INTRODUCTION.

SO numerous are the compilations of the Songs of Scotland, that it may be egotism on my part to offer a new collection in the hope of creating a demand sufficient to repay the outlay; but to me this "gathering of the flowers of melody" has been a labour of love. I have watched its progress to completion with parental care, and although, in comparison to some of "richer girt," my offering may not appear "a thing of beauty," yet to some I trust it may prove "a joy for ever;" for the music of our leal land is not the luxury of the few, but one of the daily wants of the many.

I have much faith in the vitality of the muse of Scotland, and the love such as Scotland has for its minstrelsy is a great gift; there is vigour in it, and that vigour reveals the power of the mission of national songs, for such a gift is not given without a purpose. It is a recorded fact that five thousand copies of Cunningham's edition of Burns were sold as fast as they could be issued from the press; and, therefore, who can fathom the high results to Scotland of the existence of Burns?—for the pen of the hand that knows how to use it is the most powerful weapon known. "'Tis the weapon of the soul."

Commentators have worn out every meed of praise that could be bestowed on the poet ploughman of Scotland; pilgrims, in years gone by, have wandered to the "thatched hut" in which he was born, to prove that the banks of Avon, where Shakspeare saw light, are not holier ground than the banks of Ayr or Doon. "What has Burns written!" What has he not written? He, who could melt with love or fire with rage, has depicted every emotion in the human breast. He waves his wand, and lo! before us are the "snaw" white locks of "John Anderson, my jo;" he waves his wand again for "Auld Langsyne," and next we see "Twa Dogs," who are thankful they are not of our race; then the wizard with his magic stroke proves "A man's a man for a' that;" he philosophises on a daisy and a mouse; he sings to Mary in Heaven, and delivers an address to the very Deil himself. There is no occasion to lift the veil, behind which the dead are out of sight; but, "ill starr'd" as he was, Robert Burns has "built himself a living monument, and kings, for such a tomb, might wish to die."

From the plough and the loom, what bright gems of thought have illumined our undying strains, for second only in popularity to the lyrics of Burns are the songs of Robert Tannahill, the Paisley poet, a delicate and sensitive bard, who passed prematurely behind the "cloud of oblivion." Then from the Shepherd's fold came the name of James Hogg; but he, unlike many of our song-writers, spent a long and happy life. It would require space beyond my purpose to notice in detail all the successful songsters that pass before my mind's eye, but "till all time" generations will remember such names as Sir Walter Scott, Thomas Campbell, Allan Cunningham, Henry Scott Riddell, John Stuart-Blackie, William Thom, Joanna Baillie, Lady Nairne, and others of the brilliant rank of Scotia's sons and daughters of song.

Of the antiquity of the music of Scotland we have every proof—and there is no question but we owe many of our best old melodies to wandering minstrels who, long before "the iron age," were wont to roam from hill to vale, and from the laird and the cottar met with a lowin' welcome.

I believe with Eliza Cook, the Queen poetess of England, that "music is born with us, and forms one of the links of divinity." It is strange how the same melody will affect a dozen different persons in a dozen distinct ways; the Highlander, whose fresh mountain nature is incorporated with the pibroch and reel, moves very differently to the strains of Tullochgorum, compared to the ball-room "Dundreary" who listens to the measure as he would to the guessing of "a widdle." Then who does not know the softening power of the music of the human voice? It is like the angel whisperings of kind words in the hour of trouble. "Sing on." Sing to the wicked man, sing to the sufferer, sing to the old, sing to the young, for music will inspire them all.

Of Scottish music it has well been said—"Through the force of novelty, or the peculiar powers of some favourite singer, one new song after another becomes the rage of the day, which in a short time is laid aside to be remembered no more. It bloomed but to wither, was born but to die; but our old national airs are imperishable plants, unfading evergreens, which have no more to dread from the capricious innovations of fashion than the oak has to fear from the storm which, instead of overturning, serves but to fix it more deeply in its native earth." And such marked praise is well deserved, for, take our songs "all in all," where can we find such happy humour, pure pathos, true tenderness, and soul-stirring spirit, as in the lays of our northern enchanters, wedded as they are to music as healthful as the breath of spring, as plaintive as the sighing of the wind, and as cheery "as sunshine to the flowers in May"?

In this collection I have endeavoured to select the best of our well-known songs, and into such good company have introduced my own copyrights, many of which have met with favourable notice, and are not to be found in any other edition. I have also adopted the plan of having every song complete in one or two pages, thus preventing the necessity of turning over the leaves while singing. The accompaniments have been arranged by Mr. T. S. Gleadhill, a masterly musician, well known for his harmony and heart in the cause; and I therefore venture to remark that I have at least made an effort to obtain for my volume a kindly recognition, in the hope it may raise a few modern lyrics to fame, and add more admirers to the myriads who delight in our "Auld Scotch Sangs."

My father argued sair, my mither didna speak,
But she look'd in my face till my heart was like to break ;
So they gied him my hand, tho' my heart was at the sea,
And auld Robin Gray is guidman to me.
I hadna been a wife, a week but only four,
When mournfu' as I sat on the stane at the door,
I saw my Jamie's ghaist, but I couldna think it he,
Till he said, I'm come hame, my love, to marry thee.

Oh sair did we greet, and mickle did we say ;
We took but ae kiss, and we tore ourselves away ;
I wish that I were dead, but I'm no like to dec,
Oh, why do I live to say, O wae's me !
I gang like a ghaist, and I carena to spin,
I darena think o' Jamie, for that wad be a sin ;
But I will do my best a guid wife aye to be,
For auld Robin Gray is a kind man to me.

 For sadly changed indeed was he,
 Oh, wae's me for Prince Charlie.

Dark night cam' on, the tempest roar'd
 Loud o'er the hills and valleys ;
 An' where was't that your Prince lay down,
 Wha's hame should been a palace ?
 He rowed him in a Highland plaid,
 Which covered him but sparely,
 An' slept beneath a bush o' broom,
 Oh, wae's me for Prince Charlie.

COMIN' THRO' THE RYE.

Words by ROBERT BURNS.

Arranged by T. S. GLEADHILL.

PIANO-FORTE.

mf Moderato.

The piano introduction consists of two staves. The right hand plays a melody of eighth and sixteenth notes in a major key with one sharp (F#). The left hand provides a harmonic accompaniment with chords and single notes.

1. Gin a bo-dy meet a bo-dy Co-min' thro' the rye, Gin a bo-dy kiss a bo-dy,
2. Gin a bo-dy meet a bo-dy Co-min' frae the well, Gin a bo-dy kiss a bo-dy,

The first two lines of the song are set to a piano accompaniment. The right hand continues the melody from the introduction, and the left hand provides a steady harmonic base. The lyrics are written below the vocal line.

Need a bo-dy cry? Il - ka las-sie has her lad-die, Nane they say hae I! Yet Need a bo-dy tell? Il - ka las-sie has her lad-die, Ne'er a ane hae I! But

The third line of the song continues the melody and accompaniment. The lyrics are written below the vocal line.

I hae seen the guid auld day,
The day o' pride and chieftain glory,
When Royal Stuarts bore the sway,
And ne'er heard tell o' Whig nor Tory.
Though lyart be my locks and grey,
And eild has crook'd me down, what matter?
I'll dance and sing ae ither day,
That day our king comes o'er the water.

UP IN THE MORNING EARLY.

The musical score consists of three systems. The first system includes a vocal line with lyrics and a piano accompaniment. The lyrics are: "ra - ther gae sup - per - less to my bed, Than rise in the morn - ing / sit a' nicht wad better a - gree, Than rise in the morn - ing". The piano part features a treble and bass clef with dynamics p and mf. The second system continues the vocal line with lyrics: "ear - ly. / ear - ly." and includes a piano accompaniment with a dynamic of f. The third system continues the piano accompaniment with various dynamics and articulation marks.

III.

The sun peeps owre yon southland hills
 Like ony timorous carlie,
 Just blinks a wee, then sinks again,
 And that we find severely.
 Now up in the morning's no for me,
 Up in the morning early ;
 When snaw blaws in at the chimley cheek,
 Wha'd rise in the morning early ?

IV.

Nae linties lilt on hedge or bush,
 Poor things they suffer sairly ;
 In cauld rife quarters a' the nicht,
 A' day they feed but sparely.
 Now up in the morning's no for me,
 Up in the morning early,
 A pennyless purse I wad rather dree
 Than rise in the morning early.

V.

A cosie house and cantie wife
 Aye keeps a body cheerly ;
 And pantries stow'd wi' meet an' drink,
 They answer unco' rarely.
 But up in the morning—na, na, na!
 Up in the morning early ;
 The gowans maun glint on bank and brae,
 When I rise in the morning early.

The musical score consists of two systems of three staves each. The top staff is the vocal line, the middle is the right-hand piano accompaniment, and the bottom is the left-hand piano accompaniment. The key signature is one flat (B-flat), and the time signature is common time (C). The first system covers the first two lines of lyrics, and the second system covers the third line. A dynamic marking of f (forte) is placed above the piano accompaniment in the second system.

May our councils be wise, and our commerce increase;

And teach our late posterity to fight in freedom's cause,
That they like our bold ancestors, for honour and applause,
May defy the French with all their art to alter our laws.

The musical score consists of three staves. The top staff is a vocal line in treble clef with a key signature of one sharp (F#) and a common time signature (C). The lyrics are: "Phe - mie was a bon - nier lass Than braes o Yar - row e - ver saw. trip - ped by the banks o' Earn, As light's a bird up - on a thorn." The middle and bottom staves are a piano accompaniment in grand staff (treble and bass clefs). The piano part features a simple harmonic accompaniment with a bass line that includes a double bar line and the marking "D.C." (Da Capo) at the end of the piece.

Shades of the dead, have I not heard your voices
Rise on the night-rolling breath of the gale?
Surely the soul of the hero rejoices,
And rides on the wind o'er his own Highland vale.
Round Lochnagarr, while the stormy mist gathers,
Winter presides in his cold icy car;
Clouds there encircle the forms of my fathers;
They dwell 'mid the tempests of dark Lochnagarr.

IV.

Years have rolled on, Lochnagarr, since I left you,
Years must elapse ere I see you again;
Though nature of verdure and flowers has bereft you,
Yet still thou art dearer than Albion's plain.
England, thy beauties are tame and domestic
To one who has roved on the mountains afar;
Oh for the crags that are wild and majestic,
The steep frowning glories of dark Lochnagarr.

sleep on till day, O! rest thee, babe, rest thee, babe, sleep while you may.

The first system of the musical score consists of three staves. The top staff is a vocal line in G major (one sharp) and 3/4 time, with lyrics underneath. The middle and bottom staves are a piano accompaniment, with the middle staff in treble clef and the bottom staff in bass clef. The piano part features a steady eighth-note accompaniment in the right hand and a more active bass line in the left hand.

The second system of the musical score continues the piano accompaniment from the first system. It consists of three staves: a vocal line (which is mostly blank in this system), a treble clef piano staff, and a bass clef piano staff. The piano part continues with the same rhythmic pattern, marked with a mezzo-forte (mf) dynamic.

The musical score consists of three staves. The top staff is a vocal line in G major, starting with a treble clef and a key signature of one flat (F major). It contains the lyrics 'thee.' and 'me.' under the first two notes. The middle and bottom staves are a piano accompaniment in G major, starting with a grand staff (treble and bass clefs). The piano part begins with a mezzo-forte (mf) dynamic. The piano accompaniment features a rhythmic pattern of eighth and sixteenth notes, with some chords and melodic lines in both hands.

Howard ah ! woe to thy hopes of the day,
Hear the rude welkin rend, while the Scots' shouts ascend,
'Elliott of Lariston, Elliott for aye.'

O, had she been a country maid,
 And I the happy country swain,
 Tho' sheltered in the lowest shed
 That ever rose in Scotland's plain !

 With joy, with rapture, I would toil ;
 And nightly to my bosom strain
 The bonnie lass o' Ballochmyle.

 Where fame and honours lofty shine ;
 And thirst of gold might tempt the deep,
 Or downward seek the Indian mine ;
 Give me the cot below the pine,
 To tend the flocks or till the soil,
 And every day have joys divine
 With the bonnie lass o' Ballochmyle.

GLOSSARY.

THE ch and gh have always the guttural sound. The sound of the English diphthong oo is commonly spelled ou. The French u, a sound which often occurs in the Scottish language, is marked oo, or ui. The a in genuine Scottish words, except when forming a diphthong, or followed by an e mute after a single consonant, sounds generally like the broad English a in wall. The Scottish diphthong ae always, and ea very often, sound like the French e masculine. The Scottish diphthong ey sounds like the Latin ei.
