THOUGH the publishing a new arrangement of the Scottish coinage has long been an object worthy attention, yet it has hitherto been totally neglected. It must be allowed, that nothing tends more to elucidate the history of a country, than its coinage. But, among the various attempts that have from time to time been made to raise the consequence of Scotland, by corroborating some important facts in its history, how few have appeared in the numismatic line? Anderson's Diplomata et Numismata Scotiae, is a book very justly admired, and its use is universally known. But, from the great price it now brings, few are able to purchase it, merely for the coins alone; at any rate the book is seldom to be met with. Snelling on Scottish money is very defective, many of his plates are so badly executed, that they scarcely bear any resemblance to the pieces they mean to represent; besides they often totally disagree in the descriptive part, and the book has now become remarkably scarce.

From these and similar motives, the author was induced to proceed in a work which was begun, merely to employ a leisure hour, and was at last finished after two years close application and study. Whatever its merit may be, an impartial public will determine. It is not to be supposed that a publication of this kind, where so many requisites are necessary, can be altogether free of errors. What materially hurts works like this, is the inability of one person to carry on the whole, as it seldom happens, that the power of executing the descriptive part is joined to a sufficient degree of knowledge in the art of engraving, to enable him to finish the plates, without which, the greatest difficulties must be encountered. For a considerable time past, no period has produced more collectors of ancient coins and medals, than the present; from this circumstance, it is to be hoped, that the following work will be the more acceptable to the public.

Before the invention of money, mankind bartered goods with each other; but this mode of trafficking was liable to many inconveniencies. Another was adopted; a piece of leather, stamped with a certain figure, was exchanged for its fixed value in cattle or goods. This species of money was soon found inadequate to the purpose for which it was at first intended. The traffick with strangers for certain articles, which this island did not produce, rendered it necessary to offer in exchange something that could answer its value better. This first suggested the use of metals, which, on account of their intrinsic value and durability, were the best calculated for the intended purpose. Each cut his metal into the size and form that best suited his end, according to the demand of the seller, and the value stipulated. It was usual at that period to go to market laden with metal, and to carry the instruments for dividing, together with scales for weighing it. This was extremely troublesome, and it was found convenient to have pieces ready weighed, and different weights being required, all those of the same weight were distinguished with the same marks or figures. At length, owing to the frauds practised, both in the weighing and in the adulteration of the metal, it was deemed necessary to interpose the public authority. Then first appeared the stamps or impressions on money; to which succeeded the names of the moneyers, and afterwards the head of the Prince. The date, legend, and other precautions, came into use, to prevent the alteration of the species.

At

At whatever time the coinage of silver was first introduced into Scotland, it is very certain, that no silver coins have been found which can, with the least degree of certainty, be ascribed to any Prince prior to WILLIAM the LION, who began his reign in the 1165. It has been asserted, and by a respectable author, in an Essay on Medals, lately published, That the coins which have been generally ascribed to this King, belong to William the Conqueror. But it is hoped, that he, as well as others who entertain this idea, will be convinced that William of Scotland did coin, and had no inconsiderable variety of mintage. The first plate exhibits eighteen coins of this Prince. The first fifteen have the moneyers name and place where struck, clearly evincing them to be Scottish. No 1. 2. and 3. are of Edinburgh, No 4. and 5. of Perth, No 6. 7. and 8. of Roxburgh, No 9. and 10. of Stirling, and No 13. 14. and 15. of Berwick, all of which places at that period belonged to Scotland. At the same time, it must be allowed, that, had not these pieces been discovered, a doubt would have remained whether he ever did coin. The stile is extremely rude, far inferior to those of the Conqueror, and they were discovered in a corner of the country where it can hardly be supposed that any of his coins could ever be carried, in such a quantity as were found together; and, indeed, there is a convincing argument in favour of my assertion, which is, that a very considerable number of the coinage of Henry II. of England, who was contemporary with William of Scotland, were found mixed with the former collection. Perhaps I may be blamed for giving an account of the manner in which they were found; but it marks the aera of their first discovery, and authenticates the coins of which I have given the figures.

In the year 1780, in digging a foundation in order to enlarge the church of Dyke, near Inverness, in the north of Scotland, one of the workmen, when removing the earth, near the steps which led to the burial-place of Brodie of Brodie, discovered some of these pieces in the side of the trench he was making ; he was cunning enough to close up the place immediately, and went to another spot. At night, he returned, and, with the assistance of his wife, privately conveyed away the whole mass, which must have been very valuable. He was a poor man, but he soon became a considerable farmer. Great part of the coins that came into silversmiths hands, were quickly melted, as they were fine silver ; however, Mr Brodie's assiduity, after hearing that such a discovery was made, saved such a number as was sufficient to ascertain what varieties there were in this coinage. The Society of Scottish Antiquaries are, through his generosity, possessed of about a hundred of them, many of which are very perfect. The different collectors have shared in this curious discovery, from the pieces being at first dispersed by the means of itinerant pedlars.

It appears strange, that such a number should be found together, when, during so great a length of time, from the first beginning of the study of coins, none bearing the least similitude to them have ever appeared in any cabinet, except one published by Snelling, in his View of Coins struck by English Princes in France, page 40. and 41. which is said to have been found in the Isle of Man.

No 16. is ruder than any of the former, and the reverse very different from them, as well as the two following. No 17. has a reverse which incontestably proves it Scottish, besides the town of mintage (Pertb). No 18. has only the moneyer's name, the same as No 16. Where these coins having Hve Walter, which often occurs on William's money, were struck, cannot be easily ascertained, but may be supposed to have been at Edinburgh. hve. Wa. Ed. appears on some of this kind.

It

It is to be hoped, that enough has been said to induce the antiquary to coincide in opinion with regard to the appropriation of these coins to the Prince to which they belong.

To these succeeds the money of ALEXANDER II. There are two given of this reign, a larger and a smaller, both coined at Annan, and one coined at Berwick of the latter size; besides these two places of mintage, there were those of Roxburgh, Edinburgh, and Perth..

With regard to the coinage of ALEXANDER III. the varieties are numerous. Mr Hamilton of Glasgow, a learned antiquary, and well skilled in the knowledge of coins, has divided those of this reign into six classes.

1. Hexagonal stars in the quarters.
2. Star and mullet alternately.
3. Mullet in each quarter.
4. Mullet in each quarter; two points in two of the quarters.
5. Stars in the quarters.
6. French inscription.

Of these I have given, in the first Plate, the following:

No 1. See No 23. 24. Plate I. No 2. See 26. Plate I. No 3. See 22. Plate I. No 5. See 25. Plate I. and No 6. See 27. Plate I. No 4. I had not met with at the time the plate was engraving, but have since procured it. Perhaps it may be necessary here to mention, that, in the following work, instead of the term Mullets, open or shut, which some authors make use of, the first is called Spur-revels, the other Stars.

JOHN

JOHN BALIOL. There were but two mintages of this Prince, one at St Andrews, as particularly expressed on his coin. It is uncertain where the other, having on the reverse Rex Scottarum, was struck, but most probably it was at Edinburgh.

Besides those which are not particularly marked, ROBERT BRUCE had mints at Edinburgh and Perth. The different mint marks of this reign are †, :†:, †:, :†.

From the introduction of groats and halves by the succeeding King DAVID II. to the period in which the place of mintage was entirely omitted, under Queen MARY, the following table will exhibit the different places of coinage, in each reign. The authorities for which are Bishop Nicolson, and Anderson, both of whom refer to Mr Sutherland's collection, and the former also to Archbishop Sharp and Snelling's View of Scottish coins.

King.	Place of coinage.
DAVID II.	Edinburgh, Aberdeen *.
ROBERT II.	Edinburgh, Perth, Dundee †.
ROBERT III.	Edinburgh, Perth, Aberdeen, Dunbarton ‡.
JAMES I.	Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Perth, Linlithgo , Stirling §.
JAMES II.	Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Roxburgh, Stirling.
JAMES III.	Edinburgh, Stirling, Roxburgh, Berwick.
JAMES IV.	Edinburgh, Aberdeen.
JAMES V.	Edinburgh.

It

* Aberdeen does not appear in the Scottish series till this reign, and continues till the arched crown coins of James IV. during every reign, except Robert II. and James III.

† Dundee never appears but in this reign.

‡ Dunbarton, the first and only time of this town's appearance.

|| Linlithgo, the only time of this town's appearance.

§ Stirling, for the first time since William the Lion.

Upon the billon and mixed monies, Edinburgh and Stirling are the only towns marked; and the last only under Queen Mary.

It has been supposed by many, that the inscription Dominus Protector, &c. now first introduced by David II. as the legend of the reverse of his money, alluded to his deliverance from captivity; but it is certain that this legend was not peculiar to him; several of his successors used the same; the English, and French likewise used it. It was probably copied from the French money, as it is found on an old French coin in 'a Collection of all the European coins of gold and silver,' engraved and published at Antwerp, Anno 1589.

DAVID II. The varieties of coinage in this reign are very numerous, and some of them peculiar. In No 15. Pellets are introduced in two of the quarters, which is the only instance that occurs in this reign or the next, and did not become general till Robert III. in imitation of the English coins. No 20. is a most remarkable variety, and very different from any which has hitherto appeared. Instead of beginning the legend with the King's name, it has Moneta Regis. D. The remainder of the name and title is found on the reverse, avid. Rex. Scotor. This rare piece, which may be almost termed an unique, is in the possession of Dr Wright of Glasgow, who was so obliging as to allow it to be copied for this work.

ROBERT II. This King's coins are perfectly similar to those of his predecessor, except the name. And in two instances only, on a groat of the mint of Edinburgh, and the Dundee mintage, the letter B. is put behind the head. Various disputes have arisen with regard to the signification of this letter, some supposing it to be a mark for the piece belonging to Robert Bruce, others that it is only a mint mark. That it cannot belong to Robert Bruce the following authorities are quoted, Bishop Nicholson, in his Scots Library 1702, says, "I think he (David II.) was the first King of Scotland who coined Groat." Snelling, in his View of Scots coinage 1774, says, "The types of the penny, halfpenny, and farthing are the same as before."

“ before. Those of the groats and half-groats, which were NOW
 “ FIRST STRUCK, have the head circumscribed within a sort of rose.
 “ From the mullet or spur in the quarters of the reverse, they were “ called spurred groats.” Mr Hamilton of Glasgow, in a MS.
 Dissertation on Scottish coins, in speaking of David II. says, “ This “ is the first King of Scotland who coined larger pieces than pennies, “ groats and half-groats being now introduced. Some have, indeed, “ maintained, that these pieces were coined by Robert I. But this is “ scarce likely, as we know they were not minted in England till “ 1353; and it is hardly to be supposed, that the Scots would be so “ long before them in this matter.”

Ruddiman, in his preface to Anderfon's Diplomata Scotiae, opposes these opinions. He remarks, that, “ although the coining pen“ nies came at first from the English to the Scotch, it may be doubt“ ed whether the English or Scotch first coined these sort of pieces
 “ of four pennies in value, which the French called Gros, the Ger“ mans Grosche, we Groats. Speed gives us the figure of a groat “ struck by Edward I. of England; but Nicolson shows, that that “ coin of Edward was rather of Edward III. or IV. but certainly “ not of Edward I.; for he affirms, no coins of that kind were “ struck before Edward III.'s time. But there are many groats of “ David II. extant, who was cotemporary with Edward III. and “ coined in different places. Many of them which bear the name
 “ Robert, are to be seen in the collection of coins in the Advocates “ Library at Edinburgh; but which of the Roberts this may be, it “ is not easy to determine. Nicholson and Anderfon, following his “ authority, reject all the groats that have the name of Robert,
 “ from being the coin of Robert Bruce, for this chief reason, that “ none of the coins of that sort were then struck in England, and,
 “ therefore, ascribes all those which exhibit the profile of the King “ looking to the right, to be of Robert II. but such as exhibit him “ full-faced, to Robert III. But Mr James Sutherland Royal Pro“ fessor

P R E F A C E.

“ fessor of Botany, a most accurate collector and searcher into all “ kinds of coins, but principally Scottish coins, does not hesitate “ to give the former of these to our Robert I. The letter B, which “ is seen above the King’s head in some of these groats, and placed “ behind in others, he thinks, stands for the initial of the name “ Bruce, and which, indeed, seems to support his opinion in some “ measure. Certainly by that letter cannot be meant the place “ where it was coined, since that groat itself shows that it was coin“ ed at Dundee, (besides one of the coinage of Edinburgh, as above “ observed), and many think it was not decent for the coiner to “ place his name in such a remarkable part of the coin. But it is “ not quite settled that Edward II. was the first King in the island “ of Britain who coined groats, since there are extant in the collec“ tion of coins in the Advocates Library two half-groats, one of “ Alexander II. the other of Edward I.; from these it is probable, “ that entire groats, though they may be now lost, have been struck “ by these Kings. These groats, whether introduced by Robert I.
“ or by his son David II. were the largest size of coins we had till
“ the time of Queen Mary.”

I have thus given you the opinions of men learned in antiquity, on both sides of the question, leaving it to better judges to determine which authority bears the strongest marks of probability.

There is one authority more I wish to add, in corroboration of the opinion that these groats belonged to Robert II. which is Dr Francis Wise in his Catalogus Nummorum Antiquorum Scriniæ Bod- leianis reconditorum, page 244. “ Roberti a se invicem haud aegre “ distinguuntur. Robertus I nullos grossos percussit. Robertus II.
“ anteecessoris sui monetam imitatus est; nec ejus caput, a Davidis “ capite, nisi ex inscriptione, dignoscendum sit.”

ROBERT III. The profile is now changed to the full face, in imitation of the English coinage. Dr Wife, in the following sentence of the passage above quoted, says, "Robertus III. Henricorum Angliæ regum morem secutus est, ejusque nummi Henrici nummis, nomine excepto solo, similes sunt." The full face is continued till the groats with the arched crown and bushy wig under James IV. appear, when it is again changed to the profile.

It has been alledged, that pellets in the quarters of the reverse of Robert III. appear, for the first time, in the Scottish series. Mr Anderson, in his Diplom. Scot. says, in his notes on the money of Robert III. "Hi globuli quos alii Byzantinos, Angli pellets five pillulas vocant, nunc primum in nostris nummis conspiciuntur. Id autem imitatione factum Anglorum et Francorum, quorum in nummis hi globuli frequentissime adhibentur." But he is mistaken; for there are pellets in two of the quarters of the reverse of a halfpenny of David II. No 15. of Plate II.

JAMES I. With regard to the coins of the first five James's, I shall recite what Dr Wife says on this subject, and I shall afterwards add my own ideas, which coincide with the opinion of Mr Cummyng secretary to the Society of Scottish Antiquaries, and in which most people, who are skilled in the numismatic line, fully agree.

Page 244. of Dr Wife. "Jacobis suos cuique nummos reddere opus arduum erit; quo quinque hujus nominis continentis successionis ordine regnarint. Jacobus Quintus per literam numeralem 5. si quando ista occurrit, facile dignoscitur. Quartum forte designant nummi forma elegantior et corona arcuata. Ad hoc insigne haud satis animum attendit. Cl. Andersonus, cum hujus generis nummos Jacobo II. perperam, ut mihi videtur, attribuerit. Quare regum ordinem, in ejus libro servatum, nonnihil immutavi; et Jacobum II. loco quarti reposui. Caeteri per me intacti " mane-

“mameant.” There does not seem to be greater difficulty in arranging any part of the Scottish series than in assigning the coins proper to each of the five first James’s. Some writers have made the weights their rule for determining to whom the coins belong; but I do not deem this an exact mode for ascertaining the point, and have, therefore, made their impressions the rule of distinction. The order in which Anderson in his Thesaurus, and Nicholson in his Historical Library, have placed them, should be in part rejected, as they give an arched crown to James II. This form of crown was not adopted in England till the reign of King Henry VII. nor in France till after the accession of Francis I. anno 1515, as appears from a testoon of his, on which he is represented in profile with a small open crown, and, on the reverse, the French shield of arms is ensigned, with a crown of the same form with those on the coins of David II. of Scotland.

JAMES II. All the writers on the Scottish coinage agree, that the money of James I. is distinguished by a sceptre on the right or left side of the King’s head, and two fleur de lis, and three pellets, placed alternately in the angles of the cross, in the reverse, and that those of King James II. are known by two open crowns, placed alternately with the pellets, on the reverse. Anderson has given to this King a coin, on which he is represented with nearly a full face, a bushy wig, and an imperial crown, surmounted of a mond and cross; but, though authors deny that it belongs to James II. they do not agree with respect to the Sovereign to whose reign it ought to be given. Leake, in his Account of English Coins, second edition, page 151. says, “That Henry VI. who succeeded to the English crown in the year 1422, was the first of the English Kings who appears with an arched crown upon his coins; but, upon his great seal, he has an open crown.” He afterwards adds, Henry VII. is the first of our Kings that we can be certain used it; and the testoon of Francis I. coined in 1516, is the first French money we see it upon. But Martin Folkes, in his Account of English coins, published for the Society of Antiquaries in England, 1745, page 15. says, "King Henry VII. first placed upon his money the arched or the imperial crown, as it is now commonly called, and by this particular his coins are readily distinguished from all those of his predecessors. This money, however, has been generally ascribed to King Henry VI. ; but, besides that, several of the mint marks to be found on it are either badges used by King Henry VII. or the supporters of his royal arms. The weight does ascertain it to be his beyond all doubt."

From these authorities it is certain, that an arched crown was first used in England by Henry VII. who succeeded to the throne in 1483; and, from the French coin mentioned, there is also a certainty, that an arched crown was not used in France before the year 1515; for, although Leake, in the passage above quoted, asserts, that Henry VI. was the first who appeared with an arched crown on his coin, yet he remarks, that Henry VII. was the first that we can be certain used it. And Martin Folkes has demonstrated, that all those coins with an arched crown, which are attributed to Henry VI. do, by the marks they bear, belong to Henry VII.

From the time of the first coinage of money in this country, in the reign of William the Lion, till James V.'s reign, the English model was the rule with respect to the Scottish coins. In imitation of them, we struck the penny, from the time of the above William till the reign of David II. who, copying after his contemporary King Edward III. of England, first struck the groats and half groats for circulation; which, with their sub-divisions, as in England, were the only species of silver coin we had till the reign of James V. The same Edward who struck the first gold coins for currency in England, was imitated in this species by his contemporary Robert II. before whose reign there was no gold current in Scotland.

It

It has been already said, that Henry VII. was the first English King who assumed an arched crown on his coins, whether the crown with which he was inaugurated had arches or not, is by no means material. It is, however, certain, from the description of the Scottish crown in the instrument taken when it was deposited in the castle of Edinburgh, anno 1707, that the arches at present on it were added by King James V.; and it is very natural to suppose, that when Henry VII. took that mark of imperial sovereignty, his spirited son-in-law James IV. who succeeded to the crown of Scotland in the year 1488, only three years after his father-in-law's accession, would, agreeable to the practice of his ancestors, adopt this material improvement in the appearance of his coins; and, therefore, I am induced to believe, that he was the first of the Scottish Kings who was represented with an arched or imperial crown on his coins. The three following authorities seem to confirm this opinion.

I shall first mention an engraved genealogical tree of the royal family of Scotland, executed in the time of King William and Queen Mary, in which are represented the portraits of all the monarchs of Scotland from King Malcolm III. each of whom, down to James III. inclusive, is adorned with a crown of the same form with that on their respective coins; but James IV. and all the succeeding monarchs are represented with arched or imperial crowns.

Secondly, In the numismata of Thomas Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, collected in the reign of Charles II. engraved and published in quarto, the coin attributed to James II. is given to James IV.

And, lastly, I mention the valuable collection of that great Antiquary Sir Thomas Bodley, in the university of Oxford, published in folio, with engravings by Wise, in which the arrangement described scribed is observed, and the crown in question placed on the head of James IV. This ought to be esteemed the most respectable authority, on account of the extensive knowledge of Sir Thomas in all branches of learning, as well as of the period in which he lived. He was born, as narrated in the Athenae Oxoniensis, Vol. I. pag. 326. on the 2d of March 1544, not thirty-one years after the death of James IV.; and, therefore, it cannot be supposed that he was ignorant of the coins which belonged to that reign.

The coins of JAMES III. are distinguished by having, on the reverse, a mullet or star of five points, and three pellets alternately in the quarters, and no sceptre on the head side. (Plate VI.)

For the reasons before mentioned, I cannot hesitate to give to JAMES IV. the coins which distinguish themselves by having Qu. Qu. or III. at the end of the legend on the head side, those with the three quarters face, bushy wig, and imperial crown.

Besides those on which the numeral 5. is expressed in the legend, to JAMES V. are given the coins with a three quarter face, having mullets and thistles on the reverse alternately. (Plate VII.)

MARY. Some time ago, there was communicated to me by Mr Fraser younger of Fraserfield, a coin of this reign, of a very extraordinary mintage. It is dated in 1553, and has the cypher FM. The disagreement here cannot easily be accounted for. The cypher would lead us to suppose it was coined on the marriage with the Dauphin; but that event did not take place for several years after, viz. in April 1558. I was, at first, induced to believe that the figure 3. might have been ill struck up, and intended for 8; but the fine preservation and superior beauty of the coin, evidently show that it has been owing to no fault in the striking. The motto is also very uncommon, (Diligite Justitiam). This appears on several gold:

gold coins of this reign, and of the same date; but I have never met with it on a silver coin. I have engraved the coin according to its real size, No 1. Plate VII. its weight is 22 pennyweights.

At what period No 2. was coined, we cannot be certain; but, as it has no date, I have placed it before her coinage with her head, dated 1553. No 3. which is the only date of this coin.

No 4. and 7. being the whole and half, have 1555 only.

No 5. and 6. were coined in the years 1556, 1557, and 1558. Several of them have different dates on the same piece, as 1556 on the one side, and 1557 on the other, also 1557 and 1558, and some have In Veritate instead of In Virtute. The mint marks of this sort are a crown, cross potence, and cross patee.

FRANCIS and MARY. No 8. and 9. with the motto Fecit Utraque Unum. have for dates 1558 and 1559. Of this last date there are two kinds, one has Fran. et Ma. Dei G. the other, Fran. et Ma. D. G. A remarkable distinction is observable in the arms on this coin, struck while Francis was Dauphin, which is, 1 and 4 quarterly the arms of France and the Dauphin, with her arms below, which he joins with his own in her right; the left side of the shield is occupied with her arms*. After his succession to the crown of France, the arms of both kingdoms are impaled, as in No 9. and 11. †. No 9. and 11. Vicit Leo de tribu Juda. are dated 1560 and 1561. These of this sort, which are dated in 1561, must have been struck between the 4th of December 1560, the day of Francis's death, and the 20th of August 1561, the day of the Queen's arrival arrival in Scotland. The dye was changed soon after, as there are whole and half testoons, with her head alone, in 1561. The mint marks of No 9. and 11. are a saltire, and some are without that mark; several have Scotor. 2. others Scotors. No 12. Snelling has placed under the head of billon, and Anderson amongst his silver. I am inclined to think that both are right, as I have seen them of fine silver as well as billon, which is a mixture of copper and silver. No. 13. is more properly to be considered as a medal.

* All these have the motto Fecit utraque unum.

† All these have the motto Vicit Leo de Tribu Juda.

MARY, Widow. With her head uncrowned, No 14. and 15. Plate VIII. have no other dates than 1561 and 1562.

MARY and HENRY. From her marriage with Darnley, to her resignation, their ryal, two thirds, and one third, all 1565, 1566, and 1567; and, what is singular, there is a one third ryal with Mary's name alone, dated 1566, which was during Darnley's life, and which I have engraved No 22. Plate VIII. It is in the possession of Mr Cummyng secretary to the Society of Scottish Antiquaries, whom I have formerly had occasion to mention. Whether there were any of the other kinds with this peculiarity, I have not been able to determine.

With regard to the ryal above mentioned, which is commonly called the Cruickstone dollar, I shall subjoin what Mr Anderson says:

“ Caeterum multi arborem in averfa hujus nummi facie insculptam, “ taxum esse volunt; adduntque, praeterea, eam ipsam designari,

Cruickston castle, in Renfrewshire, was originally the property of the Crocs, and in the time of Malcolm II. came by marriage of the heirefs of Robert de Croc. into the hands of the Stewarts, Earls and Dukes of Lennox. Here fame says, that Mary first resigned herself to the arms of Darnley under a large yew tree, which still exists. The Queen struck a coin with a figure of this tree, a crown, and an allusive motto of DAT GLORIA VIRES. See Pennant's Tour in Scotland.

The act for the coinage of this Ryal, is dated Decembris 22do 1565.

Sederunt Jacobus Comes de Moretoun Cancellarius, Georgius Comes de Huntlie, Joannes Comes de Atholl, Joannes Comes de Mar, Patricius Dominus Ruthven, Alexander Episcopus Candidae Casae, Joannes Maxwell de Terregles miles.

JAMES VI. The years of this King's coinage are particularly expressed in the descriptive part; and, therefore, it might be deemed unnecessary to give it here. (Plate IX. X. and XI.)

After his accession to the throne of England, none of his coins, except the sixpences, are dated.

The

that of the queen; however, to make amends as it were to the king, (though, I do not conceive how the queen could well place her husband's name before her own, on the public money of the nation), the famous yew tree of Cruickstone, the inheritance of the family of Darnley in the parish of Paisley, is made the reverse of this new coin, and the inscription about the tree, Dat. Gloria. Vires. is, no doubt, with a view to reflect honour on the Lennox family. The trunk of this tree, which stands to this day, is so large, and so well spread in its branches, that it is seen at the distance of several miles.

* This ascertains with absolute certainty, the value of silver in Scotland at that time, viz. that the ounce of silver contained but half the number of shillings it contains at present, and consequently, that the denomination of our money was then six to one of the English; whereas it is now twelve for one, and that our shilling was double in weight of silver of what it is now.

The first money of James VI. commonly called the James Ryal, I shall explain, by giving the act of the privy council in Keith's Appendix, No 23. which is not included in the acts contained in the appendix.

 son, as well as others, who are of opinion, that there were pieces of this kind of so low a value as five shillings.

With regard to this King's money, struck after his accession, I shall add Mr Anderson's notes upon No 1. of Plate XI. He says, thor, on this coin, has the following note.

The coins of CHARLES I. minted in Scotland. No 6. 7. 8. 9 and 10. are exactly the same dye as his father's, except the difference of the name. The varieties in this reign, as well as the mint marks, are very numerous, especially the 40 penny-pieces, the value is marked XL · XL · XL · XL XL besides many others, which might be reckoned too trivial to mention here. (Plate XI.)

With regard to the coins of CHARLES II. I shall insert the dates of those which have fallen under my observation. Of No 14. the four merks Scots, the dates are 1664, 1665, 1670, 1673, 1674, and 1675; below the head is the letter F. for Falconar, who was at that time master of the mint. The others, which have not this mark, have a small thistle. The dates of the coinage of No 15. are 1664, 1670, 1673, and 1674. Of No 16. the years of coinage are 1664, 1665, 1666, 1667, 1668, 1670, 1671, 1672, 1673, and 1674. Of No 17. are 1665, 1668, 1669, 1670, 1671, 1672, 1673, and 1675, all with the thistle beneath. No 1. of Plate XIII. has dates 1676, 1679, 1680, 1681, and 1682. They have all the mint mark F beneath, and are of the value of 56 shillings Scots. No 2. is dated 1675 and 1681, having also the letter F below the King's breast, and is in value 28 shillings Scots. No 3. has for dates 1676, 1677, 1678, 1679, 1680, 1681, and 1682, and a small F below the head; the value of this is 14 shillings Scots. No 4. is dated in 1680 and 1681, and is of the value of 3 shillings and sixpence Scots. No 5. was struck during the years 1676, 1677, 1679, 1680, and 1682, having, as well as the former, the letter F below the breast; value 7 shillings Scots. (Plate XII.)

JAMES VII. There are only two coins of this reign struck in Scotland, they are of the value of 40 and ~~40~~⁴⁰ shillings Scots. Of No 6. the years of coinage are 1687 and 1688. Of No 7. 1687 only. (Plate XIII.)

WILLIAM and MARY. Of this reign No 8. exhibits the crown, or 60 shillings Scots; these were struck in 1691 and 1692. No 9. the 40 shillings Scots has dates 1689, 1690, 1691, 1692, 1693, and 1694. No 10. the 20 shillings Scots, is dated 1693 and 1694. No 12. the 10 shillings Scots has for date 1691. No 11. the 5 shillings Scots, has dates 1691 and 1694.

WILLIAM

WILLIAM. No 1. Plate 14. is of the value of 60 shillings Scots, and, as well as No 2. of 40 shillings Scots, are dated from 1695 to 1700. No 3. the 20 shillings Scots, is dated 1695, 1696, 1697, 1698, and 1699. No 4. of 10 shillings Scots, is dated 1695, 1696, 1697, 1698, and 1699. No 5. of the value of five shillings Scots, is dated in 1695, 1696, 1697, 1701, and 1702. (Plate XIV.)

ANNE. There are but two coins of this reign struck in Scotland, the ten and five shillings Scots. No 6. has dates 1702, 1705, and 1706. No 7. is dated 1705 and 1707.

I

I shall now proceed to the gold coinage; the origin of which cannot be carried farther back than the reign of Robert II. I am aware, that many persons will disagree in this point, and insist that Robert I. did coin; but, I would beg leave to offer one reason, which, I think, may have weight. If Robert I. coined gold, it is most natural to suppose, that his successor David II. would imitate him; but none of his have ever been heard of. Had there been a coinage, among such a number of cabinets as are formed and forming, surely David's money must have been known. The learned Nicholson, whose knowledge was very extensive, is of this opinion, and founds it on the same arguments that he uses in the silver coins, That Edward III. was the first who struck these kind of coins in England, and he reigned after Robert I. of Scotland.

Prior to the reign of James I. of Scotland there is nothing in the publick acts relating to the gold money. In 1514, which was the year he returned to Scotland, after his captivity, he enacted in parliament, That both the gold and silver coin should be conform with that of England, in fineness and in weight.

The gold money of Scotland was similar in figure, size, and shape, to those of other nations, particularly the English. Till the reign of James V. the pieces were generally of a large and broad surface, but very thin. This Prince was the first who diminished their size, by increasing their thickness. The most remarkable are those commonly called the Bonnet-pieces, which were struck of native gold; in beauty and elegance of workmanship, they approach the nearest to the Roman coins, and very much surpass all the coinage of Europe at that period, or even since.

With regard to the denominations of the different coins, there is an unsurmountable difficulty. Most of the Acts for the coinage of particular pieces were never printed, nor is there any other way of ascertaining ascertaining them at this distance of time. It is probable, that, in this, as well as in other particulars, we followed the example of the English, who gave their gold the general name of Florins, from the Florentines or Tuscans, who then excelled all others in the art of refining and striking gold and silver coins; they were sometimes called Nobles, because they were composed of the noblest or purest metal. In the early periods, it was customary with the English to give the gold the same name with the silver. The Florins of the largest size were also called Pence, their halves, halfpence, the quarter, quadrants and ferlings; but afterwards, their names were derived from the devices impressed on them: The angel took its name from the figure of the angel trampling on the dragon. The rose noble from the English rose surrounded with the regalia. Reals and sovereigns from the icon of the King, or from other symbols of sovereignty. For similar reasons, the names Florins and nobles first distinguished the Scottish coins; they were afterward denominated Lions, from the figure used as the arms of this kingdom. The Scottish gold is so termed in the public acts and private contracts.

With regard to the fineness of the gold coinage of this country, I have subjoined a table showing the intrinsic fineness, &c. to which I refer. At the same time, I must remark, that, from this table it appears, that, during the period, from the reign of Robert II. in 1371, to that of Mary in 1556, the gold was 11 oz. 18 pw. 18 gr. fine, and 0 oz. 1 pw. 6 gr. allay. During Mary's reign, it was 11 oz. fine and 1 oz. allay; except for a part of James VI.'s reign, when it was only 10 oz. 10 pw. fine, and 1 oz. 10 pw. allay; the fineness continues the same.

As to weights, a considerable difficulty occurs in ascertaining, with precision, what were the real weights of the different pieces. The acts of parliament ordering the mintages, are silent as to the weight; they only give the fineness, and what they shall be current for.

The weights, as they now are, seem a very imperfect rule, as there are few or none in good preservation: Such as I have weighed, I shall give. The St Andrew of Robert II. weighs generally 38 gr. that of Robert III. 60 gr. the St Andrew or lion of James II. 48 gr. This continues the only device till James III. introduced the unicorn holding the shield; the largest of these weighs 48 gr. the half in proportion. Those of James IV. are the same, except No 3. of plate II. which weighs 57 gr. No 2. weighs 19 gr. The bonnet-piece, No 5. and 9. of plate II. weighs 72 gr. its half, No 11. and quarter, No 10. in proportion. Of Mary's, No 14. weighs 32 gr. the lion, with her cypher, No 15. and 16. weighs 78 gr. and the golden ryal, with her bust, dated 1555, 115 gr.

Before I enter into the description of the following plates, I beg leave to observe, that, in the whole of the Scottish gold coinage, there does not appear the name of a single town; consequently, we have no rule for ascertaining the places of mintage; but, from the numerous mint marks in most of the reigns, it may be naturally concluded that there were several mints. I could have wished to have given a distinct account of those particular mint marks which have come to my knowledge; but it will readily occur to every person, that the description of them here would not answer the purpose; and the engraving every variety would have required at least double the present number of plates, and increased the price too much in proportion to the real value.

ROBERT II. The legend of the reverse of two of this King's coinage is very singular; and, as its meaning may not be obvious, I explain it. XPC is put as a contraction of the Greek word XPICTOC, or XPIΣ TOΣ. Christ. The same legend is used by his

his successors, Robert III. and James I. No. 2. has Dns. Protec. Ms. z. libe. for Dominus protector meus et liberator meus.

ROBERT III. No. 5. has Scotmu, and on the reverse is Xnmv. apparently blunders in the person who made the dye, as the last cannot be meant as a contraction of the legend.

JAMES I. On No. 9. of this reign, the legend is changed to Salvum, fac Populum Tuum. The varieties in the gold coins of this King are very numerous, as well as his silver: The legend is divided by fleur de lis, small crosses, annulets, &c.

JAMES II. The word Doc, on the reverse of No. 10. is placed as a contraction of Domine.

JAMES III. The legend is again changed, which being long, is contracted in many different ways; but is to be read Exurgat Deus, et Dissipentur, inimici, ejus. On one, in the word inimici, the two first letters are comprehended in the letter N. which method was much used in ancient inscriptions. There is a variety having the same legend, Exurgat Deus, &c. on both sides, only contracted differently. On the side with the unicorn is, Exugat, De, et, Disipent, Nimici, e, on the other, Exurgat, Ds, et, Disipet, inimici, es.

JAMES IV. The four coins given of this King are quite different from each other. No. 16. has the same legend as the last, only the figure 4 after the name. No. 17. the King armed on horseback, sword in his right hand, also regarding the right. No. 18. the same as that of James I. No. 9. plate I. only having IIII after Scotorum. The legend of the reverse of this is strangely contracted, Salum, Fac, PPluv, Tuv, Dne, for Salvum, fac, populum, Tuum Domine. In No. 2. and 3. of plate 3. the King on horseback regards the left, his sword

in his left hand; his name and title is on the side with the shield, which was before the reverse. (pl. II.).

JAMES V. No. 4. has Villa Edinbug. It is to be observed, that blunders seldom occur on the coins of this reign. He is the first King who inserted dates on his money. The letters CK behind the head of this No. 4. were probably the initials of the mint-master's name. No's. 5. 9. 10. and 11. are what were commonly called the Bonnet Pieces, and, as I have mentioned, were of gold found in Scotland. The crosses on each side of the shield of No. 7. have been by some mistaken for the figures xx, who from thence inferred that it was struck to pass for twenty pounds Scots. But it does not weigh, as particularly mentioned in Nicolson's Bibl. Scot. pag. 299. more than one ounce and three drops, which, according to the table of gold, says Ruddiman, would scarcely amount to the value of nine pounds: Besides, two crosses, exactly similar to those, are found upon a coin of the same kind, but of a much smaller size, No. 8. which shews that they never were intended as the value of the piece, but as a symbol of the Christian religion. At any rate, it was the opinion of Nicolson that these two were medals.

MARY. No. 12. is, except the two small crosses at the side of the shield, exactly alike to No. 7. and 8. of her father. No. 14. has MR. for Maria Regina. On No. 14. are the letters IG. on the sides of the shield, for James Earl of Arran, who was then governour of Scotland. Nicholson, page 301. says, that these letters were for the initials of James Stewart Earl of Murray; but it is certain, that, in the year 1553, James Hamilton, Earl of Arran in Scotland, and Duke of Chattleherault in France, was governour of the kingdom; and that James Stewart, above mentioned, was not created Earl of Murray before the year 1567, by James VI. No. 15. the reverse bears a cypher, containing Maria Regina. These cyphers or monograms were first used in seal rings, afterwards in the coins of the Eastern empires, and the reverse of seals, &c. No. 16. is much the same, only the letters I G are placed on each side of the cypher instead of cinquefoils, as in the last.

MARY. Plate III. No 1. and 2. are the testoon and half. No 3. seems to have been a medal.

JAMES VI. No 5. was called the rose-noble of Scotland. No. 7. and 8. have the inscription, Post. 5. et 100, &c. meaning that there had been 105 Kings before him. But, according to our best historians, there were 107, unless the two Baliols were excluded out of the number, as being deemed usurpers. No 9. I should imagine, was intended as a medal. The Hebrew characters in the reverse are very singular. No 10. and 12 are dated from 1593 to 1601. By the legend Spero meliora, James would seem to indicate his hopes of succeeding to the throne of England. The dates of No 11. and 13. are 1601 and 1602.

Plate IV. After the accession of James to the throne of England, he changed the type of his coinage altogether; he now assumed on his reverse the Scottish British arms crowned; on the face of his largest piece, himself in profile crowned, wielding a sceptre in his right hand, in his left bearing a globe, ensigned with a cross. On his smaller money, his bust alone in profile, crowned. On No 4. there is the rose crowned, on one side; in the reverse, the thistle crowned. The piece No 1. was first called the Unite, on account of the union of the two kingdoms under one Prince; they afterwards obtained the appellation of Jacobus's and broad pieces; they were struck about the 23d of February 1605, and from thence to the 14th of April 1613. Their value was at 20 English shillings; afterwards they increased to 25, which was 12 pounds Scots. No 2. is half the size, passing for six pounds Scots, called the Double Crown. The legend of the reverse is Henricus Rosas, Regna Jacobus.

bus: I shall beg leave to add Mr Anderson's explanation of this, in his own words, "Id. est, -Henricus VIII. Angliae Rex, (qui utriusque heres erat) domum Eboracensem (cujus symbolum erat rosa alba) et Lancastrensem (cujus symbolum erat rosa rubra) in unum conjunxit, Jacobus VI. R. Scotiae, ejusdem Henrici (extinctis ejus liberis) ex proavi sui Jacobi IV. cum ipsius sorore Margaritha conjugio, itidem heres, Scotiae et Angliae regna feliciter adunavit." No 5. the fourth part of No 1. passed at three pounds Scots. This and the preceding were struck in the years 1602, 1603, and 1604. No 4. was commonly called the thistle crown; its value was 48 shillings Scots; the dates of this coin are 1605 and 1606, also 1611, 1612, and 1613. No 3. bore the same value as No 4. No 6. is of Charles I. except the legend, similar to No 1. of his father's. It was called the Carolus Jacobus, to distinguish it from the other piece of the same King, which wanted the imperial globe, and was called the Carolus; its value was 12 pounds Scots. No 7. is perfectly similar to the double crown of his father No 2. No 8 passed for three pounds Scots, being the fourth of No 6. No 11. has the profile turned to the left; the value was six pounds Scots. No 10. its half; No 9. the fourth part. No 12. has a legend different from the former, but was, in all respects, perfectly similar to No 6.

Of CHARLES II. there was no gold coinage in Scotland. With regard to this, Anderson, page 104. says, "Nescio qui factum sit, ut quamvis regnantibus Carolo II. ejusque fratre Jacobo VII. nummi argentei aereique ingente, apud nos, copia excusi fuerint, nulli tamen ex auro percussi, ex officina nostra monetaria toto eo tempore prodierint." No 13. and 14. are of William II. and were struck of the gold remitted by the Darien Company. They are thus described by the above author: "Sole autem ex oriente, qui sub regis effigie, repraesentatur, designata videtur nobilis illa, cui “ quam Dariensis illa colonia spectabat) negotiandi causa instructa.”

B I L L O N.

Considerable difficulties occur in arranging the coins of the first James's in the billon plate. From the best authorities, we learn, that there were none of this species struck by James I. Its introduction was owing to the great increase of the price of silver, which came so high in the reign of Mary, that groats and half groats could no more be coined, except in billon of four parts copper and one of silver; which, according to the author of the Essay on Medals, whom I beg leave to quote, had been practised by James II. III. IV. and V. He adds, all the Scottish copper coin, down to James VI. may be safely regarded as black money, being of the size of groats, half groats, and pennies, and intended to go as such. Historians mention, that one of the chief crimes imputed to James III. was his coining of black money, and the copper, as it is called, attributed to James II. III. IV. and V. is all of this description. In the reign of James VI. the copper coinage began, and speedily increased in its species. Various were the denominations under which they passed in this and the succeeding reigns. The Atkinsons were, it is thought, to be only the bawbee coined about the year 1582, when the money bore to the English as 1 to 8; but, upon its falling as 1 to 12, a third was added, and they went for 8 pennies; bas-piece was its real name, from the first questionable shape in which it appeared, being of what the French call bas billon, or the worst kind of billon; it corresponded to the French sol, and English halfpenny; and the penny Scottish, now equal to the French denier, was but the 12th part of an English penny, the sixth of the bawbee, and the half of the bodle. Fynes Morrison, in his Itinerary printed 1617, speaks of other coins called Placks of four pennies Scottish, and hardheads of one and one half; the plack is an ideal coin at this present time in Scotland, and the hardhead is only the French hardie Scotified, says the author above mentioned. There is no great wonder that French coins were very current in Scotland during, and after the reign of Mary, when we consider the numbers of French employed in the Scottish civil wars. He afterwards inserts a table of the old Scottish copper coins.

	A penny	=	$\frac{1}{12}$	of a penny English.
Botbwell , or	Bodle	=	2	pennies.
Hardhead , or	Hardie	=	3	pennies.
	Plack	=	4	pennies.
	Bawbee	=	6	pennies.
	Atkinson	=	8	pennies.

This coinage continued the same through the reigns of Charles I. and II. Copper Scottish coins of the first are, however, the scarcest of any. The bodle of James VI. has the lion rampant upon the face side, and the thistle on the other; but those of his two successors have C. R. or C. R. II. with the thistle on the reverse. The Scottish pennies of Charles II. are not very uncommon, they weigh only ten grains. After 1660, we hear of two pennies, bodles, and turners, the last being another term for the bawbee, by Ruddiman, derived from the French turnois; but apparently so called, like many other Scottish coins, from the monier's name. I have thus ventured to give such extracts from the Essay on Medals as have reference to this matter, as I think it by much the best work I have seen of the kind, and a most ingenious performance, so far as I can judge; and I would, therefore, recommend it to every person who intends turning their thoughts to the study of this branch of antiquity.

JAMES II. Plate I. No 1. 2. and 3. were certainly struck by this King. It having been already observed, that James I. did not coin any billon money. No 1. has an annulet on each side of the neck. This we observe as a mint mark of James II.'s silver money; besides, the form of the letters are much older than any of the following coins. No 2. is exactly similar to the silver coin I have given, from the best authorities, to James II. plate V. fig. 8. No 3. is much the same as No 1. having the annulet in the angles of the crosses, in the reverse, dividing the three pellets. No 4. and 5. are of a different type; but, upon comparing the letters in the legend, besides having crowns in the reverse, I do not hesitate to give them also to James II. Of James III. I have only one. The star, or spur-revel, in the centre of the orle, in the reverse, in my opinion, determines it to belong to this reign. There may be many varieties of this, as well as the others, I have inserted; but all I have met with of this type, having an orle on the reverse, as also, No 1. 2. 3. are much defaced, owing to this circumstance, that, as they were coined for the use of the poorer sort of people, their circulation became so much the greater, consequently they are in very bad preservation, when compared to the silver and gold of the same period.

No 7. distinguishes itself to belong to the Fourth James, having always the figure after his name; the reverse is similar to those of James II. crowns in the angles of the reverse; but the letters of this and No 6. are very different from the former, being those of the modern alphabet.

James V. No 8. and 9. are the half and whole; the largest weighs commonly 26 and the other 13 grains.

No 10. and 11. of Mary, are similar to the two last, and of the same weight; the largest was what was commonly called the plack. There are several varieties of this piece, in the contractions of the legend, and in the limbs of the saltire; some having R. others Regina, D. and Dei. &c.; in the reverse, the saltire often differs, sometimes plain; others have one smaller saltire suppressing the other, besides being struck both of billon and pure copper. No 12. is on the face side the same as the former; the reverse has a cross potent, with small ones in the interstices. This is the only coinage which appears but that of Edinburgh. At what period this and the former were coined, I cannot say. The silver coinage, with this last reverse, are dated in 1556, 1557, and 1558; we may, therefore, suppose this to have been struck in 1556, as there is a coin with the date, No 15. of the same year and reverse; after which period, all her coins seem to have been dated. No 13. has her bust full faced. This, in the catalogue of the coins in the Advocates Library, is placed as her first coinage; but I can see no reason for assigning it any particular place; it can only be said, that, having no date, it must have been struck on or before the year 1556. The same catalogue places No 10. and 11. after she became widow by Francis's death; but I should rather think myself right, as they also want a date, and, besides, have a perfect resemblance to those of her father, and, probably, of the same dye, with the alteration of the name only. No 14. is of pure copper, dated in 1557. Several of this kind I have seen, with a heart and star punched in, from which circumstance it has been given to Morton; but, I am led to think, that it was only meant to distinguish the real coin, after a discovery that this piece had been counterfeited. No 16. dated 1558, was struck just before her marriage with Francis. No 17. I have met with of fine silver, billon, and pure copper; its date is also 1558, and was struck immediately after her marriage. No 18. like No 14. has a star and heart punched in, and is dated 1559. No 19. with the arms of Mary and the Dauphin joined, is also dated in 1559.

The copper coinage of James VI. are all without dates, as are those of Charles I. and II. The reverse of No 20. has two points behind the lion, which denotes the value, two pennies.

No

No 21. is washed over with silver, and passed for eight pennies, or four Bothwells, this was called the Atkinson. No 22. is of copper, and passed for two pennies. No 23. and 24. also of the same value.

Plate II. Exhibits the Scottish British coins, that is, after the accession of James VI. to the throne of England. Of this King there are only two. No 1. was called the Hardhead. The reverse has two points behind the lion, to denote its value of two pennies. No 2. its half.

No 3. and 4. of Charles I. are perfectly similar to No 1. and 2.

Of Charles II. No 5. and 7. are what were called Bothwells, of the value of two pennies. No 6. is the half. No 8. is also a Bothwell. No 9. the bawbee, passed at six pennies.

No. 10. of William and Mary, was of the same denomination. No 11. its half.

No 12. of William, was likewise the bawbee; and No 13. its half, equal to the farthing English.

NUMISMATA SCOTIÆ.

WILLIAM, Surnamed the LION*.

The Ninety-third King of Scotland,

SUCCEDED his brother, Malcolm IV. in 1165. During a long reign of forty-nine years, he was engaged in constant disputes with Henry II. Richard I. and John, Kings of England. Being taken prisoner by Henry's army, he was carried over to that Prince, then in Normandy, and confined till he paid the ransom of 40,000 merks Scots. It may, therefore, be deemed not an improper conjecture, that, while residing abroad, he should engage, and send over to Scotland, foreign artificers for the purpose of coining money to pay this ransom, which may account for the legends of this his first coinage being French; besides, four

* Some alledge, that he was so called from the activity of his disposition; and other from his first introducing a lion rampant as the regal armorial bearing of Scotland.

four of the places of his mintage were castles, and delivered up in pledge until the sum was paid *.

(Head side.) This King is always represented in profile on his coin, and invariably regards the right. The crowns of this, his first money, are all alike, simple, composed of three fleur de lis, the middle one having a double stalk, the sceptre before the face, either surmounted with four parts in cross, or with a cross, all contained within a circle. Behind the head is a crescent embracing a pellet.

The legend of No 1. 4. 6. and 15. have LE REI WILAM. No 7. LE REI WILLAM. No 5. WILIELMUS REX. No 11. WILAME REX, with points between every letter. No 13. WILLAME REX. No 14. LE REI WILLAME.

Such unusual inscriptions in this kingdom may, at the first view, strike the reader with the idea of their not being Scottish; but, when the reverses are examined, the doubt will vanish †.

Dr Ducarel's Series of Anglo Gallic coins, quarto, London, 1757, Plate I. No 2. expresses a reverse of William the Bastard, Duke of Normandy, on a silver coin, which he says, p. 1. has four half moons in the four quarters of the cross. These, in some measure, are similar to our mintage in Scotland; but the legend by no means corresponds, which undoubtedly proves that those here engraved belong to our William; and this is farther corroborated by other coins struck at different places in Scotland, with the like figure of the King, and similar reverse devices. Snelling, (Reverse.) In imitation of the English coins, the reverses have the name of the moneyer, and where coined. Five different places of mintage appear of this King's coin, viz. Edinburgh, Berwick, Perth, Roxburgh, and Stirling; on all of them the cross, which is confined within the inner circle of the legend, is the same, only differing sometimes in breadth. Most of them have points in the angles, and in each quarter a crescent embracing a pellet, with one, two, and some no stalk.

No 1. ADAM ON EDENEBU. No 2. ADAM ON ED. No 3. HUE OF EDENEBU.; each with points in the angles and pellets, having one stalk only.

No 4. FOLPO. DE. PERT. No 5. FOLPOLT DE PERT.; these have points in the angles, but the pellets have a double stalk.

No 6. RAUL DE ROCESBU. With points and pellets, as in No 3.

No 7. RAUL ON ROCAB. The pellets close to the circle of the legend, and no stalk.

No 8. RAUL ON ROCEBU. The same.

No 9. RAUL DERLIG. The points and pellets as in No 1. Five dots at the end of the legend.

No 10. RAUL DERLIG. The same. Three dots at the end of the legend.

in his plate, page 41. No 2. a reverse, which very nearly agrees with our Scottish mintage, and, from the defects of the piece, &c. asserts, that it was struck in the Isle of Man, for no other reason, but because it was found there.

No 11. ADL. The rest of the letters defaced; only from the pellets having a double stalk, and no points in the angles, it may be given to Perth, as all that coinage of this reign have invariably these marks.

No 12. WAL ETER. The points and pellets as in No 1.

No 13. and 14. WILLAM BEREWIC. Not differing in any thing else but the legend from No 1.

No 15. ADAM BEREWIC. The same.

(H. S. No 16.) We place as his second coinage. The head is more rudely expressed; regards the right, without a crown. The legend, LE REI WILA. Instead of a crown, there are three rows of pearls, extending from the forehead to the neck. The sceptre reaches almost to the edge of the piece, surmounted with four pearls in cross.

(R.) A double cross, extending only to the legend, having the ends curved, within a circle of pearls, with a figure rudely representing a fleur de lis in the quarters. Legend, HVE WALTER.

(H. S. No 17.) The head and sceptre much the same as the last, but placed farther back in the inner circle, the face more distinctly expressed, with the legend, WILBLMUS R X.

(R.) Has the double cross, as the former, with a star of six points in each of the quarters. Legend, WALTER ON PRT.

(No

(No 18. H. S.) The head and sceptre, as in the last. The legend, LE REI WILAM.

(R.) Has this legend, H WALTER; most probably for Hue Walter. A double cross, not extending to the inner circle of the legend, filled up in the manner expressed in the plate. In three of the quarters are stars, or shut mullets of six points, and one of five points.

(Weight.) These pennies usually weigh from 18 to 23 grains Troy; so the medium may be struck nearly at 20 grains, allowance being made for wear in currency; although it cannot be expected such accuracy can take place in coins so old and so rudely minted.

(Fineness.) Eleven ounces two penny weight of fine silver, and eighteen penny weight of alloy, as in England*, was the standard fineness of the Scottish silver at this time, and remained so, until the reign of James V.

(Value.) Money at this period was of the same value as in England; therefore the pound troy weight of 12 ounces of the standard mentioned †, was of the same value as the pound tale, or twenty shillings in money, the pound weight here is made up of 240 pennies, of the weight of $22\frac{1}{2}$ grains each, that is, of 5400 grains, or eleven ounces five penny weight, or lighter by one sixteenth than the pound weight troy ‡.

ALEXANDER II. 1213,

Succeeded his father William in the year 1213, when but 16 years old; he married first Jean, sister to Henry III. of England, who died without issue; he afterwards married Mary, daughter to the Earl of Couci in France, by whom he had Alexander III. his successor; he died in the 35th year of his reign.

(Type, Head Side, No 19.) On his money he is represented with a profile head, looking to the right, with an open crown and the sceptre before his face, extending through the legend Alexande Rex.

(Reverse.) A double cross extending through the legend ending in form of an anchor; in the centre of the cross a square with a point in the middle; a star of six points in each of the quarters; the legend Jonas on An *.

(H. S. No 20.) The head similar to the last, with the legend Alexander Rex.

(R.) A double cross extending to the edge of the piece, with a square and point on the center, and stars of six points in the quarters. The legend Tomas on An. This coin is much smaller than the first; but neither from former authors, nor any other information, could be obtained the value of this piece; so it is deemed to be a penny.

(H. S. No 21.) The head and sceptre much the same as the last. The legend Alexande Rex.

(R.)

* This would seem to be the first time any mintage was made at Annan, the county town of Annandale.

(R.) A double cross as the last, without any square in its centre, but a star of six points in each quarter. Legend *Iohan on Be. This is smaller than any of the other two preceding coins.

(Weight, fineness, and value). About $22\frac{1}{2}$ gr. troy of 11 oz. 2 pw. fine silver, and the pound in tale equal the pound weight; corresponding nearly to those of his father, and as they stood in England.

ALEXANDER III. 1249,

Succeeded his father in 1249. During his minority, the Cummins, a powerful faction, managed the affairs of the nation: The public revenue was spent by them, and the subjects of all ranks were oppressed. He married Margaret, daughter to Henry III. of England; which Henry, on account of the youth of his son-in-law, took upon himself his guardianship; the queen dying, he afterwards married Jolet, daughter to the Count de Dreux. During his reign, in the year 1263, Acho king of Norway, with 150 ships, landed 20,000 men at Air, and laid claim to the Western isles, after having reduced two of the largest of them. He was attacked by Alexander Stuart, grandfather to the first of that name, king of Scotland, who totally routed this army of Norwegians at Largs near Air; Acho with difficulty reached Orkney, where he died of grief. Alexander made many salutary laws, and was esteemed to be a good king. He died in the 37th year of his reign, by the accident of his horse falling with him near Kinghorn in Fife, when on a journey to visit his young queen. He left only a grand-daughter who died unmarried.

Before this reign, pennies are the only coins we meet with; but now the halfpenny No 28. is introduced; the coinage of which in England was first made about the middle of this king's reign.

(Weight, fineness, value.) These articles stand as before, the penny weighing $22\frac{1}{4}$ gr. Troy, the standard 11 oz. 2 pw. fine; and a pound in weight passing for no more than one pound in tale.

JOHN BALIOL, 1292.

Alexander III. dying without issue, John Baliol, descended from Margaret, eldest daughter of David Earl of Huntington, youngest brother to William king of Scotland, after an interregnum of about seven years, was chosen king. He reigned four years, and resigned the kingdom to Edward I. of England, when another interregnum of more than nine years followed.

(Type.)

(Type.) Little varieties are to be observed between the types of this coinage and those of Alexander III. his head crowned in profile regarding the right, and the sceptre surmounted with a lilly before him, with the following legend. (Plate II.)

(No 1. Face.) IOHANNES DEI GRA.

(Reverse.) REX SCOTORUM. A cross with two stars or mullets; and spur-revels of five points each in the quarters.

(No 2. F.) IOHANNES DEI GRA. The head crowned as before.

(R.) REX SCOTORUM. The cross the same as before, with a spur-revel of five points in two of the quarters only.

(Sorts and varieties.) It seems to be pretty certain, that there were no more varieties struck in this reign, than those specified, No 1. and 2. being pennies, and the halfpenny No 3. the differences of which having terminately described, it is unnecessary to add any more than to express their weight.

ROBERT BRUCE, 1306.

IN the year 1306, after an interregnum of more than 9 years from John Baliol's resignation, Robert Bruce descended from the 2d daughter of David, Earl of Huntingdon, mentioned before, after various struggles with Edward I. of England, at last obtained the crown, and, during a reign of 24 years, he was the glory of the age, and died regretted by his people, both as their father and their king. (No 8) ROBERTUS DEI GRA. The king's head like the last.

(R.) SCOTORUM REX. Cross, with a star or mullet of five points in each quarter.

(Sorts) This sovereign's coinage consists of pennies as in former reigns No 4 and 5. he has also given the halfpenny No 6. and 7. and the farthing No 8.

(Weight.) The penny now weighs only 17 gr. Troy; the halfpenny $8\frac{1}{2}$, and the farthing $4\frac{1}{4}$ gr.; but, if there were 21 pennies in the ounce, it should weigh $21\frac{1}{2}$ gr. troy.

(Fineness.) 11 oz. 2 pw. fine silver and 18 pw. alloy.

(Value.) From the statute Robert III. cap. 22. Reg. Majest. as being there said, the ounce consisted of 21 den. and at this value it likewise stands in the table R. M. David II. cap. 28. it is inferred, the pound tale under this king's reign was 21 gr.; the penny, on this supposition, should weigh nearly 21 troy gr. but, as above observed, it seldom weighs more than 17, near 18 gr. This brings the pound tale to 24 gr.

DAVID

DAVID BRUCE II. 1329,

WHILE yet an infant, succeeded his father in 1329. He was forced to fly and abandon his kingdom to Edward Baliol, son to the late King John Baliol, who was powerfully assisted in his enterprise by Edward III. of England, and held the crown about four years. It may not be improper to observe, that, during Edward Baliol's government, there was no mintage in this country, at least no coins bearing his name have been discovered; for which reason we shall proceed to David, who, after an absence of nine years, returned from France, where he had fled for protection in the beginning of 1342, and having declared war against England, was, after various vicissitudes of fortune, totally defeated near Durham and taken prisoner; he remained in England about eleven years, and was at last ransomed for 100,000 merks of silver. He died in the 41st year of a reign full of troubles, without issue.

(Type.) The types of the penny, halfpenny, and farthing, are the same as before; those of the groat and half groat, which are now struck for the first time, have the head inclosed within a rose of 6 or more leaves or segments, and the reverse has now two circles of legends, imitating, in both these particulars, the manner just then introduced into England. They were commonly known by the name of spurred groats, from the spur-revel in the quarters of the cross.

(No 9. Face.) DAVID, DEI, GRA, REX, SCOTORUM. The King's head crowned in profile, shewing the left cheek; on his head a crown composed of three fleur de lis, lis, and two low points alternately; before him a sceptre erect, ensigned with a fleur de lis. All inclosed within the leaves of a rose, except the bust which reaches to the circle of the legend.

9 Troy grains; and the farthing about 4½ Troy grains, although the farthing, No 20. weighs five.

In this reign is the first statute in which there is the least mention of money. 1347, cap. 35. ordains English money to be received in Scotland at its value in England; cap. 38. ordains a new coinage, equal to the English in weight and fineness, with a notable sign upon it, to distinguish it from all other money; cap. 46. scarcity of silver, the pound to be coined into 29 sh. 4 d. being 10 pennyweights less than before; but, after deduction of seven pennies to the King, 1 d. for the warden of the mint, and 11 d. to the master of the money, to bear only 27 sh. 9 d. the pound weight; it is to equal that of England in weight and fineness.

R O B E R T II. 1371.

DAVID BRUCE, dying without issue, was succeeded by Robert, son of Walter Stewart, the Eighth hereditary Lord High Steward of Scotland; he was the first of the Royal Line of STEWART. He married, first *, the beautiful Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Adam Moore of Rowallan, an illustrious knight; after her decease, he married Euphane, daughter of Earl of Ross.

In

* This marriage, according to Richard Hay of Drumboote, C. R. his vindication of Elizabeth More from the imputation of being a concubine, and her children from the tache of bastardy, &c. 4to, Edinburgh, 1723, page 5. S. 2. places to have happened in the year 1334, against his antagonists, confirming his opinion from a variety of charters published in that rare and scarce Tract.

In the beginning of his reign, he had frequent wars with England, in which he was successful. Anno 1387, was fought the famous battle of Otterburn, between Earls Douglas and Percy. According to Buchanan, the English forces were totally routed; 1840 were slain, 1000 wounded, and 1040 taken prisoners; amongst the latter were Henry Percy and his son. This victory cost the Scots dear, by the death of Douglas their valiant leader, who, covered with wounds, fell in the beginning of the engagement; but which event was, by his own desire, kept secret till the battle was over, lest the knowledge of it might dishearten his troops, and turn the fate of the day. The standard which was carried before him is still preserved in the family of Douglas of Cavers, one of his descendants.

(Type) Of this King's coins is the same as the last; his penny and half penny are not easily to be distinguished from those of Robert Bruce.

(Sorts.) Groats, No 1. 2. 3.; half groats, 4. 5. and 6.; penny, 7.; and half-penny, No 8.

(Value.) The value of this King's money cannot be ascertained from any of the old statutes, but is generally supposed to be the same with that of his father, viz. 29 sh. 4 d. In his second year 1371, the Scottish money in England was called in, and, two years afterwards, their currency was reduced to three-fourths of that of England, which still continued at 25 sh. This brings the pound to 33 sh. 4 d. and the weight to about 54 Troy grains; however, very few so light are to be found.

R O B E R T III. 1390.

AFTER a reign of nineteen years died Robert II. He was succeeded by John his eldest son by Elizabeth More; upon his coronation he changed his name to Robert, from whence he was commonly called Robert, John Fernzier, that is, last year. This change of name he was induced to make, because that of John was hateful to the Scots on account of Baliol. Robert III. is, by all authors, allowed to have been one of the best of men, but could not be reckoned a great King; for, in fact, he had but the name of King, and, as he was a weak man, his brother took charge of the government, and was made Duke of Albany by Robert, who was the first who created Dukes in Scotland. About this time the University of St Andrews was erected*. In 1406, after various vicissitudes of fortune, Robert III. died of grief, on account of his son James, (afterwards the first of that name who reigned in Scotland), whom he had sent to France to avoid the tyranny of his uncle the Governour before mentioned, and who, in his voyage, was, by a storm, unfortunately driven on the coast of England, and there detained a prisoner for more than nine years †. The Governour dying, his son Murdoch succeeded, who, displeas'd at the insolence of his sons, ransomed James, and brought him home in 1423. In 1419, the Earl of Buchan was made Lord Constable of France, for having, with the auxiliaries sent thither under his command, defeated the Duke of Clarence, the King of England's brother.

(Type.) In this King's reign, the type undergoes a considerable change, from the profile face to the front full face, and that comprehended in a rose, without any sceptre; and, in the reverse, the stars and spur-revels in the angles of the crosses are changed for three pellets, as in the English mintage, to which they bear a great affinity.

(Weight).

(Weight.) The heaviest of the groats weigh about 50 Troy grains, and many of them not more than 32 or 33; the half groats and pennies in proportion. But there are small pennies, which appear like half-pence; they weigh from 9 to 10 Troy grains a piece, answering nearly the light groat, being too heavy for any sort of half-pence, if as fine as the larger pieces.

(Sorts.) Groats, No 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. and 14. of Plate III. No 4. of Plate IV. half groat. No 1. the penny, and No 2. and 3. farthings.

(Value.) In the statute Robert III. cap. 22. the pound tale is said to consist of 32 sh. At this value the groat should weigh 56 Troy grains; but none are found of that weight. In the table And. Dip. Sc. p. 30. it stands at 29 sh. 4 d. as his father's. In his second year, 1391, the Scottish groat was cried down in England to two pence Sterling, by 14th Richard II. cap. 12. This brings the pound tale to 50 sh. They were prohibited in his fourth year, 1393, from being any longer current in England by the 17th Richard II. cap. 1. From all which, it may be concluded, that there is no certainty as to the true value of the pound tale.

J A M E S I. 1406,

SUCCEEDED his father in April 1406, being yet a prisoner in England, where he was detained till 1423, when he was ransomed, as Redpath, in his Border history, p. 388. says, for L. 40,000 Sterling. He married Jean, daughter of John Earl of Somerset, son of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, who was of the blood Royal of England. She was the most beautiful woman of her time. By her her he had twins, the youngest of whom succeeded his father, the eldest dying when an infant. James was a little man; but strong and agile. According to Buchanan, he was of quick wit, well learned, a good politician, every way accomplished for government, and an excellent poet. He was basely murdered at Perth, in the thirteenth year of his reign, by the Earl of Athole, and other assassins, who burst into his chamber, and, in the presence of the Queen and her Ladies, perpetrated the horrid deed. The darkness of the night favoured their escape; but they were afterwards apprehended, and suffered the punishment due to their enormous crime. It may, perhaps, appear trivial to mention an incident which happened at the time of this murder; but those who are advocates for the great strength of mind which many women possess, will pardon it. When the conspirators were breaking into the room, (the bolt of the door having been purposely carried away by one of the traitors), a lady of the name of Douglas most courageously thrust her arm into the staples, instead of the bar, and thus endeavoured to save the King; but, alas! her arm was soon broke by these atrocious ruffians, and the Monarch fell a victim to their rage, and was pierced with many wounds.

Catharine

A truly learned and ingenious author has lately obliged the world, by publishing a valuable production of this Prince, called the 'King's Quair,' and, at the same time, clearly proves, that the poem 'Christ's Kirk on the Green,' (though generally ascribed to James V.) belongs to James I. His character this author paints in a few words: 'Men of active and superiour parts,' says he, 'have often soared to thrones; but how few of the sceptered rank have distinguished themselves as men of genius, and still how few to rank and genius have joined the qualities of the heart, virtue and public spirit? So rare a phaenomenon, however, was James I. of Scotland.' So long a digression, it is hoped, will be forgiven by every lover of his country, as it proceeds from a wish of giving assistance, in transmitting to posterity the knowledge of so amiable, so great, and so good a character.

(Type.) The head of this King is full faced, encircled with a rose, the sceptre erect on the right, usually; but in one coin, as No 10. it is placed on the left; the marks of distinction are more numerous in his mintage than in any reign of the Scottish series, when the coins are otherwise similar.

JAMES II. 1437,

WHEN about seven years of age, succeeded his father. On account of his extreme youth, Alexander Livingstone was chosen Regent, and William Crichton Chancellor. Under their government, there was almost a continual warfare with England, besides constant broils at home with the Douglasses, because Archibald Earl of Douglas was rejected as Viceroy. Their arms had various success. Added to these misfortunes of foreign and domestic wars, a famine and pestilence prevailed for two years, with such violence, as to kill those it attacked in a day's time. In 1449, James married Mary of Guelderland, of the blood royal of France. In the year 1460, when besieging the castle of Roxborough, he was unfortunately killed at the age of twenty-nine, by the wedge of one of his own guns, as he was directing a battery. He had all the qualifications, (says an old author) necessary to make him such a Prince as one would chuse to be, if the gifts of nature could proceed from choice. He was both graceful and lovely; he had a handsome body, a graceful mein, a grave behaviour, and a robust constitution. He left issue, James who succeeded him, Alexander Duke of Albany, John Earl of Mar, the Ladies Margaret and Cecilia.

(Weight.) It is observed, under this article in the last reign, that these groats are seldom found to weigh 56 grains Troy, yet are said to be equal to those of England, which weigh 60 grains Troy, or the eighth part of an ounce; however, there are many of the last that weigh no more than 56 grains, though, to appearance, well preserved; for which reason, no judgment can be formed what was the weight of James's groat at first, from what they weigh at present.

(Fineness.) Eleven ounces two penny-weights of fine silver, and eighteen penny-weights of alloy.

(Value.) Upon the coining the groats above mentioned in 1451, the pound tale is valued at 64 shillings, or L. 3 : 4 : 0, (that is, 96 groats, eight pence each), which is more than double the nominal value of the pound Sterling, which was only 30 shillings. In James's 13th parliament, by the groat being raised from eight to twelve pence, the nominal pound is increased 50 per cent. or from L. 3 : 4 : 0 to L. 4 : 16 : 0.

J A M E S III. 1460,

AT the age of seven years, succeeded to the throne of his father. To this Prince fled Henry VI. of England for assistance, when overcome by the Duke of York. At which time, Berwick was delivered to the Scots, in order to secure their favour, and it remained in their possession till the year 1482. In the 1468, James married Margaret of Denmark, a Princess possessed of every accomplishment fit to adorn a great and good Queen. The jealousies and discontents of many of the nobles, which had long subsisted, at last broke forth in open rebellion, upon the prospect of a marriage intended betwixt James and the Queen Dowager of England, Margaret being now dead. If this union should take place, it was dreaded that James might discover from her the persons who had been guilty of an intention of deposing, if not of murdering him. As she was an active, subtle, and designing woman, there remained not a doubt, but that she was well acquainted with the many conspiracies entered into by the Scots Lords with her first husband. James, at last, found it necessary to secure himself in the castle of Edinburgh, at that time a strong fort, which the rebels blockaded, but could not besiege. Here he was safe, and would, in a few days, have found himself at the head of an army of 40,000 men, raised by the Earls of Huntly, Errol, &c. who were on their march to join him; but, unluckily, taking the advice of those who either wanted judgment, or wished his destruction, he left Edinburgh castle, and proceeded to that of Stirling to meet his troops. Upon his arrival there, he was denied entrance by the Governour, and, receiving notice that the rebels were at hand, he was compelled either to fight, or make his escape by sea. He determined to hazard an engagement, which happened on the 11th of June 1488; the result of this was the total rout of his troops. In his flight, whether by being wounded, and not able to keep on horseback, or by his horse falling under him, he was overtaken, and inhumanly murdered by some of the confederate nobles, in the twenty-ninth year of his reign, and thirty-fifth of his age. He left three sons, James, who succeeded him, Alexander, created by him Marquis of Ormond, Earl of Ross, and Lord of Brechin, but afterwards made Duke of Ross, and provided to the archbishoprick of St Andrews; and John Earl of Marr, which two last died without issue.
result

(Type.) The type of this King's coin is very similar to those of his father. The head crowned with an open crown, inclosed in a rose. The reverse has the cross and double legend, as also the three pellets; but, instead of the crowns, there are spur-revels.

J A M E S IV. 1488,

SUCCEEDED his father in the sixteenth year of his age, and was crowned on the 24th of June 1488, being just thirteen days after the murder of his father. About this time came to Scotland, that famous impostor Perkin Warbeck, who personated the Duke of York, whom he much resembled, but who had been dead for some time. He pretended, that he had found means to escape from the Tower, when his brother Edward was murdered by Richard III. This Warbeck was set up by Margaret Dutchess Dowager of Burgundy, sister to Edward IV. of England, out of hatred to Henry VII. By her art, he had been received as the person he represented in Portugal, Ireland, France, Flanders, &c. He was possessed of a ready wit, and the melancholy story of his sufferings was credited by many. He met with a favourable reception at Edinburgh from James, who gave him in marriage the Lady Katharine Gordon, daughter to the Earl of Huntly, whose person, beauty, riches, rank, and virtue, concurred to make her a fit match for a great Prince. In behalf of this adventurer, the invasion of England was undertaken, with a considerable army; but without effect. After having experienced great vicissitudes of fortune, at James's request, he left the kingdom, and went over to Ireland. Soon after, he was taken by Henry's forces and put to death. James, in the year 1502, married the Princess Margaret of England; but, some time afterwards, quarrelling with Henry, the English invaded Scotland. James, in return, entered England, and took the castles of Norham, Wark, Ford, Etel, and others. But, as a considerable part of his army deserted on account of the want of provisions, &c. the great force which James brought with him, was reduced to a few of the nobility, with their friends and vassals. In this dreadful situation, in the neighbourhood of the English power, he

he was prevailed upon to take an advantageous post for the encampment of his army, which the English perceiving, marched as if they intended to pass him, and invade Scotland. James, not being aware of this feint, quitted his post, and came down to the low grounds. Both armies met in Flodden-field. The fight was maintained with the greatest courage till night, when both armies withdrew. The Scots lost near 5000 men; the English about the same number. Among the Scots were slain the flower of their nobility. The King was supposed by many to have fallen in battle; but others affirm, that having escaped from the field, he was pursued and murdered by one of his own nobles. It has been a prevailing report in that country, that, a considerable number of years ago, a skeleton, with an iron chain round the waist, was found among the ruins of Hume Castle, which was supposed to be that of James, as he is said, by several authors, to have worn such a chain, as a punishment for his unnatural rebellion against his father. In a manuscript history of Scotland, written by the Earl of Nithsdale, and preserved in the Scots College at Doway, it is said, 'That, during the usurpation of Cromwell, a skeleton, girded with an iron chain, and inclosed in a bull's skin, was found among the ruins of the old castle of Roxburgh; and that the iron chain which King James IV. did at no time lay by, made people generally believe, that it was the body of that Prince which they had discovered; but that the nation being then in subjection, there was no way to make a further trial of the matter; so the skeleton was interred without any ceremony in the common burial place.' James had, by his Queen, four children, James and Arthur, who died young, James, who succeeded him, and Alexander, who died a child. His natural issue were numerous, Alexander archbishop of St Andrews, by Mary daughter to Archibald Boyd of Bonshaw; Katharine, married to James Earl of Morton, by the same Lady; James Earl of Murray, by Jean Kennedy, daughter to the Earl of Cassils; Margaret, married to John Master of Huntly, by Margaret Drummond, daughter to John Lord Drummond; and Jean, married to Malcolm Lord Fleming, Great Chamberlain of Scotland, by Isobella Stewart, daughter to James Earl of Buchan.

(Type.) The type of this King is similar to those of his father, the head crowned with an open crown inclosed in a rose, after the legend on the head side is generally Qra, or Qt or III. JAMES V. 1514, SUCCEEDED his father in the year 1514, when but two years old: After various struggles by the Queen and her party, John Duke of Albany was chosen Regent. About the year 1537, he married Magdalen daughter of Frances I. King of France, who dying soon after her coming into Scotland, he married Mary daughter of Claude Duke of Guise. After a life full of troubles and disquietudes, he died on the 13th of December 1542, having reigned near twenty-nine years.

(Type.) The type of this King's first coinage, is a three quarters face, regarding the left, with an open crown in a rose of seven segments, three globules at the angles of each. The reverse has a cross foliated, only one legend, a spur-revel of six points, and a thistle head in opposite quarters. This second coinage has his head in profile regarding the left, crowned with the imperial or arched crown, and the body covered with mail, inclosed in a plain dotted circle. The reverse has the great cross of Malta, bearing the arms of Scotland. (Plate VI.)

 ing in an angle.

(Weight.) No's 12. and 13. are lighter than any of the Scots series, weighing about 30 grains Troy, and 15 grains the half, being about $\frac{2}{7}$ of those of this King, with the 5 after his name.

There is no certainty either as to the fineness, or for what these two pieces were current.

(Weight.) The groats, No 14. 15. and 17. weigh about 42 grains, and the half groat No 16. in proportion.

(Fineness.) The silver money of this King is put in the table at 11 ounces fine silver, and one ounce Alloy; but Nicholson says, that the Douglas groat, which is the most common, was only 10 ounces fine.

(Value.) In the table above mentioned, it appears that a pound of silver was coined into L. 9 : 12 : 0 in tale. Now the Douglas groat, M which

which was generally in use, and weighed only 42 grains Troy, must have been current for about 17 pence, to bring out the above value; but, if for 18 pence, as Lindsay alledges, page 292. and but 10 oz. fine, the pound tale will be increased to above L. 11. We are informed by Mr Balfour, in his account of the cunzie, page 292. that, at the death of this King, the ounce was worth 19s. 9d. and consequently the pound L. 11 : 17 : 0. As to this difference, it is left to future judges to determine.

After this reign, the groat is no more heard of. It had, for near two centuries, been the largest piece in Scotland. When first introduced by David Bruce, it was of the same intrinsic and nominal value as in England, that is, four pennies; it was now reduced to about three fifths of the old weight, yet it passed for between four and five times its first value, as was the custom in France, Germany, and Italy, where the gros, grosch, and grosso, were continually raised in their nominal value; whereas in England, notwithstanding the groat has been diminished in its intrinsic value, yet the nominal has always been fourpence.

M A R Y, 1544.

THE beautiful but unfortunate Mary succeeded her father when only a week old. To obtain the Vicegerency of the kingdom, Cardinal Beaton counterfeited a will of the late King, naming himself and three assessors to that office. However the cheat was soon discovered, and James Earl of Arran was chosen Regent. An embassy was sent about this time by Henry VIII. of England, to treat of a match between Mary and his son, afterwards Edward VI. which was agreed to in Parliament; but the Cardinal and Bishops, dreading that that a change might be effectuated thereby, made an opposition, which was so powerful, that the agreement was broke. On this account, Henry declared war against Scotland, and, invading that kingdom by sea and land, burnt Leith and Edinburgh, besides destroying many places of less note on the borders. In the year 1555, the Queen Dowager was chosen Regent by the States, in the room of the Earl of Arran: And in 1558, Mary her daughter, was married to Francis II. then Dauphin, afterwards King of France, on the death of Henry II. his father. The Queen Dowager was a woman of great wit, and had a mind very much disposed to equity; but, being warmly attached to the French interest and the Catholic Religion, her government was the occasion of constant feuds and broils, which ended only with her death in June 1560. In the December following, died Francis in the seventeenth year of his age; and Mary, finding her residence in France disagreeable, after the death of her husband, slighted by the Queen mother, and forsaken by the tribe of courtiers which appear only in the sunshine of prosperity, and being solicited by her subjects of both parties to return to her native kingdom, resolved to undertake the voyage. Altho' refused a safe conduct by Elisabeth Queen of England, she arrived safe at Leith in August 1561, after an absence of near thirteen years. She was received at her landing with the highest marks of joy and regard; but, notwithstanding every effort, it was impossible to conceal from her the poverty of the country, and she was conducted to Holy-rood-house with little pomp. A Princess accustomed to the utmost splendor and magnificence, could not fail to observe this change in her situation, which deeply affected her. In September following, she made her public entry into Edinburgh; on which occasion there was nothing neglected, which could express the affection and duty of the citizens towards her. But, among the pageants displayed in the procession, they introduced many representations of the vengeance which the Almighty had inflicted on idolaters, thereby testifying their abhorrence of that religion she professed.

She had many solicitations of marriage from foreign Princes. Her hand was asked by the Archduke Charles, Ferdinand's third son; Don Carlos of Spain, and the Duke of Anjou, the brother of her former husband. But many circumstances happened which diverted her thoughts from a foreign connection: From political views, she wished an alliance with the family of Lennox; but, afterwards on an interview with Henry Steuart Lord Darnley, the eldest son of that family, she determined to marry him, notwithstanding every opposition. He was at this time in the bloom of youth. In beauty and gracefulness of person, he surpassed all his contemporaries, and excelled to a great degree in those accomplishments which add ease and elegance to external form, and which enable it not only to dazzle, but to please. He was, however, a man of a weak understanding, and violent passions. Added to these, he had that insolence, which the advantage of external form, when accompanied with no quality more valuable, is apt to inspire.

The conduct of a man of this kind could not fail to create great disgust amongst the nobles, which was increased by his attaching himself strongly to David Rizzio, an Italian of very low birth, and son of a musician at Turin. Rizzio having been made French secretary to the Queen, by degrees, got great influence over her, which he used in behalf of Darnley, who was at last married to Mary in July 1565.

It is unnecessary to relate by what means the events which afterwards took place, were brought about, as they are well known. Perhaps it may be thought, that what has been said is superfluous; but it was done with a view to mark particular dates, which appear to be necessary in the consideration of the coins of this reign, where the variety is so great. A discussion of her conduct, whether guilty or not, of aiding in the murder of her husband, is not intended to be introduced here. That matter has already been amply treated of by

by some of the most eminent writers, men of great learning and knowledge, though differing in their opinions. One circumstance must not be omitted. A coin with Mary's name alone appears, dated 1556, which is somewhat strange, as Darnley was then alive. This coin is given No 22. Plate VIII. I have never met with any of the larger size bearing that date, nor, indeed, with a duplicate. It might be suggested, that this date is an evident sign of the hatred she bore to her husband; but this is left to the judgment of the reader. The many misfortunes which were the consequence of her marriage with Bothwell, the reputed murderer of her husband, and her tragic end in 1587, after a life of forty-four years and two months, almost nineteen years of which she spent in captivity, are generally known.

I have ventured to place at the head of this coinage a piece which lately appeared. It has the cypher of Francis and Mary, though dated in 1553, which was five years before her marriage with the Dauphin. Various have been the conjectures with regard to it. The legend is uncommon. Diligite Iustitiam appears on several gold coins of this reign, and of the same year; but I have never before met with it on a silver coin. What was the intention of striking such, is left to better judges to determine. The piece is in good preservation, and there is no appearance of any mistake in the dye. Its weight is two penny-weights.

(Weight and Sorts.) From the weight of No 2. and 3. which are from 64 to 68 Troy grains, they may be supposed to be testoons. No 4. weighs about 116 grains Troy; No 7. which is the half, 58 Troy grains; these are the testoon and half. No 5. weighs from 84 to 90 Troy grains; No 6. from 42 to 45 grains Troy, also the testoon and half. No 8. and 10. weigh nearly in the same proportion, and are the whole and half testoon. No 9. and 11. are much about the same weight, and are also the whole and half. No 12. weighs about 21 grains; but its denomination is unknown. No 13. I have never had an opportunity of knowing its weight, but it certainly was a testoon. No 14. and 15. are likewise the whole and half testoon, weighing about 92 and 46 grains Troy. No 16. was certainly intended as a pattern piece, or medal, in honour of the marriage; his name on this stands before that of the Queen; but, on all the others, her name is first. No 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. and 22. The largest of these pieces weigh one ounce Scottish, and the others in proportion to their value, that is, $\frac{2}{3}$ and $\frac{1}{3}$ of the same. The testoon and half with these last, of ten, twenty, and thirty shillings each, appear to be the only coinage she had in silver.

(Fineness.) Eleven ounces of fine silver and one ounce alloy.

(Value.) In the table, it appears a pound weight of silver, at the beginning of her reign, was coined into L. 9 : 12 : 0 in tale; and, as the testoons and half testoons are said to have been current for 5 sh. and 30 pence, they should have weighed about 147 and 73 Troy grains. In her 13th year, there was 13 pound to one pound weight. The pound tale appears to have been increased to L. 15 : 15 : 0, or

L. 16, in the 1558, or between 1555 and 1562, inclusive. In the year 1565, and the remaining part of her reign, there is a certainty of its being 18 pound.

J A M E S VI. 1567.

JAMES VI. was placed on the throne on his mother's resignation, which happened in July 1567, when he was but a year old. From this period, till he took the reins of government into his own hands in 1578, there were four Regents. The Earl of Murray held that office till 1570, when he was murdered by Hamilton of Bothwellhaugh at Linlithgow. To him succeeded the Earl of Lennox, who fell in a skirmish with the Queen's adherents in September 1571. The Earl of Mar was chosen in his room, but died in October 1572. The Earl of Morton, who long had wished for this office, but who had been disappointed by the superior interest of the Earl of Mar and his party, now meeting with no opposition, was elected Regent, and continued to exercise his power with the utmost oppression and severity, till the nobles at last, roused by the injustice with which they had been treated, prevailed with the King to assume the government himself, which he did in March 1578. Morton at first pretended to resign with joy; but his conduct afterwards shewed he quitted it with the utmost regret. Notwithstanding his being degraded from the high office which he held, he had the power to commit many enormities; his enemies at last prevailed; he was tried, condemned, and very soon after beheaded in June 1581. During this reign, in the year 1588, the famous Armada was fitted out by Philip of Spain to conquer England. Its fate is well known; successive storms and battles conspired with their own bad conduct to ruin this enterprise. In November 1589, notwithstanding the efforts forts of Queen Elifabeth, to perswade him to the contrary, James married Ann of Denmark. In 1603, he succeeded to the throne of England by the death of Elifabeth, who died on the 24th day of March, in the 70th year of her age, and the 45th of her reign. It may not be thought improper to mention, that James's title to the crown of England was by Margaret, eldest daughter of Henry VII. who was married to James IV. of Scotland, by whom she had King James V. who was succeeded by his daughter Mary, mother of James VI. of Scotland, and I. of England, by Henry Lord Darnley, son to Matthew Earl of Lennox, by Margaret Douglas, daughter to King James IV.'s widow, Lady Margaret of England, by her second husband the Earl of Angus. By which means he was allied to the crowns of England and Scotland, both by father and mother. After a life of disquietude and trouble, he died at Theobalds, the 27th of March 1625, in the 22d year of his reign as King of England, and 48th as King of Scotland. By his Queen he had two sons and three daughters, of all which, none survived him except Charles his successor, and Elifabeth who was married to the Elector Palatine. James was of a peaceable temper, and esteemed the most learned Prince of his time, and perhaps that ever sat on the English throne.

(Weight, &c.) The articles of weight, fineness, and value of these coins, are the same as the last pieces of Mary, viz. the weight $472\frac{1}{2}$ 315, and $157\frac{1}{2}$ Troy grains. The fineness, 11 oz. fine silver, and 1 oz. Alloy. And the pound weight cut into 18 pound tale. The years of this coinage are 1567, 1568, 1569, 1570, and 1571.

(Weight, &c.) These pieces are the half noble and noble, weighing 2 pw. 6 grains Troy, and 4 pw. 12 grains, a little more or less. The years of this coinage are 1572, 1573, 1574, 1575, and 1577.

(Fineness, value.) In the table against 1571, the fineness is 8 oz. and 1577 it is 9 oz. The pound weight of silver being valued at L. 16: 14: 0 in tale, as in the table, will arise from the noble's weighing 4 pw. 17. grains Troy; supposing this is its value at 11 oz. fine, if it was 9 oz. fine, it would amount to about L. 20: 5: 0.; and if but 8 oz. fine to L. 23. Which of these was the true value, I have not been able to determine.

QUEEN ANNE.

NUMISMATA SCOTIÆ,

From the ACCESSION of JAMES VI.

T O T H E

UNION of the two Kingdoms under QUEEN ANNE.

AT the death of ELIZABETH, which happened in the year 1603, JAMES VI. ascended the throne of England.

(Type.) The type of his first coinage, which was the crown and half crown, and appeared in 1605, is the King on horseback, a drawn sword in his right hand, a thistle head crowned on the caparison of the horse. The reverse has the arms of England and Scotland, with those of Ireland, in one shield. Scotland in the first and fourth quarter, France and England, quarterly, in the second quarter, and Ireland in the third.

C H A R L E S I. 1625,

SECOND son of James VI. of Scotland, and First of England, by Anne of Denmark, was born at Dunfermline in Scotland, November 19th 1600, and succeeded his father in 1625. He was, when two years old, created Duke of Albany. When his father succeeded to the crown of England, he, and the rest of the royal family were carried to England, where he advanced considerably in learning, under Mr Thomas Murray. Soon after his accession, he shewed the strongest attachment to the Catholic Religion, which, in the end, produced the most dreadful consequences. The struggles he had with his parliament broke out into open rebellion. They each declared one another's armies and adherents traitors. The battles fought by them were numerous, and the success various. At last stepped forth that independent spirit Comwell, who soon decided the fate of the Monarch. The history of the unfortunate Charles is too well known to require any thing further being said.

(Type.) The types of this reign are exactly similar to those of the last, differing only in the name for the first five. Afterwards, he is represented looking to the left. There is a great variety of pieces in this reign, which are afterwards expressed.

CHARLES

C H A R L E S II.

SON to Charles I. by Henrietta Maria, daughter to Henry IV. of France. He was born the 29th of May 1630, and succeeded to the crown in 1660. The various incidents of this reign are known to every person; therefore I shall only take notice that he died in February 1684.

(Type.) The press was in this reign first introduced into Scotland, in the coining money, in the same manner as in England, except the graining on the edges of the smaller pieces, or the letters on the large. In the four first, No 14. 15. 16. 17. the King's bust regards the right, laureated, with long flowing hair, and cloathed in the Roman manner, with the George pendent from the breast. In the first five of plate 13. the head regards the left, also laureated, but the body cloathed in a different manner.

(Weight.) The weight of the dollar is 4 penny-weight 12 grains, the different divisions of it in proportion. The standard silver of those coins was computed at three pounds four shillings Scots, and bore currency for twenty-eight shillings, fourteen shillings, seven shillings, and three shillings and sixpence.

JAMES

JAMES VII. 1684.

SECOND son of King Charles I. by Henrietta, daughter to Henry IV. of France, succeeded to the throne in 1684, on the death of his brother. He reigned four years, and then abdicated the throne.

(Type.) The King's bust laureated, regarding the right with a loose garment round the breast. The only two coins that he struck were the 40 shillings, and 10 shillings. The reverse of the first has the royal arms in one shield crowned, on the other the arms are in four separate shields crowned, a St Andrew's cross in the centre, with the thistle, rose, fleur de lis, and harp, in the angles betwixt the shields.

WILLIAM AND MARY, 1688.

WILLIAM Prince of Orange, was son of William II. Prince of Orange, by Mary Steuart, eldest daughter of Charles I. King of Great Britain. On the abdication of James II. in 1688, he was declared, with Mary his wife, King and Queen of England.

(Type.) The type of this reign has the King and Queen's head conjoined; the value of the piece is beneath their busts. No 8. 9. 10. and 12. have on the reverse the arms in one shield crowned, in the centre a shield with the lion. No 11. has on the reverse the cypher of W. M. crowned. On the death of his Queen, he struck a fresh coinage. His head regards the left; the value in figures below the bust. The reverses of the first four have the arms in a shield crowned as before. No 5. has a three leaved thistle.

BILLON OR COPPER MONEY

O F S C O T L A N D,

From the Reign of ROBERT II. to the UNION.

THE first coinage of gold in Scotland is ascribed, by the best judges, to Robert II. The types of whose coins are the shield, with the arms of Scotland; the King's name and title round; the reverse has a plain St Andrew's cross or saltyre, extending to the edge of the piece, or the figure of St Andrew, the arms and legs as on the cross, confined within the circle of the legend.

JAMES II.

The type of this King's reign is different from the former. The arms are in a lozenge shield, except the first, which has the face the same as before; and the reverse St Andrew carrying his cross in his hands. The others have a small saltire; in each flank a thistle or fleur de lis, all within an orle of six crescents, the extremities ensigned with fleurs de lis, alternately a quatre foil.

The type of this distinguishes the coinage from any of the former. The unicorn supporting a small shield with the royal arms; reverse, a cross floree, surmounted of a star of twelve or more points, waved.

J A M E S I V.

The type of this reign is various. The unicorn, &c. as in the left; the King on horseback; and St Andrew on his cross. His coins are easily distinguished from the other James's, having for the most part the figure 4 or IIII in some part of the legend.

*A Proclamation for reforming sundrie inconveniences touching the Coynes of his
M. Realmes.*

JAMES, by the grace of God, King of Great Britanne, France, and Ireland, defender of the Faith : To our loveds messengers, our sheriffs in that part, conjunctlie and severallie, constitute, greeting, For-famikle as Wee, and the Lords of our secreet counsaile, having consideration of the great hurt and prejudice that divers of our lieges have susteined, and daylie susteine, through the clipping, roungeing, impairing, and diminishing of our proper coyne of golde, both old and new, committed by numbers of avaritious and godles persons, who, preferring their own privat and unlawfull gaine to the common weale, and all others dueties of respect and consideration, brings in within this our kingdome, diminishes and puttes out amongst our subjects all sorts and spaces of golde, farre under and within the just weight ; so that this our country is filled with a greate quantitie of lighte gold, which hath commoun course, without controlment, especialie among the ignorant multitude, who are fenslis of their own harme, and lookes no foorthier but to the peece, without regairde either to weght or fynnesse : Whereas, if the receiving and delyverie of our coyne were by weght, according to the politie and ordour of others countryes, not only would the abuse of diminishing of the said coyne cease, and be of longer continuance, but our subjects would be sure to receive their paymentes in good coyne, holding weght and fynnesse. And wee being cairefull that the said abuse of diminishing of our coyne may be remooved, and the inconvenients following thereupon prevented and suffered to have no foorthier course nor progresse : Therefore wee, with advyse of the Lords of our secreet counsaile, have found it meet and expedient, that in all tyme coming, after the publication hereof, our coyne of gold, old and new, of the particular spaces and peeces under-written, shall be received by weght ; and that such peeces shall be lighter then the particular weghtes, and the remedies and abaitments after specified, may be lawfullie refused in all kynd of payments ; that is to say, the new English peece of fyne angell gold, called the Rose-Ryall, and marked on the one syde with the number of XXX. the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed three graines. In the new English peece of fyne angel-gold, called the Spur-Ryall, marked on the one syde with the number of XV. the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed one graine-halfe-graine. In the new English peece of fyne angel-gold, called the angell, marked on the one syde with the number of X. the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed one graine. In the new English peece of crowne-gold, called the New-Unite, marked on the one syde with the number of XX. the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed two graines. In the new English peece of crowne gold, called the Double-Crowne, marked on the one syde with the number of X. the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed one graine. And in the new English peece of crowne-gold, called the New-Britan-Crowne, marked on the one syde with the number of V. the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed half one graine $\frac{1}{2}$. In the peece of gold called the Unite, or Double-Angell, the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed three graines. In the peece of gold called the Double-Crowne, or Single-Angell, the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed two graines: And in the peece of gold called the Britan-Crowne, or Halfe-Angell, the remeid and abaitment shall not exceed one grain. And to the effect all our subjects throughout this our whole kingdome may have good and just weghts for the true weghing of all the faids coynes of gold, and true and upright graines for the remedies and abaitments. We, with advyse of the faids Lords of our secreet counsal, have given command, warrand, and direction to Charles Dickeson, sinker of our ironns, to prepare and make readdie sufficient numbers of upright and true weghts, as weel of the severall peeces of gold above written, as of the remedies and abaitments, according to the patterne and warrand which he hath received from the Generall of our coyne-houfe; which weghts, compting nyne peeces for everie stand, according to the number of the severall spaces of the faid gold, and double graines to everie stand, the faid Charles Dickeson shall bee holden to sell to our leiges at the pryce of twelfe shillings usuall moneye of this kingdome for everie stand, and hee shall not exceed the faid pryce, as hee will be answerable, at his perrell. And wee, with advyse of the faids Lords, discharges all others our leiges and subjects whatsoever, of all making and felling of any of the faids weghts and granes of remeid, but such as shall bee made bee the faid Charles Dickeson as faid is, upon whatsoever colour or pretext, under the paine of falsset, and to bee punished therefore in their persons and goods as counterfaiters of our weghts with all rigour. And fourther, to the intent our subjects may know upon what pryces the faids new peeces of gold laitlie coyned in England shall have course in this our kingdom, we, with advyse of the faids Lords, declares, that they shall have course in this our kingdome, upon the same pryces that they ar coyned for in England, to witt, the peece of angel-gold, called the Rose-Ryal, marked on the one syde as faid is with the number of XXX. for eighteen pounds. The peece of angel-gold, called the Spur-Ryall, marked on the one syde as faid is, with the number of XV. for nyne pounds. The peece of angel-gold, called the Angell, marked on the one syde as faid is, with the number of X. at the syde of the angell for six pounds. The peece of crowne-gold, called the Unite, marked on the one syde as faid is, with the number of XX. for twelfe pounds. The peece of crowne-gold, called the New-double Crowne, marked on the one syde, as faid is, with the number of X. at the syde of our portrait, for sex pounds. And the peece of crowne-gold, called the New-Britain-Crowne, marked on the one syde, as faid is, with the number of V. for three pounds. And touching all other spaces of gold which are

decryed and ordained to be brought into our coyne-houfe, the owner shall receive in our coyne-houfe in reddie and thankfull payment for everie unce weight of gold of XXII. carrets fyne, the soume of threttie-nyne pounds three shillings fyve-pence; and for all other gold they shall receive payment proportionallie for ilk unce, deneir, and graine weight thereof, according to the former proclamation made thereanent, and A. B. C. delyvered to the master coyner for that effect.

Our will is herefore, and wee charge you straitlie and commands, That incontinent these our letters seene yee passe, and in our name and autoritie make publick thereof, by oppen proclamation at the market-croce of our burgh of Edinburgh, and other places needful, wherethrough none pretend ignorance of the same. The which to doe wee committe to you conjunctlie and severalie, our full power, by these our letters, delivering the same by you duellie execut and indorfat again to the bearer. Given under our signet, at Edinburgh the twentie-fyft day of November, and of our reignes the fiftie-three and seventeene years 1619.

Cap. 18. The proclamation of money higher up.

Parl. 3. at
Edinburgh,
12th Oct.
1467.

Item, Our soveraine Lord the King and his three estaites in this present parliament, finds his Hieneise and the hail body of the realme greatly hurt and skaithed in the money of this realme, havand lower course than uther realmes hes about us, throwe the quhilk the cuinzie of this realme is borne out in great quantitie; for the quhilk our soveraine Lord and his three estaites in this present parliament, hes statute and ordained, that the money of uther realmes, that is to say, the Englisb noble, Henry and Edward, with the rose, the French crowne, the salute, the lew, and the ryder, shall have course in this realme of our money, to the value and equivalence of the course that they have in Flanders; that is to say, Edward with the rose to threttie-twa shillinges of our money. Item, the auld Edward to fourè marks, the ounce of the famin price as the

the rose has course; the Henry noble to twentie-seven shillings sex pennies; the French crowne to twelve shillings sex pennies; the salute to threttine shillings foure pennies; the lew to fifteen shillings sex pennies; the ryder to twentie-four shillings; the demy to twelve shillings; the lyon with the crowne to twelve shillings. Item, The auld Englisb groate fall passe for sixteene pennies; the Borage groate as the new groate; the new groate of Edward for twelve pennies; the spurred groate as the auld Englisb groate, for sixteene pennies; the Englisb penny three pennies; and the new Englisb penny richt swa; the groate of the crowne fall have course for fourteen pennies. Item, The halfe groate seven pennies; the groate of the Flour-de-luce aucht pennies; and the quhite Scottis penny and halfe penny to have course as they were wont to have; and the stricking of the black pennies to be ceased, that there be nane stricken in time to cum, under the pain of death; and that strait inquisition be taken be all schireffes and baillies of burrowes, gif ony sik stryking be maid, and the strikers to be brocht to the King and punished, as is before written; and the bringers of sik persones to be weill rewarded therefore, as effeirs.

Cap. 21. Anent the lower price of money.

In presence of our soveraine Lord and the three estaites in plaine parliament, ane worshipfull clerk maister, Archibald Quhite-law Deane of Dumbar, secretar to our soveraine Lord, in the name and behalfe of the haill clergie; and in likewise an honourable man, Richard of Kintor burgesse of Aberdene, in the name and behalfe of the haill commiffioners of burrowes, humbly maid, request, and bosoucht our soveraine Lord of his grace, that gif it happenis of case that his Maiestie, in times to cum, proclaimis his money to lower price and les avail, then it is now proclaimed, that therefore subsidies and procuracies, customs and duties, nicht be taken and payed of the money to the availe and price as they pay. The quhilk request, our soveraine Lord, in presence of his said three estaites, gratioufly and heartelie granted in all things foresaid.

Cap. 22. The crying up of certaine money.

Item, It is statute and ordained, that fra thyne furth the Scottis groate of the crowne, that pass for twelve pennies of before, fall have in time to cum course amang our soveraine Lordis lieges for fourteene pennies; and the half groate of the famin for seven pennies. Item, The auld Englisb penny fall have course effeir and to the auld Englisb groate, that is to say, for four pennies. Item, In likewise the new Englisb penny of Edward till have course effeirand to the new groate of Edwarde, for three pennies. Item, That the quhite Scottis penny have haill course in all payment quhill the next parliament, parliament, and then gif it needis remeid to be set therefore, as sall be thought speedefull. Item, That in-time to cum there be tane in payment of black money, bet twelve pennies in the pound, and swa descendant proportionally as the summe descendit. Item, It is ordained for the hyeing of the availe of the crowned groate, and Englisb pennies to be na hurte contrair the actes maid of before anent the money, but that act to stand in all force and effect as it was first maid.

Cap. 24. Anent money till have an universell course.

For as meikle as the Lordes of the three estaites, depute till advise upon the money, considers the great murmure that is past, becase of diversities of payment within the realme, throw the intaking of rentes be the auld payment, and giving out againe be the famin price; considering als that the pennyworthes ar risen with the penny, and meikle dearer then they war wont to be, that sulde hie the money till have general course to the hie price, that ilk man that suld receive ony rentes sulde be skaithed to the fourth or fifth parte of his rente, quhilk is too heavie to them in all estaites, and till eschew the greater rumour hereof, and for to content the commounes, it is statute and ordained, that the money fra thine foorth have universall course throw-out the realme. And als it is ordained, that the actes and statutes maid upon the in-bringing of bulzeon within the realme, and als the keiping of money within the realme, be observed and keiped, under richt fair and heavie paines, and richts swa uther statutes maid for keiping of the famin, that it pas not out-with the realme. Item, It is ordained, that unto the time it be advised be the wisest of the realme, and them that understandis them best therein, depute thereto, and at great lafour, as effeiris, to dispone the money as sall be seen maist speedefull for the profite of the realme, that in the meane time fra this foorth the Scottis money, that is to say, the demy, the lyon, the groate of the crowne, and the groate of the Floure-de-luce, and the small penny, and the farding fall have the famin course that they had before the first proclamation maid in parliament in the moneth of October; that is to say, the demy and the lyon ten shillinges; the groate of the crowne twelve pennies; the Floure-de-luce sex pennies and a halfe penny; and for the money of uther realmes to draw it within the realme, they ordained it to have course; the Englisb noble of the rose, and the auld Edwarde, keipand pace for twentie-aucht shillinges; the noble of Henry twentie-four shillinges; the lew fourteene shillinges; the French crowne eleven shillinges; the salute and the ryder till have course as they zeid before; and the auld Englisb groate threttene pennies; and the new Englisb groate elleven pennies; the Englisb penny three pennies; the spurred groate threttene pennies; and the Scottis pennies till have course as they had of before; and of the fardinges to take twa shillinges in the pund. And attour it is ordained, that gif ony man has maid ony obligations or contractes sen the laste parliament, or lent, or bought, or fauld ould sen the said time, they fall paye with sik like money, and sik like value as it had course in the time quhen they maid their contract, borrowed or lent, bocht or fauld; and this priviledge till indure to them quhill the feaft of Lamb-mes nixt to come, and na langer for their payment, and to outred their selfe.

Cap. 41. That na deniers of France, cortes nor mailzies be tane, nor brocht hame.

Item, It is statute and ordained, that there be na deniers of France, mailzies, cortes, mites, nor nane uther counterfaictes of black money, be tane in payment in this realme, bot our soveraine Lord's awin black money, stricken and prented be his cuinzeoures, under the paine of death; and that na maner of person bring into this realme ony strang black money of other realmes, or counterfit the King's money, under the paine of death, as said is: And attour in time cumming, that na man take in payment, nor offer in payment, ony black money, bot of our soveraine Lordis awn cuinzie; for quha that they be founden with fal be debitour for them.

Cap. 47. Anent the money, and crying down of the allayed groate to sex pennies.

Item, As tuitching the mater of the money, sen the mater is greate and tuitchis the haill bodie of the realme in great neareness, and that the Lordes here present cannot hastily be adviſed to take a final determination thereof, it is statute and ordained, that the money have course as it dois now unto the continuation of this parliament; and the Lords that fall have power in all uther maters for the commoun gude of the realme at that time, to adviſe, determine, and conclude upon the said mater of the money that now runnis. And in likewise, gif it be seene speedeful to make innovation of ony new money, outhir gold or silver, the saidis Lordis fall have power to adviſe and conclude thereupon: And as anentis the new allayed groate of seven pennies, it is ordained be our soveraine Lord, that fra thine foorth it have course for sex pennies, and the halfe groate of the samin for three pennies; and the cuinzie and course thereof to be continued, quhill the continuation of the next parliament.

Cap. 51. Of money and bulzicon.

Item, Anent the matter of money, and in-bringing of bulzicon, it is statute and ordained, that the actes and statutes maid of before, anent the in-bringing of bulzicon,

Parl. 7. at
Edinburgh,
May 9.
fall

fall be observed and kept; that is to say, of ilk serplaith twa ounce of burnt silver, and of uther gudes effeirand thereto; of the last of hides, foure ounce, and of the last of salmond, twa ounce, and of claith and uther gudes, with this addition, that the customers fall, or they give the cockquet to ony schip, take fouertie and borrowes of ilk a merchand, for the hame-bringing of bulzieon, as said is, and fall zeirly make compt thereof in the checker; and gif the customers failzies in the taking of the saide fouretie, they to be punished therefore, and deprived of their office for ever; and quhat merchand that failzies herein, to pay ten pounce to the King. And because the mater of money is richt subtil and greate, and may not richt hastely be set, it is thocht speedefull, that the three estaites commit their power to certaine wise discreet persones, to the number of ten or twelve, to advise and set the course of the money, and to devise newe money at they thinke it maist expedient.

Cap. 65. Anent the in-bringing of bulzieon.

Parl. 8. at
Edinburgh,
Nov. 20.
1475.

Item, As anent the money, because the Lordes understandis, that the pretermittung and sleuth that hes bene in the execution of the actes maid for the in-bringing of bulzieon in the realme, and als the searching and keeping of the money fra passing furth of the realme, hes caused the great scantnesse of it that is now of the money throw all the land; that therefore our soveraine Lord fall zit cause the actes and statutes maid of before, baith in the in-bringing of bulzieon, and keeping of the money, be scharpely put to execution; and that the breakers thereof be punished, after the forme of the actes made thereupon of before: And that the King now depute true and abill persones to be searchours in time to cum, that will and may do diligence for the halding in of the money, as is statute of before; and that the merchandes fall have for ilk ounce of brunt silver that he bringis hame to the cuinziers twelve shillings, and the cuinzieour of that burnt silver to make twelve groates of the ounce of the famin prent that the new groate is now, and of the new finance of the new Englisb groate; and that there be ane penny and ane half penny of silver maid of the famin finance, according to the new groate, and that penny to have course for three pennies.

Cap. 66. That nouthur silver nor gold be put to the fyre.

Item, Because it is weil knawen, that all cunzied money, baith silver and gold, put to the fire to be maid bulzieon to uther new money, is minished, wasted, and destroyed in the translation be the fyre, incurris great skaith in hurt of the King and all his lieges, and suld not be suffered in time no cum; it is therefore statute and ordained, that fra thine forth nouthur silver nor gold that bearis prent and forme of cuinzie, that
it

it be in any wise molten or put to the fire be the King's cuinzeoures, or be gold-smithes to any warke, without special licence or charge of the King; bot all gold and silver that is cunzied and has prent, be observed and halden hail to pas amangst the Kingis lieges, as he ordained it to have cours.

Cap. 68. That the money and gold be cryed up higher.

Item, It is statute and ordained, for the great scantnes and want of gold that is within the realme, throw having out of the famin, because it standis heir in a lower price then it does in uther cuntries; it is statute and ordained, that the gold have course in time to cum in this wise; that is to say, the rose noble to xxxv shillings, the Henry noble to xxxj shillings, the angell to xxij shillings, the French crowne to xij shillings iij pennies, the demy to xij shillings iij pennies, the Scottis crowne to xij shillings, the salute to xv shillings sex pennies, the lew to xvij shillings sex pennies, the ryder to fiftene shillings sex pennies, and all uther gold to paise after the fines and weicht, and at the pleasance of the giver and the taker; and that all silver money have course sik-like in time to cum, as it hes this day.

Cap. 93. Of the money; the warden's office; of bulzieon.

Item, It is statute and ordained be our soveraine Lord and his three estaites in this present parliament, that a fine penny of gold be stricken of the wecht and finnes of the rose noble, and a penny of silver to be equal in finnes to the auld Englisb groate, and ten of them to make ane ounce of silver, and to have course and paise for fourteene pennies; and there fall be alswa ane halfe groate of the famin, and the said penny of gold to have course and pas for threttie of the said groates; and ane uther penny of gold to be of the famin prent, and to have course for xx of the said groates; and the thrid penny of gold to have passage for x of the said groates; and the said penny of golde to have sik prent and circumscription as fall be advised be the Kingis Hieneffe; and all uther money to be conformed equally thereafter; and that our soveraine Lord fall limit a wise man, that hes knowledge in the money to be wardene thereof, and to examine and affaie the finnes of the said gold and silver, after the forme and rule maide in parliaments before, the wardene and the cuinzioures havand sik like fees for their laboures, as they had in our soveraine Lordis fathers and grandschirs times, and sik-like profite to cum to the Kingis Hieneffe of the cuinzie; and for the inbringing of bulzieon, the merchandes fall, for the gud of the realme, bring in of ilk serplaith of wool, skin, hydies, and claith, and of ilk last of salmond effeirand thereto, foure ounce of burnt silver; and they fall have for ilk ounce ten of the said groates.

Cap. 97. The crying downe of the new plackes.

Our soveraine Lord, of his special grace, and at the request and desire of the Lords of the three estaites in his parliament, havand consideration of the great distrefs that now procedis amangst his lieges in default of victualles and all uther merchandice and gudes that is put to derth, and raised and put to exceedand price, and halden and abstracted fra mercats, throw occasion of great quantitie of false counterfeit money, plackes, stricken in cuinzie of lait be false cuinzeoures, not allanerly within this realm, but als out-with the realme sa subtillic, and in sik forme of mettle, that it is unpossibile to discern and knaw the trew fra the fals; that therefore his Hienes moved of pietie, and of his grace, as said is, and for safety of his people, eschewing of dearth, and mony uthers inconvenients, hes ordained to cease the course and passage of all the new plackes last cuinzied, and gar put the samin to the fire, and of the substance that may be fined of the samin, to gar make ane new penny of fine silver, like the fourteene penny groate ordained of before, quhilk is of fines to the Englisb groate, and ten of them to make ane ounce. And in part of relieving of his people, that they sall not tine all the summes that they have of the saidis plackes, his Hienes hes caused Thomas Tod and Alexander Levingstoun to receive, grant, and take upon them all plackes, baith trew and fals, that is within his realme, fra quhatsumever persones that will bring or send them to the saidis Thomas and Alexander, betwixt this and the last day of May inclusive, and to give therefore ij pennies for ilk placke, that is to say, a xiv d. groate for seven of the said plackes, or ony uther payment that will impleis the partie receivand: And the saidis Thomas and Alexander shall find fourtie to the persones that they receive the money fra to make them payment, as said is, gif fourtie be desired of them: And that the latter payment sall be maid to all persons be the last day of September nixt to cum.

Cap. 2. That a fine penny of gold, and ane uther of silver be stricken; of the wardens of the cuinzie.

Parl. 1. at Edinburgh,
O.S. 6.
1488.

Item, It is statute and ordained be our soveraine Lord and his three estaites in this present parliament, that a fine penny of gold be stricken, to be of weicht and fines to
the

the roye noble, and ane penny of silver to be equal to the auld Engliſh groate, and ten of them to make an ounce of silver, and to have courſe and gang for fourteene pennies, and that there ſhall be ane halfe groate of the ſamin; and the ſaid penny of gold to have paſſage and gang for threttie of the ſaidis groates; and ane uther penny of gold to have courſe and gang for twentie of the ſaidis groates of the ſamin prent; and the third penny of gold to have paſſage for ten of the ſaidis groates of the ſamin prent; and the ſaidis pennies of gold and ſilver to have ſik prent and circumscription as ſhall be adviſed be the Kingis Hieneſſe; and all uther money to be equally conformed thereto: And our ſoveraine Lord ſhall limit ane cuinzeour thereto, as Alexander Livingſton, and a wife and leill man, that has knowlege in the money, to be warden thereof; that is to ſay, James of Creichtoun of Ruchvendaun, for the ſpace of a zier, to examine and eſſay the fines of the ſaid gold and ſilver, after the forme and rule maid in the parliament of before; the ſaidis wardene and cuinzioures havand ſiklike fee for their laboures as they had in the time of our ſoveraine Lordis progenitoures, and ſiklike profits to cum to the Kingis Hieneſſe for the ſaid cuinzie: And as for the in-bringing of bulzicon, the merchandes ſhall, for the gude of the realme, bring of ilk ſerplaith of wooll, ilk laſte of ſalmonde, ilk foure hundreth claith, four ounce of brunt ſilver, of ilk laſte of hydes ſex ounce, ilk laſte of hering twa ounce, and ſiklike of all uther gudes that payis cuſtome to the King; and the merchandes thereof ſhall bring bulzicon eſſeirand thereto: And attour, the merchandes that bringis hame the ſaid bulzicon, quhilkis ſhall be of the fines aforeſaid, ſhall have of the ſaid cuinzie, and to be payd by the wardene, twelve ſhillinges for ilk ounce; and the ſaid wardene ſhall furniſh the cuinziour of bulzicon, and the irons to be put in keiping, and to receive it that is cuinzie to the changeour thereof, and pay the merchandes for the ſaid bulzicon, and to take an aſſay of gold and ſilver that ſhall be ſo cuinzie, as is aforeſaid, to be keiped and examined zierly at the checker, and there to be maid compt of ſa mony ounces as is cuinzie in the zeir, baith of gold and ſilver; and the customers, at their compts making, to be charged with ſa mony ounces, and utheris gudes, as is abone written in the ſamin forme; and to be diſcharged of ſa farre, as they deliver to the ſaid wardene and cuinzioures; and that all merchandes that beis foundin culpable in the breaking of this ſtatute, ſhall pay to our ſoveraine Lorde the double availe of the ſaid ounces of bulzicon, according to the ſerplaith and gudes abone written; and that all uther money, gold and ſilver, ſhall have courſe to the availe, as it is now.

Cap. 14. Anent the ſailing of merchands; of bulzicon.

Anent the acte of ſailing of merchandes, quhilk hes bene maid of before, and that the ſamin act be now in time to cum obſerved and keiped be the merchandes, and in likewife anent the inbringing of bulzieson, that the acte made thereupon be given and keiped in scharpe execution ; and that the auditoures of the checker, and all uthers in time to cum, take compt of the inbringing of bulzieson sen the time of our soveraine Lorde like as at mair length is contened in uther actes maid thereupon ; and that the said compt be taken after the quantitie of the gudes that is cuming hame, and anent the failling of the said merchandes, &c.

Cap. 17. Of the money.

Item, Anent the article of the money, it is thocht expedient be the Lords of the articles, that there be ane trew substantious man master of the cuinzie, quhilk fall forge money and cuinzie to serve the Kingis lieges ; and that cuinzie fall be in this manner, that is for to fay, a groat till have course and gang for fourteene pennies, and ten of them to wey ane ounce, and to be of the famin fines as the Edwarde groate of England, and that the said cuinzieour fall give and pay for the ounce of brunt silver eleven shillinges sex pennies to be given, and for Paris silver, and the silver warke of Bruges sikklike ; and as for the silver warke of this realme quhilk is brocht to the cuinzie, that is not sa fine, the said cuinzeour fall give and delevir therefore the very availe to the awner of the said silver, and sa-meikle as it is war then Paris warke, or silver warke of Bruges, to be defaulked and rebaited of the price of the said silver ; and gif the said cuinzieour and the seller of the said warke cannot agrie of the price, that there fall be twa trew goldsmiths sworn be their great aiths to see examine the said silver warke, and the valour thereof, and to declare what it is woorth ilke ounce ; of the quhilk modification and price, baith the cuinzieour, awner, and seller of the said silver fall stand content : And to have knowledge that the said cuinzie be keiped in weicht and fines with the said Edwarde groate, this said cuinzieour fall have a signe and taiken maid in the prenting, havand difference fra the first cunzie : And gif any of the new groates be foundin war in weicht and fines nor the Edwarde groate, the cuinzieour to be punished therefore, and tine his life and gudes ; and that to be examined and seene at the next parliament, and fooner gif it pleasis the King. And because it is meaned to our soveraine Lorde, that his gold and silver cuinzed in his realme, is be ignorant perfonnes refused, quhen the said gold or silver has cracke or flaw, or be folded, it is ordained, that the said gold and silver fall be received be all his lieges ; so that it keip all the wecht, and be gude trew mettel, suppose it be with cracke or flaw, or folded, as said is, in all times to cum.

Cap. 37. Of refusing of gold that is cracked.

Item, It is statute and ordained, that because it was statute in the last parliament that all gold that held wecht and fines sulde be tane in payment; and notwithstanding the statute foresaid, they refuse to take gold that is cracked: That therefore it is statute and ordained, that all sik gold be taken without refuse, and quha sa dois in the contrair fall tme the availe of the penny be him refused in this wise, that quhair the said gold beis given for debtes, the refuser fall tme the penny be him refused, and that fall be ane sufficient acquittance to the profferer of the said debt; and gif it be given for gudes to be bocht, the refuser fall tme the avail of the penney that he refused for the said gudes.

Cap. 19. Falso cuinzie suld be clypped.

Parl. 1. at
Edinburgh,
Dec. 15.
1567.

Item, For-sa-meikle for the abolishing of great quantitie of false cunzie, quhairwith the common weill of this realme is greatly troubled, to the heavie damage and skaith of the hail lieges thereof; therefore it is devised, statute, and ordained be our soveraine Lorde, with advise of his Regent, and the three estaites of this present parliament, that certaine men of judgement, having understanding of cuinzie, be chosen and elected within everie burgh of this realme, quha being sworne thereto all summes of money fall be delivered in their presence, and quhair ever they apprehend, or finde any false money to clip the famin; and the deliverer to tyne the said false money, and the clipper to have ane penny of ilk pound for his labouris of the receiver of the money quhilk fall bee received. And to that effect, ordaines the provest and baillies, and all uthers officiares of burrowes, to make sufficient clipping-houses in sik places of their burgh as fall be sufficient for the premisses; and the personis quhom to they commit the charge, that they be abill to answer for their office in that behalfe.

Cap. 17.

Cap. 17. Quhat money suld be cunzied; layed-money suld not be cunziet without consent of the estaites; money suld not be melted.

Item, For-sa-meikle as the ordouring of the cunzie-hous, and forging of money within the realme, is ane mater of great importance to the haill lieges thereof, as may apper bee divers actis maide in our soveraine Lordis predeceffouris parliaments of befoir, and seeing the greate necessity now required for having gude and sufficient cunzie within the realme, seeing the gude silver, as Testones, and uther auld silver, is utterlie melted and destroyed, swa that the unce of silver is at double price that it wount to be at within thir late dayis, quhair-throw the realme is utterlie impoverished be evil cuinzie; therefore it is declared in this present parliament, that our soveraine Lorde, with advise of his Regent, may cause prent and cuinzie golde and silver of sik fynesse as uthers countreis does, to passe within this realme to the lieges of the famin; and that na prent nor cunzie of onie layed money be maid or cunziet in ony time cumming, but advise of the three estaites of parliament. And sik-like, our soveraine Lord, with advise of his Regent, and the three estaites foresaidis, ordainis, that na manner of gold nor silver, alreadie cunziet within this realme, bee melted, nor broken downe in the cunzie-houfe, or otherwise in anie time hereafter, under the paine of confiscation of the halfe of the gudes of the awner and melter, for the first fault; and gif the melter be not responfal, to punish his person at the discretion of the justice; and the second fault, confiscation of their haill gudis.

Cap. 106. (107.) Anent the cuinzie.

The Kingis Majestic, and his three estaites, considering how hurtfull and prejudicial the lait silver cuinzie (having course upon sa heich prices) is, and hes bene to the common weill of this realme, the same being occasion of great dearth, and of many uther inconveniencies; and now willing to have the same reduced to ane lower price, without losse of his Hieneis subjefts, or zit to the parteneris and takkes-men underwritten, quhilk they find cannot be done, gif the contract maid anent the same cuinzie be suffered to have further effect and execution; therefore his Majestic, with advise of the saidis estaites, and of the saidis takkes-men and parteners, they are to say, Alexander Clerk of Balbirny, Provost of Edinburgh, William Naper of Wrichtes-boufes, Nichol Udwart, Henrie Nisbet, Richard Abircrummy, and Thomas Acheson, upon consideration had be the order following, that they fall be na loiffers, decernis and declaris be act of this present parliament, the said contract to be null and of nane availl, force, nor effect in all time cumming; and ordainis the saidis takkes-men, parteneris, cuinzeours, and uthers officers, to desist from all striking and cuinzeing of ony further of the said cuinzie in ony

ony time hereafter. And declaris be the said act, that the saidis takkes-men and parteneris, and all uthers at their command, hes done nothing in the said mater of the lait cuinzie preceding the dait hereof, bot according to the will and minde of his Majestie and his saidis estaites, quhilk they ratifie and appreive, in sa farre as they have done, conforme to the said contract ay standand in effect quhill now, exonerand them theirow for now and ever; they being alwaiies comptable and answerable for ony thing done be them in the said cuinzie, contrarious to the effect and meaning of the same contract, conforme to the tenour theirow. Attoure his Majestie be the same act, with the advise of the saidis estaites, revokis, cassis, and annullis for ever all assignations for payment of summes of money maid be his Hienes, upon the said takkes-men and parteneris, to any person or persones; and dischargis the Lordes of the secrete councell and session, to direct ony letters, or charges upon or against them, or ony ane of them, and gif they do, declare the same be thir presents to be of nane avail, force, nor effect, notwithstanding ony decreetes given, or to be given, quhilk his Majestie with, advise of the saidis estaites, discharges simpliciter; ordaining them to have na further force, effect, nor execution in time cumming. And further, his Majesty, with advise of the saidis estaites, and consent alsua of the saidis takkes-men and parteneris, statutes and ordainis, that the said lait cuinzie, extending to twa hundreth eleven stane and ten pund weight of silver, fall be reduced and brocht in againe be them, to be cuinzie of new be his Hienes maister cuinzieour, betwixt and the ellevinth day of March next to cum, in ten shilling peeces of elleven pennie fine, containand foure in the ounce in this forme, that is to say, havand on the ane side the portrature of his Majestie's bodie, armed with ane crowne upon his head, and ane sword in his hand, with this circumscription, JACOBUS VI. DEI GRATIA, REX SCOTORUM; and on the other side, his Hienes armes in ane scheid, with ane crowne abone the same scheid, with the dait of the zier upon ane of the sides, with this circumscription, HONOR REGIS JUDICIUM DILIGIT. For in-bringing and reduction of quhilk money, the saidis takkes-men and parteners hes presentlie nominated and appointed William Naper and Thomas Acheson quhilkis fall remaine at Edinburgh to receive all the said cuinzie be the number and quantitie foresaid, fra his Heines subjects, and deliver them uther money therefoir, upon the same prices that they were given out for, betwixt and the said elleveinth day of March, unto the quhilk day they fall have coursé allanerlie; and being reserved, fall bring and deliver them to his Hienes maister cuinzeour, quha fall cuinzie them of new, in forme and maner abone mentioned, and thereafter deliver baith stocke and profite againe, in full recompense of their expences, charges, and travelles els sustained be the said cuinzie to sik as fall be appoynted in their names to receive the same. And the maister cuinzeour present and to cum, fall find the saidis takkes-men and parteneris sufficient caution and sovertie, acted in the buikes of councell, for rendering unto them the stocke and profite of sik summes and weicht, as they fall deliver unto him to the the effect foresaid ; unto the quhilk time the saidis takkes-men and parteneris fall not be astricted to deliver ony silver to the saide maister cuinzeour, deduceand always the fees and deuties of the wark-men and utheris ordinar officiaris of the cunzie-hous used and wount for their paines and laboures. And becaufe the said reduction cannot weil take effect, without sum stock to mak the exchange, the saidis takkes-men and parteneris theirfoir fall have libertie, lyke as his Majestie with advise of the saidis estaites, be thir presentes, grantis them licence and libertie to strike and caufe to be stricken and cuinzeit twentie stane wecht of silver, mair nor is els cuinzeit, in the money new devised, quhilk fall bee delivered to them again, after the same be past the irones, in maner foresaid, without deduction of onie profites, or uther deutie therefore, except the fees and deuties of the saidis wark-men and officiares used and wount. Attour, our soveraine Lord, with advise of his saidis three estaites, gives and grantis full freedome, licence, and libertie to his Hienes maister cuinzeour, to break down the present current money within this realme, of ellevin pennie fine, specially the thirtie, twentie, and ten schilling pieces and Testoones, and to cuinzie the same in the said new money devised at forty schillinges the unce, of ellevin pennie fyne, making his Hienes dew compt and reckoning of the profite thereof as apperteinis : For the quhilk the said maister cuinzeour, nor utheris the officiares of his Hienes cuinzie-hous, fall incurre na skaith nor danger in their perfonas, lands or guddes, notwithstanding onie actes, lawes, or constitutions maid in the contrair, anent the quhilk his Hienes, with advise of his saidis estaites, dispensis.

(After Cap. 202. follows) Ratification of the act anent the bullion.

Our soveraine Lord, with advise of his estaites in this present parliament, ratifies and appreivis the actes maid alsweil be his Majestie's mast noble progenitoures, as alswa in his awin time, anent the hame-bringing of bullion : And to the effect that the mair diligence may be done for in-gaddering thereof, alsweil for byganis as in time cumming, the treasurer, his deputes, and uthers admitted to the cure thereof, to make compt and reckoning to the auditoures of the next checker, and fiklike in time cumming.

quhair-

quhairunto all sorts of golde and silver, alsweill foreine as of his Hieneffe awin cuinzie, as presentlie redacted, be the libertie quhilk all sortes and degrees of persones takis at their awin handes, in raising of the prices of all golde and silver at their pleafure, farre above the just availle, prescribed in his Hieneffe laws, actes, and proclamations maid thereanent; be the quhilk forme of doing, and bee the unlauchfull transporting of the cuinzie at all times fourth of this realme, great difordoure and confusion hes bene interteined as is lykelielie to increase, to the hurte of the common weill, and great contempt of his Hieneffe, and his authoritie, gif the lawes already maid hereanent fall not bee put to deu execution in all poyntes, according to the tenour thereof, with all convenient expedition. And therefore his Majestie, with advise of his saidis nobilitie, counsell, and estates foresaidis, has concluded and ordained, and bee their presentes ratifies and apprievis the lawes already maid, anent the discharginge of the daylie raising of the prices of gold and silver. And ordainis, that all and sundrie persones, transgressours of the saidis lawes in raising of the saidis prices, fall be called, tryed, and punished therefore, with all extremite. And forder, that his Hieneffe, with advise of his saidis nobilitie, counsell, and estates foresaidis, hes thocht meete to declare and make it manifest, that fra the 17th daye of May instant, the ounce of silver cuinzie in ten shilling peeces, and the uther smaller peeces of ellevin pennie fine, cuinzie according to the laste acte of parliament, fall stande at fiftie shillings, and the auld threttie shilling peeces, being of the like weicht and finesse, at the same price, and the new threttie shilling peeces, being three quarters of ane ounce, at threttie-seven shillings sex pennies, and the aulde and new twentie and ten shilling peeces according thereto pro rata, and the ounce of golde, of twentie-twa carrets fine, being his Hieneffe awin cuinzie, of five pounce and fiftie shilling peeces, sell alwa stande at threttie pounce the ounce. And forder, that the speses of money, and finesse thereof, to witt, of ellevin pennie fine in silver, and twentie-twa carrette fine in gold fall be cuinzie, and have course hereafter, conforme to the actes of parliamente maid thereanent; and that all merchandes, or utheris persones, transporters of the same fourth of this realme, be tryed and punished according to the saidis lawes and actes foresaidis; and sik-like, that na foreine cuinzie of gold or silver fall have course amangst his Hieneffe lieges hereafter, bot be haltlie inbrocht to serve as bulzicon to his Majesties cuinzie-house; and all gold, silver, or uther cuinzie, quhilk fall be brocht within this realme hereafter, quhair-unto his Hieneffe subjects ar astricted to bring in bee his Majesties laws as bulzicon, the ounce thereof being of twelve denieres, or being basser, and supplied bee compt and quantitie to be worth twelve denieres; the merchandes in-bringers thereof fall have ane ounce of his Hieneffe awin cuinzie of ellevin denieres for evrie ounce of bulzicon brocht in maner foresaide, and of all foreine cuinzie that they fall voluntarlie bring in to the cuinzie-house of the saide ordinar bulzicon, that there be onlie the threttie pennie thereof reteined to his Majesties profite. And alwa ordainis, that all the saide lieges conform themselves in this mater of cuinzie, to the will, declaration, and determination of his Majestie, his nobilitie, counsell, and estaites foresaid; and on na-ways take upon hande to breake, or contraveene the famin in ony part, as they will answere to his Hieneffe, upon their obedience, at their uttermaist charge and perrell, and under the paines prescribed in his Hieneffe lawes to be executé upon them without favour. And to this effect, that the Thesaurar and his deputes, insist and seeke the execution of the paines and punishments prescribed in the saidis lawes against the contraveeners thereof, with all rigour and extremitie, as they will answere to his Hieneffe, upon their office and obedience; and that the general maister cuinzieour, warder, counter warder, maister cuinzieour, assayer, sinker, meltare, forger, and all uther officiares of his Hienes cuinzie-houise, proceede to the cuinzieing, stricking, and forging of new cuinzie, according to the lawes alreadie maid, and this present acte and ordinance, as they will answere to his Hieneffe upon their offices: And to the effect his Majesties subjects may be resolved of the prices of all golde and silver to be brocht be them within this realme, and quhilk the maister cuinzieour fall be astricted to paye to them, conforme to the tenour of thir presents, he fall be astricted to have openlie affixed in his house of exchange ane authentick table, to be maid be his Hieneffe commissiouners, appoynted to that effect, containand the particular price of all spesces of foreine gold and silver, usuallie in-brocht within this cuntrie, according to the availe, weicht and fines thereof; and the clerk of his Hieneffe register cause imprint thir presents, and oll uther acts maid concerning the cuinzie, customes, and bulzeion, quhair throw his Hieneffe subjectes pretend na ignorance thereof; quhilk acte abone written our said soveraine Lord, with advise of the saidis estaites in parliament, ratifies, apprievis, and confirmis in all poyntes, after the tenour thereof; and decernis and declaris the famin to have strength, force, and effect of an law and acte of parliament in all time coming.

in

Cap. 9. Act anent cunye and bullion.

Our soveraigne Lord and estaites of parliament, having at length reasoned anent the state of the cunye, as the same is presently current within this realme, declares that in this present parliament they will on no wyse alter the fynnes nor prices of the cunye, either of gould or silver, but that the same have free passage and course hereafter as it presently gives. And because his Majesties estaites understands that there is great scairfitie of cunye for the tyme within this realme, therefore hes given power and commission to the Lords of his Highnes secret counsal, for ordour taking anent the hame-bringing of bulyeon for furnishing of the cunye-houise, and discharging the transporting and away taking of gould, silver, and uther forbidden geare, under the paine of punishing of their bodies and goods, according to the discretion of the saidis commissiouners, whereby the countrie may be furnished with abundance of cunye of sik fynnes and pryces as the same presentlie gives, and hes passage within this realme: And these presents to be published to all our soveraigne Lords lieges.
