Preface

My Forgey family history journey began with my introduction to Lucille Wallace's "A genealogical history of the Forgy, Forgey and Forgie families in America" book. A cousin, Helen Irene McNiece, brought her copy of the book with her when she visited us in the early 1990's. I was surprised to find out the family first settled in Tennessee. I was only aware of the family in Indiana. A cousin in Indiana wrote a follow up book to Lucille's book in 1999. After reading this book I decided I wanted to collect some of the documents mentioned in both books, and create a website with our Forgey family history. I ordered LDS Family History Library deed microfilms for the areas mentioned but, unfortunately, could not find these deeds on those films. I thought the deeds had never been officially recorded in the deed books, and may have been in a family collection. I decided to move on and order more microfilms for the area. I found references to court cases regarding the family. I located the contact information for the Knox County, TN archives on the internet and contacted them for more information about the court cases. They could not provide more information, but offered to send me an index of all Forgey court cases. The archivist also offered to send me a deed index. I happily accepted these offers. When I received the indexes I was very surprised to find the deeds I was looking for listed. When I asked why I was not able to find them on the Family History Library Microfilms I was told the FHL had not microfilmed all of the deeds. The deeds I was looking for were warranty deeds, and were not filmed. I immediately ordered copies of some of the deeds. The deeds did not support the lineages in the books. The 1802 James Forgey to Alexander Forgey deed was said to be a father to son deed, but there was no relationship stated in this deed. The land was sold to Alexander Forgey of Knox County, TN from James Forgey of Hawkins County, TN. There was a James Forgey in Hawkins County, TN. I knew this man could not be Alexander's father. Since the basis for our lineage rested solely on those deeds; I knew at this point I needed to scrap the old lineage and rethink everything.

I began research on the early family from scratch, with no preconceptions. I decided to collect everything I could find from every possible source. I quickly found more information pointing to the Andrew Forgey, Margaret Reynolds, line owning land on Flat Creek in Knox County, TN. I found many family ties with the Hawkins County, TN Forgey family and the Flat Creek area of Knox County, TN. There were just too many ties to ignore. I used a process of elimination to find my Andrew Forgey, born 1794's, father. I put together family groups for every Forgey male I found in the records, for both Knox and Hawkins Counties. Once I finished this project I was left with only two males in the age range, who could have been my Andrew's father. Namely, Hugh and John were the only two remaining. I later found that John Forgey had a son named Andrew who died in 1834, which could not be my Andrew. Hugh Forgey and Catherine Fisher were the only couple now left with unidentified children. I was able to build a good circumstantial case using existing evidence for that lineage.

The following compilation is the result of many years of research by many people. I would like to thank everyone who provided me with assistance and information. This includes Nan Harvey, Kenneth Edmondson, Carla Rotmans, Brian French, Helen Travis, Christy Cradic La Barthe, Roger Forgey, Charles Forgey, Mellissa Forgey-Simpson and Lynn Steele to name a few. The Knox County Archives, and Reynolds Family Association. The list could go on ...

Explanation of results

My Uncle Charles Forgey has taken a Y DNA test, along with Roger Forgey, of the Andrew Forgey and Margaret Reynolds' line. They took the 37 marker Y DNA test and mismatched by only one marker. This points to a tight relationship. As the testing company states few achieve this close a match. Roger tested positive for the L126 SNP, which is associated with Scotland (this SNP probably originated in Southwest Scotland). Our family was likely in the British Isles for thousands of years. It was thought there might be a Norman connection. This does not seem to be the case.

All of our Forgey/Forgey DNA testers have matched a Forgie line from Co. Down, Ireland. The Forgeys were Scots-Irish, and most likely were part of the Ards plantation in Co. Down, Ireland. The Forgies can be found in the area in the early 1600's.

The name Forgey is derived from the clan name Ferguson. This was confirmed by our DNA study. There were many Ferguson matches.

Andrew and Margaret's History

The family migrated to America from Ulster Ireland shortly after the birth of their daughter Nancy in 1768. They seem to have followed a well worn path. First settling in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania. They followed the same migration pattern from Pennsylvania through Virginia into Tennessee as thousands of others. They most likely migrated through Virginia to Tennessee on The Great Wagon Road. Andrew and Margaret made their home just outside Surgoinsville, Hawkins County TN. They arrived in Tennessee about 10 years after the original settlement.

In order to put the family into historical context some background on the history of Tennessee and Hawkins County, TN might be helpful. Eastern Tennessee has a very rich history. Tennessee's first settler was William Bean. Settlement officially began when he built a cabin on Boone's Creek in 1769 (William Bean's wife was saved by Native American Heroine Nancy Ward from being burned at the stake ). Hawkins County is nicknamed "Mother of Counties." It is named after Benjamin Hawkins member of the Continental Congress.

The Forgey family basically lived on the western frontier. It was a common pattern for the Scots Irish to settle in frontier areas. Living on the edge of civilization meant living with danger. Indian attack was a real threat in the early days of settlement. A grandson of Andrew and Margaret Forgey, Hugh Forgey Crawford, related a story of a thwarted attack in the area where Hugh's family lived<sup>1</sup>. From Goodspeed's History of Hawkins County TN, "The Indians made several incursions into Carter's Valley, but finding the people in the forts and prepared for them they retreated without doing serious damage." The Forgeys lived near Carter's Valley in Stanley Valley (Carter's Valley and Stanley Valley run parallel to each other north of the Holston River). Sporadic attacks and kidnappings did continue for some time. An infamous attack took place in Stanley Valley in 1792. Harper Ratcliff's wife and three children were killed by Native Americans<sup>2</sup>.

As a Reynolds' cousin related life in Tennessee in those days required a great deal of physical labor by all members of the family including children. The land had to be cleared, and a cabin built. When the Forgeys and Reynolds first settled in Tennessee they were described as poor ( although the family did manage to raise 200 schillings which would be the equivalent $1768 in today's money, which they used to pay for their land) . Once these families carved out a place for themselves in the wilderness they were able to raise their standard of living. Land was the primary source of their wealth. Andrew Sr. and son James purchased land grants from the State of North Carolina. Another source of income was the sale of whiskey. Andrew Forgey was convicted of selling liquor without a license and above the rates.<sup>3</sup> Money was difficult to earn in early America. Money was scarce in those days. Selling liquor would have been one of the few ways of earning money, and a person needed money to purchase land. They could barter for some goods, but purchasing land required money.

Stanley Valley, where Andrew and Margaret settled, is flanked by ridges. This valley stretches 26 miles from Virginia and through Hawkins County, to the mouth of Big Creek . Andrew and Margaret lived in the Possum Creek area of Northern Stanley Valley. The location was described by Hugh F. Crawford as in “Stanley Valley 17 miles above Rogersville.” James Forgey lived 10 miles above Rogersville on a Creek named for the family, Forgey Creek. Settlers, like the Forgeys, sited their land as close to creeks as possible. These creeks provided water for the family, animals and crops. Areas where creeks and rivers ran were fertile areas for farming. Some of their Possum Creek neighbors included the Looney, Coldwell, and Weddle families. These names can be found linked together in the county records.

The people of Tennessee took pride in being self-reliant. They lived in isolated areas and had to be self-sufficient. However they did need to occasionally buy manufactured goods which they could not make. To meet this need "itinerant merchants with caravans of pack horses established trade routes throughout the territory. Because of an almost total absence of money, trade between merchant and pioneer farmer, and between farmer and farmer, was largely carried on by barter. On the whole the trader and peddler drove hard bargains, exchanging pot metal rifles, likely to explode at the first charge, poorly soldered utensils, and adulterated powder for the frontier farmer's prime peltries. As fur-bearing animals grew scarce, by-products of the pioneer home - bacon, corn, lye-soap, sorghum-sugar and molasses, and strong whiskey - became the medium of exchange, along with Spanish silver, which trickled in as river trade with Louisiana began to assume importance." 4 (WPA Project) Peter Norrison's Store in Knoxville was one of the first places where these pioneers could buy luxury goods such as gold jewelry, watches and kid gloves from Philadelphia. This well stocked store also sold essentials such as rifles from Philadelphia and Europe. It was a difficult task to haul merchandise into Tennessee. Most merchandise was brought from Philadelphia on very poor roads. The horses were sometimes only able to travel only 10 miles or 12 miles at a time. Ann Royall described seeing a dozen heavily laden wagons a day in the 1820's.5

James Forgey Sr. purchased a bible in 1805 which was printed in Philadelphia. This demonstrates it's importance as a prime manufacturing and trade location. This bible is an important source of family history for Andrew and Margaret's family. It contains the dates of birth and death for Andrew and Margaret.

After the Louisiana purchase the Forgeys may have benefited from the new opportunities to trade with this new Territory. After the acquisition of this territory East Tennessee Farmers began trading their products with this region, such as Indian Corn, whiskey, and irish potatoes for cotton, which they in turn traded for merchandise from Philadelphia. 6

The Forgey family likely were subsistence farmers as John Reynolds describes in his book.<sup>7</sup> The diet of the family was probably similar to this extract from the "Taste of the States": "The pioneers grew corn, potatoes, some vegetables, and a little fruit. Most settlers had at least one apple tree. In the mountains and hollows, deer and wild turkey were plentiful. Raccoon, whose lard was considered choice, abounded. So did bear, squirrel, and rabbit. A hog or two provided meat for winter, The women learned to make stews of opossum and squirrel, and stews have remained a part of Tennessee cooking...The cuisine of Tennessee followed the terrain. In hill country the main dishes were basically stews and roasted meats."<sup>8</sup>

The Wilderness has always played an integral role in the life of the people of Tennessee. First and foremost it provided food and raw materials. This dramatically beautiful landscape inspired early settlers with awe. They also felt like the primitive wilderness was a force to tamed and exploited for their benefit. The settlers built very sturdy log cabins to keep the wild animals, such as bears and panthers, out. They were also built sturdy for defense against the Native population. "Throughout East Tennessee the cabins of old frontier days, with their little porthole-like windows and dog-trots (open runways), still stand, bearing the scars of Indian tomahawks and bullets."<sup>9</sup> (from WPA project)

Boone's Wilderness Road was a major thoroughfare to the west. The Forgeys lived close to this major highway. Although they lived in an isolated spot not far away streaming masses were on the Wilderness road heading for the Western Territories.

The Forgey log cabin was probably furnished in the typical style of the time. The cabin would have pegs on the walls to hang clothes. A washstand, water bucket, and three legged stools would likely also be found. Animal Furs were used as blankets. <sup>10</sup> The cabin would be furnished with at least one bedstead. As some French tourists noted in 1790's beds were at a premium, at that time, and several people might have to share a bed.<sup>11</sup> A letter written by a traveler in McMinn Tennessee addressed a bed bug problem.<sup>12</sup>

As far as religion goes the Forgey Family continued to practice the religion of their forefathers. Namely, they were Presbyterian.<sup>13</sup> Andrew and Margaret's son James was a prominent member of the New Providence Presbyterian Church in Surgoinsville where he and his wife are buried.<sup>14</sup> James was an elder in the Church. This church was founded in 1780. Hugh and Catherine likely belonged to the Washington Pike Presbyterian Church in Knox County, TN. Women during the early days of settlement were especially isolated socially. Attending church would have been one their only social outlets.

The Second Great Awakening swept through Tennessee in 1800. This religious revival was influential when it came to the establishment of religion in Tennessee. The Baptists and Methodists were leaders of the Great Awakening in Tennessee. Their fiery camp meetings resulted in increased memberships for these sects. This style of worship had a great appeal to the people of Tennessee. As a result the Baptist sect gained membership, however, the Methodist Church showed the greatest gains in membership. The Presbyterian Church suffered a schism due to a disagreement over participation in the camp meetings. The traditional Presbyterian sect suffered membership losses due to the formation of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church which adopted a reformed worship based on the camp meeting revivals. The Andrew Forgey family of Maury County, Tennessee were early members of the Baptist church in that area. Most of Andrew and Margaret's descendants were members of the Cumberland sect of the Presbyterian Church.

The Forgey family likely participated in the leisure time activities of their peers. Men participated in more leisure time activities than women. Long hunting, horse racing and corn husking were some of their favorite pastimes (baskets were woven from the husks, and they also used them to stuff mattresses). Dances would likely have been a favored activity for both sexes. It sounds like occasional dances accompanied by fiddle music were held in the pioneer settlements. Dancing and singing often occurred after the corn husking gatherings.

The telling of tall tales seemed to be another pastime. The rich literary tradition of the south was spawned through this early oral tradition of telling Tall Tales. One of my grandfather Charles Forgey's favorite authors Mark Twain was certainly influenced by this tradition.

The 4th of July and New Years were the most popular celebrations in early America. This description of a 1793 4th of July Celebration in Knoxville Tennessee illustrates the kind of celebrations which took place "At two o'clock in the afternoon the federal troops under the command of Capt. Richards paraded before the public and fired the federal salute.<sup>15</sup>" At 4 o'clock a banquet was held for prominent citizens, a fireworks display followed that night. If the Forgeys did not witness any of these celebrations they likely heard about them, or read about them in the Knoxville Gazette.

A celebrated event occurred when a future King of France paid a visit, in 1797, to the Stanley Valley area. He visited the Armstrong Mansion in Stony Point. He criticized the lack of culinary diversity in Tennessee. Hoe cakes were served everywhere (cornbread like cakes). He did get a good square meal at the Armstrong Mansion, however.

The Flat Creek area of Knox County, TN was another focal point for the family. In 1787 Hugh Forgey (son of Andrew and Margaret) was a chain bearer for the surveyor Thomas Hutchings. The family likely became acquainted with the area at that point, and soon after began purchasing land there. In 1788 James Forgey purchased a land warrant for 640 acres in Knox County (then Hawkins County) TN. Hugh Forgey, and his wife Catherine, first settled in Knox County on land he purchased from his father. They lived in the Flat Creek area of Knox County.<sup>16</sup> Their neighbors included Hugh's sisters Nancy Crawford, and Margaret Roberts. Other neighbors were Hugh's Aunt Ellen Reynolds McDaniel and Uncle James Reynolds. There were two other Forgey families living in the area; the Andrew Forgey family and Alexander Forgey family. They purchased their land from Hugh's brother James.<sup>17</sup> They were likely cousins of Hugh and James. Andrew appears to have sold his land some time later and migrated to Maury County, TN. While Alexander Forgey later migrated to Tippecanoe, Indiana.

The first newspaper to be printed in Tennessee was the Knoxville Gazette in 1791 printed in Rogersville. A year after it's founding Hugh Forgey placed this ad: "I gave a bond to Leonard Rice for $250 with a bearing date of November last, and payable on June next. Rice has given three horses that are now proven stolen. I will not pay said bond." Hugh Forgey. Hugh's brother James also placed an ad about a rifle he found. Before this newspaper news was often passed along in Taverns, a principle meeting place of the male population. The first US Mail service in Knoxville began in 1795 and was delivered twice a month.<sup>18</sup> Ann Royall describes the stage coach bringing in mail six times a week in the 1820's. Three times a week from Nashville and three times from the east.

Early Knoxville was a very rowdy settlement with numerous saloons and brothels. It later became a respectable, refined and affluent town. Hugh Forgey often served on Juries at the Court House in Knoxville. Ann Royall described the citizens of Knoxville as more refined than Huntsville Alabama.

Another asset owned by some Tennessee families were slaves. There is no record of Hugh Forgey owning slaves. According to tax lists he did not own slaves. We know James owned a slave family. We do know his father owned at least one slave named Bacchus.<sup>19</sup> In the early days of settlement slave ownership was common, with most families owning slaves at some point. The Hilly terrain of eastern Tennessee was not suited to plantation style farming. Small farms were predominate and slave ownership was also small scale; with most families owning five slaves or fewer. The early slave population was about 12 percent of the total population. At the time the Forgeys purchased their slaves the value of a slave was around $100 (about $2,300 today). An anti-slavery movement was able to gain a foothold in Eastern Tennessee because slavery never became essential to life in this area. Hugh's sister Nancy Crawford seemed to sympathize with the anti-slavery point of view. The presence of these slaves in communities seemed to cause anxiety. Their plight piqued the consciences of some, and fear of slave uprisings were in the forefront on the minds of others. A law was passed requiring the monthly search of slave quarters by authorities in order to head off an uprising.

Both Andrew and Margaret lived in Hawkins County, TN until their deaths.

The Descendants of Andrew and Margaret are now scattered all around the United States. A few remain in Tennessee and are primarily the descendants of John Forgey and Nancy Armstrong.

Notable relations

Two of Andrew and Margaret's granddaughters, James Forgey's daughters, married John A. Rogers.<sup>20</sup> He served in the Tennessee Legislature. He also ran a Tavern in Rogersville which the young Andrew Jackson patronized. His father Joseph Rogers founded Rogersville. His grandfather Thomas Amis purchased the land that Rogersville sits on from Davy Crockett's grandparents. James Forgey was a prominent citizen of Surgoinsville in Hawkins County. He made his money through land speculation.

Margaret Reynolds had some notable connections. Her brother Robert Reynolds was a leader of the pro-slavery movement in Illinois. He was elected to the Indiana Territory Legislature, and was also a Judge. He was a large landholder in Illinois. His son John Reynolds (and Margaret's nephew) became the third Governor of Illinois, and a US Congressman.<sup>21</sup> His Cousin and (and Margaret's nephew) Robert Bannon Reynolds became an Attorney General in Tennessee. He also became Paymaster for the US Army in Mexico. During the civil war; "According to family legend Longstreet mapped out his assault on Knoxville on the Reynolds' dining room table."<sup>22</sup>

Hugh's brother-in-law John Beaird was described by Gov. John Reynolds as one of the most effective Indian fighters in Tennessee History.<sup>23</sup> He was often called upon to lead militia attacks against the Native Americans on the frontiers of Knox County. He was also as a member of the Tennessee General Assembly.

Andrew and Margaret's grandchildren, and great grandchildren, generally supported the Confederate cause during the Civil War. Archibald's son John A. Forgey was killed during the Civil War, and his son Andrew was taken prisoner. Most of the Shelby County, TN great grandsons participated in the Civil War as Confederates. John T. S Forgey was killed on the first day of the battle of Stones River in Tennessee. This battle took place on December 31, 1862.

1. Andrew FORGEY, son of FORGEY ( - ), was born on 4 February 1732 in Ireland. He married Margaret REYNOLDS in 1760 (approx.) in Ireland. Before 1800 he was in New Providence Presbyterian Church, Hawkins Co., Tn. He died in 1809 in Hawkins Co., Tn.

We believe that Andrew Forgey appears on the 1766 Religious Census for Ireland. A Hugh Reynolds also appears on the Census for Creggan Co. Armagh/Louth. Hugh may be Andrew's father-in-law. Andrew FORGEY Sr. may have had a brother named Alexander FORGEY. He lived in Washington County, Virginia. The names of his descendants are unknown. Both Alexander and Andrew, it is believed, originally settled in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania. In 1773 Andrew FORGEY purchased land there, and Alexander FORGEY was a witness to this transaction. Alexander and Andrew appear on tax lists for Peters Township from 1772 to 1774. In 1779 Andrew FORGEY Sr. was convicted of selling liquor without a license and above the rates. The trial took place in Washington County, Virginia. Andrew FORGEY eventually settled in the Surgoinsville area of Hawkins County, TN. A creek named Forgey Creek is located there. The Jacob ROLLER family lived in nearby Scott County, Virginia. Andrew owned 400 acres of land according to the 1809 tax list for Hawkins County. Andrew owned one slave named Bacchus.

Margaret REYNOLDS, daughter of Hugh REYNOLDS ( - ) and Mary DUER ( - ), was born on 25 December 1741 in Creggan Parish, Co. Louth, Ireland. She died on 1 June 1828 in Hawkins County, Tennessee. She and Andrew FORGEY had the following children:

Hugh Crawford b. 1806 wrote this about James " Uncle James was not a very stout man, but a very enterprising man of good sense and judgement. Settled in Hawkins County on the Stage Road 10 miles above Rogersville. There lived and died. Had a family of 6 daughters and 1 son." He also said he was a religious man and an Elder in the New Providence.

3. Hugh FORGEY, son of Andrew FORGEY and Margaret REYNOLDS, was born in 1766 (approx.) in Ireland. He married Catherine FISHER in 1788 (approx.). He died between 1809 and 1830 in Hawkins County, Tennessee.

Hugh Forgey Crawford wrote this about Hugh "My Uncle Hugh's family I cannot say much about him, he died in early life. I have never seen him after I was old enough to remember him. I was named for him and Uncle Hugh Crawford. Hugh Forgey once lived in this county (ie Knox) a few miles north of here."

The first mention I find of Hugh is when he signed a Sullivan County Petition 1786. In 1787 he is a chain bearer for a surveyor, Thomas Hutchings, in Knox County, TN. In 1792 he placed an ad in the Knoxville Gazette regarding stolen horses. It reads ""I gave a bond to Leonard Rice for $250 with a bearing date of November last, and payable on June next. Rice has given three horses that are now proven stolen. I will not pay said bond."

In April of 1795 a Hugh FORGEY sued Joseph BEARD in Knox County, TN. Hugh had previously testified in the James FORGEY adm. of John FORGEY vs. Joseph BEARD case, which took place in 1794 in Knox County. Joseph accused Hugh of perjury in that case, stating that he uttered a "damned eternal lie." Hugh sued Joseph for slander. He asked for $1000 in damages, but only received $5.00. On 2 Oct 1802 Hugh wrote a letter to the Cherokee Indian Agency which is now in a collection at the National Archives.

Hugh and wife Catherine were mentioned in her father's probate and received $2.00 from the estate. In 1806 Hugh left Knox County, TN and briefly relocated to Jackson County, TN where he signed a petition in late 1806. By 1809 he is back in Hawkins County, TN living on his brother John's property in Stanley Valley (according to Andrew Sr.'s will). We know Hugh is alive in 1809 when he appears on his father's will and a Taxlist for Hawkins County, TN. He may have died shortly after, because Catherine appears in Court represented by brother-in-law, James, in 1814.

Catherine FISHER was the daughter of Archibald FISHER (-). She and Hugh FORGEY had the following children:

"In religion Presbyterian.
