THE EDITOR'S PREFACE.

IN the year 1591, Mr. Thomas Mollisone, then Town-Clerk of Aberdeen, in preparing a Catalogue of the “ Registeris and Baillie Court Buikis of Aberdene, presentlie extint, or les bene during the memorie of man thir thre scoir yeiris bygane,” states that, before the year 1380, there did not appear any volumes of Record. “ Befoir this, serowis on parchment, contening sum courtis of the Bright of Abirdene, writin in Latyne all, and for ilk year aue skrow : na mater of importance or weyght extant or registrat thairin, nather yit ony ordinance or statut sett dounn, onlie suitis and actionis, or processus for annuellis, euil to be red, be reson of the antiquitie of the wreit, and forme of the letter or charecter, weray schortlie and compendiouslie wretin, quhilk is not now vsit ; and skairslie gif ony man can reid the samyn ” Of these scrolls two fragments were lately recovered out of masses of useless papers which were decaying in a garret of the Town House. They consist of narrow membranes of parchment, stitched together endwise, but are obviously only incomplete parts of the much longer Rolls, each of which had formed the record of a year. From these two Rolls, the selections printed in the commencement of the present volume have been extracted. In one case, of which the Record has been preserved, and is now printed,<sup>a</sup> where the Brieve de recto is said to be sewed to the roll, as relative to the proceedings, that document still remains, attached to the Record, and except in one part, where the parchment has been somewhat injured by damp, the "scrowis" are in good preservation, and the character is not so "euil to be red" as the style of writing used by Mr. Molli-sone and his contemporaries.<sup>b</sup> The proceedings preserved in these fragments are not without their value and interest, as exhibiting the forms and principles used in legal pleadings of the day. It may be thought that the most interesting matter is contained in the first extract, where reference is made to a "Lex Burgorum," regulating the giving over of lands within burgh, "per quam dicitur cum cartis et clamore fiat tradicio terrarum in burgis,"<sup>c</sup> inasmuch as it seems to refer to a law which has not come down in our ancient code, known as "The Laws of the Burghs." Some valuable information on this point will be found in "Remarks on the Law of the Burghs, concerning delivery of Lands within Burghs," prepared, at the Editor's request, by Mr. Chalmers of Aldbar, which are appended to the Preface<sup>d</sup>

The Extracts from the earlier volumes of the Council Register, which follow those from the Rolls, have been gleaned from these Records, on the occasion of several recent investigations; and it is believed that they will be found of considerable importance in various ways.

Extracts from the Accounts of the Burgh.

These Accounts, for the period from 1398 to 1453, are engrossed in the Council Register, amid the entries of the ordinary business of the Council and of the Burgh Court. In the latter year, the accounts kept by the Dean of Guild commence in a separate form, although, unfortunately, the series which has been preserved is far from complete. The first volume of the Treasurer's Accounts, dates from 1559; and among these, also, several gaps occur.

It is hardly necessary to enlarge on the great value of accounts such as those in question, for historical purposes. They relate to disbursements of the most diverse sorts—the most minute, as well as the most important—and serve, in many ways, to throw unexpected light on historical events,—on the character, manners, and varied pursuits of our burghal forefathers.

One striking feature pervading these accounts arises from the hospitable temper which seems to have characterised our civic rulers at all times. It cannot be denied that, on all occasions, the Cup of Bon-Accord was liberally dispensed.<sup>a</sup> In the earliest of the Accounts now printed, there are many entries for wine, dispensed to various good neighbours of the Town, among whom the Bishop of the day was not forgotten. Indeed, the cordial hospitality of the Burgh to the Clergy was at all times remarkable. Thus, in 1617-18, we have an entry “for wyne and spycerie to propyne the Laird of Corss,” apparently when he was proceeding to St. Andrews, for the purpose of being consecrated; and another entry informs us that he got a similar propyne “when he returned bischope.”<sup>a</sup>

Again, Dr. William Forbes, who was Principal of Marischal College, on his removal, in 1622, to a pastoral charge in Edinburgh, got a banquet which cost 60 lib., and his wife was presented with “wyne, suger, and tobacco.” Dr. Forbes returned to the Burgh, as one of its ministers, in 1626; and in that year<sup>b</sup> we find an entry for the freight of a vessel which conveyed his family and furniture from Edinburgh to Aberdeen, “with fyftie merkis to Thomas Forbes, his brother, for his chairges in going southe to convoy the said Dr. Forbes hither.”<sup>c</sup> In 1633, he was “written for to teache befoir the King’s Majestie,” when his expenses were defrayed by his kind patrons<sup>d</sup>; and in that year he was promoted to fill the newly-erected See of Edinburgh. Before he left the Burgh, he received a supper, at which the Magistrates and the Clergy of the town were present, and at which the guests were regaled by the music of “the violers.” The cordiality of the connection which subsisted between the parties cannot be better understood than by the entry which shows the charge “at the saluting of Doctour Forbes, at his hame cuming, 4 lib. 14 s.”<sup>e</sup> and “for wyne careit to the Crabstane at the said Doctour Forbes departure.”

A like good feeling on the part of the Magistrates towards his colleague, Dr. Barren, appears by the following payment “for ane dussone siluer spoones to Mr. Robert Barroun, Minister, to his first hous, in token of the townes lowe to him, 61 lib. 10 s.”<sup>f</sup>

eeived at his entry with equal kindness, although displayed in rather a more homely fashion. In the Accounts of 1559-60, we have an entry for “ane garment and haill stand of claythis to Maister Adame Herreot, as well as for the expense of maintaining himself, his servant, and his horse, for 9 weeks”<sup>a</sup>

Mr Robert Bruce, one of the Ministers of Edinburgh, who, in 1605, was banished by the King and Council to the north, after spending some years in Inverness, where he was not well received, ventured, in 1610-11, to come southward as far as Aberdeen. His visit appears to have partly been at the request of the Magistrates; and, notwithstanding the cloud which hung over him, their hospitality to Mr. Bruce partook of its usual exuberance, and, accordingly, we find that he, first of all, was graced by a “propyne of succouris, sueit meats, and spycerie;” afterwards, he received the more substantial tokens of the town’s good will, in the shape of “tua carkaches of beaff,” banquets, and a present of wine, while his wife received a collation “in vine and succour;” and, in conclusion, the Burgh defrayed the whole expense of his lodgings and maintenance while he was in Aberdeen.<sup>b</sup> The Magistrates, on two occasions, interposed their influence with the Privy Council, in favour of Mr. Bruce, without success; and he was speedily compelled to return to his Highland quarters at Inverness. He at last removed to his own House of Kinnaird in 1613; but, in 1622, he was commanded to take up his quarters in Inverness; and, at his bygoing thither, it appears that he again partook of the town’s “wyne and spycerie.”<sup>c</sup>

"quhen he came first to Aberdein, and wes wpon his tryelles, for making his chairges furth and home, 66lib. 13s 4d.;" and also the expense of "his transplantatioun from St. Johnstoun, 333lib. 6s. 8d.;" and "quhen the prowest and baillies went to salute him, 4lib. 18s. 4d."<sup>a</sup>

The Magistrates were also liberal patrons of literature and learning, as many entries will show. So early as 1433-38, we find a payment to the Master of the Schools.<sup>b</sup> In 1597, "Robert Lind-saye, pylot of the new schip to Hispan," gets a reward "in recompance of his carte presentit and dedicat to this toune."<sup>c</sup> Mr. David Wedderburn, Master of the Grammar School, on one occasion, got 40lib. for making his charges to Edinburgh, "being sunmondit anent Mr. Alex<sup>d</sup> Hume's Grammer;" and, afterwards, 66lib. 13s. 4d. "in help of his expenssis, be reasone of his long stay in Edin-brugh, upon the approbatioun of his new graimer;" and, afterwards, "for making of his charges to Edinbrugh, to procure the lordis of secret counsall, thair approbatioun, to the new grammer laitlie set furth be him, 100lib."<sup>d</sup>

Nor were his lighter attempts in the region of poetry suffered to pass unrewarded, as we see an entry to "Mr. David Wedderburne, for some poesies made by him on the death of the King, at the desyre of the toune."<sup>e</sup> They could not refuse a similar courtesy to Mr. Alexander Forbes, "for ane poesie presentit to the prowest, on the praise of the toune;"<sup>f</sup> nor to Mr. Alexander Gardyne, "for dedicating of his pamphlet to the toune."<sup>g</sup> Occasional, entries occur of money paid to Mr. Edward Raban, the first printer who settled in Aberdeen, for such work as the following :—"For printing the thessus of the college of the broch, at the lourtione of the skolleris this present zear, quhilkis are dedicat to the Magistrattis and Counsell, 12lib."<sup>a</sup> But it appears that a necessary preliminary to any work consisted in "drinksiluer to Raban's servant;"<sup>b</sup> and, again, "drink at the setting of the press."

The expense of Royal visits are occasionally to be found. Thus, in 1594, James VI. came to Aberdeen when on his expedition against the Popish Lords. On this occasion, his Majesty was entertained at the charge of the town, and the amount expended for the various articles is duly entered, including a "punscheoun of wyne," and a large supply of "spycerries."<sup>c</sup>

Charles II., on his route southwards from Speymouth in 1650, lodged in the Burgh.<sup>d</sup> On this occasion, we have the usual entries, as well as one for "My Lord Duke of Buckingham, and sundrie wther noblemen's charges, dwreing the aboade of his Majestie."<sup>e</sup>

Among the miscellaneous disbursements may be noticed those "for the burning and sustentatioun of the witches"<sup>f</sup>—an yearly entry "for wyne, succour, and glasses, the day of the Kingis Maies- teis deliuerie fra Gowrie."<sup>g</sup> "To my Lord Merschellis nureis, quhen as the towne wes invited to be his gossipis, ane dubill angill."<sup>h</sup> "To Archibald Armstrong, his Majesties plesant, ane Portugale ducat."<sup>i</sup> "Gevin for the expensis maid on the intertenement of Monsieur de Halzie, Frenschemane, and the gentilmen his Majestes servands, quho cum to this burght with him."<sup>j</sup> Besides the notices which we find of the heavy sums exacted from the inhabitants on different occasions, to save the town from plundering "at that tyme," there are many others bearing witness to the impartiality with which both parties, in the great Rebellion, made free with the property of the "Brave Toun."<sup>a</sup> Thus a supply for "wynce and bread to the Marquis of Argyle," "than at Fyvie,"<sup>b</sup> is balanced, in the course of the same account, by a gift to "Alexander Grahame of Cairney, generall quarter maister to Montroiss armie, of three ellis Spanish tafetic," and various supplies to the camp of "Spanish wync" and "acquauitie."<sup>c</sup> The town also furnished "two rim of paper," for the use of the great Marquis himself.<sup>d</sup>

Letters to Dr. James Fraser.

These Letters were found in the Charter Chest of the University and King's College, Old Aberdeen. Dr. Fraser, to whom they were addressed, entered King's College, as a student, in the year of the Restoration. After completing his education, he went to England, where, it is said, he was employed as Tutor to several young men of good family, with whom he travelled in various parts of the Continent. He was made Secretary of Chelsea Hospital in the time of Charles II., and retained the office during the reigns of James II., William and Mary, Queen Anne, and George I., having died in 1731. One of the various bequests which he made for the benefit of his Alma Mater was a gift of his library, and the Letters now printed form part of a mass of his papers, which came into possession of the College, along with his Books. It will be seen from the Letters that Fraser was an intimate friend of Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury. He was also a friend and correspondent of the industrious Wodrow, on whom he conferred many courtesies, and the first volume of whose history he presented to King George I.

The first four are written by Mr. Martin, who appears to have had some connexion with the English Embassy at Madrid. In these he gives a ludicrous account of the Spanish Monarch and his Court. Of the latter he says, in the third Letter, written during the time of Lent—"The continual noise of misereres in the churches, and the dismal sight of penitents scourging their insolent flesh in every corner of the streets, is the only entertainment we have at present in this Catholic Court, wher you'l imagine how impatientlie the galants and ladyes wait for Easter, to put on fine cloaths, change their hypocritical faces, and sin publickly, without scandal."<sup>a</sup>

The fourth is a Letter from the learned Lloyd, Bishop of St. Asaph, in which he discusses several curious points connected with our early history.

The letters written to Dr. Fraser by the Countess of Errol contain several graphic allusions to the unsettled state of the country soon after the invasion of the Prince of Orange.<sup>a</sup>

"The Prince of Orange his circular letters for the approaching convention is just now dispersing in this country; my Lord Erroll got his this morning. I pray God send it a good ending, for it is of great comfort, and I am mightily concerned for their security that is to be at it, since I hear there is ane army of people about

Edinbrugh that hes kept them in trouble for severall ueeks, and it is not yet perfectly understood what they would be at; but I am so much a coward as to be afraid extreamly of those warriours, if they come near a convention wher I most expect a great number of my friends to be.

“ Ther is also aue army of some hundreds of Highland men that hes threatened to come and destroy all my brother Perth’s land.* He is sending his two eldest daughters hear, who is realy extreamly fine young ladys, and it shall be much against my uill if any of them ever be in hazard of being put in a convent, for I love them uell, and I hope they shal not be permitted to goe abroad, though he says he designs they shall, but it most be prevented.”

And again, “ It is very ueasie for me to think on the condition this country is in, for we have only as yet in this corner of it heard of the tuo first dayes of the convention at Edinburgh; and things hes so gloomy and so divided aue aspect, that I am sadly apprehensive of some great missfortune, nor is it to be doubted, for ther is so many privat quarels, and every man so much endeavoring to be uppermost, that it uill be a very hard matter to give our government quiet for a while; and the common people are so sett on edge by ther hopes of relife from all taxes, that they uant but a little of a disappointment to be on fire; and nobody knows whome to trust, for it is realy a very sad thing to consider how much division and quareling does threaten some mischief to come upon us, if God of his mercy do not prevent it, which I earnestly pray that he may doe; and since my Lord Erroll went away to the convention I have been in the most extream concern in the world for fear of him, nor can I be at peace least he may be involved in danger, though I am sure he will never do anything himself to draw it upon him.”<sup>a</sup>

* James sixth Earl of Perth, who is here and elsewhere referred to in these Letters, had been recently converted to the faith of the Roman Church. An interesting series of Letters from his Lordship to the Countess of Errol has been printed for the Camden Society. From these it appears that his Lordship was a sincere convert. In one of them, dated Venie, 28th March, 1695, he writes:—“I offer you daily to God that he would convert you, that you who see so far in all things else may at last see the unreasonableness of being a Protestant.” While on the other hand the Countess writes of her most earnest hopes that she may one day see her Brother “a member of that gloryous church which it was his misfortune to fall from.” Of Burnet, whom the Countess regarded so highly, his Lordship adds in the same Letter:—“Abbe Leith swears Burnet is the damn’dest lying rogue in the whole world. I give it you as the Abbot’s own words, who speaks broad Scots, excellent French, and Italian like a Roman.”

Documents from the Charter Chest of the Earl of Airlie.

The first of these papers is a Bond dated 31st July, 1578, by the Earls of Athol, Argyle, and Montrose, and Lord Ogilvy of Airly, binding themselves to pay to Captain Patrick Cranstoun and his wife, and the survivor of them, a pension of 100 merks for the “gude and thankful seruice done and to be done be Patrik Cranstoun, for the libertie and releif of our souerane the Kingis Maiesteis persone.”

James VI. had recently fallen into the custody of the Earl of Mar through a plot in which, although Mar appeared as the ostensible agent, the real mover was doubtless the wily Earl of Morton, who was longing for a restoration of his credit and power.

The Bond now printed is signed by the Earl of Athole the Lord Chancellor, and the other leaders of the faction opposed to Morton, and probably refers to a counterplot by them for regaining possession of the King. It does not appear that any such attempt was made, but in any event Cranston appears regularly to have drawn his pension, as we find by the second paper that he discharges Lord Ogilvy of his share of it down to 1595.

The Third Document is a Letter from Sir William Ogilvy of Barras to James Earl of Airlie, dated 22d April, 1682. Sir William was son of George Ogilvy of Barras, who so manfully held out the Castle of Dunnottar, containing the Regalia of Scotland, against the usurping Parliamentary troops, and whose wife (a member of the house of Angus), in conjunction with the Dowager Countess of Marischall, and Christian Fletcher, wife of Mr. James Granger, Minister of the Parish of Kinneff, devised a successful scheme which resulted in the rescue of the Regalia and their concealment in the Kirk of Kinneff. After the surrender of Dunnottar, Ogilvy and his wife were imprisoned by the English on account of their share in this transaction, and their property suffered by the imposition of heavy fines. Yet, at the Restoration, these loyal and courageous services were acknowledged with only the unsubstantial reward of a Baronetcy, and a change in the feudal holding of the lands of Barras from ward to brench.

It appears that Sir William, the son of the defender of Dunnottar, was pressing his claim at Court for a more tangible reward of his father's heroic services, and this Letter is written to invoke the aid of the Earl of Airlie in his behalf. Sir William appears to have been a keen sportsman, taking the opportunity to remind his Lordship that he had expected one of his Lordship's "Clan Ronald Hawks," and as he had been informed that there "vas ane goosehawks eyrie at Clova," he also makes request for "ane goosehawk." The fourth paper would appear to have resulted out of the applications made on behalf of Sir William. It is a Draft of a Precept by the King for expediting a letter under the Privy Seal of Scotland "making, constituting, and appointing Sir William Ogilvie, Knight baronet, during all the dayes of his lifetyme, Master of his Maiesties hawks, chief huntsman, and master of the royll game, with power to him during the said space to use and exercse the said places and offices with all privileges, casualties, fies, profits, and commodities whatsomever that ever did or that may hereafter belong to the samen." It was proposed at the same time to annex a salary to the office in question, but it would rather appear that the matter did not go farther.

Decreet of the Synod of Perth.

This document is printed from a Transcript, among the Panmure Collections, made from the original at Arbuthnott House in the early part of last century. A somewhat loose translation of the Decreet was printed in the first volume of an "Enquiry into the Early History of Scotland," by John Pinkerton, where he states that "the above is said to have been translated from the original Latin in the possession of Lord Arbuthnot, about 1700 by a Mr. Clerk, schoolmaster at Bervie."<sup>4</sup>

It contains the judgment of a Synod of the Church of Scotland assembled at Perth on 11th April, 1206 in a cause between the Bishop of St. Andrew's, on the one part, and Duncan, Laird of Arbuthnott, on the other part, relating to the Kirkton of Arbuthnott, which the Bishop claimed as belonging to the Church of St. Andrew's, and of which, as he alleged, the said Duncan had robbed that Church.

Judgment was given in favour of the Bishop, and the evidence on which the Synod proceeded is annexed to the sentence. Some of the depositions of the witnesses are exceedingly curious, and illustrate the tenure of an early class of Tenants called Scolocs,<sup>a</sup> perhaps resembling the Corbæ of Ireland.<sup>b</sup> A newer and more curious character is assigned to the "Scolocs" in the admirable paper on the subject of "Scholastic Offices in the Scottish Church in the Twelfth and Thirteenth Centuries," which Mr. Robertson was so kind as prepare for this work, and which is printed as an Appendix to the Preface.

The Editor is also indebted to Mr. Robertson for the following

"Notes on persons mentioned in the Decree of Perth":—

John of Hastings seems to have possessed the manor of Dun in Angus, and is a frequent witness in the northern charters of King William the Lion. (Lib. S. Trinitatis de Scon, p. 22; Regist. Vet. de Aberbrothoc, pp. 19, 23, 32, 33, 36, 58, 62, 63, 99, 124; Act. Parl. Scot., vol. i., pref., pp. 79, 85.)

Ysaac of Banevin, the second witness, appears, with Walter, Prior of St. Andrews, as a witness to a charter of the Church of Fowlis, by William Maule of Fowlis. (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, p. 41.)

Adam of Banevin, his nephew, is found as a witness to charters

<sup>a</sup> According to Lhuyd, "Sgológ" is a farmer, a husbandman. O'Reilly in his Irish Dictionary gives Scológ, Seolog, a petty farmer, and Bullet in Mémoires sur la Langue Celtique says "Sgolog, laboureur, fermier, metayeur paysan." "In the old manuscripts the letter c occurs frequently where they now use g." Lhuyd, Archæolog. Britann. Pref. Tit. x. Oxford, 1707.

of the “Abbs,” or hereditary lay abbots of Edzell, and of their Angus neighbours, John of Montfort, and Hugh Malherbe the younger. (Regist. Vet. de Aberbroth., pp. 42, 47, 48, 49.)

Hugh de Benne, or Bennef, appears as a witness to charters of Earl Gilliechrist of Angus, Bishop Matthew of Aberdeen, Bernard Fitz-William Fitz-Bernard, and John de Montfort. (Regist. Vet. de Aberbroth., pp. 29, 30, 31, 32, 45, 47, 136.)

If we could be assured that the name of the witness, Andrew de Bas, had been quite correctly transcribed, we should be helped to the surname of Hugh, Bishop of St. Andrews, which does not seem to be elsewhere recorded.

“Master Ysaac,” and “Hugh the Steward,” may, perhaps, be identified with persons of the same name, who appear on record at the same time in deeds relating to St. Andrews. (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 154, 156.)

Extracts from Baron Court Books.

The Court Books of the Baronies of Skene and Leys are preserved in the Charter Room at Crathes; and the Minutes of the Court of the Barony of Whitelaugh form part of the Collections in the Charter Room at Whitehaugh. The Extracts now printed illustrate the working of these little feudal courts in their ordinary business; while some of the entries reflect considerable light on various customs of the day.

The judgments of the Baron Baillie seem often to be rather arbitrary; but, at times, he appears to have had to deal with rude materials. Here is his mode of remedying one cause of complaint :—

Nov. 26, 1660. The said day, forsamekill as the stewart within the place gawe in ane complaint, schawing therein that he was oft and diuers tymes reproved for presenting to the tabill of ewill baikin bread, and declaired that he was nocht abill to amend the same for want of barme to the batches at all tyms. Thairfore, the baillie hawing takin consideratioun for remeid thairof in tyme comeing, and finding that thair is ane gryt pluraltie of brewars within the laird's awin lands, decernit the haill brewars, per vices, ilk ane in thair tourne, to gift weeklie to the stewart, or to any wther he sould happen to send for the same, ane quart of barme, for making and baiking of sufficient bread; and quhosoevir refusises, being desyrit to send the same, sould pey to the stewart the prye of ane quart of aill, in reddie money, to by the samen; and quhosoevir failles in manner forsaid, ordaineis the officier to pound presentlie for the samen. And it is heirby declaired that ilk brewar that sends in the barme sall hawe thrie loawes for the samen.<sup>a</sup>

Miscellaneous Charters and Contracts.

These documents have been printed from the Collections of the Honourable Harry Maule of Kelly, youngest son of George, second Earl of Panmure, by whom they were made, at various periods, between the years 1700 and 1730. In many cases, the transcripts were made from the original documents; and where the case was otherwise, the source whence the copy was derived is almost always given. It is to be regretted that these transcripts are not so accurate, in all respects, as could be desired; and that, in some cases, slight inaccuracies have occurred in printing the documents, by a too rigid adherence to the copy. The collection, however, is so curious and important, and the chance of getting access to the original papers belonging to so many different owners, for the purpose of collation, so small, that it was thought better to print the documents from Mr. Maule's copies, rather than run the risk of wanting them altogether. It will be seen that, besides other original Charters, the present Collection contains Documents from the Charter Chests of Lord Torphichen, Lord Gray, the Duke of Douglas, the Earl of Errol, Stirling of Keir, Lord Lovat, Lord Panmure, the Earl of Mar, Lord Elphinstone, Lord Pitsligo, Bishop Halyburton, and the Earl of Wigton.

No. XXXI. preserves to us a specimen of those numerous heritable hereditary offices which existed in feudal times, being a retour of the service of Alexander Lindsay, as heir of his father, Richard Lindsay, in the shop and office of blacksmith of the Lordship of Brechin, dated 29th April, 1514. By it the inquest, selected from the Barons of the Shire, reports, on oath, that the late Richard Lindsay and his forefathers were common smiths of the workshop of the Lordship of Brechin, and of good and laudable custom, had received for the said office hereditarily nine firlots of good meal of every plough and mill of the tenants of the following towns, viz.: Balnabroch, Kindrokat, Petpollocks, Pettinde, Hanch of Brechin, Brichtiemill, Pettintoschall, Balbirny, with the Mill of Kincaig and Loachland; and one fleeee of an old sheep yearly, of every one of the tenants of the said towns, for the working of a forge, by use and wont of the tenants; and also common pasturage, in the Long Haugh of Brechin, for two cows and a horse.

No. XXXII. is a Tack, dated 3rd Sept., 1521, by the Abbot and Convent of Cupar, to John Pylmoir and his wife and their heir male, for their lives, and to the survivor of them, of a toft, yard, and two crofts, and is principally remarkable for the traces which it presents of that spirit of improvement in the Convent, which has been remarked of their brethren at Kinloss about the same time.* The Tenants were “to pnt the said toft yard and crofts till all possibyl poliey in biggyn of gud and sufficiand yeird houses for haw, chawmerys, and stabuls to resave and herbry to the nowmer of xij. or xvi. horses, honestly as efferis for horse meit and manns meit, sua that of resoun thai be scin no falt in thaim; plantand frut tris . . . with their defensours; and thai soll keip gud nighburhed and the lands fra guld; and thai soll keip our medowis, wards, and broumerparks fra thaimself and thair catel under pain as efferis.”<sup>b</sup>

No. XXXV. is a Deed, by which Malcolm, Lord Fleming, founded and endowed the Collegiate Church of Biggar, and affords us a fair specimen of what was, for a time, the fashionable mode of development of the piety of the wealthier classes.

By it, with consent of the Archbishop of Glasgow, the Dean and Chapter of Glasgow, and, on the customary narrative of motives, his Lordship founded a College or Collegiate Church, dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, with endowments for a provost, eight canons or prebendaries, four choristers, and six poor men. The first prebendary was to be stiled the Prebendary of the Hospital of St. Leonard, and was to be master of the singing school, and instruct the boys of the said college, and others who might attend, in plain chant, pricksong, and disceant, and be skilled in playing the organ for divine service. The second prebendary was to be teacher of grammar, and be sufficiently instructed in grammar. The third prebendary was to be sacrist of the College. He was to ring the bells, light the candles on the high altar and the two aisles, and the altar of the crucifix. He was also to prepare the vestments and ornaments of these altars, and wash and clean them, and, when necessary, repair them ; and, after being thus washed and mended, he was to place them on the said altars, and cover them, as the season might require. This prebendary was also to furnish bread and wine for the celebration of mass at the College throughout the year. The fourth prebendary was to be the instructor of the poor in said College, and administrator of their food and other dues. The duties of the other prebendaries are not specified. The eighth was to be vicar pensionary of the said College Church, and, along with the others, was to make continual residence, and perform divine service in the choir, unless when he might be engaged in the administration of the sacraments to the parishioners. The four boys were to have shaven crowns, and to wear gowns of a blue colour,<sup>a</sup> like those worn by the singing boys of the metropolitan church of Glasgow. The six poor men, or beidmen, were to dwell in the hospital and garden founded for them. If possible, they were to be taken from the founder's Baronies of Bigar and the Lengze ; and each was to have, yearly, a white gown of woollen cloth, with a white hood, and were to be present daily at high mass, and all vespers sung in said Church ; and, after the founder's death, were to sit at his tomb, and that of his parents, and devoutly pray for the souls of the founder and his wife, and those of his forefathers and successors. An endowment is provided for each member of the foundation, besides which the provost and prebendaries were to have manses and gardens in a convenient place near to the Church. By order of the founder, the following round of religious services was to be observed by the members of his College. First, a mass of the blessed Virgin was to be said before the commencement of matins between six and seven o'clock, and that during the summer and winter seasons; high mass was to be sung daily after ten o'clock to the Gregorian Chant, or descant with music on the organ, as the season requires. Likewise a third mass to be said immediately after the consecration and elevation of the host at high mass. On every Monday a mass of requiem was to be sung for the souls of the founder, his wife and relations, and the faithful departed, as also on the greater double feasts commonly observed by the clergy and people. On Tuesday was to be sung, immediately after matins, a mass in honour of St. Anne, mother of the blessed Virgin. On Wednesday, at the same time, a mass in honour of St. Nicholas and St. Ninian. On Thursday, a mass in honour of the body of Christ. On Friday, the mass of the five wounds of Christ, and on Saturday, after matins, mass of the feast of the compassion of the blessed Virgin.<sup>a</sup> It was also enjoined on him who celebrated high mass that, immediately after the service was concluded, he should come to the founder's tomb, habited in his stole and alb, and say the Psalm de profundis, with the usual collects, prayers, and sprinkling of holy water. The prebends were required to make personal residence, and to perform the prescribed services in their habits—namely, clean linen surplices, with red hoods, trimmed with fur.

The founder of this religious institution was Malcolm, third

Lord Fleming, who succeeded his father in the family estates, and in the office of Great Chamberlain of Scotland, in the year 1524. After a life of active political service, he was slain at the Battle of Pinkie, on 10th September, 1547, while yet in the vigour of his manhood. Early in that year, which proved to be his last, he made his will, which is printed in No. XXXVI. of the Miscellaneous Contracts. This document contains a list, (with the value of each article) of his extensive moveable estate, which, however, formed but a small part of his wealth. He had been married to Joanna Stewart, a natural daughter of James IV.; and he ordains her “to be principall intromittar with all my guddis, moveabill and unmovabill,”<sup>a</sup> except “gif she maries, or uses ony man in marage, or by marage.” The following clause, in reference to the Collegiate Church of Biggar, and relative erections, shows that they had not yet been completed: “And I leif all vestinents that was indued to the Kirk of Biggar, and Colledge of the samin; and all other profits whilk belangs to themselves, as the erection of the Colledge bears, to the utility and profite of the samen, ay, and while the Kirk, College, aleemosineress, and mansion-house be beggit and putt

Birth Brieves.

The Selections printed under this title<sup>a</sup> have been made from a volume among the Records of the Burgh of Aberdeen, commencing in 1637, and coming down to the year 1705. During the above period, and especially during the reign of Charles I., many descendants of Aberdeenshire families settled in Sweden, Poland, and Russia. It generally happened that the settler in a foreign country was desirous of obtaining a certificate of his descent, by some recognised authority, with the view of establishing the fact in the eyes of strangers. The process seems to have consisted in the appearance of two or more friends before some of the Magistrates of Aberdeen, and giving oath to a statement of pedigree. The value of such certificates will be found to be very various. In some, the statement of the witnesses are distinct and coherent; but, in others, they consist of mere vague assertion. Their principal value consists in their preserving to us the names of many members of well-known families, and furnishing us with occasional incidental notices which are historically interesting.<sup>b</sup> was interrupted by the Reformation. “The Collegiate Church, which was that also of the parish, stood in the village of Biggar. It was built in the form of a cross, and is still in use.” “In the year 1555 the perpetual vicarage of the parish church of Saint Mary and Saint Bruoc, at Dunrod, was added to the endowments, at the instance of Master John Stevenson, precentor of Glasgow, vicar of Dunrod, and the first provost of our Lady College of Biggar, with consent of the patrons the canons regular of Holyrood, and of the ordinary of the diocese. The Bishop’s charter bears to be granted in consideration of the singular zeal and pious affection towards God and the Catholic Church, which were shewn in these unhappy days of Lutheranism, by a some time noble and mighty Lord, Malcom Lord Flemyng, who at his own charge built a stately church in the village of Biggar, dedicated to our Lady of the Assumption, and commonly called the College of Saint Mary of Biggar.” (Origines Parochiales, p. 133.)

These documents might be more accurately termed Attestations of Propinquity.

The Birth Brieves now printed are of the same class with the “Bore Brieve,” granted by the Scottish Parliament, in 1686, to Charles Colbert, Marquis of Seignelay, as

Missives to the Provost, Bailies, and Council of Aberdeen.

These documents have been selected from a large mass of official papers in the Town-House, relating to the affairs of the Burgh, which have been recently arranged.

The first is an order from King James VI., in which he intimates his intention of “being with ane army in theyse pairtes,” and desires the Magistrates that they “faill not to caus be maid reddy and preparit all kyndis of prouisions and viueris necessar for the interteanement of ws and our army.” The expense attending his Majesty’s reception will be found in the accounts printed in this volume,<sup>a</sup> from which it also appears that the Town was obliged to contribute some aid to the object which principally drew his Majesty to the North,—viz., the chastisement of the Earls of Errol and Huntly: “Item, to Robert Stewart, for tuentie stane weyght of pulder, furneist be him to the toun, to the dounecasting of Strathbogie and Slanis, 213 lib. 6s. 8d.” “Item, gevin to John Frasser, measone, and uthir measonis, craftsmen, and pionaris with him, for thair expensis in being at the dounecasting of Strathbogie and Slanis, 86 lib.”<sup>b</sup>

No. IV. is a Petition from the Burgh to his Majesty, setting forth that they had recently become bound not to have any inter-a descendant of the Cuthberts of Castlehill, near Inverness, and as a connection of all the more ancient families of Scotland. The Preamble in the Parliamentary warrant for the Bore Brieve recites the reasons for its being granted, and the same motives might be alleged by the parties requiring our Birth Briefes.

course with the Earl of Huntly, “and now the said Erll being retnurit within this realme, and in conference with the Presbiterie of Abirdene, quhilk is kept within our burgh, for his reconciliatioun to the kirk, we, for feir of incurring of your Maiestatis wraith, . . . dar na resett him within oure burgh, and hes alreddy refusid to grant him any resett or supplie within the same.” “And seing it is luiked for be all men that the said Erll sall conforme himself to all things quhilk sal be requirit of him, and sall obtene himselff relaxt fra the sentence of excommunication,” they therefore entreated to be released from their Bond, and their request was conditionally granted by the License in their favour being No. V. of the Missives. The result justified the expectation of the Magistrates, as appears from the “Forme of the Erle of Huntlie receaving to the Church,”<sup>a</sup> described in a letter from Mr. T. Mollison to “his gossop, Mr. R. Paip, aduocat, befoir the Lordis,” 28th June, 1597, and some entries in the accounts printed in this volume furnish us with the expense of the proceedings adopted on that occasion, and seem to justify Mr. Mollisone’s remark in winding up his account, that “at ewin nathing but wauchting.” “For sex quartis wyne to ministrat the sacrament of the Lordis Supper, quhen the Erlis of Huntlye and Erroll war absoluit of their excommunication, 4 lib. 16s. In No. XII. and XIII. will be found a few scraps of information from Provost Alexander Jaffray, dated from the Hague in April and May, 1648. Jaffray was one of the Commissioners appointed by Parliament to treat with Charles II., and the state of matters which he records will hardly allow us to wonder that the conference was attended with no substantial result.

Jaffray was despatched on the same mission in the subsequent year, but in his diary he afterwards records his regret for sharing in these transactions. "We did sinfully both entangle the nation and ourselves, and that poor young prince, making him sign and swear a Covenant which we knew he hated in his heart; where I must confess, to my apprehension, our sin was more than his. I had so clear convictions of this that I spoke of it to the King myself, desiring him not to subscribe the Covenant if in his conscience he was not satisfied."

By the Act of the Scottish Parliament, sentencing the great Marquis of Montrose to be hanged and quartered, it was decreed that "one lyge and foote" of their unfortunate victim should be placed on the "porte of Aberdeine."<sup>a</sup> It appears that a hand of the murdered Marquis had been substituted, and that when Charles II. visited the Burgh in 1650, it was sticking on a pinnacle of the Tolbooth, opposite to which the Monarch lodged on that occasion.<sup>b</sup> Sometime prior to the Restoration this member of the Marquis was taken down and interred in the Church of St. Nicholas, and now when that event had occurred, it was disinterred, and amid a concourse of citizens, "in ther best armes," was carried to the Town-House with sound of trumpet and beat of drum, there to remain till orders should be received for carrying the limb to Edinburgh,<sup>c</sup> thus anticipating, as it were, on a small scale, in the one member the splendid pageant which witnessed the final and, as it has been termed, "the true funerals of Montrose," in the Cathedral Church of St. Giles soon afterwards.

No XVII. is a Letter from the second Marquis of Montrose, in which he thanks the Provost and Magistrates "for their having witht much solemnitie reased that member of my father's which was erected in your cittie," and desires them to deliver the same to the lairds of Morphie and Fintrie, or to any having ther warrant."

No. XVIII. is a Letter from the Laird of Fintrie, dated 9th April, 1661, giving authority to the bearer of it to receive the dismembered hand, which had been resting in the Town-House for about six weeks.

Documents relating to Orkney and Shetland.

These documents (with the exception of No. I., which is now in the General Register House, Edinburgh,) are in the possession of George Petrie, Esquire, Clerk of Supply at Kirkwall, by whom they were kindly communicated to the Editor, and will be found to contain various points of interest connected with the ancient his-

the Magistrats and Counsell, and with the inhabitants of the toun going before in armes to the Toun's publent house with sound of trumpet and beat of drum, ther to be kept under custodie of the Magistrats in the hieh Counsell Hous, till such tyme as order suld be sent for transporting theroff, and appoints the inhabitants to discharge their guns, and shoot volies at and about the mercat croce at their comeing therunto, and delyverie of the said member to the Magistrats. (Council Register, vol. liv., 248-9.)

tory of Orkney, and the usages of its inhabitants. The Members will be pleased to receive the following remarks on the subject, prepared by Mr. Petrie at the request of the Editor:—

The Attestations and Decrees of the Lawmen of Orkney go far to illustrate the nature and mode of administration of the ancient laws of the Islands; and, as most of their early records have been destroyed or lost, these documents are now the more valuable.

The Islands of Orkney and Zetland were for many centuries under the dominion of Norway, and were governed by its laws and usages. In 1468, on the marriage of James III. of Scotland with Margaret, daughter of Christian I. of Denmark, these Islands were mortgaged to Scotland by the Danish King, in security of his daughter's dowry; but it was expressly stipulated that their ancient laws and customs were to be maintained inviolable. This important condition was specially referred to in subsequent leases and grants of the Islands by the Scottish Government, and in 1567 it was declared by the Estates of Parliament that Orkney and Zetland should be subject to "yair awin lawis," and not to "ye comone law of yis realme." Even in the times of Earls Robert and Patrick Stewart, the maintenance of the "cuntry lawis" and usages, which was enjoined in their charters, was generally observed by them, although too often rendered subservient to their own avaricious purposes. It was not until the year 1611, that the Privy Council, taking advantage of the charge of oppression and tyranny against Earl Patrick Stewart, made it a pretext for "discharging" and annulling the ancient laws, and substituting for them the laws of Scotland, in direct violation of the conditions of the mortgage.

Although there is now no copy existing of the primitive code, yet there is sufficient evidence to show that the laws were, both in their nature and administration, characterized by great simplicity, and differed essentially from those of Scotland. One important feature in them was the law of heritage, which provided that, on the death "of ony landit man haveand land within the said cuntrey, . . . the haill landis and heritage appertaninge to him in his lyftyme, immediately after his deceis, war equallie and lauchfullie (to be) divydit amangis his haill bairnis, als-well sones as dochteris, comptand alwayis twa sistars partis for ane brotheris pairt; and being sua divydit, the eldest brother (to have) na farder prerogative aboue the rest of his brother, except the first choise of the pairtis and parellis of the landis divydit."<sup>a</sup>

The book which contained the ancient laws was called "the Law Buik," and reference is made to it in several manuscripts still extant. It is probable, however, that the "Law Buik" was not a mere transcript of the laws, as has been often supposed; but that it also comprised a Register of the Decrees of the Lawmen. It appears, in short, to have been the Record of Court, containing a copy of the "cuntry lawis," to which the Lawman and the Rothismen or Assize were enabled at once to refer. This may be inferred from a Decree, dated 27th April, 1509, fixing the Marches between two conterminous properties, in which "the Lawman of Orkney, and the wirstiest and best of ye landgoderytt, landytt men, and Roythismen, fyndis be ye laurbuik, ye dyk steith yt strekis fra ye nether dale of Saba to ye march stane att standis att ye sowith wast end of Meissengere wass, is, and sall be meyrch,"<sup>a</sup> &c. In this case, the Marches seem to have been judicially ascertained on a former occasion, and a record of the facts preserved in the "Law Buik," to which reference was made by the Lawman at the date of the "finding" above quoted.

The jurisdiction of the Lawman, at least subsequent to the mortgage of the Island, extended over Orkney and Zetland—a substitute, with the designation of Head Fold or Foud, being appointed to act in Zetland in the absence of the Lawman. There were also the "Roythismen," or "Rothismen," who acted as Assessors in the Head Court or Lawting. Each Parish also had a Sub-Foud, who held Courts, and maintained order in his district, in which he was assisted by the Lawrightmen or Laerichmen. The decisions of the Sub-Foud were subject to review in the Lawting or Head Court, in which the Lawman presided.

The Lawting was held at stated periods, at Kirkwall in Orkney, and at Tyngwall in Zetland; and the Decree of the Lawman in 1510,<sup>b</sup> and other existing documents show that the Sub-Fouds and Lawrightmen also sat in the Lawting, along with the Lawman and Rothismen.

But there is a circumstance respecting the district or Sub-Foudry Courts, which is peculiarly interesting as connecting them with the standing stones.

In some of the Parishes and Islands a single standing stone is still seen in a central or commanding position. It may be difficult or impossible now to ascertain the purpose for which these large undressed blocks of stone were originally erected. It may have been to commemorate a victory, or to point out the spot where a warrior fell, or the ashes of a chief were interred. But, although their earlier history is shrouded in mystery, yet it is very interesting to know that in later times these standing stones became the places of public resort, where the Sub-Foudry Courts were held, and intimations relative to sales of lands and similar transactions were given, with the same view to publicity that similar intimation are now made at market-crosses and church-doors. Evidence of this curious circumstance is found in manuscripts discovered in Kirkwall about four years ago.

Thus, in a “Dome dempt at Kirkwall, on Tuesday, in the Lawting,” in June, 1514, by “Nicoll Haw, Lawman of Zetland and Orkney for the tyme,” affirming a sale of land by Nicol Fraser or Frysell, which was challenged by his brother, Alexander Fraser, it is stated, that the “said Nicol diver and syndrie tymis come to the said Alexander, and offerit him the bying of all and baill his rychtis and his fatheris heritag befor ony utheris, and he refusit it all tymis;<sup>a</sup> and, thaireafter, he come before the best and wirthiest in the cuntry, and diuers and sindrie tymis in courtis and heid stanes.<sup>b</sup> Again, it is stated in another MS., dated at Kirkwall, 1st May, 1550, that, “scin it meritable is to furthschaw ye veritie quhair-throw ye hyding thairoff generis prejudice, harm, and skaith to ye righteous. Than it is yat I, ye forsaid Edward to . . . makke knawin yt I and my spouses, Jonet of Ska, quhom God assoilzie, at tyng and stein diuerss days and yeris in the burght of Kirkwall, and in to landwardt quhair it effeirit, we maid it knawin yat Barnard of Kamsto and his aris had tayne and violentlie possedit four merkis land, and ane half wt ye profeits yir mony zeris pertaining to my said wyffis mother, Katheren of Papley,”<sup>c</sup> &c. And, in a third manuscript, or rather a fragment of one, which appears to have been the minutes of a Sub-Foudry or Bailie Court, held in the parish of Ssnt Andrews, the preamble runs thus—“Ane staine haldin at Tankarnes.”<sup>d</sup> The only part of the date which remains is the words, “fyfty iii zeris;” but it is probable that it was 1553. Now these extracts go to prove that, while the intimation of the sale of lands was made in Kirkwall, in the “Tyng” or Head Court, it was also necessary, when the property lay in a landward parish, to give notice of the seller’s intention at the stein, in the parish in which the lands were situated. And, although it may be said that the “staine,” as shown by the last extract, simply meant the Sub-Foudry Court of the parish, yet this makes it all the more evident that these Courts had at least formerly been held at the standing stone or Heid Stane, and that the one was so associated with the other, that a “Court” and a “Staine” became synonymous terms.

<sup>a</sup> “There was also another important udal law, for the due execution of which the foudre of each parish was made responsible. No one could sell land, unless upon most urgent claims of poverty, or unless the land was first offered to the nearest of the seller’s kindred; a right of redemption remaining for them a considerable period after the sale had been effected.” Dr. Hibbert, on the Tings of Orkney and Shetland, apud Archæolog., Scot. vol. iii., p. 171, where he quotes the law book of Norway. “Will a man sell his odal-land? Then shall he summon all the odal-horn (his kindred) and notify to them that he is to sell such odal-land, making them the first offer, if they will buy, and have no impediment, such as the want of money, and the like; also, he shall proclaim, or cause to be proclaimed, in the public market, that he is to sell such odal-land, and shall again offer it to his own kindred, the odal-horn, whether known or unknown; but first to those who stand in nearest degree of relation to him, whether male or female, that so the affair may come to their knowledge, even though they should not be there present.”—[ED.]

It has been remarked as a curious circumstance, that the Attestation by the Lawman of Orkney,<sup>a</sup> which is dated in 1438, should be conceived in the Scottish language at a period thirty years before the transference of Orkney to the Scottish dominion, but it doubtless had happened that Scotch colonization had been gradually leavening the Norse element for some time previous to this event.

It may be well to refer at this place to No. XVIII. of the "Miscellaneous Charters and Contracts"<sup>b</sup> printed from the Panmure Transcript, as bearing on a point of Orkney history. The document, which is dated 10th Nov., 1422, bears to be an attestation by the Lawman of Orkney, two canons of the Church of St. Magnus, and four burgesses of Kirkwall of the descent and good name of James of Cragy, laird of Hupe. It is there set forth that the said James of Cragy was married to Margaret, daughter of Elizabeth of Stratherne, by Henry Sinclair, sometime Earl of Orkney, and that the said Elizabeth was a daughter of the late Malise of Stratherne, formerly Earl of Orkney.

About twenty-four years after the date of this Instrument there was prepared a "Diploma, or Deduction, concerning the genealogies of the ancient Counts of Orkney, from their first creation to the fifteenth century, drawn up from the most authentic records by Thomas, Bishop of Orkney, with the assistance of his clergy and others, in consequence of an order from Eric, King of Denmark, to investigate the right of William Sinclair to the Earldom."<sup>c</sup> In this Diploma it is stated that Malise, Earl of Stratherne, succeeded to the Earldoms of Orkney and Shetland as lawful heir, apparently of his mother, Farther, that Malise first married a daughter of the Earl of Menteith, by whom he had a daughter, Matilda, who was married to Weiland [but more probably Robert] de Ard, the father of Alexander de Ard: That Alexander de Ard succeeded Earl Malise in the principal messuage of the Earldom of Caithness including the title, together with lands in Orkney, and that he disposed of the Earldom of Caithness to King Robert II. It is there also stated that Earl Malise took for his second wife a daughter of Hugh, Earl of Ross, by whom he had four daughters, of whom the eldest was married to Sir William Sinclair; the second to Uere Ginsill of Swethick; the third, with a certain person, "Gothurno le Spere," and the fourth died without heirs. Sir William Sinclair, it is added, had by his marriage with the eldest daughter a son, Sir Henry Sinclair, who made certain agreements with Haco, King of Norway, and enjoyed thereby the Earldom of Orkney.

The point of difference between the two Deeds arises thus: In the Diploma it is stated that it was Sir William Sinclair to whom one of the four daughters of Earl Malise de Stratherne, sometime Earl of Orkney, was married, while in the Attestation to James of Cragy it is stated, that Elizabeth, daughter of the said Malise, was married to Sir Henry Sinclair, also sometime Earl of Orkney. If this last statement is correct, it would then appear that Sir Henry's claim to the Earldom, when he obtained the title from King Haco, was in right of his wife, and not, as has been generally stated, in right of his mother.

The whole subject of the succession, however, is obscure, and it is difficult to adjust satisfactorily all the facts which have been ascertained from different sources.

The Attestation to James of Cragy also furnishes us with a Bishop of Orkney hitherto unnoticed. It appears, from various documents, that there was a Bishop John, in 1397, and the next prelate who is mentioned is Thomas de Tulloch, whom we find flourishing in 1422. The Attestation takes notice of a Bishop Patrick, who must have come to the See between the above Bishops, John and Thomas; and it refers to his canonical title, and the many disturbances and injuries which he suffered during his incumbency, in all which he received the firm support of James of Cragy.

No. VI. is a curious missive to Torquil M'Leod from Queen Mary, dated at Inverary, 23d July, 1563. By it, after referring to a report, that “sum of the Ilis ar desirous to haue you allyat to thame be mareage;” she adds, “and becaus ye haue that honor to be of the Stewarth blude, we thocht expedient to gif you advertisement that it is our will and plesheur that ye allyat yourself to na party in mareage without our advyss, and quhill we declar our opinioun and mynd to yourself thairin.”<sup>a</sup>

The following statement by Gregory, in his “History of the Western Highlands and Isles”<sup>b</sup> serves to explain the relationship which gave to Torquil M'Leod a tincture of the “Stewarth blude,” as well as his share in the stormy fortunes and early death which distinguished so many members of that Royal House. “Roderick of Ruari Macleod, the Baron of Lewis, and heir male of his ancient house, was first married to Janet, daughter of John M'Kenzie of Kintail. The alleged issue of this marriage was a son, Torquil,—afterwards, from his residence among his mother's relations in Stratheonnan, surnamed Connanach. The Lady of Lewis, however, having eloped with John M'Gillechallum of Rasay, chieftain of a powerful branch of the Siol Torquil, was divorced by her husband, who, at the same time, disowned and disinherited Torquil Connanach, alleging that the latter was not his son, but the son of the Breve or Celtic Judge of the Lewis. Ruari Macleod married secondly, in 1541, Barbara Stewart, daughter of Andrew Lord Avondale, and by this lady had a son, likewise named Torquil, and surnamed Oighre, or the Heir, to distinguish him from Torquil Connanach. The latter being supported by the Mackenzies, a feud between the two clans was the result. Nor did the quarrel thus begun end, but with the total destruction of the family of Lewis. Sometime in or before the year 1566, Torquil Oighre, a young chief of great promise, was, with many of his attendants, drowned in a tempest when sailing from Lewis to Sky. As he left no male issue, this event gave fresh spirit to the supporters of Torquil Connanach and to that individual himself, who had now married a daughter of the Laird Glengarry." The letter of Queen Mary must have been addressed to Torquil Oighre shortly before his death.

No. 1.

REMARKS ON THE LAW OF THE BURGHS CONCERNING DELIVERY OF LANDS WITHIN BURGH.

BY P. CHALMERS, Esq. OF ALDBAR.

"Per illam legem burgorum per quam dicitur," &c. In accordance with that law of the Burghs, by which it is said, "let delivery of lands in Burghs be made with charters and outcry," "cum cartis et clamore."

These words are not found in any of the 'Leges Burgorum' of Scotland; and, therefore, we must look elsewhere for their explanation. These Burgh laws, however, by no means afford a complete code of Scotch burgal law, even as it existed at the date of their compilation; perhaps this collection may be more in the nature of rules of law and practice, deduced from decisions of the court of Four Burghs on questions arising before it, together with additions and alterations suggested by experience, or rendered necessary by increasing extent and complexity of transactions; drawing largely too from England and France, the substratum being the common law, of which there was probably no written text in any of the countries.

But the explanation of the words in question may perhaps be found in "La clameur des Lignagers" of the consuetudinary law of Normandy. This custom is supposed by Houard,* who illustrated the Norman Law by that of England and Scotland, to have arisen in the 12th century, to meet the inconvenience that must have flowed from the inalienability of Burgal land and heritage (heirship), which could only be sold on proof of extreme poverty, if, indeed, it could have been sold at all before that date. In heritage were included the principal tools used in the trade of a burgess, and certain articles of his household furniture; the buildings on the land of a burgess were generally laid out to suit the wants of his particular calling, and as this calling was usually (if not necessarily, by law) hereditary, descending from father to son, and as his family was bound to support him in sickness, in poverty, and in old age, so the law provided that the land and heritage should not be alienated from the family; and, therefore, gave to this the right, up to the seventh degree of kindred inclusive, to reclaim, from a purchaser, that land or heritage if sold. If there were no limit in time, as there seems to have been none, to the exercise of this right, it followed that no purchaser could be assured of a valid title to his purchase. The 'clameur des Lignagers' met this by providing, that a burgess desiring to sell his land or heritage, should give notice of his intention to do so at three successive 'placita' or courts of the Burgh, held at intervals of fifteen days; and, having proved extreme poverty,* should call his kindred (lignagers) to appear for their interest, and should offer the property to them. If no objections were made, the court named a day for the sale, to which the kindred were cited; the sale was made in the presence of the Mayor or the chief Magistrate, along with twelve notable men or councillors† ('échevins') specially summoned; the proceedings at the three courts were recited, proof being given that the notices of sale, and offers of the property to the kindred, had been duly made; the property was again offered to the kindred, and if no claimant appeared, the sale was made and proclaimed. If the sale so made were not challenged within year and day, by one having right, the purchaser's title was completed, and could not afterwards be disturbed by the kindred, except on proof of fraud or collusion in the sale. In Winchester there seems to have been a special seal with which charters of feofment were sealed, or countersealed, by the Alderman (in whose custody they had remained) on expiry of year and day without challenge, and after three days notice given.

There can be little doubt that the right of reclamation and redemption by kindred, was common to the Burgh laws of England and Scotland, as well as of Normandy; but Houard is of opinion that it did not exist in any of them before the 12th century, because it is not found in the laws of William the Conqueror,

* In Scotland, proof of poverty was not required in the sale of conquest land in burgh; the offer to the kindred was sufficient in this case; but it is probable that the exception was made at a later date.

† In Normandy, twelve councillors ('échevins'): but in Scotland they seem to have been twelve neighbours, four from either side of the tenement, and four dwelling opposite to it: at least, these are required for preliminary proof of poverty, without which there could be no sale. Leg. Burg. c. xi., Skene; evii, apud Acta Parl. (Thomson's Acts.) See also the latter, App. v., p. 336, "De eaysina in burgo," according to the law and assise of King David, A.D. 1169; but David died in 1153. William came to the throne in 1165; the Scots version omits the year.

* Archaeological Journal, No. 33, pp. 80, 89, where there is a drawing of the seal.

nor in the law of Normandy of his time, the only ‘retraits’ traceable then being ‘le feudal’ and ‘le conventionnel,’ but he finds traces of it in the laws of the Scotch Burghs,* compiled at a later date. On this supposition, burgage land would, before the 12th century, have, on alienation, escheated to the King, under la clamour feodale, or to the community as holding intermediately between the king and the individual burgesses; probably to the former, because the rents of the perticatus (parvi redditus)† were paid to him.

The mode of proceeding in clamour des lignagers, simple at first, and without writing, as is shown‡ in the provision for proof in case of the death of all who had been present, gradually came to be encumbered with the formalities of charters, precepts of sasine, notarial instruments, and minute observances, varying with the particular circumstances of the transaction, and eventually, perhaps, took the shape of the well-known forms of later times. Is it too much to suppose that we see, in the present case, the law or practice in a state of transition, when the two modes of transferring land in Burghs may have co-existed, one before an assize, without writing, the other still retaining the presence of the assize, as essential to the validity of transfer, but accompanied with the delivery of a written charter in its presence, “eum cartis et clamore in traditione terrarum in burgis.”

The claim itself, which has given occasion to these remarks, is one of redemption by next of kin, but is encumbered with specialties. Stripped of these it is as follows:—A, claiming to be heir of B, asserts her right to a tenement of land of which C is in possession in security for a sum of money lent to B; C’s only title being corporeal institution, following on a personal (?) bond (literas obligatorias). To avoid litigation, C agrees to pay a certain sum to A, on condition that she conveys to him all right that she has, or pretends to, in the tenement in question. In order that A may carry out this agreement, it is necessary that she should prove her burgess descent, and that she is of lawful age (15 years) according to the Burgh laws of Scotland, to enable her to sell the lands. Also, that she should offer the tenement to her next of kin, at three several courts (placita) of the Burgh, held at intervals of fifteen days. Here D and E appear, claiming to be of kin.

* Leg. Burg. Skene, cap. ix, xi, xxiii, xlvi, xcvi, c, cxxvii. See also clep, a call, a form of claim in criminal causes—Skene de Verborum Significatione. Also, the second statutes of King Robert the First, chap. xx, 7, “Item, it is to wit, that this is the forme in discharging of poynds, that the debitor shall have his cattell poyned, or anie other poynd restored to him, and the probation readie at hand, with clep and call,” (clamore)—Regiam Majestalem, Skene. Translation, Reprint, Edin. 1774, p. 363.

† The parvi redditus were payable to the King, and each burgess owed the King such suit and service as was due from a perticatus of land; but as a burgess could obtain possession of land within burgh without a writ from the King’s Chancery, but on institution by the bailie of the burgh, it may be inferred that the community held intermediately between the King and the individual burgess. These parvi redditus were compounded for in the reign of David II. for a certain annual sum, fixed for ever, payable by the burgh.

‡ Leg. Burg. cxxvii, Skene.

It is found that D is not of kin of the blood; but E is declared to be A's next of kin, and being offered the tenement on condition of paying to C the money he had lent upon it, together with that he had agreed to pay to A (and, also, to take the burden of her support during life, if he should take the property?) renounces all right or claim. None other of kin appearing, A demands that C shall be put in possession, in tertius of her charter granted to him. On this, the Bailies rise in court and proceed along with the assize to the tenement, and there, causing the charter to be read, sasine is given to C in the usual form, in presence of the assise, “vicinitate congregata testante.” A then delivers her charter to C, (putting an end to the process of litigation,) according to that law of the Burghs, by which it is said, “cum eartis et clamore in traditione terrarum in burgis,” with charters and outcry in delivery of lands in burghs.

C then offers to E, as next of kin to A, the option of redeeming the land on repayment within one year of the sums he had paid to B and A.

In the Register of the Bishoprie of Glasgow, there are two instances of the offer to kindred of burgal tenements within the Bishops Burgh, previous to sale, thus confirmatory, so far, of the statement that the great lords, ecclesiastic and lay, speedily followed the King's example in extending the privileges of their burgesses; for Houard holds that this droit des lignagers does not belong to burgage tenure proper, but is a privilege granted to burgesses, distinguishing between burgage tenure and burgess rights (bourgage et bourgeoisie), a want of attention to which distinction had, he says, led the reformers of the Norman law into much confusion.

These Glasgow charters* are found under the reigns of Alexander III., and Queen Margaret, being of earlier date than the present case. In both instances the sale is preceded by proof of poverty on the testimony of credible and sufficient men (of burgess rank?) and is made with the express consent of the seller's next heir. In the first it is probable that the intention to sell had been opposed by some party, for the offer of the lands to the next relations and friends (propinquioribus parentibus meis et amieis†) is made in the court of Glasgow at the three principal plaicita (head courts of the Burgh) of the year, as well as at other plaicita according to the law and custom of the Burgh. Sasine is given in presence of the Provosts and Bailies of Glasgow, and of twelve burgesses, and others of the said city. In the second case, the sale follows the third offering in three courts (plaicitis) of the Burgh, “ut moris est,” and the seller and his heir bind themselves by oath, and bind their heirs, to pay a penalty of one hundred shillings sterling towards the repair of the Church of Glasgow, (fabricæ ecclesiæ) if they shall attempt to set aside the sale.

Do we see our upset price and sale by roup in this offering of property to the kindred of the seller? The primary meaning of roup is, to shout, to cry aloud, and Cotgrave translates the French “vendre à l'encant” by “to sell by Port-salut, or out-rope,” and “Incant as Encant; an out-crie of goods.” Outcry is still used in some parts of England and Ireland in this sense, as is uit-roepen in some of the northern languages. Uitroep in Dutch, proclamation, publication; “Jets bij openbaaren uitroep verkoopen,” to sell anything by public sale.

(Lois des François. Tom 1.)

“DANS les Loix de Guillaume le Conquerant, on ne voit d’ autre Retrait admis que le féodal ou le conventionnel. On peut donc assurer que le lignager n’ existoit point de son temps en France ni en Normandie. En effet, quoique Charlemagne eût défendu, par la Loi des Saxons, d’ aliener son bien avant de l’ avoir offert à ses proches; ni ses Capitulaires, ni les loix de ses Successeurs ne contiennent rien qui ait rapport au droit de Retrait. Marculphe même, dans différentes Formules, dispense de la tradition des parens pour la validité des donations. Mais en consultant les Loix des Bourgs d’ Ecosse, lesquelles ont été tirées du Droit Coutumier Anglois, il me paraît qu’ on peu fixer l’ époque et déterminer le motif de l’ usage du Retrait lignager, tel que nous pratiquons encore. L’ établissement des bourgeoisie a en pour bût, en France comme en Angleterre, d’ étendre le commerce, d’ affoiblir l’ autorité des Seigneurs. Il convenoit donc que les possessions fussent, dans les Villes, plus stables et plus indépendantes que celles que les Seigneurs donnaient en Fief. Les fonds qu’ un pere de famille acquéroit dans la ville où il avoit obtenu le droit de Bourgeoisie, étoient batis et distribués selon les besoins de la profession qu’ il exerceoit. Perpétuer ces fonds dans les familles, c’ étoit conséquemment le moyen le plus sûr d’ engager ceux qui la composoient à se livrer tous au même genre de travail; et comme, par une suite de cette idée, un Bourgeois ne pouvoit disposer de son mobilier, sans réservr à ses heritier ou à ses enfans, les principaux outils et ustensiles de son métier et du ménage; de même, il n’ avoit la liberté d’ aliener sa maison que dans le cas de nécessité, et lorsqu’ aucun de ses parens ne vouloit lui procurer la subsistance et l’ entretien. La loi du Retrait est donc une loi de Bourgage dans les pays coutumiers de France, et en particulier dans la Normandie, et à proportion de ce que les Villes se sont multipliées dans une une Province, cette loi a dû avoir plus de vogue.”

Anciennes Loix des François, conservées dans les Coutumes Anglaises, recueillies par Littleton, &c. Par M. Houard, Avocat au Parlement, &c. &c. Tome premier, p. 256, 4to, Rouen, 1779.

“Nous avons cru devoir distinguer les clamours d’ avec les retraits, et sous ce dernier mot, traiter des retraits faits de biens échus aux possesseurs par succession sous celui de elameur, il ne sera donc parlé que du droit qu' ont les Seigneurs sur les lignagers d' expoprier un possesseur de fouds ou de rentes qu' il a acheté.

L' origine des elameurs prises en ce dernier sens doit être fixée au douzième siècle ; ce fut alors que les Bourgeoises des Villes s' établirent, pour accroître cet établissement, si propre à affoiblir l' autorité des Seigneurs, il convenoit que les possessions fussent dans les Villes affranchies du vasselage, et plus stables, et plus indépendantes qu' elles ne l' étoient dans les Seigneuries. De là les fonds qu' un pere de famille acquérait dans une Ville, devant passer à ses enfants qui ordinairement exerceoient sa même profession, étoient bâti et distribués selon les besoins de cette profession ; et il étoit de l' équité que le Bourgeois n' en disposât pas, ni de ses principaux outils en faveur d' étrangers sans nécessité, et tant que ses enfants ne lui refusoient point les besoins et les commodités de la vie.

Quand les Seigneurs, à l' instar des Souverains, eurent établis des bourgeois dans leurs terres, pour prévenir la totale émigration de leurs vassaux, ils admirent aussi la elameur ou revendication des alienations en faveur des parents de leurs hommes, et ils ne se réservèrent le retour des fonds vendus qu' a défaut des lignagers qui en reprissoient la possession ; les formalités des elameurs pour les lignagers étoient extrêmement simples.

Le propriétaire declaroit dans trois plaidis successifs du Bourg ou de la Ville où les fonds étoient assis, plaidis que se tenoient de 15 jours en 15 jours, qu' il étoit déterminé à vendre ; il faisoit sommer ses parents de s'y trouver ; s' ils ne comparoisoient pas, la vente s' effectuoit, l' aquareur entroit en possession en présence de douze Echevins et du juge majeur ou Maire, et après l' an et jour expiré, sa propriété étoit à l' abri de toute réclamation. Si, postérieurement à ce délai, quelque parent troublloit l' aquareur, il étoit obligé d' établir la fraude : par exemple que l' héritage n' avoit pas été légalement proposé à la famille.

On ne distinguoit donc alors que deux sortes des elameurs, la lignagère et la féodale. Depuis se sont introduites celles à droit conventionnel et à droit de lettre luc."

Houard, Dictionnaire de la Coutume de Normandie. Tom 1. p. 242, 4to, Rouen, 1780.

In illustration of the right of reclamation by kindred, I may mention that in conversation with a member of the Odelsthing of Norway, some years ago, I was told that the Odal lands in that country might, if sold, be reclaimed from the purchaser or his successors by any of the kindred of the seller, whether through male or female line, (heirs whatsoever) at any time on repayment of the original purchase money, so that the more such lands were improved, the greater became the temptation to the kindred of the seller to reclaim them. He himself had known lands to be so reclaimed after having been held by descendants of the purchaser through several generations. Attempts had been made in the Storthing to open such lands to commerce, but, up to that time, without success. A purchaser who was of kin to the seller might, however, obtain a valid title; probably by some such proceeding as we see in this case. Instances of sale of Odal lands in Orkney and Shetland, may be seen in the printed collection of "Deeds relating to Orkney and Zetland, 1433 to 1581." Number XIII. of that collection is a charter of Opgestrie in which a woman and her husband make choice of certain of their bairns in whose favour they resign their lands, on condition of their receiving maintenance for life. Opgestrie* was the resignation or transfer of Odal lands to one's kindred, on condition of being lodged, fed, clothed, and otherwise taken care of during life.

Much light may probably be thrown on the ancient burgh or town (villa) laws of Europe by a careful study of the laws and customs of the village communities still subsisting in India, some of which societies bear so close a resemblance to those of our Saxon ancestors as to make it certain that their laws are derived from a common origin. It is to be hoped that Mr. Campbell, who has lately given us such interesting information on the subject, may be induced to treat it more fully than he had occasion to do in his recent publication†; showing in what parts of India the system exists in its greatest purity, and its modifications in different parts of that wide country, and making patent to the public some of the hidden knowledge contained in 'Blue-books'.

It is necessary that I should apologise for having ventured at all upon the foregoing remarks on a subject with which I have so little acquaintance.—P. C.

ON SCHOLASTIC OFFICES IN THE SCOTTISH CHURCH IN THE TWELFTH AND THIRTEENTH CENTURIES.

It is proposed to show, by the incidental light of contemporary charter and chronicle, that three offices or grades of a scholastic kind—the Scoloe, the Master of the Schools, and the Ferleiginn—obtained in the ancient Scottish Church, and survived the great civil and ecclesiastical revolution which was begun by St. Margaret, and followed out, but not completed, by the three Kings, her sons.

I. THE SCOLOC.

The lowest order was that of the Scoloe. We are happily not left to conjecture the meaning of the name. A writer of the twelfth century, Reginald of Durham, sometimes also called Reginald of Coldingham, takes occasion, in his lively ‘Book of the Miracles of St. Cuthbert,’ to relate certain incidents which befel the famous St. Aelred of Rievaux, in the year 1164, during a journey into Pictland—that is, Galloway, it would seem, or perhaps, more generally, the provinces of Scotland lying to the south of the Forth and the Clyde. The saintly Abbot happened to be at ‘Cuthbrietic Khirebe,’ or Kirkeudbright, as it is now called, on the feast-day of its great patron. A bull, the marvel of the parish for his strength and ferocity, was dragged to the church, bound with cords, to be offered as an alms and oblation to St. Cuthbert. ‘The clerks of the church,’ says Reginald, ‘the Seolofthes, as they are called in the Pictish speech,* irreverently proposed that the bull should be baited in the churchyard. It was in vain that the elder and wiser of their number remonstrated against the profanity. ‘There is no Cuthbert here,’ was the scoffing

* The words of the original are: ‘clericci illi, qui in ecclesia illa commorantur, qui Pictorum lingua Seolofthes cognominantur.’ If Reginald of Durham had chanced to be disinterred before the Pictish controversy wore itself out, these words might have become as famous as the passage in Bede, ‘qui sermone Pictorum Peanfaehl appellatur,’ which led to the memorable strife between Sir Arthur Wardour and the Laird of Monkbarns.

answer, ‘nor is this a place to show his power, for all his stone chapel.’ With this the speaker unbound the bull, and began to bait him with the rest. The sequel need scarcely be told. The bull broke loose, and rushed upon his assailants, but hurt no one ‘except only the scholar aforesaid (praedictum scolasticum solummodo).’ This would be enough of itself to show that Reginald, or his informant, St. Aelred, understood ‘the clerks’ or ‘scollofthes’ of Kirkeudbright, to be ‘scholars.’ But, as if to place his meaning beyond doubt, he inscribes the chapter with the rubric ‘Of a certain Pictish scholar (de scholastico quodam Pictorum), who rashly broke the peace of St. Cuthbert’s cemetery, by a bull-bait upon St. Cuthbert’s day; and of the retribution which beset him.’*

The use of ‘scholar’ or ‘scolasticus’ in the sense of an ecclesiastical ‘clerk,’ was by no means peculiar to Scotland. Du Cange has collected abundant instances of such a meaning. ‘Scholars in country churches (scholares in ecclesiis ruralibus)’, he says, ‘were commonly called clerks (clericis).’ ‘Clerks (clericis) were vulgarly styled scholars (scholares).’ He quotes a capitulary of Charlemagne to show their office. ‘Let priests have their scholars (scholarios) so trained and taught,’ was the injunction of the great restorer of letters in the west, ‘that when accident hinders their own presence in the church at Tierce, Sext, Nones, or Vespers, their scholars (ipsi scholarii) may sound the bell and perform the service.’ The Norman chronicler of the eleventh century, Dudon de Saint Quentin, writes: ‘The scholars (scolastici) babble as they bear the candlesticks and crosses before the canons.’† Our Scotch ‘scoloc’ had probably nothing peculiar but the form into which his name was corrupted. There is ample evidence that ‘scoloc’ and ‘scholar’ were convertible terms.

Ellon was of old the capital of the earldom of Buchan. Here, on a green mount rising from the bank of the Ythan, those ancient Earls administered justice, received the homage of their liegemen, and took investiture of their great fief.‡ The parish

The editor—the Reverend James Raine, I believe, the admirable author of ‘The History of North Durham,’ a work of invaluable use to the Scottish antiquary,—in his glossary (p. 335), explains ‘scollofthes’ as ‘the Pictish word for clerici, scholars, or students.’

We may infer that ‘scoloc’ was, in Reginald’s time, sounded with a guttural gh, as if written ‘sceloch’ or ‘scoologh.’ With most Englishmen at the present day, ‘loch’ becomes either ‘lock’ or ‘loft.’ We find even Scotsmen ‘native and to the manner born, like Hector Boece, transforming “Bannockburn” into “Bannafboorn.”’ (Heet. Boet. Scot. Hist. lib. xiv. fol. 302. edit. Paris, 1575.)

The Abbot of Cambuskenneth, writing in the beginning of the sixteenth century, records the temporary endowment of a ‘scolastic chaplain’ (scolasticum capellarum) at Dunkeld. (Vit. Episcop. Dunkeld, p. 59.) The constitutions of Bishop Elphinstone of Aberdeen, in 1506, make provision ‘ne calices asportentur extra chorum per seculares sex garsiones laicos aut scolares.’ (Regist. Episcop. Aberd. vol. ii. p. 105.) In Bishop Kennedy’s foundation charter of St. Salvator’s College at St. Andrews, in 1458, we have ‘sex erunt scholares sive clericis, sed pauperes.’ (Rep. of Royal Commission on Scot. Univ., p. 387, evidence, vol. iii. p. 271.)

church, participating, as would seem to have been the custom,* in the metropolitan dignity of the place, appears to have had an endowment for the maintenance of four Scolocs. We first hear of them in the year 1265, when Gameline, Bishop of St. Andrew's, ‘let his land of Ellon, in Buchan, which the Scolocs of Ellon hold (quam Scoloci de Elon tenent)’, in lease to Alexander Cumyn, Earl of Buchan, for a yearly rent of two marks of silver. The Earl bound himself to perform the military service due from the lands; to be leal and faithful to the Bishop and church of St. Andrew's; and, at the expiry of the lease, which was for three lives, to restore the land to the See, ‘by its right marches, with all its appurteuances, as the Scolocs now hold it (sicut Scoloci eam nunc tenent).† More than a century afterwards, in the year 1387, the land which had been thus leased became the subject of an inquest, made at the parish church of Ellon, by Walter, Bishop of St. Andrew's, with consent of the Bishop of Aberdeen, the ordinary of the diocese. The ‘good men and true of the country,’ who were sworn of the inquest, declared ‘that the church lands of Ellon, which are called the Seolog lands, are of the yearly value of fifteen pounds thirteen shillings and four pence sterling, and were worth of old twenty pounds, and there are due from them, to the Lord Bishop of St. Andrew's, the over-lord, sixteen shillings yearly;’ that the Bishop may put bailifs in the lands at his pleasure, who may hold courts, at which all the folk of the land are bound to appear, suits there to follow or defend, and judgement to undergo, as of right and use is: ‘that custom was, that the heir of any Seolog deceased (Seologi defuncti, ‘Scolagii defuncti’) should be entered in his heritage by the bailif of the lands, without letter of inquest from the over-lord’—— But hereupon,’ says the record, ‘in face of the witnesses, after their declaration of inquest, Dame Anabel of Liddel, one of the tenants of the lands aforesaid, being thereto personally present, affirmed that she had entered into her land, being a portion of the lands aforesaid, by letter of inquest, and had given a scisin ox, after the

Thus, at Muthill, the capital of the Earldom of Stratherne, there was a Priory of Keldes. (Carte Monialium de Northberwic, pp. 7, 12; Crawford's Officers of State, p. 6; Palgrave's Illust. Hist. Scot. vol. i. p. 329; Liber Insule Missarum, p. xxxvii.; Regist. Episcop. Moravien, pp. 469, 470.) The ‘ehemys,’ or chief messenger of the Earldom of Menteith, was at Inch-Ma-Colmcock, or St. Colmcock's Isle, a religious seat of unascertained antiquity. (Riddell's Inq. into Scotch Peage Law, vol. ii. pp. 990—1002.) The capital of the Earldom of Athol was at Rait, and the charter of the Bishop of Dunkeld, which confirms the place to the Canons of Scone, takes care to record the fact: ‘Rath que est caput comitatus.’ (Lib. Eccl. S. Trinitat. de Scon, p. 35.) The first monastic foundation, of the reformed order, made in Albany or proper Scotland, was at Scone, ‘in principali sede regni nostri,’ says the charter of the Maiden King, who, next to the royal founder, was its chief benefactor. (Lib. Eccl. S. Trinit. de Scon, p. 5.)

The ‘land of Helen which Slothagh held’ appears in the possession of the See of St. Andrews, in the end of the twelfth century. (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, p. 59.) Bishop Richard granted it to the canons, in exchange for Portnoak, by the name of ‘Helin terram seclieet Sluthagh.’ (Id. p. 140.) The grant was confirmed by Bishop Ilugh, whose charter writes ‘et Elin quam Sluthadi tenuit;’ and by Bishop Roger, who describes it as ‘terram Elin quam Slothah tenuit.’ (Id. pp. 146, 152.) But it may be doubted, perhaps, if there be sufficient evidence of the identity of this Elin with Ellon in Buchan.

manner of the country, which ox one there present affirmed that he had received; and the Lord Bishop protested that he was then in possession of this right, namely, that the heir of every Scolog ('cujuslibet Scolgi,' 'cuiuslibet Scolagij') should enter to his heritage by inquest and seisin thereupon following, after the manner and common use of the realm.* After this interruption, the record hears that the men of inquest declared that the quarter, or fourth part of the lands aforesaid, which had belonged to the deceased Megot, daughter of the deceased David of Ferley, were now in the Bishop's hands, by reason of the non-presentation of an heir; 'that, from the lands aforesaid, there are to be found, for the parish church of Ellon, four clerks (clericij) with copes and surplices, able to read and sing sufficiently; that the quarter, or fourth part of Easter Ellon, is bound to find a house for the scholars (pro scolaribus) at Ellon; that the quarter, or fourth part of Candellan is bound, twice in every year, to find twenty-four wax candles for 'the park' or 'perk,'† before the high altar; and that the quarter, or fourth part of Ferley aforesaid, is bound to find a smithy (fabricinam) at Ellon.'

The inquest, which has been thus recited, reaches us in two copies, the one derived from the Great Register of the Archbischopric of St. Andrew's,‡ the other engrossed in the Red Book of the Bishopric of Aberdeen.§ One point of difference between them is instructive, as proving the identity of 'Scoloc' and 'Scholar.' Where the scribe of St. Andrew's writes 'the church lands of Ellon, called the Scolog lands,' his brother of Aberdeen has 'the church lands of Ellon, called the Scholar lands.' Nor is this a mere clerical error or unauthorised freedom. The conveyances of the lands which remain in the charter-room at Ellon, show that the popular speech of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries had transformed 'Scolog' into 'Scholar.' Thus, in 1472-3, Symon Bannerman of Elsick sells to Gilbert Hay, the son of the Knight of Dronlaw, his eighth part of the lands of Argeith, held in chief of his Lord of St. Andrew's, and 'lying in the schooldry of Ellon (in scolaria de Ellon)' binding himself to free the purchaser 'of all secular service, exactation, or demand, due from the lands, either to the over-lord or to the church of Ellon.' The same description of 'in scolaria de Ellon' is repeated in a charter of 1506, and in precepts of clare constat of 1556 and 1562,* the older designation of 'the Seoloc lands' having now, it would seem, become obsolete.

* On the point which seems to have been here in dispute, reference may be made to the Regist Episcop. Morav., p. 379.

† The words of the record are 'super lie park coram magno altari.' In Dr. Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, we have 'park' for a pole or perch, with an instance of its use in that sense from Bishop Gawain Douglas' translation of the Aeneid. The 'Glossary of Architecture' gives 'perch, park, and peach' as 'an old name sometimes given to a bracket or corbel,' and adds that 'the large wax candles used in Roman Catholic churches were formerly sometimes called peaches.' Carpenter explains 'parechia' as 'trabecula in aedibus sacris ubi cerei accenduntur. He gives 'pertica' with much the same meaning. (Glossarium, vol. iii. coll. 171, 236.)

It is to be observed that the word which is written 'lie park' in the copy of the Ellon inquest, taken from the St. Andrews' Register, is written 'le perf' in the copy preserved in the Aberdeen Register.

Looking to the Ellon inquest of 1387, it would seem that the lands, originally set apart for the maintenance of the 'Scoloes,' had undergone much the same fate with the possessions of so many greater religious foundations in Scotland. Take, for example, the ancient abbeys of Abernethy and Brechin, as we see them in the charters of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.† Their endowments had been divided into two parts. The larger and better portion, together with the name of Abbot, had been usurped by laymen, who transmitted the benefice and title as a heritage to their children. What remained, with the name of Prior, was possessed by ecclesiastics, who discharged, probably perfunditorily enough, the duties, for the performance of which the whole revenues had been originally assigned by the founders. Such was the condition into which most, or all of the ancient monasteries of Scotland had fallen before the twelfth century.‡ The same kind of abuse

The abuse which prevailed in our Scottish abbeys before the twelfth century may be illustrated by a few sentences from the passage in which the learned Deputy Keeper of the Records paints the great abuse of bestowing abbeys as lay-benefices, which obtained in France in the ninth century. 'We can best,' says Sir Francis Palgrave, 'exemplify the Carlovingian corruptions, by contemplating a great commander on Blenheim field. If you ascended the rock of Chiusa, and reached the mysterious tower of San Michele, where you passed between the ranged corpses, stationed as warders of the portal, sculptured with zodiacal signs, and asked for the Abbot, the monks informed you that you would find him in Marlborough's camp: for it was as Monsieur l'Abbe de Savoie that Prince Eugene made his earliest campaigns, he being at that time commendatory abbot of that and another of the most venerable monasteries of ancient Lombardy, situated in the district to which, from its position, the name of 'Piedmont' was subsequently assigned. Such were the 'lay-abbots,' whom we have so often noted, who held the most important monasteries in the Carlovingian Gauls—a motley group of stout soldiers, clever statesmen, delicate young princes, half-acknowledged husbands of princesses, or husbands fully declared, courtiers most in favour with the monarch, partizans who were to be conciliated by favour, or claimants who were to be satisfied—constituted the class who usually obtained these excellent pieces of preferment, which, in many respects, were more advantageous than any secular domain. Sometimes these abbots commendatory were in minor orders, but very frequently mere laymen, like those we have already noticed of Sithin or Centulla. Outwardly the abbey did not appear to be changed. You heard of an abbot us you now do of the noble or reverend 'master' of this or that 'hospital,' realising the fines and rents, according to the valuations and currency of Queen Victoria, and staving off the 'brethren,' by tendering their stipends in the nominal pence of Plantagenet. The Count was not in the abbey, he might be fighting against the Northmen, or enjoying himself in the palace: truly, there was a prior presiding in the refectory, and the monks were chanting in the choir, but the real spirit of the institution was of course fleeting away.' (Hist. of Normandy und England, vol. i. pp. 184, 185.)

Sir Francis Palgrave was not the first to illustrate the condition of the 'lay-abbot' of the Dark Ages, by reference to the usage of more recent times. Sir Henry Spelman sums up the explanation of 'Abba Comes,' in his glossary, by an allusion to the contemporary practice in Scotland, as instanced in the well-known Edward Bruce, Abbot of Kinloss. Our 'Tulchan Bishops' might have furnished another case, not much less in point. But, indeed, examples are only too abundant. 'An idea,' says Mr. Riddell, 'had been fostered after the Reformation, that the acquisition of a dignified church patronage placed the dispense in the shoes of his predecessors, and not only gave him, together with the lands, a seat and vote in Parliament, but also their style and dignity.' This conclusion, which even prevailed in the seventeenth century, being practically indulged in, induced Indirous results. . . . . Mere youths, and trafficking and abandoned laics, figured under the masquerade of ‘holy and reverend fathers,’ and in the imposing guise of Abbots, Priors, Commandators, having seat and vote in Parliament, Postulates, Provosts, Archpriests, Rectors, Parsons, with every epithet the most sacred and revered.’ (Peage and Consistorial Law of Scotland, vol. i. pp. 239, 240: Case of the Earl of Balcarres claiming the Earldom of Crawford, pp. 215, 216, 222.) He adduces an instance in which a lad of thirteen figures in legal record as Prior of Coldstream. Such boy ecclesiastics were not unknown before the Reformation. In the year 1550, we find the canonry of Memuir, in the cathedral church of Dunkeld, held by a stripling of eighteen. He was the bastard of a canon of the same cathedral; and the Pope, while dispensing with his youth and spurious birth, specially forbade that he should say mass at the same altar with his father, or succeed him in his benefices. (Lib. Officialis S. Andree, pp. xxviii., xxix., xlviij., xlxiij.)

In the chief monasteries of Scotland and the north of England, during the eleventh century, a grosser abuse prevailed than any which seems to have existed among the Carlevingian abbeys. Not only was the Abbot’s office in the hands of a layman, but the monks had become hereditary, marrying wives, and transmitting their monastic profession and benefice to their children. Let Symeon of Durham describe the degeneracy into which the brethren of St. Cuthbert had lapsed: ‘Tradita sibi districione paulatim postposita, ecclesiasticae disciplinam odio habuerunt remissoris vitae illecebras seculi . . . . Seculariter itaque omnino viventes carni et sanguini inserviantib, filios et filias generantes: quorum posteri per successionem in ecclesia Dunelmensi fuerunt nimis remisse viventes, nec ullam nisi carnalem vitam quam duecabant scientes, nec scire volentes. Clerici vocabantur, sed nec habitu nec conversatione clericatum praetendebant; ordinem psalmorum in canendis horis secundum regulam Sancti Benedicti institutum tenerunt, hoc solum a primis institutoribus Monachorum per paternam traditionem sibi transmissum servantib.’ (Lib. de Exordio Dunelmensis Ecclesiae, pp. 3, 4; Reginald. Dunelm. Lib. de Virt. S. Cuthberti, pp. 28, 29.) The strong arm of the Conqueror, and the reforming zeal of Pope Gregory VII., purged Durham of its hereditary clergy, ‘nomen tantum Canonicorum habentes, sed in nullo Canoniconum regulam sequentes.’ (Symeon. Lib. de Exord. Dun. Eccl., p. 224.) But they survived for nearly a century afterwards in the ecclesiastical capital of Scotland.

The ‘Historia Beati Reguli,’ written about the year 1144, shows us their condition: ‘Sublati vero a presenti vita Sanctis, qui cum reliquis Beati Apostoli advenierant, et eorum discipulis atque imitatoribus, cultus ibi religiosus desperarat, sicut et gens barbara et inculta fuerat. Habebantur in ecclesia Sancti Andreas tredecim per successionem carnalem quos Keledeo appellant, qui secundum suam aestimationem et hominum traditionem, magis quam secundum sanctorum statuta patrum, vivebant. Sed et adhuc similiter vivunt, et quedam habent communia pauciora scilicet et deterioria, quedam vero propria plura scilicet et potiora. . . . Personae septem fuerunt obligationes altaris inter se dividentes, quarum septem portionum unam tantum habebat episcopus, et hospitale unam: quinque vero reliquiae in quinque caeteros dividebantur, qui nullo omnino altari vel ecclesiis impendebant servitium, praeterquam peregrinos et hospites, cum plures quam sex adventarunt, more suo hospitio suscepient, sortem mittentes quis quos vel quod recipere: hospitale sane semper sex, et infra, suscepit. . . . Personae autem supra memoratae redditus et possessiones proprias habebant: quas, cum e vita decederent, uxores eorum, quas publice tenebant, filii quoque vel filiae, propinquui vel generi, inter se dividebant, nihilominus et altaris oblationes, cui non deserviebant, quod puduisse dicerre, si non libuisset eis facere. Nec potuit tantum auferri malum, usque ad tempus felicis memorie Regis Alexandri.’ (Pinkerton’s Enquiry into Hist. of Scot., vol. i. pp. 462-464 edit. 1814; Sir Robert Sibbald’s Hist. of Fife, pp. 176-181, edit. 1803.) Cf. Registr. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 123, 125, 129, 152.

The lay abbot was common throughout Wales and Ireland, towards the end of the twelfth century. We have him painted by an eye-witness, who drew to the life. The lively Gerald de Barri thus describes what he saw at Llanbadarn-fawr, near Aberystwith, when he visited that ancient monastery, in the year 1188, in the train of Archbishop Baldwin, then preaching the Crusade: ‘Notandum autem, quod haec ecclesia, sicut et aliae per Hiberniam et Walliam plures, Abbatem laicum habet. Usus enim inolevit et prava consuetudo, ut viri in parochia potentes, primo tanquam economi seu potius ecclesiastri patroni et defensores a clero constituti: postea processu temporis aneta cupidine totum sibi jus usurparent: et terras omnes cum exteriore possessione sibi impudenter appropriarent: solum altaria cum decimis et obventionibus clerico relinquentes: et haec ipsa filius suis clericis et cognatis assignantes. Tales itaque defensores seu potius ecclesiastri destructores Abbates se vocari fecere, et tam nomen indebitum quam rem quoque sibi assignari praesumpsere. In hoc statu ecclesiam hanc invenimus capite constitutam, veteri quadam et inveterato dierum malorum (enim nomen Eden Oen filius Gwraithvoed) se Abbatem gerentem, et filiis ejusdem altari incumbentibus. . . . Jactat autem gens haec et generatio prava Episcopum quendam ecclesiae istius (quia cathedralis parsonage, and was called the parson, leaving the spiritual duties to be discharged by a priest, who was paid for his services by the dues and oblations of his flock.* So also it appears to have been with the Seocols. We see at Ellon that the Seocolc lands, divided into four parts, were inherited by as many laymen—the Seocolc's office in the church being performed by substitutes, whom the Seocolc lands were bound to provide.

'Seocols' present themselves elsewhere in Scotland than at Kirkeudbright and at Ellon. They are found, at the close of the twelfth century, sharing the possessions of the church of Arbuthnott, in the Mearns. Here, as at Ellon, the lands which they occupied held of the See of St. Andrew's; and here, as at Ellon and at Kirkeudbright, the church in which they served would seem to have been had in more than common reverence. It was dedicated to St. Ternan, 'Archbishop of aliquando fnerat) a decessoribus suis interemptum: et hac praecepsus allegatione in loco eodem jus sibi vendicant et proprietatem. Elegimus itque has potius enormitatem ad prascens sub dissimulacione transire, quam (nullo ibidem querimoniam deponente) gentem iniquam exasperare.' (Giraldus Cambrensis, Itiner. Cambriae, lib. ii, cap. iii.)

The number of lay abbeys which remained in Scotland in the twelfth century, is sufficiently shown by the rubric of the little memorial of St. Rule, which has been more than once printed from the Colbertine MS.: 'Qualiter accederit quod memoria S. Andreas Apostoli amplius in regione Pictorum quae nunc Scotia dicitur, quam in ceteris regiounibus, sit: et quomodo contigerit quod tanta abbatiae ibi factae antiquitas fuerint, quas multi adhuc seculares viri jure hereditario possident.' (L'Inkert, Enquir. Hist. Scot., vol. i, p. 49th, edit. 1814.)

* Mr. Hallam refers to an instance of an hereditary parsonage in England, where it was found by an assize, in the year 1194, that there had been no presentation to the church, the parsons having held it from father to son. (Supplemental Notes to Hist. of Middle Ages, p. 193.)

The abuse was rank in Scotland. It seems not to have been until the reign of King Alexander I. (A.D. 1107—A.D. 1124), that the church's right of collation was established. The Prior of St. Serf's writes:—

'Than ordanyd wes als, that the Kyng,
Na na lawyl patrone, be staff na ryng,
Suld mak fra thine collatyowne,
Or suld gyve institutyowne
Of blyschaprykis, or abbasyis,
Or ony kyrkis benefyis:
Bot barly that the patrone
Suld gyve hys presentatyowne.'

(Wyntown, Cronykil of Scotland, book vi, cap. v; vol. i, p. 287.) This provision must have greatly restrained the evil; but it seems to have taken such root, that even in the diocese of Glasgow, certainly not the least civilised province of Scotland in that age, Pope Urban III., between the years 1185 and 1187, while he condemned the hereditary succession of the son to the father's church, permitted the Bishop, at his discretion, to overlook the irregularity: 'Præterea filios sacerdotum paternas ecclesias qui hereditario jure sibi vendicantes et eis contra statuta canonum et sancte ecclesie libertatem taliter incubantes, sublatio appellationis obstaculo, ab ecclesiis in quibus patres eorum ante ipsos proximo ministrarunt, nostra fretus auctoritate removeatis; nisi forte aliquem propter probatum honestatem et diutinam possessionem sub dissimulacione videris transcundum.' (Regist. Episcop. Glasg., vol. i, p. 59.)

The Scottish Church, even in the beginning of the thirteenth century, had to enact, by a solemn canon, that rectors of churches should be ordained: 'Item, irrefragabili constitutione sancimus ut rectores ecclesiarum ac primos ordines veniant ordinandi; ita quod quam cito fieri poterit commode ordinentur.' (Regist. Episcop. Aberd., vol. ii, p. 34.) The practice of the Irish Church, in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, may best illustrate this canon. In the diocese of Derry, we are told, parsonages were held for years by persons not in orders, and even when they were ordained, they did not perform divine service. Dr. Reeves has collected abundant instances from the dioceses of Armagh, Connor, and Dromore, of rectors of parishes being ordained deacons and sub-deacons.

the Picts,' and appears to have had some provision for chaplains, until the Reformation. When the light of record first breaks upon the banks of the Bervie water in the last days of St. David, or in the following reign of his grandson, the Maiden King, the manor of Arbuthnott is seen divided between the church and the crown. The primatial see of Albany, 'the bishoprie of the Scots,' as it still wrote its titles, had the advowson of the church, with the church land, or 'kirk town.' This ecclesiastical territory was held of the Bishop by certain 'tenants called parsons (tenentes qui dicebantur persone)'—laymen, it would seem, who had the name and revenues of the parson, but did not possess the sacerdotal function*—and who had sub-tenants under them, having houses of their own, and (Primate Colton's Visitation, A.D. 1397, pp. 118, 119.) In Scotland, after a lapse of three or four centuries, the Reformation again brought round the cycle of lay parsons, as in the instance, which recent inquiries have made familiar, of Mr. John Lindsay, the hoy parson of Menmuir, Lochlee, and Lethnot. (Mr. Riddell's Crawford Case, pp. 215, 222; Lord Lindsay's Lives of the Lindsays, vol. i, p. 334.) Again, the ecclesiastical power had to struggle for the right of collation. It was not until the year 1592 that Parliament consented that 'all presentations to benefices be directed to the particular presbyteries, with full power to them to give collation thereupon.' (Act. Parl. Scot., vol. iii, p. 512.) The act which immediately follows this in the statute book is entitled, 'anent deposition of unqualified persons from their functions and benefices.'

Laymen long afterwards maintained hereditary possession of some of the minor ecclesiastical offices. Thus, in 1609, when the Bishops were formally restored to their consistorial jurisdiction, the 'heritable right of the commissariat within the bounds of Argyle' was specially reserved to the Earl of Argyle. (Act. Parl. Scot., vol. iv, pp. 430, 431.) The office of commissary, or judge of the ecclesiastical courts of Orkney, was, in the same way, hereditary in the Earls of Morton. (Inquisit. Special. vicecom. Orkney, no. 60.) The Earl of Eglinton in 1661, was served heir to his father in the offices of clerk of the parish churches of Ardrossan, Dregborne, Beith, Torbolton, Eastwood, and Eaglesham. (Inquisit. Special. vicecom. Ayr, no. 510; vicecom. Renfrew, no. 159.) The bell and alms of St. Kessog, 'campana et elemosina Sancti Kossagii,' had been hereditary in the family of Buchanan of that Ilk, for about a century before the year 1602. (Inquisit. Special. vicecom. Stirling, nn. 8, 37; Buchanan's Ancient Scottish Surnames, p. 176, edit. 1829.) They passed, together with St. Kessog's chapel, to the Earls of Perth, before the year 1612, and, along with the holy bell of St. Lolan, 'sacra campana Sancti Lolani,' continued to be included in their feudal investitures until the year 1675. (Inquisit. Special. vicecom. Perth, nn. 708, 889, 1094; Miscellany of the Spalding Club, vol. iii, pp. xxiii-iv.)

* While the inquest speaks of these so-called 'Parsons of Arbuthnott,' it discloses to us, at the same time, the existence of a 'Priest of Arbuthnott'—'hospiatus est cum Helia sacerdotus de Abernethen.' (Miscellany of the Spalding Club, vol. v, pp. 211, 212.) A charter, of about the year 1170, describes the parson of Inverness as being both a priest and a parson—'Thome sacerdoti ejusdem ecclesiae personae.' (Regist. Vet. de Aberbrothoc, p. 24.) So, in a charter of about the year 1140, we have an abbot described as 'priest and abbot'—'Duftah sacerdos et abbas.' (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, p. 118.) Neither every parson, nor every abbot, was a priest. Nay, every abbot was not even a monk. One of our oldest writings distinguishes a Keldee of St. Serf's Inch, as being both monk and abbot—'Ronanus monachus et abbas.' (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, p. 113.) The passage proceeds to furnish, perhaps, the only instance to be found in our Scottish records of the abuse of the 'precarium,' so well known on the continent. (M. Guizot, Essais sur l'Hist. de France, iv. essai, cap. i, § ii, pp. 92-96, edit. Paris, 1845.)

Not every abbot, it has been seen, was a monk, nor did every abbot always take or receive the name of abbot. It is as 'Horm the son of Ilugh,' 'Orm of Abernethi,' 'Laurence the son of Ilorm,' 'Laurence of Abernethi,' 'Patrick de Abernethyn,' 'Patrick the son of Laurence,' that the lay abbots of Abernethy meet us in record. Their monastic character and style appear only when it is necessary that the King or the Bishop should distinguish the peculiar tenure of their inheritance. (Regist. Vet. de Aberbrothoc, pp. 25, 26, 54, 75, 97, 120, 145-8; Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 132, 216, 268, 319; Lib. Eccl. S. Trinitat. de Seon, pp. 24, 47, 49; Cart. Monial. de Northberwic, p. 6; Regist. de Dunfermelyn, p. 45.) So also with the lay abbots of Brechin. 'Leod of Brechin' is a more common style than either 'Leod, abbot of Brechin,' or 'Leod the abbot.' (Act. Parl. Scot., vol. i, p. 47; Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 182, 187; Regist. de Dunfermelyn, p. 8.) His grandson, cattle, which they pastured on the common. The fixed rent or 'conveth,' due to the See, would seem to have been two or three cows; and, small as the tribute was, the poverty of the occupants was such, that the Bishop did not always enforce its payment. He appears, like the Irish prelates of more recent times,* to have found his chief profit in the right of hospitality, or refraction, lodging, and attendance, which he exacted for himself and for his servants, whenever they visited the neighbourhood. Such was the tenure of the church land. The lay manor of Arbuthnott was farmed from the crown by a steward or thane, until King Malcolm bestowed it in property upon Osbert Olifard, the Crusader. He, too, possessed by a however, seldom or never appears without his abbatial style. (Regist. Vet. de Aberbroth, pp. 7, 49, 50, 134; Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, p. 118.) Elsewhere we see the 'abbot' of the middle of the thirteenth century, gliding into the 'lord of the abbey' of the beginning of the fourteenth century. Thus 'Nicholas, the son of Brice, the priest of Kirriemuir,' having received a hereditary grant of the lay abbey of Monifeith, takes the title of 'Nicholas the abbot,' and 'Nicholas the abbot of Monifod,' while his successor, half a century afterwards, designates himself 'Michael of Monifod, lord of the Abbacy of that Ilk.' (Regist. Vet. de Aberbroth., pp. 330, 331, 34, 82, 190, 278.) The looseness of description which prevails in our earlier charters, doubtless prevents our identification of more than one lay abbot of whom we should like to know more—e.g. 'Ewen the abbot,' who witnesses a charter of Bishop Richard of St. Andrew's; and that nameless 'Abbot of the Keldees of St. Andrew's,' who witnesses an indenture between Bishop Hugh of St. Andrew's, and Earl Dunstan of Fife. (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 133, 333.)

* The record which Dr. Reeves has so well edited of the 'Acts of Archbishop Colton, in his metropolitan visitation of the Diocese of Derry, A.D. 1397,' shows us how this right of hospitality was enforced: 'Tandem vero idem dominus Archiepiscopus cum sua comitiva ad villam de Ardstraha adveniens, vocatis coram eo vicario et herenacis ville predicte, eis mandavit ut de necessariis hominum et equorum, neconon de sufficienti vigilia pro corpore, bonis, et rebus ipsis Archiepiscopi et comitive sue, ecclerite providerent. Qui, ejus mandatis obediens annuentes, panem, butyrum, lac, et carnes, focalia, stramina atque blada pro equis, umanque domini huius homines et equi dicti domini Archiepiscopi inhospitatu fuerunt, juxta numerum hominum et equorum in dominis ipsis inhospitalitorum, communibus sumptibus herenacorum et incolarum ipsis ville, apportari et ministriare fecerunt; et vigilias hominum per diversas partes ville predicte, et precipue circa domum ubi prefatus dominus Archiepiscopus inhospitabatur, cum iugna diligentia statuerunt.' We have an ample commentary on the custom, in a statement addressed by Montgomery, Bishop of Derry, to King James VI.: 'These causales terrae, or copyhold lands which payed rent, yeelded also unto the byshops certayne intertaynements, which they call refectiones, and were of the nature of cosherings, once or twyce every quarter of a year, or oftener ys occasion of more frequent visitation were offered, or other busynes of the churche or tenents required of the byshops presence. And indeed by these refectiounes did the byshops chiefly mayntayne themselves and their followers, spending the most part of the yeare in this wandring kynde of lyfe among their tenents, and receaving from them meate and drinke for 100, and som tymes 200 people, that followed the Bishop; and in respect of tenents charge this wayo, the byshops imposed very small rents upon the lands . . . lying not by their rents but by their refectiounes; in such sort that a tenant which payed not above a noble in rent, spent in entertayning the byshop and his followers, ten pounds, or twenty marks yearly. . . . The lands belonging to these byshopricks laye not by whole manors together in one place, but were devyded in every parische neere the churche . . . so that the byshops did, una et eadem opera, both visit the churches, and keep their temporall courts for determining of controversies among their tenents, for which purpose they had their officialls and seneschals, neyther did any temporall officer meddle in any matters concerning the churche tenents, but left them unto the byshops seneschals.' (Primate Colton's Visitation, A.D. 1397, pp. 9-12, 117, 118. Buh. 1850. Irish Archaeol. Soc.) Dr. Reeves cites a passage from Bede, which shows that the arrangement here described was not much dissimilar from that which St. Aidan established among his Northumbrian converts: 'In hac [villa regia non longe ab Bebbanburgh] habens ecclesiam et cubiculum, saepius ibidem divertit ac manere, atque inde ad praedicandum circumquaque exiro conservat: quod ipsis et in aliis villis regis facero solebat, nupto nil propriae possessionis, excepta ecclesia sun et adjacentibus agellis habens.' (Hist. Ecel. Gent. Angl. lib. iii, cap. 17.)

steward or thane. His successor, Walter, gave the land to Hugh of Swinton, the progenitor of all the Arbuthnotts. These occupied the manor themselves, and, although they were its lords, seem to have still been styled, in common speech, its thanes. Their claims soon began to clash with those of the Bishop. Although the church land and its inhabitants belonged to the See of St. Andrew's, the lay lord of Arbuthnott had certain rights over them. Every house in the ‘kirk town’ was bound to give him yearly ten cheeses, made of the whole milk at midsummer, and to furnish three men for gathering his corns in harvest. The Bishop seems also to have paid him a certain ‘cane’ or rent. He had, besides, an equal share with the Bishop in the ‘merchets’ and ‘bloodwits,’ the fines for marriage and bloodshed, levied from the men of the lands, although these were amenable only to the Bishop’s courts. Not content with these dues, the new lords of Arbuthnott began to remove the old occupants, and to till the land themselves. The usurpation was resisted, although somewhat tardily it would seem, and became the subject of an inquest before a synod of the Scottish Church, which found for the Bishop. It is in the evidence which was adduced on this occasion that we meet with the Scolocs. The notices are only incidental, the object of the inquiry being rather to determine the rights of the lay lord, than to ascertain by whom the ‘kirk town’ was possessed, or what services were due from the land to the parish church to which it was attached. The first witness, John of Hastings, had been Sheriff and Forester of the Mearns, in the time of Bishop Richard (A.D. 1163—A.D. 1178), and of Osbert Olifard. ‘He had seen many Scolocs upon the land in dispute, to wit, Arbuthnott, and when the folk of that land were troubled about any matter touching the Sheriff or Forester, the bailiffs of the Lord Bishop came to him with the King’s writ, and re-pledged them, as the Bishop’s men, to the Bishop’s court.’ Ysaac of Banever, who, for six years, had farmed the lay manor as a thane, under the Olifards, affirmed that Hugh of Swinton, after the death of Bishop Hugh (A.D. 1188), and the village patriot, Gilli Andres the cripple, ‘removed divers Scolocs from the kirk town, one after another; that such as he left were ejected by his son Duncan; and that the same Duncan, after the Scolocs were thus expelled, began to till the land.’ The witness Felix had, more than once, seen Bishop Arnold (A.D. 1160—A.D. 1162), and Bishop Richard (A.D. 1163—A.D. 1178), as guests in his father’s house at Arbuthnott, who held his land of them, and with the Scolocs who belonged to the land, ministered to the Bishop’s wants. He added that Hugh of Benne or Bennef (who, after Ysaac of Banever, farmed the lay manor as a thane), and Duncan of Arbuthnott ‘removed the natives and Scolocs from the land.’ Maurice, the priest, spoke nearly in the same words of the removal of ‘the natives and Scolocs from the land.’ Andrew of Bas, the brother of Bishop Hugh, of pious memory, declared that, after the days of Bishop

Roger A.D. 1188—A.D. 1202, ‘Duncan of Arbuthnott removed the Seoloes altogether from the land, and, save the Bishop, was the first to till the land.’*

The ‘Seoloes thus disappeared from Arbuthnott in the first years of the thirteenth century. But in the same neighbourhood, and much about the same time, on a perambulation of the lands of Balfeth, about the year 1190,† we find ‘Duf Seolok of Fetheressau’—a church dedicated to St. Caran, a bishop and confessor in the north, with a dependent chapel, and a ‘kirk town’ which, like that of Arbuthnott, held of the Bishop of St. Andrew’s.‡ Elsewhere we have traces of Seoloes at a later period. Thus ‘Ri Seoloc’ appears on an assize of marches in Fife in the year 1230.§ ‘Richard Seoloc’ is witness to a transaction between the Prior of St. Andrew’s and Serlo de Lascelles, in the year 1280.|| The Benedictines of Dunfermline, in the fourteenth century, occasionally recorded the pedigrees of their bondmen. One of these genealogies relates that Patrick Seurfarache begat Alan Gilgrewer, who begat John Seoloe the elder, who begat John Seoloe the younger, who begat John . . . . . , who had three sons, Adam Johnson, John Bel, and one whose name, through decay of the parchment, cannot now be read.** The surname†† of ‘Seoloe’ was here obviously personal or official, for, although it was borne by two, or perhaps three generations of bondmen, we see that they neither inherited it from their forefathers, nor transmitted it to their children. That the Seoloe begat sons and daughters, and was of servile condition, was not inconsistent with his ecclesiastical function in Scotland, during that age. Even so late as the year 1251, we find Pope Innocent IV. pleading for the rights which ‘married clerks’ were accustomed to enjoy in the Scottish realm;‡‡ and not many years before we see the Bishop of †† The name of Seoloe or Seolaige is found in Ireland, but apparently as a Christian name. Thus is recorded, that in the year 1011, ‘Scholagus filius Clercheni, nobis presbyter Ardmacchans, et illi numeri seniores et studiosi Ardmacchani interierunt.’ (Colgan, Trias Thaumaturga, p. 298; Lanigan, Ecccl. Hist. of Ireland, vol. iii, p. 411.) Again, in the year 1067, the Annals of the Four Masters record the death of ‘Seolaige M’Indreacht’ ‘aircindae’ of Mucknoe and Dunletbglin. (O’Connor, Ker. Hibern. Script., vol. iii, p. 627; Dr. Reeves’s Ecccl. Antiq. of Down and Connor, p. 146.)

‡‡ Registrum Episcopatus Moraviensis, p. 336; Lord Hailes’ Annals of Scot., vol. i, pp. 163, 344, edit. 1776.

The Pontiff’s words are: ‘Clerici vero uxorati ejusdem regni, qui clericalem deferentes tonsuram clericali gaudere solent privilegio, et cum bonis suis sub ecclesiastice protectionis manere presidio ab antiquo, solite immunitatis beneficis exsuntur, et sub nova rediguntur onera servitatis.’ So common do such married clerks appear to have been, that a statute of King William the Lion made special provision for the freedom of the sons of chaplains: ‘Quod filii capellani respondent ut homine liber quam dia pater suis vivit sejunct ad omnem libertatem sed post mortem sui patris amittet suam libertatem.’ (Act. Parl. Scot., vol. i, p. 68.)

Gerald de Barri shows us the prevalence of the same state of things in Ireland, towards the end of the

Murray stipulating in a covenant with the Lord of Badenach, that ‘as to the native bondmen of the land, the Bishop and his successors should have all the clerks (omnes clericos) and two laymen, to wit, Gylle Mallouock MacNakeigelle and Sythach MacMallon: these cleric and lay natives the Bishop of Murray and his successors shall have, with all their chattels, and their possessions, and their children, and all their posterity, and the chattels of their children.’* We should, perhaps, recognise a Seiloc in that ‘Gille-Mor Scolgo,’ the ‘native liegeman’ of the prior and convent of St. Andrew’s, on their lands of Tarland, in Cromar, who, in the year 1222, had their licence to abide during their pleasure, with Sir J., the son of M. sometime Earl of Mar, in consideration of the yearly payment of a pound of wax at Lady-Day in harvest, and on condition that, whosoever they should be reclaimed, both he and his children, and all their substance, should return to the prior and convent as their native men, to dwell in such reasonable place as should be allotted to them.† It may have been their appropriation of old to the support of ‘Scolocs’ that gave name to ‘Scollowland’ in Fife,‡ to the ‘Scolilands’ in Annandale,§ to the lands of Scowlag in Bute,|| and to the ‘Scollatishland’ at Monymusk, in Mar.**

twelfth century: ‘Notandum autem quod viri, qui ecclesiasticae gaudent immunitate, et quos viros ecclesiasticos vocant, quanquam laici et uxorati, comis quoque praelongis trans humerum diffusis, solum armis renuiciautes in signum protectionis, pontificali impositione, amplas in capite coronas gestant.’ (Girald. Cambrensis, Topog. Hiberniae dist. iii. cap. xxvi.)

This adoption of the clerical tonsure, and assumption of the clerical name, by laymen, in order that they might enjoy ecclesiastical immunities, was an abuse flagrant in England in the beginning of the eighth century. Bede inveighs against it in his letter to Archbishop Egberht of York, written about the year 734: ‘Sic per annos circiter triginta, hoc est, ex quo Aldfrid rex humanis rebus ablatus est, provincia nostra vesano illo errore dementata est, ut nullus pene exinde praefectorum extiterit qui non hujusmodi sibi monasterium, in diebus suac praefecturae comparaverit, suamque simul conjugem pari reatu novici mercatus astrinxerit. . . Atque ita ordine perverso innumeris sint inventi, qui si abbates pariter et praefectos sive ministros aut famulos regis appellant. . . Et quidem tales irrepte, ut nosti, tonsuram pro suo libitu accipiunt, suo examine de laicis non monachi, sed abbates efficiuntur.’ (Beda Epist. ad Egberctum Antistitem, cap. vii.)

These lay abbeys—‘monasteria, si tamen ea fas est ita nominare’—were condemned by the Synod of Cloveshou, in the year 747. They are reprobated by St. Boniface, in a letter to Archbishop Cuthbert of Canterbury, written about the same time. (Epist. Bonifacii ad Cudherthum Archiepiscop., cap. viii.) Professor Hussey has appended both this tract and Bede’s letter to Egberht, to his late useful edition of the Hist. Eccles. Gent. Ang. (Oxon. 1846.)

M. Guizot has pointed out, with his accustomed clearness, how the separation of ordination and tonsure issued in the result, that many men were tonsured without entering into orders, and became clerks without becoming ecclesiastics. (Hist. de la Civilisation en France, leçon xiii.)

11.—THE MASTER OF THE SCHOOLS.

The function of 'Rector' or 'Magister Scholarum,' the second scholastic grade, which we discover in Scotland, is sufficiently explained by its name.

It first meets us in the beginning of the twelfth century, before the death, it would seem, of King Alexander I., in the year 1124, when 'Berbeadh, the rector of the schools of Abernethy (rector scolarum de Abyrnethyn)' is enumerated among those who witnessed the confirmation of the grant which the son of St. Margaret, 'Edelrad, Abbot of Dunkeld, and Earl of Fife,' made to St. Serf and the Keldee hermits in the Isle of Lochleven, of the lands of Admore.*

The 'Master of the Schools of St. Andrew's (magister scolarum civitatis Sancti Andree)' appears, between the years 1211 and 1216, along with 'the poor scholars' of the city,† in a deed which there will be occasion to recapitulate hereafter, when speaking of the third and highest of the scholastic offices.

About the year 1213, we find 'Adam, Master of the Schools of Perth (magister scolarum de Pert)' associated with the Archdeacons of Dunkeld and Dunblane, as judges delegated by Pope Innocent III. for determining the controversy between the monks of Paisley and William the clerk of Sanquhar, as to the church of Prestwick.‡ There are still older notices of the schools of Perth. Between the years 1152 and 1159, Robert, Bishop of St. Andrew's, confirmed to the monks of Dunfermline 'the church of Perth, and that of Stirling, and the schools.' One after another, Bishops Arnold, Richard, and William, renewed the confirmation;

* Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, p. 116. The union of the Earldom of Fife and the Abbey of Dunkeld, in the person of Edelrad, is not the only instance of an intimate relation between the two localities. One of our earliest notices of a religious house at Dunkeld—a passage in the Annals of Ulster in the year 865—is a record of the death of 'Tuathal Mac Artguso, high bishop of Forthrich, and abbot of Dunkeld.' (Collect. de Reb. Alban., pp. 258, 259.) When the abbey of Dunkeld last meets us in record, in the beginning of the thirteenth century, its 'rights in Fife and Forthrich' are specially reserved. (Regist. de Dunfermely, pp. 6, 20, 29, 41, 47.) They are said to have been ultimately transferred to the Bishopric which was founded or restored on the ruins of the ancient abbey. (Vit. Dunkeld. Episcop., p. 6.) The extent of jurisdiction which that Bishopric possessed in Fife and Forthrich is remarkable, as indeed the territorial constitution of the diocese (dating, it is said, like that of Brechin, which it resembled, from no more remote era than the beginning of the twelfth century) seems altogether anomalous. Made up, in great measure, of disjoined parishes, it stretched from the West Isles to the mouth of the Frith of Forth, from the heart of the Mers to the gates of Brechin. The venerable monastery of Dull—the reputed retreat of St. Cuthbert in the seventh century, and in later times the hereditary benefice of our princes—fell naturally within its limits. But, when it gave up Argyll for the diocese of a new Bishop, it retained the old religious foundation of Arlhatian, in its allegiance. It invaded the Norse diocese of the Isles, to grasp the hallowed territory of Iona. It advanced its borders into Anglo-Saxon Lothian, to embrace the site of the ancient abbey of Abercuru, whence Trumwin, in the seventh century, ruled that Northumbrian bishopric of the Picts beyond the Forth, whose limits we may, perhaps, conjecture to have been nearly those of Forthrich. The circumstances which determined the boundaries of our dioceses, have not yet received the consideration which is their due. This is not the only point of interest on which we may expect to derive essential help from the completion of Mr. Innes's 'Origines Parochiales Scotiae.'

and, by a special charter, between the years 1163 and 1172, Bishop Richard granted ‘to the church of the Holy Trinity of Dunfermline, the school of Perth and the school of Stirling, and all the schools which belong to the said church, free and quit of all claim and exaction for ever.’*

The conveyance of a church to a religious house would seem to have carried the school with it, although no special mention was made of the latter. In this way the grant by St. David of the churches of the Castle, and St. Cuthbert’s of Edinburgh, appears to have transferred the school of Edinburgh to the Canons of Holyrood. The Master was taken bound, in 1524, ‘to be at high solemn festival times, with the Abbot and his successors, at mass and even-song, with his surplice upon him, to do the Abbot service within the abbey.’†

The ‘Master of the Schools of Ayr,’ together with the Deans of Carrick and Cunningham, was, in the year 1234, appointed by the Pope to decide a dispute regarding certain lands between the Clugniacs of Paisley, and Dufgall, the rector of Kilpatrick.‡

‘Master Thomas, Rector of the Schools of Roxburgh,’ is among the witnesses to a deed by William, the son of Earl Patrick of Dunbar, executed in the chapter-house of the monastery of Kelso, on the morrow of the feast of St. Matthew, the apostle and evangelist, in the year 1241.§ The ‘churches and schools of Roxburgh, with all their appurtenances,’ had been granted to the monks of Kelso by King David I., between the years 1147 and 1152.|| The grant was confirmed by King William the Lion, between 1195 and 1199; by the Bishops of Glasgow, Herbert, Joceline, and Walter, between the years 1152 and 1232; and by Pope Innocent IV., between the years 1243 and 1254.**

In the year 1279, a controversy between the Monks of Kelso and the Vicar of Roberton, was referred to the arbitration of the Subprior of Coldingham, the Sacrist of Coldingham, and ‘the Rector of the Schools of South Berwick,’ or Berwick-upon-the-Tweed.††

It need scarcely be said that Berwick was, in that age, a Scotch town. At Norham, on the opposite bank of Tweed, where there is said to have been a church before the days of St. Cuthbert, there was a school, which, in the twelfth century, was regarded as of old foundation. It was taught within the church. (Reginald. Dunelm. Libell. de Virt. S. Cuthberti, cap. lxxiii, pp. 149, 150.)

'Master Thomas of Bennun, Rector of the Schools of Aberdeen,' appears among the witnesses to a deed by Richard, Bishop of Aberdeen, at Inverury, in the year 1262-3.* He is perhaps to be identified with the person of the same name who was Chancellor of the diocese in the year 1276-7.† According to the constitutions of the cathedral of Aberdeen, enacted in the year 1256-7, 'it was of the Chancellor's office that he should provide a proper master for the government of the schools of Aberdeen, able to teach the boys both grammar and logic.'‡ The same constitutions show us that 'the Master of the Schools of Aberdeen' was required to see to the due attendance, at matins and high mass, on all the greater festivals, of four singing boys, two who carried tapers, and two who bore incense.§

In almost all our dioceses, of which we have record, the supervision of the schools seems to have belonged to the Chancellor.

The chapter of Glasgow modelled itself after that of Salisbury, where, in the middle of the thirteenth century, the Chancellor's office was defined to be the charge of governing the schools, the repair and correction of the books, the choice of the lessons or readings, the keeping of the chapter seal, the framing of letters and charters, and the like.¶ In the end of the fifteenth century, we find the Chancellor of Glasgow successfully asserting 'that, from time immemorial, he and his predecessors had had the unquestioned right of instituting and removing the Master of the Grammar School of Glasgow, and of taking care, rule, and oversight of the same, so that, without leave of the Chancellor for the time being, it was not lawful for any one to hold a grammar school, or, publicly or privately, to teach

The reader, who does not require such an explanation, will, I hope, excuse my saying, for the sake of others, that the 'ars grammatica' comprehended something much beyond what the words would now suggest. Indeed, they might, perhaps, be more properly translated 'classical,' or, what is the same thing, 'profane literature.' The Grammaticus was, as his name imports, a man of letters—these letters, however, to borrow the words of Augustine, 'non quas primi magistri, sed quas docent qui grammatici vocantur.' (Maitland's Dark Ages, p. 179.)

§ Regist. Episcop. Abberdon., vol. ii, p. 49.

The deed is preserved by which the Chancellor of Aberdeen gave institution to the Master of the Schools of Aberdeen in the year 1418. It sets forth that 'ad dignitatem Cancellerie predictae collacio beneficii Magistri Scholarum burgi de Abberdon pleno iure noscitur pertinere. The presentation to the office was with the provost and corporation of the burgh: institution was given by gift of the Chancellor's cap, 'per donationem birriti mei' (Extracts from the Burgh Records of Aberdeen, vol. i, pp. 4, 5; Kennedy's Annals of Aberdeen, vol. ii, p. 122.) In 1509, the Master of the Schools seems to have been both presented and collated by the provost and corporation, institution being given 'by gift of a pair of beads.' But the appointment seems to have been called in question, and we hear of an appeal to the court of Rome. (Extracts from the Burgh Records of Aberdeen, vol. i, pp. 80, 97, 98, 107.) In 1538, we see the Chancellor contending for the right of presentation, while the provost and corporation acknowledged his right of collation. (Id. pp. 151, 152.) The presentee of the provost and corporation appears to have obtained possession in the end. (Id. pp. 202, 231.) In 1550, the provost and corporation presented, and the Chancellor instituted. (Id. p. 277.)

and instruct scholars in grammar, or youth in letters, within the aforesaid city or university.'*

Dunkeld, like Glasgow, took the constitutions of Sarum for its type.† Its anarchist, writing in the beginning of the sixteenth century, relates that the Chancellor of that day, 'not unimindful of his office, had endowed a scholastic chaplain (scholasticum copellatum perpetuum) who was to serve St. George's church, and be Master of the Grammar School (et scolam grammaticalem recturum.‡)' The same Chancellor, it is added, contemplated another foundation for the promotion of grammatical learning ('si serretur, ecclesiae doctos grammaticam dabit.§)

The chapter of Murray copied from Lincoln, where the Chancellor had the rule of 'the schools of theology,' and 'the disposal of all the schools in the diocese, those of the prebends excepted, and this privilege, that without his leave no one could teach in the city of Lincoln.'|| This was the usage of the beginning of the thirteenth century. In the end of the fifteenth, we have an ordinance of the chapter of Murray, that 'a common school (generalis scola) shall be erected and built at Elgin by those who are bound to erect and build the same; and that the Chancellor shall appoint and ordain a fit person to rule and govern the same, and to teach those who resort to it, and instruct them in grammar.' In the meantime the parson of Kincardine, in Strathspey, was to be cited to shewby what right he held the office of Master of the School.**

The cathedral constitutions of Brechin gave the oversight of the song school to the Cantor, of the grammar school to the Chancellor. With consent of these dignitaries, it was provided that the college of choristers, founded in 1429, should have two chaplains, one to teach the music school, on the part of the Cantor, the other to teach the grainmar school, on the part of the Chancellor. The choristers, it may be observed, were tonsured. The foundation charter requires quod quilibet puerorum habeat tonsuram bene latam et rotundam durante tempore sue ministracionis in ecclesia.††

III. THE FERLEIGINN, SCHOLASTICUS, OR LECTURER.

What the Chancellor became in the English and Scoto-English churches, from about the twelfth century, the Ferleiginn seems to have been in the Irish and Scoto-Irish churches of an earlier age.

Colgan describes the office as it obtained in Ireland, first under the name of 'Scribnidh' or 'Scribhneoir,' that is, 'Scribe or Writer,' and subsequently, from about the middle of the tenth century, more commonly under the name of Ferleiginn, Lecturer, or Scholastic, literally, Man of Learning.* Almost every cathedral or conventional church of note, in the sister island, seems to have had its Ferleiginn, whose duty it was to see to the transcription of manuscripts, and copying of deeds, and to rule or teach the schools.† The Irish annals abound in notices of these Scribes or Lecturers.‡ Not the least famous of their number was the monk whom Alcuin addresses as 'Coleus lector in Scotia,' and whose death is thus recorded by the Four Masters under the year 789: 'Colgu na Duineaca ferleigind Cluana-macenois'—'Colgu O'Donoghoe, Lecturer of Cloumaenois.'§ The office was not un-

* 'The word,' says Dr. Reeves, 'is derived from FEAR, tir, and LEGINN, eruditio.' (Eccles. Antiq. of Down and Connor, p. 145.)

† 'Quia viri qui id munus [scribendi] priscis saeculis obibant, erant singulariter eruditii, ea rax successu temporis usurpata est ad denotandam personam quanlibet ecclesiasticam, cui ex officio incumbat, non solum transcribere antiqua monumenta, sed insuper eadem apprime collere et profiteri publice, docendo, et nova opera in lucem edendo. Solebat enim in quolibet monasterio celebri cathedralibus ecclesiae esse aliquis ex monachis aut clericis, singularis eruditiosis, cui non solum membra manus publicae lectionis sustinendas, verum etiam penitus rimandi, observandi, et alius scilicet patrias antiquitates, eisque historias, aut annales sui temporis subtexere. Et hinc tempore primitivae nostrae ecclesiae et paene usque ad medium noni saeculi vocabatur Scribhneoir vel Scribhnuoir, id est, Scriba vel Scriptor. Sed in ecclesiis cathedralibus nomen illud videtur a medio ieiuni saeculi et deinceps transire in alind nonac, nempe Ferleiginn, id est, Praelector vel potius Scholastus ac. Quod autem haec nominis mutatio sic contigerit duo argumenta mibi reblunt satis probabile. Primum, quod in Annalibus Dungallensibus seu Quatnacis Magistrorum legam eundem nunc Scholasticum, nunc Scribam appellari. . . . Secundum est, quod inter viros illustres ecclesiastarum cathedralium et celebriorum monasteriorum advertamus numeratos Scribas usque ad definitum tempus, e. g. usque ad medium vel aliquando usque ad finem pro decimi saeculi, nulla interea, velatis parca, Scholasticon facta mentione: deinceps vero Scholastics, nulla, aut sane rara, Scribarum facta mentione, continuo in hisdem Annalibus recenseri. . . . Ex his constat non solum munus et nomen Scribare in Scholastici officium et nomen desivisse, sed et insuper solum Scribarum noui fuisse vel paulo ante finem eiusdem saeculi: utrumque autem indifferenter, saltem in diversis locis, toto pene illo saeculo.' (Colgan, Trias Thamauturga, pp. 631, 632.)

Dr. Reeves quotes an Irish canon of the eighth century, which ranks the Scribe next after the Bishop and the Abbot. (Eccles. Antiq. of Down and Connor, pp. 149, 150.)

Our earliest Scotch charter, that of King Duncan, the son of Malcolm, at Durham, exhibits the cross of 'Grenton the Scribe,' beside the crosses of the princes of the blood, and the other magnates of the northern court. (Diplomat. Scot.; Raine's North Durham, append.; Sir James Dalrymple's Collect., p. 229.) We have the name of a still earlier scribe of Scotland, 'Thana, the son of Duda-brach,' who wrote at 'Migdale' between the years 839 and 842, when 'Pheratb, the son of Bergeth,' was King of the Picts. (Pinkerton, Enq. into Hist. of Scot., vol. i., p. 462, edit. 1814.)

† Lanigan enumerates the deaths of about twenty, during the first half of the eleventh century. (Eccles. Hist. of Ireland, vol. iii., pp. 431, 432.)

known in England and France. Du Cange adduces instances of its occurrence in the conventional church of Lindisfarne, the Iona of the Northumbrian shores, and in the cathedral church of Auxerre, in Burgundy, the seat of the ancient bishopric and monastery of St. German.*

We read, in the Annals of Ulster, that, in the year 1011, ‘Muredach O’Crican, successor (combarba) of Columkille, and Lecturer (fer leighinn) of Armagh, slept in Christ.’† The ‘coarb of Columba’ seems generally to have inherited the rights of that saint both in Erin and in Albany. The same chronicles relate that, in the year 1034, ‘MacNia O’Uchtan, Lecturer (fer leighinn) of Kells, was drowned while on his voyage to Albany, with the books of Columkille, and three of the reliques of Patrick; and thirty of his men were drowned with him.’‡

About a century afterwards, we meet the Ferleiginn or Lecturer of Iona. Thus the Annals of Ulster record, under the year 1164: ‘The holy brotherhood of Hy, that is, the arch-priest Augustin, and the Lecturer (ferleiginn) Dubside, and the disertach Mac Gilla Duib, and the chief of the Keldees§ (cenn na Ceileude) Mac-

Ceux des abbayes prennent les noms de copiste (anamusus), de lecteur, de scolastique ou ecolatre.’ (Elements de Paleographie, tome i, p. 212. Paris, 1838.)

† Collectan. de Rebus Albanicis, pp. 270, 271; Lanigan, Ecel. Hist. of Ireland, vol. iii, p. 411.

‡ Collect. de Rebus Albanicis, pp. 272, 273; Lanigan, Ecel. Hist. of Ireland, p. 431. The Annals of Ulster record, under the year 1040, the death of ‘Mael Muire O’Uchtan, combarba of Columkille.’ (Collect. de Rebus Alban., pp. 272, 273.)

§ This is not the only passage which might be adduced against Dr. Lanigan’s somewhat too sweeping assertion, that ‘it happens, unluckily for the fanciful theory of the Culdees being derived from Columkille, that in none of the lives of that saint, nor in Bede, who very often treats of the Columbian order and monks, nor in the whole history of the monastery of Hy and of its dependencies, is the name of Culdees, or any name tantamount to it, once mentioned.’ (Ecel. Hist. of Ireland, vol. iv, p. 296.) We find Culdees at Iona, in a list of Scottish bishoprics and abbeys which Mr. Stevenson has printed from a MS. of the thirteenth century. (Scalacronica, p. 242.) But both these are late instances; and there seems no reason to qualify what Dr. Lanigan has said as to the absence of all contemporary or nearly contemporary mention of Culdees in connection with St. Columba and his disciples.

The ‘disertach,’ of whom the text makes mention, as one of the spiritual chiefs of Iona, was perhaps a hermit or superior of a community of hermits. ‘Disert,’ says Dr. Reeves, ‘is merely an Irish form of the Latin desertum. It primarily signified ‘a sequestered place,’ and was afterwards applied to the church erected in such a spot; hence it came to signify ‘a hermitage’: as a prefix to the names of churches it was exceedingly common.’ (Primate Colton’s Visitation, p. 120.) Of our Scotch ‘Diserts,’ that which is now best known, ‘Dysart,’ in Fife, first appears as the retreat of St. Servan, the saint to whom the foundation of Keldee Hermits in Lochleven was dedicated. (Wyntown’s Cronykil, book v, chap. xii, l, 1170; Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 113-117; Breviar. Aberd., prop. sanct. fol. xv, Jul. 1.)

Our Scottish charters of the twelfth and two following centuries, abound in notices of Hermits—e. g., Lib. Insulae Missarum, p. 4; Regist. Episcopat. Glasg., vol. i, p. 89; Regist. Episcopat. Morav., pp. 4, 32; Miscell. of Spalding Club, vol. ii, p. 307; Genealogic. Deduct. of Fam. of Rose of Kilravock, p. 118. We have glimpses of the eremitical life of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries in Joan. de Fordun, Scotichronicou, lib. v, cap. xxxvii; and in the Chronica de Mairos, pp. 188, 189. So recently as the year 1606, ‘the adyowson of the office of hermitage of the chapel of St. Lawrence the Martyr, on the lands of Overkelwood,’ in Dumfriesshire, continued to be enumerated among the hereditary rights of the family of Gledstanes of Craigs. (Inquisit. Special. vicecom. Dumfries. no. 36.) Seven hermits appear in the train of St. Rule. (Pinkert. Enq. Hist. Scot., vol. i, p. 461.) Nor is this, or what is recorded of the Isle of Lochleven, the only reason for supposing that the brotherhood of the Keldees contained an eremitical order. Joceline of Furness, writing towards the end of Forellraig, and the other good men of Hy, go to the successor (comarba) of Columkille, Flatherty MaeBrolcain, to take the abbey (abdaine) of Hy, by the counsel of Somerled, and the men of Argyll and Innisgall, and, with the consent of the successor (comarba) of Patrick [that is, the Archbishop of Armagh], and the King of Erin, O'Lochlainn, and the chiefs of the race of Eoghan.*

A Lecturer presents himself in the genealogy of the MacIntosches, which Mr. Skene has printed from a Gaelic MS. of the fifteenth century. It traces the descent of Gillie Chatan, the great progenitor of the Clan Chattan, from 'Gilbert, the son of Diarmuid, called the Lecturer (fear legin.).'†

The twelfth century, says of the disciples of St. Mungo, as they survived in the traditions of Cumbria: 'Mor' primitiae ecclesiae, sub Apostolis et eorum successoribus, nichil proprium possidentes, satis sobrie, juste, et pie, et continentissime viventes, in singulis tamen consulis exquirant et sapientiam maturaverant, sicut et ipsi Sanctus Kentegernus commorabantur, unde et Cliri Sapulares et vulgo Cllei' nunupabantur.' (Vit. S. Kentegerni, cap. xx.) Strathclyde was a Welsh dominion; and it is to be remarked that the Keldes who survived in Wales, at the close of the twelfth century, were believed to derive their name from the celibacy which they practised, before it was yet universal in the British churches. Gerald de Barri writes of the island of Bardsey, 'on the east of Caernarvon,' 'quam monachi inhabitant religiosissimi, quos Celtas vel Celides vocant.' (Giraldus Cambrensis, Itiner. Cambriæ, lib. ii, cap. vi.) Contrast these solitary, self-denying, Keldes with the married Keldes of St. Andrew's, as these good easy canons have been shewn in a previous note.

There was a distinction between the hermit and the anchorite. We seem to have had both in Scotland. It was the latter and more austere recluse that was held in such regard by St. Margaret, as her confessor Turgot tells us: 'Quo tempore in regno Scottorum plurimi, per diversa loca separatis inclusi, per magnam vitæ distinctionem, in carne non secundum carnem vivebant. Angelicam enim in terris conversationem duebant. In his Regina Christum venerari, diligere, suæque crebrius adventu et alloquo visitare, atque illorum se precibus satagrabat commendare. Et cum non impetrare posset, ut ab ea terrenum aliquid vellent accipere, petebat obnoxios, ut ei aliquid eleemosynæ vel misericordia faciendum dignaretur præcipere. Nec mora: quidquid illorum voluntatis erat, devota implevit: vel pauperes ab egestate recreando, vel quosque afflictos a miseria quibus oppressi fuerant relevando.' (Pinkert. Vit. Antiq. Sanct. Scot., p. 345.)

On the anchorites or 'inclusi' of Ireland, see Harris, Sir J., Ware's Works, vol. ii, pp. 232-236. Lanigan's Eccl. Hist. of Ireland, vol. iv, p. 402. Both hermit and anchorite were in great repute in Wales, at the end of the twelfth century: 'Heremitas et Anachoritas abstinentia majoris magisque spiritualiter alibi non video.' (Giraldus Cambrensis, Cambriæ Descript., cap. xviii.)

* I am indebted for this instructive passage to a friend, peculiarly accomplished in Cælic learning, William Forbes Skene, Esq., who transcribed it from the MS. Annals of Ulster at Dublin.

It was in the year in which this transaction took place, that Somerled made his last great rising against the King of Scots. (Chronica de Maioribus, p. 79.) Not long afterwards, we find the Scotch King granting to the canons of Holyrood the churches in Galloway, which belonged to Icolmkill. (Lib. t. art. S. Crucis, p. 41.)

† Collect. de Rebus Albaniacis, pp. 52, 53. Mr. Skene first interpreted fear legin in this place as 'the Leinster man,' but he permits us to say that he is now satisfied that it means 'lecturer' or 'reader.'

The Clan Chattan was peculiarly a ghostly tribe. It took its distinctive appellation from a saint that kinsman of St. Blane, who was patron of Aberuthven in Stratherne, and gave name to Ardchattan and Kilchattan in Lorn, to Kilchattan in Bute, to Kilchattan in Gigha, and to other churches in the West Isles. This sept was the hereditary keeper of a sacred stone, on which oaths were taken, by which the sick were healed, and armies put to flight; and while, as we have seen the whole clan sprung from the loins of a Ferleiginn, the name of one of the two races into which it was divided proclaimed a second descent from a parson. It was not the only tribe which boasted a spiritual pedigree.

The name of the MacNabs attests their monastic origin, 'their first descent being from an Abbot,' says a writer, recording the tradition of the seventeenth century. (Patrick Gordon's Britanes Distemper, p. 97, Aberd. 1714. Spalding Club.)

The surname of the Earl of Ross, in the reign of King Alexander II., was Macintart, that is, 'son of the priest,'—his descendants went to battle in the shirt of St. Duthac, in the same manner

We have a more instructive record of the Lecturer of St. Andrew's. Between the year 1211 and the year 1216, a controversy arose between Simon, Prior of St. Andrew's, and his convent, on the one part, and 'Master Patrick, Master of the

as the Queens of the Scots clothed themselves, in their hour of travail, in the shirt of St. Margaret—and the lineage of what seems to have been a still earlier dynasty of those great northern earls, may perhaps be traced to the coarb or lay Abbot of St. Maolrubha's ancient monastery of Aporcrus or Applecross.

The line of the lay Abbots of Brechin disappears from record about the middle of the thirteenth century.

But the race of the lay Abbots of Abernethy, ennobled by the title of Lord Abernethy, in the middle of the fifteenth century, still flourishes. It was to its ecclesiastical descent, doubtless, that its chief owed the distinction which he shared with the Earl of Fife and the Priest of Wedale, of being one of the three judges of the law of Clan MacDuff—itself, perhaps, a privilege of mixed ecclesiastical and judicial origin—a right, it would seem, partly of 'sanctuary,' partly of 'regality,' distinguished from the common mass of such jurisdictions, by being personal not territorial, inherent in a tribe not attached to a church or barony. Another privilege enjoyed by the chief of the sept of MacDuff—that of placing the King of Scots in the royal seat at Scone, on the day of his coronation—seems also to have an ecclesiastical aspect. If the last privilege claimed for the tribe—that of leading the van of the King's host, in the day of battle—appear to be of a different character let two things be remembered: firstly that, as the editor of Wynntown has remarked, it is doubtful if any such privilege existed; secondly, that even such a warlike function was not inconsistent with the habits of the lay abbots of the tenth, and two following centuries. Thus, the Annals of Ulster record the deaths, in battle, of Duncan, Abbot of Dunkeld, in the year 965, and of Crinan, Abbot of Dunkeld, in the year 1045. (Collect. de Reb. Alban., pp. 294, 265, 272, 273.) Hear, too, what Gerald de Barri relates of the lay Abbot of Llanbadarn-fawr: 'Contigit autem regnante Stephano, qui successit Henrico primo, militiis quondam de Armorica oriundum Britannia, peragratis regionibus multis, ut variarum gentium tam urbes quam mores discerneret, huc tandem forte fortuitu adiectum esse. Cum itaque die quodam festivo ad missae celebrationem adventum Abbatis tam clerici quam populus expectaret, denum Abbat ventienti cum aliis occursans, vidit turbam juvenum venire circiter viginti mox gentis expeditam, et armis munitione: cumque querenti, quisnam illorum Abbas esset, virum quadam ostenderet cum lancea longa praecedentem: intrens in eum, et admirans ait: Nonquid aliud habbitum aliumve baculum Abbas iste, quam illum, quem nunc profert, habet? Responderunt: Nequamquam. At ille: Sat, inquit, hodie novitatis vidi, satque miraculi jam audiui. Et ab illa statim hora reversus them labori posuit et explorationi.' (Giraldus Cambrensis, Itiner. Cambrie, lib. ii, cap. iv.) If the Earls of Fife had any privilege or place of honour in the armies of Scotland, it may possibly have been as the hereditary keepers of some consecrated banner, such as the 'Brebennach' of St. Columkille, which King William the Lion bestowed upon the Monks of Arbroath, under whom it was held by a long line of Monymuskis, Urrys, Frasers, and Irvines. (Regist. Vet. de Aberbroth, pp. 5, 10, 73; Collect. on Shires of Aberd. and Baoff, pp. 511-517.)

The first Earl of Fife, certainly known to record—the son of St. Margaret—was at once an Earl and an Abbot. The second, Constantine, who appears before the year 1124, was 'a great judge in Scotland,' 'vir discretissimus,' 'magous judex in Scotia,' 'vir discretus et facundus'—a character less likely in that age to be applied by a cloistered scribe to a layman than to an ecclesiastic. (Regist. Priorat. S. Andree, pp. 116, 117.) The judicial function of 'Mair of the King' appears to have been hereditary in the Earl of Fife, in the reign of King Alexander II. (Act. Parl. Scot. vol. i. p. 68.) Tradition represented the fabulous MacDuff, as the progenitor as well of the MacIntoshs as of the Abernethys—both, as we have seen, families of spiritual descent.

The old lords of Luss, now represented by the knightly house of Colquheoun, drew their origin, in the thirteenth century, from a Dean of Lennox, who probably held his dignity, along with the lands of Luss, (the patrimony, it would seem, of the ancient church or monastery of St. Kessog), by hereditary title. He appears to have transmitted some remnant of ecclesiastical immunity to his descendants. In the year 1316, King Robert I. confirms the charter, by which Earl Malcolm of the Lennox, of his devotion to St. Kessog, frees the lands of Luss from all burden of prise, caption, and carriage, and undertakes that the men dwelling upon them shall not be called upon to bear witness, either by the Earl's bailiffs and serjeants, or by the bailiffs and serjeants of the justiciar of our Lord the King. (Cart. Comitat. de Levenax, pp. 97, 21, 22.) Similar privileges were conceded by the same Earl Malcolm to the men dwelling upon the lands of the Mouks of Paisley, within his earldom. (Regist. Monast. de Passelet, pp. 203-5.)

The Dean of Lennox was not the only churchman of the diocese of St. Kentigern who left a heritage of lands to his son. We find the Dean of Clydesdale—called also the Dean of Stobo, in like Schools of the city of St. Andrew's, and the poor Scholars of the same city, on the other part, regarding the land of Garriech, and certain measures of barley which Master Patrick and the Scholars claimed from the land of Neuechi, and the 'cane' which was wont to be paid from the lands assigned to the Prior and convent, by the authority of William, Bishop of St. Andrew's, in amicable settlement of the strife between the Prior and convent, and Master Laurence, Archdeacon of St. Andrew's. Pope Innocent III. appointed the Bishop of Glasgow, the Abbot of Melrose, and the Archdeacon of Glasgow, to determine the controversy, which 'was amicably settled in this wise,' says the record, 'with the assent and goodwill of the said Master Laurence, who was both Archdeacon and Lecturer (Ferleya) of the said city. That is to say, the land of Garriech and the land which is called Neuechi, shall remain with the Prior and Convent freely and quietly for ever, in terms of the charter of Bishop Richard, of good memory; but the Prior and Canons, and their successors, shall yearly, at the feast of St. Martin, pay to the foresaid Laurence the Lecturer (Laurentio ferlano) and his successors, at the house of the Lecturer of the said city, (in domo Ferlani ejusdem civitatis) situated within the same, for the use of the poor Scholars of the said city, the old 'cane' of the lands which they hold in their own hand . . . which 'cane' [amounting to forty stones of cheese, seventy measures of barley, and a sheep] shall be levied from the tenants by the servant of the Lord Prior, accompanied by a servant of the Lecturer (uno seriente Ferlani), and shall be paid to the Lecturer (Ferlano) in manner above written . . . Thus was agreement made between the parties, and by authority confirmed, so that neither Archdeacon, nor Lecturer (Ferlanus), nor Master of the Schools, nor poor Scholars, shall hereafter move controversy against the same, regarding the lands aforesaid, nor the 'cane', nor any other thing whatsoever.'

We see here the three grades of the Schools, the Master of the Schools, and the Ferleiginn, exhibited together in their proper order and relation.

At St. Andrew's, the functions of Lecturer and Archdeacon were, in one inanner as the Dean of Lennox was styled also Dean of Luss, from the church, which was his chief benefice or inheritance—about the end of the twelfth century, succeeded by his son in a portion of the old domain of the sanctuary of St. Machute. (Lib. de Calchon, pp. 82, §3, 270; Regist. Episcopat. Glasg., pp. 41, 46, 73; Lib. de Melros, pp. 113, 114; Lib. Cart. S. Crucis, p. 42.) The parson of Stobo, says Mr. Innes, 'was styled Dean, and was, it would seem, in very early times hereditary, like some of the heads of the regular convents.' (Origines Parochiales Scotiae, vol. i, pref., p. xxi.)

The title of Dean in Scotland, in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, seems to have been applied somewhat loosely. One and the same person, for instance, would appear to be styled 'Dean of Muthill' in one charter, and 'Prior of Muthill' in another. (Regist. Episcopat. Morav., p. 469; Lib. Insule Missarum, pp. 63, xxxvii.) The 'priory' was a foundation of Keltees. (Regist. de Cambuskenneth, MS.; Carte Monialium do Northberwic, pp. 7, 12.) Elsewhere we have mention of a 'Dean of Ratray' of a 'Dean of Fogghou' of a 'Dean of Tiningham' of a 'Dean of Kinghorn' of a 'Dean of Ayr.' (Lib. Ecel. S. Trinitatis de Scot. p. 53; Lib. S. Marie de Calchon, p. 106; Sir J. Dalrymple, Collect. Scot. Hist. p. 293; Regist. Monast. de l'Assunc., p. 137.)

stance at least, discharged by the same person. We can trace a connection between the offices elsewhere. Thus, Du Cange quotes a charter, of the year 1213, in which Hugo, the Archdeacon of Auxerre, narrates that, ‘to his office of Archdeacon it belongs to provide a Lecturer for the church of Auxerre, who shall order the whole course of reading.’*

The junction of the offices of Archdeacon and Ferleiginn at St. Andrew’s, may, perhaps, account in part for the absence of a Chancellor in that diocese—a point in which it resembled some of the Irish sees, such as Down, Connor, and Dromore, where, we are told, ‘before the Reformation there does not appear to have been any dignitary connected with the cathedral, except the Archdeacon.’† The restoration or new foundation of the chapter of St. Andrew’s, which was made in the beginning of the seventeenth century, left the metropolitan diocese of Scotland still without a Chancellor,‡ an arrangement which obtains, in the Irish diocese of Meath, to this day.§

The union of the functions of Archdeacon and Ferleiginn at St. Andrew’s, probably led also to the somewhat unusual combination of immunities, which the Archdeacon of St. Andrew’s possessed. He had the right of election of the Master of the Schools of the metropolitan city;|| he was Conservator of the privileges of the University; and to him belonged the office of investiture of all persons presented to benefices within the diocese of St. Andrew’s.** The nomination of the Archdeacon was with the King;†† and it needs but to consider the list of those who held the office, to see what its dignity and importance must have been, and to be satisfied of the care which was generally taken to choose men of learning for its duties.

I.—Mr. Martin to Dr. Fraser.

Madrid, November 1, 1679, N. S.

Deer Sir,

I shall not trouble yow with an impertinent relation of my journey hither, wherein, howeuer, there haue been some aduentures of no contemptible remark. I shall only tell you that I arrived here the latter end of September. Sir Henry Goodrick came hither a fortnight after, and we are but iust now got into a house of our own.

Sir W<sup>m</sup> Godolphin affected so much the honour of his late character, that he could not preuaile with himself to remoue his Majesties armes (whiche is the custome here to be placed ouer the dores of publick ministers) til the very day Sir Henry Goodrick appeared himself. Sir Henry's audience is deferred til his Catholic Majesties return from his journey to Burgos, whither he proceeded the 21st of the last month, to meet his royal bride. It would certainlie be worth a man's time to be present at the motion of the court toward the frontier, but particularie at the deliuerie of the Queen into the hands of the Spaniards, to obserue how the young princesse will be astonished at the extrauagant figures of the Dons, but most of all how she will be surprised to see with what a silly meen her lord and spouse will acost her in his first approaches, how awkwardly he will put off his hat, and what a short compliment he will make her of S. V. M. bien venuida, words that I hear he has been as many months learning as there are letters in them, and which now he says much better without book then his Ave Maria. It is reported that he is strangelie enamoured of his young Queen, that he was wont to gaze away whole days on her picture, which he had in his closet, that he often would make reverences to it, and sometime kiss it, practising upon the shadow to fit himself for the substance; and as a mark that he is a great galant, he not long since commanded all the Queen mother's maids to leave off their fardingals, and ordered that mode should neuer more be seen in palace, because he was told it was not used in France, and that his Queen would not endure it.

When I haue been long enough here to make serious obseruations, I shall send you the true character of this court in its present posture since D. Juan of Austria's death, and be punctual in giuing all other occurrences here from, Deer sir,

Your most faithfull humble Seruant,

JO. MARTIN.

Pray, sir, giue the enclosed to the gentlewomen to whom they are directed, if they be still with you, if not, send them where they are, burn or dispose of them as you please; but pray forget not to give my respects to Mrs. Nelly and my deer Lord Burford.

II.—Mr. Martin to Dr. Fraser.

Madrid, March 6, 1680, N. S.

Deer Sir,

Tho' no circumstance can encrease the value I haue for your letters, yet the first I haue receivied from you (which, I know not by what accident, has loitred strangely by the way) accompanied with those curious transcripts, and so full a relation of affairs at home, givens me the satisfaction of seeing that you euen take pains to entertain me at this distance, and that I don't please myself with a vain fancy when I think you have a kindnessse for mee.

I wish I could make you some proportionable return from hence; but you haue the aduantage of living in a court which is at present the greatest scene in Europe of wit and intrigue, and I the misfortune of being confined to a place inhabited with the most stupid sort of animals in the world. You must know that I mean the men here; as for the women, I must confess I spend some part of my time with them pleasantly enough, but not to a degree as to forget the charmes and advantages of our English beauties, to whom I pay a thousand times a day many tributary sighs and wishes.

I can now say little to you of my Spanish hero, who, I perceive, will never afford any subject for a sublime poem. He is not half so much in love with his young spouse as he was before he saw her; however, he is oftener in her company than at the council board; he converses and plays with the ladies of palace at canterlow and at one-and-thirty; but the pleasure he takes at crosse and pile and push-pin, shewes they are his favorite games. He expresses his devotion by the frequent visiting of churches and miraculous images; his learning, in being able to spell his name now without the help of his secretary; and his courage, in venturing to kill rabs with a crosse-bow; to conclude, his accomplishments are such, that the Spaniards have as much reason to adore him, as the Egyptians had, in old times, to fancy a divinitie in catts and garlick.

The Duke of Medina Celi is made first minister of state, a person whose worth and merits are equal to his high birth, and from whose integrity we may reasonably expect the monstrous irregularities of this government will be in some measure rectified.

The fall of mony to one fourth part of its former value has spread an inconceivable confusion over these kinglomes, an expedient made use of to fill the King's coffers, and which would never have been endured by any subjects but these of Spain, who are as famous for being insensible of injuries as they are of benefits.

Our late ambassador, Sir W<sup>m</sup> Godolphin, stil continues here, his breast filled with envy, and ready to burst with a million of poisonous thoughts that afflict him. I haue little time at present, my next may give you a long relation of this gentleman.

I haue written to Mr. Wiseman, who is now in Andalusia, on his way to England, and owes me mony, to pay you, at his return, that summe which you had the kindness to furnish me with when I was there, who, I question not, will be punctual in that matter. The book you mention I will look for, and send you, by the first opportunitie, from, Dear sir,

Your most obedient and humble Servant,

Mr. Fraiser.

JO MARTIN.

Pay my humble respects to my Lord of Burford, &c.

III.—Mr. Martin to Dr. Fraser.

Madrid, March 20, 1680.

Deer Sir,

Since we entered into the serious time of Lent, we haue no obiects here but of mortification. The continual noise of misereres in the churches, and the dismal sight of penitents scourging their insolent flesh in euery corner of the streets, is the only entertainment we haue at present in this Catholic court, wher you'l imagine how impatientlie the galants and ladyes wait for Easter, to put on fine cloathes, change their hypocritical faces, and sin publickly without scandal.

The few French that came hither with the Queen do not, it seems, love her Majesty so well as to endure the country for her sake, hauing already conceied such preuidices against it, as that the greatest part of them will return on foot rather then stay here. Amongst the rest, Monsieur Guiehard the poet, at the head of a troop of about thirty musicians, mounted on able asses, will begin his journy when they haue giuen him money to buy a pair of boots.

These ministers are almost of opinion that the French King will still be troublesome to them in Flanders, and yet seem not very uneasy since England thinks fit to declare a great concerne for the preseruation of those countries; and I believe they would very willingly leane us the glory of so nobill a designe, without any share with us but in the profit of it. The truth is, they haue such confidence in his Majesties interesting himself in their cause, that they euen wish for a new breach with France, as a means to repair the disaduantages of the Nimeguen treatie, by another they expect more in their fauour. They haue lately taken from Monsieur Villars, the French embassadour here, the priuilege of that jurisdiction about his house, as has been for many ages enjoyed by all foreign ministers, in return (as is said) of the ill treatment of the Duke of Joacnaro, the embassadour of this crown, in Paris. I have no more, but to professe myself, as I am with unfeigned respect, Deer sir,

Your most affectionate humble Servant,

Mr. Fraiser.

JO. MARTIN.

IV.—Mr Martin to Dr. Fraser.

Madrid, April 17, 1680.

Deer Sir,

We haue been awakened here out of that lethargy and neglect of business our humour does so naturally engage us in, by a late expresse from Paris, with loud and threatening demands of satisfaction for the affronts pretended to haue been put on the French ambassadour in this court, (of which I gaue you an account in a former letter), and with declarations of such high resentment, that we now find ourselves reduced to the necessities of being more greedy of appeasing, than we were rash in prouoking the displeasure of that troublesome monarch, and to win the continuance of his good friendship by a shameful condescencion to those methods (pardon the word) which he imposeth on us.

My hero is so diuided between his deuotions and his amours, that it will be a question with posterite which he frequented most, the altars or the ladyes cushions; tho' I'me perswaded the learned man that is to write the history of the actions of his life will shew that his gallantry and his piety goe with equal steps, and that he may as well be thought a saint as to deserue the opinion of the fair sex. It is obserued in his prayers that he is particularly addicted to the glorified souls of women (tho' some hereticks think these are none at all) for the great interest they haue in heauen; for, after he had almost consumed his lungs in calling upon St. Peter and St. Paul for rain, and all to no purpose, he no sooner invoked St. Bridget, St. Teresa, and St. Catherine, when immediatly there fell many gentle and refreshing showers, that haue happily deliuered us from the fears we were in of wanting bread. This being holy week, you must not admire if I haue taken notice of these remarkable passages of miracle and deuotion.

The care which has been taken for the encrease of the number of councellors of state, shewes that this court is not altogether unconcerned for the good direction of their affairs. Those who haue been named to that honour are the Duke of Villa Hermosa, governor of Flanders; the Marquis of Velez, vice-king of Naples; Don Melehor Nauarra, the inquisitor-general; the Duke of Albuquerque; the Conde de Oropesa; and the Marques of Ma[n]zera. This place affords nothing more and I must tell you that I live under an impatient expectation of your fauour to, Deer sir,

Your most faithfull humble Servant.

Mr. Fraiser.

JOHN MARTIN.

V.—Dr. Lloyd, Bishop of St. Asaph, to Dr. Fraser.

Nov<sup>r</sup> 10, '84.

My very worthy friend,

If you had been less kinde to me, I should have been more civill to you. I mean, if you had not writt me so long a letter, it would not have been so long before I had answerd it; for, having fill'd my hands with business in this retirement, I can scarce afford myself time to write a long letter, tho' I may venture at a line or two between whiles. But not to make the matter wors by making a studied excuse, I thank you for your patience in reading the book which I made bold to put into your hands. It was a boldness indeed to present you with a piece which seems to be designed against the antiquities of your countrey; but I know you have considerd on my side that my business led me to it. And to do right to my cause, I was obliged to speak the plain truth, which is to be preferred, as the philosopher says, before any friend whatsoever, so I may add before ones countrey too. The patriarchs, whose praise is in the gospell, left their countrey for truth's sake. And as well to shew you that I am of their minde, as to make some amends to your country, I made as bold with my owne in shewing the defects of our writers. For the excuse that you bring from the wast of all records that was made by King Edward I., I thought I had prevented, by shewing that, in that King's reigne, the records that were pleaded against him were mere fictions, tho', indeed, they were not the same fictions that have been set up since by later writers.

For what you say of the objections that are made against the tale of Amphibalus, that the same might he made against St. Alban, I can by no means grant it to you; onely thus far I go along with you, I do not believ that St. Alban sufferd in the time of Diocletian, nor does our Gildas affirm it any farther than as a conjecture, conjicimus is his word; but it was through his unskilfulness in ancient history he knew not that which you truly say and prove; and I said and proved it in that book, that, in Diocletian's time, there was no persecution in Britain. This does not take away from the authority of Gildas, who was certainly a very true writer. There was not one untruth in his book. But his credit is engag'd onely for this, that when he writ, which was in the next century after the Roman times, there was an undoubted tradition of an Alban that suffered here for the faith under one of the Roman emperors, which emperor he conjectures to have been Diocletian.

For your 2nd argument from Mabillon's Analecta (which I have not by me) it may seem to be very considerable; for the piece which you quote from Mabillon is a litany writt about a 1000 yeers ago. But if that be tru which you say of the age, then it is of no authority at all in this matter; for from the time that the Saxons came to be Christians till the yeer 800, they neither owned the British Christians, nor the Britains them, but as schismatics; and, therefore, I very much doubt that there is some inadvertency in that which you say of the age, or els in that which you say of the many British and Saxon saints which are together in that litany. For your 3rd argument, which is against the authority of Bede in this case, I willingly grant it is no better for St. Alban then for K. Lucius. I say for Bede's owne authority, I do not say the same of his author's. His author for K. Lucius is that raskally collection of the Gesta Pontificum. His author for St. Alban is Gildas beforementiond; and whatsoever is not in Gildas, I do not beleev it on the credit of venerable Bede. I grant you that Fortunatus Venatius was of Gildases age. One gives you the traditions of Gaul, and the other of Britain, concerning the same person, in an age when there was no historian of Gaul or of Britain that had written anything of our British church matters since the time of St. Alban, which I take to have been that of Decius or Valerian; so that there was nothing to be known of those times but by tradition, or from private writings of no greater authority; and from hence I observe a great difference between the credibilities of those things that are said of St. Alban, and those that are said of Pope Joan, whom you parallel with him. We reject the story of Pope Joan, not because she is not mentioned by any writer till 200 years after, but because she is shut out by writers that lived in the same age. Hincmar, then Archbishop of Reims, tells us how he was going to Rome to Pope Leo IV., and (saith he) when we were come to Turin, we understood that Pope Leo was dead; therefore we made a halt there for 2 or 3 weeks, and then we understood that Benedict III. was chosen in his stead. Now, if writers 200 years after tell us (as they do) of a Pope Joan that sate about 2 years, between this Leo and this Benedict, I think this one passage of Hincmar is enough to disprove them, and would be so if these writers had lived within 100 years, or even in the same age.

To the 4th thing you say, that Amphibalus was not the name of the garment, but caracalla: You might as well have said it was toga or penula, for all these are garments of different sorts. But that sort which St. Alban was said to have worn in the legend was Amphibalus; which our lying Jeffrey took occasion to turn into a man, and from our Jeffrey it came into all the authors you mention. And all those tales of the reliques of Alban and Amphibalus were made either by our Jeffrey, or by some of his associates; for he greased his pance at St. Alban's at the time of the discovery of those reliques, as I could prove if there were farther occasion; but this is more than the matter deserves.

I thank you for the information you give me of books that we are to expect; but my enquiry was for books of inscriptions that have been publisht since Reinesiuses time. I know of Lambeenis Carnuntum, and of Norises Monumenta Pisana. I beleev there may be more, and you would do me a great kindness in enquiring for such.

I take leav with all kindness and respect, being truly, sir,

Your very affectionate servant,

W. ASAPH.

VI.—Anne, Countess of Errol, to Dr. Fraser.

8th Februar, 1688–9.

Sir,

I had not thought on giving you a trouble of this kynd, till I had heard of that which I sent toward you with my Lord Keith had come to your hands, if a necessitie did not oblige me to it which I was not then thinking on, by my brother Perth's being imprisoned in the castell of Stirling, and having aluays been a very kind freind to me (except so far as his change of religion did a litle, on that account, byass him to the contrar) I could not but wish his relise from that restraint, and endeavor all that I could to get it made as easie as possible; which some people had the malice to mistake so far (at least to pretend they did so) as to begin to vent that nothing could make me so kynd to him (considering how hardly he had dealt by me on some occasions) but a being overcome to his errors, which was both groundless and unjust, for it is more then a tuelv monthe since he left off to importune me on that account; but at last I found out that it was invented to endeavor to freight me from doing him any more kyndness, or from doeing what I could to procure his relise; and having got notice that some of them who had said this of me was gone to London, I grew apprehensive that, at such distance, they might possibly come to doe me a very ill ofice with some at that place, whose good oppinion I am very loath to find a liklyhood to loss, and particularly your self, who (amongst several others that I have very much esteem for) can have no ground to valw me, but for my love to that truth which I look on as my greatest honor to profess. I hope you will accept favorablle of this vindication, and prevent my sufring under a calumnie which I had rather dye than deserv; and let not my endeavors for my brother's saftie be mistaken, which I wish not more sincerely to sucseed for the relation I have to him, then I doe for the hopes I have that I may one day see him a member of that gloryouss church, which it was his misfortune to fall from; and I pray the Lord may grant him the grace to improve the sufferings he is under, for the glory of God, and the good of his oun soul; and I entreat you may doe me the favor to deliver the letter hearwith inclosed to my Lord Bischope of Ely, which is humblie ofered, both to put his lordship in minl of my brother's unfortunat condition, and of my satisfaction for the great aplause and admiration his lordship's generous undertakings, with the other worthy bishopes of England, hes gained from all the world, which most needs be very loud wher it can be cleirly expressed, since, evin in this countrie, it meets with all the favorable comendation that the place is capable of, which I acknowledge is no great boast; yet, when all is given that can be, ther can no more be expected, and the unfortunat circumstances we are falen in amongst ourselves will at last render us yet far more despicable then before; for the zeal which some hes to ruine others, and the ambition others has to raise themselves, makes them so farr outrun comon measures of reason, they expose this poore remoat part of the kingdome to be ridiculed by all judicious men, and themselves, to the hazard of missing ther design; but God can turn all to good, and certainly he is now framing the world to some great design for his glory, and may it so appear as to draw all the world to his service.

I most ask your pardon for so much truble as I now give you, and I wish you may consider me as so far obliged by the corespondance you did for some time alow me, that I wish the continowance of it, that I may have ground frequently to assure you of my being, Sir,

Your most sincear friend and Servant,

ANNE ERROLL.

VII.—Anne, Countess of Errol, to Dr Fraser.

Slaines, 22nd Februar, 1689.

Sir,

Having got your letter of the 7th of Februar upon the 16th, I might before now have sent you my thanks for it, but my Lord Erroll's being very unwell about the time that the last post went from Aberdene, prevented my giving my self the satisfaction of that performance, and will I hope prevail with you to excuse it. The news you was pleased to tell me was very surprisingly great, and I am glad that you propose my getting of them soon, as ane incouragment to continow the favor, since I am very confident that your letters, if directed to Slaines, will not fear of coming to me, for I am sure those you formerly sent me nent not wrong by mistake.

I sent a very long truble of this kynd to you about ten days agoe, and it uill please me extreamly to know that the misrepresentations I then mentioned hes got no footing with you, for they uere very industriously spread a while with every body that was belived to have any favor for me; yet I bless God it hes done me no harm hearabouts, and I hope it uill shortly near away euery uther, but it did for some time vex me to get information of it from so many severall hands as uas pleased to tell me of it; and since my brother's condition does still more need the kyndness of his freinds, it is quite impossible for me to leav of my endeavours to help him, and much the rather that I find his misfortunes as yet coming rather from the efects of our old barbarous feuds, then from his errors in the government, which treuly I shal not offer to vindicat in any he did as a papist; but, by all that ever I could learn, his conduct in every thing as a statesman (abstracting matters of religion) uas as blamless as any that has been great in Scots affaers of a long time.

The Prince of Orange his circular letters for the approaching convention is just now dispersing in this country; my Lord Erroll got his this morning. I pray God send it a good ending, for it is of great comfort, and I am mightily conserned for ther security that is to be at it, since I hear there is ane army of people about Edinbrugh that hes kept them in trouble for severall weeks, and it is not yet perfectly understood what they would be at; but I am so much a coward as to be afraid extreamly of those warioris, if they come near a convention wher I most expect a great number of my friends to be.

Ther is also ane army of some hundreds of Highland men that hes threatned to come and destroy all my brother Perth's land. He is sending his two eldest daughters hear, who is realy extreamly fine young ladys, and it shal be much against my uill if any of them ever be in hazard of being put in a convent, for I love them uell, and I hope they shal not be permitted to goe abroad, though he says he designs they shall, but it most be prevented.

If my Lord Erroll had not been sikly of leat he had been or now at London, uher he might have made you betters ofers of his service then I can doe at this distance; but if any of us can doe you acceptably what may convince you of our sincerity, I assure you of our good will, and particularly of my oun, being

Your most humble Servant,

ANNE ERROLL.

VIII.—Anne, Countess of Errol, to Dr. Fraser.

Slaines, 22nd March, 1689.

Sir,

The generall complaint that uas over all this country for severall monethes together about the misscarying of letters, had the adition of regrate for the uant of some that uas designed for me; but I have now so much ground to hope that ther uill no more of such misfortune befall any corespondence, that I begin to use the ordinairie conveyances as formerly, and finds them so frequently sueseed as hes almost put me out of any apprehension of ther going urong; and I uish to hear that you are as much assured of it as I am, at least, I hope that very soon after your last letter (which I got this morning) hes come from you, that uich I sent to tell you of my having got your former one hes come to your hands, which, if it hes done, I uill be in no more dout about that matter, till I get some suche reason to turn suspitious as I formerly had.

I know not what to think of my brother Perth's condition, for he does not uant very many that hes inclination to pity him; and I got a letter from Doctor Burnett, whom I doe belive by this time to be bishope of Salisbery, and so sends hearuith the ansuere of it under that title, uich I intreat you may do me the favor to delivir to him, for his was so full of every thing that could be expected from the best of Christians, that I most keep that part of it only for admiration, and offer him my thanks for all that was favorable and obliging in it; for, though he could say nothing that could be beyond nhat I might expect from him, yet realy I most acknowledge it hes a great deall more of goodness and generosity in it then could be require l from any mortall, and I pray that God may reward his charity and piety as himself does desire, and that he may be convinced of my faithfull inclination to serv him, which I have ever had, from a sence of his great merit, and shall ever continow to have on that same account, with the adition of all I can add to it in graititud for so favorable ane obligation as I have receaved by his letter, which, my Lady Margret Hay tells me you was pleased to bring to her, and which I gave her the trouble of looking afteor, because I was not then certain of my letters either from or for you was fallen in any probable method of a safe conveyance, but I expect you wil allow me to give you the truble of hearafter, which I wil take as ane adition to your former favors, and endeavor to lett you see that I am not insensible of them.

What the Bishope of Salisbery is pleased to write me of my brothers is all so just, and so like himself, that I have nothing to say more of it, nor can I disire him to doe any other thing in ther consern than what he hes shounen himself inclined to doe without my proposing of it, though, when I consider the provocation he got, it's very admirable to find him so favorable; and I doe sincerely declare to yo, that to this hour, I know not how far they may have had a hand in the ill circumstances he was in by that government they had the misfortune to be leading men in, for I did not hear thrice from my brother Melfort since he went to stay in England, and it was both my Lord Errol's inclination and mine so much to keep ourselves from knowing what was done in Scotland, that we never was in any capacity of hearing more of state affairs then we got from publick accounts of them, and I am not sure it was not without much regrete we heard of many things that was done, and particularly the procedure against that worthy man, which I have many witnesses of my being so dissatisfied with, that I drew on myself the censure of being criminall, and suspicioous for my conduct in it; but for all this, I most still ounē that I know not how far they had a hand in it, yet I believe it to have been as much as makes me exceedingly admire his generosity towards them, and leaves me no room to wish for more then I can hope for from him, on ther account and on my ounē. I never had disire for more then that he should believe I had never altered from the esteem I had of him, and that he might consider me as one that should aluays retean ane inclination to serv him, answerable to the great character he had in the world, and the veneration I ever had for his great worth.

It is very uneasie for me to think on the condition this country is in, for we have only as yet in this corner of it heard of the tuo first dayes of the convention at Edinburgh; and things wes so gloomy and so divided ane aspect, that I am sadly apprehensive of some great misfortune, nor is it to be doubted, for ther is so many privat quarels, and every man so much endeavoring to be uppermost, that it will be a very hard matter to give our government quiet for a while; and the common poeple are so sett on edge by ther hopes of relife from all taxes, that they want but a litle of a disappointment to be on fire; and nobody knows whome to trust, for it is realy a very sad thing to consider how much division and quareling does threaten some mischief to come upon us, if God of his mercy do not prevent it, which I earnestly pray that he may doe; and since my Lord Erroll went away to the convention I have been in the most extream concern in the world for fear of him, nor can I be at peace least he may be involved in danger, though I am sure he will never do anything himself to draw it upon him.

The ill circumstanees Blair Drumond is in obliged him to come to this place and stay some days, it being a very peaceable part of the country, and far from any disturbance; and since he spoke very often and very kyndly of you, I hope it will not be unacceptable that I tell you of it; but since his missfortunes has drawn so much odium and clamour on him, I most also to you, who has ouned some freindship for him, endeavor his vindication from those aspersions that his being necessitate to retire gave a vent to, and I am sure there is none can know his case better then I doe now, for I did most particularly enquire at him of every thing that ever I had heard to his disadvantage, and he did so suficiently clear himself of them, as did convince me of his inocence, and would, I am sure, done as much to any that had heard him; but for one instance, as to his taking of monye, he says if ever it be proven upon him that he took it, otheruays then the place he had did require, he is content to loss all he has in the world; and for all the many thousands of pounds that he is said to have gained unjustly, he says if he be this day two thousand pound richer then he was when he entred to publiek employment, lett him fall in the former penalty, and loss his life to the hargan, and he might very well have gained that upon what was properly his oun; but if in everything he can be accused of he doe not as well vindicte himself, I know not what to say of it, for he has so far satisfied me of his honesty, that I canot dout him, and I wish you may also belive him worthy of your favor, and very faithfully your servant.

My brother Perth has sent his two eldest daughters hear, but ther is a French woman sent amongst with them, which I was not expecting; but our missfortune is such, wee know not as yet wher to get any advice in things of that kynd, for all about us is as confused as euer. They are extreamly good natured young ladys, but exceedingly lyable to all inconveniences that can attend the loss of a mother.

I have reason to ask your pardon for trubling you so much, yet shall not dout of my having it, since I am sure it is meant with no ill intention from

Your most humble Servant,

A. ERROLL.

I most expect your excuse for the confusedness of this letter from my condition at present.

IX.—Anne, Countess of Errol, to Dr. Fraser.

Slaines, 25th March, 1689.

Sir,

Though I have got two of your letters so soon hear that I have not great fear for the loss of any, yet I am not so sure if mine hes had all the success I wish them to have had, for I have not yet got any notice of your getting one of mine that mentioned my getting the first one you sent me affter my Lord Keith's coming to London, and that hes made me not venture all my stock at one fraught, but also try this conveyance by my Lady Margret Hay, to second what I wrot to you last ueek, inclosed with a letter for the Bishope of Salisbery.

I am sorry the Bishope of Ely hes left the court, for I uas in hopes he should have been my brother's freind at it; but since the Christian and generous cariage of the Bishope of Salisbery is so much to my satisfaction, I am fuly assured that he will meet with nothing ther that I can have reason to complean of, but my fears does sadly encreass, from the unruly divisions which are so greatly encreasing in this country; and since it is God alone that can prevent the rmine and desolation wee are threatened with, I pray that he may doe it, and bring every thing about for his glory, and the good of this nation, of which all the sober people are very inclinable towards England, but, in all appearance, ther is hot blood enough to hinder it for a while.

I filled up a sheet of paper so full of the concern of my freinds the last time I wrot to you, that I had not room for giving you any account of those papers you uas pleased to send me, and now I think I need only say that I know I want a great deall more then I got; but I am not resolved to fill this paper with so needless trifles, as to mention all the false steps befell in that matter, and it shall suffice to tell you that, about a moneth agoe, I got nine books with marbled paper covers, of which two was gilded, but all of them so spoild, that I admired a while in whose bands they could have been; for, to this hour, I know not certainly who sent them her, though I fancy them to be a part of those which Adair had the bringing down of; but James Hay writes to me that he shall get me more certain notice conserning them, for it was one Alexander Hay, ane appothecary, gave them to some servants of ours that was returning home from having been a part of those forces the country kept on foot a while this winter, so it is needless to tell you in what ill handling they have been; but this is not to depriv you of the thanks I owe you, nor to endeavor your loss by doing me that favor; for, since injustice is a fault I wish not to be guilty of towards ane enemie, I should be sorry to make it the return wher I am very well content to owe a kyndness.

As for what came in paquets, I got ane account of the Inquisition at Goa, and the first part of Doctor Sherlo's Preservative against Popery, in two seeverall ones; and a while after, my Lord Erroll being one night accidentally by when the black box was opened, saw a letter which he knew to be from you, and stole it up, in which he found the paper in vindication of the bishops; but he was told about that time to advertise me that ther was some very curiouss papers kept up that you had sent for me, but, indeed, I never saw more of them then I have hear named to you, and I doe heartily regrate my want of them, for I was exceedingly pleased with those I had the good fortune to get, and you will exceedingly oblige me if you will continuall in that maner to give me so desirable ane entertainment, whiche I intreat you may allow me to mention as a thing I wish for, and yet not at your loss, though it has wholy been so, for as far as it has yet come; which I most reckon amongst my missfortunes, since I am sure it is none of my fault, for I am and shall ever be willing, on all occasions, to approv my self.

Your most real and most humble Servant,

ANNE ERROLL.

Apyyll the 22, 1682.

My Lord,

I did intrust the manngagment of that affaire at court (quherof I have often spoken and written to your lordship) to my Lord Advocate,<sup>a</sup> and that vith your lordship's consent, and assurance of your assistance. I have bein alvayes expecting ane accompt of it from the advocate, and the bearer heirof, Jo. Clerke, my agent, hes bein still pressing for ane positive answer but can not have it, which prejudges me being uncertaine quhat I may rely on; so that I am necessitate to trouble your Lordship (tho' I thought not to have doen it) as too intreat your assistance and concurrence, for I know, at this instant of tym, your lordship can prevaile at court if you be villing, so that I shall not insist, being a vord to ane intelligent person is sufficient. My Lord, I expected one of the Clan Ronald hawks from you, for the last I got, after she ves a fowlslayer, I gave her back to you, and I expect assuredly this year one of them from your lordship, and if she does vell you may alvayes command me. Your lordship's servant, Alex<sup>r</sup> Moorisone, told that there vas ane goosehawks eyrie at Clova, and that your lordship commands them yearly, so that I intreat for ane goose hawke; and if your lordship doe promise ane falcon for ony field sport to any person at south, howsoon my hand is filled with ane gooshawke, because I cannot altogether vant ane hawke for partridging, then you may have my third hawke, which is exactly ane fowlslayer, for she hes slain at brooke vith my vther hawk these three yeares, and knowis ane fowle, and helped to kill severalls, but hed litle gate. I recommend my affaire to your lordship, and expectis you vill move therin and cause the advocate doe so, and let me have ane positive answer that I may rely on, which is the most earnest an humble desyre of,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most faithfull and ever vell vishing humble Servant, omnium qui intererant sinodo diffinitivam sententiam promulgavimus tam possessionem quam proprietatem ejusdem terre et hominum qui in ea manserunt ecclesie Sancti Andree et eidem Willelmo episcopo adjudicantes et prefato Duncano et successoribus suis perpetuum silentium imponentes. Et ut processus negotij plenius possit innotescere attestations quarum auctoritate predictam sententiam protulimus inferius scribi dignum dueimus. Sunt autem hec attestations.

Johannes de Hastinkes juratus dixit quod tempore episcopi Ricardi et tempore Hosberti Olifard qui tunc temporis habuit terram fuit vicecomes et forestarius de Moernes vidit multitudinem Scocolocorum in terra de qua est contentio scilicet Aberbuthenoth et quod si homines illius terre in aliquo quod spectaret ad vicecomitatum vel forestariam vexarentur ballivi Domini episcopi veniebant ad eum cum brevi Domini Regis et fidejubebant pro eis sicut pro hominibus episcopi et ad curiam episcopi.

Ysaac de Banvin juratus dixit quod tempore Osberti Olifard et Hugonis episcopi cum idem Osbertus erne accepta vellet proficiisci Iherusalem accepit ad firmam ab Osberto tanquam a domino terram de Aberbuthenoth quam Dominus Rex ei dederat cum toto jure suo pro servitio suo et tunc fuit Kirketun bene edificata vidit octo terram tenentes qui dieabantur persone et alias sub eis habentes domos et animalia in pasuis. Cum quereret quid juris haberet Osbertus in villa illa respondit sibi debere decem caseos de qualibet domo de Kirketun quales possent fieri sine diminutione lactis xv. diebus proximis ante festum Sancti Joannis Baptista vel post et ad bladum suum colligendum in autumno semel de unaquaque domo tres homines Retulit etiam predictum Osbertum sibi dixisse quod homines de terra de Kirketun [ ] et viatico in expeditione Domini Regis cum hominibus suis. De molendino cum quereretur respondit eos haberi molendinum qualibet die veneris sine multura Cum autem idem Ysaac vexaret eos volens eos sibi teneri eadem consuetudine molendi quam alij tenebantur quasi scilicet homines Osberti tenebantur ostenderunt ei locum ubi prius habuerunt molendinum in terra sua et quod potestatem habuerunt re-edificandi molendinum ibidem. Quod cum didicisset composuit cum eis videns quod sibi non expediret quod cum eis contendenter cum eos tueretur episcopus [quasi homines] suos. Cum autem idem Ysaac quereret ab eodem Osberto quid juris haberet vel in terra vel in possessionibus eorum respondit se nihil juris habere in Kirketum sed omnia esse in dispositione episcopi tanquam de terra propria ad conferendum terram et domos cui vellet. Et cum unus nomine Gillandres unipes esset ei magis rebellis alij credens eo amoto se alios pro voluntate sua posse tractare optulit episcopo Hugoni equum v marcarum ut eum amoveret Audito vero quod nativus esset de terra respondit episcopus quod nullo modo faceret. Aseruit etiam idem Ysaac quod per sex annos per quos terram illam tenuit nec tempore Osberti nec tempore Walteri qui ei successit aliquid aliud preter predicta recepit et medietatem blodwitorum et merchetorum et aliam medietatem recepit episcopus ut de hominibus suis Retulit etiam quod vidi seneschaldum Domini episcopi et alios tam clericos quam laicos de hominibus episcopi hospitari iu terra illa et apud illos homines tanquam proprios homines et in terra propria Aseruit etiam quod Walterus Olifard postea dedit terram suam de Aberbuthenoth Hugoni Swintun pro servitio suo et quod idem Hugo post obitum episcopi Hugonis mortuo Gilandres Scoloccos plures de Kirketun amovit unum post alium. Dunecanus filius ejus alios omnino amovit quos post obitum patris sui invenit. Dixit etiam idem Dunecanus amotis scoloccis incepit terram illam colere.

Adam de Banevin juratus dixit idem per omnia quod Ysaac avunculus ejus nisi quod dixit hoc factum fuisse tempore Ricardi pie memorie episcopi Sancti Andree.

Magister Ysaac juratus dixit quod ante consecrationem Rogeri episcopi pie memorie missus fuit per episcopos de Catenes et Moravia et Ros ut venirent ad consecrationem hospitatus est cum Helia sacerdote de Aberbutbenot et vidi ibi complures domos prout dicebatur in terra episcopi tempore istius Dunecani nec audivit dici quod aliquis thanus posuisset carrucam in terram illam antequam iste poneret Cum autem veniret ad Walterum Scottum in extremis laborantem ut hujus rei veritatem inquireret tanquam de homine veridico et in hijs perito et suppliaret ut pro salute anime sue ei hujus rei veritatem secundum conscientiam suam exprimeret respondit se plurimum admirari quod iste Dunecanus vellet istam terram Domini episcopi sibi appropriare et ibi dominium sibi vendicare cum in tempore viii thanorum vel plurium vidisset eam esse propriam Domini episcopi Sancti Andree Aseruit etiam se vidisse ibidem plures episcopos pluries hospitatos fuisse et cum eis comedisse et a domo suo exennia misisse et quia vidi mortem sibi imminere ista in scriptum redacta ut alias testimonium suum locum haberet sigillo suo coram uxore sua signari fecit.

Felix juratus dixit se vidisse tempore patris sui episcopos pie memorie Arnaldum et Ricardum hospitatos fuisse pluries apud Aberbuthenot in terra illa tanquam in propria in domo patris sui qui terram tenebat ab episcopis et ministrabat ipsis episcopis necessaria cum scoloccis ejusdem terre qui tum pertinebant ad terram illam Vedit etiam seneschaldo et tam clericos quam laicos de hominibus episcopi ibidem hospitatos fuisse itinerando ut in terra propria Domini episcopi Sancti Andree Dicit etiam quod vidit tresdecim thanos terram illam habuisse sed nullum inquietasse homines de Kirketun usque ad tempus Ysaac. Et quod episcopi Sancti Andree possiderunt pacifice terram illam soluto debito cano thanis usque ad tempus Ysaac de Banvin qui primus incepit vexare homines illius terre Post eum asserit Hugonem de Bene et presentem Dunecanum amovisse nativos et scoloccos de terra Dicit etiam quod nullus thanus terram illam coluit nisi per episcopum preter istum Dunecanum.

Hathakin sacerdos juratus dixit se vixisse temporibus sex episcoporum et usque ad tempus patris istius Dunecani episcopos Sancti Andree pacifice possidisse terram illam de Kirketun. Dicit etiam se bis eum Ricardo episcopo et semel eum episcopo Arnaldo ibidem hospitatum fuisse. Aserit etiam quod per vexationem patris istius et per vexationem illius homines terre illius a terra illa amoti sunt et quod nullus terram illam excoluit priusquam iste nisi auctoritate Domini episcopi.

Mauricius sacerdos juratus dixit se vidisse episcopum Ricardum in terra et homines illius terre ei necessaria ministrasse tanquam Dominio dicit etiam patrem istius et istum et Hugonem de Benne nativos et scoloccos a terra illa amovisse et istum terram coluisse.

Hugo seneschalus juratus dixit quod vidit episcopum Ricardum temporibus Malcolmi Regis Scottorum hospitatum in terra illa tanquam in propria fuisse et homines illius terre ei necessaria ministrasse tanquam Domino et cum eodem episcopo ibidem tunc temporis fuisse Requisitus quis primo nativos amoveret dixit se nescire sed hoc asserit pro certo quod nullus antequam [ ] terram illam excoluit preter episcopum.

Andreas de Bas juratus dixit se fuisse cum Hugone episcopo pie memorie fratre suo quum episcopus ibidem tanquam in proprio hospitatus est et de hominibus illius terre sicut de hominibus suis necessaria recepisse et munera in recessu suo in crastino. Dicit etiam se in temporibus episcopi Rogeri pie memorie se ibidem recepisse redditus episcopi scilicet duas gilvas vaccas nec loquutus est cum Dunecano vel cum alio nisi cum hominibus episcopi inde. Aserit etiam quod Duncanus post tempus episcopi Rogeri ex toto scoloechos amovit et terram illam preter episcopum coluit primus.

Bricius persona de Neudonase juratus dixit quod vidit episcopum Ricardum et episcopum Hugonem in terra illa tanquam in propria coneturum suum ab hominibus illius terre recipere tanquam ab hominibus proprijs et quod homines illi nativi licet essent vexati per Hugonem de Ben et per alios post tempus episcopi Rogeri per Dunecanum sunt amoti et quod primus terram illam excoluit preter episcopum.

Gillipedes juratus dixit quod vidit episcopos Sancti Andree Robertum Arnaldum et Ricardum hospitatos fuisse in terra illa tanquam in propria et coneturum suum sine omni contradictione tanquam ab hominibus proprijs recepisse. Aserit etiam homines nativos illius terre per vexationem Hugonis Suintun et Hugonis de Ben et istius Dunecani a terra illa fuisse amotos et istum Duncanum primum preter episcopum terram illam coluisse.

Malcolmus de Edivin juratus dixit se non vidisse sed audivisse a predecessoribus suis episcopos Sancti Andree jura sua a predicta terra habuisse juxta sermonem priorum.

Cormac de Neudoesc juratus dixit se vidisse episcopos Ricardum et Hugonem ibidem coneturum summ tanquam in terra propria et ab hominibus proprijs recepisse et per vexationem Hugonis de Ben et per patrem Duncani et Dunecanum homines amotos esse et istum Dunecanum terram illam arasse primo.

Sumerleith de Fetherhesau juratus dixit se vidisse episcopos Arnaldum et Ricardum ibidem tanquam in proprio sine contradictione esse et istum Dunecanum primo preter episcopum terram illam coluisse et dixit quod episcopus Rogerus per paupertatem eorum in quodam itinere suo coneturum suum omisit accipere et quod homines amoti fuerunt per vexationem predictorum trium scilicet Hugonem de Ben et Hugonem de Suintun patrem Dunecani et ipsum Dunecanum.

Lykas Jon Molleson is becum oblest as eauitioner for the said Alex<sup>r</sup>, and the lard hes oblest to stand gud for the said Robert.

May 14, 1650. The said day, irrespect of the daylie contentioune, flytting, scoldeing, and wther indisceret cariage had betuixt Thomas Duncan, and Dauid Dowglas, and George Thome, indwellars in Bards-hillok, ffor remeid quhairof, and that they keip gud nichtbourheid ilk ane to wthers heirefter, they hawe becum actit and obleist ilk ane to wthers, that ather of thame shall be harmeles and skaithles of wthers heirefter, and that wnder the paine of ane hundrethe pounds scottis money, to be peyit to the laird be the pairtie braker of this act, and ordanis the offieier to poynd for the samen.

The said day, it is ordanit and statut that na tennent within the ground strik nor ding wthers beastis, how soewer being found in skaith, quhair-throw diuers of the tennentis and nichtbours hes resanit gryt skaith from wthers be the strikking of tham indiscreitlie with gryt treis, and felling of tham with staineis; and quhatsomenir tennent or nichtbonr within the ground that dois the lyk abuse, the same being qualifeit and prowini, the pairtie trespasser is ordanit to pay the sowne of fourtie shillingis toties quoties. So that, be vertew of this act, all nichthbours ar dischaigert frome strikking wthers guds, bot ar ordanit onlie to hound, and not to strik gif they be found in skaithe.

April 22, 1656. The said day, anent the complanit giwen in be the tennentis in Newbray, concerning a gryt stryff and debait risen among them for ane water stryp that runns at the north end of ther croftis; by reason, som of the saids tennentis demmis the water, and makis it to run throw ther neighbours land, and convoyses the same out aff the right watergang, quhair the same was wount to runne, for preventing debait that may heirefter arys among the saids tennentis for the caws forsaid, it is ordained that whosoewir heirefter salbe fund demming the said stryp, but only suffering the same to runne in the wount cowrs, sall pay ane wnlaw of fortie shillingis, toties quoties they be fund guiltie.

May 37, 1656. The said day, anent the generall ordour aff surveying the personall estaitis of all tennantis, and seing ane condescendanc betuixt maister and tenant for payment of the cess may be ane meane to eschew the surrweyeing of personall estaitis, therfoir it is particularlie condescendit and agried betuixt the said Sir Alex<sup>r</sup> and the tennantis vnder subscrywers, in mainer wnidirvrittin, that is to say, that the saids tennantis sall reliue the said Sir Alex<sup>r</sup> of a thrid pairt of the cess in all tym coming, during the payment therof, and be reasone the tennantis are the first adwancers of the haill cess, it is further condescendit that what wictuall any tenant that payes ferme haldis in ther awin hand, for payment of that pairt of the cess that is payabill be the said Sir Alex<sup>r</sup>, they sall haw the wictuall so retaine ane merk downe of ewirie holl that the said Sir Alexander gettis for his garner, the tennantis who haw condescendit in mainer befor expressit are thes, &c.

Nov. 26, 1660. The said day, forsamekill as the stewart within the place gawe in ane complaint, schawing therin that he was oft and diuers tymes reprowed for presenting to the tabill of ewill haikin bread, and declaired that he was nocht abill to amend the same for want of barme to the batches at all tyms. Thairfore, the baillie hawing takin consideratioun for remeid thairof in tyme comeing, and finding that thair is ane gryt pluralitie of brewars within the laird's awin lands, decernit the haill brewars, per nices, ilk ane in thair tourne, to gift weeklie to the stewart, or to any wther he sould happin to send for the same, ane quart of barme, for making and baiking of sufficient bread ; and quhosoevir refusies, being desyrt to send the same, sould pey to the stewart the pryce of ane quart aill, in reddie money, to by the samen ; and quhosoevir failles in maner forsaid, ordaineis the officier to poynd presentlie for the samen. And it is heirby declaireed that ilk brewar that sends in the barme sall hawe thrie loawes for the samen.

June 26, 1661. The said day, the haill tennents, cottars, and grasmens within the maynis ar decernit, ilk ane of thame, to fald thair haill guidis, both nolt and scheip, nichtlie dureing the season ; and ilk ane of thame, according to the number of thair guids, to walk the fald thair nicht about, least the guids, for want of attendance, brak the fald. And gif it fallis out that they happen to brak the fald, and do skaith, that the persone appointed for the fald to walk the samen suffer any skaith to be done be eitting and distroying of the cornis sall be comptabill for the skaith, and pey the samen efter compryssing.

October 22, 1674. Lykas, all former acts made in the laird of Leyis courts, viz., the shearing of grass amongst corns or in hainings, the keiping of the laird of Leyis smidie and peyng boall as vsit and voant, the keiping of the mils and not abstracting no multars, and to doe all dewtie theirto vsit and voant. The which acts ar confirmed to hold firme, and in as great foaree and strenth as give the samen wer extended to the full.

The entries subsequent to 1666, or thereabout, are mostly reckonings of the laird with his tenants for their " fermes " and other dues, diversified occasionally by actions for " ryots," or for " hurting, wounding, and blood drawing."

The following is the last entry in the record :—

August 29, 1709. The said day, forsameikle as James Naughtie in Bairdshillock being declaireed theife and fugativ, and forsameikle as William Collie in Lightwood was found to have receipt and avay taken of the said James Naughtie, fugative, of his goods and geare ; and being judiciouslie swoarne that he should declaire what goods and geare particularlie he had receipt and avay taken, and being interogat therupon by the procurator phiscall, did declaire that he had receaved seaven or eight boords, and ane old timber seat, and ane meikle wooll wheall, and on chist of on board in the syd, loacked and banded, and ane vyther chist of ane boord and ane halfe boord in the syde, loacked and banded; but the said William Collie being interrogat whtat was in the said chists, declaired judiciouslie that he knev not, and theron gave oath. Mor fouar or fyve yoaks, and ane horse yoak, and ane single door, and ane corne furlot, and ane airme chaire of woodin oake with tuo stilts, and ane head of ane pleugh with ane hand barrou, and ane baiking boord. And being againe interogat give he goat aney moar judiciouslie, gave oath that he goat no moar, and that they wer all loacked wp in on of his barns; and the bailyie heareing and considering the forsayd fact, does heirby inact the said William in the wnlav of , and to make peymet therof as accords of law. And lyke as, the said William was ordained be the bailyie, that he should make all the forsayd goods furth command vpon demand, vnder the failzie of , to which acts the bailyie interpons his ponar and autoritie.

The Court of the lands of Bucharn, Mountgarioch, and the other lands within the parochin of Tillienessell, belonging heretally to ane honorabill man, John Leith of Whythaugh, holden within John Leith in Bucharn, his dwelling house, wpon the twenty-second day of Februar, jay vi<sup>e</sup> four seoir and seven yeares, be Georg Wilsone of Fyndhaugh, his baillie, John Leith in Bucharn, pror. tiscall, Mr. Adam Barclay, notar publick, court clerk, John Ailice, ground officer, and , dempster.

The snits callit, and the court lawfullie fencid and affermit as effires.

The quhilk day, John Richie in Slavethie gave in ane complaint upon Alex<sup>r</sup> Chamber, servitor to the laird of Whytehaugh, who, comming from the sermon upon ane fasting day, did meit accidentally on the rod; and, after severall words and lyes that past betuixt the said complainer and the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer, the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer did strick the said complainer over the head with a tree, and thairafter they being red, the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer did meit him in the way with ane bended pistol, and swear horrible that he should have his life since he was not able to grapple with him, and shot the said pistole at the said complainer, bot did no hurt; and, afterwards, not being satisfied with that, did strick, abuse, and blood the said complainer, quhairfor he desired justice as lawe will.

The said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer being lawfullie soummond to this court ten dayes befor the dait heiroff, to answer hear this day at the said procurator fiscal, his instance, and at the instance of the said complainer, for the crymes above lybellit, being callit, compeired, and challenged, and accused upon the said lybell if it was true or not, did denye the samen, as it is conceived; quhairfor the said baillie referred the samen to the probatione, and for proving thairoff the witnesses were adduced, to witt:—

Arthour Donaldsone in Mosshead, who being admitted and sworn, deponed upon oath, that he sawe Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer strick John Richie with a tree over the head, and also that he sawe John Richie strick Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer with a tree twice over the head after severall lyes past betwixt them. This he declared to be truw, as he shold answer to God.

Arthour Donaldsone.

Patrick Wilsone in Newseat, another wittnes adduced, admitted and sworn, deponed upon aith, in omnibus ut supra, and this he declared to be true, as [he] shold answer to God. At command of the said Patrick Wilsone, who cannot write, as he affirmed, I, Mr. Adam Barclay, notar publick, doe subscribe as testifies my following subscriptione.

A. Barclay, N. P.

John Clariehew in Bucharn, being adduced as another wittnes, admitted and sworn, deponed upon aith that he saw them both at the ground in handie gripps, and both arose again and wrestled and fell to the ground the second tyme; and afterwards he sawe John Richies nose bleeding, bot did not know who gave the blood. This he declared to be true as he should answer to God.

John Clerihew.

Donald Bain in Bucharn, adduced as another wittnes, admitted and sworn, deponed upon aith that he sawe them lyeing on the gronnd in handie gripps, and sawe John Richies nose bleeding, and Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmers fingers bleeding, and that he saw John Richie lift a stone to throw at Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer, bot was hindered, and the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer did lowp out of the way. This he declared to be trew as he should answer to God. I, the said Mr. Adam Barclay, notar publick, doe subscribe for Donald Bain, as testifies my hand.

A Barclay, N. P.

Alex<sup>r</sup> Black, miller at Millhill, was adduced as another wittnes, admitted and sworn, deponed upon aith that he sawe Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer, his hand bleeding, after it was washen, being hurt. This also he declared to be true as he should answer to God. At command, also, of the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Black, who cannot write, as he affirmes, I, Mr. Adam Barelay, notar publick, does subscribe, as witnesses my hand.

A. Barclay, N. P.

The rest of the lybellit, quwhich could not be proven by witnesses, the said complainer referred to Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer, his oath.

And the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer deponed on his oath, that he did not intend to doe John Richie wrong with his pistoll, nor did he shot nor aime at him with her, bot shot her in the burn. Whilk complaint, with the witnesses depositiones and declarations being taken to the baillies consideratione, and finding the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer guiltie of battering, stricking, beating, and bleeding of the said John Richie, did therfor onlaw the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer in fiftie pounds scots, to be payed to the said baillie, and ten merks of assythment to the complainer injured; and ordaines the same to be payed be the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer within terme of lawe, under pain of poynding and sicklyke the said Alex<sup>r</sup> Chalmer heirby enacts himselfe to behave himselfe civilie and christianly to the said John Richie, both be word and deed in all tyme comming, under the penaltie of tuentie pounds for every tyme he shall contraveen the premisses, toties quoties.

Geo. Wilsone, bailzie.

A. Barclay, N. P. clerk, prediecte curie.

And continues this court to the nixt tuentie four hours advertisement, or sooner if neid beis.

3.—Information of the House of Erskine's right to Kildrumie, being a part of the Earledome of Mar. By Sir Thomas Hope.

It is out of question, that the house of Erskine had als good right to Kildrumie as to the earledome of Mar, because Kildrumie was the cheif maner place of the said earledome of old.

It is also out of question, that the right of the said earledome of Mar pertains to the house of Erskine by lawfull succession, through the decease of umquhill dame Isabell Douglas, last countess of Mar, of the old blood.

For umquhil Gratney, Earle of Mar, begat upon the sister of King Robert Bruce, ane son called Donald, and a daughter called Helen. Donald had a son called Thomas, who was thereafter Earle of Mar, and deceast without children,<sup>1</sup> and a daughter called Margaret, who was married to William, Earle of Douglas, and with him begat only one daughter, called Isabell Dowglas, who, being barren, dyed (tho' being twise married, as shall be shonen afterwards) without issue, and so in her ends the race of Donald, Earle of Mar, and thereby the title and right of the Earle of Mar returns to the heirs of Helen Mar, who was sister to Donald. This Helen Mar was married to Sir John Menteith, who begat on her a daughter, called Christian Menteith, who was married to Sir Edward Keith, brother to the mershall, of which marriage was procreat only one daughter, called Janet Keith, who was married to Sir Thomas Erskine, and with him procreat Robert, Lord Erskine, who was afterwards styled Robert, Earle of Mar, being in his own time served, retoured, and seased in the said earledome, as heir to the umquhill dame Isabell Douglas. Likeas, by the computation foresaid, the said Robert, Lord Erskine, and the said dame Isabell were thirds and fourths of kin.

Albeit the house of Erskine had the undoubted right to the said earledome of Mar, yet they were debarred from the possession thereof for many ages, by the iniquity of the time, in maner after deduced.

For the said dame Isabell Dowglas, heretrix of Mar, had to her first husband, Malcolme Drummond of Coneraige, who dyed without succession. Thereafter she was ravished by Alexander Stewart, bastard son to Alexander, Earle of Buchan, who was third lawfull son to King Robert the second ; and the time of her ravishing, he moved her to give him infestment of the said earledome. But neither with him had she any children.

The said dame Isabell Douglas deceased without heirs of her body, before the said Alexander her spouse, about the space of twenty two years ; and, dureing his lifetime, the Lord Erskine could have no access to the earledome of Mar, becance of his liferent, or conjunct fee right by vertue of his infestment.

After the decease of the said Alexander her husband, whieh was in anno 1436, King James the First then reigning, intruded himself in possession of the earledome of Mar upon this pretext, that the said Alexander, deeeaseing bastard, by the priviledge of the crown, the said earledome pertained to the King, and that the Lord Erskine could have no right thereto, as heir to umquhill dame Isabell Dowglas, because she had resigned her right in favours of the said Alexander. King James the First haveing possessed himself of the said earledome deceast the next year, 1437 ; and because the Lord Erskine urged instantly his right and succession, therefor there was an act of parliament carried in the first year of King James the Second, ordaining that the King should continue in the possession of the haill lands bruiked by his father untill his perfect age of 21, and so the Lord Erskine was debarred all the while from the said earledome.

Yet the Lords Erskine was ever carefull to preserve the lawfull right, and that not only after the death of the said Isobell Dowglass and her spouse, but also in their time ; for unquill Sir Thomas Erskine, who married Janet Keith the righteous heir of Mar, being informed that dame Isabell Dowglas, by instigation of her husband, minded to make resignation of the said earledome in haill or in part, in prejudice of the righteous heir, did mean himself by supplication to King Robert the Third then reigning, desireing him not to receave such resignations, whereunto his Majesty was pleased to harken, and gave furth his letters patent under the great seall, which are yet extant, whereby he promised not to receave any resignation in prejudice of the heirs of the said Sir Thomas Erskine, who was to succeed to the said earledome.

Item, within two years after the death of the said Alexander Stewart, in anno 1438, Robert, Lord Erskine, son and heir of the said Sir Thomas, procreat with dame Janet Keith, obtained himself served and retoured to the said earledome of Mar, as nearest heir of blood to the said dame Isabell Douglas, and that by his retours, one thereof in Aprile, 1438, whereby he is retoured to one-half of the said earledome, upon the which retour he is seased; and ane other in October, 1438, whereby he is retoured to the other half of the said earledome, but not seased; and because the Lord Chrichtoun, chancellour, did refuse to give precepts upon the second retour, for seasing of the said umquhill Robert, Lord Erskine, therefor the said Robert, Lord Erskine, (styled in his own time Earle of Mar) in presence of the King and his councell, complained of the said chancellour for detaining of his retour, and refusing to give precept thereupon, and upon this refusall there is publict attestation and instruments taken, which are yet extant, and are dated in the years 1441, and 1442, which is three or four years after the said Robert, Lord Erskine, his sasine of the other half of the said earledome.

Item, notwithstanding of the said Robert, Lord Erskine, his right and title foresaid, yet he was still debarred from the possession of the said earledome, by the power of the Kings and their counsell, against the which they did ever protest, whereof two are remarkable, ane in facto, ane other in jure.

For the said Robert, Lord Erskine, made interruption in facto, by possessing himself in the castle of Kildrumie, (and ejecting the keepers thereof) whiche he detained, while he was forced to quitt it for releif of the castle of Alloay seized upon at the Kings command.

Item, ane manifest interpellation was made in jure, by Thomas, Lord Erskine, son to Robert, in the year 1452, who compeared in face of parliament, complained of the denyall of justice, and that he was wrongously debarred from his lawfull succession to the earledome of Mar.

But to give a colour and pretext to such unlawfull possession as interrupted him, the chancellour caused summond five or six of the persons of inquest who were upon the service and retour of the said Robert, umquhil Lord Erskine, to hear and see themselves punished for their erroneous service, and they, partly through fear, and partly by perswasion, are moved against their oath to confess their error, and come in the King's will; and immediatly thereafter the chancellour offerrs to the said Thomas, Lord Erskine, to doe him justice if he would claim it by ane breif of succession, and the said Thomas accepting the offerr, there is certain persons chosen upon the inquest, and namely the samen five who were already mensworn, who gave furth one service negative, finding that the said Thomas, Lord Erskine, was not heir to his father Robert, of the said earledome of Mar; and, by occasion of thir two deeds, the Lord Erskine, under the colour of law and justice, is excluded from his right and possession, and this was done in the year 1457.

Since this time, the earledome of Mar has been possessed by the Kings, and their second or third sons, and by their favorits, to whom they pleased to dispone the same, and thereby the Lords Erskine debarred from their right, while umquhil Queen Mary, in the year 1565, after her perfect age, considering the undoubted rights and titles which the house of Erskine had to the said earledome of Mar, did, by her Majesties infestment, under the great seal, give and dispone the said earledome of Mar, to umquhill John, Earle of Mar, Lord Erskine, father to John, now Earle of Mar, which infestment is ratified in parliament, in the year 1567.

Item, King James her son, who now reignes, finding the undoubted right of the said earledome of Mar to appertain to the said house of Erskine, has in plain parliament, with consent of the three Estates, in July, 1587, ratified and approven the foresaid infestment granted by his mother, and declared the said John, now Earle of Mar, as righteous heir of blood to the said dame Isabell Douglas, to have the undoubted right to the said earledome of Mar.

Item, the said John, now Earle of Mar, is served, retounred, and seased in the said earledome of Mar, as heir of blood to the said dame Isabell Douglas, in the year 1588.

By vertue of this infestment, he has been in possession of a great part of the said earledome, and the rest which he possessed not, was detained by certain particular persons, who pretended rights and infestments granted by his Majesties predecessors, which infestments being elade with possession, is, by the laws of this realme sufficient to bruik by, ay and while the samen be reduced.

And because the parties bruikers thereof were many and powerfull, the said Earle of Mar was forced to let the reduction thereof lye over for a long time, and yet has ever been instant in raising his summonds, and pursuing the parties, as he had occasion, and amongst the rest, the said

Earle of Mar intented reduction against the Laird of Pittarro, and obtained decree of reduction against him for not compearance.

Item, he intented the like reduction against William Forbes of Corse, wherein his contestation is made parte comparante in the year 1593, by the space of 29 years or thereby; and, after long dependance of plea, has obtained sentance, wherein his right and title to the said earledome of Mar, as heir of blood to the said umquhil dame Isabell Douglas, is found to be good and lawfull.

There rests ane portion of the said earledome in the hands of my Lord Elphinston, which is the barony of Kildrumie, which, of old, was the cheif and capital messuage of the earledome of Mar, and for recovering thereof the Earle of Mar has now intended summons of reduction, and that the rather, in respect of the late act of parliament made anent prescription of heretale rights, whereby thirteen years is granted after the date of the said act, which was made in anno 1617, to prosecute their lawfull rights, otherways to be debarred for ever.

And because this process is pursued by the said Earle of Mar, and that the said Lord Elphinston his parties is conscious of the weakness of his cause, in place of just and lawfull defences, they studie to make calumnious informations in prejudice of the Earle of Mar and his right.

And first, they study to possess his Majesties ear with ane opinion of bis Majesties interest, and that the right competent to his Majesty is drawn in question by the Earle of Mar being treasurer, against the dutie of his office, and that if the Earle of Mar prevail, my Lord Elphinston is to have recourse of warrandice against his Majestie.

Item, they spare not to affirm, that the Earle of Mar has no right of blood, as heir to dame Isabell Douglas, and if he have any right, it is but to the half of the earledome of Mar, and not to the haill.

But before thir objections be answered, it is to be considered that none of thir alledgeances were used or proponed against my Lord Erskine's right to the Earledome of Mar, when the old retour was drawn in question eight score of years since or thereby.

But the cheif alledgeances then used was the minority of the King, during the which his right could not be drawn in question, but in respect of the act of parliament made in the King's favours, whereof mention is made before, and also in respect of the common law, Quod minor non temeratur placitare super hereditate.

And next, that the said dame Isabell Douglas was denuded of her right in favours of Alexander Stewart, her spouse, who, deceasand bastard, did transmitt his right to the King.

And albeit thir alledgedances be not proponed by the party, yet because they are more substantiall nor these which they use, it is expedient to answer them in the first place.

And, to the first, it is answered that the priviledge of the minority, competent either by the act of parliament or common law, is now long since expired, and the negative service, which was cheifly given in respect of that priviledge, cannot prejudge the Earle of Mar to seek ane declarator of his lawfull right against ane partie major.

And, as to the second, founded upon Alex<sup>r</sup> Stewart's infestment and his bastardie, it's answered that his infestment was null of the law, because it was never confirmed by the King. 2<sup>do</sup>. The said Alexander Stewart renounced the said infestment, as authentick instruments taken thereupon in September, 1404, proports. 3<sup>to</sup>. After his renunciation, he accepted a new right to the heirs gotten betwixt him and the said dame Isabell, which failling, to return to her heirs whatsoever, which infestment was confirmed by King Robert the Third, in January, 1404. Likeas the said King Robert, by that same infestment, has confirmed the said earledome of Mar to the said dame Isabell Douglas, and Alexander Stewart, her spouse, in conjunct fee, and to the heirs to be gotten betwixt them, which failzieing, to returne to the said dame Isabell Douglas, her heirs whatsoever. Likeas, conform to this infestment, Robert, Lord Erskine, was retoured and seased in the said earledome, as heir to dame Isabell Douglas, in the year 1438, which is ratified by Queen Mary in anno 1565, and confirmed in parliament 1567, and thereafter of new confirmed in parliament in anno 1587. Likeas John, now Earle of Mar, is retoured and seased in the said earledome in anno 1588. In respect of the which rights, and specially of the infestment granted by King Robert in his majority, whereby the earledome is provided to dame Isabell, her heirs whatsoever, it can never be alleadged that the earledome fell in the King's hands by the bastardie of the said Alexander Stewart.

Thir answers were so pregnant and necessary, that the Lord Elphinstone is content not to propone the foirsaid arguments, but has his refuge allennerly to his former subterfuges and calumnies, to the which now answer is to be made for the part of the said Earle of Mar.

And, first, where they informe that his Majestic has right to the earledome. It is answered that his Majesty and his predecessors were denuded of all right by the infestments granted by King Robert the Third to dame Isabell her heirs whatsomever. Next, by the infestments granted by Queen Mary, ratified in parliament as said is. And, lastly, by infestments and rights granted by the King's Majesty that now reignes, and the states of parliament, to John, now Earle of Mar; and his Majesty can neither tyn or win in the cause, ffor, if the Earle of Mar prevail, he becomes vassall to his Majesty, and comes in place of my Lord Elphinstone, who was vassall before, in respect of his infestment standing not reduced. And, in this case, it's a foolish thing to think that the King can be obliged in warrandice to my Lord Elphinstone, because, by the laws of this kingdome, his Majesty can not be obliged in warrandice of any infestment granted to his subiects, who takes the same upon their own perill; neither is there any such clause of warrandice contained in the my Lord Elphinston's infestments.

And whereas it is obtruded that this cause is pursued by the Earle of Mar, being treasurer, against the duty of his office; it is answered that the King, out of his gracious love and inclination to justice, will not debar any of his subiects from their just claim of law upon such a frivolous pretence, especially in this case, where it was notour to his Majesty and Estates that the Earle of Mar had just right to the said earledome, and was unjustly debarred, by injury of time; and that the said Earle of Mar, before his investing in the said office of treasury, had his actions intended against diverse persons, pretending right to the said earledome, or parts thereof; and it is not his Majesties pleasure that the Earle of Mar, or any of his subjects, shall be debarred from the benefite of law by occasion of their office, speciallie where his Majesty has no particular interest in this case, where the question is only anent the changeing of a tennent.

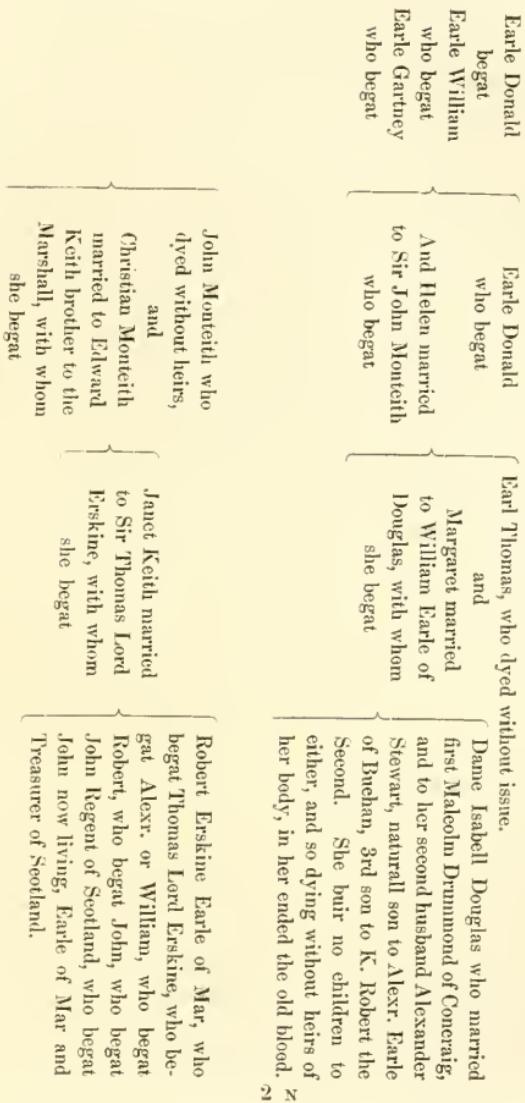

And what is furder alledged, that the Earle of Mar cannot succeed as heir of blood to dame Isabell Douglas, because none can succeed to her that way but these who are joyned in blood with her upon her father's side; and that, by the laws of Scotland, there is no succession cognatorum, or of the mother kin, but only agnatorum, that is of the father's side. To this it is answered, that this alledgeance ought not to be respected, in respect of the two retours, one in anno 1438, the other in anno 1588, whereby umquil Robert, Earle of Mar, and the said John, now

Earle of Mar, are served, retourned, and ceased as heirs of blood to the said umquhil dame Isabell Douglas, in the said earledome of Mar, which retours are, by the law of Scotland, irreduceable after three years ; and to clear to the world that the said Earle of Mar is righteous heir of blood to the said dame Isabell (by and attour the said retours), the letters patent granted by King Robert the Third, under his great seal, yet extant, whereby it is declared that the heirs of Sir Thomas Erskine were righteous to succeed to the said earledome of Mar, is sufficient to close the mouths of any that would alleadge the contrair.

And, lastly, where the Lord Elphinstone, fearing that he cannot prevail upon this ground, by denying the right of blood, has his recourse to ane other ground of the same forge, to make the Earl of Mar but half heir, and to make the other half to pertain to the King, as heir by progress to dame Marjorie Bruce, daughter to umquil Robert the Bruce, of whom his Majesty is lineally descended ; and, for perswading hereof, they alleadge that umquhile Donald, Earl of Mar, had tuo sisters, viz., Isabell the eldest, and Helen the youngest, and that the said Isabell was married to King Robert the Bruce, and of the said marriage was procreat dam Marjory Bruce, his Majesties predecessor.

It is answered hereto that the Lord Elphinstone cannot be heard to propone this alledgeance, because it is contrary to his own rights produced ; and specially to that process of reduction of the retour and negative service, wherin the right of the said earledome is claimed by his Majesties predecessors, by the bastardie of Alexander Stewart, and not by the right of succession to the said dame Isabell Douglas. Next, it is contrair to the Earle of Mar, his retours, which are standing unreduced, and are unrednceable for the causes foresaid. And, thirdly, such naked alledgeance, without any ground or warrand in a matter of so great antiquity, cannot make faith without some monument and lawfull probation ; and the Lord Elphinstone, nor any other, is not able to adduce any warrant or probation whatsomever to instruct that King Robert the Bruce married the sister of Donald, Earle of Mar, much less that dam Marjory Bruce (of whom his Majesty is descended) was procreate of that marriage.

PEDIIGREE OF THE HOUSE OF MAR.

Walter knight ; and Mr. Robert Grahame.

Precept of Sasine by John Elphingston of Pitindrech to Alexander Elphinstone, his son, of the lands of Stirkfield, in the barony of Chamberlane Nenton, in the shirriffdom of Selkirk, to which John Elphing-ston of Pittindrech appends his seal, at Edin<sup>r</sup>, Octo<sup>r</sup>. 2nd, 1497.
Witt<sup>s</sup>: Andrea Elphingston de Slemys. I take him to be his cousin-german. This Sir John I find had a daughter, that was married to Kinross of Kippenross, and a second son John.

In the Tailzies after Slemys, there is John Elphinston, burges of Glasgow, whom I take to be father to George, in 1546, and grandson to William, Canon of Glasgow, and of Laurance is Selms. Sir John Elphin-ston's wife is Margaret.

Contract of marriage betwixt Sir John Elphinston of that ilk, knight, whereby he contraets his daughter to James Kinros, son and heir apparent to John Kinros of Kipenross, in the year 1504.

Obligation by John Kinros of Kipenross, to a noble and mighty Lord, Alexander, Lord Elphinston, 27th March, 1510. This is the first time that the Lord Elphinston is a Lord of Parliament.

Resignation by Margaret Hepbnr of her part of the Gargarock plain and Fordill, in favours of Alexander Elphinston of that ilk, dated 22d June, 1509. He is then no Peer, nor before the 27th March, 1510, that is called a noble Lord, and simply Lord Elphinston.

Instrument of Sasine in favours of Alexander dominus Elphinston of the lands of Gargarrok, Fordell, &c., dated 19th June, 1510, so that 'tis plain the House of Elphinston were made Lords in the beginning of the year 1510.

IX.—From Alexander, Earl of Dunfermline.

Ryght honorable freind, my hairliest commendacions premittit

The birar, George Bruee, your nighbour, haiffing schawin me that now amongs the rest of tanners, saiddlers, and barkers of lether within the burrows of this kingdome, quhen summoundis war gewin to these within your burght to appeir before the lordes of his Maiestieis counsall. the rest of his nighbouris and brethren of that treadde imployed and requeisted him, as commissionar for thame, and in thair naymes, to come southe heir and attend vpon the counsall, to be readye to giff his adwyse for the weill of the bussines, as it should be demandit off him. Whair heawing most cairfullye attendit, ffeiring now at his returne (seing maters ar not to be done for thair contentment) that his saidis nighbouris, wha desyred him to come ouer heir, may postpone him in repayment of the charges and expensis sustenit be him in that bussines, and soe force him to raise summoundis for that effect before the counsall, I haiffe taken occasione by theese to intreate yow, giff he sall mein himselffe vnto yow of his brethrene and nighbouris their hard dealyng withe him, that ye may mowe thame to doe him reasoun, latting thame knaw it shall not be best that thai putt the honest mann to sute the same be extremitie, whiche, giff thai doe, may turne to thair gritter charges. Bot hoping, be your credeitt, ye may satle these questiouns amongis thame, I wische yow all happines, and restis,

Your assured good freind, to be commandit,

From Edenburght, 6th December, 1619.

DUNFERMELYNG.

Ye may assuirdlye persuade theese of this honest mann's craft, saidlers, and all that hes enteres in the foirsaid bussines, that if be your sicht thai tak not ordour with him, it will coast thame far more if he be forced to summound thame heir.

To my honnorable good freind Sir Thomas Menzeis, prowest of Abir-leene, &c.

X.—From Alexander, Earl of Dunfermline.

Rycht honorable freindis, all hairliest commendatiouns premitted,—I houpe ye will not refuse me a suite I am to mak yow in fauouris of the berar, my cousins, James Setoun, to be burgeous of your good toun, whome as I hawe commandit to be deutifull and obedient to yow in all respectes, sua will I acknowlege what fauour he shall fynd of yow for my respect as done to myselfe, and shall rest thankfull thairfore, as ye may haife adoe to imploye me. Sua, for the present wischinge vnto yow all happines, I rest for ewir,

Your assured good freind, alwayis at command,
From Edinburgh, 28th Januarij, 1622. DUNFERMELYN.

To my honnorable and assured good freinds, the prouest, and baillyeis, and counsall off Aberleene.

6th February, 1622.

The counsall, all in ane voce, grantis to this request, finding cautioune for his gude behaviour, residence, and taxationounis.

XI.—From General David Leslie.

Much honored freinds,—I receaued your letter by the bearer concerning the removing of those companyes quartered in your town, and as I am very sensible of the burthen yow haue susteaned, so shall I be carefull to affoord yow all the ease that can be, and sie yow duely payed for what entertainment they haue receaued since the tenth of March, which wes the day appointed for the rendezvous of the army. And as for the recreuts of Colonell Campbell's regiment, they shall lykewyse furthwith be removed; and what may further satisfy your desyres shall be hartily endeavoured by,

Your louing freind and seruant,
Lesmoir, 27th March, 1647. DAVID LESLIE.

For his much honored freinds the baillies of Aberdeen.

XII.—From Provost Alexander Jaffray.

Right honorable,—As I wreat to yow from Edinburgh befor my parting from that, hawinge onlie the night befor my partinge obteyned sum thinge to be done in parlament, anent our petitione, I wold gladlie haue vosad to haue steyed a day or two more to hawe gotten our acte rightlie framed, and the precept from the comissioner for keeping in your awen hand, from the 1st of February, yowr exceyis and manteinance, till ye war payed of 1000lb. sterlinge ; for, albeiet the delaywerance on owr bill does not carie this muche in direct termes (whilk was eschewed for fear of vther browghes to mak a preparatiue therof), yet this was, in feace of parliament, condiscended on betwixt the comissioner and me. Not being abell to stey myselfe, I left informatione withe my brothers for dowinge of this, whilk I dowbt not but or nowe is cum to your handes. Onlie this, whilk I forgotte to wreat from Edinburgh (and as I knowe the acte will carie it), the exceyis and manteinance most be collected as formerlie, and accresse to mak wpe a pairt of the monies ye ar resting to the mortificationes ; for if it head not beine in that consideracione, I dowt if I could haue obteyned anie swche thinge, ether for retenenge present exceyis and manteinance, or byegane manteinance dischearged : all whilk is to be, efter countinge of it, allowed to ws in pairt of our borowed monies. I sall say no more of yowr affaires ther, but, God wolling, at meittinge, sall labowre to giwe a more fulle acownt. If D. Fraser be heir, I sall doe withe him what I can. As for Mr. Narne, ye hawing alredie receawed ane order for peymant of what was resting be Sr Ja. Fraser, and for what was restinge by himselfe, I was dowing my best to hawe setld sum way of persewte of his aires befor the comissaris of St. Androwse, and at my parting left word withe my brother to cum that way home, and doe sumthinge in it mor then I, for the tyme, cowld get done. [

] intendes to be at the Hage this night. What speciid we will cum ther I cannot tell, but, as occasione offers, ye sall be adwerteised by

Yowr serwant at command,

Delph., 24th March, 1649.

AL. JAFFRAY.

This letter hawing steyed by me longer then I expected, we hawe sense beine sewerall tymes present withe the Kinge. Swm of owr wicked countrey men and of his Englishe cownsall ar onlie for his going to Irland, becaus they hawe not hoape to get libertie to cum with him to Scotland, yit we want not our awen friendes heir. The Prince of Orange, the Princes royll, and Esteates generall ar for ws. We hawe interchinged sewerall peapirs withe the King, and ar this night or the morow to giwe in a peapir contening the swbstance of our desires. What will cum of it I cannot tell ; but all that ether laws, King, or kingdomes hes much reasone to be ernest withe God, for marcic to them, for his contraversie semes not yet to be neir ane end. Ye sall be forder adwertisad as occasione offers. I hawe met withe D. Fraser, but have not yet head oportwnitie so fittlie to spek to him, but, or we paift, I sall labowr to doe withe him what may be done heir.

From the Hage, 2-12th Apryle, 1649.

XIII.—From Provost Alexander Jaffray.

Right honorable,—This is my second to yow sense my being heir. We ar now schortlie to paift from this, and intendes, Godwollinge, befor the 10th of this monethe, to be in Scotland. I am informed by my brother from Edinburgh that the passinge of your act met withe sum deficwltie efter my partinge, but if it be not or now past, my adwyse wold be that Mr. Wiliam Moir (seing he is on of the committie of esteat) head bein sent ower, qvhilk I sowld hawe wrrettine schoner, but it sliped my memorie, who I think might hawe exped your busines, whilk I wold wolling haue done if we head steyed a day or two longer. If ye think good to send him or anic other ye please they may exped your busines, as also serwe for keeping the next dyet of parliament ; and if it please the Lord I come ther in tyme, I sall werey wollinglie conewre withe them to the wtermost of my powre for your service. I hawe spoken withe D. Fraser. He aledges that ther was newer ane condecione conelwded betwixt him and the magistrates then in pleace, and so expectes that the anwell of that swm, resting to the colidge, will fall to him, whilk I think hes bene his purpose so to frame it. I sall striwe befor my parting to bring the bwssines to the best poynt I can. He is not now in ceasse to pey debtes but on way of compositione. I know no other partecwlar I can be servicabell to yow heir, but wharawer I sall be, sall be most wulling, according to my powre, to aprowe myselfe,

Yowr servwant at command,

From the Hag, Mey 3-13, 1649.

A. JAFFRAY.

For the right honorable the provost, baillies, and counsall of Aberdeen.

We haue not head that swesse in owr imployment heir withe the King that we wold wossed, by reasone of awill counsall that ar about him. He is schortlie to goe for France to meit withe his mother. Till then he will not resolwe what to doe. I heir ther is sum troubles amonqe yow pretending for his serwice, but I wowlde they ar not his frindes, and he hes publicklie to ws diskleamed anie powr or commissione from him to them, or that he will giwe anie swche powr other by sea or land aganast Scotland. I heartellie wosse that anie that lowes religione, the Kinge, or ther owen good, keepe themselwes free of anie accessione, or giwing cowntinancie to swche wnhape men. I trwst I sall not need to desire yow to be cairefuller that nothinge of this kynd esceape anie of our night-boures ; but, on the contrarie, that they schowe themselwes wolling in ewrie thing to the countreys serwice. This vas promisad librallie by me in ther neames ; and I know they sall newer repent it. On Doreslaws sent heir from England to corespond betwixt that parliament and the esteatess heir, and to mak way for ane embasadrie from them was (for his being accessorie to the leat Kinges deathe) yesternight, in his lwdgng killed. It is not knownen by whome, but that they war Englichemen. The peace in France is not sewre, neew trwbles reysinge ther againe.

XIV.—From Bailie John Jaffray.

Ryght honorable,—I cam heir vpoun Twysday at night, and heiring that my brother was in the firth, lyeing at the back of the Maij, and onlie be contrarie windes, quhilke war vere gryt heir, they could not win vp, this maid me not to go in to the parliament till Thursday, at the foore noones sessione, and I haid not gone then nather, give I haid not bein forcit to get ane act annullit quhilke was maid to your vere gryt preiudice. It was done befoir I cam over the watter. The act was ordaineing Collonell Forbes reigment to quarter in the towne of Ald [Aberdeen], and your awin maintenance allowit to pay them, by quhilke meanes the poore towne, considering the caice they ar in, vold haue bein rwined, and your sex thowsand pund formerlie grantit takin from you. I never hard of this till Vedinsday at supper, that young Leslie told me that the act was to be ordainet the morrow thereafter, to be revisit and printed. Then I tuick occasione to go and solist, haueing delyuert all the letters ye sent with me to Argyle, Warrestoun, and the Provost of Edinburgh, immediatlie after I cam. I dealt earnestlie with that thrie, and they war our speciall freindis; and efter I haid schavein the caice of the towne and countrie, and quhow our maintenance was disponit vpoun alreddy, they reassoned to liberat ws. At last the Parlament war content they sould onlie haue ther locall quarters in the towne, and sould have ther pay from the sehyre ~~out~~ of your maintenance. I haid no will of this nather, for I wold haue expeicit evill payment; allwayes, being referred till the esternoone, I got the towne and friedome absolutlie fred from quartering, and an ample act ~~in~~ our favoris, quhilk ye sall haue with the nixt; but, for the sehyre, ther was no help for it, at least I could get nothing done. So the foott ar ordainet to be quartered on the sehyres of Aberdeen and Banff, and towne of Banff, and ther maintenance allowit to them for intertinement of the toott and four troupes of hors, tuo old and the tuo new, that ar ordainet to be quartered ther. Ther is not ane sehyre or brugh in Scotland trie but Aberdeen. As for Walter Melvill's suspentione, I can do nothing in it except I haid informatione, for I know nothing of it; therfoir, blame me not give it miscarrie, for the sessione sittis downe this day, and, I assure yow, will sitt constantlie durcng the ordinar tyme; and, for that caus, the parlament sittis onlie in the esternoone, and the sessione in the foore noone. This was ordainet yesterday be act of parlament. As for the suspensions of the Lord Frasersbrugh, I am cawseing look out the warrandes, but I fear sall not be gottin in haist; therfoir, look them in your charter kist, and send over suche wreatis as ye haue to instruct them. Ye know better nor any ean do heir quhat may instruct them best; allwayes, quhidder ye know perfytlie or not, send suche thinges as ye think will instruct them, and quhat we want I sall wreath for. As for your excye, I ressaue ane letter quhilk was cumeing to yow from the committie therof. I sall do my best in that, and also in your excye of vyne, quhilk is yit frie. As for W<sup>m</sup>. Bartan, I dar not speak any moir for his trielome, in respect ther is sum moir to lay to his chairge, quhilk I dar not wreath of till the parlament wreath to yow. As for Andro Crichtoun, collectour generall of the customes, he is in ane gryt anger that he gettis not contentement, and will not behold it long, I assure yow; therfoir, be at a poynt with the Earle Marschall. I ressaue your letters of horning aganes the stenters and towne being stentit, quhilk, with gryt difficultie,

I have obtenuit. The difficultie was this : they wold not grant letters aganest the towne till the stent sould be gevin out vnder the stenters' hand ; yet, at last, I obtenuit them. As for newes, no word of our commisioneris as yet, but ar daylie expectit ; a letter cam from Ingland yesterday, and will mak bussines in a schort tyme. I could not yett haue the copie of it, but sall stryve to send it north. I haue writtin a littill of the substance of the letter to Baillie Moir. This is all I haue for the present ; with the nyxt I sall stryve to give yow ane account of my procedurings, and of the thinges committit to me. I rest,

Youris servant,

Edinburgh, 1st of Junij, 1649.

J. JAFFRAY.

I sall wische that ye lett not the committie of the schyre know that the foott ar to be quartered on them, nor yet the towne nor schyre of Banff ; for give ther commisioneris haid bein heir, as they war not (except Leslie), I haid fund moir difficultie ; therfor, give Leslie wreath not to them, ye may misken ye haue hard of it.

To the ryght honorable the provost, baillies, and counsell of Aberdeen.

XV.—From General Monck.

Whereas I am informed that divers persons within this nacon haue of late gone about to ensnare men's consciences, by inforeing of oathes and covenants vpon them, these are therfor to lett all knowe that what person soever shall tender any oath or covenant vnto any one, or who ever shall take or enter into any oath or covenant, without order from the comon wealth of England, both the tenderer and the taker of such oathes or covenants shalbe holden as enemies to the comon wealth aforesayd, and dealt with all accordingly. Alsoe, the provost of Aberdeene is hereby strictly required to see this proclaymed and published in the city of Aberdeene, as he will answeare the contrary att his perill. Giuen vnder my hand at Dundee, this 7th of October, 1651.

GEORGE MONCK.

To the provost of Aberdeen, or, [in] his absence, to the bailiffs of the sayd city :—These.

Vpone the tuentie-tua day of October, being ane publict mercat day. betuixt elewin and twelft houris in the foirnoone, jaj vj<sup>e</sup> and fyiftie-ane zeiris, 1, John Mowat, messenger, be virtue of the within wreittin warrand, of the dait, at Dundie, the sewint day of October, 1651 zeiris, past to the mercat croce of Aberdene, and ther, at command of the bealleis of the said ceittie, be oppine proclamationune and publict reiding of the said warrand, I maid dew and lauffull intimatione to all personeis quhatsoewer that sall tender any oath or covinant wnto any one, or quhoewer sall tack or enter into any oath or covinant without ordour from the commoun wealth of England, both the tenderer and taker of such oathis and covinanxis salbe hauldin as enemeis to the commoun wealth afoirsaid, and delt withall accordinglie. This I did, conforme to the within wreittin warrand, and according therto in all poyntis, befor thir witnesses : Maister James Sandilandis, toun clerk of Aberdene, and Alexander Bruice, wreatther ther ; and, for the mair verificatioune heiroff, thir presentis are subscritbit with my hand.

J. MOWAT. Messinger.

XVI.—From General Monk.

Gentlemen,—Haveing a call from God and his people to march into England, to assert and maintaine the liberties and being of parliaments, our antient constitutions, and therein the freedome and rights of the people of these three nations, from arbitrary and tiranicall vsurpations vpon their consciencees, persons, and estates, and for a godly ministery. I doe therefore expect from you, the magistrats of the burgh of Aberdene, that you doe preserve the peace of the commonwealth in your burgh ; and I doe heereby authorize you to suppresse all tumults, stirrings, and vnlawfull assemblies, and that you hold noe correspondeny with any of Charles Stewart's party or his adherents, but apprehend any such as shall make any disturbance, and send them into the next garrison ; and doe further desire you to countenance and encourage the Godly ministery and all that truely feare God in the land, and that you continue faithfull to owne and assert the interest of the parliamentary governement in your severall places and stations. I hope my absence wilbee very short, but I doe assure you that I shall procure from the parliament whatever may bee for the good governement and releife of this nation, and doubt not but to obtaine abatements in your assesse, and other publique burthens, according to the proportion of England; and what further service I may be able, I shall not bee wanting in what may promote the happines and peace of this afflicted people. I shall not trouble you further, but begg your prayers, and desire you to assure yourselves that I am,

Your faithfull freind and humble servant,
Edinburgh, 15th November, 1659. GEORGE MONCK.

I desire you to send mee word to Barwick, vndour your hands, how farr you will comply with my desires, be the 12th of December next.

I desire you that what is behinde of the last fower moneths of the twelue moneths assesse may be in a readinesse against it is calld for.

For my very loving freinds the provost and bailiffs of Aberdene.

XVII.—From James, second Marquis of Montrose.

Right honourable,—Being informed by your commissioner and his ascessor that yee have, witht much solemitie, reased that member of my fathers, which was erected in your cittie by the comand of some barbarous and disloyall persons pretending the authoretie of a parliament. I have urett this to returne you manie heartie thanks, and, withall, to assure you that I have a most reall recement of that action, quherby ye have not onlie testefied your constant adherance to his Majesties service, bot also have, in a verie singular maner, wittnessed your respects to the memorie of him quho was your faithfull freind, and have lykvays putt a verie high obligation upon,

Your most affectioned friend and servant,

Edr., 30th March, 1661.

MONTROSE

I shall desyre ye will be plesed to deliver that member to the lairds of Morphie and Fintrie, or to anie having ther warrant, for I have writt to them theranent.

Ffor the right honourable the lord provest, balzies, and toune counsell off Abberdeine.

XVIII.—From the Laird of Morphie.

Morphie, the 9th of Apryll, 1661.

Right honorabill,—The Marquess of Montross hath writen to me of laite, showing that he hath sent yow a letter of thankes for the great respectes ye hawe witnesseed to him towarde the raising of that member of his fatheres that was erected in your towne, and that he hes desyred of yow that it may be delywered to the lairl of Fentrie or my selfe, or to anie hawing our warrant, quhairfoir I hawe directed this bearer to yow for that effect, to whom ye will be pleased to cause delywer the samen. I hawe noe moir to adde for the tyme, sawe that I ame, and do subserwe my selfe,

Yours verie humbill servant,

A. GRÆME, of Morphie.

For the right honorabill the prowest, baillzies, and counsaill of Aberdeine :—Thess.

XIX.—From John Earl of Middleton.

Worthie freends,—Wee, knowing that your minister, Mr. Andrew Cant, hath for a tyme sureceased from the exercise of his ministry among yow, because of his weaknes and many infirmities, incident to old age, and that now he is upon resolution to returne to your city to live and die among yow: These are therefore desiring yow to regard him as becometh a Christian magistracie, such an honest and painfull minister, who hath spent his strenthe among yow for these twenty years bygone in very difficile tymes, and to have him in estein and love for his works' sake, and to look as favorablie upon the sun-setting as upon its rysing; and also desyres that though there be a cessation from discharging his former office, through age and inabilitie, yet that he may injoy his old manteinance for his short tyme, which will be your credit both before

God and men. This we doe expect, and that he shal have no just cause to complaine.

Your affectionat freend,

MIDDLETON.

Ffor his worthie freinds the magistrats and councell off Aberdeine :—
These.

XX.—From George eighth Earl Marischal.

Invervgie, 20th Februarij, 88.

My Lord Provest,—Being intendent (God willing) ones nixt moneth to fall a work for reparacione and finishing the bulwork at Stonhyve, and, as ye all know, being so convenient a port for saveing of ships, which, blessed be God, hes been severall times evidenced this winter, I am very sensible of the good will and kyndnes ye have already shown for promoteing this so good and necessary a work, and will earnestly intreat that ye will yet evidence it a litle more by ordering ane collection, which will be a ty on me in all your concernes to approve my selfe,

My Lord,

Your affectionat friend and humble Servant,

MARISCHALL.

I have ordered George M<sup>c</sup>Kenzie, collectour at Stonhyve, to come in and wait upon yow, and receave your commands.

For my lord provest and balyies off Aberdeen.

XXI.—Order of Privy Council.

His Majestie haveing, by his royll letter of the 4th current, recomendit to the lords of privie councill to ffind out a way for rassing a competent number of seamen for his Majesties service, being resolved that Scots-men (if prisoners) shall be equally relieved with the English, and that

Scots trading ships shall have protections one board for preventing ther mens being pressed, wherfor the saids lords of his Majesties privy councill do requyre yow to causse beat drooms and make intimatione, upone the nixt mercat day efter this comes to your hands, for leaveing seamen within your jurisdictions of the touns of Newburgh, Peiterheid, Crimand, Linmay, and Frazersburgh. And they grant warrand to and ordaine yow to promisse and pay ffourtie shillings sterling of leavie or advance money, and six pence a day to each seaman that shall list him selfe in ther Majesties service untill they shall be shipped aboard the fleett, and at quich tyme they are to enter on English pay; and the councill gives assurance of your repayment of what yow shall advance to the seamen out of the excysse payable be your burgh, and how farr the samen falls short out of the excysse of the shyre, at terme of Whitsunday nixt. And they have granted ordor and warrand to allow the samen unto yow, and that such as shall affectionatly show ther forwardness one this occasione shall have assurance given them of obtaining parliamentar protections on board each one of ther ships, to be free from pressure by any of his Majesties men of warr or in any of his ports. And they lykwayes requyre yow to give in a report of what seamen ye have so taken on in the terms forsaid, with ane exact list of the haill seamen and fishermen within your bounds and tounes forsaid, betwixt and the tenth day of February next, that the councill may consider how farr the seamen to be furnished to his Majesties navy falls short, that soe the samen may be made up in a just proportione by lott out of the said other list of seamen, without any leavie or advance money to be given by his Majestie to thesse who shall be taken by lott, and who shall not voluntarly list themselvs; and the councill will take speciaill cair that just and dew consideratione be hade of such touns quherin the seamen shall voluntarly list themselves, when the councill falls upone the other method above mentioned for effectwnating the said leavie. This, by warrand, and in name of the councill, is signified to yow by,

Your humble Servant,

Edinburgh, 10th January, 1690.

STATUTA ET LEGES LUDI
LITERARII
GRAMMATICORUM ABERDONENSIVM.

1553.

STATVTA ET LEGES LVDI
GRAMMATICORUM ABERDONENSIVM.

In primis, puer ingressus scholas prosternat se humi, genibus flexis salutet Christum, optimum, maximum, humani generis authorem, et Deiparam virginem breui precatiuncula, hoc modo :

Gratias tibi pater cælestis ago, quod præteritam noctem mihi volueris esse prosperam : precorque vt diem itidem hunc mihi bene fortunes, ad tuam gloriam et animæ meæ salutem : et tu qui es vera lux, occasum nesciens, sol æternus, omnia viuificans, alens, exhilarans, digneris illucescere menti meæ, ne vsquam in vllum impingam peccatum, sed ductu tuo perueniam ad vitam æternam. Amen.

Jesu esto mihi Jesus, et spiritu principali confirma me.

Septima lucis hora, incipiat Pars, qua absoluta, ingrediatur præceptor, castiget aut verbo aut verberibus delinquentes : castigatione facta, fiat omnium lectionum prælectio publica, per præceptorem ipsum, hora lucis octaua. Prælectione absoluta, ientatum festinent pueri. Priuata hypodidascalorum prælectio, in singulis suis classibus sit hora lucis decima : vndeclima vero, aut sesquiundecima, sit copia egenis condiscipulis eundi in vrbem, itidem oppidanis paulo post, si qui sint.

Secunda archididascalii praelectio Terentij, Virgilij, aut Ciceronis, sit sesquiundecima iis qui adesse debent. Denique ubi sonuerit hora meridiana pueris prandendi fiat potestas.

Ante horam pomeridianam secundam, sint singuli presto in ludo literario ad audiendas classium praelectiones.

Semper unus hypodidascalorum per vices presto sit in gymnasio, qui notet errores, Latini sermonis ineptias, et minus iusto studiis incumbentes. Viderint etiam ipsi, ne quod alios facientes ex officio reprehendere debent, ipsi committant.

Lucis vero pomeridiana quarta, post campanae sonum recenseant pueri suis instructoribus pensum illius diei.

Exeant bini ad naturae officia cum signo aut baculo: licitum non erit cuiquam exire, nisi coacto, ante redditum eorum quibus eundi copia facta fuit.

Gymnasiarela ipse, unam aut alteram audiet classem preter suam supremam, cum sibi sedeat animo.

Disputationes vesperi a quinta ad sextam noctis horam fiant; qua cognita Deo Opt. Max. preces canere festinent.

Pythagoricum unius anni silentium elementariis ac neophytis sit iniunetum.

Confessionis tabulam ediscant.

Numerandi artem modice prælibent.

Loquantor omnes Latinè Græcè Hebraicè Gallicè Hybernicè, nunquam vernacula, saltem cum his qui Latine noscunt.

Singuli singulas gestent fernulas.

Familia extraneis sit interdicta.

Nullus de grege Grammaticorum cum Dialectico agat.

Leges.

Non licet commutare, nec rem alienam emere, nec propriam alienare, inconsulto archididascalio, aut eius suffraganeo.

Ne ludas sponsione libri, aut pecuniae, seu vestium, aut prandij; sed pro deposito, certent saltem prouectiores coriaceis ligaturis vel aciculis.

Ne ludus aleæ sit vetamus ; aleæ lucro gaudebunt pauperes.
A conspectu hypodidascalorum ludere non licebit.

Leges animadversionis.

Nullus alteri faciet inuriam verbo nec opere, quam si læsus ferat modestè conquerendo, offendens puniatur. At si contendendo sese mutuis iurgiis altercationibusque commouerint, vterque pœnas luat. At qui pro verbis dat verbera, solus verberator det pœnas. Si qui autem ætate prouectiores, peccando in præmissis, delinquendi occasionem iunioribus dederint, duplice pœna mulcentur, quia peccant et aliis peccandi ansam dant, quibus alioqui animus peccandi non fuit.

Non audientes dicto. Serò matutina luce gymnasium ingredientes. Nescientes dicere Partem, cum lectionis textu. Mouentes citra necessitatem de loco in locum. Discurrentes. Colloquium tempore prælectionum tenentes. Serò redeuntes a ientaculo et prandio. Moram trahentes in naturæ officio. Vernaculè loquentes. Absentes dia ab auditorio. Authores mali.

Quum neminem leges ignorare oporteat, hæc nostræ scholæ statuta excudenda curauimus, quo illorum certior sit cognitio, et paratiōr probatio : et vt qui sub nostra ferula militant, eo officiosiores nomophylaces esse velint, quo sunt hæ nomothetae iam typis excuse per nos singulis facte notiores, quām vt earum ignorantiam possint prætexere.

Officium discipulorum ex Quintiliano.

Discipuli præceptorem suum non minus quam ipsa studia ament : et parentem esse non quidem corporum sed mentium credant : in ipsos cœtus scholarum læti et alacres conueniant : emendati non irascantur : laudati gaudeant : vt sint charissimi, studio promereantur ; nam vt illorum officium est docere, sic horum præbere se dociles : alioqui neutrum sine altero sufficit.

Officium adolescentis ex Cicerone.

Est adolescentis maiores natu vereri, ex hisque eligere optimos et probatissimos, quorum consilio atque autoritate nitatur: ineuntis enim ætatis inscitia, senum constituenda et regenda prudentiæ est. Maxime autem hæc ætas a libidinibus arcenda est, exercendaque in labore patientiaque et animi et corporis, ut eorum et in bellicis et ciuilibus officiis vigeat industria. Atque etiam quum relaxare animos et dare se iucundati volent, caueant intemperantiam, meminerint verecundiæ: quod erit facilius, si huiusmodi quoque rebus maiores natu interesse velint. Adolescentum ætas prona est ad peccandum; et nisi maiorum exemplis autoritateque contineatur, facile semper in deteriora prolabitur. Adolescentia enim libidinibus æstuat, ætas media iactatur ambitione, senectus cupiditate avaritiaque consumitur.

Officium adolescentis ex Terentio.

Nouitus tyro in militiam literariam ascriptus, has quinque Pamphili conditiones sibi procuret. Prima, facile perferre ac pati eos debet, cum quibus versatur. Secunda, vna cum his sese dedat. Tertia, eorum studiis obsequatur. Quarta, sit aduersus nemini. Quinta, nunquam preponat se aliis, nam quo sublimior fnerit, eo submissius se gerat. Ita viuendo, facilime sine inuidia laudem inueniet, et amicos parabit.

Hoc Fac Et Vires.
