

HISTORY
OF SCOTLAND.

BY PATRICK FRASER TYTLER, Esq.

F. R. S. E. AND F. A. S.

VOLUME III.

EDINBURGH :

WILLIAM TAIT, 78, PRINCE'S STREET.

MDCCCXXIX.

CONTENTS

OF

THE THIRD VOLUME.

CHAP. I.

ROBERT THE SECOND.

	PAGE.
ACCESSION of Robert the Second,	1
Unexpected opposition by the Earl of Douglas,	2
Obscurity of the motives which guided him,	ib.
Spirited conduct of Sir Robert Erskine, and the Earls of March and Moray,	3
Douglas renounces his opposition,	ib.
Coronation of the king,	4
Indolent character of the new monarch,	5
Situation of the country	6
Condition of England,	7
Same subject continued,	8
Scotland enters into a new treaty with France,	9
Symptoms of hostility on the part of England,	10
Parliament held at Scone 2d March, 1371,	11
Death of the Black Prince,	12
And of Edward Third,	13
Causes of animosity between the two countries,	14
The Earl of March sacks and burns the town of Roxburgh,	15
The borderers fly to arms,	16
Warden raid by Hotspur,	ib.
Singular dispersion of the English army,	ib.
Mercer, a Scottish naval adventurer, infests the English ship- ping,	17

	PAGE.
The fleet consists of Scottish, French, and Spanish privateers,	17
Mercer is taken by Philpot, a London merchant,	18
Observations on the mutual situation of the two countries, .	19
Perpetual infringements of the truce,	ib.
Berwick taken by Sir Alexander Ramsay,	20
Retaken by the Earl of Northumberland,	ib.
Conflict between Sir Archibald Douglas and Sir Thomas Musgrave,	21
Invasion of Scotland by John of Gaunt,	22
Cessation of hostilities,	ib.
Insurrection of Tyler, during which the Earl of Lancaster finds a retreat in Scotland,	23
New treaty with France,	ib.
Truce with England expires, and war recommences, . . .	24
John of Gaunt again invades Scotland,	ib.
He advances to Edinburgh,	25
Truce between France and England notified in Scotland, .	ib.
A party of French knights arrive in Scotland, and Lancaster retreats to England,	26
The king desirous for peace, but the nobles determine to con- tinue the war,	ib.
They break the truce and invade England,	27
Parliament meets at Edinburgh,	28
Its various provisions,	29
Same subject continued,	30, 31
Expedition of John de Vienne, admiral of France, into Scot- land,	32
The French determine to attack England at the same time by sea,	33
Vienne's fleet arrives in Scotland,	ib.
Difficulty of finding them quarters—discontent of the Scots,	34
Scottish peasantry rise against them,	35
Scottish king arrives at Edinburgh,	ib.
He is anxious for peace, but is overruled,	ib.
An army of thirty thousand horse assembled near Edinburgh,	36
Council of war, and regulations for the conduct of the army,	ib.
Commencement of the campaign,	37

	PAGE.
King of England assembles a great army,	38
Tactics of the Scots and French,	39
Disadvantages under which the English made war in Scotland,	ib.
Discontent of the French, in not being allowed to fight,	40
Anecdote of Vienne and Douglas,	ib.
Richard the Second pushes on to the capital,	41
Devastations committed by the English,	ib.
Edinburgh burnt,	ib.
Dreadful distress of the army,	ib.
Richard compelled to retreat,	ib.
Scots and French break into England by the western marches,	42
Ravage Cumberland,	ib.
Return to Scotland,	43
Discontent of the Scots, who refuse to furnish transports for the French,	44
Miserable condition of the army of Vienne,	ib.
The French admiral at length obliges himself to pay all damages, and his knights are allowed to return,	45
Reflections upon the expedition,	ib.
Continuation of the war, and invasion of England,	46
Scottish descent upon Ireland,	47
Character of Sir William Douglas,	48
He assaults and plunders Carlingford, and ravages the Isle of Man,	49
Lands at Lochryan, and joins his father and the Earl of Fife in the west of England,	ib.
Great invasion of England determined on in a parliament at Edinburgh in July 1385,	50
Description of the army,	ib.
Plan of the campaign,	51
Army separates into two divisions,	52
Second division, under the Earl of Douglas, pushes on to Durham,	53
Hotspur and the barons of Northumberland assemble their power, and occupy Newcastle,	ib.
The Scots present themselves before the town,	ib.

Skirmish between the knights, in which Douglas wins the pen- nion of Hotspur,	54
Defiance of Hotspur,	ib.
The Scots are suffered to continue their retreat,	ib.
Encamp in Riddesdale, near Otterburn,	ib.
Douglas prevails on the Scottish barons to interrupt their re- treat, and assault the castle of Otterburn,	55
His motives for this,	ib.
His judicious choice of the ground,	ib.
Hotspur pursues Douglas at the head of eight thousand foot and six hundred lances,	56
Battle of Otterburn, and death of Douglas,	57
English totally defeated—captivity of Hotspur,	58
Reflections upon the battle,	59
Causes of the defeat of the English,	59, 60
Distinguished prisoners,	60
No important consequences result from this defeat,	61, 62
State of Scotland—age and infirmities of the king,	63
The Earl of Fife chosen regent—his character,	ib.
His injudicious administration,	64
Three years' truce,	65
Death of Robert the Second,	ib.
His character,	66
Commerce of Scotland,	67

CHAP. II.

ROBERT THE THIRD.

Coronation of John, Earl of Carrick,	68
He assumes the name of Robert the Third,	69
Character of the new king,	ib.
State of the country,	70
Earls of Fife and Buchan, their great power,	71
Anecdote illustrative of the times,	72
Indolence of the king—intrusts the Earl of Fife with the ma- nagement of the government,	73

	PAGE.
Mutual situation of the two countries,	73
Truce of eight years,	ib.
Atrocious conduct of the Earl of Buchan,	74
His natural son, Duncan Stewart, ravages Aberdeenshire,	75
Combat at Gaskelune—the ketherans defeat the Lowland barons,	ib.
Disorganised state of the country,	76
Combat on the North Inch of Perth between the clan Kay and the clan Quhele,	77
Its results,	78
Government of the northern parts of the kingdom committed to the king's eldest son, David Earl of Carrick,	79
State of the two countries,	ib.
Prevalence of chivalry and knight-errantry,	80
Anecdotes connected with this,	81, 82
Parliament at Perth, 28th April 1398,	83
David Earl of Carrick, created Duke of Rothsay,	ib.
His character,	ib.
Bands entered into between the king and his nobles,	84
Same subject,	85
Observations on the state of the country,	86
Albany resigns the office of governor,	87
Parliament held at Perth, 27th January 1398,	ib.
Its proceedings,	88
Duke of Rothsay made king's lieutenant, and a council appointed to advise him,	89
Further proceedings of the parliament,	90
Same subject continued,	91, 92
Revolution in England, and deposition of Richard the Second,	93
Accession of Henry the Fourth, and reported murder of the king,	94
Reports arise that Richard is still alive,	ib.
A real or pretended Richard appears in Scotland,	95
Situation of that country,	96
Contentions between the Earls of March and Douglas, regarding the marriage of the Duke of Rothsay,	97
Rothsay is married to Elizabeth Douglas,	ib.
The Earl of March enters into a correspondence with England,	98

Flies to the English court,	98
Borderers recommence their ravages,	99
March, along with Hotspur, invades Scotland,	100
Expedition of Henry the Fourth into Scotland,	101
Details of this invasion,	102
Henry's moderation,	ib.
Same subject continued,	103
Meeting of the Scottish parliament, 21st February 1401,	104
Its proceedings,	105
Same subject continued,	106 to 117
Wild and reckless character of the Duke of Rothsay,	118
Contrast between his character and that of his uncle Albany,	119
Death of the queen and the Earl of Douglas,	120
Intrigues of Sir John de Ramorgny,	ib.
Character of this intimate of the prince,	121
Albany and Ramorgny form a plot for the destruction of the prince,	122
He is murdered by their contrivance,	123, 124
Conduct of the Scottish parliament,	125
Albany resumes his situation as governor,	126
Conflict at Nisbet Moor—Scots defeated,	127
Scots invade England,	128
Battle of Homildon Hill,	130
Scots entirely defeated,	131, 132
Causes of this,	132
Events which followed the defeat,	134, 135
Cruelty of Hotspur,	136
Conspiracy of the Percies,	137
Its connexion with Scotland,	138
Battle of Shrewsbury,	139
Able conduct of the Earl of March,	140
Death of Hotspur,	141
The Duke of Albany retreats,	142
Murder of Sir Malcolm Drummond,	143
Alexander Stewart seizes Kildrummie, and marries the Count- ess of Mar,	ib.
Extraordinary proceedings at the castle of Kildrummie,	144
State of Scotland,	145

	PAGE.
The heir of the throne is committed to the charge of the Bishop of St Andrews,	146
Effects of the captivity of the nobles on the state of the country,	ib.
Reports that Richard the Second is kept in Scotland, . . .	147
Conspiracy of the Countess of Oxford,	148
Conspiracy of Scrope and Northumberland,	149
Scrope and Moubray seized and beheaded,	150
Percy and Lord Bardolf fly into Scotland,	151
Albany's administration becomes unpopular with some of the nobles,	152
They determine to send the heir of the throne to France, . .	153
The prince on his passage is treacherously captured by the English,	154
And confined in the Tower,	ib.
Albany's satisfaction at this event,	155
Skirmish at Langhermandston, and death of Sir David Fleming,	156
Death of Robert the Third,	157
Character of this monarch,	158
Meeting of the parliament at Perth,	159
Declaration that James the First is king, and nomination of the Duke of Albany as regent,	ib.
Political condition of the country in its relations with France and England,	160
Piracies of the English cruisers,	161
Scots retaliate under Logan, but are defeated,	162
Stewart Earl of Mar becomes a naval adventurer,	ib.
The Earls of Douglas and March return to Scotland, . . .	163
Doctrines of Wickliff appear in Scotland,	164
History and fate of John Resby,	165
He is burnt for heresy,	ib.
Consequences of this persecution,	166
Expiration of the truce,	167
Teviotdale borderers recommence hostilities,	ib.
Henry the Fourth complains of the Earl of Douglas neglect- ing to return to his captivity,	168
Douglas is finally ransomed,	ib.
Fass Castle taken, and Roxburgh burnt by the Scots, . . .	169
Sir Robert Umfraville, admiral of England, seizes fourteen Scottish ships, and ravages the country,	ib.

	PAGE.
Rebellion of the Lord of the Isles,	170
Causes of his discontent,	171
Assembles his army at Inverness, and ravages Moray,	172
The Earl of Mar advances against him,	173
Great battle at Harlaw,	174
Particulars of the battle,	175
Severe loss of the Lowlanders,	176
Lord of the Isles retires,	ib.
Statute in favour of the heirs of those slain at Harlaw,	177
Albany's northern expedition,	178
His negotiations for the return of his son from captivity,	179
Death of Henry the Fourth,	ib.
Policy of England to maintain pacific relations with Scotland,	180
Foundation of the University of St Andrews,	181
Same subject,	182
Policy of Henry the Fifth with regard to Scotland,	183
Albany's profligate administration,	184
He procures the return of his son Murdoch,	185
And succeeds in detaining James the First in captivity,	ib.
Resolves to assist France, and to invade England,	186
Parallel between the policy of Edward the Third and Henry the Fifth, as to Scotland,	187
Albany sacrifices the national happiness to his own ambition,	188
His expedition into England, called the "Foul Raid,"	189
Exploits of Sir Robert Umfraville,	190
Embassy of the Duke of Vendosme to Scotland,	ib.
Seven thousand Scots sent to France under the Earls of Buchan and Wigton,	191
Albany the governor dies at Stirling,	ib.
His character,	192
His son Murdoch succeeds to his power, and assumes the of- fice of governor,	ib.
His weak administration,	ib.
Henry the Fifth carries James the First with him to France,	193
The Scots auxiliaries refuse to obey him whilst he is a prisoner,	ib.
Intrigues of James the First for his return, and his communi- cations with Scotland,	194
Death of Henry the Fifth,	ib.

	PAGE.
Regency of Bedford and Gloucester,	194
Negotiations for the return of James the First,	195
Marriage of James the First to the daughter of the Earl of Somerset,	196
Seven years' truce,	197
James returns to his dominions,	198

CHAP. III.

JAMES THE FIRST.

Character of James the First,	199
Advantages of his education in England,	200
His coronation at Scone,	201
His caution in his first proceedings,	202
Assembles his parliament,	203
Lords of the Articles,	ib.
Proceedings of the parliament,	204
Proclamation against private wars and feuds,	ib.
Against riding with too numerous an attendance,	ib.
Appointment of officers or ministers of justice,	ib.
Laws against sturdy mendicants,	205
Statutes regarding the "Great Customs," and the dilapidations of the crown lands,	206
Tax upon the whole lands of the kingdom,	207
Mode of its collection,	208
Same subject continued,	209
Taxation of ecclesiastical lands,	210
State of the fisheries,	211
Mines of gold and silver,	212
Impolitic restrictions upon commerce,	213
Enactment against the purchase of pensions and ecclesiastical benefices,	214
Against rookeries,	ib.
Statute for the encouragement of archery,	215
Reflections upon James's first parliament,	216

His measures for the destruction of the house of Albany, 217

Difficulty of tracing his project, 218

Mode in which he proceeds against Murdoch and the principal nobles, 219

Parliament summoned to meet at Perth, 12th March 1424, 220

James imprisons Duke Murdoch, along with twenty-six of the principal nobility, 221

Possesses himself of the strongest castles in the country, 222

Trial and condemnation of Walter Stewart, eldest son of Albany, ib.

He is executed, 223

Trials of the Duke of Albany, Alexander, his second son, and the Earl of Lennox, 224

They are condemned and executed, 225

Their fate excites pity, 226

James's unnecessary cruelty, ib.

Forfeiture of the estates of Albany and Lennox, 227

The imprisoned nobles are liberated, ib.

Deliberations of the parliament proceed, 228

Symptoms of the decay of the forest timber, ib.

Regulations concerning commerce, 229

Administration of justice, ib.

Striking statute as to the dispensing justice "to the poor," ib.

State of the Highlands, 230

Statutes against the growth of heresy, 231

Reflections upon this subject, 232

Reflections upon the destruction of the house of Albany, 233

The queen is delivered of a daughter, 234

Projected marriage between the Dauphin of France and the infant princess, 235

State of France, ib.

Embassy of the Archbishop of Rheims and the Lord Aubigny to Scotland, 236

Embassy from the court of Scotland to France, ib.

Embassy from the states of Flanders to Scotland, 237

James procures ample privileges for the Scottish merchants who trade to Flanders, 238

	PAGE.
The king and nobles of Scotland engage in commercial adventure,	238
Tax of twelve pennies upon every pound,	239
Rude estimate of the annual income of the people of Scotland,	ib.
Meeting of the parliament at Perth, 12th March 1425,	240
Picture of the condition of the country, conveyed by its regulations,	241
Institution of the "Session,"	ib.
Register for all charters and infeftments,	242
Committee appointed to examine the books of the law,	ib.
Directions for the transcription and promulgation of the acts of the legislature,	243
Defence of the country,	244
Commerce of the country,	245
Singular statute as to hostillars, or innkeepers,	246
Regulations of weights and measures,	247
James concludes a treaty with Denmark,	248
He determines in person to bring his northern dominions under legitimate rule,	249
Summons his parliament to meet at Inverness,	ib.
Condition of the Highlands,	250
Same subject continued,	251
James repairs in person to Inverness,	252
His seizure of the northern chiefs,	253
Some are instantly executed,	ib.
James's clemency to the Lord of the Isles,	ib.
Rebellion of this prince,	254
James's active measures against him,	255
Alexander's penance,	256
James imprisons the Lord of the Isles in Tantallan castle,	ib.
The Countess of Ross, his mother, confined in the monastery of Inchcolm,	ib.
Anecdote illustrative of the disordered state of the Highlands,	257
Same subject continued,	258
The king again assembles his parliament,	259
Provisions against the barons sending procurators to attend in their place,	ib.
Indications of James's government becoming unpopular,	260

	PAGE.
Statutes regarding the prices of work,	260
And the encouragement of agriculture,	261
Rebuilding of the castles beyond the " Mounth,"	ib.
Against carrying the gold out of the country,	262
Regarding judges and the administration of justice,	263
Important change as to the attendance of the smaller barons in parliament,	264
Principle of representation introduced,	ib.
Speaker of the commissaries,	265
Reflections on this change, and the causes of its introduction,	ib.
Statutes regarding the destruction of wolves,	266
Regarding the fisheries,	ib.
Foreign commerce,	ib.
Lepers,	ib.
Against simony, or " Barratrie,"	267
Prices of labour,	ib.
This meeting of the three Estates denominated a General Council,	268
Difficult to understand the distinction between a Parliament and a General Council,	ib.
Embassy of the Archbishop of Rheims to Scotland,	269
Conditions of the marriage between the Princess Margaret and the Dauphin finally agreed on,	ib.
Cardinal Beaufort requests a meeting with James, which is declined,	270
Benevolent law as to the labourers of the soil,	271
Sumptuary laws as to dress,	272
Laws as to the arming of the lieges,	ib.
Arms of gentlemen,	ib.
Of yeomen,	273
Of burgesses,	ib.
State of the navy,	274
Tax of providing vessels laid on barons possessing lands with- in six miles of the sea,	ib.
The queen is delivered of twin sons,	275
Truce between the kingdoms renewed for five years,	276
State of the Highlands,	ib.
Rebellion of Donald Balloch,	277

PAGE.

He defeats the Earl of Mar at Inverlochy,	277
Desperate combat between Angus Dow Mackay and Angus Murray, at Strathnaver,	278
The king assembles an army, and undertakes an expedition into the Highlands,	279
Three hundred robbers hanged,	ib.
Donald Balloch betrayed, and his head sent to James,	ib.
Pestilence breaks out,	280
Its symptoms—and effects on the popular mind,	281
Total eclipse of the sun, called the “Black Hour,”	ib.
Advantageous offers of the English government for the establishment of peace,	ib.
The Estates of the realm meet in a General Council,	282
The treaty, to which the temporal barons had consented, unfortunately is broken off by disputes amongst the clergy,	ib.
Trial and condemnation of Paul Crawar for heresy,	283
His doctrines,	284
Conduct of the king,	285
James pursues his plan for weakening the aristocracy,	286
His designs against the Earl of Dunbar,	287
He determines to resume the immense estates of March,	288
Parliament assembled at Perth, 10th January 1434,	289
The cause between the king and the Earl of March solemnly pleaded,	ib.
March is deprived of his estates,	290
He is created Earl of Buchan,	ib.
And retires in resentment to England,	291
Before separating, James requires the barons to give their bonds of adherence and fidelity to the queen,	292
The king acquires the large estates of Alexander, Earl of Mar, on the death of this baron,	ib.
Sir Robert Ogle invades the Scottish marches,	293
He is defeated at Piperden by the Earl of Angus,	ib.
The Princess Margaret sent to France with a splendid suite,	294
The English attempt to interrupt her, but are unsuccessful,	ib.
The king deeply resents this,	ib.
The marriage is celebrated at Tours,	295

	PAGE.
King James renews the war, and lays siege to Roxburgh,	296
He abruptly dismisses his forces,	297
Assembles a General Council at Edinburgh,	ib.
Its provisions,	298
Conspiracy formed against the king by Sir Robert Graham and the Earl of Athole,	ib.
Character of Graham,	ib.
Probable causes of the conspiracy,	299
The nobles readily enter into Graham's designs,	300
Their object merely to abridge the royal prerogative,	301
They select Graham to present their remonstrances to the king,	ib.
He exceeds his commission, and is imprisoned,	ib.
He is afterwards banished, and his estates confiscated,	ib.
Retires to the Highlands, and sends to James a letter of defiance,	302
James fixes a price upon his head,	ib.
Graham communicates with the discontented nobles,	303
Induces the Earl of Athole and Sir Robert Stewart to con- spire against the king,	ib.
James determines to keep his Christmas at Perth,	304
Facilities which this affords to the conspirators,	ib.
Stopt on his journey by a Highland woman,	305
Neglects her warning,	ib.
Conspirators determine to murder the king on the night of 20th February,	306
Sir Robert Stewart, the chamberlain, removes the bolts of the king's bed-chamber,	ib.
James unusually cheerful,	307
Heroic conduct of Catherine Douglas,	308
The murder,	309
James makes a desperate resistance,	310
He is overpowered and slain,	311
The murderers escape to the Highlands,	312
But are soon taken,	ib.
They are tortured and executed,	313
Audacious defence of Sir Robert Graham,	314
Character of James the First,	315
Prominent features in his reign,	316

	PAGE.
Causes which produced his inexorable firmness, and occasional cruelty,	317
His conduct towards the house of Albany,	318
His encouragement of his clergy,	319
His personal accomplishments,	320
And excellence in all knightly exercises,	ib.
His children,	321

END OF THE REIGN OF JAMES THE FIRST.

HISTORICAL REMARKS ON THE DEATH OF RICHARD THE SECOND.

OBSCURITY which hangs over the accounts of Richard's death,	325
Reports of his having escaped to Scotland,	ib.
Statement of the author's views on this point,	326
Proofs of his escape to Scotland,	327
Evidence of Bower,	ib.
Same subject,	328
Evidence of Winton,	329
Same subject continued,	330
Opinion as to Winton's testimony,	333
His caution accounted for,	334
Corroborations of his evidence as to Swinburn and Waterton,	335
Proofs from a MS. in Advocates' Library,	336
Conclusions from the above evidence,	337
Passages from the Chamberlain Accounts,	338
Same subject,	339
Their unquestionable authenticity,	ib.
Inferences to be deduced from them,	340
Proofs from contemporary English writers,	341
From Walsingham,	ib.
From Otterburn,	ib.
From a contemporary French MS.	342

	PAGE.
Chronicle of Kenilworth,	343
Of Peter de Ickham,	ib.
Assertions of the king's escape by contemporary writers,	344
Same subject continued,	345
Conspiracy of the Earls of Kent, Surrey, and Salisbury,	346
Passage as to Maudelain personating the king,	347
Observations on this,	348
Richard's reported death at Pontefract,	349
Exposition of the body, and funeral service at St Paul's,	ib.
Passage descriptive of the ceremony, from a contemporary French MS.	350
Observations upon this,	351
Assertions in a contemporary French MS. that it was not the body of the king,	ib.
But of Maudelain the priest,	352
Arguments to show it was not the body of the king which was exposed,	353
Burial at Langley,	354
Froissart's account of Richard's deposition extremely inaccur- ate,	355
Reports of Richard's escape which arose soon after this expo- sition,	356
Frequent conspiracies against Henry, always accompanied with the assertion that Richard is alive,	ib.
Eight Franciscan friars hanged in London for asserting this,	ib.
Prior of Launde executed for the same offence,	ib.
And Sir Roger de Clarendon,	ib.
Proofs of this from Henry's proclamations in the Fœdera Angliæ ,	357
Reports in 1402,	358
Rebellion of the Percies in 1403,	359
Evidence in their letter of defiance in 1403, contradicted by their manifesto in 1405,	360
Conspiracy of Serle and the Countess of Oxford in 1404,	361
Opinion as to Serle having procured Warde to personate the king,	362
Henry's assertion not to be credited—contradicted by the silence of Walsingham and Otterburn,	ib.

	PAGE.
Proofs from the conduct of Henry after this conspiracy,	363
King believed to be alive by the French,	364
Epistle by Creton, addressed to Richard in 1405,	365
Conspiracy of Scrope and Northumberland in 1405,	366
Proofs from this conspiracy,	367
Letter of Northumberland to the Duke of Orleans,	368
State of parties in Scotland at this time,	369
Same subject continued,	370
Prince James taken prisoner by the English,	ib.
Consequences of Henry becoming possessed of James the First, at the same time that Albany gets possession of Richard,	371
Conspiracy by Northumberland and Lord Randolph, in 1407,	372
Suppression of this conspiracy,	373
Conspiracy of the Earl of Cambridge and Lord Scroop, in 1415,	374
Proofs arising out of this conspiracy that Richard is alive,	375
Evident contradiction and falsehood of the account given in the Parliamentary Rolls,	376
Same subject,	377
Explanation of the real object of the conspirators,	378
Same subject,	379
Conspiracy of 1417,	380
Alleged plot of the Duke of Orleans to bring in the "Ma- muet" of Scotland,	381
Evidence of Lord Cobham that Richard is alive in 1417,	382
Observations on this evidence,	383
Conclusion,	384
NOTES AND ILLUSTRATIONS,	389