MEMOIRS

OF HIS OWN LIFE AND TIMES

BY SIR JAMES TURNER.

M.DC.XXXII.-M.DC.LXX.

FROM THE ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPT.

PRINTED AT EDINBURGH.

M.DCCC.XXIX.

AT A MEETING of the COMMITTEE of MANAGEMENT of the BANNATYNE CLUB, held at Edinburgh, on the 11th day of June, 1828.

IT having been stated to the Meeting by the Vice-President, that "THE MEMOIRS OF SIR JAMES TURNER," from an original Manuscript in the possession of David Constable, Esq. Advocate, were in preparation for the press, it was

RESOLVED, That One Hundred Copies of the Work should be purchased for the use of the Club.

DAVID LAING, Secretary.

and a state of the state of the

M.DCCC.XXIX.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, BARONET,

[PRESIDENT.]

THE EARL OF ABERDEEN, K.T. RIGHT HON. WILLIAM ADAM, LORD CHIEF COMMIS-SIONER OF THE JURY COURT. SIR WILLIAM ARBUTHNOT, BART. 5 JAMES BALLANTYNE, ESQ. SIR WILLIAM MACLEOD BANNATYNE. LORD BELHAVEN AND STENTON. GEORGE JOSEPH BELL, ESQ. ROBERT BELL, ESQ. Press and the set 10 WILLIAM BELL, ESQ. and a second second JOHN BORTHWICK, ESQ. WILLIAM BLAIR, ESQ. REV. PHILIP BLISS, D.C.L. GEORGE BRODIE, ESQ. . . . . . . . . 15 THE DUKE OF BUCCLEUCH AND QUEENSBERRY. JOHN CALEY, ESQ. JAMES CAMPBELL, ESQ. HON. JOHN CLERK, LORD ELDIN. WILLIAM CLERK, ESQ.

20 HENRY COCKBURN, ESQ. DAVID CONSTABLE, ESQ. ANDREW COVENTRY, ESQ. JAMES T. GIBSON CRAIG, ESQ. WILLIAM GIBSON CRAIG, ESQ. 25 HON. GEORGE CRANSTOUN, LORD COREHOUSE. THE EARL OF DALHOUSIE. JAMES DENNISTON, ESQ. ROBERT DUNDAS, ESQ. RIGHT HON. WILLIAM DUNDAS, LORD CLERK REGISTER. 30 HENRY ELLIS, ESQ. CHARLES FERGUSSON, ESQ. ROBERT FERGUSON, ESQ. LIEUT.-GENERAL SIR RONALD C. FERGUSON. THE COUNT DE FLAHAULT. 35 HON. JOHN FULLERTON, LORD FULLERTON. LORD GLENORCHY. . T. I. THE DUKE OF GORDON. WILLIAM GOTT, ESQ. SIR JAMES R. G. GRAHAM, BART. 40 ROBERT GRAHAM, ESQ. LORD GRAY. RIGHT HON. THOMAS GRENVILLE. THE EARL OF HADDINGTON. THE DUKE OF HAMILTON AND BRANDON. 45 E. W. A. DRUMMOND HAY, ESQ. 1.1

JAMES M. HOG, ESQ.

JOHN HOPE, ESQ. SOLICITOR-GENERAL. and being you to COSMO INNES, ESQ. DAVID IRVING, LL.D. 50 JAMES IVORY, ESQ. S. - 11 - 51 - 5 REV. JOHN JAMIESON, D.D. ROBERT JAMESON, ESQ. SIR HENRY JARDINE. FRANCIS JEFFREY, ESQ. 55 JAMES KEAY, ESQ. When you do not a line with JOHN G. KINNEAR, ESQ. THOMAS KINNEAR, ESQ. [TREASURER.] THE EARL OF KINNOULL. DAVID LAING, ESQ. [SECRETARY.] 60 THE EARL OF LAUDERDALE, K.T. REV. JOHN LEE, D.D. THE MARQUIS OF LOTHIAN. COLIN MACKENZIE, ESQ. HON. J. H. MACKENZIE, LORD MACKENZIE. 65 JAMES MACKENZIE, ESQ. JAMES MAIDMENT, ESQ. THOMAS MAITLAND, ESQ. GILBERT LAING MEASON, ESQ. THE VISCOUNT MELVILLE, K.T. 70 WILLIAM HENRY MILLER, ESQ. THE EARL OF MINTO. SIR JAMES W. MONCREIFF, BART. JOHN ARCHIBALD MURRAY, ESQ. WILLIAM MURRAY, ESQ.

T 1 75 JAMES NAIRNE, ESQ. MACVEY NAPIER, ESQ. FRANCIS PALGRAVE, ESQ. HENRY PETRIE, ESQ. ROBERT PITCAIRN, ESQ. 80 JOHN RICHARDSON, ESQ. THE EARL OF ROSSLYN. ANDREW RUTHERFURD, ESQ. THE EARL OF SELKIRK. RIGHT HON. SIR SAMUEL SHEPHERD, LORD CHIEF BARON OF SCOTLAND. 85 ANDREW SKENE, ESQ. JAMES SKENE, ESQ. GEORGE SMYTHE, ESQ. THE EARL SPENCER, K.G. JOHN SPOTTISWOODE, ESQ. 90 THE MARQUIS OF STAFFORD, K.G. MAJOR-GENERAL' STRATON. SIR JOHN ARCHIBALD STEWART, BART. HON. CHARLES FRANCIS STUART. ALEXANDER THOMSON, ESQ. 95 THOMAS THOMSON, ESQ. [VICE-PRESIDENT.] W. C. TREVELYAN, ESQ. PATRICK FRASER TYTLER, ESQ. . ADAM URQUHART, ESQ. RIGHT HON. SIR GEORGE WARRENDER, BART. 100 THE VENERABLE ARCHDEACON WRANGHAM.

CONTENTS.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE,

P. VII

MEMOIRS OF SIR JAMES TURNER, PART FIRST; wherein are contained the most remarkable Passages of his Life, till his releasement out of Prison at Hull, in the Year 1649, . 1-88

and the second second

APPENDIX.

I.	BISHOP	GUTHRY'S	OBSERVAT	IONS OF	THE	LATE	REBEI	LLION
	OBSERVE	ED, .		•			. 1	P. 229

II. LETTERS TO SIR JAMES TURNER.

1.	From William Duke of Hamilton, 22 Nov. 1672,	247
2.	From Dr Gilbert Burnet, 1 May [1673]	248
3.	From Dr Burnet, 18 Aug. [1673]	248
4.	From R. Hamilton of Dickmont, [1673]	249
5.	From Dr Burnet, 22 Aug. 1673,	250
6.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 28 Aug. 1673,	251
7.	From Dr Burnet, 22 Nov. [1673]	252
8.	From the Duke of Hamilton,	253
9.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 22 Sept. [1675] .	254
10.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 13 Nov. 1675,	255
11.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 19 Mar. 1677,	255
12.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 11 Apr. [1677]	256
13.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 23 May [1677]	257
14.	"Discourse with the Archbishop of Glasgow, the 28 of May,
	1677," by Sir James Turner,	257
15.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 1 Jun. [1677]	262
16.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 16 Jun. [1677] .	262
17.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 10 Sept. [1677]	263
18.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 26 Oct. [1677] .	264
19.	From the Duke of Hamilton, 2 Jan. 1678,	264
20.	From Anne Duchess of Hamilton, 19 April, 1678,	265
21.	From the Duchess of Hamilton, 22 Apr. [1678] .	267
22.	From the Duchess of Hamilton, 30 Apr. 1678, .	268
23.	From the Duchess of Hamilton,	269

04 From the Duchage of Hamilton 00 May 1679	070
24. From the Duchess of Hamilton, 20 May 1678,25. From the Duchess of Hamilton, 17 Jun. 1678,	270 270
26. From the Duchess of Hamilton, 19 Jun. [1678]	271
27. From the Duchess of Hamilton, 20 Jun. 1678,	271
28. From Sir James Turner to a Person unknown,	272
29. From the Duchess of Hamilton, 4 Nov. 1678,	276
30. From Andrew Toftes, 10 Feb. 1679,	276
31. From the Duke of Hamilton, 4 Mar. [1679]	277
32. From Andrew Toftes, 4 Mar. 1679,	278
33. From the Duke of Hamilton, 5 Feb. [1680]	278
34. From the Lord Ross, 14 Jan. 1682,	279
35. From the Lord Ross, 22 Jan. 1682, .	279
36. From the Lord Ross, 26 Jan. 1682,	280
37. From the Lord Ross, 10 Feb. 1682, .	281
38. From the Lord Ross, 16 Feb. 1682, .	282
39. From the Lord Ross, 6 Mar. 1682, .	283
40. From the Lord Ross, 8 Mar. 1682, .	284
41. From the Lord Ross, 11 Mar. 1682, .	284
42. From James Earl of Arran, 21 Mar. 1682, .	285
43. From the Earl of Arran, 22 Mar. 1682,	285
44. From the Lord Ross, 25 Mar. 1682,	286
45. From the Earl of Arran, 27 Mar. 1682,	287
46. From the Earl of Arran, 28 Mar. 1682,	288
47. From the Earl of Arran, 29 Mar. 1682,	289
48. From the Earl of Arran,	290
49. From Sir Thomas Levingston, 11 Apr. [1682,]	291
50. From Sir Thomas Levingston,	292
51. From the Lord Ross, 13 Apr. 1682,	292
52. From the Lord Ross, 15 Apr. 1682,	292
53 From the Earl of Arran, 19 Apr. 1682,	293
54. From Sir James Turner to the Earl of Arran, 21 Apr. 1682, or. From on oames Furner to the Part of Attall, 21 Apr. 1082,	294

55.	From William Master of Ross, Apr. 25, [1682]		•	296
56.	From the Earl of Arran, May 4, [1682]		•	296
57.	From the Earl of Arran, May 6, 1682,	۰		297
58.	From the Lord Sempill, May 6, 1682,			298
59.	From the Earl of Arran, May 11, 1682,	٠		299
60.	From the Earl of Arran, May 19, 1682,		•	299
61.	From the Earl of Arran,	-		300

Als Capary Dun working which housed out make thom, no thor card the It gonorall be moved to grant any other conditions, then that they fould yood on Difordren, a more And I bogs to bo fond to formas with a hundred country follow di hom hill, mhorby they commanded two Shipol of mator, that mo wit methors fenne, ox copt one young men Mack only as help life Hon, that they found your thompored is the king times mer cy, and not he hid At. Congth they and le, and after they now 12 form strange to me to hours the lt gonorad's mito differe takes But his uffindle fortes of them none put le the Snow, we Ehripmas them Jopre a purloy; I wild wrows he prouks with come out up the Eustle, Chay more fort. fu the snow, alon lift firs or par, with Argilod Major. After this, Inexurable owingh, fill me storing a from they had at the fool of the no had Smuch oil of a cave, as they Doo foxed. The non- colon he Euptaine Eumboll, the Chuncellerd Bre ther.

Memoirs Page 46.

PRELIMINARY NOTICE.

THE work here given, under the title of MEMOIRS OF SIR JAMES TURNER, has been extracted from a volume of Discourses on various subjects of Philosophy and Literature, in the hand-writing of the author, compiled at different periods of his life; and with the different portions of which he has connected a history of himself, down to the date of the manuscript in the year 1670. The relation of these biographical portions of the volume to its other contents, will best appear from a short analysis of the whole, which is subjoined to this Preface; and on the part of the Editor it may be enough to add, that no liberty of the slightest kind has been taken with the author's composition, beyond that of separating these historical parts from the larger mass, and arranging them as a continuous narrative.

The hand-writing of Sir James Turner is sufficiently well known to place the genuineness of this manuscript beyond the possibility of a doubt; and of its fate subsequently to the author's death, some slight notices have been preserved. He was survived by his wife, to whose worth so many affectionate tributes are paid in these Memoirs; and after his death, Lady Turner resided in the family of Lieutenant Richard Turnbull, of the Scots Dragoons, (whose wife was probably her near relation,) first in the neighbourhood of Glasgow, afterwards in the Island of Arran, at the White House of Lamlash, where she died, as is supposed, about the year 1716. To Mr and Mrs Turnbull, she is reported to have left a considerable sum of money, and other valuable property; and, in particular, there can be no doubt that they retained the possession of Sir James Turner's manuscripts.

These papers did not escape the notice and inquiries of the indefatigable Mr Robert Wodrow; and, in the valuable collection of his Correspondence, lately purchased by the Curators of the Advocates' Library, there are several letters on the subject, addressed to him by the Rev. James Boes, minister of Campbeltown. On the 8th of July, 1723, Mr Boes writes,—" I have caus'd enquyre at Mr Turnbull anent Sir James Turner's Memoirs, and find he has them, but is not willing to part with them, being, as he says, pre-ingadg'd to the D. of Hamiltone not to part with them till he see them. I shall deall with the Arran ministers to use their interest with him for a sight of them, under what security he shall demand; and if so, ye shall have an account of them one way or other." Again, on the 4th of February, 1724, Mr Boes reports to his correspondent as follows :—" I desired Mr Stuart, [minister of Kilbride,] in Arran, to procure a copy of Sir Ja. Turner's manuscript, and particularly intreated him, which he promised to do. The person Turnbull who has it, tho otherwise a discreet man, yet is at the heart strongly prelatical, and a Jacobite, as is his wife. However, if it can be procured, doubt not of its being sent to you." These attempts had proved unsuccessful; and, in answer to a letter from Mr Wodrow, March 2, 1724, " praying the continuance of his endeavours to get a loan of Sir James Turner's papers from Mr Turnbull, if he would not part with them," Mr Boes writes, on 3d of November, 1724,-"" I have done all I could, both here and in Arran, to procure that manuscript of Sir Ja. Turner, but without successe. Mr Turnbull is dead, and his relict, who is but ill affected to our interest, refuses to part with it, saying, she knows not where it is. However, if I can possibly procure it, ye shall have at least a copy, tho' I'm told by such as perused it, that it contains but a narrative of what he did there, with his orders, and reflections on what he calls the stiff humor, and obstinat refractory temper of the people oppressed and persecuted by him, which was all he had to say in his own justification."

After Mrs Turnbull's death, her effects passed into the possession of her nephew, William Wilson, a person of respectability in the island of Arran, who probably allowed the papers, so eagerly sought after by Wodrow, to remain undisturbed and uncared for. At the sale of his furniture, after his death in 1767, a strong box of nice and curious construction happened to attract the attention of Mr John Stuart, son of the Rev. Gershom Stuart, minister of Kilbride, and grandson of the Rev. James Stewart, mentioned in Wodrow's Correspondence, then a youth of thirteen years old, and afterwards his father's successor. His importunities prevailed on his mother to purchase this box; and on examining it, young Stuart discovered the manuscript in question, together with a considerable number of letters addressed to Sir James Turner; all of which, though perfectly legible, had suffered great injury from damp. When he afterwards went to College at Glasgow, he carried this manuscript with him, and placed it in the hands of Robert and Andrew Foulis, the celebrated printers of that University, with permission to print such parts of it as they might think fit. This, however, was declined, and the manuscript remained in the possession of Mr Stuart till about twenty years ago, when it was brought into notice by the publication of a few extracts in a provincial newspaper. It passed afterwards into the hands of a bookseller at Greenock, from whom, it is believed, it was purchased about ten years ago, by the late Mr Archibald Constable, whose intention it certainly was to have published the historical portions of the volume. The manuscript is now the property of David Constable, Esg. advocate; and with his permission the present edition of these Memoirs has been prepared.

To the Memoirs are here added, in an Appendix, the Letters addressed to Sir James Turner, found in his strong-box or cabinet; which, although not perhaps of very deep historical importance, throw some scattered lights on the course of his life for several years after his removal from military employment, and will be found to exhibit some amiable contrasts to those darker impressions of his character, which have been too deeply, and, it is to be feared, too justly stamped on the contemporary history of his age, ever to be effaced.

At every period of his life, Sir James Turner appears to have been much addicted to literary composition. Besides his printed works, of which "Pallas Armata,—Essays on the Art of War," is the most considerable, he left various manuscripts; but among these, little of any value as a fit addition to this historical work has been found, excepting a few remarks on Bishop Guthry's Memoirs. These are valuable, as the testimony, in most instances, of an eye-witness, and have been, accordingly, introduced into the Appendix to this volume, printed from the original manuscript in the Advocates' Library.

In the same Library there is preserved a copy of another work, entitled "Buchanan Revis'd; or, Animadversions on the Historie of "Scotland, and a Dialogue De Jure Regni apud Scotos, both write "by Mr George Buchanan." This work is in its nature controversial, and intended to counteract the anti-monarchical principles of the writings which he undertakes to criticise; but in the Introduction, Sir James Turner has given some few additional notices of himself, which it has been thought worth while to quote in the Appendix.

101 - 1

the second s

.

APPENDIX.

I. ANALYSIS OF THE CONTENTS OF THE MANUSCRIPT FROM WHICH SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS HAVE BEEN EXTRACTED.

- P. 1. " The Introduction to these Discourses, wherein are contained the most remarkable Passages of my Life, till my releasment out of Prison at Hull, in the Year 1649."
- P. 68. The following ESSAYS or DISCOURSES, are of—(1) DUETIES OF SOVERAIGNS AND SUBJECTS.—(2) THE SUPREME POUER IN ALL REPUPLICKS.—(3) MO-NARCHIE. — (4) ARISTOCRACIE. — (5) DEMOCRACIE. — (6) ORATORS AND PREACHERS.—(7) MAGICKS.—(8) THE JEWS CABALE.—(9) FRIENDSHIP.— (10) EXTERNALL EVILLS AND MISFORTUNES.—(11) IMPRISONMENT.—(12) ANGER.—(13) REVENGE.—(14) DUELLS.—(15) CRUELTIE.
- P. 192. A Letter from Don Francisco of Quevedo to Philander of Sitmald, who wrote the Continuation of Quevedos Visions. Concerning some Discourses which passed in the Infernall Court betweene the late Vsurper Oliver Cromwell, the late Chancellor of Sweden, Axell Oxesterne, and the Lord Wilienstrome. Sent by the Post of Hell. In yeare 1659. Englished out of the Hie Dutche.
- P. 230. A Defence of some Ceremonies of the English Liturgie—to wit : Bowing at the name of Jesus. The frequent repetition of the Lord's Prayer, and good Lord deliver us. Of the Doxologie.
  Of Surplesses, Rotchets, and Canonicall Coats.
- P. 271. " A full Narration of the Insurrection in Scotland towards the latter end of the Yeare 1666, and of my Misfortunes following thereupon."

XIV

- P. 272. "In the Introduction are contained the remarkable Passuges of my Life, from my releasment out of Prison at Hull, in 8<sup>ber</sup> 1649 till 9<sup>ber</sup> 1663. The rest are narrated in the Narration till the Yearc of God 1670."
- P. 308. The Narration.
- P. 387. The Concometancie of Joy and Griefe. (in verse.)
- P. 389. Two Heroicall Epistles, supposed to have beene writ by Mahomet the Great and Irene, the faire Greeke. Composed before I was ane and twentie yeares of age.
- P. 403. End of the two Epistles.
- P. 404. Ane Elegie on the Death of the Earle of Lothian. Designed by William Douglas of Tofts

"The Argument .- It wants but a few yeares of halfe ane age since the Earle of Lothian's death made a great noyse in the world : The strange manner of it furnishing matter of strange discourses to people of all rankes and qualities. He was a person of a great spirit, endued with excellent parts. He had seene the most renouned places of Europe. Naturally curious he was, which perhaps made him studie Astrologie. He made choyce of William Douglas of Tofts to be his freend, his confident, and his alter ego. This was a gentleman of a good spirit, generous, and learned in omni scibili, especially in the Mathematickes, wherein he had attained to so great a perfection, that he had no equal in his oune countrey, perhaps few in Christendome. As intimate as he was with the Earle, it is cleare enough, by his oune complaints, that he was not entrusted with the secret of his death. He either finish'd, or intended to finish, the composition of ane Elegie on this sad subject. In the yeare 1662, I fortund to be in the Mers, wher I gave a visite to Archbald Douglas of Lumsden, brother to this Tofts, where he shew me this peece, pitifullie torne, mutilated, defective in most places, and writ with a very bad orthographie. He and I having long befor contracted a strict enough friendship in Germanie, he prayed me to look on it, and to take a litle paines to reduce it to some good order, at least to make it intelligible, for the memory of his noble brother who design'd it. And certainly the original wanted his last hand to it, or that copie which his brother gave me was exceidinglie imperfite. I tooke it with me to Edinburgh; foure days I spent before I could get it red, and foure more before I could vnderstand or guesse at the scope of it. At length I put it in that garbe in which it is now to be seene, and sent it to my friend."

P. 429. MISCELLANIES written at several times for DIVERTISEMENT.—The PREFACE.
—FRANCESCO PETRARCHA.—EDWARD THE THIRD, KING OF ENGLAND.
—PHILIP THE SECOND, KING OF SPAIN.—LUCRETIA ROMANA.—LUCRETIA BORGIA.—LUCRETIA MARINELLA.—ORLANDO.—ENHARD and IMA, [i. e. EGINHARD and EMMA.]—JULIUS SCALIGER.—MARY STEUART, QUEEN OF SCOTS.—RAYMUNDUS LULLUS.—THE STRANGE EVENT OF A DISPUTE IN RELIGION.—CARDINAL MAZARINE.—THE KING'S EVILL.— WALLENSTEIN, DUKE OF FRIEDLAND.—GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAME.—MARY TOUTHER, QUEENE OF ENGLAND.—CHARLES
GUSTAVE, KING OF SWEDEN.—CHRISTINA, QUEENE OF SWEDEN.

3

END.

II. EXTRACT FROM THE INTRODUCTION TO "BUCHANAN REVISED," &c.

"I BEGAN to write these papers which follow, in the year of God 1643, in Ireland, bot made no great progresse in them, being otherwayes imployed there, and afterwards in Scotland and England : Bot fyve years after that, being prisoner in Hull, in England, from September 1648, till November 1649, I had leasure and opportunitie enough to write; and such was the civilitie of Colonell Overtoun, then governour of that towne, that he permitted the stationers to furnish me with any books I call'd for, the peruseall whereof I had at an easie rate per week; nor did he hinder me to write any thing my fancie led me to; and when I had gott my libertie mostly procur'd by him, he suffered not any of my papers to be search'd, though in severalls of them I had write my opinions very freely of the King's murther, and that of James Duke of Hamiltone, and of the change of monarchy in a pretended commonwealth. There it was that I finish'd all I intended to say of Buchanans writeings; but my papers were all taken and destroyed by the Cromuelians, in the year 1651, when Dundee was taken, sack'd, and plundered by Generall Monek, who liv'd to doe more acceptable service to God and his Prince, and all the three kingdomes. I had car'd the lesse for the destruction of these papers, if I had not lost better moveables : bless'd be God for his mercy in saving my wife from being kill'd by these furious plunderers. Four years after that, in the year 1655, I found myself in good enough leasure in Bremen, a toune in Germanie, to resume my former labour, which encouraged me to write over most of what I had said before on that subject ; and in the year 1659, I finished them at the Hagg, in Holland. All these papers lay by me almost in loose sheets, till the year 1669, a year after I had laid down my commissions, and then I had leisure more then enough to write them over in mundo ; and indeid they have lyen ever since in parcells by me, till in this year 1679, I was mov'd by a very accidentall emergencie, to cause bind them together in one book, as now you see them."

MEMOIRS OF SIR JAMES TURNER;

PART FIRST,

WHEREIN ARE CONTAINED THE MOST REMARKABLE PASSAGES OF HIS LIFE TILL HIS RELEASEMENT OUT OF PRISON AT HULL IN THE YEAR 1649.

A

.

.

1.0

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

1 was not feventeene yeares old when I left the fchooles, where haveing lightlie paffed thorough that courfe of philosophie which is ordinarlie taught in the universities of Scotland, I was commanded by my father and grandfather to commence Mafter of Arts at Glafgow, much against my will, as never intending to make use of that title which undefervedlie was beftowed upon me, as it was on many others before me, and hath beene on too many fince. I stayd a yeare after with my father at Dalkeith, applying myfelfe to the ftudie of humane letters and hiftorie, in bothe which I allways tooke delight. I did reade alfo the controverfies of religion betweene us and the Roman Catholickes, (for the Prefbyterians at that time made litle or no noyfe,) wherby I might be enabled to differ the truth of the Proteftant perfusion and the fallacies of the Popifh one or any other, that fo I might not, in traverfing the world, be carried away with everie wind of doctrine. Bot before I attaind to the eighteenth yeare of my age, a reftles defire enterd my mind, to be, if not an actor, at leaft a fpectator of these warrs which at that time made so much noyse over all the world, and were managed against the Roman Emperour and the

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

A.

Catholicke League in Germanie, under the aufpitious conduct of the thrice famous Guftavus Adolphus, King of Sueden. Sir James Lumfdaine was then levieing a regiment for that fervice; with him, (my neereft freinds confenting to it,) I engaged to go over enfigney to his brother Robert Lumfdaine, eldeft captaine; who fince that time was a generall major, and tuo days before the king was routed at Worcefter, was killed at Dundee, (where he was governour,) in cold blood, ane houre after he had got quarter.

It was about Lambes of the yeare 1632, that we came before Elfennure in Denmark, where we ftayd three days, and therafter landed at Roftock in the Dutchie of Mecklenburg; from whence we marched to the Archbifhoprick of Bremen, where, whether with the change of aire or dyet, or by eating too much fruit, (wherof I faw that countrey abound more than my oune,) or all three, I fell grieveouflie ficke. My fever keepd me fixe weeks, and by that time I was able to walke abroad, we were fent to reduce some obftinate countries to order, and force them to fubmit to the Suedifh yoake. This provd a hard and fevere winter to me and all of us, who knew not before what it was not to have tuo or three meals aday, and goe to bed at a feafonable houre at night.

The King of Suedens victories had carried him fo far up in Germanie, that we never came to fee him. At the time of our arriveall, his fortune beganne to decline; for at Nuremberg, trufting to that prodigious fucceffe which had attended all his former undertakeings, he ftormed a well fortified campe entrenchd on a hill, in which were tuo armies; the Imperiall under Wallenftein, and that of the League under the Elector of Bavaria. As this was a rafh, fo it proved an unfortunate ......; for beaten he was with the loffe of neere foure thoufand killed on the place, among whom were many brave ..... and gentlemen. Neere fixe thoufand wounded, fo that all the hofpitalls and lazarettos of Nuremberg were fufficientlie filld. Nixt November, this magnanimous king, endeavouring to fave the Duke of Saxe his lands from the same Wallenstein, lofd his life at the battel of Lutfen, which notwithftanding was wonne by the conduct and valour of Bernard Duke of Weimar. In Februare 1633, a ftrong and veterane armie of the Sueds came to the Lower Germanie, under the command of George Duke of Brunfwick and Luneburg as generall, and Dodo Baron of Kniphaufen as felt marfhall, with which joynd Lumfdains Scots regiment, and one Englifh one under the fame Colonell Afhton who was killed at Tradaff or Drogheda in Ireland, where he was governor, where all were put to the fuord by Cromwell in the yeare 1649.

1632.

1633. SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

With this armie I had a lamentable cold, wet and rainie march, till we layd fiege to the ftrong toune of Hammelln, which held out, with the deftruction of multitudes of our men, till the 28th of June, and till the two earles Merod and Grünffield, both Imperiall generalls, came with an armie of 20,000 men to relieve it. We broke up, and met them foure Englifh miles from thence, and fought them. This was a battell wherin fo much blood was fhed, as was enough to flesh fuch novices as I was. We gaind the victorie, which was a great one to be gaind with fo little loffe on our fide. Neere nine thoufand of the Imperialifts were killd in the place, three thoufand taken, with eighteene canon, and above eightie ftandards and collors. The toune yeelded therafter on articles. After this battell, I saw a great many killd in cold blood by the Finns, who profeffe to give no quarter. The whole time of this fiege, my best entertainment was bread and water, abundance of the laft, but not fo of the first; but this proceeded from want of money, for the leager was plentiful enough. The reft of this fummer, nixt harveft and nixt winter, I was at the fieges of feverall towns and castles, and at many brufhes, encounters and .....; and all the time fufferd exceeding great want of both meate and clothes, being neceffitated to ly conftantly in the fields with little or no fhelter, to march allways a foot, and drinke water; fo that then I could verifie that which I had fo often heard at fchoole, Dulce bellum inexpertis. And indeed I was fo hardend with fatigue, that thogh at firft I longd to be backe at Scotland, yet being fo well inurd to toile, I fullie refolved to goe on in that courfe of life of which I had made choyce, and I thought then I could have livd all my days on a very fpare dyet, and without a bed too; fo true it is that Habitus e/t altera natura.

6

In the beginning of the yeare 1634, our English and Scotch regiments, such as they were, came to be quartered at that Oldendorpe neere to which the battell was fought. I was lodged in a widows house, whofe daughter, a young widow, had been married to a rittmafter of the Emperors. She was very handfome, wittie and difcreet; of her, thogh my former toyle might have banifhed all love thoughts out of my mind, I became perfitlie enamourd. Heere we ftayd fixe weeks, in which time fhe taught me the Hie Dutch, to reade and write it, which before I could not learne bot very rudlie from fojors. Haveing then the countrey language, I learnd alfo the fafhions and cuftomes of the Germane officers; and about this time was both regiments reducd to tuo companies; tuo captaine lieutenants, and tuo enfigneys, (wherof

.1634. SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

I was one,) onlie ordaind to ftand; all the reft cafheerd, and in great neceffitie and povertie. The tuo companies were bot badlie ufed, toffed to and fro, in conftant danger of ane enemie, and without pay. Bot I had learnd fo much cunning, and became fo vigilant to lay hold on opportunities, that I wanted for nothing, horfes, clothes, meate, nor moneys; and made fo good ufe of what I had learned, that the whole time I fervd in Germanie, I fufferd no such miferie as I had done the firft yeare and a halfe that I came to it.

It was in this yeare that the Emperors Generalifimo Wallenftein, intending to betray his mafter, familie and armie, [was put to] death by Gordon and Leflie at Egar in Bohemia, by the way of fact, per viam facti, as they call it, becaufe by the way of right, or de jure, he was fo ftrong as he could not be proceeded againft. The actors were well rewarded by the Emperour, efpeciallie Leflie. Ferdinand the Second entrusts the conduct of his forces to his fonne the King of Hungarie, who, with the help of the Cardinall Infant, brother to the King of Spaine, gave a total defeate to tuo Suedifh armies, under the command of Bernard Duke of Weimar and the Suedifh field-marshall Gustave Horne. Sixe thousand or therby, wherof our tuo companies made up fome part, were on our march to Nordling, where the battell was fought, to have reinforcd the Sueds; and were within a few leagues of Frankford du Mein when we heard of the rout, and fo were countermanded to Weftphalia. By this one blow the Sueds loofd more ground then they had gaind in a yeare before; and nixt yeare most of the Dutch princes made their peace with the Emperor.

Touards the latter end of this yeare, my fathers death calld me to Scotland to give my mother a vifite, where I was forcd to ftay longer then I intended; for the froft continued that winter univerfallie through Europe till the midft of March 1635. In the fummer I returned, and being informed at my landing at Bremen, that fome officers intended to goe from Hamburg to Perfia, I refolvd to make one of that number, and upon that account went thither; where I found many of my countreymen, fome English and fome Germans, great with child of that expedition, wherin they promifd themfelves more gold then the philofophers ftone can afford the alchymifts. The matter was this. The Duke of Holftein Gottorff intended to fet up a trade with Perfia, for filks to be transported from Hircania thorough the Caspian fea, and then up the great river Volga, from thence to Riga, then to Holftein. The Sophi of Perfia was contented ane embaffador fould be fent to treate with him concerning the traffique, bot that the embaffador fould bring with him as many officers as poffiblie he could, to traine the Perfian foot, wherin he was farre inferior to the Turke. A number of us were to goe as members of the embaffadors houfhold and traine, becaufe the Great Duke of Mufco, being at peace with the Grand Seigneur, wold not fuffer us to goe otherwife ; bot the Ruffe hearing the defigne, wrote to the Duke that he wold not fuffer his envoy to paffe with fuch followers. After I had fpent fome of my moneys at Hamburg, and got a promife of the directors of that expedition, that roome fould be keepd for me if the voyage went on, I went to Ofnaburg, where my colonell Sir James Lumídaine was governour. The Perfian expedition was bloune up by the perfidie of the Dukes embaffador, who reveald the whole plot to the Turke; for which he had his head ftrucke of at his return from Perfia, having deferved a more ignominious death. At my arrival at .

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

1635.

Lumfdaines garrifon, I found my place was difposed to ane other, which

1637. SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

I lookd upon as no fair play, being done contrare to promife. I was fored to ftay there. Sir James goeing away, and the Imperialifts prevaileing everie where, Ofnaburg is blockd up by the Marques of Grana. This blocquado was coufine german to a feege; in the time wherof I came againe in employment.

Nixt fummer the Sueds prevaile; old Leflie is made our fieldmarfhall, (Kniphaufen being killd,) and King his lieutenant generall; they beate away the Marques, who befeegd us in Ofnaburg, joyns with the Landtgrave of Heffen, and with joynt forces beates Lamboy and fome other of the Emperors generalls, who had befeegd the ftrong toune of Hanaw two yeares, and put frefh provision in it. Heere was Sir James Ramfay governour. After this Leflie joynes with Banier, and both of them fought with the Duke of Saxe, and ane Imperiall armie at Woodftocke, where they gaind a compleate victorie.

In the yeare 1637, I went with fome commanded men, with Lieutenant Generall King, into the land of Heffen, to affift the Landgrave to beate fome Imperiall regiments out of his territories, who indeed were makeing havocke of all among his poore fubjects. Upon our approach they retird ; bot thogh we were tuo to one againft them at leaft, and that Bigod, who commanded them, made a ftand at Efhvegen, yet did we retire in great hafte, thogh in good enough order, back to Caffels the Landgraves refidence and capitall citie, and left the poor countrey to the mercy of ane enraged enemie, who had order by fire and fword to force the Landgrave to accept of the peace of Prague. Neither did Bigod fpare to burn three faire tounes, Efchvegen, Olendorpe and Vitfenhaufen before our eyes. A mournfull fight it was, to fee the whole people folow us, and climbe the tuo hie rockes which flanked us. Old and young left their houses, by the loss of them and their goods to fave Aged men and women, many above fourfcore, most lame their lives. or blind, fupported by their fonnes, daughters and grandchildren, who themfelves carried their little ones on their backes, was a ruthfull object of pitie to any tender hearted Christian, and did show us with what dreadfull countenance that bloodie monfter of warre can appear in the world. Neither did our feare, (which often maiks itself with reason of ftate, as then it did,) permit us to make any ftay at Caffels, bot pould us with fome hafte to Weftphalia. As we paid by a litle toune called Brokle, where lay ane Imperiall garrifon, a great many of them had fallied out, lind the hedges and annoyd the Heffich, who that day had the vant; which when King faw, he commanded this Sir Edward Bret and me, with each of us fiftie mufketeers, to beate them in ; which we did, with a great loffe to them, and of three or four of our oune men. Therafter finding no enemie in the field to oppofe us, the Landgrave and King befeeged the litle bot indeed ftrong toune of Vecht, in which was Luterfam, the Elector of Collens lieutenant generall. This fiege we plyd fo brifklie, that within eight days it yeelded on articles. From thence we runne to the fiege of Furftanaw, which, when we had invefted, the Landgrave, by the tolleration, perhaps advice, of the eftates of Holland, broke up with his armie and marched into Eaft Freezland, where nixt winter he dyed. Bot his armie, under the command of Lieutenant Generall Melander, quarterd there tuo yeares at leaft; wher they made themfelves fo ftrong, that therwith the brave Princeffe Emilia, Landgraves, in the minoritie of her pupill fonne, of whom fhe was Regent, did thefe feates in oppofition to the Emperor Ferdinand the Third, as hath made herfelfe famous to the world, and much enlargd the territories of that proteftant prince. After this feparation, Lieutenant Generall King was forcd to breake vp the fiege, and put his litle armie in guarrifon. Nixt yeare he joynd at Statlone, in the bifhoprick of Munfter, with Prince Palatine, and befeegd Lemgo; but the fudden approach of Count Hatffeld with ane Imperiall armie obligd them to get them gone; bot was overtaken by him neere Vlotho, and there rather fhamfullie routed then overthroune, where Prince Rupert and the Lord Craven were taken, with many brave gentlemen more. Nixt fpring I fell grievouflie ficke of a tertian, which keepd me full feventeene weekes.

1639. SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

It is not my purpofe to relate all the great actions were done in Germanie during my aboade there, that being the fubject of ane other ftorie; or yet of all the occurrences befell myfelfe, that wold be tedieous; and therfore I shall fay, that haveing passed thorough the feverall charges of enfigney, lieutenant, captaine lieutenant, and captaine, after I had recovered of my ague, being difcontented with my colonell, one Plettemberg a Courlander, for imposeing too hard conditions of recruts on me, I tooke my leave of that fervice in the frontiers of Franconia, and went ftraight to Scotland, to look for fome employment under the Prince Elector, who as I heard, by order of parliament, was to levie ten thoufand men in that kingdome. Being arrivd I found indeed a parliament fitting in the yeare 1639, where E. Traquair was commissioner; but no word of levies for Germanie, but verie great rumours of civile warrs. I flayd bot one fortnight there. At my return to Germanie nixt winter, I engadged to raife a companie of Germans vnder one Colonell Burgfdorff, who paft then vnder the reputation of a brave and honeft cavalier; bot I found he was more obliged to report than he deferved; for he cheated me fhamefullie by giveing up his capitulation, laying the blame on Felt marfhall Banier having ftrengthened his regiment with five and forty men which I had levied on my owne charges, which could coft me no leffe than foure hundreth dollars; so many leviers there were for feverall interefts, and fo knavifh the fojors.

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

This abufe obligd me to goe to Sueden, to complaine to thefe who were Administrators dureing the minoritie of Queene Christina. I went in companie with Sir James Lumfdaine, whofe regiment I had left foure yeares before, and Colonell David Lefley, fince Lord Neuarke. We fhipd at Lubeck, and after a fortnights toyle at fea, we landed at Stokholme the capitall citie of that kingdome; much beautified fince with these fumptuous and magnificent palaces which the Suedish generalls have built, as monuments of these riches they acquired in the long German warre. There I faw one of the faireft caftles, and of the greateft reception, of anie I ever lookd on, all coverd with copper, of which mettall that kingdome abounds. It ftands on a prettie afcending hill from the fea; and under it, for most part, rides the navie royall, composed of great and tall thips, carrying fome 50, fome 60, fome 70, and fome eightie braffe guns. The Queene was then about fourteene yeares old, applying herfelfe much to learne forreine languages, and to the ftudie of these sciences, which by the ftrength of her .... naturall endowments flie foone acquired, which has made her fo famous all the world over. Her mother, a beautifull and vertuous princeffe, at this fame time when I was at Stokholme, ftole away out of Sueden, being neceffitated fo to doe by the rude entertainment given her by the five Administrators; bot within a few years brought backe with honor by her daughter, after she had tane the reines of the government in her oune hands. Her coufine german, the Palfgrave Charles Guftav, fince that time king, and famous enough for the flort time of his raigne, was just then returned from his travells in Italie, France, England and Germanie.

I petitiond the Councell, and made my particular application to the renouned Chancellor Oxeftern, who, as he had with admirable prudence and fucceffe mannagd the warre in Germanie after the king his mafters death, with the title of Director of the Evangelicke League and Plenipotentiarie Legat for Sueden, fo I found that in Sueden itfelfe, he governed all affaires of ftate both forreine and domeftick. After fixe weeks staye, they offerd me a letter to Field marshall Banier, to cognofce on the difference betueene Burgfdorff and me. But knowing well enough to what litle purpofe I fould make fo expensive and dangerous a journey to find out Banier, who in purfueance of his good fortune had enterd Bohemia, I defird my paffe, which was granted me, and with it as much money as I fuppofe I had fpent at that Court. Haveing fignified my defire to goe to Gottenberg, and there to thip for Scotland, they gave me the Queens paffe for free horfes, meate and drink by the way; a cuftome much in use then, and very grievous to the poore countrey men, fince juftlie abrogated by a law.

I did well perceave the Administrators encouragd all my countreymen to goe home, old Generall Leflie being then to enter England with ane armie; and there is no doubt but that rebellion, whereof he was heade, was fomented by both Sueden and France; the late king in the yeare 1630, haveing made peace with Spaine, fo much to the prejudice of the ambitious defignes of these tuo crounes. I was no leffe then a fortnight in travelling to Gottemberg, thogh in August 1640; yet it is bot fiftie Suedifh leagues, each wherof we can compute to be no leffe then fixe Englifh miles at leaft. At my arriveall there, I underftood there were tuo fhips lying at Millftrand in Norway, three Suedifh miles from Gottemberg, one ane Englifhman bound for Hull, ane other a Dane bound for Leith.

I had fwallowed without chewing, in Germanie, a very dangerous maxime, which militarie men there too much follow; which was, that fo we ferve our mafter honneftlie, it is no matter what mafter we ferve; fo, without examination of the juffice of the quarrell, or regard of my ductie to either prince or countrey, I refolved to goe with that thip I first rencounterd. After two days necessare flay at Gottenberg, I hired a boat and went away in the evening; we rowed all night, and haveing paid tuo Suedifh caftles, about breake of day we came neere Millstrand. . Understanding the wind blew faire for both ships, I was advifd to ftep out, and goe a foot ftraight thorough the toune to the fhoare, it being the neerer cut, whill the boate went a greater way about with my fervant and coffer. I did fo, and came just there as the Englifhman was hoyfeing his failes. I afkd him if he wold give me paffage to Hull, (a place I have fince beene too well acquainted with,) who told me he wold with all his heart, provided I wold prefentlie ftep in. I befeeched him to ftay till my fervant and coffer came, without whom I could not goe; bot no intreatie or prayer could prevaile with the inexorable fkipper, for away he flew from me, as ane arrow from a bow. This onlie hinderd me to prefent my endeavors to ferve the King against the Covenanters. I calld instantlie for the Dane who was bound for Scotland, refolving to ferve either the one or the other without any reluctance of mind; fo deeplie was that bafe maxime rooted in 1640.

The people pointed with their fingers to the fhip, which my heart. had got a great way out from the fhoare, and ftayd there for a paffenger whom the fkipper had promifd to carry to Edinburgh. He was ane old man, who at taking his farewell of his friends the night before, had drunke fo much that he had fleepd his time. Immediatlie I clapd in fresh men in my boate, the others being overwearied with rowing, and fo came to the fhip; neither did the fkipper make any fcruple to reffave me, thogh at first he conceaved his old man was in my companie. To the neglect of this old man, nixt to all ruleing providence, may I attribute my goeing at that time to Scotland. On the fixth day after my embarkeing, we faw ourfelvs not farre from Aberdeene. I was glad we were fo farre north, becaufe I had heard the kings fhips were in the firth; bot I was miftaken, for they were gone; and no matter they had been gone fooner, for any good fervice they did the king there. The fkipper fet me afhore at a place called the Cove, from thence I hired horfes to Edinburgh. This was in the month of September; and Generall Leflie haveing marchd into England, with a numerous armie at the Lambes before, and put my Lord Conway with some of the kings forces to a fhamefull retreat at Newburne, had made himfelf mafter of Neucastle, and all the Bishoprick of Durham. I found this fucceffe had elevated the minds of my countreymen in generall to fuch a height of vanitie, that most of them thought, and many faid, they fould quicklie make a full conqueft of England; bot time hath fhoune them fince that they made their reckoning without their hoft, for the very contrare fell out.

After a flort flay at Edinburgh, I rode ftraight to Neucastle, where I found all offices and charges of the armie filld up except one, which was the majors place of my Lord Kirkkubrights regiment, which confifted of the men of Galloway, a place and a people fatall to me. The Earle of Rothes, father to this lord chancellor, profeffing very great kindnes to me, eafilie perfuaded the generall to beftow that charge on me; who otherwife bore me bot little good will, for fome differences had beene betueene his brother and me in Germanie, where I accufd him of eleven points of treafon; bot the controverfie betueene him and me was decided by a canon bullet, which tooke away his heade. In that charge I continued ten months in England, a ceffation of armes being everie month renewed betueene the Royalifts and Covenanters.

1641.

The blacke Parliament of England having ftrucke of Straffords loyall heade, imprifond the Archbifhop of Canterburrie, and frighted all the ftatimen and courtiers who might oppose them beyond feas, they got the king to paffe the bill for trienniall parliaments, and ane other for the prefent one to fit as long as it pleafed. They had no more use for the Scots armie, and therfore after haveing given a brotherlie prefent of three hundreth thousand pounds sterline, (a very kind and loveing compliment,) they fent them home to their oune countrey richer, I fuppofe, then when they came out of it. All this while I did not take the Nationall Covenant, not becaufe I refused to doe it, for I wold have made no bones to take, fueare and figne it, and obferve it too; for I had then a principle; haveing not yet ftudied a better one, that I wrongd not my conficience in doeing any thing I was commanded to doe by there whom I ferved. Bot the truth is, it was never offerd to me; everie one thinking it was impoffible I could get into any charge, unles I had taken the Covenant either in Scotland or England.

The king, in his paffing to Scotland, had viewd the Scots armie as ## 1641.

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

it lay quarterd in the Bifhoprick and Northumberland. When we came home all were difbanded, except three regiments which had not at all beene in England. One was under Major Generall Monro, the fecond under Colonell Cochran, both which were quarterd neere Edenburgh. The third, confifting of fixe companies of Orkney and Cathnes men, was under my Lord Sinclar, and lay at Aberdeene. The Parliament of Scotland wold needs fit before the king came, for fuch was their pleafure; and when he came, it did what it pleafed; my lord Argile, at that time created Marques, carrying all before him. He got a creature of his oune, and of his oune name, to be chanclor, to the difparagement of a farre honefter man, the Earle of Morton, Argiles oune father in law and benefactor. Heere the king gave way to his parliament to difpose of all offices of state, and of his forts, caftles and militia, all of them undoubted prerogatives of the Croune. Ane act of oblivion wold not ferve this parliament, for their takeing armes againft the king; it must be ane act of justification, which passd with the kings confent. Prefbiterian government is heere eftablished, and Episcopacie abrogated by law; the king out of his goodnes granting all they defired, thinking thereby to gaine them; and indeed it was his conftant fate and practice to impouer his enemies to doe him more and more mifchiefe. This he felt before tuo yeares went about; and even then he might have feene their wickednes, when they wounded his honor irreparablie, by makeing the people beleeve he intended either to put Marques Hamilton and Argile aboord one of his fhips, and fend them prifoners to England, or to affaffinate them in his palace of Halyroodhouse; which horrible calumnie these tuo lords seconded, by their counterfeit flight out of Edinburgh to Kinneil.

18

In the latter end of October 1641, came the lamentable news of the execrable rebellion of Ireland, in which fo many thousands of innocent Protestants, both Scots and English, men and women, young and old, were put to cruell deaths by the barbarous and favage Irish. The parliament of England fent over prefent fuccours; that of Scotland offers ten regiments of foot, each confisting of one thousand men, to maintaine the Protestant interest in Ireland, bot to be entertaind by England. The proffer is accepted, and old Less, newly created Earl of Leven, for his fuccessfull rebellion against the king, is appointed to be generall of these 10,000 men, against the rebells in Ireland, who (had they not she for much blood,) did no more against his majestie, then Leven himselfe had done.

Monro and Cochran ar ordaind in the fpring to goe over to Craigfergus with their regiments; the firft hath a commiffion to be governour of the toune and caftle of Craigfergus, and major generall of the ten regiments; the fecond is cafheerd for offering to be loyall. My Lord Sinclars fixe companies are reducd to foure, and they orderd to go over with Monro, till my lord raifed fixe more to make up his regiment compleate. The other feven regiments were to be transported fo foone as they were levied. A litle before the report of the rebellion came to Scotland, my Lord Sinclars major dyed, whose place my lord was pleafed to beftow on me; a favour (in regard he had then choyce of a hundreth more sufficient) I can never either remember or mention bot with much thankfullnes. His brother was his lieutenant colonell, with whom I ftayd at Aberdeene fome part of that winter, and touards the spring marchd fouthwards. I found Generall Leven diffatiffied with my Lord Sinclars election of me, pretending his confent fould have been fought; bot if it had, I am fure it had never been got, for that Excellence of his was conftantlie my very heavie friend. We came to the weft countrie in 1642, and lay at Irwine, Aire, and Kilmarnock more than a fortnight, waiteing for a faire wind; which makeing a flow to offer itfelfe, Monro embarked at the Largs, Home (who had got Cochrans regiment) at Aire, and we at Irwine. When we were at fea the wind turnd contrarie, and fo all of us met at Lamlash, a fecure bay on the coaft of the Ile of Arran, where we lay a fortnight, if I remember right; and then the wind againe offering to be favorable, one of the kings thips which was with us thooting a warning peece, all weighd anchor, hoyfd faile in ane evening, and nixt day were in Craigfergus loch, and landed that night. The English forces that were there, under the Lords Conway and Chicefter, marchd to Bellfaft, leaving Craigfergus free for us. Thefe tuo regiments, with those of the tuo Vicounts of Clandeboy and Aird, and the tuo Colonell Steuarts further north, with fome few others which afterwards were called, for diffinction, the British forces, had preferve all that tract of Ulfter which is neereft the fea from deftruction; for the wild Irifh did not onlie maffacre all whom they could overmafter, but burnt tounes; villages, caftles, churches, and all habitable houfes, endeavouring to reduce, as farre as their power could reach, all to a confused chaos.

1642.

1642.

After we had refreshed a little, Major Generall Monro left feven or eight hundreth men in Craigfergus, and went to the field with the reft, among whom was my lieutenant colonell and I; my Lord Conway went along also with neere two thousand English. In the woods of Kilwarning we rencountered some hundreths of the rebells, who after a short difpute fled. These who were taken got bot bad quarter, being all fhot dead. This was too much ufed by both English and Scots all along in that warre; a thing inhumane and difavouable, for the crueltie of one enemie cannot excufe the inhumanitie of ane other. And heerin alfo their revenge overmafterd their diffretion, which fould have taught them to fave the lives of thefe they tooke, that the rebells might doe the like to their prisoners. Then we marchd ftraight to the Neurie, where the Irifh had eafilie feizd on his Majefties caftle, wherin they found abundance of amunition, which gave them confidence to proclaime their rebellion. The fortification of the toune being bot begunne, it came immediatelie in our hands; bot the rebells that were in the caftle keepd it tuo days, and then deliverd it up upon a very ill made accord, or a very ill keepd one; for the nixt day most of them, with many merchands and tradefmen of the toune, who had not beene in the caftle, were carried to the bridge and butcherd to death, fome by fhooting, fome by hanging, and fome by drowning, without any legall proceffe; and I was verilie informed afterwards, that feverall innocent people fufferd. Monro did not at all excufe himfelfe from haveing acceffion to that carnage, nor coulde he purge himfelfe of it; thogh my Lord Conway, as Marshall of Ireland, was the principall actor. Our fojors (who fometimes are cruell, for no other reafon bot becaufe mans wicked nature leads him to be fo, as I have fhoune in my Discourfe of Crueltie) feeing fuch prankes playd by authoritie at the bridge, thought they might doe as much any where els; and fo runne upon a hundreth and fiftie women or thereby, who had got together in a place below the bridge, whom they refolvd to maffacre by killing and drouning; which villanie the fea feemd to favour, it being then flood. Juft at that time was I fpeaking with Monro, bot feeing a fare off what a game thefe godles rogues intended to play, I got a horfeback and gallopd to them with my piftoll in my hand; bot before I got at them they had difpatchd about a dozen; the reft I favd.

1642.

21

This execution had not the fucceffe which Conway and Monro had promifd themfelves; for inftead of terrifieing the rebells from their wonted cruelties, it inraged them, and occafioned the murthering of fome hundreths of prifoners whom they had in their pouer. Sir Phelomey Oneale, the ringleader of the rebellion, hearing of the loffe of the Neurie, in a beaftlie furie burnt the toune of Armagh, where he then was, and as much of the Cathedrall as fire could prevaile over, and then retird himfelfe to the woods and bogs. This gentleman was not the plotter of this rebellion; that was done by men of foberer heads and deeper judgments; but he was the grand inftrument, and appeared firft in armes, most treacherouslie pretending his Majesties commission for what he did, (wherof the rebells in England and Scotland made good ufe.) He had counterfeited a warrand under the kings hand, and to the falfe parchment annexed his Majefties great feale, which was hanging at his great charter, as he confelled afterwards to many perfones of qualitie yet alive, and left it on record at his death; to which he was defervedlie put, by hanging and drawing and quartering, at Dubline, by rebells as wicked as himfelfe, bot upon ane other account; for it was Cromwells partie that executed him.

My Lord Conway and Monro plunderd the Neurie, except a very few houses; most of the men that were left alive, Conway forcd to carry armes under his oune regiment. This being done, Monro orders the toune and castle to be guarrisoned by my Lord Sinclars regiment, wherof onlie two hundreth were there with the lieutenant colonell and myfelfe. We complaind, as we had good reafon, to be left in a place which our oune people had made deftitute of all things, bot in vaine. My lieutenant colonell ftayd at the Neurie, haveing got two hundreth commanded men added to his oune, till I fould bring up from Craigfergus as many of the regiment as were comd from Scotland. Accordingly I went thither with the armie; we tooke our march thorough the woodes and mountaines of Morne, where feverall rebells were killd, and many cows taken. I do remember that there we fufferd one of the most stormie and tempestuous nights for haile, raine, cold, and exceffive wind, (thogh it was in the beginning of May) that ever I yet faw. All the tents were in a trice bloune over. It was not possible for any matche to keepe fire, or any fojor to handle his musket. or yet to ftand; yea feveralls of them dyed that night of meere cold. So that if the rebells, wherof there were 500 not farre from us, had offerd to beate up our quarters with fuch weapons as they had, which were halfe pikes, fuords and daggers, which they call fkeens, they wold undoubtedlie have had a cheap market of us. Our fojors, and fome of our officers too, (who fuppofe that no thing that is more then ordinarie can be the product of nature,) attributed this hurrikan to the devilifh skill of some Irish witches; and if that was true, then I am fure their mafter gave us good proofe that he was reallie prince of the aire.

1642.

1642.

I found about 500 of my Lord Sinclars regiment latelie arrivd at Craigfergus; thefe I fhipd, and haveing obtained fome wheate from the Major Generall, bot verie fparinglie, and fome leade, wherof we had none at the Neurie, I went aboord; and the wind being faire, nixt morning I caft anchor at Carlingford, where I found that man of warre who had convoyd us out of Scotland. In the afternoone, I marchd in to the Neurie; pitifull quarters we had, and when the reft of the regiment came over, which that fummer they did, we found we had not houfes for the halfe of them; for we were neceffitated to take down a great many houfes, to make the circumference of our walls the leffe. Our own prefervation taught us to worke allmost day and night, till we had finishe the irregular fortification begunne by the rebells. This great fatigue and toile, a very spare dyet, lying on the ground, litle fleepe, constant watching, Sir Phelemy being for most part allways within a days march of us, all these, I fay, added to the change of the aire, made most or rather indeed all our officers and so for sall feike of Irish agues, flixes, and other difeases, of which very many dyed. These who recoverd, being inured to hardship and well traind, became excellent fojors and good firemen.

Monro made two more cavalcads that fummer, in one wherof my lieutenant colonell was with him with 300 men; in the fecond, myfelfe with the like number. In neither of them did he any memorable action, the rebells not dareing to face him, which made him conceave, becaufe they did not then, that thereafter they neither could nor would. This opinion put him in danger nixt yeare, and four years after occafioned his totall overthrow at Blackwater. In one of thefe cavalcads, he layd fiege to Charlemont, a ftrong caftle, bot broke up a litle too foone, even when there was hopes of a furrender.

About Lambes in this yeare, 1642, came Generall Leven over to Ireland, and with him the Earle of Eglinton, who had one of these ten regiments, my Lord Sinclare, and Hamilton generall of the artillerie, better known by the name of Deare Sandie. Great matters were expected from fo famous a captain as Leven was, but he did not anfuere expectation. One cavalcad he made, in which I joynd with him with 300 men, in which I could not fee what he intended, or what he propofd to himfelfe. Sure I am he returnd to Craigfergus without doeing any thing. And the fame game he playd over againe at his fecond march, except that he vifited the Neurie; for which we were but litle obligd to him, being forcd thereby to part with our hay, wine, beere, and breade, of which we were not very well ftord. In this yeare beganne that fatall warre betweene the King and his rebellious Parliament, by which, among other bad effects, we fingered no pay the whole time I ftayd in Ireland, except for three months.

1642.

.

The officers of this our Scots armie in Ireland finding themfelves ill payd, and which was worfe, not knowing in the time of the civill warre who fould be their paymafters, and reflecting on the fuccefffull iffue of the Nationall Covenant of Scotland, bethought themfelves of makeing one alfo; bot they were wife enough to give it ane other name, and therefore chriftened it a Mutual Affurance; wherby upon the matter they made themfelves independent of any except thefe who wold be their actuall and reall paymafters, with whom, for any thing I know, they met not the whole time of the warre. The Generall was very diffatified with this bond of union, as he had reafon; and at first spoke hie language of ftrikeing heads of; bot the officers fticking clofe one to another, made these threates evanish in smoake. And indeed it is like, ane active generall (who could have added policie to courage, and divided them,) might have made their union appear in its oune collors, which were even these of blacke mutinie. Bot the Earle of Leven, not being able to overmafter it, got himfelfe ane errand to go to Scotland, and fo gave an everlafting adieu to Ireland. The moft remarkeable thing he did in the time of his ftay was, that he tooke 2500lb. fterline to himfelfe, which the Parliament of England had fent to the officers of his armie for wagon money. And trulie this Earle, who lived till he paft fourfcore, was of fo good a memorie, that he was never knowne to forget himfelfe, nay not in his extreame age. I can not fay more of his deportments in Ireland then what my Lord Vifcount Moore (who was killd nixt yeare) faid to tuo of my friends, and it was this; That the Earle of Levens actions made not fuch a noyfe in the world as thefe of Generall Lefley.

My Lord Sinclare flayd with his regiment in great fcarfitie at the Neurie, till the nixt yeare 1643, and then fell dangerouflie ficke; being recoverd, he returnd to Scotland. In the time of his ftay, we fingerd bot litle moneys; and meale fo fparinglie as feldome we could allow our fojors above a pound a day; for this reafon, whenever we had intelligence where the rebells were with their cows, either my Lieutenant Colonell or I fought them out, with a partie of three or four hundreth foot and fome horfe, in moft of which litle expeditions we were fuccefsful, bringing in ftore of cows, with the flefh and milke wherof we much refreshed the decayed bodies and fainting spirits of not onlie our fojors, bot of many of our officers alfo. Some loffe of men fometimes we fufferd, bot feldome; many prifoners we tooke, on whom, if we did not fet them at libertie, we beftowed fome maintenance, bot made them worke at our fortifications. Not one officer or fojor escaped fickenes, except the Lieutenant Colonell. About Januare 1643, I fell grievouflie ficke of ane Irifh ague, which brought me to deaths doore, bot it pleafd God I recoverd.

1643.

In May, if I remember right, of the yeare 1643, Monro tooke the field with 1800 foot and tuo or three troops of horfe. When he came to Kirriotter, feven miles from the Neurie, he wrote to my Lord Sinclare to fend him 300 mufketeers, and either his brother or me with them. Bot before this time, Owen Oneale, (who had beene Governor of Arras for the King of Spaine, and defended it gallantlie till he got honorable articles,) was comd to Ireland, and declared generall for Ulfter, as Prefton, (who had keepd out Gennep houfe against the Prince of Orange) was for Munfter. Oneale haveing brought fome armes amunition and officers from the Spanish Netherlands, had in a fhort time reduced many of the natives to a more civill deportment, and to a prettie good understanding of militarie discipline, and at that time was not farre off with a confiderable part of ane armie. That night Monros melfage came to the Neurie, by my Lord Sinclars appointment I rode to him. I found him a bed, and fhew him in what good pofture Oneale was, which, as he confeffd, he knew not before; bot it was not in my power to diffuade him from the opinion he had, that the Irifh durft not ftand and looke to him. After ane houres difcourfe with him, and the drinking halfe a dozen cups of facke, I left him and returnd to the Neurie; and immediatly marchd to Armagh, where the Major Generall had appointed me to meet him, which was fixteene miles. I had caufd everie one of my fojors carry tuelve fhot a peece, and had befides on horfbacke a centner of pouder, with ball and match; for I had learnd of the Major Generall, that none of his men were provided with more then tuo or three flot; a great fault in a generall, or in any man, to have an overweening opinion of himfelfe, and to undervalue his enemie. He gave me the vaun, in regard I had gone farre. We marchd from

1643.

1643.

Armagh foure miles further into the baronie of Loughgall, a very clofe countrey full of hedges and ditches. I had told the Major Generall, that undoubtedlie we wold find Oneale before us, and therfor defird that no horfe fould be permitted to goe before me, in regard they could doe no fervice in that countrey, bot be ane hinderance to the foot. Yet Major Ballantine wold needs march before me; bot at a place called Anachfhamrie, which was Generall Oneals oune houfe, he was fhamefullie chacd backe upon me, tuo of his horfmen being killd, three hurt, and the reft exceedinglie terrified. The roade way being none of the broadeft, and ditches on everie fide, I was more troubled with thefe horfinen then I was with the Irifh; bot haveing made way for them as well as I could, I advancd towards the enemie, whom I could not fee, he haveing fhelterd himfelfe with 1500 fixd musketeers in enclosurs ditches and hedges; yet he made me quicklie know where he was, by a falve of 4 or 500 fhot he made at me, at which fome of my men fell. I then made a ftand, and lyned the hedges on all fides of me, conftantlie fireing from them, and advanceing ftill on the hie way, thogh verie leifurlie. The bodie of Monros foot were a great deale farther behind me then either I thought, or Oneale fancyed, otherwife. I fuppofe he wolde have left his poft, as advantageous as it was, and advanced on me, being five to one against me. The diffute continued very hote about ane houre, and then Major Borthwick, fince a colonell, and Captaine Drummond, fince a lieutenant generall, came up with a great pace to my releefe, and endeavord to cut thorough the hedges, that they might march thorough the enclofurs. Oneale perceaveing his men beganne to looke over their fhoulders, refolvd rather to retire then flie; and fo he did to Charlemont. Thither did alfo runne the most part of the countrey people, with neere

3000 cowes, all which we had got if we had purfued our victorie. Owens houfe was immediatlie plunderd and burnt, and fo were many other fine houfes in that right pleafant countrey.

In this fkufle, I loft thretteene fojors and a fergant, all killd on the place, and about eighteene I had wounded ; neither my felfe or any other officer being hurt. The Irifh confefd to have lofd about threefcore. Monro committed heere tuo faults; first, for undervaluing his enemie; nixt, for not purfueing him, after he had made him turne his backe; for the difappointment he met with did so quaile him, that he immediatlie marchd back to Armagh, full foure miles : A third he added, in fending, in the very time of the fight, a partie to the right hand to looke for cowes. There being fome diforder or indeed confusion among the hedges. when Oneale retird and Monro marchd backe, many followd that partie that did not belong to it; yea, fo many, among whom were fome of my 300, that when we came to encampe in enclofurs at Armagh late at night, our bodie, which at beft was but litle, lookd exceeding weake and wearie too, and it was well the Irifh knew it not. Adjutant Generall Lefley forwhat unadvifedlie ordaind me to be commander of the guards that night, never confidering in what condition I was. After I had gone the great round, I found myfelfe fo wearie after eight and threttie miles rideing and marching, befides the toyle of the fkirmifh, haveing fleepd none in 48 houres before, that I was fored to tumble myfelfe doune in my tent, recommending the guards to the Adjutant Generalls care; which when the Major Generall did heare, he taxd the Adjutant of indifcretion, and undertooke the overfight of the guards himfelfe. Nixt day our fcattering parties comeing in to us, we marchd to Tandergie, where Sir James Lockheart, purfueing fome of the rebells in a wood, was mortallie fhot in the bellie, wherof he dyed nixt morning. We buried him in the Neurie, in as honorable a way as we could. After Monro had given my lord Sinclare a vifite, he returnd to Craikfergus, and left us at the Neurie.

Some other marches he made that fummer, in one wherof we encamped regularlie at Armagh, and fortified ourfelvs; and from thence fent men to befeege Charlemont once more, bot all to no purpofe. At this leager, the Marques, now Duke of Ormond, fignified by a trumpet to us the ceffation he had, by his Majefties appointment, concluded with the Irifh for a yeare, and required Monro, in the kings name, to obferve it. Bot he refufd to accept of it, becaufe he had no order for it from his mafters of Scotland. Heere was ftrange worke; a man not able to profecute a warre, yet will not admit of a ceffation. It coft us deare; for fince the king's reftoration, all our arrears were payd us, by telling us we were not in the kings pay, fince we refufed to obey his commands; and very juftlie we were fo ferved.

Touards the latter end of this yeare 1643, our guarrifon at the Neurie fell in extreame want of all manner of provifions, both for backe and bellie. For this reafon, by Monros toleration, I had a meeting with ane Irifh colonell, one Thurlo Oneale, fent by Sir Phelomey. We met at Kirriotter, each of us tuentie horfe, and after ane hours difcourfe, and the drinking fome healths in Scotch aquavitie and Irifh ufkkiba, we concluded a ceffation of armes with them for our oune guarrifon. Bot this did not fupply our wants; for no monie came to the armie, either from England or Scotland, and very little meale came from Craigfergus to us. Wherfor my lieutenant colonell and I refolved that I fould goe fpeedilie to Scotland, and procure ane order to the regiment to march to the Airds and Clandeboy, there or fomewhere elfe to quarter as the reft of the armie did; and that immediatlie after I was gone, and that a fhip with fome meale which we hourlie expected was arrivd, he fould fhip in his amunition, baggage and ficke men, and then march ftraight to the Clandeboy. The Neurie was to be deliverd to the Englifh; for I had gone to Dundalg, and agreed fo with my Lord Moore. This was prefentlie put in execution; for I went to Craigfergus, and tooke my leave of the Major Generall, telling him dounright what my errand was to Scotland; bot conceald from him the refolution, that the regiment fould be with him before my returne.

1644.

At my comeing to Scotland, in the beginning of the yeare 1644, I found the generall had marchd in the dead of winter into England, with ane armie of neere 20,000 foot and 2000 horfe, to joyne by vertue of the folemne League and Covenant with the rebellious parliament of England, against our oune foveraigne laufull and native lord and king. I followd him on poft horfes, and found him hide bound at Neucaftle; for he was ftopd there by the toune and river, so that he could not get farther fouth. I reprefented to him not onlie the condition of my Lord Sinclars regiment, bot of the whole Scots armie in Ireland fo feelinglie, that he found himfelf obliged to relate it to the Committee of Eftates, (wherof the Marquis of Argile was prefident, by appointment of the usurped parliament of Scotland.) I am calld before them, and to them I reprefented fo paffionatlie the miferies of that armie, that they pafd ane act for the transportation of it to Scotland, provided the Committee of Eftates at Edinburgh gave their joint confent. I got likewife ane order to approve our delivering the Neurie to the English. My Lord Sinclare is appointed to goe to Ireland with that order of transporta1644.

tion, and to fee it put in execution; I having affurd the committee, that all the Scots armie wold be willing to leave Ireland, except perhaps the Major Generall, and a few others whofe diffent, I faid, wold not prove materiall.

Whill I was heere, I lookd upon the pofture this armie of Scots (of which the parliament fo much boafted) were in. I found the bodies of the men luftie, well clothd and well monneyd, bot raw, untraind and undifciplind; their officers for most part young and unexperiencd. They had divided themfelvs in feverall bodies, and in feverall quarters, everie one or any one of which might with a refolute fally been eafilie beate up, and then, in my opinion, the reft would have runne. There was fixe thousand men of Neucastles armie within the toune, and Lieut. Generall King, then Lord Eithen, with them. I admird then, nor could I wonder enough fince, that he never endeavourd to give his countreymen a visite. He was a perfon of great honor; bot what he had favd of it at Vlotho in Germanie, where he made fhipwracke of much of it, he lofd in England. The Scots maine care was, how to get over Tine, never careing to polleffe themfelves of a palle on that river for their retreate, fo much did they truft to their oune valour and fucceffe. Whill I was there, they indeavord one night to bring boats from the glaffe houses, or above them, to the river, and so to make a bridge. Bot fearing the Kings forces fould fall out upon them that were at worke, Argile and his committee fent over Colonell Steuart, with 1200 foot, to ftand betweene the workmen and the toune. They had bot a litle narrow bridge to paffe in their goeing and comeing, and if 2000 had fallen ftoutlie out of the toune on them, they had killd and tane them everie man, for retire they could not. Argile hearing this was my opinion, which was feconded by others, afkd Deare Sandie, Sir James Lumfdaine and myfelfe, what was beft to be done. We were unanimous that falfe alarums fould be given about the whole toune, to divert the enemie from fallieing too ftrong upon Steuart, for the tounes utter guards of horfe had certified them within of his approach. I was fent with this meffage to the Generall, whom I found goeing to fupper. When I returnd, I was ashamd to relate the ansuere of that old Captaine; which was, that he feard the brightnes of the night (for it was moonefhine) wold difcover the burning matches to those on the walls. I told him, the mooneshine was a prejudice to the defigne, for it wold hinder the matches to be fene; for the more lunts were feene, the better for a falfe alarme. However, the alarums were made in feverall places. which were taken fo hotlie where I was befide the workmen, that thogh I calld often to them, it was our oune people, yet fome great perfons, whom I will not name, calld eagerlie for their horfes, and when they were on them rode away. The work was left undone, becaufe it was neep tide, and Steuart returnd fafelie, to the great difgrace of thefe within. The Scots got over the river afterward, and by peecmale made Neucaftles armie almost as strong as their oune, and farre better fojors, moulder away, and the relicks of it take fanctuarie within the walls of Yorke. Such was the Kings fad fate, and the infatuated ftupiditie of these under him. I have often made myselfe merrie with that nights worke, first to confider how the Committee of Estates, efpeciallie their prefident Argile, who was a good feaman, did not advert it was neep tide, before they attempted the removeall of the boats : fecondlie, how they adventurd to face a toune wherein there was fixe thousand horse and foot, with 1200 men, and no way for them to retreate : thirdlie, of Generall Levens impertinent anfuer to my meffage ; fourthlie, to fee men affrayd at their oune fhadow, men runne away for ane allarme themfelves had caufd make ; and for a farce to the play, to heare my old Colonell Steuart, when he was returnd to his quarters, vapour and bragge of the orderlie retreate he had made without the loffe of a man, when there was not fo much as a foot boy purfueing him.

33

My Lord Sinclare and I went post to Scotland, where we found my Lord Chancellour and the Committee of Eftates there very averse from that transportation, fearing the bad confequences of it. Whill things are a debateing, my Lord Sinclars regiment lands at Portpatrik. The Laird of Lauiers regiment follows, and after him the Earle of Lothians; fo wold all the reft, bot they wanted fhipping. The occasion was this. After I had left Ireland, my Lieutenant-Colonell haveing reffavd fome fupply of meale, fhipd in tuo field peeces, his amunition, his baggage, ficke men, and all the meale except fo much as the fojors carried on their backes, and marchd by land to the Airds, haveing deliverd the Neurie with the caftle to thefe were appointed to reffave it by the Marques of Ormond, lieutenant of Ireland, as we had formerlie agreed to doe: Upon this the field officers of the whole Scots armie met at Craigfergus, and feeing no appearance of my returne, unanimouslie concluded to goe all over to Scotland; and becaufe they had not veffells enough for all, fent thefe three regiments first away. This alarumd the Committee at Edenburgh exceedinglie. They difpatch my Lord Sinclar weft to fee the regiments well quarterd, no hurt to be done to the countrey, bot most of all, that the Covenant reflavd no prejudice. I went post with my Lord to Aire, where we found our regiment.

The Committee haveing well confiderd the danger might enfue, if the other feven regiments came to Scotland, fend Sir Frederick Hammilton and the Laird of Lauiers over to Ireland, with ten thousand pounds fterline, and feven thousand futes of clothes for the fojors, and fome private inftructions, to conjure them to remaine in their old duellings; to which the officers confented, notwithstanding the oath of their Mutuall Affureance, which was then broke and cancelld with as much formalitie, bot with a great deal of more reason, then it was made.

E

Thus was I at toyle and trouble enough for the fpace of tuo yeares in Ireland, haveing got no more in the employment then what maintaind me. Yet I had a purchafe in it of that I value more then any worldlie riches, that was of my deare wife; Mary White, with whom I was firft acquainted and then enamourd at the Neurie. She was comd of very good parents; her father being the fecond fonne of a knight, and her mother of ane other good familie of the Whites. She was thought by others, much more by me, to be of a good beautie. For the qualities of her mind, I have had fuch experience of them as they have renderd me happie amidft all the afflictions hath befallen me fince. I did not then marry her, becaufe at that time fhe was tenacious of the Roman Catholick perfuafion, which was verie hatefull to our leading men of Scotland; neither indeed, in the condition wherein I was then, could I maintaine her in any good fafhion.

The Marques of Huntley makeing fome buftling in the north, thogh to litle purpole, the Committee orders my Lord Sinclars regiment to march to Stirline, and Lothians to St Jonfton; that of Lauiers lay in countrey villages. I had then lookd a litle more narroulie in the juffice of the caufe wherin I fervd then formerly I used to doe, and found I had done well enough in my engadgement against the bloodie 1644.

rebells in Ireland. Bot the new Solemne League and Covenant (to which the Committee of Eftates requird an abfolute fubmiffion) fummond all my thoughts to a ferious confultation ; the refult wherof was, that it was nothing bot a treacherous and difloyall combination againft laufull authoritie. Some captaines of my Lord Lothians (who were well enough principld, and had got good information of the defignes of the prime covenanters from the late Lord Chancellor, E. of Glencairne,) and I communicated our thoughts one to another, and then I broke the matter first to my Lieutenant Colonell, and then to my Lord Sinclare. All of us thought it our duetie to doe the King all the fervice we could againft his ungracious fubjects; and therefore refolvd not to take the Covenant, bot to joyne with the Marques of Montroffe, who had the Kings commission. In the meane tyme, we made faire weather with the Committee of Eftates, till we got one thousand pound, and tuo hundreth fterline money for each regiment, and a fute of cloths for everie fojor. The Committee prefid much the figning of the covenant, with many letters, meffages, and meffengers. We wavd it with many pecious pretences; especiallie we defird fixe weeks time to advice with our confciences, a thing they had granted to all other fubjectes; hopeing before the end of that time to be in a capacitie to fpeake plainer language.

Meane while my Lieutenant Colonell and I had our feverall confultations with my Lord Eríkine, my Lord Napier, the Mafter of Napier, the Mafter of Mederdie, and Laird of Keir, all of them very loyall perfons, with whom we concluded it was fit to fend tuo, one from them and another from us, to Montroffe, who was then in the border, to invite him to come to Stirline, where he fould find caftle, toune and regiment at his devotion, and St Jonfton likewife. And leaft he might 1644.

thinke we meant not honneftlie, in regard there had been no good underftanding betweene him and my Lord Sinclare formerlie, his neece the Ladie Keir fent him a well knowne token with Harie Steuart, who was the man we fent, and this he reflaved. The meffenger they fent was young Balloch Drummond, then very loyall, whatever he was afterward. I beleeve he got not to him. Bot Montroffe haveing a litle too foone enterd Scotland, and met with a rufle neere Drumfreis, and upon it retird to England, it feems he thought it not fafe with fo inconfiderable troops to hazard fo farre as to Sterline, perhaps not giveing full truft to our promifes; and most, becaufe the Committee had appointed a fecond levie, which then was farre advanced, under the command of the E. of Callander, who with the deepeft oathes, even wifning the fupper of our Lord to turne to his damnation, which he was to take nixt Sunday, if ever he fould engadge under thefe or with thefe Covenanters, had perfuaded me in his oune houfe of Callander, and upon a Lords day too, that he would faithfullie ferve the King ;-I fay, by Montroffe his neglect, and Calanders perfidie, was loft the faireft occasion that could be wifhd to doe the King fervice. For if that levie had beene fuppreffd, as very foone it fould, and Montroffe have comd to Stirline, and joynd with our tuo regiments, as eafilie he might, he wold with the affiftance of Huntley in the north, and these Irish who soone after came over from Antrum, have reducd Scotland without bloodfhed to their duetie and obedience, or els the Scots armie had beene forcd to have left England, and marchd home to oppofe us; upon whofe retreate, it was more than probable most of England wold have embracd the Kings intereft; the reputation of the Scots armie at that time keeping up the English parliaments interest. Bot the inauspitieous fate and difaftrous definie of the incomparablie good King wold not have it to be fo.

A litle before this, Sir George Monro, Colonell Hammilton, and fome other officers of the armie in Ireland, had comd over to deale with the Committee of Estates for their oune maintenance, and E. Calander requireing an adjutant generall for his new forces from the Committee, they fought the opinion of these officers, who they thought fufficient for that employment. They were all pleafd to name me to be the man fitting for it; upon which ane act of Committee was made, without acquainting me with it; that I fould have that charge, and continue likewife major as I was. This offer being made to me when I expected Montroffe, and was with good reafon diffatified with Calander, I refufd it, pretending I could not undergoe both charges. It was given to Major Douglas, a fonne of the Sheriffe of Teviotdaill, who was afterwards a colonell, and killed at Worcefter fight. Notwithftanding of all this, Calander did not give over to give me all imaginable affureances that he wold act for the King, and that the greater pouer he was invefted with, the more vigorouflie and vigilantlie wold he flow himfelfe active and loyall for his Majeftie. This put me in fome hopes I might be inftrumentall under him to doe the King fome fervice. Withall, I knew I was vehementlie fufpected by the Committee of Eftates, and if I had denuded myfelfe of all imployment, which was my greatest fecuritie, I had runne the hazard of imprifonment, if not worfe; for now they had declard the fupreame pouer to be in themfelves, and therfore all was acted against them must be no better then treafon. Upon thefe grounds my Lord Sinclars regiment marchd into England, and I with them, and made a fashion (for indeed it was) no better) to take the Covenant, that under pretence of the Covenant we might ruine the Covenanters; a thing, (thogh too much practifd in a corrupt world) yet in itfelfe difhoneft, finfull and difavoueable; for it is certaine that no evill fould be done that good may come of it; neither did any good at all come of this, for Calander all along provd true to his own intereft and gaine, and falfe to the Kings, never laying hold on any opportunitie whereby he might, with finall difficultie, have done his Majeftie fignall fervice. After he enterd England, I wold have undertaken to have made moft of his new levied forces, which were about 5000, declare for the King, and forcd thefe who wold not to fly from the armie. Upon this Northumberland and Bifhopricke (whofe gentrie was ftill loyall,) wold have rifen with us; and thogh fhortlie after that Prince Rupert was beaten at Longmeston mure, yet he haveing brought away neere 4000 horfe with him, we wold have beene able to have made him up a gallant armie. Bot non voluere fata.

1644.

Having croffd Tyne at Neuburne, Calander invefts Neucaftle on the other fide of the river; haveing firft got affureance that the Prince was defeated at Long Mefton by Generalls Leven, Manchefter and old Fairfaxe, all which three had fhamefullie left the field and fled; but Leven fled furtheft, for he did not draw bridle till he was at Wedderbie, four and twentie miles from the place of battell. There was reafon he fould take the ftart of the other tuo, becaufe he had furtheft home. Calander lys doune before Hertipoole, a very tenable litle fea toune, wherin was a garrifon of 300 men for the King, and had it unworthilie yeelded to him without ftroake of fuord by Sir Edmund Carew; and Stokton Caftle likewife, before which not one man of ours had appeared, for which he was afterward queftiond.

A litle before harveft in this yeare 1644, Leven came with all his armie and befeegd. Neucaftle on Northumberland fide; which was well enough defended eight or nine weeks by Sir Johne Morley, mayor of the toune; bot at length he haveing foolifhlie refufed articles, which he might have made at his pleafure, the toune was taken by ftorme, with no great loffe on our fide, and with very litle bloodfhed of the My Lord Sinclars regiment were the first that enterd the royalifts. toune, the first partie of them of tuo hundreth being led by my felfe, being very well feconded by my Lieutenant Colonell. One of my Captains, Sinclare, foolifhlie running contrar to my command fraight to the market place, was ther killd. It was well for thefe of that fide within the toune that we enterd fo foone, for we gave very good quarter, my Lieutenant Colonell and I cleering the wall all along till the nixt port; there we tooke tuentie gentlemen on horfeback, and 200 foot fojors, and fo made eafie way for my Lord Leviftons, now E. of Lithgows brigade, and Lieutenant Generall Baillies to enter, being before pitifullie beate of; neither did we kill one man within the walls. In the approches our regiment loft very prettie men, bot in the ftorme onlie three. Immediatlie after the plunder of this toune, (wherof I had not one pennie worth) the armie is put in winter quarters. Whill we befeege Neucastle, Calander is fent with fome regiments to Scotland to oppose Montroffe, who, with a handfull of Irish very ill armed, had beaten the Lord Elcho and his armie at Tippermure. Calander ftayd not long, neither had the leaders of the Covenanters better lucke than Elcho, for beaten they were by Montroffe at Aberdeene, and the third time at Innerlochie, where Argile favd himfelfe foone enough.

Nixt fummer of the yeare 1645, Montrofe did thefe feats which hath renderd his name immortall. Against him were feverall regiments fent the fecond time from the armie in England. With the reft Leven marcheth fouthward; and at Nottinghame, fome well meaning officers of the armie made a motion to prefent a petition to the King, according to the laudable cuftome of both the first and the fecond Covenanters, before we enterd in any act of hoftilitie against him. This had given a ftop to the advance of our armie, which the English royalists fo much feared. I was defird to draw the petition, which after fome refufeall, (apprehending Calanders jugling,) I at length did. Bot he not onlie refufd to figne it himfelfe, but to let the Committee fee it, (without whom it could not be fent to the King) thogh never fo many officers wold fubfcrive it. And fo thefe honneft officers were deceavd and abufd, as I had fortold them. On our march to Gloceftershire, we had the fad news of the Kings overthrow at Nafebie, after which never any of his forces made a ftand. Whill the Scots army invefts Hereford, news comes that Montroffe had gaind the battell of Killfyth, fo entirelie that all the covenanting Lords were fled to Berwick. Lieutenant Generall Lefley upon this is fent away to Scotland, with most of the cavallerie, to oppose fuccessfull Montrofe, whom he had the good fortune, as he thought it, to beate at Philiphauch ; where Major Generall Middletone, now Earle, was very active againft, thogh fince very active for the King. After fome weeks ftay at the feege of Hereford, upon a rumour of the Kings approach with fome forces, we broke up and marchd north, and that harveft quarterd in Yorkshire; and in the beginning of winter, helpd the English forces to blocke up Neuarke on Trent, from whence a litle before his Majeftie was gone with 500 horfe to Oxford. Heere old Generall Leven left us and went to Neucaftle, forcd therto by order of the Parliament of Scotland. I am very fure, fore againft his will he parted with a command wherby he could have put aboundance of money in his pocket, which Lieutenant Generall David Lefley could not choofe bot doe. We paft that winter with very much cold, bot very litle bloodfhed; bot fo did they not at St Andreus, where the pretended parliament dyed fome fcaffolds very red, with the loyall blood of many of his Majefties faithfull fubjects.

1646.

1

In the fummer of the yeare 1646, the Kings fate driveing him on to his neere approching end, he caft himfelf in the Scots armes at Neuarke. There did E. Lothian, as prefident of the Committee, to his eternall reproach, imperiouflie require his Majeftie (before he had either drunke, refreshd, or reposed himselfe,) to command my Lord Bellafis to deliver up Neuarke to the Parliaments forces, to figne the Covenant, to order the eftablishment of prefbiterian government in England and Ireland, and to command James Grahame, (for fo he called Great Montroffe) to lay doune armes; all which the King ftoutlie refused; telling him that he who had made him ane Earle had made James Grahame a Marques. Barbarouflie ufed he was, ftrong guards put upon him, and centinells at all his windows, that he fould caft over no letters; and at length Neuarke by his order being given up, he is carried with a very fpeedie march to Neucastle, where he was well enough guarded. At Sherburne I fpoke with him, and his Majeftie haveing got fome good caracter of me, bade me tell him the fence of our armie concerning him. I did fo, and withall affurd him he was a prifoner, and therefor prayd him to think of his efcape, offering him all the fervice I could doe him. He feemd to be well-pleafed with my freedome, and the griefe I had for his condition; bot our converfation was interrupted very uncivillie (for I was in the roome alone with his Majeftie) by Lieutenant Generall Lefleys command, wherin he made ufe of tuo whom I will not name, becaufe the one is dead, and I hope the other hath repented; neither was I ever permitted afterward to fpeake with him; yet he namd me, as one of five fitting to carry his commands to Montroffe, bot the Committee made choyce of a man by Lothians perfuafion, fitter for their purpofe. Moft of that winter, till neere Candlemas, was fpent in quarters, which were alloted us in fome places of Yorkfhire, Durham, and Northumberland all over; meane time goes Argile to London.

When I perceaved things in this troublefome condition, not knouing what might be the iffue, whether I might not be neceffitated to fly beyond feas, (for the Committee and Generall entertaind very ill thoughts of me.) and not dareing to goe to Irland, leaft they fould thinke I went about more ferious affaires, I fent and defird her who was to be my wife, to be at the trouble to come to England to me, which the willinglie did. This both flew her affection to me, and the truft fle repofed in mine; leaveing her parents, her friends, countrey and all that was deare to her, upon my word. And indeed fhe found me but in a bad condition, and it was well it was no worfe; for haveing drunke at one time too much at parting with a great perfon, rideing home I met one Colonell Wren, betueene whom and me there was fome animofitie. He was a foot, and I lighted from my horfe; drinke prevailing over my reafon, I forced him to draw his fuord, which was tuo great handfulls longer then mine. This I perceiving, gripd his fuord with my left hand, and thruft at him with my right; bot he ftepping backe avoyded it, and drew his fuord away, which left fo deepe a wound betueene my thumbe and formoft finger, that I had almoft lofd the use of both, unles I had beene well cured. Ane other hurt I got in my left arme. The paffengers parted us ; bot I could never find him out after, to be revengd on him, though I fought him farre and neere. This was ane effect of drinking, which I confesse, befide the finne against God, hath brought me in many inconveniences. This was the first time ever my blood was draune, though I have hazarded it and my life very often, not onlie in battells, fkirmifhes, rencounters, fieges, fallies, and other publick dueties of fervice, bot alfo in feverall private duells. I was not well recoverd, when the I lovd beft came to England. Shortlie after, we were married at Hexame, in prefence of ane honourable companie, on the tenth of November, 1646. Many fad ftorms and blafts of adversitie hath the patientlie flood out with me fince, and both of us have reafon to bleffe our good God, who hath graciouflie deliverd us out of them all.

In Februare 1647, the Committee haveing receaved 200,000lb. fterline, for the arrears of the armie (for fo it was calld), the King is fhamefullie deliverd over to the Commiffioners of the two Houfes of England, and that by a vote too of the Parliament of Scotland, to the eternall difgrace of the whole nation. He is firft carried to Holmbie Houfe; and after the armie had chacd the eleven Prefbiterian members of the Houfe of Commons beyond feas, they take his Majeftie to Hampton Court, and after many jugling tricks of Cromwell, he is carried to Carifbrok Caftle in the Ifle of Wight, out of which he never came till he was led to his arraignment. The Scotch armie marcheth to Scotland and is modelled in feven regiments of foot, thretteene troops of horfe, and three companies of dragooners. All the reft are difbanded. My Lord Sinclars regiment is orderd to goe backe to Ireland. They - - - by the way at Peebles, and fome runne away. Quarters are appointed for them, and E. Lothians regiment in Galloway, till I went over to Ireland, to try whether Monro and his officers (for that armie was then governd by a councell of officers, wherof the Major Generall was prefident,) wold make us welcome or not, I found the coaft guarded with fojors to barre our landing, which I lookd on as a bad omen. At my comeing to Craigfergus, the officers are calld together. I deliverd them a letter from the Scots Parliament, and endeavord to perfuade them to reflave us as antient members of their bodie; telling them that we were to bring such provisions with us, that we fould not be burthenfome to them. Bot I harangud them in vaine, for I found, thogh they wold not fpeake it dounright, they wold not admit us at all; for thogh they had beene well beate by Owen Oneale the yeare before, yet they fancyed they fould then receave ten thousand pounds fterline for everie regiment, and they thought if our tuo regiments joynd with them, we might occasion a diminution of the foume. Upon my returne, and the burthen Galloway had of us, order comes to us from the Committee of Eftates, to difband, which was accordinglie done. This was the end of my Lord Sinclars regiment, which indeed was composed of prettie men, ftout and loyall, both officers' and fojors, to which I had beene ferjeant major full five yeares.

1647.

Shortlie after, Lieutenant Generall Lefley having reduced the North to the obedience of the Committee of Eftates, by takeing all Huntleys houfes, and chaceing himfelfe and his party to their hieland fhelters, marched fouth, being to goe into Kintire. I met him at Dumblaine, where he, the late Marques of Argile, and Major Generall Holburne, eafilie perfuaded me to accept of the Adjutant Generalls place of the armie, then vacant; for indeed I thought it duetie to fight againft these men who first had diferted their Generall Montrosse, as E. Aboine and Sir Alafter Macdonnald had done when he ftood moft in need of them, which mainlie had occafiond his irreparable loffe at Philipfhauch; and nixt had abfolutlie refufd to lay down armes at the Kings oune command, carried to them by Sir James Lefley. I was neceffitated to ftay for fome baggage a day or tuo, and therafter met the armie at Inverraray, Argiles chiefe houfe. From thence we marchd to Kintire, which is a peninfull. Both before and at the entrie to it, there were fuch advantages of ground, that our foot, for mountains and marfhes, could never have draune up one hundreth in a bodie, nor our horfe above three in breaft; which if Sir Alafter had prepoffeft with thefe thousand or 1200 brave foot which he had with him, I think he might have routed us, at leaft we fould not have enterd Kintire bot by a miracle. Bot he was ordaind for deftruction; for by a fpeadie march we made ourfelves mafters of thefe difficell paffes, and got into a plaine countrey, where no fooner he faw our horfe advance, but with little or no fighting he retird; and if the Lieutenant Generals foot had been with him to have given the enemie a falve or tuo, which would have diforderd him, I beleeve-none of them had escaped from our horfe. Alafter, like a foole, (for no fojor he was, though ftout enough,) put in 300 of his beft men in a houfe on the top of a hill, calld Dunavertie, environd with a ftone wall, where there was not a drop of water but what fell from the clouds. Then leaveing Kintire he went to Yla, where he playd juft fuch ane other mad prank, leaveing his old father, commonlie called Coll Kettoch, with neere 200 men in a caftle, called Dunneveg, where was no water either bot what the heavens afforded. The reft of his men he carried with him to Ireland, (ane excellent Generall Major) where he was killd in a battell fought by those with whom he joynd against my Lord Taffe, now Earle of Carlingford. We befeegd Dunavertie, which keepd out well enough, till we ftormd a trench they had at the foot of the hill, wherby they commanded tuo ftripes of water. This we did take in the affault. Fortie of them were put to the fuord. We lofd five or fixe, with Argiles Major. After this, inexorable thirft made them defire a parley. I was orderd to fpeake with them; neither could the Lieutenant Generall be movd to grant any other conditions, then that they fould yeeld on differentiation or mercy; and it feemd ftrange to me to heare the Lieutenant Generalls nice diffinction, that they fould yeeld themfelvs to the kingdomes mercy, and not to his. At length they did fo; and after they were comd out of the Caftle, they were put to the fuord, everie mothers fonne, except one young man, Mackoull, whole life I begd, to be fent to France with a hundreth countrey fellows whom we had fmoakd out of a cave, as they doe foxes, who were given to Captaine Cambell, the Chancellors brother.

1647.

Heere it will be fit to make a ftop till this cruell action be canvafd. Firft, the Lieutenant Generall was tuo days irrefolute what to doe. The Marques of Argile was accufd, at his arraignment, of this murther, and I was examind as a witnes. I depond, that which was true, that I never heard him advice the Lieutenant Generall to it. What he did in private I know not. Secondlie, Argile was bot a Colonell there, and fo had no pouer to doe it of himfelfe. Thirdlie, thogh he had advifd him to it, it was no capitall crime; for councell is no command. Fourthlie, I have feverall times fpoke to the Lieutenant Generall to fave thefe mens lives, and he allways affented to it; and I know of himfelfe he was unwilling to fhed their blood. Fifthlie, Mr Johne Nave (who was appointed by the commission of the kirke to waite on him as his chaplaine,) never ceafd to tempt him to that bloodfhed; yea and threatened him with the curfes befell Saull for fpareing the Amalekites, for with them his theologie taught him to compare the Dunavertie men. And I verilie beleeve that this prevaild moft with David Lefley, who lookd upon Nave as the reprefentative of the Kirk of Scotland. Laftlie, there is no doubt bot the Lieutenant Generall might legallie enough, without the leaft transgreffion of either the cuftome, practife, or law of warre, or his oune commission, have ufd them as he did; for he was bound by no article to them, they haveing fubmitted themfelvs abfolutlie to his difcretion. It is true, on the other hand, fummum jus, fumma injuria; and in fuch cafes, mercy is the more chriftian, the more honourable, and the more ordinarie way in oure warres in Europe. Bot I reallie beleeve, advife him to that act who will, he hath repented it many times fince, and even very foone after the doeing it. a alar to the the the

From Kintire we went by fea to Yla, and immediatlie invefted Dunneveg. I muft remember, by the way, that we carried bot about fourfcore horfes with us after we left Kintire, the reft of the troopes being left in Lorne, under the command of Colonell Robert Montgomerie, fince Generall Major, who blockd up the houfe of belonging to Mackoull in Lorne, whofe clan was, as I faid, extirpated very neere at Dunavertie. Dunnaveg, after a ftout refiftance, for want of water, came to a parley. I am appointed to treate with one Captaine Oneale and one Donald Gorum, who came out of the houfe on the Lieutenant Generalls word. Life was promifd to them; all the officers to goe where they pleafed; the fojors to be transported to France, and given to Henry Sinclare my old Lieutenant Colonell. The articles I faw couchd in writeing and fignd by both Argile and Lefley. This capitulation was faithfullie obferved. A litle fkurvie ile in the end of Yla was keepd by a baftard fonne of Coll Kittoch, which we left to its fortune. Bot before we were mafters of Dunneveg, the old man Coll, comeing foolifhlie out of the houfe, where he was governour, on fome parole or other, to fpeake with his old friend the Captaine of Dunftaffage Caftle, was furprifd and made prifoner, not without fome ftaine to the Lieutenant Generalls honor. He was afterwards hangd by a jury of Argiles fheriff depute, one George Cambell, from whofe fentence few are faid to have efcapd that kind of death.

From Yla we boated over to Jura, a horride ile, and a habitation fit for deere and wild beafts; and fo from ile to ile till we came to Mull, which is one of the beft of the Hebrides. Heere Maclaine favd his lands with the loffe of his reputation, if ever he was capable to have any. He gave up his ftrong caftles to Lefley, gave his eldeft fonne for hoftage of his fidelitie, and, which was unchriftian bafenes in the loweft degree, he deliverd up fourteene very prettie Irifhmen, who had beene all along faithfull to him, to the Lieutenant Generall, who immediatlie caufd hang them all. It was not well done to demand them from Macklaine, bot inexcufablie ill done of him to betray them. Heere I cannot forget one Sir Donald Cambell, a very old man, flefhd in blood from his very infancie, who with all imaginable violence prefd that all the whole clan of Macklaine fould be put to the edge of the fword; nor #### 1647.

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

wold he be commanded to forbeare his bloody fute by the Lieutenant Generall and the tuo Generall Majors, and with fome difficultie was he commanded filence by his chiefe the Marques of Argile. For my part I faid nothing, for indeed I did not care thogh he had prevaild in his fute, the deliverie of the Irifh had fo much irritated me against the whole name. As we were goeing to Mull, Major Generall, fince E. Middletone, (who had with tuo regiments of foot and fome troops of horfe ruind the relicks of Huntleys partie,) came to us. With him I had fome conferences concerning the Kings condition, who at that time was at Hampton Court. Then first I found he beganne in earnest to oune his Majesties intereft. Great jealoufies there were then of all parties both in England and Scotland. Argile and Leflie thought fit to feparate me from Middletone, and fo fent me to Edinburgh to give the Eftates ane account of our fucceffes, and to defire quarters to be provided for the armie againft our descent to the low countrey. Thither I went, and after Leslie had taken in ane old caftle in Knoggard or Moggart, I know not which, I met him on his march to Stirline, ten miles on the other fide of that toune, bringing with me the quarters ordered for the feverall regiments and troopes; which being divided, every one went ftraight to his oune.

The Committee of Eftates, and confequentlie the vifible foveraigne pouer of Scotland at that time, is divided between the Duke Hammilton and the Marques of Argile. The laft keepd ftronglie by the church, and had it for him; and for feare that did not his turne, he keepd the armie, at leaft Leven and David Leflie for him, as knowing, omnia funt gladii pediffequa. Yet the Hammiltons had gaind much on Middleton, who had a ftrong influence on the armie. Hammilton, to beate Argile out of his ftrongeft fortreffe, propons the dif-

G

banding the armie as very ufeles now, and which was worfe, very burthenfome, all the enemies of the ftate being rangd to their duetie. This was not onlie a plaufible pretext, bot ane unanfuerable argument ; bot marke the reply of the other partie. " Never fo great danger as now; the Kings perfon, which they were bound to defend by the oath of their Covenant (obferve, there was no former ty on them,) being in the hands of the Independents, who were fuorne enemies to his facred perfon and to prefbiterie, and carying now all things before them in the English Parliament, were become very formidable." So impudentlie could thefe hipocrites make ufe of the fafetie of the King, to fupport their power, by the ufurpation wherof they had brought him to that low condition, and whofe deftruction they ftill defignd. To this they adde a ridiculouflie palpable ly, that the Marques of Huntley was ftrong and marching fouthward, waxd numerous, and to use their oune words, grew great like a fnow ball; that poore Marques, in the meane time, hideing himfelfe in holes and caves, out of which he is about that fame time draune, and carried to Edenburgh and caft in the tollbooth, out of which he never came till he was brought to a fcaffold. The matter of the armies difbanding is referd to the meeting of a great Committee, whofe members are fummond by Argile and the kirk to come from the remoteft places of the kingdome, and when they meet, they vote the armie to ftand. By this favour they obliged many officers, to eafe the kingdome forfooth, to quite a third part of their pay voluntarilie; for which fimplicitie the kirk cryd them up for good patriots; and this was enough to put these fimpletons in the full poffeffion of a fools paradife.

Bot before all this was done, E. Lainrick, brother to Duke Hamilton is made one of these commissioners which they called the Committee of both kingdomes. The Chanclor and he went to London, and from thence, by the Parliaments permiffion, to the Ile of Wight, where they had feverall conferences with his Majeftie. Many conceffions they obtaind from him against Poperie, Arminianisme, Socinianisme, Libertinifme, Eraftianifine, and I know not what els, and many promifes they made to him, and fo returnd to Scotland. A Parliament is calld, which either confifted of the royall or purlie Hammiltonian partie; Argiles being the leaft of the three, the election of the members was fo dexterouflie carried. Bot in the Commission of the Kirke, Argile carryd all before him. And now the fcene is changd. The King is in no danger; the Parliament of England, thogh independent, and Scotland are good friends; they muft not fall out; the union of the tuo kingdomes muft be preferved; the King in his conceffions had not taken away Prelacie, and therfore all the reft of his grants were hipocriticall; neither were the Scots bound to defend his perfon by vertue of the Covenant, bot in the defence of the true religion, which, according to their gloffe, is prefbiteriall government; and therfor no armie muft be raifd for his releafment or reftoration, onlie the English Parliament wold be defird to fuffer them to treate with the King, whofe perfon, according to promife, fould be keepd in honor, freedome and fafetie. Heere yow fee ane armie neceffare and not neceffare, for one and the fame caufe. Yow will thinke that ftrange, bot I will unriddle yow. Neceffare for the Kings defence, and to withftand the power of the Independents, fo long as old Leven, and David Leflie commanded it; not neceffare for thefe or any other caufes, if Duke Hamilton and Earle Calander had the conduct of it. Whether the great foumes of money the English Commissioners brought with them, had ane influence on the leading men of the ftate, the kirk and the armie, Sir James Stewart, once Provoft of Edinburgh, yet alive, can well enough tell. This rent betueene the ufurped ftate and the ufurped kirk, was the firft ftep to the ruine of the whole defigne of the yeare 1648; for in the time of this furious dif.... our levies were retarded, and time given to Fairfaxe and Cromwell to deftroy all the Kings partie in England. At length the raifing of ane armie is carried in fpite of Argile and the kirk. Duke Hammilton is declard Generall; E. Calander, (who once more appeard to oune the Kings intereft,) Lieutenant Generall of the armie; Middletone Lieutenant Generall of the horfe, and Baillie of the foot.

1648.

Bot before this was done, a petition is draune up by Argile and his friends, (the Chancellor playing faft and loofe with both parties,) which is calld the petition of the armie, which was to fecure religion (for thefe were the kirks words) and the kingdome of Chrift, before any forces were raifed for the Kings releasment. It is fignd privatlie by Leven, Da: Leflie, Major Generall Holburne, Sir Johne Broun, Colonell Scot and fome others, and then prefented publiklie to the reft of us, thinking we could not, being fojors, refuse to follow our leaders. Bot they found themfelves miftaken; for Major Generall Middletone, and the honneft part of the officers of the armie told them, that fuch a petition, which lookd fo like mutinie, could not be prefented to the Parliament without incurring the difhonour which Fairfaxe, his armie had draune upon itfelfe, to impose on the Parliament of England. To oppofe this petition, Middletone was pleafd to make use of me; neither was I, indeed, unwilling to contribute all my endeavors for the deftruction of a paper which, if it had beene red, wold have fpoke with fo loud a voyce, that many of the members, who were bot indifferent, wold have fpoke Argiles language very plainlie. The bufienes was fo handled that it was never prefented.

Innumerable allmost were the petitions that came from all places of the kingdome, against the raising of forces for his Majesties releafment. Glafgow being a confiderable toune, was most refractorie to this Parliament; for Mr Dick, whom they lookd upon as a patriarch, Mr Baillie, Mr Gillefpie and Mr Durhame, all mightie members of the kirk of Scotland, had preachd them to a perfite difobedience of all civill power, except fuch as was authorifd by the Generall Affemblie and Commission of the Kirk; and fo indeed was the whole weft of Scotland, who cryd up King Chrift, and the kingdome of Jefus Chrift, therby meaning the uncontroullable and unlimited dominion of the then kirk of Scotland, to whom they thought our Saviour had deliverd over his fcepter, to governe his militant church as they thought For this reafon, I am fent to Glafgow to reduce it to obedience, fit. with three troops of horfe, and Holburns regiment of foot, which a litle before that had mutind in the Links of Lieth; (their colonell, lieutenant colonell, and all their captains haveing deferted them,) bot the mutinie was with fome difficultie compefed by myfelfe, and that regiment brought by me the length of Cramond, in its march to Glafgow. In Glafgow were many honneft and loyall men, the prime wherof wer the Cambells and the Bells; and indeed I had good helpe of Coline Cambell, James Bell and Bayliffe James Hamilton. At my comeing there I found my worke not very difficill; for I fortlie learnd to know, that the quartering tuo or three troopers, and halfe a dozen mulketeers, was ane argument ftrong enough, in two or three nights time, to make the hardeft headed Covenanter in the toune to forfake the kirk, and fide with the Parliament. I came on the friday, and nixt day fent to Mr Dick, and defird him and his brethren to fay nothing nixt day in their pullpits that might give me just reason to disturbe the peace of the church. In the forenoone he fpoke us very faire, and gave us no occafion of offence; but in the afternoone he transgread all limits of modeftie, and raild malitieouflie against both King and Parliament. This obligd me to command all my officers and fojors to goe prefentlie out of the church, becaufe I neither could nor would fuffer any under my command to be witneffes of a mifdemeanor of that nature. At the first Dick was timorous, and promifd if I wold stay, he wold give me fatiffaction; bot I told him I wold truft him no more, fince he had broke his promife made in the forenoone. Seeing I intended no worfe but to remove, he continued his fermon, and nixt day went to Edenburgh to complaine; bot fent one that fame night to make his greeveance to the Duke, who was comd the day before to his palace of Hammilton. Thither I went nixt morning. His Grace approvd of all I had done; and there was reafon for it; becaufe I had done nothing bot by his oune order, and his brother E. Lainricks advice. This was that great and well neere inexpiable finne which I committed against the facred foveraigntie of the kirk; for which all members were fo implacable and irreconcileable enemies to me afterward.

Finding my Glafgow men groune prettie tame, I tenderd them a fhort paper, which whoever figned I promifd fould be prefentlie eafd of all quartering. It was nothing bot a fubmiffion to all orders of Parliament, agreeable to the Covenant. This paper was afterward by fome merrie men chriftend Turners Covenant. It was quicklie fignd by all, except fome inconfiderable perfons; and fo foone as Duke Hammilton had caufd read my letter in Parliament, and the fignd papers fent to the Clearke Regifter, I was orderd to march to Renfrew, to reduce that fhire to obedience. I left the Generall of the Artilleries regiment, which was not very ftrong, at Glafgow, and marchd with my oune (for the Parliament had given me that of Holburns, and my Lord Duke had placd me himfelfe at Glafgow) and eleven troops of horfe; for ftill as they were levied in the eaft, they were fent weft to me. I lay at Paiflay myfelfe with my regiment, and quarterd my troopes round about. Bot the people from feverall parifhes came fo faft to me, offering their obedience to the Parliament, that I knew not well how to quarter my prefent men, much leffe thefe troops, and Calanders regiment, which were on their march weftward.

Meantime a pettie rebellion muft be ufherd in by religion, yea, by one of the facredeft mifteries of it, even the celebration of our Lords fupper; fo finely could thefe pretended faints make that vinculum pacis, that bond of peace, the commemoration of our Savieours fufferings and death, that peace fo often inculcated, and left as a legacie by our bleffed Lord to his whole Church; fo handfomelie, I fay, could thefe hipocrits make it the fimbole of warre, and bloody broyles. Whill I lay at Paiflay, a communion, as they call it, is to be given at Machlin church, to pertake wherof all good people are permitted to come; bot becaufe the times were, forfooth, dangerous, it was thought fit all the men fould come armed. Nixt Monday, which was their thankfgiveing day, there were few leffe to be feene about the church then tuo thoufand armed men, horfe and foot. I had got fome intelligence of the defigne before, and had acquainted the Duke with it; who orderd me expreflie not to-fturre till Calander and Middletones coming; who accordinglie on the Saturday before the communion came to Glafgow, where I met them; and then went ftraight forward to Paflay. A rendevous is appointed by Calander to be of horfe and foot at Steuarton hill nixt Monday. From thence Lieut. General Middleton is fent with fixe troopes of horfe to Machlin moore, where the armed communicants were faid to be. I intreated my Lord Calander (bot to no purpose) not to divide, bot rather march with all his forces, then hazard the overthrow of a few, which might endanger the whole. We advanced with the reft, as the foot could march; bot it was not long before we heard that the communicants had refused to goe to their houses; and having reflaved a brifke charge of Middletons forlorne hope, had worfted it; and that himfelfe and Colonell Urrey comeing up to the refcue, were both wounded in the heade; which had fo appalld their troopes, that if they lofid no ground, they were glad to keepe what they had, and looke upon the faincts. These unexpected news made Calander leave my regiment at Kilmarnock, and take his horfe with him up to Middletone. I intreated him to march at leaft at a great trot, if not at a gallope; bot he would be more orderlie, and therefor marchd more floulie. We met numbers of boys and bedees, weeping and crying all was loft; bot at our appearance the flashing communicants left the field, the horfe trulie untouchd, becaufe not fiercelie purfued. About fixtie of their foot were taken, and five officers. The ministers that came in our power, who had occafiond the mifchiefe, were nixt day difinifd. Nixt day we marchd into Aire, where a court of warre is appointed to be keepd about the prifoners. The country fellows of them are pardoned; the officers fentenced to be hanged or fhot; bot therafter were pardond; to which I was very inftrumentall, thogh I had bene prefident in the court of warre. Lieutenant Generall Middletons wound, and Colonel Urreys fufferd them to ride abroad within foure or five days. We knew not well what to doe, for Lambert was on the Border with a ftrong part of the Englifh armie, and in a manner keepd Sir Marmaduke Langdail blockd up at Carlile. Our west countrey was not at all fetled, bot very readie for new commotions. Upon this E. Calander defires a conference with the Duke, who then was at Edinburgh, to be at his oune houfe of Hamilton, to which the Duke readilie affented.

1648.

I had left my wife at Glafgow, and therfor defird libertie to goe there, and bid her good night, and accordinglie went thither. Within two nights came E. Calander, and Lieutenant Generall Middletone, and with them I went to Hammilton, takeing my leave of my deare wife, whom I did not fee againe till fhe faw me prifoner at Hull.

At Hammilton, we could not bot with much regret and difpleafure confider, that Sir Marmaduke and his Lieutenant Generall Sir Philip Mufhgrave, both gentlemen of untainted loyaltie and gallantrie, had not onlie unfeafonablie, and contrare to the advices given them, raifd above 3000 foot and horfe, bot had marchd with them into Lancafhire, and therby had given a juft pretext to the Parliament to fend Lambert with a more confiderable power, to give a ftop to their further proceedings; which he did fo vigorouflie, that Langdale was glad to fhelter himfelfe under the walls of Carlile. This expofd him to a certaine and prefent ruine, unles he were fuccourd. To marche to his reliefe, were to leave the halfe of our forces in Scotland unleavied, and ane enemie behind our hand, ourfelvs in a very bad condition, without money, meale, artillerie, or amunition; to fuffer him to perifh was against honor, conficence, and the reason both of state and warre. It wold have given our enemies occafion to infult; wold have brought the Dukes honor (rudlie enough dealt with [by] fome before) to an everlafting loffe, and wold have given fuch just apprehensions of jealoufies to the royalifts in England, that never one of them wold have joynd with us, or ound us. The further debate of this bufienes is delayd till the Duke, Calander and Middletone went to Edenburgh to advife with the Committee of Eftates, for the Parliament was then diffolvd. Bot in the meane time Colonell Lockheart is fent to command fome brigads of horfe at Anan, and I orderd to goe prefentlie to Drumfreis, to take the command of fixe or feven regiments of foot, which were to be fhortlie there. Our neernes to Carlile was thought might give Lambert fome ombrages of both a ftronger and a neerer approch. Neither were we miftaken in our conjecture; for fo foone as we began to rally there, he drew his troops neerer together, and fo Sir Marmaduk got aire, and with it fome meate for himfelfe, and graffe for his horfes.

In this pofture did Lockheart and I ftay about a fortnight, tuelve miles diftant one from ane other, till (Sir Marmaduks reliefe being concluded on at Edenburgh as purlie neceffare,) my L. Duke, E. Calander, and Lieutenant Generall Middletone and Baillie, with many, bot weake regiments of horfe and foot, randevoufed at Anan. There I met them with my litle infantrie, amunition and a great deale of meale, which had beene fent to me from Edenburgh and other places. Nixt day we advanced into England, order being given for all the regiments of the whole kingdome to hafte after us, except fuch as were orderd to ftay for defence of the countrey againft our hidden enemies ; and thefe were to be commanded by E. Lainrick, as commander in chiefe 1648.

at home. Our advance obligd Lambert to retire. Some fkirmifhes we had with him for a day or tuo, bot to litle purpofe. At length he got to Steinmure, where he beganne to fortifie himfelfe. The Duke is neceffitated to ftay ten or twelve days at Kirbie-thure, to reffave those regiments were marching from Scotland, which did not exceed the halfe of their numbers they fould have beene, all neulie levied, raw and undifciplind; and that fummer was fo exceffivlie rainie and wet, that I may fay it was not poffible for us to keepe one mulket often fixd, all the time we were in a bodie in England. Adde to this that we had no canon, nay not one field peece, very litle amunition, and not one officer to direct it. Deare Sandie being groune old and doated, had given no fitting orders for thefe things. Whill the Duke lyes at Kirbie-thure, Sir Marmaduke befeegeth the caftle of Applebie, in which Lambert had left a guarrifon. I am fent with tuo brigads to ly neere him, for feare Lambert fould face about upon him. Within a few days the caftle yeelded.

Heere I will fet down ane accident befell me; for thogh it was not a very ftrange one, yet it was a very od one in all its parts. My tuo brigads lay in a village within halfe a mile of Applebie; my oun quarter was in a gentlemans houfe, who was a Ritmafter, and at that time with Sir Marmaduke; his wife keepd her chamber readie to be brought to bed. The caftle being over, and Lambert farre enough, I refolvd to goe to bed everie night, haveing had fatigue enough before. The firft night I sleepd well enough ; and rifeing nixt morning, I mifd one linnen ftockine, one halfe filke one and one boothofe, the accouftrement under a boote for one leg; neither could they be found for any fearch. Being provided of more of the fame kind, I made myfelfe

1648.

reddie, and rode to the head quarters. At my returne, I could heare no news of my flockins. That night I went to bed, and nixt morning found myfelfe juft fo ufed; miffing the three flockins for one leg onlie, the other three being left intire as they were the day before. A narrower fearch then the first was made, bot without fucceffe. I had yet in referve one paire of whole flockings, and a paire of boothofe greater then the former. Thefe I put on my legs. The third morning I found the fame usage, the flockins for one leg onlie left me. It was time for me then, and my fervants too, to imagine it must be rats that had fhard my flockins fo equallie with me; and this the miftrefs of the houfe knew well enough, bot wold not tell it me. The roome, which was a low parlour, being well fearchd with candles, the top of my great boothofe was found at a hole, in which they had drawne all the reft. I went abroad, and orderd the boards to be raifed, to fee how the rats had difpoid of my moveables. The miftrefs fent a fervant of her oune to be prefent at this action, which fhe knew concernd her. One boord being bot a litle opend, a litle boy of mine thruft in his hand, and fetchd with him foure and tuentie old peeces of gold, and one angell. The fervant of the house affirmd it appertaind to his mistres. The boy bringing the gold to me, I went immediatlie to the gentlewomans chamber, and told her, it was probable Lambert haveing quarterd in that house, as indeed he had, fome of his fervants might have hid that gold; and if fo, it was laufullie mine; bot if fhe could make it appeare it belongd to her, I fould immediatlie give it her. The poore gentlewoman told me with many teares, that her hufband being none of the frugalleft men (and indeed he was a fpendthrift) fhe had hid that gold without his knowledge, to make use of it as she had oc1648.

cafion, efpeciallie when the lay in ; and conjurd me, as I lovd the King, (for whom her hulband and the had fufferd much) not to detain her gold. She faid, if there was either more or leffe then foure and tuentie whole peeces, and two halfe ones, it fould be none of hers, and that they were put by her in a red velvet purfe. After I had given her affureance of her gold, a new fearch is made, the other angell is found, the velvet purfe all gnawd in bits, as my ftockins were, and the gold inftantlie reftord to the gentlewoman. I have often heard that the eating or gnauing of cloths by rats is ominous, and portends fome mifchance to fall on thefe to whom the cloths belong. I thank God I was never addicted to fuch divinations, or heeded them. It is true, that more miffortuns then one fell on me fhortlie after; bot I am fure I could have better forfeene them myfelfe then rats or any fuch vermine, and yet did it not. I have heard indeed many fine ftories told of rats, how they abandon houfes and fhips, when the first are to be burnt, and the fecond dround. Naturalists fay they are very fagacious creatures, and I beleeve they are fo; bot I fhall never be of the opinion they can forfee future contingencies, which I fuppofe the divell himfelfe can neither forknow nor fortell; these being things which the Almightie hath keepd hidden in the bofome of his divine preficience. And whither the great God hath preordained or predeftinated thefe things, which to us are contingent, to fall out by ane uncontrollable and unavoidable neceffitie, is a queftion not yet decided.

My Lord Duke marcheth on with this ill equipd and ill orderd armie of his, in which I being Colonell of a regiment, I officiated alfo as Adjutant Generall, or rather indeed doeing the duetie of Major Generall of the infantrie, fince there was none namd for it. To relieve

62

Langdale at Carlile, brought us out of the roade, and truelie we never came in the right way againe; fo true is the old faying, once wrong and ay wrong. At Hornbie, a days march beyond Kendall, it was advifd whether we fould march be Lancashire, Cheshire and the western counties, or if we fould goe into Yorkfhire, and fo put ourfelvs in the ftraight roade to London, with a refolution to fight all wold oppofe us. Calander was indifferent; Middletone was for Yorkfhire; Baillie for Lancashire. When my opinion was askd, I was for Yorkshire, and for this reafon onlie, that I underftood Lancashire was a close countrey, full of ditches and hedges, which was a great advantage the English would have over our raw and undifciplind mufketeers; the Parliaments armie confifting of experienced and well traind fojors, and excellent firemen; on the other hand, Yorkshire being a more open countrey, and full of heaths, where we both might make use of our horfe, and come fooner to pufh of pike. My Lord Duke was for Lancafhire way, and it feemd he had hopes that fome forces would joyne with him in his march that way. I have indeed heard him fay, that he thought Manchester his oune, if he came neere it. Whatever the matter was, I never faw him tenacieous in any thing during the time of his command bot in that. We choold to goe that way, which led us to our ruine. Our march was much retarded by most rainie and tempeftuous weather, wherof I fpoke before, the elements fighting against us; and by flaying for countrey horses to carry our little amunition. The vanguard is conftantlie given to Sir Marmaduke, upon condition he fould conftantlie furnish guides, pioneers for clearing the ways, and which was more than both thefe, to have good and certaine intelligence of all the enemies motions. Bot whither it was by our falt or his neglect, want of intelligence helpd to ruine us; for Sir Marmaduke was well neere totallie routed, before we knew that it was Cromwell that attackd us: Quos vult perdere, hos dementat Jupiter.

1648.

Befide Prefton in Lancashire, Cromwell falls on Sir Marmadukes flanke. The English imagine it was one Colonell Ashton, a powerfull prefbiterian, who had got together about 3000 men to oppofe us, becaufe we came out of Scotland without the Generall Affemblies permiffion. Marke the guarrell. While Sir Marmaduke difputs the matter, Baillie, by the Dukes order, marcheth to Ribble Bridge, and paffeth it with all the foot, except tuo brigads. This was tuo miles from By my Lord Dukes command, I had fent fome amunition Prefton. and commanded men to Sir Marmaduks affiftance; bot to no purpofe; for Cromwell prevaild, fo that our English first retird and then fled. It must be rememberd that the night before this fad rencounter, E. Calander and Middleton were gone to Wigham, eight miles from thence, with a confiderable part of the cavalrie. Calander was comd backe, and was with the Duke, and fo was I; bot upon the rout of Sir Marmaducks people, Calander got away to Ribble, where he arrivd fafelie by a miracle, as I thinke; for the enemie was betueene the bridge and us, and had killd or taken the most part of our tuo brigads of foot. The Duke with his guard of horfe, Sir Marmaduke with many officers, among others myfelfe, got into Prefton toune, with intention to paffe a foorde below it, thogh at that time not rideable. At the entrie of the toune, the enemie purfued us hard. The Duke facd about, and put tuo troops of them to a retreate; bot fo foone as we turnd from them, they turnd upon us. The Duke facing the fecond time, charged them, which fucceeded well. Being purfued the third time, my Lord Duke cryd to charge once more for King Charles. One trooper refufeing, he beate him with his fuord. At that charge we put the enemie fo farre behind us, that he could not overtake us fo foone. Then Sir Marmaduke and I entreated the Duke to haft him to his armie; and truelie he fhew heere as much perfonall valour as any man could be capable of. We fuind the river, and fo got to the place where Lieutenant Generall Baillie had advantageouflie lodgd the foot on the top of a hill, among very fencible inclofures.

After Calander came to the infantrie, he very unadvifedlie fent fixe hundreth musketeers to defend Ribble bridge; for the way Cromwell had to it was a defcent from a hill that commanded all the champaigne, which was about ane English quarter of mile in length betueene the bridge and that hill where our foot were lodged; fo that our musketeers haveing no shelter, were forced to reflave all the musketades of Cromwells infantrie, which was fecure within thicke hedges ; and after the lofs of many men, were forced to runne backe to our foot. Here Claud Hammilton, the Dukes Lieutenant Colonell, had his arme broke with a mufket bullet. The bridge being loft, the Duke calld all the Colonells together on horfebacke, to advife what was nixt to be done. We had no choyce bot one of tuo, either ftay and maintaine our ground till Middletone (who was fent for), came backe with his cavalrie; or els march away that night, and find him out. Calander wold needs fpeake first; wheras by the custome of warre, he fould have told his opinion laft, and it was to march away that night fo foone as it was darke. This was feconded by all the reft, except by Lieutenant Generall Baillie and myfelfe. Bot all the arguments we used, as the impoffibilitie of a safe retreat from ane enemie fo powerfull of horfe, in fo very foule weather, and extremelie deepe way, our fojors exceeding wet, wearie, and hungrie, the inevitable loffe of all our amunition, could not move my Lord Duke by his authoritie to contradict the fhamefull refolution taken by the major part of his officers. After that the drumles march is refolvd on, and bot few horfe appointed to ftay in the reare of the foot, I inquird what fould become of our unfortunate amunition, fince forward with us we could not get it. It was not thought fitt to blow it up that night, leaft thereby the enemie fould know of our retreate or rather flight. I was of that opinion too, bot for ane other reafon; for we could not have bloune it then, without a vifible mifchiefe to ourfelves, being fo neare it. It was ordaind it fould be done three hours after our departure, by a traine; bot that being neglected, Cromwell got it all. Nixt morning we appeard at Wiggam Moore, half our number leffe than we were ; most of the faint and wearie fojors haveing lagd behind, whom we never faw againe. Lieutenant Generall Middletone had mifd us, for he came by ane other way to Ribble bridge. It was to be wifhd he had ftill ftayd with us. He, not finding us there, followd our tracke, bot hotlie purfued by Cromwells horfe, with whom he fkirmishd the whole way, till he came within a mile of us. He loft fome men, and feverall were hurt; among others Colonell Urrey got a dangerous fhot on the left fide of his heade, wherof, though he was afterward taken prifoner, he recoverd. In this retreate of Middletons, which he managed well, Cromwell lofd one of the gallanteft officers he had, Colonell Thornton, who was runne in the breafte with a lance, wherof he dyed. After Lieutenant Generall Middletons comeing, we beganne to think of fighting in that moore; bot that was found impoffible, in regard it was nothing large, and environd with enclofurs which commanded it; and thefe we could not maintaine long, for want of that amunition we had left behind us; and therfore we marchd forward with intention to gaine Warinton, ten miles from the moore we were in; and there we conceavd we might face about, haveing the command of a toune, a river, and a bridge. Yet I conceave there was bot few of us thought we might be beaten, before we were mafters of any of them. It was towards evening, and in the latter end of August, when our horse beganne to march. Some regiments of them were left with the reare of the foot; Middleton flayd with them; my Lord Duke and Calander were before. As I marchd with the laft brigad of foot through the toune of Wiggam, I was alarmd that our horfe behind me were beaten, and runne feverall ways, and that the enemie was in my reare. I facd about with that brigad, and in the market place ferrd the pikes together, fhoulder to fhoulder, to keepe up any fould charge, and fent orders to the reft of the brigads before to continue their march, and follow Lieutenant Generall Baillie, who was before them. It was then night, bot the moone fhone bright. A regiment of horfe of our oune appeared first, riding very diforderlie. I got them to ftop, till I commanded my pikes to open, and give way for them to ride or runne away, fince they wold not ftay. Bot my pikemen being demented, (as I thinke we were all,) wold not heare me, and tuo of them runne full tilt at me. ' One of their pikes, which was intended for my bellie, I gripd with my left hand; the other run me neere tuo inches in the innerfide of my right thigh; all of them crying, that all of us were Cromwells men. This was an unfeafonable wound, for it made me after that night unfervicable.

64

1648.

I

This made me forget all rules of modeftie, prudence and difcretion. I rode to our horfe, and defird them to charge through thefe foot. They, fearing the hazard of the pikes, flood. I then made a cry come from behind them, that the enemie was upon them. This encouragd them to charge my foot fo fiercelie, that the pikemen threw doune their pikes and got into houfes. All the horfe gallopd away; and, as I was told afterwards, rode not thorough, bot over our whole foot, treading them doune; and in this confusion Colonell Lockheart was trode doune from his horfe, with great danger of his life. Thogh the enemie was neere, yet I beate drums to gather my men together. Shortlie after came Middletone, with fome horfe. I told him what a difafter I had met with, and what a greater I expected. He told me, he wold ride before and make the horfe halt. I marchd, however, all that night, till it was faire day; and then Baillie, who had refted a litle, intreated me to goe into fome house and repose on a chaire; for I had fleepd none in tuo nights, and eate as litle. I alighted, bot the conftant alarums of the enemies approch made me refolve to ride forward to Warinton, which was bot a mile; and indeed I may fay I fleepd all that way, notwith thanding my wound. I thought to have found either the Duke or Calander, or both heere, bot I did not; and indeed I was often told that Calander carried away the Duke with him, much against his mind. Heere did the Lieutenant Generall of the foot meet with ane order, wherby he is required to make as good conditions for himfelfe and those under him as he could; for the horfe wold not come backe to him, being refolvd to preferve themfelvs for a better time. Baillie was furprifd with this, and lookeing upon that action which he was orderd to doe as full of difhonor, he lofd much of that patience of which naturallie he was mafter; and befeechd any that wold to fhoot him thorough the head. At length, haveing fomthing composed himfelfe, and much follicited by the officers who were by him, he wrote to Cromwell. I then told him, that fo long as ther was a refolution to fight, I wold not goe a foot from him; bot now that they were to deliver themfelvs prifoners, I wold preferve my libertie as long as I could, and fo tooke my leave of him, carrying my wounded thigh away with me. I met immediatlie with Middletone, who fadlie condold the irrecoverable loss of the tuo last days. Within tuo hours after, Baillie and all the officers and fojors that were left of the foot, were Cromwells prifoners. I got my wound dreffd that morning by my oune furgeon, and tooke from him these things I thought necessfare for me, not knowing when I might fee him againe; as indeed I never faw him after.

9月

That unhappie day we met with Cromwell at Prefton, fome regiments of horfe, and our Irifh auxiliaries under the command of Sir George Monro (who were fifteene hundreth good foot and three hundreth horfe, and were appointed, againft all reafon of warre, to be conftantlie a days march behind us) all of them, I fay, finding the enemie had got betweene us and them, marchd ftraight backe to Scotland, and joynd with E. Lainricks forces. Bot fo foone as the news of our defeate came to Scotland, Argile and the Kirks partie rofe in armes everie mothers fonne; and this was calld the Whiggamer rode. Da. Leflie was on their heade, and old Leven in the Caftle of Edinburgh, cannonading the royall troopes when they came in view of him. Yet might they have been all verie foone conjurd to be quiet, if the royalifts had not fuffered themfelves to be cheated by a treatie, by which they were obligd to lay down armes, and quite their power in civill and militarie affaires. Bot the principall men of them, particularlie the Earles Lauderdaile and Lainrick, Sir George Monro, Dalyell and Drummond, and others, found it not faife to truft the Saincts too much. and therfor crofd the feas, to take fanctuarie in Holland. Cromwell at Warinton fends Lambert with a fufficient cavalrie after us, and follows Monro with the ftrength of his armie to the Border, and there is invited by the Prefbiterians to enter Scotland. He gets Berwick and Carlile bafelie yeelded to him; and in one of them a number of English gentlemen who had ferve the King; ane infamous act! He is feafted by old Leven, (peeres of one tree) in the Caftle of Edenburgh; which within tuo yeares after he made his oune. Thefe men, who courted him, were fo faithfull to the Covenant, that if fame wrong not fome of them, they agreed with him in my Lady Homes houfe in the Canongate, that there was a neceffitie to take away the Kings life. Now, for the good intertainment the Prefbiterians had given this Arch Independent, at his returne to England, he left Lambert, (who had difpatched us before) with foure regiments of horfe, to defend them against the Malignants (for fo were honnest men called), till forces of their oune were raifed, which was foone done. And then Acts of State and Kirke are made, to incapacitate all who had beene in England with the Duke, all who had abetted that engadgment, or had confented to it, from any office, charge or employment in State, Church, or Militia; and numbers of honneft Ministers, upon that fame account, turned out of their benefices and livelihoods.

To returne to the Duke in England. At night, after I left Warinton, when I came to him, all the refolution I found taken was, to march forward a day or tuo, and then by a turne to endeavour to get into Scotland; for there was then no vifible partie for the King in England to joyne with; Cromwell haveing, before he came to us, routed and broken all thefe who rofe in Wales, and hangd many of the principal gentlemen of them. And Fairfaxe had broke all thefe who rofe for the King in other counties, first under the Earle of Holland, and then under the Earle of Norwich, chaceing him and the remainder of them into Colchester, which, after a fiege, was furrendered to him on difcretion, as I thinke. Heere Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Lile were cruellie dealt with, having bot tuo houres given them to prepare for death; and after that fhort time, by the inftigation of wicked Ireton, Cromwells fonne in law, mercileflie fhot dead.

The first day, then, of the Dukes march from that place where I found him, was to Whitechurch, (in what countie I do not remember.) There a great number of the countrey traind bands appeard againft us, bot were quicklie put to flight by Middleton, without blood fhed. That day we marchd many miles, and at night most or all the horfe lodgd in the field, where their horfes fed well. Some officers went to houses; bot I lodgd at a hedge, and fleepd there so found, that at break of day the trumpets could not waken me; that being the fourth night in which I had fleepd none, except on horfebacke. Nixt day we made a long halt at a countrey toune, I thinke in Staffordfhire, called Stone. Heere, becaufe we had not enemies enough to take our lives, a trooper killd his oune Ritmaster, one Patrick Grey, who had beene a captaine under me in my Lord Sinclars regiment. The trooper was in the place flot dead, by my Lord Dukes command; who, to fpeake truelie, was too fpareing in taking lives, his clemencie occafioning the keeping very bad difcipline the whole time of our march in England.

A litle after we had remove from that place, Lieutenant General Middletone making good the reare against fome of the countrey militia troopes, was taken; his horfe having fallen under him. He was carried to Stafford; and indeed, after that, we might trulie have faid we were all prifoners; for I am fure enough, if he, or rather we, had efcapd that miffortune, fuch unhappie accidents had beene prevented by him, which fhortlie ruind us. And I know not bot he keeping us united, might not at a long runne have brought himfelfe and moft of us to Scotland. We came at night to Uxeter, in most tempestuous, windie, and rainie weather. Nixt morning, when we were on our march, a great unwillingness in the horsemen, and some of their officers to march further; the wearines of both man and horfe, ane irrefolution whether to goe, and most of all, a fatalitie which purfud us, made the Duke turne backe, and take up his quarters in the fame toune. Neither that day nor nixt night was any thing refolvd on, bot to reft and refresh man and horse, and then either treate with these forces that had furrounded us, or fight them and march away. Sir Marmaduk Langdale, and thefe few English who were with him, had left us at Uxeter. He was taken afterward, bot favd his life by efcapeing out of prifon. The Duke and Calander fell out, and were at very hie words at fupper, where I was; each blameing the other for the milfortune and milcarriage of our affaires; in which conteft I thought the Duke had the better of it. And heere, indeed, I will say, that my Lord Dukes great fault was in giveing E. Calander too much of his pouer all along; for I have often heard him bid him doe what he pleafed, promifeing to be therwith well contented. And therfor Calander was doublie to be blamd, first for his bad conduct, (for that was inexcufable,) and nixt for reproching the Duke with that whereof himfelfe was guiltie. To fill up the measure of our milfortunes, our troopers mutine against the Duke, Calander, and all their officers. Whether this proceeded of their oune wickednes, or by the inftigation of fome of their oune commanders, (which I then fhrewdlie fufpected,) is uncertaine. The Duke and Calander are keepd prifoners, with ftrong guards of the mutineers, all nixt night in the Dukes lodgeing, with many other officers, and among others myfelfe. Nixt morning, fo foone as I could fee, I cald over the window of the Dukes bedchamber to them, and afkd them, if they were not yet ashamd of the base usage they had given their Generall, and of that contempt they had flown of all difcipline, and of the ignominie of this action; and requird them, if for no other reafon, yet for their oune fafetie from the common enemie, to returne to their duetie, and goe home to their lodgings. Immediatlie they removd their guards, and went to their feverall quarters, curfing in generall words thefe who had prompted them to the mutinie; which augmented my former fufpition, but it was no time to make a ftrict inquirie in the bufienefs. Shortlie after, Calander went away with as many as would follow him; which indeed were more than the halfe of thefe were in toune. No intreatie of the Duke or mediation of the officers could prevaile with him. I dealt particularlie with him, bot in vaine. He ufd many arguments to move me to goe along with him, bot I told him, if I keepd my life, I wold be one of the laft men fould ftay with the Generall. I heard that not long after he was deferted by all that went with him, as he had deferted my Lord Duke. Yet he had the good fortune (which I believe no other officer of our armie had,) to get fafe to London in a difguife, and from thence to Holland,

I muft remember heere, that the day after we returnd to Uxeter, there came fome gentlemen of Staffordshire with a trumpet from the governour of the toune to my Lord Duke, who fhew his Grace, that in the time Middletone had fervd the Parliament in the qualitie of Major Generall, he had done many good offices to both the town and the fhire; and therefor to witnes their thankfulnes, they were comd to intreate his Grace to permit them to carry Middletons fervants, horfes and baggage to him at Stafford. This was readilie granted by the Duke, with his heartie thankes to the gentlemen for their fo feafonable kindnes. Standing by the Duke when this paffed, I bethought myfelfe of fending fome moneys in Middletons coffers. There was a hundreth and fiftie pounds fterline of it, which one of our commiffaries had intreated me to caufe fome of my fervants carry, becaufe in our tumultuarie march after Prefton, he knew not what to doe with it. Lieutenant Generall Middletone haveing taken 500 lb. fterline from fome other commiffaries, upon that fame account, I dealt with Middletones fecretarie and his valet de chambre, to take my money with them ; bot they both rudlie and obstinatlie refused it, till I conjurd the uncivill humour out of them, with the pouerfull charme of tuentie pound fterline, and then they found roome for the reft of the money. Some of this I gave afterwards to our fojors, who were prifoners at Stafford, and much I lent to indigent officers, and tooke notes from them for it, which I got occasion to fend to my wife in Scotland, who got thankfull payment afterward of much of it.

Calander being gone, there was ane abfolute neceffitie imposed on the Duke to capitulate with the Governor of Stafford, who had about 3000 of the countrey militia with him, with which we were furround-

K

1648.

ed. Sir James Foullis of Colinton, Colonell Lockheart and myfelfe are namd and commiffionated by my Lord Duke to treate. We met with the governour and fome of the principall gentlemen, three miles from Uxeter, at a very pleafant houfe in Staffordshire, where, as they had told us, Mary Queene of Scots had beene long keepd prifoner. This with fuperfitious people wold have lookd ominous for us, who were of that nation. In our treatie, we found them very civill and rationall, and fo much friends to monarchie, that we had reafon to expect no bad conditions from them. Bot Fortune had not yet made peace with us. We are interrupted by a meffenger fent by Lambert, to acquaint both them and us that he was comd within tuo miles of that place, and that, if we wold treate, it must be with him. These were no good news, yet we prefentlie horfd and went to him. We found him very difcreet, and his expreffions civill enough. He appointed three principall officers to treate with us, wherof Lieutenant Generall Lilburn was one. After much difcourfe, they offerd to us, if we wold redeliver Berwick and Carlile to the English Parliament, we fould be permitted to goe; nay, we fould be convoyd backe to Scotlande. We told them we had no pouer in our commission to speake of these tounes; and fo other articles were agreed on by us, bot not fignd till I fould goe first to the Duke and show him, if he wold furrender these tuo touns, he and all with him fould have their libertie; if not, we were by the articles all prifoners. He abfolutlie refufd to engadge for the deliverie of thefe places, as a thing he faid was not in his pouer; juftlie fufpecting the Deputie Governors of the touns wold not obey his orders in the condition he was; and fo with many forrowfull expressions difmissd me. Upon the way as I returned, I met Liambert, with fome troops, who told me he was goeing to fave my Lord Duke from my Lord Grey of Groobie, who was marching towards Uxeter on the other fide of the toune, which I knew before I came from the Duke to be true. He defird me by all meanes to haft the figning the articles, which he promifd to ratifie. At my returne, I told my comerads what reafon we had to make hafte; and haveing reported the Dukes answer to the Englifh officers, we all immediatlie fignd the articles, which, indeed, if they had been malitious, they might have wavd; for whill we were about it, one Major Gib, ane officer of our oune, came very unmanerlie into the roome, belching out his folly in thefe words : "Gentlemen, what doe ye dooe? The Duke and all who are with him are my Lord Greys prifoners." Yet the commiffioners figned for all that; and indeed my Lord Duke was by that time prifoner, bot Lambert tooke the protection of him; for our agreement was ratified by him, and by the Duke too, for he was not to be efteemed a prifoner, becaufe taken in the time of a ceffation and treatie, against custome of warre. Our first article was for the Duke, that he fould onlie be a prifoner of warre, nor fould his life ever be queftiond or in danger. He fould keepe his George; fixe of his fervants, fuch as he fould choofe, fould be permitted to attend him, and fixe of his beft horfes likewife; that in his prifon acceffe of all perfons to him fould be allowd ;---conditions good enough, but very ill keepd. The fumme of the reft of the articles was this: That all of us, both officers and fojors, fould be prifoners of warre, bot civillie ufed, till we could procure our libertie by exchange or ranfome; that all of us fould keepe the cloths we had on us, and all the gold and money we had about us, all other baggage, armes, and horfes, fould be bootie and prife to the victor. We three who had capitulated, were orderd to be carried to Stafford, where Middletone was. The captain who conducted us thither got our horfes and armes. As we rode thorough Uxeter, we made a ftand at the window of the Dukes chamber; and he looking out, we tooke our eternall farewell of him, with fad hearts parting from him we were never to fee againe. He fpoke kindlie to us, and fo we left him to act the laft and worft part of his tragedie.

1648.

1648.

At Stafford, where were very many prifoners, we ftayd, I thinke, feven or eight days; and then came a Ritmafter (who had beene a glover, and ftill keepd both the mine and manners of a mechanick,) with fortie horfe, and ane order from Lambert to cary my Lord Cranfton, Lieutenant Generall Middletone, Colonel Lockhert and myfelfe, to Kingfton upon Hull. One Major Crafurd, with much importunitie, got leave to goe along with his coufine Lockhert. We tooke our leave of our fellow prifoners, and of the governour, who had beene very civill to us; and fo had all his officers, and the touns people likewife. This Ritmafter was a fellow of low qualitie, weake intellectualls, a violent Independent, a mortall enemie to the King, his familie and all monarchie; a perfecutor of Prefbitrie. For the reft of his endouments, we found him not ill natured ; neither will I wrong him much if I beftow upon him the title of a foole. He furnishd horses for ourfelvs and fervants. My Lord Cranftoun had tuo fervants allowd him; fo had the Lieutenant Generall, Collonell Lockheart and I, each of us one. The Ritmafter and his litle troope was but ill mounted, and therfor gave us eafe enough on our journey ; neither was it unpleafant, except when the fad remembrance of our oune condition, and that of all honneft men, mixd too much water with our wine. On: the fifteenth of September, if I remember right, we arrive at Hull. Our Ritmafter left us at Yorke, to whom, becaufe he was not very uncivill, we gave tuentie five pounds fterline in gold, wherof my fhare was five. And heere I muft make a litle ftop, (for indeed I did fo, ftaying there long enough.) and looke backe a litle.

1648.

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

It is a true faying, "Man propons, and God difpons;" neither is it in the pouer, or within the reach of the wit of weake man, to project a bufienefs with fo much caution, or profecute it with foe much induftrie, prudence or courage, bot it may be blafted from Heaven, and renderd unfucceffull by thefe contingencies which can neither be forfeene nor prevented. The truth of this we found in this unhappie expedition. What was intended for the Kings reliefe and reftoration, pofted him to his grave. His fad imprifonment calld for affiftance from all his loyall fubjects, which as a duetie the laws both of God and man feemd to impose on them. Our hopes of fuccess were great, grounded on the equitie of our just undertakeing, the prevailing of the royall partie in Ireland, the returne of most of the navie to their duetie and obedience, under the then Prince of Wales, now King; the numerous and loyall rifeings of many fhires in England and Wales; against that usurped pouer which keepd his Majestie in restraint, and upon our oune ftrength; for our armie was intended to have beene tuentie thousand foot, and fixe thousand horse and dragoons. Bot we never amounted to fourteene thousand in all. These were honnest and faire motives for that loyall and well intended engadgment of ours; bot.

Ludit in humanis divina potentia rebus.

The heavens brings things unto ane other end, Then that, for which blind man did them intend.

1648.

The Allmightie in his infortable will had orderd matters otherwife, and refufd a bleffing to that unhappie armie; for the ruine and deftruction wherof did contribute, as fecond caufes, the mifchieveous retardment and obstruction Argile and his kirke fo vigorouflie made, which hinderd us to come time enough to joyne with the foutherne counties; Langdales unadvifed and too fudden levies, and his unfeafonable march to Lancashire, which obliged Lambert to come against him, and chace him to Carlile; which imposd a neceffitie on the Duke to march to his releefe, before he was halfe readie; the weaknes, rawnes, and undifciplindnes of our fojors, our want of artillerie and horfes to cary the litle amunition we had, the conftant rainie, ftormie and tempeftuous weather which attended us, which made all hie ways impaffible for man and beaft, our want of intelligence, our leaveing our Irifh auxiliaries fo farre behind us, and our unfortunate refolution to wave Yorkfhire, and march by Lancashire; all which, being hinted at by me before, made us a prey to Cromwells veterane armie. Hence followd the alteration of the government in all the three kingdomes; the Kings execrable murther, who was brought from Carifbroke Caftle to Weftminfter, is arraignd, impeachd, condemnd, and hath his heade ftrucke off in the fight of the fun at noontide of the day, at the gate of his oune palace of Whitehall; and the death and totall ruine of most of the royall partie.

Bot to returne to Hull. Colonell Robert Overton was governor there; a great Independent, who hath fince had his fhare of imprifonment, both under the Ufurper Oliver, and under his prefent Majeftie; fo it wold feeme he hath beene ane enemie to monarchie, whatever name it had, whether King or Protector. Civill and difcreet he was, had been at ane Inns of Court, was a schollar, bot a litle pedantick. He made us wellcome, and lodgd us tuo months in tuo feverall inns, where we were well enough ufed for our money, and well enough guarded withall. Before the end of that time, my Lord Cranfton, by the mediation of his father in law Generall Leven, was first carried away from us to Neucastle, and therafter set at libertie. At the end of thefe tuo months, Middletone and Lockheart, by the interceffione of their friends, likewife were carried to Neucastle; bot Major Crafurd was not permitted to goe with his coufine Lockheart. After that, Middletone got libertie to goe to and ftay at Berwick, till his ladie was brought to bed there; when that was done, he made his efcape to Scotland, which wold have coft him deare three years after, if he had not playd the fame game, and efcapd out of the Toure of London. Lockheart might have been releafd for fome money; bot whether it was to fpare that, or to enjoy the too acceptable focietie of Paul Hobfone, he knows beft. After they were gone, I am put in the Provoft Marshalls hands, and Major Crafurd to beare me companie. I had, notwithftanding that I was in the common prifon, which formerlie had beene the Houfe of Correction, ane indifferent good chamber, and a good bed for myfelfe, and ane other for my fervant. I was very ftrictlie guarded, and no leffe than five centries keepd conftantlie about me. I learnd the alteration of my usage afterward, and the causes of it.

1648.

After Cromwell had left Lambert in Scotland, he marchd to Pomfret Caftle; which Lieutenant Colonell Morris had furprifed, and keepd then for the King, for which they hangd him afterward at Yorke. Whill I was prifoner at Hull, Cromwell befiegeth it, and fends for Overton to command in that fervice nixt to himfelfe. In the meane time, Argile and the Kirk being able to ftand on their oune legs, difmiffd Lambert with many thankes. He had beene very well entertaind in Scotland, which made him fo defireous to returne to it tuo yeares after. So foone as he came to Pomfret, Cromwell thought he fpent his time not well in takeing a caftle from the King, when he intended to take the heade from the King; left Lambert to reduce Pomfret, fends Overton back to Hull, and marchd directlie to London with the reft of his forces, to murther the beft of Kings.

• At the governors returne to Hull, he required me to plight my faith to him, by a revers under my hand, to be a faithfull prifoner, and not goe without the walls of Hull without his libertie. He brought me this meffage himfelfe. I told him I was readie to doe it, provided he removd his guards from me; which he refufeing to doe, I flew him that if he tooke my parole or faith, he was obliged to truft me; for, fides et fiducia funt relativa; and if he tooke my word for my fidelitie, he was obliged to truft it, otherwife it was needles for him to feeke it, and in vaine for me to give it; and therefore I befeechd him, either to give truft to my word, which I fould not breake, or to his oune guards, who, I fuppofd, wold not deceive him. In this manner I dealt with him, becaufe I knew he was a fchollar. He acknouledgd all I faid to be true, bot withall he told me, I must either doe all he defired of me, or doe worfe. I prayd him to tell me what was that? He faid he had order from his Lieutenant Generall, meaning Cromwell, to keep me in irons; bot he thought the feverenes of that command proceeded from the care he had I fould not escape. The Governor himselfe conceaved, if he keepd me fo well that he might prefent me to the Lieutenant Generall when I was calld for, he had made choyce of a way for it more tolerable for me. He promifd to befriend me as much as he could, without his oune prejudice, and fo indeed he did; bot affurd me any rough ufage I reffavd or might reffave, came out of Scotland. I then gave him what he demanded, with many thanks for not putting his order in execution. I could not then bot reflect upon the kind recommendation that Argile, or fome of that partie, had given to Cromwell of me; and I make no doubt but if greater matters had not chacd the remembrance of me out of Cromwells mind, and fome mifunderftandings that arofe betweene him and his friends in Scotland, that they could not convenientlie put him in mind of me, fome greater mifchiefe then imprifonment had befallen me. Most of all these prisoners of warre that were in the common goale with me, were fhortlie after releafd one way or other, and fo was Major Craford alfo; bot in all their roomes came Colonell Boynton, who had perfuaded his brother (thogh a great Independent) to declare himfelf and the Caftle of Scarborough, wherof he was Governour, for the King. A fine young gentleman this was, had ftudied in one of the univerfities, was travelld, and well feene in hiftorie and in the prefent state of Christendome. He and I were conftantlie guarded with tuentie mufketeers. The Marshall who had the principall government of us, was one Watfone, who had beene ane Alderman and wooll merchant in Dubline, and had broke for 25,000 lb. sterline; he was afterward Marshall Generall in Scotland. He was civill enough to us, and after the Kings reftoration, I chance to doe him fome favours at Edinburgh. He had a depute under him, one Lindale, one of these we call good honest men, or if you please, a fillie fimple fellow. Under him there was a third, called Standfield; he was fince a regiment marfhall at Aire, and lives now at Newbotle in Scotland. He was our turnkey, and lockd us in our feverall chambers everie night. We dieted with him for eightene pence a meale for each of ourfelves, and eight pence for each of our fervants. I payd for neere a twelvemonth a fhilling fterline every night for my oune bed, and a groat for my mans; a fhilling everie day for coales, and a groat for candles, fummer and winter. I had much comfort in Boyntons companie fo long as he ftayd, which was full fix months; and then he got his libertie on bond.

81

In the month of December, 1648, my wife came out of Scotland to me. I was extreamlie glad to fee her, thogh very fory the fould have made fo long a journey in fo bad a time of the yeare. She had obtained in Scotland ane order from Lambert to Overton, to fend me to Neucaftle ; bot he excufd himfelfe, in regard he had a later order from him who commanded over Lambert. Yet my wife, much againft my will, wold needs goe to Lambert at Pomfret, where he reffavd her civillie, bot faid it was not in his power to contradict his Lieutenant Generalls order. She returnd, after getting bad entertainment and lodgeing at Pomfret, and after a pitifull journey of threefcore miles, in deepe and allmost unrideable way, and in most stormie and rainie weather. She ftayd about a month with me, much to my comfort; and fore against her will returned to Scotland, whether I would have her goe to looke to our particular affaires. It is to be fuppofed we parted forroufullie, and fo indeed we did; yet not without hopes to see one aneother joyfullie againe, as it pleafed God we did a twelve month after.

Haveing accuftomd myfelfe all my life over to be fometimes folitarie and retird, wherin I ever tooke much delight, I did not take my reftraint fo greevouflie as thefe would doe, who either will not or cannot live without companie. And haveing the use of bookes, paper, pen and ink, I deceave the longnes of the time with readeing and writeing. Withall, the Governour permitted me not onlie to goe to church. bot to walke fometimes on the toune walls, with one of my marshalls and tuo mufketeers with me; fome honneft royalifts of the toune were permitted alfo to give me vifites. Yet for all these comforts I came to the knowledge of fome things (for I had the reading of all the Gazets and Diurnalls) which made my reftraint more bitter and heavie to me than otherwife it wold have beene; for not to fpeake of the cruell ufage I had in Scotland, men looking where any money of mine was to be got, and immediatlie feizd on, the difertion I met with of all my friends, yea my neereft relations, for these concernd onlie myfelfe; firft, I heard how mercilefslie the prefent Committee of Eftates, who had usurped the government, had used men of all ranks and qualities, who had given bot the leaft occafion to fufpect their honeftie and loyaltie; fecondlie, the banifhment of the peers of England out of the Upper Houfe, and the extrusion, or as they calld it, the exclusion of the honneft members of the Houfe of Commons, by Collonell Pride, at Cromwells command ; which portended, thirdlie, the Kings execrable murther the 30th of Januare, 1649; fourthlie, the taking Duke Hammiltons heade of on a fcaffold at Weftminster in March after. They beheaded him as Earle of Cambridge, and fo a Peere of England, without haveing any regard at all to the articles he had for life; bot in this I fuppofe Cromwell did nothing without advice from Scotland. Heere I can not bot bewaile the fate of that miffortunate Lord, who was a perfon of excellent qualities, of a great understanding, and good expreffions, curteous, affable, humane; fo mercifull that he was bot a bad

1649.

Juftitiare, which I thought was a blemish in him; one of the best mafters to vaffalls and tennants that our kingdome afforded. His conftellation had inclind and appointed him to be a good ftatefman, and to be happie in the enjoyment of his Prince his favour, the fummum bonum of courtiers, bot to be unfortunate in all his militarie employments both by fea and land. Most unhappie he was in his honour, which was branded most part of his life with foule asperfions of difloyaltie and treacherie; neither will venemous tongues fuffer his afhes to ly quiet, bot caft duft upon them as if he had dyd as a foole. I had onlie the honor to know him when he was my generall, and I believe he was faithfull to his foveraigne all his life; bot in the time he had the conduct of that unfortunate armie, I dare fueare the deepeft oath for his fidelitie and loyaltie, and that he intended nothing bot the full reftoration of the King, for whom he dyed a martyr. Immediatlie after him were beheaded on that fame fcaffold, E. Holland and the brave Lord Capell. Fifthlie, as I was glad to heare of Lieutenant Generall Middletons escape out of Berwick, and that he was upon the heade of a royall partie in the north of Scotland; fo it was grievous to me to heare that, in his abfence from that partie, most of it was routed and beaten by Ker and Strachan, and himfelfe forcd to be contented with ane affurance that he might live at home in peace ; fo litle did that rifeing contribute to the prefent Kings fervice. Sixthlie, I could not bot be exceedinglie greevd to heare all the canons about the walls of Hull fhot, and fee bonefires made in the ftreets, for joy of that victorie. Colonell Michael Jones had got, by a defperat fally out of Dubline, of the Marques of Ormond and all his numerous armie, even when he was abfolutelie mafter of all Ireland except Dubline, Dundalk, and Londondarrie; and at that time too when Cromwell was readie with ane armie at Milford haven to croffe over to Ireland, to purfue that victorie, and reduce that kingdome to the Parliaments obedience, as he did. Seventhlie, I was forry to heare, that any thing might have been done for the King in Scotland, was totallie obftructed by the irreconcileable animofities betueene Duke William Hamilton and the Marqueffe of Montroffe at the Haag, where they were both with the King ; as alfo that his Majeftie, in fteade of goeing to Ireland, which might have been preferved, was perfuaded to goe fee his mother in France ; from whence he went to Jerfey, where he winterd in the yeare 1649, till ane addreffe from the governing partie in Scotland brought him out of it to Breda, there to treate with his Scots Commiffioners. I confeffe that all thefe fad intelligences comeing on the necke of other, did much afflict my fpirit, yet not fo much bot that I ftill hopd to live and fee ane alteration ; for after a great ftorme, of neceffitie a calme muft follow.

Overton had promifd, that fo foone as Cromwell went out of England, he wold propofe fome way for my libertie. So foone, then, as he was arrivd in Ireland, I put my Governor in mind of his promife. He advifeth me, in regard Watfone my marfhall was goeing to London about his oune affaires, I fould give him fome moneys, for which he wold oblige him to agent my bufienes according to his direction, which was this. A friend of his, one Colonell Nidam, was killd in the Parliaments fervice, and had left his wife very poore. She fould petition the Parliament to give her a prifoner, for whofe libertie fhe might get fome money. He faid there was no doubt bot the Parliament wold referre the petition to Generall Fairfaxe, and then he wold deale with Mr Clerke, (who was then Fairfaxes fecretarie under Rufhworth, fince knighted by the King, and killd at fea,) that I fould be the man, if I wold fatifie the widow. I humblie thankd him for this very kind proffer, and readilie accepted of it. The Governor writes to London with Watfone, who ftayd ten weekes, moftlie at my charges. The Governor had caft up a right account; for a letter is obtained to him from Fairfaxe to fet me at libertie, I giveing my paroll to goe beyond feas, and not to returne to any of the three kingdomes for a yeare, bot not one word of money. I am prefentlie taken out of my prifon houfe, my guards removed, and I accommoded in that inne where firft we were lodged when we came to Hull; the beft inne of the toune.

100

The nixt day I went to Overton, both to give him my reall thankes for this fuperlative favour, as alfo to know what he wold appoint me to give the widow and Mr Cleark; for thogh there was mention made of none of them in his Generalls order, yet I intended not to be ungrate, or omit to pay that duetie I owed to both. He askd me what I wold beftow on each of them? I told him, fiftie pounds on the widow, and ten on Mr Cleark. He replyd it was too much, and therfor he wold fave me fifteene pounds of that foume; for the widow fould have bot fortie, and Mr Cleark five. This I prefentlie payd; neither wold Overton fuffer me to prefent either himfelfe or his ladie with any token of my thankfulnes. This was the most curteous Independent I ever met with. My marshall and his deputes I satisfied fo well, that they did not complaine of me. Moneys were furnishd me not onlie for this, bot for all my charges the whole time of my imprifonment, by one Mafter Key, who that yeare was fhrive of the toune. They were repayd to him by David Wilkie, a merchant of Edinburgh, they tuo haveing beene well acquainted together in Spaine. Mr Key and fome other honneft Royalifts of the toune had given me feverall vifits, when I was in the Provoft Marshalls companie, bot there we might not fpeake bot before one of my keepers; bot when I came to lodge in the inne, they and I conversed freely together, to both our great fatiffactions.

I refolvd to be gone with the first ship went from Hull, whatever place of Chriftendome fhe was bound for, feareing I might be ftopd by fome new order. Sixe weeks after, a cloth fhip made faile for Hamburg with a convoy of threttie guns. In the convoy were fome merchants belonging to that ftaple, all men for the new Commonwealth. I wold not goe with them, but went in the cloth fhip, where one Mafter Robbiesone was master, ane honnest and well principld man. We went doune the Humber, at the mouth wherof we met with a very faire wind, which in foure dayes time put us in the mouth of the Elve; and as we went up that river, I found a gret change fince the time I was there before, about Geluctftad, a toune of the King of Denmarks; his block houfes there, whereby he had exacted toll of all fhips that paffd, being demolifhd, by vertue of ane article of the peace he had made with Sueden, after foure yeares unfortunate warre. That article was made by the inftigation of the citie of Hamburg, which had notablie affifted the Sueds against their lord and protector the King of Denmark. Tuo days after, we arrivd and landed at that rich and flourishing citie.

Among other favours I reffaved from Colonell Overton, Governour of Hull, this was not the leaft, that he permitted me the ufe of all the bookes the ftationers of that place could afford, for which I payd them money weeklie; and, which I valued more, he allowd me the ufe of pen, paper and inke; which were tuo very comfortable and profitable divertifements to me in that affliction. Heere it was where I wrote fome collections of the ftate of Europe, from the yeare 1618, that the dreadfull comet appeared, till the year 1638, that the Scots Covenant appeared in the world, which produced as fad and lamentable effects as that comet did. Heere I wrote alfo [fome] effays and difcourfes, and that with fo much confidence and freedome, as if I had beene at my full libertie, that I am fure if Overton had perufd them, he had found fo much fpoke to the difadvantage of his mafters of the new Commonwealth, that he wold have given a ftop to my releafment. Bot he fufferd me to cary all my papers with me untouchd and unfeene by himfelfe or any other. And fo I tooke my leave of him, and of Hull alfo, in the beginning of November 1649, after I had beene prifoner fourteene months or thereby.

1649.

.

MEMOIRS OF SIR JAMES TURNER;

PART SECOND,

WHEREIN ARE CONTAINED

THE REMARKABLE PASSAGES OF HIS LIFE FROM HIS RELEASMENT OUT OF PRISON AT HULL, IN OCTOBER 1649, TILL NOVEMBER 1663.

м

.

en de martine de seu a la characterie

WHEN I arrive at Hamburg out of Hull in November of the year 1649, I found a number of Scotch gentlemen who either had fervd the late King, or intended to ferve the prefent one, attending the orders and motions of the famous Marqueffe of Montrofe; who haveing trufted too much to Vlefeld the Great Steuart of Denmarks promifes of affiftance, found himfelfe difappointed by that faithles minister of eftate, who afterwarde went faire to betray both his prince and countrey. This obliged the Marques to retire himfelfe to Gottenburg in the Suedish dominions, where he was underhand fupported, bot very inconsiderablie, by the great Queene Christina. If I had beene provided then with moneys, without which I could put myfelfe in no equippage, I had runne the hazard of goeing to Scotland with the reft who accompanied the Marqueffe, fhortlie after, in that laft miffortunate and fatall expedition of his. Bot I could be mafter of no money till I came to Holland; and therfor by my letter offerd my fervice to my Lord Marques, which the Lord Napier was pleafd to fend under his couvert, and to which I had a very favorable returne, and invitation from the Marques to come to him, writ with his oune hand.

1650.

I went by land to Holland, accompanied with Colonell Sibbald, who carried letters from Montrofe both to Scotland and Ireland. From Roterdame I wrote with him to my wife at Edinburgh, to furnifh him with a confiderable peece of money, (for he was not well ftored,) which fhe did; and he had his heade chopd of not long after at the Croffe of Edinburgh; fo I lofd both my friend and my money. My wife, in a ftormie and tempeftuous winter, gave me a vifite in Holland; and haveing furnifhd me with what I moft ftood in need of, returnd with much trouble and danger to Scotland. I pafd the reft of the winter in vifiteing the beft places in Holland; and in March of the yeare 1650, went to Breda to attend the treatie betueene the King and his Scottifh fubjects; the iffue wherof was a gracieous condifcendence of his Majeftie to all or moft of their demands; and with them he went to Scotland, accompanied with feverall Lords, who after his arriveall were removd from him, and himfelfe fo ufed as I wifh pofteritie may never know.

I then put on a refolution to goe to Sueden, and under a notion to feeke fome arreares were due to me, to fee the glorie of the Suedifh Court, and the magnificence of Chriftinas coronation. I arrivd at Elfennure, where finding the wind turne contrare for fome days, I alterd my refolution; and haveing feene the King of Denmark and his Court at Coppenhagen, his ftatelie palace of Frederichfburg, and his ftrong caftle of Cronenburg, I returnd to Holland, after I had endurd a horrible tempeft at fea. I intended then to have gone to France, bot the late Earle of Southefke, then Lord Carnegie, perfuaded me to accompanie him to Scotland. We landed the very night before Cromwell beate the Scottifh armie at Dumbar. My Lord and I found, that the perfecution of thefe who had affented to, or acted in Duke Hammiltons engadgment, as it was calld, was as hote as ever; which obliged us that very night to depart the toune, and take up our lodgeing with a gentleman six miles from Aberdeene, where we had landed. My Lord and I parted at his fathers houfe of Kinnaird.

I went privatlie to Fife, where I had the comfort to meet with my deare wife, who haveing put her beft things in the Caftle of Edinburgh, and left the reft to their hazard, came and livd with me that winter at Difart.

About this time, the monftrous Remonftrance was hatchd; and if Lambert had not, by good fortune to us all, beaten Colonell Ker at Hammilton, I beleeve the King had beene just as fafe at St Jonston, as his father was at Weftminster. The desperate condition of affaires movd fome of the beft naturd of the Prefbiterian cleargie to thinke of fome meane, to bring as many hands to fight against the publike enemie as was poffible; and therfor, notwithftanding all their acts of Affemblies and Commissions of the Kirk to the contrare, they declared all capable of charge in State or Militia, who would fatifie the Church, by a publike acknowledgment of their repentance for their acceffion to that finfull and unlawfull Engadgment. The King commanded all who had a mind to ferve him, to follow the Churches direction in this point. Heerupon Duke Hamilton, the Earles of Craufurd and Lauderdaill, with many others, were admitted to Court, and numbers of officers reffaved and put in charge, and entrusted with new levies. My guilt in affronting the Ministrie, (as they calld it) in the perfon of Mr Dick at Glafgow, and my other command in the Weft, retarded my admiffion very long; bot at length I am abfolved, and made Adjutant Generall of the Foot; and after the miffortunate rencounter at Innerkeithen, had once more Lieutenant Generall Holburns regiment given me by his Majefties command.

Behold a fearfull finne! The Minifters of the Gofpell reffavd all our repentances as unfained, thogh they knew well enough they were bot counterfeit; and we on the other hand made no fcruple to declare that Engadgment to be unlaufull and finfull, deceitfullie fpeakeing againft the dictates of our oune confciences and judgments. If this was not to mocke the allknoweing and allfeeing God to his face, then I declare myfelfe not to know what a fearefull finne hypocrifie is.

The defeate of that part of the armie at Innerkeithen, Cromwells march with most of his forces to St Jonston, whereby he cut of all fuccourfe of men and meate from the North, obliged the King, with the advice of the Committee of Eftates, to lay prefent hold on occasion to leave the rebell behind him, and march with his whole armie from Stirline into England. The horfe and dragoons might be about foure thousand; and the foot, as I reckond them that day we marchd from Stirline parke, were upwards of nine thousand. A traine of artillerie of fome field peeces and leather canon we had, with futeable amunition, under the conduct of Sir James Wemis Generall of the Artillerie. We got quicklie to English ground, bot with a great deale of mischiefe to all thefe poore Scotch people by whofe dwellings we marchd, robbing and plundering being ufed by the fojors, even to admiration and inhumanitie. Neere to Carlile, the King is proclaimd King of England and Ireland, with the great acclamations of the armie; and fevere commands made against all other robberies, plunderings and exactions ; which being put in execution by hanging tuo or three, were well enough obferved, and very good order and difcipline keepd the whole march,

I will not amufe myfelfe to relate all the particulars, circumftances, or mifcarieages of this unfortunate expedition, my intention being to fpeake of what befell inyfelfe till this prefent years of God. In that armie I was Colonell of foot, and Adjutant Generall; and with no better fortune then I had when I exercd thefe charges in the yeare 1648.

95

Lambert and Harriefone being beaten from Warinton bridge, and all their Chefhire foot chacd away from them, the King declind to march ftraight to London, from which upon his approach it was thought the Parliament wold have removd to Windfor; and fo we went ftraight to Worcefter, where we lay till Cromwell came and facd us; and after three or foure days refpite, in which time he gatherd a great bodie of the countrey traind bands, to the number of five and tuentie thoufand at leaft, befides his veteran armie; and then he forcd us to fight on the third day of September, with a great deale of difadvantage both for ground and numbers, bot with much greater miffortune.

Heere was the gros of the royall armie routed; fome great officers efcapd, and three thoufand horfe with them; which bodie might have, no doubt, made a fecond warre in Scotland, bot falling in peeces by bad conduct, they came everie mothers fonne in the pouer of the enemie. His Majeftie, by the good hand of God, efcapd fafelie, and was prefervd to be a bleffing to his three kingdomes. The manner how, and what way he got out of England to France, notwithftanding all the means the rebells ufd to get him in their pouer, may be feene in the hiftorie of his life written by Edward Philips.

Many thousands were carried away prisoners to London, to give the people ane affured demonstration of Cromwells unquestionable victorie. Among the reft I was one. At or neere Oxford, the Marshall Generall (who indeed was as civill as a man of his charge could be,) exacted from the Lords, Officers and Gentlemen, who were prifoners, a parole and revefe fignd with their hands, to be faithfull prifoners, which moft of all willinglie did; bot Generall Dalyell, and Lieutenant Generall Drummond knowing I intended to endeavour my efcape, refuled to figne, leaft I, being the onlie perfon that wold not fubfcrive it, might have beene the worfe ufed. The fecond night of our ftay at Oxford, with the helpe of our hofte, a barger, a barbour, and a fhoemaker, I got out of the top of the houfe, and thorough ane other voyd houfe, efcapeing all our guards both of horfe and foot, not without obftructions and fome merrie paffages, the memorie wherof was afterwards pleafant, thogh then I runne tuice the neere hazard of breakeing my necke. I lay tuo days and nights in the garret of a new houfe, which had neither doore nor window in it. The fearch, which was not very ftrict, being over, and the prifoners with their guards prettie well advancd touards London, I creepd out of my retreate, and in a very pitiefull difguife, accompanied with halfe a dozen of watermen, (who had all ferved the late King as fojors,) tooke my journey ftraight to London. The first day I walkd afoot to Morley, which was tuentie miles from Oxford; but my feet were fo fpoiled with the clouted fhooes which I wore, and myfelf fo wearie, that my companions were forcd to carry me almost the last tuo miles. Lustie, strong and loyall fellows they were, bot extreamlie debauchd. They mifd not one alehoufe in the way, and my paying for all the ale and beere they dranke (for I thanke God they wold drinke no wine,) did not at all trouble me; but it was a vexation to me to drinke cup for cup with them, els they fould have had no good opinion of me, and to them I was neceffitated to reveale myfelfe, my honneft barger goeing before us all the way a horfebacke, and fo ferving us for a fcout. At Morley I hird ane old carkaffe of a horfe from a knaveifh old fellow, who made himfelfe exceeding merrie with me, jeering me verie broadlie; and indeed I was in fo wofull a plight that I was ridiculous enough, neither could any man have conceaved that ever I had beene ane officer in any armie of the world. On horfebacke I came from Bramford, thretteene miles from Morley, and feven from London, and rode thorough at leafte tuo hundreth red coates that had convoyd my countreymen to Titlefield; bot was well feconded in paffing them by my truftie comerades, the watermen. At Bramford I tooke oares, and in the night time landed at Westminster staires, which I had never seene; for I came in ane evill houre to London, where I had never beene before. I was lodgd that night with ane honneft Welchman, to whom my barger reveald what I was, that he might make me knoune to fome of the Royal lpartie, for I had no acquaintances in that great citie.

1651.

After I had repofed myfelfe tuo days, wherof I ftood in great need, fome clothes, linnens and a litle money, were fent me by three honneft men, and brought to me by my hofte. The clothes I accepted, bot refufd the money, and nixt night I was brought by water to the citie, to the three gentlemen who had fent me fo fure tokens of their kindnes, and whom I had never feene all my life before. Three loyall perfons they were, who, after they had made themfelvs knoune to me, they defired a particular rehearfeall of the King's milfortunate expedition, and his loffe at Worcefter; which they heard with as grievd hearts as I related it. They thought it fit to lodge me in a publike inne within the citie, and entrufted me to the care of the drawer, who was both ane honeft and ane underftanding fellow. That houfe I changed, and fo did I many others, till I lighted on the houfe of ane honneft widow, who had no creature in the houfe with her bot her oune daughter; and there indeed I was as fecure as if I had beene in my mothers houfe. Severall appointments were made betueene my three noble friends and me, and all punctuallie keepd. Their kindnefs I can never forget, unles I intend to accufe myfelfe of the higheft ingratitude. They entrufted me with a meffage to the King, wherin his Majeftie was neerlie concernd, which I faithfullie deliverd to him at Paris.

N

Immediatlie after the first time I had spoke with these three Royalifts, I went back to Weftminfter, to take my leave of my honneft barger and watermen, who had by that time ended their bufienefs; for the watermen were led as witneffes of a ryot, alledged to have beene committed by the barger, and if the matter was referd to their oath, I need. not doubt bot he was affoyld, let his guilt be what it wold. I was given out all the way from Oxford to be a witneffe alfo; I was borne in a countrey village in Oxfordshire, where I had never seene or learnd any good manners or breeding; and I was called Richard, or Dicke; bot I changed that and five or fix more names before I got out of London. After I had drunke a dozen of beare with them, I offerd everie one of them a tuentie fhilling peece of gold as a token of my thankfullnes, bot I could not for my heart perfuade any of them to take it; onlie I movd each of them to take halfe a croune, wherwith they faid they wold drinke my health in their returne to Oxford; and fo after many embraces we parted. The like honeftie I met with at Oxford before; for neither my barbour nor fhoomaker wold, for any intreatie of mine, take either gold or moneys from me; bot they tore away all the ribbands that were on my clothes, and faid they wold weare them till the Kings reftoration, which they faid they were fure wold be nixt yeare. Colonell Prides fonne haveing given me faire quarter when he tooke me, I had favd fome of my gold; and when I made my efcape, Generall Dalyell had lent me ten peeces, one wherof I gave to my hofteffe at Oxford, when fhe lighted me to the garret of her houfe; ane other I gave to the bargers wife as a token. Sixe I fpent in my tuo days journey to London; the reft maintaind me well enough till I was fupplyd out of Scotland.

When I went abroad, I did it either by coach or water; for the ftreets were full of Scotfmen, efpeciallie fojors, who might have wrongd me with unfeafonable kindnes. For the most part I keepd my chamber; and then I had time and leifure enough to reflect on the deplorable condition of the King and all the Royall familie, of the three kingdomes, efpeciallie my native countrey of Scotland, now reducd to a province by the most infolent of Rebells. But, proximus efto tibi is fo true a faying, and fo agreeable to mother Nature, that . . . . . . . . and therefore I feriouflie confidered the evill afpect of my oune particular affaires, the many tryalls and afflictions I had met with in the courfe of my life, and what a great one I had now to wraftle with, my wife haveing beene in Dundee when it was taken, a world of blood fpilt in it, the toune fackd and plunderd. This I knew at Oxford, but did not, nor could not, learne what had becomd of my deare wife, till three weeks after my comeing to London; and then I was certainlie informed that fhe had favd nothing of all fhe had of moneys, clothes and mooveables, except the cloths fhe had upon her; bot that her life wes faved, and that fhe was returned on foot to Difart. I was exceedinglie comforted to heare that her life was given to us as a prey, for which mercy I blefd God. The miffortune of dolefull Dundee fell on the firft day of September, and ours in England on the third therof. My wife and I, by our mutuall letters, underftanding of each others wellfare, I recommended her to the divine Providence, who in his oune good time wold bring us together againe.

99

1.0

I durft not hazard to goe out of England, till it was knoune that his Majeftie was fafelie arrivd at Paris. The fearch then not being fo ftrict, I refolved to be gone either for Holland or France. I had keepd a conftant correspondence with Lieutenant Generall Middletone, then prifoner in the Toure, by Major Strachan, now Sir John Strachan. I ftill affurd him, for my intelligence by my English friends was very good, that his life wold be taken, fo foone as he was cured of a fhot he had reffavd in his bodie; and therfor had layd doune three ways for his efcape; one of them being by a falfe key to open his chamber doore (whill Strachan fould be drinking with the keeper in ane alehoufe,) and difguifed in a blacke fute of apparrell, with a periwig of red haire, to walke at all leifure out of the Toure, accompanied with Captaine Hay, (who was bot flenderlie rewarded for this faithfull fervice,) and fo fould goe to the lodgeing I had provided for him. This way, I fay, was that wherby he obtaind his libertie. The pretence they had to put him to death was, that he had broke his parole in efcapeing out of prifon at Berwick, as they alledged. He pretending not to be guiltie of this alledged crime, his neereft friends not feareing his life, prevaild with him not to hazard the loffe of his eftate in Scotland, which wold be affuredlie forfeited if he broke out of prifon. Upon this advice he fent me a meffage by Major Strachan, fhouing me his refolutions, and defird me to put myfelfe to no further hazard for him, bot be gone as foone as I could to the King. He fent me a memoriall of what I was to fay to the King from him, as alfo to all his friends at Paris. I was trulie forry to fee him fo eafilie perfuaded to put his life in fo needles a hazard; bot feeing my ftay was to no purpofe, I prepard to make my efcape out of England, as I had done out of Oxford. To this did exceedinglie help me, a paffe which one Mr Harrie Knox, ane expectant minifter, had got by the Counteffe of Devonfhires meanes, from the pretended Councell of State. He altering his refolution of goeing to France, gave me the paffe; and after I had ftavd three or foure nights with a fifter of mine in Kentshire, I came to Dover, accompanied with one Mafter Simfone, a brother of my brother in laws. I was more ftrictlie lookd to and examind then was ordinarie; and one James Tours, a Scotfman duelling there, was brought to fee and fpeake with me. He was like to undoe me with queftions. I found it was neceffare to try his honeftie; for imprifonment was the worft could befall me, haveing never broke either word or writ; for I thinke faith fould be keepd to the worft of men. Whill the Governor Colonell Temple was boweing his heade to fpit, I gave Mr Tours a figne wherby he might foone know I was not the true Mr Harie Knox. He provd ane honneft man, and indeed favd me, by not putting me to anfuere any more hard interrogatories. In a word, Colonell Temple could find me neither gentleman, minifter, fojor, or merchand ; bot a fervant to the old Earle of Morton, which James Tours knew well enough to be a ly.

. The matter was this. Middletone had efcapd out of the Toure the day before, and thefe at Dover haveing never feene him, and tuo hundreth pounds being offerd to any that could find him out, wold needs have me to be him. Bot being cleard of that very groffe errour by Mr Tours, I was fufferd to paffe with the packet boate. My Ladie Middletone haveing found by fome difcourfes with Sir Arthur Hafelrig, and Lamberts ladie, the truth of that I had fo often averd, that they intended to put her hufband to death, advifd him to fly and fave his life; which he did, as I flew a litle before. I had acquainted Major Strachan with the miftres of my houfe, and fhe promifd to make the gueft I entrusted to her very wellcome; and fafe enough he was all the time he ftayd in London, thogh the fearch was ftrict enough was made for He pafd under the name of Mafter Andersone, and Major him. Strachan was at that time Andro Reid. I had entrusted none bot him, my brother in law, and the miftres of the houfe with the fecret.

I had a letter to the King from the imprifond minifters, Middletons Memoriall, and fome other papers of concernment, all which I clofd by way of packet in a fheet of paper, and gave them to James Tours to put in the boxe. They were directed to "Jacques Broune à Calais;" for I was to have that name at Paris, and all letters to me to be directed fo. Nixt day when I arrivd at Calais, I went to the poft houfe and paid eight fous for my owne packet. I had imparted to Mr Simfone Middletons efcape, what hand and concern I had in it, conjurd him to hafte to London, affureing him he wold find him at my old lodgeing; and withall I gave him my paffe to carry him, which might ferve Middletone to good ufe, provided he did not touch at Dover, which I befeechd him not to doe. Mafter Simfone went away that night, after he had feene me boated, found Middletone in the appointed place, and did him very great fervice; and indeed was the man that lodgd him at his fathers houfe in the countrey, five or fixe days, till he had agreed with a boate to carry him to France. Bot the mafter haveing got foure pounds in earneft, cheated them; yet Mafter Simfone prepard and agreed with ane other veffell, the mafter wherof proveing honneft, landed Middletone and Major Strachan fafelie in Normandie.

I made fhort ftay at Calais, goeing with the firft meffenger, day and night, in a pitifull cold feafon, to Paris; where, haveing kifd the Kings hands, I deliverd all my meffages to him. I was graciouflie reffavd by his Majeftie, and wellcomd by all my friends and acquaintances. Not long after, Lieutenant Generall Middletone arrivd, who fent for me before his comeing was knowne. I ftayd a night with him, and nixt day brought my Lord Neuburgh to him, and the day after that, he went to Court at the Louver, where he had a moft gracieous reception from his Majeftie, and a heartie wellcome of all attended him. The Marques of Ormond, and Sir Edward Hide, then Chanclor of the Exchequer, made up a knot of friendfhip with him, which I beleeve be yet to unty. This was difpleafing to many who lovd none of thofe tuo; for even then was this litle Court divided into factions and fractions.

Within a few weeks after his comeing, I retird to a private houfe in the fauxbourg or fuburbe of Sainct Antonie, from the companie of all my countreymen, that I might learne fome French; the readeing, writeing, and underftandeing which language I had, without any other helpe bot that of a grammar and dictionarie, ftudied during my imprifonment at Hull in the yeare 1649. Heere I ftayd ten or tuelve weeks, till both the King of France and the Prince of Condes armies drawing neere that place where I lodged, made me retire into the Citie; bot not before I faw the Prince his forces, after a ftout refiftance, beaten into the Port of Saint Anthonie; which being fhut, they had in all probabilitie beene facrificed to Cardinal Mazarinis juft revenge, if the Duke of Orleans had not forcd the gunners of the Baftile to difcharge all their canon againft his mafter and nephew the King of France, who was perfonallie prefent with his armie; and that his daughter Madamoifelle, had not, with her viragolike prefence and eloquence, cajold the burgeffes guards fo well, that without confent of the magiftrats, they opend the port, and fufferd the Prince and the forces he had with him to march thorough the citie, and croffe the river of Sein at the New bridge.

1652.

Before this, the Archduke Leopold, taking his advantage, whill the King of France his fuord is draune in his oune defence againft the neereft Princes of his blood, marchd to Eftampes, five leagues from Paris, yet did no great feats. Charles Duke of Lorraine marchd alfo with a flying armie of ten thoufand men to Charenton, tuo leagues from Paris, with a refolution to joyne with the Princes. Him Marfhall Turenne facd ; bot whill they prepare to fight, the King of Great Britaine mediats a truce, and obtaines it, by which the Duke was obliged to march fpeedilie out of France, and not to returne to it for fourteene days ; and fo the Lorrainer marchd backe againe, plundering all before him according to his cuftome. This good office done to the French King, procurd to ours the evill will and hatred of his neereft kinred ; for indeed it ruind the Prince of Conde, and it furd up againft his Majefty the populace, who breathd nothing fo much as the deftruction of Mazarini; even fo farre as it was not fafe for the King to entrust himselfe longer in the Louver, or for his followers to ftay longer in Paris. The Palace of St Germans in the Lay is by the King of France his command provided for him. Thither he goes with the Queene his mother, and his fifter Princesse Henrietta; for the Duke of Yorke before that, had gone to Marefhalle Turenne to look after adventures, and perfite the skill he allreadie had in the militarie art. Moft of thefe who attended the Court followd him; and I accompanied thither General Middletone. We went by boate, and in great danger of robbers and voleurs, the river being but narrow, and the tuo armies on both fides of it. He had, a litle before that, got a commiflion to be Captaine Generall of all his Majefties forces in the kingdome of Scotland; and he was to haften to Holland and other places, where he might expect any affiftance of moneys from well affectionate Scotfmen, wherwith to provide armes and amunition for thefe who were allreadie afoot for the King in the Hielands.

1652.

I was appointed by him to goe to the Low Countreys before him, and waite his comeing at the Haag; bot I was neceffitated to ftay till the true Mafter Harie Knox (who had beene fent with letters to the King from the prifoners in the Touer) was difpatchd; and that could not be done in a fhort time, being fome of the prifoners, and the Chiefes of thefe who were in armes in the hills, wold be fatiffied with no letters bot fuch as were all writ with the Kings oune hand. He being difpatchd, and I haveing kifd the Kings hands, Sir Johne Keith, brother to the Earle Marfhall, David Ramfay, Mr Knox and I, made a pleafant journey in the beginning of September 1652 to Rowen, where I had a care to fee Mr Haries papers fo well packd up in fhoes and flippers, that they were bot in fmall hazard of any difcoverie. He went for England, and deliverd all his letters and inftructions, many of which were fent to the hills, bot neither in one place or other did thefe papers, which the King had writ with fo much trouble, produce the wifhed effect of union, bot in the contrare difunited men of one intereft; which may be imputed to the perfidieous wrong fuperfcriptions, interlineings and mifdeliveries of his Majefties letters; all which the late Chanclor of England, the Earle of Clarenden, did in the yeare 1660, a little before the King was proclaimed in England, in a long difcourfe with me at Breda, lay at my Lord Balcarris doore, how trulie, I fhall not judge.

105

Sir Johne Keith and I went from Rouen by land to Diepe, from that by fea to Calais, where finding a little veffell readie bound for Flufhing, we embarked that night. Nixt morning, paffing by Dunkirke, we were examind by ane Admirall of a Spanifh fleet, which keepd that toune blockd up by fea. There we faw tuo great guns fire often from a batterie at land againft the toune; for Leopold haveing taken Graveline, had befeegd Dunkerke alfo, then keepd by the French. It was not long after furrenderd to him, wherin the Englifh were very inftrumentall; for the Duke of Vendofine being fent by the French King with a ftrong navie, in which he carried recruits of men, moneys, victualls and amunition, the Englifh, farre too ftrong, fet upon him, and carried his fleet to England; and after Dunkirk had yeelded to the Spaniard, they releafed the fhips, and landed all their men in French ground.

Sir Johne Keith and I being difmifd by the Spanish Admiral, landed that night at Flushing. From thence we went to Roterdame, where we found my Ladie Middletone with much longing expecting her hufband. She had her brother with her, Major Durhame, afterwards a titular Colonell, Sir Alexander Durhame, and Lyon King of Armes. When I was at Amfterdame about fome particular bufienes, my Ladie had a meffage from Breda, that her hufband the Generall was arrived there, very fick of a tertian. She went thither; and not long after, I came to him at that fame place. Within a month he was in a capacitie to make difpatches; and I was fent with a commission from him, and many letters from the King, to fome places in Low Germanie, to feeke the affiftance of fuch Scotch gentlemen as I had formerlie been acquainted with in the German warre. In all these journeys, I was my oune purfemafter; and fpending my oune, I found myfelfe countable to no man. I began my journey the first of November, 1652; a very bad time of the yeare to travell day and night with a pofte. In Februare nixt I returnd to the Generall, bringing with me fifteene hundreth dollars. In Aprile 1653, I was fent backe to fome other places; and that fummer I reflaved three thousand foure hundreth dollars, which I fent to the Generall by bill of exchange, retaining for my charges fo much as he was pleafd to allow me. What I had done encouragd him to fend his brother in law, Durhame, to Sueden; where our countrymen contributed for the Kings affiftance about feven or eight thoufand dollars, befides what was got in Holland from wellaffected Scotfmen there, and five thousand guldens which the Princesse Royall advanced.

That fummer I defind my wife to give me a vifite in a ftrange land once more, and to meet me at Bremen, which fhe readilie did, and in. June arrivd fafelie there; the which meeting, after all thefe traverfes, was exceeding comfortable to me. I could not learne what keepd the Generall fo long in Holland; waiting whofe orders, I ftayd ftill at Bremen with my wife, not onlie all that fummer and harveft, bot nixt winter alfo. I had advifd him to give no commiffions till he came to the hills, that everie mans merite might be cognofed on. This he winter alfo. I had advifd him to give no commiffions till he came to the hills, that everie mans merite might be cognofed on. This he faithfullie promifd, bot forgot it; for he gave bot too many, and among others, one was fent to me, to exerce the fame charges I had at Worcefter, which I accepted.

In Februare 1654, the Generall made faile from Amfterdame to Cathnes, accompanied with my Lord Napier, Sir George Monro, Generall Dalyell, and Lieutenant Generall Drummond, and many other gentlemen; and though he had promifd to fend for me, that I might goe along with him, yet he did it not, bot wrote to me to follow him. In Aprile nixt I entrufted myfelfe to ane honneft fkipper, who livd in Bremen, bot had beene borne in Scotland. I refolvd to goe with him to Norway, where he was to take in a loadeing of timber, and from thence to Fife; and fo caft myfelfe on Providence, it not being poffible for me to forfee how I could get to the hills from that place. After tuentie days tempeftuous voyage at fea, we arrive at Norway; and after a months ftay there, we went againe to fea, and on the ninth day came to the coaft of Fife. I went ashore beside Enster, in the night time, being then in June. I fufferd the fkipper to take all my clothes, piftolls, carabines and faddles with him, all which he burried under ground at Culros. After fome privat ftay in Fife, I was furnifhd with tuo indifferent good horfes; by tuo noble and loyall gentlemen; and haveing got most of my things with great hazard and difficultie out of Culros, and meeting with five or fixe officers of the armie, (for fo they calld themfelvs) I went to the hilles as farre as Locherne, where I met with fome others, who pretended to a great defire they had to be with the armie. I encouragd them much to fo loyall ane action, bot found it was not their earneft; for they did bot leade me up and doune the countrey, without ever draueing neere the armie; which they might eafilie have done, it being then at the heade of Loch Tay, from whence it removeing, and Monck follouing, it was never poffible for me afterwards to come to it.

A guarrifon of Englifh, both foot and horfe, lying at Drummond Caftle, I lurkd fome time about Locherne, with very much danger; and at that time, I had the bad fortune to fee numbers of horfmen which belongd to the Kings armie paffe that way, feekeing to get to their feverall homes; haveing taken a libertie to themfelvs to difband, after ane unhappie rencounter at Lochgarie betueene Generall Middletone and Morgan, wherein the royall partie was worfted, bot with the loffe of very few men. I fpoke with moft of thefe horfemen, and found they were all willing to continue in the fervice, if their horfes were put in cafe, who were all pitifullie beaten, and that they had put themfelvs in fome better equippage, which indeed I faw to be as bad as could well be imagind. Upon confideration heerof, I wrote to the Earle of Glencairden, who haveing done fome handfome things before Middletones arriveall, had acquird the affection of both the countrey and foldierie, bot upon fome diffatiffaction given him, had left the Generall, and retird himfelfe with fome Lords and Gentlemen, to the Ile of Makfarlen. I fent my letter (a copie wherof I keepd, and yet doth) by a truftie hielander. In it, I adjurd his Lordship by all that was or could be deare to him, to appoint a rendevous for thefe difperfed troopers, if he pleafd, three weeks after the date of the letter; affureing him they wold punctuallie keepe it, as men who were very readie to obey all his orders; and withall offerd my fervice in it, or any thing els wherin he conceavd me able to advance the grand defigne of his Majefties fervice. I reffaved his anfuere, which did not at all pleafe me; for by it my Lord told me, he could doe none of thefe things I defird him; being he was layd afide as ufeles to the King or his fervice; with fome other expreffions of reffentment of the injuries had beene done him. This made me fenfible that the Kings affaires in that countrey were all out of frame, and made me conclude it neceffare, that he who was most concernd ought to know his oune condition, and that it could be reprefented to him by no fitter perfon than myselfe, who I found could doe him no good where I was. And heerupon I put on a refolution to get out of Scotland as foone as I could.

To this purpofe of mine, a faire occafion offerd itfelfe. One Menyies, a lieutenant of horfe, had about eighteene or tuentie troopers, and a trumpeter, with him; and thefe five officers who came with me out of Fife, flucke ftill clofe to me. All of them haveing intelligence that there was 200 paire of piftolls in a houfe of Kircaldie, they had fome thoughts of goeing thither to make a purchafe of them. When they had communicated the matter to me, I fullie perfuaded them to give it the hazard. On our fecond days march, we came to ane alehoufe in Glendeven, where they conferd the command of the partie on me. There being good ale there, I caufd them all drinke luftilie, and payd for the breuvage, a thing not ufuall at that time in thefe parts. Haveing given the word and figne, I march before with my five officers, and my fervant, inverting the ordinare cuftome of enfans perdus, or forlorne hopes, and orderd Menyies to follow at a litle diftance with the reft. It was touards the evening, and I had not rode a full mile, when I difcoverd a partie of above threttie well mounted men of the enemie, Scots and English. By providence I had on both my hands tuo litle rifeing hills, betweene which I tooke my place with my officers, the enemie being below me in no good rideing ground. I refolvd to reffave his charge; bot I fent my fervant immediatlie to Menyies, commanding him to gallop up with his partie, and to caufe his trumpet found a charge all the way. The enemie and I had trifled away the time with inquireing for whom we were, thogh both of us knew we were not one for ane other. At length, when I heard our trumpet, I bid one of my officers tell we were for God and King Charles, and cryd aloud myfelfe, that English fould have quarter, bot Scots none; and fo charged. On our fide no piftoll was difcharged bot mine, all the reft being unfixed; on the other, one carabine and a piftoll, which laft was fhot at me. The enemie runne bafelie, and my partie purfud eagerlie, Menyeis being a man ftout enough and well mounted. After we had purfued by the helpe of the moone about a mile and a halfe, I caufd found a retreate. Sixe of the enemie were kild, and foure taken; to one wherof, Jonfton, a Scot, bot borne in Ireland, I had given quarter, Menyeis unworthilie kild in cold blood. He cravd me pardon for it; I defird him to beg Gods pardon for fo unchriftian ane action, and fo paid it, becaufe I durft not challenge it. The mischiefe was, he made his peace fhortlie after with the English governour of Sainct Jonfton, and fuore to him that he had killd that poore man by my order, haveing faid no Scot fould have quarter; for which the English

1654.

1654.

112

vowd to cut me in peeces where ever they found me. That night, we refreshd in the wood of Kincairden; neither did I thinke it at all fitting for my partie to purfue their defigne of Kircaldie, or me my intention to get into Fife. I was that night divested of my command; neither could I by any intreatie move Menyies to march quicklie to the hills, knouing these of Falkland and Brunt Iland wold be quicklie after us, and these of St Jonston might be before us. The truth is, he had a localitie therabout, and looking more after money than men from the countrey people, he protracted the time so long as the English gave us the chase. Menyies wold have beene at killing the other three prisoners, whom partlie with intreatie, and partlie with horrible threatnings of ane after revenge, I faved; they crying so the to keepe parole to them, and had learnd well enough, thogh against my will, both my name and charge.

After this, I fhifted myfelfe from thefe plundering fellows, and haveing put away both my horfes and my arms, except one fhort fword, I refolvd to get into Fife all alone, fending my fervant away a foot clothd as a countrey fellow. The firft night I was kindlie entertaind at fupper by my Ladie Breko and her fonne. He went to take up his bed, as he ufed, in the mos; and I went on in my travells with a guide. The fecond night, the moone being eclipfed, I never in all my life felt or faw fo fad and fo heavie a raine, nor fo palpable a darke night, thogh in the midft of Auguft. My poore guide, who was honneft enough, miftakeing his way, as it was no wonder, brought me in a moffe, in which he, my horfe and I were well neere dround. After much tumbling, we got out; bot he, who at beft was fcarfe halfe witted, grew allmoft diftracted with feare, not apprehending the true reafon of fo great a darknes and raine. My feare was, that his feare fould make him difert me, and therfor I comforted him, ever and anone putting a fhilling in his hand, and promifeing him greater matters. My confidence brought him a litle to himfelfe; bot I was glad when I movd him to laugh, by telling him that he needed not feare the white collor of my horfe, which, when I met with him, he faid wold make me difcernable in the night time; "for," faid I, "the moffe hath made him, you and me fo blacke, that we may paffe for blackamores." The poore fellow brought me at length to ane honneft mans houfe, and there he left me, after I had, to his oune thinking, overrewarded him for his nights fad turmoile. This honneft man brought me, a litle before day, to a friends houfe, where I defird to be. There I repofd tuo days; and after ten days longer fojourning with fome others, I got to Enfter, where I found ane honneft fkipper bound for Oftend. After I had lurkd foure days at ane honneft mans house in that litle toune, I embarkd, and with a faire wind in three days time arrivd at Oftend; being as glad to get out of Scotland as I was three years before to get out of England.

After I had viewd that strong place, famous for the three yeares fiege it flood out againft the Archduke Albert, I went by Bruges and the Sluce of Flanders to Vlufhing, and from thence to Travere, where I was informed by that loyall gentleman, Sir Patrik Drummond, that the King had beene, with his fifter the Princeffe Royall, at the Spaw waters, and was then at Aken, the firft and antienteft Imperiall toune of Germanie, the ordinarie refidence of Charles the Great, and famous for its hote bathes; the citie and many places about it, ftanding above immeafurable, and almost incredible fubterraneous fulphureous hote waters, wherby many infirm, lame and difeafed perfons are cured. I went by Dort to Gorcum, from thence to the Bufch. There I took waggon, and paffed through the land of Liege to Maftricht. From that ftrong toune my nixt days journey was to Aken, paying money all the way to the Spanish fojors for my life. I arrive there the 20th day of September, and refted that night.

Nixt day I addreffd myfelfe to the Vicount of Neuburgh, who was very loth to beleeve the bad news I told him. Houever he brought me to the King, to whom, after I had kifd his hand, I flew that the loffe of men at Lochgarie was not at all confiderable; yet, for all that, the condition of his affaires in that countrey was bot bad, if the troopers difbanding and difcontent of fome of the Lords were rightlie confiderd. The last of these tuo feemd strange to him, as haveing heard nothing of it before; bot I offerd to make it appear to him by my Lord Glencairns oune letter. His Majeftie feemd to be well fatified with my freedome, and orderd me to bring the letter to him after dinner, which I did; bot feareing he wold keepe it, I tooke a perfite copie of it, which I have yet by me. I was admitted to the bedchamber, and none elfe bot my Lord Neuburgh. So foone as the King lookd upon the letter, he faid it was all my Lord Glencairns oune hand. Many difcourfes he had with me; he faid he wold fhortlie fend armes and amunition to his Generall; he commanded me to waite on my Lord Neuburgh and Chancellour Hide nixt day, and give them ane exact and particular account of all I knew concerning his affaires in Scotland. He told me withall, he wold keepe Glencairns letter, thogh written to me. I told his Majeftie, the letter was in the right hand, he being most concerned in it; and fo I was difmifd.

Nixt day in the afternoone, I met the Chanclor and Vicount Neuburgh at a convent of Francifcan fryars, and gave them that account the King had commanded me to doe. I found it was good for me I had Glencairns letter to produce, a copie wherof, and of mine to his Lordship, I gave the Chancellor to reade; for without them, these tuo were apt enough to queftion the truth of that part of my relation, concerning the mifunderftanding betweene the Generall and Glencairne. They wold have it to be onlie betweene that Lord and Sir George Monro. I told them that indeed it beganne betueene thefe tuo, bot did not end there. The Chanclor then afkd me, if I wold not goe where the King thought fit to fend me. I replyd, at the Kings command I wold goe to Japan. He merrilie anfuered, Japan wold be out of my way. I told him it could not be out of my way if the King fent me there. Bot perceiveing his defigne was to fend me back to Scotland with letters, I faid I was readie to go, bot it was fit to let his Majeftie know before hand, I was a very improper perfon to employ in ane accommodation of tuo perfons, to neither of which I was acceptable; for Middletone had fhoune how fmall refpect he had for me in feverall particulars, which I wolde forbeare to fpeake of. Glencairne, and the other Lords, wold looke on me as a fojor, and fo one of those who they thought had cabald together to fuppreffe the nobilitie. This was no excufe, bot a certaine and reall truth. After this free language, I was no more defird to goe to the Highlands. A choyce was made of Colonell Borthwick, to carry the Kings pleafure and letters to his Generall, Glencairne and the other Lords. Bot his negociation did the King litle good, and proved exceedinglie milfortunate to himfelfe, as his foure yeares imprifonment at Bruges can too well teftifie.

1654.

I ftayd a month in that toune, partlie to fee my old acquaintances, whom I knew not when I fould fee againe; partlie to cure myfelf of a difeafe which is epidemicall allmost in the place from whence I brought it, the Hielands; I meane the ich or fcab, the hote bathes of of that citie being excellent for it. Then I got his Majefties paffe to goe to Bremen, bot not to leave his fervice. Haveing kifd his and the Princeffe Royalls hands, and taken my leave at Court, I left Aken the very fame day. His Majeftie went to Collen, and went backe to Maftricht, with Colonell Borthwick, and George Arnot, at that time page to his Majeftie. From thence we went doune the river Mafe by boate, to Rurmond and Venlo, and fo to Gennep houfe. There we tooke waggon and went to Nimmeghen, where, after a nights ftay together, we parted. I crofd the River of Wall, and by land went to Utrecht, and from thence to Roterdame. I ftaid fome time in Holland, and went to the Hag, to give the Queene of Bohemia ane account of my fummers expedition; and I found it fit to doe fo; for a report had come to her eares, that in my difcourfes at Aken I had reflected on Generall Middletone; and fhe being a Princeffe who had a kindnes for all Scotfmen, did not love to heare that we fould doe one ane other any bad office.

It was now winter, and in the midft of November, when I beganne my journey from Amfterdame to Bremen. I had a cold and troublefome paffage of it; bot God be praifd arrivd fafelie there in ten days time. There I had the comfort to find my fueet wife in good health, haveing myfelfe paffd the yeare 1654 with as much trouble and anxietie of mind, fatigue of bodie, and danger both at land and fea, as any yeare I ever pafd in my life. A litle before I went to Scotland, the citie of Bremen had commenced a warre with Count Konighfmark the 1655.

Suedifh generall in thefe parts, and had continued it whill I was in Scotland, with varieous fucceffe; bot at the long runne, they were forcd, fhortlie after my returne, to accept of a difadvantageous peace, after a very chargeable warre. In it they furprifd a fconce called Burg, which the Sueds had taken from them, where Colonell Forbes my thrice noble friend was killd. He was brother to the Lord Forbes, Governour of Stade, a gentleman of much honor, gallantrie and integritie.

I had time enough to reft myfelfe the whole nixt yeare, 1655. It was then that Charles Guftave king of Sueden, broke the peace with Pole, fixe yeares before the expiration of it, and invaded that kingdome with a prodigieous fucceffe. A paffe was fent me by one of his Field Marshalls, Count Wittemberg, at the folicitation of some of my friends, and ane invitation to come to him, who then had enterd Polonia Major. Bot I knew how difpleafing it wold be to the King, that any profeffing loyaltie to him, fould ferve a prince who had allied himfelfe fo ftrictlie with Cromwell. I excufd myfelfe for not goeing, bot keepd the paffe, which yet I have by me. In the fummer 1655, Generall Dalyell came over to Bremen from Scotland in a difguife. He told me Lieutenant Generall Drummond was gone to Holland, and that all being lofd in Scotland, Generall Middletone would fhortlie be with the King; and fo he was, and whill he was at Court, feverall letters paft betueene him and me. After Dalyell had ftayd three or foure days with me, he went with the poste to Amsterdame; neither did I fee him againe, till his returne from Mofcovia, which was not till ten yeares after.

Nixt harveft, my wife, intending for Scotland, went a boord of a fhip, and was full feven Dutch leagues on her way from Bremen, when the wind proveing contrarie, by Gods good providence, I alterd my refolution, and went doune the river of the Wefer, and brought her backe, that I might enjoy her company the enfuing winter. This was a great mercy; for that fhip wherein fhe was to goe, after fixe weeks tempeftuous toffing at fea, was glade to get backe to the river, pitifullie fpoyld, and three of her men dead. Not long after, a very heavie and grievous concatenation of difeafes feazed on my wife, which keepd her feven full months; and indeed I had reafon to feare the worft; bot by the goodnes of God fhe was at length reftored to health, to my exceeding great joy. In the nixt Spring of the yeare 1656, we found there was a neceffitie for me to looke fomewhere for a fubfiftence, and fo for us to part for a time. This was a griefe to us both; bot it was our duetie to fubmit to Gods good pleafure. We refolved therfor to goe firft to Holland, and advice there further; and accordinglie came by fea to Amfterdame, in the beginning of May.

1656.

118

There I found Generall Middletone, who the yeare before had beene gracieouflie reffaved by the King at Collen. He was then comd to Holland about fome affaires. A little before my arriveall, Dalyell and Drummond had fhipd for Riga, in order to their journey to Mufco. I found the Generall civill enough to me, and after fome faire expoftulations on both parts, we were, as I thought, very good friends. The King keepd then his court at Bruges. A kind of league betueene him and the King of Spaine (who had enterd in a mortall warre with the Ufurper) being clapd up, many great things were promifd by the Spaniard, few of them performed; yet under him, the king and all his followers had fhelter. Thither Middletone went, and I promifd to follow very foone after.

Finding no paffage from Amfterdame to Scotland, I tooke my wife

1656.

from thence to Roterdame; and after a months ftay there, and the Haag, I found a good veffell bound for Leith, and in it my wife embarked. William Bruce, now Sir William, and Baronet and Cleark of the Bills, was likewife a paffenger; at which I was glad, knouing he wold doe my wife all the good offices he could. I went with her below the Briell, where with a very fad heart I tooke my leave of her; finding then how fenfible and touching a forrow it is, to part with a beloved yoakefellow. I thought this feparation of mine from her did too neare refemble death; for I had no vifible ground for any hope to fee her againe; I not being permitted to come to the countrey whither fhe was goeing, and there being bot fmall probabilitie that I could expect any fortune fo foone as might invite her to come and take a fhare of it. Bot

> Aftra regunt homines, fed regit aftra Deus : The flarres above governeth men below, Bot the Allmightie rules the flarres, we know.

We put our truft in God, and He, who never deferted thefe who put their confidence in him, did not difappoint us. She landed fafelie, notwithftanding of a ftorme, and a great many Spanish capers at fea. I had provided my wife, on all hazards, with his Majefties paffe, which ferved well enough against the Spaniards.

I hafted to Bruges, where having kifd the King and Duke of Glocefters hands, (for the Duke of Yorke was not yet comd from France, thogh dailie expected,) I found the defigne to fend Generall Middletone to Dantzick and Pole very farre advanced; and in the beginning of October his difpatches were readie. Great foumes were promifed to be fent to him from Bruxells, for leavieing ane armie there. The King of Poles affection to our King, in hatred to Cromwell, was not to be doubted; bot affiftance of moneys from Scotch merchands in Pole, was bot a fpeculation. It could not in reafon be lookd for, after they had beene fo well fleecd foure or five yeares before, by Mafter Crofts now Lord Crofts. I was appointed to attend the Generall thither; who tooke alfo along with him his brother in law Colonell Durhame.

Before we went from Flanders, the King, by permiffion of Don Juan of Auftria, raifd three regiments, one of Englifh, under the Earle of Rochefter, formerlie Lord Wilmot ; the fecond of Scots, under Generall Middletone ; the third of Irifh, under Ormond. Two more were added after, and all were put under the command of his Royall Hienes the Duke of Yorke. All the Captaines were to be Lords, Knights or Colonells ; at leaft fixteene Captaines were ordered to be of the Scots, wherof I was one. Bot being commanded away with the Generall, I never faw my companie, nor reapd benefite by it, except a hundredth and fiftie guldens.

A little money was advanced to the Generall at Court, which was all well neere fpent before we got out of Amfterdame. We ftayd fo long there that my Lord Neuburgh was fent to hafte us away. Sir William Davidfone, now Confervator, agreed with a veffell to tranfport us. It was loaden with Renifh and French wines. He put in alfo aboundance of provisions for our voyage; and fo on the tuelfth of November we embarkd, and were a full month at fea in very cold weather, before we got to Elfennure. Five days did fcarclie bring us from it to Coppenhagen, thogh it be bot five Dutch leagues; and there we were frozen in till the midft of Januare. The Generall livd in that place incognito, which the Spanish Embassiador tooke not very well. A thaw comeing on, in three days time we landed at the Mund, a very ftrong place in the mouth of the Weichfell, a German league from Dantzick. There we found the Suedifh Generall Konighfmark clofe prifoner, who had beene taken at fea, not without fufpition of foule play of fome of our countreymen under his command. At Dantzick, fome of the Scots merchands, efpeciallie Mafters Dumbar and Gallenden, made us wellcome. Numbers of my Lord Cranftouns regiment came over to us, whom we too foone entertaind, haveing libertie from the Magiftrats, (who wellcomd and entertaind the Generall with all imaginable civilitie,) to levie privatlie. Seven days before our arriveall, the King of Pole, to our great grief, was gone from Dantzick, where he had winterd three months. The Generall fent his Majefties letter to the King of Pole, by a convoy which was goeing to him. The great Chancellor of Pole wrote to the Generall, and invited him to come to his Mafter, where he affurd him he fould be very wellcome; the letter was in Latine. A faire occasion was offerd us of a convoy of five hundreth foot that were to march to the King; bot the Generall wanting money, we were forced to ftay. He wrote fome formall excufes to the Chancellor. I was defird to pen the letter in Latine, (for I was all the fecretarie he had both for that and the Hie Dutch languages,) and it was fhoune to tuo Polonian fenators, before it was fent away.

No money being fent from Flanders, and the Generalls and mine being exhaufted, we borroued from the Magiftrats, and private perfons alfo, more than is yet well payd. That being fpent alfo, we were forcd to difband our fojors, and recommend them to a German Baron, who was levieing for the King of Denmark. Not long after that we were ne-ceffitated to leave the inne where we lodged, and take up houfes apart, where we keepd bot a very forrie menage. Our credite was gone, our moneys were fpent, and all we had except our wearing clothes was impauned; and in that pitifull condition, we breathd rather than lived three months. Many confolotarie letters were writ to the Generall from the Court, bot becaufe in fome of his he had expoftulated a little for his bad ulage, a countreyman of mine did me the good office to informe Chancellor Hide, that I had ftird up the Generall to be diffatiffied with the whole Court. This was most malitieouslie done; for I could not have beene fo wicked as to blame any about the King for our wants, in regard the Spanish ministers not keeping promife to the King, it was impoffible for him to fupply us. Middletone endeavord to keepe me from knouing this; bot not haveing fhoune me the laft poftes letters, a thing he did not ufe, I began to fufpect there was fomething in the wind, and I handled the matter fo with Durhame, that I got it out of him; which the Generall knouing, he gave me the letter to reade. I told him I wold write to the Chancellor; and befeechd him, by his letter, to vindicate me of a crime, he knew beft of any man. I was never guiltie of. He promifd to doe it fullie, and was as good as his word. I wrote to the Chancellor, a letter faire enough, yet fo tart, that he might foone know, I was fenfible enough of the injurie was done me; to which letter of mine I reffaved a very faire anfuere, when I was at Coppenhagen; and in effect, finding himfelfe abufd by his informer, he afkd me pardon; for fuch are the very words of his letter. After that, I gave him a weeklie account of all the occurrences of Denmark.

After this paffage, I reprefented to the Generall, how ufeles I was to

1656.

him, being all hopes of doeing that we came for, were evanishd, and what time I lofd, being the most of Christendome were in action; I therfor defird him to permit me to goe and offer my fervice to the King of Denmark. This he granted me, and gave me a very ample teftimonie of my faithfullnes and diligence, which I have yet a keeping. About this time, Sir William Davidsone had advanced me fiftie dollars, a perfon who owd me tuentie haveing payd me them, and old Mr Gallenden lending me tuentie more, (which fixe weekes after I honneftlie repayd,) I found myfelfe in a condition to fupply fome wants at Dantzick, and make my voyage to the Sound. I tooke my leave of the foure burgomafters, to all of whom I was very particularlie obliged; bot I told them I was goeing to Flanders, for further directions to the Generall from his Majeftie. The Generall difmifd me with exceeding great kindnes, and many embraces; and being convoyd to the Mund, by Colonell Durhame, I embarkd for Denmark. Sixe days ftorme I ftood out, and on the feventh, haveing a good wind, I landed towards the evening at Elfennure. There I learnd from the poftmafter, who was a Scotiman, the condition of Danish affaires, which was bot bad. I knew before I left Dantzick that the King of Sueden had forfaken Pole, and left Ragoski, the Transilvanian Prince, to his future fortune, and was on his march thorough Caffubbia, Pomerania, Meclenburg, and the territories of Lubeck; and by that time that I came to Denmark, he had got into Holftein, where, of ane armie of Danes, confifting of fixteene thousand men, not one facd him the whole way; the Sueds, in derifion of the Danes couardife, hanging out lanternes over the fteeples of all the villages, to know if therby they might fee any to oppose them, fince with daylight they could fee none. To Coppenhagen I went, where I was made wellcome by the Count of Ribelledo, the Spanish Embassador at that Court, and by him recommended to the Great Stewart, the fecond perfon of that kingdome. Bot he haveing gone at that time with the King to Jutland, where both his oune and the enemies forces were, I was forcd to travell the whole length of the Ile of Zeland, the greateft of that kingdome ; to crofse the great Belt, a river foure Germane miles broad, which gives the name to the Baltick Sea, and to goe into Funen, where tuo yeares after, the Dane, with the helpe of the Hollander, gave the Sueds a totall defeate ; and at Odenfee, the principall toune of that Ile, I found the Court. This Great Stewart, or Grand Maistre, as the French call him, or Reichs Hofmeifter, as the Germans name him, made me wellcome, and recommended me to the Secretarie of Eftate for Denmark, (for there is ane other for Holftein,) with whom I guided the matter fo well, that at the Kings returne to Coppenhagen, I was brought to his prefence. I kifd his hand without kneeling, and offerd him my humble and faithfull fervice against all his enemies. His Majestie reflavd my compliment gracieouflie, and bad me expect my anfuere from his Secretarie of Eftate, whofe name was Erich, or Henrie Krag. At this time, the Embaffadors of all Chriftendome were at that Court; the Imperiall, Spanish, Brandenburger, Polonian, and Muscoviter, folliciting a vigorous profecution of the warre against their common enemie; the Sued, Tuo months after my comeing, about the end of October of the yeare 1657, Ulefeld, a Danish Generall in Skonen, being killd, Henrie Lindanaw, one of the Noblesse in that province, was designd to fucceed him. To him I was fent, with the Kings order to have a free squadron of the French, English and Hollander, mediating ane accommodation.

1657.

dragoones, and to be Adjutant Generall of his armie. I had the Kings paffe for free quarter and wagons. Takeing fome Scotch officers along with me, and arriveing at Chriftianstat, (a skirvie litle toune, bot exceedinglie well fortified,) where Lindanaw was governour, I deliverd him the Kings letter. He orderd a double centrie to be put to the doore of the inne where I lodged, and caufd his toune major give me the word. Nixt day he invited me to dinner; and after he had well entertaind mé with boules of wine, according to the cuftome of that countrey, he tooke me afide, and ferieouflie afkd me, if I thought that thefe at Court who fat at the helme of affaires were all in their right wits. I told him it was fo ftrange a queftion, that, if I offerd to anfuer it, he might trulie fay, I were out of mine. He faid, if they had been fo wife as they pretended to be, they wold never have offerd to give him a commiffion to be a Generall, who had never had a hier charge then that of a Ritmafter, and this he wold fhortlie declare to the King himfelfe, as indeed he did. He gave me notwithstanding free quarters to these officers I had brought with me, and keepd them with him, and fo difmifd me with much kindnes.

At my returne to Zeland, I met with Major Generall Montgomerie at Elfennure, who had brought recommendatorie letters from our King, and the Queene of Bohemia, to the King of Denmark. He was gracieouflie reffavd, and the levieing a regiment of foot offerd to him; which he refufd, his defire being to command a regiment of horfe. I tooke my leave of him there; he recommended to me tuo of his follouers, both Montgomeries, whom I fhortlie after got accommoded in a troope; and fo the Major Generall fhipd for Holland, and I returnd to Coppenhagen.

At my comeing, the Secretarie of Eftate told me, that he had learnd from Lindanaw himfelfe, how needles a journey I had made to Skonen; bot faid withall, that the King intended to give me the levieing of a foot regiment, for the scene of affaires was alterd in my absence. The Sueds had by ftorme made themfelvs mafters of Fredericks Ode, a ftrong place in Jutland, where they killd and tooke sixe thousand Danes, the reliques of the Holftein armie; and with them was taken the Fieldmarshall himselfe, very fore wounded, wherof he dyed a few days after; yet neither his wounds nor his death were able to wipe away the afperfion was caft on him of treafon. In that toune, the Danes loft above a hundreth braffe canons, and a confiderable magazine of amunition and victualls. This confiderable loffe, and the evill neighbourhood of fo fturring ane enemie, wakend the Danish King and his councel out of their dreame. They finding they had bot litle reafon to truft the natives, farre degenerated from the vigour and courage of the antient Danes, refolved to levie ftrangers. To that effect, fixe commissions were given out for levieing fixe foot regiments, each of a thousand men, wherof the King bestowd one upon me. I knew well enough how difficult a thing it was to leavie men at that time ; bot perceaveing I could not in reafon looke for any other employment, I accepted the commission. Bot intending to raife the halfe of my regiment in Dantzick, I wold only reffave the halfe of my levie moneys in Holland, then which I never committed ane act of hier follie. Thretteen dollars for each fojor were allowd us, for levie armes and tranfportation. His Majeftie caufd give me a hundreth and fifty duckats, to defray my charges the time of my attendance, not to be reckond in my levie money, which I was to reffave at Amfterdame. It did not pay the halfe of my expence; yet it was a gratuitie to which he was not obliged, and therfor reflavd by me with all thankfull acknouledgement. Haveing courted the Secretarie of Eftate, as a man of his qualitie fould be, I kiffd the Kings hand, and tooke my leave of the Great Mafter and Treaforer, who were my noble friends; then I went to Ribelledo, the King of Spaines Embaffador, and returned him my humble thankes for his civilities. I left him in a bad condition; for he was fo plagud with ane univerfall gout, that, as he told me himfelfe, he could fturre no member of his bodie bot tuo, that was his eye and his tongue. I tooke my leave of tuo Jefuits who attended him, who were my good friends, wittie men, and jollie companions. I embarkd at Elfennure in the midft of December, in a veffell bound for Harking in Freifland. A very cold paffage I had, bot not very ftormie; and in ten days time I landed at the Uly. From thence I had fome difficultie, becaufe of the ice, to get up to Amfterdame.

126

1657.

Letters of recommendation were offered me from the King to the Danifh Court, bot I refufd them, not out of vanitie, bot out of pure loyaltie; for I faw Sir Philip Medows, Cromwells pretended Embaffador, reffavd at Coppenhagen with fo much ftate and magnificence, (which fhows that England muft be courted, be mafter of it who will,) that I had juft reafon to feare his Majefties letters fould have beene bot litle regarded. From Amfterdam I went ftraight to the Haag, where I fhew my commiffion, capitulation, and orders to Monfieur Rofemving, the Danifh Embaffador with the Generall Eftates, and with fome difficultie I procurd from him the halfe of my levie moneys. I capitulated with a Major and three Captaines, and gave them commiffions; but I gave them onlie a third part of my levie money. Whill all of us are bufie fetting forward the affaire wherwith we were intrufted, behold, the King of Sueden, in Februarie 1658, paffeth his whole armie, horfe and foot, over the Belt that feparateth Funen from Jutland. The ice was fo ftrong on the whole Baltick coaft that winter, and continued fo long, that on the 19th day of March therafter, the fame King of Sueden carried his whole armie and his great guns over the Sound, over against Malmey in to Skonen, on the ice. Being in Funen, he beats the Danish armie there, with very litle oppofition. He purfues his victorie, paffeth over the Ile of Langland, from thence to Laland, and at laft to Zeland, the ice ferving him for a bridge all the way. There did the English and Holland Embassadors meet him, who knouing their mafters wold not willinglie fee Charles Guftave mafter of the Sound, partlie by entreaties and remonstrances, partlie by threatnings, movd the victorious King to grant peace to the Dane; who bought it by a perpetual refignation of the faire province of Skonen or Scandia, the Ile of Borholme, the ftrong caftle of Bahoufe, and fome other places. Affuredlie the King of Sueden repented himfelfe afterwards that he did not march ftraight to Coppenhagen, wherof at that time he could have made himfelfe quicklie mafter; where he might, without ftroake of fuord, have got all the magazines of the kingdome, the whole fleet, which was frozen in, and the King with his Queene and whole familie, if they had not fled over the ice to Skonen, and fo to Norway. Bot God had determind otherwife.

The Eftates of the United Provinces were very angrie with the King of Denmark for makeing that peace, which pure neceffitie had forcd him to, without their confent, and therfor they difcharge our leavies under paine of death, arrefts our fhips, fets our men afhoare, and give-ing each of them halfe a dollar, bad them goe where they pleafed. Such a miferable end had that miffortunate leavie of ours ! Affuredlie in this the Eftates did the Danish King a very shreud office; for if they had fufferd us to finish our leavie, we had carried over 6000 men to Denmark, which undoubtedlie had moved the Sued to guit his refolution of invadeing that kingdome, as nixt fummer he did; for this martiall King falls with a ftrong armie before Lambes in Zeland, and at one time befeegeth Elfennure and Coppenhagen. The first, after a stout refiftance, he takes by accord; from the other he is beaten with ane exceeding great loffe. The Hollanders then perceaves their error, and to make ane amends, they fend a ftrong fleet with their Admirall Opdam, who fights thorough the Suedifh navie in the Sound, and victualls Coppenhagen. Nixt yeare, they fend ane other fleet with De Rutter, and 2000 foot fojors, under the command of Colonell Killigrew, who affifted the Danes pouerfullie to beate Prince Palatine Sultíbach and his Suedifh armie at Neuburg in Funen. The King of Sueden did not long outlive this miffortune, and it is reported, that he was heard fay frequentlie on his death bed, "Funen, Funen, tu m'as tué ;" Funen, Funen, thou haft kild me! So dyed Charles Guftave, who in the fhort time of his raigne had beene the Boutefew and Incendiarie of Chriftendome, haveing kindled the flame of warre in a great many parts of it.

128

1658.

1659.

Then it was that I found how foolifh I had beene in takeing bot the halfe of my levie money; for my comerads, the other Colonells, who had got all theirs, were never brought to any account at all. It is true, I demanded it from Rofenwing, and he refuse to pay it, I protefted the Kings capitulation with me was broke and violated. We were entering in a fute of law, bot comeing to tearmes of agreement, we gave it over; and I requiring my paffe from the King, tuo were fent me in hafte, one in Danifh, the other in Hie Dutch. In the beginning of the yeare 1658, I defird my wife once more to croffe the feas, and come out of Scotland to Holland; which fhe readilie doeing, we met happilie, praife be to God for it, at Roterdame, and therafter livd tuo yeares together at the Haag with much content.

R

1659.

Generall Middletone flavd all that winter, after I left him, at Dantzick. Nixt fpring as much money was fent him as the King could well fpare, wherwith he payd fome of his most prefling creditors (for all his debts he could not pay), and bought fome horfes, and accompanied with Major Murrey, brother to Pomais, and one fervant, he travelld thorough feverall places of Germanie, and vifiting the tuo Electors of Brandeburg and Saxonie, at their oune Courts, he came to our mafter the King, at Bruxells, where he was gracieouflie reffaved. He was pleafd to write to me fo foon as he came. In the harveft therafter he left the King, upon what occafion I know not, and went to Amfterdame; there he ftayd all the nixt winter. About that time, his Scottifh regiment was given to the Vicount of Neuburgh, Don Juan haveing commanded, that none fould have charge bot thefe who attended it. My companie in that regiment had beene given away, long before that, by the Duke of Yorke, without any injurie to me; for I could not both attend a companie in Flanders, and a regiment in Denmark. In the fummer follouing of the yeare 1659, Middletone is recalld to Court, many great rifeings of the Royall partie in England haveing beene projected, with greate hopes of fucceffe. Bot the time which God had appointed to finish foe great a worke not being comd, they were all blafted; and Sir George Booths partie, which was the moft confiderable, being beaten by Lambert, the King with a fmall traine went to Bayonne, to attend in perfon the iffue of the greate treatie of peace betueene France and Spaine, which that yeare was concluded. The tuo great Ministers of State, Cardinall Mazarini and Lowis de Haro, meeting in the Ile of Phefants, to caft that great affaire in a right mould, and therafter at the ftatlie enterview of the tuo Potentates themfelvs, a full conclusion was made, and the peace ratified, by the confummation of a marrieage betweene the King of France and the King of Spaines daughter. Bot obferve, that what fould have cemented the agreement betueene these tuo crounes tuo yeares agoe, did diffolve it; the French King, to vindicate the Queenes right, invadeing the Spanish Netherlands; to fo litle use fervs humane prudence and policie, when a bleffing from Heaven is denyd to it. Nothing was done for our King at that treatie; which made him returne to Bruxells, where he found greater grounds of hopes from his own fubjects, then he had reafon to expect from ftrangers.

A kind of a warre haveing beene begunne betueene Monck and Lambert, the loyall Lords of Scotland defird Mr Bruce, now Earle of Kincarden, to goe in their names to the King, (fince he was to goe to his wife in Holland houfoever), to reprefent to him their loyaltie, to defire his affiftance of armes, bot above all, to intreate his Majeftie to impart his royall commands to them, how they fould demeane themfelvs in fo great a concerne and exigent. And if they did not in plaine tearmes defire it, yet their exprefions feemd to import, that they wifhd his Majeftie wold be pleafd to name fome other Generall for them then Middletone. Mafter Bruce told the Lords, he could not agent their bufienes openlie at Court, without running a vifible hazard to loofe his eftate in Scotland, which was confiderable; bot with their permiffion wold imploy me, who he conceavd was faithfull, and had nothing to loofe at home. They were fatified with his choyce, and after he was comd to the Haag, he broke the matter to me, and found me readie enough to goe about the busienes, bot very shie to propone any thing to Middletons prejudice. My wife fell ficke in the meane time; bot being told by a doctor that there was no danger, (which yet did prove otherwife) I went to Bruxells and deliverd Mr Bruce his credentialls to the King and Chanclor Hide, who was then Lord Chanclor of England. I found the King well enough fatified with all the defires of the Scottifh Lords, except that of a new Generall. He fpoke long to me on that fubject. I offerd in their name to affure his Majeftie, that fince he had a mind to continue him in his commiffion, none wold oppofe him. Meane while the King prepares privatlie for Breda, and commanded me to goe before him there, and attend him. There he came within three days after, and made wellcome by his fifter, the Princeffe Royall, and his nephew, the Prince of Orange. It was there where I fpoke at full length with my Lord Chanclor concerning Scottifh affaires; who told me many ftories, and gave me full affureances of his affection to all Scotfmen, whatever had beene faid of him to the contrare, and of his particular kindnes to myfelfe; bot withall complaind of the unfaithfullnes and falfhood of fome of my countreymen, as I have touched before. I told his Lordship I wold not ftay a minute longer, unles I knew the King wold approve of my ftay at Court, in order to my inftructions. He faid, he was confident the King wold approve of my negotiation, and that his Majeftie had much truft for me; bot could not wonder enough, what prejudice the Scottifh Lords had againft Middletone. Nixt day the King calld me, and told me full as much as my Lord Chancellor had faid, and wrote much of it to the Earle of Glencairden in a letter, which he commanded him to communicate to the reft of the loyall Lords.

1660.

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

Bot there was litle need of any agenting any thing at Court, or of a new Generall for the Scots, or yet of armes to be fent to Scotland; for the Kings reftoration, and the means tending to it, were carried on in fuch a way, and fo faft, as himfelfe could neither with nor expect the bufienes to be done better. He is proclaimd in all his three kingdomes; is complimented by the Embaffadors of the United States at Breda; invited to the Haag by the provinces of Holland; is there royallie and magnificentlie wellcomd and entertaind; is congratulated by the Embaffadors of all the Princes of Chriftendome who were at that Court; his oune fleet is fent to bring him home, with Commiffioners from both Houfes of Parliament. He embarkes in it, and nixt day lands at Dover, and enters his capitall citie of London triumphantlie, on his birthday, where, at his Banquetting-houfe, both his Houfes made their humble Addreffes to him. And all this was done in leffe then tuo months time.

At my returne to the Haag, I found my wife bot weaklie recoverd of a heavie fickenes; and that obligd me to ftay in Holland with her, till it pleafd God fhe was perfitlie well. Generall Middletone had once more fallen ficke at Breda of a tertian, bot it was of no continuance, fo that it hinderd him not to accept of the grace the King offerd, to take him along with him in his oune fhip. If he did reffent any thing was movd to the King, to put ane other in his roome, he did not well to revenge himfelfe on me; for not only my Lord Chanclor, bot the King himfelfe cleerd me of haveing any hand in it; and if himfelfe harbourd any evill thoughts of me, he diffembld deeplie, for he profefd otherwife.

At my comeing to London, I found his pouer greater, bot his kindnes leffe; I fpeake this trulie, thogh I intend not to defcend to particulars. His Majeftie had defignd him to be Earle, his Hie Commiffioner at his enfueing Parliament of Scotland, Captaine Generall of his forces there, Captaine of his Caftle of Edinburgh, Extraordinare Lord of the Seffion, and to have a troope of horfe for his guard. No act of grace or favour conferrd on any Scot, but what paffd either thorough his hands, or the Earle of Lauderdaills; and thogh formerlie thefe tuo had beene very intimate friends, yet then the feeds of jealoufies betueene them were foune, which brought forth fruits therafter of implacable animofities. Ambition will have the uppermoft roome; great Pompey will endure no equall, and greater Cæfar will acknouledge no fuperior.

I petitiond the King to remember my faithfull, thogh finall fervices His Majeftie bad me tell, to whom I defird he fould have referd the confideration of my bufienes. I namd the tuo Earles of Lauderdaill and Middletone. Lauderdaill promifd, whatever Middletone wold project for me in Scotland, he fould get it pafd by the King in England. It may be; and I beleeve it, he wold have beene as good as his word; bot he was never put to it; for, though, befides all other former fervices of my oune, my Lord Chanclor of England had, by a letter, very ferieouflie recommended me to Earle Middletone, yet did he never doe, act or propone any thing for me. Tuo things I projected for myfelfe, which fo foone as I told him of them, he obtaind a grant of them both to other tuo gentlemen. When I kifd the Kings hand at my parting from Whitehall, in prefence of fome of the greateft men in England, (except thefe of the blood), his Majeftie exprefd himfelfe very gracieouflie touards me, and told me, he had orderd his Commiffioner to provide for me. He conferd Knighthood on me, ane honor trulie never either defervd or defird by me.

I ftayd in that condition till Auguft 1662, and then it was that my Lord Commiffioner, by his Majefties expreffe command, orderd Colonell Urrey and myfelfe, to raife each of us a companie of foot; the third the King had ordaind for my Lord Clermont, Middletons onlie fonne; bot his father takeing on him to be his tutor, gave the companie to Major Thomfone. Shortlie after, the Duke of Lennox raifd a companie for Dumbarton, and the Earle of Mar ane other for Stirline Caftles. All five marchd in September to Glafgow, where my Lord Commiffioner comeing in his progreffe to the weft, he appointed the Earle of Linlithgow to be Lieutenant Colonell of his Majefties guards of foot, and me to be Sergant Major. For what reafon this was done, will be to litle purpofe to tell. I had no commiffion till, a yeare and a halfe after, the King fent me one.

In the yeare 1663, his Majeftie being difpleafd with fome of E. Middletons doeings, appointed E. Rothes to fucceed him, and to be his Hie Commissioner at the third Seffion of Parliament, at the close wherof, E. Middletons troop of horfe was casheered. Touards the latter end of the yeare, the King tooke from him his commission of Captaine Generall, which he gave to none at this time; as also his commission of Captaine of Edinburgh Castle; that, he conferd on E. Lau-derdaill; and beftowd likewife his place of extraordinarie Lord of the Seffion on the Archbifhop of Glafgow. And this may fufficientlie let us fee the lubricitie of Court favours and preferments, the mutabilitie of all fublunar things, and the truth of that a noble French author writes, " la montée aux prosperites, eft de verre, la cime, tremblement, et la descente un precipice;" the ascent to prosperities, fayth he, is of glaffe, the top wherof trembles, and the discent is a precipice. It verifieth alfo, what the Italian poet, Torquato Taffo, fayth,

1663.

> A glli voli troppo alti et repentini, Soglino i precipitii effer vicini. Sudden and hie advancements, frequentlie By precipiteous dounfalls followd be.

Yet the King profeffed ftill kindnes for him, which he hath witneffed was reall fince, in makeing him Governour of Tanger, ane honorable command.

I ftayd at Glafgow, quietlie attending my charge, till the yeare 1663; and from it I beginne the narration of what has fince befallen me.

MEMOIRS OF SIR JAMES TURNER;

PART THIRD,

CONTAINING A FULL NARRATION OF THE INSURRECTION IN SCOTLAND TOWARDS THE LATTER END OF THE YEAR 1666, AND OF HIS MISFORTUNES FOLLOWING THEREUPON, TILL THE YEAR 1670.

S

the older while all a straight of

. . .

•_____

•

IN the beginning of the yeare 1663, ane unhappie quarrell arose betueene the Minister and some of the people of Kirkcubright. It fignified bot litle; bot makeing a great noyfe, the Privie Councell orderd fome Lords to goe thither, and fome forces with them, under the command of the Earle of Linlithgow, my Lieutenant Colonell, to examine the matter, and to imprifon fuch as they found guiltie of the tumult. Some women were carried to Edenburgh, and keepd fome time in the tollbooth; bot by the charitie and bountie of thefe who were of their perfusion, returnd richer home than they came from it. One Ewart, who had beene Provoft, was banifhd out of Scotland, not becaufe he had any acceffion to the commotion, bot becaufe he did not appeafe it. By the Kings clemencie, his Act of Banishment was taken of. This inconfiderable and allmost ridiculous tumult, made a great noyfe at Court, as if the whole Scots were readie to enter England, with a numerous armie, on the account of the Covenant ; wherof fome great perfons thought to have made their feverall ufes.

In the latter end of September of that fame yeare, one Mr Alexander Robertfone, (who was afterward hangd for rebellion) ane expectant minister, tooke on him to open the doores of the church of Anwith, neere that fame toune of Kirkcubright, and preach there to a very great auditorie. Bot thogh upon fummons he appeared at Edenburgh, yet the Privie Councell, to prevent fuch illegall meetings, thought fit to fend me to that fteuartrie, with threefcore men, to be added to the hundreth, whom my Lord Linlithgow had left there under the command of Captaine Ratray, at that time Lieutenant of my companie. Before I came, the Captaine had quarterd fome fojors on the most obftinate oppofers of the conforme ministers, in the parishes of Corfphairne and Balmacllellan; and at my comeing, upon bonds for future obedience, the fojors were a removeing. Neither was any fine exacted. If any ceffe money was taken by the Captaine, or thefe he imployed, I know not, bot I am fure it was not complaind of. At the earnest follicitation of the ministers of these tuo parishes, who were both of them exceeding weake brothers, I caufd the bonds of their parifhoners to be given to them, and they upon faire promifes of the parties, very fimplie redeliverd them; and this act of follie gave fome ground for my returne to that unhappie countrey. At the defire of the Bifhop of Galloway and his finode, I fent threefcore of my fojors with Ratray to Stranraer, commonlie calld the Chappell, being the people there were very diforderlie. After I had ftayd till neere Candlemes of the yeare 1664, the ministers complaining no more, I left that countrey, as I thought, in a reafonable good way to conforme; and in Aprile nixt, the whole partie was commanded backe from Kirkcubright to Glafgow; ane act of the Privie Councell being made to give me thankes for the fervice I had done.

In the month of March 1665, I was the fecond time commanded to that fleuartrie, with a partie confifting of one hundreth and tuentie foot and threttie horfe, to put the laws concerning Church ordinances in execution; the people haveing beene extreamlie outragieous to their ministers, and disobedient to discipline. I stayd about tuo months in that countrey, and reducd it to ane indifferent good order, by ceffing on fome, and by both ceffing and fineing others, and by faire meanes prevaileing with many; fo that most of the Ministers thought, if I had beene permitted to have ftayd longer, they might have had fome comfort in their charges, by a tollerablie good complyance of their parifhioners. Some money I exacted, fparinglie, from those of whose obedience I had hopes; bot from fuch as the ministers and I judged obftinate, I tooke fome money, and bonds for all they were found to be dulie oweing, as 20s. fcots for everie Lords day they had abfented themfelves from their parish churches. The bonds were all in Master Keith his name, under cleark to the Privie Councell. I affurd the perfons who gave the bonds, that upon teftificates from their feverall Minifters, of their frequenting the church, and difhaunting conventicles, it was probable their bonds wold be returnd to them for litle or no money at all; and this I thought fit to flow them at parting. After tuo months ftay there, I was orderd to returne to Glafgow with both horfe and foot, to be employed therafter for difarming fome people in the weft; it being my fate that nothing was intended to be done, that was difpleafing to that country, bot wherin I was made inftrumentall. Immediatlie after I arrivd at Glafgow, I am orderd with both horfe and foot to march to Aire, Irwine and Kilmarnock, to affift the Earle of Glencairden as Sheriffe of Aire, and the Earle of Eglinton as Bailiffe of Cuninghame, for difarming all, except thefe who were entrufted with publike charges.

142

When this was done, I rode ftraight to Edenburgh, and gave the Earle of Rothes, then Lord Commiffioner, ane account of both my negociations. I gave my Lord a paper of what moneys I had reffaved, what I had difburfed, and what I had by me. He fhew the paper to the tuo Lords Archbifhops, and a litle after, all I had done was allowd and approvd as good fervice, and I commanded to deliver up the bonds to Mafter Keith; the fuperplus of the money wherof I had not difpofed being allowd me, as I conceavd, for the charges mentioned in the paper, I had beene at, in three yeares before; as alfo for my expences in the fteuartrie, in the yeares 1663 and 1665. The bonds I accordinglie deliverd to Mr Keith, and tooke a note of reffait of them from him, figned with his hand, which yet I keepe by me. The money I retaind, which was one hundreth and fiftie pound fterline or therabout.

Bot the people of Galloways minds being whollie eftranged from the prefent government of the Church, and haveing beene bot terrified to ane exterior obedience, and, by reafon of my parties fhort ftay, not at all fetled, they foone furnishd their ministers with new occasions of complaints, which were fo loud, that they were brought quicklie to the eares of the tuo Archbistions; and they prefentlie acquainting my Lord Commissioner with the great contempt of the laws, in order to Church Government in that countrey, fo that a refolution was taken to fend me the third time there, as also to Nithsdaill, where the people were likewise become diforderlie. It was intended I fould have gone in the beginning of Januare 1666, but fome things occurd, to which my oune backwardnes to that journey contributed, for indeed my mind prefagd me little good, which retarded my journey till the month of March. I had againe a hundreth and tuentie foot allowed me, and threttie horfe were appointed to follow me, for bringing in the Parliaments fines, as they were called; and indeed I very little meddled with thefe horfe, except that I quarterd fome of them, on fome deficients, in tuo or three parifhes, in the months of September and October after, when I lay myfelfe at the toune of Drumfreis.

1666.

1666.

I was fufficientlie impouerd, with orders and inftructions from my Lord Commiffioner, for ceffing, quartering on and fineing perfons difobedient to church ordinances; neither had I at all any order to cite or proceffe formallie the contemners and diffrequenters of churches, and thefe who married and baptifed with outed minifters; all which perfons could not be dilated to me by the conforme minifters, for they knew leffe than I, which of their parifhoners frequented conventicles. They might indeed miffe them out of their churches, bot could not tell where they were. I was commanded to make inquirie after fuch, and to beftow liberallie upon intelligence, both to find them out, and the fugitive minifters, (whom I had order to apprehend) and to find out fuch who harbourd them, and to quarter on them, and fine them. And by this meanes, I was more able to informe the Bifhop and Minifters of thefe diforderlie meetings, and who were at them, than they could informe me.

In May, if I remember right, a Sinod was keeped at Kirkcubright; where to eafe the phanaticks for fome time of ceffing, at my very earneft defire, ane Act was paid for a bond of future obedience, to be fubfcryved by all who had payd no fine that yeare; with promife that after figneing and obferveing the bond, nothing fould be demanded of them for bygone tranfgreffions; if not, they fould be cefd on, not for refufeing to figne the bond, (for that was a wicked calumnie) bot for the fines they owd for former delinquencies. Many fubfcrivd the bond, and fo payd no fine at all; many refufd it, and fo by my order were quarterd on for their bygone fines. A fortnights time was allowd them to advice, and in that time I went to Glafgow, from whence I had a call from my Lord Commiffioner to come to Edenburgh, where I reflaved new inftructions. At my returne to Galloway, I cefd on fuch tranfgreffors as had neither paid their fines, nor wold figne the bond. Bot makeing haift to Nidfdaill, becaufe of a letter from my Lord Commiffioner, I exacted the fines of very few, bot caufd them pay the ceffe to the fojors, promifeing once more, if they wold yet keepe the church, they fould pay no fine at all; if not, though I was going from them, I wold not faile to fend horfe to quarter on them.

In July, if I miftake not, I came to Drumfries, where I tooke the fame courfe I had done in the fteuartrie of Kirkcubright, and fhire of Galloway. I dealt as favourablie as I could with thefe who were averfe from Church government. And heere I fhall take leave, once for all, to write ane undoubted truth, which is, that I was fo farre from exceeding or transforming my commission and inftructions, that I never came the full length of them; fometimes not exceeding the fixth part of the fines, fometimes not the third, and feldome the halfe; and many fines I never exacted at all, ftill upon the parties promifes of future complyance.

In all the places where I came, the number of the deficients, and the Minifters feares, that I fould be calld backe before the bufienes were done, was fo great, that I was often neceffitated to quarter my whole partie on delinquents, and fcarce keepe any by me, except my oune fervants; this may be cleare by this demonftration, that thogh I ftayd in that countrey full eight months, yet when I was taken, I had the deficients of feven or eight parifhes, whofe names had beene given me long before, to quarter on. And this my order led me to doe, being appointed to ceffe and quarter with my partie, and not to keepe any poft, place or guarrifon; for if it could have been expected that the people of that countrey wold have rifen againft me, my partie when it was ftrongeft, wold have beene too weake to have enterd there; and after I had enterd, it had beene madnes in me to have ceffd or quarterd upon any delinquent; for neceffitie of felfe defence, wold have obliged me to have keepd my whole partie conftantlie together, yea, and to have fortified myfelfe againft hoftile attempts.

Three months before my takeing, the halfe of my foot were tane from me to goe to Leith, the warre being hote with Holland; and in the latter end of October, my horfe were fent for by their fuperiors; fo that I had not in my partie full feventie men, and all thefe, except twelve or thretteen, quartered on deficients in the countrey. In this pofture were my affaires and myfelfe, when, upon the fifteenth day of November, a partie of phanatikes both horfe and foot, to the number of a hundreth and fiftie or therby, furrounded the houfe where I lodged, and made me prifoner. I was ficke at that time, and had beene fo for moft part all that fummer; it being weell knowne that, betueene the firft of March and November, I had let blood feven times. I can not bot regrate all my lifetime that miffortune, which I could not prevent unles I could have forfeene it. Tounes, caftles, citadells, ftrong forts, well guarrifond, yea and fome armies too, have beene furprifed in our oune days; and yet they had reafon to expect the attempt of an enemie, and therfor were obliged to keepe good guards and watches; wheras I had no reafon to looke for any fuch thing, from a people profeffing all kind of obedience to the King, and from thofe who had declard no warre or hoftilitie. And indeed none could fpeake more for me then his Majeftie, when he heard of it, expreffing himfelfe graciouflie in thefe words. "What hath befallen him, might have befallen the beft man of the world." What followed after my takeing, till the overthrow of thefe who tooke me, is fet doune at large in my Relation to the then Lord Commiffioner, a true copie wherof follows.—

1666.

A RELATION of the late Rebells their motions from the time of their rifeing, till their overthrow, made to his Grace his Majefties Hie Commiffioner, by Sir James Turner, Anno 1666.

(a) A set of the se

energian as get of the second proceedings and be a second by the

May it pleafe your Grace. A Laboration of the second state and

If it were onlie there of the phanatick partie that blamd me for being accellorie to the late Rebellion, I fould not be much troubled at it; bot it is no finall greife to me to heare, that fome who profelle to be of ane other perfuasion are apt to truft these misreports, without either heareing me, or examineing the truth, especiallie at a time, when my imprisonment renderd me uncapable to answer for myselfe.

I thinke I may fafelie avouch it, that malice itfelfe could not have abufed me, and that partie under my command, with more horride, unchriftian and inhumane crimes, then a nameles libeller hath done, in ane infamous paper difperfd againft me. And fince I have anfuerd it, and all its corollaries, grievances, aggravations and inftances, I ought in justice to expect that my ansure be beleevd, till the libeller affixe his name to his paper, and undertake to prove it.

147

I thinke I have just reason to defire all, of what perfusion foever they be, to beleeve that the Rebellion was a hatching, long ere I commanded these parties which the libeller mentions; and that none of my actions, which he calls oppressions, gave any rife to that infurrection. And if they will not beleeve me, they will, I hope, give trust to the worst of papers, I meane that infamous Declaration of the rebells themselves, wherin all may see that their takeing armes, aimed at no less marke then the setting up of their dagon the Covenant, the restoration of their Remonstrance, and such a Presiderian government reessant reessant is further that the protesters braines, and the totall abolishing of the present ecclessation.

My Lord, it will be impertinent for me to tell your Grace all the paffages, dureing the time of my impriforment, betweene the Rebells and me. Upon that fubject, I fhall be ready to doe it when you command me; onlie give me leave to fay this much, that they confefd to me, that three or foure of their pretended grieveances, wherof they faid my opprefilon was one, did not at all give ground for their rifeing, bot onlie did accelerate it. Bot let it be fo, that my opprefilon occafioned this infurrection, why did thefe of the flyres of Aire and Clidfdaill rife, on whom I never quartered one foldier? fure thefe men can pretend no opprefilon of mine. If my opprefilon gave a rife to this Rebellion, why did Maxwell of Morith, Macllellan of Barfckob, Maclellan of Balmagaghen, Mr Robinfone the minifter, Gordon of Holme younger, all of them commanders in this infurrection, and all of them profeffing that I had done them feverall favours; why did they, I fay, rife? Nay, why did Wallace, who at length commanded in chiefe, take armes, whom I had not feene in three and tuentie yeares before? Bot I fhall fay no more on this fubject, bot haften to give your Grace a relation, (fo farre as I know), of what pafd from the time the rebells enterd in armes, till they were routed.

1666.

About the 12th or 13th of November 1666, a gentleman of the fteuartrie of Kirkcubright, fent one to acquaint me, that tuo men were comd from the north of Scotland, to follicite feverall perfons, (who they conceavd, were either diffatiffied with the prefent government, or otherwife difcontented,) to rife in armes, promifeing them great affiftance from their countrey: As alfo, he informed me, there was a report, the phanatikes intended to feize on the Citadell of Aire, now called Montgomeries toune, and to repaire it. Bot becaufe the gentleman could averre, neither the one nor the other to be a certaine truth, he defired me to fufpend my beleefe, till he fent a neare friend of his oune to make a more particular inquirie of the whole matter, which I beleeve he did ; bot I was made prifoner, before he could give me any further account.

On the 14th day of the fame month, about fixe of the clocke at night, a corporall of mine, (who had beene quartered 18th miles from Drumfreis), was brought to me on horfebacke, fhot in the bellie by Maclellan of Barfkob, accompanied with 18th or 20th men in armes; and this was done, as the corporall affirmed to me, becaufe he refufd to figne the Covenant. This did fo alarum me, that I refolvd, (thogh at that time I was right ficke,) to march directlie to the place where the ryot was committed, fo foone as I could get any of my fojors together; for my inftructions being, as your Grace knoues, to ceffe fojors perfonallie on thefe who refufed to give obedience to church ordinances, it came often to paffe that I had few or none with me, and at that time, I had not above thretteene with me in toune. This made me immediatlie write orders to most of thefe who were ceffed in the countrey, with all diligence either to come to me, or meet me on the way. I wrote also to the Steuart Depute, and defird him to meet me at the parish of Dalry, where the formentiond corporall was wounded; fo being refolvd to march, with as many of my foldiers as could be brought together the nixt day, I orderd these few who were prefent, to come nixt morning at nine a clocke to my lodgeings, and reffave pouder, match and ball.

Nixt day, being the 15th of the month, I role about fixe of the clocke, and when I was allmost cloathd, I found myselfe fo indisposd that I was fored to goe to bed againe. Betueene eight and nine I arofe once more, and haveing onlie my night goune upon me, the rebells enterd the toune, and furrounded my lodgeing. I went to a window, from whence I calld to them, and inquird what they intended. Severall of them, especiallie Neilfon of Corfock, told me that, if I pleafd, I fould have faire quarter. My anfuere was, I needed no quarter, nor could I be prifoner, being there was no warre declared. Bot I was anfuerd, that prifoner I muft be, or dy; and therfor they wished me quicklie to come doune ftaires, which I choofd rather to doe, (notwithftanding the oppofition of my fervants,) then be murtherd in my chamber, for fome of them had allreadie enterd the houfe. I went to the ftreets in my goune, where many piftolls and fuords were prefented to my head and breaft, till Captaine Gray, (who commanded the whole partie,) made me get on horfebacke, and wold have carried me un-

1666.

cloathd out of toune, promifeing therafter to fend for my cloathes. Bot at length he was perfuaded to goe with me to my chamber, and to permit me to put on these clothes I wore the day before. In the meane time, this Captaine feazd on a coffer of mine, where fome bags of money, fome linnens, and fome papers were. Bot his fojors got more, in ane other chamber, then he; neither could I make him or his officers fenfible of their overfight, in fuffering the rebells to cary away fo much money with them. Before I could get myfelfe in doublet, breeches and bootes, (and hafte enough I was commanded to make,) I could fee myfelfe robd of all the papers, moneys, armes, horfes, clothes, and linnens I had, thogh the Captaine often promifd, that not any thing belongd properlie to myfelfe, fould be imbecelled, and I as oft calld out to them to take all and onlie fave my papers; this was faithfullie promild to me, bot faithleflie broken. Some few of my fojors were taken in their lodgeings, for nine a clocke, at which houre I appointed them to meet, was not yet comd. They lookd for Mafter Chalmers, the Perfon of Drumfreis, bot found him not, yet did they bring away his horfe; neither did I heare of any thing els they plunderd at that time. The Captaine mounted me on his oune horfe, and there was good reafon for it, for he mounted himfelfe on a farre better one of mine, befides these he disposed of to others. Some gentlemen, out of affection, folloued me out of Drumfries; one wherof was rudlie commanded backe, and tuo others were carried eight miles further, allmost as prifoners. Yet I had the opportunitie to tell one of them, that fo foone as he returned to the toune, he fould immediatlie post away a fervant of mine, (whom he knew I trufted,) to my Lord Archbishop of Glafgow, to acquaint him with all had paffed. It was a great addition to my griefe, to know that my Lord at that time, becaufe of a feaver wherof he was not recoverd, might fall in a relapfe, and fo not onlie endanger his life, bot render him uncapable to pay the King and the Church that fervice, which otherwife I knew he was both able and willing to doe; yet I thought it more fitting he fould have it from my fervant, then from ane other, who could not perhaps have given him fo right ane information.

That night I was lodged at the ministers house of Glencairne, bot the rebells did not let me ftay long there, being frighted from thence by a mifintelligence they had, that the Earle of Anandaill, and my Lord Drumlanrig, were follouing them with a ftrong partie of their friends and vaffalls. I found it was in vaine for me, to offer to perfuade the Captaine, that it was purlie impoffible for these Lords, in fo fhort a time, to get fo many men together as could rencounter his partie, which confifted of above ninefcore men, more then the halfe wherof confifted of horfemen, indifferently weill mounted, with fuords, piftolls and carabines; the reft were afoot, armed with mufkets, pikes, fuords, fithes and forkes. When they had carried me away from thence, they put a ftrong guard upon me, and with much difficultie I was permitted to fpeake to the Captaine, who a litle before had difmild tuentie of my fojors, whom he had taken in the countrey; telling them, they fould have no quarters heerafter, if they fervd the Prelats any more. They had kild one Hammilton, a fojor of my oune companie, the night before, becaufe he wold neither take the Covenant, or cared for their quarter. I did pleade, I could be no prifoner of warre, and therfor defird I might be fet at libertie, which was refufd me with much fcorne and contempt.

Then I defird he wold leave me in fome place, till I convalefed, which I hopd wold be within a day or tuo; and then I wold not faile to come to him upon my paroll, which I promifd not to breake. Bot the wicked wretch told me, that he was fo farre from beleeveing my word, that he wold not truft the King, my mafter, if he were there; and utterd fuch horride fpeeches as are not fit for any loyall fubject to rehearfe. I then told him, he might now difpofe of me as he pleafed, for after these expressions of his, it did not become me to make any further applications to him. Most part of that night was spent in rideing, in regard my indifpolition conftraind my guards to march bot floulie. Once they tooke me in to refresh at a place called Castellfairne ; the honneft woman of the houfe was bot fhreudlie ufed, becaufe by her pitifull lookes fhe did fhow fhe had commiferation of my condition. There was one of my guards, called Canon of Barnfhalloch, who entertaind me the whole night, with difcourfes of death, by order, as I imagind, from the Captaine. He told me, he beleeved it was concluded I fould dy, and therfor wifhd me to prepare for it, and to repent of all my haynous finnes, efpeciallie of that crying one, of my perfecuting Gods people, who made conficience to keepe the Covenant, to which all my actions fhew me to be a mortall enemie. It is needles to trouble your Grace with any more of his language, or my anfuers to him; let it be enough to fay, that I endeavord to learne from him, whether my death was to be delayed till more of their forces were comd together; his anfuere was, it was probable it might be delayed.

On the fixteenth day of the month, we came to the old Clachan of Dalry, where their number increased to tuo hundreth and fiftie. Mafter Hugh Hendersone, late minister of Drumfries, who lived neere that houfe, obtained leave of Gray, that I might dine with him at his houfe. And thogh he and I be of different perfuasions, yet I will fay, that he entertaind me with very reall kindnes, and defird the Captaine to fet me at libertie; whole anfuere was, that he could not difpole of me, till he came to the fhire of Aire, where he was to reffave further orders from his fuperiors. At this place, Major Steuart of Monwhill gave me a vifite, and thogh he be a Prefbiterian, yet in plaine enough language. he called them both fooles and knaves. It was reported to me, that Captaine Graye did heere offer to refigne his command to this Major Steuart, and that he abfolutlie refused it. I had often enquird what this Captaine Gray was, and by what authoritie he did command thefe gentlemen he had never feene before; bot I was anfuerd by them all, that they knew no more of him, bot that he called himfelfe Captaine Gray, and that he had brought ane order with him, to them all to obey him. I tooke much pains to learne from whom that order came, whether from one man, as a Generall, or from more men, as a councell, a committee, or junto; bot could never yet, by any means I could ufe, come to the knouledge of it.

At night, the Captaine lodged me with himfelfe, at one Mr Chalmers of Waterfide his houfe, who entertaind me with much curtefie and civilitie. Bot fo did not my Captaine; for he being againe alarmd with a report, that Anandaill and Drumlanrig were feene with a bodie of horfe neere a foord of the water of Ken, he got himfelfe on horfebacke, and calld inceffantlie to mount the prifoner, for now I had lofd my oune name, and paft under that of the prifoner. And becaufe I was not fo foone mounted as he would have had me, he entertaind me with very rude language, and threatned me with death. This alarum provd falfe, thogh it was moft true that thefe Lords were very bufie raifeing men, to purfue the rebells. I was permitted to goe into the houfe againe, bot not permitted to ftay long in it, for about eleven or twelve of the clocke at night, I was againe fet on horfebacke. Very dark it was, it raind pitifullie, the wind was loud, and the way exceeding bad; yet ficke as I was, I was forcd to ride eight miles to Corfphairne, where the Captaine lodgd me in a countrey houfe, with fixteene horfemen to guard me. I fpent the reft of the night till day, in that poore houfe, as well as I could. Bot my Captaine refted bot litle, for the day before he had fent away the money, and other baggage, which he had got from me, and thinking he had fped well enough, refolvd to retire himfelfe, before the fire grew hoter; and accordinglie did beginne his retreate that very night, which he managd fo difcreetlie, that he was never feene fince by either me, or any of his oune partie.

I have often thought fince of the follie of this poore fellow, who fince he was not fo abfolutlie wicked as to take my life, and that it was money he was looking after, why he could not be fo abfolutlie good to himfelfe as to take me with him, who, no queftion, wold have bought my libertie from him with all the moneys I could be mafter of.

The feventeenth day of the month was fpent in their quarters, under the command of Barfkob, Corfock and Robinfone the minifter, who paft then under the name of Captaine Robinfone. At night they inlarged their quarters, in that fame parifh of Corfphairne; and I was fent to the houfe of one Gordon of Knockgray, who was himfelfe in prifon at Kirkcubright, bot his fonne did entertaine me very kindlie, for fome favours I had done to his father, bot he was forced likewife to entertain threttie horfe, who were fent to attend me,

The eighteenth day of the month, being the Lords day, we marchd to Damellintoun, to which place Mr John Welch was comd from Edenburgh, with Maxwell of Morith, Maclellan of Balmagachen, and three or foure gentlemen more, who all of them became officers immediatlie. The first halfe of that way, I was guarded by civill enough men; bot haveing fpent one houre at a pitiefull alehoufe, I was deliverd to ane other guard, the commander wherof did entertaine me the length of foure miles, with all the infolent and outrageous words that he could invent, and affurd me, that dy I muft, and dy I fhould. My anfuere was, that my life was not fo deare to me, as that I wold feeke it from him. When we were comd to their body, I perceave the commander, whom I knew not. Somthing pufled with marfhalling his diforderlie rable, he prefentlie commanded tuo of the wickedeft of his guards to cary me forward to the other fide of a litle hill; and fpoke fome thing els privatlie to them, which I did interprete to be a command to difpatch me; which conceit of mine was corroborated by the inhumane language of these tuo who conducted me, who told me, it was just both with God and man, to put me to death on a Sabbath day; in regard, faid they, I had forced many pretieous Chriftians to tranfgreffe the Sabbath, by hindering them to heare their lawfull paftors in hills and woods, and forcd them to goe to church, to heare dumbe dogs, for fo they qualified conforme minifters. I defird them to doe with me what was commanded them, and not to ftirre up my paffion, which might choak thefe better thoughts and meditations that were fit for me to entertaine at that time. Bot I found therafter, that their wickednes proceeded meerlie from themfelves, for I was fent to that place, onlie that I fould not fee the diforders of their new troops.

1666.

1666.

At Damellinton I was quarterd at the principall inne, where I had often lodged before ; my hofte and hofteffe made me very wellcome ; and thogh both of them wer Prefbiterians, yet did they profeffe their diflike of the infurrection, and my impriforment. Sufficientlie well guarded I was, for three; (whom they calld gentlemen,) ftayd in the chamber with me, three others at the chamber door, and the reft below ftaires. After my guards had fupped, at my charges, Mr Welch fent one to enquire of me, if I wold reffave a vifite from him; my anfuere was, he was a perfon I was lookeing for thefe tuo yeares bygone, bot I had found him now in a wrong time; however, he might come when he pleafd. When he came, he enterd in a tedious difcourfe of the Covenant, which, as he faid, had made Scotland glorieous in the eyes of the nations. He held out to me, how great ane enemie I had beene to that Covenant, and how much I had endeavord to support Prelacie, by suppressing and oppreffing the people of God, who loved not that government. He wilhd me to meditate much on death, which, as he faid, I knew not how foone might overtake me. That, thogh perhaps I might anfuere before men for all I had done, yet it wold be hard for me to ansuere all before the tribunall of Jefus Chrift, where it was like I might fhortlie compeare. He confidentlie offerd to affure me, that the Lord had reveald it unto them, that this was the time appointed by God, for the deliverance of his faints and people, from the perfecutions and tirannies of thefe who had vilipended and contemned the Covenant. And then he told me, that thogh a ftrict guard was still to be keepd over me, vet it was the falvation of my foule that they fought, and that they refolvd to endeavor to gain me, and that I needed not to apprehend death ; bot added these words, " I meane," faid he, " not fo foone." I anfuerd particularlie to everie part of this long difcourfe. Among other things, I told him, that revelations and miracles were ceafd; that it was not probable that he or his partie could fet up their Covenant, with fuch inconfiderable numbers as either they yet had, or were like to get, against the Kings standing forces; the which, in all probabilitie, were on their march against them. I wishd they wold more maturlie confider what they were doeing, and give over in time, goe home to their houfes, and fubmit to the Kings clemencie; whofe former acts of grace might give them confidence to beleeve, that they had to doe with a mercifull prince, who would pardon their errors, and take their grievances to his royall confideration. Bot by thefe difcourfes I prevaild as much with him, as he did with me by his. I calld for a cup of ale, purpoflie that I might heare him fay grace. In it, he prayd for the King, the reftoration of the Covenant, and downfall of Prelacie. He prayd likewife for me, and honord me with the title of Gods fervant, who was then in bonds. He prayd for my conversion, and that repentance and remiffion of finnes might be granted to me. After this, the conference broke up, at which were prefent as many as the roome could well hold.

On the ninteenth day of the month, about foure of the clocke in the morning, when I was makeing readie, eight or nine of the rebells horfmen, commanded by Mr Robinfone the minifter, rod thorough the village tuice or thrice, ey crying aloud, "Rander your prifoner, rebells, rander your prifoner, or you fhall all dy." I inftantly conjecturd, that this was done on purpofe to try what countenance I wold fhow, and therefore I affurd my guards, (who were indeed ignorant of the defign,) that it was their own people, for it was impoffible for any of the Kings forces to be fo neere. One of them went doune ftairs, and at his return told me, I had conjecturd right; bot, faid he, when first I heard the cry, I doubted whether to kill you, or goe doune ftaires firft. I afkd him, if he had any fuch order, to which he and his comerads anfuered with filence. It was then that one of my intelligencers (for tuo I had gaind among them,) told me, they were refolvd to difpatch me, fo foone as they met with any opposition; bot this resolution was afterwards alterd. My guards were changd that morning, and after all the new officers had given me a civile vifite, we marchd, and about tuo of the clocke in the afternoone, I was quarterd befide the church of Torbolton, and their horfe in the parish; the foot lodging in the church and church-yard. That afternoone many joynd with them, both from the fhire of Aire and Cliddfdaill, infomuch as they fpoke of nothing bot marching to Glafgow the nixt day. Bot being informed that night, that My Lord Duke of Hamilton and Generall Dallyell were both comd to that toune, and that nixt day the whole forces wold be there, they betooke themfelvs to their fecond thoughts. Towards the evening, Mr Robbinfone and Mr Crukshank gave me a vifite; I calld for fome ale, purpoflie to heare one of them bleffe it. It fell Mr Robbifone to feeke the bleffing, who faid one of the most bombastick graces that ever I heard in my life. He fummond God Allmightie very imperiouflie to be their fecondarie, (for that was his language ;) " and if," faid he, "thou wilt not be our fecondarie, we will not fight for thee at all, for it is not our caufe, bot thy caufe; and if thou wilt not fight for our caufe, and thy oune caufe, we are not obliged to fight for it. They fay," faid he, " that Dukes, Earls, and Lords are comeing with the Kings Generall against us, bot they shall be nothing bot a threshing to us." This grace did more fullie fatiffie me of the follie and injuffice of their caufe, then the ale did quench my thirft. That night, they fent feverall parties abroad, who brought many horfes to them. One partie they fent to the toune of Aire, which brought out of the tolbooth all thefe armes, which E. Glencairne and I had taken from the countrey people the yeare before.

.

The nixt day, being the tuentieth of the month, about eleven or tuelve of the clocke, the rebells marchd ftraight to Aire, and fo farre as I could well perceave, their numbers were encreafed to above feven hundreth ; bot they gave it out, that there were five hundreth for them, at fuch a place, and fixe hundreth at ane other place, and that their brethren of the north had crofd Forth at the heads. This they told, with many more lyes; for to fpeake untruths was a veniall finne with thefe perfons. While we were on our way, one Major Lermond accofted me, and ufd me with many infolencies, telling me, he had knowne me before ; " and at that time," faid he, " you were a gentleman, bot now you are not; for you are a perfecutor of Gods faints, and hath made yourfelfe a flave to Prelacie, and the inftrument of their tirannie." I told him, thogh all his language were true, yet he had timd it very ill. Mafter Gabriell Semple tooke him away from me, and did himfelfe enter in a difcourfe with me, of Epifcopacie, Prefbiterie and the Covenant. I was very free with him, in declareing my mind concerning all the three. Then he enquired of me, whether I thought vice and finne were not more punished in the time of Prefbiterie, then it was now in the time of Epifcopacie. I anfuerd, that thogh I fould grant that to be true, yet wold it militate onlie against the Bifhops perfons, and not at all against their functions. Bot that he might fee that I wold not grant him that either, I told him, I never faw either publike or private finne more abound then in the years 1643 and 1644, when the Solemne League and Covenant was fubfcrived by many. He purfued that difcourfe no further, bot told me, I was in difgrace with the King, diferted by the Bifhops, and threatened with death by the Generall; and that I might eafilie rid myfelfe of all these difficulties, by figneing the Covenant. Bot when he faw that did not prevaile, he had a large difcourfe of death, on which he defird me to meditate, and fo parted civillie with me. That night I was lodged at Aire in ane inne, three of their gentlemen in the chamber with me, and a guard of horfe and foot below ftaires. Severall of my acquaintances were permitted to fee me, bot not to difcourfe in private with me. Yet Colonell Robfone, ane English gentleman, who lives at Montgomeries toune, found meanes to tell me quietlie, that my death was refolvd on, fo foone as the rebells did once fee the Kings forces. At this place I borrowed a little money from a friend of mine, for I had beene mafter of none fince I was made prifoner. I cannot omit to tell, that on our march to Aire, Major Mackulloch, who was fince executed at Edenburgh, in my hearing, praifd God for that happie day he had now feene; and, faid he, "Magnified be thow, Lord, for thow haft done thy oune worke thyfelfe." One of his partie, and my guards, rejoyned in this language; "Bide you yet, fir, the worke is not halfe done, the play is bot beginning." I lookd immediatlie to him, and fmild on him, and fo did he upon me. Then I refolvd, if poffible, to make a ftrict acquaintance with him, and to that purpose entered in a difcourfe with him; bot by it, I found he was a perfor not fit to be entrufted with fecrets, and therfor tooke no more notice of him.

1666.

On the tuentieth and one day of the month, my guards were changed; halfe a dozen wherof came to the roome where I was, and pulld me out of it with much rudenes and infolence; neither wold they give me time to fubfcrive a note for fome moneys I owed to my landlord for my fupper, a hat, and fome linnens, his wife had prepared for me. And when they had brought me doune ftaires, and found no horfe readie for me, they made me walke afoot allmost out of toune, till the gentleman who commanded my guards the day before, came and carried me backe to the inne, where I had time to fatifie my hoft, and take my morning draught. And then the fame gentleman faw me mounted on fuch a horfe as they had allowed me. Heere a fpurre, which they had permitted me to weare before, was taken from me; and then I was carried out of toune, where they were drauing up their companies. He who commanded my guards, did moft infolentlie revile me; he told me, I was a greater perfecuter of Chriftians, then any who was ever mentiond in hiftorie. He faid, I was the author of all the mifchiefes that had befallen either the Covenanters, or the Covenant itfelfe. Nay, the foole averd, that I was the man that had both prefented and admitted the minifters in feverall parifhes, unfufficient fellows, that came in by my meanes, without the peoples confent, with much more ftuffe to this purpofe. He was fo extravagant, that I enterd in fome paffion with him, which made me tell him, it was below me to anfuere his infolent follies, and that he might fay what he pleafed, for I wold take no more notice of his language then of the barking of a dog; at which the ridiculous fellow requird the reft of the guard to be his witneffes, that thogh there was a great alteration in my condition, yet my heart was not at all changed, bot hardend in wickednes, in fo farre, that I had compared him, who was a good Chriftian, to a dog. Bot Mafter Crukfchanck the minifter, haveing heard of this dialogue, came and gave him a very fevere reproofe, and told him, thogh ane idolatrous king had faid it, yet it was truth, that he who puts on his harneffe, fould not boaft, as he who puts it of. Neither, faid he, does any of us know, bot that before night, we may be in the fame condition that this gentleman is, or a worfe. From Aire, the rebels marched tuo miles, and paffed the water at Afton Bridge, and then drew up in a field. My ignorant guard carried me up to their van, where I prefentlie began to number them, bot was foone interrupted by fome of their officers, who under a fhow of civilitie, defired me and my guards to goe to the nixt alehoufe and refrefh a litle.

161

X

Heere they ftayd about tuo houres and a halfe, and as I was told, placd fome officers both of horfe and foot. Immediatlie after, they repaffed the fame bridge, and marchd in to the parifh of Colton. Bot by the way, I was commanded to alight from the horfe I did ride on, becaufe they alleadged he was too fuift, and mounted I was on ane other, who wold not goe without ftroakes. And to make fure worke with me, they tooke away a fpurre from me, which that fame wicked fellow, who had abufd me fo much that morning, (to make fome amends for his uncivilitie,) had lent me. I was very defireous to have keepd the fpurre, bot Major Lermond told me, that the committee had orderd it otherwife. "What," faid I, " have they brought the bufienes that length, as to a committee ? perhaps the firft act of it hath unfpurd me." They likewife appointed one Callhoone, a bankrupt merchant of Glafgow, in whom they much trufted, to command my guards ; which he did tuo days together very firictlie, yet with very much refpect and civilitie. Heere Lieutenant Colonell Wallace came to me, in a long cloake, his muntero draune over his face, and his beard very rough. His deportment was civill; he afkd me, how I had my health, and if I knew him. I told him, I knew his face, but could not fo foone remember his name. He immediatlie told me who he was, and profefd to be forry to fee me in that condition; and after that, I had conftantlie exterior civilities from him. We lodgd that night difperfdlie in that parifh of Coltoun, where we had fome alarums. And after the word "horfe, horfe," was given, (for that was all their trumpet;) the nixt word was conftantlie, "mount the prifoner," which many times was given in fuch hafte, that I had litle time alloud me to pull on my bootes; which made me refolve in time coming not to pull them of at all, thogh it provd exceeding troublefome to ride, walke, fit and ly conftantlie in them.

On the tuo and tuentieth day of the month, we marchd to Ochilltree, where Mafter Johne Welch, (who went from Damellintoune to Galloway to fetch frefh forces,) met us with his armie, (for fo fome of the rebells wold needs have it called). I faw them afarre of, and reckond them to be neere one hundreth ill armed foot, and fome fifteene or fixteene horfe. I was lodged that night at the principall alehoufe of the toune, where I was indifferentlie well ufed, and vifited by fome of their officers and minifters. Moft of their foot were lodged about the church and churchyard, and order given, to ring bells next morning, for a fermon to be preachd by Mr Welch. Maxwell of Morith and Major Mackulloch, invited me to heare that phanatick fermon, (for foe they merrilie calld it). They faid, that preaching might prove ane effectuall meane to turne me, which they heartelie wifhd. I anfuerd them, that I was under guards, and that, if they intended to heare that fermon, it was probable I might heare it likewife, for it was not like my guards wold goe to church, and leave me alone at my lodgeings. Bot to what they fpoke of my conversion, I faid, it wold be hard to turne a Turner. Bot becaufe I found them in a merry humour, I faid, if I did not come to heare Mr Welch preach, then they might fine me in fortie fhillings Scots, which was duoble the foume of what I had exacted from the phanatikes. Bot there was no fermon, which undoubtedlie I would have heard, if there had beene any. It was told me, that Mr Welch had a fhort fpeech to their officers, at Sir Johne Cochrans houfe, where most of them, and their ministers were quarterd; bot his lady was fo farre from makeing them wellcome, (Sir Johne himfelfe being then with the Generall), that fhe would not be feene by any of them. And I fuppofe, we were all of us deare enough guefts to Sir Johne, for I am confident, his fervants were forcd to entertaine neere a hundreth of their horfes, among whom were fixteene of my guardes, if not more.

On the tuentie third day of the month they broke up from Ochilltrie, about eleven of the clocke in the morning, and marchd to Cumlock. Once I thought the rebells intended for Sanquor, to pay there fome of their relligieous vowes; one wherof was, to ruine my Lord Drumlanrigs caftles and lands, becaufe he was active against them, and, as they were informed, had hangd tuo of his vafials or tennents, becaufe they had faild to be at a rendes-vous which he had appointed. Bot the faints were wife in their anger, and delayd their revenge till a more fit opportunitie. Upon their march to Murekirke, they had intelligence that the Kings forces were marchd the day before from Glafgow to Killmarnock, which provd to be true. The way to that church was exceeding bad, a very hie wind, with a grieveous raine in our faces. The night fell darke before we could reach the place where the foot were quartered, with no meate or drinke, and with very litle fire. I doe confeffe, I never faw luftier fellows, then thefe foot were, or better marchers; for thogh I was appointed to ftay in the reare, and notwithftanding thefe inconveniences, yet I faw few or none of them ftragle. Major Lermond, (who endevord to make fome amends for his former incivilities), gave order to quarter me in the beft alehoufe neere the church. Bot threttie of their foot came likewife, and quarterd themfelves with me, in fpite of my horfe guards.

On the tuentieth and fourth day of the month, about nine of the clocke of the morning, they rendevould at Murekirke; where I was permitted to buy tuo litle nags, ane for myfelfe, and ane other for a drummer of mine, who had ftayd conftantlie with me, and for both I payd no more bot tuelve dollars; it will be eafilie granted I could doe no great feates on horfes of that price. It was from this place, or from Douglas, that they fufferd Mr Welch his fervant to carry ane open letter of mine to my wife at Glafgow, for they wold not permit me to write to . . . . . . . (who, they faid, was at London), or to my Colonell the Earle of Linlithgow, or to Generall Dallyell. We began our march about ten a clocke, and fpent moft of the day ere we could get to Douglas, the way being rough and mountanous, and the weather rainie and boifterous. Here it was told me, by one of my intelligencers, that they intended to march to Hammilton, and from thence, (if they could give the Generall the goeby,) to Glafgow. We made a ftand at Douglas till quarters were made, and in that interim, I was accofted. by one Mitchell, whom I had never feene before, a preacher, bot no actuall minister, who spared not to raile sufficientlie against all authoritie both fupreame and fubalterne. He feemd to be most offended with the gentlemen of the long robe, who, as he conceavd, had beene the contrivers and penners of thefe laws, either in Parliament or Councell, which did uphold the prelaticall government. Nixt to them he furieouflie blamd me, for oppreffing men in their confciences and eftates, by putting thefe unjust laws in execution. He faid, I had opprefd men who had fhoune more loyaltie to the King, in the time of ufurpation, then any of these who had pend those laws. I told him, sharplie enough, if both my confcience and judgment had not gone along with the justice and equitie of these laws, no worldlie advantages fould ever have made me undertake the execution of them. He feemd to commend my ingenuitie, bot enterd on ane other difcourfe, which paffd all prefcriptions of modeftie. That night, Wallace beganne to command their forces, which power, with the title of colonell, as I was told, was given him by their committee; in which also it was debated, what fould be done with me, bot nothing concluded on the matter.

On the tuentie and fifth day of the month, being the Lords day, they broke up from Douglas, and marched neere Lefmahego; haveing beene informed, bot not trulie, that my Lord Duke of Hammilton, onlie with his oune troope, and fome of the countrey gentlemen, . . . . . . which made them fpeake of beateing up his quarters; which gladlie they wold have done, being much incenfed againft my Lord, becaufe he had . forced, under all hieft paines, the gentrie and communaltie to goe with the . Generall, againft both their confciences and judgments, as they pretended. At this place they ftayd about tuo houres, haveing fent a partie of horfe to Lanrick to make quarters. I was taken into a contrey houfe, under pretence to refresh, bot it was, that I fould not looke upon their armie, (for fo they were pleafd to call it,) till they had marshalld it rightlie. At length I was mounted, and led along the reare of both horfe and foot, and therafter I was brought to the front of the battell, where I did not let the opportunitie flip to reckon them. I found their horfe did confift of foure hundreth and fortie, and the foot of five hundreth and upwards, befides the partie of horfe which was at Lainrick, and fome other fmall parties which they had fent abroad to plunder horfes; a Sundayes exercife proper onlie for phanaticks. The horfe men were armed for most part with fuord and pistoll, fome onlie with fuords. The foot, with mufket, pike, fith, forke and fuord; and fome with ftaves, great and long. There I faw tuo of their troopes fkirmifh against other tuo, (for in foure troopes their cavallerie was divided,) which I confesse they did handfomlie, to my great admiration. I wonderd at the agilitie of both horfe and rider, and to fee them keepe troope fo well, and how they had comd to that perfection in fo fhort a time. The foot were not exercifed at this time. At length they marched to Lanrick, the horfe croffing the river of Clide by the foord, and the foot by the boate, for there was bot one.

The principall Bayliffe of the toune was willing to have lodged me at his oune houfe, bot he was onlie permitted to flow his kindnes to me, by prefenting me with a cup of ale in his oune chamber, (all the reft being taken up for their officers), and by giveing me a vifite at ane other lodging prepard for me. Heere Commiffarie Lockheart came alfo and faw me, and profferd very kindlie to lend me any gold or filver I ftood in need of, wherof I did not accept, yet I borrowed a change of linnens from him. The toune was fearchd for armes and amunition, and onlie fourteene partifanes, and three or foure pound of pouder were found, and taken out of the tollbooth. That night a councell or committee was keepd, where it was concluded, that nixt morning the Covenant fould be renewd, and fuorne. And the queftion was, whether immediatlie after, they fould put me to death ; they who were for it, pretended ane article of the Covenant obliged them to bring all malignants to condigne punifhment. Bot it was refolvd, that I fould not dy fo foone, bot endeavors fould be ufed to gaine me. All this was told me by one of my intelligencers, before tuo of the clocke nixt morning. Yet I have heard fince, that it was formallie put to the vote, whether I fould dy prefentlie, or be delayed, and that delay was carried in the councell, by one vote onlie.

٩.,

Let now all people of impartiall judgments determine, whether this armie of pretended faints fpent this Lords day, as Chriftians ought to doe; and thefe who make Sabbath breakeing a crying finne, how will they excufe this crue of rebellious hipocrites, who began that dayes worke in the morning with ftealeing a filver fpoone and a night goune at Douglas, and fpent the reft of the day, moft of them in exercifeing, in a militarie way, and the reft in plundring houfes and horfes, and did not beftow one houre or minute of it, in the Lords fervice, either in prayers, praifes or preaching? Bot they made a good amends at night; for omitting the dueties of the day, by paffing one act for renewing the Covenant, and ane other for murthering me whenever they fould thinke it fitting. This I fhall fay, they were not to learne to plunder, and that I have not feene leffe of divine worfhip any where, then I faw in that armie of theirs; for thogh at their rendevoufes and halts they had opportunitie enough everie day for it, yet did I never heare any of their minifters, (and as themfelves told me, there was not fo few as tuo and threttie of them, wherof onlie five or fixe converfd with me,) either pray, preach, or fing pfalmes; neither could I learne that it was ever practifd publiklie, except once by Mr Robbifone at Corffairne, ane other time by Mr Welch at Damellinton, and now the third time by Mr Semple at Lanrick, where the laufull paftor was forcd to refigne his pulpit to him. What they did in feverall quarters, I know not; perhaps they had fome familie exercife there. I am fure in my quarters, my guards neither prayd nor praifd, for any thing I ever heard; and being for moft part in one room together, it is to be fuppofed I muft have beene a witnes to their devotions. Bot I confeffe I was more overwearied with the tedioufnes and impertinencies of their graces before and after meate, then I was either with the fcarfnes or badnes of my meate and drinke.

168

1666.

It was now Monday morning, the tuentie fixth of the month, when one of their minifters did reade the Covenant on the top of the ftaires of the tollbooth, which was fuorne by all the affiftants. Bot neither I nor any of my guards were invited to that morning exercife. When moft of them were marchd out of toune, I was calld out of my lodgeing, and Major Lermond wold needs convoy me himfelfe, for feare, forfooth, that the toune people fould ftone me. Bot I am fure none of them offered fo much as one injurieous word to me; yet I heard many poore people curfe them for takeing free quarter, (I haveing paid my hofte for all my guards and I dranke; for meate he wold take nothing, for which he witneffed his thankfullnes in holding my ftirrop, when I got on horfebacke.) It was ane ordinare thing for any of them all, to call for any thing was neceffare for either horfe or man, and fay they wold pay it when they came backe. This was bot a peccadillo in both officers and fojors, for a great finne it could not be in fuch faints, who, fay they, have the onlie true right to the creature. Bot one houre was not paft, when I could tell Major Lermond what made him fo officious as to convoy me that morning. There was a certaine perfone, who fhall be nameles, who defird to fee me led as a prifoner, environd with a number of draune fuords, to fatifie whom, the Major led me out of the way round about the tollbooth, before a hie window where that perfone ftood. There were many fignes of joy, and much laughter paffd betuixt him and the Major, yet he endevord to keepe himfelfe fo within the window that I fould not fee him, bot in vaine, for I faw him well enough. It was a ridiculous action of that foolifh Major, to fatiffie any mans curiofitie, by abufeing himfelfe, and the charge he then exerced. And to the other, I fhall fay, it was below a gentleman, and unbefeeming a good fubject, to defire to glut his eyes with the fight of the low condition and captivitie of one who profeffd loyaltie to the King, Heere at Lanrick feverall fellows joyned with the rebells, to the number, as I thinke, of fortie or fiftie; bot they were not able to arme the halfe of them. And now the rebells were in their greateft ftrength, which I avow never to have exceeded eleven hundreth horfe and foot, (if ever they were fo many,) for thogh in everie place fome came to them, yet fome likewife diferted them, among whom were fome of their ministers, particularlie Mr Alexander Pedden.

Without the toune, in fight of their armie, for fo they wold have it called, Major Lermond, Mr Robbinfone, and ane other minister whom I knew not, with tuo or three officers more, came to me; and the Major embraceing me, faid, that I was in greater fafetie with them then I could be with the Kings forces, in regard the Generall intended to put me to death; and that fome great perfon had, and wold ftop all ways for me to enter in the Kings favour; that I had beft confider my oune condition, that my perfecuteing the Covenant was the ground of the controverfie betweene God and me; and if I wold take the Covenant, as they had done that morning, befides the good I fould doe to my oune foule, I fould be eminent enough in the eyes of the world. Much to this purpose did he and the reft of them harangue to me. My anfuere was premeditated, and fuch as proceeded from one refolvd to dy. First, I wishd that Mr Semple had beene there, to whom I had at large related, on what grounds I had taken that Covenant three and tuentie yeares agoe; as also how I had repented for doeing it; what were the grounds that movd me to that repentance, with a refolution never to enter into it againe. I told them, I lookd upon the prefent condition of affaires with a forrowfull heart, and that I forfaw, that he, whom they calld their enemie, (meaning the Generall,) would engadge them within eight and fortie houres, which I withd I might prevent with the loffe of my life; which I was heartilie willing to facrifice, if therby I might explate thefe offences, wherwith I was unjufflie charged, conditionallie no more blood might be fhed, and that they wold goe home to their houfes and implore his Majefties pardon, who is both readie to forgive for time bygone, and readie to heare their grievances in time to come. "And now," faid I, "gentlemen, you may perceave, by what I have faid, how little the terrors of death are like to prevaile with me;" and to what I have faid, I tooke God to be my witnes, who, faid I, in all probabilitie will fhortlie be my judge. And to Mafter Robbinfone (who fpoke fomething to me of death,) I faid thus; "Mr Robbinfone, I know you, and to you now I fpeake. The houfe of death hath many doores, and thorough one or ane other of them we muft all enter; for me, I refolve to endure the moft fevere ftroake of the Kings juftice, rather than cary a fuord againft him or his authoritie. If," faid I, "a man enjoy the inward peace of his mind, it is no matter whether a feaver, a piftoll, a fuord, a dagger, a hatchet, or a halter, ufher him to his grave." They were pleafd to fay that I had fpoken generouflie, bot averd that all of them were as much for his Majefties perfon and authoritie as I was, or any other that carried his commiffion; and added, they wold give me time to confult with God and my confcience, which I accepted, and fo we parted.

1666.

1666,

They had marchd now about a mile and a halfe, and enterd in a moras, when one came and told them that the enemies forepartie was feene on the other fide of the river; and that Mondrogat, who commanded a partie of theirs at the foord, had either dround or broken the boate. Lermond was fent thither, to fee in what condition their affaires ftood, their body marching on. Bot within one houre, or therby, the Generall had paffd the river with both his horfe and foot; the Earles of Linlithgow and Kellie flowing their foot companies good example by wadeing the river first themselves. Upon this intelligence the rebells facd about, and drew up as formallie as the ground could permit. And certainlie if the Generall had comd up that length and attackd them, he had done it with a notable feene difadvantage, the moras being fo deepe, and the way fo narrow, that hardlie the foot, much leffe the horfe, could do any great fervice. When they heard the Generall had made his quarters at Lanrick, they marchd on. A little before this, Mr Laurie of Blackwood was brought to them; what his errand was

172

1666.

1666.

I know not, bot if it was to intimate the proclamation and act of grace, he did it with fo little noyfe, and to fo few, that not all their officers, much leffe their foldiers, knew any thing of it; neither did he fo much as give me any hint of it, thogh he and I rode a full houre together.

In this march, Wallace had feverall difcourfes with me, particularlie of the ftrength of the Kings forces. I told him, I conceave the troopes of horfe to confift of fixe hundreth, and the tuo regiments of foot neere tuo thousand. Bot he replyd, that he had latelie beene in Edenburgh, and had privatlie feene all the foot companies, when they went out to exercife, and that he conceave them to be below that number I fpoke of. He faid, he was informed that the Generall had left tuo troopes of horfe, and fixe companies of foot behind him, bot where, or for what reafon, he had not yet learned. He faid likewife, that the fpeedines of the march, the foulnes of the weather, and the badnes of the way, muft of neceffitie have leffened the Generalls numbers much; and concluded, he could not be above foure hundreth horfe, and eight hundreth foot. And withall he told me, that many that were with the Generall, wold wearie of the fatigue of the march, and wold importune him to leave his foot, and follow with his horfe, which the faid Wallace protefted, he wold looke upon as a great advantage to his caufe. I flew him he entertained fuch hopes in vaine; for neither could the Kings forces be fo much diminished, or was it probable, the Generall wold feparate his horfe and his foot; " a certain demonstration wheref," faid I, "you have just now learnd, for you have heard that he hath caufd his whole foot wade thorough that foord, which yesternight with some difficultie you paffed on horfeback. Bot if he wold have left his foot behind, it was his time to doe it on the other fide of the river, and then have folloued you with his horfe." Moreover, I told him, it was like, the Lords who were with the Generall, were accompanied with numbers of the countrey gentlemen, with their friends and vaffals. At this he fmild, and did infinuate, that thefe I mentioned were not like to doe him very great hurt, for he looked not on them as enemies to him or his caufe. To this I anfuered, that all the gentlemen of the wefterne fhires who were of his perfuafion, had opportunitie and time enough to have joynd with him, before the Generall came the length of Kilmarnock. And fo we parted for that time.

They came neere to Calder with daylight; and againe, I muft fay, that I have feldome or never feene luftier foot then thefe they had. They keepd rank and file on that miferable way and weather, even to admiration, and yet outmarched their horfe, and got to the van of them, either thorough neglect or mifunderstanding of their officers. Bot Maxwell of Morith and Lermond rode up, and reducd them to their former order. Neere to Calder, I faw halfe a dozen of farmers meet with Mafter Semple, who told him, as I was informed, that a good number of his perfuation had that morning keepd a private rendevous, of purpose to joyne with him, bot haveing heard that the Covenanted armie had marchd touards Glafgow, they had difbanded. Mr Semple imployed thefe fellows to be guides to their armie. When Wallace came up to us, he orderd his forces to march to Bathket, which was a litle out of the roade way to Edenburgh; this, I confeis, made me doubt whether he intended for Edenburgh or Glafgow. He increafed my doubt, by afking me, whether I did not think that when Generall Dalyell heard that he, the faid Wallace, was at Bathket, he wold not imagine, that he had turnd head to Glafgow, and therfor wold endeavour to get between him and it. He fmild when he afkd me this queftion, hugging himfelfe (as I found afterwards) with the fancie, that he had, by that turn of his, caft the Generall a whole days march behind him. I told him, there was no queftion bot the Kings Lieutenant Generall could not readilie refolve, whether to follow him ftraight to Edenburgh, or intercept his paffage to Glafgow, for I myfelfe, who was with him, did much doubt which of the tuo places he intended for. This doubt of mine made him laugh with open mouth, for it was no fmall joy to him to think he had puzled me; and this gave me occafion to meditate a whole houre after, how vaine a thing man is.

Haveing well enough perceaved, notwithstanding this frolicke of his, that he ftill imagind the Kings forces were at his heels, and therfor wold not ftay long in one place, I defird him to permit me, with my guards, to goe to fome houfe, where I might repofe a litle. My defire was civillie granted by him, and he feemd to regrate very much, both my condition and indifpolition. My guards, (wherof David Scot, a weaver, was Captaine,) carried me ftraight to Bathket, and tooke up for my quarters the beft alehoufe; and there fome countrey gentlemen of my acquaintance had beene undoubtedlie unhorfed, if I had not ufd fome dexterous means, not perceivd then by my blockheaded guards, to make them underftand their danger, and efcape it; for which fome of my guards, forry to have loofed fuch a prey, complaind afterwards to Wallace, bot he tooke litle or no notice of it. After I had refreshd a little, Mr Semple, and their pretended Generall Quartermaster, came to the houfe, and made quarter for the armie; bot fo, that none of their horfe were to lodge one mile beyond that place. When they had done, and that Mr Semple, and I had difcourfed a litle. I caft myfelfe on the top of a bed, and fleepd till Wallace and the reft of his officers came. He and they made their fupper at my lodgeing; I was invited to it, bot pretended want of fleepe for my excufe. About tuelve of the clocke at night, " Horfe, horfe, and mount the prifoner," was proclaimd. All was readilie obeyed, and the march went from thence ftraight to Edenburgh; bot the raynie and boyfterous weather, the darknes of the night, and deepnes of the way, occafioned a most diforderlie march; for after they were three or foure miles on their way, most of them, both horfe and foot, went into houfes on the hie way, and by my perfualion, fo did my guards too. We ftayd in a poore houfe, till daylight fummond us to horfebacke. That night fortie horfe were too many to have routed them all. Bot feldome doth one enemie trulie know what ane other is doing. Nixt morning, about ten of the clocke, they rallied well enough at the new bridge, five miles from Edenburgh. They drew up in tuo fquadrons of horfe, and one of foot. In the numbering of all the three, I could find few above one thoufand.

1666.

At this place, I neither heard prayers, pfalmes, or preaching; yet one of their minifters, (and they faid, it was either one Guthrie, or one Oglebie,) made a fpeech to them, which, if his caufe had beene good, had not been evill. He defird them to remember that Covenant and oath of God, which they had fuorne the day before, and that they were obliged to cary themfelves not onlie piecuflie to God, bot civillie and difcreetlie to man. He affurd them, their friends were readie to reffave and embrace them with open armes, and furnifh them with all neceffaries for backe and bellie, as alfo with all things might render them able to encounter their enemies; armes and amunition affuredlie he meant. "Bot," faid he, "you muft not ftop there, for to be civill to thofe who are good to you, deferves neither thankes nor reward. Bot I intreate you," faid he, "to ufe all imaginable difcretion to thofe who are not of your perfuafion; endeavor to gaine them with love, and by your good carrieage, ftop the mouths of your adverfaries." This fpeech, though it was not unworthie a Chriftian, (thogh a rebell,) yet did it not at all pleafe me; for by it I perceaved the minifter conceaved the toune of Edenburgh to be his oune. Bot before he fleeped, I was difabufed, and he was difappointed.

It was now the feven and tuentieth day of the month, and thretteenth of the infurrection, when the rebells marchd from that bridge to Collinton, tuo miles from Edenburgh. In fome places of the way, they were in view of the Caftle, bot at fuch a diftance that the guns of it could not reach them. The place where they quarterd, by reafon of a church and churchyard, a ftone bridge, the water, becaufe of the · great raines, unfoordable, was defencible enough against infalls. My guards and I were lodged in the best inne, and about the evening, Wallace and most of his officers gave me a visite. He told me that he was more troubled for me than for himfelfe; for he found it wold be convenient for him to ftay in the field most of that night, which he thought wold not be fit for me to doe, and therfor afkd me, if I wold not ftay in my lodgeing with my guards. Bot I apprehending my guard might have order rather to difpatch me, then fuffer me to be taken from them, told him, I wold rather choose to goe to the field with him. While we were fpeaking thus, the noyce of tuo piftolls gave ane alarm; Wallace prefentlie left me, bot left order with my guard to keepe me in my lodgeing till his further direction. After a litle time he returned, and told me it was boyfterous and rainie weather, and that he had refolved to let ane evill night kill itfelfe; and that I might goe and take fome reft if I pleafed.

Bot the above mentioned Laurie of Blekwood his comeing to that place, with Mr Richard of Barskemmine, who was fent from the Generall, made me refolve not to fleepe till I knew both their errand and their anfuere. And becaufe I found I was not concernd in my oune particular in any of them,' I refolvd to be the more free both in it and their generall meffage. Both of them gave me a vifite, and I found Mr Laurie did not deceave my expectation of him. They had met with Wallace and his officers, before I faw them. Barfkemmine came alone without Laurie; he was folloued by Mr Robinfone and tuo other phanaticks, who were to beare witnes what paid betueene him and me. I dare affure your Grace, Barfkemmine acted his part very handfomlie. He intimated to all he could either meet or fpeake with, (without any feare of the rebells,) his Majefties act of grace, and the . Privie Councells proclamation; which did produce fo good effects, that it diminished their number at least one hundreth, before nixt morning. He and I both endevord very much to fpeake one word in private together, bot Mr Robbifone wold by no means permit it; yet we mannagd the bufienes fo well, that under the notion of fome dollars, (which he offerd to lend me,) I told him the true number of the rebells. and as much of their defignes as I either knew or could gueffe at. At our conference, one of my guards faid, there was a fleet of fortie men of warre of Hollanders neere the coaft of Scotland; to which Barfkemmine replyd, that whoever trufted to the Hollanders, leand on a broken reed ; and this I feconded, which put Mr Robbifone in fo great a paffion, that he did with much impudence avouch, that he and the reft of his partie were as ready to march againft the Hollanders, in defence of his prince and his countrey, as either Baríkemmine or I, thogh I had my libertie. And then it was that I did declare to him, in prefence of Baríkemmine, that I was readie to performe the promife I had made at Lanrick, of facrificeing my life, to fhunne the effufion of more blood, which I did too well perceave wold be fhed. And it was then likewife that Mr Robbifone declard, that nothing wold fatiffie their partie bot the dounfall of Epifcopacie, and the reftoration of Prefbiterian government.

Before Barfkemmine came, I afkd Wallace how it came to paffe, that neither wine, good bread, nor ftrong waters, were brought from Edenburgh by his futlers. He anfuerd me, that the provoft of that citie had taken fuch a ftrict courfe for keepeing all fo well within the toune, that nothing could be brought out of it; and that the fame provoft had appointed ftrong guards, with . . . fielding peeces, at everie port, and had caft up a very ftrong worke at the Weftport, which I interpreted to be a barricado. He told me alfo, that he was of the opinion that the provoft wold reffave no meffage or addreffe from him. By this ingenuous difcourfe, Colonell Wallace did exceedinglie comfort me; for I had reafon to imagine that the rebells made an account to get ftrong fupplys out of that citie, if not to be abfolute mafters of it. About tuo or three of the clocke in the morning, the rebells quarters without Collinton were beaten up by fome loyall gentlemen, under the command of my Lord Ramfay, as I fuppofe, who quarterd then in the Canongate with fome of the gentry of Lothian, wherof he was Sheriffe. What number was kild or taken I did not much inquire, bot they faid themfelves that a flout refiftance was made.

1666.

That night, I was told by one of my intelligencers, that one of the rebells had undertaken to carry a meffage into Edenburgh, and bring ane anfuer out of it from their friends. And fo he might, for I knew the undertaker to be ane Edenburgh merchant. Nixt morning the fame perfone told me, that the meffenger was returned, bot with what news he could not tell. "We fhall," faid I, "know that quicklie by their motions." And it was as I faid, for immediatlie they marched fouthward, difpaireing of any good from the citie.

It was the tuentie eight day of the month, and the fourteenth and laft of the rebellion. At firft, when they began their march, I imagind they intended for Dalkieth, and fo to Tiviotdaill. Bot when I faw them leave that road, and take the way of Linton, I knew not what to thinke, and perhaps the rebells knew not what to doe. Some foure or five miles from Edenburgh, at a place called the Gallow Law, (ane ominous name,) they made ane halt, bot did not draw up, waiting for their reare, for many had ftayd behind lookeing for their breakfafts. Some wherof, and these not a few, I faw go into Fulford, not to plunder, (for that was ane odieous word in the eares of the faincts,) bot only to enquire how Sir William Purves his cellars were provided. His fervants can tell if thefe pieous people did offer any drinke money for what they ate, drunke, or tooke. At this place, one of my guards made me a proffer of fome bread and cheefe, which he faid he had got at a curats house; for now the worke of reformation went fo ftronglie on, that all gentlemen, and countrey farmers, who had any thing that was useful for the faincts, paid under the name of curats. I told him,

I was readie to accept his offer, (and indeed, I was not fo hungrie the whole time I was their prifoner,) if I could be affurd of a cup of ale. which he promifd to bring from the nixt alehoufe. In the mean time came Wallace, who feeing me a foot, lighted from his horfe, and began to enter in a difcourfe with me. Bot whill I endeavord both to heare him, and make use of my well purchaed vittaills, one of my guards pointing at ane hie hill, cryd, "There comes the enemy;" . . . ane other of them cryd, " It is a partie of our oune." We lookd prefentlie that way, and whether Wallace was ftartled at this fight or not, I know not, bot I am fure I was fo alarmd that I forgot my breade and cheefe. When I faw the partie appear numerous, I prefentlie apprehended it was the Generalls forpartie, or forlorne hope, efpeciallie when I calld to mind that Barfkemmine had told me, that the head quarter the night before had been at Weft Calder. It provd to be as I thought, which, as I was afterwards informed, was commanded by Lieutenant Generall Drummond himfelfe. I faid to Wallace, "Sir, be not furprifed, for this may prove to be a partie of your oune, which I faw ride up ane other hill a little while agoe." His anfuere was this; "They are tuo blacke," meaneing many, "to be a partie of ours; fy, fy, for ground to draw up on." To which I replyd, "You had beft look for it elfwhere, for heere there is none." Both of us got prefentlie on horfebacke, and fince that time I never faw him. This I fhall fay of him, (rebell as he is,) he was conftantlie civill to me, and I have charitie to beleeve, if he had not beene over ruled by others, the reftraint of my libertie wold have beene the greatest hurt I might have expected from him. He tooke all his people, horfe and foot, round about the Gallow Law, and drew them up in that order as first Lieutenant Generall Drummond, and therafter Generall Dallyell faw them. I fhall not offer to give your Grace ane account of the fkirmifh which the Kings Major Generall and his forepartie had with the rebells, and the fucceffull iffue of it, or how long he ftood with his partie after that fkirmifh, before the cavalrie came up to him; onlie this I may affure your Grace, that it was very comfortable to me to fee him keepe his ground. Nor fhall I trouble your Grace to tell you, how long it was ere the foot could come up . . the horfe, thogh all poffible diligence, even to extremitie, was used by the Earles of Linlithgow and Kellie to bring the infantrie up. And thogh these noble lords, and all under their command, could not bot be . . . . . fo long and fo arduous a march, (for thogh I was not with them, yet I went allmost foot for foot before them,) in most stormie and tempestuous weather, and very bad way; yet at night, after the fight, I found both their lordships, and all under them, not only readie to profecute the victorie, bot if need had beene, to have folloued that night the rebells, if they had endeavord, without fighting, to have made their retreate. Neither shall I offer to trouble your Grace with the errors the Rebells committed at this their laft tryall, or with the fucceffe of that unhappie encounter, being I know all this hath beene fufficientlie done by his Majefties Lieutenant Generall and Major Generall. I fhall onlie prefume to give your Grace ane account of what they did not fee, and what I did fee. After the encounter which the Major Generall had in the morning, I faw feven or eight of the Rebells horfes come backe upon their fquads, without riders; which, when thirtie or fortie of their horfemen (who were bot comeing up from the reare,) did perceave, they keeped on the high way to Linton, at a faire and full trot, without offering to turne

1666.

the hill to joyne with their brethren; fo much did felfe prefervation prevaile over felfe denyall with thefe Covenanters. At which fight, three or foure of my guards alkd me, what that flight meant. I dealt ingenuouflie with them, and told them, that thefe who fled, did like wife men and good fubjects, in embracing the Kings Act of Grace; and in obedience of the Kings proclamation, were goeing home to their houses; and if my guards were wife, they would do the like, for they wold find it wold prove their fafeft courfe. I found I had fpoke more honnestlie than prudentlie, for one of them told me I wold doe well not to use fuch difcourageing words, and that he efteemd these who had diferted their partie were bafe, perjurd, and cowards; this taught me to be more wary afterwards. I was fhortlie after that brought to the top of a litle hill, where I might fee all was done. When the foot of his Majefties forces were joynd with the horfe, my guards feemd to be fomthing follicitous of their oune fafetie, which movd me to take the opportunitie to tell them, that they fould fuffer none of their oune armie to joyne with them, except thefe who were appointed to guard me, otherwife it might fall out that their guards, grouing numerous, might be calld doune by Wallace to fight; to which I perceave they had bot litle ftomacke. This advice they punctuallie followd. Then they defird me to use freedome with them, and tell them what my opinion was wold be the iffue. I did not intend in this to fatiffy their curiofitie, for I thought my pofferfing them with vaine hopes, or dejecting them with fears, might prove equallie dangerous to me. I told them that the Kings Lieutenant Generall had ftayd fo long on the hill, that it was not probable he wold engadge with them that night; and that he was lodged in fo ftrong a ground, that it was not poffible for the Covenanters to attack him, with any hopes of fucceffe.

Not long after this, the Lieutenant Generall drew doune from the hill in very good order. This my guards and I faw with equal joy, bot with farre different thoughts; for they told me they conceavd he wold march to Edenburgh, bot I had reafon to be of ane other opinion. I was exceeding glad to fee the matter brought now to a trial, at fo great odds. I prayd heartilie for victorie to his Majefties forces, wherof I made no kind of doubt. I knew the odds of my particular condition might be this; if the Rebells were beaten, I might probablie be fent to ane other world that very night; bot if they were victorious, it was like I might be permitted to breath a day or tuo, and then put to death with fome pretended forme of juffice. We faw tuo gentlemen of the Kings armie try the ground on which they drew up afterwards, which they feemd to do exactlie. I underftood therafter, that it was the Generall himfelfe, and Mufter mafter Generall Arnot. Both of them came fo neere the Rebells that they could fpeake with them, and as I afterwards underftood, the Generall was qualified by them with the title of Epifcopall rogue, and the Generall Muster mafter with that of faucie fellow.

Whill the Kings forces were takeing up their ground, I was carryed by my guards behind the little rifeing of a ground, which hinderd me to fee any thing. One Dandilling, a gentleman whom the Rebells had keepd prifoner with me fixe or feven days, came and told me, that Mr Crukfhank the minifter, and one Thomas Maclellan, (a young gentleman who had done me feverall good offices,) had beene both kild in the morning fkirmifh; and that he conceaved the Generall was endevoring to gaine the wind from the rebells. This was feconded by the report of tuo or three more of my guards. I defird I might be permitted to goe a litle from that place, and looke upon the Kings forces, affureing them I wold tell them my opinion freelie; this they granted. I faw the infantrie and left wing of the horfe take up their ground, for the right wing had done it before. I rejoyced to fee them fo numerous; and then I told my guards, that the Generall would force them to fight that very night, and that he intended to give them faire play, for he had taken onlie the halfe of the wind to himfelfe, and had left the other halfe for them; for the wind blew from the weft.

When both parties were readie to advance, (for the rebells had changed their ground,) one Vetch, who was their pretended quarter-mafter, came and told my guards, that it was thought fitting that they and I fould come from the hill, and ftand behind their bodie, onlie, as he faid, to make a fhow. We did fo, bot by the way we met with Mr Welch and Mr Semple, who were goeing to take that advantage of ground which we formerlie had; and by doeing fo, I thought both of them had provided indifferentlie well for their oune fafetie. I ftayd a litle with Mr Semple, who faid to me, "Now, Sir James, that which we have beene difputting with you this fortnight bypaft, fince you were our prifoner, fhall be decided in a very fhort time." "It is too like," faid I, " bot whom blame you? If you had followd my advice, no blood bot mine had beene fhed." We had fome more difcourfe, not needfull now to rehearfe.

When I faw the encounter wold be inevitable, and that my guards were doubtfull of the event, I thought it hie time to propone that to them which I had long premeditated, and which none of them could at that nick of time reveale without their oune danger. My friends, faid I, brufklie, "the day will be either yours or ours. If yours, I am ftill your prifoner, and I beleeve I fhall not be long troubled with you after your victorie. If the day proves ours, your lives and mine are in equall danger. If then the Kings forces gaine the victorie, defend you me from the violence of your partie in the flight, and I fhall affure you of your lives."

To this proposition the eight who were with me, (for the other eight had left me to my fortune,) readilie affented. " Then," faid I, " put your fuords in your left hands, and hold up your right hands to heaven, and let both you and me fueare the performance of our mutuall promifes." This was prefentlie done; "And who will now fay," faid I, " that I am not a Covenanter?" Not long after this, we might heare Mr Welch and Mr Semple cry out very loudlie and very often, "The God of Jacob, the God of Jacob," without adding any more. This was, becaufe they faw our commanded men give fome ground; my very latlie fuorne guards echoed the fame words, "The God of Jacob, the God of Jacob." I askd them what they meant. They ansuered, Could I not fee the Lord of Hoftes fighting for them? I told them then very paffionatlie, that they underftood not their oune condition, for they might fee that party, which they thought was beaten, rally and ftand. They could not bot fee the whole bodie of our foot, and left wing of our horfe, advance with much courage and in very good order, with trumpets founding, and drums beateing. "And in one word," faid I, " if your partie doe not reele, runne and fly within one quarter of ane houre, then I shall be contented you piftoll me." It fell out fo, that thogh the rebells, for their number, fought desperatlie enough, yet it pleafed the Lord that they were beaten, and their horse fled apace. Whill I thought to make use of this opportunitie, came Canon of Mondroget, bleeding very faft, for wounded he was. He had profeffed kindnes to me formerlie for fome curtefies I had done to fome neere friends of his; bot he told me then, that I must goe with him. I ansuered, that I was fo pitifullie ill mounted that I could not ride up with him; befides he knew I had no fpurre allowd me, wherby I might helpe my nagge to runne. Bot he replyd, it was probable fome of their officers might be made prifoners, and that I might helpe by exchange to relieve them; therfor forward I muft goe, for he neither could or would leave me behind him, and tooke God to witnes, it was much againft his will. I told him, that fince fure it was he could not get me forward with him as I was mounted, and his partie being routed, and himfelfe wounded, it wold be no advantage to him to kill a perfon who had never done him any injurie, whatever other crimes were layd to his charge; and with that I lookd over my fhoulder, (for my guards ftill forcd me to ride after him,) and faw our horfe purfueing eagerlie enough, and were not farre from us. Then I calld to Mondroget, and advifd him to looke about, and fee who was purfueing him, telling him it was now more time to fave his oune life, then to feeke after ane other mans. This advice he followd by galloping away. Foure more of my guards had left me out of feare; the other foure were foone perfuaded to turne with me. I then commanded a drummer of mine, who had waited conftantlie upon me, to tell any officer he met with, that I was there. He rencounterd with Alexander Cokburne, a fervant of my Lord Duke Hammiltons, who was well armd and mounted. He came to me with much kindnes, and gave me and my prifoners, (for fuch were now my guards,) the word and the figne, and conducted me to my Lord Duke. His Grace was pleafd to reffave me with much civilitie and favour, and entertaind me with exprefiions of fo much kindnes as I doe reallie acknowledge not to have deferved. He gave order likewife that my prifoners fould be kindlie ufed, till nixt day they were deliverd to the foot guards; and not long after, upon my humble fupplication, had their lives and liberties granted them.

I was told here, that the rebells had rallyd, and that Lieutenant Generall Drummond was calling for the troopes to advance to him, and the foot to follow. I was eafilie perfuaded to beleeve thefe news to be true, and therfor refolved to impart them to E. Linlithgow, whom I could eafilie find out by the burning matches of his regiment, for now the day was fpent. My lord was afoot, and it was fome time before the kindnes of his officers and fojors did permit me to falute him. His lordship wellcomd me very affectionatlie, and I found he had draune up his regiment on the other fide of the hill, where the rebells formerlie ftood, and was there attending the motions of a partie of men, which he faw on the top of a hie adjoyning hill. Bot when I had given his lordfhip affureance that thefe he faw could be no other bot countrey people, in regard I knew the rebells had no referve; he marchd with his regiment ftraight to the Lieutenant Generall, with much cheerfullnes and alacritie, and was immediatlie followd by E. Kellie. Bot the Lieutenant Generall haveing told me, that upon his advance with the horfe the enemie was difperfd, both horfe and foot went to quarters that night. Nixt day I had the good fortune to meet with the Generall, Lieutenant Generall, and many lords and other perfons of qualitie, who all of them did with much kindnes and humanitie congratulate my well neere difpaird of libertie; which was very refreshing to me, after a short bot fad tryall of the vicifitude and instabilitie of humane affaires; for all which I give to God the praise and the glorie to whom it duelie belongs.

End of the Relation made to the Earle of Rothes, His Majefties Hie Commissioner.

The Narration continues.

HEERE was ane end of the Rebellion and my imprifonment, bot not of all my milfortunes. Thogh at my returne to Edenburgh, I found perfons of all ranks and qualities profeffe kindnes to me, and feemd to be glad I had efcapd fo eminent a danger, yet everie man is not to be taken at his word; the thoughts and defignes of men are knoune to none bot to him who hath keepd it as his prerogative, to know the heart. The King haveing beene perfuaded before, that no infurrection was, or wold be intended againft the prefent eftablifhed government, was eafilie induced to beleeve that my feveritie, or at beft my undifcreet zeale, had occafiond the commotion. Bot yet it was not time to lay this at my doore; fomething els muft be done before.

It must be rememberd, what I fould have spoke of before, that about the month of August 1666, his Majestie haveing open warre with three dangerous enemies, France, Denmark and Holland, had, for the defence of his kingdome of Scotland, caused his regiment of foot guards be made up ten companies, each to confift of one hundreth men; befides his caftles, over whom he appointed E. Linlithgow to be Colonell, myfelfe to be Lieutenant Colonell, and Colonell Urrey to be Sergant Major. He appointed alfo Generall Dallyell to raife a foot regiment of ten companies; and his pleafure was, that ten troopes of horfe, befides the tuo which were allreadie raifd, fould be fpeedilie levied, over all which forces he orderd the fame Dallyell and Lieutenant Generall Drummond to command, the firft in qualitie of Lieutenant Generall, and the fi cond of Major Generall.

So foone as I came to Edenburgh, I intreated Generall Dallyell to call a councell of warre, wherin my deportment in these places where I had beene, might be impartiallie examined; and if I were guiltie of thefe crimes that were publikelie talkd of, I might accordinglie be fentencd and punishd; if not, that I might have ane approbation of what I had done. This was denyd me feverall times, in regard there was no complainer, accufer, or accufation againft me. Heerupon I addreffd myfelfe to the Privie Councell, my Lord Commiffioner not being returnd from Court, and humblie befeechd their Lordships to heare and cognofice on any thing was faid, or might be faid against me. About this time, a libell was fcatterd up and doune against me, wherin what blacke malice could invent or difgorge against myselfe, or any of these parties which had beene under my command, was fet doune in the darkeft dy. I anfuerd it, and all its parts, and in all its dimensions, as I have allreadie faid in my Relation. I intreated the Privie Councell, fince there was none that appeard against me, except a fama clamofa, and that libell, to which none could be found to affixe his name, that the libell itfelfe, and my anfuere to it, might be examind; and that therafter, their Lordships wold come to a fentence of approbation or condemnation of my proceedings. Upon this, the Councell appointed three of their number, to wit, my Lord Bellenden, my Lord Renton, and Sir Robert Murray, late provoft of Edenburgh, to examine the whole matter, and make a report to them. This was accordinglie done; and after my Lord Commissioners returne, the report was made, that till the libeller did prove his paper, I was to be juftified in all I had done. Now the libeller, even when a yeare therafter I was brought on the ftage, and that he had a faire time offerd him to play his game above boord against me, never appeard perfonallie or by proxie, by word or by writ, directlie or indirectlie. And thogh Naphtali, in his infamous booke, hath fet doune that libell allmost verbatim, and will perfuade his reader that it was a true relation, and that my anfuere to it confifted onlie of negatives and denyalls, yet let any perufe my anfuere, (and many copies I have given of it,) they will find Naphtali as great a liar in that, as he is in most of the passages of that booke which he wrote against all that are in authoritie, from the lowest to the hiest; for there are many things in the libell, which in my anfuere I acknowledged to be true, and that the actors of them were punifhd by me, as haveing done things without my warrand. Many things I acknowledged to have beene done by myfelfe, for which I was warranted by my inftructions. Many things, indeed, I abfolutlie denyed, becaufe I knew them, ex certissima scientia, to be lyes and calumnies. Many things were alleadged in the libell to have beene committed which, thogh true, could never have reflected on me, in regard I never heard either the actors or the crimes complaind of, till I red them, first in the written libell, and then in printed Naphtali.

1666.

By example, where was my fault, if any unchriftian horfman under my command, gave the remainder and crums of their dinners to their dogs, not alloueing any of them to the children of their landlords? Or if any barbarous fojors (who fould have beene at church themfelvs,) did beate fome countreymen, whom they found praying among the rockes, on the Lords day? Or if any prophane and godles trooper faid, he wold recommend his camerad, who was a dying, by his letter to a friend of his who was in hell, to provide him good winter quarters; how could thefe, I fay, reflect on me, who never heard of them? Indeed, if complaints had beene made to me, and I had neglected to have punifhd fuch offenders, I had defervd to have beene banifhd out of all Chriftian focietie for ever. Bot these things are not fo much as mentiond in all these depositions which the yeare after were taken, and upon oath too, from all the people in Galloway and Niddfdaill, where I had quarterd; and it is not at all probable fuch complaints wold have beene finotherd, where not onlie the people had a libertie, bot ane encouragement, to fpeake what they pleafd against me. Bot well may the nameles libeller, and fhameles Naphtali write what they pleafe, fo long as they conceale their names, which I never did, nor intends to doe, from any thing I ever wrote in my life.

Bot the libeller is more to be excufed than Naphtali, for the firft had vented his libell before I was prifoner, and therfore knew not what the Rebells knew afterwards, when they had red my commiffion, inftructions, and all my papers at Damellintoun; where they confefd I had not done fo much by halfe as by my orders I might have done. They then acknowledgd, I nor my partie had not got the fourth part of the money wherwith I was charged. This the libeller, I fay, did not know, when he wrote his libell. Bot Naphtali could not bot know it before he wrote that impudent booke of his, being he could not bot have learned it from the rebells, his deare correspondents. Yet wold he choofe rather against truth and his oune confcience, to grope after the libeller in the darke, then make use of the light he might have borroud from his oune beloved partie. What a monftrous foume did they make up, no leffe than feventeene thousand pounds sterline, that I and my parties had got in moneys, meate, quarterings and bonds; yet the depolitions of all those that ever I had celd or quarterd on, being exactlie taken on oath in the end of the yeare 1667, declares them impudent and fhameles lyars; for it is yet to be feene in the councell office, that all which was pretended to have beene taken in three yeares time in ceffe, quarter, meate and drinke, moneys and bonds, yea, and irregular actions and plunderings, did not exceed tuo thoufand feven hundreth and fiftie pounds fterline, not the fixth part of the libeller and Naphtalis foume. Bot they knew themfelvs that wrong account is no payment; bot to fpeake truth, I thinke I have duelt too long with fuch false accountants.

SIR JAMES TURNER'S MEMOIRS.

After this, I petitiond my Lord Commiffioner and the Councell for ane approbation. Severall lords prefid it with ftrong reafons, bot moft faid, that the Councell haveing given me no commiffion, could not judge whether I had walkd according to my inftructions or not. Bot notwithftanding that, I was put in hopes to obtain my defire at that time; yet he who had given me the commiffion by which I had acted, did nothing at all for me.

After I came out of prifon, fo foone as convenientlie I could, I petitioned the Councell for these prifoners who had beene of my guards, den.

193

1667.

as is fet doune in my relation. The Councell referrd the matter to the Generall, who, at my interceffion, and their takeing the declaration, gave them their lives and liberties, and his paffes to goe home, and I gave each of them a litle money to carry them to their houfes. One more, who had beene my intelligencer, my Lord Commiffioner, at my humble fute, favd from hanging at Aire, and therafter gave him his libertie.

After fo pitiefull a toyle, I was adviced to purge; and this hinderd me to goe weft with my Lord Commiffioner, when he marchd with the forces to reduce that countrey to order; bot I folloued him foone after, and waited on him at Glafgow when he came backe from Aire. Some fixe and threttie or therby of the rebells were hangd at Edenburgh, Glafgow and Aire. The reft, who were above a hundreth, efcaped one way or other. And now I appeale to Mr Naphtali himfelfe, if any of thefe fixe and threttie ever mentioned my name in their fpeeches at their executions, or blamd me for opprefilion, or directlie or indirectlie infinuated that I had occafiond the infurrection. None knows better then Naphtali, who hath very carefullie collected all their teftimonies, (as he calls them,) perhaps pend the moft of them.

Generall Dalyells foot regiment lay a while at Aire, I thinke till June 1667. The regiment of guards was appointed to march to Edenburgh; fixe companies lay in the Canongate, and I with foure more did ly at Lieth. It was dureing the convention of eftates, who, by his Majefties command, were affembled to find out meanes to entertaine the late levied foot and horfe, which were not to be a militia very long. Upon the eleventh of Februare, at tuelve of the clocke at night, I was calld away in hafte to Glafgow to my wife, who had taken both a fudden and a dangerous difeafe, which was indeed the effect of that melancholie fhe had contracted for my imprifonment; for thogh her carriage dureing that affliction was that which became both a fober and a chriftian woman, yet griefe had got fo deepe ane impression in her heart, that the could not overcome it, no not with my reftoration to libertie. I ftayd three weeks with her; and indeed all the croffes that had ever befallen me, and the laft one too, which was one of the greateft, feemd no thing to me in comparison of that I then fufferd, by the fad apprehension I had to be feparated from fo deare and fo precieous a voakefellow. It pleafd God the betterd, and the philitians affureing me there was no more danger, I returnd to my charge at Lieth. Bot the very nixt day after my comeing, I was advertifd that the was fallen in a dangerous relapfe. I returnd to Glafgow, haveing firft caufd fhow my Lord Commissioner, the Generall, and E. Linlithgow, the caufe of my fudden departure. At my arriveall at Glafgow, I found her heavilie ficke; fome intervalls of eafe fhe had, bot both few and fhort. I ftayd three weekes with her the fecond time, till it pleafd the Lord to better her condition fo farre, that the phifitians once more thought my longer ftay needles. This mercy comforted me more than my late miffortune had afflicted me.

When I came to Edenburgh in Aprile, I found the regiment of guards was removd to Fife, to defend that coaft against forreine invafion. Everie companie had a toune alloued for quarter, and mine had St Andrews. I lookd on all the companies in passing, before I came to St Andrews, the Archbishop wherof I found very ficke of a tertian. Nothing past that fummer in Scotland, of acts of hostilitie worthie remembrance, except that Van Gent, one of the Vice-admiralls of Holland, with tuo and threttie gallant men of warre, came up the Firth; who, having fpent to no purpofe, above one thousand shot of canon at Burnt Iland, and killd onlie one fifher at the Weims, returnd that fame night, haveing both wind and tide to carry him away. In Burnt Iland were my Lord Commissioner himfelfe, E. Linlithgow, and tuo companies of foot ; a troope of horfe comeing to them fhortlie after. At Kircaldie, was Colonell Urrey with tuo foot companies more; the other fixe companies were with me at the Eli, a place most fit for them to land at. Trulie, if that Hollander had put it to the hazard to have landed his foot, which in fo many veffells could be no fewer then three thoufand, at any place bot where we were, I thinke in all probabilitie he might have plunderd and burnd the moft, if not all the touns of that coaft, the countrey not being in any kind of pofture of defence. Bot the fame Van Gent, as they fay, behavd himfelfe more advantageouflie for his mafters, and more miffortunatlie for England that fame fummer at Chattum. Many other alarms we had, bot they provd all falfe ones, and it was well fo; for if we had beene handfomlie attackd, we might have had just reason to have had more then the halfe of the feare.

About Lambes of the yeare 1667, his Majeftie haveing concluded a firme peace with all thefe neighbours of his who had made warre againft him, to eafe his kingdome of Scotland of the great burthen lay on it, for the maintenance of fo great a militia, he orderd all his troopes of horfe except tuo, to be difbanded, and Generall Dallyells regiment of foot likewife. In the beginning of September, he commanded three companies of the ten wherof his regiment of guards confifted, to be fent to France, the Captaines therof haveing belonged formerlie to 1667.

Lord George Douglas in that kingdome. The fifteenth day of September was appointed for them to march from Enfter to Burnt Iland, to reflave what was oueing them, and then to goe a fhipboord. Bot moft of the fojors haveing ane averfion from the French fervice, and preying on the Captaines weakenes, who were Melvill, Ritherfurd and Lieth, mutined, refufing to march, and calling imperiouflie for their pay. If the Captaines had beene either wife or liberall, they might have engadged moft of all their fojors to goe with them to France, by giveing each of them a croune or tuo at moft, in hand, as levie money, and fo both have prevented the mutinie, and carried over their companies; for the King had declard he wold force none of them to goe. Bot as avarice is the root of all iniquitie, fo it provd heere; for the narrow hands of the Captaines loft them both their liveliehoods and reputations. Neither did they take any course befitting militarie men, to compesce the mutinie. Tuo of them fled, the third was detaind in the qualitie of a prifoner, never one of the three ever offering to draw a fuord. The reft of the officers fhifted for themfelvs. The tuo that thought they had fped well by haveing efcapd, ftayd at Leven and refreshd themselvs and horfes, at all leifure, without fo much as acquainting the Earle of Rothes, who was Captaine Generall, or E. Linlithgow, who was their Colonell, thogh the first was at Balgonie within four miles of them, the fecond at Edenburgh; or did they ever offer to fend to me, who was their Lieutenant Colonell, thogh they knew well enough where I might be found. They went therafter to Kircaldie, and after a breathing, one of them went to Edenburgh, and the other to my Lord Chanclor. Mellvill rencountering by chance with a fervant of mine, wrote to me, in what condition he had left Enfter; this letter came to a gentlemans houfe where I was, about tuelve a clocke at night. I wrote inftantlie to Colonell Urrey, to bring E. Linlithgows companie from Kircaldie, and his oune from Difart, with him to the Eli, where I fould, God willing, meet him. I wrote alfo to Saint Andrews, for my oune companie to march with all hafte thither.

1667.

Nixt morning I rode to the Eli, where I found Sir George Curror ficke and bedfaft, bot his companie in armes and in good order, as was alfo Captaine Whites at Pittenweim. I fent Lieutenant Leviston of Weftquarter, who belongd to these mutinous companies, to tell the mutineers that I was come to heare and redreffe their grievances, and therfor requird them to meet me without the toune in the field. They returnd me anfuere, that for feverall reafons they could not leave the toune, bot I fould be very wellcome to come in to them. I did fo, and was met at the entrie by threttie mufketeers, for my honor, faid they, to convoy me to the fhore, where I found them all in armes, with their collors flying. I was environd round, and fo clofe, that I could not get my horfe movd from the place where I ftood. I perceavd the mutinie had comd to a great heighth, for they had chosen their officers and fpeakers, and prefented me with a petition directed to E. Linlithgow, and in his abfence, to me. I harangud them, and demonstrated to them the ouglines and follie of this action of theirs; I cryd up their former loyaltie and fervices, and advifed them not to ftaine the reputation of them by this tumultuarie and unadvifed rafhnes of theirs. which I wold not tearme mutinie, wherof I knew fo gallant men could not be guiltie. I did not faile likewife to fhow them, that I knew how to force the most difobedient of them to duetie, bot hopd they wold be wifer as to put a neceffitie on either me, or these above me, to make use of our pouer. I rallied and made merrie with fome of them, and they made fport with me; and in end, after many difcourfes, I promifd they fould be payd at Burnt Iland all was duelie oueing to them, and that none of them fould be forcd to goe a fhipboord againft his will. They defird to be payd and difbanded there where they were; this I wold by no meanes grant. Their mufkets were chargd with tuo balls at leaft, many with three; fome of the mutineers gave fire upon the houfes over my head. At length I commanded drums to beate, and crying, "God fave the King," which they likewife did, I orderd the collors to follow me; and without more noyfe, carried them fairlie to Leven, feven miles from the place where they were, and the nixt day to Burnt Iland, where they were all difarmd and difbanded.

So foone as my Lord Chancellor knew of the mutinie, he wrote to E. Linlithgow to come over out of Edenburgh to appeale it. Strange and very ftrange it was, he wold not write to me, who, he knew, was within foure miles of him. And as ftrange it was in E. Lithgow, to thinke that I wold be fo tame as to fit ftill and doe nothing till he came; for fo foone as he arrivd at Burnt Iland, he wrote to Saint Andrews, (thinking I was there;) for me to meet him at Enfter. His letter I got on the 16th of September, at night, when I was quartering the mutineers at Leven. A drummer, who was ane Englishmen, and feven or eight more, who had beene the ringleaders of the mutinie, were feizd on at Burnt Iland; for I had promifd indemnitie to none of them, neither indeed did ever any of them feeke it from me. Bot by a private advice from the Privie Councell, I fuffered them all to make their escapes, a month or therby thereafter, out of the tolbooth of Leith.

A month and more before this mutinie, Generall Dallyell acquainted me, that E. Kellie had told him, that there was a refolution to take my charge from me, and to give it to him. I beleeve his Lordfhip got a very rough reprimend from fome of his friends, for not keeping his oune fecrets better. I was apt to beleeve there was fuch a defigne, and therfor refolvd rather to goe out, then to be thruft out. I made a proffer of my charge to my Lord Kellie, provided I might be Major, and Colonell Urrey eldeft Captaine, as we had formerlie beene. My Lord had good reafon to thanke me for fo kind ane offer. In the meane time, I movd my Lord Chancellor to write fomething of it to E. Lauderdaill; who returnd him anfuere, that he had never heard of any fuch thing before.

Sir Robert Murray, Privie Counfellor and Commiffioner of the Treafurie, told me, much about that time, that the King haveing heard fome grieveous complaints of me, intended to order his Privie Councell to examine the matter. I told him, I wonderd any complaint fould come to the King of me, fince none was made to the Councell, to whom it properlie belonged, to take notice of fuch affaires; it not being ordinarie to runne directlie to the King, per faltum, in contempt of that authoritie which he had eftablifhed in Scotland. He anfuerd, the King did in thefe things as he pleafd. I faid, I thought it very ftrange, I was not brought fooner on the ftage, it being now neere a tuelvemonth fince I came out of prifon. He gave me indeed a reafon, which hugelie increafd my admiration. So long, faid he, as the armie ftood, you were too ftrong for your accufers, neither durft they be feene againft you; bot now, that the forces, for moft part, are difbanded, the Councell may take notice of you with leffe trouble. I replyd, that then I had beene miftaken formerlie, in thinking that the armie wold rather have affifted juffice to be administerd, then have given any obfruction to it; and with that we parted.

Meane while E. Kellies friends thought it fit he fould gett me to ratifie under my hand the proffer I had made him, which, they thought, being bot verball, I might avouch or deny as I pleafed. I refolve they fould fee I was a man of my word; and therfor immediatlie, by way of letter, made my former offer, and that without any hefitation. My letter was fent to Court, and inftantlie his Majefties order came to the Councell, to fee E. Kellie admitted Lieutenant Colonell, and Colonell Urrey and myfelfe returne to our former charges; which was accordinglie done, in prefence of my Lord Bellenden and Sir Robert Murrey, in the fands of Lieth, the 2d of November, 1667.

I thought, by this addreffe of mine, I had conjurd away the ftorme prettie well; bot I had caft up a wrong account, for a letter from the King, of the date of the 17th of November, came to the Councell, in which, among other things, he commands their lordfhips to call me before them, to examine my deportments ftrictlie, and what moneys I had exacted, and make a report of all to his Majeftie. The Councell appoints a committee of nine of their number, which confifted of the principall councellors, foure or five wherof were of the long robe. At this time, neither my Lord Chancellor nor E. Tweeddaill were comd from Court. I am brought before this committee, and once I intended to have pleaded, that I could not be accufd of any thing I had done dureing the time I was Lieutenant Colonell, being his Majefties conferring the new charge of Major upon me infinuated a pardon of any crime I formerlie could have beene guiltie of; bot I refolvd not to clafh with the King in any thing, much leffe to quible in a bufienes which concernd myfelfe fo very neare.

The Committee was civill to me; the Prefident of the Seffion being chofen Prefident, caufd offer me a chaire, which I abfolutlie refufed, being, I faid, I was before them in the qualitie of a defender, and they were the reprefentatives of my judges. They inquired, which of the tuo I thought most convenient to be done, in order to his Majesties commands; whether to referre the matter to my oune relation, which they hopd wold be ingenuous, or if they fould fend one of their oune choofing to Niddfdaill and Galloway, to affift fuch gentlemen of that countrey as the Councell fould impouer, to take depositions against me. I freelie told them, the florteft way wold be to take my oune relation, which I promifd fould be a faithfull one; for I wold acknouledge the refait of as much as all the depositions, they could get wold amount to; and after the conclusion of the whole busienes, they both found and acknouledged that to be true, what I then told them. Bot at this time they refolvd both to take my relation, and fend one from themfelvs alfo; for it feemes they thought it was good to be fure. Mr James Thomfone, a commiffare and ane exchequer man, was defird to goe; bot he refufed the employment, faying he wold not fo badlie requite the favours he pretended to have reffaved from me. Bot ane other was quicklie found, for fifteene fhillings fterline per diem, one Buntein, ane under cleark of the exchequer. Him they difpatch with all neceffare orders and inftructions. This act of councell, to invite, defire, nay, conftraine men to complaine, hath had, for any thing I know, bot few or no precedents. My first compeareance was on the 27th of November, and Buntein was orderd to returne against the first of Januare 1668.

I defird libertie till then, to goe and ftay at Glafgow with my wife, who was then ficke, which was fairlie granted me. Nixt day I rode thither, where indeed I found my deare wife, (who had had bot litle health all that fummer, and whom I had not feene in eight months before,) ficke of a lent feaver. About Chriftmas, the being fomewhat convalefced, I tooke my leave of her, and returned to Edenburgh, there to waite for Buntein, of whofe motions, actings and practifes againft me, I had fufficientlie good intelligence; and both he, and thefe who fent him, did find I was not fo hated as they had fancied, bot had acquird the affection of the beft and honnefteft of the gentrie, who faild not to let me know all that paffd wherin they conceaved I might be concernd. At my comeing to Edenburgh, I found by the committee of the councell, that Buntein pretended he had not yet done all his bufienes, thogh the time prefixed to him was well neere expired. It is like he defird the continuation of his daylie falarie of fifteene fhillings fterline; and I found the committee was not averfe to allow him it for a longer time, perhaps thinking the longer time they gave him, the greater feats he wold be able to doe against me. Bot his ftrength was spent, and he came backe in the beginning of Januare. I must not forget to tell, how the gentlemen, who were deputed by the Councell for takeing depolitions against me or my partie, did examine all or most on oath; a thing in itfelfe illegall, at leaft feldome or never practifd, for a mans oath in his oune caufe proves nothing; yet this thefe gentlemen did, not without my private affent, for I found a benefite by it; the malice of many of the phanaticks being fuch, as they wold have declard any thing against me, or these under my command, if they had not beene reftraind by the dreadfull awe of ane oath.

After the Committee had feene and perufed all the declarations and depositions which Buntein had brought, one of them (whom I need not name,) drew up fifteene grieveances of illegall and difavouable proceedings of mine, all of them grounded, as they faid, upon thefe decla-This monftrous paper of grieveances was a month a hatchrations. ing; then I was fent for, and defird to anfuere them. I told the lords, that thefe declarations, on which the grieveances were pretended to be grounded, muft be all legallie proven, els they could doe me no hurt. Bot leaft their Lordships fould thinke, that I tooke advantage of the impoflibilitie of that probation, (for no witneffes could be led against me bot these who were socii criminis,) I was readie to take the paper and anfuere it, provided they gave me time, and I defird a month. Bot Sir Robert Murrey told me, that it being now in Februare, and the Lords to goe to the countrey in the beginning of March, the ordinarie time of vacancie, fo long a time could not be alloued me; yet all or moft confented to a fortnight. I defired to have the declarations or depofitions given me, that I might fee how cleerlie the grieveances were deduced from them; bot I was told, I fould have acceffe to the Councell Chamber where these papers were keepd, bot they could not fuffer them to be carried elfwhere. I thought this was fevere, not to give it a worfe name; bot I did not value much this refuseall, for I had a perfite copie of them all fent me by my friends, which I reflaved before Buntein arrivd at Edenburgh with the principall.

Before the fortnight came to ane end, E. Tweeddaill returnd from Court; his Lordship was appointed to be ane additionall member of my committee. The time prefixd to me being expired, I appeard; where I found E. Tweeddaill, after debate, voted to prefide. He did not for-beare to exerce that charge with vigour enough, yet with very much difcretion and civilitie, which fueetned the bitter pill I knew I was to fuallow; for I perceave that thogh by not acknouledging myfelfe guiltie, I fould fave my reputation a litle, yet in the end I must fuccumbe; for the promife of my charge to E. Kellie told me I was precondemned. I gave in my anfuers, which were read and heard attentivelie enough; bot fome of them relateing to my commission and inftructions, I was defird to fhow them to the Committee. I told them, that which was true, that I had neither of them, for when the rebells tooke myfelfe, they tooke alfo them and all my other papers. And indeed, when I was first questiond, I was not master of them, thogh afterwards, with much paines and trouble, and the pouerfull mediation of moneys, I got them againe in my hands. The reafon I wold not fhow them was, that I feard matter of complaint might be pickd out of them, which wold not at all fave me; and this I was fenfible enough of, that the flowing them might wrong my Lord Chancellor, and doe me no good; for I was told that I was lyable to punifhment for giveing obedience to illegall commands. I was queftiond therafter about fome particulars of my written defences, as alfo concerning tuo written declarations given in against me by tuo malitieous and infamous perfons, not without the inftigation of my Lord Cochran, one of my committee, and confequentlie one of my judges; which declarations I might eafilie have repeld, by telling the Lords that I wold anfuere none of them, till the bafe accufers undertooke to prove them, which was purlie impoffible. Bot to them and all other interrogatories, I gave fuch returns as were interpreted, even by these who were none of my beft friends, to be moderate, fubmiffe, ingenuous and candide; and indeed I was informed, fome of them faid I had given a full demonstration I was not the man I was caracterd to be, proud, paffionate, haftie and furieous. And yet I confesse, my humour never was, nor is not yet, one of the calmeft; when it will be, God onlie knoues; yet by many fad paffages of my life, I know that it hath beene good for me to be afflicted. By this teftimonie of theirs I was a gainer, thogh I lofd my charge. I was defird to tell them extemporarlie, how much the free quarter, meate and drinke, bonds and money, exacted by me and my parties, the three feverall times I was in Galloway, might extend to. I told their lordfhips, I knew well enough that the depofitions of all parties concerned, in which were fet doune plunderings, did not exceed three and threttie thousand pounds Scots; of that I could abate, even in their oune judgments, five thousand pounds; neither was I bound to acknouledge the reft, for it could never be made out against me; yet to ease their lordships of further trouble, and show them my oune ingenuitie, I wold charge myfelfe with threttie thousand pounds. They openlie declard that they thought I had fpoke fo ingenuouflie, that more could not be chargd upon me. Where are then the feventeene thousand pounds sterline wherwith the infamous libeller and nameles Naphtali charge me? Haveing beene keepd by the Committee above foure houres, I was difmifd; and indeed I will fay, that the whole time of my tryall I was dealt with as a gentleman; for they never offerd to imprifon, arreft or bayle me, or yet did ever command me to forbeare the exercife of my charge, for I . . . . on my command, till the very laft minute that I layd doune my commiffions.

204

My bufienes now drauing neere a clofe, a report was draune up, to be fent to his Majeftie by one of the members of the Committee, (whom

206

I need not name;) and as to the reft, fome of them got fome harfh words expungd, and made the report fomething fmoother, as indeed at beft it was bot bad enough. The day it was to be red in the Privie Councell, I petitiond their lordships that I might be permitted to fee it, before it was fent to the King. This many of the Lords thought very modeft and most reafonable; others wold not heare it, alledging, it was to lay the Committee and me in a ballance, and to make them my partie, and confequentlie fend them all to the barre as well as me. The matter for a while was well enough debated, bot carried in the negative, and declard I fould not fee the report till it was fent away. Bot to pleafe me, they orderd, after it was off, a copie of it to be given me, and fo indeed there was one nixt day in the afternoone, when I beleeve the post of the principall was the length of Morpeth. Before I proceed further, it will be fit to give a true copie of the Report, by which the fifeteene grieveances, wherwith I was formerlie charged, are not onlie fet doune in bafe caracters, bot are convoyd to the King with fixe more to accompany them.

A true Copie of the Report fent to his Majeftie concerning me, from Edenburgh the nineteeneth of Februare 1668.

The Lords of his Majefties Councell did no fooner reffave his Majefties commands, in his gracious letter of the tuentie one of November laft, for takeing exact examination of Sir James Turners deportment in the weft, bot they orderd and impouerd a Committee of their number to inquire diligentlie into them; and by their Report it appears, that, upon information from the Stewartrie of Kirkcubright, given in upon oath of parties, or their mafters, or their neighbours, many illegall exactions have beene made, and diforders committed. Such as, Firft, quartering of fojors for levieing fines and impofitions. Secondlie, Exacting ceffe for quartering money for more fojours then were actuallie prefent, fomtimes for double the number or more, (and that befides free quarter for these present,) sometimes 8 pence, sometimes tuelve pence, sometimes 16 pence, and fometimes more, for each man. 3°. Ceffe exacted for diverse dayes, fometimes for eight, ten, or more, before the partie did actuallie appeare. 4°. Impofeing of fines, and quartering, without any previous citation, or heareing of parties. 5°. Fineing without due information from minifters. 6°. Fineing fuch as lived orderlie, as appeares by ministers testificates. 7°. Fineing and ceffing for causes for which there are no warrands from acts of parliament or councill; as first, baptifeing of children by outed minifters; fecondlie, baptifeing by neighbouring ministers, where the parish church is vacant; thirdlie, for marrying by outed ministers; fourtlie, for keeping conventicles. 8°. Fineing for whole years preceeding his comeing to the countrey, and that after they had begun to live orderlie. 9°. Fineing fathers for their daughters baptifeing children by outed minifters, thogh foriffamiliate fix months before, and liveing in another parifh. 10°. Fineing without proportionating the foume with the fault. 11°. Fineing whole parifhes promifcuouflie, as well those that lived orderlie as thefe that did not. 12°. Fineing whole parifhes where there was no incumbent minister. 13°. Fineing one that lay a yeare bedfaft. 14°. Forceing bands from innocent people. 15° Ceffing of people that were not fyned. 16°. Takeing away cattle and other goods. All thefe acts are illegall mifdemeanors. Of other kinds there are, 17°. Agreeing for ceffe and fines both in one foume, wherby accounts were confounded. 18°. Not admitting complainers who were cefd upon, to come to his prefence; alleadged to have beene his conftant cuftome. 19°. Permitting his fervants to take money for admitting people to him, and yet acceffe denyd. 20°. Increafeing the number of quartering fojours after complaints. 21°. Exacting of moneys for removeing of fojors after ceffe and fynes were payd.

Everie one of the forgoeing articles is made out by information upon oath, which yet doth not amount to a legall proofe; which, in moft of these cases, will be difficult if not impossible to obtaine, in regard that no witnesses can be had that are not lyable to exception, unles by examineing officers, fojors and fervants, which wold take up much time and labour.

Sir James Turners defences as to fuch of the forgoing articles as he acknowledged, are commiffions and inftructions from the then Lord Commiffioner, for quartering to raife fines, for fineing fuch who forbore goeing to church, or married or baptifed by outed minifters, or keepd conventicles; and that upon the delation of credible perfons, and to preferre them to thefe of minifters. Bot he doth affirme, all his commiffions and inftructions were taken by the rebells, when he was made prifoner, and fo hath nothing to fhow for his vindication. And for all the other heads above written, he either denys matter of fact, afcribes the tranfactions to others, or pleades ignorance.

The foumes of money reffaved for fines and ceffe, and bonds taken, he acknowledged to have amounted to be threttie thoufand pounds fcots. The foumes charged on him by the countrey, befides quartering, comes to about threttie eight thousand pounds Scots; wherin is not reckond what was exacted from any of those who rose in rebellion, and fome parishes in Galloway from whence no information was returned.

2 D

And as to his furprifall, he fayth, Firft, he had bot fixtie fixe foot in thefe parts under his command. Secondlie, that they were all difperfed throw the countrey about the fines, fo that there was not fo many left with him as to keepe guard at his lodgeing, nay, not fo much as one, fome nights before. Thirdlie, that he had no order to keepe a guard about him, or to fortifie himfelfe, thogh there be a ftrong houfe within the toune called the Castell, to which he might have retired with fome thretteene fojouris that came in that night before he was taken. Fourthlie, that he had intelligence there was a rifeing in the countrey; and that a corporall of his was fhot, who told him that there were divers perfons got together, who had intelligence from the north of a rifeing there, with ane intention to march to the citadell of Aire, and to feize it and the armes which had beene taken from the countrey. Fifthlie, that about midnight, he wrote to George Maxwell of Munches. Sixthlie, he fent orders to fome more of his fojours to meet him the nixt morning, intending towards Newgalloway, where the rifeing was reported to be. Seventhlie, that he rofe about fixe of the clocke that morning, bot being indifpofed, lay doune againe, and being up in his goune about eight a clock, he was furrounded and taken.

This is all that can be expected for his Majefties prefent information concerning Sir James Turner. As to what further concerns the money he intromitted with, it may be lookd after, according to the way his Majeftie fhall appoint.

End of the Report.

210

The fending away of this Report to the King without permitting me to fee it, was the hardeft meafure I met with the whole time of my tryall, and perhaps is ane action that wants a precedent. I wrote ane anfuere to that Report, and everie article of it, and that fo ingenuouflie and candidlie that I could, to verifie the truth of it, goe to death. Bot finding it was in vaine to fhow it to the Councell, now that the bufienes was out of theirs, and in the Kings hands, and feareing, if I fould fend it to Court, either no ufe, or a bad ufe fould be made of it, I onlie fhew it to fome of my friends. The copie of it follows.

My Anfuere to the Report.

The Report which the honourable Committee made to the Lords of his Majefties Privie Councell, and which their Lordships fent to his Majeftie concerning me, had nothing in it on their parts bot truth, neither enterd it ever in my fecretes thoughts to question the veritie of it; I meane still, on their part; for they bot reported these things that were alleadged against me, and many of them suore by the parties. Bot because their lordships in that Report affirme, that no legall proofe was got, or could possible be obtained, I shall beg libertie shortlie, bot verie ingenuous to answer everie article of that Report.

1°. The first I acknouledge to be true, and was warranted for it by the fourth article of my instructions, dated the 6th of March, 1666.

2°. I abfolutlie deny, that I ever gave order, permitted or connivd at any fuch exactions, neither was there ever any complaints of that nature brought to me; and the contrare of this, I fay, will never be provd. My anfuere to the 7th and 8th grieveances cleers it fullie.

3°. I deny that ever any fuch thing was done by my order or connivence; and if it was done at all, it hath beene by fecret transactions betueene the parties and the fojors, without my knouledge; neither was ever any fuch thing complaind of, as is more fullie containd in my anfuere to the fixth grieveance.

4°. The fourth I grant to be true, as being obliged to it by my orders, as appeareth by the formentiond fourth article of my inftructions. Neither, indeed, was it poffible to use any fuch previous citation or formall processes, nor was it needfull, the most of the parties acknouledging guilt.

5°. Minifters could not give due information of conventicle keepers; and I was obliged by my commiffion to ceffe upon, and fyne fuch without the minifters, the thing being made cleere to me otherwife, as more fullie appeares in my anfuere to the third and fifth grieveances.

6°. It neither can or ever will be provd, that I fynd or cefd on any that livd orderlie. As to the minifters teftificates, tuo inftances were given in the grieveances, the one of Keirick parifh, which perhaps may be true, thogh I do not at all remember either the thing or the parifh. The other is of Irongray, to which I fhall fpeake in my anfuere to the ninth article. To both I fay now, I was not obliged to regard teftificats from neither minifter or other man, after fubfcrived lifts were given me, as appeares by the fourth article of my inftructions.

7°. The feventh article is fubdivided in foure. To the first I ansure, I granted I did fo, and was warranted for it by the first article of my orders, dated the 9th of May, 1666. To the fecond I fay, it is a meere calumnie, for I exhorted all who had no minister of their oune, to goe to the nixt adjacent church, both for hearing the word, and getting the benefite of the facraments; and never hinderd or difchargd any, provided the minifter who officiated was conforme; if not, I could not permit it, being orderd to the contrare in the formentiond first article of my orders, dated the 9th of May, 1666. The third I grant, being warranted to it by the formentiond articles of my inftructions. The fourth I grant, being warranted by the third article of my inftructions, dated the 6th of May, 1666.

8°. I grant I did fo with fome wicked, malitieous and obftinate contemners, whom the bifhops and minifters gave me in their lifts, for I was to be ruld by them for the time when I beganne to ceffe. Bot affuredlie I find none whom they declared to have begunne to live orderlie; for they thought it not enough that fome, at my approch to them, declared they wold keepe the church afterward. Bot with whom the minifters were fatified, fo was I too. Bot neither they nor I were fatiffied with the hipocriticall carrieage of one of the worft of men, Steuart of Cullgruff, for whofe fake this article is foyfted in.

9°. The honorable Committee hath put in this article, upon a moft unjuft and falfe information. It is the bufienes of Irongray. Firft, it was no baptifme, bot a marriage. Secondlie, the woman was not foriffamiliated. Thirdlie, fhe livd in her fathers houfe, and not in ane other parifh. Fourthlie, the wedding dinner was keepd in her fathers houfe. Fifthlie, fhe was married by a nonconformift, haveing refufed to be married by tuo conformifts, who livd neerer her father then the other did. And this I was not to fuffer, by the whole feries of my inftructions; yet that there was fome feveritie ufed in that bufienes, I doe ingenuouflie confeffe.

10°. To the tenth I fay, if I did not proportionate the foume to the fault, it was done in favour of the partie, in not exacting fo great a fine as his fault deferved; that ever I exceeded, is a groundles calumnie will never be proved, the contrare being acknouledgd by the phanatikes themfelvs; and it is knoune, that at moft, I never from the greateft tranfgreffor exacted the halfe of the fines.

1668.

11°. This eleventh article was the firft grieveance, and the tuo inftances of the parifhes of Kirkcunzon and Anwith, will be fo farre from proveing it, that they demonstrate the contrare. And the Earle of Niddsdaill, who had once the greatest fhare of the first, and Sir Alexander Mackulloch, who hath the greatest interest in the last, will testifie the contrare. I quarterd indeed on feverall perfons of these parishes, bot upon none bot deficients, as more fullie appears in my ansure to the first grieveance.

12°. I never find a whole parifh, bot I grant I find fome deficients in feverall parifhes where there were no incumbents; becaufe they went not to the nixt churches where conforme minifters were, which they were bound to doe by the Act of Councell 1662.

13°. If the thretteenth article be provd, I fhall acknouledge myfelfe to be voyd both of chriftianitie and of humanitie; I have fpoke to it fullie in my anfuere to the eleventh grieveance.

14°. I never forcd a bond from any, much leffe from innocent people; if any have accufd me of it, they were bound by law to prove it, which is purlie impoffible

15°. I acknouledge I cefd on many whom I find not. It was upon promife of future obedience, and this I had power to doe by the third article of my inftructions, dated the 9th of May, 1666. Bot I had no power to abate any thing of the fojors ceffe, which the Councell had alloued them; bot, good God! could any man have thought, that any favour I did these people, wold have appeard against me under the notion of a grieveance.

16°. Such things were never done by my order, and when I knew the fojors had done it, I reftored the cattle and punished the fojors.

17°. This was fometimes done, at the earnest intreatie of the deficients, as ane ease to them; nor were accounts therby confounded, for I payd the sojors their cessed duelie, and keepd the rest for fine, as is more fullie set doune in answere to the eighth grievance.

18°. I never all my life refufd to admit people to me who had bufienes with me, unles I have beene ficke. And my indifposition that fummer was fo frequent, that it is well enough knoune that, betueene the 20th of March and the middle of November, I was feven times let blood; and fo this grievance fignifies litle, befides that it is falfe.

19°. I remember, fome complaind that my fervants tooke money to admit people to me; bot I beleeve, never one of them faid that I permitted them to doe fo, fo the article is very ill worded. Befides, if my fervants did fo, they had neither command, permiffion or connivance from me. I onlie fhall fay, it will be hard, if not impoffible, for any man that is in publick truft or charge, to anfuere for all their fervants efcapes of that nature.

20°. If the article be meand, that the more obftinate the deficient was, the more fojors I quarterd on him, then it is true; if otherwife, it is moft falfe, neither will it ever be provd true; in that fence the article holds it out.

21°. If this laft article be provd, I fhall be infamous; yet fuch things being fo frequentlie fpoke of in the depositions, and charged upon fome under my command, bot never upon myfelfe, I am apt to beleeve that fome under me have abufd both the people and me, bot none ever haveing complaind of it, I could not redreffe it.

As to what is fpoke in the Report of what I faid for my oune juftification, I wifh all I faid to everie grieveance had been mentiond, as well as what I was accufd of. They are yet extant in the Councell Chamber.

The Report fayth, I acknouledgd 30,000 lb. Scots for quarter ceffe moneys and bonds, and fo I did. It fayth, moreover, that 38,000 lb. was charged on me by the countrey for ceffe moneys and bonds, befides free quarter. Heere I am bound to animadvert to tuo things. Firft, there is a fallacie, for 38,000 lb. was chargd on me in the firft examination by the Mafter of Herreis and Baldoun; which was fo groffe and ouglie, that the Councell thought it not fitting to take up their meafures by it, bot examind me upon the fecond report brought in by Buntein, which exceeded not 33,000 pound Scots, in which alfo was fet up the fojors plunderings. Secondlie, that which the Councells Report calls free quarter, the countrey people calls ceffe; and fo free quarter and ceffe are all one, which the Report feems to diftinguifh very difadvantageouflie for me. As to what I tooke from thofe that were in the rebellion, it was bot litle; bot it was not forgot to be given up by their friends to Buntein, which is obvious in many places of his papers.

For my furprifall, I have no more to fay bot what I have faid allreadie; bot the penner of the Report hath miftaken himfelfe in thefe particulars. I never faid I could fortifie myfelfe in that ftrong houfe, (as he calls it) or Caftle of Drumfries. If I had had intelligence of the rebells comeing, I wold have endeavord to defend the bridge, and not a houfe, which could not be made defenfible bot in a long time. Secondlie, I had no intelligence that there was any rifeing in the countrey, otherwife I wold not have ftayd in Drumfreis. The fhooting of my corporall onlie alarmd me. Thirdlie, my letter to Munches, was, that he, as ftewart depute, wold looke after thefe rogues who had fhot my corporall; this is in my defences, bot omitted in the report. Fourthlie, the intelligence I had of a rifeing in the north, was not at all to be trufted till further inquirie; neither did I ever fay, that I had heard the north countrey people intended to have taken the citadell of Aire. That fould have beene done by the weft countrey men, if by any.

So ends my Anfuere to the Report,

Ten dayes, if I remember right, after the Report was to Court, namelie, on the feventh of March, my Lord Chancellor arrivd at Edenburgh. He was met with hundreths of the nobilitie, gentrie, burgeffes and foldierie. E. Linlithgow orderd me to reffave the word from him. He gave it me very publicklie, without any ceremonie, which made many thinke the King had continued him Captaine Generall; bot my nixt nights feekeing it from him cleerd the matter, for he told me that he was obliged to thanke my Lord Linlithgow for his civilitie, and that he had accepted of it the first night, in regard he knew it was done to honor him; bot haveing layd doune his commission of Generall at Court, he wold not pretend to give the watch word any more.

That very night my Lord Chanclor came, arrivd a poft who brought a letter from the King to the Councell, in which he orderd them to call me before them, and in his name to command me to lay doune his commiffions which he had given me, and to call me to ane account for what moneys I had reffaved; and what I was found to be juftlie owing, to take it from me, and to put it to fuch pieous ufes as they thought fitting. This was the refult of the Report. On the tenth of March, a macer was fent to the withdrauing roome privatlie, to defire me to goe into the Councell; for the Lords were pleafd to ufe me with fo much refpect, as not to fuffer the macer to call publicklie for me, or to fuffer any to enter with me, thogh both in fuch cafes be ordinarie. Being at the barre, my Lord Chancellor told me what his Majefties pleafure was. I had fullie refolve before with myfelfe, to vindicate his Majefties juftice by takeing fome guilt upon me; for befides that I thought all loyall fubjects fould doe fo, I had reafon to imagine, if I fould plead not guiltie, I might be ufd feverlie enough. I had therefore premeditated what to fay, which I utterd in thefe, or the like exprefions.

2 E

1668.

My Speech to my Lord Chancellor, and the Privie Councell, when I layd doune my Commiffions, the tenth of March, 1668.

My Lord Chanclor,

If ever it had beene in my pouer, as it was allways in my defires, to have done the King any acceptable peece of fervice, I fould never have beene fo vaine as to have valued it at a hier rate, then the paying a part, and bot a part, of that duetie I owed to his Majeftie. Yet let my endeavors be what they wold, they provd ftill unfuccefffull. Bot a greater milfortune then that hath befallen me. I have done the King differvice, for which I have deferved a fevere cenfure; and certainlie my crime is fo much the greater, that I have offended fo good and fo gracieous a mafter; yet, my lord, give me leave to fay, that I never wickedlie, malicieouflie, or intentionallie wrongd his fervice. Some things were irregularlie done by thefe under my command; bot becaufe I did not know them all, I could not advert to them all. Bot fome things were done by myfelfe, which I do not offer now to juftifie, bot fhall acknouledge that his Majeftie might have proceeded with much rigour againft me, and yet not have exceeded the bounds and limits of juftice. Bot he hath beene gracieouflie pleafd to incline rather to clemencie than feveritie.

My lord, I am not indeed now fo able to ferve the King in any militarie imployment as formerlie I have beene. My bodie with yeares and toyle is become crafie, and my fpirit with fome fad croffes and afflictions is brought low; bot in what condition foever I fhall heerafter be, my loyaltie to the King fhall accompany me to my grave, and it fhall be my inceffant prayer to heaven, that his Majeftie may live long, to raigne with his accuftomd goodnes glorieouflie and happilie over us.

My lord, fome foure yeares fince, his Majeftie gave me a commiffion to be a Major of his guards of foot; a yeare and a halfe agoe, and fome more, I got a commiffion to be Lieutenant Colonell of thefe guards. In November laft, the Earle of Kellie was appointed to be Lieutenant Colonell, and I againe Major; for this laft charge I had no commiffion, bot acted by vertue of the Kings letter to the Councell. The tuo commiffions are heere; which, as I reflaved with much joy and gladnes, as teftimonies of his Majefties undeferved favour touards me, fo I doe now moft willinglie and cheerfullie, without any reluctancie, yet with all imaginable fubmiffion and humilitie, returne them backe.

1668.

So ended my Speech.

My Lord Chancellour haveing given me a figne to remove, nothing els was faid to me then; perhaps the lords thought there was enough faid at one time. I was therafter orderd to give in my accounts to the Cleark Register, Hatton and Nithrie, or any tuo of them; and the 8th day of Aprile (which was nixt Councell day,) was indulged to me to make them readie. I went to Glafgow, and at my returne a day or tuo ere the Councell met, I deliverd my accounts to my Lord Regifter and Nithrie. After they had perufd them in the Councellhoufe, I was calld in and defird to figne them; which I did, and attefted them to be true according to my beft memorie and judgment; and fo I was difmiffd by them. When the Councell day came, I was inquired privatelie, whether I wold fweare that these accounts were just or not. This I peremptorilie refufd, for, having lofd my memorialls and papers, I might eafilie erre in fome particulars, and ane oathe fould be taken in judgment, truth and righteoufnes. Upon this anfuere, my Lord Register refolves to give them in to the Councell as they were. They were publikelie red there by their clearke; a copie wherof follows.

My Accounts given in to the Privie Councell the eighth day of Aprile, 1668.

My Lords,

The accounts that are charged on me, and the feverall parties of horfe and foot under my command, by the fhyre of Niddifdaill and fteuartrie of Kirkcubright, extended, as I reckoned, to nine and tuentie thoufand and fome odd hundreths of pounds Scots, thogh I know fome will have them to amount to 33,000 lb. Scots; yet in my anfuere to the abbreviation of the Report, they did not exceed eight and tuentie thoufand pounds. Bot when I was defired by the honorable Committee of the Privie Councell, to declare ingenuouflie what I thought the foldiers ceffe, and the fines I exacted in bonds and moneys might amount to, my anfuere was, that they never could exceed threttie thoufand pounds ; and therfor I fhall be contented the foume fhall be calld fo, thogh I am very fure it will never be provd to be fo.

I am now to divide that foume in ceffe, in bonds, and moneys. As to the ceffe, it wold be confiderd, that the fecond time I was in Galloway, anno 1665, (for the first time I meddled with neither ceffe nor fine) I ftayd tuo months; and the third time, which was anno 1666, I ftayd full eight months, which makes in all ten months. It is impoffible for me to give a precife account of what my foldiers reffaved in ceffe, which is, (as they call it there) 8d. per diem, and in meate and drinke, (which they call free quarter) 4d. per diem; in all tuelve pence per diem for everie foot fojor, and halfe a croune a day for each horfman. Bot I shall offer to your lordships confideration, that it can not be juftlie or rationallie thought that the foot fojors exhaufted leffe then three pounds fterline everie day, that is to fay, alloueance for threefcore men, which was bot halfe my partie of foot; for thogh fometimes I had none at all on ceffe, which was bot fet doune, fometimes not above the third part, yet ordinarilie, I had the most of my partie quarterd on deficients, and fometimes all of them; as it happend, when I was furprifd at Drumfreis; fo that, communibus diebus, I may moft juftlie reckon the ceffe of the foot foldiers to be three pound fterline a day; Inde, for ten months, upwards of nine hundreth pounds fterline moneys; and it is undenyable, bot the ceffes of the feverall parties of the horfe which I employed, extended to much more then one hundreth pounds fterline. Let then the ceffe, which the foldiers of horfe and foot got, wherof I might not defraud them, (haveing had pouer onlie to qualifie the fines,) be reckond to one thoufand pounds fterline, which I fhall eafilie prove to be farre below that, which they got in money, meate and drinke.

Ĩ.,

1668.

The bonds which I deliverd to Mr Alexander Keith, and fome inconfiderable ones, which were taine from me when I was made prifoner, I reckon to amount to thretteene thoufand mearks.

It will then inevitablie follow, that I have reffaved of fines, no more in money then fourteene thousand mearks; and I doe averre, that more then that, if fo much, was never reffaved by me, nor any in my name, and the contrare of what I now affirme shall never be proved. What is becomd then of all these monstrous fournes reffaved by me, or those under me, which have made fo great a noyse?

I fhall now offer to your lordfhips confideration, what became of thefe fourteene thousand mearks, and how they were disposed of by me.

1°. Firft, at my returne from Galloway in the yeare 1665, I deliverd a paper to the then Lord Commiffioner, which he communicated to the tuo Lords Archbifhops, wherin I fhew them what great expence I had beene at in three years before, for many incident charges in the Kings fervice, as alfo for my tuo journeys to Galloway, 1663, and 1665. Upon which I was orderd to deliver all the bonds I had taken to Mr Alexander Keith; and haveing reffaved no command to deliver up the money which was then in my hand, I did conceave, and doe fo ftill, that upon the account of my formentiond charges, that money was allowd me; and confirmed I was in that opinion, becaufe fince that time, it was never fought from me, the foume not exceeding one hundreth and fiftie pounds fterline, for all thefe charges. A precedent of this was given by the Privie Councell in the yeare 1663, when they orderd one hundreth and tuentie pounds fterline to be given to E. Linlithgow, for the expence of his journey to Kirkcubright.

2°. In these forementiond years of 1665 and 1666, some ministers, on the account of some extraordinarie charges which they were at for the same busienes wherin I was imployed, receaved from me fortie pounds sterline.

3°. Thogh Robert Glover, (who is fo oft mentiond in the long Report, and the abbreviation therof,) was not guiltie of fo many enormities as he is charged with, yet I may, of thefe fourteene thousand mearks, fafelie charge fixe hundreth mearks, if not more, upon him.

4°. The feverall officers of thefe parties under my command, at feverall times, for their extraordinare charges, (fuch things being ordinarlie practifd in all warrs,) reflaved from me one hundreth and ten pounds fterline, and upwards.

5°. Laftlie, when I was furprifd at Drumfreis, the rebells tooke from me, of readie money in the chamber where I lay, and the chamber above it where my clothes were, (which were all likewife loft,) about fixe thoufand and fixe or feven hundreth mearks Scots.

My lords, you fee that in this account, I have not at all mentiond my particular loffes, either of horfes, armes, furniture, cloaths, linnens, or my fervants goods, all which for one of my meane qualitie, were not inconfiderable; bot refers the confideration of all thefe loffes, and all the premiffes, to your lordfhips pleafure and determination.

End of my Accounts.

Thefe accounts being red before the Councell, a great Committee is appointed to cognofice of them, to examine myfelfe in any difficultie might arife, and report their fence to the Councell against the fixth of May. The Committee confifted allmost of these members which compold the former one, except that (if I remember right,) E. Linlithgow, and my Lord Renton were added. The first profeffing kindnes to me, and the fecond being my reall friend, made me flatter myfelfe with a fancy, that much feveritie was not intended againft me; neither did my hopes abufe me; for, being calld to the Committee a day or two before the Councell met, I was ufd with all imaginable civilitie. E. Tueeddaill being againe Prefident, defird me to name the minifters to whom I had given the money mentiond in my accounts, which I did very readilie. Then I was defird to name the officers who had got a fhare of that money, for which I was accountable. I prepard to doe it inftantlie, and had namd one of the officers to the cleark; bot E. Tueeddaill perceaveing I was unwilling to particularife the perfones. after he had fpoke with tuo or three of the Committee with a low voyce, told me, the Committee haveing found fo much ingenuitie in me for-. merlie, that they wold take my word for this, and difpence with me in that particular; and fo difmifd me. The Report to the Councell was favorable, and no doubt I had ftrong obligations both to E. Tueeddaill, and Sir Robert Murrey, for their kindnes in the Report; for thogh my accounts were true and juft enough, yet if thefe tuo perfons and the reft of the Committee had not beene favorable to me, what I gave either to minifters or officers, or the hundreth and fiftie pound fterline I had taken to myfelfe without precept, had not beene alloued me. On the fixth day of May, the Committee made their report to the Councell, and both my charge and difcharge were alloued by their lordfhips, without a contrare vote, except my Lord Cochran, whom the King hath fince made Earle of Dundonnald. Ane act of councell was paft for my exoneration, a copie wherof followes.

Act of Councell for my exoneration, at Edenburgh the 6th of May, 1668.

"Forafinuch as the Kings Majefty haveing by his letter directed to the Lords of his Councill upon the third of March laft, ordered them to call Sir James Turner to ane account for moneys and bonds levied and taken by him for church fines, and in order thereto, they haveing appointed a committee of their oune number to confider of the faid Sir James his accounts, who, in obedience to the faid order, haveing called and conveened the faid Sir James before them, and he haveing exhibit and given in a paper, bearing a charge and difcharge of the bonds and moneyes reflaved and levied be him; and the faid Committee haveing diligentlie perufed and confidered the faid paper of accounts, did make the report folloueing: Firft, as to the charge, that their humble opinion was, that feeing they conceaved there wold be difficultie to prove legallie the charge of threttie eight thousand pounds Scots or therby, given in against him by the countrey, that the charge of threttie thousand pounds Scots confessed be him, (wherin they thinke him very ingenuous,) be admitted without further inquirie. And as to the first article of the discharge, craveing the alloueance of one thousand pound sterline taken for quartering, that their opinion was that the fame fould be alloued, feeing it hath been the former cuftome to grant alloueance of quartering upon fuch occasions. As to the fecond article, anent the bonds taken be him, and deliverd to Mr Alexander Keith, which amount to eight thousand one hundreth and fiftie one pound Scots, that Sir James flould be exonerd of the fame. As to the article of one hundreth and fiftie pound fterline, which he defires may be alloued upon the account of his charges for the feverall times he went to Galloway; they thinke the fame fould be alloued to him upon that reafon, and upon the confideration of the loffes he fuftaind, by plundering of his horfes, cloaths, etc. when he was taken prifoner. As to that article of fortie pound sterline given to fome ministers, Sir James haveing made a particular condescendence who did reffave the famine; they thinke the fame ought to be alloued to him. That the article of fixe hundreth mearks reflaved be Robert Glover be alloued, and fome courfe be taken with him therfore. That the hundreth and ten pounds fterline given by him to officers under his command, for their extraordinarie charges be alfo alloued. And as to the laft article of fixe thoufand fixe hundreth mearks, which Sir James alledgeth he loft when he was taken prifoner; the Committee noways doubting Sir James his ingenuitie, offerd it as their opinion, that the fame fould be alloued him. The Lords of his Majefties Privie Counfell haveing at length heard and confiderd the forfaid account of charge and difcharge given in by the faid Sir James Turner, together with the faid Report of the Committee therupon, doe approve of the faid Report, and exoners and difcharges the faid Sir James of his intromiffion with the foumes and bonds above fpecified, conforme to the tennor of the forfaid Report.

226

Extractum per me,

AND 000 100

Sic fubscribitur,

and the set of the set of the formed the Pet. Wedderburne.

So ended the Act of Councell.

Haveing now at length comd to ane end of this tedious and troublefome bufienes, wherin, in fteade of fome gratuitie from his Majeftie, of which I was made to have great hopes, my livelihood was taken from me, not without fome reflection on my reputation; and trulie things being reprefented fo of me to the King, his Majeftie might have ufd me worfe, better he could not; being, I fay, at ane end of it, I tooke my leave of the Lords, thankfullie acknouledging the favours I reffaved from fome of them; and returning to Glafgow, I found my wife very ficke of a feaver, and in a ftrong apprehenfion of death; bot it pleafed God fhe recoverd, to be a comfort to me after thefe fad tryalls.

Since then I have livd private, and though I profeffe myfelfe no ftoicke, nor have I indeed that apathie or infenfibilitie of the ftroakes of fortune and afflictions wherof they foolifhlie boaft, yet I may without vanitie fay, that the Kings difpleafure with me being fet afide, I have beene bot litle movd with thefe changes of fortune that hath befallen me; nor have they brangled my refolutions from looking on profperitie and adverfitie with ane equall eye, nor fhall hinder me, fo farre as God fhall enable me with grace, to keepe a good conficience before God, ane unfpotted loyaltie to my Prince, and faire and honneft dealeing with all men, at leaft in as hie a degree as man in the ftate of imperfection can reach to.

I am writeing this in the month of Februare, of the yeare of our Lord one thouland fixe hundreth three fcore and ten, and entring in the fixe and fiftieth yeare of my oune age, being in indifferent good health; my bodie, confidering the fatigue of my life, not very crafie; the intellectualls which God hath beftowed upon me, found enough; and my memorie fo good, that though I never ufed to keepe notes in writeing, and that I have written within thefe four laft monthes, the Introduction to my Difcourfes, and the Introduction to this long Narration with the Narration itfelfe, in which are comprehended the moft remarkable paffages of my life; yet all and everie one of them reprefented themfelvs as frefhlie to my remembrance as if they had beene bot the occurrences of yefterday. To God onlie wife, be glorie for ever. Amen.

END OF THE WHOLE NARRATION.

APPENDIX.

٤

1

- 2119 1.91

-

٠

BISHOP GUTHRY'S OBSERVATIONS OF THE LATE REBELLION OBSERVED.

AFTER haveing long fought for a manufcript of our late troubles, I have got a fight of it, and it beares this title : "Obfervations upon the "rife and progreffe of the late rebellion againft King Charles the Firft, "in fo farre as it was carried on by a malecontented faction in Scot-"land, under pretext of reformation; by Mr Henry Guttrie, Bifhop of "Dunkeld." I have obfervd, in thefe Obfervations, fome paffages maliciouflie and falflie written againft James Duke of Hamilton, and others which I know to be meere lyes; bot thefe laft, not directlie relateing to the Duke, I fhall onlie touch en paffant, that the reader may know the Bifhop to have beene a man not to be trufted in what he writes, bot when the truth was knoune by more faithfull authors.

Page 17, [Pr. Mem. p. 40.] The Bifhop, fpeakeing of Duke James, then Lord Commiffioner, writes :

"Upon the morrow, thefe lords and minifters returnd to his Grace,"

(now thefe lords and minifters were Covenanters,) " and found him " more plaufible in treateing with them, even publicklie before Rox-" burgh, Southefke, the Treafurer Depute, the Juffice Clerk and other " Councellors that were prefent. Bot that which was most talkd of, " was that which at parting he told them in private; for haveing de-" fired thefe Lords of the Councell to ftay ftill in the chamber till his " returne, himfelfe convoyed them" (to wit, the Covenanters) " thorough " the roomes, and ftepping into a gallerie, he drew them in to a corner, " and there express himselfe as follows: My lords and gentlemen, I " fpoke to you before thefe Lords of the Councell as the Kings Com-" miffioner; now there being none prefent bot yourfelves, I wold fpeake " one thing to you as a kindlie Scotfman: if you goe on with courage " and refolution, you will carry what you pleafe; bot if you faint and " give ground in the leaft, you are undone; a words enough to wife " men." The Bifhop proceeds thus : " This haveing beene fpoke in pri-" vate, I fould not have mentiond it, if it had not comd to be publick; " and reports anent it were fo different, that fome made it better, others " worfe then it was. Bot that fame very day, Mr Andro Cant told it " to Mr Guild, as also to Master Dalgleis minister of Cooper, to Mr " Robert Knox minister of Kelfo, and to Mr Henry Guttrie minister " of Stirline."

Anfuere.

The Bifhop, after fo foule an afperfion, fould have endeavord to prove his accufation by fome more habile witneffes then Mr Andro Cant, yea or any of the Covenanters, not excepting the beft of them; for all of them were then partie, all of them knew bot too well that many publick affaires are carryed on by lyes, and the bufines ordinarlie done before the people be undeceived ; and therfor I doubt not bot they wold ftudie by all meanes, laufull and unlaufull, to carry thorough their begun rebellion; and what more plaufible way to encourage their oune partie, and get profelites to their caufe, then to perfuade not onlie the populace, bot even men of note, parts and understanding, that his Majefties Commissioner was only for the King in an outward and diffembled fhow, bot in his heart was entirelie for the Covenanters and their caufe? Bot the Bishop himfelfe makes Mr Andro Cant the reporter of this tale, and confequentlie father of the ly; and indeed he could not have told it to three fitter trumpeters, wherof this Bifhop was himfelfe one. Bot let this manufcript be examind, it will be found the Bishop accuses the same Mr Cant, in another case, to have made a concatenation of lyes in the pulpit to his audience in a fermon, and blafphemous lyes in his prayer to God Allmightie. With what malice and impudence then can the Bifhop make use of the fame Mr Cant as a habile witnes against James, then Marques, fince Duke of Hamilton?

This Mr Guild, (if it be he I meane,) was an honneft man at that time, and a royalift; and therfor Cant hath purpofelie told this ly to him, that Guild being once perfuaded to beleeve it, might alfo labour to bring other honneft and loyall men to a diftruft of the Commiffioner, that they might provide for their oune fafetie, by leaveing him and joyning with the Covenanters; Cant and all his crue knouing well enough, that when one is boldlie calumniated, fomthing will flicke and adhere; and affuredlie their defigne at that time and long afterwards, was, to make honneft men jealous one of another, and particularlie of James then Marques of Hamilton; wherin they were bot too fucceffefull, none contributeing more to it then the Bifhop, the author of this manufcript.

2 G

Bot let us observe, what a poore and fillie kind of a man the Bishop makes the Marques to have beene. He convoyd the Covenanters out of the chamber where he was. Trulie I have knoune him keepe greater flate when he was not the Kings Commissioner. Bot he leaves the Privie Councellors, and convoys the Covenanters thorough feverall roomes, and leads them to a corner in a gallerie, there to blufter out both treafon and follie. James Duke of Hamilton had many and pouerfull enemies, who accufd him of treacherie; bot this Bifhop is the first, (for any thing I ever yet heard,) that accused him of follie. Wold any bot a foole, or a mad man, have told out his treacherous thoughts to a number of men, of whom he neither had, or fought a promife of filence. Could he not have imparted thefe villanies onlie to one of the Covenanters, (fuppofe my Lord Lindfay, the Dukes brother in law,) that he might tell them to the reft of the confpirators? Bot the Bifhop will have the Duke to tell his treafonable cogitations to more then halfe a dozen of the violenteft of all the Covenanters. The Dukes enemies never acculd him of follie, bot in the contrare of too much wit and policie; nor did they ever accufe him to be open mouthd, bot, in the contrare, to be the most close and referved perfon that ever folloued a court. Bot this Bifhops malice is fo great, that he will have the Duke to have beene both a knave and a foole, none of which he was ever able to prove.

Bot how wickedlie and falflie the Bifhop hath reprefented this ftorie, may appeare perfectlie by this, that he writes of the famous then Earle, fince Marques of Montrofe, as one who beleeved this ridiculous narration to be true. There is no doubt bot that noble perfon was fo wrought on to be Duke James his enemie, and was indeed fo to a hie degree; and if he could have put any ftreffe on this forgerie, it is to be thought affuredlie he wold not have omitted it, but wold certainlie have made it one of the chiefe articles of that accufation he and others gave againft Duke James, in the yeare 1643, in Oxford; and being he did it not, affuredlie he lookd upon it as a fable invented by Mafter Cant, with some additional notes by Bifhop Guttrie. You may reade thefe articles at Oxford, and Duke James his anfwers to them, in the Memoires of that Duke, and his brother Duke William, written by Doctor Burnet.

The Bifhop, page 23. [Pr. Mem. p. 56.]

" Notwithftanding my Lord Aboine defird my Lord Marques of " Hamilton to joyne the land forces he had on the Kings fhips with his, " yet he did it not, bot lay ftill in the Firth, and did nothing at all."

Anfuere.

The Marques might not, by his inftructions, put all his land forces to the north. Aboyne got more then what he defired; for befide officers and amunition, the Marques gave him money, and the two firft were onlie fought; bot what ufe Aboine made of all, I had rather the Bifhop fould learne from others then me. Reade the Memoires.

The Bifhop, in that fame page.

"The Lord Marques came out of his fhips, by boate, to the linkes of Barnbougall at midnight, where my Lord Loudon met him and had tuo hours conference with him; after which he returnd to his fhips, and the Lord Loudon to thefe who fent him."

Anfuere.

Thefe who gave in a charge against Duke James at Oxford, 1643, were not fo punctuall, and therfor more prudent then the Bifhop, who particularifes a meeting in Barnbougall linkes with the Lord Loudoun, and ftints the conference to tuo houres time; wheras the charge names not the Lord Loudon at all, nor fpeakes not of one night, or tuo houres, bot fays indefinitlie, the Marques keepd feverall meetings in Barnbougall fands and places nixt adjacent, with fome who were most defperate leaders and promoters of the Covenant; for fraud and deceit lurkes in generalls. Bot fince the Bifhop is fo particular, I thinke he was bound to have made good his affertion. If he could not produce habile witneffes, yet he was obliged to have namd fome fpectators, or byftanders. Affuredlie neither the Marques nor the Lord Loudoun came alone; and if the Bishop thought the Marques his attendants guiltie of their lords treacherie, and therfor not apt to reveale his fecrets, yet he might have namd thefe who waited on Loudoun, who were no hoter Covenanters then the Bishop himfelfe was at that time. And if my Lord Loudoun did tell the Bishop that he had met that night with the Marques of Hamilton, what will follow on that, bot that it was neither the first ly nor the last ly that lord had made, for promoting the holy covenant, and calumniating the Kings friends and fervants, particularlie the Marques; to make loyall perfons jealous of him, as one who keepd night meetings with his mafters enemies, and therfor not to be trufted, and confequentlie to fall off to the Covenanters. Duke James fullie anfuerd that charge at Oxford, as you may read in his Memoires.

The Bifhop, page 46. [Pr. Mem. p. 117.]

"The Marques being come home, (viz. anno, 1642,) he and Argile "feafted daylie together, and fpoke of a match betweene my Lord "Lorne and Lady Anne Hamilton; fo that in fteade of reclaiming Ar-"gile to the Kings fide, Marques Hamilton went along in Argiles way."

Anfuere.

a che in prove

Marques James neither came doune from Court, or was fent doune by the King, to declare warre against Argile, or any of the Covenanters, bot to ftraine all the finues of his wit to gaine all of them to his Majefties fervice, and effectiallie to hinder them to joyne either forces or councells with the blacke Parliament of England, then in armes against the King. Could Marques James deale in this great affaire with Argile, (the then prime Covenanter,) and not fpeake with him; and could he fpeake with Argile, and not feeme to use him kindlie? How hath malice foold this Bifhop, as not to make use of that reason God had beftoud on him! Did not the Bishop know that marriages are oftner fpoke of among great men then intended; yea, often confummated, yet both the married couple and their parents flicking clofe and adhering to their former principles, both in matters of faith and state? Reade the true storie of the tuo brothers deportment in the yeare 1642, in their Memoires written by Dr Burnet, which will cleare any unbyaffd reader.

The Bishop, speakeing of Lieutenant Generall Leslies march to

Kintire, writes, page 92. [Pr. Mem. p. 243.]

"From Inneraray on the 24th of August [May] they marchd to Kintire, "where Alaster Macdonald was, whose strength was 1400 foot, and "tuo troopes of horse. On the 25th Macdonald skirmishd with them

" from morning till night; bot the nixt day, himfelfe and his Irifhes, " (haveing boates in readienes) fled to the Iles, and from thence to Ire-" land. The countrey people, whom Macdonnald had conftraind to joyne " with him, fubmitted, on quarters given them by David Leflie; bot " haveing renderd their armes, Marques Argile and a bloodie preacher, " Mr John Nevoy, prevaild with him to breake to them; and fo the " armie was let loofe upon them, and killd them all without mercie. " Wheranent it feemd David Leflie had fome inward checke, for whill " the Marques and he and that Mr Nevoy were walking together " over the ancles in blood, he turnd about and faid, Now Mr Johne, have " you not once got your fill of blood !"

Anfuere.

I have not taken notice of feverall falfhoods, wherby the Bifhop blemifhes and ftaines the actions of the noble Marques of Montroffe, even when he intends to cry them up. I might have let this paffe alfo, as being eccentrick to my obfervations, which I intended onlie concerning James Duke of Hamilton; yet, to fhow how the Bifhop impofes lyes and contrivd fables on his readers, and does not at all make truth the fquare of his writeings, I fhall fpeake a litle to this laft paragraph, as knouing the ftorie as well as any man breathing. Firft, Macdonnald had good enough intelligence of Leflies march into Kintire; and therfor, if he had beene a foldier, and not exceffivelie befotted with brandie and aquavitæ, he fould have poffefd the paffes on this fide of Kintire, where one hundred well armd and refolute foot might have done David Leflie mifchiefe enough, and gone faire to have repelld his forces, efpeciallie his horfe. Nixt, that Macdonnald fkirmifhd from morning till night is fo falfe, that I beleeve that romance had its exiftence onlie in the Bifhops oune braine, and no where After Leflie had gaind the paffes without reluctancie, very unadels. vifedlie rode with the horfe feverall miles before his foot, and there found Alaster on his march, bot out of time, (like mustard after dinner,) to the paffes, particularlie to a houfe called Tarbot. Leflie made a halt, and offerd fkirmifh; tuo of Macdonnalds men were taken, and immediatlie without more adoe he retird; and now it was farre afternoone, Leflie thinking Alafter had retird to fome ftrength, returnd backe to his foot. Was this to fkirmifh a whole day, where Leflie had neither man nor horfe killd, fhot or wounded? Nixt day, Leflie purfued, bot found Macdonnald was fled to Ila, bot had left 300 men, and ftout men they were, at Dunnevertie; which he did like a foole, neither that house nor Dunneveg in Ila haveing any water, which occafioned the loffe of both places. A fearfull ly it was in the Bifhop, to write that these Alaster had left behind him had quarter promifd, and given them by David Leflie. A most falfe calumnie. The truth was this. The 300 men in Dunnevertie had faire conditions offerd them for their perfons and baggage, if they wold give over the houfe; this they ftiflie refufd to doe, expecting releefe which Alafter had falflie promifd. At length their louer trench being formd and taken, and fortie of their men killd in it, want of water made them beg conditions which before they had refused; bot none were granted them, bot to come out on difcretion, which they did, and fo were put to the fuord. Heere nothing was done against the laws and custome of warre, much leffe against faith or parole; for neither life nor quarter was ever promifd them. Yet I shall not deny bot heere was crueltie enough; for to kill men in cold blood, when they have fubmitted to mercie, hath no generofitie at all in it. It is true, David Leflie hath confeffd it afterwards to feveralls, and to myfelfe in particular oftner then once, that he had fpard them all, if that Nevoy, put on by Argile, had not, both by preachings and imprecations infteade of prayers, led him to commit that butcherie. Houever, he broke neither word nor articles, as this Bifhop falflie alleages. And is it not a prettie ftorie of the Bifhop to fay, that the Marques of Argile, David Leflie, and Nevoy waded over the ancles in blood? Certainlie they have beene horriblie delighted in blood, that wold walke in blood, where they might have walkd dryfhod. Could the blood of 300 men, in a hote fummer day, make fuch a poole of blood as to come over mens ancles? Bot this is fo farre from truth, that David Leflie never faw thefe 300 men either dead or alive, or ever came neere them, fay the Bifhop what he will.

I cannot deny, bot there was fome inhumanitie ufed in this action; bot if we will confider what a graceles and difobedient crue of defperados thefe were who fufferd, we muft acknouledge they got no more bot what they juftlie defervd. For, firft, no requeft, no intreatie nor command of Marques Montroffe, could prevaile with Alafter, or with his Irifh and Kintire men, to ftay with him after Kilfith battell; bot to Kintire they wold goe, and to Kintire they did goe, and to that difobedience of theirs, and my Lord Aboyns leaveing him with his northerne horfe, might Montroffe impute his loffe at Philiphauch. Nixt yeare after that, the late King fent his commands to Montroffe to lay doune armes, which he did; the like orders did his Majeftie fend to Alafter and his Kintire men, by Sir James Leflie, which that mad man and his cracke braind companie obftinatlie and rebelliouflie refufd to obey. Befide, they had fhed much innocent blood, which might well have beene fpared; for the Argile and many others were guiltie of capitall crimes, yet moft of their vaffalls and tennants were innocent; and of them it might be faid, what have thefe poore fheepe done? Now, thefe unhappie men who would neither obey their oune Generall, nor their Soveraigne Prince, for whom they pretended to fight, bot wold needs ftand on their oune legs, and who difdainfullie refufd faire conditions when they were reducd to extremities, what quarters could they rationallie expect from their profefd and dounright enemies, the Covenanters? Yet, perhaps, their welldeferved punifhment was inflicted on them by the wrong hand.

The Bifhop, fpeakeing of Duke James his election to be Generall, 1648, page 100. [Pr. Mem. p. 267.]

"There came onlie tuo to be talkd of, in reference to the hieft place "of command. The one was Duke Hamilton, whofe friends contend-"ed, it fould be fetled on him. The other was the Earle of Calander, "very many being for it, that he fould be the man, etc."

Anfuere.

I beleeve, when the Bifhop wrote this, he knew he was writeing a ly; for he could not bot know, that the Duke and his friends were fo farre from contending for that hie charge, that it was imposed on him against his will, by parliament; and if he had not accepted, he had beene fent to the Castle of Edenburgh, if he had not met with harder measure; nor did ever the Earle of Calander, or any for him, defire a hier charge then to be Lieutenant Generall under the Duke. See the Dukes Memoires.

The Bifhop, fpeakeing of the fight at Machlin, page 104. [Pr. Mem. p. 278.]

"The fight lafted not long, Middletone in an inftant putting them "all to flight; eightie of them being kild in the place, the reft taken "prifoners, except a few that efcaped by flight."

Anfuere.

As fhort as this relation is, it has many groffe lyes in the bellie of it. Middleton did not rout thefe rebells in an inftant; they difputed the matter long, wounded both him and Colonell Hurrie with fuords on the head, which fhew they did not prefentlie fly; and if E. Calander had not comd up with 8 troopes of horfe, Colonell Turners regiment of foot following faft, the bufines had beene worfe with Middleton. There were not ten of them killd, and not above fixtie prifoners. Now when the fight began, they were no fewer than tuo thoufand; how could then the Bifhop impudentlie fay, that all were killd and taken except a few that efcapd by flight; for moft of all, on Calanders appeareing, got away in a full bodie?

The Bifhop, page 105. [Pr. Mem. p. 279.]

"Generall Major George Monro had arrived by this time from Ire-"land, with tuo thoufand foot, and one thoufand horfe, and marchd "ftraight after the armie to England."

Anfuere.

In the unhappie tranfactions and Engagment in the yeare 1648, all along the Bifhop makes the Duke to drive on hidden defignes; and when the too earlie rifeings in England, and Sir Marmaduke Langdales too fudden levies, forced the Duke allmost unprepared to march, the Bifhop maliciouflie conceales the true reafons of the Dukes march, as alfo how he was forced to march with halfe regiments, ill armd and worfe difciplind, in the rainieft fummer ever Europe faw; and withall, to make the Duke more odious, he multiplyes his forces, as heere he doth Sir George Monros; for he landed not in Scotland with above fifteene hundreth foot, and four hundreth horfe.

The Bifhop, page 106. [Pr. Mem. p. 283.]

"The Scots armie made Prefton their hoff quarter, bot withall quar-"terd fo wide, that betueene the van and reare of their armie, there "was neare eight and threttie miles, and withall fufferd not George "Monro and his forces to come up, bot keepd him allwife behind, to "bring up the foots canon, which were in number five."

Anfuere.

Malicious Bifhop ! who, before the armie was raifd, makes the Duke underhand play the fame game which Argile and the kirk was playing above boord ; and after he was Generall, the Bifhop makes him act like a man who defigned to get his armie deftroyd, his mafter ruind, and himfelfe murtherd. Bifhop, I wold not have beleeved one word of this laft paragraph, the I had heard you preach it in a pulpit. Prefton was never the hof quarter, nor did ever any of Duke James his armie quarter in it. The Duke wold gladlie have had Sir George Monro and his forces come up to his armie, becaufe his men were traind and experiencd ; bot in this, as feverall other things, he unhappilie fufferd himfelfe to be overruled, nor did Sir George defire to joyne. The Dukes Memoires will informe you. It was agreed on, that Sir George fould ftill be in the reare, not for bringing canon, for we never faw any, bot for bringing ficke and ftraglers. It was alfo agreed on that Sir Marmaduke Langdale fould conftantlie have the van, for provideing guides, bot moftlie for intelligence, the want wherof haftend our ruine; for Sir Marmaduke and fome of the Dukes armie were routed, before we knew it was Cromwell that had done the feate. The day before Cromwell appeard, Calander and Middleton had prefd the Duke to fuffer them to goe with moft of the cavallerie, eight miles from the head quarters to Wiggam; bot notwithftanding that unhappie march, there was not fixteene miles from the van to the reare of all our forces, which this Bifhop with his multiplying glaffe makes up to eight and threttie.

The Bifhop, in that fame page. [Pr. Mem. p. 284.]

"Sir Marmaduke Langdale, in his fkirmifh, fent to the Duke and "Earle Calander for amunition, which was refufd him. The nixt "day, Generall Major Baillie renderd himfelfe and ten thoufand foot "prifoners; the reft of them ftragled northwards touards Monro. The "Duke and Calander, and the reft of the generall officers, (except "Middleton, who made the beft appearance of any, and was taken on "the place,) with three thoufand horfe, fled together in a body. Short-"lie after, the Duke, with all the other generall perfons, and all the "bodie of horfe, were taken prifoners, except Earle Calander, who in "a difguife efcapd to Holland."

Anfuere.

In a few lines the Bifhop hath couchd a good many malicious lyes. Firft, Sir Marmaduke got more amunition then could at that time be well fpard, and more then he defird; and numbers of men were likewife fent to him; and, by his mifintelligence, takeing Cromwell to be one Afhton, a prefbyterian gentleman in Lancashire, he was instrumentall in his oune and the Dukes ruine. Nixt, Lieutenant Generall Baillie had not fifteene hundreth foot with him, when, at Warinton bridge, finding they could make no refiftance, [he] renderd himfelfe and them prifoners of warre. Thirdlie, Middleton made no greater appearance then the Duke himfelfe did, nor was Middleton taken on the place; but tuo days after our first rencounter, he was taken in Staffordshire by tuo countrey troopes, his horse stumbling under him. Fourthlie, after our march from Ribble bridge, the Duke never faw eight hundreth of his horfe in a bodie, which the Bifhop, according to his cuftome, makes three thoufand. And here the Bifhop, with his accuftomd malice, conceales that Calander left the Duke at Utuxeter, and tooke the halfe of the horfe with him, leaving the reft fo difheartend and difcouragd, that they even put a neceffitie on the Duke to treate for himfelfe and them. And heere the Bishop, out of spite to the Duke, conceales this treatie, and therby feemes to justifie the blacke Parliaments murther of the Duke, being he mentions no previous treatie, wherin the Duke and all with him got faire quarters, and articles fignd. Is not all this done like a reverend and devout father of the church?

The Bifhop, page 108. [Pr. Mem. p. 288.]

"Sir George Monro comeing neare the border of Scotland, acknou-"ledgd Lainrick for his Generall. Thither came alfo Sir Thomas "Tilflie with a thoufand Englifh horfe, and offerd his fervice; bot "was refufd by Lainrick, faying, it wold be a meane to draw Crom-"well into Scotland."

Anfuere.

The Bishop hath purfued Duke James till he left him imprifond with the bloodie fectaries, where he needed expect no good ufage; and then the Bifhop returns to Scotland, to perfecute his brother Lainrick. Could any man have imagind, a Bifhop could have fhaken a thoufand Englifh horfe fo foone out of his fleeve; I never heard of thefe thoufand horfe before, and I beleeve never shall heerafter. I knew Sir Thomas Tilflie very well; a Roman Catholic he was, bot a very loyall perfon. I doe not remember ever I faw him with Duke James. I have heard he was to be Major Generall of Sir Marmaduke Langdales foot ; and fo had no horfe with him, bot thefe belongd to his oune perfon and his fervants. Very wellcome he wold have beene with a thoufand horfe before our defeate, bot how he got a thousand horfe together fo foone after we were beaten, and marchd fo fpeedilie with them to the Scots border, is beyond all wonder; onlie I fancy the Bifhop levied and transported them there, purposelie that Earle Lainrick fould refuse their helpe, and fo fould pertake of his brother Duke James his treacherie.

What the Bifhop writes of his generall affemblies, and their committees and commiffions, may perhaps be true; for he was for moft part a conftant member of them. Bot affuredlie when he wrote this paper, he might have fpent his time better to have written a homelie. And now, good Bifhop, I am fo perfectlie wearie of this moft malicious and lying pamphlet of yours, that I am readie to fueare never to reade any of your fermons after it.

LETTERS TO SIR JAMES TURNER.

1. FROM WILLIAM DUKE OF HAMILTON.

Hamilton, 22 No<sup>r</sup>, 1672.

SIR,

I KNOW fo well by experience what a trouble the paine of the fciatike is, that I am very fory you fhould have it, and that it has at this time hindered me of your company; but if your health or buffines can allow you to come here againe Chriffenmaß, againe which time I intend to return from Ed<sup>r</sup>, yow fhall be moft heartely welcome; and if you will be pleafed to fend me a copie of thefe memoires yow have of the buffines, I fhall take it for a very great [favour]; and the perufeing of it before I fee you, will enable me the more at meeting to talk with yow of that affair, and to let you know my defigne in it; knoueing how much both my famely and my felf is oblidged to your good opinione of us; which, when it is in my pouer other wayes to express my fence of, you fhall find me very really, Sir, your moft affec<sup>t</sup> friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner.

2. FROM DR GILBERT BURNET.

Glas: 1 May [1673?] 10 acloke.

HONOLL SIR,

THE enclosed you fent me for her [Grace] is, as every thing I ever faw [from your] pen, truly worthy of you. [Give me] leave to adde, that it was an overftretch of modefty that you referre the reading it, and judging how fitt it were to be fent to me, who will never prefume to judge of any thing comes from you, being affured before hand that it muft be excellent good. I fhall feal and fend your letter quickly, for a bearer is now in toune. I encline to follow your advice in the particular you mention, and cannot eafily expressed how ftrong my Inclinations are on all occasion to approve my felfe, Hono<sup>n</sup> Sir, your most oblidged and faithfull fervant,

GILBERT BURNETT.

I fend you a book I lately had, fuppofed to be the D. of Buckinghams; but I have [reafon] to apprehend it Cap. Titus his work. One fheet hath been left out in the binding of it.

For the Hono<sup>11</sup> Sir James Turner, at Gorbells.

3. FROM DR BURNETT.

Hamilton, 18 Aug. [1673.]

RIGHT WORSHIPFULL,

Mx difappointment of many papers I was put in hope of, hath kept me all this while from performing the journey I defigned when I waited on you. I am now neerer a readines then formerly; but, becaufe the enclofed paper differs in fome things from the accounts I had from you, I fend it to you, to fee if it can fo refrefh your memory, that all may be fully adjoufted. This paper is of Liv<sup>t</sup> Gen. Drumonds penning, as it is like you will know by the hand. The moft confiderable variation from your account is, that here you will find advertifements fent by Monro to the Generall of Cromwells forces at Skipton. He faid, they knew not if thefe they fent came to the army, for they never returned to them; but he is fure they fent many another thing. He tells of eight regiments of horfe they found lying behind your army. It is true, he added, they were but of but 150 horfe or 200 at moft a peece.

I hope when you have perufed this paper you will return it with fuch reflections as fhall occurre, particularlie for clearing those things I have touched. I know your generous friendship for the memory of him you honour so much, will make you easy to me for putting you to so much trouble; therefore, without any further apology, I break off, the I shall never break off from being, Noble Sir, your most humble and most faithfull fervant,

GILBERT BURNETT.

For the Right Worfhipfull Sir James Turner, at Glafgow.

4. FROM R. HAMILTON OF DICKMONT.

Kenill, the [1673.]

HONORED S<sup>R</sup>,

I DID not meit w' my lord duck till he com eaft. I fhew him your letter; he fayes qn he comes weft, which wilbe at furtheft the nixt week, he fd he refolued to haue yow at hamilton; he fays y' S' will. lockart was fpok to qn he was heir, bot his tym in this cuntrie was fhort; he fd lykways y' he wold caus the profeffor to wait on yow, in order to thos amendements, and to conffer w' yow wpon y' expedition.

I moft intreat yow to giue my lord a uiffit at hamilton, for I affure yow both his gr. and the dutches uiffes yow weall, and ar much your friend, and will tak your weiffit weri kyndlie. I told the generall y<sup>t</sup> I had bein w<sup>t</sup> yow, and of your ciwilitie and kynd remembrance of all your old acquaintance, and particularlie to himfelf. Houftoune hes his ferwice remembrit to yow; he fays he hes toylled himfelf much to find out your age, and hes read not a few books and ancient records; bot at laft he hes fund it out, y<sup>t</sup> in quein marie of jngland her tym, ther was one Serjeant major turnor, a glant man, ferwed hir in the warrs, which directlie he finds was yow by feverall obferwations. S<sup>t</sup>, I wiffe yow guid health; I pray yow remember my ferwice to your ladie; I haue nothing elfe to troubell yow w<sup>t</sup>, bot y<sup>t</sup> I am, Honored S<sup>t</sup>, your moft humbill ferwant,

R. HAMILTON.

For his honord freind, Sir James Turner, at Glafgow, Thes.

5. FROM DR BURNET.

Hamil. 22 Aug. 1673.

RIGHT WORSHIPFULL,

I SHALL not enter on a particular confideration of your laft, but fhall only tell you, you give in it fuch demonstrations of your noble friendship for the two Dukes, that you have to a very high degree obliged both Duke and Ducheffe ; who comand me to return their very hearty thanks to you, and are refolved on every occafion to make appear what a fenfe they have of their obligations to you. I now fend you all I have written, both of the Ingagment and the bufines of Strivelin, and will expect your opinion of it. Yefterday Dachmont was with me, and told me diverfe particulars were new to me ; the moft confiderable of them you will find added by my hand, but one thing I demurre on till I hear your fenfe of it. He tells me, that being fent by S<sup>r</sup> George Monroe to the Duke, on the Fryday before Prefton, the Duke read to Douchel and him a letter he had from Langdale, telling how the enemy had rendefvoufed at Oatly and Oatley-park, wher Cromwell was. This feems to vary from your account ; fo I hope, when you have read the papers my man will give you, that you will favour with a return, Sir, your moft humble faithfull feruant,

GIL. BURNETT.

For the Right Worshipfull Sir James Turner, at Glafgow.

SIR,

6. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

28 August, 1673.

ON monday Mr Burnet went from this on his way to London. If I do not follow him within a fortnight, I refolve to keep my refolution in feeing yow about the end of the herveft; and if you have not advertifement before I come, I fhall difpence w<sup>t</sup> your fare, if I have the good fortune to find yourfelf. I fhall communicate yours to Mr Burnet before that book come abroad, for I thinke what yow fay is very rationall. If I go to London, and can do yow any fervice there, yow may be affured of it from, Sir, your oblidged friend and fervant, HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner, at Glafgow.

7. FROM DR BURNET.

Hamilton, 22 Nov<sup>r</sup>, (1673.)

0 1 0 1 - 0

RIGHT WORSHIPFULL,

I AM forry I came fo foon out of Glafgow, fince I thereby miffed ane occafion of anfwering yours, and brought on you the trouble of fending your fervant fo farre. The Duke of Hamilton goes in on Moonday or Twefday, and fent for me, but I fhall wait on you, pleafe God, on Tuefday or Wednefday, and then we fhall talk more fully.

Mean while, I fhall tell you, I had not advifed you to fo humble a Confeffion as you made the Com<sup>r</sup>; fince your greateft crime was too implicit obedience to a Com<sup>r</sup>, which certainly, in his account, fhould paffe for a very veniall fin. I wifh you had pretended fooner to Vrreys place, tho I think it is not too late till his fucceffor be declared; but I apprehend D. Laud. is fo engaged, not only to Borthick, but alfo to Mr Stewart, who was made liv<sup>t</sup> with a promife of the firft captains place, tho Mr Drumond of Lundie was preferred, that I fuppofe D. Laud. will take ane occafion at once to oblige Borthwick, and to perform his promife to Mr Stewart; yet your pretending will at leaft doe you this right, that whatever follow, you have again offered your fervice to the King. You can expect nothing from D. Ham. mediation with D. Laud, they are in fo ill termes. How the Chancellor ftands with the Com<sup>r</sup> I know not, but your application to the Parliament would be well confidered, for I know not how the lords of Councell will like the Precedent, fince vpon the matter it will found a complaining of their vnjuftice. But I wifh you were at Ed', if your health could allow of it, for ther' you could take better meafures then any can at this diftance. This is what occurres. I fhall only adde, that at London D. Laud expreffed to me a willingnes to promote your brother, which makes me think he hath no ill impreffion of you; but how farre E. Tweeddale would now choake or promote your bufines in Parl<sup>4</sup>, I cannot fay. And now D. Ham. and he are clofely vnited at this tyme. I am no more than I was, for I told the King plainly I would not be a Bifhop, nor any great thing, but I am vnalterably, Sir, your moft humble faithfull feruant, GILBERT BURNET.

Ther came no newes to this place fince Tuefday. The Ducheffe here is your moft faithfull friend, and remembers her to you very kindly.

For the Right Worfhipfull

Sir James Turner, at the Gorbells.

8. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

· S<sup>R</sup>,

I AM forie your Indifposition hindered me from your good company this day w<sup>t</sup> your ladys, who my wife was very glade to fee; but your thoughts of looking after things beyond the fea troubles me extreamly, and I hope, even the time you propose before you do itt, fome thing may fall out that may give you ground to change your resolution. I fhall not in this trouble you w' my full thoughts of itt, hopeing to fee yow befor your refolutions be more determined; onely I fhall fay, that your imploying the cheife minifter, in defiring fo finall a favor from his Ma<sup>tie</sup> to you as a pafs, can certanely not be refuifed or miftaken by any. Your obferves ar moft rationall; but how to help what Mr Burnets precipitant haft to bring thefe memoires to the view of the world, is the great queftion; for it is that has occafioned thefe great errors, and what ground he had to make fo much haft, I could never underftand, and I did what I could to prevent itt, that they might have been a litle better digefted; and on this very account he and I ar fallen in thofe tearms that wee do not correfpond; but at meeting wee fhall talke of these matters at more length; and not haveing any news worth your trouble, I onely ade the affurance of my being, S', your affec' friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner.

9. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

22 Sep. [1675.]

SIR,

THE uncertanty of my fons goeing, by the delay of the fhips makeing ready, and the neceffity that is on me to be prefent at the next Councill day, makes me uncertane till my return here, wher and when I fhall meet w<sup>t</sup> L<sup>t</sup> Generall Drumond. So foon as I can be positive in it, I fhall lett you know. The B<sup>p</sup> of Dumblane I expect to fee here this day. I confes I ..... the primats change to him; but a litle time will difcover many things, and fhall that I am, Sir, your moft affect friend,

HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner.

10. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

Hamilton, Nouber 13, 1675.

SR,

I RECEIVED yours of yefterday, and give you my hearty thanks for the kindnes it expresses. My journey has been but refolu'd fince I went laft to Edin<sup>b</sup>; nor does it proceed from any call from the King, but the general defire, and frequent pressure, of all friends at Court;  $w^{ch}$  having communicated to our well-wishers here, and finding their opinion to agree  $w^t$  the others judgment, I thought my felf obliged to confent to fo unanimous a motion. In the mean time, if I may be ftedable to you in any thing at Court, affure your felf my endeavors to ferue you shall be fuitable to the many civilities you have euidenc'd to S<sup>r</sup>, your obliged friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner.

11. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

Hamilton, 19 March, 77.

SR,

I PRAY yow give your brother my thanks for letting me hear from him anent a minifter to Borrowftones, and tell him his recomendation will have great weight w' me, and I fhall inform my felf anent that man he recomends; that I did not prefent my felf to fome vacancies I have in this fhire, but left it the Archbifhope, was becaufe I am aprehenfive, by the unruliens off that people, that whatever conform minifter come amongft them, his incouragement will be but fmall; and I had no will to imploy any, wher they might have fo litle fatisfaction. Att this junctur, it will be an ill time to recomend that relation off yours to be a Captane, for upon the takeing of 500 men off the recruits off my brothers regiment att fea, the King of France has broke ten companies off the regiment. Nixt winter will be more fitt, for then is the time he makes up any vacancies, and then you fhall have all the affiftance I can give yow. I am forie to hear yow haue been fo ill off the Goutt. I intend to be fhortly in Glafgow, at which time yow fhall fee your moft affec' friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner.

12. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

11 Aprill [1677.]

SIR,

THER is no haft in your fpeaking to the Arch-Bifhope, and when yow gett his relation off that affair I fpoke of to yow, then hear iff he inclines to do me right wherin his informations had injurred me; it was I that fhuned liueing with him as formerly, which he wold willingly done, but till he do fome what to right me wher he has done me wrong, I incline not to itt, and I fear fo long as he has his dependancie wher he has, ther is litle that way may be expected from him, or trufted to him, promis what he will; but I know your difcreation and friendfhip for me fo much, that I leave itt to your management, and am very really, your affect friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

13. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

23 May, [1677.]

SIR,

AT my return from Anandale, I found yours of the 15 here; my wife being to go to Glafgow this day will lett you know my thoughts as to the Chan. and the reafon of the difference betuixt him and the Precedent, and what ar my conjectures of his fending up his fon, and will impart to you all I know more, wherby you will find a litle time may produce feverall revolutions. So honeft men had need to be well and ferioufly advifed; and putting great confidence in you, I fhall not doubt of your friendfhip and frie advife, which fhall meet with all the returns of kindnes in the pouer of your affec<sup>t</sup> friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

14. SIR JAMES TURNER'S "DISCOURSE WITH THE ARCHBISHOP OF GLASGOW, THE 28 OF MAY 1677."

THERE is one frafer who is prifoner at Dumbarton, as being accefforie to a manflaughter committed by one of his fonnes; I had tuo letters from him defireing me to advife w<sup>t</sup> our Archbifhop what might be done for him, pretending innocence. I knew the Archbifhop had kindnes for the man as being his old acquaintance, and therfor I layd hold on this occaffion to goe to the caftle laft monday, where I found Orbifton and a fonne of Barns advifeing with him concerning the tryall of fome witches; there I found alfo our provoft, and his bayliffs, tuo wherof runne out fo foone as they faw me; there was alfo Sir John Monkreiff, a coufine of the Marqueffe of Athole; I ftayd till moft of thefe were difpatched, and then enterd in a difcourfe w' the Archbifhop concerning Frafer; from that I fell to fpeake of a wrong was done to a friend of mine, a minister, by the B. of the Iles (wherin I beleeve he was affifted by both our Archbifhops), and afkd him if he had no vacant places in his oune Dioceffe for that poore minifter. He told me, he thoght for my fake he might accommode him in Anandaill; bot that not being my errand, I askd him if there were no vacancies in Clidfdaill; he faid, Differf was vacant, for one Hamilton, to whom it was offerd, wold not accept. I faid, nor fould my friend come there w' my confent. He told me he had prefented one Gallan to Leffmahego. I askd if all these were fallen Jure devoluto in his hand; he faid yes, bot he had not made use of his power till he wrote my lord duke, and got his anfuere, that he might prefent whom he pleafd. I told him he had done in that very modeftlie; and fo haveing made a faire way to my intended difcourfe, I faid, I withd there had been no miftakes betueen the duke and him about other matters; he anfuerd, he wishd the fame. I prayd him to relate the matter to me, if he had the leifure: very willinglie, faid he, and did it, to my best remembrance, in thefe or very neare the like tearms.

At London, faid he, my lord duke was pleafd to give me a vifite;

where falling on the fubject of indulgd minifters, he defird me to be favourable to them, as to men who contributed much to the peace of the countrey. I anfuerd, that they might expect faire enough vfage from me, provided they did thefe things they were obligd to doe. My lord D. afkd me what thefe things were : one, faid I, is the keeping the 29 of May; he faid, he thought that fould be done. Another thing, faid I, must be done by them, or they can expect no favour from me, and that is, to ordane no young men or Expectants, which they too often practife, and that will perpetuate the fchifme. The duke, faid he, replyd, how can yow or any other get helped? This, faid he, I thought was ftrange language; bot anfuered, that their were hopes, if men did their duetie, it might be got helpd by time. This vpon the matter, faid he, was all pafd betueene vs on that heade. Not long after, faid he, I had occafion to goe to D. Lauderdaill concerning my difpatch to Scotland, haveing allreadie kifd the kings hand, without any refolution to tell him any thing had paid betueene D. Hamilton and me. There were fome companie with him; bot fo foone as he faw me, he came with his accuftomd addreffe to me, and told me he had fomthing to impart to me, and immediatlie tooke me to another roome, and told me there had beene a noble perfon with him, who had promifd he fould be a very great man, and the king a glorious prince, w<sup>t</sup> many other promifes, if he wold procure the Indulgence in Scotland to be enlarged. I afkd who that perfon was: he anfuerd, my ladie Dutcheffe of Hamilton; and that her G. had beene very earneft w<sup>t</sup> him in the bufienes. This vnexpected rencounter, faid the Archbishop, made me apprehend the Duke of Hamiltons defigne reachd further then at first I was aware of, and thervpon told D. Lauderdaill what had pafd betueene D. Hamilton and me. D. Lauderdaill bid me looke well to it, for the busines concernd me and all these of my order. I told him, faid he, I could do no more in it then relate it to him, haveing taken my leave of the king. Yes, faid D. Lauderdaill, it will be fit you acquaint the English Bishops with the matter before you goe to Scotland. Nixt day, faid he, D. Lauderdaill and I dind w<sup>t</sup> the Archbishop of Canterburie at Lambeth, where were present the Bishops of London, Worcester and Rochester. After dinner, D. Lauderdaill told the English Bishops, that he thought I had fomthing to fay to them; on which I related to them what I have told yow; and D. Lauderdaill told them what had paid betueene the Dutcheffe of Hamilton and him. The English Bishops were of opinion, D. Hamilton might readilie propound the matter to the king, and therfor it were fit to preuent him, bot told me, I might goe to Scotland; and fo, faid he, I went away. I was told therafter, faid he, that the king fpoke with D. Hamilton on the matter, and that the king told him, now I have it out of yo<sup>r</sup> oune mouth, that you are for enlarging the Indulgence, and for the prefbiterians to give ordination. The Duke, faid he, wrote a letter to me, to which I gave an anfuere, containing all I have now related to you; for I wrote to him I had faid nothing of his G. to either D. Lauderdaill or the English Bishops, bot what I wold give vnder my hand. And heere the Archbishop ftopd.

I afkd him, If D. Lauderdaill had not told him what my ladie Dutcheffe of Hamilton faid to him, wold he have told D. Lauderdaill what D. Hamilton faid to him; he protefted he wold not, and could take God to witnes in it. Then I told him, that I was informed, D. Hamilton, in his Difcourfe with the king, had neither defird of his Majeftie an enlargment of the Indulgence, or libertie of ordination. Bot the king afking him what his opinion of the Indulgence was, he hielie magniefied that which was granted, as a thing that contributed much to the peace of the countrey where thefe Indulgd minifters preachd. And being afkd by his Matie, if he thought any greater Indulgence fould be granted, answered, He wold not take on him to tell his mind extemporarie; bot that if his Matie wold call for others and afke their advice, he fould be readie faithfullie to tell his opinion. To all this the Archbishop replyed, That he was informed, D. Hamilton denyd that he gave the king advice to permit ordination by prefbiters, bot did not deny that he had adviced him for a larger Indulgence. I replyd, That I beleevd the Duke denyd both the one and the other, bot I wold not meddle in it. Then I told the Archbifhop, that his revealing to D. Lauderdaill what had pafd betueene D. Hamilton and him, provd no good office to the Duke, becaufe on occasion therof, men had endeavord to posses the king with thoughts that the Duke intended an alteration in church gouernment, which I beleeved never enterd into his thoughts. He anfuered, he was blameles of that; he had reprefented no more bot what had reallie pafd betueene them. I replyd, I was forry it had fallen out fo vnluckilie in his hand, for I had never heard D. Hamilton fpeake to the prejudice of either him or his order; nay, I have heard him fay, he wold never liue vnder that prefbiterian government which was in his younger years exercifd in Scotland. The Archbishop subjoyned, that he had neuer entertaind any other bot honorable thoughts of my lord Duke; and to after ordinare complements, we parted.

15. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

SIR,

1 Jun. [1677.]

I AM forry you have taken fo much pains to fo litle purpofe, for I did aprehend it wold be as is fallen out. How ever, I thanke yow very heartely, and when it is in my pouer, your kindnes shall not be forgote. I difcover more of the defigne has been in that buffines nor I knew befor, by the relation the Arch B. gives of itt; for my wife fpoke what he fays my Ld Lauderdale told him att parting many weeks befor, and what paffed betuixt him and me was indeed but a few days befor he parted; and after what paft betuixt my wife and my Ld Lauderdale, wee was in great civillities together, and many offers made, which was not accepted; wherupon it feams this ingine has been fallen on to incenfe the King, feeing him ufe me well; bot till I fee yow I will not trouble yow w<sup>t</sup> a more full account of that affaire, and wherin the Arch B. relation differs w<sup>t</sup> me; and for that end I muft defire the feeing you here when I return from Ed<sup>t</sup>, wher its like I may go from Kinneill the end of the nixt weeke. I had letters on Saturday that Duke Laud: wold be down this month and by fea; other occurrancis I have bid Smith give yow, but litle matteriall yett: the Chancelors way is well enugh underftood by all fides, and time will clear his politiks. I am very really, Sir, your most affect friend,

For Sir James Turner.

HAMILTON.

16. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

16 Jun. [1677.]

I WISH yow had comed your felf, for I confes I do not underftand your letter; for how it can be expected I will apear in any publicke thing, confidering as I am ftated, w<sup>t</sup>out being called to it by his Ma<sup>tie</sup>, who has thought it fitt for his fervice to lay me afide, is a thing fure in comon diferentiated in the second seco

For S<sup>r</sup> James Turner.

1 1 2 - 2 - 2

17. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

SR,

10 Sep<sup>br</sup> [1677.]

BEING juft goeing to my horfe for Kinneill, I have onely time to tell yow that I thinke yow may fend your letter wherof I return yow the copy; for I fhall be very glade all honeft men may come in imployment, and fhall wifh yow good fucces in itt: onely I fhall tell yow that the Lyons place was to his fon as well as himfelf, fo that does not vaike; and I hear the L<sup>t</sup>: Colls: place is intended for this young E. of Kellie, and that of the Caftle of Ed<sup>t</sup> to one Maitland, who is a Cap<sup>t</sup> in my brothers regiment, and was once D. L. padge, who is already fent for; he onely to have the profite of the company, and the other revenew of the Caftle to go for D. L. ouen ufe. I thinke yow had beft examine thefe things, for I wold not have yow rafh in expofeing your defires. At my return, which will be the end of this weeke, I fhall be glade to fee yow, and then it is like yow may hear more from your moft affec' friend, HAMILTON.

For S<sup>r</sup> James Turner.

18. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

26 Oct. [1677.]

I THANKE yow for letting me hear from yow. The marching of the forces from Glafgow gives great occasion to people to conjecture what the matter can be, fince wee can hear nothing extraordinar of the phanaticks motions, who can hardly I thinke be fo mad as to definge any infurrection, and yett I thinke ftrange iff the Ministers of State be fo allarumed w'out good ground; houever it makes the caice of private cuntrey men that intends to leave peaceably, pretty difficult what to refolve on in these feaming combustions and alarums. I with your Arch B. may att laft be a good inftrument in the fetling off thefe differencis he fays wold tend to the good off his Maties fervice, that things may be fetled by a parliament; but I fear he is not convinced fo in his former errors as to proceed in that method, and fayed fo to yow, onely knoueing the refpect yow may have for fome off those he mentioned. . . . any further off confequence come to your knowledge, I fhall expect to hear from yow, as yow fhall the like from me, being, S<sup>r</sup> your very reall and affec<sup>t</sup> friend, HAMILTON.

19. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

2 Jan<sup>r</sup>, 78.

I THANKE yow for letting me hear what comes to your knowledge, but I am not much alarumed w<sup>t</sup> those ftories of imprisionment, and I wish that wer the worst wer intended, then I hope our inocensie wold foon relieve us. I hear the Chancelor is gone to Fife last weeke, but the particulare occasion off it, or any thing els of consequence, I have not heard fince parting; fo I have onely to add the reneued affurance of my being, S<sup>r</sup>, your moft affec<sup>t</sup> friend and fervant,

Sª.

SR,

HAMILTON.

For S<sup>r</sup> James Turner.

20. FROM ANNE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

19 April, 78.

I THANK you hartely for y' kindnes expreft att this time, which is fuitable to many more obligations you have put on me. I heard yefterday from my Lord; his letter was of the 11; he had not then feen his Ma<sup>tie</sup>, but had kifed the Duks hand, which was by an acedent; for that night he came he went to the Duke of Monmoth, and faid he did not goe ftraght to the King as he vied to doe, because he heard reports that his Ma<sup>tie</sup> would not allowe of his waiting on him, and therefore defired him to afke his Matie; but the D. Monmoth replyed, he had fpoken to the King alredy, and the King bid him tell my Lord he would not fee him, while he knew what he had to fay for his coming without ether his leaue or his counfells, who had made a proclamation to the contrary, but he would uerie quickly apoynt his Cabenet Counfell to heare him; and upon the Tufday the D. Monmoth tould my Lord to come to his lodging, and he would conduct where the counfell fatt, which was to be the next day; and the King allowed my Lord to bring whom he thought fitt with him; fo he touk my L. Cocheran, his brother and L<sup>t</sup> Generall Drumond. They went to fee the Duches of Monmoth, and stay there while D. M. came to carry them to the place of metting, and there came the D. of Yorke; my Lord made him a low bow, but did not goe forward while the Duke made a figne to him, and then he went and prefented the reft to him. My Lord faid, he looked on itt as a good omen, that they [had] feen his Highnes, and hoped he would be att the Cabenet Counfell; the D. faid, he thought not to haue ben att itt, for feeing them while the King fhold, but now he thought he might; however he was not thare. Those that weer was the Chanc. the Trefurer, Duke M. the Lord Chamberland, and the 2 Secretares. My Lord fpok first, and then the reft, what things has ben don amongft us; but the thing they infifted moft on was, why they had contemned the Kings authoryty in coming without leave, to which they thought they gaue fatisfying reafons. As fone as they came out, the King went in, and D. M. came afterwards, and tould my Lord; His Matie feemed more fauorably inclined after they had made ther report of what they had faid; but the King defired, for his better information, they would put in writing, which they needed not fyne, and itt fhold be returned them againe without been copyed; with all D. M. tould them, if they declined itt, there would be great advantage taken; fo they were refoluing to doe itt, but you may judge what loffe they ar att in wanting aduice of Lawers. This is the fume of what was wreten to me; only my Lord defires friends may not be difcouraged, for he hopes all fhall be well, and that his next may give more ground to expect itt; but God be blefed, even this is better then what we weer thretened with. As for the mutiny heere yesterday, I thought itt a uerie pleafant fight to fee they trobled no body heere; but when on company was gone away with their coulers, the L<sup>t</sup> Coll. and Cap. L' rod after them, and ouer touk them at Jarefton wood; they capitelat the buffenes, for itt was to hardy a mater for to gentelmen to force fo many men back againe but by perfwafions.  $L^t$  Coll. had fume men of his owne who weer prevailed on to returne with a drumer, the reft marched away with their cullers, and beating ther drum; while they weer at this, the other company in the toune went and forced their cullers out of the place they were in, and went their way, doeing rong to none, but beating ther comarods that were unwilling to goe with them; fo when the comanders came in from on mutiny, they found a more difplefing on, for the company that went from this was the L<sup>t</sup> Coll. owne company, but itt was grown dark, and there was no following them. But I am tould itt will reflect on me and this place; I faid I could not helpe that, but for my part I wife all that comes may do fo. I heare the regement will now gett leave to goe away; if they had done this foner, they might have ben difinift foner; and if they had not, I beleve they fold have ftayed as long as they could haue gotten any thing. I shalle troble you no further, but if I heare better news, you fhall fhare. Adieu.

For Sir James Turner.

21. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

J. D. SANTA * grant/7 Store in a second

22 Aprell, 5 acloke.

I received y<sup>rs</sup> within this houer. I have not heard from my Lord fince I wrott to you, fo can give you no further account then what you know. I doe beleue S<sup>r</sup> G. Lockhart will be att London before the Kings aduocat, who went with his Lady in coach to Yorke, and from thence is to goe in the stage coach. Sure Hatton has fume other defigne in coming to Glaf. then what concernes the ordering the forces, which itt feemes they haue a mind fhall be continued on us as long as they can. I wonder att the great haft in bringing out the Needfdaill regement. I think fume concerned in that fhire might haue ben expected would haue ftayed for another comand before they had done itt; but this is a time will difcouer who ar friends in realety and who not. Amongft the number of the firft I bid you hartly Adieu.

For Sir James Turner.

22. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

30 Aprell, -78.

I HAUE gott no letter from my friend fince that you was acquainted with, as you fhall when I heare againe; but I am writen to from Ed<sup>r</sup> fume of those things you mentione; but what concernes M. Atholl and E. Perthe I doe not credeat; and I hope more of there affertions ar according to the reft of there way, any thing that makes for them, which, when brought to the teft, may have, as other things has had, contrary effectes. That the countrie is att prefent fo much eafed is a mercy we aught to be thankfull to God for, and fure our friends has ben no ill inftrements in itt, and I truft fhall ftill continue in there duty. By the laft packett, D. L. receued a letter from the Arch B. G., fhowing how well he was receued by the King, and how takeing the naritive was with His Matie and the Clergie of England, and how firmly the King was refolued to adheir to his Counfell heere, and to approue of there proceedings, as all tending to his ferues, and to difcountenance D. H., and that party whom yet he had not admitted to his prefence. You may beleue this letter is even worne out with reeding; yet I shall fay no more but, for all this, they have too parts of the feare. Adieu.

For Sir James Turner.

23. [FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.]

HONERED SIR,

I HAUE receued y<sup>rs</sup> with the inclosed on you needed not have returned; and that which I defired you fhould, was from no doubt of your cair in any thing wherin our friend is concerned. Since I begun to writt I have gott a return of what I wrott with y<sup>18</sup>. He is werie fenceable of your kindnes, and has had his thoughts of what you propofed, but fees great defec . . . . . . to be admitted acces and ordered backe .... to afke leaue, will furely be denyed. He intends to be in Ed<sup>r</sup> to morow night, and hopes . . . . . . day free. Laft poft brought no confiderable news. I heare those in the west that refuses the bond, or the enacting themfelfes, intends to goe to Ed<sup>r</sup>, rather then be imprifoned thare; but itts faid they will begin with the most confiderable first, for which they have much reason, for . . . . . . . . has more then fill there prifons. There is great develoons amongft them, both in Counfell and Comitie. What God may and will bring out of all these diforderly courses is only known to himfelfe, to whose determinations itt will be all our duties to fubmett. The inclosed is all I gott; fo hartly Adieu.

For Sir James Turner.

24. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

20 May, -78.

A LITTEL while after  $y^{r}$  faruant went away, I receued letters from our friend of the 14 inftant, which came by Mr Benerman. You will fee by the inclofed in what condition our friends and felfes ar in ; if you have any thing elfe to ad to what you have already wreten, lett me haue itt by to morow night. I hope a littell time fhall produce better things, and for the prefent I am altogether of  $y^{r}$  mind. So adieu.

Our friends dufe not intend to the baiths, while they fee a littell further, and heere what is friends opinion heere.

Mr'George Maxwell was ariued, which lett P. A. know.

For Sir James Turner, att Glafgow.

25. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON

17 June, ----78.

THERE needed no appollege for not feeing me, who am not apt to miftake friends who ar fo reall as I believe you ar in your profeffions; but I am fory y<sup>r</sup> abfence now fhould be from any indifposition, and wifnes what has formerly ben a remedy may proue fuccefsfull ftill. I had letters Saterday . . . . . by S<sup>r</sup> Jo. Cun, and by the packett . . . my lord of a later daitt; they weer put in hope that the convention would be adjorned, and if it weer not, they weer refolued to kepe it, and I doe not heare but M. Atholl intends alfo to come notwithstanding of his Ladys jorny. I know no thing of L. G. D. beien in this cuntrie, and beleues itt is att the fame raitt of truth that my Lord is faid to be heere, which, if fafely, I fhould have ben glad of, for his abfence att this time is difcouraging to fume. I wifhe the D. of L. confidence in carying votts fo clearly as 5 to on in the convention, may make him take no other courfe to bar members fitting; but fume of there proceider giues ground to think they will fall on fume fuch way; a lettell time will now difcouer what is att prefent perplexing. Adieu.

For Sir James Turner, att Glafgow.

26. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

June 19, [1678.]

THIS day I have gott letters from my Lord, dated 13, which day he touk jorny with E. Perthe and S<sup>r</sup> Jo. Cocheran, and fays others takes poft, only M. Atholl and E. Kincarne ftays. My Lord thinks to be in Ed. on Saterday; but there is fume quefton what way he fhould come, and I fhould be glad to have y<sup>r</sup> aduice. I intend to goe to Ed<sup>r</sup> to morow, where, if your helth would permett, you ar hartely wifhed for. Adieu.

For Sir James Turner, att Glafgow.

27. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

20 June, -78.

I OPENED  $y^{rs}$  to A. T. and thereby receude  $y^{rs}$ . I wifthe  $y^r$  aduices be followed concerning my friend, which I fhall declare is my owne oppinion. I gott a letter this morning, which fpeakes that G. Deyell fhould have gott my brothers regement. Beien fo neare goeing away, I haue not time to ade more, but M<sup>r</sup> Jo. B. will be with you to morow, and he will tell you more particularly my thoughts then att this time I can writt them. So hartely wifhing you your helthe, that your friends may have y<sup>r</sup> company. Adieu.

For Sir James Turner, att Glafgow.

28. FROM SIR JAMES TURNER TO A PERSON UNKNOWN.

SIR,

I RECEAVED yo' laft from Ed', wherin you gave me a full account of all pafd at yo' Convention of Eftates ; and indeed, when I feriouflie confider how things were layd and prepard, and how Duke Hamilton was with fome confiderable friends at London when that Convention was called by his Ma<sup>tie</sup>, and how the elections were carried, I can not bot fay, my lord Duke, by his prudent carriage, rather gained ground then loft any ; you will thinke fo, when you confider how many of thefe who had declard to be of his principles, had diferted him, and gone over to the other partie ; and of thefe who were afhamd to doe fo, how many rather mutterd then fpoke out their thoughts. I heard before you wrote to me how the Duke had left Scotland, to feeke his health at the baths, where now I conceave he is ; bot yow tell me he intends to goe to London before he returne home. Yow tell me D. Lauderdaills animofitie againft him continues, and defires my thoughts of all thefe affaires, which I fhall give yow very freelie, how wifely, judge yo' felfe.

I thinke my lord Duke of Hamilton hath the wolfe by the eares; he dare neither bite nor let goe. If he goe not to court, his enemie will tell the king, it is out of difrespect, and perhaps out of contempt or revenge, becaufe reafon of ftate fufferd not his Matie to let the Duke kiffe his hand laft fummer. If he goe to Court, I am affrayd he may once more meet a vifage de bois, the bed chamber doore fhut vpon him. Bot of tuo evills the leffe muft be chosen; my lord, by his goeing to caft himfelfe and his fortunes at the kings feet, vindicates his loyaltie to the world. If the king refuse to admit him to his prefence with that affabilitie he honours fome meaner perfons, the Duke loofeth nothing; for foveraigne princes muft be gained by obfequeoufnes, bot not by refentment. Yow alke me, if the Grand favourite continue to perfecute the Duke of Hamilton, what fhall the Duke doe; I fhall tell yow, thogh the ftroke be mainlie and directlie intended against the Duke himfelfe, yet by an oblique rebound it will give a fad blow to all that Illustrious family. For this reafon, I humblie conceave the Duke fould prefer his libertie to all other concernments, and rather hazard any thing then goe to prifon. I apprehend no danger of that by the tender of his fervice to the king at Whitehall, fo it be done before the fitting of the p<sup>r</sup>liament; for his appearance at that nick will furnish Lawderdaill subject to represent to the king groundles feares, needles jealoufies and apprehenfions, well mafked with feeming reafons of ftate. If my lord get a reall wellcome from the king, he knows then how to take vp his measures; if it be bot a feeming and a complementall one, I with he wold take it, and goe away with it; for the most part of men will thinke his Matie is reallie kind to him, and this will doe no hurt; befides, his Matie will have the leffe jealoufie of him, being he conceaves himfelfe in favour.

Bot yo' great queftion is, if the Duke perceave that the king hath

2 M

no kindnes for him, bot by the furmifes of his enemies entertaines jealoufies of him, what he fhall doe in that cace. I thinke he can doe but one of three, ftay where he is in England, goe beyond feas, or come home to Scotland. I apprehend as yet no danger of any of the three. Bot he shall be a lofer by doeing any of the first tuo. If he goe beyond feas, first he must be maintaind thogh Inconnu; nixt the mannagement of his eftate will fenfiblie miffe him; thirdlie, the Dutcheffe will be difconfolate; fourthlie, thefe who ftand yet for him (thogh they be fewer then they were) will fall off, and make their peace, or at leaft lag behind; laftlie, he diferts his oune and the countreys caufe, and gives it for loft. I fay ftill, if neceffitie force him not to feeke fhelter abroad, My lord Dukes ftay in England (vnles he be in favour) will render him contemptible, the object of his enemies fcorne, and will not fave him from imprifonment, whenever it is defigned or concluded. The third is onlie left, to come home, which I humblie thinke is the most honorable and fafe of the three. Honorable, becaufe he may live like himfelf at home, with thefe particular .... ents which arife from the pleafure he hath in his confort and children, and the conversation of these whose honor is so deare to them, that they will not bow their knee to Baall. Bot yow fay the danger of imprifonment is still the fame at home that it was, when the bond and lawborrous were preft, and the formidable hofte in the weft. I grant yow it is fo, bot the wit of man can not guard againft all thefe euills and dangers that the wit of man can forfee. If the Duke, by his intelligence, (which I conceave is not impoffible,) or by ftrong prefumptions, fee his incarceration be defignd, he may make a ftep with good enough reafons over to Arran; he hath bufienes to doe there; he may anfuere all they have to fay againft him by his proxies and Advocates; bot if that helpe not, he may without much difficultie get from Arran to fome other place of the world, and that is the laft refuge, and fould be keepd fo in referve. I cannot fancie the eftate can fuffer by his retreate, thogh . . . make him fugitive, it is none of his; and I am as fure, his honor can fuffer as litle, when armed malice and black revenge, (which know not to be limited by either juftice, reafon, law or conficience,) impofeth a neceffitie on him to fave himfelfe.

I faw the Earle of Arran at Paris, ..... came from his travels in Italie. I looke on him as a perfon of much honor, a fmart young lord, and one who in time may prove a very refenting enemie, which perhaps is, or may be apprehended by my lord Dukes enemies, which, peradventure, may prove a bit to reftrain fome of them from offering palpable injuries both to my lord Duke, or any of his familie. ... I am afrayd yow may afke me, if mifchiefe be intended againft both father and fonne, not that E. Arran hath done any hurt, bot becaufe he may doe it, as it was faid of a Duke of Cleve, who hangd young men because they might prove thieves; and vpon this account, to fave themfelves an after game, clap vp at one and the fame time both the Duke and E. Arran; what, I fay, fhall be done in that cace? Firft, I fay, that may be thought of time enough heerafter; fecondlie, I confelle, when I thinke of the fad fate of an Earle of Douglas and his brother at the caftle of Edenburgh, and of the lord Home and his brother in the minoritie of James the fifth, I fould thinke the Duke and his fonne, if they be in one countrey, they fould be bot feldome in one houfe, till the coafts be more cleare, and the weather looke fairer; for the ones libertie may fave the other from imprifonment. I could enlarge this, bot I have faid enough to one who can difcant on this fubject better then myfelfe. Expect no news from me bot what the gazets brings yow; whether Spaine and Holland will make peace with us heere in france or not, a litle time will difcover. I pray God keepe yow. from Havre de Grace, 11 7bris, 78.

29. FROM THE DUCHESS OF HAMILTON.

4 Nov. -78.

YOUR continued refpects I receue with the fence I aught, and am altogether of your oppinion, which I beleue my Lord is now of alfo; for in his laft letter he forbids me to writt more to him. I did defire James fhould have come home before this; but his father intending to come, thought fitteft not to fend him, but to bring him along with himfelfe. He writts no news to me, but I heard from Ed. what you fent me, except the taking of the too laft in the lifte, and that the Marq: Montros is to mary with the blood royall, I heard not; it feemes this plot has ben of a long contriueance. I pray God difcouer all trateres, and then I am confedent we fhall haue better days. So hartely farwell. My feruis to your Lady.

For Sir James Turner, att Glafgow.

30. FROM ANDREW TOFTES.

RIGHT WORSHIPFUL, Hamilton 10 Febr<sup>3</sup> 1679. MR SMITH did leave thefe books with a manufcript with me, but forbad me to fend them till he wrot from  $Ed^r$  to me, which he hes never yet done; but, fince you feem to need them, receive them from the bearer. I have no newes but what are none to yow, that is, touching the tuo Brothers Regiments, and themfelves, to come in place of E. Linlithgow and E. Marr their  $Reg^{ts}$ . I have nothing of certainty; but only it is fomeq<sup>t</sup> probable, if it be not ftopt by the Councell. Whither my Lord be yet come off or not, we cannot tell, but we expect to hear to-morrow or Wednefday; but her Grace thinks he may be on his journey, for her laft letters bore his refolution of coming o . . . . . inftant. E. Kincarden comes with him. I . . . . . . . the condition that becomes me as, Right Worfhipfull, your moft obliged, faithfull, humble ferv<sup>t</sup>

276

ANDREW TOFTES.

For Sir James Turner at Gorbells.

31. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

4 March [1679.]

I AM very fory to hear of your indifpolition, and wilhes yow your health with all my heart, and hhall be glade to fee yow here to foon as yow are able. I do regraite the hard meafure the Bifhop of Ed<sup>r</sup> meets with as much as any; and I beleive all the concernment that S<sup>t</sup> Andrews has for it is the preprative; but I will fay no more till meeting, who am, S<sup>r</sup>, your affec<sup>t</sup> friend and fervant,

HAMILTON.

For Sir James Turner.

S<sup>R</sup>,

32. FROM ANDREW TOFTES.

11 - 1 - 1 - 1

Hamilton March 4 1679.

RIGHT WORSHIPFULL,

I DELIVERED yours to his Grace; you have my Lords anfwer inclofed. I have never yet had one fyllable from Mr Smith ordering the delivery of your papers; but I am glade they came fafe to your hands, and that I fent them that day with your man. We have fome rumours here, not without probable grounds, of their Grace going for England in May, or about that time; for other newes I know none. I am very much grieved to hear of your being ill; I pray God fend yow health, and it fhall be defired by none with more ardor then, Right Worfhipfull, your moft obliged faithfull humble ferv<sup>t</sup>

ANDREW TOFTES.

For Sir James Turner at Gorbells.

33. FROM THE DUKE OF HAMILTON.

5 Feb<sup>r</sup> [1680.]

I RECEIVED yours, and thanks you kindly for the trouble you have been at in fpeaking to the Principall and Regents concerning my fons, to whom I thought it unneceffary to write to, fince I am refolved to be there myfelf win a little after the Duke goes from this, who waits onely now for the yaghts; for I intend to go from this to Kinneell, and . . Glafgow to Hamilton. I am fory your ouen affaire had no better fucces, but I confes I expected no better for you, as affairs ftill contineus;

when I can contribute any thing to your advantage, you may be affured of the indevores of your most affect friend & fervant,

HAMILTON.

34. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halkhead the 14. Jan<sup>y,</sup> 1682.

I HAVE juft now receaved ane order from the General for fending Captaine Stewarts troupe of Dragouns to Dounce, wher they are to quarter; I fhall therfore defyre ye will order them to march from ther prefent quarters, on Munday the fixteine inftant, to the toune of Dounce, wher they are to quarter till further order. I doubt not but ye have heard of the late infollence committed in the toune of Lenerk one Wednefday laft. Be pleafd to caufe difpatch the inclofeit to the Generall by a dragoune foe soon as is poffible. Since thes Rebells are begining to apear oppenly againe, I defyre ye will caufe yo<sup>r</sup> Dragouns be in as good a readynes as is poffible; and I think it wer not amifs to fend fome tomorrow the length of Lenerk, to know the certainty of this. Sir, I am yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant, Rosse.

For Sir James Turner, Thefe.

35. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Glafgow the 22 Janr<sup>y</sup> 1682. I SEND you heare a nott of the names of fome of thes who are faid to have been at the late buffines at Lenerk. I defyre, therefore, that ye will fend a partie of Dragouns to aprehend them if it be poffible. I ame told that your Livtenant knows moft of them who lives in the paroch of Cather. This lift was fent me from Lenerk by Major Whyt; whoe adds, that at parting he receaved express comand from his Royall Highnes to keepe corefpondence with me for that effect. I hope ye will order fwch perfons to goe wpon this partie as will be fitteft; and whoe, by ther deligence, will inable ws to give a good account of our care and conferne for the Kings fervice. I wold have the partie to goe to the places first which are nearest to this, and I wish them good fucces. I am yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant, Rosse.

For Sir James Turner, Thefe.

[On a slip enclosed in the Original.]

Grays of Cryftie, in the paroch of Cather, about five mylls from Glafgow. John Rwffall of eaft feild,

George Hill in Cather crooks, Wathell in Midowbuckle, John Wathell in Badfhaw of Lauchope.

Gavine Hamiltone, whos mother lived latly wnder the Laird of Dalyell, at the Baronfhall, near to the Kirk of Dalyell.

. 36. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halkhead the 26 Jan<sup>y</sup>. 1682. I THINKE it no great wonder that two troupes fhould be foe ill accommedat in the toune of Lenerk, when I remember what deficulty we hade to gett intertainment for a much fewer number when I was laft ther; but it feems they have order to mew themfelves within the narrow confyns of that pitifull litle place, ells I cannot beleive they wold willingly reduce themfelves to fuch ftraits, as innevitably they moft undergoe, if the hors and dragouns fall not be allowed to qwarter in the countrie about. Major Whit never fignified any thing of ther deftres, foe that I was altogether ignorant of it till I hade it from yow. I remember the Generall flew me that he did aprehend ther was a defigne that Claveres fhould come waft, but I found him wery avers to it. As for Lieutenant Lawders informatione anent James Gray, I fhall fay nothing of it till I returne to Glafgow; for the things taken from the Rebells, I mak not the leaft doubt of ther being prys. And I think it but a fmall gratification to give the ferjeant that litle mear, in confideratione of his lofs. I doe fupofs that both Rufsall and Hamiltone wer declared fwgitives by the Circwit court which fatt laft at Glafgow. Againft Munday, I fhall give yow a mor certaine account, haveing fent to Edinburgh this laft week for the letters of denunciatione. I am yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant,

For Sir James Turner Thes.

Rosse.

37. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halkhead the 10 of ffeb<sup>r</sup> 1682. I HAWE receased the bound which ye fent me for thes two prifoners apeirance; I hawe lykewyfe this day taken bound for the four prifoners browght in from Lochenoch; for when I had examined that matter as ftrickly as I could (heir in the country,) I could find no ground for apprehending of them; foe that I beleive the charactor ye give of the comander of that pairty is jwft enough. If mafter Kenavay reftore not thes two horfes, which he has no pretence to keep, I think the pairtie owght to be recalled. I fent yow home yesterday two of yo' dragouns who wer of M<sup>r</sup> Kenavays pairtie; I know not give they came to yow, but this was the occafione. They hade qwartered wpon fome perfons in Ranfrew, by ane order from the provoft, becaufe the perfones hade refufed to pay a fubfidie imposed by the provost in ane arbitrary way, without the leaft forme or collor either of law or juffice, wpon which I commanded them back to ther quarters; and really this ought not to pas wnpunished, for it will oppen the mouthes of difafected people to fay, ther is nothing intended but ane arbitrary gowernment, then which, I am fure, nothing is mor fals; one of the two whoe was qwartering at Ranfrew, his name is John Ros, a perfone whofe late mifcarriages in Captaine Hay his company might have tawght him mor circomfpectione. I fhall not be ane ill inftrument with the Archbishope to doe any fawor he thinks fitt, tho few of thes gentlemen have deferved it at his hands. I defyre ye will order one of yo<sup>r</sup> dragouns to cary the inclosed to the Generall, and to delyver the other to the Juffice-clarke. I am yo' most humble fervant,

281

To Sir James Turner Thes. RossE.

38. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halkhead the 16 day of feb<sup>r</sup> 82. I BELEIVE the badnes of the way was the caufe yo<sup>r</sup> dragoune returned not fooner. The Generall gave me nottice that he wold recall mafter Kanavays partie, befyds which, he fignified nothing ells to me, exept a comand from the Duke to come in, if it wer poffible for me; which indeid at prefent it is not. As for Muray, yo<sup>r</sup> other dragoune, I am fatisfied he be pardoned. I have given two letters to the bearer, the one to the Generall, and the other to the Treafurer-deput. I defyre ye wold fend them eaft with one of yo<sup>r</sup> dragouns, whoe will be carefwll to delyver them. I am, yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant,

For Sir James Turner Thes.

39. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halkhead the 6 day of March 82.

JOHN CRIGHTONE, my enfigne, cane teftifie and fhow it wnder my hand to him, q<sup>r</sup>in I told him that I was fure ye did not know that fellow did belong to me when ye ingadged him, foe far I was from intertaineing any mifaprehenfions of yow therein; nor indeid cane I expect any thing of that nature from any body conferned for the Dutch officers, feing I wold willingly doe every thing that might oblidge any of them, and particullarly Captaine Dalyell. As for that fellow Blackburne, the reafone why I putt him in prifone was, becaufe he declaired he could ferve no longer in my company; and I am fure, wer he at liberty, he wold run away befor to morrow, and that is the reafone why I ftill detaine him ther. I am yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant,

For Sir James Turner Thes.

10 Barrier 201 Barrier

والمحاجلة الرجاري والاستقارا واركا المحاد وال

Rosse.

Rosse.

40. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR,

Halkhead the 8 March 1682.

I HAWE receaved a letter from the Generall, daited one munday, wherin he fhows me his Royall highnes gave order that all the foott at Lenerk fhould come to Glafgow; and I hawe accordingly fent order to Glafgow for taking wpe qwarters for all the four companyes. Captaine Hay will give yow a letter directed to Major Whit, q<sup>ch</sup> I hade difpatched before I receaved yo<sup>re</sup>; when it coms to yo<sup>r</sup> hands, I defyre ye will caufe fend it to Lenerk. As for that fellow ye wreat of, I hope ye will excufe me when I tell yow that I hawe refufed him to my brother-in-law, Captaine Ramfey. Sir, I am yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant, RossE.

For Sir James Turner. Thes.

41. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halkhead the 11 March 1682.

IT was folly the confideratione of yo' dragouns advantage which made me foe wnwilling to remove them out of the paroch of Govan; for I know not that place in this country wher either they cane ly foe contigous, ore be foe well provyded in horfs meat, which is a great confideratione this fcairs year; and, in my oppinione, the firft is noe lefs at fuch a tyme, qwhen the barbarous rebells are cnocking doune thos who ferue the king in every corner; but fince ye are foe defyrous to haw yo' dragowns removed, I am fatisfied that ye qwarter them in the paroches of Cathcart, Carmanock, and Rutherglen. I am wnvilling to qwarter wpon the barronrie, the Archbifhope being from home; but I think they wold hawe been better qwartered in the paroch of Eafter Kilpatrick, and places ajacant, then wher they are goeing, becaufe noe body hath been qwartered ther of a longe tyme. I am yo<sup>r</sup> moft humble fervant, Rosse.

.

For Sir James Turner. Thes.

42. FROM JAMES EARL OF ARRAN.

SIR,

Ham. March 21 1682.

I HAVE been foe often oblidged to yow that I have noe reafon to dout of your affection, and affiftance to what relaits to my concernes, which makes me croffe yow with this franckneffe; for tho I know yow hav had feverall officers meaking recrutes amongeft yow alreadie, and foe it will be the hearder tafk now; yet, for old aqwantance faik, I will defir your affiftance for fome men that I ame leavieng for my oun particular. I intend to be with yow upon thuriday, but thought my giving yow this advertifiment could doe [no] hurt, fince at the faim tyme it is to affure yow, that I ame your faithfull freind and fervant, For Sir James Turner, at Glafgow. ARAN.

43. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

SIR,

Ham. March 22 1682.

I HAVE just now received yours, and am ashaimed I did not thank yow yesterday for the letter I had at my arrivall. I ame forie that yow are indifpofed, but I thank God I ame not, and as longe as I have health, I think it is the beft tyme I can emploie to vifit my freinds; foe I fhall not faill fieng yow, and affur yow that I ame your affectionat freind and fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner, at Glafgow.

44. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR,

Halkhead the 25 March 1682.

I AM of yo' opinione, that Orbeftoune might haw fatisfied himfelf with aprehending fuch of his oune tenants as wer gultie of the late rebelion, and yet this difcowerie wold hawe done better hade it been made a twelve moneth agoe; which certainly I think might hawe been done as well then as now. Ther is noe body, I am certaine, lefs ambitious of command then my felf. But yow may remember what orders the Generall was pleafed to lay wpon me before yo' felf; and therfor, wnlefs I know how they are difpofed, I cane give him noe account of my deligence: And wpon the other hand, ye know I was alvays ready to comply with every motione ye were pleafed to make relateing to yo' dragouns: Soe that I am fure my comands could not be wery burthenfome. In the meine tyme, I doe afure yow I fhall be farr from taking nottice of what is paft, our great buffines being to ferve the King faithfully, and not to fcrew wpe our animofities and peiks one againft another. I am, Sir, yo' moft humble fervant,

For Sir James Turner. Thes.

Rosse.

286

45. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Hamilton March 27 1682.

I HAVE had yours, and fince my laft one from Orbiftoun, wherine he feames mightilie furprized with my fever letter; for he tells me ther is not one of thos men that he had feazed on that he could not prove fuch crimes againeft them, and efpetialie that man of My Lord Dundonalds, who, he fayes, was til of lait one of his own tenantes, and that most of thes he took wer most of them rogges that lived under himfelf, and that he would meak out fuch thinges against them, that they would willinglie goe anie where reather then byde the fencure of the law. His beinge foe poffitive, has hindred me from writting to my Lord Dundonald, till I fpiek with him felf, who I expect heer this night, and yow shall be enformed of what passeth. He tels me too ther wer two men that Houfton had given me, and one that Bifhoptoun had done the like with, and your fergant had fett all at libertie. I hope Orbiftoun will wait upon yow, and give yow a particular account himfelf, of the reafones why he took thos men; at lieaft if he dont doe itt as he comes upp, I fhall meak him wait one yow when he comes from hence, and when you are togither you cane agrie what is beft to bee done. I dont think it fitt for me to writt to the Generall till wee fee what is reprefented, and then I fhall not faill to doe what you fhall think moft convenient. I hear ther is one Thomas Kennway, that rides in the gward, that goes upp and down thes countries about Glafgow, to find out thos that has been accefforie or actualie in the laft rebellions. I beleive if he be dealt with, he may furnish fome men eafilie, which I begge yow would doe if he be off your acquantance. I heare ther are juft now fome men arrived from Glafgow, which meakes me ftop my letter till I know what they are, that I may give yow ane account of them now. My Major is come in, and has brought 13 men alongeft with him. I have noe more to adde, but that I hope in a litle tyme I may, in fpytt of ill fortune, meak upp the number I propoffe to my felf. I am your faithfull humble fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner.

46. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Hamilton March 28 1682.

I BEGGE yow a thousand pardons for detaining your fervant foe long, but just as I received yours, I was getting a horfback to taike the aire, which has hindred my writting till now. I find Orbiftoune continewes to fay, that thos men he had taiken, he could prove against all of them, that they wer in the lait rebellion, ore what would come within the acte of Parliament, which reaches the fecuring of vagabons and villans; and he fayes ther wer 12 of thos men his own, and that I might be feur he would not, for his own faik, fecure anie men but thos that he might be warranted to doe by law, and that the affiftance he had from yow was what he hopes yow wont be qwessioned for, when he comes to be examined what men they were he had feazed upon; and fince he came heer, I fee he has bein thraitned, by fom of thos men that wer fett at libertie, to have his hous burnt, as the Laird of Barochan, who was accidentily with him when he was upon that expedition, has had his hous, as I ame informed. For all this I intend to writt to my Lord Dundonald tomorrow, and follow anie thing yow think fitt to adviffe me, which is all I have to adde at prefent, but that I ame your faithfull humble fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner.

47. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Hamilton March 29 1682.

I AME forie yow fhould have given yourfelf the trouble of fending your fergant or your corporall, fince yow may be feur what ever yow fay is of more weght with me then that yow nead have taiken this paines of convincing mee. Yow know I ame ignorant of what are the concernes of thos men but as I ame informed, and for my pairt, I will look noe more after them; I with I had neaver meddeled with anie of them, fince yow rune anie rifque to be blaimed for what yow have done; tho I ame confident, when yow are heard, you'l meet with a very gentill reprooff, if anie. I fhall not faill to writt to my Lord Dundonald, and tell him that he might be affured what ever man of his had been offred me, I would neaver have accepted him if he did not think it fitting, and that I ame forrie Orbiftoun had feazed on any of his tenants. Orbiftoun tells me that he is refolved to feaze on thos that are his oun men, againe to bring them to juffice; tho for my pairt I caire for none of them, fince it has maid fuch a clamour in the contrie, which does my leavies ten tymes more hurt then tuice the number of men could doe me good. I ame forie yow eufe the expreffion of being baiten with double rodes. Yow may be feur, as to what relaits to my pairt, I ame not capable of thinking yow are in the leaft in the wrong, and I hope thos yow nead to cair for will be off my oppinion; but I think y<sup>e</sup> beft will be to let the thing fall to y<sup>e</sup> ground. I have had three or four voluntires from Ruglen, and I have ingaged one man more, who received my monie voluntarlie, and now refufes to goe; I think ther can be noe hurt in taiking fuch a man as that. His naime is John Fairey. I fent down one that took one with me to fee if he could gett anie of his comerades; foe this John Faire received my earneft from the handes of one David Scott, befor feverall wittneffes, but now refufes to goe; foe if yow dont think it [may] bring yow into new trowble, I fhould defir yow would caus fome of thos of your dragowns that ftay in the place bring him to me. I have noe more to add to this, but that I ame your faithfull humble fervant,

20

For Sir James Turner.

ARAN.

48. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Saturday, 4 aclock.

I HAVE just now had yours, but I am informed that that Fairie which was taiken one by David Scott, is a lustie young fellow, and that he who yow talk of is a younger brother; how ever, I shall doe what yow will advis me, but I had foe manie that have taikin my monie and cheated me, that I ame loth to trust anie more. Ther is one George Baxter too in Ruglen, who I have bein extraordinary kind too. He came a volontir, and upon that account I was much kinder then to y<sup>e</sup> others; but now he has taiken my monie thes 8 or ten dayes, and absents him felf; foe if under the pretext of shairching for the other, they can fall upon him, I fhall think it is a good chainge. To fho how litle I preffe people, ther came hither a boye to taike one, and nixt day his mafter came from Glafgow to tell me he was his apprentiffe, and had rune away upon fome debait that aroffe betuixt him and fome of his other fervants; immediatly I reftored the young man, and told him I would protect noe bodies fervants against ther maisters. I had feverall officers with me yesterday, but Cap: Inis was not amongeft them, nor did I gett foe much as one man. I have now one Captan Cuningame with yow, and if anie of my friends have any refolutions of letting me have anie more men, I fhould be glad they would fend them upp with him. I flould be glad to know what I might hope for. I ame jouft now goeing out to meet my father, who, wee fancie will be heer this night. I have fo bad a pen, and ame in fo much haift, that I belive you'l heardlie be aible to reed this. I ame your faithful freind and fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner.

49. FROM SIR THOMAS LIVINGSTONE.

SIR,

Lieth 11 April [1682.]

THE dragoene who you have been plaefed to fent with a letter, telling me ther is fix men by the way for my Lord Arans regiment, came to me this morning. It is onpoffible for me to meet the men my felf, but fchall fend an officer, in regard we ar to part to morro, and I have faeveral bufines. In the maen tyme I fchal not fael to acquent my Lord Aran of your kyndnes, and remain your most humble fervent,

For Major Turnare att Glafkoue Thes. T. LEVINGSTONE.

291

50. FROM SIR THOMAS LIVINGSTONE.

SIR,

SINCE my laft your dragouns did come heer, bringing along with them fyve men; as for that gentelman Robifone, I fchal not fael to recomend him to my Lord Aran, and for my particular, any kyndnes I ame capabel he fchal difpofe of. In the maen tyme, if you plaefe lye any comands opon me to the plaefe wheer I ame going, ther fchal bee no man moor reddi to fcho hoe much I ame your moft humble and obedient fervent,

T. LEVINGSTONE.

For Major Turner at Glasco.

51. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR,

Halkhead the 13 Aprill 1682.

I AM really foe wndefpofed ftill that I am not able to goe about buffines as formerly; therefore, (till it pleas God) that I recover my health, I fhall defyre that ye will qwarter yo<sup>r</sup> dragounes in the moft convenient pleafes ye think fitt, which I fhall aprow off; I defyre lykwyfe ye will wreat to Captaine Inglifh, and fhow him that I have ane order from the Generall to call ane counfell of warr betwixt his Enfigne Lewies Lawder and ane tenant of the Earle of Lowdons; if Lawder find himfelf in the wronge, I wifh he may take fome cours to take it avay, and I fhall give him all the tyme I can pofibly for doeing of it. In the meine tyme I wifh he would fend me a trew acount of the wholl affaire. I am fory to heir that yo<sup>r</sup> gutt hath twrned from ill to wors; fo foone as I am able I hope to fee yow. I am your moft humble fervant,

For Sir James Turner.

Rosse.

52. FROM THE LORD ROSS.

HONNORED SIR, Halk

Halkhead the 15 Aprill 1682.

I AM very glade that Enfigne Lawder is come wpe to Glafgow; I am very defyrous to fpeak with him; if ye thinke fitt to fend him hither, wpone Munday about two a clock in the afternoone, ore any other of the dragouns whoe wer conferned in that affaire, for I am wery defyrous to doe them all the right I cane. I wifh they may make the bufines as clear as is pofible; which, efter I hawe fpoken with them, I will endeavo<sup>r</sup> to airt them as right (to mak ther oune pairt faire) as I can, for I am a litle conferned to haw them com hanfomly off in that, if it be pofible. Loudounes officer, called Campbell, was with me, defyring a continvatione of the counfell of warr till the eighteine of May, which I made him give me wnder his hand as his oune defyre, but I gave him no affurance to delay it for ane hour. Now, if Enfigne Lawder find it more convenient to continowe it till that dyet, ore to hawe it cald mor fumarlly, I cane doe either of them he finds moft convenient.

Since I am to fpeak with the perfons whoe wer actors in that bufines, I will certainly receave a more clear information from them then Captaine Inglifh is able to wreat; and therefor I haw returned yow back his letter. Sir, I am your moft humble fervant,

For Sir James Turner Thefe.

Rosse.

53. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Ham. Ap: 19 1682.

I HAD yours of the 18 this morning, and has fpoken to Orbiftoun about that man Longe. He has promifed me to talk to the father, who he fayes he can governe as he pleafes; and more then that, if the fon fhould infift, he can meak out fuch things againft him that will taik his life if he fhould perfew him, ore in the leaift revive this affaire. I have had noe letters yett from  $E^d$ . fo can tell you nothing about the men, onlie I defir you would taik one noe more, nor put your felf to further trouble, which is all at prefent from your faithfull freind and fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner.

54. FROM SIR JAMES TURNER TO THE EARL OF ARRAN.

My NOBLE LORD,

21ft April 1682.

I SHALL waite vpon yo' lop' direction concerning thefe men I levied for y' lop, and fhall meddle no more, hopeing yow will need no more; and if the French king be well naturd, it is probable the Eftates of the Vnited Provinces will be more readie to difband then raife more forces. I befeech yo' lop let me know if I fhall take thefe drops with cherrie facke in the morning, and how long I fhall faft after. Bot the maine errand of this letter is to fhow yo' lop, that the other day I was told by a friende, that it is certaine that the Deane of Glafgow, now minifter at Hamilton, did of himfelfe, without any previous defire of the Archbifbop, promife to him not to nominate Doctor Birfbine or Mr William Blaire to be his affeffors when he was rector; and yet, notwithftanding his promife, nominated them both. I am forry one who had the generall reputation of an honneft man, fould have done any thing like a prevarication; but that which troubled me most was, that it is faid, your lo<sup>p</sup> invited and prompted the Deane to doe fo. Your lo<sup>p</sup> knows what yow owe to that order re-eftablished by law; which yow know his Ma<sup>tie</sup> ownes fo much, nor needs any man tell yow what refpect is due to an Archbifhop whom his Matie hath made the third perfon of this kingdom, whofe authoritie was trampled on by the more than magisteriall masters of our universitie, particularlie these two I just now mentioned; and I thinke not onlie the Epifcopall order, bot the royall power, was wounded through his fides. How much it may concerne yo<sup>r</sup> lo<sup>p</sup> to reverence that function, and thefe who are in it, no bodie needs informe the Earle of Arran. And for thefe two men, I beleeve yo' lo<sup>p</sup> had reafon to expect more fervice to your felfe and noble familie from 2 lackeys, than from them both. However, the Deane hath demitted, and Mr Waddell is chofen Rector, who hath nominated none of thefe two gentlemen to be his affeffors. I am forry to learn that the phifitians have yefterday told my Lord Rofs; that the malignitie of his maladie is above their cure, though not their fkill. I am, etc.

Gorbells, 21 Aprile, at night.

55. FROM WILLIAM MASTER OF ROSS.

SIR,

Halkhead Aprill 25.

I RECEAVED yours, and according to your comands delivered the inclosed to my father, who begs your pardon he was not able to writ to you, but orders me to fhow you he is very ueal fatisfied with what the general writs to you; he is extraordinarly much better than he uas fome days befor this and I hop is nou in the way of recovery. I am, Sir, your most humble fervant, W. Rosse.

For Sir James Turner.

56. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Thursday y° 4 of May 7 at night

SINCE the laft tyme I troubled yow, I have received a letter from Collo: Douglas, telling that he will receive my men; his fhip is lieng in Leith Road. I told him I had twelve men, for I thought Orbifton had had eight. He defired I may caus imbark 6 men in John Burnfydes fhip, and 6 in Robert Dumbars; they are both leing togither. I had a letter yefterday from Orbifton, telling me he would deliver what men he had to Cap. Douglas, who had promifed to caus convoy them to the fhoar. I wifh yow would enquir what men he has received, and lett me know ther names, togither with the 4 yow have, and the 2 my Lo: Semple promifed mee. Collo: Douglas tells me the people are verie rude to the officers that embark the men, fo defires me to gett fome difcriet man to taik caire of thos that are fent; but I think yow may talk with Cap: Douglas, and fend the men with thos Orbifton has delivered to him. I'l fwar I ame fo afhaimed to euffe this freedom with yow, that wer itt not that I know you'l forgive me, I fhould neaver have eufed yow with this freedom. I had letters by the laft poft that tels me the Duk was then refolved to com off one the 5, which, if the nixt poft confirmes, I wil imediatly goe to Ed<sup>r</sup>; but, as yett, I have taiken noe other refolution. So I ame your faithfull freind and fervant; ARAN.

57. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

and the second sec

second to be transferred by south other second

Ham. May 6 1682.

I HAVE juft now had yours, and imediately begune my letter, that your fervant may be with yow in all haifte. I confeffe I ame mor and more amaized at Orbiftouns cariadge. I think Cap: Douglas is extreamlie in the right; nor did I my felf ever underftand that he fhould be putt to further trouble, than when they were brought to him, to help them forward with a gwaird, which Orbiftoun writt to mee he had ingaged to doe, fince he was to fend in fome men however to Coll: Douglas, for his euffe; fo I thought it would be all one trouble to carie in a few more, which maid me think of troubling Cap: Douglas. I am afrayed, if the wind comes butt a litle more futhward, the fhipes will be fayled befor the men gett thither; however, it is but venturing the jurnie. I doe heer fend yow a letter to the mafters of the two fhipes, according to your defir, to receave what men Duncan Grant delivers for my euffe; but I wifhe they may be put aboard Collo: Douglas, tho I dont know particularlie which is his; and fo foon as I bear that ye men are difpatched, I fhall writt to Collo: Douglas. I with I knew the poffitive number, for if they be but 7, I think it wer beft to fend them aboard Douglas fhip; but becaus I told him in my laft I had a duzen of men, he defired I might fend 6 aboard Lift: Collo: Buchan, and the other 6 aboard his fhip; but if ther be but one mor then the half, I think it beft not to feperat them. I hope yow have not given my aquittance to Baxters wife, fince the tels fo foolifh a ftorie for her hufband, and I meak noe dout to gett him mead wearie of his life heer. But fince the town of Ruglen ingaged to furnifh that man, I don't fee why they fhould not meak good ther word. I doe affure yow, if I had thought you had had fo bad a memorie, I had neaver put yow to this trouble; but I thought in comoradfhip one might be affiftant to ane other upon fuch occasions as this, but not at the raite yow have eiffed me, for it has put yow to too much trouble, and more coaft then is fitt to meak a compliment off; which is all at prefent from your faithfull friend and fervant,

ARAN.

a set of the set of th

58. FROM THE LORD SEMPILL.

SR,

Caftle Sempill, May 6th 1682.

the set in state

I RECD yo", and as to those men concerning which yow writ, I keept them foe longe untill I did despair of yo' fending for them, while att length there freinds gave boand and caution for them, and now they are att there liberty, for that it can hardly bee expected that they will promise willingness to goe, which is all at prefent from, S<sup>r</sup>, yo<sup>r</sup> very humble fervant, SEMPILL.

For Sr James Turner

att Gorbells Thefe.

298

59. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Ed<sup>r</sup>. May 11 1682.

I HAVE bein in fuch a hurrie ever fince I came, that I could not difpatche your dragoun fooner, which I hope yow will pardon. I was in good hopes to have found yow heer at my arivall yefterday. I think of goeing allong with the Duk, or to follow him verie fuddenlie, the Duk goes from hence on Monday or tuefday, which is all at prefent from your faithfull freind and fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner.

I all a little it is the short

60. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

an area to the second second

and the second second

Ed: May 19 1682.

1 1 1 1

I HAD yours yesterday, and was extreamlie furprized when yow told me what yow aprehended uas like to befall yow. I affur yow, without meaking anie kind of compliment, I ame foe much concerned in whatever relaites to yow, that yow may affur yourfelf that I will follow anie method yow can propoffe to doe yow fervice; but till what yow told me yourfelf, I had neaver heard anie thing of itt, nor could I allmost belive it when yow wrott itt. I think yett fuch measures may be taiken that yow will hear noe more of it neather; for according to that fkeme that was propoffed, and fome other changes to attend itt, I heer nothing is like to follow. I goe over to Fife to morrow, and fhall be back again the midle of the nixt week, and then I intend to begine my journie for London; foe if yow have anie commandes for me, I should be glad to have them by that tyme. You may be affured of all the freindship my father can show yow, and intirlie command your most affured freind and fervant, ARAN.

For Sir James Turner, att Glafgow.

61. FROM THE EARL OF ARRAN.

Friday, paft 7 in the afternoon.

I HAVE just now had that which yow wrott at twelve, and ame extreamlie oblidged to yow for the inclosed yow fent me, but I find I have moft of them in my liftes. I ame affraiyed they are all fled fince I came into this contrie, for I ame a great bogle amongeft them. I think yow took the best course in putting them in to Glasgow tobuth, and I meak noe dout, when the Generall knowes they are people that are diffurberes of the peace of the contrie, tho it would be heard to meak out particulars against them, yett ther being fent off the contrie I think were noe ill fervice both to the King and the Governement. I hope my Lord Roffe will be of the faime oppinion. I ame feur nothing in the world could afflict me more then that yow fhould in the lieft be found fault with upon my account, but I hope yow are in noe danger; but now I must begge to know how I shall beftur my felf to gett thos men that are in the tolbuth, and the others that the other pairtie will bring alongeft with them. I intend both Orbiftown and my Major thall come and wait one yow to alk your advice, and I hope yow will fpur the officers, that gave me a great mainie fair promiffes laft night to be as good as ther wordes. I fhall add noe more, but impatiently expect what will be the event [of] our endeavours, and affure yow that I ame extreamlie fenfible of your kindneffe, and fhall ever be your faithfull friend and fervant. ARAN.

For Sir James Turner.

. -