidding Prayer, Dr. F. E. Brightman writes : ‘All ancient rites have, or have had at some time in their history, a body of intercessions, generally in some kind of litany-form, concluding the Mass of the Catechumens or opening the Mass of the Faithful, in either case following the Sermon, or the Gospel if there is no Sermon.’¹ As early as the middle of the second century St. Justin Martyr relates (Apol. i. 65) that after the Sermon followed κοιναὶ εὐχαῖ ‘for ourselves and for the newly baptised, and for all men,’ and these prayers are described under the same title by St. John Chrysostom (Ep. lv. 24). Origen calls them oratio communis (in Matt. xxvi. 36). As early as the eighth century, however, these particular prayers had become confined in the Roman liturgy to Good Friday, as they still are, under the name of the orationes solennes. Before the end of the ninth century a closely cognate custom had arisen on this side of the Alps. The people were admonished after the sermon to pray for the several classes of the living and the dead, and prayers were then said. This ‘ bidding of bedes ’ (i.e. praying of prayers), as it was popularly called, latterly came to be understood of the enjoining to pray; bid from the Middle English bidden, ‘to pray,’ being mistaken for bid from the Middle English beden, ‘to command.’ Hence the term ‘ bidding of prayer,’ shortened still later into ‘the bidding prayer’ by an adjectival use of the word ‘ bidding,’ so as to indicate this particular prayer preceded by the long detailed request. In course of time the form both of the biddings and of the prayers themselves, originally subject only to the discretion of the minister, tended to crystallise into different local varieties, conditioned on the one hand by a necessary similarity of character, and on the other by a certain liberty of variation. These forms never attained such fixity as other liturgical forms. Sometimes each group of persons bidden for were separately prayed for, sometimes the prayers were all gathered at the end. In some cases the prayers developed into a miniature service with a psalm, preces, and collects, while in others only the Lord's Prayer was said. While in earlier days the bidding of the bedes followed the sermon, in England and France it afterwards preceded it, and according to Sarum use (except in parish churches) was recited from beneath the rood during the procession.¹

The bidding prayer is followed by a Form for receiving Brethren. This must be carefully distinguished from forms for professing religious. Its purpose seems to be the admission of members of a third order, living in the world but associated with the community. In the thirteenth-century martyrology and obit book of the Benedictine monastery of Christ Church, Canterbury,² the same prayer, Suscipiat te, is in the original hand. A later hand has prefixed the rubric Pro fratribus recipiendis with practically the same earlier part of the service as here, except that there only the one psalm, Miserere, is indicated. At the end of the Dublin troper with a Sarum consuetudinary in Cambridge University Library,³ a later hand has added an Ordo ad faciendum fratres et sorores secundum ordinem sancti Augustini which is very similar; it has one psalm, Magnus dominus, and adds two other collects, Adesto domine suppli- cacionibus nostris and Deus humilium visitator. The Austin Canons at Guisborough¹ had a shorter form Quando aliquis in fraternitatem suscipitur in capitulo, with one psalm, Ecce quam bonum, preces, and a different collect, Omnipotens sempiterne deus miserere famulo tuo et dirige. Here the rubric shows that the admission took place in the chapter-house and not in the church.

¹ In England the 'Bidding Prayer' enjoined by the Canons of 1604, in which a model form, subject to variation, is prescribed, has always maintained its ground in cathedral and collegiate churches, and is being increasingly used in parish churches. During the Middle Ages all sorts of vernacular, devotional, and instructive matter became added to the Bidding Prayer in the form of the Creed, the Decalogue, a general confession and absolution, notices of feasts and fasts, banns of marriage, notices of excommunication and the like, the whole being called the 'Prone.' From the sixteenth century onward more or less extensive forms of the Prone occur in nearly all French and German diocesan ritualia. These or similar vernacular elements, connected as they were with the sermon, became perpetuated in the Reformed morning service of Strassburg, Geneva, and Zurich, and, as Dr. Brightman points out, the Prone is therefore 'the original of the morning service in all the communions, in France, the Low Countries, Scotland, and elsewhere, in which the influence of the Swiss Reformation prevailed' (op. cit., ii. 1039).

Next comes a Form of Absolution from Excommunication. Then come two series of verses written in a late cursive hand, the first for memorising the order in which the books of holy scripture are read in divine service during the course of the year, and the second the order in which the books occur in the bible. They are in rude rhyming hexameters, in which some of the proper names are strangely mutilated to suit the metre.

The kalendar appears to be a copy of an English Augustinian kalendar, and of one not at all under York influence, for the groundwork largely agrees with that of Sarum. The characteristic York entries, except that of St. Paulinus (10 Oct.), are conspicuously absent. The special needs of the order are apparent in the keeping of St. Augustine (28 Aug.) with an octave (4 Sept.), in the feast of his Translation (11 Oct.), and in St. Osyn (Sancte Osgide, 7 Oct.). The influence of Holyrood is shown by the raising of the two feasts of Holy Cross (Invention, 3 May, and Exaltation, 14 Sept.) to the rank of feasts prime dignitatis. The grading of the feasts belongs to the Augustinian order, and is non-Sarum. The Scottish names form another element in the kalendar, and most of them are later additions, as are the feasts of the Dedication of the Church (i.e. of Holyrood) on 13th October and of Relics on 21st October. Besides the purely Scottish names, there are a few other late additions, favourites in Scotland shortly before the Reformation, such as SS. Bonaventure and Longinus (14 and 15 Mar.).

On 16th July is Sancti ethoti confessoris, in the original hand. Diligent search has up to the present failed to identify him, and he remains the most puzzling feature of the kalendar, if not of the whole book.

The Scottish entries in the kalendar include some very important days, e.g. SS. Baldred (6 Mar.), Columba (9 June), Serf (1 July), Ninian (16 Sept.). Moreover, no less than six Scottish days are added in March, with several other days not usually found in English kalendars, while in most other months the absence of equally important Scottish festivals suggests great laxity regarding them.

The tables which follow the kalendar provide rules for beginning what were called the 'histories' in divine service, in accordance with the possible variations of days upon which Sundays could fall, from August to December inclusive. Another table for the same purpose, though unfinished, is on the verso of the last leaf but one of vellum waste at the end of the book. It is in a different form, though containing the same matter, and consists of a wheel-like diagram in which the Sunday letters and dates occupy concentric circles, each series filling a segment of the whole diagram, with the 'cue' of the 'history' at the circumference of the circle.

Next comes a form of Excommunication for thefts within the monastery enclosure, drawn up in the name of the prior. Then follows a form of absolution for those excommunicated for attacking a privileged place by striking any one, by burning or threatening, or by effusion of blood, or otherwise. After this is a shorter form of absolution from excommunication incurred through violence to particular persons.

After these forms, in the same late hand which wrote the inventory of 1493 at the end of the book, is an Agreement with the Canons of Carlisle about services for deceased brethren, of which the following is a translation :

' This is an agreement between the canons of Carlisle and the canons of Holyrood at Edinburgh : that for a deceased brother there should be full service in the convent. Every priest shall say three masses ; other clerks one psalter. And it [i.e. the commemoration] shall be added to the yearly office.'

Unfortunately all the books and records of the sister house of Carlisle have disappeared,¹ so we cannot trace any corresponding notice of this agreement there. Such agreements between monastic houses were very usual. A considerable number are entered in the service book of Guisborough² immediately after the kalendar, and several examples from Durham have been printed in the Liber Vitae Ecclesiae Dunelmensis.³ A long series of them is summarised at the beginning of the New Llanthony collector, under the heading Debita Canonicorum quibus obligamur in obitu eorum, and there is another set in a Reading cartulary.⁴

Folio 9 is occupied with a series of preces to be added to the day hours, namely the services of prime, compline, terce, sext, none, and evensong. In the case of the last three services only a single versicle and response are given, but in that of the first three a considerable number of them, with collects and indications of collects. These are all added in the same later and much faded hand that added the litany on fo. 127. The preces are almost identical with those in the New Llanthony collector, and were no doubt copied from some English book, or from a book which was itself a copy of one.

9. THE MARTYROLOGY

As already pointed out, the martyrology, which occupies a considerable portion of the manuscript, viz. from folio 10 to folio 50 inclusive, calls for little remark. It follows the type of martyrology known as that of Usuard, an early compiler, and exceedingly widespread in Western Europe in the middle ages. The text is not particularly good ; there are abundant signs of careless copying, and no certain trace of adaptation for Holyrood or even for Scotland, though there is abundant evidence that the scribe had before him a text that had been adapted for England.¹ Such interest therefore as it possesses is English, and it was not thought worth while to occupy space with a well-known and easily accessible document, the few characteristic features of which have no connection with Scotland, but are textual variations which ought more properly to be dealt with when a critical edition is made of the Latin martyrologies as used in England.

10. THE GOSPELS AND HOMILIES FOR READING IN CHAPTER

The next section of the book consists of a series of gospels and homilies for reading in Chapter. The gospel is here reduced to the first sentence or two of the liturgical gospel read in the mass of the day, followed by the words Et reliqua. The subsequent homily is also reduced to a very few lines, containing little more than a single thought suggested by the gospel. Originally, even if the whole of the liturgical gospel were not read, the homily was longer. The reading of the gospel and homily was confined to Sundays and certain holy days. The series provides in the Temporale for every Sunday in the year, the Advent Ember days, Christmas, Epiphany, and Ascension, with their vigils and octave days, the five saints' days following Christmas, Ash Wednesday, the week-days following Easter and Whit Sunday, Corpus Christi and its octave day. The sanctorale includes all feasts of nine lessons and upwards in order of dignity, as given in the kalendar, except a few octave days, and except St. Francis, St. Barbara, and certain days in March. The last are later additions in the kalendar. Of local saints and of saints not usually found in secular English kalendars provision is made for St. Kentigern (13 Jan.), St. Anthony (17 Jan.), St. Modan (4 Feb.), St. Duthac (8 Mar.), St. Constantine (10 Mar.), Translation of St. Andrew (9 May), St. Columba (9 June), St. Ethotus, Confessor (16 July), St. Ninian (16 Sept.), St. Osgida¹ (7 Oct.), Translation of St. Augustine (11 Oct.), Feast of Relics² (21 Oct.). St. Osyth and the Translation of St. Augustine are days specially kept by the Augustinian canons and not peculiar to Scotland. The Common contains nothing remarkable; there is no provision for matrons. The Dedication gospel and homily follow, and those for the Vigil of the Assumption of the B.V.M. are added at the end.

Similar sets of gospels and homilies for reading in chapter exist in other books of this kind. The obit book and martyrology of Christ Church, Dublin, contains a set which is largely the same as that used at Holyrood. The homilies in the Dublin temporale are the same, except on the 5th Sunday after the Epiphany, the 2nd in Lent, Maundy Thursday, Whitsun Ember Friday and Saturday, the 4th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 11th, 12th, and 23rd Sundays after Trinity, and upon Trinity Sunday, when the gospel itself is different.¹ In the sanctorale the gospels differ on the feasts of SS. Mathias, Alban, Mary Magdalene, Beheading of St. John Baptist, besides the many cases where there is only a reference to the common, and in which there is great variation. In some eight other cases the homily is different. The Dublin common is shorter.

The twelfth-century martyrology of the Augustinian monastery of St. Osyth in Essex has another very similar series of gospels and homilies. The homilies at Dublin are longer than those at Holyrood, but in the St. Osyth book they retain much more of their original length, being twice or thrice as long. Throughout the temporale, except on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday in Whitsun week, and on and after Trinity Sunday, they are from the same source, and usually have the same beginnings. But while the St. Osyth series differs altogether from Holyrood and Dublin during the Trinity season, it generally agrees with Holyrood in the Sanctorale and not with Dublin.

These gospels and homilies are the same as those of mattins of the corresponding days in the breviary. In the introduction to the third volume of the Hereford Breviary,² Dr. Frere has shown that the homiliarius which Paul Warnefrid, the deacon of the great Benedictine monastery at Monte Cassino, made at the request of Charles the Great, is the source of nearly all the homilies in English breviaries. That not only the series itself originally came, but also its use in chapter, from a Benedictine source is suggested by its existence, and probably the instance is far from being singular—in an eleventh-century martyrology at the British Museum,³ which seems to have been written for the great abbey of S. Gilles in the diocese of Nismes, not far to the west of Arles. Here, as in so many other cases, the martyrology is followed by gospels and homilies for reading in chapter (Incipiunt lecciones evangeliorum que in capitulo leguntur). All through the temporale the homilies are with few exceptions the same as those at Holyrood, although in the sanctorale only a few are the same.

Gospels without homilies are found in Dominican books. The obit book of the Black Friars at Guildford¹ has such a series, followed by the Rule of St. Augustine, various statutes and other matter. Practically the same series is prefixed to the Constitutions of the Dominican nuns of the Sciennes convent, Edinburgh, now in the University Library there.²

II. THE RULE AND THE AUGUSTINIAN ORDER

The rule of St. Augustine follows, divided into sections, for reading each day of the week, together with the usual long addition, in the margin of which fifteen different sections are noted. As this rule is a well-known document, easily accessible, it has not been printed at length, but the beginnings of the different sections have been indicated. The rule will be found, both in the original Latin and also translated into English, in the Barnwell Observances, pp. 1-23.

The earliest form in which what is called vocation to the religious life found its fulfilment was that of the solitary hermit of the desert, not that of the monk living a common life with other monks. But the germ of the coenobitic as distinct from the anchoritic life is found as early as the beginning of the fourth century, when St. Anthony inaugurated it in northern Egypt, in a form in which the anchorites lived in separate cells but joined in common services on Saturdays and Sundays. Half a century later St. Basil introduced the common life under one roof, and to this day practically all the religious of the East follow his rule. The monastic life, with a good deal of variation in arrangement and with many features derived from the practice of the solitaries of Eastern deserts, reached Celtic christendom through Lerins and Gaul as early as the time of St. Patrick, and in course of time Celtic developments reacted on the Continent, besides spreading over the north of Britain. Meanwhile early in the sixth century a new development began in Italy that was destined to exercise an unending influence on Western monasticism. St. Benedict gathered followers around him at Subiaco, and several monasteries arose under his direction. The rule he composed for his own house of Monte Cassino forms the base of the whole idea of monastic life in the West. This rule, 'difficult, but possible to follow,' compiled with a wise statesmanship that allowed for individual weakness while setting up firm authority with considerable power of discretion, was based on the ideal of a life of work and study as well as of prayer and fasting, and was hard and ascetic without giving room for such excesses of austerity as would defeat its main objects.

In course of time the Benedictine rule displaced other forms of monasticism in the West. In the tenth century a decline from its early ideals gave occasion for a reform of the rule which spread from Cluny, and had great influence in England in later Saxon times. Whereas the original Benedictine system made each monastery self-governing under its own abbot, the Cluniac houses were priories directly responsible to the head house of Cluny and exempt from the visitation of the diocesan bishop to which other Benedictine houses were subject.

The end of the tenth century saw in the foundation of the Carthusian order by St. Bruno in 1086, a return to a modified anchoritic system, for each Carthusian monk had his own cell. The same period saw another and more important revolt against what some felt to be increasing Benedictine laxity, when Robert, the Benedictine abbot of Molesme, founded in 1098 the abbey of Cîteaux in Burgundy for the strict observance of the rule of St. Benedict, only with greater austerity. His followers, Stephen Harding and St. Bernard, early in the following century caused this new Cistercian order to spread with such rapidity that in the thirteenth century there were no less than six hundred houses. Like the Cluniac reform of the Benedictines, the Cistercian order was centralised, each monastery owning obedience to the abbot of Cîteaux. It is unnecessary here to do more than glance at the Cistercian characteristics of secluded valley sites, agricultural work, extreme simplicity of architecture (at first), the large number of lay brethren or conversi, and the consequent peculiarity of plan of buildings.

The same period that saw the second series of reforms of the Benedictine order, of which the chief was the Cistercian, saw also the beginnings of the order of Augustinian Canons Regular. The monastic movement was not originally clerical, and in early days the great majority of monks were laymen. But from the time at least of Chrodegand, bishop of Metz, towards the end of the eighth century, the clergy attached to cathedral churches observed some kind of rule, particularly in regard to divine service and common meals, though more usually they came to live in separate houses near their common church. They were collegiate bodies, and as they followed a rule as compared with the rest of the secular (i.e. not monastic) clergy, they were known as canons. In course of time some of these bodies of clergy developed in a monastic direction and followed a rule modelled on an adaptation of a letter of St. Augustine of Hippo to a congregation of religious women. Such canons became known as Augustinian or Austin Canons, or Canons Regular, to distinguish them from the secular canons who, although bound together as members of a collegiate body, did not live like monks. The order did not receive papal recognition till 1139, but it had been widely spread for some time previously. It seems to have appeared in England about 1106, when the priory of St. Botolph, Colchester, was founded. ‘The number of English Augustinian houses at its highest point reached 218, and of these 138 were founded before 1175. At the suppression of the monasteries there were about 170 Augustinian houses, while of Benedictine houses there were from 130 to 140. Augustinian houses varied greatly in size and wealth, and at no time did their wealthier abbeys approach the immense revenues of the greater Benedictine houses ; while their average income was very moderate. Each house was governed by a “prelate,” generally known as the prior, but in some twenty-four cases as the abbot. Most of their abbeys were in the midland districts : in Yorkshire, Nottinghamshire, and Norfolk, where their houses were numerous, the title of prior was universal. In 1133 one of their convents, Carlisle, was raised to the dignity of a cathedral priory. Their growth was analogous to that of the Benedictines ; each house with its cells was an independent community ; their visitor was the diocesan bishop, and very few of their houses became permanently exempt from visitation. The order also held its general Chapters, at which two visitors were appointed yearly for each of the provinces into which its houses were divided.’¹

12. LOCAL HISTORICAL MATTER

The Rule is followed by the History of the miraculous foundation of the monastery, the story of a miracle during the building, the history of the foundation of the daughter house of St. Mary’s Isle, and a list of abbots, unfortunately nearly all cut away. Historical memoranda such as these are not infrequently found in books of this kind, and may be looked upon as connected with the particulars of founders and benefactors which were added to their names in the lists of obits read out in chapter.

The History of the foundation is well known ; it has been printed in the second volume of the Bannatyne Miscellany, and Bellenden's translation is reprinted in the introduction to the Liber Cartarum Sanctae Crucis. The rubric at the head of it may be translated :

'The following is the history of the miraculous foundation of the monastery of Holyrood near Edinburgh by David the most mighty, most just and most devout king of Scots, son of Malcolm Canmoyr king of Scots, and of St. Margaret the queen, his wife, the daughter of Edgar, son of Edmund Irnside king of the English.'

After a rather pietistic prologue, the writer goes on to tell the familiar story of how it happened that in 1128 King David was on a visit to his castle near Edinburgh (castrum puellarum prope Edinburgh), and that after mass on the feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross (14 Sept.) the court wished to go hunting in the great forest called Drumselch, which then adjoined the south side of the town. The king's secretary and confessor Alwin, a wise and religious Austin canon from Merton in Surrey (monasterii de meritonne prope londonias), who had served the king when he was Earl of Huntingdon and Northumberland and Lord of Cumbria, warned him not to hunt on so solemn a feast day. The king, however, was persuaded by his court, and after taking some food, mounted his horse and rode eastwards through the valley called Abergare, which is now the Canongate, between two small hills (versus orientem per vallem vocatam abergare . que nunc est via canonicorum inter duos monticulos). He waited for the huntsmen and hounds to drive out a stag, near the north side of Salisbury Crag (non procul a pede rupis dicte *salisbere versus boream). Suddenly a very beautiful stag rushed towards him from near a spring ; his frightened horse bolted northwards, and the stag attacked and overturned both king and horse where the church of Holyrood stands now, wounding the king in the thigh. The king, wishing to grasp the stag's horn in self-defence, seized a cross which there was between the stag's horns, and the cross came away in his hand. The stag disappeared towards the spring whence it came, and so the spring was afterwards called the spring of the crucifix (fons crucifixi in posterum appellatus est). The king lay wounded, holding the cross ; his confessor Alwin comforted and also reproved him. He was carried back to the castle, and Alwin ordered the cross to be carried before him. That night the king in his sleep heard a voice calling him 'David' three times, and adding 'Make a house of canons devoted to the cross' (Fac devotorum crucis edem canonicorum). In the morning he told Alwin, and after he recovered he informed his council that, impelled by the vision, he had decided to found a house in honour of the Holy Cross. Because there were few workmen in Scotland competent for such an undertaking, he sent to France, whence his ambassadors returned with twenty skilled men, and in 1128, with consent of his son Henry and also of his council, he began to build the monastery in the place where the cross was brought him by the stag, giving it the name of the House of Holy Cross, in Scots Halyrudhous, making his confessor Alwin the first abbot, and giving the cross for a dowry, besides churches, lands, and other possessions.*

The story of the miracle during the building relates how one of the chief joiners fell to the ground while working on the roof and was apparently dead. Alwin the abbot ordered the body to be laid before the high altar. King David visited the abbey the following morning, and on being told what had happened, knelt and prayed beside the joiner, and after a time commanded the mass of the holy cross to be celebrated.

After the mass the king uncovered the joiner's face, and seeing signs of life, ordered him to be removed to a quiet resting-place, where he recovered.

Next comes the account of the foundation of the Priory of St. Mary's Isle, near Kirkcudbright, preceded by the following rubric :

' This is the history of the foundation of the Priory of the Isle of Traile, and how Fergus the great Lord of Galloway, its founder, obtained the peace of King David and gave the island and other possessions to the monastery of Holyrood, and after becoming a religious, was buried there.'

During the building of Holyrood, the story goes, Fergus through some trifling fault seriously offended the king, who was minded to punish him severely. He asked advice of Alwin, who was afraid to intercede for him. Between them they agreed that Fergus should put on the habit of a canon regular, and ask the king's peace and forgiveness among the rest of the brethren. One day when the king came to see the progress of the building, Alwin, in the name of the convent, begged the king to be present in chapter and pardon their transgressions. He consented, and sat in the middle, while the brethren lay prostrate around him. The abbot then asked the king's pardon for any offences committed against him, for his blessing, and that he would give each one the kiss of peace. The king answered that he forgave all their offences, and commanding himself to their prayers, rose from his seat and kissed the abbot's hand, saying, ' Peace to thee, brother, with the divine blessing.' Here the story ends at the foot of the first column on the verso of folio 72, and the next column begins with the list of abbots. But it is clear that a half leaf was at one time fixed to the page by its inner edge being pasted on between the columns. This leaf would include the space of two columns, ample for the continuation of the story. The next leaf has been cut out, so that the latter part of the list of abbots is gone.

There is no reason to think that the story of the foundation of the abbey is altogether devoid of truth, notwithstanding the allowances that must be made for the miraculous element. It is not at all improbable that King David went hunting against Alwin's advice on some holy day, and that he was attacked by an infuriated stag and thrown from his horse near the site of the abbey. It is even possible that when thrown he may have found a crucifix on the ground. From such an incident it would not be a long step to the story of the crucifix having been found between the horns of the stag, on the analogy of the legend of St. Hubert. Thankfulness for such an escape might well have led the king to found the abbey, especially when acting under the advice of the Augustinian Alwin, who would naturally have the interests of his own order at heart.

Recent excavations conducted on the site of the choir of the abbey church by Mr. W. T. Oldrieve, acting for H.M. Office of Works, revealed the fact that an earlier church of much smaller dimensions had existed on the same site before King David's foundation of 1128. This tends to discount the 'miraculous' story of the foundation, but it also makes it difficult to understand the foundation charter, which does not mention any such church as already existing. It may have been in ruins or deserted. It may have been ignored as a Celtic survival with 'nescio quo ritu barbaro,' to quote St. Margaret's biographer's contemptuous reference to the older rite. In any case, it would seem as if every effort must have been made to give David all the credit of a new foundation, both by the foundation charter and also by the 'miraculous' story, whether or not there was any truth in the hunting incident.

The valley leading eastwards from the Nor' Loch to Holyrood is described in the 'miraculous' story as Abergare, apparently by false assimilation from the word herbergare, to erect or establish, used in the phrase herbergare quoddam burgum inter eandem ecclesiam et meum burgum, near the end of the foundation charter. The misreading of this word was intimately connected with long disputes over the burgh of Canongate in later times, the documents concerned with which are printed in Liber Cartarum Sancte Crucis.

This is not the place to do more than allude to the buildings of the monastery.¹ The church was of large size for Scotland, and was almost the only great church in the land with a stone vault over the nave. There was a central tower 30 ft. 6 in. square, the nave being 128 ft. 10 in. long inside, and the choir 108 feet long, making a total internal length of 267 ft. 4 in. The choir had an additional north aisle, and a square east end, the east ends of the aisles being in line with the east end of the Lady chapel, which was behind the high altar. The east end of the earlier church was beneath the south-western portion of the choir. The western towers, once surmounted by short, thick, lead-covered spires, projected from the west front in a very unusual way, leaving the west end of the nave recessed for a distance equal to the sides of the towers. The architectural details of the nave show foreign influence, rare in Scotland in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, when English forms overspread the land, and thus bear out the statement in the foundation story that masons were brought from France.

The conventional buildings were on the south side of the church, and the eastern part of the north cloister walk still remains, with the eastern processional doorway, which is among the earliest work existing. While nothing more than the nave remains above ground, the foundations of the choir are left exposed as far as possible, and there are also sufficient of the foundations of the chapter-house to show that it was either octagonal or apsidal.

It is not in the least likely that the conventional buildings, now destroyed, were on any but the usual plan, arranged on the sides of the cloister court in the normal way. The nave of the church was on the north side of the cloisters; the cellars, stores (and guest accommodation at first) occupied the west side; the frater or refectory was on the south side; the east side, adjoining the south transept of the church, contained the ‘parlour,’ entrance to chapter-house, which projected in the middle eastwards, and warming-house, all on the ground floor, with the dorter or dormitory above; while the infirmary was no doubt an offshoot from the south-east corner. The kitchen was probably outside the south-west corner of the buildings, conveniently near the west end of the refectory. The whole arrangement can be seen best in Scotland at Dryburgh, which was a house of Premonstratensians, or reformed Augustinians.¹ There, although much of the church is gone, the rest of the buildings remain to a very large extent. Latterly the guest-house may have been separate, and the abbot almost certainly had a separate house.

Like all monastic churches, that of Holyrood must have been divided at the crossing, or west of it, by two closed screens, each supporting a gallery or loft. The eastmost, known as the pulpitum, had a central doorway and enclosed the canons’ choir on the west, the upper stalls being ‘returned,’ as it is called, against the east side of it, as they remain to this day at Carlisle.² This screen may have stood beneath the eastern arch of the central tower, or a bay or so farther west. A short distance to the west of it, under the western arch of the crossing (or farther west, according to the position of the eastern screen), the nave of the church was crossed by another screen, called the rood-screen, because it supported the loft beneath the rood, or great crucifix with St. Mary and St. John on either side, which occupied a conspicuous position in every mediaeval church. This screen bounded the parochial part of the nave on the east ; an altar, probably the parish altar of St. Mary, stood against the middle of it, and it was pierced by a doorway on either side, leading from the parish church into the small space between the two screens. Farther west still, the parish choir was no doubt enclosed by an open-work screen, something like the open rood-screen of an ordinary parish church. In a church of secular canons, like the majority of the cathedrals, there was only one of these great closed screens, the rood being above the pulpitum, which was therefore also the rood-screen.

Of the exact positions of the screens at Holyrood we know nothing, except the fact that they must have existed. But judging from the general plan of the church and the analogy of other cases, the probability is that the canons' choir was within the eastern limb of the church, as at Carlisle, Hexham, and Kirkham, and that the parish altar and rood-screen were beneath the western arch of the crossing, in the position of the present east end. The high altar, we know, had the Lady chapel behind it, and must therefore have stood against another screen, pierced no doubt by doors on either side, like the rood-screen. The aisles must have been divided into chapels by screens, the lesser altars (except those at the ends of the aisles) standing against them, so as to secure orientation.

The procession before high mass on Sundays started from the high altar, turned into the north choir aisle, passed through the Lady chapel behind, thence through the chapels in the south aisle and out into the east walk of the cloister through the doorway which still exists ; it visited the various parts of the monastery and returned to the church by the doorway opposite the west walk of the cloister. Passing up the nave, a station was made before the rood—at Holyrood this would also be before the parish altar; then the procession divided so as to pass through the doorways on either side of the altar, and rejoining in the space behind, proceeded through the pulpitum into the choir, making the final station before the high altar. The convent took their places in choir; the sacred ministers returned to the vestry, and re-entered for high mass during the singing of the introit a little later.

13. THE ORDINALE

The historical memoranda are followed by the ordinale, which occupies a larger space than any other part of the book, and contains considerably more matter. It is the most characteristic and interesting portion of the contents, and, as has already been pointed out, is of first-rate liturgical importance. To describe or discuss it in detail is out of the question in a general introduction like the present.

All that is proposed is to indicate certain matters of special importance and to make a few explanations for the general reader. To rightly understand a liturgical document of this kind, some knowledge is necessary both of the services and ceremonial, and of the life of a monastery. The former have been very briefly glanced at already in considering this book as a whole (pp. xx-xxv). The daily life occupies a subordinate position in the ordinale. It is described in detail in the Barnwell Observances.¹ Here it is only possible to give the barest outline. Like all the older religious orders, the canons regular rose at or soon after midnight for the long choir service of mattins, which consisted of a varying number of psalms and anthems, lessons and responds,² and was immediately followed by the shorter service of lauds, composed chiefly of a few psalms with anthems, a hymn, the Benedictus, and one or more collects. On festivals this long service was dignified by a more elaborate use of bells, by the anthems being sung and the lessons read by seniors, the wearing of copes by officiants, by the use of incense, and so forth. Between one and two the brethren went to bed again, and after a much longer sleep rose at daybreak and went into church for the short service of prime, which was followed by morning mass and private masses,¹ after which all went to the chapter-house for the business arrangements of the day, which were preceded by the short service described above (pp. xlii-xliv), for which this book was required. After chapter the brethren began their work. Somewhat later the short choir service of terce was sung, after which the mixtum, that is bread soaked in wine, was distributed to novices and the infirm. Afterwards came high mass of the day, preceded on Sundays and solemn days by the procession described on p. lxiii. High mass was followed by the short choir service of sext, during which the servants and the reader at table dined. Then, about midday, came dinner (prandium) in the frater, during which the brethren were read to by the reader, who had already dined himself, and who occupied a pulpit in the wall, such as still exists at Carlisle or Dunfermline. This was near the east end of the frater where the high table was, at which the president and his guests sat. In winter the canons returned to the cloister² and worked until the next short choir service of none; in summer they went to the dorter for a midday rest. This made up for the shorter night, for in summer the whole day

¹ Private masses were said by single priests, each of course with a clerk to serve, in the side chapels which were formed in the aisles and transepts of the church. Many of them went on simultaneously. They were a somewhat late development in Latin christendom, and are unknown in the East, where, generally speaking, there is still but one altar and one solemn celebration of the liturgy, and that not every day.

² It should be remembered that the cloister was covered, and had glazed windows, and that in it was done all the work that was possible, especially study and instruction.

was longer, as they went to bed later and rose earlier, so as to make full use of the daylight. Indeed the whole scheme of the monastic day was regulated by the principle of longer intervals in summer than in winter, and not by that of fixed hours. From none to evensong the convent worked, although in some places, e.g. S. Denis, Paris, they were allowed to walk in the meadows before evensong. Evensong consisted of psalms with anthems, a hymn, Magnificat, and one or more collects; like mattins and lauds, and unlike the lesser services, it was an occasion for ceremonial which varied with the importance of the day. The brethren then went to the chapter-house and listened to a reading from some monastic author; this was called collation, because the Collations of Cassian were very often read; the word also came to be used to include a drink of beer, which followed in the refectory in some places. The day concluded with the service of compline, and the brethren retired to the dormitory for the first part of the night.

This is only a very rough sketch of the canons' day. In Lent and on fast days there were variations. High mass was sung later; prandium was consequently later, and was the only meal. In other religious orders there were different arrangements; the Cistercians, for example, stayed out working on the land, and said sext and sometimes none privately. In all religious houses there were some whose special work did not allow them to take part in all the services, and there were also conversi or lay brethren, who only attended very few services.

Scattered through the ordinale will be found various references to the different alterations which the season required in the arrangement of the canons' day, as well as to liturgical changes in the ritual and ceremonial.

The general reader must be cautioned against drawing false conclusions from the general appearance of a highly technical document like this ordinale. For example, the services it deals with are in no sense specially elaborate, nor are they described with any excessive amount of detail. A great deal is left to general knowledge and tradition. But given the Christian year, with its fixed Christmas and its variable Easter, and services arranged in series for the seasons and saints' days, besides special services, it follows that there must be some rules for carrying out the system and making the necessary adaptations for the different varieties of years. To do this in the briefest manner requires a good deal of space, and provision has to be made for contingencies which only very rarely occur. It must also be remembered that by the time this document was drawn up, a whole series of secondary services had come to be added to the principal ones, through the greater part of the year.¹

The ordinale combines the temporale and the sanctorale in sections ; thus, not only are the directions for the saints' days at Christmastide included in their place among the instructions for the season, but the saints' days from SS. Fabian and Sebastian to the Annunciation are inserted between Epiphany and Septuagesima (pp. 84-87), and St. Mark and the other days in April and May are included after Easter. There is an unfortunate lacuna in Advent ; the whole of fol. 73v is left blank. Apparently the book from which the writer was copying had leaves about half the size, and one of these leaves was lost. So a page was left vacant with a view to being filled at some future time, and the filling never took place.

The ordinale contains some allusions to other uses. For example, on p. 71 the writer refers to the fact that some leave off kneeling at Evensong for the Christmas festival season when the anthems known as the Great O's are begun on 16th December, sed nos solitum cursum tenemus. The other custom referred to here was that of Sarum among other uses, followed by the seculars. A reference to other customs occurs on p. 77 in connection with what is done in nonnullis magne auctoritatis ecclesiis if Innocents' day falls on a Sunday. In the matter of the service for the Sunday after Christmas (p. 79), we are told de hoc officio diversi diversa senciunt; on the Vigil of the Epiphany alii jejunant alii non (p. 81); and on p. 83 there is a reference to the practice of the Cluniacs.

On Candlemas Day the candles are blessed by the prelate before the high altar with but little ceremony. The procession makes a station before the refectory and then the usual one in the nave of the church. The candles are offered at the offertory and extinguished, except that of the celebrant, which burns on a candlestick beside the altar until the end of the service.

On Ash Wednesday the ashes are blessed and distributed in the usual way, and those in the procession wear their ordinary black copes and not ecclesiastical vestments (p. 90). The litany is begun when the procession enters the church. At Guisborough the brethren appear to have received the ashes in the cloister.

From Ash Wednesday to Maundy Thursday the three ministers of high mass washed the feet of three poor men after mass, and gave them bread.

On the First Sunday¹ in Lent after compline, the sacrist hung up the great Lent veil between the choir and the sanctuary, and then, or on Monday before prime, covered the crosses, reliquaries, crowns,² and images. The veil was drawn back during any feast day from after high mass on the vigil, but let down for the ferial mass on the day itself. It was raised during the gospel of ferial masses and for the Wednesday and Friday processions. This was all very usual, and the ordinale also gives full details for most of the other ritual and ceremonial alterations which marked the Lent season.

² This is suggestive of fairly early date. These crowns were ornaments which were frequently hung in front of and over altars before the thirteenth century.

The Palm Sunday procession is described with some fulness. As in so many other mediaeval rites, it contains certain elements of religious drama. In common with that described in Lanfranc's Constitutions, and with other English and Norman uses, the reserved eucharist was carried in it. But there was nothing like the elaboration of Sarum, Hereford, or Rouen. In the early morning two canons in albes removed the eucharist to a tent that was set up ubi provisum fuerit, presumably outside the monastery buildings. During terce the sacrist spread a carpet before the high altar and placed upon it the palms, flowers,¹ and leaves, which were blessed by the prelate, apparently in choir habit, assisted by deacon and subdeacon, but without ceremony. The prelate removed the stole he had worn for the blessing and returned to the choir ; after the distribution of palms, the procession began, first those carrying the banners, then the holy water bearer, then the cross bearer, taperers and thurifer, in albes, the subdeacon in a tunic with the textus, the deacon with the book from which the gospel was to be read,² then the cantors and the convent, the prelate last. The first station was at a table covered with a cloth, a little distance from the tent, from which the two brethren emerged with the eucharist as the procession drew near, other two brethren spreading two cloths on the ground before them, one after the other. They then placed the feretrum containing the eucharist on the table, round which the ministers and the bearers of the apparatus processionis grouped themselves, the deacon, thurifer, and one taperer on one side, the subdeacon, holy water bearer, and the other taperer on the other side, the cross bearer behind, facing

² The textus was originally the gospel book, but in course of time it was often so richly and heavily bound that in actual use it became customary to read the gospel from another book.

the convent, and the banners in the background. The textus was placed on the table beside the feretrum. Then the anthem Ave rex noster was sung. The ordinale provides for what is to be done si conventus sit in capitulo ad processionem; the meaning is a little obscure, but it seems to be a provision for making this station in the chapter-house in bad weather. After censing the eucharist, the deacon proceeded with lights and incense to read the gospel Cum appropinquasset, which describes the entry of our Lord into Jerusalem. Then there might be a sermon to the people, presumably to drive home the scripture lesson taught by this dramatic ceremonial. The procession started again, and went to the door of the church, where the feretrum with the eucharist was set on a table prepared with a cloth,¹ at which a similar station was made. A place above the doorway² was hung with curtains, in which four of the brethren, or four boys, sang the hymn 'Glory, laud, and honour,' alternately with the convent. At the end of it, the procession re-formed, and entered the church, singing the respond Ingrediente domino, going as far as the ostium monasterii, that is to say the doors through the rood-screen on each side of the parish altar in the eastern part of the nave. There they made a station and the rood was unveiled. On entering the choir, a final station was made before the high altar, the convent took their places, the bells were rung with a clash, and the office, i.e. the introit, of the mass was begun. Meanwhile the sacred ministers re-entered carrying palms, the deacon and subdeacon being now in chasubles.³

¹ So also Lanfranc.

There is the usual provision (p. 101) for gradually extinguishing a number of candles during mattins of the last three days of holy week, a curious survival of the gradual putting out of artificial lights as daylight strengthened during the protracted mattins of earlier days. This had been long forgotten when the ordinale was written, and we find the usual mystical meanings attached to the custom by mediaeval writers. The number of candles varied in different rites ; here, as at Sarum, it was twenty-four.

On Thursday before Easter there are elaborate rules for the great maundy, when the convent washed the feet of as many poor men as the number of brethren in the monastery at the time, with two for the prelate and as many others as he should choose for the familiares, and one for each of the brethren who had died during the year. The washing took place in the cloister, the prelate's poor men sitting in the north-west corner, the rest arranged along the north and west sides. During the ceremony the first section of the psalm Beati immaculati was sung, with the anthem Dominus ihesus between each verse. Afterwards each poor man received four coins, called nummi in one place and denarii in another, and after being taken where a good fire had been prepared, were given a share of food (prebenda), which they might either eat there or take away.

After none the ministers vested for mass, the seven penitential psalms were said before the altar, and all the bells were rung more slowly than usual. Their ropes were then tied up until Easter Even. All the convent received communion, and the hosts to be reserved were wrapped in the corporal on which they had been consecrated, placed in a chalice, and taken in procession by the deacon to a place prepared for the purpose, in which the prelate deposited them. Then the washing of the altars was carried out.

It is a relic of the early Roman use of this vestment by nearly all the assistants, before the dalmatic and tunicle were used by them. In mediaeval times in England the dalmatic and tunicle seem to have gradually dispossessed the chasuble for the assistants, except perhaps in cathedral and monastic churches, until, in the middle of the sixteenth century, we find the first English Prayer Book ordering tunicles for the assistant ministers without qualification as to season. In parish churches this seems to have been the practice for a long time before 1549, to judge from the evidence of inventories.

Between supper and compline the maundy of the brethren took place in the chapter-house, when the prelate washed the feet of the rest. Then the deacon read the gospel Ante diem festum pasche at the lectern in the chapter-house, with incense and the same ceremonies as at high mass. At the words Surgite eamus hinc all went in procession to the refectory, or frater, where they partook of the potum caritatis.

On Good Friday there is not much that calls for special notice. The ceremonial of the veneration of the cross is very like that of Sarum, and the cross is uncovered by the priests that bring it and not by the celebrant. But the deacons who sing Agyos wear chasubles here.¹ There seems to have been no Easter Sepulchre, as the ordinale is silent as to any placing of the eucharist or the cross in it.²

On Easter Eve the ceremonial is very close to that of Sarum ; indeed several passages in the Sarum Consuetudinary for that day (and apparently for that day only) are verbally almost the same as the corresponding parts of this ordinale.³

³ These are §§ lxix and lxx, pp. 144 to 153 of The Use of Sarum, vol. i., The Sarum Customs as set forth in the Consuetudinary and Customary, ed. W. Howard Frere, Cambridge, 1898. Most but not all of these passages belong to the later recension of the Consuetudinary. Examination of the Sarum text shows that there is a great deal more on Easter Eve that comes from the same source as Holyrood, although Holyrood has not included it. The phraseology is the same, and there is the same recurrence of mystical explanations, common at Holyrood, but strange to the rest of the Sarum

The compilers of the Sarum book seem to have drawn for this occasion upon the same source as that from which this Augustinian book was taken. Careful examination shows that neither document is copied from the other, and the passages in the Sarum book have the appearance of being abridged from a book that was closely akin to the Black Canons' ordinale.

After the blessing of the new fire, which probably took place in the nave, the procession returned to the choir singing the hymn Inventor rutili alternately with two cantors, who were in silk copes, not as at Sarum in surplices only. At the blessing of the paschal candle the five grains of incense had been fixed in it before the service, as in Lanfranc's Constitutions, instead of after the words incensi hujus sacrificium and the censing, as at Sarum.¹

The lessons, tracts, and collects follow a very common order, and are the same as at Sarum, except that the fourth lesson is Haec est hereditas instead of Scripsit Moyses as at Sarum, and an additional collect is added at the end. In returning from the blessing of the font a third litany is sung, instead of the Sarum Rex sanctorum.²

document. At the same time it is easy to trace the adaptations to Sarum, such as references to clericis de superiore gradu and the like.

The passages in the Holyrood book which are common to the Sarum Consuetudinary on this day are :

p. 113, ll. 17 to 26	=Sarum, op. cit. p. 145.
p. 114, ll. 15 to 21	= " " p. 146.
p. 114, ll. 24 to 30	= " " p. 147.
p. 114, l. 35 to p. 115, l. 9=	" " p. 148.
p. 117, ll. 33 to 36	= " " p. 151.
p. 119, ll. 17 to 37	= " " p. 151.

Some of these are somewhat altered, and elsewhere there are less definite indications of the use of a common source.

¹ This ceremony is the result of a misunderstanding of the words incensi huius sacrificium, which refer to the paschal candle and not to incense. Some early mediaeval ceremonialists thought incense was intended, and they invented a ceremony to fit the words. See A History of the Use of Incense, E. G. Cuthbert F. Atchley, Alcuin Club, Collection xiii, London, 1909, pp. 136-8.

² Sarum seems to be the only English rite that has this, though it is common in German uses, see Missale Westmonasteriense, iii. col. 1433.

There were no special ceremonies as at Sarum and elsewhere on the morning of Easter day. It is provided that if the canons have care of parishioners, a mass is to be said for them in the morning and a sermon preached after the singing of the offertory (p. 121). Evil-livers of various kinds are to be warned lest they presume to receive communion to their condemnation and not to their souls' health. It was apparently expected that those present would make some promise of amendment of life after the sermon. Communion is to be given after mass, not in the ancient place in the course of the action, and the priest is to remove his chasuble for convenience in administering. The communicants are to be presented to him by one assistant, and another assistant is to administer wine mixed with water *ut communicati . . . hoc poculo confirmentur.*¹ It is added that, according to the canons,² he who does not communicate at least thrice a year is not to be accounted a Catholic.³ Those who ought not, or are unable, to communicate are to be given blessed bread, eulogias id est oblatas—the same as the French pain benit, the Greek ἀριδώπον, and a form for blessing it follows.

The procession to the font is provided for after evensong with a second station before the rood, which is to take place si ad

² i.e. Concil. Agath., A.D. 506, c. 18 in Gratiani Decret., lib. iii. dist. 2, c. xix.

fontes eundum non est, in which case the altare crucifixi, that is the altar in the nave in front of the rood-screen, is to be censed.

The processions of the greater litany on St. Mark's day (p. 131) and those of the three Rogation days (p. 135) are described, though with no special fulness. The usus Romane curie is referred to as the authority for having the litany on St. Mark's day, but there is no following of Roman use in details; e.g. the order of procession is, famuli with banners, holy water, cross, taperers, subdeacon with textus, deacon, priest with relics, convent. The procession goes normally to some other church for the mass.

On Ascension day the procession is to go foras circa curiam monasterii, that is to say round outside the wall which enclosed all the outer buildings connected with the monastery.¹

On the vigil of Pentecost the paschal candle is to be lighted before the prophecies, and burns till after compline on Whit-sunday.² Lights and incense are to be used at the gospel. On the day itself during the hymn Veni creator spiritus at terce, all the bells are to be rung, and the altars censed with two censers.³

After prime on the feast of St. Eustace, the morrow of All Saints' day, there was a solemn procession to the cemetery in commemoration of the faithful departed, with the three ministers vested for high mass and preceded by cross, lights, and incense. The service for this is in the manual, p. 200. The psalm Beati immaculati was sung, and the procession went from the common cemetery to that of the brethren, where a station was made and certain prayers said. They said the seven penitential psalms on the way back to the church, and high mass for the dead followed, with deacon and subdeacon in chasubles.¹

² At Sarum it had been removed before high mass on Friday after Ascension day. According to Roman use it is put out after the gospel at high mass on Ascension day; at Windesheim the Augustinians removed it after that mass.

³ See Atchley, History of the Use of Incense, pp. 300-305.

The ordinale concludes with a sort of ‘common,’ giving directions for the variations in ceremonial on the different classes of festivals. This part of the document is very largely based on Lanfranc’s Constitutions for the Benedictines, which are sometimes abridged, sometimes expanded, sometimes adopted verbally for a phrase or two.

On the highest feasts all the altars were prepared,² the seats in the frater and chapter-house covered with cloths, the floor strewn with rushes or straw, or hay in winter. At evensong all the lights of the church were lighted, and a light placed before each altar. The high altar was censed at Magnificat with two censers, and the other altars were also censed.

At mattins the singers and readers were vested in copes. Two priests censed the altar at the third respond of each nocturn and at the Benedictus at lauds. Three lights burned before the altar at the little hours. At the procession before high mass all wore copes, and the order was as follows: holy water, cross, taperers, thurifer, subdeacon in tunicle with textus, deacon in dalmatic, cantors of choir, boys of choir, the convent in order, lastly the prelate, occupying the place of the bishop in a procession according to Sarum use.³ At the end of the mass, as well as before it, all the bells were rung in classicum.

On feasts of second dignity the ceremonial was only slightly less. On all feasts of first dignity the brethren were to communicate and generaliter on those of the second. Apparently when the ordinale was first drawn up they received in both kinds.

² i.e. vested in frontals, with perhaps some of the ornaments. Of old, ornaments were not left upon altars out of service time, although the high altar generally had its frontal and curtains.

³ This order is practically the same as at Sarum and as that prescribed by Lanfranc.

A good deal of the ceremonial is taken for granted, e.g. the times of ministration for incense during mass on feasts prime et secunde dignitatis. During octaves we are told that at mass incense is used at the gospel, presumably not at other times therefore.¹ So with the lights round the altar. During octaves they had two ; on feasts of third dignity at evensong and mattins four ante altare, and the rest round about were lighted.² One censer was used. All in choir at mass wore copes.

On common feasts only the altars in the presbytery were parata. Only the high and morning altars were censed at Magnificat and Benedictus, unless there were one in the church dedicated in the name of the saint of the day. Three lights were lighted before the high altar.

As in the case of the highest feasts, so in the case of the lowest, those of three lessons in modum octavarum and private feasts of three lessons, much of the ceremonial is taken for granted, because it was that of ordinary days, and was more familiar to those concerned than were the modifications required for the intermediate grades. Besides, it was probably contained in the consuetudines, or whatever at Holyrood corresponded to the Observances at Barnwell.

Here and there the compilers of the ordinale inserted extracts from the canon law. The section relating to the observance of the principal feasts by the people³ is lifted

³ p. 157, ll. 1-29, Grat. Decr. lib. iii, De consecratione, dist. 3, cap. i. The rubric of the Decretum, here copied into the text, erroneously attributes this list of days to a council bodily out of the Decretum of Gratian, which is also the source of the rule about communion thrice a year as the minimum for lay folk,¹ and of the quotation from St. Cyprian's letter to Euricacius on actors,² as well as of the references to St. Victor³ and to Gregory VII⁴ on the keeping of Easter. This use of the Decretum shows that the ordinale, in the form in which it was copied at Holyrood, was not earlier than the middle of the twelfth century, while the absence of any reference to the feast of Corpus Christi suggests that it was probably not much later than the middle of the thirteenth century.

14. THE MANUALE

The Manuale—to use the name generally given in this country⁵ to the book containing the occasional services—includes the orders for the visitation, anointing, and communion of the sick, the commendation of a departing soul, and the burial of the dead. To these are added short forms for the reception of one brought for burial from outside, for the procession to the cemetery in commemoration of souls departed, with blessings of meat and eggs, butter and cheese, a general blessing, and one for food and drink. There follow the forms said in chapter commanding those departing on a journey and giving thanks for a safe return, with that used on Saturdays at the weekly maundy. In manuals written for religious orders who had care of souls in a parish, the of Lyons. Richter, in his great critical edition of the Corpus Juris Canonici, Leipsic, 1879, traces it to a capitulary of Ahyto of Basel (†822), and refers to Hartzheim, Concil. Germ., ii. 18.

⁴ p. 121, ll. 6-9, De cons., dist. 5, c. xv.

⁵ On the Continent in more recent times rituale is the name generally given to the corresponding book, which in German and Scandinavian dioceses was often called an agenda or obsequiale. Some of its services were frequently included in other books, such as missals and pontificals.

services for baptism and marriage are usually found, as at Guisborough, Westminster, Evesham, and elsewhere, but this is unfortunately not so in the book before us, which was evidently written wholly for use in the chapter-house and the monastic buildings, and not for use in the church.

As has already been indicated, the services follow a type which is characteristic of English Benedictine houses, and is found in the manuals of Canterbury,¹ Westminster,² Bury St. Edmunds,³ and Evesham.⁴ Exactly the same burial service, even to the wording of the rubrics, so far as it goes, is to be found in a manual that seems to have belonged to the Augustinian Canons of Bodmin; unfortunately this book is imperfect, and does not contain the visitation of the sick and the end of the burial service, or it would probably be found to be identical throughout. The litany also is practically identical, as will be seen later. The Bodmin book has a baptismal service with the gospel *Confiteor tibi pater*⁵ before Nec te latet, as at Westminster and Canterbury, which is also the case in the Guisborough manual.⁶ Collation with the rites of Canterbury, Westminster, Bury St. Edmunds, and Evesham shows substantially the same service, without verbal identity in rubrics, thus suggesting a common origin. The Oseney manual⁷ has very considerable variation, and that of Guisborough much more, but neither follow the secular rites of Sarum or York,⁸ although perhaps somewhat influenced by them. The burial service of the Victorine canons of St. Thomas, Dublin,¹ has a certain amount in common with that of Oseney, but hardly enough to suggest Victorine influence in the case of the latter. The burial service at Guisborough seems to show secular influence, especially in the last part.

The service for the visitation, anointing, and communion of the sick at Holyrood is practically identical with those of Canterbury, Westminster, and Bury St. Edmunds, except in the prayers said at the communion, and at Evesham the chief difference is that communion is given a little earlier in the service.² Following the communion comes a long series of benedictions at Holyrood and Evesham, which the other three rites do not give, and then the Litany with the prayer Proficisciere anima christiana. The Commendation of the departing, or departed, soul follows, and is the same in all. Then we find evidence of divergent usage due to local arrangements concerning the preparation of the body for burial. At Evesham the choir service of the dead is ordered, apparently in some connection with this, and at Westminster certain psalms. At Bury the corresponding forms are said after the body has been taken to the church, which is most likely to have been the case at Holyrood. The burial service is practically common to all.³

² Evesham prefixes another litany to the beginning of the service, adds three collects before the confession, and gives communion after Deus humane generis, with three collects not in Holyrood, but of which two are at Westminster, two at Canterbury, and one at Bury.

At Holyrood the psalms Domine probasti, Domine exaudi, Laudate dominum, with their anthems and the Benedictus are grouped together between Absolvimus and Te domine sancte. Westminster and Evesham alternate the second two psalms with the next two prayers, and place Benedictus after Tu nobis domine and then transpose Temeritatis and Domine sancte pater qui unicum. So Evesham and Canterbury, but Canterbury has the psalm Domine exaudi after Te domine, omits Laudate, and does not transpose Temeritatis and Domine sancte. All except Holyrood add Exequiis rite celebratis.

It must be remembered that by the time these services reached the form in which we find them in the mediaeval books, the rite of anointing that in earlier times was used as a part of the spiritual healing of the sick and to assist recovery, had come to be associated with the dying, and held to convey the special grace of removal of what mediaeval theologians defined as reliquiae peccatorum.¹ There was also a tendency to say certain commendatory forms after death, which had of old been used for the dying. The most important and perhaps the oldest part of the burial service, the celebration of the eucharist, is not very apparent to the casual reader of a book like the present, which merely refers to it with the words cantata vero missa. The form for the reception of one brought for burial from outside is presumably intended for the parishioners.

The short forms for blessings call for little remark and are of a type commonly used for their respective objects. Those for beginning and ending a journey are also common, and are practically the same as at Guisborough. At Llanthony the same forms were repeated several times during the day, and are entitled Benedic和平 ad fratres iter acturos . ad matutinas et ad .j. et iij. et vj. et ix datur benedic和平 . ad vesperas et ad completorium non datur. and benedic和平 ad fratres de via reuersos. Ad iij vj. et ix . et ad vesperas et completorium intrabunt ad benedictionem recipiendum.²

15. THE LITANY

The litany is added in a later hand, the same that wrote the preces for the day hours near the beginning of the book. It does not contain many names of saints and hardly any of definite local significance. St. Augustine is doubled, as might be expected, and if SS. Oswald, Paulinus, and Cuthbert might be held to suggest a north of England origin, SS. Edmund, Dunstan, and Swithin belong to the south. The latter part of the litany omits several of the usual petitions. A nearly identical litany is to be found in a fourteenth-century Augustinian psalter at Oxford,¹ which may just possibly have been written for Jedburgh. It transposes one or two saints and adds St. Ebba, but it is the same even in the group of collects at the end. The litany in the Bodmin manual is also the same; it adds SS. Petroc and Germanus, doubling the latter, and has many more collects at the end, but it is otherwise almost identical. All that can be said is that this Holyrood litany is a copy of one written for English Augustinians.

16. THE INVENTORY OF CHURCH GOODS OF 1493

This is the last document in the book, although it is quite possibly not as late as the litany which precedes it. The writing is careful and regular, and is the same in which the agreement with the canons of Carlisle on fo. 8v is written. The following is a translation:—

This inventory was written on the 12th day of October in the year of our Lord 1493, of all the jewels, vestments, and ornaments of the high altar and vestry of the monastery of Holyrood in existence and remaining at the time of this writing.

2. Item a change of satin, of blue colour overgilt,⁴ namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, two albes, an amice.
3. Item a change called Douglass,⁵ of gold colour, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, two albes and two amices.
4. Item a change called Earl Marschel,⁵ of cloth of gold, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, two albes, and an amice.
5. Item a change of cloth of gold, of blue colour, namely a chasuble, two tunicles, an albe.

9. Item, a change of best cramasey, of red colour, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, three albes, three amices, a stole, and a maniple.

Item, from of old,⁷ a stole and maniple of satin.

¹ mutatorium, change, used here for a set of vestments, a very rare word used for this purpose. It generally signifies rich and valuable secular garments, though Du Cange quotes an ordinary of the Canons Regular of St. Laud at Rouen at the end of the 1679 edition of John of Avranches, p. 312, in which it is used for a change of bed-clothes.

² tunica, used here, as frequently, for the deacon's dalmatic as well as the sub-deacon's tunicle. Latterly, both vestments came to be made almost if not quite identical.

³ examitum, an uncommon word, is here used for amice, or rather, for the apparel of the amice. There is apparently some confusion here with exametum or examitum, which Du Cange defines as pannus holosericus, the same word as samitum or sametum, the common form, e.g. dalmaticam de optimo exameto rubeo.—Gesta Innocentii, iii. p. 138.

⁴ superauratum, probably meaning very heavily embroidered with gold.

⁵ So called, no doubt, after the donor.

⁶ Probably = velvet, the same as 'vellous.'

⁷ de antiquo. Apparently used with the rest in this section.

10. Item, a change of damask, of glaucous¹ colour, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, three albes, three amices, a stole and a maniple.
11. Item, a change of valuce, of black colour for the dead, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, three albes, three amices.
12. Item, a change of satin, of black colour, from of old, for the dead, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles.
13. Item, a change of damask, of green colour, namely, a chasuble, two tunicles, two albes, two amices, and a third of blue colour.
14. Item, for ferial days, a chasuble of valuce, of red colour, and two tunicles.
Item, for the season of Lent, a chasuble of damask, of white colour, a stole and a maniple.
Item, an albe of pure silk,² called the albe of St. Thomas the Martyr.
Item, for the high altar, three veils or offertories, with three frontals,³ and a veil for the step above the altar for feast days.
Item, a carpet⁴ of cloth of gold, of red colour, for the high altar.
Item, a carpet of damask, of red colour, beneath the altar and another above the altar.
Item, a carpet of valuce, of black colour, for the dead, and another of damask, covered with the royal arms.
Item, two carpets of chamlet, of white colour, for feasts of the Blessed Virgin Mary.
Item, three cushions⁵ of cloth of gold for the high altar, and one of damask.

¹ Sea-green, sometimes thalassicus, or venetus, as opposed to ordinary green, as in no. 12.

² The albe was a linen vestment, although it had silk apparels, or movable patches attached to skirt and sleeves. But occasionally abnormal examples such as this are to be found. In Eastern christendom, the στοιχάπιον, Russian stichar, the same in origin as the albe, is regularly of silk.

³ frontalibus, here used for the frontlets, not the frontals, for which the context shows that stragulum is used.

⁴ stragulum, cf. canon 82 of the English code of 1603-4.

⁵ For the book; desks were occasionally used latterly, but cushions were more usual in mediaeval times. In England, Spain, and Austria they have been in continuous use for this purpose, in the more conservative churches.

Item, in the first place, a new cross of pure gold with precious stones, namely, thirty, with the wood of our Lord's cross, with a leather case.¹

Item, an old silver cross with the wood of our Lord's cross.

Item, a great silver cross with a foot, weighing a hundred and eighty ounces, with a wooden case.

Item, a silver cross for the sacrament, with a silver chain.

Item, a cross of crystal.²

Item, three silver gilt texts.

Item, a text of glass.³

Item, an ivory text.⁴

Item, a tabernacle of ivory for the altar of St. Katharine.

Item, a silver arm of St. Augustine, with his bone, and two rings weighing eighty-four ounces.

7. Item the chalice of the altar of the Holy Cross.
8. Item the chalice of Sir John Marschell.
9. Item the chalice of Sir John Weddaill.
10. Item another chalice, which is common, beside the chalices outside the chancel doors, namely (11) the chalice of the parish altar, and (12) the chalice of the infirmary,⁷ of silver but not gilt, and so there are twelve.

¹ No doubt a case of stamped leather of the kind known as cuir bouilli.

² i.e., a considerable amount of rock crystal, set in a metal frame, probably.

³ Covered with glass, rock crystal, or some kind of enamel.

⁴ Covered with ivory.

⁵ Ure=Urr, a parish in the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright and diocese of Glasgow.

⁶ The weight has never been filled in.

⁷ The infirmary was probably at the south-east corner of the monastery.

- Item, two old silver candlesticks.
 Item, four new silver candlesticks, weighing a stone and four pounds.
 Item, two silver candlesticks in the abbot's chapel of little weight.
 Item, two brass candlesticks, and two of iron for ferial days.

FOR THE PONTIFICALS OF THE ABBOT

 Item, a pastoral staff.
 Item, three rings.
 Item, an ivory comb, with a bodkin.
 Item, a girdle of silk.
 Item, three palls of silk to carry the cross or the sacrament.

 Item, a great eucharistial of silver, weighing a hundred and sixty ounces, and it is gilt, except two bells,¹ with precious stones.
 Item, a great cup of silver for the sacrament.
 Item, a silver gilt vessel for holy water, with a hyssop.²
 Item, two silver censers with a silver box ³ for incense.
 Item, two silver gilt cruets for the high altar.
 Note, that there are two silver cruets for the altar of Holy Cross.
 And two silver cruets for the altar of St. Katharine. And two silver cruets with one silver text, and an image of the Blessed Virgin, of ivory, with a silver foot ; and a glass cruet with the oil of Blessed Andrew,⁴ for the altar of St. Andrew.

¹ Miniature bells attached to the monstrance, to ring as the monstrance moved, perhaps taking the place of a bell to ring separately in the procession.

² Hyssop=sprinkler; this word is evidently suggested by the anthem usually sung at the sprinkling of holy water on Sundays—Asperges me domine ysopo et mundabor.

³ acerra, the classical word; the usual word was 'ship' in the vernacular.

⁴ Probably as in other similar cases, a scented oil believed to have been distilled from his remains; this or a similar phenomenon was very widely believed to have taken place in the case of certain great saints. Compare the very widespread belief that in many instances the bodies of saints have been immune from corruption.

Here follows the inventory of copes :—

- In the first place a new cope of cloth of gold of blue colour.
- Item, two copies of cloth of gold, of red colour, with two silver gilt morses, and one of them with precious stones, the other without stones.

Note that Robert, abbot of the monastery of Holyrood [departed from] the kingdom of Scotland on the second day of September in the year of our Lord 1494 to the land of Flanders, and thence to Rome. And this abbot brought for the replenishment of the monastery of Holy Rood, very cheaply, in the market-place of Bruges in [the Nether?]land, these jewels and vestments which follow in this writing, namely :

First, namely, for the honour of the Blessed Virgin Mary, a great vestment, namely a ‘stande,’ namely, a cope with chasuble and two tunicles, with three albes, three amices and their apparels of precious cloth of gold, of white colour. And twenty copies of damask, also of white colour, with orphreys of cloth of gold of blue colour, and some orphreys of valuce of black colour, and this vestment, in English a ‘stande,’ he gave to the vestry of the said monastery to remain in perpetuity among the jewels and vestments of the said monastery.

² Evidently a representation of the stag as said to have been seen by King David in the story of the foundation of the monastery.

Also at the same time the same abbot gave for the adornment of the high altar, four curtains of double tartara of blue colour, made and finished with their hangings¹ and other necessaries.

The most striking feature of the inventory, taken as a whole, is the meagreness of its contents for a monastery of such wealth and importance. It is true that some of the vestments and ornaments must have been very splendid, and that in actual practice there were plenty of beautiful things with which to carry out a stately service. But if we compare the contents of the vestry at Holyrood with those of an important English monastery, the difference is very marked. We need not go so far. St. Salvator’s College, St. Andrews, was richer ; if King’s College, Aberdeen, had not more vestments, it was as rich in other respects. And in spite of its royal connection and its situation close to Edinburgh, and much farther south, Holyrood could not compare with Aberdeen Cathedral in the wealth and number of its church goods and ornaments.

Fourteen full sets of vestments are enumerated, all with two tunicles specified, and nearly all with one to three albes and amices. In only four cases are stoles and maniples mentioned ; this is probably due to carelessness. It is difficult to know whether the albes and amices are the linen vestments in question, or their apparels, or both. It may be noted that no other linen is mentioned, no surplices, rochets,² corporals or

² The rochet, worn by Augustinian canons in choir instead of the surplice used by seculars, is a form of surplice with tight sleeves instead of long open ones. Being part of the monastic habit, it was naturally not included in a list of church ornaments, any more than the black choir cope (cappa nigra, or in this ordinale merely cappa as opposed to cappa serica, the rich cope of silk or other coloured material). The choir cope was a cloak of black stuff with a hood, and, like the rochet, was part altar cloths. Only one ‘single’ set of vestments—i.e. a set for a single priest, without deacon or subdeacon—is mentioned, and that is one of white damask for Lent.

Of these fourteen full sets, three are described as gold, though other coloured sets are cloth of gold, one is white, three are blue, three red, two green (including one ‘glaucous’), and two black, specified as ‘for the dead.’ Of the red sets, one is ‘for ferial days.’ As in so many cases where sets of vestments are specified in inventories as being for ferial days, the reason is probably their being old and worn, apart from any question of suitability of colour. The idea of a colour sequence only developed gradually; before the thirteenth century, and indeed long afterwards in most places there was little if any more notion of a colour sequence in the West than there is in the East at the present day. Only little by little did the use of colours become defined by the practice of great churches, and it is chiefly after the Reformation on the Continent that the fixed diocesan colour sequence is found. The usual mediaeval practice was to use the best vestments on the highest feasts independently of their colour, and old and shabby vestments on ferial, i.e. ordinary, week-days, and in Lent. At Rome, as early as the thirteenth century, violet was used for Advent, and from Septuagesima through the whole of Lent to Easter, green was used on ordinary days, and white soon came to be used for most feasts of our Lord and for all saints who were not martyrs. This remains the Roman of the monastic habit of a canon regular. It was worn over the rochet in choir except from Easter to Michaelmas, when the canons appeared in their white linen rochets only (see p. 113 l. 27, p. 154 l. 9). The practice of secular canons was often the same, except that they wore the surplice instead of the rochet and also used the fur almuce, not only when the cappa nigra was not worn, but sometimes underneath it. Some canons regular used the surplice and almuce, e.g. at Christ Church, Oxford, the brass of James Courthope, 1557, shows him dressed in these, like a secular canon. Underneath the rochet the canons wore a cassock, which in England in the sixteenth century seems to have been dark blue.

The rest of the clothing of the Black canons is described in the Barnwell Observances, pp. lxxiii-lxxxii.

practice down to the present day. But outside Rome, colour uses developed on other lines, with almost infinite local variation, and for a long time with much less rigidity ; though side by side with very great freedom, such obvious uses as white for virgins, red for martyrs, and black for the dead became usual everywhere : and on this side of the Alps plain white linen was used to represent sackcloth for the first four weeks of Lent and red for the last fortnight in Lent, including Good Friday. Soon we find special rules for great churches specifying a good deal more, for example at Westminster and Wells, and to some extent at Sarum and elsewhere. But there is abundant evidence that widespread as was the Sarum missal, the average parish church made no attempt to follow the few rules for colours that are given in it. It will be noticed that in this Holyrood ordinale only once is a colour mentioned, namely on Good Friday (p. 109), when the prelate is to wear casulam purpuream si habeatur si non unam de mediocribus. At this date purpureus indicates a dark red, though in the sixteenth century in some places¹ it had come to mean what we call purple. This use of red on Good Friday was very common indeed of old, and seems to have been one of the first colour uses to become fixed. It is the only colour direction in some mediaeval books ; for example, in the Arbuthnott missal. Elsewhere in the Holyrood ordinale references to vestments are in terms of value or the reverse, not in terms of colour. On Christmas day the priest is to be vested honorifice (p. 75) for the first mass, and the same phrase is used later on in the case of feasts of first dignity (p. 158) ; for the second mass the sacred ministers are to be vested sicut solent in dominicis. On octave days the priest is to be vested festivius quam solet in privatis diebus (p. 164), on common feasts festivo more (p. 168), on feasts of nine lessons honeste (p. 169). On Easter Eve at the blessing of the paschal candle the vesting is festivo more

(p. 113), at the prophecies and the consecration of the font the prelate is to put on una de mediocribus planetis, which he changes for alia festiva for the mass (p. 119).

From the colours mentioned in the inventory, it would be unsafe to make any deductions as to use, except in regard to white for Lent, most probably the first four weeks only, and that not on Sundays. It will be noted that there is only a single chasuble, stole and maniple, with no provision for deacon and subdeacon, also that the material is damask, not as was more usual, in England at any rate, fustian or linen or some coarse material. No result can be drawn from comparing the number of vestments of each colour, as several are merely called gold. The blue vestments must have been among the best there were, and there is no such quantity of white as to lead one to think that more than feasts of our Lady and virgins were kept in that colour. Of the thirty-three copes mentioned, blue and green predominate. There was a set of glaucous or sea-green vestments, with two purple copes. No yellow vestments are mentioned. At the end of the list of copes is one of purple with black orphreys pro hamera. This word has long been a difficulty with students, and the writer has been unable to find it in any of the dictionaries. The late bishop of Edinburgh, Dr. Dowden, believed it to be a form of the proper name Hamer, the old designation of the parish of Whitekirk in East Lothian, a possession of Holyrood. This is probably the true solution of the difficulty.

Comparatively few textile ornaments are recorded for the high altar, and none for any of the other altars. It is difficult to believe the inventory is complete in this. There was a frontal of red cloth of gold, one of black for the dead, another covered with the royal arms, a red damask frontal and upper frontal, and a white damask frontal and upper frontal for feasts of the Blessed Virgin Mary. The unusual word stragulum, literally a carpet, is used for the frontal, and the word frontellum for the frontlets, of which there were three.

Besides four cushions for the books, 'three veils or offertories' are mentioned among the ornaments of the high altar, and 'a veil for the step above the altar for feast days.' The last is a very puzzling entry. At first sight it almost suggests the shelf or gradine of the later renaissance altar, which has increased and multiplied at the expense of the proportions and dignity of both altar and reredos on the Continent, and to lesser extent in England in more recent times. What was the gradus super altare? Most probably an early low reredos, on the top of which the jewels and reliquaries were placed on high days; this would explain the word velamen. It is to be noticed that stragulum is applied to what hung above the altar as well as beneath it (subtus). These stragula were therefore clearly upper and nether frontals, therefore not the same as this velamen. Further the velamen pro gradu is included with the offertoria, which were long thin strips of material, probably silk, resting upon the shoulders of the ministers of the altar when holding certain things in them. Probably the gradus was not unlike a high shelf, and the upper frontal may have hung above it, on the screen which no doubt ran across the choir behind the high altar. The altar candlesticks are not likely to have been placed on the gradus, but in the usual mediaeval way upon the altar itself.

There were two crosses containing reputed relics of the true Cross, a cross of crystal, and a great silver cross with a foot, weighing 180 ounces. The fact of the foot being specified shows that it was separate, and used for the cross when it stood on the altar, the cross being also available as a processional cross when set on a staff.

The silver cross for the sacrament with a silver chain, appears to have been a kind of cross-shaped pix for reserving the holy Eucharist for the sick. Generally in England and in the north of France, particularly in the greater churches, and also in the south of Scotland, the Eucharist was reserved in the hanging pix above the high altar. In some places, particularly in the Low Countries and in the north of Scotland, a more or less elaborate structure, called a sacrament house, in the wall on the north side of the sanctuary, was used for reservation. At Aberdeen one of these took the place in the sixteenth century of the hanging pix which the inventories show to have been in use before. In the case of Holyrood some kind of suspension seems to have been practised. Beside the cross and its chains, we find 'a great cup of silver for the sacrament.' This is not a chalice ; the word cuppa here used is generally connected with the basin in which the pix was suspended. We may most probably conclude that either the cross was a cross-shaped pix standing in the cuppa or basin, or else that the cross formed a link between the chain and the basin.

The eukaristiale was of course a monstrance or shrine for the reserved Eucharist. In the pre-Reformation period it seems to have been used very seldom, perhaps only on the feast of Corpus Christi, and in the processions on Palm Sunday and Easter morning. Latterly there seems to have been some kind of exposition of the Eucharist in connection with the mass, but the modern Roman Catholic service of Benediction with the blessed Sacrament is of post-Reformation growth. The monstrance of gothic times, called by the name of 'eucharist' in the vernacular, was generally a very rich and elaborate piece of plate, seldom found except in the greater churches.

The 'texts' (textus) included among the plate were richly bound books of the liturgical gospels and epistles, with covers plated with silver and gold or adorned with enamels and precious stones. The custom of doing special honour to the gospel book is very ancient, and originated in the feeling that every possible effort should be made to emphasise the importance of the record of the life and words of our Lord over all the rest of holy scripture. Hence the book of the gospels was one of the very few objects allowed to be placed on the altar itself in early days, and it has long been one of the necessary and characteristic ornaments of the holy table all over Eastern Christendom. Just as the book of the law had been carried of old before the Roman magistrate as a sign of his office, together with other insignia such as lights and incense, so the book of the gospels came to be borne before the celebrant to the Christian altar, and carried before the deacon with the same insignia when he went to read the liturgical gospel. In course of time the epistle book was also richly ornamented, and both books or textus were set upright, one on either side of the altar. This is ordered in the rubrics of French missals down to very recent times, and the custom of setting up richly bound books in this position still survives in some conservative churches in England.

The tabernacle of ivory for St. Katharine's altar was probably an ornament of no great size. Tabernaculum, a tent, was used in mediaeval Latin for almost any kind of canopy, and also came to be employed to include the carved figures beneath a canopy. In this particular instance the ornament was very likely a small ivory triptych with rich canopy work.

The silver arm of St. Augustine was a reliquary shaped like an arm, to contain the arm bone. St. Giles', Edinburgh, had a similar reliquary and relic of St. Giles.

Ten chalices are specified 'beside the chalices outside the chancel doors.' Four were known by the names of their donors, including Kings David and Robert. The rest include chalices attached to particular altars, those namely of St. Mary, St. Andrew, St. Katharine, and Holy Cross. This tells us that these altars were all in the eastern part of the church. There would seem to have been an altar of Holy Cross, apart from the high altar, which must have been under that patronage. The parish altar was under the patronage of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and was probably, though not certainly, the altar which was in front of the rood-screen, probably between the two pillars at the east end of the nave, with a door on either side leading through the screen. We do not know its exact position or where the canons' choir began. It is certain, however, that a bay or two farther east, probably between the eastern piers of the crossing, but possibly farther west, there must have been a second screen called the pulpitum, with a single door in the middle closing the choir on the west. This is what is referred to as 'the chancel doors.'

There are very few candlesticks in the inventory. It was not usual in mediaeval times to leave candlesticks as permanent ornaments on altars that were not in use, and thus the same candlesticks could be used on one altar at one time and on another at another time. But for so large a church this is a very small list, and apparently only concerns the high altar. We have two old silver candlesticks, probably for festivals, two brass candlesticks, and two of iron, which the inventory tells us were 'for ferial days.' Beside these are four new ones of silver. It was very rare for more than two lights to be set on the altar of old. Additional lights were placed on standard candlesticks on the pavement before the altar, or upon the pillars or other supports of the curtains at the altar's ends, or they were hung from the roof. But there was never anything like the multitude of lights immediately behind the altar itself that has become customary on the Continent in modern times. It is possible that Holyrood was an exceptional case, where there were latterly as many as four, although there is no actual proof of this.¹

In the Liber Cartarum Sancte Crucis, Edinburgh, 1840, pp. 204-5, is printed the grant by the antipope Clement VII, dated from Avignon, 27th July 1379, to the abbot of Holyrood, 'cuius abbates qui fuerunt pro tempore principales Capellani dicti Regis esse consueuerunt sicut asseritur,' of the right to use the mitre, ring, and other pontifical insignia, and to give the solemn blessing after mattins, evensong, and mass, in the absence of a bishop or papal legate, in all churches subject to the monastery.

A list of ornaments for the abbot is given. Certain abbots obtained the right to use the special ornaments of a bishop, although themselves only in priest's orders. The abbot of Holyrood was one of these. So we find two mitres, one with precious gems, evidently a 'precious' mitre in the strict sense, and another of white damask, apparently a 'simple' mitre.¹ The two precious amices were evidently not the amices themselves, which obviously could only be made of linen, but richly ornamented apparels to be attached to them. The comb was for straightening the hair when displaced by the mitre, and is an object frequently found in this connection. The object called tela was probably a sort of bodkin, used for parting the hair, like the discerniculum of classical times.

An interesting and difficult question is raised by the entry tria pallia de serico ad portandum crucem seu sacramentum, at the end of this section. Their inclusion in it suggests that they were chiefly used on great occasions when the abbot pontificated. With them must be compared the previous entry pro majori altari tria velamina seu offertoria cum tribus frontalibus and the rest, among the furniture of the high altar. The pallia as well as the velamina seu offertoria were of the nature of sudaries or humeral veils, long cloths in which certain of the sacred vessels and ornaments were held. Originally their use, as the word sudary implies, was to protect the vessels from the moisture of the hands; in course of time they became signs of reverence and dignity.

From much earlier days the sacred vessels were carried to the altar wrapped in a long sudarium or offertorium, the ends of which rested on the shoulders of the bearer. The paten was held in the same veil at high mass when it was not being used. At the same time, in some rites a similar veil was used as well, in a slightly different way; it was placed on the shoulders of the minister, who wrapped what he carried in the ends. In certain uses the latter kind of veil, the humeral veil, survived when the other went out of use. At Bayeux a veil of the former kind, called a sindon, was used to carry the chalice by the clerk, who also wore on his shoulders a veil of the latter kind, called a pallium. Some hold that the practice at Sarum was the same, the word mantellum being used for the pallium. Here at Holyrood apparently the velamina seu offertoria were sudaries or veils of the first kind, used in the ordinary ceremonial of a solemn mass to carry the vessels and their contents to the altar, while the pallia were of the second kind; humeral veils strictly so-called, probably of later introduction, used to hold the cross or the monstrance containing the reserved sacrament in processions.

At Aberdeen in 1549 the same veils were used for both purposes, for in the cathedral inventory of that date we read that they had tria sudaria ex tela serica seu transparens lintheum deferenda super venerabili sacramento et sacrificiis misse cum exequitur officium dominus episcopus aut decanus seu sua loca tenentes super sacrificia deferenda per ministros altaris.¹ The word sacrificia is clearly used here for the sacred elements as already prepared before being taken to the altar at the offertory.²

At Holyrood, seemingly, the conservatism of a religious order preserved the earlier distinction between the two kinds of veils, which became obliterated at Aberdeen latterly.³

³ The present writer has discussed the whole question of these veils, especially in Scotland, in the Transactions of the Scottish Ecclesiological Society, 1912-13, vol. iv. pt. i. pp. 72-81.

A little more can be gleaned about the ornaments of the church from Bellenden, and from Richard Augustine Hay, the Augustinian canon of S. Geneviève, Paris, whose manuscript collections relating to Scottish monasteries are in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh.

John Bellenden, in his translation of Boece's History, writing of his namesake 'Den Robert Bellenden, Abbot xvij yeris,' whose gifts have already been alluded to in the inventory, says:

'He brocht hame the gret bellis, the gret brasyn fount. xxiiij capis of gold & silk. He maid ane chalice of fyne gold, ane eucharist with sindry challicis of siluer. He theikkit the kirk with leid.'¹

The 'gret brasyn fount' is said to have been looted by Sir Richard Lee when the English burnt Holyrood during the Earl of Hertford's invasion of 1544, and given to St. Albans Abbey, where it disappeared during the Great Rebellion. This rests on the authority of Camden and Fuller, whom all the other writers seem to have copied.

In the second edition of Camden's *Britannia*² we read :

'Fanum Albani . . . templumque Monasterij . . . quod nunc in Parochiale aedem conuersum pulcherrimum habet ex aere solido Baptisterium, in quo Regum Scotorum liberi sacra aqua ablui solebant, Quod e Scotici belli manubiis Richardus Leus Eques Cuniculariorum Praefectus cum hac inscriptione consecravit.'

ET HENRICI OCTAVI XXXVI.'

Thomas Fuller, in his History of the Worthies of England, writes :³

'I am sorry to hear that the fair Font of solid brass, brought out of Scotland and bestowed by Sir Richard Lee on the Abbey Church in St. Albans is lately taken away.'

Although stone was the usual material for fonts, metal examples are sometimes found in Western Europe. They are the rule in the East at the present day, where the font is movable. After the Reformation in Scotland, small movable metal basins, sometimes of silver, became the rule, among Episcopalians as well as Presbyterians, until the nineteenth century. In pre-Reformation times a metal font was rare, although lead linings to stone fonts were general. Some thirty leaden fonts remain in England,¹ and Mr. Tavenor-Perry reckons that there are still about fifty brazen fonts in Europe, chiefly in Germany, the Netherlands, and Scandinavia.²

Hay describes the church in somewhat grandiloquent language, and in a very loose way. Writing about a century and a half after the destruction of what he describes, his evidence is not of very great weight, but he probably had access to sources of information which are now lost. He speaks of chorus . . . cui pulpitum herebat, ex quo epistole et evangelia recitari solita, indicating a tradition that the epistles and gospels were read from the pulpitum. He also says :

'In narthece rota seu corona, ex aere elegantissime composita, fortis catena sustentata dependebat : accensi cerei imponebantur in precipuis festivitatibus. Arbor ante altare stabat miro artificio opere fabricata, ex aere, nec magis conspicua superpositis lucernis quam suis gemmis.'³

It may perhaps be worth while to refer to a kalendar, considerably extended by long explanatory notes, which Hay gives in these collections as having come from Holyrood. He writes in a very vague way about it, and gives no indication of the book to which it belonged, or where he saw it. It contains many Celtic saints, unconnected with the east of Scotland, including some not found elsewhere, but it also contains entries like St. Bruno, that are non-Scottish and non-Augustinian, and which suggest that Hay may have added entries that he thought interesting, in addition to his own lengthy notes. The doubtful character of the whole document, and the number of questions relating to Scottish hagiology in general, and of no special connection with Holyrood that would

THE HOLYROOD ORDINALE

It is not likely that Hay invented what he calls a tree. Much more probably he knew of it by record or tradition. It was probably one of the large seven-branched candlesticks which certain great mediaeval choirs possessed. Salisbury, Lincoln, York, and Hereford among secular churches, and the monasteries of Westminster, Bury St. Edmunds, Christ Church Canterbury, Durham, and Winchester each had one. That at Winchester was given by Cnut in 1035, but most of them belonged to the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. Examples still remain at Milan, Magdeburg, Brunswick, and Essen. Bourges, Rouen, and S. Remi at Reims also had them formerly. That at Milan is still called the Tree of the Virgin. At Durham it was used as the paschal candlestick, and stood crossways between the choir and the altar.¹

It has generally been assumed that the bronze eagle lectern in St. Stephen's, St. Albans, was part of Sir Richard Lee's plunder from Holyrood. The lectern bears Crichtoun's arms, mitre and crosier, with the inscription :

▽ Georgius * Creichtoun * Episcopus * Dunkeldensis

George Crichtoun held the see of Dunkeld from 1524 till his death in 1543, and he had previously been abbot of Holyrood from 1515 to 1524. He founded a hospital of St. Thomas on the north side of the Watergate at Abbeyhill, the endowments of which he devised in trust to James Greg and John Faw, chaplains, and their successors, celebrating divine service at the altars of SS. Andrew and Katharine in the abbey church of Holyrood, 'in the southern chapel require to be discussed at length if it were dealt with at all, suggested that any extended treatment would be out of place in the present volume. The writer intends to treat it fully in the book referred to on p. xxvii.

adjoining to the high altar.' This foundation deed¹ shows that he was buried in the abbey church : it provides for the setting of lights in his tomb at obit services. His maintaining this connection with Holyrood certainly suggests that he might have given the lectern, which would no doubt be used for reading the gospel on days when it was read near the altar and not in the pulpitum. While the absence of any reference to Holyrood in the inscription is at first sight more suggestive of Dunkeld Cathedral, it is difficult to see how a Dunkeld lectern would get to St. Albans, while there is very good evidence that the Holyrood font was taken there.

It is difficult to understand why Sir Richard Lee or any one else should trouble to carry off this lectern, which is of a very usual late Gothic type, such as England must have possessed in great abundance at the time.² The looting of the brazen font, in itself an uncommon ornament, with associations of royal christenings, can be much more readily understood. There is no actual proof that the lectern was at Holyrood, and no documentary evidence to that effect, although the indications, such as they are, support the generally received view. Still, it is within possibility that the lectern had been made in England to Crichtoun's order, and that it never reached Scotland at all. But this is less likely than the theory of its removal from Holyrood with the font, especially as we know that Lee had the advowson of St. Stephen's, St. Albans, conferred upon him on 7th January 1544-5 by Henry VIII.³

The lectern itself is of a familiar type, of which a fair number of examples still exist in England. It consists of an eagle standing on a slightly flattened ball, on the top of a circular shaft with prominent bands of mouldings at the top, in the middle, and at the base, which is circular and spreading, and originally had three small lions at the base, like other lecterns of this class. The total height is 5 ft. 7 in. ; the base is 1 ft. 9 $\frac{1}{4}$ in. in diameter ; the eagle stands 1 ft. 9 in. above the ball, and is 1 ft. 11 $\frac{1}{2}$ in. across the wings. The inscription is engraved round the upper surface of the projecting band in the middle of the stem, and a small shield with Crichtoun's arms separates the beginning from the end. On the upper surface of the ball, two similar but larger shields are engraved, one on either side, alternating with two representations of the mitre and crosier, one in front, the other behind. Three modern lions take the place of the lost old ones at the base. Clutterbuck, the historian of Hertfordshire, tells us that the lectern was dug up under the chancel in 1750, when the Montgomery vault was being opened.¹

The lectern is described and illustrated, but not particularly well, in a Notice of an ancient Scottish lectern of brass, now in the parish church of St. Stephen's, St. Albans, Hertfordshire, by William Galloway, in Proceedings of Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, vol. xiii., 1879, pp. 287 sq., where all the literary references to the font are collected. A photograph of the lectern is reproduced in the Report of the Royal Commission on Ancient Monuments for Hertfordshire, p. 19.

No bells are included in the inventory, although the church must have possessed several. It would be unsafe to attempt to draw any conclusions as to their number from the rules for ringing in the ordinale, because these were undoubtedly written for some English houses, and are largely based upon similar rules in Lanfranc's Constitutions. The language is Lanfranc's ; the use of the word signum instead of campana belongs to the eleventh and twelfth centuries and not to the fifteenth. All that we can say is that it is probable that in actual practice the ringing at Holyrood was more or less based upon these rules.¹

In conclusion it is perhaps right to refer to the erroneous supposition that the Black Rood of Scotland, St. Margaret's famous cross, found its way and gave its name to Holyrood. There seems no evidence to support this, either here or anywhere else. The whole subject of the Black Rood has been fully discussed by Mr. George Watson in the Transactions of the Scottish Ecclesiastical Society, vol. ii. pt. i. pp. 27 sq.

The last item of any interest or importance in the book is a curious note in a contemporary cursive hand, to the effect that on the 7th of September 1547 the Earl of Hertford, who had led an army of 20,000 men by land with 8000 by sea, 'and thaie intendit for plane conquest,' was 'feildit' on 'Gladismur' by the Governor of Scotland and the Douglas. Here the note stops; the sequel to these events was the destruction of Holyrood Abbey, with the carrying off to England of the brazen font and probably the bronze lectern. It almost looks as if one of the canons made the note immediately on hearing of the battle of Gladsmuir, and fled to a place of safety taking the book with him, before Hertford reached Holyrood.

¹ Very little attention has been given to the numerous mediaeval rules for ringing which exist, and nothing seems to have been done towards classifying them. Broadly speaking, according to this ordinale, for mattins and evensong the bells were rung in succession, each (or two together) for a short time, beginning with the smaller, and finally all were rung together. For high mass all were rung together in classicum (i.e. probably clashing, and not one after the other). The bells were also rung at the end of mass. On less important occasions fewer and smaller bells were used, whether of those rung singly or in classicum. At Exeter Cathedral, where there is the heaviest set of ancient bells in England, the mediaeval way of ringing bells of increasing size, each for a short time in succession, followed by all or a larger number together, is still kept up. See The Bells of the Cathedral Church of St. Peter, Exon, H. T. Ellacombe, Exeter, 1874, p. 28.

Anno igitur dominice incarnationis millesimo centesimo uicesimo octauo . Contigit dauid regem scotorum uisitare suum castrum puellarum prope edinburgh anno quarto regni sui. Eo tempore regio scocie erat nemorosa et magna foresta tunc temporis dicta drumselth adiacebat ex parte australi uille edinburgi uicina . in qua erat copia ferarum siluestrium . uidelicet cerui dami caprioli uulpes apri indomiti et siluestres et huiusmodi bestie uenabiles. Die uero occurrenti exaltacionis sancte crucis . post missarum solempnia astant in presencia regie maiestatis nobiles domini regie domusque maiores et signanter estate iuuenili florentes et lasciuientes magnates supplicantes ut die tante amenitatis campos uisitare . necnon solacia uenandi exercere regia maiestas delectaretur. Eo tempore erat cum rege eius secretarius et confessor uir religiosus uite sanctimonia uirtute et sciencia incomparabilis nomine alwinus canonicus regularis ordinis sancti augusti[ni] monasterij de meritonne prope londonias . qui eciam longo tempore seruuerat regi tempore precedenti quando idem dauid rex erat comes de huntington [et] northumbrie et dominus cumbrie. Hic contrarius iuuenili consilio dominorum . regem arguit constanter asserens regiam maiestate die tante deuocationis et solempnitatis sancte crucis campis uagari . aut solacia uenandi exercere non debere. Nobilibus nihilominus regem prouocantibus et temporis congruenciam et uenandi complacenciam allegantibus . rex tandem eorum desiderio applicatus . facta refectione cibali . equum ascendit . se mouens uersus orientem per uallem uocatam abergare . que nunc est uia canonicorum . inter duos monticulos ad locum in quo cursum ferarum cum canibus melius poterat intueri. Venatores quidem forestam penetrant cum suis canibus quorum latratu sonoro ac exploratorum solertia bestias de siluarum latebris expellere possint. Mox tantus canum clangor et clamor indagancium sonat in altum . silua resultat quod totus aer suis canibus circumquaque dispersis . et a uisu ferarum occultatis. Et ecce subito uidit rex sub pede rupis apud fontem ceruum mire pulstrepitu et terrore equus regis perterritus fugit . rege inuito paulisper uolens cerui cornu manu apprehendere inter cerui cornua crucem casu apprehendit . que de facili euulsa et in manu regia dimissa est. Ceruus iter carpens quo uenerat cursu uelocissimo aufugit et apud predictum fontem inter frondes ab oculo regis disparuit . quare dictus fons fons crucifixi in post[e]rum appellatus est . regis equo discurrenti solo.

 Nobiles undique regi adherent confestim . confessor alwinus regem subleuare conatur : admiracio una cum strepitu populi fit maxima queritat unusquisque geste rei euentum . regem prostratum uulneratum crucem manu tenentem . nimirum admirantur ualde magnates. Alwinus regem consolatur dicens . rex in eternum viue merito castigaris .

 rex omnes crucem adorare et flexis genibus crucem adorando cum lacrimis non desinit osculari. Postquam uero omnes crucem adorauerant . rex a ministris in sua cella subleuatur. Confessor alwinus crucem ante regem portare iubetur . et sic ad instar processionis castrum intrant puellarum : uulneribus regis diligenter arte medicinali mature dispositis . rex in suo cubili collocatus est. Et ecce eadem nocte sequenti . regi soporanti . uox dauid repetendo ter regis in aure sonuit

Et quia tunc temporis in regno scocie ad auisandum et perficiendum tanti operis excellenciam regie maiestati ingeniosi artifices uidebantur pauci. Rex suos ambassiatores direxit in franciam qui reuersi adduxerunt latomos viginti mecanici operis ingenio arte et experientia expertissimos de quorum consilio regie prudencie exemplaribus ostensis figmentis . rex ualde contentatus est. Anno igitur domini millesimo centesimo uicesimo octauo . sanctus et deuotissimus rex dauid cum consensu carissimi filij sui henrici principis tociusque sui regni maiorum concurrenti concilio in eodem loco quo sibi a ceruo crux memorata delata est incepit in honorem sancte crucis fund[are]¹ regale monasterium canon[icorum]¹ regularium ordinis sancti augustini doctoris nomen illi imponens domus sancte crucis . uidelicet scotice halyrudhous suum confessorem alwinum utpote uirum sanctum religiosum industruosum et omni uirtute prefulgentem in abbatem sui noui excellentis monasterij faciens promoueri. Mane autem facto . sanctus rex dauid solito more sui monasterij opus preciosum uisitare dignatus est . cui occurrens abbas alwinus secretarius regieque conscientie confisus capellanus . dicti carpentarij casum et mortem lugubri continencia breuiter declarauit. Rex uero maximoque furore concussus ad uerba abbatis alwini sui confessoris huiusmodi noua referentis spiritu turbato respondit . Vbi posuistis eum . / Notum sit omnibus quod semper a quinto kalendis decembris usque in iiiij^o nonas ipsius mensis ubi dominicus dies aduenerit . ibi aduentus domini celebretur.

¶ Sabbato ante primam dominicam aduentus domini ad vesperas antiphona Benedictus . et alie a[ntiphone] . cum psalmis diei consuetis . Eciā si in sabbato festiuitas sancti andree celebrata fuerit de qua tantum post primam collectam commemoracio fiat . postea de sancto loci . Que memoria de sancto loci nullo tempore dimittitur nisi in festis duplicibus et per octauas natalis domini . pasche et pentecosten^t et tribus diebus ante pascha . et per octauas assumptionis sancte marie.

Ab hoc sabbato usque ad pentecosten commemoracio de cruce intermittitur . Horas beate marie sicut per totum annum dicimus . excepto quod ad matutinas ipsius et ad vesperas oracio dicitur . Deus qui de beate marie . Commemoraciones sanctorum que post officium beate marie fieri solent : usque in crastinum octauarum epiphanie dimittuntur . nisi de sancto augustino et de omnibus sanctis et de pace.

¶ Si festum sancti andree in prima dominica aduentus domini euenerit . mutabitur in crastinum . de qua tamen in sabbato ad vesperas et in ipsa dominica ad matutinas commemoracio fiat . et missa matutinalis . Ipsa quoque die ad vesperas dictis solito more psalmis dominicalibus . capitulum et que sequuntur de apostolo erunt.

¶ Notandum est . quod quelibet festiuitas infra aduentum euenerit . celebretur . tamen commemoracio de aduentu non dimittitur . Quod uero de prefate festiuitatis mutacione dictum est : de festo sancti nicholay et sancti thome apostoli obseruatur.

Generaliter enim potest dici quod in quocumque sabbato per annum festiuitas aliqua de hijs que communes appellantur euenerit . uesperas in ipso sabbato habebit . nisi maior festiuitas occurrat . exceptis quinque precipuis dominicis . i[d est] . prima dominica de aduentu . et dominica septuagesime . sexagesime . et dominica medie quadra-gesime . et dominica in palmis . in quibus sabbatis solummodo festa duplicita si occurrerint . uesperas sibi afferunt.

/ In festo sancte lucie prostracio dimittitur Ad matutinas psalmi solito more dicuntur . lecciones et responsoria et antiphone quinque ad laudes . et maior missa de uirgine peraguntur. De qua festiuitate cum in dominica euenerit . commemoracio ad vtrasque vesperas . et in matutinas fiat . et medie tres lecciones et missa matutinalis.

IN tercia ebdomada aduentus domini. Feria secunda . laudes proprie ad matutinas incipiuntur . et per totam septimanam singulis diebus sue proprie dicuntur. Si uero festum occurrerit quod de festo totum seruicium agatur . laudes ipsius ferie dimittuntur. Quod si post quartam dominicam festum natalis domini prolongatur . ferijs que vacant laudes ad ipsas ferias pertinentes recantantur. Antiphone que supra ad . Benedictus in precedenti ebdomada dicte sunt . quia alie abundant mutantur.

Feria iiiij^a. vi^a. et sabbato quatuor temporum ad matutinas euangelia pronuncientur. Responsoria propria cantentur. In quibus diebus oraciones de ieunio ad matutinas et vesperas tantum dicuntur . et super horas oracio dominicalis. In ipsa quarta feria prima collecta de missa sine salutacione dicitur.

C Sabbato ad missam in nulla oracione dominus uobiscum dicitur . nisi ad Deus qui tribus pueris.

C Hac die qui ad missam . lecciones . et tractus . Benedictus es dicturi sunt . in tabula scripti primitus in capitulo recitentur.

C Tractus Benedictus es . a duobus canitur . choro per singulos versus repetente . Et laudabilis. Tractus Qui regis israel . ab utroque choro alternatim cantetur . primo uersu ex illa parte incepto . qua cantor ebdomadarius extiterit.

Antiphone que per O literam incipiunt . xvij kl' ianuarij . nono die ante vigiliam natalis inchoantur. Nonnulli postquam has antiphonas incipiunt . prostrationem ad vesperas intermittunt . sed nos solitum cursum tenemus.

Vigilia sancti thome apostoli.

IN vigilia sancti thome apostoli . missa sicut in alijs vigilijs apostolorum ad nonam cantetur. In hac festiuitate ad matutinas legitur euangelium quod est de octaua pasche . et ita incipitur . Thomas vnus de duodecim . cum parte omelie . Iste vnus discipulus defuit. A[ntiphona]. O thoma didime . in vigilia et in die natalis eius ad magnificat dicitur. Quod si hanc festiuitatem propter dominicam mutari contingat . ipsa antiphona ter canitur . sabbato scilicet ad commemorationem . et in dominica . et in secunda feria quando hoc festum agitur. Ad Benedictus dicitur a[ntiphona]. Quia vidistis me.

C Quando hoc festum . vi . feria . uel sabbato . quatuor temporum occurrit . responsoria que de ipsis feriis / habentur propria . in [fo. 74 v precedingi] quinta feria cantentur. In quibus diebus missa de apostolo post terciam canitur . sicut per totum annum fit . quando festum ix lectionum . uel festum quod more octauarum agitur . quando in generali ieunio occurrit.

Sciendum est quod hec a[ntiphona]. Nolite timere nuncquam dicitur nisi in natale sancti thome . et tunc post matutinas ad commemorationem dominici aduentus dicitur. Et si forte contingat ut ipsa festiuitas de loco suo mutetur . tunc prima ad laudes dicitur a[ntiphona]. Canite tuba. Mutetur autem si euenerit in vi . feria ieunij quatuor temporum uel in sabbato : et in v . precedenti feria . celebretur.

C Aut si euenerit in dominica celebratur in secunda feria. In ipsa autem festiuitate non dicuntur ad omnes horas alie a[ntiphone] quam de ipso apostolo . preter eam solam que per O literam incipitur . sed ex toto remanent. Et ipsa festiuitas nuncquam fit in tribus diebus ieunij quatuor temporum.

C Si post quartam dominicam natale domini producitur . Matutinales antiphone precedentis ebdomade repetuntur . et si opus fuerit antequam O sapiencia incipiatur . qualibet ex hijs antiphonis subscriptis . ad Magnificat dicuntur . if[dest] . a[ntiphona]. *Veniet forcior . a[ntiphona]. De quo missa matutinalis in ipsa vigilia similiter cum vna oracione celebratur. Quando autem vigilia in dominica occurrerit . ante completur. Nec propter hoc officium quod in memoriam omnium defunctorum agitur . annum si assit pro defuncto fratre seruicium intermittetur . immo omnibus diebus anni . uel a conuentu uel priuatim sicut mos est ab ebdomadario minoris misse persoluetur. Excepto primo die natalis domini . pasche . / pentecostes . Assumptionis sancte marie . [fo. 75 et excepta . v^a. feria . vi^a. et sabbato ante pascha. Ultimus versus ab ipsis iijor. simul dicatur . ita tamen ut a choro finiatur.

¶ Hac die post completorium sacrista cortinam inter chorūm et altare protendat. Tunc uel crastino ante primam : cruces . capsas . coronas et ymagines cooperiat.

¶ Id hac et in sequenti dominica ad processionem . Antiphona . Cum uenerimus. In duabus sequentibus dominicis Antiphona . In die qua uenerit.

¶ Ad vesperas que in hiis diebus post missam dicuntur primum signum quando Sanctus canitur pulsari inchoet . et ad per omnia secula ante dominicam oracionem cessen. Secundum uero . tercium . et quartum . ita moderentur . ut ante finem prime oracionis que communionem sequitur : terminentur. Postrema duo signa . uel classicum in festis . cum sacerdos incepit per dominum ad oracionem que super populum dicitur . pulsari incipient. Quibus cessantibus . sacerdos qui missam celebrauit . nisi duplex festum sit . et nisi in sabbatis.

^{1—1} Erased.

Videlicet quia tunc alterius ebdomade seruicium inchoat. Vespertas ibidem ad altare incipiat. Post vespertas diei dicuntur vespere de sancta maria . et ad ultimum si festum non est . psalmi familiares. Deinde facto breui interuallo : pulsetur cimbalum et eant cenatum.

In qua missa ad canonem / fratres super formas se non [fo. 83 v] curuent . qua die post completorium . nisi aliud festum occurrat . predicta cortina sicut solet extenditur. In omnibus missis que de quadragesima . dicuntur . ipsa cortina dum euangelium legitur debet esse collecta . sed lecto euangelio . statim extendenda est. In quarta et^t feria et sexta quando proc[essio] sit . Sacrista eam ante processionem retrahat . et sic usque ad introitum misse remaneat.

¶ Notandum quod commemoracio quadragesime . pro nullo festo dimittitur.

¶ Notandum quod in prima ebdomada quadragesime . ieunium . iiiij^r temporum semper celebrari debet. Quod autem in prima dominica quadragesime . ieunium . iiiij^r temporum semper celebrari debet . gregorius papa ita confirmat. Licet noua consuetudo ecclesie nulla fulta auctoritate . numeret inter ieunia et ordinaciones . iiiij^r temporum primam ebdomadam primi mensis marcij . et secundam quarti . i[d est]. iunij. Vetus tamen auctoritas sanctorum patrum est ut inicio quadragesimali ebdomada prima . et ebdomada pentecostes^t debeant obseruari . Vnde leo papa ait . Huius obseruancie dilectissimi in ecclesiasticis precipue est racio custodita ieunijs . que ex doctrina sancti spiritus ita per tocius anni circulum distributa sunt . ut lex abstinentie omnibus sit ascripta temporibus. Siquidem ieunium uernale in quadragesima . Estuum . in pentecosten . Autumpnale . in mense septimo . Hyemale in decimo celebremus.

¶ Notandum quod quandocunque leccio vna uel plures legende sunt in missa . Dominus uobiscum nisi ad collectam ante epistolam non est dicendum. Feria quarta in prima ebdomada . Ad missam ad primam colectam^t dicitur Oremus Flectamus genua. Oracio . Preces nostras. Lectio postea sequitur . Dixit dominus ad moysen. GR^r Tribulaciones . SAbbato prime ebdomade quadragesime . quinque lectiones leguntur . cum . v . oracionibus . et ad quam libet oracionem . dicitur Flectamus genua. Angelus domini legatur usque ad illum versum . Benedictus es domine in firmamento. Exinde enim Tractus incipit . Cuius primum versum dimidium . iiiij^{or}. fratres simul . et reliquos bini et bini dicant. Chorus uero primum versum ab eo quod dicitur . et laudabilis . accipiatur et post finem ceterorum uersuum . ympnum [Bene]dicte semper repetatur. Postquam totus tractus finitus fuerit . a predictis . iiiij^{or}. fratribus . primus versus eiusdem reincipiatur. Hunc tractum in suis nigris cappis cantant. In quo sicut in supradicta dominica descriptum est . vicissim sedeant. Deinde Dominus uobiscum . Deus qui tribus pueris . Ad quam solam flectamus genua non dicitur . propter apostolum ut quidam dicunt qui postea legitur . sed tamen in fine misse . Humiliate capita vestra solito more dicitur.

Deinde tractus proprius eiusdem / diei . s[cilicet]. Dixit dominus mulieri chananee.

DIes passionis domini duabus ebdomadis ante pascha computantur . quoniam in duobus temporibus ante legem scilicet et sub gratia eadem passio prefiguratur atque perficitur. In hijs xiiij . diebus salua numeri significacione gloriam sancte trinitatis in cantu amittimus . quia conformat se sancta ecclesia capiti suo . et reticet de eius glorificacione usque dum exaltetur per triumphum uictorie.

¶ Ieremias propheta hoc tempore legitur . quoniam ipse redemptoris nostri passionem aperta lamentacione monstrauit.

¶ Nota quod infra tempus passionis nulla commemoracio dicatur nisi de sancto augustino.

¶ A sabbato itaque precedenti primam dominicam passionis usque post penticosten^t . dimittuntur commemorationes solite . i[d est] . suffragia sanctorum . nisi de sancto loci . et de sancto augustino . et omnibus sanctis . et de pace.

¶ A sabbato usque ad pascha in cantu sicut dictum est Gloria patri postponitur . s[cilicet]. in inuitatorio in Responsorijs . tam ad matutinas . quam ad omnes horas . et in introitu misse. Responsoria que alio tempore cum Gloria patri dicerentur . reincipiantur. Quod si festum celebrari contingat . uel missa dicatur que non sit de passione . in huiusmodi officio . Gloria patri . solito more dicitur.

¶ Per hoc tempus usque post pascha . ad primam Ihesu christe Fili Dei vivi miserere nobis non dicitur.

¶ In hijs eciam diebus post primum versum de Venite exultemus Inuitatorium totum ut solet alio tempore non repetitur . sed dimedium^t. propter Gloria patri quod in fine non dicitur.

¶ In dominicis . cantato Asperges me . cum versu . Miserere mei deus . Loco Gloria patri . si opus fuerit . secundus versus dicitur.

SAbbato ante dominicam palmarum . ad vesperas R^g Dominus Ihesus. Officium misse de precedenti vi^a. feria . s[cilicet]. Miserere mei domine . mutuatur.

¶ Nota quod infra tempus passionis missa de cruce non dicitur. Quando dicitur missa de sancta maria . tunc tres collecte dicuntur . prima de officio 2^a . de sancto augustino . 3^a . de omnibus sanctis. Et tunc ad missam de ieunio . v^e . collecte . p[rima] . de officio . 2^a de prelatis . iij^a . pro rege . iiiij^a . pro familiaribus . v^a . Omnipotens . s[em-piterne . deus] qui viuorum.

In dominica . palmarum

IN dominica palmarum nocturnale officium sicut in vna preceden-

. iij . collectas dicant.

¶ In capitulo quicquid agere debeat . prouideatur. Post capitulum audito signo . statim omnes qui in processione aliquid portare debent

Deinde pulsato vno de maioribus signis . primo sicut in purificacione beate marie dictum est aqua benedicatur . et tercia cantetur . que . dum canitur . sacrista tapetum ante maius altare extendat palmas flores et frondes superponat. Quo cum prelatus post horam beate marie cappa tantum indutus absque paratu processionis . solummodo diacono cum stola et libro preeunte peruererit . sumpta stola . palmas benedicat . et aquam subdiacono aspersorium ministrante aspergat. Deinde in chorum . deposita stola redeat. Tunc accedentes secretarij per ordinem . s[cilicet]. domino priori . et ministris . cantoribus quoque ac ceteris fratribus palmas et frondes distribuant. Dum hec aguntur : inchoat precentor antiphonam . Pueri hebreorum . et aliam a[ntiphona]m Pueri hebreorum uestimenta . Antiphonam Cum angelis et pueris . post hec antiphonam. Osanna filio dauid. Interim processio disponatur. Que . cum precentor antiphonam . Ante sex dies imposuerit : moueatur . et precedentibus famulis cum vexillis : sequuntur per ordinem qui aquam benedictam . crucem benedictam . candelabra . et thuribulum ferunt. Deinde subdiaconus in tunica cum textu . diaconus cum libro in quo lecturus est euangeliū . post quos cantores et conuentus prelatus ultimus incedit. Omnes uero ordinate et cum magna reuerencia procedentes . in animo . s[cilicet]. cui obuiam exeunt reuoluentes : donec ad propositum stacionem perueniant . et que subscripta sunt prout racio dictauerit . canant . antiphonam. Prima autem azimorum. R^y Dominus ihesus. R^y Cum audisset turba. R^y Cogitauerunt. Cum autem stacioni approximauerint . ubi mensa debet esse pallio cooperta et tapetum extensem . que mensa a tentorio aliquantulum distare debet : exeant de ipso tentorio fratres cum feretro : quod sicut dictum est mane illuc detulerunt . hoc uero obseruent . ut tunc exeant quando aduenientem conuentum tantum prediche mense suspicantur . quantum locus tentorij in quo sunt ab ipsa mensa distare videtur. Quibus exeuntibus occurrant de processione duo fratres qui ad exempla eorum qui uestimenta sua in uia prosternebant . duo parua bancalia sub pedibus eorum . alterum post alterum genua flectendo supponant . donec ad mensam perueniant. Illis autem reuerenter et morose incedentibus . cantetur hec antiphona. Occurrunt turbe . et alia antiphona . Cum audisset populus. Sed cum portatores feretri ad mensam peruererint : deponentes illud super eam . hinc inde in ordine aliorum secedant . ad ipsam quoque mensam cum et hij uenerint qui aquam benedictam crucem et cetera portant : diaconus cum thuri-

Solus ille qui portat crucem . cum ipsa cruce post mensam iuxta feretrum facie ad conuentum conuersus stare debet. Textus iuxta feretrum ponatur.

¶ Hijs ita preparatis . omnibus in ordine stantibus . et in fine antiphone quam canunt ad feretrum conuersis . prelatus delata sibi a precentore antiphona Aue rex noster.

Cum dompnus abbas ter incipiat . Aue rex noster . s[cilicet]. ante feretrum . ibique eandem antiphonam tribus vicibus . tociens veniam petendo incipiat . de qua tantum dicat Aue rex noster. Conuentus per singulas vices genua flectendo idem repetat . deinde tota antiphona cantetur. Tunc ueniat thuriferarius cum ceroferarijs ad abbatem et abbas ponet thimama in turibulum . Mox incensato corpore domini . redeat ad sedem suam cum ceroferarijs ad dexteram et ad leuam ipsius . post quam reuersus fuerit ad sedem suam . redeant ceroferarij ad locum ubi ante fuerunt iuxta feretrum. Diaconus uero antequam antiphona finiatur ueniat cum thuriferario et ceroferarijs . ad abbatem . tunc iterum ponat abbas incensum in turibulum . et diaconus accepta benedictione a prelato eat ad locum ad septentrionalem partem euangelium Cum appropinquasset ihesus ierosolimam . legat . lecto euangilio . si est sermo ad populum redeat diaconus cum ministris ad locum vnde prius uenerat. Si uero non fit sermo . incipiat cantor antiphonam Ceperunt omnes turbe . resumpta processione . omnes ad ostium ecclesie pergant. Hoc ordine . primo aquebaiulus . deinde laterna . poste feretrum deinde crux . et cerei et sic per ordinem sicut in primis dignitatibus . finita predicta antiphona . si longior uia fuerit . de supradictis responsorijs . si quid remansit cantetur . prout precentori videbitur. Ita tamen ut semper cum ad portam appropinquauerint antiphona Cum appropinquaret dominus ierosolimam . imponatur. Cum ad portam uenerint deposito iterum ante eius porte introitum feretro super mensulam ibidem cum pallio preparatam . stacionem superiori similem faciant. Locus super ingressum porte.

Honeste debet esse paratus cortinis et dorsalibus. Ibi post finem antiphone . omnibus ad portam conuersis . quatuor fratres siue pueri si assunt desuper ipsam portam Gloria laus concinant. Conuentus per singulos uersus Gloria laus . tantum repetant. Ad ultimam repetitionem : portatores in ordinem suum redeant . et incipiente prelato Responsorium Ingrediente domino . intrent . et usque ad ostium monasterij procedant vbi expectent donec finito illo Responsorio . precentor Circumdederunt me imponat. Cum quo intrantes . ante crucifixum qui tunc cum celeritate discooperiatur stacionem faciant versum ipsius responsorij / duo ibidem canant. Postea im- [fo. 85 v] posita antiphona Colligerunt[†] . chorum intrent . et cum tres fratres uersum eiusdem antiphone inceperint . sedeat conuentus . et portatores feretri feretrum reponat. Post versum . dicta repeticione antiphone . Subiungat prelatus V. Benedictus qui uenit in nomine domini . Conuentu respondente . Osanna in excelsis. Oracio de die. Sicque pulsato classico officium misse inchoetur . Prelatus et ministri accedentes ad altare . palmas in manibus gestent . Ministri casulis induiti sint . Gradale duo cantent. Tractus cantetur sicut tractus in prima dominica quadragesime. Ad passionem propter dominicam Dominus uobiscum dicitur . Sed Gloria tibi domine non respondetur. Postea dum offerenda canitur . primo ministri palmas offerant . deinde cantores . et reliqui de choro bini et bini ordinate ueniant. Sitque ibi sacrista paratus : qui ea que offeruntur suscipiat.

¶ Ymnus angelicus . s[cilicet]. Sanctus . qui ad missam ter dicitur . uel canitur . deuote et celebriter debet persolui.

¶ Propter laborem officij . post prandium dormiant . cumque tempus fuerit ut excitari debeant : vnum de minoribus signis pulsetur . quo audito . in claustrum uenientes . primo se sicut mos est pectinent . deinde manus et facies lauent . sedeant per claustrum . expectantes donec signum ad nonam pulsari incipiatur . post nonam . in refectorio eant bibere. Huiusmodi meridiane obseruancia a pascha usque ad kalendas octobris exceptis diebus ieuniorum teneatur.

¶ Hac die ad horas mutantur Responsoria . i[d est] . ad terciam R^g Frates mei. Ad vi . R^g Attende. Ad ix . R^g Saluum me fac. Ad vesperas R^g Circumdederunt me.

¶ Omnis quippe salutacio de esse debet . ad euitandam et demonstrandam iude proditoris salutacionem pestiferam . et quamuis de passione domini qua redempti sumus nos oporteat gloriari . nunc tamen dum legitur expedit contristari.

Feria iiij^a. uel antea. Si tunc non potest : officium omnium defunctorum . sicut ante vigiliam natalis domini prescriptum est compleatur . et sic usque completum pascha in conuentu intermittatur. Quod si annum seruicium debetur . tunc ebdomadarius maioris misse prouideat ut inde in ipsa iiij^a. feria . v . misse videlicet ipsius diei . et iiij . subsequencium dicantur. Ipse uero sicut alibi dictum est . placebo et dirige persoluat.

¶ Notandum quod ab hac die usque ad quartam feriam ebdomade pasche silencium seruetur . nec in vigilia pasche communiter frangendum est . sed socij pro aliqua re familiari inter se submissa uoce loquuntur in locutorio.

[H]ac die processio non fit. Ad missam uero post Kyriel[eison] dicat sacerdos Oremus / Flectamus genua . Presta quesumus . [fo. 86 et postea lectio legatur. Deinde GR^r Ne auertas. Sabbato in albis.

Sabbato quod intitulatur in albis. quia eo die nuper baptizati albas deponunt. In officio diurno nichil mutatur usque ad vespertas. nisi quod in missa duo alleluia dicuntur. Quod significat duplarem stolam quam in anima et corpore recepturi sumus. Inde est quod hodie septuagesime numerus completetur. Per septuagesimam omne presens tempus quo in hac uita peregrinamur accipitur. Quia igitur per mortem christi a seruitute corrupcionis et huius uite miserijs eruimur. et ad eternitatis resurreccionem perducimur. nisi gemina stola induendi sumus. merito hodie gradale quod presentis temporis leticiam significat postponitur et alleluia quod gaudium nunquam terminandum pretendit geminatur. Hoc enim spacium temporis usque ad pentecosten. figuram gerit octuae beatitudinis. vnde et in eo alleluia assidue frequentatur.

C Quando euenerit ut in hac dominica officij cursus de aliquo festo sit . Ad missam matutinalem officium dominicale cantabitur. In qua missa non fit commemoracio de octauis quia eadem missa proprie ad ascensionem pertinet.

C Pro festo trium lectionum quod in hac dominica occurrat . non intermittatur missa matutinalis de ascensione. In hac dominica stacio ante crucifixum intermittitur . et eciam memoria de cruce usque ad festum trinitatis intermittitur.

C Per octauas ascensionis ad matutinas leguntur sermones patrum qui de eadem ascensione in libris propriis habentur. In octauo die ad matutinas pronunciatur euangelium Ego mittam promissum patris mei in uobis. Qua die ad missam dicitur Credo in vnum.

Post octauas feria sexta . et sequenti sabbato . inuitatorium ymni . versus . responsoria . capitula . et super horas . responsoriola . omnia de ascensione. In vtraque uero feria . ad xii^{cim}. psalmos nocturnales una alleluiaatica dicitur. In laudibus eciam et per omnes horas alleluiaatica ponitur de paschali tempore.

C Feria vi . ad matutinas terminantur lecciones de sermonibus ascensionis.

C Sabbato pronunciatur euangelium de vigilia. Vtraque die ad matutinas . et ad omnes horas oracio dicitur dominicalis.

C In sexta feria si quodlibet festum occurrit . celebratur.

¶ In sabbato uero de festo trium lectionum commemoracio tantum fit . et missa matutinalis. Et si festum ix . lectionum . occurrerit . totum seruicium.

¶ Quelibet festivitas in hoc sabbato eueniat . ieuinum non interrumptur.

¶ Similis est enim hec uigilia paschali uigilie . quia in hac sicut in illa et baptismus nostre salutis celebratur . et officium misse pene eo ordine quo tunc persoluitur.

¶ In hoc sabbato uel ante . missa in memoria omnium defunctorum dicitur.

Officium hodie ita inchoatur. Finita nona . statim ad legendam lector accedat. In lectionibus tituli postponuntur. Lecciones sicut in uigilia pasche senioribus dantur . et in albis leguntur. Similiter et tractus in albis cantantur. Prelatus quoque et ministri sicut tunc ita et nunc induuntur . et ad altare procedunt et inde redeunt. Ad inicium officij cereus benedictus accendatur . et usque in crastinum post completorium non extinguitur.

¶ Prima leccio . Temptauit deus abraham : quam non sequitur tractus . sed oracio . Deus qui in abrahe. Secunda leccio . Scripsit moyses. Tractus . Attende . oracio . Deus qui pro nobis per prophetarum. Tercia leccio . Apprehendent septem mulieres . Tractus . Vinea facta est . / oracio . Deus qui nos ad celebrandum [fo. 101 v] Quarta leccio . *Audi israel . cui subiungitur oracio . Dumque Gloria in excelsis deo canitur . sonat classicum.

¶ Ad euangelium lumen et incensum portetur . Credo in unum dicitur . et offerenda canitur . et pax accipitur . quod in uigilia pasche minime fit. Prefacio . Qui ascendens super omnes celos. Communi- cantes. Hanc igitur.

¶ Post missam facto breui interuallo . cenatum eant.

Qua ratione baptismus in penticosten sicut in pascha fit . Sanctus leo papa episcopis per siciliam constitutis ita scribit. Additur sane huic obseruancie et penticost[es] ex aduentu spiritus sancti sacra solemnitas . que de paschalis festi pendet articulo. Et cum ad alios dies alia festa pertineant . Hec semper ad eum diem qui resurrectionis domini insignis est occurrit. Porrigens quodammodo auxiliantis gracie manum . et eos quos a die pasche aut molestia infirmitatis . aut longinguitas itineris . aut nauigacionis difficultas interclusit inuitans ut ne quibuslibet necessitatibus impediti . desiderij sui effectum dono sancti spiritus consequuntur. Ipse enim vnigenitus dei in fide credencium . et in uirtute operum nullam inter se et spiritum sanctum uoluit esse distanciam . quia nulla est diuersitas in natura dicens. Rogabo patrem meum et alium paraclitum dabit uobis. Et iterum. Paraclitus autem spiritus sanctus quem mittet p[ater]. in . n[omine]. m[eo]. ille u[obis]. do[cebit]. omnia. Et iterum. Cum uenerit ille spiritus ueritatis . docebit uos o[mnia] . u[era]. Cum itaque ueritas christus sit . et spiritus sanctus spiritus ueritatis sit nomen que paracliti utriusque sit proprium non dissimile sit festum vbi idem est sacramentum.

In die pentecostes

DIe igitur sanctissima pentecostes ad suscipiendam sancti spiritus graciā . omni deuocionis studio cunctorum mentes preparentur et corda. Huius diei et sequentis ebdomade seruicium ad instar officij paschalis ebdomade cum eadem dignitate et diligencia agendum est. Nunc autem quod in pascha non fit. Ad matutinas et ad vesperas et ad omnes horas . ymni . capitula . Responsoria . versus dicuntur. Antiphone / quoque cum neupmate finiuntur . que et ad Benedictus . et ad Magnificat repetuntur. Ad vesperas sequencia non dicitur . nec processio ad fontes uel ad crucifixum ducitur. Per totam ebdomadā missa matutinalis dicitur Spiritus domini . nisi festum intercurrat.

De festis nouem lectionum.

DE festis autem nouem lectionum excepto primo die . in vesperis et in matutinis commemoracio fit et missa matutinalis. Si uero festiuitas duplex fuerit . si quidem in primo die euenerit : re-seruatur usque in secundum feriam post octauas. Sin autem in aliquo die per ebdomadā occurrit in suum octauum diem transfertur. Huiusmodi festum si in quinta feria huius ebdomade uel in duobus diebus sequentibus euenerit . preter quod dictum est ipso eciam die quo pronunciatur commemorationem ad primas vesperas et ad matutinas . et missam matutinalem habet.

C De festis trium lectionum excepto primo die commemoracio fit . et post quartum diem missa matutinalis.

Primo die pentecostis[†] ad processionem que ante terciam per clausum ducitur . cantatur Salve festa dies . uel Sequencia . Alma chorus domini . tres fratres versus : Chorus per singulos versus . repetit . Almus[†] chorus . Staciones solite fiunt . dum sacerdos uadit per officinas. Ad introitum ecclesie incepta antiphona . Hodie completi sunt . in chorum processio reuertatur. Secretarius ilico[†] ecclesie lucernas festinat accendere. Finita antiphona . dicat prelatus . V Spiritus domini repleuit . et collectam diei. Statimque terciam idem pater incipiens ympnum Ueni creator spiritus . solempniter et deuotissime imponat. Tunc omnibus ueniam potentibus cum magna exultacione . idem ymnus ab vtroque choro simul spaciatis scilicet decantetur. Interim omnia signa pulsentur. Altaria quoque sicut ad vesperas cum duobus thuribulis incensentur. Deinde incensum per chorum portetur. Prelatus eciam ad hanc horam antiphonam incipit. Ita tota hora cum gaudio in eo de quo est . videlicet tocius gracie decore spiritu sancto festiuue et affectuose dicatur. Deinde inchoatur missa . ad tante hospitis suspcionem secretum cordis dignum habitaculum preparetur . ut in illius presencia carnalium cogitationum motus tumultusque uiciorum sedentur . et ex amoris illius dulcedine suauitas compunctionis in mente generetur. Ad missam non solum hodie sed eciam per totam ebdomadam . Credo in vnum dicitur. Prefacio . Qui ascendens super omnes. Communicantes. Hanc igitur.

C Ad terciam quoque cotidie cantatur ympnus Veni creator . quem incipit sacerdos qui ipsam horam dicit . qui eciam ab omnibus ut supradictum est simul canitur. Altaria uero non incensantur . nec classicum pulsatur . sed tria tantum luminaria ad totam / horam ardent. [fo. 102 v] Per totam ebdomadam silencium seruatur in claustro.

De ieiunio iiij^{or}. temporum

IN hac ebdomada ieiunia quatuor temporum secundum apostolicam institutionem celebrantur. Vnde sanctus leo papa . hodiernam dilectissimi festiuitatem de descensione spiritus sancti consecratam sequitur ut noscis ieiunium quod animis corporibusque curandis salubriter institutum deuota est nobis obseruacione celebrandum. Repletis namque apostolis uirtute promissa . et in corde eorum spiritu ueritatis ingresso non ambigimus inter cetera celestis sacramenta doctrine . hanc spiritualem continencie disciplinam de paracliti magisterio primitus fuisse conceptam . ut sanctificante ieunio . mentes conferendis carismatibus fierent apciores. Item post aliquam . igitur . post sancte leticie dies quos in honorem dei a mortuis resurgentis ac deinde in celum ascendentis exegimus . postque perceptum sancti spiritus donum . salubriter et necessarie consuetudo est ordinata ieunium . ut si forte quid inter ipsa festiuitatis gaudia negligens libertas et licencia immoderata presumpsit. Hoc religiose abstinencie censura castiget. Que ob hoc quoque studiosius exequenda sunt ut illa in nobis que hac die ecclesie diuinitus sunt collata permaneant. Templum enim facti sumus sancti spiritus . et maiori quam unquam copia diuini fluminis irrigati nullis debemus concupiscencijs vinci nullis vicijs possideri . ut uirtutis habitaculum nulla sit contaminacione pollutum. Item quarta igitur feria et sexta ieunemus. Sabato autem apud beatissimum petrum uigilias celebremus. Cuius nos oracionibus et a spirituali[bu]s inimicis . et a corporalibus hostibus confidimus liberari. De hac re quid dicat gregorius papa septimus require in quadragesima . licet noua consuetudo ecclesie et cetera.

IN hoc igitur ieunio quod solempne uocatur . Gloria in excelsis dicitur . Credo in vnum . et prefacio . et cetera dicuntur. Diaconus quoque dalmatica . et subdiaconus tunica induitur. Alleluia eciam loco gradalis canitur.

Feria quarta ad missam cantato Gloria in excelsis deo . Dicat sacerdos . Oremus Mentes nostras. Deinde leccio . Dixit salomon filijs israel. Alleluia . versus . Spiritus domini. Postea Dicat Dominus uobiscum. Oracio Presta quesumus o[mnipotens]. deus ut a nostris mentibus . epistola . Stans petrus cum duodecim . Alleluia . Emitte. Alleluia . Repleti sunt. Euangeliu. Nemo potest uenire ad me. Offertorium . Emitte. Communio . Pacem meam.

Feria sexta ad missam oracio . Da quesumus ecclesie. Epistola . Aperiens petrus os suum . Alleluia . Emitte . Alleluia. Spiritus sanctus / procedens . Euangeliu. Factum est in vna dierum. [fo. 103] Offertorium . Lauda anima mea. Communio . Spiritus vbi vult.

SAbbato ad missam . prima oracio . Mentibus nostris. Leccio . Effundam de spiritu meo . Alleluia . Spiritus domini repleuit . oracio . Illo nos igne. Leccio . Locutus est dominus ad moysen dicens .

Loquere filijs israel . Alleluia . Factus est repente. Oracio . Deus qui ad animarum medelam. Leccio . Dixit moyses . Alleluia . Repleti sunt omnes. Oracio . Presta quesumus omnipotens deus . ut salutaribus ieunijs. Leccio . Dixit dominus ad moysem . Alleluia . Uerbo domini. Oracio . Presta quesumus omnipotens deus sic nos ab epulis. Leccio . Angelus domini . tota legitur . Alleluia . ¶ Benedictus es domine deus . cantato versu . Alleluia repetitur. Deinde dicitur oracio cum Dominus uobiscum . Deus qui tribus pueris. Epistola . Conuenit vniuersa ciuitas . Alleluia Emitte spiritum . Alleluia . Laudate dominum omnes g[entes]. Euangeliu[m] . Surgens ihesu de synagoga. Offertorium . Benedictus qui uenit. Communio . Non uos relinquam.

¶ His tribus diebus ieuniorum seruicium totum festiu[m] agitur . ad modum scilicet quarte ferie . sexte et sabbati paschalis ebdomade. Vnum quodque alleluia duo et duo canunt.

Hoc ieinium ab apostolis spiritu sancto baptizatis cum ordinacione statutum fuisse . mox sequens ordinacio . vij^{te}. diaconorum ostendit. Facta oracione sorore ieuniij . vnde dominus hec duo coniungit simul dicens . Hoc genus non eicietur . nisi in oracione et ieunio.

¶ Quarti uero mensis ieinium idcirco in hac ebdomada congrue agitur : quia sabbatum ebdomade pentecostes sepius in quarto mense quam in tercio reperitur.

Festiuitas pentecostes octauum diem no[n] habet . sicut nec pascha . sed septem diebus expletur . quia gracia sancti spiritus septiformiter diuiditur. Unde ecclesiasticis viris placuit . ut sabbato pentecostes huius festiuitatis obseruancia finiretur. Hinc uenerabilis Beda presbiter. Quia enim inquit spiritus sancti septiformis est gracia . iure solempnitas aduentus eius per septem dies laude ymponorum debita simul et missarum celebracione colitur.

In prima dominica post festum ¹sancete trinitatis¹ iuxta quod in decretis conscriptum est et romana ecclesia tenet : incipiatur liber regum . et cantatur hystoria . Deus omnium. Precedenti sabbato . ad vesperas antiphona . Benedictus . et alie antiphone cum suis psalmis. Capitulum . Benedictus deus et pater domini nostri . ympnus . O lux beata trinitas.

^{1—1} Erased.

¶ Post vesperas memoria fit de sancta cruce que ab aduentu domini fuerat intermissa. Post vesperas quoque de sancta maria suffragia sanctorum que a dominica in passione intermissa fuerant in solitum reducantur.

¶ Ad completorium hinc usque ad primam dominicam mensis octobris . quando historia Adaperiat cantatur . ymnus Te lucis ante terminum canitur.

Ad matutinas . ymnus Nocte surgentes . et in laudibus . ymnus . Ecce iam noctis. Psalmi nocturnales decem et octo . dicuntur. Antiphone Pro fidei meritis . et cetera.

¶ In hac et in alijs dominicis usque aduentum domini missa matutinalis de trinitate . nisi festum occurrat. In quibus ad maiorem missam . nisi de festo sit . dicitur prefacio . Qui cum vnigenito tuo.

Sciendum uero est de festis que in hijs dominicis occurrerint. Si uero festum nouem lectionum in qualibet dominica eueniat celebrabitur. Eciam si in ipsa dominica hystoria debeat inchoari. Si tamen alia dominica superfuerit in qua ipsa historia cantari possit. Alioquin in secundam feriam mutabitur festum . et hystoria cantabitur. Quod quando euenerit de festo quod mutatur . eciam in ipsa dominica ad vesperas et matutinas commemoratione fit . et missa matutinalis.

Notandum est de qualibet historia que propter aliquod festum transmutatur . quod in qua dominica primum cantatur . eundem dignitatis statum habet quem haberet in prima sua dominica . eciam si per precedentem ebdomadam de ipsa hystoria Responsoria cantata fuerint . idest Responsorium ad vesperas in sabbato dicitur. Et si in ipsa dominica festum trium lectionum occurrat de eo non fit nisi commemoratione et missa matutinalis. Quando autem in dominica officium de aliquo festo agitur . de dominica commemoratione et missa matutinalis . nisi eidem festo aliud festum vnde missa matutinalis fieri debeat sit coniunctum. Tunc eciam memoria dominicalis non intermittitur . si tamen officium dominicale per ebdomadam oporteat cantari. Alioquin si propter prolixum spacium usque ad aduentum domini dominicale officium ad aliam dominicam debet reseruari : tunc de eo nulla fit mencio . nisi in illa dominica per cuius ebdomadam cantandum est.

¶ De festo trium lectionum si in dominica occurrat . commemoratione fit et missa matutinalis . et eciam tres medie / lecciones [fo. 104 ad matutinas . nisi quando hystoria incipitur.

C Sciendum quoque de uesteris illarum festiuitatum que in secunda feria celebrantur . quod quelibet festiuitas nouem lectionum sit . uesteras in dominica a capitulo habet . etiam si in ipsa dominica hystoria inchoata fuerit. Tamen in illis uesteris post primam collectam de festo . commemoracio fit de dominica. De festis uero duplicium uel communium festiuitatum que in sabbatis aguntur . qualiter in eisdem sabbatis mutentur require in aduentu domini. De simplicibus uero festis que similiter in sabbatis occurrunt quomodo uestertinale mutetur officium . require in fine libri post tractatum de ipsis simplicibus festis.

IN omnibus dominicis huius temporis usque ad aduentum domini ad processionem cantatur quodlibet responsorium de trinitate nisi quando duplex festum celebratur. Tunc enim de festo dicitur.

C Nonum quoque responsorium ad matutinas de trinitate canitur . nisi quando historia incipitur.

Feria secunda post completum pentecosten . queque pro gaudio dominice resurreccionis . ascensionis . et aduentus spiritus sancti intermissa fuerant recuperantur. Inde enim ad horas fiunt prostraciones . dicuntur etiam preces . nisi in festis ix lectionum . uel in octauis sanctorum . uel in festis que more octauarum aguntur.

C Hoc tempore usque ad kalendas octobris propter nocciunt breuitatem . septem psalmi penitenciales post primam dicuntur. De quibus obseruatur quod non dicuntur nisi in illis diebus quibus ad horas prostracio fit.

C In sexta feria hoc tempore ieunandum est . nisi festum ix lectionum . uel octuae intercurrunt.

AB octauis pentecostes usque ad kalendas augusti ponitur ad legendum . libri regum . et paralipomenon . et cantantur Responsoria . Deus omnium . preparate corda uestra . et cetera. Quoniam sicut saul et dauid et alij pro lege sua contra alopholos et goliam pugnauerunt . sic et nos post pentecosten idest postquam receperimus donum sancti spiritus in baptimate pugnare debemus contra vicia et demones. Nam iuxta apostolum non est nobis collectacio aduersus carnem et sanguinem . sed aduersus principatus potestates . et cetera. Debemus etiam corda nostra preparare ut simus templum spiritus sancti . illi videlicet soli seruientes cuius solius gracia iuxta quod sequitur in illo Responsorio . Liberabit nos de manibus predictorum inimicorum nostrorum.

A Kalendis augusti usque ad kalendas septembres . legitur et cantatur Salomon . idest liber sapiencie . cum Responsorio In principio . et ceteris.

C Augustus sextus mensis est calidus et anni medius. In sexta etate qua dominus / uenit debemus propter presenciam eius [fo. 104 v] sapienter viuere quoniam audita est inter nos illa sapiencia que ex ore altissimi prodijt. Unde et cor hominis concalescit . et in eius meditacione ignis exardescat . quoniam dominus ignem uenit mittere in terram . vnde quia in media etate vbi quisque amplius ab estu uiciorum succenditur magis debet tunc succurrere sapiencia. Ubi sapiencius est cauendum . quanto plus ualet etatis perfectio ad resistendum.

A Kalendis septembres legitur et cantatur Iob usque ad medium eiusdem mensis. A dominica medij septembres ponuntur tobias . Iudith . et esdras . et neemias vsque ad kalendas octobris. Hic sunt qui omnia aduersa pacienter sustinuerunt. Sic et nos debemus in septima etate qua mundus finietur aduersa que occurunt pro domino tolerare pacientius.

DE septembres autem ieunio constitutum est . ut si kalende septembres in quarta feria eueneri[n]t . aut antea ieunium in tercia ebdomada celebretur. Et si in quinta aut vi^a feria . aut sabbato contigerit in quarta ebdomada ieunandum erit. In decembri uero illud obseruandum erit . ut proximo sabbato ante vigiliam natalis domini celebretur ieunium . quia si vigilia in sabbato euenerit . simul vigilia et ieunium celebrare non conuenit.

A kalendis octobris usque ad kalendas nouembris leguntur libri machabeorum . et cantatur responsoria Adaperiat. Ornauerunt . et cetera. Iste octauus mensis leticiam resurreccionis significat . quia sicut iudei finitis prelijs et templo restituto in ymnis et confessionibus benedicebant dominum . sic et in resurreccionis gloria destructis prelijs diaboli sancti et iusti in domino gaudebunt.

A Prima dominica mensis octobris siue Adaperiat incipitur siue non . ad completorium dicitur ymnus . Saluator mundi domine . usque ad quadragesimam . a qua dominica usque aduentum . et ab octauis epiphanie usque ad quadragesimam . Sabbatis ad vesperas . dicitur ymnus Deus creator omnium. In dominicis ad nocturnum ympnus Primo dierum . et in laudibus Eterne rerum conditor.

A Kalendis nouembris usque aduentum domini . legitur ezechiel et daniel . et xij . minores prophete . cum Responsorio Vidi dominum. Ezechiel vedit iiiijor . animalia idest quatuor euangelistas qui domini natuitatem passionem resurreccionem ascensionem . et cetera annunciauerunt . mundumque docuerunt. Daniel quoque eum esse uenturum predixit dicens . Aspiciebam in uisu noctis . et ecce filius hominis uenit. Similiter et duodecim minores prophete nasciturum dominum predixerunt , et ideo ante eius aduentum post supradictos prophetas leguntur / quia ipse est saluator mundi quem [fo. 105 nasciturum de virgine maria predixerunt.

DE hijs autem libris immo de omnibus qui per totum annum ad legendum annotati sunt obseruetur . ut infra statutum terminum quod in ecclesia non poterit legatur in refectorio. Hic uero incipiendorum supradictorum librorum ordo teneatur . ut si kalende mensis . dominica . aut feria secunda . uel tercia . uel iiiij^a . intraueri[n]t . liber historie cum Responsorijs . in ipsa dominica incipiatur. Si autem feria quinta . uel vj^a . aut eciam sabbato kalende mensis intrauerit Liber historie et Responsoria usque in sequentem dominicam inchoari differantur.

In vigilia sancti Iohannis baptiste.

C Missa matutinalis habetur propria . Iustus ut palma. Ad maiorem missam . Credo in unum dicitur.

C De hac festiuitate aguntur octuae . idest tocius officij cursus inde persoluitur usque ad festiuitatem apostolorum . eciam in dominica si intercurrat . nisi in festo sanctorum iohannis et pauli. De ipsis enim officium more octuarum agitur in tribus lectionibus. Qua die de octauis sancti iohannis commemoracio fit . et missa matutinalis . De istis martiribus quando in dominica eorum festiuitas occurrit . totum seruicium fit cum tribus medijs lectionibus de sancto iohanne.

vigilia apostolorum petri et pauli.

IN uigilia sanctorum apostolorum petri et pauli . de sancto leone papa commemoracio fit ad vesperas et matutinas . et ad primam missam . que de octauis sancti iohannis post terciam canitur. In die.

Gloriosa ista solemnitatis quamuis ad beatum petrum propter officij proprietatem specialiter pertinere uideatur : sub honore tamen amborum martirij vtriusque ipsius videlicet petri et coapostoli sui pauli celebris habetur et venerabiliter colitur. Nam ut ait sanctus leo papa et beatus gelasius . vna die uero diuerso tempore . vno in loco vnius / tyranni tollerauere sentenciam. Missa matutinalis de [fo. 105 v] sancto iohanne. Ad maiorem missam . Credo in unum dicitur . et prefacio de apostolis. Ipsa die vespere communiter de vtrisque apostolis aguntur . absque commemoratione propria de apostolo paulo . quam quidam post principalem collectam faciunt.

De commemoratione sancti pauli.

Ad matutinas ante memoriam de octauis sancti iohannis commemoracio fit de apostolo petro . ad quam dicitur oracio . Deus qui beato petro apostolo . que est in cathedra eius. Que eciam cum sua secreta et postcommunione ad missam matutinalem ipsa die dicitur. Ad quam missam officium . epistola . euangeliu[m] . et cetera dicuntur sicut ad missam pridie. In maiore missa . dicitur Credo in unum et prefacio de apostolis.

C Ad vesperas prima commemoracio est de subsequenti octauo die beati iohannis. De quo in crastino totum seruicium agitur cum commemoratione et tribus medijs lectionibus . et missa matutinali de octauis apostolorum.

Sequenti die post octauas sancti iohannis officij cursus est de octauis apostolorum. De quibus tres lecciones fiunt. Vel si dominica fuerit nouem lecciones fiunt. Qua die de martyribus processo et martiniano commemoration fit . et missa matutinalis . et in dominica medie lecciones. Ipsa die de sancto swythuno non fit nisi commemoration . quia in proximo in eius videlicet translacione ubi et congruencius potest plenaria de eo festiuitas agenda est.

Per octauas apostolorum totus cantus . ymni . capitula . et ad missam epistole . et euangelia omnia de communi aliorum apostolorum sumuntur. Cotidie ad missam nisi matutinalis sit . prefacio supradicta dicitur . Et te domine. Nuncquam enim dicitur prefacio ad missam matutinalem. De festiuitatibus prime dignitatis.

Quinque sunt festiuitates . que sicut pre ceteris in maiori ueneracione habentur . ita maiori celebracionis apparatu digne videntur. Sunt autem iste. Natalis domini . Pascha . Pentecostes . Assumpcio gloriose et perpetue uirginis marie . Festiuitas loci.

C Pridie ante vigilias istarum gloriosarum festiuitatum . monasterium ornari inchoatur . quod totum secundum facultatem loci prout conuenientius potest ornatur. Altaria quoque omnia parantur . sed in vigilia. Et in vigilia Natalis domini . et assumptionis beate marie ante terciam. In vigilia uero pasche . uel pentecostes . siue festiuitas loci . post sextam. Ante hec festa mundantur officine . et claustrum. Sedilia refectorij . et capituli . bancalibus operiuntur. Sternitur iunctus siue stramen . uel fenum in hyeme.

¶ Fratres quoque pridie ante istas vigilias nisi dominica prohibeat raduntur . tunc uero ante . excepta vigilia pasche in qua radi oportet . et vigilia pentecostes . in qua eciam rasura sit . nisi pro aliquo festo nouem lectionum quod in eo occurrerit preueniatur.

¶ Notandum quod in vigila natalis domini . et assumptionis beate marie hoc amplius ceteris vigilis habet . quod quia a capitulo / celebritas inchoat. Ad terciam et sextam vnum de medio- [fo. 109 v] cribus signis pulsatur. Igitur in qualibet uigilia istarum festiuitatum ante missam . preparatis rite omnibus que intrinsecus siue extrinsecus supra descripta sunt preparanda ante ipsam missam totum classicum pulsetur . et ita siue dominica siue non . maior missa de ipsa uigilia celebretur. Vna tantum collecta dicatur. Cantores secundarij chorum regant . qui et gradale canant . quod post versum reincipitur . nisi dominica fuerit.

¶ Si uero dominica fuerit . alij de choro gradale canant . et cantores Alleluia . Kyriel[eison] festiue cantetur. Breue tamen . Sanctus quoque et Agnus dei . festiue dicantur.

¶ Ad hanc missam sacerdos honorifice induatur. Diaconus sit in dalmatica . et subdiaconus in tunica . totum seruicium festiuo more persoluatur. Submissius tamen quam in crastino cantus inchoetur . quamquam nec nimis alte nec nimis submisso . sed inter utrumque ita semper moderandus ut bene possit cantari. Nec unquam aliquis super alios exclamando cantare presumat. De concordi modulacione beatus augustinus in libro de ciuitate dei ita loquitur. Diuersorum sonorum rationabilis moderatusque concentus . concordi uarietate compactus . bene ordinate ciuitatis insinuat ciuitatem.

In fine misse nullum signum pulsetur. Sed post breue interuallum duo de maioribus sonent ad nonam.

¶ Ad mensam legatur quicquid ad suscipiendum gaudium tantarum solempnitatum magis congrue videtur. De regula uero nostra que per septimanam semel ex precepto legitur . si quid restat legendum predie^t ad cenam . uel ante . uel in quarta feria ante pascha perlegatur. Hinc enim usque ad completas octauas istarum festiuitatum nec in refectorio nec in capitulo legitur . nisi quod ad festa pertineat. Tamen et infra octauas si opus fuerit supradicta regula ad cenam legitur . post quartum scilicet diem . et maxime in sabbato si se oportunitas prebuerit.

De vesperis.

AD vesperas . primum duo de maioribus signis pulsantur . secundo . tercio . et quarto . duo , et duo sicut sunt per ordinem maiora ac deinde simul omnia. Inter signa omnia luminaria ecclesie accenduntur . ante singula altaria singula luminaria ponuntur. Duo in cappis chorum regunt. Antiphonas super psalmos distribuunt. Primam antiphonam prelatus incipiat . secundam dominus prior. Ceteras alij sicut sunt in choro maiores. Responsorium cantores canunt. Antiphona ad Magnificat ter tota canitur. Prelatus eam primo imponit . / et postremo. Altare maius cum duobus [fo. 110 thuribulis incensatur. Per cetera quoque altaria incensum portatur. Benedicamus cantores dicunt.

De matutinis.

IN hijs festis ad matutinas primo totum classicum pulsatur . et remanente classico . duo de minoribus signis sonant . donec conuentus ad ecclesiam occurrat. Inuitatorium quatuor canant. Primus qui aquam benedictam portat . Deinde qui crucem . postea ceroferarij . Deinde qui portat thuribulum . quos sequitur subdiaconus cum textu in tunica . et diaconus in dalmatica. Post eos incedunt cantores. Deinde pueri . et reliqui fratres binj et binj sicut est ordo eorum . et post omnes prelatus. ¶ Quod si dominica fuerit . primo sit aqua benedicta ab ebdomadario . et altaria et fratres consueto more asperguntur. Deinde dicta oracione . Exaudi nos domine sancte pater . incipit ipse ebdomadarius terciam . que dum canitur . uadit idem cum aquebaiulo et / [fo. 110 v] subdiacono qui sibi librum defert per officinas et solitas obseruancias complet. ¶ Meminerint tam cantores quam ceteri omnes ut totum quod cantant morose et cum distinctionibus ita concorditer proferant ut pro dulcedine circumstantes uocem leticie cordis sui in auribus omnipotentis dei effundant. Gradale cantores secundi canunt . adiuncto tercio de choro cui precentor innuerit. Alleluia uero pertinet ad cantores qui in choro sunt priores . qui secum alios duos de maioribus personis assumuntur. Postea sequencia in choro incipitur . et alternatim spaciose sicut et cetera decantantur^t.

¶ Sanctus cum versibus simul omnes canunt. Ad Agnus dei . sicut nec ad Gloria in excelsis nunquam versus dicuntur.

IN hijs festis omnes qui missas non canunt ad communionem uadunt . exceptis illis qui aliqua racionabili causa consulto prelato se abstinent. Finito Ite missa est . paululum omnia signa pulsantur in classicum.

De vesperis totum fit sicut de histernis[†] vesperis dictum est.

De octauis.

Gloriose iste festiuitates octauas habent . que ita solemniter aguntur . quod per octo dies omnia que ad celebracionem ipsarum festiuitatum non¹ pertinent proponuntur. Ad matutinas enim quindecim psalmi intermittuntur. Hore secundarij non dicuntur . nec psalmi familiares . officium quoque pro defunctis nisi corpus presens sit intermittitur. Ad missam matutinalem dicuntur quinque oraciones . quarum prima est de eo officio vnde missa canitur . cetera uero dicuntur pro familiaribus uel aliquibus necessitatibus.

C Non enim est consuetudo ut in hijs diebus in quibus singulare officium agitur . de sanctis in missa non fiat mencio . nisi de quibus ad vesperas et ad matutinas fit commemoratione. De festis qui in hijs octauis occurrent . in suis locis dictum est.

eciam et ad omnes horas quamquam priuatis diebus solet pulsari. In octauo die officium agitur . sicut in vna illarum festiuitatum que communes appellantur . de quibus paulo post dicendum est.

Quia uero ecclesia nostra in honore sancte crucis consecrata est in eius festiuitate que inter supradicta festa annumerata sunt . hoc additur quod tota ecclesia ornatur . quod eciam in festo sancti patris nostri augustinj obseruatur./ [fo. 112 v]

Quod maiorem reuerenciam debeamus sanctis illis quorum reliquias habemus . uel quorum nomine dedicatas ecclesias incolimus . sanctus ambrosius insinuat dicens . cum omnium sanctorum martirum fratres deuotissime natalicia celebrare debeamus . precipue eorum solempnitas tota nobis ueneracione curanda est qui in nostris domicilijs proprium sanguinem pro deo fuderunt. Nam licet vniuersi sancti vbique et omnibus prosint . specialiter tamen illi pro nobis interueniunt . qui pro nobis supplicia pertulerunt. Martir enim compatitur non sibi sed ciuibus patitur . sibi enim patitur ad premium . ciuibus ad exemplum . et post pauca . cuncti qui martyres deuotissime percolendi sunt . sed specialiter hi uenerandi sunt a nobis quorum ecclesias incolimis et reliquias possidemus. Illi enim nos adiuuant oracionibus et passione . cum hijs eciam familiaritas quedam nobis est . semper enim nobiscum sunt . nobiscum morantur . hoc est et in corpore viuentes nos custodiunt . et de corpore egredientes suscipiunt . hic ne peccati labes absinuat . ibi ne inferni horror inuadat. Nam ideo a maioribus hoc prouisum est . ut sanctorum ossibus nostra corpora sociemus . ut dum illos os tartareum metuit . nos pena non tangat. Item de eadem re quod specialius adiuuemur ab illis sanctis quorum corpora uel reliquias habemus . sanctus leo papa in quodam sermone suo ostendit dicens. Sicut autem inquit et nos experti sumus . et nostri probauere maiores . credimus atque confidimus inter omnes labores istius uite ad optinendam misericordiam dei semper nos specia- lium patrum nostrorum oracionibus adiuuandos . ut quantum pro- prijs peccatis deprimitur . tantum apostolicis meritis adiuuemur.

De duplicitibus festis

Sunt et alie festiuitates quas tercie dignitates[†] appellamus idest festum sancti stephani. Sancti iohannis euangeliste . Innocencium. Circumcisio domini . et cetera huiusmodi festa sicut continentur in kalendario huius libri.

¶ In hijs festis paratur presbiterium . chorus . altaria . pulsantur signa ut supra. Ad vesperas et matutinas quatuor luminaria ante altare . et cetera que circa sunt accenduntur. Duo chorum regentes . antiphonas . primas ad vesperas inchoant . et ceteras per maiores distribuunt. Ad magnificat . et Benedictus . antiphona . bis dicitur . prelatus eam primo imponat. Altare principale . et matutinale cum vno thuribulo incensatur. Ad inuitatorium . iiiij^{or} . ponuntur. Antiphone . inchoantur a prelato et senioribus. Singula Responsoria a duobus canuntur.

¶ In hijs festis commemoracio fit de minoribus festis qua simul occurunt . et missa matutinalis. Quod enim fit in supradictis secunde dignitatis festis nisi in die ascensionis . tunc enim quodlibet festum occurrat . propter excellenciam / ipsius ascensionis nulla eius [fo. 113 fit mencio . nisi in vltimis vesperis et tunc si tale festum vnde in crastino officium agendum est. Idem obseruatur in supradictis quinque precipuis festis ut quodlibet festum superueniat . nulla eius commemoracio fiat.

In hijs eciam festis ad missam omnes cappis induuntur. Quod si dominica fuerit . post terciam ad processionem cantatur aliquod responsorium de festo . quo finito . intermissa consueta oracione . Via sanctorum . incipitur aliqua antiphona . de sancto loci . et ita in chorum reuertitur. Deinde dicta solita oracione de ipso sancto pulsatur classicum . et missa inchoatur. Officium ante Gloria patri . et post Gloria patri repetitur. Kyriel[eison] cum versibus canitur. Gradale non repetitur . nisi in supradictis prime et secunde dignitatis festis. Alleluia cantores canunt . quibus si cantori uisum fuerit tercius de choro additur. Sequencia canitur. Sanctus sine versibus . festiuum tamen dicitur. Finita missa classicum pulsatur. Ad mensam de festo legitur. Ipsa die ad vesperas antiphone . quinque dicuntur . uel de laudibus uel de alijs sicut in libris habentur. Responsorium quoque dicitur. De quibusdam istarum octuae aguntur . de quibus officium agitur ut supradictum est de festis secunde dignitatis . excepto quod octaua dies simpliciter tantum cum ix lectionibus recolitur.

De festo dedicacionis ecclesie.

Festum dedicacionis ecclesie inter supradicta secunde dignitatis festa annumeratur. In quo . super quod ibi dictum est hoc additur . quod tota ecclesia ornatur . et per illa altaria que ipsa die consecrata fuerunt lumen ad primas vesperas accenditur . et donec in crastinum post completorium non extinguitur . per cetera quoque altaria ad vesperas et ad matutinas et ad missam ponitur lumen. Insuper eciam si tantus est numerus sacerdotum . per omnia altaria ipso die missa de festo canitur . per circuitum quoque ecclesie si fieri potest processio ducitur . de quo eciam octauae fiunt.

Unaqueque ecclesia illius sancti in cuius honore est consecrata . uel cuius corpus habet . et dedicacionis agitur octauas.

[D]e octauis dedicacionis in libro machabeorum sic legitur . inter cetera . et obtulerunt sacrificium super altare nouum secundum tempus et secundum diem in quo contaminauerunt illud gentes . in ipso renouatum est . et iterum . et fecerunt dedicacionem altaris diebus octo . et obtulerunt holocausta cum leticia . et statuit iudas et fratres eius et vniuersa ecclesia israel . ut agatur dies dedicacionis altaris temporibus suis ab anno in annum per octo dies.

In omnibus supradictis festis prelatus uel cui ipse iniunxerit. Vesperas in vigilia . et matutinas . et missam . et alias vesperas in die tantum dicit . cetera officia ebdomadarius complet. / In [fo. 113 v] dominica eciam palmarum . In cena domini . In paraseue . In sabbato sancto pasche . In uigilia pentecostes . prelatus debet solummodo missam celebrare.

De festis communibus.

ITem sunt festiuitates que communes appellantur . pro eo quod ex parte simpliciter et ex parte dupliciter celebrantur. Id est festum sancti vincencij martiris . Conuersio sancti pauli . et cetera.

¶ In hijs festis parantur presbiterij altaria. In uigilia ad nonam pulsatur vnum de maioribus signis . ad vesperas duo . et ad matutinas primo duo de minoribus signis . et deinde gradatim vnum post vnum . et ad classicum omnia. Ad Magnificat . et Benedictus altare principale et matutinale incensatur. Si uero in ecclesia altare de sancto vnde festum celebratur habetur . ad illud cum incenso itur. Ante quod eciam ad vesperas et matutinas et ad missam lumen accenditur.

¶ Ante maius altare tria luminaria ardent. Ad inuitatorium tres ponuntur . primum responsorium . et tertium . et sextam . et nonum . a duobus dicitur.

¶ Ad Te deum laudamus . sonant duo de mediocribus signis . et ad Per singulos dies omnia. Duo quoque de mediocribus ad primam . et vnum tantum de maioribus ad terciam . et ad vi . ad nonam. Duo regunt chorum . qui ad vesperas et ad matutinas primas antiphonas . super psalmos imponunt . et ceteras maioribus distribuunt. Responsorium ad vesperas et primum ad matutinas ipsi dicunt . qui eciam Benedicamus cantant. Ad nonum responsorium duo de senioribus ponuntur.

¶ Ad missam sacerdos et ministri festiuo more induuntur. Officium post versum dimidium recantatur . et sic Gloria patri incipitur. Kyriel[eison] festiuum sine versibus canitur. Gradale duo canunt. Alleluia cantores. Sequencia dicitur. In fine misse classicum pulsatur.

¶ In hijs festis sicut in omnibus festis ix lectionum . missa matutinalis consuetudinaliter de festo dicitur . nisi aliud festum simul occurrat . de quo ad vesperas et ad matutinas commemoracio fiat. Tamen quoniam ab octauis pentecostes usque ad aduentum domini per consuetudinem in sexta feria missa de cruce solet cantari . quando festum ix lectionum in sexta feria occurrit . nisi commune uel duplex sit . missa matutinalis de cruce cantatur. Si tamen aliud festum non simul occurrat . de quo missa matutinalis debere fieri scriptum sit . quod cum euenerit ad ipsam missam matutinalem . secunda oracio dicitur de cruce.

De qua eciam in festis communibus que in sexta feria occurrerint . ad missam matutinalem secunda oracio dicitur . et quia de cruce mencio facta est . dicendum est quod quando in sexta feria missa de ipsa cruce ad nonam ut solet propter aliquod festum quod ipsa die occurrit non potest cantari . pro festo enim trium lectionum si ipsa die euenerint debet intermitte . / ad ipsam tamen missam [fo. 114 secunda oracio dicitur de cruce. Item infra octauas . uerbi gracia Iohannis baptiste . uel aliorum sanctorum in sexta feria ad missam que de octauis cantatur post terciam secunda oracio de cruce dicitur.

¶ Item in festis que in sabbatis occurrunt . de sancta maria dicitur missa matutinalis . nisi eadem festa dupliciter agantur . uel duo festa simul occurrant . tunc uero cantor debet prouidere . ut ipsa ebdomada aliqua die precedenti de ipsa gloria domina nostra missa maior uel matutinalis dicatur. Nulla enim si fieri potest ebdomada transire debet . qua de hac beatissima domina ad minus missa in conuentu non cantetur. De qua eciam aduocata nostra ab octauis pentecostes . usque ad aduentum domini . et ab octauis epiphanie usque ad septuagesimam omni sabbato plenarium seruicium agitur . eciam si festum trium lectionum occurrat . nisi more octauarum agi debeat . tamen in spacio quod inter octauas epiphanie et septuagesimam habetur . respensoria de psalmis in vno sabbato dicuntur . si tamen aliquid euenerit in quo non sit festum neque trium neque nonum^t lectionum. Si autem generale iejunium sabbato occurrit . festum de supradicta domina nostra intermittitur . nisi quod matutinalis missa de ea ipsa die dicitur . si tamen per ebdomadam dicta non fuit.

¶ Pro hijs festis communibus . xv . psalmi non intermittuntur. Venie post lecciones petuntur. Hore secundarie . et suffragia sanctorum solito more dicuntur. In capitulo uero non Verba mea . sed Laudate dominum dicitur. Ipsa quoque die Placebo et dirige nisi corpus presens sit . uel aliquod speciale anniuersarium occurrat intermittitur.

De festis nouem lectionum.

I Tem sunt festa que vsualiter nouum^t lectionum appellantur . idest festum fabiani et sebastiani . Agnetis . Agathe . et cetera.

¶ In hijs festis ad vesperas et matutinas primo vnum de mediocribus signis . ac deinde per ordinem vnum et vnum pulsatur . postremo exceptis maioribus totum classicum. Ad horas vnum de mediocribus. Ad nonam tantum et primam vnum de maioribus. Ad vesperas responsorium dicitur. Cantores ebdomadarij sunt in cappis . et primas antiphonas inchoantes . reliquis mediocribus iniungitur. Ad vesperas et ad matutinas duo luminaria accenduntur . et sicut ad vesperas ita et ad matutinas altare maius et minus incensatur. Ad te deum laudamus . sonant duo de mediocribus signis . et ad Per singulos dies totum classicum . exceptis maioribus signis.

¶ In huiusmodi festis et eciam in supradictis que communia uocantur . ad missam matutinalem commemoraciones fiunt que priuatis diebus ad maiorem missam solent fieri . scilicet prima de officio quod canitur . secunda de sancta maria / tercio de [fo. 114 v] sancto augustino . quarta de omnibus sanctis . quinta illa communis . Omnipotens . s[empiterne] . deus qui viuorum dominaris . quod si eadem missa de sancta maria dicitur . quarto loco dicitur oracio pro familiaribus . uel pro aliqua necessitate. Hoc modo per consuetudinem oraciones dicuntur . tamen cum causa dictauerit adduntur et alie . numerus tamen septenarius non exceditur in conuentu.

¶ In huiusmodi festis sacerdos honeste ad missam induitur . Diaconus in dalmatica . subdiaconus in tunica. Gradale duo canunt . Alleluia cantores. Vna collecta dicitur.

¶ In fine misse vna de mediocribus scillis pulsatur. Finita nona .

Placebo dicitur . nisi festum nouem lectionum in crastino occurrat. Ad vesperas inter signa . dirige dicitur . primum signum pulsatur usque ad psalmum . Expectans . secundum . dum lecciones leguntur . tertium . Dum psalmus Te decet . et deus deus meus . quartum . dum laudate dominum de celis . classicum uero uel priuatis diebus ultima duo signa inchoantur pulsari quando sacerdos finita oracione . Deus uenie lar-gitor . dicit Oremus . et cessant cum post oracionem Fidelium deus dixerit . Requiescant in pace.

¶ Si uero nouem lectionum fieri debent . reseruatur exultabunt usque post cenam . et tunc primum signum ad vesperas pulsatur donec prime tres lecciones lecte sint . quando autem ieunij dies est. Post cenam graciarum accione redditia statim Placebo dicitur . et ante vesperas inter signa . totum dirige . eciam si cum ix . lectionibus dicendum sit . tunc uero secretarius ad conuocandos fratres in chorum modicum sonat . vnam de scillis . expectans postea donec septimus psalmus inchoetur . et tunc primum signum ad vesperas incipit pulsare . ultima leccio usque¹ finiatur . qua uice et eciam alijs vicibus que descripte non sunt . sequencia signa debet moderare . prout congruencius competere perspexerit . quod si pro officio illo classicum pulsandum est in inicio antequam . Dirige incipiatur debet pulsari . tam diu quoisque fratres omnes in chorum conueniant. Quando uero ita festiuie pro aliquo defuncto officium agendum est . ut lecciones ad lectri-cum quod ad gradus chori debet poni legantur . pulsato in inicio ali-quamdiu classico . totum ante vesperas persoluitur . siue dies ieunij sit siue non . et tunc primum signum ad vesperas finita nona leccione incipit pulsari.

Qualiter in festis sanctorum vespertinale officium mutetur.

Sciendum est quod cum due uel tres festiuitates continuatim eueniunt . secundum quod dignitates earum expetunt . ad vesperas mutantur capitula. Verbi gracia . si hodie est simplex festiuitas nouem lectionum . et cras futura sit communis . ad vesperas / psalmi erunt de presenti festiuitate . capitulum uero et que [fo. 115 secuntur de communi . idest de subsequenti festo . Habita . s[cilicet]. memoria post primam collectam de hodierna festiuitate. Similiter si crastinam communem festiuitatem : sequiter duplex festiuitas . ad vesperas mutatur capitulum. Eadem ratione si hodie est duplex solempnitas . et cras sit futura communis . vespere ex integro de hodierna die erunt festiuitate . et de crastina fiet tantum commemoracio. Si uero due eiusdem dignitatis solempnitates uel communes communibus . uel simplices simplicibus occurrunt . communis versus est quod de precedenti festiuitate psalmi dicuntur . deinde de subsequenti capitulum et cetera que sequuntur . cum antiphona . et oracione de priori festiuitate post vesperas. Si autem aliquando forte conigerit quatinus tres solempnitates tribus diebus continuatis eueniant . quarum prima sit communis . et postrema duplex . uel e conuerso . prima duplex postrema communis : tercia uero que est media simplex sit festum ix . lectionum . uel aliqua dominica . ipsa simplex uel dominica non habebit alias vesperas nisi in die suo psalmos usque ad capitulum . seruato tantum quod in aduentu de quinque precipuis dominicis dictum est . si in eorum sabbatis communis festiuitas eueniat . ibi idest in aduentu domini require quid de vesperis siue communium siue duplicitum festiuitatum fieri debeat . que sabbatis occurrunt.

¶ De simplece autem festo ix . lectionum si sabbato occurrerit . uespere fient : habita tantum commemoratione post vesperas de dominica : nisi in crastino hystoria debeat inchoari. Tunc enim de dominica ix . lecciones fient . et de festo commemoratione tantum.

¶ Notandum uero quod in quinque principalibus dominicis quando de dominica uesperi sabbati fieri debent : non a capitulo ut a plerisque solent . si ipsa die aliqua festiuitas ix . lectionum celebrata fuerit inchoantur : immo semper a principio cum consuetis antiphonis . et psalmis Benedictus et alijs dicuntur . eciam si ipsa die celebrata sit festiuitas de hijs que communes appellantur.

De festis iij . lectionum . in modum octauarum.

Sunt uero festa trium lectionum que more octauarum aguntur . idest . Elphegi martiris . Georgij martiris . Dunstani . archiepiscopi . quando in paschali tempore occurrit. S[anctorum] iohannis et pauli . ypoliti martiris . et S[ancti] iohannis ante portam latinam . et sancti eustachij et sociorum eius. In hijs festis . Ad matutinas psalmi nocturnales . ix . cum vna antiphona . dicuntur. Ad laudes quoque vna antiphona . dicitur . nisi in festis quibus ad laudes antiphone proprie habentur . et omnes quinque cantantur.

¶ Notandum uero de supradictis festis quod quando in dominica occurunt siue hystoria / inchoetur siue non medie lecciones [fo. 115 v de ipsis fiunt . excepto festo iohannis et pauli . et festo sancti ypoliti de quibus cum in dominica eueniunt sicut suis locis dictum est totum seruicium persoluitur . excepto eciam festo sancti dunstani de quo cum post pentecosten occurrit ix lecciones aguntur.

In hijs festis et signa pulsantur . et ad missam ministri induuntur . et Te deum laudamus dicitur . et cetera explentur sicut supradictum est in tractatu de octauis festiuitatum. De quibus eciam festis ultime uespere aguntur . nisi maius festum superueniat.

De priuatis festis trium lectionum

DE priuatis festis trium lectionum que per annum occurunt . que priuata festa ideo appellantur . quia seruicium de ipsis cum seruicio priuatorum dierum idest feriarum mixtum est . vel quia sicut in priuatis diebus solet cum prostracione agitur . hec sunt festa que secuntur . idest festum . felicis in pincis . Mauri abbatis . Marcelli martiris . Prisca virginis . et cetera huiusmodi festa sicut continentur in kalendario huius libri. Quando autem aliquod de hijs festis trium lectionum in aliqua feria occurrit . Ad primas vesperas capitulum et cetera de ipso fiunt. Ad matutinas uero inuitatorium . ymni et psalmi duodecim cum suis antiphonis . ferialibus de feria in qua festum illud occurrit dicuntur . versiculi uero lecciones et deinceps cetera usque ad vesperas de huiusmodi festo aguntur. Secunde vespere de huiusmodi festo non fiunt.

C De quo festo quando in dominica occurrit . commemoratio tantum fiat . cum medijs lectionibus . et missa matutinali persoluitur . nisi historia debeat inchoari. Tunc enim cum sola memoria . et missa matutinali dimittitur.

Sciendum est quod in nullo festo per annum nisi in vigilia natalis domini . et assumptionis sancte marie . ad primas vesperas mutatur psalmi . sed dicuntur de feria in qua vigilia euenerit. Ad secundas uero vesperas sicut ad matutinas semper mutantur.

In festis sancte crucis psalmi dominicales idest. Dixit dominus . et quatuor qui secuntur.

C In festis sancte marie psalmi qui solent dici cotidie . Dixit dominus. Confebor. Beatus uir. De profundis. Memento domine dauid.

The following agreements as to memorial services between the Augustinian Canons of Guisborough and the Scottish monasteries of Jedburgh, St. Andrews, and Kelso are among a number of more or less similar agreements with English houses, written in a thirteenth-century hand immediately after the kalendar, in the Guisborough service book at the British Museum, MS. Add. 35,285. They are of the same type as the agreement between Holyrood and Carlisle on p. 19 above.

REPORT OF THE SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE OLD EDINBURGH CLUB

THE SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CLUB was held in the Old Council Room, City Chambers, on the afternoon of Thursday, 29th January 1915, at 4 o'clock.

Mr. W. Moir Bryce, President of the Club, presided. There was a good attendance of Members.

Apologies were intimated from the Right Hon. the Earl of Cassillis, Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc, Mr. John B. Clark, Mr. F. C. Inglis, and others.

The Secretary submitted the Seventh Annual Report, which is in the following terms :—

The Council beg to submit to the Club the Seventh Annual Report.

A meeting of the Club was held in Dowell's Rooms, 18 George Street, on the evening of Tuesday, 24th February 1914, at 8 P.M.

Mr. W. Moir Bryce, President of the Club, presided. There was a good attendance of Members.

The Secretary read the notice calling the meeting.

Apologies for absence were intimated from the Right Hon. the Earl of Cassillis, Sir Robert Usher, Mr. Charles E. Price, M.P., Col. Gordon Gilmour, Dr. Middleton, Mr. Robert Home, and Mr. William Melven.

The proposed alterations on the Constitution of the Club

were held as read, a print of same having been issued to each member.

Mr. William Cowan stated that the matter had arisen out of a remit to the Council at the Annual Meeting of the Club on 29th January 1913, and that the principal change proposed on the Constitution was the increase in the number of members to a limit of 350 instead of 300. He also mentioned that the Council had carefully considered as to the advisability of increasing the membership at more than one meeting, and had ultimately resolved to recommend that the membership be increased to 350. He thereafter went over and explained the proposed alterations, and in conclusion moved that the Rules as now printed should be the Rules of the Club. Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc seconded. Mr. Hugh Carbarns moved as an amendment that the proposed increase in the membership be not agreed to, and Mr. W. J. Hay seconded. A discussion followed, and on a vote being taken only three members supported the amendment. The motion was declared carried by more than the required two-thirds majority.

It was agreed that the Associates on the roll as at 31st December last should have the first opportunity of becoming members.

On the motion of Dr. W. B. Blaikie, a cordial vote of thanks was awarded to the Chairman.

In terms of the foregoing resolution, 50 members were added to the roll, and there still remain 17 names on the list of applicants waiting admission.

The following meetings were held.

1. LECTURE ON ‘KING DAVID’S TOWER AT EDINBURGH CASTLE.’

A meeting of the Club was held in Dowell’s Rooms on the evening of Thursday, 30th April 1914, when a lecture on ‘King David’s Tower at Edinburgh Castle’ was delivered by Mr. W. T. Oldrieve, principal Architect, H.M. Office of Works.

Mr. W. MOIR BRYCE, President of the Club, who occupied the chair, referred to the great work Mr. Oldrieve had done for antiquarian Scotland. In Holyrood, for instance, he said he had quite revived the old building, giving it, if not a new face, at least a new constitution, so that its walls would stand for centuries to come. He had also dug there, and revealed to them the reason why King David first selected the spot as the site for his monastery. He found there the foundations of the old Celtic chapel. They had had many reasons advanced as to the cause of the King's selection of the spot. That was the true cause. He erected it over this little church, which must have been one held in great veneration. Then he had revived the Norman nave at Dunfermline, the roof of Glasgow Cathedral, and their own picturesque and old Castle he had gone over and touched up with a loving hand, interjecting his invaluable cement all over the Half-Moon Battery, so that it would stand for ages to come. Not content with the outward veneer, he had dug underground, and if there was nothing new to be found above, he had certainly found a great deal below.

Mr. Oldrieve's lecture was profusely illustrated with lantern views. Reference is made to Mr. Oldrieve's paper on 'David's Tower at Edinburgh Castle' in Vol. VI. of the Book of the Club.

Dr. W. B. BLAIKIE, at the close, raised the point as to where the masons came from to build the castles, and where they got the material.

The CHAIRMAN said that the building art was not a small art in those days. No sooner had Queen Margaret died than a host of ecclesiastical buildings and castles sprang up. Though Bruce destroyed castles, there must have been in the country and beyond the country—Englishmen, Frenchmen, and Germans—masons ready to do the work for the necessary gold.

Mr. Oldrieve pointed out the existence of masons' guilds at that time, and that these guilds travelled about the country, as the various masons' marks found testified. There was no great difficulty about the material, because there were cases in which they knew the very quarries from which these buildings were erected.

Dr. Ross said Bruce destroyed a certain number of castles, but he also built a good many. He built a large castle at Tarbert, in Argyllshire, of stone, and among the names of the builders were several 'Donalds.' Regarding the travelling masons, some of them were

Scotsmen, a good many of them were Frenchmen. Indeed, there was a whole family called ‘French,’ undoubtedly French, who built a great many of the churches and castles of Scotland. The West Church of Stirling, he further mentioned, was designed and built by a Stirling man—John Shanks.

Dr. Ross, who moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Oldrieve for his lecture, also recalled his many services, and described his discovery of David’s Tower as the most interesting thing that had occurred at the Castle since the discovery of Margaret’s Chapel fifty or sixty years ago by Daniel Wilson. That discovery excited a great deal of admiration, but this probably excited more. It was with universal regret that they had come to know that Mr. Oldrieve was about to give up the office which he had adorned so long.

Lord GUTHRIE said he wished to emphasise what Dr. Ross had said about Mr. Oldrieve’s services to Scotland. His position had been a very important one, but the effect of it really depended on the man. They might have had a mere official, an excellent official, but nothing more. But they had had in Mr. Oldrieve a very unusual combination—a man of thorough knowledge and learning in his own profession, and of a capacity to acquire new information and new learning when it was needed for any particular work. They might have had a man who was no antiquarian, but Mr. Oldrieve had a passion for matters connected with the history of the country. Their difficulty in the past had been to get money out of the Treasury, but Mr. Oldrieve’s repeated efforts had met with a success almost incredible in a direction where Lord Rosebery, Mr. Balfour, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and the Prime Minister had confessed themselves powerless. Glasgow Cathedral roof alone required £13,000, and he did not think any official could have got that money except Mr. Oldrieve. Mr. Oldrieve was not a Scotsman, but he had done what no Scot had done, partly, perhaps, because he was an Englishman, with no axe to grind, and no motive to serve except the desire to do the very best he could for the interests committed to him. He had had the interests both of the antiquarians and the common people at heart, and his judicious tact in dealing with proprietors all over Scotland had a great influence in the transference of valuable historic properties from private hands to the Crown. He hoped that, although Mr. Oldrieve was retiring, they would continue to retain for many years the inestimable benefit of his membership on the Ancient Monuments Commission for the carrying to completion of the great work that was being done by that body for Scotland.

Mr. OLDRIEVE briefly returned thanks.

2. VISIT TO SOUTH LEITH.

The first outing for the season took place in delightful weather on Saturday afternoon, 16th May 1914, when the members and friends, eighty in all, met at South Leith, the church and churchyard being the first objects of interest. In the burial-ground are the graves of Adam White, the first Provost of Leith; Hugo Arnot, the historian; Robert Gilfillan, collector of taxes, and writer of 'Oh, why left I my hame?'; Rev. John Home, author of the tragedy of Douglas; and James Balfour, laird of Pilrig, whom Robert Louis Stevenson represents as receiving a visit from his cousin, David Balfour, the hero of Kidnapped and Catrina. The graveyard seems at first to have been the burial-place for the monks of the adjoining St. Anthony's Monastery. The Earl of Moray has sittings in South Leith Church. That family acquired the confiscated estates of the sixth Earl of Balmerino, who was beheaded on Tower Hill, London, in 1746, for participation in the Rebellion, and the Balmerino pew was granted to the Morays on condition that the Corporation might bring water into Leith from Lochend Loch. The members of the Club crossed the Kirkgate to Trinity House, in which the curios and paintings were examined with interest, particularly Raeburn's portraits of John Hay, George Smith, and Admiral Lord Viscount Duncan. Passing the site of one of the oldest buildings in Leith, now being demolished, the haunted house of the 'green lady,' the party repaired to the former residence of the Balmerino family, which is part of a Roman Catholic school. Mr. David Robertson, S.S.C., Town-Clerk of Leith, and Mr. John Russell, acted as leaders, and the cordial appreciation and thanks of the company were expressed by the President, Mr. Moir Bryce.

8 REPORT OF THE SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING

3. VISIT TO CRAIGMILLAR CASTLE, THE INCH AND GARDENS.

The second outing of the season took place on Saturday afternoon, 30th May 1914, when, by kind permission of Colonel R. G. Gordon Gilmour, C.B., a visit was paid to Craigmillar Castle, The Inch and gardens. Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., acted as guide. From the invasion of Edward I. in 1295 on to about 1357, when David II. was released from captivity, Dr. Ross explained, few castles were erected in Scotland, the country being exhausted with the continual wars. During this period many of the Scottish nobles had been prisoners or hostages in England, where they saw the Norman keeps for the first time. On returning home they adopted these keeps as the models for the new castles, as being better suited for their exhausted means, and hence-forward for a generation or two this strong self-contained tower continued to be the type of castle built in Scotland. During the thirteen years of David's life after his return in 1357, he built the tower recently discovered in Edinburgh Castle on this model ; and four years before the death of David, Simon Preston, in 1374, purchased the estate of Craigmillar, and built the great tower, placing his arms over the doorway. David's Tower and the Craigmillar Tower are both on the L plan, and very nearly of identical size. Craigmillar stands on the very edge of a precipice, 20 feet high, and at the doorway it is 30 feet high and cut into beneath so as to narrow the pathway, and this cut was originally bridged over with trunks of trees, which could easily be removed in an emergency. There was but one doorway, which could only be reached along this narrow pathway. It led into a small chamber about 8 feet square, from which no intruders could have got out alive. The defences of the entrance show how impregnable such a tower was before the introduction of big guns. The members, having inspected the great hall, Queen

Mary's room, and other apartments of the Castle, then proceeded to The Inch, and walked through the gardens. They also had the privilege of viewing the vaulted dining-room of The Inch.

4. VISIT TO CORSTORPHINE CHURCH.

The members of the Club, sixty in all, met on Saturday, 27th June 1914, in the pre-Reformation Collegiate Church at Corstorphine, by kind permission of the Rev. James Fergusson. Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc, R.S.A., one of the members, acted as guide. 'Collegiate' churches, such as Corstorphine, owed their origin to a movement in the fifteenth century to counteract the evils of the Benedictine and Augustinian Abbeys, and were formed by grouping the clergy of neighbouring parishes into a college, whereas in more recent times the term 'collegiate' has been applied to a church with two ministers serving as colleagues. Scotland possessed at one time forty or more Collegiate Churches. Sir Adam Forrester, Lord Provost of Edinburgh, who bought the manor of Corstorphine, built the church in 1380, and it was enlarged in 1429 by his son, the Lord High Chamberlain of Scotland under James I. The tombs of the Forresters stand in the chancel. In a side chapel rests that Douglas whose heart was placed by his dying wish in Whithorn Church, and in the same chapel is an ornamented slab, dated 1620, and it is noteworthy that the inscription from Ezekiel about 'the valley which was full of bones, and they were very dry,' had been taken from the authorised version of the Bible, published nine years before. In the east gable of the church is to be seen a shrine, where stood the lamp which burned from sunset to sunrise to lead the unwary traveller along the road which ran by the side of the morass. The thanks of the Club were accorded to Mr. Fergusson and Mr. Blanc by Mr. Moir Bryce, the President.

10 REPORT OF THE SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING

The Book of the Club for 1914 will consist of two papers by Mr. F. C. Eeles, viz. :—

1. THE HOLYROOD ORDINALE. This will include nearly the whole contents of the large fifteenth-century MS. belonging to Mr. Moir Bryce, viz.: Kalendar, Gospels and Homilies for reading in Chapter, Ordinale for all services throughout the year, Manuale containing the visitation of the sick and other occasional services, Inventory of church goods and ornaments of 1493 and other matter of liturgical interest, edited with a full introduction and notes.
2. THE MANUSCRIPT ADDITIONS FOR SCOTTISH USE IN A SARUM BREVIARY GIVEN TO THE BURGH MUIR CHAPEL BY JOHN CRAWFORD THE FOUNDER. These are a series of entries of Scottish Saints' days in the Kalendar, and are of considerable local interest.

The Treasurer submitted the financial statement, from which it appeared that the balance in hand was £397, 10s. 10d.

The CHAIRMAN, in moving the adoption of the Reports, said : The Book for 1913, which was placed in your hands yesterday, may be accepted as evidence of the continued virility of the Club. In spite of disappointments in two directions, it contains three articles of considerable importance. The first relates to the recent discoveries in the Castle, a work which was carried out with considerable acumen and knowledge by Mr. Oldrieve, and it is to his efforts that the ancient castle of David II., with its walls 60 feet high on the one side and 30 feet on the other, was permanently brought to light after its long entombment of nearly three and a half centuries.

The second article, on the Incorporation of the Skinners of Edinburgh, by Mr. Angus, is one of great interest and importance in the history of the city, and I have no hesitation in characterising his paper as a model both in the matter of research and in the style of writing. I hope that we will obtain from this gentleman some further contributions out of the stores of his knowledge. The third and last article is by the indefatigable Mr. Fairley, who continues his interesting extracts relating to the grim old Tolbooth, which formed so prominent a feature in old Edinburgh life.

As mentioned by the Secretary, the Volume for the year 1914 will be entirely devoted to a liturgical examination by Mr. Francis C. Eeles, our greatest liturgical scholar, of the book, now in my own possession, colloquially known as the Service Book of Holyrood Abbey. So far as I am aware, there is only one other book of a similar nature, that on the Arbuthnot Missal, that has hitherto been printed. You will understand that it demands scholarship and qualifications of a unique character, and I am very proud that my friend Mr. Eeles has agreed to give us some of the fruits of his great learning. The Volume for 1914 will, therefore, form in my opinion a landmark in the series of our publications. At the present moment we are one year in arrear with our Annual Volume, and the Council propose to issue this Book for 1914 in the month of September next. They also propose to issue the Volume for 1915 in the month of January next ; so that during the next twelve months two Books will be issued, and our series thereby brought up to date.

For the 1915 Book we are well provided with new and important material.

1. Dr. Blaikie's article on the Defence of Edinburgh in 1745.
2. A paper by Mr. R. K. Hannay, Curator of the Historical Department of the General Register House, on the Foundation of the University of Edinburgh. He has already discussed, elsewhere, the question of education as regards the Universities of St. Andrews and Glasgow. The Edinburgh University was, of course, a post-Reformation establishment, in which different ideas naturally prevailed.
3. The Ancient Church Bells of Edinburgh and its Neighbourhood, by Mr. Eeles, who, I need hardly remind you, is facile princeps in this subject.
4. A critical paper, also by Mr. Eeles, on the Breviary belonging to the Chapel of St. John the Baptist at the Sciennes. This Chapel stood behind the buildings on the north side of Braid Place, opposite to the little Jewish cemetery.
5. A further article on the Sculptured Stones of Edinburgh, by Mr. John Geddie—a work of undoubted importance.

12 REPORT OF THE SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING

6. A further contribution by Mr. Fairley of the Tolbooth Extracts.
7. Excerpts from the Calendar of Original Documents preserved in the Register House, so far as they relate to Edinburgh and its immediate neighbourhood.

I hope also to contribute an article or two on the Kirk-of-Field and some of the minor religious establishments in the city.

We are fortunate in Edinburgh in possessing vast stores of records relating to mediaeval times. The Register House, with its numerous records and publications, the City Munimenta, the Advocates' Library, and that of the University of Edinburgh, afford ready means of research, and I hope to receive assistance in that direction from the individual members of the Club. It may be of interest to state that Miss Borland, daughter of a minister of the Church of Scotland, has recently been engaged in framing a catalogue of the magnificent Manuscripts preserved in the University Library, and that she has been the means of bringing to light a number of historical documents of the utmost importance. I may narrate a few :—

1. An early Celtic Psalter with the Celtic Division of the Psalms, and dated either in the eleventh or twelfth century. It bears the inscription in a sixteenth-century hand, 'Liber magistri Johannis Reyd, Cancellarij Aberdonensis,' and is, therefore, probably of Scottish origin. It is to be remembered that there is no document in Scotland at the present moment of Scottish handwriting written prior to the year 1100.
2. A very important fragment of a fourteenth-century Antiphoner containing part of the Service for St. Columba's day, with the ecclesiastical Plain Chant or Gregorian music. This is the earliest piece of music known to have been written in Scotland.
3. Collection of Theological Treatises belonging to Sweetheart Abbey, with a leaf of a noted Breviary of York Use, of the thirteenth century.
4. Sarum Breviary written about A.D. 1300 for use in England, and afterwards used in Scotland.
5. Noted Breviary of Sarum Use written about the year 1300, for use in England, but afterwards used in Aberdeen. To this portions of a Chronicle similar to that of Melrose have been added in a fourteenth-century hand, and, in a later, part of the Service for St. Kentigern.

6. Book containing five choir parts of sixteenth-century harmonised music for the Ordinary Mass, and certain Anthems. Said to have belonged to Dunkeld Cathedral, and has some resemblance to the Scone MS. in the Advocates' Library.
7. A number of Books which were formerly in Scottish libraries before the Reformation. One was at Soulseat, and another belonged to Robert Ferguson, Prior of Dunfermline about 1530 ; while others belonged to William Gordon, the last pre-Reformation Bishop of Aberdeen.
8. The printed Breviary above referred to belonging to the Chapel of St. John the Baptist, with notes by the founder of the Chapel.
9. Late fifteenth-century Calendar and Astronomical Tables written for the Cistercian Abbey of Coupar Angus.
10. Book of Hours, fifteenth century, ' according to the use of England,' containing the Hours of St. Ninian, and probably written and illuminated in Scotland. The illuminations include a figure of St. Ninian, and one or two interesting Liturgical pictures.

In England many ladies have devoted themselves, with considerable success, to historical research, and it is a great satisfaction to know that Miss Borland, a native of Dumfriesshire, possesses the erudition and determination to tackle the compilation of such a difficult and learned work. In these notes I have had the assistance of my friend Mr. Eeles.

Mr. MOIR BRYCE moved the re-election of Lord Rosebery as Hon. President, and the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, Sir James Balfour Paul, C.V.O., LL.D., Lyon King of Arms, Professor Hume Brown, LL.D., and Professor John Chiene, C.B., as Hon. Vice-Presidents, and the motion was cordially adopted.

On the motion of Dr. W. B. BLAIKIE, Mr. Moir Bryce was unanimously elected President of the Club.

Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc, R.S.A., Mr. William Cowan, and Mr. Thomas Ross, LL.D., were appointed Vice-Presidents, with Mr. Lewis A. MacRitchie as Secretary, Mr. Thomas B. Whitson, C.A., as Treasurer, and Mr. John Hamilton, C.A., as Auditor. Mr. Robert Cochrane,

14 REPORT OF THE SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING

Mr. John M. Rusk, Mr. John Russell, and Mr. James Wilkie were elected members of Council.

A hearty vote of thanks was awarded to Rev. Mr. Burnett, Mr. John B. Clark, Mr. George Lorimer, and Mr. Robert T. Skinner, the retiring members of Council.

Mr. WILLIAM COWAN moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Moir Bryce for presiding.

The meeting then terminated.

CONSTITUTION

- I. The name of the Club shall be the ‘Old Edinburgh Club.’
- II. The objects of the Club shall be the collection and authentication of oral and written statements or documentary evidence relating to Edinburgh; the gathering of existing traditions, legends, and historical data; and the selecting and printing of material desirable for future reference.
- III. The membership of the Club shall be limited to three hundred and fifty. Applications for membership must be sent to the Secretary in writing, countersigned by a proposer and a seconder who are Members of the Club. The admission of Members shall be in the hands of the Council, who shall have full discretionary power in filling up vacancies in the membership as these occur.
- Note.*—By its original Constitution the Club consisted of Members and Associates. The Associates on the Roll for 1913 shall be continued as such if they so desire, paying a subscription of 2s. 6d. on 1st January yearly, but in future no addition shall be made to their number. These Associates have no vote or voice in the management of the affairs of the Club, but shall be entitled to free admission to the meetings and to take part in the discussion of any subject under investigation.
- IV. The annual subscription shall be 10s. 6d., payable in advance on 1st January. Any Member whose subscription is not paid within four months from that date may be struck off the Roll by the Council.
- V. The affairs of the Club shall be managed by a Council, consisting of the President, three Vice-Presidents, Secretary, Treasurer, and twelve Members. The Office-bearers shall be elected annually. Four of the Members of Council shall retire annually in rotation, and shall not be eligible for re-election for one year. The Council shall have power to fill up any vacancy in their number arising during the year, to make bye-laws, and to appoint Sub-Committees for special purposes. Representatives to such Committees may be appointed from the general body of Members. At meetings of the Club nine shall be a quorum, and at meetings of the Council seven.
- VI. The Secretary shall keep proper minutes of the business and transactions, conduct official correspondence, have custody of, and be responsible for, all books, manuscripts, and other property placed in his charge, and shall submit an Annual Report of the proceedings of the Club.

VII. The Treasurer shall keep the Accounts of the Club, receive all moneys, collect subscriptions, pay accounts after these have been passed by the Council, and shall present annually a duly audited statement relative thereto.

VIII. The Annual Meeting of the Club shall be held in January, at which the reports by the Secretary and the Treasurer shall be read and considered, the Council and the Auditor for the ensuing year elected, and any other competent business transacted.

IX. The Council shall hold stated meetings in April and October, and shall arrange for such meetings throughout the year as they think expedient, and shall regulate all matters relative to the transactions and publications of the Club. Papers accepted by the Council for publication shall become the property of the Club.

X. Members shall receive one copy of each of the works published by or on behalf of the Club as issued, but these shall not be supplied to any Member whose subscription is in arrear. Contributors shall receive twenty copies of their communications. The Council shall have discretionary powers to provide additional copies for review, presentation, and supply to approved public bodies or societies.

XI. In the event of the membership falling to twelve or under, the Council shall consider the advisability of winding up the Club, and shall take a vote thereon of each Member whose subscription is not in arrear. Should the vote, which shall be in writing, determine that the Club be dissolved, the Council shall discharge debts due by the Club, and shall then deposit in trust, with some recognised public institution or corporate body, any residue of funds or other properties, including literary, artistic, and other material collected by the Club, for preservation, in order that the same may be available to students of local history in all time coming.

XII. No alteration of this Constitution shall be made except at the Annual Meeting of the Club. Notice of any proposed alteration must be given in writing to the Secretary, who shall intimate the same by circular to each member not less than seven days prior to the meeting. No alteration shall be made unless supported by two-thirds of the Members present at the meeting.
