THE object of the present work is to bring together the documentary evidence relating to the Coinage of Scotland.

Upwards of seven hundred and seventy records and papers are given, of which more than five hundred and fifty have never been printed before. They have been selected from the Acts of the Parliaments of Scotland, the Records of the Privy Council, the Acts of the Lords of Council, the Exchequer Rolls, the Accounts of the Lord Treasurer, the Registers, Warrants, and Accounts of the Cunyie House preserved in the General Register House, Edinburgh, and the Miscellaneous MSS. and Papers bearing on the History of the Scottish Mint deposited in the Public Record Office, London, the Libraries of the British Museum, the Faculty of Advocates and the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, the Collections of MSS. at Oxford, and several private libraries and charter rooms.

The papers are printed without abridgment. When contractions are used the words have been given in full; proper names have been printed with capitals, and punctuation has occasionally been added in some of the earlier records where the sense was obscure. With these exceptions the documents are printed exactly as they are found in the original MSS.

The Acts of Parliament are taken from the Record Edition, and I am indebted (among many other acts of kindness in connection with this work) to the late Professor Cosmo Innes for giving me access to the Index and to the additional volumes of the Acts, which have not yet been published. The other documents, of which the originals exist in Scotland, either in public or private collections of MSS., are printed from copies made with his usual care and accuracy by Mr Walter Macleod, and the proofs again collated with, and corrected from the originals. The papers, of which the MSS. are not in Scotland, are printed from copies supplied by the official custodiers of the documents, to whom I take this opportunity of returning my thanks for their great trouble and unvarying attention to the demands made on them for information.

While giving much curious information on questions affecting early trade and commerce, these records will be found to furnish data which will enable numismatists to make several important changes in the appropriations of the Scottish Coins.

The entry in the Chronicle of Melrose (Introd. p. cvii.), shows conclusively that the change of type in the early Sterlings, from the short to the long double cross, had taken place and was a matter considered worthy of notice by the Monkish chronicler two years before the death of Alexander II. The appropriation of the St Andrew (Pl. III. fig. 10) to James I. has already been doubted, for numismatic reasons, by two such excellent judges* as the Rev. Mr Pollexfen and Mr E. Burns, F.S.A. Scot. (to both of whom I have been much indebted during the progress of this work), and their doubt is fully confirmed by the records. It is probable that the small copper coins usually assigned to James IV. (Pl. III. fig. 23) were first struck under the authority of the Act of 1466. The undated Coinages of Mary and James VI. are now arranged in their proper chronological sequence. The Coinage of 1581 (Pl. VIII. figs. 10, 11, 12, 13), is shown to have no connection with the Thistle Dollar set (Pl. VIII. figs. 7, 8). The Coins issued between 1605 and 1610 (Pl. X. figs. 16, 17, 18, Pl. XI. figs. 1, 2, 3), are for the first time restored to the Scottish series. The Farthing Tokens (Pl. XII. fig. 16) were issued in the reign of Charles I. The early issue of Half Merk, Forty and Twenty Penny Pieces (Pl. XII. figs. 17, 18, 19), is distinguished from the later Coinage (Pl. XIII. figs. 12, 13, 14) of the same value. The Three Shilling and Two

Shilling Pieces (Pl. XIII. figs. 15, 16) are now shown to be a separate coinage. The Turners (Pl. XIII. fig. 17.) were minted in the reign of Charles I. The supposed Half Testoon of Mary (Lindsay, Pl. VIII. fig. 180), the Jetton of 1553 with the monogram (Lindsay, Pl. VIII. fig. 181), the Jetton with M (Lindsay, Pl. VIII. fig. 182), and the supposed Bawbee of Mary (Cardonnel, Billon Pl. I. fig. 19), were never intended for currency. The supposed Quarter Testoon of 1558-59 (Lindsay, Pl. VIII. fig. 189) was not issued in standard Silver. It is now certain that the sixteenth of the Thistle Merk (Lindsay, p. 59, 1st Supp. p. 5), was never minted. Many of the rare gold pieces figured by Lindsay were pattern pieces, and were never in common circulation.

Much new information regarding the standard legal weights and values of the various coins will be found in the Records. While every endeavour has been made to search all sources where it was likely that original documents relative to the Scottish Coinage might be found not only in Great Britain but in most of the public libraries and in several private collections in Northern Europe, it is possible that documents may yet be discovered which will throw light on some points that are still obscure. I shall always be glad to have any such brought under my notice.

With regard to the Plates, it is necessary to state that they are only intended to illustrate the Coinages noticed in the "Records." I have endeavoured, as far as possible, to figure Coins from public cabinets, where the originals can always be seen; and I take this opportunity of thanking the Trustees of the British Museum and the Council of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland for permission to use, for this purpose, the Coins in the National Collections, and also Messrs R. Carfrae, F.S.A. Scot.; J. Wingate, F.S.A. Scot.; Ford, and Gray, for kindly allowing me access to their cabinets for specimens which were not in the public museums.

I am also very particularly indebted to Mr Stuart Poole and the gentlemen connected with the Medal Department in the British Museum, for the great assistance I have received from them. In particular, my thanks are due to Mr C. F. Keary for selecting the various specimens from the Museum collection and superintending the arrangement of the Plates.

I have great pleasure in recording the fact, that during the course of a tolerably lengthened investigation, involving applications for permission to examine documents and papers in the private possession of many with whom I had no personal acquaintance, and on whom I had no possible claim beyond the fact that I was searching for matter connected with an historical object, I have not met with a single refusal; but, on the contrary, every facility has been afforded to me, and often very great trouble has been taken in searching charter-rooms, though in many cases with very small result. For the liberal access which was given me by the Earl of Hopetoun and his guardians, to the extensive and extremely valuable series of papers connected with the Scottish Mint at Hopetoun House (the most important of which are given in the present work), I am deeply indebted. Lady Cumming-Gordon most kindly permitted me to print the exceedingly interesting papers preserved at Gordonstoun, which throw complete light on a point hitherto very obscure.

In conclusion, I have to perform the pleasing duty of thanking those who assisted me in the execution of this work. My best acknowledgments are due to Mr Thomas Dickson, Curator of the Historical Department of H.M. General Register House, for the great help he has most ungrudgingly given me during the long time I have been engaged in collecting materials. His able advice and active assistance were ever ready when required, and his intimate knowledge of the vast stores of unprinted materials under his charge was always most kindly and freely communicated. To the Reports of Dr John Stuart, to H.M. Commissioners on Historical MSS., I am also highly indebted for indicating many sources where documents, likely to be of use, might be found. The late Mr E. W. Robertson, whose early death is justly lamented by all the students of Scottish history, was good enough to revise, and approve of, the conclusions I had arrived at with regard to the early weights and standards of the Scottish Mint, and supplied me with many curious and interesting memoranda on the subject.

The Hon. C. W. Fremantle, Deputy-Master of H.M. Mint, most obligingly gave me access to the extensive and very valuable collection of Numismatic works contained in the Library of the Royal Mint. To M. Delisle and M. Henri Cohen of the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris; M. Sudre, Keeper of the Archives of the National Mint of France; M. Herbst, Copenhagen; Mr R. Sim of the British Museum; the Rev. H. O. Coxe, Bodleian Library, Oxford; the Rev. H. Latham, M.A., Vice-Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge; the Rev. F. L. Hopkins, M.A., Cambridge; the late Mr Hill Jamieson, Advocates' Library, Edinburgh; Mr Small, M.A., University Library, Edinburgh; Mr George Sim, F.S.A. Scot; Mr Joseph Anderson, Museum of Antiquaries of Scotland, Edinburgh; Mr James Grant, M.A., Edinburgh; the Rev. Professor Dickson, D.D., University Library, Glasgow; and Professor Young, M.D., Keeper of the Hunterian Museum, Glasgow; I am much indebted for assisting me in my researches for unpublished MSS. connected with the history of the Scottish Mint. Mr H. W. Henfrey communicated to me an interesting notice regarding Scottish Coinage from the Entry Book (No. 106) of the Protector's Council of State. Mr W. H. Henderson took much trouble in answering my queries regarding the provincial coinages at Linlithgow. I am also indebted to the Rev. Charles Rogers for information as to the mint at Stirling.

I hope the materials gathered together may prove of some use to those interested in the subject.

Introductory.

the curious, the documentary evidence relating to the coinage, never having been systematically preserved as a series in any one place, is now unfortunately scattered in almost every direction, and can only be recovered by patient searching through the great public and private collections of manuscript records.

But though we have to regret the loss of much valuable information, and the occurrence of many blanks even in what is still preserved, the importance of consulting the original records as a means of making our knowledge of the coinage, and of the historical questions connected with it, more accurate and more complete, will not be denied.

Before proceeding further, it may be interesting briefly to consider what has been already written relating to the coinage of Scotland.

§ 2. The earliest printed notices of Scottish coins are to be found in the Edicts published by royal authority for the guidance of the merchants and money-changers in the Low Countries. The edition of the Edicts of Charles I. and Philip II. "De Re Monetate," printed at Amsterdam in 1557, contains figures and notices of various Scottish coins, such as the Demy of James I.,<sup>1</sup> the Unicorn of James III.,<sup>2</sup> the Two-thirds St Andrew<sup>3</sup> of James IV., the Écu of James V.,<sup>4</sup> and the silver Groats of James III.<sup>5</sup> Later Edicts mention the One-third Bonnet piece of James V.,<sup>6</sup> and the gold Ryal,<sup>7</sup> half Ryal,<sup>8</sup> and silver Testoon of Mary.<sup>9</sup> An "Ordonnance" of Charles IX., printed at Paris in 1561, also notices Scottish coins, and figures several of those then current. Nicolson<sup>10</sup> refers to another, printed at Amsterdam in 1575, in which several Scottish coins are mentioned.

These notices are valuable, because they show what coins were chiefly current at the time. They occur down to the middle of the seventeenth century; but it is hardly necessary to remark, that in these Edicts, coins were only considered with respect to their value as a means of mercantile exchange. The first works which treat of the coinage of Scotland, as an object of archæological interest, were written towards the close of the seventeenth century.

Evelyn, in his "Discourse of Medals,"<sup>11</sup> refers to one or two of the Scottish coins, but gives no particulars regarding the series in general.

<sup>11</sup> London, 1697, pp. 93, 103. A specimen of the medal, figured at p. 92, is in the Hunterian cabinet in the University of Glasgow. The medal of James IV. (p. 88), was first given by Luckius in his "Sylloge Numismatum" (1620), p. 27.

Shortly before 1699, Archbishop Sharpe wrote his observations on Scottish coins, and in the beginning of that year sent the manuscript along with his dissertation on the English series to Mr Thoresby.<sup>1</sup> This manuscript was bought by Mr Gough at Thoresby's sale in 1764, and printed by Mr John Nichols in the seventh volume of the "Bibliotheca Topographica Britannica" (No. XXXV.), in 1785.<sup>2</sup> Without any pretensions to be a complete account of the coinage, the observations of the learned prelate are still well worthy of perusal. He does not mention any of the gold coinages, and describes only the silver coins which were in his own collection. The preliminary remarks, though not free from error, are often ingenious, and some of his conjectures have been confirmed by later research. In the first section he treats of the Scots weights, and falls into the common error of supposing that the ounce pieces of Mary and James ought to weigh the modern English Troy ounce, although he states<sup>3</sup> that the Scottish pound was equal to the French. He is mistaken in supposing that the standard of the Scottish and English silver pieces was always the same. In the following section he determines the rate of deterioration in the Scottish coinage, and the proportionate value which it bore at different periods to the English. A description of the coins closes the treatise.

Though the observations of Archbishop Sharpe were written prior to the publication of Bishop Nicolson's "Scottish Historical Library," the latter was first printed, the first edition appearing at London in 1702.<sup>4</sup> From the acknowledgment in the preface,<sup>5</sup> and from the letters which are printed in Thoresby's "Correspondence,"<sup>6</sup> it appears that Nicolson made considerable use of the observations of Archbishop Sharpe in his remarks on the silver coinage; and was equally indebted to Mr Sutherland, the Professor of Botany in Edinburgh, and the collector of the fine cabinet of Scottish coins in the Museum of the Antiquaries of Scotland, for information about the gold. In the eighth chapter of this still valuable work, Nicolson describes the coinage of Scotland, and though his observations are necessarily brief and sometimes imperfect, they possess considerable merit, and claim our attention as being the first systematic treatise on the subject.

He begins with the gold coinage, and before entering particularly into details, he remarks that the proportion between gold and silver in Scotland has been usually as one to twelve—a statement which, as will be afterwards seen, requires considerable modification. He notices the difference between the standards of weight in Scotland and in England, and of the gold and silver coins of Scotland. It is to be observed that the rare gold coins figured in this plate are not, and never were, in the collection at Oxford, but are copied from Anderson's "Numismata Scotiæ"—a fact mentioned in the account of the plates<sup>1</sup>—though Lindsay, in his "View of the Coinage of Scotland,"<sup>2</sup> several times refers to these coins as existing in the Bodleian Library. The penny ascribed in the plates to Alexander I. is now known to be the short cross type of Alexander II., and the penny said to be of David I., a blundered coin of William the Lion. These attributions are justly doubted by Wise in his notes.<sup>3</sup> He derives most of his appropriations from the works of Sharpe, Thoresby, Ruddiman, and Nicolson. He thinks it possible that the earliest type of the Scottish coinage was derived from the Anglo-Saxon, and that some of the rude sterlings (sometimes found in the Western Islands), with lines and strokes merely, where the legend ought to be, were struck in Scotland.

Maitland's "History of Scotland" was published in 1757. A chapter<sup>4</sup> is devoted to the ancient money of Scotland. Nothing new is however given. With some very slight alterations it is taken almost verbatim from Nicolson and Ruddiman, and the tables given are those compiled by the last mentioned author.

Several other historical and antiquarian works on Scotland, contain notices of the national currency, but they are almost without exception taken from the same sources.

In 1774 Snelling's "View of the Silver Coin and Coinage of Scotland," with plates of the gold and billon, appeared. The author died before he had quite completed his task; but even, imperfect as it is, it may still be consulted with advantage by the numismatic student. He commences the silver series with William the Lion, but only notices his second coinage. The sterling attributed in the plate to David I. he rightly conjectures to have been a blundered coin of William, though he is mistaken in supposing that Anderson copied it from the Pembroke plates. He describes the coins with regard to their type, legend, sort, weight, fineness, and value. Many of his descriptions are given from coins that were, at that time, in the collection of Dr Hunter, and are now preserved in the library of the University of Glasgow. He supposes that Alexander III. issued the long single cross sterlings after the year 1270, and in imitation of the great recoinage in England. To Robert the Bruce, he assigns the first coinage of round farthings, though the weights given are too light, the penny being generally about 21 grains, and the halfpenny sometimes as heavy as  $11\frac{1}{4}$  grains.<sup>1</sup> The groats were first introduced by David II., and those struck by him and his successor were long afterwards known as the spurred groats from the mullet in the angles of the cross. Snelling doubts whether the coinage ordered by the Act of 1367 ever took place, as he had never met with groats so light as 61 grains. But many such are now known,<sup>2</sup> and there is no reason to suppose that the provisions of the Act were not carried out.

§ 2. Works treating of the Coinage of Scotland.

The different weights and values of the coins during this and the two succeeding reigns are very confusing, and it is by no means easy to make anything satisfactory out of them. Snelling's remarks on the coinages of this period are worthy of attention, though his appropriations are not always correct. He gives the groats with the crown to James I., as the coinage following the Act of 1424, though he thinks they were also struck by James II. and James III. The groats with the arched crown are appropriated to James III., on the ground that they agree in weight with the coinage ordered by the Act of 1483. After this period the appropriations are more easily determined by the numeral and the date. Snelling gives a very brief outline of the Acts relating to the coinage. Many of the coins given in his plates are very rare, but there is no reason to doubt their existence. The ryal of 1565,<sup>3</sup> with Mary and Henry face to face, is now known to have been issued for circulation, though immediately afterwards called in. The supposed bawbee of Mary<sup>4</sup> cannot be traced in any collection, and the piece was not the bawbee or "babie" at all, but probably a jetton. In his remarks on the coinage after the accession, Snelling is very accurate though brief, but he omits the references to the original Acts. Dates not mentioned by him occasionally occur, and he gives no account of the Edinburgh coinage of Anne, with E below the bust. His death prevented any notice of the gold and billon coins, though the plates were prepared, and are given without any account of the coins.

In 1783, Mr James Cummyng, Keeper of the Lyon Records, published a disquisition on the proper arrangement of the silver coins belonging to the reigns of James I., James II., James III., and James IV.<sup>5</sup> This paper is mainly occupied with the question of the appropriation of the groats with the arched crown, which are there shown to belong to James IV.

another in 1789, and a third, greatly enlarged and corrected, in two volumes, in 1808. It contains<sup>1</sup> a short account of the Scottish coinage, and the appendix gives references to a few of the Acts of Parliament, with an estimate of the prices and rarity of some of the coins. Pinkerton has mainly relied on Ruddiman and Snelling for his information. He falls into the common error of appropriating to Alexander I. the sterlings which belong to Alexander II. He shows that at some periods the Scottish coinage was much superior to the English in workmanship and design. A slight account of the billon coinage is also given, but only from the reign of James III. The table of the comparative values of English and Scottish money<sup>2</sup> requires some modification. His plates contain a few Scottish coins, the principal one being the rare gold noble of David II., from the collection of Dr Hunter, figured for the first time.

Adam de Cardonnel published in 1786 his "Numismata Scotiæ," or a series of the Scottish coinage from the reign of William the Lion to the Union. This work is taken in a great measure from Snelling. It contains fourteen plates of the silver, four of the gold, and two of the billon coinage. The preface contains some curious historical matter, and in the appendix are given some extracts from Acts of Parliament and other original documents. The early coinage of William the Lion was first noticed by Cardonnel, though one or two had been figured by Snelling<sup>3</sup> but wrongly appropriated. He inserts Ruddiman's tables of the values of the gold and silver coinages, without correction.

The weight, fineness, and value of the coinage of each reign are taken from Snelling's work without any additions or corrections. Snelling appropriated some of the crown groats to James I., but gave their weight distinct from the fleur-de-lis groat. Cardonnel, in copying from Snelling, places the remarks of the latter on the weights of the crown groats, under the earlier type, asserting that the fleur-de-lis groats weigh generally about 56 grains, while in point of fact they rarely exceed 38 grains.<sup>4</sup>

Cardonnel's appropriations are generally correct. The coins of the Edinburgh and Perth mints, attributed to Robert the Bruce, ought to be given to Robert II. None of the gold Demys are given to James I., nor any of the Riders to James III. The St Andrew with the legend SALVV M F A Q POPVLV M TVV M and without the numeral, is now usually considered to have been struck by James II., though it is very difficult to lay down exact rules for the appropriations of any of the St Andrews'. The first billon coinage is attributed to James II. instead of Robert III., and there is no account of the coinages of Anne at Edinburgh, in 1707 and the succeeding years.

§ 2. Works treating of the Coinage of Scotland.

A small pamphlet of 16 pp. was published at Edinburgh in 1817, entitled, "A Short Account of Scottish Money and Coins." This carries the money of Scotland no further back than the time of William the Lion. It contains some tables of the values and standard of the money taken from Ruddiman. The denominations and weights of the various gold and silver coins are given very imperfectly, while the billon and copper coinage is dismissed in ten lines. The table of prices and the paragraph following it are extracted verbatim from Ruddiman's preface to Anderson's work. A list of archbishoprics and bishoprics in Scotland in 1560, with their revenues, is also given.

In the Transactions of the Royal Society<sup>1</sup> will be found a very valuable and interesting paper, by Dr Jamieson, on Scottish coins. He was the first to assign coins to David I., and his arguments have been fully confirmed by later discoveries. The sterlings he attributes to Alexander I. are now believed to belong to Alexander II. To Dr Jamieson also belongs the credit of showing that the coins inscribed with the word DERLIL, belong to the mint of Roxburgh, and not to that of Stirling to which they had formerly been appropriated. He supposes that the name PERIS ADAM, which occurs on some of the sterlings, represents the name and surname of the moneyer. He points out that Snelling only gives the second coinage of William the Lion in his plates, which may be accounted for by the fact that the great bulk of the coins of the first coinage were discovered after his time. An energetic protest against the common assumption that the Scottish mint followed the example of the English in every improvement, closes a very valuable and instructive paper.

In 1837 William Till published an "Essay on the Roman Denarius and Silver Penny," which contains a slight account of the Scottish sterlings. He notes a penny of David I. similar in type to the coinage of Stephen, and two of the short cross type of Alexander II., with the head turned to the left, hitherto unnoticed.

Some communications by the late Mr Lindsay appeared in the "Gentleman's Magazine," about 1843, relating to the Scottish coinage. These were followed in 1845 by the publication of his "View of the Coinage of Scotland," a work which, with some imperfections, deservedly holds a very high place as an authority on the Scottish series. Two supplements have been issued since the original work appeared, one in 1859, the other in 1868.

Mr Lindsay's work is illustrated by many plates, which present very accurately the various types, without however any attempt to give an idea of the different styles of workmanship so characteristic of the Scottish mint. The chief merit of the work lies in the excellent descriptive catalogue of the various sorts, varieties, and legends of the different coins; though many varieties have occurred since this most useful catalogue was compiled.

Lindsay's appropriation of the long double cross sterlings to Alexander III. cannot be maintained. He was led to adopt it against his own better judgment by a mistaken idea of the nature of the historical evidence on this point. His attributions to the kings of Scotland earlier than David I. are not altogether satisfactory, and require confirmation. Though in constant correspondence with Professor Innes and Mr Ferguson, who furnished him with much important and valuable information about the Records of the Mint, he constantly falls into errors, which seem more the result of carelessness than anything else. Wrong dates are given to Parliamentary proceedings (see pp. 19, 31); wrong names are given to authorities (p. 224); Robert II. is made to reign in 1364 (p. 22); James II. is said to have been murdered in February 1438 (p. 26), and many other mistakes of like nature. But his work is nevertheless indispensable to every student of Scottish numismatics.

Mr Y. Akerman's useful little "Introduction to the Study of Coins," published in 1848, contains a slight notice<sup>1</sup> of the Scottish series, chiefly derived from Lindsay, but making some alterations, such as giving unicorns to James II.,<sup>2</sup> for which no authority is quoted.

In 1868 Mr Wingate published a very excellent series of plates of Scottish coins, drawn by himself from specimens existing in his own fine collection.<sup>3</sup> These plates are remarkable for their fidelity to the most minute variety of type, and are by far the best which have appeared since the publication of Anderson's work in 1793. Mr Wingate adopted the historical part of the work from Lindsay, not having the time necessary fully to

§ 2. Works treating of the Coinage of Scotland.

Besides these larger works, there are many notices of Scottish coins in the "Transactions" and "Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland." It is unnecessary to particularise them, as they will be easily found by referring to the indices of the various volumes.

In the "Numismatic Chronicle" several articles and notices will also be found. Among these may specially be noticed an article, by the Rev. D. H. Haigh, on the "Early Scottish Pennies,"<sup>1</sup> giving his views on the appropriation of the sterlings of Alexander, which were afterwards adopted by Lindsay in his work on the Scottish coinage. There is also an excellent article, by the Rev. J. Pollexfen, on the silver coins of David I.,<sup>2</sup> discovered in Bute. He adds Haddington to the list of Scottish mints. The same author has also contributed another able paper<sup>3</sup> on the later Scottish coinages after the accession of James VI., and the views there suggested are fully confirmed by the records now printed for the first time.

In some numismatic works published abroad, descriptions of Scottish coins occur. Among these are "Wellenheim's Catalogue,"<sup>4</sup> where thirty Scottish coins are mentioned ranging from 1124-1714. In Madai's "Thaler Cabinet"<sup>5</sup> some coins of Mary and James VI. are noticed; and in the "Reichelsche Munzsammlung in St Petersburg" (1843), above a hundred Scottish coins are described, some of them very rare. The following foreign books may also be consulted:—"Verzeichniss auf nachgeschriebene sehr rare Dänische, &c., Münzen" (Copenhagen, 1716); "Geschichte der Engl. Medaillen" (Hannöv Mag., 1787); "Geschichte des Münzwesens in England, Schottland, und Irland" (Hannöv Mag. 1787); "Loisirs sur divers sujets d'Administration," &c. (Amster. 1775).

§ 3. Having thus briefly noticed the principal printed authorities on this subject, it is now time to turn to the hitherto unpublished sources of information. And before proceeding to the official records and other documents more immediately connected with the affairs of the mint, there are two very interesting MSS. which merit attention.

§ 3. Original Records of the Coinage of Scotland.

The first is in the British Museum collection,<sup>6</sup> and consists of a great number of drawings and descriptions of coins of various countries. Three leaves (fol. 14, 15) are devoted to the Scottish series. The MS. has apparently been written about the end of the sixteenth century. The first coin figured is a groat of Alexander III., which is unknown to numismatists, and is unsatisfactory; though there has ever been a tradition that Alexander III. issued coins larger than the sterling.<sup>1</sup> Various coins of James IV., James V., Mary, and James VI. are mentioned, and their standard of purity indicated. The appropriations are not always correct.<sup>2</sup> The other MS. is also of great interest and importance. It was discovered in the charter room of the Earl of Hopetoun, a descendant of one of the generals of the old Scottish mint, and is evidently the work of some one not only practically acquainted with the operations of the Cunyie house, but who had access to some of the official records belonging to it, which are now lost. It is chiefly valuable because it throws considerable light on the coinages of the reign of Mary; in which, owing to a blank of several years in the Register of the Privy Council, great uncertainty has hitherto existed.<sup>3</sup>

Some other MSS. about Scottish coins are mentioned which cannot now be discovered. Cardonnel speaks<sup>4</sup> of a dissertation in manuscript in the possession of the late Mr Hamilton of Glasgow. In 1846 a work by Dr Jamieson in MS. (possibly only the original of his paper) was sold at Till's sale. Two others are referred to by Lindsay.<sup>5</sup> A description of some Scottish coins is in the British Museum, Add. MSS. 19,974, f. 239.

Of the official records relating to the coinages, the earliest that are extant, are found in the Rolls of Accounts rendered in Exchequer. These commence in 1326, and are continued, not however without blanks, till 1748. Some of these are given in the selection from the Chamberlain Rolls, printed in three volumes, and presented to the Bannatyne Club by their president, Mr Thompson. Several of the most important of the moneyer's accounts are not in these volumes, having been discovered since then, and are now printed for the first time. Though these are the earliest extant accounts of the coinages, there is a notice<sup>6</sup> of several bags of documents relating to the earlier moneyers taken to England by Edward I., which cannot now be discovered. The Exchequer Rolls afford very important information as to the coinages of the reigns of James I., James II., and James III.<sup>7</sup>

The Accounts of the Lord Treasurer commence in 1473 and continue to 1635. Some, especially of the earlier ones, contain incidentally various particulars about the money, and fix the dates of several coinages.<sup>8</sup> There is an unfortunate blank in the record between 1474 and 1488.

§ 3. Original Records of the Coinage of Scotland.

In the reigns of James V. and Mary several notices of matters relating to the coinage are to be found in the unprinted Acts of the Lords of Council.<sup>2</sup> But by far the most important documentary evidence relating to the coinage is the Record of the Privy Council. It commences in 1545, and continues to the Union. The Lords of the Privy Council were usually empowered by Parliament to fix the type, legends, and value of the various mintages, and the record of their acts is often the only place where this information can now be found. It is somewhat singular, that though Lindsay quotes this record once or twice,<sup>3</sup> he never had it thoroughly searched. Had this been done, it would have enabled him to have appropriated correctly the Thistle Dollars of 1578-80, to have prevented the confusion with the coinage of 1581, to have added the coinage of 1605-9 to the Scottish series, and to have arranged the coinages of Charles I. in their proper sequence.

Of the later Mint Warrants and Registers a few have been preserved, but unfortunately the series is very far from being complete. It consists of various accounts of the mint rendered by the masters. The earliest as yet discovered is one by Thomas Achesoun, commencing in April 1582 and ending in August 1606.<sup>4</sup> The weight of silver and gold passing the irons in each coinage is recorded, and all the expenses connected with the Mint given in full.

The next "Compt of the coyne hous" was rendered by George Foullis, and extends from May 1613 to July 1627. The last one, by John Falconer, extends from June 1639 to April 1641. It will thus be seen that there are many blanks in this series.

A different sort of mint record is known as the Warden's Register or Book, and shows the amount coined and the sort of coin made each day. The earliest discovered commences in April 1556, and continues down to September 1558. The entries in these are of comparatively little interest, being merely journals of the daily work. They extend, with a few blanks, from 1591 to 1634; from 1664 to 1674; and again, from 1691 to 1698. It is quite possible that others may yet be discovered to complete the series. The originals of those noticed above are in many different hands, but careful and exact MS. copies of all have been made and deposited in the General Register House, Edinburgh, for reference.

§ 3. Original Records of the Coinage of Scotland.

The remarkable series of mint papers in the collection of MSS. belonging to the Earl of Hopetoun contains many curious memoranda relating to the coinages, and also to the practical working of the mint. They are all given in full in the present work, though in many cases they are evidently the rough drafts, or notes, of papers afterwards drawn up with greater care, but not now, unfortunately, extant.

The sources from which the other minor miscellaneous records are derived are indicated in the margin, and do not require more particular notice.<sup>1</sup>

§ 4. The Early Moneyers.

§ 4. In passing now to the various subjects of interest relating to the coinage, one of the most important is the position of the moneyer. The exact duties and responsibilities of the early monctarii have long been disputed. Some<sup>2</sup> conjecture them to have been the farmers of the mint; others, merely the workmen employed to strike the money.<sup>3</sup> Ruding considers that those whose names appear on the coins were responsible for the weight and purity of the metal. Ruddiman<sup>4</sup> believes that they accompanied the king from place to place, striking money where necessary, and putting the temporary place of sojourn on the coin as the place of mintage.

It is impossible, in the absence of historical evidence, to assert anything positively with regard to the early Scottish moneyers before the reign of David II. But there is a considerable probability in the conjecture that they were appointed by the king; that they accompanied the court from place to place; that they were responsible for the weight and purity of the coin; and that they were remunerated by fixed fees. It is apparent from the variety of names that appear on coins of the same reign, that at or about the same period a considerable number of moneyers were at work. And it will be noticed that the same name occurs in connection with different mints. Thus on the long double cross coins of Alexander, the moneyer, WALTER, appears at Glasgow, Aberdeen, Montrose, Berwick, and Dunbar; and WILM, at Berwick, Lanark, Aberdeen, Dunbar (or Dundee), and Edinburgh. It is impossible to say whether there was a different WALTER and WILM at each of these towns, or whether the same individual struck money at different places. But if the number of different moneyers recorded at the various towns is considered in connection with this, it will appear more probable that they moved from place to place (possibly with the king) coining money where required, than that large numbers of them were permanently established at towns of comparatively small importance. Thus, between 1165 and 1214, the names of ADA PERIS, FOLPOLD, ÞVE WALTER, RAVL, PERIS ADA, WALTER ADA, WILM, and others, occur on coins minted at Roxburgh. The same names, about the same period, are found on coins of Berwick, Edinburgh, and Perth. It is more likely that the same individuals worked occasionally in each of these towns, than that each town had a staff of coiners with similar names.

It was the practice in France in early times for the moneyers to accompany the king.<sup>1</sup> Cardonnel<sup>2</sup> points out the great probability that the moneyers of William the Lion were sent over from that country to coin the money for his ransom, and M. de Longpérier has strengthened this conjecture by pointing out the Norman-French origin of many of the moneyers. These foreigners would be likely to follow in this country a custom familiar to them in their own.<sup>3</sup>

There is no reason, as far as is known at present, to doubt the assertion of Ruddiman,<sup>4</sup> that from the earliest period the king of the Scots exercised the exclusive right of coining, and it may be added, that the Crown alone appointed the moneyers, regulated the currency, and received the profits. The moneyers would thus be appointed by royal authority, and be directly responsible to the Crown. They would probably be remunerated by fees in proportion to the amount coined, and they would account for the profits of the coinage to the Treasurer; all in accordance with what we know with certainty was the case at a somewhat later period. These suppositions are strengthened by the fact that in the list of documents relating to the kingdom of Scotland carried off by Edward I., the following entries occur:<sup>1</sup>—

“Item in decimo sacculo xxj rotuli tangentes compota monetarium et cambitorium et alia monetam tangencia.”

After the great coinage in the commencement of the reign of Alexander III., the practice of putting the name of the moneyer in full on the reverse of the coins, which had hitherto been almost universally the custom, was discontinued. In the time of John Baliol, the name of the mint only occurs, without that of the coiner, and this points probably to the period when the moneyers became permanently established in the principal towns under a settled constitution. What that constitution was at this period, it is impossible to say precisely, from the total absence of any documentary evidence relating to the mint during the unsettled times of Baliol and Bruce. But in the reign of David II. important changes took place, which can be traced from the records with greater precision.

§ 5. The Early Constitution of the Mint.

§ 5. Ruding<sup>2</sup> says that the English mint did not receive its full constitution of superior officers till the eighteenth year of Edward II. There is reason to believe that during his captivity in England, David II. paid some attention to mint affairs, and it is certain that immediately after his return to Scotland he, on the 1st of July 1358,<sup>3</sup> granted letters patent to Adam Tor, warden of the Cunyiehouse of Edinburgh, James Mulekyn, master moneyer, and the other workmen there, giving them certain privileges and immunities. It cannot be certainly affirmed that this was the first appearance of these officials in the Scottish mint, for there is a strong presumption that similar offices existed some time previously, but this is the earliest charter of constitution known, or ever alluded to in the mint documents of later times.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> The exact date of this letter is given in an unfinished memorial amongst the MSS. in the possession of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland.

We may therefore now proceed to consider the early constitution of the Scottish mint as it appears towards the close of the fourteenth century. § 5. The Early Constitution of the Mint.

The officials were<sup>1</sup> the warden (custos monete), and the master moneyer (magister monetarium), assisted by printers and strikers (operarii). That the warden was superior in position to the master moneyer is apparent from a precept of the king<sup>2</sup> in 1367, directed "custodi monete nostre et monetario nostro," and from an unfinished MS. memorial in the library of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, which (quoting apparently from an original now lost), says, "The said James (Mulekyn) and all the other officers under him shall stand at the decision of the said Adam (Tor) in all pleas and complaints which concern them except only the pleas of freeholding and our crown."<sup>3</sup> The respective duties of the warden and master are laid down with great distinctness in the Act of Parliament of 1393.<sup>4</sup> The warden was to receive all the bullion brought to the master moneyer to be minted, and to enter the weight in a register kept for the purpose. Every evening after the work was over he was to receive from the moneyers their coining implements, and keep them in secure custody till the following day. The master moneyer also appointed the operarii. He had to deliver to the warden every evening the money struck during the day. This was to be collected till the end of the week, and kept in a chest. At the end of the week certain pieces of the money were to be taken and retained for the trial of the pix, which was ordered to take place within forty days of the mintage. The warden was responsible for the money both as to weight and standard. The dies were sunk by the moneyer,<sup>5</sup> who apparently also furnished the designs for the coins.

In 1434, a special "sculptor ferrorum" is mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls,<sup>6</sup> who was remunerated by a fee proportioned to the amount of bullion issued. Though the warden was responsible for the weight of money coined, the Act of Parliament of 1451 specially rendered the master moneyer responsible<sup>7</sup> for all the gold and silver money until the warden had taken an assay of it. The same Act provided,<sup>8</sup> that the old irons of the coinage, together with the "letteris of graving," should be destroyed in the presence of the king and <sup>3</sup> In the early French mint the "monetarius" was apparently the principal officer. his council; and new ones were ordered to be prepared "within the cunye-place." The master was to have power to punish the workmen if necessary. It was also specially provided that no goldsmiths were to be employed in the mint if others could be got.

A distinction is drawn in this Act between the "king's cunyeouris" and others who apparently had struck money without royal authority. The latter were called "false cunyeouris," and the money issued by them was forbidden to have course. An Act of Parliament in 1449<sup>1</sup> prohibited any one from striking money without the royal authority under the great seal. The first fully recorded trial of the pix was in 1438.<sup>2</sup> The warden of the mint appeared before the Lords Auditors, and the pix being produced by him, duly closed, was opened in their presence, and the various trial pieces having been gone over and found to correspond with the registers, were assayed, and being declared correct, the warden and master were freed from all further responsibility. This trial was appointed to take place yearly at the Exchequer.<sup>3</sup> It was afterwards taken every December before the Privy Council.<sup>4</sup> Two pieces were taken from every "Journey," and after an assay, the remainder and the report were put in the pix. Some confusion having arisen from the appointment of two masters of the money in 1487,<sup>5</sup> it was ordered by Parliament that in future only one should act who should be responsible for the coinage. In other respects no change was made, except that a "wislar" or exchanger is mentioned, an office which seems formerly to have been held by the warden. The appointment of all these officials, and the entire regulation of the coinage as to weight, fineness, and value, rested with the king and his three estates in Parliament assembled. An Act was passed in 1478,<sup>6</sup> which expressly provided that the king, with advice of the Lords of Council, should make regulations for the coinage, and the other Acts already noticed sufficiently show that at this period the appointments were made by the king in the same manner.<sup>7</sup> At the beginning of the sixteenth century the constitution of the mint was considerably modified. In 1527, the appointment of a "wardane principale" occurs,<sup>8</sup> and shortly afterwards two "keepers of the irons" were appointed. Towards the close of Mary's reign the official staff of the mint comprised a general of the cunyeous (for the first time appointed in her reign), two wardens, namely, the principal warden, and the comptroller warden, or counter warden; a master coiner; a

WARDENS.

1438–1442	Thomas de Cranstoune. <sup>7</sup>

It must be remembered that this list cannot be considered exhaustive. Almost every good collection of early Scottish sterlings will add mints or moneyers to it.

THIRD PERIOD.

Officers of the mint from 1555 to the Union.

GENERALS.

The first General of the Scottish mint was David Forres, appointed in, or about, 1555. Before his time this office was unknown in this country.<sup>6</sup> It was adopted apparently from the French mint, where the title had long been known.<sup>7</sup> The principal duty of the general was to act as chief comptroller of all the affairs of the mint; to superintend the other officials; to try their work and to punish them when necessary. He was answerable for the weight and fineness of the coin; he had to see that all the books, registers, and accounts were correctly kept, and the bullion properly paid for; he had to be present at the trial of the pix, and had to produce the standards and trial pieces before the judges.<sup>8</sup> The contents of the pix, after trial, belonged of right to him, though this right was questioned in 1591,<sup>9</sup> but fully recognised in 1603.<sup>10</sup>

David Forres was general in 1573,<sup>11</sup> but it is not certain when he died. Sir Archibald Napier of Edinbillie was appointed in 1576,<sup>12</sup> and continued to hold the office for the long period of thirty-two years. He died in 1608,<sup>13</sup> and was succeeded by John Achesoun, portioner of Inveresk, one of a family long connected with the Scottish mint. George Foulis<sup>14</sup> of Ravelston was general from 1639 to 1641, when John Alexander of Gartmore succeeded him,<sup>1</sup> but the latter seems only to have held the office for a very short period, as § 6. Officials of the Mint. Sir James Hope was appointed in the same year.<sup>2</sup> Sir James continued to act during the Commonwealth, and it is mainly owing to his care that so many of the mint papers are now available. After the Restoration, Charles Maitland of Haltoun<sup>3</sup> was appointed, and continued till 1682; when in consequence of the enquiries made by a special commission he was removed from office. Richard, Lord Maitland, occurs in 1687;<sup>4</sup> and in 1689, Henry, Lord Cardross, succeeded him,<sup>5</sup> and continued to act till his death in 1694. Lord John Hamilton was appointed in the same year,<sup>6</sup> and was followed in 1699<sup>7</sup> by John, Earl Lauderdale, who held the office at the time of the Union. The full text of the commission of the Earl of Lauderdale as general of the mint, with the form of investiture, will be found in the Records.<sup>8</sup>

MASTERS OF THE MINT.

The duties of the Master of the mint after the appointment of the General were somewhat different to what they had been in the earlier period of the history of the mint.

He had to receive and give out the bullion according to the provisions of the various Acts of Parliament<sup>9</sup> thereanent, and to see that it was of the just standard. He had to pay the fees and salaries of the workmen, and to keep and render just accounts of the various coinages.<sup>10</sup> Along with the wardens he superintended the mintage, and had the custody of one of the keys of the chests in which the money was kept.

During the unsettled reign of Mary several mint masters occur, and it is not always easy to determine their exact position. In 1554 we find John Misserwie, who is described as an Englishman, and is called "master coiner."<sup>11</sup> John Achesoun<sup>12</sup> occurs under the same designation in 1555, and continued to hold the office, with some interruptions, for a long period. The Hopetoun MS.<sup>13</sup> mentions David Levisoun in 1556 as acting master coiner, and James Hairt in 1561, at which time it is stated by the same authority that Achesoun had gone to France, but returned in 1561, having received a gift of the office of master under the great seal. He seems to have held office till 1580,<sup>14</sup> and was

WARDENS.

In the reign of Mary we find for the first time two wardens acting at the same time in the Mint. The one was called the warden principal; the other the counter-warden or sometimes comptroller warden.

The duties of these wardens were somewhat different to what they had been in the former period. They had to be present at the allaying of the metals,<sup>8</sup> and had to enter in their registers the amounts of bullion brought to the mint and of money coined.<sup>9</sup> The principal warden had the custody of the irons and dies. Both had to superintend the sizing, making, and weighing the money,<sup>10</sup> and the principal warden kept one of the keys of the chest in which the money was placed till the trials were taken.

The following list of the wardens and counter-wardens from the time of the changes in the constitution of the mint in the reign of Mary till the Union, cannot be considered perfect from the defective state of the records from 1543 to 1567.

§ 7. Originally the officials of the mint were paid by fees at a fixed rate, proportioned to the amount of bullion coined. In 1367 the warden received one penny from each pound of silver minted, and the master and workmen elevenpence amongst them.<sup>1</sup> The same fee occurs again in 1441, and the engraver of the irons got a similar amount.<sup>2</sup> A yearly salary is mentioned in 1488,<sup>3</sup> when the warden was to receive ten pounds annually besides the other profits of the office. In 1536 the keeper of the irons got ten pounds a year.<sup>4</sup> The master had an allowance of one hundred merks in 1538.<sup>4</sup> In 1564 the fees were :<sup>5</sup>—

The General,	.	.	£12	10	0	per month.

Another paper from the Hopetoun MSS. gives a good idea of the internal economy of the Scottissh Mint in 1641.

II.—Discourses and tryalls anent coininge writein I think by my father.

This day<sup>1</sup> I went down to Coinehouse & mette with James Ballatine principall Hopetoun

He told me the maister, the sinker or graver, the Clerk of the bullione the warden and counterwarden and assaymaister, as for the generall he did not name him because he suspected me.

The generall (who for anything he knew was Johne Alexander of Garthmure 4 sone to umquhill W<sup>m</sup> Alexander second brother in lyfe to Harrie now erle of Stirling) hes (sayes he) ane hundreth and fiftie pounds a yeire and fiftie merks monthlie when the works goes, Item that the say box belong to him when it is broken vp quhich will not be much, because that it conteins bot ane quartre of everie say piece That this box had three kyes, bot that they wer all broken because there was ane contest for the keeping of them That the generall sees that everie man doe his office and receaves and admittes all the vnder officers.

The Maister who for the tyme is Johne Falconer does receive the hail bullion and for the vnce thairof vtter fyne payes to the marchant 53 s 9 d that the king hes vpon the coinage of everie Scots staine of silver bulyion 64 fi quhairof the maister hes 15. Item the tale of money comeing in vpon exchange is 10 fi 13 s 4 d vpon the stane, quhairof the maister gettis 10 fi the rest is the kings. Item the kings tale. . . . .

The graver who is Charles Dikkisone for the tyme hes 40 fi Scots by yeire and 13 fi 6 s 8 d Scots in the month quhilk is 100 yeirlie quhen the workes goes quhich in the hail maks 200 fi quhen they goe, bot he allages that he hes the halfe of the extraordinarie fie albeit they goe not.

The Clerk of the bullioun who is George Foullis of Ravelstoune for the tyme hes 500 merks by yeire constantlie bot that he never comes neire the house bot ance and tuyse a yeire to revize the maisters books quhereas he keepes none him selfe quhich he should doe, and that since the troubles begond he was ordeined by the Committie of Estaits to oversie the hail coinage and in a manner to supplie the generalles place who was absent.

The essay maister who wes Francis Naper and vnder him Andro Balvard (bot the place is now vaiking be the said Francis his deceis, and it is thocht that the said Andro will gett the samine) hes af fie 5 marks monthlie or 40 fi by yeire and of extraordinare quhen the workes goes 10 merks monthlie or 80 fi by yeire, quhilk in the hail is yeirlie 120 fi Scots.

The Warden principill hes 50 fi yeirlie and 13 fi 6 s 8 d in the month when the workes goes. The Countre Warden (who for the tyme is Thomas Oliphant) hes 40 fi a yeire or 5 merks a month ordinare and 6 fi 13 s 4 d in the month or 80 fi a yeir of extraordinaire when the works goes quhilk in the haill makes 120 fi a yeire. Item the said James Ballatine who is principill Warden keeps the haill yrons and that there is ane Clerk of the yrons. Item that of befor in G. Foulis his tyme The Wardens would have made 500 merks by yeire of the old yrons by selling of them bak to the maister at the yeiris end, bot that now the maister as they faise and blunt keepes and causes mend them. Item that the haill charges and wages of all the workmen (except the officers fies) are payed and susteined by the maister of his owne profeit.

§ 8. Original papers relating to the internal economy of the Mint.

Item that this way of coinage by the mylne press and swey is a great deall more dispatcheing, bot more expensive then the vther by forgeing and striking with the hamer, for heir the yrons are more subject to brakeing and defaceing then the vther way, and the milne varie chargeable to menteane, bot that this was ane extraordinarie brave way for coining of the Stirling coper monie quhich requyred great dispatch and could not have been done the ordinaire way for triple more charges, for of before there was ever three yeirs allotted to the coinage of 500 stane of copper and by the mylne and this way they would putt 1000 stane throw the yrons in the yeire.

Item that the haill officiars of the Counyehouse wer to petitione his maiestie and the parliament anent the augmentatione of there fies and for houses to remaine in quhereas the maister has all and they have none.

Item that at a tyme the maister will melt and cast bot 6 stane of silver at the most and that he will stampe it all three dayes the melting day being compted for ane.

Item that the vnce of vtter fynne gold by the A. B. C. is worth 43 fi and the vnce of ellevine deneirs fynne silver goes out at worth 3 fi 10 d  $\frac{1}{4}$ .

Item that all goldsmyth work should be of the standard fynnes bot that it is vtherwyse for lake of ordor.

Item that it is 27 or 28 yeirs since the say box was closed.

18 s 8 d and the pound be consequence at 48 li 13 s 8 d and so the vnce at 3 li 10 d and the drope at 3 s 9 d  $\frac{4}{16}$  d bot it holds not as heirefter sal be proven &c.

That the bullione comes in at 713 li 12 s the staine of 12<sup>ders</sup> fyne so the kings tale vpon the st of bullione is 65 li 6 s 8 d.

Item the pound of bullione comes in at 44 li 12 s so the kings tale ther vpon will be 4 li 1 s 8 d.

Item the vnce of bullione comes in at 55 s 9 d so the kings tale thervpon is 5 s 1  $\frac{1}{4}$  d and als the drope comes answerable in 3 s 5  $\frac{1}{16}$  d so the kings tale therevpon is 3  $\frac{5}{16}$  d all this by ther compt. The pund Troy English consisting of 12 oz everie oz of 20 d weight everie pennie of 24 gr<sup>rs</sup> etc is equal to 12 oz 5 drs 9 gr 18 pr Scots or 169,002 primes Scots so that 12 oz trois are lyghter then the 12 oz troy be 3114 prs Scots now ther should be 62 s sterling peices in everie ane of the oz Troy, and of other peices proportionallie be contract betwixt his maiestie and Th. Now the bullion of 12<sup>ders</sup> fyne (as I am informed) comes in at 55 s 9 d once so the king's tale vpon the once trois of bullione is 5 s 1 d  $\frac{7}{16}$   $\frac{3}{16}$   $\frac{4}{16}$  or if ye allott to the king the 12 pt. frie anlie as it is conceaved be the said contract; there should be payed for the once thereof 55 s 9 d  $\frac{4}{16}$   $\frac{0}{16}$   $\frac{7}{16}$   $\frac{1}{16}$  so that the kings tale vpon the once should be only 5 s  $\frac{9}{16}$   $\frac{5}{16}$   $\frac{2}{16}$  d Item the lib. of  $\text{C}$  comeing in at 44 li 12 s by there compt the kings tale vpon the pound is 4 li 1 s 8 d  $\frac{5}{16}$   $\frac{3}{16}$   $\frac{8}{16}$   $\frac{2}{16}$  d bot paying therefor according to the contract 44 li 12 s 6  $\frac{8}{16}$   $\frac{0}{16}$   $\frac{2}{16}$  d The kings tale will be bot only 4 li 1 s 1  $\frac{7}{16}$   $\frac{7}{16}$   $\frac{5}{16}$  d. Item the st. comeing in at 713 li 12 s by there accompt the kings tale should be vpon everie st Scots of bullione 65 li 7 s 6  $\frac{5}{16}$   $\frac{1}{16}$   $\frac{8}{16}$   $\frac{8}{16}$  d albeit ordinarlie they esteme it bott to 65 li 6 s 8 d because compting the once at 55 s 9 d only neglecting the fractiones, The st. amonts only to 778 li 18 s 8 d

Item the staine of bullione conforme to the contract should come in at 714 li 1 s

These privileges were confirmed from time to time. James V. in 1542 gave licence to all those working in the royal mint to stay at home in all forays and raids, and freed them from watching and warding.

In 1579 the following letter under the Privy Seal was passed:—

The Courts of Wardenry of the Mint<sup>1</sup> were particularly confirmed by James VI. in 1584-1604, and 1612, and power was given to the General of the Mint to repledge his officers and workmen from all other jurisdictions.<sup>2</sup>

Any infringement of these privileges was viewed with the utmost jealousy, and instant protestation made.

A paper drawn up in 1634 gives a very clear account of the privileges and immunities of the officers of the mint.

§ 9. The privileges of the Officials and Workers of the Mint.

§ 10. The earliest recorded duty paid to the sovereign was in 1358,<sup>1</sup> when seven pennies from each pound of silver were deducted as seignorage. As the pound of silver in 1367<sup>2</sup> was struck into three hundred and fifty-two pennies, the royal duty at this period was very nearly one-fiftieth, or about two per cent.

In 1441<sup>3</sup> it was sixteen shillings from each pound of gold, sixty-four pence from each pound of silver coined into groats, or sixty pence when coined into small money.

After the new coinage of 1451<sup>4</sup> it was thirty-two pence from each pound of silver and as the pound of silver was now struck into one thousand and twenty-four pence, the seignorage was rather more than three per cent.

The royal duty from each pound of gold in 1464<sup>5</sup> was twelve shillings, and from each pound of silver coined into small money sixteen pence. The rate of 1451, or thirty-two pence from each pound of silver coined into groats, was still retained. By the contract of 1525<sup>6</sup> the king was to have twenty-five shillings from each ounce of coined gold, and from each pound of coined silver of x d fine, eighteen shillings, or about six and three quarters per cent.

In 1526<sup>7</sup> the seignorage was twenty-six shillings from the ounce of gold, and from the ounce of silver twenty shillings, including the fees of mintage.

During the reign of Mary and James VI. the duty to the sovereign and the expenses of mintage amounted together, on an average, to about one-twelfth part. The mint was, however, often let at this period for a fixed rent, the tacksman making what profit he could.

In 1593 the weekly rent of the mint was one thousand merks.<sup>8</sup> But at the accession of James VI. to the English throne the seignorage on the gold was fixed at twenty-five shillings five pennies per ounce, and the twelfth part of the silver was taken for the seignorage and expense of mintage.<sup>1</sup> In 1683 the Commissioners appointed to report regarding the mint recommended that in future there should be a free coinage,<sup>2</sup> which was carried into effect by an Act of Parliament in 1686.

§ 11. In early times when the moneyers moved about with the king, and the method of coining, being rude and simple, did not require any cumbrous machinery, it was unnecessary to have any special building set apart for the purpose.<sup>3</sup> But whenever the amount of money required became greater, and improvements were introduced in the practical work of the coinage, the mints were gradually reduced in number and confined to the more important towns. From the earliest period Edinburgh was one of the principal mints. About 1357 a royal charter granted the Cunyie-House with its liberties to Adan Tor and James Mulekyn. The coinages of that and the following year were minted in the house of John de Corry, in Edinburgh,<sup>4</sup> who received an annual rent of five pounds. At the same time payments are recorded for repairing the residences of the moneyers. It is likely that at this period the mint was located temporarily in any convenient place suitable for the purpose. Thus in 1438 a payment of three pounds thirteen shillings and four pence occurs in the Exchequer Rolls<sup>5</sup> as rent, "Hospitii domini Regis prope portam de Kirkstile . . . in quo hospitio dicta moneta fabricatur." Again, in 1441,<sup>6</sup> in the account of the Master of the Money, there is an entry of rent paid to a certain John Swift for the use of his house for coining in. And in 1442, in the account of a coinage at Stirling,<sup>7</sup> another payment is recorded to Robert Hakate, "pro firma domus diete cone." Between this time and 1527 a special building for the mint must have been erected. For in that year James V. assigned to Hochstetter and others (in a contract entered into about the coinage),<sup>8</sup> "domus monetaria Edinburgensis." This cunyiehouse may have been at Holyrood. In 1562<sup>9</sup> an entry in the treasurer's account shows a payment of four hundred and sixty pounds odd by the master coiner to the master of work "for the bigging of the cunyehous within the castell of Edinburgh and beting of the cwnyehous within the palice of Halierudhous." Another proof that the "cunyie house" was at the Abbey at that time, is found in the "Diurnal of Remarkable Occurrents,"<sup>1</sup> under the date July 1559, where it is stated that the Prior of § 11. The Mint at Edinburgh. St Andrews and the Earl of Glencairn, with the congregation, passed to the Abbey of Holyrood, and there "tuke and intromittit with the queenis irinis of the cunyie hous and brocht the samyne up to Edinburgh to his awin lodging quhairat the quenis grace regent was very discontentit."<sup>2</sup>

This mint appears to have been situated in the outer court of the Palace of Holyrood, on the south side of the Canongate, and on the west side of the Abbey Close, and to have still been called the mint in 1567 when Darnley was murdered. Maitland makes a mistake when he says,<sup>3</sup> that at this time the mint was situated in the house, in his time, occupied by the Dowager Duchess of Gordon. The deposition of Dalgleish, taken after the king's murder, shows that it was not.<sup>4</sup> The mint erected in the Castle of Edinburgh was used by Sir William Kirkealdy to coin the "auld cunyie of the Quene."<sup>5</sup> During the siege of 1572 this cunyie house, along with other portions of the castle, was destroyed; and in 1574 the mint was finally established<sup>6</sup> in a building at the foot of Todrick's Wynd, in the Cowgate, where coining operations were carried on, till finally put an end to by the Union. From an Act of the Privy Council in 1581,<sup>7</sup> it appears that the coinage of the succeeding year was to take place in the house of Archibald Stewart in Edinburgh, as the "cunyieous besyde Halyrudehous is presentlie rwynous vnmeit for working of the said Work." It is not stated where this was. In 1597 the Royal Mint was in such a ruined state that<sup>8</sup> the work of coinage could not be carried on. Part of the buildings in Todrick's Wynd seem to have been built a century later, as they bear the date 1674. The original building known as "Thomas Aitchinsounes Lugin," contained the council-room of the officers, with lodgings for some of the officials. In the more recent part of the building was the coining-house, and in a projecting wing the finishing house.

In 1817 the buildings of the old Scottish Mint were finally disposed of, and ceased to be national property. The following is the text of the Act of Parliament of Great Britain which authorised the sale of the mint in Edinburgh:—

Master of the Mint in England for the time being ; and that the other Offices of the Mint in Scotland should, upon the Termination of the respective present existing Interest therein, be held by the Officers discharging Duties corresponding to the Duties of these Offices in England ; and that the Buildings of the Mint in Scotland should be sold ; Be it further enacted, That from and after the termination of the present existing Interest in the Office of the Governor of the Mint in Scotland, the said Office shall vest in and thenceforth and for ever thereafter be held by the Master and Worker of the Mint in England for the time being, without any special Appointment for that purpose or in that behalf, and without any Salary, Fee or Emolument in respect thereof ; and all the other Offices in the Mint in Scotland shall, from and after the respective Terminations of the present existing Interests therein respectively, be held by the officers respectively discharging in England Duties corresponding to the Duties of such offices, without any additional Salary, Fee or Emolument in respect thereof ; any thing contained in any Act or Acts of Parliament, or Law or Laws, or Custom or Indenture relating to the Mint of Scotland, to the contrary notwithstanding.

“ V. And be it further enacted, That upon the Termination of the whole of the existing Interests of such of the said officers as are entitled to Apartments in the said Buildings, or upon their relinquishing their Rights thereto, it shall be lawful for the Lord High Treasurer of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or the Commissioners of His Majesty’s Treasury of the said United Kingdom, or any Three or more of them, and they are hereby authorized and required, as soon as conveniently may be after such Termination or Relinquishment, to order and direct the Buildings appropriated to the Mint in Scotland to be sold, and the Proceeds, after deducting the Charges attending the Sale or Sales, to be paid to the Receiver General in Scotland ; and the same when so paid shall be accounted for by him in the same manner with any Public Monies received by him.”

vincial Mints.

§ 12. Mints were also established in many of the provincial towns. Of these provincial mints we have very little authentic record. A right of striking money was claimed for the See of St Andrews from the very earliest times. In 1283 Alexander III., standing before the high altar in the kirk of St Andrews, granted the right of striking money to God and St Andrew as freely as any of the bishops there had enjoyed it in his father’s time or before.<sup>1</sup>

James II. in 1452, and James III. in 1479, confirmed to the See of St Andrews all former privileges. The "Golden Charter" in 1483 specially mentions "monetæ fabrica," and so late as 1553 the same right was confirmed. It is doubtful, however, if the episcopal mint ever issued any coinage. Martine in his "Reliquiæ Divi Andreae," mentions that the bishops could not coin above a groat, and it is probable that though the right was admitted it was not exercised. The only coins which bear this mint on them are the sterlings of John Baliol. A sterling of the reign of Alexander II. coined there, is recorded at Tyssen's sale,<sup>1</sup> and during the usurpation of Baliol many coins bear the legend CIVITÆ SANDRÆ. Whether these coins were struck under this grant, or whether a mint was established there by royal authority during this period only, cannot now be ascertained.

A mint existed in Glasgow in the reign of Alexander II., as appears from the coins preserved. And it would seem from M'Ure's "History" to have been used afterwards, though the later coin of this mint given in Lindsay is certainly false. He says—<sup>2</sup>

"There has been a Mint House here also as was in most of the Considerable Burghs ; for some of the Coins of King Robert III. bear to have been stamped here, and have the King's Picture croun'd without a Sceptre and Robert dei Gratia Rex Scotorum ; in the Inner circle Villa de Glasgow : and on the Outer Dominus Proctector—some of wh<sup>h</sup> are Reserved in the Cabinets of the Curious & some were Found lately (1733) by Masons among the Rubbish of the Office Houses, as M<sup>r</sup> Russel informs me who is Governor of the Correction House."

None of these are now known to exist, though from the very correct description given of them there is no reason to doubt that a mint existed here in this reign.

Dundee appears first in the reign of Robert II., nor is there any notice of it again till 1585,<sup>3</sup> when a minute of the Privy Council ordered the mint to be transferred from Edinburgh to Dundee in consequence of the plague then raging in the capital. In Achesoun's "Compt of the Cunyie" it is recorded that a sum of £551, 15s. 9d. was paid for repairing the "Coyne hous" at Dundee, and transporting the coining tools there and back again. Again, so late as 1651<sup>4</sup> commissioners were appointed by the Scottish Parliament to visit the "Coynehous" at Dundee, and to spend two thousand merks on repairing it. It appears from a local history<sup>5</sup> that a close leading from the High Street is still called the Mint Close.

Berwick was a mint for Scottish coins from the time of David I. During the reign of James IV., Gilbert Fish<sup>1</sup> is mentioned as striking money there, but no other record of this mint can be discovered.

Stirling appears as a mint on the double cross coins of Alexander, and again on those of James I. and James II. Its last appearance is during the reign of Mary, when placks (or babeis) were coined there. In 1442 Alexander Tod was appointed moneyer of the king in Stirling and coined gold and silver.<sup>2</sup> John de Levingston was warden, and the mint was established in the house of one Robert Hakate, who received a rent for it. Afterwards the mint was situated in that portion of the rock of Stirling which fronted the lower extremity of St John's Street. The mint house was pulled down about five years ago to make room for some modern improvements. It is a tradition that Alexander I. was the first who established a mint at Stirling, and struck sterlings there with silver found in the Ochils at Alva. The alloyed coinage of money struck here was minted from copper found at Airthrey.

Dumbarton appears as a place of mintage during the reign of Robert III., but never either before or after; nor can any record or tradition concerning it, now be recovered.

Annan occurs as a mint on the authority of sterlings of Alexander reading AN or ANPE, but no other evidence can be produced regarding it.

The mint at Aberdeen is said to have been established by William the Lion.<sup>3</sup> It was in operation during the reigns of Alexander II., David II., Robert III., James I., James II., and James IV., as appears from coins still preserved. In the reign of James V., William Rolland was master of the mint of Aberdeen,<sup>4</sup> though no record exists of its operations during that or any succeeding reign.

A small lane leading from the south-west corner of the market place is called Exchequer Row, and here it is said that the mint was situated.

Coins of James I. were minted at Linlithgow, and local tradition has it that the silver was found about three miles from the town, and was minted at a house on the west side of the market place still known as the "Cunye Neuk."

Of the other mints mentioned by Lindsay<sup>5</sup> no record can now be found. Large coinages took place at Perth and Roxburgh, and possibly some local trace of the mints there may yet be recovered. Dunbar, Lanark, and Montrose are known only from the coins.

Only one specimen of the sterling reading FRE is known in this country, though a fine § 12. Provincial Mints. example of it occurs in the collection at Copenhagen, which confirms the attribution to Forres. Inchaffray must be deleted from the list of Scottish mints, as the coin which was supposed to have been minted there is now attributed more correctly to Inverness—a mint which was worked so late as the reign of James II., but concerning which no documentary evidence can be obtained.

Haddington is supposed to have been one of the mints of David I., and it is possible that other mints may yet be discovered.

§ 13. The supply of bullion for the Scottish mint was mainly derived from three § 13. Supply of Bullion for the Mint. sources, viz., first, the duties laid on merchants to pay a certain amount of bullion for commodities exported by them; next, the melting down of foreign coin and plate; and lastly, the produce of the native mines.

We have no exact knowledge of how the supply of bullion was kept up in the earlier periods. It is said<sup>1</sup> that David I. had a silver mine in Cumberland, and there is a grant by him<sup>2</sup> to the Abbey of Dunfermline in 1153 of all the gold which should accrue to him from Fife and Fothrif. But in 1425 two sufficient men were appointed by the king's chamberlain-depute<sup>3</sup> at each port to receive the king's custom and make account thereof to Exchequer. In 1436<sup>4</sup> these customs are distinctly specified, and are fixed at three ounces of burnt silver to be paid by the merchant for each sack of wool exported; for each "serplath" in freight, three ounces; for each "last" of hides, nine ounces; and for five Hamburgh barrels, three ounces. These amounts were frequently altered by Act of Parliament. Thus in 1474<sup>5</sup> for each serplath and for each last of salmon the amount is fixed at two ounces, and for each last of hides, four ounces. In 1483<sup>6</sup> each serplath of wool, hides, skins, or cloth, is to pay four ounces, and the last of salmon also four ounces; and again in 1488,<sup>7</sup> each serplath of wool, last of salmon or four hundred cloth, four ounces; each last of hides, six ounces; and each last of herring, two ounces. John Achisone, master coiner, and John Aslowane, burgess of Edinburgh in 1562,<sup>8</sup> obliged themselves to pay to the mint forty-five ounces of silver for every thousand stone weight of lead ore exported from the mines of Glengower and Wenlok. It is unnecessary to give more examples of these duties, from which, there is no doubt, the principal part of the bullion was derived.

Bullion for the Mint.

From a very early period foreign money was allowed to be current in Scotland. In the reign of David II. an Act of Parliament allowed English money to have course in the country.<sup>1</sup> Coins of France and of Flanders are mentioned in the time of his successor, and in every Act almost which altered the value of the currency coins of other nations are specified. This foreign money diminished the necessity for native coinage, though it must have complicated mercantile dealings to a very great degree. But besides permitting these coins to be current, it appears from the records that they were often melted down and recoined in native currency, not without profit.

Thus in the "Treasurer's accounts" under the date 1504-6,<sup>2</sup> there is an entry of three hundred and seventy-seven pounds as the profit arising from changing three thousand six hundred and ninety six "coronarum viz scutorum Francie" . . . . "in moneta Scoticana." Similar entries occur in succeeding years. Numerous notices of melting down plate for the coinage are also found in the records. The treasurer accounts in 1506 for the profits arising "de tribus antiquis amphoris argentiis" . . . . "conetatis in le plakis" and "de duobus placatis argentiis vocatis de Balgony . . . . conetatis in singulis denariis:" and "de conetacione viginti trium le lynkis auri de magna cathena domini regis . . . . conetati in le unicornis," and similar entries are found in every reign.

The amount of bullion derived in early times from the native mines was very considerable. Leslie, in his "Descriptio Regnorum et Insularum Scotiæ," says that gold was discovered in the Leadhills in the time of James IV. In the treasurer's accounts for 1511, 1512, and 1513 payments occur to Sir J. Pettigrew for expenses incurred in working the gold mine in Crawford Mour.<sup>3</sup> In 1515 the Queen Regent recommenced operations there, which had been interrupted by the death of the king at Flodden, and sent the "Lord postulate of the Yles for to pas to Craufurd muir and thare to set workmen and mak ordinances for the gold myne." The Regent Albany coined the famous Albany medal out of gold found in this mine.<sup>4</sup>

In 1526 all mines of gold and silver were conceded to Joachim Hochstetter and some other Germans, apparently for the space of forty-three years; but the contract for the coinage, only specifies ten years.<sup>5</sup> Their operations do not seem to have been very successful, as in 1539 miners were brought from Lorraine to work for the mint, and their better skill was rewarded by much increased returns. In 1540<sup>6</sup> one hundred and thirty ounces of gold "lucrati in mora de Craufurd et terris de Coreheid" were coined into ducats, better known as bonnet pieces. In 1539<sup>1</sup> the Regalia of Scotland was made from native gold, forty-one and a quarter ounces being given to the king's crown and thirty-five ounces to the queen's. An interesting manuscript in the British Museum<sup>2</sup> gives an account of the operations at this time, from which it appears that in some summers as many as eight hundred persons were employed in working for gold, and great quantities were obtained. Very little was done during Mary's minority, though the Queen Dowager sent to England for miners. In 1562 the lead mines were let on condition of a payment in silver as lordship, and in 1564 a privilege of working gold and other mines between Tay and the sheriffdom of Orkney was granted to John Stewart of Tarlair and his son. During the minority of James VI.,<sup>3</sup> Cornelius de Voss got permission from the Regent Murray to search for gold, and was so far successful that it is recorded he sent eight pounds of gold to the mint within the space of thirty days. De Voss made over his privilege to Arnold Bronkhurst, who failed to make anything out of it, and in 1583 all the gold, silver, copper, tin, and lead mines were granted to Eustachius Roche for twenty-one years. The contract will be found in the unprinted Privy Council Records.<sup>4</sup> If, in the course of his researches for the metals he should chance to find "coll," he was permitted to take as much as could be used in his work, but was not to dispose of it. Out of every hundred ounces of gold found he was to pay the king seven; and of the other metals ten per cent. All the rest of the gold and silver was to be brought to the mint at the rate of £22 for the ounce of gold and £2 for the ounce of silver. He was also to pay 1000 stone weight of lead yearly and 2000 lb weight of copper. This contract was put an end to by the Scottish Parliament in 1592,<sup>5</sup> and a special officer, called the master of the metals, appointed to take charge of all metals and minerals pertaining to the crown. Napier of Merchistoun, then general of the mint, entered his protestation against this act. Several other adventurers tried their fortune at gold searching but without much success. Laing, in his "History of Scotland,"<sup>6</sup> says James VI. expended £3000 in the search, and only got 3 ounces of gold. In 1616 Stephen Atkinson got a licence to search for gold and "the Saxeer Calumeer and Talyneer stones in Craufuird muir." He wrote an account of the gold mines in Scotland for the purpose of getting the king to do something for him. His treatise contains much curious matter, though it had not the effect he desired. In 1621 he gave up the search, and a Dr Hendlie got a licence at that time for twenty-one years to search for gold in Craufurd Muir. It does not appear that he made anything of it, and since that time no regular operations have been carried on, though so late as 1863 considerable quantities of gold were obtained.

Silver also has been obtained from native sources. In 1424 Parliament granted to the king all mines where three halfpennies of silver could be refined out of the pound of lead. In 1607 silver ore in great quantity was discovered at Hilderston, near Linlithgow. This mine was worked by royal authority, and the accounts of expenses, &c., are still preserved.<sup>1</sup> From these it appears that between 1608 and 1610 nearly £50,000 had been expended in working the mine, besides the cost of refining the ore.

The following paper is in the collection of MSS. in the British Museum.

§ 14. Methods
of Coining.

§ 14. Amongst the Hopetoun Papers are some very curious and interesting, but unfortunately fragmentary, notices of some of the practical operations in the mint. In order however to understand these, it will be necessary to explain the various ways of minting money in use at different periods.

In the Scottish mint, as everywhere else, money was first struck with the hammer. The method of proceeding was as follows. The gold or silver having been brought to the required standard was put into heated crucibles of earth, shaped like inverted cones, and placed in a furnace. These furnaces were of two kinds, differing in their construction and known in the French mint as furnaces à soufflet or à vent. The first named were generally used for gold, and the others for silver. § 14. Methods of Coining.

Whenever the metal was melted thoroughly it was run into moulds and cast into bars. These bars were again reheated and afterwards lengthened by beating on an anvil. They were then cut into pieces about the thickness of the coins required, and adjusted to the proper weight by cutting with shears. The pieces were then taken up together with pincers, and while held tightly on an anvil, beaten with a hammer all round to blunt and soften down the marks left by the shears on the edges. The pieces thus prepared were known as flans, and were now ready for blenching. This was done by again heating them, shaking them in a copper sieve, and afterwards throwing them into boiling water mixed with common salt and the ashes of the burnt lees of wine, in which they were boiled till quite bright, and then again thrown on the copper sieve and dried with rubbers.

MINT FURNACE.

De Monetis et Re Numaria. Coloniae Agripp.

After this the "flans" were distributed to the moneyers to have the impressions put on them. Each moneyer had two irons or puncheons, one of which was called the "pile," and the other the "trussell." The "pile" was from seven to eight inches long, and was firmly fixed in a block of wood (called "ecpeau" in the French Ordonnances). On the "pile" was engraved one side of the coin, and on the "trussell," the other. The "flan" being placed on the "pile," the "trussell" was applied to the upper side of it by means of a twisted wand, or by the hand, and the moneyer then struck the end of the puncheon with the hammer until the impression was produced on the "flan."<sup>1</sup>

of Coining.

The only relic of the early Scottish mint which is extant is a "trussell" of the reign of Alexander III. preserved in the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, and of which a woodcut is here given. It was found in the ruins called King Malcolm's Castle, in the grounds of Pittencrieff, near Dunfermline. It measures  $3\frac{3}{4}$  inches in length, and is about 1 inch in diameter in the middle. Dr Scott<sup>1</sup> has described it as used for forging coins.

The way of using the coining irons with the hammer is shown in the accompanying cut from the Proceedings of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland.

ANCIENT SCOTTISH COINING IRON OF "TRUSSELL"

COINER AT WORK.—From the Capital of a Pillar at St Georges de Bocherville, Normandy.

The legend was put on by means of small puncheons bearing the necessary letters.<sup>2</sup> The coining irons and the "letteris of graving" were always destroyed or defaced when the type of the coinage was changed, and when in use were placed in the custody of the warden.<sup>3</sup>

This method of coining by the hammer continued in use for a long period. In 1597<sup>1</sup> § 14. Methods of Coining. James Achesoun, in an overture proposing a coinage of fine copper, stated that he had invented a new sort of coining mill by which the money could be made more perfectly than hitherto. It is not known whether this invention was made use of in the Mint at this time, but it is probable that it was not, for in 1629<sup>2</sup> the use of the “pile” and “tursell” is still referred to as in operation, “after the accustomed manner of the cunyiehouse.”<sup>3</sup> In 1632,<sup>4</sup> the copper coinage was ordered to be “printed with presses and other ingynges necessar thereto.” Four years later, and after Nicolas Briot had been appointed master coiner, there was a remonstrance<sup>5</sup> from the other officers of the Cunyiehouse, in which it was stated that Briot proposed to introduce a new form of working the coin by the mill, and praying the Lords of Council not to allow this novelty into the Cunyiehouse till it had first been received and approved of in the Mint of England. A definite proposal<sup>6</sup> to employ the mill in minting the silver coinage, 1636, was laid before the Privy Council in September, which was deferred for the consideration of the king. At last, in January 1637, a formal permission<sup>7</sup> was given to Briot to make a trial of his mill and press till the Whitsunday following. This permission was extended from time to time, till use of the hammer was tacitly and finally, relinquished.

The following list of Briot’s machinery and its original cost is preserved in the collection of Mint Papers at Hopetoun.

MILL AND PRESS. From a woodcut in Boizard's Traité des Monnoies. Paris, 1692.

The method of coining by the mill and press was more efficient and quicker than by the hammer. The metal having been prepared in much the same way as formerly noticed, the “flan” was placed between the puncheons, the bar of the press turned, and the impression given at once. The annexed woodcut will give an idea of the machine used for this purpose.<sup>1</sup> The irons were prepared by the graver of the mint, who engraved the portrait of the sovereign in relief, and from this the dies for striking the money were sunk. The dies from which the reverses and the legends were struck were also furnished by the chief graver.

The following inventory of the machinery in the mint in 1649 will show how these processes were then carried on in the Scottish mints:—

3. Pair of "rollers for flattening silver," 4½ inches diameter.

4. Three pairs of small scales for weighing.

These (viz., 3 and 4) were presented by Mr John Swinton Simpson, Assay Master, 1829.—Arch. Scot. Vol. III., App. p. 137.

5. 128 dies of coins of Charles II., of which there is no list extant. Queen's Remembrancer presented them in 1862.

6. Two dies of the silver twopenny piece of Queen Anne, 1711. They were presented by Robert Selater, 1865.

7. Some punches, edge dies, and knarling tools which came, in all probability, with the dies mentioned above.

A further improvement was made in the fabrication of the money by the introduction § 14. Methods of Coining. on the coinage of James VII. of marking the edges either with lettering or milling. This was done by a machine which was originally the invention of M. Castaing of the Mint in Paris, and of which a cut is here given.<sup>1</sup> A thin piece of steel was firmly screwed upon a flat plate of copper fixed on a stout wooden frame. This steel bore on one edge half of the legend or marking. Another piece of steel, having on its edge the remainder of the legend or marking, was fixed on the copper plate, so that the "flan," being placed between them, was touched on each side by the marked edges of the steel bands. This second steel was moved by a mechanical arrangement of a wheel and handle (as shown in the cut), and the revolving "flan" received at once the milling or inscription.

MILLING MACHINE. From a woodcut in Boizard's Traité des Monnoies. Paris, 1692.

It will be observed, on referring to his table,<sup>3</sup> that he gives the sterling standard of 11 oz. 2 d from the earliest period down to 1529. But a much baser coinage was in circulation long before this. In 1355 it is recorded<sup>4</sup> that money had lately been minted, which was baser in alloy than the old sterlings of Scotland. In 1393<sup>5</sup> pennies and half-pennies were issued, which only contained two-thirds of their weight of fine silver. The remonstrances of the English Parliament show that from this period down to 1423,<sup>6</sup> when the money of Scotland was totally prohibited in England, it was much below the sterling standard. An effort was made in 1424<sup>7</sup> to make the coinage equal in weight and fineness to that of England, but it was apparently not carried out till 1451,<sup>1</sup> when a great recoinage took place both of gold and of silver of sterling standard. A base coinage of groats is recorded shortly before 1471,<sup>2</sup> though it cannot now be exactly determined, and in 1473<sup>3</sup> pennies were issued, which contained only five shillings of fine silver in the ounce.

In 1525<sup>4</sup> the agreement between the Lords of Privy Council and James Achesoun shows that the groat was to be x ð fine, and not xi ð fine as given in the table. In 1554 the testoons were only ix ð fine, as appears from the Hopetoun MS.<sup>5</sup>

In 1555<sup>6</sup> the silver coinage was ordered to be xi ð fine, and the same standard was fixed for the ryal of 1565.<sup>7</sup> But in the same reign, in 1558–59, the xii ð groats were only vi ð fine. In 1571–76 Ruddiman reduces the standard to ix ð and viij ð fine, and this is called in question<sup>8</sup> by some of the later writers on Scottish numismatics. But there is satisfactory evidence to show that at the time in question, some part of the currency was very much debased. In the “Diurnal of Occurrents”<sup>9</sup> it is stated, that in May 1572 half merk and xl ð pieces were coined in Dalkeith only vi ð fine. These were afterwards raised to viij ð fine, and in 1579 to xi ð fine. The standard in 1686 was fixed at xi deniers ii grains, at which it was to remain in all time coming.

Gold in Scotland was probably coined originally of a finer standard than in later times. In England the old standard of gold was that of the mint of Florence, or twenty-three carats three and a-half grains of fine gold, and half a grain of alloy, and this continued in universal use till the reign of Henry VIII.,<sup>10</sup> when the new standard of twenty-two carats fine was introduced. Both standards were in use in England till 1663, when the new standard was finally adopted.

The Act of 1393<sup>11</sup> ordered that the Lion or St Andrew of Robert III. should be “de bono auro,” or of fine gold, equal in purity to the noble of England. The gold coinage of 1488<sup>12</sup> was to be of the same fineness. It is probable, from the permission given to Bertoun to coin unicorns in 1517,<sup>13</sup> that these coins, when originally issued, were only 21 carats fine. Somewhat later, in 1525,<sup>14</sup> the ecu of James V. was ordered to be of the fineness of 21½ carats.

The gold ducat of Francis and Mary was ordered to be 22 carats fine;<sup>1</sup> the gold coins § 15. Standard of fineness. of 1580, 21 carats fine,<sup>2</sup> and the same standard was to be kept in the coinage of the following year. In 1584<sup>3</sup> the standard was raised to 21½ carats; in 1588 to 23 carats 7 grains;<sup>4</sup> and in 1593<sup>5</sup> the standard was fixed at 22 carats for all the gold. All the coins of gold minted in, or for Scotland, after the accession of James to the English throne, were 22 carats fine.

Along with the gold and silver coinages there was from a very early period a billon coinage, and in later times copper coins were also issued. Billon coinages contained silver, but were not more than vi ð fine.<sup>6</sup> The first copper coinage was in 1466,<sup>7</sup> though the type was slightly changed<sup>8</sup> before it was issued. Among the Ashmolean MSS. at Oxford is a very curious paper, giving an estimate of the equal valuing of the English and Scottish money in 1601.

§ 15. Standard of fineness.

The Coynage is not accounted of, beinge unknowne, and the true Standard weight of the Scottish monyes being but coniechered the Judgement of the Exchange cannot be certeine. But it is most true that M<sup>r</sup> Lepton is deceiued in the estimate he maketh of the valewe of golde and siluer after the standerd of England at this present.

§ 16. In the earlier periods of the history of the mint the assays of silver and gold were done roughly, and without the minute exactness which was required later. A small piece of silver was taken, from the mass to be tested, with a graver's tool (called in the French mint Eschoppe), and placed in the fire, and the quality was judged from the colour when heated. Gold was tested by the touchstone. The metal to be tried was rubbed on it; the tester had small pieces of gold of which the standard was known, and these were rubbed on the touchstone till one was found to make a mark similar to the gold to be tested, which was then judged to be of the same standard. These processes soon gave way to more exact methods. The following account of the manner of melting and fining silver in the Scottish mint was written by Sir James Hope in 1639:—

§ 16. Methods of melting and fining.

XI.—Anent Melting and Fyneing of Metalles.

I went doune to the conyiehou to M<sup>r</sup> Falkinner maister thairof for the tyme, quho tooke me to the smiddie thairof quhair I saw the rollors of yrne for drawing of mettells to lenth and thinnes standing in the turneing loome

fining.

Item those instruments quhairwith they cutt out of the lignets drawne as said is the exact quantitie of metale in weight and bigness, of everie space requyred. The forme thairof for smaller monies was round ; for greater ovall ; The instrument or way of force quhairby they wer cutt is marked C D E F The stamp of those that wer cut Round was flat, and did impress thairvpon by ane force lyke to the former.

Those that wer cutt ovall did receive thair impressioun successivelie, by the quhilk they wer forced to the bread and so wer maid round ; Thair forme of instrument and maner of impressioun shall be sett downe heirefter ; The forme of thair stamp is the portioune or sectione of a cylindur on both syds

I saw in his studie the fornaces for fynning of gold and silver ; two of thame in the bosome of ane chimny for gold thus, and ane other as it wer in a bole ; the breid thairof  $1\frac{1}{4}$  fote the lenth thairof  $1\frac{1}{2}$  fote and the height of 2 fote drawing a little narrower at the tope, of clay with in bot covered with a thinne yrne plate without. The catills wer of more and lesser sydes of this forme, made of bone ashe allanerlie draked with pure water and dried with a temperat heat to sik a drynes as is proportionallie requyred. They call them tastes. I saw also his three sorts of strong waters preparing silver in thair ampullies for fynning of gold

I went thair agane and did se them malte thair siluer for casting thairof into lignets of a certaine breid quhilk thairefter was to be brocht to lenth and thikeness as said is in the preceeding page Thair fornace was 2 fote diameter Pyramidall roud ; The separation betuixt the ergasterium and the cineritium was in forme of brander above the quhich it was closed round  $1\frac{1}{2}$  f above that a  $\frac{1}{4}$  open for letting out and in the pottes of ane ordinarie syse, From thence vp closed round with plates of clay quhilk did open in thre  $\frac{1}{3}$  parts in case of necessitie, or for greater pots, Everie one of the quhich  $\frac{1}{3}$  parts had a spiritall hole The cover of the former part was of brike also with 2 spiritall holes, quhilk served lykwise for gripping thairof, for the more easie removeing, and placeing of the same

The pot that was vsed that day was of content of 9 stane double at the sydes bot single at the bottome in respect it stood vpon the said brander and was not subject to the lyke heat ; about ane inch thike each of them and had thair cover with aue ring in the middle quhich being sett in the midst of the foresaid fornace, the fewell was cast round about it on all quartres (quhich both heir and in the fynning sett doune heirefter was our ordinar cole broken thinne) and then the mouth and heid thairof ware all closed except the spiritall holes ; and so the fyre oft renewed The clippes or tongs quhairwith they tooke out the said potts wer of this forme L There was 7 stane melted this day, quhairof thair was a pound  $\frac{1}{2}$  of inlake. § 16. Methods of melting and fining.

Item that day I did see silver fynned or the fynnes thairof tryed, thus. First he tooke a litle of the silver given to be tryed, quhich being clanged and scrapped of all dust and drosse, he weighed thairof to the quantitie and weght of this litle indefinite weght quhich represented 12 deniers thairefter he inrolled it in a litle foyllied leid.

Then he tooke a litle leid bullet 5 tymes the weght of the said silver, quhich he put in one of the afore descryved tastes (quhilk had bein lying in the first descryved fornace with its mouth downward for fear of spoyling) and a litle efter it was fallen, he putt in the said silver enrolled as said is, quhich he suffered to remaine in the said fornace the mouth thairof being closed ay vntill the whole leid was evaporate and exhald, quhilk was adoeing about 5 or 6 minutes.

In this hailt tyme it was always bullering and as it wer seithing bot so soone as it settled and rested from so doeing (al the quhich tyme thair did appeir some cleir twinkling sparkles into it) he tooke it forth bot not in ane instant, bot softlie by retireing and advanceing, and quhen he had blowen vpon it he tooke it out cannelie out of the taste, and then weighed it, to the end he might se quhat it had lost. The ballance wer most exact quhairin he tryed it in forme marked M. N. Item I saw in the say mesters chamber a bake quhich was distinguished in everie syde of the center in to a 60 and more holes for distinctione in to smaller weights; as is K P

Item the silver thus fynned does alwayes conglobulate, and quhair it is prominent on any syde, it is a token that the fyre hes bein too bold on that quartre and if the bottome thairof be frie of dross it is a sure token that the assay is exactlie wrought.

Item if it be to suddenlie drawn forthe of the fyre the suddane change from heat to cold makes it springe about the edges, that is to say burst furth lyke the points of needle or prinnes.

The above are exact facsimiles of the pen and ink sketches on the margin of the original MS.

The next note was also written by Sir James Hope, and shows the method adopted for testing the copper coinage.

and that generall Hamiltounes overture was that the old should come in at 10s the pound and that the new should goe out at 12s the Scots lb Trois at quihich rate everie turner will weigh 1<sup>der</sup> and 28<sup>grs</sup> or 1 $\frac{7}{8}$  drope quheras the old turner with the thrissell and the lyon did weigh dropes the piece only, and so went out at 42 s 8 d the pound and the small turners went out at 8 s st the lb new copper being bocht at 16 s the lb at most (for some tymes it hes been had for 12 s and 13 s 4 d) the kings tale therevpon was 26 s 8 d quhairof allotted to the maister for coinage so rested to the vpon everie lb weight.

4 Nov<sup>r</sup> 1641.

This day I was sent for to the parliament house be the Erle of Southesk L. Burlie G. Pringle of Stichell and W<sup>m</sup> Rige of Ethrenie who wer appointed be the Parliament to sitt and advyse anent the copper coine quhere wer also sent for the rest of the officiares of the Mint, and Johne Fleming of Edinburgh. Quhere efter long discourse they resolved to take a tryell of the Stirling turners, how they will hold out in weight by melting and recoinng of them at dropes the piece or therabout as they should condiscend vpon efter tryell quhairfor they appointed the maister to have a staine of them in reddiness against Saturday nixt being the 6. of this currant with fyre pottes mulders and vther necessaeres for melting milneing and cutting of them in pieces of the old turners quantitie and weight quhere also they appointed James Denneistoune Goldsmith and founder as men of skill to be with them the said day at 7 houres in the morneing at the Mint.

Saturday

This day met accordinglie quhere was in reddiness a pot before a double belleis full of fyre bot no fyre nor coalls about it, it was above two inches thick & 5 or 6 inches deipe and about 9 inches over; with a little gutter in the mouth for pouring out of the metall of the forme marked A. This being fully hote and rid within they took ane garnett for so they call it (which is also a part of the pote bot because if it wer all ane peace it would be so how and vnhandie that the metall could not be convententlie poured out, therefore it is thus divided vnto two parts) and sett vpon it luttering well the jointures round about, only a little hole left forgaines the bellies The garnet was of the forme B, and placed vpon the pote before the bellies in maner marked C. Then we took aine trois staine of the turners last coined quhereof ordinarlie goes to the staine Thir we putt in by ladle fulles above the coalles (the pott being full of coalles blowne to their best) and covered them with sinders. Then again within less than  $\frac{1}{2}$  part of ane houre als manie: and so the haill staine at 7 or 8 inputtings (bot more and thicker at the end then in the beginning) in ane houres space all was melted, then the founder lifted off the garnett of the potte softlie and threw off all the sinders and with wett gloves vpon his hands he lifted the pott vnto the molds quihilk wer neirby quhair he did caste in the metal into ingotts or lignetts § 16. Methods of melting and fining. as we call them bot the casting was not so tichtlie done as the melting, then we tooke the slagge of the potte and the by fallings and brysed washed and sifted them quherof being dight we had 1 lb 3 oz and of lignotts of clene metall 14 lb 10½ oz So that the haille weighed 15 lb 13½ oz so the loss in melting and casting was bot 3 oz bot they compted it foure oz because according to the first weighing (quihilk was too large) they compted the metaille bot to 15 lb 12 oz; bot I think an all had been weill gathered there had not been two oz of inlake. Of this 14 lb 10½ oz of lignotts there heads and vthers being clipped there rested only 11 lb 5 oz 4 d quihilk was delyvered to the milne quhairof returned 6 lb 3 oz 4 d of made turners, quihilk in the tale of 3 lb weight wer havie be 4 turners. Item of chissell and broke 4 lb 8 oz 10 dr quihilk in haille being joined together makes 10 lb 11 oz 14 d so the inlake of this 11 lb 5 oz 4 drs in neilling and workeing is 9 oz 6 d Bot it is to be observed that the samine at the first foure tymes neilling did inlake bot 4 oz and some oddes, and yett at the last neilling that did inlake als much quich is to be suspected for there wer non present at the last bot Richard Maxwell for the burrowes for the wardens had gone to there denner as they told me Item at the delyverie there wer three lb telled for the haille and the wardens reported them to be 8 d havie vpon the three pound quich was reasonable neire, bot they are nather blanchid nor prented as yett because we had no yrons reddie and that will rebaitt of there weight.

Given to the melting the heades and clippings of the lignetts being 3 lb 5 oz 4 ds. 9 Novr.

Item the Chissell thereof quich rested after the cutting out 4 lb 8 oz 10 drs.

Item of washings efter the first melting being 1 lb 3 oz 0 drs

Summa of the weight given to the second melting 9 lb 0 oz 14 drs

Returned from the fire in lignetts 8 lb 4 oz 4 drs.

Item in washings 0 lb 11 oz 12 drs so inlaked in the second melting 0 lb 0 oz 14 drs.

Note that brimstone is exceeding good to try a mould or a stampe quherof I saw a tryell in Charles Dickiesones hands of the kyngs armes quich was notablie well done and it was done thus as he informed me.

Item in discours with Mr W. G. he told me that he heard tell that the haire of an hartichoke was the fittest thing that could be found for tryell of the divisione of a graine into many parts for cutting it croce als thinne as possible may be and weighing it in to a graine weight Then dividing it according to the haire it will divide reasonable equally into a 200 or 300 parts according to the dexterie in the cutting. Marchistoune as I hear did vse the plumes of a penne or fether. Item told me be Harie Hope that he would cleave and divide a 6 s or any vther silver peace in two by laying and burning a litle brysed brimstone vpon it, and thereafter givinge a great cast vpon the table it would cleave in two quherof everie ane should have their severall impressions as they had before; and that he did see this done bot had never tryed it, quhich hes been bot some imposture, but he affirmed R<sup>t</sup> Murray, Blackbarroneis brother, could doe it. This I have seene tryed and have also tryed myselfe; bot it does not divid fullie only it taks of a scruffle of it with the burning, quhich is done thus, sett the peice so vpon a table (we did sett it vpon three pinnes stucken in into the table) that you may lift it vp vpon your looffe betwixt your two formost or midle fingers and turneing your hand throw it hard vpon the table, that side thereof quhich is burnt efter it is thus placed spred (the haille syde of it which ye desyre to have taken of) with brayed brimstone about the thickness of a 6 pence Then light the brimstone with a sponke or paper at severall places that all may burne together and quhen it heth left lowing throw it as said is and the piece will cast a scruffle as said is.

remedies.

§ 17. It cannot be exactly ascertained what remedies or allowances for unavoidable errors in weight and fineness in minting, were permitted to the coiners in the earliest times, but it is probable that the two grains, under or above, mentioned in 1525<sup>1</sup> had been commonly allowed for a long time. The remedy on the smaller prices was one grain of weight, but two of fineness. In 1555<sup>2</sup> the remedy on the gold coinage was the eighth of a carat in fineness, and one grain in weight. Two grains were allowed in 1565,<sup>3</sup> and also in the Act of 1686.<sup>4</sup> The same remedies had long been in use for the larger gold pieces, with proportional differences for the smaller.<sup>5</sup>

Pure gold = 24 carats.

Pure silver = 12 deniers.

The denier was divided into 24 grains: the grain into halves or quarters, seldom reckoning the more minute parts.

The method of arriving at the desired standard of gold or silver required very nice and technical processes, which need not be entered upon here. But the following paper will show how this could be done when metals of different known standards had to be melted to produce a certain required standard:—

Hopetoun Papers.

1. Yee must find out the proportione of the denominatione and divisione of the subtil weights from the mony weights by the which yee are to make your accompt; that is the weights by the which ye trye your fynnes and those by the which yee weigh your money or Ingots; and make a note how much of the one ansuers to so much of the vther and to have the samine in its severall spaces of denomination sett doune for memorie and expeditione in the operatione In a table such as is heirefter descryved.

Instance in our Scottish Accompt first of silver we try and Accompt the fynnes of our silver ingots or money, by subtil weights of 12 deniers for vtter fynne, everie deniere being subdivided into 24 graines; everie graine into 24 pryms, everie pryme into 24 seconds, seconds into 24 thirds and so fourth. Agane our Ingotts or money weights are subdivyded from deniers dounwards efter the same maner; Bot vpwards 24 deniers goes to ane oz, sextein ounces to a lb, sexteine pounds to a stone, which is the highest denominatione. Hence it may be easilie collected that if any Ingott be for Instance of 12 deniers weight and 11 deniers fynnes and so of 1 denier allay (because the highest denominatione in the fynnes of silver is only 12 deniers as said is) Then everie denier of fynnes in that ingote will ansuer precislie to a denier of weight. That is, als many deniers as the samme is denominat to bee, of fynnes or of allay, so many deniers of weight of vtter fyne silver, or of the basser metall (with the which it is allayed) respective, does it conteine; as in the former instance 11 denieris of weight of vtter fynne silver and 1 denieris of copper or vther allay; And so fourth what ever be the weight of any Ingote in and proportionable to the denominatione of each twelve deniers. Bot in the denominatione of ounces in respect everie ounce as said is containes 24 that is twayne 12 deniers, Then in everie ounce of your ingote, 1 deniere of fynnes will ansuer to 2 deniers of weight. And be consequence in a pound weight (which containes 16 oz as said is) everie denier of fynnesse will ansuer to sexteine tymes two deniers, that is 1 oz 8<sup>drs</sup> and in everie stonne also to 16<sup>lb</sup> 8<sup>oz</sup> Againe dounewards, If in ane Ingote of 12 deniers weight, everie denier of fynnes ansuer to a § 18. Of the denier of weight Then (in respect everie denier conteines 24 that is twelve tymes <sup>degrees of</sup> ~~110~~ purity.

graines) in ane ingot of whatsoever weight everie denier of fynnes will ansuer to 2 graines of weight in the denier, and be consequence also to 2 pryms in the graine; tuo seconds in the pryme and so fourth dounewards. Againe if one denier of fynnes in everie ounce, correspond to tuo deniers of that weight; Then in so much that as everie denier of fynnes is subdivided into 24 graines so everie ounce of weight is also subdivyded into 24 deniers. Therefor everie graine of fynness in everie ounce of weight corresponds to tuo graines of that weight and in everie denier to tuo pryms, and in everie pryme to tuo seconds etc. And sicklyke vpwards If one graine of fynnes in the ounce weight ansuer to tuo graines of that weight, and that 16 ounce goe to one pound

Instance Scottish Accompt Gold Wee weigh our Gold coyne and ingots of Gold with the same weights that we doe our silver, bot the fynnes therof we trye and Accompt by subtile weights of 24 caracts for the heighest denominatione, everie caract being subdivyded into 12 graines, everie graine

This division that is deleit borrowed from the English only not properlie our owne.

~~(by some into 4 quarts, by others mere subtiltie)~~ into 24 primes, seconds, thirds, etc. as the silver is. Now in ane Ingot of ounces one or more in respect everie ounce conteines 24 deniers, correspondent to the heighest fynnes of 24 caracts. Therefor everie caract of fynnes in everie ounce of weight ansuers to one denier of that weight In everie denier to one graine, In everie graine to one prime, and so fourth dounewards, and in the pound to sexteine deniers, and in the stonne to sexteine tymes 16 deniers, that is 10 ounce and 16 deniers Bot in respect whereas the denier of ounce weight is subdivyded into 24 graines the caract is only subdivided into 12 graines Therefor a caract of fynnes in everie ounce weight is worth tuo graines of that weight In the denier worth 2 primes In the graine worth 2 seconds and so dounwards as the silver; Againe if the caract ansuer to a denier in the ounce and a graine of fynnes to 2 graines in the ounce Then a pryme will ansur vnto tuo pryms etc. and a pryme in the denier to 2 seconds etc and so also vpwards and dounewards proportionallie.

vtter fynne silver or Allay, then it should contene if it wer of that standard or fynnes yow desyre it to be, which is done by takeing the difference of the fynnes or allay it is of, from what you desyre it to be; And for everie caract, denier, graine, pryme, etc, therof, and everie stonne, pound, ounce, denier, graine etc. of the weight of the Ingot given Accompting so much vtter fynne silver Gold or Allay respective conforme to the foresaids tables, which being found, if there be only one masse or Ingotte to be reduced; Then because that by how much the fyne metall Is found by this way of Accompt to be deficient in any Ingot by so much is the allay redundant therein et contra, and that in place of that fyne metall or Allay which is found to be more there must contrarlie be putt als much allay or fynne metall respective And that immediat conversione of the one into the vther is impossible and that the withdrawing of the redundant and substituteing of the deficient metall because changeable is not vsuall Therefore yee must not only adde so much of the pure metall or allay as is found to be deficient; but also als much more therof as may reduce that which is found to be redundant of the opposite fynne metall or allay respective (and which is not withdrawne) vnto the same standard and fynnes that is desyred of the wholle Bot if there be more Ingots to be commixed and reduced then one; Then adding together the differences of all the Ingots that are vnder or deficient into one; and the differences of all (how many soever there be either of the one or the vther sort) that are above or redundant, into ane vther soume; subtract the lesser soume from the greater; and so you shall know whether the wholle being commixed will be vnder or above the desyred standard or fynnes; and the remainder of that subtraction will be the difference how much; By the which difference (as if it wer of one masse or Ingot) yee must worke as of before And thir Rules will hold good generallie for all Accompts; for further cleiring whereof I will subjoine some instances of the Scottish Accompt

Suppose there wer ane ingote of 20 deniers fynnes and 15 ounces weight given to be reduced into the Standard of 11 deniers fyne now in respect the difference of fynnes is 1 denier vnder; And that 1 denier of fynnes in everie ounce weight is by the table worth tuo deniers of weight of vtter fynne silver, And that the ingote weighes 15 ounce Therefor the given ingote contenes fyftene tymes tuo deniers, that is 1 ounce 6 deniers fynne silver lesse and be consequence so much allay more than it ought to doe, being 12 deniers fynne, first then the deficiencie of the fynne silver must be mad good by the Additione of 1 ounce 6 deniers of fynne silver Then ther must be als much more fynne silver added as will reduce the redundant 1 ounce 6 deniers of allay (which remains still in the ingote not taken out) into the fynnes of 11 deniers which must be Eleven tymes 1 ounce 6 deniers that is 13 ounce 18 deniers of fynne silver, so in the haille there must be 15 ounce of fynne § 18. Of the silver commixed with the foresaid ingote to reduce the samine to the fynnes of 11 deniers <sup>degrees of</sup> purity.

And the Egre dient masse will weigh 30 ounces.

Suppose there were ane Ingot of 1 pound 6 ounces weight and of the fynnes of 11 deniers 6 graines given to be reduced to the fynnes of 10 deniers 2 graines The difference of the fynnes is 1 denier 4 graines above in the silver or deficient in the Alloy (note that it comes alwayes to the same thing to worke by the redundance of the one or deficiencie of the vther) The denier in the pound is worth 1 ounce 8 deniers and in the 6 ounces worth 12 deniers And the 4 graines in the pound are worth four tymes 1 denier 8 graines that is 5 deniers 8 graines, and in the 6 ounces worth 8 graines, which in the haille is 2 ounces 1 denier 16 graines more silver and lesse Alloy than should be The alloy is supplied by the additione of 2 ounces 1 denier 16 graines of alloy, and the redundant silver is reduced to the fynnes of 10 deniers 2 graines by the additione of  $\frac{4}{3}\frac{6}{2}$  thereof more of alloy which is 9 deniers  $10\frac{1}{3}\frac{2}{1}$  graines So in the haille there must be 2 ounces 11 deniers  $2\frac{1}{3}\frac{2}{1}$  grs of alloy commixed with the foresaid Ingotte to reduce it to the fynnes of 10 deniers 2 graines.

§ 19. Ruddiman, in his preface to Anderson's "Diplomatum et Numismatum Thesaurus," gives a table<sup>1</sup> to show how many numeral pounds, shillings, and pennies Scots have been coined at various periods out of the real pound weight of silver. Since this table was compiled much additional information has been made available and the results he gives require to be considerably modified.

He begins by assuming that from the year 1107 to 1296 the pound current was equal to the pound weight, or in other words, that 240 sterlings exactly balanced the standard of weight.

But it appears from the "Assise"<sup>2</sup> of David I. that the Scottish pound weighed fifteen ounces, or twenty-five shillings, or three hundred sterlings, and was equal to 6750 grains Troy weight. Consequently the pound with which Ruddiman commences his table was not the Scottish standard of weight, but the lighter English one of twelve ounces only.<sup>3</sup>

In a comparative statement of the value of the coin it would have been of little moment what unit of weight was chosen, so long as the same unit was preserved throughout. The rate of deterioration could have been equally well shown either with the English pound or

the Scottish pound. But it is evident that if one standard of weight is given at one time, and a different one at another, the true proportion is not preserved. And this is what has been done by the learned author above quoted. For in 1367 we find in the table that the pound weight of silver was coined into twenty-nine shillings and four pennies. And in an Act of the same year,<sup>1</sup> it is ordained that, “de libra ponderiis jam fiant viginti novem solidi et quatuor denarii numerales:” which is evidently Ruddiman’s authority for his statement. But the pound weight referred to in this Act was the Scottish pound of fifteen ounces, and not the pound of twelve ounces, which was never the standard of weight in the Scottish mint in early times. Ruddiman says,<sup>2</sup> “Dicendum ergo videtur Scotos, eo tempore in nummis pendendis libra Anglica, non sua, fuisse usos.” But this is entirely an assumption, not only unsupported by any evidence, but exactly opposed to the facts of the case. We know from original records that the Scottish pound was used in weighing money in the time of Robert Bruce,<sup>3</sup> and that the English pound was not in use in the time of James II.;<sup>4</sup> nor is there in any act or record anything to prove that it ever was, at any time prior to the Union, recognised as the standard of weight in the Scottish mint. And consequently the rate of deterioration is not truly shown by Ruddiman. For the same weight of metal which in 1367 was coined into twenty-nine shillings and four pennies, produced in the reign of Robert I. twenty-six shillings and three pence,<sup>5</sup> and in David I.’s twenty-five shillings. And the pound, which is given in the tables as producing twenty shillings in 1296, and twenty-one in 1329, produced in 1367, not twenty-nine and fourpence, but a fraction more than twenty-three shillings and five pence.

Again, in 1393, we find in the tables the value of the money coined out of the pound of silver set down as thirty-two shillings. But in the Act of 1393<sup>6</sup> it is ordered that “. . . de sex unceis Troye puri argenti viginti unus solidi erunt fabricati.” And if six ounces were made into 252 pennies, each ounce would produce 42; and therefore even the English pound of twelve ounces would be worth two pounds two shillings instead of one pound twelve; and the same weight of silver which in 1367 was coined into twenty-nine shillings and four pennies, in 1393 produced fifty-two shillings and sixpence; and consequently the rate of deterioration given in the table is altogether different from what it really was. It will be noticed that the expression in the statute is “puri argenti,” here meaning fine silver. There is reason to believe, as has been already noticed, that in David II.'s time the currency was baser than it had been before his reign, but Ruddiman gives the same standard of purity down to the time of James V., this circumstance cannot have affected his reasoning.

In 1424 we find in the table the value of the pound of silver set down at thirty-seven shillings and sixpence. But this would make the Scottish coinage of James I. equal in value to that of England, which it is known from the indentures of the English mint varied from thirty shillings the Tower pound in 1412 to thirty-seven and sixpence in 1464. That the Scottish coinage of this period was not equal to the English is evident from the objections made by the English Parliament. In 1390<sup>1</sup> the money of Scotland was reduced to one half in England; and this agrees with the values elsewhere indicated, for the pound of the Tower standard was coined in England at the same period into twenty-five shillings, while in Scotland it was struck into forty-two shillings. The remonstrances of the English Parliament were repeated in 1411 and 1415; and in 1423 all manner of Scottish silver money was banished out of the realm of England—an extreme measure which would never have passed if the money of the two countries had been equal in weight and fineness. Ruddiman probably founded his statement on the first money Act<sup>2</sup> of James I., which recommended that the king “gar amende the moné and ger stryk it in lik wecht and fynes to the moné of Inglande;” but, it is added, he is only to do this “quhen him lykis and thinkis it speidfull and profitable for the realme.” And the coins which have hitherto been assigned to this reign show conclusively that the recommendation was not carried out till 1451.

There is another reason for doubting Ruddiman's value at this period. In Nicolson's “Scottish Historical Library,” in the valuable chapter on coins and medals, frequent reference is made to a MS. note by Sir James Balfour on the prices of the money in Scotland.

The original MS. of this note is still preserved in the collection of Balfour's MSS. in the Library of the Faculty of Advocates at Edinburgh, and is here printed for the first time.

§ 20. Mint weights.

§ 20. There is no subject connected with the Scottish coinage more perplexing than the systems of Mint weights in use at different periods.<sup>1</sup> In the time of David I. the § 20. Mint “pondus Cathanie” was ordered to be used in all Scotland.<sup>2</sup> It has been conjectured,<sup>3</sup> weights. with great probability, that this pound was equal to the Veitzslo silver pound of sixteen ounces, weighing 6563 grains of the modern Troy standard.

At the same time, or shortly afterwards, another pound is recorded,<sup>4</sup> which was divided into fifteen ounces only, and weighed 6750 grains of the modern Troy standard.
 We are enabled to fix the exact weight of this pound with certainty, as it was founded on the weight of the wheat corn, thirty-two of which went to the sterling, and six hundred and forty to the ounce. How long this weight remained in use cannot be exactly ascertained, but in 1425,<sup>5</sup> in the “Assise de ponderibus” of the Parliament held at Perth, it was enacted that the “stane” should “contein xvj pundis Troyis,” and “ilk Troyis pund” should “contein xvj vnce.” The expression “libra continente sexdecem vncias ponderis de Troya” constantly occurs after this date.<sup>6</sup> This pound weighed 7560 grains of the modern Troy standard, and each ounce weighed 672 wheat corns, or 32 wheat corns more than the early ounce of David I. This ounce was thus  $7\frac{1}{2}$  grains lighter than the English ounce of 480 grains modern Troy.

The Scottish ounce was divided into 24 deniers, as appears from an Act of Council in 1565,<sup>7</sup> in which the third of the ounce is said to be equivalent to eight deniers. Each denier would thus be equal to 19.6875 grains modern Troy. These calculations are confirmed by a “Treatise on the Ancient Metts and Wechts of Scotland,” written by Alexander Huntar, and printed in 1624, in which he states that the Scottish stone, called the stone weight of Lanark, was made up of sixteen Scottish pounds; each pound contained two marks, each mark eight ounces, and each ounce 576 Scottish grains.

There is a probability that the Act of 1425 was only declaratory, and that the new system of weights had been introduced even before the reign of James I. But however this may be, it certainly was in common use immediately after. In 1552 the stone weight of Lanark is specially mentioned<sup>1</sup> in the Records of the Convention of Royal Burghs; and in 1578 it was more particularly ordered by the same body that each troy weight should “keip the just wecht of xvj unces for the pund conforme to the French wecht.”<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This has proved a most fertile source of error, as it has been generally assumed that the English standards were used in the Scottish Mint. As an example of this the remarks of Lindsay (p. 57) on the weights of the thistle dollars may be cited. The weight of the dollars as laid down in the Act agrees perfectly with the extant specimens.

In 1587 a commission<sup>3</sup> was given to sundry persons—among whom was Sir Archibald Napier, then General of the Cunyie House—to enquire concerning the laws and acts relating to weights and measures, and to make and establish a weight and measure to be common and universal among all the lieges for buying and selling. This commission reported that, having considered the ancient laws and Acts of Parliament anent metts and weights in bygone times, and among others the pound troy, and the stone proportionate thereto, they find that “maist wisely” the proportions and grounds of all these have been so established of old that each controls the other; and accordingly recommend that the same should be observed in all time coming. This was confirmed in 1607; and in 1618<sup>4</sup> another Act was passed for settling weights and measures, which provided “that there shall bee only one Just weight through all the parts of the Kingdome which shall universallie serue all his Majestie’s Lieges (by the which and no other) they shall buy and sell” . . . “to wit the Frensh Troys Stone weght conteneing sexteine Troys Pounds in the stone and sexteine Troyes unces in the Pound and the lesser weghts and measures to be made in proportion conforme thereto.” In 1621<sup>5</sup> and in 1625<sup>6</sup> other Acts were passed ratifying this and the Mint Act of 1686,<sup>7</sup> shows that these were the ordinary weights in common use then. They continued so till the Union, when the seventeenth<sup>8</sup> article of the Treaty provided that ever afterwards the weights and measures in use in England should be the standard for the United Kingdom.

Sir James Hope has some curious notes on the Mint weights as follows:—

Antwerpe by almost 32 Antwerpe graines The said 100 lb of Antwerpe is equall to 96 <sup>§ 20. Mint</sup> weights. Trose Scots weight, and to 93 kings Paris weight, and to  $94\frac{3}{4}$  lb Diepe or Burdeaux weight

Whence I gather

1. That the ounce Trose Scots is havier thant he said ounce of Antwerpe by 1 denier of 24<sup>grs</sup> preciselie

2. That the ounce Trose Scots wilbe lighter then the Paris kings ounce by  $18\frac{1}{3}\frac{1}{2}$  graines Scots, so that the Scots Trose pound wilbe lighter then the Paris kings pound by 12 den  $9\frac{9}{31}$  gr Scots

3 That the ounce Trose Scots wilbe lighter then the ounce Troy English by varie neere 8 graines But by the contract after specified its 10<sup>grs</sup> 19<sup>pr</sup> 6<sup>sec</sup> lighter

4. That the ounce Trose Scots will be lighter then the Diepe and Burdeaux ounce by  $8\frac{7}{31}$  grs Scots

5. That the Paris K. ounce is havier then the oz of Antwerpe by 1 den. 19 and almost ane halfe graine.

I find by contract betwixt his majestie K. Ja. 6 and Thomas Achesone Mr Coinyier in Scotland A°. 1604 that a lb weight Troy of England is reckoned equall to 12 ounce 5 den. 9 grs 18 pr Scotland Mint weight 20 Julie 1647.

Compaired the ordinarie French Trose weight vsed be our Marchands in Scotland which is ordinarlie marked with a fleure de lyce with the Troye weights of the Mint of England which are in the Warden Chist of the Mint of Scotland and wer sent home be K. Ja. 6 in A°. 1604. and finds 16 ounce Troy to weigh 16 oz 3 drope 6 graines Trose fleure de lyce weight, and 12 oz which is 1 lb Troy to weigh 12 oz 2 drope  $13\frac{1}{2}$  grs Trose weight forsaid. And seing the said lb Troy weighes 12 oz 5 den 9 gr. 18 pr. of the Mint of Scotland as by the aforesaid contract. It followes that 1 lb that is 16 oz Trose Mint weight of Scotland should be lighter than a lb that is 16 oz Trose fleure de lyce weight by 2 den 11 gr French. So also the oz Mint weight of Scotland should be lighter then the said French trose oz. by three gr 16 pr. 12 sec. French, and the oz Troy English havier then the said oz Trose French by 7 gr 3 pr. Trose French Compared also with the Deane of Gild's lb weight of Edr. which is marked thus  which I found to be 12 gr. Franch lighter then the said fleure de lyce lb. So that the lb weight of the Mint of Scotland is lighter then the Deane of Gilds lb by 2 deniers lakeing one graine, and so the oz by 3 pr, lakeing the 144<sup>pt</sup> of a graine or  $1\frac{1}{2}$  pryme but the Deane of Gilds lb was worne-like. Compared also the Deane of Gilds of Ed<sup>r</sup> 4 lb weight with the new 4 lb pyle marked with a fleure de lyce boght from J<sup>o</sup> Falconar Warden from Holland and found the fleure de lyce 4 lb lighter than the Edin<sup>r</sup> 4 lb by 2 drope large

More compared my brase round stone weight which I had justed, by the forsaid fleure de lyce 4 lb weight and I found it to be 12 drope lighter then the Dean of Gilds of Ed<sup>r</sup> stone weight; which evidenced the forsaid Edinburgh 4 lb weight to be worne light a drope More compared the forsaid round brasse stone weight (which I had justed as said is) with a new brasse stone pyle weight in the coinyehouse, and I found the said new pyle weight havier by almost halfe one oz

More that the iron tronne stone weight in my leadhouse at Leith is havier then 20 lb weight of Ed<sup>r</sup> Dean of Gilds weights aforesaid by  $4\frac{1}{2}$  oz

More in a little box in the Wairden's chist I found thir severall sorts of grains following

I found some marked A. which have beene mad be Johne Achesone Generall for the tyme,

I found vthers marked onely with points for the numbre of the graines or cyphers, with out any mark of Authoritie

I found vthers marked thus

I found vthers marked with a libbert and ane B which I suppose to have beene mad be Briot

I found vthers marked onely with points or cyphers for the numbre of the graines and a crowne; which compareing I found equall to these were sent me from London be under assayour in the Toure. By compareing I found the  graine havier than the graine marked with the crowne without the C by 21 droits.

Conforme to the aforesaid Contract there should be 12  $\frac{2}{3}$  Crownes or 5<sup>s</sup> St. peices of silver in the lb Troy so each crowne peice should weigh 13629  $\frac{1}{8}$  prymes, and so the halfe crowne 6814  $\frac{3}{8}$  prymes of the mint weights of Scotland The ounce both Scots and French are devyded into 24<sup>ders</sup> Everie denier into 24 g<sup>rs</sup> everie g<sup>r</sup> into 24 prymes everie pryme into 24<sup>sec</sup> Hence the once contains 13824 prymes So that if the French oz. or 13824 pr. § 20. Mint weights. be havier then the once or 13824 pr. of the mint of Scotland by 3<sup>gr</sup> 16<sup>pr</sup> 12<sup>sec</sup> or 2124<sup>sec</sup> French, and that the halfe crowne of silver by the aforesaid contract should weigh 6814  $\frac{3}{8}$ <sup>pr</sup> of the mint of Scotland. Then the same halfe crowne should weigh 6771 prymes Frenche weight or 11<sup>ders</sup> 18<sup>grs</sup> 3<sup>pr</sup> bot there is ane hudge great fraction, bot this is within one second for exactness. The 24 Julie Tryed deane of Gilds lb weight of Ed<sup>r</sup> which was marked  · I · P · B · with the aforementioned Frenche pound weight and fund the deane of Gild's lb weight lighter by twelve graines.

I Sir James Hope generall of his majesties Mint being requyred by the honourable Committie of Estaites to set under my hand the trew weight that the halfe crowne of silver should be according to the standard of this Kingdome doe declare that I find that by contract past betwixt his majestie of blessed memorie K. James the 6 and Th. Achesone M<sup>r</sup> of the Mint for the tyme dated at Whytehall the 16 Nov<sup>r</sup> 1604 the halfe crowne should weigh 6814  $\frac{3}{8}$ <sup>pr</sup> prymes of the mint weight or 11<sup>ders</sup> 19<sup>gr</sup> 22  $\frac{3}{8}$ <sup>pr</sup> and als that haveing examined the French pyle marked with the fleure de lyce amongst the weights now used amongst the marchands for the trew weights of this Kingdome, with standart weight of the mint doe find that the saids Frenche weights are heavier then our mint weights by two drope 13 $\frac{1}{2}$  graines in a pound Troy, and so one Frenche ounce will be havier then the mint once by 3<sup>gr</sup> 16<sup>pr</sup> 12<sup>sec</sup> and be consequence that the said halfe crowne should not weigh by the standard of this Kingdome above seiven drope and threttie graines  $\frac{1}{8}$  of the saids Frenche weights which I doe testifie be thir presents written and subscrved with my hand at Ed<sup>r</sup> the tenth day of Julie 1647.

The occasion of this was the rounge and clipped half crownes which came from England with our armie which wer now to be discharged to goe under their trew wight.

The declaratione just abone written did not satisfie, bot was sent backe to me by my Lord South Eske vpon Monday the 14 Julie to be more succintlie and cleerlie sett down for the Clerkes informatione anent the proclamatione which I did as followes

I Sir James Hope Generall of his majesties mint being requyred by the honourable Committie of Estaites to sett vnder my hand the trew weight that the halfe crowne of silver according to the standard of this Kingdome should weigh of the French weights marked with the fleure de lyce ordinarlie now vsed amongst the marchands for the trew weights of this Kingdome doe declare that efter comparatione made of the saids French weights with the mint weights I find that the said halfe crowne of silver by the aforesaid standard should not weigh of the aforesaid French or Marchand weights above seven drope and threttie graine and ane eight part graine so that the samine will fall to be leighter then the French halfe ounce about sex graines and that besydes two graines of remeid or allowance which I testifie by thir presents written and subseryved with my hand at Ed<sup>r</sup> the fourteinth Julie 1647. § 21. Tables

weights.

The following paper, from the British Museum collection, gives some information as to the agreement and difference between the English and Scottish currency at the time of James VI.'s accession to the English throne :—

XVI.—The [particular articles propounded by the Master of His Majesty's mint in England: The answer[s of the Mint] Master of Scotland and their agreement. 3 October [1604].

Cotton MSS.,
Otho E. X., fo. 241. (This MS. is injured by fire.)

Answers to the Articles particular . . . . .
underwritten.

Article 1. The difference in weight betwene the pound weight Troy of England and that of Scotland.

Answer. This cannot be knowne but by the counter peyzing the one with the other, quhilk shalbe don when you please/

Agreement.

Wee fynd the ounce English doth overpeyze the ounce Scottish viii graynes three quarters English, and after that rate xij ounce English doth overpeize xij ounce Scottish iiij peny weight ix graynes English.

Art. 2. The difference of the Standerds in the Allay of the gold and syluer monies as they are establisht.

Answer. The golde of Scotland is of 22 carrettes fine and the siluer of xj denie<sup>rs</sup> and xj ounce fyne.

Agreement.

Touching the difference in the fynesse of the moneys, wee fynde the six pound pece of Scotland to bee in Allay of xxij carrette fine, and equall in finesse with the Crowne gold moneis of England. The marke pece of siluer wee fynde to be ten ounces, xix peny weight at the assay . a peny weight wourse then thair standerd and one peny weight wourse then the monies of England; which after the computation of the Scottish accompt ryseth to tenne deniers xxij granes and a haulfe; which is wourse then the English money one grayne and a halfe, and wourse then their owne Standerd one grayne &  $\frac{1}{8}$  of a grayne Scottish.

The difference of the number of peces shorne in the ounce or pound weight according § 21. Tables to the severall Indentures./ of Mint weights.
Art. 3.

Six whole peces of golde, or of their halfes twelve; and of siluer fowre and a half-peece, Answer.
or nyne halfes and their quarters and other parts answerable therto are in our ounce./

Agreement.

. . . . . pride that six of the six pound peeces of Scottish gold fo. 241<sup>b</sup>.
Burnt away. . . . . weigh one ounce Scottish and yet by reason of the defect
. . . . . f weight of the ounce Scottish to the ounce English and that they . . . . . are shorne at sixe in the ounce, whereas the halfe Sovreign
. . . . . is shorne but at Five and a half and seaven graynes in the ounce English :
. . . the said half souarayne is better in true currant value then the said six pound
. . . pece by x<sup>d</sup> ob. very neare/.

The difference in the severall formes and stampes of the moneis currant in each of the Artic. 4.
said Relmes and how they hold in allay one with an other.

All the other money of Scotland is made bullion for making of the said spaces. Answer.

Agreement.

Towching the monies of Scotland wee are of opinion that the monies to be made currant in bothe the Realmes are to bee discribed with their printes plainly in the proclamacion for the better Informing of the people, and all other moneis of Scotland to be declared to be bullion.

The difference in true valewe from the severall Standerds forsaid by reason of the Artic. 5.
remedie allowed to be wrought upon in Scotland, which is not permitted in England.

As to the difference from the standerds by reason of the remedies : They are Answer. observed in Scotland as they are in England. So that in the generall assaies the money is found to kepe the standerd with remedies granted in both the countries.

Agreement.

Towching the marke peeces of Sylver of Scotland we thincke they may goe currant as they doe.

The difference in proporcion betwene fyne gold and fine Silver in each of the said Artic. 6.
Realmes.

§ 21. Tables of Mint
weights.
Answer.

The proporcion of fyne gold to fyne sylver in Scotland is as one is to twelve, and so in the rest, pro rata,/.

§ 22. Foreign influence on
Mint.

§ 22. It has generally been assumed that the Scottish moneyers imitated the English, and that the changes which took place in the Southern mint were always, or at least in the great majority of cases, followed in the Northern.<sup>1</sup> Though it might have been expected that in countries between which there was so much intercourse as England and Scotland,<sup>2</sup> the example of the larger and more wealthy would naturally be followed, it is nevertheless certain that the influence of the English mint on the Scottish one, has been very greatly overrated. This will be at once apparent by comparing the coins of each country current at the same time. It is true that the early sterlings of Scotland were equal in weight and fineness<sup>3</sup> to those of England, but they differed altogether in type. It is universally conceded that the moneyers during the reign of William the Lion were Norman-French, while the coinages of Alexander the Third, with the legend ESCOSSIE REX, were probably by artists from the same country. David II. employed Italian coiners<sup>4</sup> in his mint, and the coins of his reign, in consequence, compare favourably with any others current in Europe at the same period. In the reign of Robert III. there was an evident tendency to imitate the coinage of England. Before that period the king's head was in profile, not full-faced as in the coins of the English series. A curious reason for this is given by an old English annalist :—

“ Afore the fyft K. Henrey's day, Their silver coinage was as it ought to be,
The kyng's face looked on side all waye
To his sovereign (lorde) of England as I see.”<sup>5</sup>

The Scottish coins have chiefly mullets and stars on the reverse, while the English have pellets. Alexander the Third has DEI ERA on his coins, an example which was followed by England shortly after.<sup>6</sup>

But from this time down to the reign of James V. we cannot trace any direct foreign influence in the Scottish Mint. In 1527<sup>7</sup> a contract for the coinage was entered into with

Hochstetter and other foreigners, apparently Germans, and the gold pieces of 1539 and 1540 were acknowledged at the time to be the most artistic coins in Europe.

§ 22. Foreign influence on the Scottish Mint.

Many of the coins of Mary's reign were the work of French artists, and some of the dies were engraved in Paris.<sup>1</sup> In 1555, however, an Englishman (called "Misserwie" in the records) was mint master. During the regency of the Earl of Morton a Dutchman had a contract about the mint, but it does not appear that he had any hand in designing the coins.<sup>2</sup>

The last distinguished foreigner who influenced the coinage of Scotland was Nicholas Briot, a native of the Duchy of Lorraine. He first appears in 1626,<sup>3</sup> and was afterwards appointed to be the engraver<sup>4</sup> and master of the mint in Scotland. He was also chief engraver of the English mint. His pieces are very well struck, and were produced by improved mechanical processes.

At all periods foreign coins were legally current in Scotland. In many of the Acts of Parliament and Privy Council special values are laid down at which these were to have course. The following table will give some idea of the sorts and values of these coins:—

§ 24. The history of the Coinage of Scotland cannot be carried back to any very remote period of antiquity. There is no trace of an early Scottish currency, imitated like the early British, from the well-known coins of Gaul or Rome. If native moneyers were at work at all before the beginning of the eleventh century, we must look for their coins among the rude imitations of the Anglo-Saxon types often found in the Western Islands,<sup>1</sup> with legends either perfectly illegible, or so blundered as to baffle everything except conjecture.<sup>2</sup> David I. coined sterlings, and it is highly probable that his immediate predecessors had a silver currency. But the present appropriations to these earlier kings are far from being satisfactory, and we must await future discoveries before we can certainly affirm that any coins were minted in Scotland prior to 1124.

It may safely be assumed that in this country a native coinage was much later of coming into use than in either England or Ireland. But it is not altogether easy to account for this. Ruddiman<sup>3</sup> gives as probable causes the scarcity of precious metals and the want of skilled native workmen. Yet, on the other hand, it would seem from incidental notices scattered throughout the chronicles and annals that the country was far from being altogether deficient either in native art or in gold and silver. As early as 930 struck by the kings of the Hebrides have been shown by Mr Burns to have been most erroneously appropriated.

a silver shrine or case for containing the gospels existed at St Andrews, which is expressly stated to have been the work of Scottish artificers ;<sup>1</sup> and this would imply the existence of much more skill than was necessary for sinking the rude dies of the early sterlings. Nor were the precious metals by any means so scarce as has been imagined. Brudus is related to have sent considerable sums in bullion to the Saxon king Edwine.<sup>2</sup> Macbeth went at great expense to Rome, where his charity was conspicuous even in that city of wealthy pilgrims.<sup>3</sup> Malcolm Canmore was served in plate of gold and silver,<sup>4</sup> and by the treaty of 1091 twelve merks of gold, or ninety-six ounces, were paid to him by William Rufus.<sup>5</sup> Coins of gold are mentioned as current about the same period, but these were probably the "bezants" which were received all over Europe.<sup>6</sup> These notices show that if a native coinage did not exist prior to the time of Alexander I., it was not from any scarcity of the precious metals or from any want of native art.

The early Scottish historians give a much greater antiquity to the Scottish mints ; but their accounts have no historical value. Buchanan<sup>7</sup> says that Donald V. was the first who set up a royal mint in Scotland, and that the silver money was coined at Stirling from whence the word "sterling" came. Lesly<sup>8</sup> gives the honour of first establishing a currency to Reutha, who "nummus ex corio bubuli cudi jussit." Boethius<sup>9</sup> believes that Donald I. "was the first king of Scottis that prentit ane penny of gold or silver On the ta side of this money was prentit ane croce and his face on the tither." And the same author goes on to state that before the introduction of this coinage, "the Scottis usit na money bot marchandice quhen thay interchangeit with Britonis and Romanis . . . . except it was money of the said Romanis or Britonis : as may be previt be sindry auld hurdis and treasouris found in divers partis of Scotland with uncouth cunye."

In all probability the earliest attempt at a native gold coinage may be found in the circular pellets of that metal, slightly flattened on each side and marked with a cross and sometimes a star. At various times considerable numbers of these have been found in different parts of the country. In 1806 a hoard was found in Peeblesshire ; about forty were found together on another occasion in Lanarkshire. Some have been discovered in Forfarshire and others elsewhere. Two specimens now preserved in the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland are figured by Wilson<sup>1</sup> in his "Prehistoric Annals of § 24. Early history of the Scotland;" and he has no hesitation in pronouncing them to be "the primitive type of coinage. native minted currency." They weigh 4 dwt. 15 grs. and 4 dwt. 12½ grs. respectively, and though we have no evidence as to the time when they were used as money, it may be noted that they are nearly equal in weight to the "scillings" of gold, current in Northern Europe.

In many parts of the country thin discs of iron have been found in grave mounds, and some have supposed that these might have been intended for currency,<sup>2</sup> but this is doubtful. "Tres nummatus ferri" are mentioned in a charter of land granted to the monks of Paisley by Hose of Crageyn in 1170,<sup>3</sup> but no baser currency than fine silver was known till long after this time.

§ 25. In the early Scottish laws some regulations are found relating to money, but none that can be carried further back than the reign of David I. In his time offenders were punished more commonly by fines of cattle than of money, though pecuniary penalties are also mentioned. In the "Laws of the Four Boroughts"<sup>4</sup> various sorts of coins are mentioned. The brewer was to pay to the aldermen fourpence per annum for leave to brew; the merchant who had a covered booth in the market-place was to pay a halfpenny to the town; but if the booth was uncovered he was to pay only a farthing. The "forfalt"<sup>5</sup> of a burges was fixed at eight shillings. In the "Leges inter Bretos et Scotos" the "croo" for the slaughter of a king is fixed at three thousand "ororum aurearum." No native gold currency of this period is known, but a law of doubtful authenticity provides that "pro vulnere in facie vulnerans dabit unam peciam auri videlicet unam imaginem auri;" and it is certain from a grant made to the Abbey of Dunfermline<sup>6</sup> in 1153 of all the gold which should accrue to the king from Fife and Fothrif that this metal was current in some shape at this period. In the same code we find twenty-one pennies and two-thirds of a penny mentioned as the "croo" of the "newow of ane ogethearn." Among the uncertain fragments of ancient codes still extant, there is one which provides, "Quicumque falsam monetam fecisse probatum est manus ejus amputetur," or as it stands in the Scottish version:—"Qubatauer he be that makis fals mone and that be proffyt, his hand salbe schorn of, nocht anerly he that maid it, bot also he that had witting and he that tuk that mone knawand it was nocht guid, resawyt thyfft of a theff, ande tharfor he salbe punyst in sic lik maner as a resettour of thyft wisly stollyn thing.”<sup>1</sup>

We cannot consider this, however, to be earlier than the time of David I. That he coined extensively is evident from the comparatively numerous specimens of his coinage which are still preserved. It is probable also that foreign money was at this period in common circulation, for in the “Iter Camerarii”<sup>2</sup> among the points to be enquired by the “gret assys” occurs the following:—“Item gif thar be ony inbringaris of fals mone of ane other kynrik.” Large sums of money were most likely still paid by weight. Formerly, apparently, the mode of computation had been, at least in the southern parts of the country, by ores, but the ordinary mode of reckoning by shillings and pounds came, during this reign, into general use, and ever afterwards remained without alteration.

§ 26. Annals of the reign of William the Lion.

§ 26. In the reign of William the Lion we first find trustworthy evidence on the state of the coinage in Scotland. His coins are numerous, and the large sums mentioned in the chronicles show a great increase in the wealth and civilisation of the country. In 1186 Gilbert, son of Fergus, Lord of Galloway, offered Henry of England two thousand merks of silver as a yearly tribute.<sup>3</sup> Under the year 1189 we find the same sum mentioned by Wynton:<sup>4</sup>—

“Twa thousand marks of sic monè,
As oysed wes than in oure countrè.” . . .

In the “Chronicle of Mailros” it is stated that “Willelmus rex Scottorum dedit Recardo regi Anglorum x millia marcas auri et argenti propter dignitates et libertates ac honores suos quos habuit ante guerram et pro Berewic et Rochesburh quas Henricus rex per xvj annos violenter detinuit.”<sup>5</sup>

Shortly afterwards, according to the same authority,<sup>6</sup> William sent from Roxburgh two thousand marks as a contribution towards paying the ransom of Richard of England; and still later in the same reign the Scottish king agreed to pay the King of England fifteen thousand marks as compensation for the destruction of the castle of Tweedmouth, and for “procuring his friendship and fulfilling certain conventions between them.”<sup>7</sup>

the coinage:—"Willelmus Rex Scottorum innovavit monetam suam."<sup>1</sup> There is no doubt that this was what is now known as the second coinage of William the Lion.<sup>2</sup> It is mentioned by Wynton in his "Chronicle":—

"Of Scotland then the Kyng Willame Renew'd his monè then at hame."<sup>3</sup> . . . .

§ 26. Annals of the reign of William the Lion.

Three years after this there was a great famine in Scotland; and, according to Boece, a "modius of barley could hardly be purchased for five 'aurei.'"<sup>4</sup> Unfortunately, he does not state what he means either by "modius" or "aureus;" so the reference is of no historical value as far as money is concerned.

§ 27. The long reign of Alexander II. affords very scanty materials for the annals of the coinage. The chronicler of Melrose says that in 1247<sup>5</sup> there was a great recoinage and change of type in the national currency. Balfour<sup>6</sup> states that this was decided on in a Parliament held at St Andrews.

§ 27. Annals of the reign of Alexander II. 1247.

Though this is the only historical reference in this reign it has a very important bearing on the appropriation of the coins, bearing the name of ALEXANDER.

From the earliest period down to 1832,<sup>7</sup> it was generally believed by numismatic enquirers that the type of the long double cross sterlings<sup>8</sup> belonged to the reign of Alexander II., and that with the long single cross<sup>9</sup> to his successor. Lindsay<sup>10</sup> took a different view, and maintained that all the long cross coins, whether double or single, belonged to Alexander III. While fully admitting the almost insuperable difficulties which this arrangement presented, he adopted it, because he believed that the evidence of history could not be got over, and that it was clearly proved that the first change of type from the short cross was made in 1250. He cites four authorities in support of his view, the "Chronicle of Melrose," Fordun, Lord Hailes, and Sir James Balfour. The two latter derived their knowledge on this point from the earlier annalists, and cannot be considered as independent authorities. Lindsay's view therefore stands or falls with the statements of the earlier chronicles. And of the two original authors quoted it is singular that Fordun never alludes to any change of type in the coinage at all, while the "Chronicle of Melrose" directly

§ 27. Annals of the reign of Alexander II. 1247. contradicts Lindsay's view, and states most distinctly that the great "mutatio monete" took place in 1247, before the close of the reign of Alexander II.

It must be remembered that the "Chronicle of Melrose" is an authority of the very highest value, for it was written almost immediately after the events it narrates; and it may also be borne in mind that it had already mentioned the only other coinage in which a change of type took place. The only "mutatio monete" which was possible in 1247 was the substitution of the long double cross for the short double cross, and the former type is conclusively connected with the reign of Alexander II. by a curious fact which has not been hitherto noticed. Of all the early kings of Scotland, Alexander II. alone appears uncrowned on his Great Seal,<sup>1</sup> and the only Alexander who appears uncrowned on the coinage, is the Alexander on the obverse of the short and also of the long double cross sterlings.<sup>2</sup> Thus the evidence of history, far from supporting Lindsay's arrangement, completely confirms the former appropriation, and clearly shows that the long double cross type belongs to the reign of Alexander II.<sup>3</sup>

The only authority for Lindsay's statement is the Abbot Bower, who, alluding to the great coinage at the commencement of the reign of Alexander III., falls into the mistake of supposing that it was the first in which the long cross was used.

§ 28. Annals of the reign of Alexander III. 1250. § 28. At the commencement of the reign of Alexander III. a new coinage was struck.<sup>4</sup> In the Scotichronicon<sup>5</sup> it is said that in 1250 "moneta etiam Scoticana renovatur." This was, in all probability, from the reasons stated above, the well-known single cross coinage, in which the single cross passed for the first time through the legend.

In 1253 it is stated, in the Chartulary of Moray, that one mark was paid for the risk of conveying twenty marks from Badenoch to Berwick; <sup>6</sup> a sufficient proof of the lawlessness of the times. Macpherson, in his "Annals of Commerce,"<sup>7</sup> says that Alexander III., in 1278, coined pieces of two pence; but this is very doubtful, though a large coin of Alexander is figured in a MS. in the British Museum.<sup>8</sup> Under the year 1283 a very interesting reference occurs in Wynton's "Chronicle":—

 the reign of Alexander III.

There is no reason to doubt the fact here recorded. It is alluded to in the Scotichronicon,<sup>2</sup> and is referred to by Ruding as a proof that the power of striking money was granted by the monarch publicly.<sup>3</sup> In 1284 Scottish money was permitted to be current in England at its full value. 1284.

§ 29. From this period to the commencement of the reign of David II., there is almost an entire blank in the records of the coinage. For nearly seventy years we have little or no historical trace of what was done in the matter of money. No Acts of Parliament relating to the coinage have been preserved, nor any records of the mint, nor any accounts of the moneyers; nor are there in the annals, chronicles, and historical documents which are still extant, any notice or reference throwing further light on this obscure period.

§ 29. Annals of
 the reign of John Baliol
 and Robert I.

But though no historical evidence is at present available, it is evident from the coins that remain, that considerable coinages must have taken place. The pennies and half-pennies bearing the name of John<sup>4</sup> are comparatively numerous, considering the length of his reign; and though no difficulty, or doubt exists, as to their appropriation, there are several points on which it would be of the highest interest to have some light thrown by history. The mint of St Andrew's appears for the only time on the coins of this king (with one doubtful exception),<sup>1</sup> and is the only mint which is named in this reign. The word QIVITAS <sup>2</sup> also is peculiar to this reign, and due probably to some English moneyer, though we cannot say so with certainty. That Robert the Bruce struck money is admitted by every one, and it might have been expected that such an important proof of the national independence, and the establishment of the Scottish sovereignty, would have been noticed by the annalists. But such is not the case, and, with the exception of a clause in the English Statutum de Moneta, in 1292,<sup>3</sup> permitting the currency of Scotland to pass in England, and a note of the diminution in the currency between the time of David I. and that of Robert I., there is, in the meantime, no historical reference whatever, to illustrate the numismatic history of the reigns of John Baliol and Robert Bruce. There is no doubt that many of the original records which might have been useful for this period were taken away by Edward I. In the inventory of documents carried off to England there are entries of various papers and accounts relating to the moneyers which, had they been preserved, would doubtless have thrown considerable light on the affairs of the mint.

It is somewhat surprising that Edward I. did not coin money in Scotland. But though there has ever been a tradition that he did so, no satisfactory proof has as yet been obtained of it. An English sterling has been appropriated to Haddington, but it is now known to have been a misreading for RADINLY.<sup>4</sup> Another penny of Edward, long supposed to have been struck at Stirling, was in reality only a poorly preserved specimen of the Newcastle mint, in which the last syllable of NOVICASTRI and the first of VILLA came together, making STRIVILL, the rest of the legend being obliterated.

§ 30. Lindsay, in his "View of the Coinage of Scotland,"<sup>5</sup> states that the first parliamentary Act of the reign of David II. relating to money was passed in 1347. The statute which he gives of that date was not, however, passed till 1357; and the earliest recorded notice of the coins of this reign is found in a proclamation made in England in 1355<sup>6</sup> forbidding any one to receive Scottish money except "ad verum valorem ejusdem." The reason for this prohibition is given in a precept directed by the English king to the Sheriff of Northumberland of the same date,<sup>7</sup> in which it is stated that the money lately coined in Scotland was less in weight and coarser in alloy than the old money of that realm. Of this coinage (which was probably the sterlings now generally known as the first coinage),<sup>1</sup> no other record has been discovered.

§ 30. Annals of the reign of David II.

Two years after this the parliamentary Acts, erroneously given by Lindsay in 1347, were passed. The first of these, dated at Scone in November, prohibited the export of money without the payment of a duty of half a mark on every pound weight of silver, and the second<sup>2</sup> permitted the money of England, both gold and silver, to be current in Scotland at its true value. 1357.

During the reign of David II. a very great improvement may be observed in the style and workmanship of the coinage, and the position and privileges of the officials of the Mint were for the first time legally established.

A charter was granted by the king to Adam Tor, a burges of Edinburgh, of the privilege of exchange in Scotland.<sup>3</sup> A grant of privileges was also given to the officials of the Mint, exempting them from all duties and contributions whatever, with the right to decide pleas and complaints in their own courts. Though the original of this grant cannot now be found, it is constantly referred to in instruments of a later date, and in the ratifications of privileges granted to the master and officers of the Mint.<sup>4</sup> Up to this time there is reason to believe that no silver coin larger than the sterling had been issued.<sup>5</sup> In the Act of November of this year, "nostra moneta" is defined as "sterlingi," and in the agreement made for David's ransom in 1358, it is stipulated that the payment is to be "in sterlingis vel in moneta auri in Anglia jam currente."<sup>6</sup> From the Exchequer Rolls<sup>7</sup> it is evident that a very considerable coinage took place at Edinburgh at this period, but there is nothing in the record to indicate what sort of coins were issued. Adam Tor is mentioned as the "custos monete," and there are entries of sums paid for repairing the residences of the moneyers, and for providing tools for their use.

The following year David II. visited England, and if any reliance can be placed on the statements made by Knyghton,<sup>8</sup> petitioned Edward to allow the money of England and Scotland to be current interchangeably in both countries on equal terms. This request was granted because, as the annalist states, of the great humility of the King of Scots, 1358.

1362. The Exchequer Rolls<sup>1</sup> of this and the preceding year still show extensive coinages 1364. going on at Edinburgh by Adam Tor, and in 1364 he rendered his account of receipts and expenses at Stirling before commissioners specially appointed for the purpose.<sup>2</sup> The seignorage due to the king from the coinage for the three and a half years immediately preceding the date rendering of the account, at the rate of seven pennies from each pound of silver minted (except during the last month, when the rate was eight pennies), amounted to five hundred and seventy-seven pounds, ten shillings, and twopence. Mention is made in this roll (as also in that of 1358) of Bonagius the moneyer, who received a payment for various designs made by him for the dies of late coinages, of "Magister Jacobus," of Johannes "aurifaber," and of Nicholaus, also described as "aurifaber." These moneyers were all of Italian origin, and the beauty of the coins of this period, and the excellence of their workmanship, bear ample testimony to the talents of the artists. "Magister Jacobus," described elsewhere as Jacobus Moulakyn, and Jacobus of Florence, had a charter from the king of the Cunyie house and its liberties along with Adam Tor.<sup>3</sup> His brother (probably the Nicholaus mentioned in the same Roll) was employed in the Mint at this time, though afterwards he appears to have been employed in England.<sup>4</sup> Bonagius was also a Florentine, and probably some relation of the Franciscus Bonagius whose name appears in the Records of the Mint at Florence as "sententiator moneta argenti" in 1324.<sup>5</sup> He was long connected with the Scottish Mint, and his name, or perhaps that of a son, occurs so late as 1393. Lindsay falls into an error in stating<sup>6</sup> that he was a moneyer of Robert II. in 1364, as David II. then occupied the throne.

1366. In May of this year an Act was passed which is erroneously given by Lindsay as enacted in 1365.<sup>7</sup>

Ruding<sup>8</sup> places this Act in 1347, though one of the authorities he quotes (Snelling, p. 5) correctly states that it was passed in 1366. Cardonnel also gives a wrong date. Coinages of "Magister Jacobus" were noticed, and a new one was ordered to be equal to the current money of England in weight and fineness, on which a notable sign was to be placed to distinguish it from the other coinages already struck ; and the Chamberlain and Master Moneyer and workmen were to agree as to the fees. § 30. Annals of the reign of David II.

In October of this year the king issued a precept,<sup>1</sup> following on an enactment by Parliament the month before, addressed to the "Custos Monete" and the "Monetarius," commanding the pound of silver to be coined into twenty-nine shillings and fourpence, but declaring that the coinage was to be of the same fineness as the last one, or that of England. From every pound coined, seven pennies were to be taken for the king's seignorage ; one for the Custos for his fee; and eleven for the "Magister Monetarius" and the workmen in the Mint. 1367.

In spite of these enactments, however, it would appear that neither this coinage nor the former one was equal to the English ; for in this year, in consequence of so much light money being brought into England, proclamation was made that no money of Scotland should be current there, and that no one should pay or receive any money of the Scottish mint.<sup>2</sup>

Two years after, it was ordained that every one taking money, or gold, or silver out of the kingdom, without paying a duty to the king of forty pennies in the pound, should forfeit for every penny so taken, twenty shillings.<sup>3</sup> 1369.

§ 31. At the commencement of the reign of Robert II. an Act was passed by the Parliament assembled at Scone in March 1371,<sup>4</sup> requiring the payment of certain duties (similar to those of the Act of 1369) by the exporters of money out of the kingdom. In this year we find from the Chamberlain Rolls<sup>5</sup> that Andreas Pictor was "Custos Monete" at Edinburgh. § 31. Annals of the reign of Robert II.

A proclamation was made in England in 1372,<sup>6</sup> which is very interesting, as it mentions for the first time Scottish gold.<sup>7</sup> It prohibited any one from receiving Scottish gold or silver money except as bullion, and ordered that if any should be found after a certain date, one-half was to be forfeited to the king, and one-half to the finder. If this does not refer to the nobles of David II., it implies a coinage of gold by Robert II. much earlier than has hitherto been supposed. Lindsay<sup>8</sup> considers that up to 1385 no gold was coined by this sovereign ; but this distinct mention of Scottish gold in the 1372.

1373. In this year Thomas de Stratherne was "Custos Monete" at Perth, and Andreas Pictor at Edinburgh; and from their accounts, still preserved in the Exchequer Rolls, it appears that, both this year and the following, considerable coinages took place.<sup>1</sup> But it is also evident that no improvement was made in the standard, for an English proclamation of this date<sup>2</sup> ordered fourpence of Scottish money to be equal to threepence English, and the same proclamation was made again the following year at Berwick.<sup>3</sup>

1376. The Commons of England petitioned at this time to be relieved from the burden of returning forfeitures of Scottish money to the Exchequer.<sup>4</sup> Shortly after this, the connection of Jacobus Mulekyn with the Scottish Mint probably ceased; for in 1377 a present of money was made him by the king, which is duly entered in the accounts.<sup>5</sup>

1381. A coinage probably took place not long before this, as in the informations which were taken previous to the passing of the English Act of this year (and given by Ruding),<sup>6</sup> a new and evidently very light Scottish coinage is referred to.

1385. An Act of the Scottish Parliament was passed in June of this year,<sup>7</sup> which authorised a new coinage to be issued similar to the former one.

The price at which various foreign gold coins were to pass was also fixed, and the Act closes with even more stringent provisions than usual for preventing the export of money out of the kingdom.

1387. In this year again the money of Scotland was proclaimed in England, and the former valuation of one-fourth less than the nominal value more strictly enforced.<sup>8</sup>

In the Parliament held at Scone in March 1389,<sup>9</sup> one of the articles recorded relates to the matter of money, but nothing further has been preserved.

This closes the reign of Robert II., during which the money of the realm was gradually depreciating in value.

In 1393 a very important Act was passed at Perth, in October, which is interesting as § 32. Annals being the first Act extant which authorised a gold coinage, and also for the full account of the reign of given in it of the duties of the officials, and the general working of the ancient Scottish Robert III.
mint.<sup>1</sup> A silver coinage was also ordered, of which the groats and half-groats were to be as fine as those of David, but the pennies and halfpennies were only to be viii<sup>d</sup> fine. 1393.

In the reign of David II. we have the first mention of the "Custos Monete," or warden; and also of the "Magister Monctarius," or master coiner. This Act of 1393 defined the respective duties of these officers, and provided, in the first place, that Bonachius of Florence should make the money; and next, that some one, "discretus fidelis sufficiens et potens in diviciis," should be elected as warden of the mint, who should be sworn to perform truly his duties; and these were, to accurately and carefully weigh all the gold and silver which was brought to the moneyer to be coined, and to take and keep an account of the same. Every evening, after the day's work was over, he was to receive the coining-irons, with which the moneyers struck the money, and was to keep them in safe custody, under lock and key, till next morning. And he was to receive the money which was made each day from the moneyers, and was to place it in a coffer (cista) under seal and key; and every week, in the presence of sufficient witnesses, he was directed to take a note of how much, both gold and silver, had been made during the week, and was to select certain pieces, which were to be well and truly kept until a trial was made of them, which trial was to take place within forty days. And the warden was responsible for the correct weight of money coined, and was to receive from the king the fees which had been customary. And if the warden, or the person appointed to examine the money, or the moneyer, should fail to do their duty, or if they made false money, or used such, or permitted it to be used, they were to be punished as the law directed; nor had the king himself power to grant to such any pardon or remission of their sentence.

The Act of 1398<sup>3</sup> was passed at Perth in the month of March. After enacting certain values for the foreign gold coins, it specified the various gold coins which were permitted to be current. Among those enumerated are Lions and Half-lions.<sup>4</sup> The Lion is probably the coin ordered by the Act of 1393, as it is there called "de bono auro una pecia vocata Leo;" but that Act contained nothing about any coinage of Half-lions. It mentioned "maillies," 1398.

and ordered them to be current at a given value. Some of the Lions usually appropriated to Robert II. correspond very closely in weight with what the half of the Lion of 1393 ought to be, and as these must have been in existence then, and cannot be included under any of the other gold coins mentioned, the probability is, that the expression "Half-lion" covered all these smaller gold pieces of Robert II. and III., even though their weights may not have exactly corresponded; and this conjecture is strengthened by the fact that in the list of values given—though the Lion is fixed at five shillings—no sum is specified for the Half-lion, which was left to be regulated by the weight. Indeed, the weights of these earliest gold pieces are most perplexing, scarcely two being alike.<sup>1</sup>

1398. Some time about this period a charter was granted to Thomas the Moneyer, appointing him Master of the Office of Coining. Whether this Thomas was the Thomas Melvill who had also a charter to the same effect along with Galfour Goldsmith in the same reign is uncertain.<sup>2</sup>

1401. The Commons of England again enacted, in this year, that the money of Scotland should only have the value of the amount of good metal contained in it, or else that it should be "voided out of the realm."<sup>3</sup>

1402. During the reign of Robert III. a billon coinage was introduced into Scotland. This word is derived from the French, and, according to one authority, included all silver below xđ fine;<sup>4</sup> according to another, all below vid fine.<sup>5</sup> The pennies and halfpennies of 1393 were only viiiđ fine, but others are found which are much baser, though no record exists of their coinage. In this year we find mention of base "halfpennies"<sup>6</sup> of Scotland, in a petition from the Commons of England quoted by Ruding.<sup>7</sup> Lindsay mentions,<sup>8</sup> as a proof that Robert III. coined billon, the notice of these coins in 1406, the first year of James I., and rightly conjectured that they were struck in the reign of his predecessor, but he has omitted to note this mention in 1402, which was three years prior to the death of Robert III. The introduction of this base coinage provoked remonstrances from the English Parliament, who petitioned that the importers of this base money should be liable to capital punishment, which was not, however, granted. These remonstrances were repeated in 1411, 1415, and 1423.<sup>9</sup>

§ 33. The first parliamentary Act of this reign relating to the coinage was passed in 1424.<sup>1</sup> It gave power to the king to strike money equal in weight and fineness to the coinage of England when he considered it profitable for the country. It is doubtful whether this recommendation was given effect to. The terms of the statute imply that the coinages of this reign, from 1406 to 1424, had been below the standard of England. There is no doubt that these were the fleur-de-lis groats;<sup>2</sup> and it is likely that, in spite of the Act of 1424, the same type continued, with some slight varieties, to the great recoinage in 1451.

§ 33. Annals
James I.

In 1425 another Act<sup>3</sup> prohibited the export of money, and provided that any one discovered offending should forfeit the money and pay ten pounds besides.

Two of the moneyers' accounts of this reign are preserved in the Register House. The first<sup>4</sup> was rendered at Linlithgow on the 4th of June of 1434, by Robert Gray, master moneyer, and noticed coinages both of gold and silver, without giving any particulars as to the sorts of coins. The other<sup>5</sup> was rendered at Stirling in 1435, and also mentions gold and silver coinages, but states that the silver was minted into groats, and that, besides, there was a considerable coinage into small money (in minuta pecunia). No half-groats of the fleur-de-lis type have ever been discovered, and this small money was, in all probability, the fine billon pennies and halfpennies<sup>6</sup> of which large quantities were minted in this and the succeeding reign.

In 1436 provision was made by Parliament<sup>7</sup> for supplying the mint with bullion, by ordaining that the exporters of merchandise out of the country should pay in certain specified amounts of silver to the master of the money; and at the same time the export of jewels, gold and silver, coined or uncoined, was prohibited.<sup>8</sup> 1436.

Towards the close of the year, on the night between the 20th and 21st of February, the king was murdered at Perth by Sir Robert Graeme. For the five months preceding his death, extensive coinages had been going on, but the accounts were not rendered till 1438.<sup>9</sup>

The absence of any documentary evidence prior to 1424 renders the appropriations of this reign to some extent uncertain. There is evidence from the records that gold was coined in 1434, 1435, 1436, and there is every probability that earlier coinages took place. has led most numismatists to assign them to James I., and Anderson thinks this was the only gold coinage of his reign. But a contemporary account, quoted by Pinkerton,<sup>1</sup> states that James I. offered a reward of “iij<sup>m</sup> demyies of golde every pece, worth half an Inglis nobil” to whoever would slay Sir Robert Graeme; and as the trial of the Pix in 1438<sup>2</sup> mentions gold coins, “vocatis vulgariter dimyis,” it is thus evident that a considerable number of the lozenge lions<sup>3</sup> (which were long known as “demies”) must be assigned to James I.

There is no record of any coinage of St Andrews<sup>4</sup> at all, and the workmanship of the type usually assigned to this reign is evidently of the same period as the groats of 1451.

§ 34. The first record of this reign is an account<sup>5</sup> of Robert Gray, moneyer, which is divided into two parts; the first beginning at the 12th September 1436, and ending on the 24th December 1437; and the second extending from that date to the 18th July 1438. According to Lindsay's view, the whole of the first period, and a part of the second, belonged to the reign of James I., whereas really only that part which extends from the 14th of September to the 20th of February 1436, can be appropriated to that king. In other words, the relative proportions of time given to each king are just reversed; the whole period of twenty-two months being divided by Lindsay into five months to James II. and seventeen to James I.; while it ought to be seventeen months to James II. and five only to James I.

It is recorded in the Chamberlain Rolls<sup>6</sup> that in July 1438 a trial of the Pix took place at Edinburgh, in which all the money struck by Robert Gray, both in the previous and the present reign, was carefully tested in the presence of special commissioners, and found to be true and good. Thomas de Cranston was then the Warden of the Mint.

This year, on the 2d September, Robert Gray rendered his account<sup>7</sup> at Stirling of all the bullion coined by him from 23d June 1440 to the date of the account. From this it appears that 1 lb. 8 oz. of gold was coined into demies (“in dimidiis”) at Edinburgh, 26 lbs. 11 oz. of silver into groats, and 16½ lbs. of silver into pence and halfpence. The duty payable to the king was 16s. for each pound of gold, 5s. 4d. for each pound of silver coined into groats,<sup>8</sup> and 5s. for each pound coined into pence and halfpence.<sup>9</sup> It will be observed that half groats are not mentioned. Lindsay has alluded<sup>10</sup> to the amount of silver pence and halfpence mentioned in the account of 1436–38, and another considerable coinage of these smaller coins is again recorded in this account. Between December 25, § 34. Annals 1437, and July 1443, 89 lbs. of silver were struck into pence and halfpence at the of the reign of Edinburgh Mint alone; and it certainly seems surprising that so few should have come James II.

down to us. 1443.

amounts coined in the different years. In 1449 the first parliamentary enactment<sup>2</sup> on the 1449.
subject of money during this reign was passed at Edinburgh in the month of January. It refers to an "act" made some time before by four and twenty commissioners specially appointed for the purpose of looking into the regulations for the supply of bullion, and of considering the "new straik" to be made. Unfortunately no trace of this "act" can now be discovered, though in all probability it did not take effect till 1451, as Robert Gray's last account was rendered in 1450, with the usual charges and duties, while in 1452 new moneyers and new duties will be found. This Act of 1449 also contained the important provision that no one in time to come was to be allowed to strike money without the authority of the king under the great seal.

On the 21st July of this year Robert Gray and John de Dalrymple for the last time 1450. rendered their account<sup>3</sup> at Edinburgh of the gains and expenses of 1 lb. 14 oz. of gold coined into demies, and 54 lbs. 2 oz. of silver made into groats, between 7 September 1448 and the date of the account.

In all these accounts the "gain to the king" is at the same rate, viz., 16s. for each lb. of gold, 5s. 4d. for each lb. of silver when coined into groats, and 5s. when coined into small money; but it will be observed that immediately after the passing of the Act of 1451 the rate is considerably lower in the silver coinage.

The Act of 1451 is very important, and is headed in the original record, "The advise- 1451.
ment of the Deputies of the thre Estatis touching the mater of the money, etc."<sup>4</sup> It begins by providing for a new coinage of groats (at eight to the ounce), with half-groats, pence, halfpence,<sup>5</sup> and farthings in proportion. The course of the old coinage and of foreign coins was fixed, and a new gold piece called a lion was ordered, to be equal in weight to the half English noble.

The pennies minted by the king's moneyers were allowed to be current till the new ones were issued. Among the moneyers mentioned were Robert Gray; John de Dalrymple, sen. and jun. ; and Alexander Tod. The John Spethy, whose name does not occur in the Rolls, was probably moneyer at some of the other mints of which, though the coins are preserved, the records are now lost.

1451. It was also provided that trusty men should immediately be sent to collect all the old coining irons, and also the letters of graving from the gravers, and these were to be destroyed in presence of the king and his council, and new ones given out within the Mint. The Act closes with some provisions for the payment of obligations incurred during the time of the course of the old moneys. Balfour<sup>1</sup> says that in this Parliament the king raised his money from 5s. the ounce to 8s., and the gold from £3 to £4, 19s.

1452. In the next Parliament,<sup>2</sup> held at Edinburgh in August 1452, an Act was passed ordering the English penny to have course for three Scottish ones, until the next meeting 1453. of Parliament. The following year a new moneyer, John Laundale, rendered an account at Stirling on the 19th June of his gains and expenses since 17th May 1452.<sup>3</sup> No coinage of gold is recorded, but 338 lbs. 12 oz. of silver were minted into groats and pennies. An important difference occurs in the seignorage, which is now stated to be 2s. 8d. per pound, instead of the 5s. 4d. formerly invariably found in the accounts. Though no gold is accounted for by Laundale, it is evident that some must have been coined,<sup>4</sup> for in a memorandum it is stated that the auditors of the Exchequer delivered to Alexander Naper, Provost of Edinburgh, on the day preceding the rendering of the account, "vij assais of gold xxxiiij grotis of xij<sup>d</sup>. grotis and j<sup>d</sup>. in a lokfast box quhilk was of the assais of siluer and of gold syn the xvij day of Maii the year M<sup>o</sup>cccc lii." This and the following gold coinages were probably the Lions ordered by the Act of 1451, though the denomination of the coin is not stated.

About this period a great amount of forged money seems to have been current. Certain false coiners are mentioned in the Act of 1451, and the towns where they carried 1455. on their operations are specified. In 1455 another Act<sup>5</sup> was passed, to hold good for three years, ordering that whoever arrested a false coiner was to receive ten pounds from the king, besides the forfeiture.

1456. A Parliament<sup>6</sup> was held at Edinburgh in October 1456, in which several provisions about the money were enacted. The new groat in particular was ordered to pass for 12<sup>d</sup> notwithstanding that the Act of 1451 fixed it at 8d. ; and it was forbidden, on pain of death, for any coiner to strike either “demies” or “sixpenny groats.”

§ 34. Annals of the reign of James II.

The following year certain lords were nominated by Parliament in the month of March<sup>1</sup> to convene in the next place where the “chekar” might be held, to commune upon the matter of the money, and in the meantime the striking of money was ordered to cease until other provision should be made for it. Immediately after this Alexander Tod rendered his account at Linlithgow of all the money coined by him from 15th November 1456. He accounted for 10 $\frac{3}{4}$  ounces of gold and 201 $\frac{1}{2}$  ounces of silver.<sup>2</sup> As it is not stated to have been struck at Stirling, and as Robert Gray’s name does not appear again, possibly Tod may have been transferred to Edinburgh.

At Perth, on the 20th of July 1459,<sup>3</sup> the same moneyer gave in his account of the coinages from August of the preceding year. Four ounces of gold were minted, and 270 lbs. of silver were struck into groats, and 204 lbs. 12 oz. of silver into small money (“in minuta pecunia”).

No other notice relating to the coinage is found in the reign of James II. The bursting of a cannon at the siege of Roxburgh Castle in 1460, put a sudden and unexpected close to the life of a prince who had done much to correct the abuses under which the country suffered.

§ 35. Five years elapsed before any notice occurs relating to the money. In June 1464<sup>4</sup> Alexander Tod accounted for the coinage of 12 lbs. 2 $\frac{1}{2}$  oz. of gold, but the denomination of the coin is not stated. As will be afterwards seen, mention is made of gold coined in this reign “in Scutis.” As both “Rydaris” and “Unicornys” are also specially named in subsequent accounts, it is difficult to say what coinage is recorded here. A similar difficulty occurs with the silver coinage in this account. Three hundred and eighty-five lbs. fourteen oz. of silver were struck “in grossis duodecim denariorum et sex denariorum,” for which the seignorage was twopence the ounce.

§ 35. Annals of the reign of James III. 1464.

The coinage “in minuta pecunia” given in this account is very considerable, 94 lbs. 4 oz. being struck in pence and halfpence. The seignorage on the small money was fixed at 1s. 4d. per lb., or half only of that payable for the groats and half-groats.

In the minutes of the Parliament of 1464<sup>5</sup> certain provisions were made for bringing in bullion, and 4s. 9d. per ounce was fixed as the price to be paid by exporters of wool, &c., who were obliged to bring a certain amount of bullion to the Mint. The "lew" was proclaimed to 14s. 4d., and searchers were appointed at every port to prevent the exportation of the moneys.

1465. In July of this year Alexander Tod rendered his account,<sup>1</sup> from 14 June 1464, at Edinburgh.

This account differs only in the quantities, from that last noticed. Four lbs.  $6\frac{3}{4}$  oz. of gold were struck; 69 lbs. 13 oz. of silver into 12d. and 6d. groats; and 66 lbs.  $12\frac{1}{2}$  oz. of silver into pence and halfpence.

1466. The next Acts about the money were passed by the Parliament<sup>2</sup> assembled at Edinburgh in October 1466. In the first, a penalty of ten pounds was imposed on any who should take money out of the kingdom, besides the forfeiture of the money. Provision was also made for the trial and punishment of any "clerkis" who might be guilty of this offence. The second provided that the exporters of wool or hides out of the kingdom should receive for every ounce of silver 4s. 7d., but that the exporter should bring two ounces for every "sek" taken out of the country. The last Act provided for the coining of copper money, which was to go at the rate of four to the penny. Though no coins exactly corresponding to the type given in this Act are known, there is little doubt but that the small copper coins<sup>3</sup> (usually called halfpence) were struck at this time, and under the authority of this Act. Three thousand pounds were ordered of this coinage; and the rest of the money, both gold and silver, was to pass at the current rate except the new groat of Edward of England's coinage, which was ordered to be current for ten pence, and the new English rose noble, which was to pass for twenty-five shillings; and the lords appointed by Parliament were to have power to make what rules they might deem proper about the sixpenny groat of the fleur-de-lis.

The moneyer's account<sup>4</sup> from 3d July 1465 to 18th June 1466, rendered at Linlithgow by Alexander Tod, shows a coinage of 17 ounces of gold, 10 lbs.  $14\frac{3}{4}$  oz. of silver in groats, and 121 lbs. 13 oz. in small pennies and halfpence. The duties, &c., were similar to the former accounts. In reference to the expression now found in the accounts "in minutis denariis," there is a statement by Pinkerton<sup>5</sup> that the penny was so diminished in this reign that it could not be cut into halves and quarters for small change, so billon farthings were introduced. This may refer to the copper money of four to the penny authorised by the Act of 1466. Black money (cona nigre monete) is for the first time mentioned in this account. No quantity is specified (or the sort of coin), but it is stated to have been made by an agreement entered into between the king (with consent of the Council) and the moneyers.

§ 35. Annals of the reign of
James III.

In June 1467 George Grinlaw, Warden of the Mint, rendered the account<sup>1</sup> of Alexander Tod at Perth, for the year from June 1466. Twenty-three and a quarter ounces of gold were struck; 9 lbs. 3 oz. of silver were issued in groats, and 53 lbs. 15 oz. in small pennies. No change occurs in the other provisions.

In October a Parliament<sup>2</sup> assembled at Edinburgh, and certain lords were appointed to prepare the articles and to look to the matter of money. More especially they were deputed to determine how many English, how many Scottish, and how many black pennies<sup>3</sup> were to be taken in the pound, and to fix the values of the English pennies and of the groats of the crown. The result of this commission is embodied apparently in the Act of 1467, which fixed the values of all the various coins, foreign and native, then current. All were raised in value except the white Scottish penny and halfpenny, which were to have course as formerly.<sup>4</sup> The black pennies were no longer to be issued, and as loss and annoyance had been caused throughout the kingdom by the continued change in the value of money, it was further enacted that payment of debts, contracts, &c., entered into before the passing of that Act, were to be made of the same value as the money was before the Act was passed, and that all obligations made in the past, which contained payments to be made in the usual money of Scotland, were to be paid as the money had course at the time of the passing of the Act.

In January of the same year a Parliament<sup>5</sup> was convened at Stirling, and Acts were passed raising the groat of the crown to fourteen pence and the half to seven pence,—the same values which were fixed by the Act of the preceding year. The old English penny was fixed at 4d., and the new penny of Edward IV. at 3d. The white Scottish penny was to have course till the next Parliament. Lindsay<sup>6</sup> erroneously attributes to this Parliament an Act which was not passed till the following year.

<sup>3</sup> These were probably the copper coins mentioned in the "Chronicle" at the end of Wyntoun. They had course originally for halfpennies, and the larger sort (now called placks, plate iv. figs. 1, 2) for three-pence. They were recalled in 1482.

§ 35. Annals of the reign of

In the Parliament of 1468, which assembled at Edinburgh, fourteen commissioners, chosen from the prelates, the barons, and the commissioners of burghs, were appointed for the articles and the money.<sup>1</sup> They recommended certain provisions which were embodied in an Act of the same year. The Act is given, but not with accuracy, in Cardonnel's Appendix, and Lindsay says that two shillings' worth of farthings, instead of three, were allowed to be taken in the pound. This Act is interesting as giving a list of the "Scottis money, that is to say, the demy, the lyone,<sup>2</sup> the grot of the croune and the grote of the flour de lice and the small pēny and the fardyng;" and all these were to pass at the rate they went at before October 1467.

At Edinburgh, on the 22d of June, Alex. Tod and William Goldsmyth rendered their statements from 2d June 1467, and accounted for the profits arising from the coinage of 2 lbs. 3½ oz. of gold, and 83 lbs. 13½ oz. of silver.<sup>3</sup> From a memorandum in the account it would appear that by this time the black money had been reduced in value, as a sum of £45 was allowed the moneyers to make up their loss. The reduction seems to have been one half, as it is stated that at the commencement of the coinage the small black coin had passed for one halfpenny, but afterwards it was reduced to a farthing. The Act of October 1467, it will be remembered, ordered the coinage of the black money to cease, and the Act of 1468 shows that the black halfpence were then current only at half value.

1469. In the Parliament<sup>4</sup> of this year certain provisions were made against bringing in any foreign black money into the country.

1471. A commission<sup>5</sup> was again issued to certain prelates, barons, and commoners to consider the importation of bullion, the keeping of money in the realm, and the course it ought to have. From the Act of May 1471,<sup>6</sup> it would appear that these commissioners had not arrived at any determination, for the arrangements were delayed till next Parliament, though the "new allayed groat" of 7d. is reduced to 6d., and its half in proportion. What this coin was, is not satisfactorily settled. It was to run at very nearly the same value as the groat of the fleur-de-lis, and yet is called allayed, as if it were of billon. Lindsay<sup>7</sup> considers that it was equal in value to the half of the crown groat.

1473. In July of this year Parliament<sup>8</sup> assembled at Edinburgh and passed certain Acts continuing the current values of the various coins, forbidding the further coinage of the § 35. Annals of placks and new pennies, and providing for the appointment of commissioners to see the reign of whether they contained five shillings of fine silver in the ounce as had been ordered by the James III.

king. From a MS. of Sir James Balfour's in the Advocates' Library it appears that the price of silver at this time was 12s. the ounce.

In May 1474<sup>1</sup> Parliament again met at Edinburgh and passed an important Act, 1474.
which is not noticed by Lindsay. After fixing the amounts of bullion to be brought in by the various exporters of wool, hides, salmon, &c., the Act continues—"And because the matter of the monè is ryt subtile and gret and may not haistely be set, It is thot speidfull that the three estates commit their power to certane wyse and discret personis to the nowmber of x or xij to awise and set the course of the monè and to devise new monè as thai think maist expedient." That these "discret personis" did devise a new groat is probable from the tenor of the Act<sup>2</sup> passed at Edinburgh the next year, which ordered groats to be 1475.
coined, twelve to the ounce, "of the samyn prent that the new grote is now," and of the same fineness as the new English groat. The other money Acts of this Parliament prohibited the melting of any coined money whatever, and raised the course of the current gold. The only Scottish coins mentioned, are the "Demy," of which the value is fixed at 13s. 4d., and the "Scottis crowne," also fixed at 13s. 4d. Lindsay<sup>3</sup> thinks the latter is the same coin as the lion (mentioned along with the demy in the Act of 1467 and elsewhere). Sir James Balfour's MS. in the Advocates' Library says that in November of this year the ounce of silver was at 11s. 8d. and the gold at £6. As neither "Unicorns" nor "Scottish Riders" are mentioned, they had probably not yet been struck, though from the entry about the latter in the moneyers' roll of the following year it is evident they were in circulation in 1476, when Alex. Levingston and Thomas Tod rendered their account<sup>4</sup> at Edinburgh. 1476.
For at that time they accounted for the profits and expenses of 13 lbs. 5 oz. of gold coined "in scutis et novis denariis vulgariter dictis Rydaris;"<sup>5</sup> of 273 lbs. of silver coined into groats, "et in dimidiis grossis novis;" and of 140 lbs. 8 oz. of silver coined into small pennies. With regard to the gold coinage it is evident that two sorts of coins were struck, part of the coinage being "in scutis," and the rest in Riders. The question therefore arises, What were the gold coins called "Scuta?" In the later accounts of the same reign, there is distinct mention of gold coined into Unicorns. It is therefore not likely that two names would have been employed in the public accounts for the same coin, and, besides, the shield is not so prominent on the unicorns as on some of the other gold coins. The discovery of this record shows that the appropriation of the Riders to James III. is beyond any question.<sup>1</sup> Half-groats of the Edinburgh mint are very rare, yet we have here a very considerable coinage of them, and apparently more than one type, as they are described as the new half-groat.

Two years after this, King James III. caused a very fine medal in gold to be struck and sent to the shrine of John the Baptist at Amiens. It is particularly described by Du Cange in his "Traité Historique du Chef de St Jean Baptiste."<sup>2</sup> It weighed nearly 2 oz., and was  $2\frac{1}{3}$  inches in diameter. On the obverse was a beardless king with long hair, throned, and holding in one hand a naked sword, in the other a shield with the arms of Scotland; on the canopy above the throne, in Gothic letters, the legend IN MY DEFFEN; above the canopy, VILLA BERWICI. The legend is in Gothic letters—MONETA NOVA JACOBI TERTII DEI GRATIA REGIS SCOTIÆ. On the reverse is St Andrew on his cross, with the usual legend, SALVVΩ FAC POPVLVΩ TVVΩ DOMINE. This remarkable medal was stolen during the first French Revolution. It was apparently the work of some artist of the Mint at Berwick, which was in operation<sup>3</sup> during this reign.

In the month of June the Scottish Parliament<sup>4</sup> passed an Act which is not given either by Cardonnel or Lindsay. It began by stating that the money, both of the realm and of other countries, having course therein, having been taken away and melted into bullion to provide for the coinage ordered by last Parliament, great inconvenience and damage had resulted. For which reason the several Acts relating to the import of bullion and the keeping of money in the realm were to be put into "sharp execution," and in the meantime, until a sufficient quantity of bullion was gathered into the country, the king ordained that all coining and striking of money, "golde siluyr gret or small" should cease; and the coiners were forthwith to deliver up their coining-irons; and as soon as sufficient bullion was collected, the king, with advice of his Council, was to make regulations for the weight, fineness, and value of the gold and silver money, and was also to appoint a warden and master of the Mint to see these regulations properly carried out. This Act shows that between 1474 and 1478 an extensive recoinage had been ordered, but apparently not issued.

Later on in the same year<sup>1</sup> the lords of articles were again recommended to look into the matter of the money. § 35. Annals of the reign of James III.

In 1482 Cochrane, Earl of Mar, the unworthy favourite of the king, was hanged over the bridge at Lauder. Permission had been given to him, as the chronicles relate,<sup>2</sup> to strike base money, which were called "Cochrane placks," and this was one of the principal charges brought against him. Proclamation was made immediately after his death calling it in.<sup>3</sup> This coinage was probably the billon placks and black halfpennies (afterwards reduced to farthings). They are referred to in the chronicle at the end of Wyntoun, and are there said to have been made of copper, and the placks to have been current for three pennies. The Acts against exportation of money were ordered to be put in force. 1482.

In February 1483<sup>4</sup> Parliament ordered a piece of gold to be struck of the weight and fineness of the rose noble; also the one-third and two-thirds parts of it; and a groat of silver, ten to the ounce, and of the same fineness as the old English groat, which was to pass for 14d., with a half-groat corresponding. And the king was authorised to select a wise man for warden of the Mint, to assay the gold and silver. And the warden and coiners were to have the same fees they had in the two preceding reigns; and the seignorage to the king was likewise to be the same. 1483.

Lindsay<sup>5</sup> doubts whether this Act was ever carried into effect, and it is certain that no gold coins of the weight of the rose noble have as yet been appropriated to this reign. He seems to think, however,<sup>6</sup> that the silver coinage took place, though the Act of 1485 (omitted both by Cardonnel and Lindsay), which recapitulates word for word the Act of 1483, renders it likely that the coinage did not take place at least for two years, and even then, as is apparent from the moneyers' account, not exactly in terms of the Act. After ordering a new coinage of gold and silver,<sup>7</sup> the Act provided for bringing in bullion, and ordered one ounce in every forty of silver to be minted into small pennies. The duties of the warden of the Mint were also particularly specified. The latter part of the Act referred to the coinage of placks and half-placks, and directed that all the money should have course as formerly ordained. Heavy penalties were directed against transgressors. This Act is of great importance for the billon coinage of this reign. 1485.

The placks last coined were called in, and a new coinage of groats ordered by an Act<sup>1</sup> passed in May 1485. The following record relates to the change of value of the black money at this time:—

1486. Counterfeit black money appears to have been largely in circulation at this time, and was so well made that detection was almost impossible.<sup>3</sup>

1487. On the 18th of August 1487 Thomas Tod and Alexander Levingston presented their accounts<sup>4</sup> from the 7th of October 1486. The gold coinage amounted to 8 lbs. 1 oz., issued in unicorns;<sup>5</sup> and the silver to 181 lbs. 1 oz., issued in 14d. groats and 7d. half-groats.

The Parliament that assembled at Edinburgh in January passed some important Acts<sup>6</sup> that are not noticed either by Cardonnel or Lindsay. The king was recommended to appoint one responsible master of the money instead of two, as had formerly been the case; reseters of false coin were to be punished in the same way as false coiners; and the Acts against the exportation of money were ordered to be put in force.

the reign of
James IV.

§ 36. In October 1488 the first Parliament of the reign of James IV. was held at Edinburgh, and an Act<sup>7</sup> was passed ordaining a fine piece of gold to be struck of the same weight and fineness as the rose noble, with the  $\frac{2}{3}$  and  $\frac{1}{3}$  parts thereof. Of this coinage no specimen is now known, and possibly it was never issued. The same Act authorised the coinage of a new silver coin to be equal in fineness to the old English groat; ten of these were to be in the ounce, and they were to have course for fourteen pence. Thirty of these groats were to go for the largest of the gold coins above mentioned.<sup>1</sup> The king was to settle what device and legend were to be on these, and he was also authorised to appoint Alexander Levingston as Moneyer and James Crichton as Warden of the Mint, who were to perform the same duties and have the fees that had been authorised in previous reigns. Provision was also made for keeping up the supply of bullion, for making a yearly trial of the pix, and for keeping an annual account of the amounts coined in each year. It was also enacted that all other money should stand at the former rate.

the reign of
James IV.

In January of the same year another statute<sup>2</sup> was made about the money, which authorised the coinage of a gold coin to be of the weight, size, and fineness of the French crown, and to be current for fourteen shillings. The coin is minutely described in the Act, though no specimen has as yet been recorded. The description is interesting, because the word "quartus" is added on the obverse to the king's name—the first occurrence of a descriptive numeral in the Scottish series, with the exception of an uncertain penny of Alexander. The reverse of this piece was to bear the legend, "SALVVQ FAD POPVLVQ TVVQ DOMINE."

The silver coinage ordered by this Act was to have the same weight, standard, and value as that authorised by the previous statute; but the king's face was to "stand-cywyn" in the present issue. The usual provisions for the supply of bullion and for carrying out more strictly the former Acts, were again enacted.<sup>3</sup>

It is very unfortunate that in this reign we have very little recorded about the coinage except in the Acts of Parliament. As has already been stated, it does not always happen that the coinage, authorised and described by a particular Act, was immediately issued. For the actual issue, the moneyers' accounts are much better authority, but none of these have as yet been discovered belonging to this reign.

In the following year two statutes were passed at Edinburgh<sup>4</sup> relating to the coinage. The first provided that the Acts of the last Parliament were to be put into execution; and the second that all who traded in gold or silver coin, were to suffer a year's imprisonment, and forfeit all their goods to the king.

Towards the close of this year another Parliament was convened at Edinburgh in February, in which the former Acts about bullion were continued. The Lords of the Articles thought<sup>1</sup> it expedient that a Master of the Mint should be appointed who should print money for the use of the lieges. Groats of the same weight, fineness, and value as those already specified were to be coined. The coiners were to pay 11s. 6d. per ounce for "burnt" silver, and the same rate for Paris work and for the new work of Bruges; but for Scottish work of less fineness, the value only of the silver was to be paid for. And should any doubt arise as to the amount of silver, two goldsmiths were to be sworn to examine it, and their award was to be binding on both parties. The new groats were to be equal in weight and fineness to the Edward groat (of England), and were to have some sign of difference to distinguish them from the first coinage. No money was to be refused on the ground of being cracked or flawed, if it was of true weight and good metal.

About this time a great quantity of cracked or flawed money must have been current, for several Acts are found referring to it.

1491. In 1491 the Act of 1487 was again enforced<sup>2</sup> as far as it referred to cracked coins, and it was ordered that any one refusing a cracked, but otherwise good, gold coin should forfeit the value of it.

A curious document<sup>3</sup> of this date fixes the values of the Scottish current gold coins at the following rates, viz. :—

Rider	.	.	.	.	=	23s.	Scots.
Unicorn	.	.	.	.	=	18s.	„
Crown	.	.	.	.	=	13s. 4d.	„
Demy	.	.	.	.	=	13s. 4d. to 14s.

1493. Two years after this another Act<sup>4</sup> was passed about the trouble caused by the refusal of the gold coins "of our soverane lordis prent" on account of their being cracked.

The names of various moneyers are given in this Act—Gilbert Fish, who was apparently at Berwick, and probably issued money in the preceding reign; the late Levingston and John Curroure. With the exception of Levingston, whose name occurs in the rolls of James III., no record has as yet been found relating to the others.

Cardonnel gives an Act in his appendix,<sup>5</sup> under the year 1494, which is not found in the records of that date, but it occurs in 1496,<sup>1</sup> repeating the necessity of the king's § 36. Annals of appointing "ane famous and wise man" to be moneyer, who was to see that all the former the reign of Acts were put in force. Churchmen were again interdicted from taking money out of the James IV.

 kingdom.<sup>2</sup> In 1496 and in 1497 coinages of pennies and of unicorns are noticed in the 1496.
 Lord Treasurer's accounts.<sup>3</sup>

A period of several years now elapses before any mention of the money was made in 1503.
 Parliament. In 1503 James IV. married Margaret of England, and in the contract of marriage<sup>4</sup> we find that £2000 sterling of English money equalled £6000 Scots of the money now current in Scotland. In March of the same year a Parliament was held at Edinburgh, and several enactments<sup>5</sup> were passed about the coinage.

The Acts and statutes lately made for retaining money within the kingdom were ordered to be put in force, as well as those for bringing in bullion. The following note shows that a coinage took place about the end of this year:—"2 January 1503 Item for MSS. Gen. Reg.
 the cunye Jrnis and the punschionis of the samyne brocht hame be Johne Pennycuke and Ho deliverit to Matho Auchlek xl. ti."

 A coinage of small money and placks is noticed in the Treasurer's accounts at this 1504.
 time.

Between August 1506 and September 1507<sup>6</sup> a considerable coinage of silver took 1506.
 place, but the issue is not specified; and during the same period a large coinage of gold was struck, the metal for which was obtained by melting down French crowns.

In August 1508 the account<sup>7</sup> shows a coinage of silver amounting to above 40 lbs. 1508.
 weight of bullion, but without any further particulars. The coinage of gold for the same time amounted to 16 lbs. 3½ oz., but there is no indication of what sort of coin was struck.

In the year preceding August 1512 a coinage of 12d. groats is recorded in the 1512.
 Treasurer's account,<sup>8</sup> and also another coinage into "plakkis,"<sup>9</sup> the metal for which was obtained by melting down certain silver vessels. Twenty-three links of gold of the great chain "domini regis" were melted down and struck "in le unicornis."<sup>10</sup>

1514. In this year Adam Boyd was appointed "Wardane principale and Keper of the Kingis Cunyie Irnis."

1515. On the 23d of June the matter of the money was brought before the Council,<sup>2</sup> but because it "is wechty and greit and requires grete avisement," it was deferred till the meeting of Parliament.

1517. Two years after this, means were taken to detect the false placks, which were current in great numbers.<sup>3</sup> A special permission<sup>4</sup> was given to Bertoune, the comptroller, to coin 80 ounces of gold into Unicorns; and the Earl of Arran was allowed to coin 30 ounces of gold "of the mynd" of the same fineness as it was got without any alloy.

1518. In March of this year, the "Irnis of the Unicorne" were delivered to the treasurer in order to coin 50 ounces of gold into Unicorns, to "be of the wecht of the Auld Unicorne," and of the fineness of the gold of the mine.<sup>5</sup> But because the keys were lost and the said irons could not be got, another minute appears on the Books of Council, authorising the locks to be broken open and new ones made.<sup>6</sup>

1519. In the following year another authority, in similar terms, was given to James, Earl of Arran, to coin 50 ounces of gold.<sup>7</sup>

It would thus appear that Unicorns were coined in the reigns of three successive sovereigns, though, as the same dies were used and the same weights kept, it is impossible to distinguish this later issue. There is even some reason to suppose that a coinage of Unicorns took place during the minority of James VI.; for it is stated that in the Regent Morton's time a golden basin of the capacity of four English quarts was presented by him to the King of France filled with coins called unicorns;<sup>8</sup> both the basin and its contents being made of the native gold of Scotland.

1523. In 1523 Queen Margaret applied for permission to coin money—gold and silver; but this was refused.<sup>9</sup>

In August of the following year an Act was passed which is not found in any of the published collections. It is preserved in the State Paper Office (Hen. VIII., vol. ii. No. 63),<sup>1</sup> and provided that certain French money, "sous traçentes and karolusis," being alloyed with copper, had course in the country; and as it was thought expedient that no alloyed money should pass current in the kingdom except at a competent price, it ordained the "sou" and the "traçent" to go for five pence the piece, and the "karolus" for four pence and no more. In the same Parliament, "ye Scottis Crowne of we<sup>t</sup>" was to go for "xviij s," and "ye Scottis demy" for "xviij s," and the other money as before. § 37. Annals of the reign of
James V.

On the 16th November another Parliament<sup>2</sup> was convened, and the Archbishop of St Andrews, the Bishop of Aberdeen, and the Earls of Arran and Argyll were appointed to look—inter alia—to the striking of money. A penny of gold and another of silver were to be coined, if the aforesaid lords should find it expedient. Native gold was to be used.

In 1525 the Lords of the Secret Council authorised<sup>3</sup> a new coinage of gold and silver, viz., "ane crowne of Gold and ane grote of silver." This crown<sup>4</sup> of gold is what is generally now called the "Ecu" of James V. It was to pass for twenty shillings, and nine were to be made out of the ounce of gold of 21½ carat fine. The groat was to be x d fine, and eleven<sup>5</sup> of them were to be in the ounce, and they were to pass for 18 d. 1525.

About this time the Pitscottie Chronicle<sup>6</sup> tells us that "the Earle of Angus . . . caused stryk cunyie of his awin, to witt ane grot of the valour of xvij d. quhilk efterwards was callit the Douglas Groatt." An entry in the Treasurer's accounts,<sup>7</sup> of date 17th August, shows a coinage between 25th June and said day, which, in all probability, was the one referred to above. At this time the price<sup>8</sup> of native gold was seven pounds the ounce; and the seignorage due to the king was twenty-five shillings on the coined ounce of native gold, and eighteen shillings for each pound weight of coined silver; and the price of the ounce of fine silver was seventeen shillings.

Edinburgh, was appointed, either personally or by deputy, to search and apprehend in all parts of the realm, any one exporting money. He was to have for his pains one-half of the money escheated; the other half was to go to the king.

In November of this year Parliament<sup>1</sup> sanctioned the agreements entered into between Arch. Douglas and James Acheson, goldsmith, burgess of the Canongate.

Another enactment<sup>2</sup> provided that "feigners and counterfeiters" of our sovereign lord's money should be severely punished; and all provosts, baillies, &c., were to search for and apprehend forgers of the coinage that they might be punished.

1527. In the following year the "Cunyie hous" was erected at Edinburgh; and a formal contract<sup>3</sup> was entered into between the king and Joachim Hochstetter about the coinage.

In the Lord Treasurer's accounts<sup>4</sup> several entries occur about this period of profit arising from money; but as no particulars are given, the coinages cannot be specified.

1532. In May of this year Parliament<sup>5</sup> ordained that, with the view of keeping gold and silver coin within the realm, the former Acts made for that purpose were to be put into sharp execution.

1535. In June 1535 another Act<sup>6</sup> was passed for the same purpose. It was ordered that searchers should be appointed at the various ports to see that none exported money from the realm. Certain commissioners were also authorised to consider and decide on the whole question of the coinage. Walter Grott was at this time Keeper of the Mint.<sup>7</sup>

1538. Alexander Orrok of Sillebawby was appointed Master of the Mint in 1538, and immediately afterwards an entry in the Treasurer's account for 1539<sup>9</sup> shows that the famous Bonnet Pieces<sup>10</sup> (or "Braid Bonnets") were first issued. The whole piece was to be current for three merks,<sup>11</sup> or forty shillings; the two-thirds for two merks, and the one-third for one merk. These coins were of admirable workmanship, and equal to any of the period in Europe. They were minted of native gold<sup>12</sup> from Craufurd Moor and

In the following year several statutes<sup>1</sup> were passed forbidding the export of money, and providing punishments for those who counterfeited the coins of the realm, and for those who took money for changing gold. 1540.

In the account<sup>2</sup> rendered in August 1542 (from September 1541), one hundred and fifty-nine ounces "auri Scotici" are entered as being coined during that period into Ducats. The date 1541 or 1542 does not occur on the Bonnet Pieces, though this entry shows that they were coined in these years. The Register of the Privy Seal contains the appointment of Philip Quidheid as "comptor warden" of the Mint in this year; and James Achesoun, the master coiner, having refused to coin "babeis,"<sup>3</sup> now commonly called placks, Richard Wardlaw and Richard Young were appointed in his place, but were not able to perform the contract, and it was again given to Achesoun.<sup>4</sup> These "babeis" (or bawbees) were first coined at the close of the reign of James V., and were so called from being coined of very base metal (bas billon). Another account derives their name from the mint master of the period, the Laird of Sillebawby.<sup>5</sup> They were only iii ð fine, and sixteen weighed an ounce. The author of the Hopetoun MS. states that they were coined owing to the wars and consequent scarcity of money.<sup>6</sup> 1542.

The first date which occurs on any coin of Mary's reign is 1543, on the rare gold piece,<sup>8</sup> with the legend, ECCE . ANCILLA . DOMINI. Of this coinage the only record is found in the Hopetoun MS.<sup>9</sup> It was xxiii carat fine, and each piece was current for twenty shillings. The Ecu, or Abbey Crown,<sup>10</sup> of this reign was also issued about the same time.<sup>11</sup> Bishop Nicolson mentions<sup>12</sup> that Mr Sutherland—the founder of the collection of Scottish coins now in the National Museum of the Antiquaries of Scotland at Edinburgh—had seen a pattern of this coin, similar in size and weight to the pattern Ecu<sup>13</sup> of James V. now in the collection; but this piece is not now known to exist. 1543.

At this period it appears, from an indenture preserved by Rymer,<sup>14</sup> that one English pound was equal to four Scottish pounds; for in a contract entered into between Henry VIII. and the Earl of Lennox in 1544, it is expressly declared that 6800 merks Scottish were to be held equal to 1700 merks sterling money of England.

One of the causes of the comparative scarcity of the native coinage during this reign will be found in the quantity of French and other foreign money which was authorised to be current in the country.

1545. As early as 1545 we find from the Record of the Privy Council<sup>1</sup> that foreign money was to be a legal tender at the following rates, viz.:—The “testoon” of the King of France for 5s. 6d.; the “sous” for 6d.; the “carolus” for 5d., with the parts in proportion. Shortly afterwards<sup>2</sup> the double ducat of Spain was to have course for forty-eight shillings. And it is curious to observe that while every encouragement was given to facilitate and authorise the coinage of France, an exactly opposite course was observed in the case of England.

In the same year and month<sup>3</sup> it is minuted that the “new Inglis grote of England callit the grote with the braid face is tane universale for xvij d. Howbeit the samyn grotis ar nocht siluir, and ar fals for the mare part,” wherefore they were forbidden to have any course in the country.

In this year William Hamilton was appointed Master of the Mint, with all the powers, privileges, and emoluments which belonged thereto.<sup>4</sup>

Base English money was prohibited in this year by an Act of the Lords of Council and Session.<sup>5</sup>

1547. The Privy Council met at Glasgow on the first of May of this year, and ordered that the “bagcheik groat,” which at the time was current for sixteen pence, should in all time coming have course for twelve pence only.<sup>6</sup>

Immediately after this<sup>7</sup> a coinage of twelve stone weight of silver was ordered to be struck into pennies and halfpennies, “of the syes and wecht of the penny past of auld in this realme.” Although these are called “pennies” in this record, it is probable from the entry in the Hopetoun MS.<sup>8</sup> that the coinage consisted of “babeis.” Penny was frequently used in a general sense for any piece of money.

1548. From an entry in the Treasurer’s accounts it appears that twelve hundred pounds were received in 1548, “a Willelmo Hamilton de Sanchoire milite pro proficuo cone sibi

In July 1550<sup>2</sup> the Lord Governor and Lords of Privy Council declared that it should be illegal for any one to give or receive clipped French billon money under the pain of death and confiscation of goods. 1550.

These warnings against light foreign money are repeated more than once in the minutes of the Privy Council.<sup>3</sup>

The effect of these proclamations was to make people refuse to take any "sous" or "caroli" at all, and in consequence a further order was made making it highly penal for any one to refuse "sous" or "caroli" or other such money that will "nocht pas throw the Ryng maid and deuisit thairfor."<sup>4</sup>

In December 1551<sup>5</sup> the King of France having paid the wages of his soldiers in Scotland in "sous," "half sous," "caroli," and "liards," the same were refused by the common people, and not taken in payment of the accounts due by the French soldiers, for which reason it was ordained by the Lord Governor and Lords of Privy Council that the "sous" was to pass for sixpence, the "half sous" for threepence, the "carolus" for fivepence, and the "liard" for three-half-pence, provided always that twelve of the "sous" were equal to the ounce weight. 1551.

On the 11th January<sup>7</sup> the Lord Bishop of Ross was hastily sent to France, and a minute of the Privy Council provided for melting down and coining articles of silver plate for his expenses, and ordered the Lord Treasurer to deliver up the printing irons of the "babeis" to the master coiner, who was to mint the bullion into "babeis" notwithstanding any Act to the contrary. A similar order in favour of William, commendator of Culross, appeared a few days later.<sup>8</sup> In this year the Lion and half-lion of gold<sup>9</sup> were minted. The Lions were to weigh 4 deniers, and were current for 44 shillings. Permission was given to Nicholas Emery to engrave, in Paris, the dies for the jetton with the initials of Mary and the Dauphin which has often puzzled numismatists<sup>10</sup> The testoons<sup>11</sup> of this year were to be current for four shillings. No half testoon is mentioned.

In 1554 the Privy Council authorised a new base coinage<sup>1</sup> to be called "Lions,"<sup>2</sup> now commonly called "Hardheads." The Privy Council Record says that thirty-two of these were to weigh an ounce, while the author of the Hopetoun MS.<sup>3</sup> states that twenty-eight only were to be in the ounce. In December of this year the portrait pennies<sup>4</sup> of the queen were minted. They were coined at the instance of the French ambassador, who got all the profit by the queen's command.

About this period it appears that John Misserwie,<sup>5</sup> described as "Anglus," was employed in the Mint. The author of the Hopetoun MS. states that he was appointed master coiner, and that he minted testoons<sup>6</sup> from January 1554 to February 1555 of ix ð fine to pass for 5/ and to weigh six deneirs. Some of the gold portrait Ryalls<sup>7</sup> of 1555 were also minted by him, and they are described in the Hopetoun MS. apparently from the original register now lost. They were to be xxij carat fine, six deneirs in weight, and to pass for three pounds. The portrait had been taken in Paris in 1533.

In October 1555<sup>8</sup> something appears to have gone wrong, for there is an entry of fifty shillings charged for the keep of "Misserwry Inglis man" for twenty days before his committal to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh; and after this date his name does not occur in connection with the Mint.

Lindsay<sup>9</sup> gives, in the first supplement to his "View of the Scottish Coinage," an extract from the Register of Privy Council, which is preserved in the Advocates' Library. This provided remedies of weight and fineness for the coinage of the gold Ryalls, with the portrait and date 1555, 1557, 1558. The silver coins were to be xi ð fine instead of ix ð. These must be the testoons of 1556-1558.<sup>10</sup>

Bishop Nicolson<sup>11</sup> says that the name "testoon" was not applied to the silver coins till the beginning of the next reign; but on the 23d December 1555, an entry in the Treasurer's accounts<sup>12</sup> bears that a certain sum of money was delivered to the queen by John Achesoun, master coiner, "in new cunyit testouns," which shows that though this name is not found in the public Acts, it was at any rate used in the public accounts, and must therefore have been well enough known at the time.

It appears from the Hopetoun MS. that David Levison coined a part of the portrait Ryalls from April 1556 to March 1558. § 38. Annals of the reign of Mary.

From March 1556 to June 1557 pennies<sup>1</sup> of 18 grains fine, forty-two in the ounce, were coined, and testoons<sup>2</sup> of xi ð fine, each weighing 4 deniers 19 grains. During the year 1557 placks<sup>3</sup> were coined of one denier fine, sixteen in the ounce, having course for 4 d. 1556.

This was followed in 1558 by a coinage of the base lions<sup>4</sup> of 12 grains fine, thirty-two in the ounce, of which the following record remains. 1558.

name. The later coinage appears to have been called "Lorraines,"<sup>1</sup> and is well known as the testoon with the monogram, F M, and the legend, "FECIT VTRAQVE VNVM." This name (Lorraine) may have been given from the cross of Lorraine which appears at each side of the monogram. These coins are so called in the treasurer's accounts,<sup>2</sup> where payment is entered "to Monsieur de Faultre for the hale princepale siluer ressaut fra him and cunyeit in lorance;" and again it is said, in the month of February, ten pounds were given "to the quenis grace in loranis to play at the cartis with the Erle of Huntlie and zoung Lethington."

1558. In the following month (January) of this year the "Quenis Grace Dowerar of the Realme of Scotland and Regent of the samyn" ordered the coinage of the rare king and queen's ducat.<sup>3</sup> Minute and particular directions as to weight, type, value, and legend are given in the record.<sup>4</sup> Both Cardonnel<sup>5</sup> and Lindsay<sup>6</sup> considered this piece to be a medal; though the latter altered his opinion after the discovery of this record. The coinage cannot have been an extensive one, as the whole coins are excessively rare, and the half is not known to exist in any collection. We learn from the Hopetoun MS. that these were minted in May 1559 by John Achesoun.

In March of this year<sup>7</sup> there is a record of the coinage of the base silver pieces with the legend "IAM. NON. SVNT. DVO. SED. VNA. CARO." These were to be vi ð fine only, and ordered to pass for twelve pence. The type and legend are minutely particularised in the record.<sup>8</sup> No fine silver pieces of this type are recorded.

1559. On the 13th day of July 1559 the Prior of St Andrews and the Earl of Glencairn, with the congregation, passed to the abbey of Holyrood House, and there "tuke and intromittit with the quenis irinis of the Cunyehous and brocht the samyn up to Edinburgh to his awin ludging quhairat the quenis grace regent was very discontentit."<sup>9</sup>

But ten days later, in the articles agreed on between the queen's party and the Protestants, it was stipulated as one of the conditions<sup>10</sup> that the latter should give up the coining irons to any one appointed by the Queen Regent to receive them. It is not stated that the Protestant party went the length of using the irons to issue any coinage with.

Knox, in his History of the Reformation, says that this interference with the royal prerogative by the congregation was made “because that dailie there war such numbers of lions alias called hardheids prented that the baseness thereof maid all things exceeding dear.”<sup>1</sup>

The coinage of lions, however, was still continued, for in 1560 a precept of the queen ordered a stone weight of silver to be minted into “lyonis,” which were to be only twelve grains fine. John Hairt was master of the mint, and some of the king and queen’s ducats were minted by him. John Achesoun had been displaced and sent to France, but was shortly afterwards recalled.

In February 1562 a Mint was erected in the castle of Edinburgh. Formerly it had been in the abbey of Holyrood; but an entry in the treasurer’s accounts under this year authorises the payment of four hundred and sixty pounds paid to William M’Dougall “for expensis maid be him upon the bigging of the Cunyehous within the Castell of Edinburgh and beting of the cunyehous within the palice of Halierudhous.”

Two Acts of Parliament<sup>2</sup> were passed in this year relating to the coinage. One provided that no one should carry gold or silver out of the country, under the pain of forfeiture of their goods, which Act was to have effect for the next five years. The other statute prohibited the import of false, or light, or base money under the former penalties. Considerable quantities of bad money were apparently in circulation at present. It was chiefly imported from abroad (France or Holland), but a forger of Scottish money was captured in England, and there is little doubt but that no small amount of the base money was manufactured there.<sup>3</sup> From the end of this year till 1565 no silver was coined, “because,” says the author of the Hopetoun MS., “all men abstractit thair handis throu the downe crying of the pryces of silver from xxiiij to xxij s̄.

An Act of Privy Council in 1564 fixed the price to be given for bullion at £10 the ounce for gold, and 23s. the ounce for silver.

A very curious memorandum relating to the coinage, written in this year, is given. It recommends a recoinage which was apparently not carried out.<sup>4</sup>

The year 1565 is remarkable for the first introduction into the Scottish currency of the large silver pieces known as “Ryalls.”<sup>5</sup> These were to pass for thirty shillings, and were to weigh one ounce troy (French standard). A much rarer type of the same coin was minted earlier in the year. This has the king and queen face to face on the obverse, and bears Henry's name before Mary's. It has generally been supposed<sup>1</sup> to have been either a medal or a pattern piece; but in a letter<sup>2</sup> from Thos. Randolphe, the English ambassador, to Sir Wm. Cecil, dated in December of this year, he states that "ther were lately certayne pieces of monie coyned w<sup>t</sup> both their faces Hen. and Maria," these were called in and "other framed as here I sende y<sup>r</sup> H. one, wayinge v testons in sū and current for vj;" which shows that these were really in circulation, though evidently to a very small extent.

1565. About this period a great quantity of false and light money was imported into the kingdom, and strict measures were in consequence taken by the Privy Council in the matter.<sup>3</sup>

1566. In June 1566 it is recorded that as certain persons had been apprehended within the burgh of Aberdeen who had acknowledged that they brought false money from Flanders into the country, two commissioners, Robert Crichton of Elyoke, and James Millar, depute justice clerk, were appointed to go to Aberdeen and to take all possible means to discover

1567. the facts of the case. In the beginning of the following year, Andrew Murray, burgess of Perth, and Patrick Ramsay, burgess of Dundee, were executed for importing false money—called hardheads—into the kingdom; and an entry in the treasurer's accounts,<sup>4</sup> under the date of May of this year, records the sum of "xxiiij s paid to ane boy passand of Edinburgh with the heidis, armis and leggis of Patrick Ramsay and Andro Murray justifit to the deith for inbringing of fals hardheidis within this realme—to the townis of Dunde and Perth and otheris townis appointit."

This was immediately followed by an Act of the Privy Council,<sup>5</sup> on the 19th of May, forbidding the inhabitants of the Marches to take the light and false money said to be fabricated in large quantities in Newcastle and Berwick, under heavy penalties.

On the 15th and 16th of July the last coins of this unfortunate princess were struck. On those days, "the Lords causit streik the Quenis wark in xx shilling xxx shilling and x shilling pieces which extended to 8 stone wecht."<sup>6</sup> Towards the close of the month King James was proclaimed, and his first coinage was minted in August, immediately after his accession.

39. The first coinage of this reign was authorised by an Act of Privy Council,<sup>1</sup> dated § 39. Annals of the reign of James VI. 1567. in the month of August. This Act minutely specified the type, weight, fineness, and value of the Sword Dollar or "James Ryall," and the two-thirds and one-third parts of it. Proclamation was made on the 1st September<sup>2</sup> commanding all and sundry to receive the new coins at their respective values of xxx/, xx/, and x/.

The Scottish parliament in December<sup>3</sup> authorised the king, with the advice of the regent, to "prent and cunye gold and siluer of sic fynes as vtheris cuntreis dois," and prohibited the issue of any "layit" or billon money, except with the consent of the three Estates of Parliament. It was also declared illegal to break down or melt coined money under pain of confiscation of the goods of the offender. Another Act<sup>4</sup> of the same session provided for the appointment of men of judgment in every town, before whom all sums of money were to be paid, and who were authorised to clip in pieces false money. One penny per pound was fixed as the fee for the clipper, and the provost and other municipal officers were required to furnish houses in which the examination of the money was to take place.

Great frauds appear to have been practised at this time about the money, and vigorous measures were taken to repress them. A merchant of Dundee, named Robert Jacke, was one of the principal offenders, and carried on his operations on a very extensive scale. He fabricated false hardheads in Flanders, and imported them into the country. This having been found out, it is noted in Birrel's "Diary" that he was hanged and quartered.<sup>5</sup>

An Act of Parliament<sup>6</sup> passed on the 22d December, provided that in consequence of the money of the realm having been made lighter than it ought to be by "roungeing and clipping and wesching," the xxx/, xx/, and x/ pieces were to be weighed with weights of one ounce, two-thirds of an ounce, and one-third of an ounce respectively. These weights were to have a special stamp or device on them.

In order to prevent the importation of foreign, or false, money another Act<sup>7</sup> provided for the sharp punishment of false coiners, and altered the values of the smaller coins. "Nonsunts," or the "twelff penny grote" of Francis and Mary, were to pass for sixpence; "babeis" (placks of James V., and the Edinburgh and Stirling placks of Mary), for three pence; "plakkis" (with the legend "SERVIO," &c.), for twopence; "hardheids," for half-pennies; and "penyis" to remain unaltered.

1568. The treasurer's accounts<sup>1</sup> for this year show the names and wages of the officials of the mint, and no change appears to have taken place since 1564, except that Gray the "sinkar of the Irinis" gets a larger sum, probably owing to the new dies required for the "James Ryall."<sup>2</sup> A lease of the mint for ten years from February 1567 was entered into with Robert Richardson at a yearly rent of £333, 6s. 8d., but it does not seem to have continued more than three years.

1570. The measures for preventing the importation of base money seem to some extent to have failed, for in 1570 the Convention of Boroughs<sup>3</sup> supplicated the Lords of Articles to make inquisition and punish those who were found importing false hardheads and placks, in order that innocent merchants might be cleared.

1571. The Privy Council<sup>4</sup> in this year authorised the coinage of the half merk and quarter merk, though the coins were not issued till 1572. From a "discharge of the cunye of half merkis and xl ð pecis"<sup>5</sup> in the treasurer's accounts, it appears that the profit arising from every stone of sixteen pounds "passing the Irinis" of silver eleven penny fine was twenty pounds; and the profit arising from the coinage of the half merk and forty penny pieces was fourteen pound ten shillings and tenpence per stone.

Among the manuscript collections of the late Earl of Haddington preserved in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh,<sup>6</sup> is an Act of the Privy Council ordering two new silver coins to be struck, of xi ð fine; the larger of which was to weigh 11 den. 12 grains, and to pass current for 13/4. It was to have on the obverse the royal arms crowned, with the legend "IACOBVS DEI GRATIA REX SCOTORVM," and on the reverse a crowned thistle, with the legend, "NEMO IMPVNE LEDET 1571," and the value marked at the sides of the thistle. If this money was ever minted, it must have been in very small quantities, for no specimen of it has been recorded. Though this Act is not noticed either by Cardonnel or Lindsay, it is referred to by Ruddiman in his preface to Anderson's "Diplomata Scotiæ."<sup>7</sup>

1572. Towards the end of the month of March of the following year the mint erected in the castle of Edinburgh was employed, according to the author of the "Diurnal of Occurrents,"<sup>8</sup> in producing the xxx s pieces of the queen. If this was the case, either the old dies with § 39. Annals of the former date were used, or the quantity minted must have been very small, since no of the reign of James VI. “Mary ryall” with that date is known. At the same time the following Act was passed:—

On the 12th of May an Act of the Privy Council<sup>1</sup> was passed at Leith ordering two new coins immediately to be issued, one to be called the half-merk piece<sup>2</sup> and to be current for 6s. 8d., and the other to be known as the "forty penny" piece, and to be current for 3s. 4d. The type and legends were minutely specified, but the fineness is not mentioned. Other authorities, however, show that it was very base. In the "Diurnal of Occurrents"<sup>3</sup> it is mentioned that they were only vi d̄ fine, and were proclaimed at Leith to have passage throughout the realm for good and lawful money.<sup>4</sup>

This base coinage was minted at Dalkeith, as appears from a letter of Sir William Drury to Lord Burleigh preserved in the State Paper Office.<sup>5</sup> The mint at Edinburgh was also in operation at the same period, but the money produced there was not recognised by the regent and his party, though one account says it was seized and broken down to be recoined into the half and quarter merks.<sup>6</sup> The author of the Hopetoun MS. says that as soon as ever a coinage was issued by the regent it was counterfeited in the castle of Edinburgh. The mint at Dalkeith does not seem to have been in operation for any length of time, as in 1573 an entry occurs in the accounts of the treasurer of "xij li x s̄ . . . payit . . . for carrying and transporting of the haille necessaris and worklumis appertening to the cunyhous fra the castell of Dalkeyth to the palice of Halyrudhous."

In August 1572 an Act of the Privy Council<sup>7</sup> was passed directing that, in consequence of the placks with the date 1557 having been counterfeited, as well as the half merk and forty penny pieces lately issued, no one was to take payment in these placks until Parliament took order in the matter, which did not take place till March 1574. No one, under pain of treason, was permitted to sell silver, coined or uncoined, to any one who counterfeited or adulterated the half merk or forty penny pieces. All bullion was ordered to be brought to the master coiner, and provosts and other officers of boroughs were directed to search for and imprison all who contravened this Act.

Great quantities of false and adulterated money being imported into the country, § 39. Annals of the reign of James VI. especially from Flanders, the Privy Council ordered, by an Act passed at Holyrood on the 12th July,<sup>1</sup> that all importers of false coins were to be strictly punished. 1573.

The regent applied in 1574 to the provost, bailies, and council of Edinburgh to supply him with fine silver for the use of the “cunyhous;” but this request was declined.<sup>2</sup> Soon after, all the boroughs were summoned to pay up the arrears of bullion due by them. The convention offered to compound this for one payment of 10,000 merks, but the regent would not accede to their proposal. Shortly afterwards, however, “after lang resonyng,” he was prevailed on to take £10,000 in full of all arrears in time past, and for all sums payable during his reign. 1574.

In October an Act of Privy Council<sup>3</sup> was passed at Dalkeith forbidding any one to transport gold or silver out of the kingdom till the next meeting of Parliament, under heavy penalties. On the 5th of March an Act of Parliament was passed, which is identically the same as a proclamation ordered by the Privy Council of the same date.<sup>4</sup> This Act provided that the placks of 1557 were to be current for two pence, and the lions or hardheads for one penny; and that all persons having these were to bring them to John Carmichael, warden of the mint, who was directed to clip all that were false, and to countermark those that were good with a heart and star.

The author of the “Diurnal of Occurrents”<sup>5</sup> notes a proclamation made at the beginning of 1575 forbidding any one to refuse any “mucats,” or hardheads, or half merk pieces under pain of death. It is not certain what coin is referred to as “mucats.” Another proclamation was made in April<sup>6</sup> calling down the Dalkeith money to its real value, or nearly one half of what it was formerly current for. It is said that these regulations about the coinage made the regent very unpopular.<sup>7</sup> He had apparently some desire to improve the coinage, for in October he wrote to Walsingham for permission to get some tools for coining for one Michael Sim, whose name, however, does not appear in the Records of the Mint.<sup>8</sup> In November, the fine and rare twenty pound piece,<sup>9</sup> weighing one ounce Scottish, was struck in the castle of Edinburgh.<sup>10</sup> The author of the “Historie of” 1575.

James VI.

James Sext" expressly tells us that this beautiful piece was intended for circulation, and was not a medal, as some have supposed. He relates that "before that year (1575) was ended he (the regent) caused a new piece of gold to be imprinted of the weight of one ounce, and ordained it to have course in the country for the avail of 20 pounds in money."

In Melville's Memoirs<sup>1</sup> it is stated that on one occasion the Regent presented twenty-five of these pieces to some friend, which he would hardly have done had they been struck as medals. From the Hopetoun MS. it appears that these £20 pieces were 22½ carats fine, and that 12 lbs. and 1 oz. of gold were issued in this form. False money was evidently still in circulation, for in November the Privy Council<sup>2</sup> took some action with Uthrid Macdowell, of Mondork, for issuing false money.

1576. The gold seekers in Craufurd Moor, Robertson and Henderland, were ordered, by an act of the Privy Council,<sup>3</sup> to bring all the gold they found to the Royal Mint at the accustomed rates, and not to sell it for exportation.

On the 5th of March a contract<sup>4</sup> "anent the cunye" was entered into between the Regent Morton, John Acheson, Master of the Mint, and Abraham Petersoun, "fleming," in which it was provided that Acheson should receive all the silver brought to him, and should hand it over to Petersoun to be reduced to the "fynenes of aucht deneiris," and thereafter it was to be forged and printed by the Master of the Mint into half-merk and forty penny pieces. Five shillings were allowed for each merk weight of coined money for the expense of coining, alloy, &c., to the master coiner, who was to give Petersoun two deneirs weight of silver for each merk melted and made ready by him for the coiners. All gold was similarly to be reduced to xxii. carats, or xxii½ carats, as should be appointed, and 2 grains of remedy of weight were allowed on each piece containing 1 oz. weight,—another proof that the twenty pound piece was a coin, and not a medal. Mention is made in the contract of ten pound pieces and five pound pieces; but it is probable these were never issued. Two shillings were to be allowed to Acheson for each ounce of coined gold, out of which he was to pay ninepence to Petersoun for his share of the work.

1577. In May the Regent and Privy Council<sup>5</sup> directed a proclamation to be made, forbidding any one to transport gold or silver out of the kingdom.

Towards the close of the year the king assumed the government himself, and sent certain commissioners to the Earl of Morton desiring him to give up the “irenis of the cunyiehouis,” which was accordingly done. § 39. Annals Parliament met at Stirling in July 1578, and passed an Act<sup>1</sup> ordering the coinage of a piece of silver of the fineness of eleven deniers, and giving full power to the Privy Council to give directions about the type, weight, and value of the said piece. It was also declared illegal to export Scottish money out of the kingdom. Accordingly, on the 29th of July,<sup>2</sup> the Privy Council ordered all the silver pieces to be brought to the Mint before the first day of March, and delivered to the Master of the Mint, and 32s. to be paid for the xxx s̄ piece, and so on at the same rate. All the good money was ordered to be countermarked with a crowned thistle, and re-issued from the Mint at the rate of 36s. 9d. for the xxx s̄ piece, and others at the same proportion. None were to be current at all unless they were countermarked. This piece could not have been of long continuance, and, according to Moysie,<sup>3</sup> these alterations in the value of the money were altogether “mislykit be the commone pepill.” 1578.

On the 18th of September an Act of the Privy Council,<sup>4</sup> given at Stirling, referring to the Act of Parliament already mentioned, ordered the coinage of a piece of silver, of the fineness of eleven deniers, to be called the two merk piece,<sup>5</sup> and to be current for 26s. 8d., with the half in proportion. The type is minutely described, and the coin is now known as the rare “Thistle Dollar.” A new gold piece was also ordered by this Act. It was to be called the Scottish crown, and was to pass for forty shillings. The standard was to be twenty-one carats fine. The type is minutely described, both in the Parliamentary statute, which followed shortly after, and in the Act of Privy Council; and the non-appearance of the coin in any collection has puzzled Scottish numismatists not a little. Lindsay<sup>6</sup> says, “Of the coinage described, and ordered by the Act of 1579—if indeed it ever took effect—no specimens now remain.” But it will be seen that a later Act of the Privy Council altered the type and value of the gold coinage, and it is now certain that the Scottish crown was never issued. A curious design for this coin has been lately discovered among the Hopetoun papers.<sup>7</sup> The Act of the Privy Council authorising these alterations is almost identical in terms with the Parliamentary Act of 1579 immediately to be noticed. The ounce of gold was to cost £20 at the Mint, and the ounce of silver 34s. On the same date another Act of Privy Council declared that any one who refused to take the silver coins, countermarked as directed by the Act already noticed, should suffer death and confiscation of goods. As the silver coinage was not coming into the Mint, a later Act of Privy Council extended the time from the first of March to the first of May.

1579. At Stirling on the 15th of May of the following year, the Privy Council ordered a proclamation to be made extending this period still further, first to August, and then to the 20th of October.

In the Register of the Privy Seal is a letter of this date confirming to the various officers of the Mint the privileges and liberties they had enjoyed from the very earliest period.

In October<sup>1</sup> the Scottish Parliament passed an Act ratifying the Acts of the Privy Council as to the proposed silver two merk piece and the Scots gold crown. These two merk pieces, with the halves corresponding, were only coined in 1578, 1579, and 1580. Lindsay<sup>2</sup> is incorrect in supposing that the silver pieces with the crowned thistle and the date 1581 had any connection with this series. It will be seen that the coinage of 1581 was completely different both in type and value. Wingate<sup>3</sup> suggests some doubt about the commonly received names for these coins, though in describing the accurately-drawn plates of his work he erroneously calls the sixteen shilling piece of 1581 the half-thistle dollar.<sup>4</sup> The Act of this year fixes the price of the ounce of fine silver at 36s., and the ounce of fine gold at £21.

1580. An Act of Privy Council,<sup>5</sup> dated the 28th day of April, altered the Act of Parliament of the preceding October, and ordered in place of the gold piece therein authorised another coin, double the weight and value, to be called the Scottish ducat<sup>6</sup> (now commonly called the bare-headed noble). The price of fine gold was fixed by this Act of Council at £21 the ounce—the same rate as formerly. Shortly afterwards (4th May) another Act of Privy Council<sup>7</sup> authorised the coinage of six hundred stone weight of silver into half merk and forty penny pieces, “beirand the like forme circumscription wecht and fynes as they are presentlie currant within this realme.”

In October a payment occurs in the Treasurer's accounts<sup>8</sup> to G. Hay for some repairs on the "cunyeuous," but without stating the locality. From another entry<sup>1</sup> in the § 39. Annals of the reign of James VI. 1580. same record it appears that James Gray was the graver of the dies of the new coinage of gold.

On the 27th of February the Privy Council<sup>2</sup> and Estates convened in Parliament passed Acts ordering all the base money within the realm (except the stamped placks and pennies) to be reformed to the fineness of eleven deniers, with two grains of remedy as well under as above, and to be re-coined in such form as the Privy Council might order. It appears from an Act of Privy Council<sup>3</sup> in 1581 that this coinage was struck in xvi s̄, viii s̄, iv s̄, and ii s̄ pieces, of sterling standard. The weights and other particulars were fully given in a contract which cannot now be found. These pieces were not minted till 1581. The Act of Parliament also sanctioned the issue of the Ducat, and fixed the price of silver at the Mint at 44s. per oz. Authority was given to the Privy Council to let the Mint and its profits.

The Privy Council in July ordered proclamation<sup>4</sup> to be made in all the chief boroughs of the country to the effect that all should receive the late coinage of thistle two merk pieces and gold ducats, and that it was illegal to break down any coined money of the realm. 1581.

Four months later an Act of the Scottish Parliament<sup>5</sup> put an end to the contract about the money which had been entered into with Alexander Clerk of Balbirnie and others (evidently the one above noticed), and recalled the silver coinage they had issued. It appears from a later Privy Council minute<sup>6</sup> that this contract had been intended to last for three years, but it was annulled on account of the coinage being so unprofitable.<sup>7</sup> These coins are the crowned thistle series, with the date 1581.<sup>8</sup> They are fully described in an abstract of the Act of Privy Council of 1580 prefixed to one of the following year. They were known as xvi s̄, viii s̄, iv s̄, and ii s̄ pieces, and are of great rarity, more especially the smaller parts. As the original contract for this coinage cannot now be discovered, the conditions of it are not known; but as the xvi s̄ piece weighs generally 170 grains, silver must still have been at 44s. the ounce, the price fixed by Parliament in the previous year. This Act further sanctioned the coinage of x s̄ pieces, each of which was to weigh a quarter of an ounce, and to be xi ð fine. The type is minutely described, but no higher denomination is mentioned, nor are the usual remedies of weight and fineness allowed. These omissions were corrected by an Act of Privy Council<sup>1</sup> at the close of the year. The dies for this new coinage were prepared by Thomas Foulis from a likeness of the king drawn by Lord Seytoun's painter.<sup>2</sup> These pieces were not struck at the Mint, which was then in a ruinous state, but in the house of Archibald Stewart in Edinburgh.

In Moysie's Memoirs it is stated that a certain Thomas Rorestoun was forfeited for false coining in this year.

On the 25th of March an Act of Privy Council<sup>3</sup> authorised Thomas Acheson, master coiner, to buy all silver of xi d fine for 37s. the troy ounce, and reissue it again in x s pieces.

In April the Council<sup>4</sup> ordered pieces of an ounce weight, three-quarters of an ounce, and half an ounce, as well as the quarter lately authorised, to be struck. These were to be of the value of xl s, xxx s, and xx s respectively, and were in all respects, except weight and value, to be similar to the quarter ounce, or x s piece.<sup>5</sup> Specimen coins<sup>6</sup> of each sort of this coinage were ordered to be given to the Clerk of Registers, Clerk of Privy Council, Lyon Herald, and various other officials. This seems to have been the general custom with every new issue at this period. It is difficult to account for the rarity of the xl s piece at the present time. It was evidently struck in considerable quantity, and was in ordinary circulation, as in 1593 an Act of Privy Council<sup>7</sup> raised the current value to 42s. The other coins of the series are not rare, and there is nothing in the Records to show that the issue of the xl s piece was more restricted than the others.

In July the Privy Council<sup>8</sup> especially released Alexander Clerk of Balbirny and the other partners in the late contract of the Mint from their obligations, on condition that they should reduce the coinage of xvi s pieces to the price of forty shillings the ounce. An Act of Parliament was ordered to be passed to this effect.

A very curious "compt of the coynehous maid by Thomas Achesoun," preserved in the Register House at Edinburgh, shows the coinage of this year. From 1st April 1582 to 1st May 1583, 607 stones 7 pounds of silver were coined into xl s, xxx s, xx s, and x s pieces. The master coiner charges himself with the sum of £12,845, 16s. 11d., and accounts for payment amounting to £17,928, 6s. 10d., so that, as the "compt" bears, the

In December a proclamation<sup>1</sup> was made calling in the twelve-penny pieces, babeis, and placks, as well as the 3d. groats and half placks then current, and ordering them to be re-coined into groats<sup>2</sup> of three penny fine, at 8d. each, and half groats corresponding. The usual remedies were allowed, and one hundred and thirty-five of the groats were to be in the merk weight, with an allowance of eight, as remedy, in every merk. The type and legends are minutely specified in the Act.

As very little of the billon money mentioned above was brought in by the time named, another proclamation<sup>3</sup> was made in January, allowing twelve pence per ounce more. Even this does not seem to have produced the desired effect, for in February a third proclamation<sup>4</sup> was made, forbidding the course of the twelve-penny pieces and placks within the city and sherifffdom of Edinburgh and the constabulary of Haddington, though allowing them to be current in more remote districts in the meantime.

Many of the common people appear to have doubted the new coinage, and to remedy this certain lords of the Privy Council, with the provost and baillies of Edinburgh and other skilled persons, were appointed to report as to whether the conditions of the contract were carried out. Accordingly, in the end of the year, a proclamation<sup>5</sup> was made, stating that these commissioners had found the coinage of placks conformable in all respects to the Act, and equal in fineness to the half merk and forty-penny pieces.

The price of silver was raised, by a proclamation<sup>6</sup> of the Privy Council in April 1584, to 37s. 6d. per ounce of eleven penny fine; and in May an Act of Parliament<sup>7</sup> was passed ratifying and approving of the new coinage of placks proclaimed in the year preceding. This Act was immediately followed by another,<sup>8</sup> authorising the issue of two new gold pieces of 21½ carat fine, to weigh respectively 78¾ and 52½ grains. The Lords of the Privy Council were directed to fix the type, legends, remedies, &c. These pieces were commonly called the Lion Noble<sup>9</sup> and Lion Crown; the latter being two-thirds of the value of the former. There is no mention made in the Parliamentary enactment of the Half Lion Crown (or one-third Lion as it is now called). The Lion Noble was to be current for £3, 15s., and the Lion Crown for £2, 10s.

In August a proclamation<sup>1</sup> was made for the purpose of prolonging the time for receiving the old placks till the 15th of October; but this provision was only to apply to places distant twenty-five miles and upwards from Edinburgh. A few days afterwards the Privy Council<sup>2</sup> considered the proposed new coinage of gold, and added to it the half lion crown.<sup>3</sup> The type is minutely described, and one-sixth of a carat is allowed on each piece as remedy for purity, and one grain for remedy of weight.

During the following year the plague raged with great violence in Edinburgh, and the Privy Council, having convened at Dunfermline, ordered<sup>4</sup> the general of the Mint to pass to Dundee with all the furniture and coining tools, and there to continue the coining of gold, silver, and alloyed money. The legend on the placks was to be "Oppidum Dundie" instead of "Oppidum Edinburgi," and the coins were to be struck "eikand ane ring within the lettres as they have alreddy out with the same quhairevir it sall happin the said money to be wrocht."<sup>5</sup> Whether any money was ever struck at Dundee or not, is uncertain; but in October another Act of Privy Council<sup>6</sup> ordered the Mint, with all its appliances, to be removed to Perth, as the plague was then raging in Dundee as well as in Edinburgh. Similar instructions were laid down for the place of mintage on the billon coins being changed from Edinburgh to Perth. There is a probability that some money was struck at Perth, as a proclamation exists in the Records of the Privy Council<sup>7</sup> requiring the officers of the Mint forthwith to proceed to Perth, and there to continue the issue of the alloyed money, as, owing to the former prevalence of the plague, "the officiaris of his hienes cunyie hes bene constraint to ly ydile . . . to the grite hinder of his maiesties proffite."

On the 10th of May 1586 certain commissioners appointed by the king<sup>8</sup> proceeded to the Mint, and there opened the boxes containing the assays of all the coinages issued while John Acheson and Thomas Acheson were Masters of the Mint. These commissioners appeared personally before the Privy Council on the 10th of December and reported the result of their trials. This report is interesting, as giving the dates of the various coinages.

From it we learn that the half merk and forty-penny pieces were struck from April 1577 § 39. Annals of the reign of James VI. to August 1580; the thistle two merk piece, from 16th December 1579 to 24th August 1580; the gold ducat, from 2d August to 29th November 1580; the lion noble, lion crown, and half lion crown, from the 2d November 1584 to 18th April 1586; the xxx s, xx s, and x s pieces, from 6th April 1482 to 18th May 1586; the xvi s and viii s pieces, from 25th June 1582 to 4th November of the same year; and the 8 d and 4 d placks, from 13th January 1583 to 10th May 1586.

From Thomas Achesoun's "Compt of the Cunyie Hous," it appears that between the 1st May 1583 and 21st April 1586, 303 stones 7 lbs. of silver were issued in xl s, xxx s, xx s, and x s pieces, with a profit to the king, on each stone, of £22, 2s. 6d. From 13th January 1583 to the same date, 1925 stones 1 lb. of silver were issued in eight-penny and four-penny groats, with a profit of £17, 2s. 9d. on the stone. In lion nobles, upwards of 96 lbs. of gold were coined, the profit on each stone being £220. Thomas Foullis made the dies for the gold coins, and also for the billon pieces.

In July of the following year the Scottish Parliament<sup>1</sup> appointed certain commissioners to confer regarding the state of the current money, and to advise concerning a new coinage of gold of 22 carat fine, and a new coinage of silver of eleven denier fine. They were to come to a decision before the 1st of January, and whatever their determination might be, it was to have the full force of law. Other commissioners were appointed<sup>2</sup> to see how much bullion should be paid by merchants exporting gold out of the realm.

The Privy Council in October ordered Thomas Acheson, master coiner, and his assistants, to coin all the bullion on hand, and to buy in as much more as would make up the whole amount to seven score stones weight. This year's coinage included 61 lbs. 5 oz. of gold issued in lion nobles and lion crowns. An unsuccessful attempt was made in this year to do away with the privileges granted from time immemorial to the officers of the Mint.<sup>3</sup>

On the 29th of March, Thomas Foullis, sinker, complained to the lords of the Privy Council<sup>4</sup> that James Acheson, son of John Acheson in the Canongate, "sinkis and makis Irnes instruments and matriceis . . . albeit the complenare hes obtenit his maiesties gift of that office during all the dayis of his lyfytyme," and prayed that he might be restrained from so doing.

Bothwell; and the officers of the Mint were directed by the Privy Council<sup>1</sup> to strike 80 stone weight of 8 d and 4 d pieces, and the profits arising from this were to be given to provide necessaries for the “companey of men of weir leuyed and appointit to accompany him.”

On account of the scarcity of small money, a new billon coinage was authorised by an Act of Privy Council in August. This new coinage was issued in two-penny and penny pieces of 12 grains fine, and forty of the penny pieces were to be in the ounce. The type of both coins (now usually called hardheads) is minutely described. The lion on the reverse of the two-penny is directed to be in a shield.<sup>2</sup>

This Act raised the value of the lion nobles from £3 15s. to £4.

The Privy Council in September<sup>3</sup> ordered a new coinage, to consist of a piece of gold of the same weight (a quarter of an ounce) and fineness (23 carat 7 grains) as the English rose noble, and to pass current for £7, 6s. 8d.<sup>4</sup> Thomas Foullis was the engraver of the dies for this coinage. A half, similar in type and fineness, was also authorised; but this coin, if it was ever issued, must be very rare. Considerable coinages of the Scottish rose noble are recorded.<sup>5</sup>

In November it was reported to the Privy Council<sup>6</sup> that the two-penny pieces authorised in August were often passed by designing persons on the unsuspecting as eight-penny pieces, from the similarity of type on the obverse of the one and the reverse of the other, and it was accordingly ordered by the Council that for the future the shield on the reverse of the two-penny pieces was to be omitted, and two dots placed behind the lion.<sup>7</sup>

1589. The king was in debt to Sir Robert Melville, the treasurer depute, and, with the consent of his Council, assigned the profits of the Mint to him till the debt was paid. The Act authorising this is recorded in the Books of the Privy Council in March 1589.<sup>8</sup>

1590. In June of the following year, a parliament convened at Edinburgh,<sup>9</sup> and certain proposals about making the standard of the silver coins the same as that of England were considered. Nothing seems to have been determined, but the matter was remitted to

James VI.

A trial of the Pix having been made in March, a dispute arose as to how the assay pieces should be disposed of.<sup>3</sup> The General of the Mint claimed them by virtue of the privilege of his office, and the Master Almoner claimed them, by order of the king, for distribution amongst the poor. The dispute was referred to the Privy Council, who decided against the claim of the Master of the Mint. The report of the commissioners<sup>4</sup> appointed to make the trials of the money was laid before the Council in May, and every thing being found correct, the officials of the Mint were fully exonerated from any further action as to their former coinages.

In August, Parliament met at Edinburgh, and passed an Act<sup>5</sup> "anent the cunyeie." This provided that all the gold, except the thistle nobles, should be reduced to the standard of 22 carat fine, and that the ounce should be set out at £27. The gold was to be struck in coins each current for £4, and fifty-four pieces were to be in the merk weight. These were called Hat Pieces from the type.<sup>6</sup> A half is mentioned in the Act, but it is doubtful if any were ever struck.

Similarly all the silver was to be reduced to 10½ denier fine, and set forth at forty-four shillings the ounce.<sup>7</sup> The merk weight was to contain 54½ of the larger pieces, or double that number of the smaller. These coins are called now balance merks, a mistake which first originated with Snelling, and has been copied without inquiry by every succeeding writer. They were, in point of fact, half merks,<sup>8</sup> being current for 6s. 8d., and the half for 3s. 4d. They were minted in 1591, 1592, and a few in 1593.

Three years were allowed to reduce the whole coinage of the country to the above standard.

Immediately after the proclamation of the new coinage, Sir Archibald Napier entered a protestation against the contract being given to the proposed partners, on the ground that his son was willing to undertake it on more advantageous terms. A long dispute arose in consequence between Merchiston and Thomas Foullis, each abusing the other, and maintaining his own proposals, and eventually the matter was referred to a commission.<sup>1</sup>

1591. On the 8th day of March the Privy Council,<sup>2</sup> finding that the allayed money under seven deniers fine which had been ordered to be called in by the Act of Parliament, could not be re-issued without great loss, commissioned Thomas Foullis to go to London and make a contract with Sir William Bowes to mint the coinage as directed by the Act. Minute directions are laid down in the contract as to the manner of proceeding.

1592. In 1592 an Act of Parliament<sup>3</sup> was passed ordering that the borough dues, which had hitherto been paid in usual currency of the kingdom, should in future be paid in sterling money.

1593. Parliament met at Edinburgh,<sup>4</sup> and on the 3d of April directed certain commissioners to look into the coinage, with power to issue a new one if deemed advisable.

The result of this commission was embodied in an Act<sup>5</sup> which provided for the coinage of a billon piece<sup>6</sup> of one denier fine (with the usual remedies), to be current for fourpence. The type is minutely described. Eight score were to be in the merk weight, with eight pieces as remedy. This would make the full weight of the coin about  $23\frac{1}{2}$  grains troy of the modern standard. As the amount coined was very limited, these four-penny pieces are very rare. On the 17th of January, an Act of Parliament<sup>7</sup> was passed which ordered a new coinage of gold and silver. The provisions of this Act were embodied in the contract entered into immediately afterwards with the town of Edinburgh.

On the 21st January, the General of the Mint, Sir A. Napier of Edinbillie, appeared before the Privy Council, and recorded his opinion that the price offered for the silver at this time was too little to make it profitable to coin money eleven penny fine. A few days later, a contract<sup>8</sup> was made between the king, with consent of the Privy Council, and the Provost and Town Council of Edinburgh, in which it was provided that all the gold was to be reduced to the fineness of 22 carats, and re-issued in pieces weighing six to the ounce, and each to be current for £5. These coins are now known as "Riders,"<sup>9</sup> and appear to have been issued down to 1601. The silver was to be made xi ð. fine, and re-issued in 10 s, 5 s, 2 s 6 ð, and 1 s pieces,<sup>10</sup> at 50s. the ounce. The profits of the Mint were let to the town of Edinburgh for two years and three months, from the 1st of February 1593, and the tacksmen were empowered to place their "cunyie house" within any town or place in the realm. One hundred and ten thousand merks were to be paid, at the weekly rate of one thousand merks, as rent. § 39. Annals of the reign of James VI. 1593.

On the 22d of April, Parliament ratified and approved of the coinages<sup>1</sup> directed in the previous year, and of the tack of the Mint to the Provost and Council of Edinburgh, and further confirmed the former Acts relating to bullion. 1594.

The Privy Council in July<sup>2</sup> prohibited the currency of the old moneys under heavy penalties, and in November<sup>3</sup> appointed certain commissioners to consult and advise regarding the form and order of the exchange of gold and silver, and to report to next Parliament.

Birrell notes<sup>4</sup> that the 4d. placks<sup>5</sup> were proclaimed on the 7th January, which seems a long time after the passing of the Act authorising the coinage. He also says they were discharged by proclamation on the 19th, which, if it is the case, will be another reason for their great rarity.

In January the Privy Council<sup>6</sup> again ordered, in more stringent terms than before, the former coinages no longer to be received as currency, and especially the old rose noble of England, which had been made current by a special proclamation (not preserved) in Aberdeen for the temporary purpose of paying the soldiers there.

No change seems to have taken place in the coinage for some time. In May 1596 an Act of Parliament<sup>7</sup> is found against false coiners. A curious document,<sup>8</sup> with the date August 1596, is preserved in the Register House. It contains the prices at which all kinds of gold and silver coins were to be brought into the Mint, and the royal profit upon the coinages issued. From this it appears that every stone weight of gold coined of 22 carat fine produced to the king £563, 3s. 4d., or at the rate of 44s. per ounce. Every stone of silver of eleven penny fine produced £38, 18s. Out of every stone of gold, twelve pounds were to be minted into £5 pieces, and four pounds into the halves. The amounts to be struck in each sort of coin out of the stone weight of silver are left blank in the original, except the 12d. pieces, of which one pound in every stone was to be minted. 1596.

This table gives an idea of the coins current at the time, and supplies some blanks in the fineness of some of the native gold coins, of which the records have not been preserved.

§ 39. Annals
of the reign of
James VI.

It is curious to find the xl s piece current at this period, while the merk piece of 1578, 1579, and 1580, and the ii s piece of 1581 were even then out of common circulation.

At the close of this year, on the 4th of March, an Act of Parliament<sup>1</sup> gave power to certain commissioners to confer regarding a new coinage, keeping the present fineness and value, but differing (if thought fit) in proportion and type. Commissioners were also appointed to treat with the commissioners of burghs regarding the payment of the customs.

In April 1597, Ja. Acheson presented an overture<sup>2</sup> to the king, recommending a coinage of small money in pure copper. This paper is very interesting, for in it he states that he has discovered "a new forme of wirking and wark lumes thairto," so that "thair sall be na pece of money ather gold siluer or copper according to thair quantitie and wecht that sall be ane grane heavier or lichter thikker or thinner braider or naroe ane nor another . . . . And farder the money sall be sa weill prentit that na pece thair of sall want ony thing of the superscription." He also recommended the king to repair his own Mint, and entreated him personally to inspect the work of coinage as he had formerly done.

The following month the Scottish parliament met at Dundee, and passed several measures relating to the coinage. The first<sup>3</sup> of these appointed certain commissioners to frame a table of the prices of all the gold and silver according to their value, weight, and fineness, and to affix the same in the house of exchange that all might know.

The next Act<sup>4</sup> laid down the values at which various coins were to be taken after the 17th of May. Silver of xi d fine was to be at 50/ the ounce; the new xxx s pieces were to pass current for 37/6, as they weighed only three quarters of an ounce.<sup>5</sup> The ounce of gold of 22 carat was to stand at £30. All foreign coin was to be brought into the Mint and exchanged, an ounce of coin xi d fine being given for an ounce of bullion of xii d fine, the difference being the profit.

It was further provided<sup>6</sup> by the same parliament, that one hundred stone weight of copper, unmixed with any other kind of metal, should be issued in two penny and penny pieces;<sup>7</sup> each penny was to weigh one denier and twelve grains, and sixty-four of the two penny pieces were to be in a merk weight. No one was bound to take more than twelve pence in copper coins. It is stated in Birrell's "Diary,"<sup>8</sup> that the proclamation of these coins was made on the 23d of May, and on the 23d of June another was made for taking the "cunyie house." Almost immediately afterwards, the whole of the officials of the Mint were discharged by an Act of Privy Council,<sup>1</sup> and the irons and other coining instruments were ordered to be delivered up to the Lord Treasurer. No cause was stated for this; but on the 18th of August<sup>2</sup> they were all reinstated, and the irons and instruments were returned to them.

Parliament met at Edinburgh,<sup>3</sup> and on 1st November ratified and confirmed the Acts made before at Dundee, and among others those relating to the coinage already mentioned.

That these measures about the coinage were not popular is apparent from a letter preserved among the State papers relating to Scotland,<sup>4</sup> in which Nicolson, writing to Lord Burleigh, mentions the discontent among the people at this time in consequence of the Mint being set up again.<sup>5</sup>

On the 22d of July, the Privy Council<sup>6</sup> passed an Act in which reference is made to this parliamentary measure of the previous June, giving a tack of the Mint for six years to Thomas Foulis and Robert Jowsie. The Council ordered the half of all penalties for breaches of the laws about money to be paid to the aforesaid Thomas Foullis.

Considerable quantities of false money were at this time in circulation. Several persons suspected of coining were apprehended in the North, and an Act of the Privy Council<sup>7</sup> in August directed them to be brought to Edinburgh and there tried.

On the last day of October Parliament met,<sup>8</sup> and the first Act passed relating to coinage, permitted foreign coin to be current at certain rates specified. Foreign silver of eleven penny fine was to be current for 48/ the ounce, and foreign gold of 22 carat for £28, 16s. All native gold coins of 22 carat fine were to be current at £30 the ounce.<sup>9</sup>

In December, Parliament met at Holyrood, and passed another Act fixing the values of the various coins, which was followed on the 18th of the same month by a proclamation altering the previous rates very considerably.<sup>10</sup> Foreign silver of eleven deniers fine was to be current for 50/, while the same weight and fineness of native currency was to pass for 53/4. Foreign gold of 22 carat was to be £30 the ounce, and Scottish gold of the same standard £32 the ounce. Such constant alterations in the value of money must have seriously interfered with commerce, and it is no wonder that the people were discontented.

1599. On the last day of July, Parliament<sup>1</sup> gave commission to the Lords of the Privy Council and certain others, to advise concerning another proposed change in the value of money, by making the ounce of silver 60/, and gold proportionally higher. This was not carried into effect apparently, for in September an Act of Privy Council<sup>2</sup> continued the Act of Parliament of the previous December, but prohibited the course of any foreign coins for the future.

1600. The Parliament of 1600 passed an Act<sup>3</sup> confirming the action of the Parliament and Privy Council of the preceding year, and directed measures to be taken for providing bullion for the Mint.

1601. On the 8th of May, a proclamation<sup>4</sup> was made by the Privy Council, warning every one against false money, which had been found in considerable quantity "in the querrell hollis besyd the Cannongait," and prohibiting any one from searching there any more.

An Act of Parliament,<sup>5</sup> dated 11th September of this year, ordered the coinage of Sword and Sceptre gold pieces.<sup>6</sup> These were to be current at the rate of £6 each, with halves corresponding. A new silver coinage was also ordered, and all the former coins were to be brought in to the Mint at 55/ the ounce of eleven deneir fine, and re-coined at 60/ the ounce, of the same standard, in merk, half merk, forty penny, and twenty penny pieces.<sup>7</sup> Nine half merks were to be in the ounce, with the usual remedies of weight and fineness. These coins were to be current after the first of January, and all others were prohibited. The type of this coinage was originally very different from what was finally adopted.<sup>8</sup> By the same Act, 200 stone weight of copper was ordered to be minted into two-penny pieces at nine to the ounce. These were to have the same impression and circumscription as the former copper coinage, and no one was to refuse to take twelve pennies of this copper money in every twenty shillings of debt.

On the 22d of September, the Privy Council<sup>9</sup> assigned the profits of the above coinage to the Master of Elphinstone and his son, till such time as they should receive a sum of £41,000, owing by the king to the Master of Elphinstone. This assignation was renounced<sup>10</sup> in December, and on the same day a contract<sup>1</sup> was entered into between the king (with § 40. Annals consent of the Privy Council), and Sir David Murray of Gospertie and others to let to them of the reign of the Mint for one year. The tacksmen were to have liberty to buy gold and silver at James VI. whatever price they pleased, and might place the mint where they liked. They were to pay £45,899, 9s. 6d. of the usual money of Scotland as rent.

proclaimed money from having course, except the late coinages ordered by Parliament.

On the 13th July 1602, Alexander Reid, cutler in Edinburgh, was tried for false coining.<sup>2</sup> It appears that he was employed as a "printer" in the Mint, and had got some false blanks, which he stamped with the true dies of the merk piece. From Birrel's "Diary"<sup>3</sup> we learn that he was hanged for this offence on the 20th of the same month.

Another proclamation<sup>4</sup> was made in December against the course of the decayed money.

On the 25th of January the Privy Council<sup>5</sup> enjoined the strict observance of all the 1603.
Acts relating to bullion, and immediately afterwards<sup>6</sup> an assay was taken of the Pix, and all being found correct, the officers of the cunyie house were exonerated in all time coming. The contents of the assay box were given to the poor of Edinburgh, but the right of the General of the Mint to the assay pieces was fully acknowledged, and his consent to the gift recorded.

§ 40. Queen Elizabeth died on the 24th March 1603, and James the Sixth of Scotland was proclaimed First of England in the course of the same day.

On the 8th of April 1603, a proclamation was issued by the king<sup>7</sup> making the six 1603.
pound gold piece of Scotland current in England for ten shillings, and the merk piece for thirteen pence halfpenny.

On the 10th of September of the following year, Napier of Merchiston, General of the 1604.
Mint in Scotland, came up to London to confer regarding the coinage, and, according to Birrel, "the witt and knowledge of the general wes wonderit at be the Englishmen."<sup>8</sup> Considerable negotiations followed, of which an account is preserved in the Cotton MSS.,<sup>9</sup> and eventually the following arrangements were made.

At Whitehall, on the 15th of November, a special grant of ratification of privileges was made in favour of the officers of his majesty's Mint in Scotland. In this grant reference was made to the confirmation of privileges made by James V.<sup>1</sup> on the 23d of October in the thirtieth year of his reign, and to two others by James VI. under the Privy Seal, one on the 25th of June 1579, and the other on 22d April 1584.

On the same day proclamation<sup>2</sup> of a new coinage for Scotland was made, and on the following, a contract was entered into with Thomas Achesoun regarding the coinage of Scotland.

In consequence of a blank in the record of the Privy Council, the exact terms of this contract have long been uncertain. Very fortunately, however, a copy of the proclamation has recently been discovered among the Hopetoun papers, and a copy of the contract has been found in the collection at Gordonstone, and it is now certain that a most important addition must be made to the Scottish series.

It has always been hitherto supposed that the Scottish coinages, after James' accession to the English throne, differed from the English, in having the Scottish arms in two quarters of the shield; but this discovery shows that till the close of 1609 there was no difference between the coins minted in Scotland and England, save in the mint mark and the thistle on the horse trappings of the silver crown and half crown.<sup>3</sup>

The contract was entered into on the 16th of November 1604. By it the king, with advice of his Privy Council of England, and of the Estates and Council of Scotland, considering that the reduction of the gold and silver coinage of both countries to a perfect equality was an essential preparation for the union of the kingdoms, ordered gold to be coined of the fineness of twenty-two carats, and the silver of eleven deniers. Five sorts of gold coins were ordered to be struck, viz., the Unit<sup>4</sup> (or £12 Scots piece), the Double Crown<sup>5</sup> (or £6 Scots piece), the Britain Crown (or £3 Scots piece), the Thistle Crown<sup>6</sup> (or 48/ Scots piece), and the Half Crown (or 30/ Scots piece). Two grains of remedy of weight were to be allowed on the two larger pieces, and one grain on the smaller pieces. Out of every 20 lb. of gold coined, one pound at least was to be issued in the small gold pieces. The type was minutely described. On the reverse there was to be "his maiesties armes in ane new forme of schield quarterlie To witt in the first quarter Thrie floure de lycess croce with thrie libbertis croce and in the croce quarter als mekill, with ane lyoun in ane doubill Tressour in the uther quarter and the harpe in the ffourt quarter" . . . . The various legends for each piece were also given, and there was to be "ane littil thrissell at the

On the 16th of November, a proclamation<sup>7</sup> was made, narrating the inconvenience which had arisen from the proclamation of the 8th of April 1603, and authorising the new coinage of gold and silver to be current throughout Great Britain.

The former six pound and three pound gold pieces, and the merk and other silver coins of that series, were minted up to the close of this year, though they are of rare occurrence, and were probably issued in small quantity.

The new coinage began at the Scottish mint in 1605, the warrant being dated at Whitehall on the 13th February.<sup>8</sup> Registers of the amounts for that month are preserved, and have been noticed by Lindsay.<sup>9</sup> 1605.

The proclamation authorising the new money was made at Edinburgh, according to Birrell,<sup>10</sup> on the 4th of March 1605. The Privy Council record at this period is unfortunately lost, but some notes regarding the assays of this coinage and other memoranda have been preserved, and are given in the Appendix.

It was not till 1609<sup>11</sup> that the shield of arms on the reverse was altered, so that the arms of Scotland occupied two quarters instead of one, and warrant was given in December of that year to the graver of the irons to sink new dies with this reverse, though in every other respect the coins, both of gold and silver, were to remain as they had been before;<sup>12</sup> and the officers of the Mint were ordered to make all future coinages according to the new impression. The series of gold and silver coins minted between 1605 and 1610 were exactly the same both in England and Scotland, except the mint marks and the difference in workmanship, the Scottish dies being engraved by Foullis. 1609.

and acknowledged the receipt of a piece of standard gold and three pieces of coined gold from the Mint in London to be used for comparison with the gold coins in Scotland.

This was followed in June by an Act of Privy Council<sup>1</sup> regarding a complaint which had been made to them by John Achesoun, General of the Mint, Thomas Achesoun, master coiner, and the other officers, setting forth that the late Sir Archibald Napier of Edinbillie was made General of the Mint in 1576 by a gift under the privy seal, and that he died on the 15th of May 1608. During that time considerable coinages in all the metals had taken place, the warrants for which were in his custody at the time of his decease. The Acts are particularly specified, and many of them have since been lost. Besides the Acts it is stated that he at sundry times borrowed from the Cunyie house letters of exemptions and grants of privileges made by his majesty and his predecessors, and certain weights and balances, which properly belonged to the officers of the Mint. All these his representatives refused to deliver up. They were accordingly summoned before the Privy Council, and having appeared, they delivered up thirty-seven Acts, warrants, and letters, relating to the Cunyie house, and promised to hand over the other articles to the treasurer. An interesting inventory of the original writs of the Mint (taken probably at a later period, as it refers to Briot) is given in the Appendix.

1611. Thomas Achesoun died about this time, and on the 23d May 1611 George Foullis was appointed maister coiner in his place.<sup>2</sup> As there was no alteration in the coinage, the Lords of Council directed him to enter on his duties conform to the contract made with Achesoun till a new contract could be drawn up.

All the gold coins were raised about one-tenth in value by a proclamation made on the 26th November,<sup>3</sup> and all former Acts against exporting coin were renewed. This raising of the value of the gold coins took place also in England a day or two earlier.<sup>4</sup> A note of the remedies for the gold coins was sent from England to the Scottish mint.

1612. The Privy Council<sup>5</sup> on the 16th of January directed that the price per ounce for gold of 22 carat fine, paid at the Mint,<sup>6</sup> was to be at the rate of  $32/1\frac{1}{2}$  per denier; and that a table of prices for gold of every other standard was to be prepared and fixed in some public part of the cunyie house. The silver was to remain as it was settled by the Act of 15th November 1604. Foreign money was only to be received as bullion, and the officers of the mint were to regulate their accounts by the prices now fixed, though in other respects they were to adhere to the terms of the former contract with Thomas Achesoun. § 40. Annals of the reign of James VI. 1612.

The rates of seignorage were altered on March 5.<sup>1</sup> For the future the coinage of each stone weight (Scots) of silver was to be £25, 6s. 8d. (Scots), and for each ounce of gold 19s. 8d. (Scots). The seignorage before this date had been £10, 6s. 8d. (Scots) on each stone, and 13s. (Scots) on each ounce of gold, and for these rates only Foullis and his heirs were to be held accountable.

An Act of the Scottish Parliament<sup>2</sup> in October confirmed and ratified all the privileges, exemptions, and liberties formerly granted by the king on the 15th of November 1604, and at present enjoyed by the officers of the Mint.

On the 22d December, an Act of Privy Council<sup>3</sup> prohibited any one from passing foreign coin as currency, and ordered it to be brought to the Mint, where it would be paid for at the rates already set forth.

On the 17th of March, commissioners was appointed<sup>4</sup> to open the Pix with the assays from 1605 to the date of the commission, and after having made the necessary trials, the usual exonerations were granted.<sup>5</sup> 1613.

On the 20th of May, the master coiner was authorised to print all the clippings which had been found in the unlawful possession of Walter Geddes of St Andrews,<sup>6</sup> and on the same day an Act<sup>7</sup> was passed forbidding the currency of any copper coins within the realm, except what passed by special warrant and authority from the king, with the advice and consent of the Estates and Council, and also interdicting the importation of any foreign copper coins into the country.

In this year farthing tokens were made current in England on the 19th of May,<sup>8</sup> and on the 27th a proposal to coin 10,000 stone weight of copper into tokens for circulation in Scotland was laid before the Privy Council.<sup>9</sup> The proposer, whose name is not mentioned, offered £42 for the license and privilege. This overture having been carefully and “at grite lenthe” considered, the Lords “all in ane voice ffindis that the coyneing of suche ane quantitie of coppre vpoun the conditionis and offer specifiet in the said Lettres will infer far greitar hurte preiudice and Inconvenient to the commonnweele nor ony proffeitt or commoditie that may thairvpoun result” . . . .

James VI.

The Lords then recommended that 200 stone weight of copper should be coined in two penny pieces without profit, and directed a missive to this effect to be sent to the king.

Foreign money seems still to have been in the country, for on the 15th of June another proclamation<sup>1</sup> was issued by the Privy Council, raising the price at the mint for every denier of the old English gold to 35s., and in similar proportions for all the gold and silver money then current.

1614. In the beginning of the next year a new coinage of copper was authorised. The Privy Council on the 1st of March granted a warrant<sup>2</sup> to Charles Dickesoun, sinker of the irons, to engrave matrices for two penny and penny pieces,<sup>3</sup> having on the one side three thistles on a stalk, with IACOBVS . DEI . GRA . MAG . BRIT; and on the other, a lion crowned, with FRANCIE ET HIBERNIE . REX. The two penny piece was distinguished from the penny in type by having on the reverse two points behind the lion instead of one as on the penny.

An Act of Privy Council,<sup>4</sup> of date the 6th of April, confirmed all the acts formerly passed for bringing in bullion, and especially one of the reign of James IV., and ordered all merchants indebted in bullion to pay their dues within thirty days after the passing of the Act, or, failing payment, to be charged double rates.

The great want of small money was still very severely felt in the country, and on the 17th of May the Lords authorised<sup>5</sup> two hundred stone weight of copper to be coined in addition to the three hundred already ordered.

An overture,<sup>6</sup> of uncertain date, was made by Achesoun somewhere about this period, in which he proposed certain changes in the coinage, which were not apparently carried out.

1618. Another Act<sup>7</sup> about the bullion was passed by the Privy Council on the 31st March, ordering all who were indebted to make payment within ten days, or in default to be charged at a double rate.

by another proclamation<sup>1</sup> on the 11th, that this was to be current at the same rate as § 40. Annals of the reign of James VI. formerly; but the new English gold coin, the Spur Royal, was not to have course in Scotland.

Later in the year, in November, another proclamation<sup>2</sup> regulated the prices at which various gold pieces current in Great Britain were to have course for.

In this year a grant of all the fines and penalties recovered from those illegally transporting money was given to Sir G. Bruce by the king.<sup>3</sup> 1622.

On the 5th of August, a proclamation was made authorising a new coinage of copper. 1623. Five hundred stone weight of that metal was to be minted in two-penny and penny pieces, similar in type to the coinage of 1614, but with this difference in the legend of the reverse, FRAN . ET . HIB . REX, and of less weight, as sixteen of the two-penny pieces were to make an ounce weight.<sup>4</sup> The other regulations for this coinage were similar to those of 1614.

Lest there might be any scarcity of metal, an Act<sup>5</sup> was passed on the same day forbidding any one to export old copper till after Christmas.

On the 1st of April 1625, a warrant was granted to Charles Dickesoun to sink the dies for the seals and the irons of the coin house,<sup>6</sup> “after that same former ordour and impressioun as his maiesties dearest Lord and father’s seale and yrnis wer with alteration and change of his maiesties name and portrait allanerlie,” which was again confirmed on the 6th of the same month. He was paid £450 for these dies, as appears from his receipt,<sup>7</sup> still preserved in the Register House.

This was followed on the 15th by another warrant,<sup>8</sup> ordering the officials of the mint to proceed with the coinage of the following gold coins, viz. :—The Unit, or Double Angel;<sup>9</sup> the Double Crown, or Angel;<sup>10</sup> the Britain Crown, or three pound piece,<sup>11</sup> called the five merk piece; the Thistle Crown, called the four merk piece; and the Half crown, or two and a half merk piece. In silver, the following coins were ordered, viz. :—The silver crown, or three pound piece;<sup>12</sup> the thirty shilling piece, or half crown;<sup>13</sup> the twelve shilling (Scots) piece, or shilling;<sup>14</sup> the six shilling piece, or sixpence;<sup>15</sup> the two shilling,<sup>16</sup> the one shilling, and the half shilling piece in silver; and of the two penny and one penny piece in copper. All these were to be of the same fineness and weight as formerly.

1625. In August, Nicolas Briot presented to the king and the lords of his Council a "short and summarie advice"<sup>1</sup> regarding certain propositions made to the king for weakening and abating his coin. The petitioner asked his majesty to depute and ordain commissioners to hear him. There is no record of any further action taken at this time; but in October a letter<sup>2</sup> was directed by the king to Parliament, requiring them to take some steps to restrain the export of money, and pointing out various methods for achieving this. This was done,<sup>3</sup> and it was remitted to certain commissioners<sup>4</sup> to meet with the Lords of Council and confer regarding the heightening of the money, and to report the result of their deliberations to the king. No further step is recorded at this time, and shortly afterwards nearly the same procedure was again gone through, with no better result.

The Acts against exporting the coinage were re-enacted on the 2d of November; and on the same day certain commissioners were appointed<sup>5</sup> to meet and confer regarding the best means of raising the value of the money.

1626. The meetings of this commission were adjourned<sup>6</sup> on the 30th November 1626 to the last day of the following January.

In the meantime, on the 12th of December,<sup>7</sup> a Flemish ship, with a cargo of supposed silver ore, was captured and brought into the port of Leith; and the Master of the Mint was directed to proceed there and make a trial of the ore. His report<sup>8</sup> was rendered on the 14th of December, to the effect that no kind of metal was contained in the supposed ore.

1627. A further adjournment of the commission<sup>9</sup> anent the coin was made on the 25th of January 1627, and the 14th of March was fixed for their meeting. What took place then is not recorded; but on the 14th of June,<sup>10</sup> Archibald Lord Napier produced before the Privy Council a letter from the king, directing the Council to confer with the bearer regarding the abuses of the coin, upon which it was agreed to summon all the counsellors,

The meeting was accordingly held on the day appointed, and it was agreed<sup>1</sup> not to raise the course of the money, nor to restrain the course of foreign dollars till a more fitting opportunity.

John Achesoun, general of his majesty's coin house, gave in, on the 20th of December, to the Lords of the Privy Council, an information<sup>2</sup> regarding the state of the money within the realm. In this he showed that the best money was exported by the merchants, and the worst imported, viz., a kind of dollar called the dog dollar, only ix deniers fine, which, though not worth more than 40s., yet passed for 48s. The Lords ordered this matter to be considered on the 10th of January, on which day a committee was appointed to give in a report. This was followed by a proclamation forbidding the importation of any more of these dollars, and reducing the value of those in the country to 46s. each.<sup>3</sup>

Another proclamation<sup>4</sup> was made on the 23d of December 1628 prohibiting the dollars of Ferdinand II. to have course in the country. Several meetings of the officers of the Mint and the commissioners appointed to look into the matter of the coinage took place<sup>5</sup> about this period, and eventually it was agreed that the Rex and Lion Dollars should be current, and that some other sorts should be assayed at the Mint, and their fineness ascertained before any determination was come to. 1628.

On the 15th of April 1629 it was ordered<sup>6</sup> that five hundred stone weight of pure copper should be issued in two-penny and penny pieces,<sup>7</sup> of the same weight and type as the coinage of August 1623, save only the name CAROLVS instead of IACOBVS, and it was further ordered that the export of copper should be restrained in the meantime; and that some repairs in the machinery and buildings of the Mint should be made.<sup>8</sup> 1629.

On February the 8th a letter<sup>9</sup> from the king to the Council was read, directing their attention to the course of foreign coin, and requiring them to take measures for remedying this abuse. The consideration of this letter was delayed to the 23d inst.,<sup>10</sup> when certain commissioners were appointed to confer with the Master of the Mint and some of the leading merchants, regarding the evils complained of. 1630.

of the reign of Charles I.

John Achesoun, General of the Mint, appeared in person before the Lords of Council on the 18th of November, and gave in an overture<sup>1</sup> regarding the coinage. He maintained that all the abuses complained about, arose from foreign coins being current by the piece and not by weight and fineness only, as they used to be in the time of James VI. He proposed to remedy this by reducing all the foreign coins then current in Scotland below the fineness of the Rex dollar to small money of base alloy, while the Rex dollar, and other pieces of similar fineness, were to be melted down and re-issued in native currency.

A copy of this proposal was given to Mr Alex. Guthrie, town clerk of Edinburgh, that he might lay it before the burghs, and report their opinion and judgment in the following March.

1631 Accordingly, on the 3d of March,<sup>2</sup> David Aikenhead, late Provost of Edinburgh, with other commissioners from the burghs, appeared before the Privy Council, and expressed their disapproval of the overture presented by the General of the Mint. They apprehended great inconvenience if the course of the foreign dollars was discharged before any new national coinage had been issued. They thought the importation of these dollars should for the future be prohibited, and recommended that the merchants ought to be allowed to pay the bullion due by them direct to the Mint, and not to the farmers of the customs, and not before it was really due.

The matter was further delayed till the meeting of the Convention of Burghs; and in the meantime Aikenhead and Guthrie were requested to put their opinions and reasons in writing. This they accordingly did; and on the 8th March,<sup>3</sup> they again appeared before the Council, and gave in the recommendations of the Convention, which agreed in substance with those of the commissioners.

The Privy Council, on the 28th of July,<sup>4</sup> issued a proclamation giving these proposals the force of law, and interdicting the currency of all foreign coins, except a few specially permitted to be current.

A new coinage of farthing tokens was authorised by the Privy Council on the 26th of August.<sup>5</sup> These are described in the minute. They were to weigh eight grains (Scots) each, and to be current for three pennies (Scots). On the obverse were to be two Cs, interlaced thus—, crowned, with the legend, CAR . D . G . MAG . BRIT . ET . HIB . R ; and on the reverse a thistle, with NEMO ME IMPVNE LACESSET.<sup>1</sup> § 41. Annals
 The Council ordered fifteen hundred stone weight of pure copper to be issued in Charles I. of the reign of these tokens, and ordered all the copper money called turners to be called in.

It is specially mentioned that Briot was to be engaged in the Mint on these tokens, 1631. and it is recorded that the General and Master of the Mint protested against any stranger being employed in working the farthings. A commission was also appointed to make all the arrangements for issuing this coinage before the time appointed in the warrant, viz., the 1st of January 1633.

On the 10th of November, a proclamation<sup>2</sup> was made prohibiting the course of base farthing tokens, and their importation into the country.

By an Act of the 10th January of 1632, the type of the farthing tokens was changed, 1632. and a new one ordered in place of that authorised just before.<sup>3</sup> The coins were now authorised to be of two sorts, current respectively for 2d. and 1d., the latter still to weigh eight grains. The obverse of the 2d. was to bear an imperial crown, with C R at the sides of it, and I · I · beneath it ; and the penny the same, except only one I ·. The legends and reverse were the same as at first sanctioned. The proportion minted between the two sorts of coins was to be fixed from time to time by the Treasurer or his depute. This coinage was to be ready before 1st January 1635.

Considerable confusion exists as to these coinages. From a memorandum in the Hopetoun Papers,<sup>4</sup> it appears that the farthing tokens<sup>5</sup> were the next copper coinage after the "turners with the three thistles."<sup>6</sup>

In June, Nicholas Briot made an overture to the king regarding the abuse of the foreign money in Scotland,<sup>7</sup> and proposed that it should be called in, melted, and re-issued from the Scottish Mint in small money, of which there was then great need. Rex dollars he proposed to buy in at 4s. 8d. sterling, and other silver coins proportionately, to the rate of 5s. 4d. sterling per ounce of xi ð fine. After a certain period, the dollars were to be reduced to their proper value of 4s. 5d. The small money he proposed to issue in 4d., 2d. and 1d. pieces of x ð fine, rather than of xi ð fine, in order to pay the expense of refining the foreign money to that standard.

 Museum, from Sir J. Twisden's collection. See Pl.

§ 41. Annals of the reign of Charles I.

To this proposition is appended the king's letter to the Privy Council, of date 6th of June, directing them to consider Briot's overture, and also any which might be made by John Acheson.

Briot apparently determined soon after this to go to Scotland, for in October another letter from the king was directed to the Privy Council, stating that he had sent Briot to Edinburgh, and directing them again to consider his proposition and any other overtures submitted to them, and authorising them to take whatever course they might judge most expedient. On the 20th November, the commissioners from the boroughs, and the officers of the Mint, appeared before the Council, and were ordered to give in their opinions in writing by the 29th, but this proving too short notice, it was further adjourned to the 10th of January.<sup>1</sup>

On the 6th December, Nicholas Briot—described in the minute as the Chief Graver of the English Mint—appeared in person before the Privy Council at Edinburgh,<sup>2</sup> and gave in writing, explanations necessary to understand the propositions made by him for reforming the abuse of foreign coin already noticed, with many arguments in support of his views, which, having been heard and considered by the Lords of Privy Council, they ordered copies to be given to the town of Edinburgh and the officers of the Cunyie house, to be considered by them, and answers lodged by the 10th of January next, along with the answers to the other propositions already alluded to.

In the meantime it was evident that this interference of the chief engraver of the English Mint, in the matters more properly belonging to the Scottish one, was not favourably received by the officers of the Cunyie house.

On the 11th December, the Privy Council<sup>3</sup> was made aware that the General and officers of the Mint had seized some quantity of the copper coin, as being not according to the Act of Council, and that Briot wanted to have this delivered to him. The Lords of Council recommended the General of the Mint to use the said Briot with all courtesy, and favour him as far as he could.

1633. The Privy Council met on the 10th of January, and appointed the 15th of that month for the answers and overtures to be given in.

Accordingly, on that day<sup>4</sup> a commissioner for the town of Edinburgh, the General of the Cunyie-house, and George Foullis, master coiner, appeared personally before the Privy Council, and each gave in answers and overtures anent the proposition made by Nicholas Briot. The consideration of these was adjourned,<sup>1</sup> and in the interim a warrant was granted<sup>2</sup> to the deputy treasurer and the king's advocate to pursue importers of foreign dollars and exporters of native coin. On the 29th, accordingly, the Council met,<sup>3</sup> and having first heard Briot's proposition, they then heard the answers to it, and the overtures by the various parties above mentioned.

§ 41. Annals of the reign of Charles I.

The borough's answer was brought up by Mr John Sinclair.<sup>4</sup> It began with a repetition of Briot's propositions, and after a very unnecessary sneer at him as "ane stranger," it proceeded to show that the remedy proposed would be worse than the disease. Briot's arguments were discussed in detail, and it was averred that his proposal about the rex dollars would be a greater burden on the people than any tax that had ever been granted. The boroughs objected to the proposed coinage of small money of x ð fine—first, on account of the excessive gain to the proposer, and consequent loss to the people; and also because it would be a different standard from that of England. They pointed out that the consent of Parliament ought to be got before any coinage below the legal standard could be issued. The document is very lengthy, and not a little of it is taken up with unnecessary personal abuse of the proposer. An information for the boroughs is also preserved.<sup>5</sup> Acheson's answer<sup>6</sup> is shorter, and he brings prominently forward the fact that Briot had not succeeded with the copper coinage, not less than 30 stone weight having already failed to fulfil the conditions of his contract. Foullis answers<sup>7</sup> very clearly, and briefly points out the results which would follow the adoption of Briot's overture. The Master Coiner proposed that the amount of bullion brought in by merchants under the present law should be temporarily trebled; next that the price paid per ounce should be raised from 55/ to 58/; that exporters of goods and stock to England should bring back a certain proportion of the price in native currency or foreign money of equal fineness, for which they should have payment at the Mint in dollars at £3 the ounce; and that a somewhat similar course should be taken with foreign purchasers of coal and salt. These regulations were to continue in force for two years, and then, with the consent of England, he proposed to call up the money to £3, 6s. 8d. Scots the ounce of xi ð fine. In an additional overture<sup>8</sup> of same date he adduces further reasons in support of his propositions, and other objections to Briot's.

To this overture of the Master Coiner's,<sup>9</sup> Mr John Sinclair, on behalf of the boroughs, produced a very lengthy reply, in which many objections are urged against these proposals.

Acheson's overture<sup>1</sup> has been also preserved. He proposed to bring in 500 stone weight of the dollar called the dog dollar at the present price, and to re-issue them in alloyed money of vi ð fine, in half merk, forty, and twenty penny pieces. These were not to have course in England, and any profit arising from them was to be employed in defraying the expense of coining the rex dollars into standard pieces. All money for coal and salt exported beyond sea was to be paid for in gold.

These various documents having been read, the Lords resolved<sup>2</sup> to continue the consideration of them to a future meeting, and directed the boroughs to depute a representative from Edinburgh to appear in their behalf, and confer with the Privy Council when required.

Warrant was granted by the Lords on the 21st of February<sup>3</sup> to examine certain persons charged about the copper coins; and on the 25th of May they received a missive<sup>4</sup> from the king, requiring them to consider certain overtures made to him, and enclosed for their opinion, to be given to him at his coming, which matter was left by the Council for the consideration of Parliament. On the last day of May, the Privy<sup>5</sup> Council ordered the copper coin sequestrated to be delivered to Briot.

In June, the Estates convened at Edinburgh,<sup>6</sup> and the commissioners of the shires presented an article touching the scarcity of gold and silver coin, and the course of dollars and foreign base money in the country. It was remitted to the Privy Council to take such steps in the matter as they deemed advisable, and it was ordered that what they resolved on should have the force of law.

In the same Parliament, the king sitting in person, protested that, though he had for sundry reasons consulted the Privy Council in matters of money, it was not to prejudice his royal prerogative of managing such matters without the consent of the Estates—an assumption heretofore unknown in Scotland.

Commission was also given in this Parliament to the Privy Council to regulate the rate of interest due on loans to be advanced on exchange on London.<sup>7</sup>

The Privy Council,<sup>8</sup> on the 1st day of February, required Mr William Gray and Alexander Guthrie to meet and confer with the commissioners of boroughs anent the coin, and to report their opinions on the following Thursday; and they ordered the officers of the Cunyie-house to be present then.

No minute of this meeting appears in the Records of the Privy Council, but amongst the miscellaneous MSS. relating to the coinage preserved in the Register House there is an overture<sup>1</sup> by the burghs, which seems to have been produced to the Privy Council on the 6th of February by Mr Alexander Guthrie. It was proposed to lower the currency of the dollars gradually; every six months they were to be reduced 12 ¢ till they reached the value at which they were then current in England. All foreign gold and silver money was to be converted into his majesty's coin at the same rate as it was then in England, viz., £3, 7s. 1d. per ounce English, free of charge, for gold of 22 carat, and 5s. per ounce for silver of xi ¢ fine. They desired, further, that, till the scarcity of small money should be alleviated, all the bullion should be issued in 16 ¢, 20 ¢, 2 s, 32 ¢, 3 s, 40 ¢, 4 s, 5 and one plack pieces, and half merk pieces, in order that the mode of reckoning might be a little different from the English, and so "make some impediment in the transporting thereof."

§ 41. Annals

Charles I.

Warrant was granted, on the 13th of March, by the Privy Council,<sup>2</sup> to coin 1500 stone weight of copper, in addition to that ordered in January 1632, but of the same type, weight, and value.

A letter from the king to the Lords<sup>3</sup> was read on the 4th December, ordering them to take measures to punish the importers of English farthing tokens discharged by an Act of Council in that country, and also to prevent the importation of false and counterfeit farthings and turners.

On the same day, there was minuted in the Records of the Council<sup>4</sup> an Act of Exchequer, bearing date 6th November 1634, in favour of the Earl of Stirling, granting him for nine years, or longer if necessary, the profits of the copper coinage in Scotland in payment of some monies due to him. Six thousand stone of copper was to be issued immediately after the fifteen hundred stones already authorised. It appears from another record<sup>5</sup> that the Earl of Stirling was at all the expense of Briot coming to Scotland to strike this coinage.

of counterfeit turners and farthings in his possession, they were ordered by the Lords of Privy Council<sup>1</sup> to be taken to the Cunyie-house, and there defaced or melted down.

A proclamation was made on the 17th of February,<sup>2</sup> prohibiting the course of false farthings and turners, and the importation of all such, and of foreign copper coins, under severe penalties; and declaring that forgers and counterfeiters of coin should be punished with death.

In spite of all this, however, the importation of false and foreign money was actively carried on, and on March 17th, the Privy Council<sup>3</sup> granted a commission to certain persons to take steps for finding out the guilty persons, with full power to apprehend them and bring them before the Council.

On the 1st of April a similar commission<sup>4</sup> was granted to the Bishop of Moray, and to such others as he should nominate and appoint, to search for and seize all persons making false dollars.

A letter from the king to the Council<sup>5</sup> regarding the coin was read at their meeting on the 2d July, in which he announced that he had ordered Briot to repair to Scotland, and directed the Council to call him before them, along with any others interested, and hear and report their propositions and answers. The Council met again on the 9th July,<sup>6</sup> and adjourned the consideration of the money to their next meeting. On the 9th, they met again, and had before them one Leonard Leslie, accused of having in his possession false dollars.

Proclamation was made on the 7th August<sup>7</sup> anent the coin, setting forth that all merchants were to pay the bullion due by them to the Mint in coin brought from beyond seas, the produce of their exports, that it might be made into his majesty's own coin, and that merchants and drovers were not to exchange the king's money for foreign. Coalmasters and owners of salt-works were to receive payment only in native currency, or ryalls and quart d'écus.

On the same day, Nicholas Briot was appointed Master of the Mint,<sup>8</sup> in the room of Geo. Foullis, recently deceased. He was ordered to make pieces of gold and silver conform to the contract between the late king and Thomas Achesoun, until a new contract could be arranged.

Briot was accordingly sworn in to perform the duties of his office, and all the officials were commanded to obey his orders.

Geo. Foullis, son of the late master, was ordered to hand over all the things belonging to the Mint, in the charge of the late master, upon inventory.

The inventory is dated 11th August, and bears that, in the presence of John Achesoun, General of the Mint, and the other officials and workmen, sundry articles were handed over, including weights, balances, shears, casting implements, ladles, hammers, and a long list of other implements and necessaries.

Certain commissioners were appointed in June<sup>3</sup> to confer with Briot anent the conditions of the contract to be made with him, and as to the management of the Mint. Accordingly, on the 11th of that month, the commissioners convened, and, having carefully inquired into the office of master coiner, not only at the officials of the Mint, but also at several of the chief merchants, found that the master coiner should, in the first place, find sufficient caution for the faithful discharge of his office, and that he should reside within the country. To both of these conditions Briot (being present) objected, on the ground that he was already the king's officer in the Mint in London, and that, if he resided permanently in Scotland, he would lose the £300 per annum he had in England. The officials of the Scottish Mint, on the other hand, objected to his being appointed both master coiner and also graver of the irons; as being neither convenient nor according to precedent; and they further pointed out that Briot intended to introduce a new species of coining mill, which might make some difference not authorised either by the Estates of Scotland or the Parliament of England. Accordingly, the commissioners reported to the Council that they would petition the king not to introduce any novelties into the Mint of Scotland.

On the 23d of June, the Council<sup>4</sup> were obliged to authorise the Lord High Treasurer to arrange temporarily with Briot, until such time as the king should make known his pleasure about the appointment of master coiner, for coining some small money on the best conditions he could make; but it was specially provided that this should in no way strengthen his pretension to any office in the Mint.

The result of these negotiations is minuted in the Record of 21st July.<sup>1</sup> The whole bullion at present owing in the merchants' hands was to be brought to the Mint and struck (according to the manner of striking used before) into half merk, xl ð, and xx ð<sup>2</sup> pieces of xi ð fine, of which the type is minutely described. One-fourth of all the bullion was to be issued in half merk pieces, and the remainder equally divided among the other sorts.

This coinage was to be issued as quickly as possible; and it was expressly provided that, as Charles Dickeson, the graver of the Mint, had "not beene in use to graue his majesties face, and that the said Nicolas Briot being cheife grauer to his majestie in the Mynt of England is best experienced with such livelie impressions," therefore he was ordered to "grave" the "effigies" for the above three coins, and give them to Dickeson to sink; and a warrant<sup>3</sup> was granted to Dickeson to sink the irons accordingly. This coinage has never hitherto been properly appropriated.

Shortly afterwards, a proclamation was made,<sup>5</sup> informing all and sundry of the new coinage, and providing that no dollars should have course for more than 54s Scots the piece. And on the same day an Act<sup>6</sup> was made regarding foreign copper coinage, interdicting every one from importing it into the country.

Briot was evidently still desirous of trying his new machinery in the Mint, for on the 14th September<sup>7</sup> it is expressly minuted that the new coinage was to be made in the old way, with the hammer, at least until his majesty should make his pleasure known about the matter.

In November, further discussion on the subject of the coinage took place in the Privy Council,<sup>8</sup> and it ended by Briot's being called in before the Council, and asked if he would convert two parts of the dollars at present in the kingdom into 12s and 6s Scots<sup>9</sup> pieces, paying back to the bringers 54s Scots for each dollar—which he undertook to do if he was allowed to coin them in his mill, and if the king would dispense with any profit from the coinage.

Certain prisoners were to be examined about the false dollars, and, if necessary, they were to be tortured to confess their accomplices.<sup>1</sup>

In January of this year, Briot succeeded<sup>2</sup> at last in getting a trial for his new machinery, on the terms indicated above, but it is not certain whether he received a direct permission to use the mill and screw for the small coins. At any rate, it was to be tried for the two larger pieces (the 12 s and 6 s Scots), and Dickeson was empowered to sink dies similar to what were used in the time of the late Thos. Achesoun, and Briot was directed to assist him when necessary.

On the 14th of February, the Council<sup>3</sup> considered a proposition made by the Lord Alexander about coining some copper money in the Mint, and some other matters: and on the 1st of April, they formally permitted Briot to use his mill<sup>4</sup> till the 15th day of June.

Eighteen hundred stone weight of copper were ordered to be coined by an Act of Council, on the 6th of June,<sup>5</sup> the profit of which was to go to the Earl of Stirling. It will be seen later that this grant caused great popular dissatisfaction. On the same day, warrant<sup>6</sup> was granted to commit an individual to prison charged with having clippings of the coins illegally in his possession, and to search the premises of a burghess of Glasgow charged with the same offence.

Considerable attention seems to have been given at this time to the coinage, and reports for the information of the Privy Council were furnished by Achesoun.<sup>8</sup>

Commission under the Great Seal was given to certain members of the Privy Council to consider the state of the Mint,<sup>9</sup> and the Town Council of Edinburgh were requested to choose some "understanding persons" from among themselves, or from the burghs, to attend the meeting of the commissioners. The officers of the Mint and some others were also ordered to attend. In the meantime, proclamation was made that no change would take place in the rate of currency of the dollars.<sup>10</sup>

The same day, the Town Clerk of Edinburgh and certain members of the Council appeared before the Privy Council,<sup>11</sup> and stated their opinion that the crying up of annual rents and the encouragement of trade by easing the customs would greatly increase the stock of money in the country.

On the 2d of August, Briot presented a missive<sup>1</sup> from the king, requiring the Council to set the Mint to work at once upon the gold and silver coins, and to settle the copper coinage as was formerly directed. The Privy Council ordered this letter to be given up to the burghs, and their opinion on it to be given in the next day.

On the 3d, therefore, the conference took place,<sup>2</sup> and in the minute it is recorded that the Lords, in obedience to his Majesty's commands, had made choice of Nicolas Briot, a native of the duchy of Lorraine, to be Master of the Mint, and had joined with him in that office his son-in-law, John Falconer, and had conferred on them all the powers, privileges, immunities, and casualties enjoyed by the holders of the said office.

This was followed in October by a warrant<sup>3</sup> to continue the use of the mill (of which the former licence had expired) till November, and to coin with it xxx s pieces (Scots), xii s pieces, half merks, xl d, and xx d pieces.<sup>4</sup>

On the 19th of the same month, a warrant<sup>5</sup> was granted for coining the gold from Guinea (brought home by certain adventurers) in the pieces, and of the weights, values, and fineness as expressed in the contract of 15th April 1625, and preceding contracts passed between the king and the late master coiners.

This was, however, to some extent altered on the 14th of December,<sup>6</sup> when it was minuted that the legend on the one side of the greater pieces should be HIS PRÆSVM VT PROSIM, and on the lesser pieces, VNITA TVEMVR.<sup>7</sup>

On the same day, Briot received a general licence, without any restriction of time, to use his machinery for the coinage.<sup>8</sup>

The copper coinage was ordered to cease in the meantime, and the warrants for it were to be produced.<sup>9</sup>

1639. In June,<sup>10</sup> the crown (60 s Scots) and sixpence (6 s Scots) were ordered to be coined, and the price of gold was fixed at £30, 6s. 8d. the ounce, English silver plate at £2, 17s. 9d. the ounce, and Scottish plate at £2, 15s. 6d. the ounce.

By an Act of Parliament,<sup>11</sup> on the 16th of September, the importation of copper money was prohibited, on the pain of death; and on the 25th of the same month, an Act was passed discharging the Master of the Mint and others from taking the bullion before hand; § 41. Annals of the reign of Charles I. 1639. and it was proposed in the same Parliament to coin no more copper money, and to alter the value of the turners. In the following month,<sup>1</sup> the barons wished to reduce this coin to one halfpenny, but this did not pass.

On the 2d of November, a special proclamation<sup>2</sup> was made against false “turners,” and the currency of those lately printed was reduced to one penny (Scots).

The evils arising from the great quantity of these small copper coins, struck probably under the Earl of Stirling’s licence, were loudly complained against, and it is related by Spalding that trade was almost at a standstill.

On the 7th of November,<sup>3</sup> the Privy Council, at the earnest recommendation of the Town Council of Edinburgh, rescinded their proclamation of the 2d curt. as to the reduction of the turners to a penny Scots, and permitted them to be current for the same value as formerly.

The Privy Council sent a long reply to some queries addressed to them from England regarding the course and value of the gold currency.<sup>4</sup> 1641.

It was represented to the Parliament convened at Edinburgh<sup>5</sup> in August 1641, that immediate steps should be taken about the copper money, but nothing is recorded. An Act<sup>6</sup> about the payment of the bullion due by the merchants was passed on the 10th of September; and on the 30th, Sir James Hope was appointed General of the Mint.

On the 24th February, a new copper coinage was authorised by Act of Privy Council.<sup>7</sup> 1642. Fifteen hundred stone weight of pure copper was ordered to be issued in two penny pieces, of which ten and two-parts of a piece were ordered to be in the ounce weight, and fourscore and five and one-third were to be in the merk weight. On one side, this two penny piece<sup>8</sup> was to bear an imperial crown, with C R at the sides, and the legend CAR . D . G . SCOT . ANG . FRA . ET . HIB . R; and on the other, a thistle, with NEMO ME IMPVNE LACASSET (sic.). These coins were to be issued before the 1st of January next, and no one was obliged to take more than sixpence of them in a pound. The old copper coinage was discharged, and the Master of the Mint authorised to pay 13s. 4d. per pound for it, if presented at the Cunyie-house.

Dollars, ryalls, and cardecues (quart d’écu) were prohibited being current<sup>9</sup> below certain weights, and the value was fixed at 54 s (Scots) for the piece of fifteen drop, 53 s 4 d for fourteen drop, and 9 s for the cardecues.

1642. A warrant for a new coinage was issued on the 28th of March 1642.<sup>1</sup> It prohibited, in the first place, any further coinage of the half merk, forty, or twenty penny pieces, and ordered in their stead two new coins, one to be current for 3 s (Scots), and the other for 2 s.<sup>2</sup> The latter piece was to bear the king's portrait on the obverse, with "I I" on the right side thereof, and the usual legend; and on the reverse, the lion within a double tressure, crowned with the legend IVST . THRONVM . FIRMAT. The three shilling piece was to have the king's head on the obverse, with the head of a thistle behind it, with the usual legend; and on the reverse, his majesty's arms, with the legend, SALVS REIP. SVPREMA LEX. These coins were to be of the same standard as the former issue. Dickeson was to grave the irons, but there is nothing said about Briot giving him any assistance.

This very important record corrects an error which will be found in every work on Scottish numismatics, and shows that the piece with the thistle behind the head is part of a distinct coinage, and not a new variety of the half merk, as has been always hitherto assumed.

On the 15th of April<sup>3</sup> the Lords of Privy Council ordered that no foreign coin should be current except rex dollars of 15 drop weight for 54/, and others particularly specified.

1644. Some dissatisfaction existed in reference to the fees payable to the officials in the Mint for the copper coinage, and various papers bearing on the matter are preserved.<sup>4</sup>

Sir James Hope presented an overture to Parliament anent the money, in which he proposed a new coinage of xx d pieces.<sup>5</sup> This was not favourably received, and shortly afterwards<sup>6</sup> he made another attempt to impress on parliament the necessity for some change in the currency. This met with no better reception, and a final attempt<sup>7</sup> was equally unsuccessful. In November of this year a further coinage of copper was ordered, which was extended in May 1646 to the following November.<sup>8</sup>

In August 1645, Parliament<sup>9</sup> raised the value of the coin, and fixed the rex dollar at 58/.

§ 42. On the 5th of February 1649 the Estates of Parliament<sup>1</sup> ordered all the irons of the Cunyie-house to be delivered to John, Earl of Loudoun, in order that they might take order for altering or changing them if they saw fit; and on the 12th June a committee was appointed<sup>2</sup> to consider the rates of money, and to take measures for getting a supply of bullion. The result of their deliberations is not stated.

§ 42. Annals of the reign of
Charles II.
1649.

In the following year, a letter<sup>3</sup> was sent by the Estates to the conservator to get the king's portrait, in order to make matrices for striking the coin. In July, Sir John Falconer was authorised<sup>4</sup> to mint three score stone of copper and no more. There are no details of this coinage given, nor any description of the dies, so it is impossible to say whether it differed from the former issue or not.

In December a paper was presented to the Estates<sup>5</sup> about a warrant given to the Master of the Mint to coin gold and silver, which was remitted to the various bodies, but the particulars and the result are not specified.

A committee was named on the 21st March 1651 to consider the rates of the money,<sup>6</sup> and to take steps to prevent the exportation of the coin, and to report their opinions to Parliament; and on the following day another committee<sup>7</sup> was named to consider the paper given in about the coinage.

Parliament considered the question on the 31st March<sup>8</sup> at Perth, and raised the shilling to 13/4, and the Double Angel to £15 Scots, and all other pieces to corresponding prices. On the same day certain commissioners were appointed<sup>9</sup> to examine the Mint at Dundee, and to apply a sum not exceeding 2000 merks in repairing it.

A committee of the English Parliament met the deputies from Scotland on November 16, 1652,<sup>10</sup> to confer regarding the money. The deputies complained of the great scarcity of money in the country, nothing being current but ryalls and cross dollars, and those for the most part counterfeit, and urged the committee to bring the matter before Parliament.

A further conference took place on the 25th November,<sup>11</sup> and on the 21st December the deputies proposed to Parliament to set the Mint going again, and to call in the ryalls and re-issue them, and to apply £10,000 (besides the repairs) for this purpose.

It was proposed to issue £5000 worth of bodles for Scotland, and the committee recommended this to be done, but the Council<sup>12</sup> thought nothing was required.

the reign of
Charles II.
1660.

On the 4th of December of this year, Charles Maitland of Halton was appointed General of the Mint.

On New Year's day 1661, Parliament solemnly ratified and confirmed the liberties, privileges, and immunities of the officers of the Mint,<sup>1</sup> which had been granted to them from the time of David II., and often confirmed by his successors, and especially by James V. in the thirtieth year of his reign, and by James VI. in 1584, and at other times. This Act recites fully all the privileges and liberties claimed and enjoyed by the officials of the Mint, and refers particularly to the grants formerly made.

The Provost of Edinburgh, Sir Robert Murray of Cameron, protested, in name of the municipality, against any encroachment on the rights of the burgh of Edinburgh by this ratification, and his protest is entered in the records of Parliament.

On the same day a warrant was given<sup>2</sup> to Charles Maitland, General of the Mint, to search for and seize any tools or articles belonging to the Mint, and carry them there for his majesty's use.

On the 12th of June, three thousand stone weight of copper were ordered to be coined into turners.<sup>3</sup> The General of the Mint and the master (Sir J. Falconer) were to furnish the copper equally between them, and it was specially ordered to be good, pure copper, without any mixture of brass, and of the same intrinsic value as the last. Each turner was to weigh one drop and a half, with an allowance of four grains more or less for remedy. Two thousand stone weight was to be coined within the space of three years, and the remainder when the Lords of Privy Council should think fit. To them was also referred the impression and legend.<sup>4</sup> As soon as the Mint was in readiness to issue this new coinage, the Privy Council was to prohibit the importation and currency of all foreign copper coin; but any copper which was required for the coinage was to be imported free of duty.

A stock of 20,000 merks Scots was also provided for the Mint,<sup>5</sup> and it was ordered that any silver or gold found in Scotland was to be taken to the Cunyie-house, and paid for at the rate of one ounce of coined gold of 22 carat for the ounce of bullion of 24 carat, and similarly the silver ounce of 12 denier fine to be paid by an ounce of minted silver coin of xi ð fine. A coinage of four-merk pieces,<sup>6</sup> with half,<sup>7</sup> quarter,<sup>8</sup> eighth,<sup>9</sup> and sixteenth was also authorised, and it was remitted to the Privy Council to fix the type and legends.

The Privy Council on the 2d of October considered a report<sup>1</sup> given in to them by the Lord President of Session and the Provost of Edinburgh, regarding the petition presented by the General of the Mint, in which they recommended that letters be granted at the instance of the General or Master of the Mint against any one contravening the Acts about bullion; and they advised that Sir John Falconer should be sent for to come home with the stamps, and that the receivers were to pay the three hundred pounds ordered by Parliament, immediately.

the reign of
Charles II.

On the same day a letter to the secretary<sup>2</sup> was read and approved of, proposing to raise the value of the gold coins in proportion to the late rise in England, and also requesting that the new dies might be delivered as soon as possible to Sir John Falconer, that he might return to Scotland and get the coinage commenced without delay. A proclamation<sup>3</sup> was issued against turners made of mixed metal and one-third less in weight than they ought to be. These were represented as having different legends. About the thistle there was DEVS PROTECTOR NOSTER, and about the crown and capital letters C.R. NOMEN DOMINI SIT BENEDICT.<sup>4</sup> These were altogether prohibited, and the importers of them were to be punished.

The Lords of the Privy Council approved, on the 14th of November, of a letter to the king,<sup>5</sup> asking that in future his royal commands concerning the coinage should be sent direct from himself to the Privy Council, and not through the Lord Secretary. This request was apparently complied with, for on the 26th of November a proclamation<sup>6</sup> was made raising the gold coinage to the same rate as it was current in England, or about one shilling and four pence on the xx/ piece.

The Lords of the Privy Council, on the 24th of April, caused a proclamation to be made<sup>7</sup> forbidding the importation of any foreign copper coin, but seeing that the Mint was not yet in readiness, they permitted temporarily the currency of French "doits" at one penny Scots each.

On the 10th of July, the bond of caution for Briot and Sir John Falconer was again produced<sup>8</sup> by the Lord Register, and registered in the Books of the Council.

On the same day a report was given in by certain commissioners<sup>9</sup> about the difference which had arisen between the General and the Master of the Mint, chiefly regarding the expenditure of the £300 already mentioned, and the lodgings in the Mint. Sir John Falconer was to have whatever rooms he required for himself and his family, and any not required by him were to be given up for the General's use.

Lord Tarbett was added to the commissioners of Privy Council<sup>1</sup> formerly named, and they were appointed to meet on the 9th August and report regarding the Mint and the copper money.

The King, on the 14th of November, commanded Thomas Simon to make puncheons<sup>2</sup> with his majesty's effigies thereon, and the royal arms, for the Mint in Scotland. These were to be for one gold coin of 20 merks, for silver coins of 4 merks, 2 merks, 1 merk,  $\frac{1}{2}$  merk, and xl d pieces. These dies, with the exception of the one for the gold coinage, were delivered to the General of the Mint on the January following.

In the British Museum Library<sup>3</sup> there is the account for these stamps. The xl d stamp is included, but not the four merk piece. The whole charge made by Simon for these was only £100.

This was followed in June by a minute of the Council<sup>4</sup> appointing certain lords to meet and consider the propositions given in by the General of the Mint regarding the coinage, and to make inquiry for certain articles belonging to the Mint, which were at one time in the possession of the late Sir James Hope of Hopetoun.

On the 2d of July, an Act<sup>5</sup> was passed anent the Mint ordering the delivery to the graver of the puncheons for the 4 merk piece, 2 merk piece, merk, half-merk, and xl d. piece, in order that dies and matrices might be prepared forthwith.

Another Act,<sup>6</sup> on the 20th October, gave the types, &c., of this coinage. It ordered the issue only of two-merk, merk, and half-merk pieces, and the type was to be the same as on the puncheons produced by the General, and since graven by the graver of the Mint. The weights and purity, with the remedies, were also fully specified.

It will be observed that this only authorised the coinage of three out of the five species of coins noticed in the Act of Parliament. Joachim Harder was the sinker of the irons.

On the 1st of December, the Council wrote to the Lord Secretary,<sup>7</sup> stating that the standard pieces furnished by King James to the Scottish Mint had been lost during the time of the late troubles, and requesting others to be sent, as they were necessary for the coinage which was about to go on in the Scottish Mint. Three separate standards were required—one for Exchequer, one for the General, and one for the master worker. § 42. Annals of the reign of Charles II. 1664.

On the 9th of February, the Lords Justice-Clerk and Register were recommended to speak to Sir John Falconer and his son anent the Mint matters, and report to the next Council day.

Accordingly, on the 16th of February, the Masters of the Mint were required to find sufficient caution<sup>1</sup> for the faithful performance of their duties, and on the 23d of the same month their bond of caution<sup>2</sup> was entered on the minutes.

The standard pieces requested by the Privy Council<sup>3</sup> were sent down by the English Exchequer, and delivered over to the officials of the Scottish Mint on the 24th of March;<sup>4</sup> and on the same day an Act<sup>5</sup> was passed authorising the issue of 4 merk pieces,<sup>6</sup> in addition to the coins sanctioned the previous year. The type, legends, purity, and weight were all specified.

The General of the Mint presented to the Lords of Council, on the 2d of June, a letter<sup>7</sup> from the king regarding the coinage of copper formerly ordered, and extending the three years allowed for coining the first two thousand stone till ten months after June 1664, seeing the coinage had not begun till the end of July 1663; and further ordered the last thousand stone to be coined within fourteen months after the end of the first coinage.

A commission was appointed on the 28th of November 1667 to report concerning the leg dollars and the laws made against the exportation of money. To this committee the General of the Mint was added in December, and on the 19th of that month their report<sup>8</sup> was laid before the Privy Council. The committee found that the foreign dollars were current at too high a rate, and recommended that they should be reduced in value, or that the coin of the realm be raised in the proportion of a merk for each shilling sterling. A careful report as to the fineness, weight, and value of those coins, prepared by the officials of the Mint, is appended. 1667.

On the 16th of July 1668, a royal warrant was produced to the Privy Council by the General of the Mint prolonging the copper coinage till August; but he having intimated that it was now finished, the dies were produced and broken.<sup>9</sup> 1668.

A proclamation was made in January 1670 reducing the value of the leg dollars to 56/ Scots.<sup>10</sup> 1670.

Charles II.

In August of the same year Parliament ratified the gift<sup>1</sup> of General of the Mint to Charles Maitland of Haltoun and his eldest son, and the longest liver of them, with all the privileges and advantages thereto belonging. The various immunities and liberties enjoyed by the members of the Mint were also confirmed by an Act of the same Parliament.<sup>2</sup>

1671. The importation of foreign copper coin, such as French doits, was prohibited by a proclamation, dated the 20th day of July 1671.<sup>3</sup>

1673. On the 2d of December 1673, the Earl of Dumfries gave in an overture touching the coin,<sup>4</sup> to be considered by the Lords of Articles. He proposed that a certain number of persons of every estate should be appointed to look into the whole matter of the coinage, and report to Parliament.<sup>5</sup>

1674. In January 1674, a commission was given to certain lords to try the assays from 1664 to 1673; and their report was rendered on the 27th of January.<sup>6</sup>

At a meeting of Privy Council on the 30th of March,<sup>7</sup> a letter was read from the king requiring them to grant full exoneration to the officials of the Mint for the coinages from 1664 to 1673, of which an assay had lately been taken. The report of the commissioners is given at full length,<sup>8</sup> and their procedure approved of by the Council.

1675. On the 11th of February 1675, a letter from the king was recorded in the minutes of Privy Council,<sup>9</sup> ordering a change in the reverse side of the coins of silver; and an Act of Privy Council of 25th February,<sup>10</sup> after minutely rehearsing the type, weight, and value of the former coinage, authorised the issue of the new one, with the changes ordered by the royal warrant. All the particulars regarding these new pieces are minutely given in the Act.<sup>11</sup>

1676. A committee was appointed in November to report on the affairs of the coinage,<sup>12</sup> and their report was given in on the last day of February 1677. They recommended that the finer of the foreign coins, such as the French crown and Spanish and Dutch ducatoons, should be current, as well as some foreign gold coins. On the same day, the General and other officers of the Mint were authorised to coin 3000 stone weight of copper in six penny and two penny pieces.<sup>13</sup>

The copper for these coinages was partly obtained from Sweden ; and the contracts between the Master of the Mint and various parties for importing it are preserved.<sup>1</sup>

§ 42. Annals
of the reign of
Charles II.

A proclamation on the 4th of March, quoted by Ruding,<sup>2</sup> raised the current value of the coins. The ounce of silver was raised to £3, 4s. Scots, and the 4 merk piece to 56/ Scots, and the Mint price of bullion of xi d fine to 58/ Scots per ounce.

1680.

At this period the Mint seems to have fallen into a very deplorable state. From statements made in a note preserved amongst the Gordonston Papers,<sup>3</sup> it would appear that the standard of the coins had been depreciated ; that more copper had been minted than was warranted ; that the officers of the Mint had appropriated to themselves money to which they had no right ; that the salaries of officers had been drawn though the office had not been filled up for years. It is not surprising that these charges resulted in the appointment of a commission to investigate the whole subject.

The report of this commission has been preserved at Gordonston.<sup>4</sup> It sets forth at great length the charges, and finds that they were substantially proved.

On the last day of August 1682, a letter from the king was read, in which, referring to the report of this commission,<sup>5</sup> he informed the Council that he had seen fit to remove the Lord Hatton, Sir John Falconer, Alexander Maitland, and Archibald Falconer, not only from their places in the Mint, but from all places of public trust, and the Lord Advocate was instructed to prosecute them before the competent judges. All coinages were ordered in the meantime to cease.

Sir Patrick Hume was appointed,<sup>6</sup> on the 23d of November, to assist the Lord Advocate in the prosecution of the officials above named before the Session.

The Commissioners of the Mint, having met on the 18th of May 1683, reported<sup>7</sup> to the king that there should be no further mintage till the next meeting of Parliament, but in the meantime the bullion was to be collected as formerly, either in specie, or commuted at the rate of 12/ per ounce. The commissioners also recommended a free coinage,<sup>8</sup> a common standard with England, and that an assay master should be appointed to test the fineness of the bullion paid in specie. Pieces of eight, or Spanish, Seville, and Mexico dollars were ordered to be current at 56/ Scots.

In the following year, an Act of the Scottish Parliament was passed which throws a considerable light on the affairs of the Scottish Mint at this period.<sup>3</sup> After offering to the king 12/ Scots for each ounce of bullion, imposed by the late Act of the first session of the second Parliament of King Charles the Second, for supporting the charge and expense of a free coinage, and for paying the salaries of the officers of the Mint, this Act declared that in future any one bringing to the Mint bullion of the standard fineness should receive for it the same weight in current coin, without any charge for melting, assaying, or coining. A clerk or book keeper was to be appointed, who was to enter in a "fair parchment book" a register or record of the several quantities of bullion given in by the merchants, and in another of the amount of coin minted from time to time. The species of current coin were declared to be sixty, forty,<sup>4</sup> twenty, ten,<sup>5</sup> and five shilling pieces, and these weights were minutely specified in the Act. Provision was made for the due and proper trial of the pix, and it was expressly noted that the edges of the 60/ and 40/ pieces were to be lettered, and the edges of the others to be grained. The particular impressions and inscriptions were to be decided by the Privy Council, who were also empowered to order a coinage of gold. If a copper coinage was required, it was to be issued in six penny and two penny pieces. The salaries of the Mint officers were fixed as follows, viz:—

Master of the Mint,	.	.	.	2400	0	0	„

Besides these salaries and the allowances fixed by the Act, £1106, 13s. 4d. were to be paid to the General and Master for maintaining the fabric of the Mint. § 43. Annals of the reign of James VII. 1687.

In February of this year a general ratification of privileges of the officials of the Mint was granted.

§ 44. In November 1689, Henry, Lord Cardross, was appointed General of the Mint in Scotland,<sup>1</sup> with all the honours and privileges thereto pertaining, and an allowance of £300 sterling per annum, and free lodgings for himself and his family in the buildings of the Mint. It is to be noticed that this appointment was during the royal pleasure only, not as formerly "ad vitam aut culpam." § 44. Annals of the reign of William and Mary. 1689.

Some difficulty seems to have been experienced about removing the former officials of the Mint.<sup>2</sup>

On the 21st of January, Sir Wm. Shairpe of Scots Craig, late Master of the Mint, and the other officials, were ordered, at the instance of Wm. Denholme of West Sheills, the present Master, to remove from the lodgings in the Mint occupied by them, and to deliver up whatever articles or writs belonging to their office which they might have. The Lords Yester, Cardross, and Revilrig, and the Laird of Ormistoune, were appointed to see this done. To these were added<sup>3</sup> on the 6th of February, the Lairds of Blackbarony and Brodie. Mr Wm. Spence was appointed warden on the 11th February, though the gift in his favour was not recorded till the 18th of April, nor the oaths administered to him till the 21st of June.<sup>4</sup> 1690.

The Mint Committee was still further increased<sup>5</sup> by the addition of the Earls of Argyle, Lothian, and Leven, Lord Yester, the Master of Burleigh, the Lord Justice Clerk, the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Crawford, the Lord Secretary of State, the Lord Advocate, and the Provost of Edinburgh, and a trial of the Pix was ordered to be taken.<sup>6</sup>

On the 11th of April, the Lords of the Privy Council received a warrant from the King and Queen, authorising them to give orders to the officers of the Mint to coin the 60/, 40/, 20/, 10/, and 5/ pieces.<sup>7</sup> They also, on the same day, ordered the provisions of the Act of Parliament of 1686, anent the money raised for the free coinage, to be put in force, the salaries of the officers to be paid, and one hundred pounds sterling to be advanced to the Master of the Mint.<sup>8</sup>

of the reign of William and Mary.
1690.

In August, the Mint officers were required to subscribe the certificate and assurance of the late Act.<sup>1</sup>

On the 26th of September, a new Pix was ordered to be provided for the Mint.

On the same day, a proclamation<sup>2</sup> was ordered to be made, declaring the Mint to be opened from and after the 16th of October, and the royal warrant for the new coinage was recorded.

At this time a good deal of feeling was excited by the late appointments to the Mint and bills of suspension<sup>3</sup> were brought in by several of those who had received their appointments formerly "ad vitam aut culpam," to try the point of the legality of their deprivation of office. In all cases, however, it appears that their pleas were rejected, and the new appointments sustained.

Permission was also given about this time to Lord Cardross to name a clerk to the Mint, and the silver standard piece was ordered to be delivered to him.<sup>4</sup>

A copper coinage was authorised by Act of Parliament.<sup>5</sup> It was not to exceed 3000 stones of metal, and to be spread over six years. Two pieces, one of two pence and another of one penny, were to be issued. The rate had been fixed by the Act of 1686 at 20/ Scots in the pound, but this was raised for the time to an amount not to exceed 30/. Another Act<sup>6</sup> of Parliament raised the rate on the stone weight of silver from £18 Scots to £20 Scots.

On the 27th of January, the opinion of the Privy Council<sup>7</sup> was asked regarding the necessity for keeping pieces of money for the Pix which had been already found of true fineness, but the Lords thought it right that in every case two pieces should be kept in the Pix, one for the fineness and one for the weight,<sup>8</sup> though in the next month they reconsidered their decision, and found one piece enough for weight.

Authority was given on the 29th of January to the Master of the Mint to give out some money which had been found finer than the legal standard.

In August, the new copper coinage was authorised.<sup>9</sup> The "bawbee" was to bear the king and queen's heads on the obverse, and the monogram of their initials was to be on the obverse of the two penny (Scots) piece.<sup>10</sup> On the reverses of both, a leaved thistle, with the king and queen's titles, abbreviated as usual.

The dies and puncheons of the silver coins were delivered to Lord Cardross in August.<sup>2</sup>

In June, a new committee of the Privy Council <sup>3</sup> was nominated to see to the affairs of the Mint, who were to meet in July and December.

On the death of the Lord Cardross, Lord John Hamilton was appointed General of the Mint, and, by an order of the Privy Council in December, was empowered to receive from the widow of the late General the keys of the Pix and other property belonging to the Mint then in her custody. 1694.

On Christmas day, the Dean of Guild was ordered <sup>4</sup> to make weights for the 60/, 20/, and 5/ pieces, conform to the English standard.<sup>5</sup>

§ 45. On the 2d of January, the Privy Council <sup>6</sup> ordered the dies of the coins with the portrait of the late queen to be disused ; but on the following day the Master of the Mint was permitted to coin a certain amount of copper in blank until the new stamps were ready. § 45. Annals of the reign of William II. 1695.

Certain trials of the Pix were made in March,<sup>7</sup> and the Council determined to ask Parliament to alter the provisions of the Act of 1686 so far as they required a trial of every journal before a committee of Council ; and this was accordingly done in the following session. The base money coined in Ireland was forbidden to have <sup>8</sup> course in Scotland, and a proclamation to that effect was made at this time.

A change in the rate of money was now contemplated, and a letter written from the Council to the king requesting his authority to do this. This was granted in April,<sup>9</sup> and after consulting the Convention of Burghs in July, a general rise of about ten per cent. was proclaimed in the coinage, and foreign money then current. The clipped money of England was only to be taken by weight.<sup>10</sup>

New dies for the copper coinage were prepared, which differed from the old ones in having the king's head and style only <sup>11</sup> on the obverse ; and on the reverse of the Turners or two penny piece, the crown and sceptre instead of the monogram.<sup>12</sup> The new dies for the 40/ and 10/ pieces of silver were authorised by the Privy Council to be used from and after July of this year. A difficulty arose about the figures under the bust signifying the value; but the Lords decided<sup>1</sup> that the figure 40 should still be kept on the coins though the value was raised to 44/.

In November, another proclamation<sup>2</sup> was made forbidding the melting down or exportation of the money.

On the 10th of December, three score stoneweight of silver were ordered<sup>3</sup> to be issued in 40/ pieces, and one hundred and twenty stone in 20/, 10/, and 5/ pieces.

Clipped money was allowed to be received by the collectors of shires for the pole money under certain restrictions; and on the same day,<sup>5</sup> the old merk piece and unclipt English broad money were ordered to pass current.

The Committee of the Privy Council<sup>6</sup> appointed to consider the affairs of the Mint, made their report in May, and the Council approved of the alterations proposed. The tacks-men were to give in their "abbreviates" quarterly; and as the amount of bullion presented at the Mint to be coined was so much greater than what was expected, it was ordered that the amounts returned to the offerers should be in sums of money according to the order of time, but commencing again with the first after eight days. A tenth part of every journal was to be in small money, and these were to be weighed in quantities, and not singly as heretofore. "Cobbs" were to be bullion, and £200 were to be paid for the new dies to Mr Clerk.

In May, a new committee<sup>7</sup> was appointed, and the operations at the Mint stopped until this committee should make their report.

Great inconvenience having arisen from the English crowns and halfcrowns passing current in Scotland at a higher value than they were in England, they were recalled to their former rate by a proclamation, on the 21st of May.<sup>8</sup> This was followed, on the 2d day of June, by another proclamation,<sup>9</sup> calling down the Scottish pieces of 60/, 40/, 20/, 10/, and 5/ to the values they were current for in 1686.

On the 9th of June, the stop<sup>10</sup> put upon bullion being received at the Mint, was taken off, and it was to be taken in as formerly.

§ 45. Annals
of the reign of
William II.

The committees had gone most minutely over all the journals, and reported all which were exactly conform to the various Acts. The mistakes were very few and trivial, and the Privy Council granted full exoneration to all the officials in the Mint.

In October, an Act of Parliament<sup>1</sup> was passed regarding the copper coinage. It had been provided that no copper should be coined without an express warrant from the king; and it was now enacted, that if the quantity allowed by former Acts were exceeded, it should be considered, and punished as false coinage.

The old merk and half merk pieces of James VI.'s reign were ordered by the Privy Council<sup>2</sup> to be brought into the Mint as bullion, and received at the rate of £3, 4/ Scots per ounce, and this was further sanctioned by an Act<sup>3</sup> of Parliament in the same year. Another Act of Parliament was passed in this year against false coiners.

Some difficulty in working the Act of 1686, in regard to the supply of bullion, occurred at this period; and in November, the Privy Council considered a petition<sup>4</sup> from the Master of the Mint on the subject, and remitted the same to the Commissioners of the Treasury to amend. The old merks and halves of the late reign, and the clipped English money, were allowed to be taken at the Mint as bullion; but no money was to be taken for the re-coinage of these except as formerly directed.

In November,<sup>5</sup> the Duke of Queensberry delivered to the Lord Chancellor the key of the Pix, which belonged to the Treasury.

On the 28th of December, the Privy Council made a curious order,<sup>6</sup> regarding two soldiers of the Earl of Tullibardine's Regiment, who had been suspected of false coining, but against whom no evidence could be found. They were ordered to be handed over to the officers from Flanders to be transported there, never to return to Scotland; and the officers were to give to the captains in Lord Tullibardine's regiment two recruits in place of them.

A proposal to call up the money at this time was negatived.<sup>7</sup>

On the last day of this year a proclamation was made enforcing the late Act of Parlia-

1697. In January 1697 it was decided by the Privy Council<sup>2</sup> that the broad English money should be current only by weight, at the rate of £3, 4/ Scots the ounce, and that the milled money should be raised to £3, 5/ Scots for the crown piece, and the others in proportion, and proclamation made accordingly.<sup>3</sup>

The importation of foreign copper or brass money was forbidden by a proclamation made in May under the pain of £10; but, in December, another proclamation legalised the currency of the French three-sous piece at three shillings Scots, and the French crown at 58/ Scots, and raised the xl d piece to 3/6 Scots.<sup>4</sup> 1698. In August 1698, an overture for an Act anent the copper coin was remitted to the Committee of Parliament for security.

Robert Millar,<sup>5</sup> merchant in Edinburgh, was appointed interim clerk to the Mint in December of this year, in room of William Bonar, lately deceased. The petition, asking his appointment, was presented by "John, Earl of Ruglen, General of the Mint," and Sir William Denham of Westsheils, the Master.

William Spence, the principal warden, died this year, and in September<sup>7</sup> Alexander Ogilvy of Forglen was appointed to succeed him. At the close of the year a committee of the Privy Council was appointed to consider the exchange rules, and if necessary to recommend any alteration. A committee was appointed in December to consider the rule for the exchange of money.<sup>8</sup> 1700. In July of this year the Company of Scotland,<sup>9</sup> trading to Africa and the Indies, presented a petition to the Privy Council, praying that money might be coined out of the gold dust and other bullion imported by them, with a suitable mark upon it to distinguish it from the other coin. The Privy Council granted the request so far, and ordered a new gold coinage of £12 and £6 (Scots) pieces.<sup>10</sup> The Company were to have 10 per cent.

profit on the gold coined. The coins were to be 22 carat fine, each £12 piece to weigh 129 $\frac{3}{4}$  grains, having on the obverse the king's head and titles, with the crest of the Company beneath. It may be noticed that in the minute it is said the legend is to be GVLIELMVS SECVNDVS, while in the coins it is only GVLIELMVS. The reverse to have the arms in a shield between W and R crowned. § 45. Annals of the reign of William II.

A petition<sup>1</sup> having been presented to the Privy Council by Gilbert Stewart in regard to some gold dust in his possession, the Privy Council, in January 1701, ordained the officers of the Mint to obey the former Act, and to provide matrices, puncheons, &c., and recommended the Treasury to allow the expense. In June,<sup>2</sup> the committee anent the Mint was recommended to meet immediately, take trials of the money, and consider any overtures or proposals which should be made to them. 1701.

A difficulty arose in connection with the coinage of gold for the African Company;<sup>3</sup> and in July the Master of the Mint presented a petition asking for the expense of refining the gold dust, which the Council decreed the merchants should pay.

A committee was appointed, in September, to confer with the Town Council and the goldsmiths of Edinburgh<sup>4</sup> anent the standard of fineness of the gold which was to be coined, and eventually the matter having been remitted to the General of the Mint and the Lord Advocate, they made a new standard out of three guineas of the late reigns, with which the new coinage was to be tried.

The regulations made in 1696 regarding the old 14/ Scots pieces and others, were enforced anew by a proclamation in November of this year.<sup>5</sup>

No report of the committee lately appointed to meet is given, but they were requested to meet again at the Mint for the same purposes. In February, some new members were added to the former committee. 1702.

Several apprehensions were made at this time of false coiners, and £50 sterling was ordered to be paid to the chamberlain of the Duchess of Buccleuch for his pains in the matter. The silver found on the persons of the coiners was to be melted down and assayed in the Mint to test it.<sup>6</sup> print the proclamation of 4th May 1697, against the importation of foreign copper or brass money.

In July, it was officially notified<sup>1</sup> that the standards of gold, which had been amissing, had been found again, and they were consigned to the custody of Sir Thomas Moncrieff.

1703.

The Earl of Lauderdale's commission from the queen, as General of the Mint, was ordered by the Privy Council to pass the Great Seal, "per saltum," without passing any other register.<sup>2</sup> The draft of an Act anent the copper coin was read in Parliament.<sup>3</sup> 1704.

A committee was appointed,<sup>4</sup> on the 3d of February 1704, to inquire into the export of money, and the import of foreign copper or brass, and to report any determination they might come to. Another committee was named on the 2d of May, and again on the 9th, specially for the same purpose, and a proclamation made, strictly forbidding the exportation of the current coin.<sup>5</sup>

More false coiners were discovered, and in November of this year a committee<sup>6</sup> was named to consider a report made by the magistrates of Dumfries on the subject.

In December, the Privy Council appointed a committee to inquire specially about the growth of Popery and false coin, and added some new members to the old committee about the export of the coin.<sup>7</sup>

In January, the formal warrant<sup>9</sup> to James Clerk for dies for a new 10/ and 5/ Scots piece was granted, and in March<sup>10</sup> the Mint was ordered to be opened, and the trials taken of the gold in the Pix, to see if it was conform to the standard made by the Earl of Lauderdale.<sup>11</sup>

The negotiations for the Union were actively carried on in this year, and it was finally agreed<sup>13</sup> that the coin should be of the same standard and value throughout the United 1707.

Kingdom. Arrangements<sup>14</sup> were made for changing the Scottish coinage into English, and a proclamation<sup>15</sup> was made in February, requiring all to keep the just value of the coinage in payments. All the English silver money was called in in April;<sup>1</sup> and in August,<sup>2</sup> all foreign and Scottish money was called in, and re-issued as the coinage of the United Kingdom. § 46. Annals of the reign of Anne.

The threatened invasion in 1708 caused another proclamation,<sup>3</sup> in which the currency of the Scottish coins was temporarily permitted. In April, however, they were finally called in, and re-minted at the Mint in Edinburgh. In the meantime, preparations had been made to carry out the re-coinage exactly after the methods of the English Mint. For this purpose, David Gregory received a warrant<sup>4</sup> from the queen to go to Edinburgh and remain there for three months for the purpose of instructing the officers of the Scottish Mint. At the same time, a clerk was sent to frame the accounts similar to the English Mint. Three moneyers, from the Tower of London, accompanied these officers, and remained in Scotland till the re-coinage was finished. A warrant<sup>5</sup> to the Master of the Mint in Scotland ordered the silver coins minted there to have the letter E beneath the bust. 1708.

Rex vicecomiti Kantie, salutem. Quia, propter diversas monetas, quæ longe minoris pretii, ponderis et valoris moneta nostra Anglie existuntur in regno nostro adiu currebant, et adhuc curruntur, moneta nostra Anglie, tam auri quam argenti, de cuneis nostris multum debilitatur, et extra regnum nostrum trahitur continue et asportatur, in nostri-et totius populi nostri dampnum immensum. Nos, volentes hujusmodi dampno precavere, et utilitati rei publicæ prospicere in hac parte, de consensu et avisamento concilii nostri ordinavimus quod nulla moneta de cuneo Scotie, nec de aliquibus aliis terris exteris, nec aliqua alia moneta, præter monetam nostram auri et argenti, de cuneis nostris propriis, cursum in regno nostro habeat; nec in emptione et vendicione, aut alio modo, pro moneta in hospitibus vel alibi, clam vel palam, set tamen pro billione, recipiatur seu liberetur. . . .

ACTS OF THE PARLIAMENTS OF SCOTLAND.

I.—24 Oct. 1393, New Money ordered, rates of Foreign Coins fixed, and regulations made for the Coinage.

Vol. I. p. 207;
new pagination,
p. 569.

Robertus, Dei gratia, Rex Scottorum, omnibus probis hominibus suis ad quos presentes litere peruenerint, salutem: Sciatis quod in consilio nostro generali, tento apud Perth, ordinatum est quod moneta nostra auri et argenti erit de cetero fabricata per Bonachium de Florencia, monetarium nostrum, in forma que sequitur, videlicet de sex vnceis troye puri argenti viginti vnus solidi erunt fabricati, de quibus erunt grossi quatuor denariorum et dimidii grossi duorum denariorum, de bono argento sicut Regis Dauid. Et erunt denarii fabricati in quibus quatuor denariis erit tantum argentum sicut in vno grosso, sed ponderabunt sex denarios causa lay quod imponitur. Etiam erunt obuli fabricati de eadem materia et ponderacione proportionabiliter secundum quantitatem denarii. Et quinta pars huius monete erit fabricata in denariis et obulis. Insuper illa scuta que hucusque cursum habuerunt erunt inhibita per proclamacionem publicam. Scilicet proclamatum erit quod quicumque habuerit scuta transeat ad excambium monetario nostro et ibi habebit pro scuto, si sufficiens fuerit, quatuor solidos, et aliter de cetero cursum non habebunt. Insuper ordinatum est quod obuli de auro, videlicet maillies, sufficientes pro triginta duobus denariis noue monete, habebunt cursum. Etiam fabricata erit de bono auro vna pecia vocata leo, et habebit cursum pro quinque solidis monete, ita quod duo leones valebunt decem solidos eiusdem monete et erunt meliores nobili ad valorem trium denariorum. Et nobile de bono auro et ponderacione bona habebit cursum pro nouem solidis et sex denariis videlicet nobile de Anglia et nobile de Flandria pro nouem solidis et quatuor denariis eiusdem monete et non alia nobilia cursum habebunt. Ad quamquidem monetam tam in auro quam in argento in omnibus, vt premittitur, fabricandam, dicto Bonachio, monetario nostro, ad hoc a nobis et nostro consilio electo et ordinato, nostram tenore presentium committimus potestatem sub omni pena que competere poterit in hac parte. Datum sub sigillo nostro apud Perth vicesimo quarto die mensis Octobris, anno regni nostri quarto.

in diuiciis, qui custodiet monetam, et erit ad hoc juratus, in forma que sequitur, videlicet, totum aurum et argentum quod portabitur monetario ad fabricandum primo presentabitur sibi quod ipse faciet ponderari et scribet quantitates in papiro suo et retinebit penes se et omni die ad vesperam recipiet et ponet in secura custodia et sub clave instrumenta monetarii quibus facit monetam vsque ad diem sequentem, et sic faciet omni die. Et monetam quolibet die fabricatam recipiet a monetario et custodiet sub sigillo et clave in cista vna, a principio cuiuslibet septimane vsque in finem. Et tunc videbit cum sufficienti testimonio, quantum de argento seu auro fuerit in septimanam fabricatum et tunc accipiet de qualibet moneta, tam auri quam argenti certas pecias ad probandum et faciet illas pecias bene et diligenter custodiri vsque ad tempus probacionis monete, que probacio fiet infra xl dies qualibet vice. Et ille qui est custos monete stabit et respondebit pro pondere monete et capiet feodum suum pro labore suo de Rege sicut hucusque consuetum est. Et si contingat custodem aut examinatorem vel monetarium delinquere in aliquo circa monetam, vel si inueniatur quod aliquis ipsorum facit falsam monetam vel scienter utitur falsa moneta infra regnum inhibita punietur secundum leges sine quocunque fauore aut remissione. Et si Rex concesserit aliquam remissionem propter dictas causas vel aliquam ipsarum personis delinquentibus nullius erit valoris nec habebit aliquem effectum.

II.—22 April 1398, Rates of Foreign Coins fixed, and exportation of Money or Bullion prohibited.

Statutum et ordinatum est per consilium antedictum quo ad monetam quod a primo die mensis Maii vsque ad vigiliam Pentecoste anno &c nonagesimo octauo mailles habebunt cursum pro ij s̄ et non amplius; et scuta Brabancie habebunt cursum pro iij s̄. Et ex tunc tam scuta quam mailles erunt inhibita nec habebunt cursum vltierus regno sed portabuntur ad conam tamquam bullion. Statutum est etiam quod nemo mercator seu alius cuiuscumque status seu condicionis fuerit, portet dictas mailles vel scuta seu quodcumque aliud aurum vel argentum in moneta vel bullion extra regnum, per terram vel per mare, sub pena vite et membrorum et omnium que erga regiam maiestatem amittere poterit. Et ista causa persecuta erit per indictamentum coram Justiciario, et qui indictatus fuerit de huiusmodi facto vel de asportacione cuiuscumque auri vel argenti extra regnum in moneta vel in bullion contra istam ordinacionem premissam facta vel in posterum fienda quicumque fuerit ille vel cuiuscumque condicionis burgensis aut alius subibit assisam coram Justiciario. Electa cuius assise media pars erit de burgensibus et alia pars hominum de patria ita quod per favorem assise Rex nec communitates regni defraudentur in moneta sicut hucusque illos constat esse deceptos. Et qui inventus fuerit portans aliquam monetam extra regnum in auro argento vel in bullion clericus aut laicus illa moneta erit eschaeta, sive bullion, et ipse qui invenerit sive revelaverit dictam portantem habebit tertiam partem auri vel argenti et due partes remanebunt Regi et consilio ad relevandas communes expensas circa negocia communia regni, salvis rationabilibus expensis illorum qui laborant extra mare vel ad alias partes extra Regnum; que expense estimabuntur per custumarios, ad hoc specialiter ordinandos secundum statum laborantium, vsque ad summam xx s vel infra. Item ordinatum est quod a vigilia Pentecostes inantea nullum aurum habebit cursum in regno, exceptis leonibus, dimidiis leonibus, nobilibus Flandrie et Anglie et coronis Francie, que corone habebunt cursum pro dimidio nobile Anglie. Et videbitur per custodem monete semel ad minus quolibet anno quod nobilia et corone antedicta tenebunt valorem ad quem modo existunt in pondere et bonitate metalli. Et si in hoc aliquis defectus reperiatur notificetur dicto consilio cum omni festinancia per custodem monete ut remedium super hoc ordinari valeat per Regem et consilium. Et ordinatum est quod nobile Anglie habebit cursum pro nouem s et vj d et nobile Flandrie pro nouem s et iiij d, et leo auri pro v s et corona Francie pro dimidio nobili Anglie ut superius est expressum. Item ordinatum est quod non plus fabricetur de moneta in denariis et obulis quam quinta pars ut prius ordinatum est.

CONSIDERAT, Regia Majestas, labores, sumptus et impensas, per Joachinum Hochstetter et confratres suas, in laboratione fodinarum auri et argenti in hoc regno multifariam factas, quantumque detrimenti et damni acceperint in commutatione mercium huc importatarum pro sustentatione et solutione artificum et laboratorum in ejusmodi fodinis: Volens propterea pro sua magnificentia, ne tam insigne opus, expensarum defectione intermittatur, antefato Joachino et suo fratri, qui id totis viribus sustinere conantur alio quodam remedio consulere, quod eis utile futurum sit, regique et regno commodo et honori, curam illis rei monetarie et circa eam libertates et privilegia, his que sequuntur conditionibus permittit et concedit.

Quia enim ipsorum nomine antefati Quinterus et Anthonius pollicentur et promittunt, magnum argenti copiam ex Germania et exteris regnis ubertim huc importandam esse et immittendam, si illud ipsum argentum importatum dictis Joachino et suo fratri eorumque heredibus et successoribus in formam monete titulo et nomine regie majestatis ad ejus regni commodum et utilitatem cudendi ac monetandi facultas concedatur, consentit, dat et concedit Regia Majestas dicto Joachino et ejus fratri suisque heredibus et successoribus, facultatem hanc et potestatem monetam argenteam intra hoc regnum suum, suo nomine et titulo cudendi et monetandi modum insequentem: Ex libra puri argenti cudentur et resultabunt centum septuaginta et sex nummi argentei, eruntque singuli valoris decem et octo denariorum usualium huius regni, veluti nunc cuduntur, et puritatis decem denariorum et duorum granorum quemadmodum in regno Scotie computatur viz. huiusmodi duobus granis loco remedij computatis.

Cudent preterea si voluerint alios duos nummos, unum duodecem denariorum et alterum sex denariorum ejusdem puritatis et probitatis, cum nummo decem et octo denariorum; habita tamen ratione ponderis; quod videlicet nummus duodecem denariorum ponderabit binam partem dicti nummi decem et octo denariorum; Et nummus sex denariorum tertiam; Vel si magis libuerit dictis viris majores aut minores nummos argenteos percutere, utpote nummos trium solidorum, quinque, decem, et usque ad viginti solidos, aut alios minores, id eis licebit, dummodo ex libra idem pondus, idem valor, eadem argenti puritas atque probitas resultaverit.

Dabunt propterea prefati Joachinus et ejus frater, sui que heredes et successores, Regie Majestati, suisque successoribus, singulis annis quibus illos rem monetariam potestatemque facultatem cudendi ac monetandi exercere contigerit, pro qualibet libra argenti puri percusi et monetati, viginti solidos Scoticos, sine fraude et dolo.

Promittunt etiam, et sese, suos heredes et successores obligabunt, post ratificationem presentis contractus, et post importatum argentum, instrumenta et artifices tantum argenti et nummorum percusuros et monetaturos, quod regia Majestas, ab eo die quo primum ad se monetariam solenniter receperint, quolibet insequenti anno, ad minus tria millia librarum Scoticarum, pro suo regio jure et arrendatione; Super quo prestabunt cautionem; Ac singulis futuris annis tanta summa regie majestati et suis successoribus solvatur, sive tantum argenti, unde dicta summa resultare possit, monetatum fuerit sive non.

Durabit autem facultas hec et potestas monetam cudendi ut prescribitur decem annos continuos proxime et immediate futuros, postquam antefati Joachinus ejus frater heredes et successores argentum, homines, artifices, instrumenta, et alia queque ad rem monetariam necessaria, in hoc regnum importaverint, et monetam cudere inceperint.

Totis hiis decem annis regia Majestas nulli alteri facultatem et potestatem concedet, quantamque monetam argenteam cudendi et monetandi, immo post ratificatum et assumptum hoc ipsum monetandi negotium, prohibebit regia Majestas publicis edictis per universam Scotiam et alia sua dominia, ne quisquam durante hiis annis audeat ullam monetam argenteam cudere aut facere, sub pena capitis seu exustionis, falsariis monete debita.

Mox vero atque ratificationem argentum artifices instrumenta et alia . . . monetariam pertinentia, huc importaverint, vel immiserint dabitur eiis et assignabitur domus monetaria Edinburgensis in qua versari possent sine fraude damno aut maleficio quocumque gaudebitque dicta domus libertate et immunitate qua cetere domus monetarie in aliis regnis, et domus prelatorum et Principum in ipso oppido Edinburgensi gaudent: Erunt etiam ipsi viri, eorum artifices et domestici servitores nulli alterius jurisdictioni subjecti quam solius regie Majestatis: Cavebunt tamen, ne pretextu ejusmodi libertatis et immunitatis, quicquam regie majestati et consiliariis suis incognitum et incogitatum, ac in hoc regno suo insuetum adverus regem, rempublicam, regni et burgorum privelegia usurpent, vendicent aut moliantur.

c. 10. Ceteros vero artifices et laboratores in monetaria dicti fratres, suis impensis alere et intertenere tenebuntur.

c. 11. Laborabunt autem in monetaria Scoti qui ad id officij reperti fuerint ydonei, et qui ante in eadem probe et fideliter laboraverunt et quos antedicti viri ydoneos censuerint.

c. 12. Concedet etiam Regia Majestas dictis, fratribus suis heredibus et successoribus, quod libere possint argentum homines artifices instrumenta et alia quecumque ad rem monetariam necessaria in hoc regnum importare; atque etiam omnia et singula preter ferra formatoria exportare, quocumque tempore sine gravamine thelonio impedimento seu injuria; Licebit etiam dictis fratribus exportare etiam argentum dummodo ut prius dictum est fuerit monetatum.

c. 13. Et quia inter regni Chancellarium et Consilii Dominos regio nomine, et dictos Quinterum et Anthonium nomine prefatorum Joachini et sui fratris super cautione et solutione juris regii, et premissorum observatione uti ante scriptum est per fidejussoriam cautionem non satis convenire potest; Tenebuntur et obligabuntur prefati fratres sui heredes et successores, ad solvendum regie Majestati, aut suis in hac re thesaurariis et questoribus suum jus regium in fine cujuslibet mensis ex quo monetam cudere inceperint; Sic quod per equalem solutionem in menses singulos integra dicta summa trium millium librarum in fine anni totaliter fiat persoluta.

c. 14. Premissa omnia et singula regia Majestas concedit, confirmat et comprobat: Quare tenebitur dictus Joachinus pro se et nomine sui fratris, vel alteruter ipsorum, quod infra sex menses aut octo proxime futuros, suam huc mittet ratificationem et obligationem, pro observatione premissorum. Importabit etiam simul et immittet in hoc regnum argentum cudendum et monetandum, instrumenta et artifices qui deinde quamprimum monetam cudere et monetare incipient: Valebit autem ejusmodi contractus si per solum ipsum Joachinum pro se et nomine dicti sui fratris, vel econtrario, per dictum suum fratrem proque eorum heredibus et successoribus ratificatus fuerit et comprobatus sub ipsius Joachini aut dicti sui fratris subscriptione manuali et sigillo proprio.

Hen. VIII.,
Vol. LXIII.
No. 79.

Forsamekle As our Soueraine Lordis gud minde and intention to haue setled the by gane misordour in the estate of the cunyeie hes bene thortoured and disappointed be the malice of sik persons quha preferring their gane and profite, to his Majesties honour, and benefite of their natiue cuntry, hes at all times at their pleasour, raised and heichted the prices alsweel of foraine money, as of his Hines awin cunye, haifand na regarde at all to the lawes, actes and constitutions maid in the contrair . And to the greate skaith and damage quhilk be their meanes the puire subjects susteined be the variable vncertantie of the said cunye, As als quhan as his Hines hes ony time bygane pressed to reduce the samin, to som conformable price, as the Gold and Siluer hes lately giuen within this Realme, within thir few yeires: The saids persons to augment thair welth vpon the hurt and detriment of the common-welth, hes vpon hope of greater prices to be had in vther pairts, transported and dayly transports Gold and Siluer, in greate quantity, notwithstanding, that the samin is forbidden and prohibite to be caried furth of this Realme, be diuers and sundrie acts of Parliament maid heretofore. Quhairby they are likely to all mens appearance, in verie short space, to make this cuntry altogidder destitute of money, quhilk not only procures the impouering and wrack of the samin, and of the hail lieges, bot will be the occasion to cause all traffique and interchange betuixt them and their neichtbour cuntreis to ceis, and may breid far greater danger, gif (as God forbid) at ony time this cuntry (as it hes bene within thir few yeiris) salbe visied be famine, and salhaue necessitie to be supplied be thir neichtbours in victuall and vther viueris, quhilk wil nawaies be advanced without present money to be giuen therefore. FOR PREVENTING quhairrof, his Hienes euer preferring the weill of his Realme and subjectes to ony thing else: And foreseeing the saids inconveniences wifh aduise of his estates lately conuened the fourteene day of December instant, concluded that the vnce of Siluer being of elleuen denneirs fine, of foraine cunye sall haue course hereafter for fiftie schillings money of this Realme. And the vnce of Siluer being of his Majesties awin cunye of the same fines, salhaue course and be interchanged among the hail leigis, for fiftie thre shillings foure pence. And the vnce of Gold being of twentie two carret fine of foraine cunye, to passe for threttie pundis. And the vnce of the samin fines being of his Majesties awin cunye for threttie twa pounds. And appoynted the Lordes of his Hienesse privie Counsell, to set downe the particular spaces of cunye of gold and siluer, allswell forrayne, as his Majesties awin money: To the effect that according thereto the samin may haue passage and course among his Hienesse subjectes. And that nane of them in ony waies presse to heicht the pryces set downe, neither giue out, or reciue ony of the said money at heicher pryces, nor they quhilk are seuerallie set downe and prescribed in this present Act. THAY are to say, The Spanish Ryall, weyand twentie ane denneirs and aucht graines, fortie fiue shillings, The eroec Dollor weyand twentie twa denneirs and twelue graines, fourtie foure shillings aucht penneis. The Fifteene Sous peece, weyand seven denneirs twelue graines, fifteene shillings six pennies. The French Testone fiftene shillings. The new ten shilling peece, and Scottis Testone, weyand the fyft part of ane vnce, ten shilling aucht pennies. The halfe marke peece, seven shillings. The Spanish pistolet weyand twa denneires fourteene graines, three pounds foure shilling aucht pennies. The Crowne of the Sunne, weyand twa denneires fourteene graines, three pound sex shilling aucht pennies. The Hary Doucat, weyand fue denneires fiteene graines, seuen pound fue shillings. The Gun-holl Angell weyand three denneires twentie twa graines, fue pound twa shillings. The Angell noble weyand three denneires twentie twa graines, fue pund fue shillings. The Double doucat weyand fue denneires ten graines, seuen pound twa shillings aucht pennies. The Ghentish Noble, weyand fue denneires twenty twa graines, seuen pound seuentene schillings foure pennies. The Harie Noble, weyand fue denneires ten graines, seuen pund three schillings four pennies. The auld Rose noble weyand sex denneires, aucht punds. The Portugal Ducat weyand ane vnce, foure denneires, threttie seven pound three shillings aucht pennies. The Thirsell noble weyand sex denneires, aucht pound fue shillings. The hat-peece, four pounds fourteene shillings aucht pennies. The Lyon noble weyand foure denneires, fue pound foure shillings foure pennies. The neu fuc pound peece weyand foure denneires, fue pound sex shillings aucht penies. And the fiftie shilling peece proportionally. And albeit be diverse and sindrie acts of Parliament maid heirtofoir the course of all forrayne money is discharged and all our Sovereine Lordis Lieges prohibite and forbidden in any waies to receiue, giue out, and interchange the samin: Bot haillelie to be inbrocht for Bulyioun to the Cunyie-house; yit in respect of the present skarsitie of his Majesties awin cunyie. HIS HIENES therefore with advise of the Lords of his Privie Counsel hes giuen and granted liberty and licence, to the hail subjects of this Realm, to interchange the said forayne money, at the prices particularly abone specified in this present act: quhill the first daye of Februar nixt-to-cum, betuixt and quhilk day his Majesty, and his said Counsell sall procure ane sufficient suirtie to all in-bringers of Gold and Siluer to the Cunyie-house, that they sall receiue immediatlie after the deliuerie of the samin without delay the just valour and price theirof, fra his Hienesse Thesaurer, and responsall deputies, to be impute be him to that effect. After the quhilk day be this presens, als his hienes subjects are expressly discharged in any waies, to interchange or to suffer the said forayne money to haue course among them, bot hailelie to be inbrocht to the said Cunyie house, certifying them that beis found to contravene the same, that the ane halfe of the said Forrayne money salbe escheit to his Majesties vse, and the vther halfe to the partie apprehender and delater of the samin. And als vnder the paine of confiscation of the hail guds moveable, alsweil of the giver out, as the receiver of the said forrayne money after the said day. And ordainis publication heirof to be maid at the Mercatcroce of the heid Burrowes of this Realme, that nane pretend ignorance thereof. Discharging in like maner, all our Soueraine Lordis, Lieges, that they on nawaies heicht, alter, impair, nor diminish the particular prices abone specified, of the spaces of his Majesties cunyie, and no waies transport furth of this realme any gold or siluer, after the day and date hereof, vnder the paine of confiscation of the hail moveable guds, and escheitting of the money that sall happin to be apprehended,

for ansuer heirto

Gif it be vpon Thomas awin expensis we querrell it not. Bot gif it be vpon his Maiesties as appeiris be the letter pairt of the said act we think that bigging tobe sumptuous and invteill Be resson the money might be affynit in ony convenient hous in Edinburgh.

Secundlie quhair at the leist ane hundreth staine wecht of the said allayit money sould be deliuerit to Schir Williame Bowis ilk moneth tobe affynit be him for answer heirto

We think his maiestie bound to ane Inconvenient / and will fall in the penalties con-tenit in the said act / To wit albeit thair wer of the hundreth staine wecht fourscoir nynteine furneist to the said Schir Williame he may refus to accept the samin. And sua his maiestie incurris the dainger of payment of x s Ilk day ffor the spaice of ane moneth mekill mair gif nane of the hundreth staine be deliuerit / and this for the first penultie / And consequentlie the contract vpon his maiesties and Thomas Fowlis pairt brokin / quhairby his maiestie sall first lose tua hundreth pund sterling advansit to the said Schir William Bowis as appeiris And also his Maiestie sall pay to the said Sir William threttie pund Sterling / ffor Ilk hundreth staine wecht of the said money that beis not deliuerit to him within the space of ane yeir thereafter / quhilk appeiris tobe na littill Inconvenient.

Thridlie, it is vnderstand that his maiestie and counsale thocht expedient and concludit that the subiectis sould be no lossearis be deliuering thair money / quhilk we vnderstand tobe Thomas Fowlis awin meaning at all tymes. And thairfore we desyre your lordschippis to inquire of the said Thomas quhat fre proffeit his maiestie will ressaue vpon Ilk staine wecht being affynit and prentit / All maner of deductions being deduceit / And thereafter we sall latt your lordschippis vnderstand ane vther plat concerning the money quhairupone his henes and your lordschippis may Juge and tak the best and maist profitable / quhairin we sall not exceid the price of outgeving contenit in the act maid at Edinburgh
the vj of August 1591

Ferdlie seing be the latter pairt of the said act It is appointit that the said Thomas

Fowlis sall reteine and vplift to his awin vtilitie ay and quhill he be payit not onlie the proffeit that may arrys vpon the said affyning Bot also all proffeit quhatsumeuir that may arrise be the said industrie of the saidis straingearis Latt him condiscend in speciall quhat he meanis be thair industrie and latt his maiestie gif his commoditie to quhome he pleissis / for we crave nathing / bot that the quantitie of the samin may be knowin to his maiestie and your lordschippis.

Fyftlie, it is expreslie prouidit be the said act that the officeris of the cunyeihous sall mak compt and rekyning of the proffeit may be had be the industrie of the saidis straingearis / Seing we ar subiect be our offices and be the said act To mak compt and rekyning of the proffeit etc. The said effyning aucht tobe maid in presens of the wardanis and essayer of the cunyeihous onlie / ffor gif suir controlement heirof be not vsit be the maist expert of the cunyeihous / The saidis effyneris may mak mair nor xl<sup>m</sup> pundis of proffeit to thame selfis and newer kennell ane fyre for effyning thairrof / Gif your lordschippis pleissis to know the maner heirof / The same salbe euidentiall declairit in presens of his maiestie and your lordschippis quhilkis wer langsum now to rehers.

And inace the said Thomas Fowlis will obiect That his saidis straingearis will permit na qualifeit officeris of the cunyeihous To se and controill thair said wark / It is ansuerit we desyre not to see thair craft of effyning / Bot allanerlie how mekle and quhat spaceis of guid money thay Demoleis / seing thair is na grit craft in demolesching ffor euerie tinklair can do the samin / ffor vtherways gif we see not quhat spaces and quantitie of money beis brokin It is not abill to ws To mak compt and conforme to the dewetie of our offices and command gevin to ws be the said act ffor thair is na spaceis of money appointit tobe affynit nor ane and euery space will mak ane diuers proffeit.

CLIII.—1592, Answers to the Laird of Merchinstonis Overtouris giffin in be him for altering of the Mony.

First gif the bas mony remane in the present estait contrair to the ordinance of the Estaittis (as he now desyris) the haill mony salbe left in the danger to be outwaillit and the havyest to be refyneit be particular personis as hes bene done with the balbeis and nonsuntz etc, thir dyuers yeiris bypast In doing quhairrof the lycht mony sall onlie remaine amangs the subiects handis Quhairthrow the wnce of siluer salbe at fyftie shillings in bas mony, his maiestie sall get na commoditie and the commoun weill salbe thifteouslie Impoverissit Secundlie the said Act of the Estaittis (quhilk wes craveit and devysit be Marchingstoun) takand effect, and the aucht pennie pieces being ressaueit be him from the subiects and deliuerit to the affyners at xlv s the wnce wtter fyne siluer and thairefter refyneit and past the Irnis in new half merks, fourtie penny peces, twa shilling peces, and twelf pennie peces proportionale al of ane fynnes, thair willbe na scarcetie of smal mony considering herewith the hudge number of pennies and twa pennie plakis new and auld remaneing within the countrie And his maiestie sall ressaue of proffeit besydis the affyners dewtie fourtie pundis mony and abone, vpoun ilk stane fyne siluer, and swa consequentalle vpoun sevin hundreth staines that sould be in the aucht pennie peces the sowme of twentie aucht thowsand pundis besydis the grit proffeit that the balbeis nonsuntz and gray plakis will mak being bas mony alswa Thirdlie he may condiscend of quhat new mixtour he wald mak his wther space of mony It appeirs he wald mak new allayeit money at the stand of fyftie shillingis foure pennies the wnce, quhilk apperandlie can nocht be granttit In respect the Estaitts wald nocht condiscend to bring doune the fyne siluer to x deneirs and ane half except the bass mony war brocht up to the samyn fynes, And gif libertie beis granttit to mak yit allayeit mony, and wors nor it hes bein heirtfoir nocht onlie sall the common weill be dampnefeit be the raising of the bas money quhilk meritit rather to be cryeit down, bot alswa his maiestie sall nocht reip sa grit commodatie thair of as be the affyneing Quhair be the contrair the mony being maid in fyne siluer the ordinance of the Estaittis is fulfillit, his maiestie sall resauie grittar commodaty nor is heir offerit, and besydis all this the hail mony is maid fyne and as it war in ane pois to his maiestie to mak thair of quhat pleissit him . ffourthlie quhair he desyris the bas mony and auld half merks to be stampit apperandlie it is maist wntollerabill, In respect of the inconvenienttis following. First the stamping makis the wnce of wtter fyne siluer to be far abone the pryce appointtit be the Estaittis . Secundlie be the stamping the money salbe subiect to brecking and waisting amangs the peopills handis Thirdlie thair sall arryse ane greit mwrmutation amangis the peopill be the fractiouns of comptting and abuisse remaneing in the diversaties of spaces wechtis and fyness, ffourthlie thair is occatioun offerit to the peopill to caus mak counterfut stampis and sicklyk within schort space thair will gif furthe the wnstampit with the stampit all for ane pryce . as hes bene done heirtfoir the tyme of the stamping of the auld fourtie shilling peces and swa the mony salbe abuisit . and his maiestie sall nocht reip the half of the commodaty that may arryse. Quhair be the contrair the foirsaid bass mony and auld half merks being brocht in as said is and the proffeit arryseing of the said half merks being joyneit with the proffeit arryseing of the bas mony refynit, nocht onlie sall his maiestie get abone ane hundreth thowsand merks of proffeit bot alswa the hail mony salbe brocht to ane gud and honorabil estait to remane permanent and all occatioun of alteratioun or heichtting may be evacuat. And as to the copper remaneing in the bas mony It may be spearit at ony subiect Quhidder it be easier and better ather for keiping or taking of mony to ressaue ane thowsand pundis of stampit Achesonis nor to ressaue ane thowsand pundis of half merks. Farther gif Marchingstoun had prosecut and followeit furthe the reducioun according to the ordinance of the estaitts and thairwith had craveit liberty for stamping of the hail forrane mony. Thir twa mycht haif bene done within xvij monethes, and thairby the forrane mony (quhilk ever causes our mony to heicht) sould haif bene put to ane wse, and his maiestie sould import neirby ane hundreth thowsand pundis of proffeit.

betwix his maiestie and Thesaurer on the ane pairt and Francis Napper sone to Sir Archibald Napper generall of his maiesties Cunyehous and moyenner of the said Contract, Twiching the affyning of the hail base money and haifing sien the compt maid conforme to the said contract ffinds that the said Francis Napper wald haif takin for the affyning of sax hundreth stane in the babies nonsuntis and gray plakis as the said compt beiris for his labour and chairgis in that proportioun the sowme of 59266 ti quhilk wad haif bein gritlie to the prejudice of his heiness and subiects gif itt had nocht bein preventitt be Thomas Foullis quha be the haimbringing of certane strangeris is able to gett the samyn done to his maiestie wpoun mair resonable conditions then the said Francis wald have done be fourtie thowsand pounds and abone The doing quhairof in the said Thomas persone we find to be maist acceptable service and repellis the said Francis and Archibald Napper of Merchunstoun elder his father, ffrom craifing persewing and prosecuting of the said contract as subtill moynners of thair luere and conceallers of his maiesties commodetie att the leist wnskilfull and ignorant handellaris of the matter of the money, In respect that thair judgment will nocht serue them to reffyne the money vpon sik resonable pryces as the said Thomas offers himself to do, And ffinds that quahatsomewer instruments protestations calumniatt speiking in privatt or publick maid against the said Thomas ather be the saidis Laird of Merchunstoun Francis Napper his sone or ony wthers to haif proceeditt vpon falss growndis, and lurking Invy conceawitt be them against the said Thomas wpoun thair awin particulare gain and commodetie He onlie sewteing his maiesties weill together with the common weill thairwith, as ewidentlie appeirs be his compts gifin in be him thairvpon And als finds the onlie abusses of the daylie heichting of the money to have proceditt pairtlie thro the overtours gifin in att all tymis be the said generall for raising of the Inuart money conforme to the prycis of the fforane, and pairtlie be nocht making of sik overtours as myecht haw stayit the subiectis in ressawing and delywring of the forane money according to thair awin plessuris Swa that sen the said generalls entrie to his office itt is maist notoure that the wnce of siluer is heichtitt twentie schillings

Pleiss your maiestie and Lordschippis to consider that necessitie compellis ane of four wayis to be takin with the base money and half merks etc.

The first is the samyn to stand and remaine in the samyne forme as is in presently doing of the quhilk the act maid with aduiss of the Estaits at Edinburgh the sext of Agust anno fourscoir alleuin yeirs sall tak na effect

Secundlie the said act takand effect and according to the act off Counsalle maid att Linlythgw the awcht of Marche anno fourscoir alleuin the said money be takin in efter the present rait of fourtie fyve schillings the vnce vtter fyne siluer affynitt cunyeit and gifin out efter the rait of fyftie schillings and neir four pence in the spacis of half merks and fourtie penny peicis thair salbe gritt scairsety of small money quhilk wald be respected as alswa quhat frie proffeit Thomas Foullis will mak his maiestie of the foirsaid moneis wald be knawin

of the foirsaid acte of the Estaitis his maiestie sall import neir by twentie thowsand pounds of frie proffeitt all chairgis deducit.

Miscellaneous

ffourtlie takin in the foirsaidis spaces of money and gewin the pepill for ilk fourtie fyve schillingis they bring in fourtie sax schillings bak again stamping and setting furth the aucht penny pece att nyne pence, and the half accordinglie the and half merk piece att sewin schillings sax pence and the half accordinglie, the stand of fyne siluer conteinitt in the foirsaid actt of the Estaitts salbe satisfied (or within fourtie pence att the maist) and the pepill sall have small money for exchange and his maiestie sall import neir ane hundreth thowsand merk of frie proffeitt besyde the spairing of the copper in the foirsaid spaces

Heirfoir your Maiestie and Lordschippis may consider quhilk of thir four wayes ar best and tak the samyne for thair is nocht ane fyft.

CLVI.—1593, Nott of the debaitt betwix the Laird of Merchistoun generall of the Cunyhous and Thomas Foullis anent the reduction of the money.

Certane articles to be preponitt against Thomas Foullis his warrand of reduction of the allayitt money / Hopetoun Papers.

In the first it is far against his maiesties proffeit and the weill of the cuntrie to tak away the speciall money without the quhilk the commonis can nocht weill be seruit and to put na wther in the steid, and in doing thair of to heich the money fra fourtie fyve schillingis the wnce to fyftie and abone to his vnlie vtilitie and na wtheris /

Secundlie gif his maiestie will be content to vse the advyss of the maist expert of his hienes counsall in the effairis of the cunye and of the cheif officaris of the Cunyhous and ordor salbe sett down how his maiestie may gett ane hundreth thowsand merks of proffeitt at the leist and the said Thomas sufficientlie satisfet for all coistis and chairges that he hes bestowitt vpoun the said reduction /

Thirdlie, Gif his maiestie will neidis sett forward the said rednctioun to his awin hurt and of his cuntrie for the proffeit of ane particulare persone latt him be obleist to his hienes to reduce the haill money appointitt thairto and na wther vnder sick painis as his maiestie and counsall sall think expedient /

Item to the effect that the fyn siluer be nocht affynitt and brokin down vnder collour of the base money, Thatt the wardenis or att the leist ane of them be alwayis present att the demolesing or melting of the said base money and thatt they keip just Register of the wecht and specis thair of conforme to the ordinances of France and all wther ciuil cuntries /

Item thatt he be obleist to pay the haill officaris of the cunyhous thair wagis and all wther coistis and chairgis to be maid vpoun the said reduction In respect that he sall ressaive all the proffeitt thair of /

Item thatt he be obleist to mak or to causs to be maid sufficient quantity of small money of the said affynitt siluer to serue the haill lieges for exchange /

Answeris to the generallis his Invasioun against Thomas Foullis ffor ffinding the meynis how his maiestie may reduce the base money conforme to the ordinance of the Estaittis and to his hieness gritt commodetty ffar by the said generallis knowledge

To the first / That might have been weill proponitt against the generall and his sone Francis qua nocht only crawled the hail proffiett arysing of the base money for the reducing of the sam bot also wald have had from his maiestie allevin thowsand merkis Quhair be the contrair Thomas Foullis hes fund the meinis how that sowme sall be preserved the reducioun maid and his maiestie to rype fyftie thowsand merks (alwayis the aucht penney peicis being att fourtie fywe schillings the wnce of siluer as the generall alledgis) and fyne siluer will be in thair rowme conforme to the ordinance Quhairthrow this article can in na wayis twich Thomas Foullis as he alledgis bot may weill be proponitt to the generall and his sone Francis /

In the second / he wald seim to say his maiestie war laith to imitate his overtouris quhilk appeirandlie hes bein to mekill ffollowed and twiching this off ane hundreth thowsand merk, Itt may be speiritt gif it be by hiechting quhilk in his first he swa heichly quarrellis or gif it be in erecting ane new allay quhilk is far diverss from the meining of the estaitis, bot it is to be feirit he respectis mair his awin fees than any satisfacioun to quhatsomever

In the thrid / he seimis to quarrell his maiestie for the reducioun quhilk he himself knawis was appoyntit be the Estaitis wpoun ane especiall and gud Intentioun thatt na money sewld be in this cuntrey wnder the fyness conforme to the act quhilk gif itt war prosecuted wald be maist proffievable to his hieness and common weill. Quhair the generall wald say that Thomas Foullis is to rype gritt gain lett him have the doing thairof wpoun sik conditions as Thomas Foullis is willing to do the same Bott gif he nather can nor will quhy is Thomas Foullis sua cullumniatte

In the ffourth / he wald say thair is diverss spaces of money appoyntitt to be boillon quhilkis makis diverss kynds of proffiett the quhilkis be Thomas Foullis his proceedings is able to cum to his maiesties chekker cownts na wayis to the generalls commodetty nor honour quhilkis fferis him to permitt Alexander Huntter to exercies his office appoyntitt be his maiestie nocht onlie exchanger bot comptroller of that work. Now sen the generall is swa beissie, It may be speiritt quhat cownt he hes gifin to the chekker of the fyn siluer brokin down be him selff and his sone Francis and quhat quantity of allay hes bein brokin down sen the last reducioun was appoyntit.

To the ffyft / sen Thomas Foullis be his wark is able to import to his maiestie, fyftie thowsand merks quhairfoir sowld he pay to the officers (thay being in his debt) thair fees mair than Francis Napper quha thoct to have tane to him self this fyftie thowsand merks together with allevin thowsand

To the sext / quhat mesteris men to be obleist to do that quhilk eiseilie may be done be his maiesties derrectioun and warrand from the counsall.

Sen the expenssis of the kingis house will in the present estait amont to L<sup>m</sup> ti in the yeir And that his propirtie being for the maist part all fewit for payment of money, To be payit in vsuall money of the realme, will nocht beare the thrid pairt of thir expenssis apperandlie, It suld be thoct guid service in ony that wald mak overtures how this rent suld be maid mair to sustene the expenssis and releive this difficultie and necessitie

It is a Lyk to mak the rent mair and to tak away the occasioun of a pairt of the expenssis vntakand away ony pairt of his fude that eittis and drinkis, or ony pairt of his fie that servis, bot rather to mak it better /

The moyen quhairby to do this Is the cunye / ather be cunyeing samekle mair in rosnoblis and tua pennie pecis / as will mak the haill supplie of that quhilk wantis, at leist of x<sup>m</sup> ti thairof quhairby the prices of gold and siluer of necessitie will increse and augment the derth of all viveris and merchandise yeirlye, sa lang as that schift mon be vsit /

Or then to stay that trade and all cunyeing for vij yeiris to cum and in the meantyme to lett the gold and siluer pece and pece fall down, as it hes extraordinarlie growin vp thir last sevin yeris and mak a certane cry euerie yeir anys at the first of Nouember, vpon the prices of forreyne gold and siluer /

ffor sen the first of Maij 1583, the fourt pairt of the layit money and of lait the fourt pairt of euerie vnce of gold hes bene taken, as ane proffite to the king, quhilk altogidder may be easelie comptit, and sie quhat hes bene his maiesties verie gayne thairby

It may alsua be comptit how far his maiesties expenssis in meit drink and clething hes excedit the prices in the yeir 1582 / quhairby I think it sall appeare that he hes loissit mair in his bying nor he hes won be ony proffite ressaut of the cunye in that space to his awin vse, beside the lose of all his people that hes bot siluer rent quhilk had vont to by als mekle for a babee as now thay do for aucht pennys and alsmekle for ane vnce of gold at the price of xxiiij ti as now for ane vnce of gold at xxix ti vj s viij d. Gif thairfoir the further cunyeing of base money salbe stayed and the viij d pece cryit bak to vj d and the gold accordinglie it sall mak that quhilk the king byis in effect the fourt penny better chaip And consequentlie bring down the fourt or fyft penny of the thingis commonlie coft in viveris or merchandice to his hienes vse.

Quhair be the contrair gif this cours of mone continew as it hes done thir sevin yeir bigane / necessarily for the sustening of this maiesties hous and clething thair will require ane augmentatioun euerie yeir of x<sup>m</sup> ti at leist / suppois thair be not ane pece eikit in quantitie / And sa for euerie yeir x<sup>m</sup> ti may be eikit be the cunye for all vther dubbis ar lavit.

Sa that it is to be aduisit quhidder it be better for the king and his haill subiectis That the viij d pece be cryit vp to ten or cryit down to sex d And the crown of the sone cryit vp to iij ti (quhilk gevis Lvij s already) ar cryit bak to L s and all vther gold accordinglie.

CLXIV—1604, A Project for the reducing of the monies of England and Scotland to a conformity and equall goodnesse.

A Project

Museum.
Cotton MSS.
Otho E, x.
Fol. 242<sup>b</sup>.

for the reducing of the monies of England and Scotland to a conformity, and equall goodnesse It is necessary to be ordered

First that the gold & silver monies be made after one Standerd in their Allay, weight Stampe, and currant Valewe; viz.

1. The silver monyes to hould xj ounces ij pennyweight fyne, and xvij pennyweight of Allay in the pound weight Troy, to which end three standerdes peeces are to be made, the one to remayne in the Exchequer, One other in the Mynt, and the Third at goldsmithes hall to be the Standerd for plate, and the like three to be made for Scotland.

Miscellaneous Records,

The gold monyes to hould xxij Carrettes of fyne gold and two Carrettes of Allay, in the pound weight Troy weight like standerd peeces for y<sup>e</sup> gold, as before is sayd for the silver. 2.

The said pound weight to be established of xij ounces and no more, The ounce xx pennyweights, the pennyweight xxiiij graynes or other wise to be made uniforme in quantity & denominacion as shall be convenyent for both the Realmes. 3.

Objections and Answeres to the Project.

Fol. 243.

They conceive not howe y<sup>e</sup> standerd of silver monyes should be as . . . silver & xviii pennyweights of Allay, and yet be no better than their standerd . . . silver, and one ounce of Allay nowe established, neither have the . . . of a standerd tryall peece. Object. 1.

This MS. is much injured.

The Standerd peece beeing commixed & made of xj ounces ij pennyweights of fyne silver & xv . . . and rightly tried with five parts of leade, will fall out by report at the . . . xi ounces and therefore but equall to y<sup>e</sup> standard & to y<sup>e</sup> moneyes of Scotland if . . . were made accordingly. Besides their monyes would be advanced in credyt. . . the name to be equall to ours of xj ounces ij pennyweights with out alteracion in substance . . . any inconvenyence or charge to the King or Realme. The use of th . . . peece is thereby to Judge certainly whether y<sup>e</sup> assay master have m . . . report trewly or not, with out which peece y<sup>e</sup> Assay master should be Ine . . . the valewe of Bullioun & monyes, & might advance or impayre them a . . . pleasure. Answ:

To this they agree saving for y<sup>e</sup> Standerd peece, whereof they knowe no . . . necessary use, which is answered as before. / 2.

To this poynt they take exceptions, First that their poundweight Troy being xv . . . & ours but xij ounces their ounce divided into xxiiij pennyweights, & ours but into xx pennyweights . . . their pennyweight into xxiiij graynes as ours is The reducing of their weigh . . . so well knowne among their people to an unknowne number & weight would breede a confusioun in their Accomptes, Yet they can agree to reduce their poundweight to xij ounces as ours is, so as wee will reduce our ounce into th . . . same number of pennyweights as theirs is being apter for the small divisions then ours is, Secondly they say our poundweight of xij ounce being nowe founde to overpoize theirs by iiij pennyweights ix graynes English is increased since the first Institution of our standerd, which they would prove, because they have & produce of our ould English pence, which by the Standerd should weigh a pennyweight, which doe agree with their denyer, and is lighter then our pennyweight nowe used viij graynes three quarters. Thirdly they alleadge (and herein Sir Richard Martyn and his sounne doe agree with them) that it is a great losse to the Realme to have our weights heavier than those of other Countryes, in that y<sup>e</sup> merchant Object. 3.

Records,

who buyeth Bullion by the weights of other Countreyes fyndeth himself deceyved & to loose when he cometh to sell the same by the weights of England, and for thir respectes they would persuade us to conforme our weightes to theirs, as more perfect for reckoning, more ancye[n]t, and more agreable with other natyons.

Fol. 243<sup>b</sup>.
Answ:

For the first reason, to induce a conformity in the . . . necessity that there be a conformity of weight but this in . . . reduction offered by chaunge of both weightes will breed . . . confusioun in both Countreyes, without good to either of them; . . . whereof If they can prove that the Mynt of Scotland is . . . be more wrought then the Mynt of England, that y<sup>e</sup> comme . . . country is greater then of this, that it concerneth the people . . . countrey more neerely then it doth ours, and that the avoyding . . . & discontentment with them then with us be of more importaunce . . . wee will willingly yelde to them. If not wee hope they will as wi . . . yelde to us.

For y<sup>e</sup> second reason, They are deceyved in their affection & more in . . . prooffe, for it shall be demonstratively proved that y<sup>e</sup> pennyweight of E . . . which they affirme to be increased since the first Institution is no . . . since it was first instituted in the xiiijth yeare of King Edw . . . And where they would prove their affection by the ould pence, that . . . no prooffe with reason, in that y<sup>e</sup> monyes have ever bene made deliverable . . . in their remedies, and therefore doe ever vary more or lesse from th . . . stander, besides so large use may easily make them lighter then the . . . were first made.

For the third reason, wee never heare of any such complaynt in h . . . majesties mynte, and hould the merchant as wise in his trade, as th . . . husbandman is in his, who is never deceyved by y<sup>e</sup> difference of me . . . that is usuall in one market towne from an other, neither can . . . state beare the abatement of our weightes (among many other) for th . . . speciall reasons. The abating of the weight, by which y<sup>e</sup> monyes are . . . would necessarily be an imbasing of the monyes. It would thereby ma . . . all y<sup>e</sup> monyes made in former tynes to become Bullion, It would abate the credyt of the monyes & there valewe upon y<sup>e</sup> Exchainge. It would thereby advance the prize of all home and forreyne commodityes, It would alter all the weightes & measures of England which have bene lately with greate charge & trouble to the people bene reduced & established, according to the ancye[n]t stander of England, and above all the rest it would alter & lessen y<sup>e</sup> present assize of Bread, drinke & all measures of grayne, which are all grounded upon y<sup>e</sup> grayne, the pennyweight, the ounce, & the pound weight Troy, and so deprive the poore of his necessary maintennce, which beeing soone and sencibly felt would breede more inconvenyence the happily will be Imagined. All which beeing considered, the lesseninge or change of one weight is not to be graunted unto . . . and prynt of the monyes to be uniforme, saving in some small . . . cret poynt, The monyes of our Realme to be distinguished from . . . ther, that the one Mynt may not beare the default of the . . . other if any happen to be found.

The current valewe of the monyes of gold & silver is to be after the proporcion of xij parte of fyne silver to one of gold. If therefore the monyes of silver of the fynes aforesaid be shorne into lxij peeces in the poundweight Troy, every peece to be current for xij d̄ as nowe they are and the like poundweight of gold of the fynes aforesaid to be shorne into lxij peeces, every peece currant for xij s̄ and so the lesser peeces accordingly. The gold and silver monyes would be exact in proporcion after twelve to one in currant valewe, and would so answer the one to the other without any fraction either in wight or in tale, as every man of meanest capacity shall be able to weigh and valewe the one by the other without error. The proffyt will be advaunced hereby in every poundweight of gold to the King xx s̄ for coynage, and to the subject liiij s̄ in monyes by tale, more than is nowe made thereof.

Secondly. that there be one mannour of Indenture or contract betweene the King & the M<sup>r</sup> Workers, or such convenient covennte for either of them, as may best stand with the state of both y<sup>e</sup> realmes, so alwaies as the monyes may be made of equall weight & fynes, with such a course of receiving Bullion into y<sup>e</sup> Mynte, making of the monyes, delivery of the same, with such tryall, avouchment and allowance as shall be fyt for the exact observing of the Standerd which shalbe established.

In this poynt wee agree, and it is devised by them, a . . . by us, that for distinction sake, the crowne imp . . . Armes for monyes made in England should hould . . . Ball in y<sup>e</sup> toppe thereof, as nowe is used, and those . . . should have a flower de Lyze in steede thereof, unlesse his maiesty do appointe it otherwise.

Object. 5.

The inconvenyence is not to be respected equall to the conven . . . of the certeyne knowledge of the weight & valewe of the o . . . money to the other, and it is farre easier by gold and si . . . to make the pound tale, then in silver monyes alone, for the . . . is used the shilling, the sixe pence, the grote, the three . . . the two pence, the penny, and the half penny, But th . . . is indifferent wee leave it to his maiesty to make choice of which sort doth please him best. Concerning y<sup>e</sup> allowance for coynage & y<sup>e</sup> resolution in the other points folowing, & of y<sup>e</sup> Indenture not spoken of, It is referred to further consideration after conference hadd with some merchaunts of Scotland, and the vewe of y<sup>e</sup> present Indentures for England, whereupon they promise to drawe a draught with such Covenants as shall be fit for Scotland, & to establish the making of the monyes there to be of equall valewe & goodness with the monyes to be made in England which when wee have seene wee shall judge of. And this is the effect of all that hath passed in our last two daies of conference beinge the xth & xijth of October, 1604.

. . . that the merchaunts of England may bringe their gold and . . . Bullion into the Mynt, as of late hath beene accustomed, to deliver the same at an equall valewe in fynes to the Standerds . . . gold and silver monyes to be established, and to receive the same . . . aine in complete monies by the same weight they doe deliver . . . at. In consideracon wherof they are to pay for coynage of every . . . pound weight of silver monyes—ij s vj d, and for every pound weight of gold monyes—xxx s, which is after the rate of xij to one for coynage proporconable to the advancement of the gold monyes in their currant valewe.

Fourthly that the Assay maisters be sworne to discharge their duty, & carry themselves uprightly betweene the King & his subjects in the place they hold, The exact tryall of the Bullion beinge the ground worke of all our worke in the mynt.

Fiftely that the moniers may have their allowance for the working of their monyes to be certeyne, and that for gold to be advanced for in truth they are loosers by the working of y<sup>e</sup> gold monies as they are nowe allowed for the same. In consideracon whereof they would be enjoyned upon a strayte penalty, to size their monyes more exactly than they are wonted to doe.

Fol. 246.

Some consideracon would likewise behadd of the gold monies allready coyned and currant abroad. /

pryces of your Maiesteis owne money whilk no vther king nor commonwealth doeth permit vnpunished.

Secondlie the transporting of your best and heaviest money out of this countrie and Leaveing the light and counterfitt within the same direct contrarie to many good acts and Lawes made in the contrarie.

Thirdlie be the Inbringing of light and counterfitt money at the bordars fairis and merkats whilk if your Maiestie prevent not speedilie your hienes Leigis of this realme sall Loise (at the leist) the third penny of the said light money.

Ffor remeid of the first It appears to be necessarie if your maiestie with advyse of the parlement find it expedient to be done That ane new act be made In regard of the Contemptious contraveening of all former acts that if any persone sall offer or give out money, either gold or silver in payment vpon hier pryces nor sall be sett down in ane table to be sett out in print That it salbe Leisum to the pairtie To whom the said money salbe offerred in payment or byeris change vpon hier pryces then are contenit in the said table To conveen and perseu the said pairtie offerers befor sic Judges as your Maiestie and Counsell sall find maist fitt to that effect With power to them to try the said matter either be witnesses or be the aith of the pairtie offerer of the said money contrarie to the said act whilk if he refus to depone to be halden pro confesso and the said money to be confiscat The ane half to your Maiesties vse and the other to the pairtie reveillar/ and farder/ Incaice that ony persone haueing occasion to borrow money vpon annuell salbe constrained in his vrgent necessitie be the Lender to receaue money contrarie to the tenour of the said act That the probatioun of the contraveening of the said ordinance in form foirsaid salbe ane sufficient discharge of payment of the said money

Secondlie for remeid of Transporting of money out of the Countrie may it also please your maiestie to ordaine be the said act that all clerks of cocketts salbe solemlic sworne in presens of your hienes counsell that they sall delyver na cocketts vntill sic tyme as they sall likeways take the aiths of the skipper mariners merchands and passengers that they sall neither directlie nor Indirectlie be themselves nor na otheris transport mair money nor may serve for the Intertainment of their persones in that voyage. And na wayes to be Employit in merchandice with certificatioun as effeiris And the form of the said aith to be sett down in writt eftir the maist strict forme that can be advysed. And to that effect also searcheris wold be appoyntit efter the same form to searche and apprehend any money that can be found to have contraveenit the said act To whom the half sould appertaine and the rest to your Maiestie.

Thirdlie as Concerning the Inbringing of Light groats and vther light money whilk is sent into this Land be ane secrete and subtill convoy from our nighbour countrie feiring the decrying theirof/ Necessarie it were that your Maiesties counsell wold advyse be what moyane the said light money may be convoyed bak agane and some good course taken that na mair be receivet in this countrie It is also to be remembered that the course of forrayne money by the peice is maist vnreasonable and also hurtfull to your Maiesties proffeitt and the commonwealth whilk may be easilie proven by the ordinances of France and many vther countries, may it theirfoir please your hienes to discharge the course of the said forraine money but onlie by weight to be brought Into the Coynehouse Thair to receive sic reasounabill pryce as your Maiesties counsell appoint conforme to the order vset in all nations and hes of ald bein practized in this realme And for the better performing theiroyf Lett the receiveris of your highnes rents The customeris and their deputs The receivers of the consigned money befoir the Lordis of session Thesaurers and deans of gild within burghs and the money payit at redemption be maist straitlie Inhibite to receive any forraine money And forder seeing the decry of the money in forrayne countreis (especiallie in france) makes our owne gold formerlie Transported to be rounge and sett bak againe That it may be intimat vnto the leiges that it salbe leisume to them to refuse the same if they be 3 graynes lighter then their owne weight wheirby they wer coyned.

And likwayes because their is ane grit quantitie of light and cracked gold whilk sindrie persons buys good cheip and Causes the samen to be soulderit And also put roude (?) of base gold and Lattoun theirin and therefter gilts and gives out the same to the leiges to their grit hurt and prejudice Theirfoir all goldsmyths and vtheris wold be discharged to vse that forme of doeing vnder the paynes vset and execute againes fals coyneyeris

Last of all it is maist carefullie to be considered be your maiestie that the merchandis hes transported the best and hiveest of your money besyds mony other vnlesume waires And In place theiroyf hes brought home foraine gold and siluer whilk they have given out at hier pryces then your hienes owne money direct contrairie to your Maiesties acts and ordinances made theiranent whilk out of all question will be ane occasion either to hight the money (whilk is already at ane hier rate then the commonwealth may weill permit) or els to decry the forraine money to the grit prejudice of your hienes trew subjects Theirfoir reasoun wald reither command that they who hes made the fault sould be punished then the Innocent liegeis ffor without punishment of the contraveenaris of Lawes, lett never your maiestie exspect any benefite of your coynie or have your countrie stored with money. ffor remeid wheiroyf may it please your maiestie to direct ane Commission to convene all merchands ventours within Scotland befoir the secret counsell Their to be examined vpon their grit oath what forraine money they have brought hame sen the dait of the last proclamatioun anent the money And vpon what pryces they have outted the same wheirby they that salbe found to have contraveened your maiesties acts may be fyned at the Counsellis discretion Be the whilk fyne the forrayne money may be brought into your hienes coyniehouse to be converted in your maiesties owne money without prejudice to your trew leiges But abone all things I recommend vnto your hienes fatherlie care of your native countrie that pourpose which your maiestie hes long aymed att and hes onlie been disappoynted by some subtile and Craftie heidis whom I know (whilk is the making of the woollskins and hydys whilk your countrie does yield in seable wairis befoir that be transported) wheirby this countrie may not onlie be stored with money good waires Bot also ane Infinite number of Idill and vnprofitable people sett to work wheiranent if it sall

James, by the grace of God, King of Great Britaune, France, and Ireland, defender of the Faith : To our loveds messengers, our sheriffs in that part, conjunctlie & severallie, constitute, greeting, Forsamikle as Wee, & the Lords of our secret counsale, having consideration of the great hurt & prejudice that divers of our lieges have sustained, and daylie susteine, through the clipping, roungeing, impairing, & diminishing of our proper coyne of golde, both old & new, committed by numbers of avaritious & godles persons, who, preferring their own privat & unlawfull gaine to the common weal, and all others dueties of respect and consideration, brings in within this our kingdome, diminishes & puttes out amongst our subjects all fôrts and spaces of golde, farre under and within the just weight ; so that this our country is filled with a greate quantitie of lighte gold, which hath commoun course, without controlment, especialie among the ignorant multitude, who are senslis of their own harme, & lookes no foorthier but to the peece, without regairde either to weght or fynnese : Whereas, if the receiving & delyverie of our coyne were by weght, according to the poletie & ordour of others countryes, not only would the abuse of diminishing of the said coyne cease, & be of longer continuance, but our subjects would be sure to receive their paymentes in good coyne, holding weght & fynnese. And wee being cairefull that the said abuse of diminishing of our coyne may be remooved, & the inconvenients following thereupon prevented & suffered to have no foorthier course nor progresse. Therefore wee, with advyse of the Lords of our secret counsale, have found it meet & expedient, that in all tyme coming, after the publication hereof, our coyne of gold, old and new, of the particular spaces & peeces under-written, shall be received by weght ; & that such peeces shall be lighter then the particular weghtes, and the remedies & abaitments after specified, may be lawfullie refused in all kynd of payments ; that is to say, the new English peece of fyne angell gold, called the Rose-Ryall, & marked on the one side with the number of XXX. the remeid & abaitment shall not exceed three graines. the number of V. the remeid & abaitment shall not exceed half one graine. In the peece of gold called the Unite, or Double-Angell, the remeid & abaitment shall not exceed thrie graines. In the peece of gold called the Double-Crowne, or Single-Angell, the remeid & abaitment shall not exceed two graines: And in the peece of gold called the Britan-Crowne, or Halfe-Angell, the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed one graine. And to the effect all our subjects throughout this our whole kingdome may have good & just weghts for the true weghing of all the saids coynes of gold, & true & upright graines for the remedies & abaitments. We, with advyse of the saids Lords of our secret counsal, have given command, warrand, & direction to Charles Dickeson sinker of our irons, to prepare & make readdie sufficient numbers of upright & true weghts, as weel of the severall peeces of gold abone written, as of the remedies & abaitments, according to the patterne & warrand which he hath received from the Generall of our Coyne-house; which weghts, compting nyne peeces for everie stand, according to the number of the severall spaces of the said gold, & double graines to everie stand, the said Charles Dickeson shall bee holden to sell to our leiges at the pryce of twelwe shillings usuall moneye of this kingdome for everie stand, & hee shall not exceed the said pryce, as hee will be answerable at his perrell. And wee, with advyse of the said Lords, discharges all others our leiges & subjects whatsomever, of all making & selling of any of the saids weghts & granes of remeid, but such as shall bee make bee the said Charles Dickeson as said is, upon whatsomever colour or pretext, under the paine of falset, & to bee punished therefore in their persons & goods as counterfaiters of our weghts with all rigour. And fourther, to the intent our subjects may know upon what pryces the saids new peeces of gold laitlie coyned in England shall have course in this our kingdome, we with advyse of the saids Lords, declares, that they shall have course in this our kingdome, upon the same pryces that they are coyned for in England, to witt, the peece of angel-gold, called the Rose-Ryall, marked on the one syde as said is with the number of XXX. for eighteen pounds. The peece of angel-gold, called the Spur-Ryall, marked on the one syde as said is, with the number of XV. for nyne pounds. The peece of angel-gold, called the Angell, marked on the one syde as said is, with the number of X. at the syde of the angell for six pounds. The peece of crowne-gold, called the Unite marked on the one syde as said is, with the number of XX. for twelwe pounds. The peece of crowne-gold, called the New-double Crowne, marked on the one syde, as said is, with the number of X. at the syde of our portrait, for six pounds. And the peece of crowne-gold, called the New-Britain-Crowne, marked on the one syde, as said is, with the number of V. for three pounds. And touching all other spaces of gold which are decayed & ordained to be brought into our coyne-house, the owner shall receive in our coyne-house in readdie & thankfull payment for everie unce weght of gold of xxii carrets fyne, the soume of threttie-nyne pounds three shillings fyve-pence; and for all other gold they shall receive payment proportionallie for ilk unce, denier, and graine weght thereof, according to the former proclamation made thereanent, and A. B. C. delyvered to the master coynier for that effect.
