INTRODUCTION

THE present volume is the third and last of those which deal with the fortunes of the Scots Brigade in Holland. In the first two were printed the papers preserved in the Government archives of the Netherlands, and there was prefixed to each period or section into which the long history of two hundred years naturally divided itself a narrative of the fighting career with which the papers were connected.

The present volume is of a supplementary character, for the history was already complete in the two previous volumes. It was originally intended to consist of the Rotterdam Papers, which were books kept in each regiment by the chaplain, in which births and marriages were recorded, a careful account kept of the money collected and expended on charitable or similar objects, and containing in one case a very complete list of attendances at Communion services, and in another a short but interesting series of minutes of a kirk-session constituted in one of the regiments, which seems to have come to an untimely end in an unequal conflict of a characteristically Scottish type between the ecclesiastical and the civil—or rather the military—power.

Owing to the courtesy of Mr. John Scott, C.B., of Halkhill, who has kindly permitted the Scottish History Society to print an interesting manuscript in his possession, it has been possible to accompany the dry details of the Rotterdam Papers with a curious, quaint, and graphic narrative of the whole period of the campaigns of Marlborough, written apparently more or less as a journal from time to time though in a metrical form, by a private soldier in one of the additional regiments which were added to the Brigade during the War of the Spanish Succession.

Owing also to the good offices of Lord Reay and M. Hoyneck van Papendrecht of Arnhem, it has been possible to supply coloured illustrations showing the uniform of each of the regiments¹ between the years 1775 and 1780.

THE ROTTERDAM PAPERS

The following account of these papers is given in a note in Steven's History of the Scots Church at Rotterdam :—

‘ In 1784, a short time after this fine body of men [the Brigade] was disbanded, Count Bentinck caused the baptismal and marriage registers to be entrusted to the care of the Kirk-Session of the National Scottish Church in Rotterdam. Having agreed to take charge of these documents so interesting to Scotemen, the Session caused public intimation to be made in the principal Dutch newspapers as to the place of their deposit. In December 1811, however, when all consistories in Holland were obliged to surrender to the respective municipalities every such record in their custody, those belonging to the Scottish Brigade were also given up upon a receipt from the Lord Mayor. The earliest of these registers is dated in 1708. Before, and even long after that period, it was no unusual thing for the members of the regiment to employ the native clergy at their various stations to celebrate marriage and administer baptism. Whether the chaplains of the Brigade kept regular public registers of christenings, etc., prior to the beginning of last century I have not been able to ascertain. It seems probable that they did not.

‘ 1. “ A general register of children’s names baptized by Rev. Mr. Donald Bayne, Mr. Robert Douglas, and Mr. Alexr. Macaulay, formerly kept in separate bookes: by order of Major-General Mac-kay, transcribed [at Breda, April 1769] into one which may serve as an authentic register for the future, with papers relative to the same." This volume commences Dec. 17th, 1708, and ends Augt. 18th, 1782.

'2. "Register of Marriages done by Mr. Charles Campbell, minister in Genl. Colyear's regt.," afterwards commanded by Genl. Dundas. This marriage record begins August 1718, and terminates March 18th, 1783. The same volume includes the births and baptisms from Dec. 30th, 1711, to Feb. 5th, 1783.

'3. "Reg. of marriages in Genl. Stuart's regt., commencing June 16th, 1767, and ending January 30th, 1780." This volume likewise contains the baptisms from Jan. 21st, 1771, to May 31st, 1781.

'4. "Register of marriages performed by the Rev. Mr. Donald Bayne, chaplain to the right hon. Major-Gen. Murray's regt." It commences 6th March 1709, and ends 8th August 1778. This volume contains an exact list of the communicants belonging to the regiment who partook of the Lord's Supper from 1714 to 1779.'

There is little to be said in the way of introduction to these papers. They speak for themselves, and contain illustrations from the inside of some features in the life of the regiments whose services have been presented in the preceding volumes. The marriage registers indicate how friendly were the relations between the Scottish soldiers and the native population, especially in the barrier towns, where they were so largely quartered during the period covered, and all the registers illustrate how in the later years the rank and file ceased to be Scottish and became to a great extent foreign. But it is interesting to note that the oldest regiment of all, the Mackay regiment, seems to have preserved its Scottish character most successfully to the end; while, throughout, the one in which the largest proportion of foreign names is found was the second, as to which, when it was commanded by Lauder, the Duke of Marlborough had protested against the giving of commissions to foreigners, and declared the desire of the Queen 'to preserve the regiments entire in the Scottish nation.' The bandsmen seem not infrequently to have been foreigners. Another interesting fact is the extent to which the characteristic names of the Northern Highlands occur throughout the century, indicating how strong was the impress left by General Mackay on his own regiment, and how though his near kinsmen had settled in Holland, the connection must have been kept up with Ross and Sutherland. The names of Mackay, Mackenzie, MacLeod, Sutherland, Gun, Ross, Munro, Urquhart, Fraser, Polson, Mathieson are all found, some of them with great frequency; and they are accompanied by many other distinctive, though not so hyper-borean, clan and north-country names, such as Macdonald, MacLean, Cameron, Macrae, Grant, Gordon, Forbes, Cumming, and Stewart. But Highlanders and Mackays were not confined to one regiment, and in all, throughout the eighteenth century, a large proportion of recruits must have been drawn from beyond the Highland line.

The officers whose names are found in the registers seem to have been drawn pretty much alike from the Highlands and the Lowlands. Entries occur relating to the following families :

Aberson.	Erskine.	Mackenzie.
Adair.	Ferrier.	MacLean.
Alexander.	Forbes.	MacLeod.
Baird (of Saughton-hall).	Gordon.	Miln.
	Grahame.	Murray.
Balneaves (possibly of Edadour in Atholl).	Greenhill.	Nicolson.
	Gun.	Pitcairn.
Blane.	Hay.	Pringle.
Brown.	Halkett.	Ross.
Bruce.	Hume.	Scott.
Cameron (of Lochiel).	Irons.	Sinclair.
Campbell.	Jackson.	Stedman.
Chambers.	Jones.	Stuart or Stewart.
Clark.	Lamy (of Dunkenny).	Thomson.
Colquhoun.	Lindsay.	Turnbull.
Cuninghame.	Macalister.	Watson.
Douglas.	Mackay.	Young.

The Registers of course do not include all the names of families furnishing officers to the Brigade.

Register of Stuart's Regiment shows, in characteristically Dutch phrases, the views of the Government upon the subject of mixed marriages, and 'the mother being sponsor to train up the child in the Protestant religion'¹ indicates that recruits were obtained from among other than Protestant foreigners. Generally the witnesses to baptisms were non-commissioned officers or comrades in the ranks, but the officers of the company probably frequently acted as such, and in one or two cases non-commissioned officers are found witnessing the baptism of an officer's child, while in the case of the child of Sergeant Archibald Lauder in 1776, the entry is 'Testes the congregation of the Regimental Church.' The entries of attendances at the Communion, although very carefully made, do not quite bear out the classification of 'the colonel's lady, the captain's wife, and the subaltern's poor thing,' but the description of brides as 'a w. gentlewoman,' 'a w. woman,' indicate that in Holland, as elsewhere, there was present the peril of the fascinating relict. The communion-rolls now and then show the presence of a casual visitor, such as 'Henry Auld, a Scotsman of Col. Volkerhoven's regiment,' 'Mr. Angus Beaton, preacher of the gospel,' and pensioners resident in the place. So occasionally ordinances were dispensed, probably when a company was on detachment, by 'the French minister' (possibly of the Walloon or Gallo-Belgian church), or 'the Hollands minister' of the town, and in one or two instances in camp, 'by the Hollans minister in Oranie-Nassau first batallion.'

The ministers of the three regiments successively were,

It will be noted that some of these reverend gentlemen kept their registers more carefully and chronologically than others, and that there are several cases of marriages or births in one regiment being entered in the register of another. How far this may be due to contemporary circumstances, or to confusion after the papers passed out of the original hands, it is impossible to conjecture.

The most characteristic episode of all is the short but troubled story of the session in Colonel Gordon's regiment (formerly Colyear's), which gives in brief the typical Scottish conflict between ecclesiasticism and secular authority. It reads like a premonitory dream of later Scottish history, with the parts reversed to some extent, for the reformer of psalmody was the stickler for the ecclesiastical claim, and it was the military powers which stood out, not for human hymns, but for the retention of the reading of the line, and the traditions of the regimental precentor. The minutes¹ tell us how Captain Cuninghame, coming recently from Scotland, tried to reform the singing, how the colonel objected, how the session tried to resist, on the highest grounds of ecclesiastical principle, and received a significant threat, how maintaining their claim they gave in as to the psalmody, how one member after another judiciously resigned, and the colonel sent the adjutant to say he had stopped the minister's pay, how the matter was referred to the Duke of

Brunswick, and the obnoxious minute admitting the troublesome captain was scratched out by order of the highest military authority, and there were no more minutes, if, indeed, any session at all.

The Account Books contain a few items of picturesque interest, and are interesting as a whole as indicating the life and liberality of the Scottish regiments. While the other papers have been printed in full, it has been thought better only to give selections from the accounts, which consist of much the same entries year after year, but it has been thought right to give a fair sample of the ordinary material, and to include in it any unusual entries. The extracts printed represent about one-third of the whole.

The money administered was generally collected 'at the church,' or 'at the parade.' But there were also collections 'during the Sacrament,' 'at a sermon before the holy Sacrament,' and 'at the annual biddagt' or Dutch fast day.¹ There were also sums secured on festive occasions, 'as by Corporal Thomas Cock at his marriage,' 'at David Henderson's marriage,' 'at a soldier's marriage,' and 'at Lieut. Greenhill's marriage.' But there were other sources recorded, as, 'given for the poor by Lieut. Greenhill,' and 'by my servant at her death left to the poor,' 'money given by the Archduke put into the poor's fund of this battalion.' This last probably indicates a visit of a member of the Imperial House to one of the barrier towns in the Austrian Netherlands, and 'the Surinam money' records payments in respect of the men who had volunteered for the expedition to Surinam, of which Stedman, a Scots Brigade officer, wrote the history.

The items of expenditure consist mainly of grants to pensioners' widows, and on behalf of the children, and confirm the statement made in a Government minute² 'that

² See vol. ii. p. 488.

Scottish regiments having their own almoner they ought to take care of their own poor.' That they did so to a great extent at least is proved by such entries as 'to an officer's widow by orders,' 'maintenance of a child of the 1st battalion,' 'interring of Geldwie's wife,' and 'turf bought by Dr. Anderson for the use of the poor.' That the education of the children was cared for in the regiments is evidenced by such entries as 'coals for the school,' 'a stove for the school,' 'a kagel (i.e. stove) in the school,' 'one dozen of catechisms for the use of the school,' and 'for paper, pens, and ink for three children in Col. Buchanan's company.' Entries also occur 'for precenting,' 'for communion elements,' 'for a bason.' But that the goodwill of the Scots was not limited to their own countrymen, or the requirements of their own simple church service, is shown by grants entered in such terms as 'to Froliger the prussian,' 'to a gentlewoman whose tongue was cut out by ye Turks,' 'an Englishwoman pillg'd by the French,' 'a Protestant minister,' 'a person in distress, at C. Robertson's desire,' 'a Hessian ruined by the French,' and 'a persecuted Protestant minister.'

These papers throw an interesting light on the interior economy of the Brigade, and fill in side-lights upon the aspects of it which have been discovered from the National Archives. They show that for generations many a well-doing Scotsman—as well, probably, as not a few handed over at the bar of the Justiciary Court for whom foreign service offered another chance and the opportunity of beginning a better life—found a home and a career under the colours of the Old Brigade. Its services have already been recorded from the time when it manned the ramparts of Haarlem down to the hour when, by a strange freak of fate, the last stricken field of the 94th Regiment, its heir and successor in the British army, was found in the treacherous massacre of Bronker's Spruit, where South African Dutchmen cruelly and dishonourably shot down the representatives of 'the Bulwark of the Republic.' The proud description of its senior regiment by the colonel as far back as 1618 as 'the first and oldest regiment of foreign nationality in these Netherlands,'¹ has been emphasised before, but it still remains to quote the most striking testimony to the valour of the Scots and the value of their services to the cause of Batavian independence from the mouth of a great enemy, from whom such recognition was no mean praise. Mendoza, the distinguished cavalry leader, diplomatist, and historian, writing from Paris on 15th October 1586 to the Prince of Parma, observed: 'Your Excellency is aware that in a thousand instances the Scots in the service of the rebels have given you more trouble than any other foreign troops.'

THE REMEMBRANCE:

OR THE PROGRESS OF LORD PORTMORE'S REGIMENT

OWING, as has been said, to the kindness of Mr. John Scott, C.B., of Halkshill, to whom the original manuscript belongs, the Society has been enabled to add to the extracts from the Dutch Archives and the Rotterdam Papers this most interesting narrative, embracing practically the whole period of the campaigns of Marlborough, written at the time by a private soldier of the Scots Brigade, serving in one of the three additional regiments then employed by the States-General.

The manuscript was probably originally in the possession of the Loudon family, but was afterwards in the Auchinleck Library, and it bears on the fly-leaf the following note, in the autograph of Lord Auchinleck (James Boswell):

'An account of the war in Flanders from 1701 to 1709 inclusive, and more particularly of the Regiment which was Lord Portmore's in 1701, and came thereafter to be the

Lo. Dalrymples (who was afterwards John, E. of Stair) then Collonel Borthwick's, and then Coll. Hepburns.'

'All wrote by John Scot, a common soldiour in said Regiment all these years. It appears from his dedication to Major John Campbell that he was enlisted at New Milns in Airshire.

'The book is wrote in homely Rhyme, But shows the poor soldiour has had attention and genius too.'

Lord Auchinleck's note does not fully describe the contents of the manuscript. The date (May 1709) of the dedication to Major Campbell, who died of the effect of wounds received at Malplaquet, after promotion to the command of Lord Tullibardine's regiment, indicates clearly that the latter part was written subsequently. One addition deals with the campaign of 1709 and the bloody battle of Malplaquet (or Longueville), and is followed by 'the continuation of the progress of the war in the year 1710,' including the sieges of Douay, Béthune, St. Venant, and Aire, and 'the progress of Brigadier Douglass' regiment, with a short relation of the actions of the armies of the Allies in Flanders in the year 1711.' It breaks off somewhat suddenly when the regiment was in garrison at Damme, but the siege of Bouchain was over, and all the real fighting of the long war was done. The manuscript ends at the bottom of a page, and it would rather seem as if the concluding pages had been torn out and lost.

From his dedication it appears that the writer was a tenant on the Loudon estates in Ayrshire, and was enlisted by Captain John Campbell, a brother of the Earl of Loudon, when forming a new company added to the establishment when the regiment (that originally raised for King James at Musselburgh by Wauchope) was taken into the service of the States-General. The contents of the narrative justify Lord Auchinleck's observation that 'the poor soldier had attention and genius too,' for they show an intelligent knowledge of the war, and a considerable faculty of observation. His description of Bois-le-Duc, for example, is clear and interesting; and his observations on the religion and manners of the people in the Low Countries are such as in that age were not likely to be made by any private soldier other than a Scot fairly well educated and brought up on thoroughly Protestant principles. The narrative itself must be referred to for many episodes of interest, and for its full illustration of war as seen from the ranks by a brave but plain man, ready to do his duty, but never losing sight of a return to 'his father's bit of heritage.' He is not ashamed to say that 'our regiment was beat and soundly defeat,' but it seems to have been always ready to come on again, and to have faced without flinching losses which would send the military critics of the modern press into hysterics. Unfortunately, the regiment being in the Dutch service, and guarding the frontiers of the Low Countries during the momentous campaign of 1704, we have no account from him of the great march up the Rhine, of the storm of Schellenberg, and of the battle of giants at Blenheim; but he saw Ramillies, Oudenarde, and Malplaquet, and his simple tale brings vividly home the slaughter of that last stricken field. It enables us to realise more vividly the expenditure of life and labour, and the exhibition of courage and endurance of privation involved in the sieges of Keyerswaert, Tournay, Lille, and many other towns defended with gallantry, and obstinacy and all the resources of the engineering science of the age. It is impossible, without unduly expanding the limits of this volume, to summarise or direct attention to all that is of interest in the 'Remembrance,' which is added more or less as an addendum or appendix to the papers on the Scots Brigade, into the dry bones of which it breathes the life of actual combat and daily experience. But one or two points may be noted, on which it merits special attention, or affords illustration of matters referred to in previous volumes, or of Scottish traits and characteristics. Several companies of the regiment were captured at Tongres in 1703 by 'the grand army of France,' after a brave defence; and Scot records how the chivalrous Duke of Berwick obtained good treatment for the Scottish prisoners, telling them 'you are my countrymen all,' and complimenting them on having held out so long against the force brought against them. They were taken to Amiens, and as some of them had their wives and children with them, the women were able to buy comforts for the men in the town. After twenty-two weeks' captivity they were exchanged. That provision for the spiritual needs of the Scottish soldiers was not wanting nor unappreciated is shown by Scot's references to their good chaplain, Mr. Anderson, and his sermons, and his recording that after Ramillies the regiment was supplied with catechisms, sent from Rotterdam to Flanders by Colonel Borthwick's lady. Though he gives no full description of the uniform, it is possible to gather its appearance from various allusions. The regiment wore scarlet coats faced with yellow, and in the spring of 1704 they were supplied at Bois-le-Duc with 'new guns, new swords, new belts, new bags, a bayonet, patrontash and belt.' In accordance with old Scottish custom, the appointments bore witness from time to time to the family arms of the commanding officer. Thus, in 1705 they got new fusilier caps, on the front of which were the rock crest, the 'Firme' motto, and the lion supporters of the house of Stair, while the grenadiers also had a grenade and gun in red and blue. In 1709 it is recorded that Colonel Hepburn 'had got a new coat of arms, the which did make a great show.'

'And Gratus Essto it is the motto
Of these valiant Scotsmen and true.'

The grenadiers' caps then bore the knot of union, the sheaf of arms and lion of the Dutch arms,

‘A hand with a shable, a horse at the amble,’ guns, and grenades, and shables of steel, and the letters I. and H. for the colonel's name. When Brigadier Douglas succeeded to the command,

‘All his drums with his coat of arms
He caused for to make new.
And on the new drums was pictured fair
The bloody heart and the crown,
Which Douglas obtained for his coat of arms
With very great fame and renown
When Robert the Bruce in Scotland was king
And had won all Scotland free.’

The ‘poor soldiour’ diverges into a repetition of the famous story of how the good Sir James took King Robert's heart to the Holy Land and fell among the Saracens of Spain, and tells with the pride of a true Scot how

‘Still the Douglasses come of that race,
Doth carry the heart to this hour,
Now Brigadier Douglas paints on his drums
The bloody heart under the crown,
And weapons of war with the points standing out,
About a broad circle all round.’

The siege of Lille in 1708 is narrated at great length, and an instructive summary given of the losses in the sieges of 1710, while the story of strained relations between the colonel, Brigadier Douglas, and his lieutenant-colonel and major, ending in a personal encounter, in which the former was seriously wounded, probably affords the explanation of the lieutenant-colonel's retirement after the slow-moving processes of Dutch administration had time to work, and his transfer of service to the colours of the Austrian Netherlands. The narrative contains many points of interest as to the personnel and the spirit of the officers, recognising as it does now and then a liberal allowance of beer on a particular occasion by a popular officer,—as to the arrangements for the sick and wounded, and as to the general provision for the troops, and the hardships they had at times to encounter. It forms a unique picture of war seen from the ranks in the days of the Grand Alliance, and presents vividly from another point of view than the official documents the work and services of the Scots Brigade.

The thanks of the Editor are due to Mr. John Scott of Halkshill, Mr. T. G. Law, Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. B. Blaikie, and others for suggestions in reference to the marginal notes giving the equivalents of words or expressions occurring in the Remembrance; to the authorities of St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh, for permission to photograph and copy the flags of the Brigade; and specially to Lord Reay and M. Hoyneck van Papendrecht, in connection with the illustrations of uniforms. The Index has been the work of Mr. Mill, Signet Library.

[Regiments Doop Register—Mackay—der Schotsche Gomeente.]

Major-General Mackay, in consequence of a representation which has been made to him, that the Baptism Register of the Regiment has been kept in separate books by the Rev^d Mr. Donald Bayne, Mr. Robert Douglas, and Mr. Alexander Macaulay, orders it to be transcribed into one, which may serve as an authentic Register for the future; and he orders the commanding officers of the first and of the second Battalions, and the chaplain of the Regiment for the time being to examine and attest the copy.

Such as had not their children baptized by the chaplain of the Regiment are desired to procure extracts from the Baptism Registers of the churches where their children were baptized, and the Major-General orders regular references to be made to these Registers, and every page of the Regimental Register to be signed by the chaplain of the Regiment for the future. (Signed) H. MACKAY.

B. MARRIAGE REGISTER

EDICT

THE States-General of the United Netherlands : To all who shall see this or hear it read, Greeting !

Be it known : inasmuch as we, to our regret, are informed that in the district belonging to the Union it is gradually becoming more and more common for marriages to take place between persons of the Reformed and those of the Roman Catholic religion ; from which not only many quarrels and dissensions arise between such consorts, their children and households, but whereby also it comes to pass that some, if not all, of the children born of such marriages, are brought up in the Roman Catholic religion, yes, that even such Reformed consorts, by the troublesome persistence and the annoyances of their Roman Catholic husbands or wives and their party, are induced and influenced, to the scandal of the public, to leave the true Reformed religion, and betake themselves to the Romish errors :

Therefore we—desiring to prevent our good countrymen from being seduced to enter into such matrimonial alliances by their youth, inconsiderate passions, and without taking into consideration the lamentable and pernicious consequences of such alliances, and on the other hand, being desirous of giving to those who may already have an intention in that direction, or are involved in any promises or engagements of marriage of that nature, the time and opportunity to listen to good counsels and to decide not to adhere to those intentions or engagements—after obtaining the advice of the Council of State of the United Netherlands, have resolved to decree and enact, as hereby we do decree and enact :—Firstly, that to no persons of the true Reformed or Protestant religion, or who incline to it and have been educated in it, whether belonging to the military or not, of what rank soever they may be, shall any banns be granted for marriage with persons of the Roman Catholic religion, until the men have fully attained the age of twenty-five years, and the women that of twenty years; which ages shall have to be proved by presentation of extracts from the Register of Baptisms to those who must register the banns of marriage; and it shall make no difference whether the said persons have been married before or not; on penalty of the registration of such persons, if contrary to this article, and the marriages following thereon, being considered null and void; and the children, born from such marriages, illegitimate; nor can they ever be legitimatised. Secondly, that all engagements of marriage between the persons aforesaid, whatever their age may be, and whether these engagements have been, or are about to be, entered into verbally or in writing, shall be absolutely worthless and ineffectual, and that, accordingly, it shall be permitted to all the said persons, on either side, at all times, not only before registering the proclamations of marriage, but even after these proclamations have been read, to cancel and depart from the said engagements; nor shall it be permitted to any judge to administer justice to those described above, much less to constrain any one to execute such promises of marriage. Thirdly, that the proclamations of marriage of the aforesaid persons, who are more than twenty-five and twenty years old, respectively, instead of being made from week to week, according to our Marriage Law, shall be made every six weeks [lit. from six weeks to six weeks], the penalty being the same, both in respect of the aforesaid Proclamations and of a marriage taking place thereafter, as has been fixed in the foregoing first article.

And inasmuch as we have been informed that our good intention could be eluded by such Reformed or Protestants as, in order to marry Roman Catholics, might have themselves so far seduced as to go over to the Romish faith before registering the banns of marriage, in order thus not to be subject to what has been decreed above, we order and command further that to no persons, whatever be their age or rank, who have confessed the true Reformed or Protestant religion or, having been favourable to it or brought up in it, shall have left it and gone over to the Romish religion, and thereafter should desire to enter into matrimony with persons of the last-named religion, shall any banns of marriage with Roman Catholics be granted, except after the end of a year from the time they left the Reformed or Protestant religion and made confession of the Romish faith, whereof they shall have to produce proper and sufficient evidence to those by whom the banns are registered; the penalty being also the same as is mentioned in the foregoing first article; and that, furthermore, with reference to such persons all that shall be done which is decreed in the foregoing articles, as if they had not left the Reformed or Protestant religion at all.

And inasmuch as, furthermore, it might happen, to the frustration of our wholesome intentions, that even the Roman Catholics should go so far as outwardly to leave their own religion and go over to the Reformed or Protestant, in order to be able to marry a person of the latter religion, without being subject to the enactments of this Edict, but with the intention of returning to the Romish faith after the marriage has taken place; therefore it is, lastly, our will that, in order to prevent this in the case of persons who have gone over from the Roman Catholic to the Reformed or Protestant religion and desire to marry some one of the said religion (and vice versa), all that has been decreed above regarding Reformed or Protestants going over to the Romish religion, shall obtain in this case also.

And all Magistrates, Commissioners for Marriage-Affairs, Church-Sessions, and Ministers, by whom banns are registered and marriage is solemnised, are respectively commanded carefully to see to it and take measures that this our Edict be observed properly and exactly in all its parts, on penalty of forfeiting one hundred silver ducats¹ by every one of them, who, contrary to the above decrees, shall have registered the banns or solemnized the marriages. A third part [of the sum] to go to the officer who shall have made the accusation, the second third-part to the informer, and the remaining third to be devoted to the benefit of the poor of the place where the contravention shall have taken place.

And all this [shall take effect] without repeal of what is decreed in our Marriage-Law generally, in so far as it does not contradict this present Edict, and especially in the fourth article of the said Marriage Law against the betrothal, marriage and remarriage, by those belonging to the Romish clergy, as well as in our Resolutions of March 3rd, 1738, and May 11th, 1639, regarding the marrying of Reformed Military and Civil officers with Roman Catholic wives, which article we desire to continue in full force and to be fully observed.

And in order that no one may pretend to be ignorant of this, we order and command that this Edict shall be published and posted up everywhere in the District belonging to the Union, as is proper and customary, for we have found it to the advantage of the country, and in the best interests of our good countrymen, to do so.

Thus done and decreed at the Hague, under the seal of the State, the 'Paraphure' [? initials and flourish = Fr. paraphe] of the gentleman presiding, and the signature of our Secretary, on June 3rd, 1750. Initialed (d'Ablaing van Giesenbergh), subject to the ordinance of the above High Mightinesses, the States-General, Signed (H. Fagel), on the 'Spaticum' being impressed the Seal of Their High Mightinesses on a red wafer, covered with a paper square.

C. MINUTES OF SESSION AND EXTRACTS FROM ACCOUNTS.¹

Last Lord's day being the 21 July 1761.

The Minister ordained Colonel James Gordon, Major James Alexander, and Capt. Mungo Graham elders, and Lieut. George Boddon and Ensign William Martin, deacons.

Namur, July 27, 1761.

This day the session being met and constituted by prayer, the minister proposed that a treasurer should be chosen, upon which they unanimously agreed, that as the money belonging to the poor was already in his hand he should continue to disburse the same as the session shall judge proper. The whole of the money that was in the minister's custody, and what was given to him by Colonel Gordon amounts to f. 77 : 6 st., out of which 2 sh. was ordered to be given to Alex. M^cKay of Major M^cLeod's company, and 2 sh. to Daniel Ross of Capt. Anderson's company.

Then the session unanimously chuse for their Clerk George Allan, schoolmaster of the 2^d Battalion of Colonel Gordon's Regiment. The meeting ended with prayer.

Remains of the poor money in the ministers hands this 15th day of November 1764, f. 105 : 1 : 6.

The above account is revised and approved of by the session, said 15 Nov. 1764.

At Nymegen the 5th of August 1764.

This day the session met after sermon in the church. The following members, viz. the Rev^d Mr. Alex^r Pitcarne, the moderator, Captain Mongo Graham, elder, and Lieut. George Boddon, deason, being present. And after prayer, the minister represented to the session that Captain James Cuninghame was an elder of the church of Scotland, and having laid the Extract of his ordination before them, proposed that the said Captain Cuninghame should be received as member of the session, which was unanimously agreed to, and he was admitted accordingly. The [sic] likewise choose John Paul, schoolmaster of the first Battalion of Colonel Gordon's Regiment to their session clerk. The meeting closed with prayer.

ALEX^r PITCARNE, Min^r.

Nymegen, 16 November 1764.

The above scraped out by virtue of a Resolution from his Highness the Duke of Brunswyk, bearing date the 10th of November 1764.

ROB. BUCHANAN.

At Nymegen, 16 September 1764.

This day the session mets [sic], and being constitute by prayer. Sederunt: the R^d Mr. Alex^r Pitcarne, Moderator; Major

Alexander, Captain Cuningham, captain Graham, elders; Lieut. George Boddon and Lieut. William Martin, deacons. The minutes being read and signed by the moderator, Major Alexander read to the court part of a letter written by Colonel Gordon to Major Buchanan, in words to this purpose: 'As to the making supernumerary elders, and the introducing the new way of singing into our church, I desire that you will order the minister, elders, and deacons to your house, and order them in my name to undoo those things immediately.' The session having considered the affair, appointed the moderator to write a letter to Colonel Gordon; which was done accordingly, the tenour where as ¹ follows:

Sir,—That part of your letter to Major Buchanan relating to church affairs having been read in the session, it was unanimously agreed that I should write you the following answer: that they think all their proceedings in a sessional way have been regular; that Captain Cuninghame being an elder of the established church of Scotland, and desiring to be received into our session, upon producing an extract of his ordination, we could not refuse to admitt him without good and sufficient reasons for so doing; and that we cannot now deprive him of his seat in the session, unless a libel were given in against him relevant to infer deposition, and fully provin. That the new way of singing the Psalms hath been earnestly recommended these many years past by the General Assembly, and is now practised by the greatest part of the congregation in Scotland, and indeed in all Protestant churches. We did not imagine that you would have dissaproved of our proceedings, and hope that upon this representation, after seriously considering the matter, you will see no reason to doo so; and it will give us great pleasure to be informed that you are satisfied with our conduct, tho' as a session we conceived that we are only accountable to a superior Church Court.—I am, with all due respect, sir, your most obedient, most humble servant,

Nymegen, Sept^r 17th, 1764.

The session ended with prayer.

ALEX. PITCARNE, Min^r.

¹ Probably 'whereof,' although the transcriber has corrected 'of' with 'as.'

At Nymegen, the 1st day of October 1764.

This day the session met and being constituted by prayer, Sederunt: the Rv^d Mr. Alexander Pitcarne, moderator; Captain Graham and Captain Cuningham, elders; Lieut. George Boddon and Lieut. William Martin, deacons.

The minister reported to the session that he had asked from Major Buchanan a copy of that part of Colonel Gordon's letter mentioned in the minutes of the session of the 16th of September last, that it might be inserted in the colonel's own words in our minutes, and that he refused to give it.

Major Buchanan having on the 28th day of September called to his house the minister, elders, and deacons (all excepting Captain Cuningham, who has ¹ debarred ² comming), and there read to them part of another letter from Colonel Gordon, respecting his former order, with a declaration in case of disobedience 'that he knew what to doo,' and also insinuating that the minister's letter, by order of the Session, was vilipending him as colonel of the Regiment, Major Buchanan being required by the minister to give him a copy of this order to lay before the session, he also refused to give it.

The minister having asked the opinion of the members, and it having come to Captain Cuningham's turn to speak, and he gave his opinion and desired it might be inserted in the minutes, which was agreed to by the session.

Captain Cuningham's opinion was in the following words:

Moderator, the question we now debate on, and of which you ask our opinions, appears to me to be shortly this: Are you, sir, a minister of the Church of Scotland or not? Was you not ordained a minister of that church, when you came to be settled as chaplain to this Regiment, and for that very purpose? Did not you then come under the ordinary obligations, that all the ministers of that church doo, to act in your spirituall and ministerial function according to the established rules of that church? and are you not subjected by your ordination engagements to the laws and authority of that church? If so, and so I believe it is, Is not your session for me exactly according to the rules of that church? and are not all the members here present, elders and deacons, acting as such, in consequence of the ordination received from you as minister of that established church? This I suppose all here present must allow to be true. If, then, you are a minister and all here are deacons and elders by ordination in the usual forms of the church of Scotland, and by no other power, can you, sir, as minister of that church, pretend to infringe any of its prerogatives or go directly contrary to its established fundamental rules, by taking law from any civil power in religious matters? Or can we as a session be answerable to God Almighty, to our own consciences, and to the church our superior in doing so? So long as you are a minister of the church of Scotland, your session court must be according to the form of that church, and so long as you have such a session, I shall continue a member of it and no longer; but no power but the General Assembly can hinder me from being a member of any regular established cession where I happen to reside. I did not wish to be a member of your session, sir, out of wantonness or lovetv, or out of any view, but for the service of God and of religion. It is an office of too serious and weighty a nature to be jested with, however lightly some people may esteem it, and however their neglect and upon¹ contempt of religion and the service of God plainly show their contempt of every thing that is serious and sacred. Sorry I am to see the little sense of religion that there is in this Regiment, and the bad example sett by too many officers to the poor men under their command. It was with a sincere view to attempt some kind of reformation and ammendment in this particular that I wished to be of your session, whose business it is, I think, to represent in the strongest manner to every one in the Regiment, high and low, the dreadful consequences that inevitably must follow such upon neglect and contempt of religious worship; and whatever others doo, I am determind thro' God's assistance to doo every thing in my power to cultivate in the minds of all I am concerned with a serious sense of religion and of their duty to God, to their neighbour and themselves. Let the profligate, the unthinking, the giddy conceited witlings think of me as they please, I shall not regard their censures, be their stations what it will.

As to what our gentlemen in power call the new singing (altho' by the by it is very old) it is no sesional affair; you, sir, as Minister are master to doo in that as you please. The General Assembly of the church of Scotland have these nine years past recommended it in the strongest manner, as it is practised by every Protestant church in the world, and the express words are, 'that prayer to God Almighty and singing his praises are most essential parts of Divine worship, and it being found by long experiences that reading out the line by the precentor greatly spoils both the melody and sens of the Psalms and takes of the attention of the congregation to mind the precentor more than their praising God, the General Assembly doo most seriously recommend to all ministers of the church of Scotland to introduce the singing without giving out the line; and the excellent church musick published by their desire.'

This being the case, sir, I dare give it as my opinion and desire, that in place of giving it up, you should use your endeavours to promote it and bring it to perfection, and glad I am to see that essential part of worship now so decently executed in our church, which hath encouraged me to commission a good many Psalm books from Scotland, to supply our officers and souldiers with who may send to you. Lieut.¹ Colonel Gordon, sir, take any steps he pleases, we can justifie our conduct, and will be heard as well as him. And remember for your encouragement, sir, that the Prince[s] of Orange have ever been remarkable for a sincere attachement to religion and virtue, and no man in the world shows a higher regard to religion and religious worship, even² does the Duke of Brunswick, which is a distinguishing part of that great man's amiable character; and let all military men who contemn religion and religious worship, only read the history and lives of the Princes of Orange, of the great Gustavus Adolphus and of Marishal Turenne, as they must be ashamed of their conduct; if they do not trouble³ for their sin and folly before God Almighty; and the brave Gustavus Adolphus was not ashamed to say publickly, 'that a souldier ought to make war and fighting his amusement, but religion and the service of God his business'; and no souldier need be ashamed to follow that glorious pattern.

After reasoning upon the whole matter, the Session came to the following resolution, that with respect to the first part of the colonel's demand, viz., the turning Captain Cuningham out of the Session, they find it impossible for them to comply with it, he being regularly ordained in Scotland and admitted here; and as to the second, that of the new singing it never having been enacted by the Session as a standing form, but only attempted as a tryal in consequence of a repeated recommendation from the General Assembly, and the now tho' common practice in Scotland, yet they for the sake of peace agree for the time to lay it aside.

The session further agree and resolve that the minister shall acquaint Major Buchanan with this their opinion and resolution, and desire and empower the minister to give to Major Buchanan or to Colonel Gordon an extract of the minutes of this sederunt if required.

The meeting closed with prayer.

At Nymegen the 2^d of October 1764.

The session being met and constitute by prayer, Sederunt, the Rev^d Mr. Alex^r Pitcarne, moderator, Captain Graham, Captain Cuningham^e, elders; Lieut. Boddon and Lieut. Martin, deacons. The minister reported to the session, that he spoke with Major Alexander on his being absent from the meeting yesterday. The Major told him that he was not to meet any more with the cession. Being thereupon asked by the minister if he meant to demitt from being an elder, he answered yes, and that he would cause it be intimated to the cession at the meeting they were to have after noon. Accordingly a message was brought to the session, by the adjutant of the 2^d Battalion, acquainting them, that he was sent by the Major to tell them in his name that he was to attend the session no more and desired to have his demission from the office of elder. The session having considered his demand, have agreed to it.

Captain Graham having represented to the session that for many reasons he finds it inconvenient for him any longer to exercise the office of elder, and begs to be excused from it, and asks his dimission, which demand being considered by the Session the agreed to it. The meeting closed with prayer.

ALEX^s PITCARNE, Moderator.

Nymegen, the 15 November 1764. The Session being met and constituted by prayer, Sederent, the Rev^d Mr. Alex. Pitcarne, minister, Captain Cuningham, elder, Lieutenants G. Bodden and W^m Martin, deacons. The minister represented to the Session, that since their last meeting, he with the other members of the Session (Captain Cuningham excepted) were called upon by Maj^r Buchanants to his house, and he there told them that Colonel Gordon ordered them to deliver up the Session Register or Book to the Major; and also acquainted the minister that Colonel Gordon had ordered the six hundred guilders of his pay yearly to be stopt in the solicitor's hands, which f600 by the resolution and reglement of their High Mightinesses, of date the 9th July 1687, is ordered to be paid out of the retention money of each Scots Regiment to the chaplains of said Regiments. To which demand the minister made answer, 'That he was sorry it was not in his power to give up the Session Books but by an order of the Session.'

The minister further represented to the Session, that this day he is informed by a message from Major Buchanan, that he the Major has received an order from His Serene Highness the Duke of Brunswic, by which the Session are ordered to deliver up the Session Book or Register to the Major. Upon which representation the Session unanimously agree that his Serene Highness's order shall be obeyed, and hereby empower the minister to deliver the Session Book upon that order. And the Session having afterward deliberated upon their whole proceedings, they have and do hereby do [sic] unanimously agree for their own vindication to lay before His Serene Highness the Duke of Brunswic an exact narrative of the whole, and hereby empower the minister in name of the Session to make up and present said narrative to His Serene Highness, so soon as his health and convenience will permit him: and to that purpose an exact copy is taken in presence of the Session of all the minutes of said Session, since its first institution, the 27th July 1761.

The Minister thereafter laid before the Session the accmpts of the Poor's money received and debursed by him, which were examined and approved.

The Sederent closed by Prayer.

ALEX^R PITCARNE, Moderator.

Nymegen, the 16th of November. This day Captain Cuningham demitted his office of elder in this congregation, and Mr. Boddon demitted his officio of deacon, as also did Mr. Martin. This is attested by ALEX^R PITCARNE, minister.

Janu^r 14th, 1765. This day the minister at the desire of the field officers and captains delivered to Adjutant Pringle seventy gilders of the poor's money.

THE DEDICATORIE

To the Right Noble worthy and Honorable, Major JOHN CAMPBELL, Major of Cornall Heyburns Regiment lying at present in the Citydalle of Liel: May, 1709.

May it please your honor :

I have now finished the enseuing progress of war, which your honor will upon revieue find to be a true account of the present war in Braban, Lukeland and Flanders, and a brief and true account of the progress, marching, and quartering of the Regiment wherof your honor is now the Major: with a description of al the touns where we have lyen in garissoun. And that from the year 1701, beginning at the day and moneth of their coming out of Scotland, and so continuing on: to this present time. And as true account of the War, time and place. When and where it was acted, and that pairt that I have not seen with my eyes: I have taken the truest and best information I could get: which I have compiled in a dialoge of meeter: in the best form or shape, I, in my mean capasacaty, can condecende upon, which I cherfully present to your honors wieve, and to your judicious centiments I ^{view} humbly submite my self:

Among the maniffold writteings, that we have transsmited to us by our prediccissors, both of humane and divine: al themost and the best have alwayes been dedicate to some person of honor, so I, in this strange place of the world, absent from my oun native Kingdom of Scotland, most now flee under the wings of your honors most judicious inspection and tuitione, to shelter my self: when I may be atacqued, for spoileing a ryme. Considering that the line, of your most Noble predecessors, now of a long bypasst time, have been active in promotting of pietie, and al kind of learning and verteous education, I canot weel enumerat how many scholiars have been brought out in the colledge, and kept and brought up in the housse, such as cheplans, and others, who have been kept and brought out by the most noble and honorable Earle of Loudoun, your father, and for anything that I know they continue yet on any poor scoliars and others, that may be brought out under the name, if not kept and maintained under the present noble Earle of Loudoun, your brother: And seing your honor is advanced to a considerable possit in the armie, as to be Major of this regiment, and brought me and others out of our native countrey, in that and other years since, and since I am and always have been, kept in your honors oun companie, I most of necessatie comite, to your custodie and judgement, this my dialogue of war, your honors answer for the whole ryme.

This shal be your rememberancer of the actions of armies in times and places bypasst, and likewayes, what changes and alterations have been in this regiment, both of Cornalls and the inferior Officers, and likewayes, what progress our armie made in this cuntrey, and an acount of al the touns our armies have sidged, and the touns where this regiment have garissouned, so if your honor be pleased, now in the throng and croud of your affaires, to take an idle hour now and then, to divert your melancholy thoughts by reading of my harmless and insignificant ryme, I have prefixed the contents of the wholle historie, where and in what page ye can finde the acount of the battels or sidges or the memorable passages of the whole story. I hope Sir that you canot blame me for spoiling any divine thing, it is bot a progress of war, and I have compiled it in meeter to the intent it may not be altogether void of either ryme or reason; if I have given any wrong title to any general person or field Officer it is through misinformation or ignorance or elsse it is the comon report that passeth throue the armie. I have not designedly or intentionatly wronged any mans name or reputation, bot have compiled the whole historie in a true ryme.

Versses or ryme are like ladies faces good or bad, acording as they are fancied or entertained, and certainly it may weel be a shame to make bad versses, it can be no sin, naither is it a shame for me in this my first essaye, unless ye can get a sojor that have made more or better versse of one and the same subject with a sojors pay. I hope your honor knous wery weel that I have al along done my dutie in your honors oun company, and your honor never aloued me anything to buy my paper pen or inck, bot I have for my oun recreation, begun and caried on the ryme, from the time of my first coming to this regiment, to this day and time. My intention is to make men laugh and no to wex them. I pretend no to retorick or oratrie, naither have I much, and as litele I can learn as I am circumstanced in this place of the woreld. I have given al along the historie the same names both to places and things that the volgar do, and have made my ryme in a very plain dress, bot if your honor be pleased to let it be seen in some other place of the world, it will be some better. Sure in every place preachers have somthing for preaching, Lauiours have somthing for pleading, Phessicians have something for curing: It is true indeed some mens preaching, pleading and curing, deserves money a great deal better than my ryme. Bot it is as true, some of al thes deserves it a great deal worssse. If my ryme do no good, it can do no hurt, to the souls bodies or estates of [any]

I hope your honor wil nou at last be pleased to call to your rememberance, the condition ye made with me your sojor, when I first listed in your honors company, which was as I can remember about the first day of May 1701: in the duelling house of George Loudoun, Bailey in Newmiles. I was to serve in your oun company, and your honor did oblidge yourself to take me back again and to put me in a capasatie to do my oun bussines in that place, and for listing money ye promist to take me home with a suite of new cloathes on my back. And with what I had or might have for my servise in the war, I promised not to run off with the frsst mounting, and I took your word of honor for the performance, this was a legal condition before famous witnesses who yet might be called, bot for the probation I reffer myself to your honors oun book in which I was listed: and I will be bold yet to ask, whoes word of honor was it I took, was it not Captan John Campbells, whom I knew to be the second son of the diseast James Earl of Loudoun, and who was very young made the Laird of Shankston, and who had raised a company of men, and been a Captan for some years, in Cornal Douglass regiment, in Scotland, and who was then listed a Captan in this regiment, and who hes now been some years Major, whom I have now served eight years: I request you Sir, either be like yourself or nothing: either fulfil it, or steal out from the armie:

To the Noble worthy and Honorable Cornal HEPBURN.

Most Noble Cornall:

I hope your honor by reading the forgoing page, may now be aquanted with my coming to this regiment, and by reading the folowing hisstorie, I hop ye may be aquanted with my service in it. I have been a sojor, in the Majors company, now eight years compleat, and notwithstanding of the condition I made with the Major, at my entrie, I do not yet pretende to take anything from it, bot what your honor shal be pleased to aloue me. I knou your honor hath had now of a long time, the comand of the regiment. Ye have been Major Lieutenant Cornal and Cornal throu the whole historie. I am now wearing old and not very able to march and to do the deutie of a sojor, and if your honor shal be pleased to send me to Scotland, I expect ye may have a younger and abler man to be a sojor in your regiment, and serve in the Majors companie. I have nothing to take along bot this book of ryme, which I have been at some pains to make. I do not knou if it may help my bread. However, since I have made it in your regiment and under your honors most renoued conduct, so I comite it to your inspection and the managment of the whole premisses to your most judicious determination.

To the right Worthy and Honorable JAMES CAMPBELL, youngest son to the Noble Earle of Loudoun. And now Lieutenant Cornal to the regiment of Dragowns, Comanded by the Noble Earlle of Stairs.

May it please your honor :

As I canot enumerat how many degrees my predecessors have always been beloue your honors predecessors, beeter then by reckening how far I am to be reckened beloue your honor, I am yet a degree beloue the youngest Corporal in your brothers companie. However, I hop your honor will be pleased to acknowledge that I was born in that same countrey or place of the world with your honor, and that your honor was present in the time and place, when I was listed a sojor in your brothers companie, and indeed it was the best caveat and by this time hes proven the truest, that your honor told me which was this, that I would buy the new cloathes dear enough before your brother wold let me get of with them : I am continued a sojor in his company throu al this war, and have made al this ryme, which I humbly present to your honor, I hop as your honor offered to be cation for your brothers performance of his condition to me, so I request your honor nou at lenth to see to it. I hop ye have not yet forgot since your honor with your atendants came in to me when I was threshing my oun beir in my oun barn, and your honor was pleased to take my flail in your hand and in good sporte to help me. I shal not multiply arguments my fathers bit of heritage is too much to looss for any thing I have heir.

I request you Sir to be pleased to take my pen in hand and to help me. I have been makeing a progress of war in ryme, and it is so general I knou not weel to whom to dedicate it. It is the acount of the actions of our armie and the patronage of the book cannot be ascribed to any one man in the armie, bot I designe it shal be dedicate in the name of our Scottish Nobles, his highness the Duke of Argile to whom many books have been dedicate, and who is a general person in our armie might have the patronage of this history of war, or the noble Earle of Stair who took at first the place to be the Cornal of this regiment and is now by degres to places of honor and preferment still advancing, if not a general person already it might come forth in his name, or in name of the General Murray, who has been a very great man and a mickle sojor throu al my historie, bot I humbly beg and requeste most noble Lieutenant Cornal James Campbell, be pleased to subscribe this my progress of war, together with Cornal Hepburn and your brother, with whom I have made it and to whom I dedicate it, let it wear al your honors cognisance and I hope to see it put upon the file of long lassting rememberance who am al your honors, most obedient souldier: John Scot in Major John Campbells company in Cornall Hepburns regiment.

THE REMEMBRANCE

CHAP. I

The progress of the Regiment called Portmores in the year of God 1701, with a short description of a city caled the Buss.

Our Scottish nobels did ordaine
By votte of parlament
They pleased to make it and enact it
That we Portmores regiment
With severals moe along to go more
And serve the Stats of Holland
The spase of five year in case of War
Then they might cal us home
Tuelve companies in our regiment
Was ordained to be than
And every company to be
Five and fiftie men strang
Al Hollands dewes they did alowe us dues
So made a conjunct band
Al was acorded by our Lords
And sealed with ther hand.
So into the year of our Lord
One thousand seven hundered and ane
Upon the twentie aught day of March twenty-cighth
Our regiment from Musselbrouge came
And into Leith they came that night
And ther they did embarque
And on Leith rade that night abade Leith Roads
And fareweel of Scotland did take
Two new companies was ordained now
To be into that regiment
And two new Captans and some subletenants
In haste a recruiting were sent
Captain Ogilvie¹ got one company
And Captan John Campbel² another

² See vol. ii. p. 28. Colonel of Tullibardine's regiment after Malplaquet, but dead by March 23th, 1710. John Campbell of Shankston, second son of James, second Earl of Loudoun. His younger brother, Sir James Campbell of Lawers, K.B., also served in the regiment, became lieut.-colonel of the Scots Greys,

Each man for himself to make up the pelf
 They got ther comisions togither
 Captan Ogilvie with his wife lived now into Fife
 And he leaved al his men there
 And our Captan John he came posting home
 Into the shire of Aire
 At Newmilles and Machline he did begine
 His purpose al to fulfill
 And with very good wil he perofert the lads
 A pint of Scots alle and a gille
 And some bits of silver he slipet in to them
 And then dreu them in with his pauss
 Some for need toke on for to get bread
 And some came for the good cause
 Til in short time he had listed then
 The number of twentie and two
 Who willingly toke on al sojours of fortune
 And so made al ready to go :
 On the tenth day of May we took jurney
 And came straught to Edinburgh toun
 Two gallons of alle ther his honor gart fill
 His good health we drank it al round.
 Then to Leith Tollboth they took us forsothe
 And kepted us ther dayes four
 Til they had made ready and brought to shoar
 That old coal shipe brought us ouer
 With hearts right good we came ashipboard
 And rowed on a lig of that watter
 The John of Borostouness our ship was called I guess
 And ther she lay at an anchor
 Upon this rade ten dayes we bade
 I wot we thought them right long
 Then we bouned to saill God send us a gail
 Aduie Scotland was our song.
 Streight by the Bass they stired the course
 And compased al Northumber land
 There the wind grew loud and the sea very proud
 To learn to pray we began
 Through Doger Banks and Earmoth Roads
 We passed al throu warilie
 Yet several dayes we were tosed in thes waves
 Ore that we our pillet did se
 It was the fourteenth of Aprile in the Holland stile
 The regiment arived at Rotterdam
 And it was the tuelfth of June at four afternoon
 When we arived at the same distinguishing himself as such at Malplaquet, and colonel, 1717. Received the Order of the Bath for services at Dettingen, and was mortally wounded at Fontenoy in 1745. Sir James's son succeeded as fifth Earl of Loudon.

Then from our old ship we behoved to flite
 And aboarde in a balender we came
 And up the river Maze they cunningly drau us
 And we came to the Buss of Brabant
 Ther free of al harms we got Holand arms
 Our cloaths we now made al clean
 And whenever they please they do us exercise
 Right frequently on the Briel green
 Our measures they took and then made our coats
 And our linens they likeways aloue us
 A shoulder knot on our shoulder they put
 And al our mounting it new was
 And as we walk round we spy al the toun
 Which lieth both pleasant and fair
 And four several streets at the cross do al meet
 To Glassgow we shal it compare
 This toun is right strong and cannot be won
 The water sorounds it about
 The fousseie is deep which may it weel keep
 The wall is strong and stout
 And at the west end the same to defend
 Two forts are made comely to see
 The one is caled the fort Isabell
 And the other Sanct Anthonie
 Of the fort Isabel I shall you tell
 Its largest and biggest in forme :
 And the Sant Anthonie is as strong as can be
 And lieth betwixt that and the toun
 And at the east end is a citydale framed
 As strong as any can be
 The toun it can comand if they should gainstand
 Or make any muttinie
 If the Popish creu should sedition reneue
 The Briel wil comand them to peace
 The judges I trow be al Protestant now
 And Popish herasie it most cease
 Besides al thes forts this toun hath four ports
 With drau bridges over each ane
 Without the Flighter port ther stands the tuo forts
 No enomie ther dare come in
 To the Intimare port as ye do resorte
 A batterie stands at each side
 And sixteen pice of canon to go of at a randon
 No enomie ther dare invade
 The Oater port is secure I'll tel you wherfor
 It stands by the boam and the Briel
 Where twentie four brasen guns above 120 ponders
 That place al about it keeps weel
 At Sant Johns port I heard of a sport
 In old time al popish they were

And the father of King William did besidge them
 But this toun they were loath to give over
 Sant John image of Silver he could them deliver
 The kyes they gave him to keep
 They bare him to the port band the kyes on his neck
 Losst the toun when he fell asleep
 That image of Sant John they did rely upon
 More then the Maker of us al
 For idols dead who chuse to plead
 In due time God makes fall
 So Spanish don : was rooted out then
 With ther rich imagerie
 And the Sant Johns kirk is a curious work
 As ever a man did see
 Bot of ther Briel take yet a feell
 It contains twentie four pice of canon
 And for a night it can loadge right
 The number of three thousand men
 In five guard houses and such conveniences
 They got coal and candle free
 And ther ordinar guard for that place prepared
 It stand hard by the entrie
 With six guns together at every corner
 With a curious ramper indeed
 And in at the boam the ships comes rowing
 With every thing that they need.
 And on the Briel green they drau up ther men
 Eight regiments ther can have room
 In shade of thes trees that are covered with leaves
 And groweth the whole place round
 Now from the Briel green let us walk in
 And to the State house let us come
 Where ther counsel do sit and al heads of wit
 Each man comes to his oun room
 Ther Moses doth stand the table in his hand
 Al writen round about
 The Law of the Lord they keep in record
 Was given on Sinaies Mount
 Above the port of it four men on horseback sit
 Which seems a strange engine
 As the cloak do reel they wheel
 Together at one time
 They goe about in wonderful sorte
 As ever yet was seen
 And as the cloak leaves of to chope
 They come to ther post again
 The Market Place is large and broad
 Even where the market stands

Three regiments can drau up at once
 Besides ther merchant stans
 Windmilles they have about the toun
 In several places round
 Which at one time four sorts of grain
 Each one of them doth grinde
 The flour and the buquetie and the rie
 And habergrot thes four grains
 Al with on wheel about they reel
 Windmilles with four gang of stanes
 And with a deal of easse turns about as they please
 Sets the saills about to the wind
 A pair of broad sails she hath cross in her tail¹
 She goes with a great deal of dinn
 They have a bark mill and grinds therintill
 Ther barks for barking of lather
 They gather ther rags to the paper mills them drags
 And therof make plentie of paper
 To define ther oyl mile it surpasseth my skile
 The works are so many therwithin.
 The great bolts of timber drau al up together
 And then comes down with great dinn
 By knocking and beating and several men working
 They make ther oyl for to burn
 And for to give them light in time of the night
 In lamps the wholle streets round
 And every night at ten ther clapermen
 Goes throu the streets and he cries
 Beware of your fire and carssel light
 Til the morning its time for to rise
 They have an hosspital where they put in al
 The poor of the toun that fals sick
 The sojors that go ther they pay for ther share
 Aught and twentie stivers by the week
 Al that die therin they get a coffen
 Wherin they are to be laid
 With very litele sorow bears them out on a barou
 And they are buried in the hospital yeard
 They have a place caled Bedlam where they put mad men
 And such as falls in distraction
 Where they are kept saffe for doing mischieff
 Or any unorderly action
 At Bedlam hall they have pictured on the wall
 Thes people and ther deeds so distracted
 As the cutting of themselves with lances and knives
 And al the misschiefs they have acted

In the moneth October it was I remember
 We marched tuo ligs out of toun
 To the village Midelroy a water runs thereby
 Where we were revieued by the King
 Our Soveragn King William did there come
 And there he did us revieue
 As our ranks passed by he did us weel espie
 To him now we shal bid adieu
 Near to this same place we saw a horsse race
 Major Heybron¹ and the Captan Campbell
 Captan Campbels little mare wan that wagour
 And Major Heybrons horsse wan the mall
 Our Christemas feast we held in the Buss
 And we drank genever and beir
 And every day the time to pass away
 Some kind of game we did hear.

CHAP. II

The progress of Portmores regiment, and the sidge of Keyezersuedr and a short progress of the Hollands armie in the year 1702.

Now came our rout and we marched out
 On Januarie the second day
 Right early we rose and away we did go
 Four ligs we marched a way
 And the next day we marched three ligs of way
 And we came to the Grave that night
 And then from the Grave four ligs we drave
 To Kranbergh the way we took right
 Then we came to Cleave that litele city brave
 Which lies near the watter side
 By companies in a housse they quartered us
 And ther for a night we did bide
 And then from Cleave no great jurney we have
 Bot the way was both deep and ill
 And over the river Rinne we got boating
 And we entered Imerick untill
 When we to Imerick came we got quarters than
 And lay ther in garissoune
 This toun is now slighted bot it hes been kept
 It lieth pleasantlie on the Rinne
 And for ther religion we canot weel judge on
 Ther is of al sorts you can chusse
 So Ile be boldest for to chusse the oldest
 Ther is ther a synagoge of Jewes

And into that toun a horsse race was run
 Great wageours was laid ther upon
 Captan Campbells sorhie cam ameling¹ in before sorrel ambling
 And Major Brodies² (Suintons)³ horsse fel behinde
 About five weeks time in this toun we lay than
 Til orders came to us to march
 The seventh of Febervar away we did go
 And we came to a toun called Rees Rees
 Ther we did lie and they ussed us kindly
 Thes folk was both kind and discreet
 And ther ye may se ther cross a thorn tree
 It stands in the midle of the street
 Its woven as a hedge with very prettie ledges
 And yearly it is cowed very sounne close cut
 And a deal of people therunder can shelter
 And defend themselves from the rain
 The Roman Catholicks they have the big church
 And a great many alters ther within
 And al ther reformaids reformed in Luthers days
 And stil they continue Lutheran
 Upon the Fastens even as it was the custom
 They chused ther judges for that year
 And by many vottes they chused them Protestants
 And then drank a great deal of beir
 Ther a post came riding and brought in the tidings
 Of the death of William ther King
 Which tidings so bad made thes people so sad
 That they made a woofull lamenting
 The twentie sixt of March we marched from Rees
 And before the tuelth hour at noon
 We came through a toun was fortified strong
 On the walls lay a great many canon.
 The toun is called Vessele in Clieveland Wesel
 Ther is many strong works made about it
 The King of Prusshea is ther the supream
 And in haste they marched us through it
 And beyonde that toun was a water runing down
 And we passed on a bridge of boats
 And marched to Steepleberge the way was large
 Al night their they quartered us
 And the nixt day : before we marched away
 We behoved to pay for our loodging
 Into Dunslagen the nixt day we came Dunslaken
 Payed for what we caled without grudging

² See vol. ii. p. 22.

³ Ibid.

The nixt day we came to a river caled Haille
 A litle from Dussbergh toun
 Where we did rest us and got orders to dress us
 And our clean gravats to put on
 We marched into Dussbergh and ther we quartered
 In this old toun pretie lang
 It stands pleasantlie in the midle of the countrey
 The walls are high bot not strong
 The inhabitants ther most pairt Protestants are
 They have the big church in keeping
 And every Friday the trouth for to say
 Al the bells of this church they do ring
 Once ther was a lady who lived therby
 Of riches she had great plentie
 She had no heirs to inherit al her geirs
 Very much to the poor she did lieve
 The bells al for joy rings still on that day
 On Friday it was that she died :
 And every day stands on a steeple high
 A karle that a horn blows loude
 A village stands near by very pleasantlie
 It is called the Bouers I 'm informed
 They let none go ther in the night to harbour
 Bot such as they say are reformed
 In the moneth Apriel the orders came us till
 And we marched out in good ordere
 And we came to Keyezerswerd and ther we camped
 That night we did it beleagure
 No war was proclaimed bot now they begin it
 The canons did shot from the toun
 And regiments did gather who were coming ther
 And so the sidge was set down
 Nixt day afternoon a comand we did warn
 To make ready for breaking of ground
 A comand of granadires and likeways of Swizers
 For a cover they were sent down
 We made batteries and no man yet loosed
 And a trench before that toun
 And this we continued from that very minute
 And the night that we first brake ground
 In raiseing of batteries and planting of canon
 And trenching before this toun
 And every day our canons did so play
 The echoe right far gave a sound
 Three regiments about every day we did mount
 Keeped our trenches both day and night
 We keepped the trenches and held in the Frenches
 Who fired al the long night

On the fourteenth night of May the French did saillie
 Out in the dark hour of the night
 And many a Hanover that night they ran over
 A regiment they destroyed near quitte
 They thought the nixt night the same to effect
 Bot our sentries them veel perceived
 My Lord Stranavers men¹ and al our trench then
 That night they better behaved. Strathnaver regimen
 Fell briskly to work and beat the French back
 And a great deal of men they did loose
 Whoso fel by the way unburied they lay
 Hardly any durst fetch in their cloathes
 On the aughten night of May they made a great fray eighteenth
 Seven hundred French sailed out
 Came out in a furie al druken with brandie drunken
 Great slaughter they made them about
 The night was dark they made a cruel work
 And many a man was slain
 Of two regiments Stranavers and Wilkies Wilkies
 That night they loosed many men
 And by the break of day the cruel French they Sailed out again in a route
 They waited not to fire but ran as in ire
 And lape over our trench in a doupe leaped in a moment
 Our men was al scattered carying of the wounded
 Which proved then much to ther losse
 The French being mad inclined to shed blood
 And armed with cruel stogaes : stog, a small stout sword
 About our batterie they came hastilie
 And fired ther shots right thick
 Our men did railie some did backwards flee
 And some from our camp did come up
 Our Major Heyburn the picket had then
 With fourtie of our good men
 In the middle of the night we came to the fight
 And weel we thought now to stand
 The press was so strong and so great a confusion
 Backwards we behoved now to flee
 Bot in a short time we railied again
 And fired right manfulie
 Our Lieutenant Cornal of his own good will
 Another picket brought out
 And al our regiment in good file and rank
 Was a coming into this same boute
 Then a comand of our horsse did brisklie advance
 And came on the French sudenlie

And with ther broad swords and not many words
 They soon made the French for to flee
 And what they loossed ther I canot declare
 Bot they durst never saillie again
 Bot ther toun keepled still ther intention was ill
 They fired out boams and canon
 A sentinel who ran and the French did informe
 This night al this mischief was done
 From the French again he ran to the Bus of Braban
 And ther like a thief he did hang
 Our armie then the sidge did confirme
 Bot this toun we could not yet take
 With great canon ball we beat down ther wall
 And a long wide breach we did make :
 And many a boam we throu in upon them
 And many a shoure of granades
 Which among them did break with many a crack
 Some brake among there stockades
 This toun was right strong and the sidge lasted long
 Every day some slaughtered were
 The French with a boat stole fresh men into it
 Every night when they could win their
 On the ninth night of June our orders came
 Two regiments behoved to atacqu
 The one was our oune and the Nassau Waloun
 Was ordered to storme their out work
 And five hundered granadires to be our frontires
 And workmen comanded for work
 Al unto good array we made us al ready
 After midday they drou us in to it
 One regiment of Swizers and some Brandiburgers
 Was likewayes comanded to storme
 And at five afternoon to the storm trench we came
 And their in platouns we did forme
 Three canons did us warn and then we vent on
 Our word it was God us beware
 A litele strau in our hatts for a sign we got
 Our officers marched us before
 A mine they did springe as we were going one
 The which did a litele confusse us
 And in the meen time so thick fireing
 They poured on us from al quarters
 To ther piliesods we advance in spight of al France
 And I trust the Lord wil suport us
 Some in the mine with the ground fel in
 A cruel like work it now was
 For al they could do ther strength we came to Beat them from it in great ire bombs

advance guard

Gott uns bewahre

palisades

Many of them were slain and few could get in
 In the foussie they lap from our fire
 They run al about bot no way could get out
 Ther strength they could not now keep
 The Brandiburges fired upon them in ire
 In ther shoes they made them to sleep
 This atacque was strong and lasted right long
 And many on that night was slain
 We al bravely behaved and God hath us saved
 For which we give thanks to His Name
 Thes teribele mines and cruel engines
 Made many a man for to groan
 Some brunt in the feet and some in the hands
 And some in the aire was blown
 About ten acloak at night the French issued out
 And fired ther last mine
 Which near our batterie it reached wonderously
 Made a wide hallow near to the same.
 This was the fourth mine the French had nou sprung
 This last was the worst of the four
 Great heaps of people it throu al together
 So that some was never seen more
 Many barels of powder bloun al up together
 It cast such a stink in the aire
 As stinking Sodom with fire and brimston
 No better we can this compare
 Right like an earthquake it made the ground shake
 Which made many men for to fall
 The wickedest tragadie this seems for to be
 That is in our progress all
 Our Levtenant Cornal Sir James Coliquer¹
 Was killed at our first going one
 And Major Hebron in the head got a wound
 Munroe bare him away home
 Officers and cadies and many of our lads
 On that night was wounded and slain
 Of the five hundered granadires that vent on before us
 Bot few were left to goe home
 Yet we got up a trench in spite of the French
 And their al the night we did stand
 And defended our selves from many perilles
 Our guns they grew hot in our hands
 And al the long night they fired right thick
 And many was wounded and killed
 From the counterscarfs round the firing came
 The ground with dead men was filled

New regiments came in for to relieve our men
 It was now the dawning of the day
 Our number was few the trowth to tel you
 When Wattie Clerk¹ brought us away.
 Many French being slain and ther out works tane
 Brandiburghs no quarter them gave
 Thes French proved bold the toun yet to holde
 Where many were brought to ther grave
 About ten hours the nixt day they beat a parlie
 And got time to bury the slain
 About two hours time ther was no firing
 Bot anew they began it again
 Now two three days more this sidge did endure
 Our trench was just under ther wall
 We made a boam batterie as soon as could be
 And anew to that work we did fall
 Charged morters with stons to beat out ther brains
 Right sadly they were now mischeived
 Many wounded and hurt and forced cry out
 No way they could now be relieved
 On June the fourteenth day they beat a parley
 And ther governour out he did come
 And was conveied safe to our governour himself
 And ther he surrendered the toun
 The Prince Van Nassau gave them leave to goe
 With ther men and six pice of canon
 With Collers flying and drums beating
 Two morters and six covered wagons
 Pox fal this Prince for favoring thes French
 Heel get the divell to his thank
 What came of him I canot now define
 Bot he never came more to our camp
 On the eighten of June our whole armie than Did fire the victorie gladly
 With canons and morters and al our smal guns
 And with a hosea past it al by
 Bot to reckon the coast right many was loost
 Which ther had gotten ther death
 Two valiant Captans in our regiment then was
 Was wounded and after lost breath
 Six of our Subeltenants stout and courageous
 Was killed on this fatal pice ground
 Our officers al was wounded with ball
 Bot two or three came of sound
 A hundreded of our best men on that night was slain
 Two hundreded and fiftie was wounded

And eight or nine serjants left ther lives in pledge
 Our victory with vallor was crowned
 This sidge being over on an way or other
 Our regiment was now very weak
 And of the other two who were engadged also
 Of ther losse no acount I can make
 This sidge lasted long with many a throng
 And many a cruel designes
 And many good men in the aire was bloun
 And burnt with thes pouder mines
 Ful nine thousand men the French ther did send
 Who camped above the toun
 The French to relieve and them freshmen give
 In a boat the Rinn they came down
 Two thousand lay within when this sidge did begine
 Most pairt was wounded and slain
 And they who releived were sadly mischieved
 Bot few was left to go home
 O cursed Keyezersued ay cruel be thy weird
 Thou art now demolished and dung down
 That strong castel they called invincibelle
 With pouder in the aire it was bloun
 Three hundered men was set a working
 To undermine this castel
 And in a days time they fired a mine
 And a corner of it down fell
 Then for work again they comanded moe men
 For to undermine al the rest
 To bloue it al down it was ther designe
 For the time to come it was best
 Al thes strong walls was made now to fall
 Thou shalt never be fortified again
 Thou shalt now be a village made fit for tillage
 Thy churches brunt to remaine
 Near the first of this sidge it was I aledge
 When the great church was brunt all
 And that great stipell came down with a ratell
 And thes musick bells al did fall
 I canot rehearse nor yet put in versse
 What hapened the time of this sidge
 At the west side of the toun we had sidged long
 To remove they did us oblidge
 Our batteries and trenches and al our wood works
 The French they brunt them up all:
 At the Brandiburghs side a trench soon was made
 And the sidge was continued withall
 And beneath Keyezersued where the water is broad
 The French had a litele scense

outwork

And the King of Prushaes brother and his Brandiburgers
 Repelled them from it perforce
 About the midel of the day in a boat marched they
 And fired the shots in good speed
 And in an hours time with thick firing
 They were masters of it indeed
 Prince Newburgh himself gave a free hospitalle
 And meat and drink was alowed
 To Diseldorpe toun al the wounded was tane
 Therein to be kept and cured
 On June the Threteth day we marched away
 And camped by Dussburgh at night
 Hard by that toun we set our tents doun
 And marched by the morning light
 That day we came far and camped by Veassel
 Six ligs this day we did march
 Four ligs the nixt day we marched away
 And on a plain field did pitch
 And from thence we removed for so it behoved
 And at night we camped by Reess
 The nixt day to Emerick and marched by it
 A long lig as our folk sayes
 Away from thence and the river did cross
 On a bridge was weel made of boats
 And with our armie this night joyned we
 Not far from Newmego it now was.
 We camped right near to our English armie
 And lay their three or four dayes
 We were bot a few yet we passed a revieue
 And thes Generalls gave us the praise
 Men in such a station and for our acomadation
 They allowed us a route to the Buss
 A boat was provided and so we came to it
 The tuelth day of Jully it now was
 When we came to the Buss we got quarters
 And then took a sound can of beir
 They gave us new hatts to set on our tops
 And we lay ther the rest of this year
 The French now had Flanders and al the Lukelanders
 And much of the Spanish Guilderlane
 And many a toun on the Maze and the Rinn
 They had now under comande
 Keyezersued they had lost at which they were crost
 And woved to take a revenge
 Upon the Hollander and the futie Engelitire
 Over al the broad countrey they range
 And with a huge hoast and a teribel boast
 Our armie they forced to retire

And towards Newmego was a coming also
 Which toun was now in great fear
 At such an alaram the toun did al arme
 And to stand for their oun saffetie
 The burgers al drew canon to the wall
 To defend themselves for a wie a little
 The French cavalrie was draving right nigh
 Ther armour shined right clear then
 So many a woman cryed yonder them coming
 And many a man did fear them
 Our Scottish Royall posted by the wall the Royal Scots
 With them they thought to disputte
 With ther firelocks ther hands on the coks
 They gave them a noble sallute
 Canons did play and bullets did flee
 The French began to retire than
 And al our armie gave a shout and a cry
 This toun it had no more fear than then
 The French dreu back let ther courage slack
 And warilie they did retire their
 Our armie did perseue al noble men and true
 Al ready to fal on their rire their rear
 Our camp set down to cover this toun
 And their for some weeks did lie still
 Our armie did gather a deal better together
 And marched to Pirre with good will Peer
 The French dreu of from that day forth
 And by degrees did retire
 Our brave and valliant Englishmen
 Right oft drave up their rire
 From Pirre some pairties were sent forth
 Al with the Prince of Heesse
 The which took in fair Stockum toun Stochem
 Which did the French opresse
 From Pirre a sidge they did detash
 Their valour for to show
 And in three weeks or four at most
 They conquered brave Finello. Venlo
 From Pirre another partie past
 Their vallon for to show
 Took Stevenswerd and Roariemount Stevensweert
Roeremonde
 As they stode in a rowe
 And every toun from Mastrick down Maestricht
 Our armie now hath won
 We took in al both great and small
 And we made the French to run
 Beyond Mastrick we marched up
 Our collors to display

A strong comand to Tongvere vent
 And chased the French away
 Then towards Luke we marched up
 In noble rank and file
 Upon that ground our tents set down
 Thinking to stay a while
 We had not stayed above three dayes
 Or four upon that ground
 Til their governour sent his message
 To render up the toun
 Providing he had leave goe free
 Marching with al his men
 With flying collors and beating drums
 Which thing could not be done
 Our noble Captan General
 This thing he did deny
 Ther Castel strong he thought to winn
 Tho many a man should die
 Our canon ball beat down their wall
 And made great sloops theirrein
 With boams and granades we sent our tokens
 Which made great noisse and dine
 A comand of granadires we did now detashe
 To atacque upon the Castell
 With courage undaunted they manfully acted
 The dispute was fierce and fell
 Upon the breach they marched up
 Al valliant hearts of gold
 And with their hands did throu granades
 Which made the French blood cold
 Now toun and Castel both we wone
 And al that countrey round
 And the trophies of our victories
 Over al the earth shal sound
 Of our brave Captan Generalls
 And al our noble peires
 At every toun their praise we sound
 With Cowehornes granadires¹
 And Reinburgh too was sigded now
 By many a valliant man
 And with strong work and many atacque
 We conqered the same.

¹ 'Cohorn's Grenadiers,' a piece which fired six grenades at once, and was therefore called by the soldiers, 'Cohorn's Grenadiers.' It was the fore-runner of the modern machine gun. The French had a piece with three barrels, which fired three balls at once, called meurtriers or orgues. See infra, pp. 348 and 365.

CHAP. III

The progress of the Lord Dalrimpells regiment with a short progress of the Hollands armie in the year 1703.

Now of the seven hundred and three
 My purpose is for to declare
 In the Buss al this winter we laye Bois-le-duc
 And right weel for camp did prepare
 My Lord Dalrimpele¹ was now made Cornall
 In place of the Lord Portmore
 Major Heyburn was made Lieutenant Cornal
 Captan Hameltoun² was made Major
 Three new Captans³ which had goten companies
 After Keyezersuerd was al past
 And a deal of Subeltenants had now goten places
 In the room of thes we had lost
 And in this winter time they brought from England
 A number of very good men
 And from Scotland our Officers sent them
 Above a hundered and ten
 Our Cloathes were made new with stockings and shoes
 And for every mans head a new hatt
 Al things being ready we wold taken them gladly
 Bot the divel a stick we now gat
 Apriel the fourtenth day we marched away
 The Hollands train for to guard
 We marched out at the Intimare port
 And at Roy that night we camped Middelrode
 Then unto Beok the way being deep Beek
 Our journey was four ligs lang
 And on the Bouers we got quarters boers
 By companies we lay in a barn
 The nixt day to Dussoch they brought us
 And we lay in barnes likeways
 The nixt day Millen we marched on
 And our train lay hard by us
 The nixt day to Gratum four ligs long
 And the nixt day to Mechell came we Mechelen
 Our journey was lang near Mastrick we came Maastricht
 And ther the train we did leave
 Into Mastrick toun the train marched in
 And that night we came to Sechem Sichen

Tongres

And on the Bouers we got good quarters
 And was two ligs from Tonguere then
 To the toun of Tonguer when we came their
 It was Apriel the twentie and one
 And their we lay still our quarters untill
 Til the ninth day of May was come
 This open village with a right bad presage
 Hath a ston wall it about
 Its neither thick nor strong and wanting canon
 In danger it canot hold out
 It hath been told that in times of old
 It was a toun of great fame
 Til a Roman emperour did it conquer
 And destroyed great pairt of the same
 Tonguer stands now betwixt Mastrick and Luke
 And Mastrick is now very strong
 With plentie of mines al noble engines
 And abundance of al sorts of canon
 It hath many forts and good counterscarfes
 And likewayes its furnished weel
 With amonition and arms to keep it from harms
 Its the strongest that Holland can build
 Bot as for Tonguere it is Ile declare
 A place both barent and poor
 Their Monks and Friers and al their grand peires
 Goes beging from door to door
 Al is Popish in it and the country about it
 And so they still do remaine
 They have a great church ful of images
 And three great alters theirin
 And every day that we in it did lie
 We got some kind of alarme
 Some French came about and we isshed out
 Bot stile it proved in vain
 One night at even two hundered of our men
 Was comanded to a village their besides
 Over dike over sike the way was right deep
 And our good John Clause was our guide
 We curst him we bant him some woued to hang him
 Bot he from us stole awaye
 And al that night lang it blatered on of rain
 And home we came against day
 This time past away til the aught day of May
 And then we passed a rewieue
 A State for Holland and the General Whitenburgh
 And without the toun they us dreu
 Two regiments of horsse did muster before us
 And as we marched into the toun

Our names they called on man after man
 And exactly our number get down
 And late at even our spye he came in
 The French was a coming upon sight
 With a strong comand we ramforced our guards
 And stayed til the morning was light
 Our General gave comand none might it gainstande
 Al us foot folk to stay in the toun
 Bot in a short space it was a sad case
 For the French they did us suroune
 That morning earlie was very mistie
 Made many a man for to fear
 They could nothing se til the French armie
 Came on apace and dreu near
 Our horse marched out for a litele scout
 Their carabines they did discharge
 And then in great fear was forced to retire
 They durst not stay to engadge
 Thes horse and dragouns rode back throu the toun
 As fast as ere they could gallope
 Our General took coach he feared as much
 To Mastrick right fast he did wallope gallop
 The French armie was Thousands sixtie
 That morning as they did apeare
 And ther cavalrie advanced briskelie
 Their coming made cowards to fear
 About this old toun they set ther tents doun
 Without any noisse or dinn
 And hastilie got up a batterie
 They thought the prisse was now win prize won
 Two regiments within did take the alarme
 Drawing up at the Market place
 Then round on the wall we were posted al
 Within a very short space
 The Brigadire Elss comanded in chief Els
 With our Lieutenant Cornal
 And with noble hearts they played ther pairts
 By conduct and worthie counsell
 With two russtie canon we fired anone
 As fast as ever we could drive
 We did them discharge with noble courage
 Til one of our canon did rive burst
 With courage stout we held it out
 For four and twentie hours
 And the French hoast for al their boast
 We called them sones of whores
 The French canon ball beat doun our walls
 And made a breach therein

And al that day they did so play
 Untill the evening came
 A message then to toun they send
 To se what we would doe
 Ther messenger vent back again
 That night we would not bowe
 And al that night their fires bright
 Shined us streight before
 In the morning earlie we beat a parlie
 And then our toun gave over
 In the morning they fired one canon
 Which drave throu a kirk of the toun
 The parlie being beat al was now silent
 And we made a capitellation
 All prisoners of War we were made their
 Since no better it might be
 Our arms to lay down at our enomies will
 No room was left us to flee
 Now Mastrick port was open set
 And the French did enter the toun
 And we were brought in from our plattons
 And al our arms threw down
 The Noble Duke Berwick¹ he ther did comand
 To us he proved right kinde
 Ye are my countrie men said he
 No man shal do you wronge
 He did marvel how we durst rebelle
 Against their grand armie
 Lay down our arms on so good conditions
 And receive no injurie
 Oh and alace right sad was our case
 We were now al prisoners tane
 Our hearts was sair our purse was bair
 And far we were from hame
 Two regiments of men in Tonguer was tane
 By the French grand armie
 They might not stripe us nor yet molest us
 So in to that kirk passed we
 Laid down our bones upon thes hard stones
 And their our case did regret
 The French men then by toming our guns
 Did fire this victorie great
 Many Dutch men with the French now took one
 And al for the love of ther monie

¹ Natural son of the Duke of York (King James II.) by Arabella Churchill, sister of the Duke of Marlborough.

And a very few of our Scots men took one
 To procure their oun libertie
 So three days time in this kirk we lay than
 After this woefull mischance
 So our enomies will we behoved to fulfill
 And so we must travell to France
 As we vent away they did us weel tye
 By fours together with a tow
 And so we did march like hounds in a liche
 And four and four in a row
 On the tuelth day of May the first half vent away
 And the last half on the thretenth
 And through their grand armie along we did go
 The which was a great deal of lenth
 The great Duke Berwick gave out in comande
 To the officers of our guards
 Kindlie to usse us and not to abuse us
 As they would expect rewarde
 And if any man should be so mad
 As to doe a prisoner harme
 Send him to me I will said he
 See for to punish him
 So to Sant Leu that day we drawe
 And was prisoned in a high loft
 And for a nights time in it we lay then
 Bot our bed was not very soaft
 And on the nixt day without any delaye
 We came to the toun of Loven
 And in a big stabe they prisoned us
 A place for horsse and not men
 From that to Brisseles the nixt day they took us
 And without that toun did us meet
 Their hoie boyes and toyes expressing their joys
 We captives was pined with sore feet
 Great multitudes their upon us did gaze
 And a strong prison we got
 Above a port head we lay and got bread
 Two nights we were in that spot
 And then bedeen we came to Anguine
 By runing al the way
 The Spainards wilde was now our guards
 To Atte we came nixt day
 From Atte to Turney was our nixt jurney
 And was prisoned beside the cantine
 Where they brew beir al dayes of the year
 And their we lay a long time
 In a brave cass of arms with other conveniences

A brave broad crosse for to recreate us
 And our monies came to us from Holland
 Fourten days time theirein we have lien
 And then it behoved us to go
 Far up into France they now comande us
 Our Lieutenant Cornall was woe
 With them he took leave and to them did give
 Three pistols of gold for to drink
 Thes companies nine who marched that time
 Got a good refreshment we think
 From Turney to Wirsey they marched that day
 And the nixt day marched to Dowey
 Which is a strong toun and fortified round
 And some of our countrey men ¹ did see
 Then on the morow they marched on Til they to Arras came
 They bought our beir and we did carire
 Drank our Cornalls health every man
 We drank al merilie and thanked him heartilie
 And a prosperous time let him have
 Who was so kinde and noble in minde
 For the three pistolls that he gave
 There we did stay and rested a day
 Provision enough came to sell
 Tobaco and sallt and what we did want
 We provided their pretie weell
 Now eight ligs long we marched to Darlang
 Our guards did wearie and tire
 They way was large put them in a rage
 And the sun it scorched like fire
 From Darlang to Amens we marched at anes
 This march was likewayes right long
 Upon that ramparte when we came their
 The people was gathered throng
 Both the old and the young they gazed us one
 Til we to our prison came
 And to an old house they have brought us
 Bot within al could not get room
 Some pairt lay without til they built hutes
 To preserve themselves from the rain
 Some wives had and bairns ready to take harm
 And they builded thes hutes for them
 The burgers they were obliged to guard us
 And the women they gave libertie
 Who vent to the toun and did bring in
 Such things as they pleased to buy

Three companies of our men were sent to Lann	Lannes
Where they had great plentie of wine
So that if ye think it ye may go and drink it
For three pence or four pence the cane	can
So now into France as we lay perchance
Very orderly we got our bread
Tobaco and salt in al thes pairts
Are the dearest things that we need
Our Officers all at Turney lay still
And some who their did fall sick
And al the hospitals they gave freely to all
And cairefully did us keep
Two and twentie weeks we were prisoners ther
Befor that we were relieved
Then cartells being made and al things agreed
Prisoners of confinement were eased
By a trepell cartell with advice and counsell
It was mutualie made and agreed on	triple, i.e. between France, Holland, and England
Prisoners to send back unto ther oun folk
And the ransome was man for man
The second of October no longer we hover	delay
We came from Amens to Dareleng	Dourlens
From Dareleng to Arras the nixt day we passe
And the nixt day to Dowey we came	Douai
From Dowey to Wirsey and from Wirsey to Turney	Orchies
And for three dayes we lay there
Our regiment did gather at Turney together
And al things for the voyage made clear
Then from Turney to Atte we marched at last	Ath
And the nixt day we came to Anguine	Enghien
A garden is their both pleasant and fair
The like is rare to be seen
The Duchess of Anguine a Leady of fame	d'Enghien
She allowed us four barrells of beir
Which we drank in our hatts and so gave her thanks
The which was a noble carire
From Anguine to Brissels we quicklie do passe
And their a day we did rest
And then we came to the toun of Loven	Louvain
And we lay in their counsell house
From Loven to Sant Leu the nixt day we drew	Léau or Leeuwe
And lay in that old prison loft
And yet a dayes time they more do us pine
For thrist their smal beir we coft	bought
Then from Sant Leu the nixt day we drew
And came to the village Bathlone	Borchloen
There we were set free at our oun libertie
We at night to Tonguere came home

Both merie and glad good fortune we had
 We were now releaved from thrall
 Our noble Generall gave eleven pistolls
 And he highly comended us all
 Our Lieutenant Cornall was likewayes noble
 He gave us three pistols more
 We bought barels of beir and we drank without fear
 Till some began for to roare
 Then on the nixt morning with litele adorning
 We came to the toun of Masticke
 And for three days time in guards we lay then
 And bought barels of beir to drinke
 We drank al good healths and we wished great wealth
 To al our comandars and peires
 We meet with some frinds who did entertain us
 With a brieff account of the weires.
 And of this campine that we were from home
 We altogether did consulte
 Of the sidges brullies and tullies that armies
 Did make with the hapie resulte
 In the spring of this year as sumer dreu near
 A sidge our armie set down
 To a city Bonn that stands on the Rinn
 The which is a very strong toun
 The Duke of Mallbery with a pretie armie
 Was sidgeing this city so brave
 With trenching and storming and strong canonading
 Perforce this city most have
 The French within were of noble engine
 And many a saillie did make
 That for a long time our armie so fine
 This toun they could not yet take
 In the begening of May the French did array
 And their grand armie came down
 And took Tonguere and encamped their
 And over Luke land got room
 Our armie from Holland was now a coming
 And by the walls of Mastrick set down
 They made a strong trench to hold of the French
 And planted it weel with canon
 The French hoast made a teribele boast
 Shortlie after Tonguer was tane
 Upon a certan day they made an essay
 To take Mastrick al alane
 In batell aray they marched that day
 At Mastrick they came within sight
 Our trench was astire as the French did apeare
 They behowed to defend as they might wars

frays and brawls

taken

From Sanct Peters berge our canon played at large
 The French now behoued to wheell
 The trench and toun did fire canon
 And so defended them weel
 The French gave a charge bot durst not engadge
 Perforce they behoued to retire
 Our armie al about for joy gave a shoute
 Our danger is passed no fear
 Our armie at Bone continued stil on Bonn
 Til at length they conquered the toun
 And when it was won they put our men in
 And then our armie came down
 Marching as fast as they had been in haste
 Til at Mastrick our armie they joyn
 The French at Tonguer did tary no longer
 Bot mount brave lads and be gone
 Our grand armie took courage on hie
 And to the plain field is gone
 With Mallbrough bold and Overquerke old Auverquerque
 Thes noble conductors of fame
 A flying armie in Zieland had we
 Was gathered at Bargenopeshome Bergen-op-Zoom
 Fourten full regiments on comand their sent
 At Hullst over the line are they gone Hulst
 And in a strong order upon the French border
 Made many a noble atacque
 And they came to Aiker to an old castel there Eckeren
 Within five ligs of Antwerpe
 The French grand armie for their saftie
 Drew in within their oune line
 And for this purpose a comand did chusse
 And marched them in short time
 The French General the great Buffelar Boufflers
 Upon the van he did ride
 With noble cavalerie and bold granadires
 He marched down in great pride
 And with them their Swizers guarding field pices
 And so they marcht al along
 Both night and day for haste marched they Till in a gray morning fell one
 Soon in a morning this fight did begine
 And many a man their was slain
 The French was beat back with many a crack
 Bot presentlie raillied again
 Our smal armie no help they had near
 Bot they dreu up in a church yeard
 And brisklie did fire as men in great ire
 Bot the French took al our out guards

The French cavalerie charged them so brisklie
 And their canons upon us did play
 Our Scots regiment their played their pairs
 And with the first engaged that day
 Three times that day the French dreu away
 Bot still with fresh men were releaved ruin (?) They came so thick down and made so great roon
 That many a man was mischieved
 And some of our folk they for prissoners took
 And carefully did them keep pools In ditches and stanks at rires and at flanks
 Many plunged in water right deep
 And in the twelght as it dreu towards night
 From our armie three regiments came down
 Who came with good speed to help us in need
 And towards the French are they bound
 And with weel charged guns beat of these whoresones
 Who fled away in great fear.
 With courage renewed our men them persued
 And brisklie drave up their rire.
 This fight of Aiker was a cruell masaquer
 Of so few men as was their
 No flying armie in that year had we
 To our grand armie let us repair
 St. Tron or Truyen Who in good aray marched to Sant Troye
 And camped ther a long time
 Behinde Sant Leu the French armie drew
 And lay secure in their line.
 Huy Then unto Howie marched our armie
 And their a sidge did set down
 We batteries made both high and broad
 And planted them weel with canon
 And many a ball shot at that castell
 And made a breach in that wall
 They thought to take Howie in spite of old Lewie
 By force of powder and ball
 Our noble Cornall my Lord Dalrimple
 This time was with the armie
 His regiment being tan he had not them seen
 At which he was grieved truelie
 To make some redress he now up did pass
 To ataque upon the Picarde
 With him vollentires like good granadires
 In a morning surprised that garde.
 climbed This jurney they took clam up a high rock
 Set his foot upon a mans shoulder
 And so they wan in without noise or dine
 And thes French did quicklie surendere

To Mallbrough in haste the news is now past
 That Dallrimple had taken a fort
 With him came enew to se this news true
 And they heartilie laught at the sport
 The works of Fort Joseph had now got a scuffe damage
 By boams granades and great ball
 Them for to storne a comand being sent
 They behoved to surrender it all
 The valliant Tronie¹ the castel held he
 Til at length he did come in their will
 Both castel and toun their arms laid down
 And Tronie he gave in his bill
 To our Generall great Mallbrough himself
 Who was pleased the same to accepte
 The valliant Tronie to our service came he
 And the French for ever he left
 He was wise and true the countrie he knewe
 Again he was governour of Howie
 A new regiment in haste he did mounte
 In our armie they passed up truelie
 Five regiments of French was tan prisoners
 That was al good granadires
 To our garissons in Holland they were sent down
 Til they for us were releaved
 Some Hollands regiments in Howie was left
 And the forts anew they repair
 Tronie this year a new fort cased built caused to build
 The name of it is called Fort Sarr
 A garde housse in the midle of this sconse
 He caused to reare up anone
 He made counterscarfs and made batteries
 And planted them weel with canon rallied (?)
 Tronie rulled Howie and al that contrie
 And made them to come at his call
 And in our armie advanced was he
 To be a Major Generall
 Al the month of October our armie lay at Tonguer
 And the housse quarters was there
 The burgers of Tonguer did build their hie steeple
 And mounted it high in the aire
 Al being agreed al prisoners now relieved
 And brought to their oun places home
 This year we sum up and our camp did break up
 And marched to their oun garissons

¹ Baron de Trognée. From the Marlborough Despatches he appears to have been in the service of the allies before, and to have directed the siege of Huy.

In Mastrick toun our regiment was than
 And they provided for us boates
 And fiftie pice of arms to keep us from harms
 And we came out at the Buss port
 In three old open boats they now put us
 And so brought us down the water
 The weather was cold and our coats very old
 For cold our teeth did al chater
 Three days and three nights we were in this case
 Before that we could win out
 And at the Grave they set us on land
 And we marched since upon foot
 We came to a village two ligs from the Buss
 And their they quartered us
 The folk was discret gave us meat and drink
 And a company lay in a housse
 We came to the Buss and stayed three dayes
 And our old friends we did see
 We were nou perchance come back out of France
 And heartielie weellcom were we
 To Gertrudenbergh we behoved now to march
 For our regiment it was their
 Our Major Hameltoun what riden and what run
 Was come from the sidge of Tonguere
 A Captan we had who with his guard fled
 And esscaped from the French band
 And al our officers this year who brought over
 Al our recrutes from Scotland
 In Katrineburgh a regiments dutie they did
 And so we behoved to march their
 And in a long village we got a nights quarters
 And they made us right weel to fare
 To Katrineburgh we marched in a rutte
 And our officers came us to meet
 With weelcom from France with a hapie chance
 So reverantlie they us greet
 In some two aired boats they took us in to it
 Til we came within that barire
 We got ballads on the burgers to get us quarters
 And now we had no more fear
 Our mounting being ready we got it out shortlie
 Each man a shirt and gravate
 With stockins and shoes and al our new cloathes
 And for every mans head a new hatt
 And al our aires they ordered to give us
 And so we were merie and glade
 Each man got five Guilders which was his aires
 And some what more we wold have hade

 Our noble Cornall the Lord Dalrimple
 Came their his regiment to see
 What old men and new we were men anewe
 Fiftie five was in each companie
 And for to weet our throats we sold our old coats
 We got a penie and we dranke
 Bot when we have the garde the new coat must be spared
 Our officers plaid us that prank
 Ful ten weeks time this toun we lay in
 I wot we thought it not long
 We mounted our guards like brave sojor lads
 And we took us a drink and a song
 And with the burgers sometimes we confere
 Who told in Dutch very proper
 That this pretie toun belonged to King William
 And heir he was made a couper
 With an ax and an ech and an apron on his breast
 They made him to drive on a girth
 And with the burgers he held a feast their
 With abundance of al kinds of mirth
 They ordered then a chain throu a stone
 Set it up for a sign did they
 As long as this chain throu the ston do remaine
 They will not have a market day
 They have bonie brassen guns planted on the walls
 None better have ever been seen
 The shipes and the boats with the hay and oats
 Comes in for the horsstes beeden
 And al the trading it comes in by shiping
 And al kinds of merchandise
 Al kinds of grain they heir do bring in
 And abundance of butter and chiese
 And round this toun the water does come
 Which is both deep and clear
 In boats and with nets and great fish hocks
 They catch fish al dayes of the year
 A strong rampar wall about the toun all
 And abundance of counterscarfes good
 The rampare within is pleasant and sound
 And the mercet place is right broad
 With a row of trees al covered with leaves
 Which grous by the side of the street
 So this litele toun is a very compact thing

CHAP. IV

The progress of the Lord Dalrimitives regiment with the Hollands
 armie in the year 1704.

The third of Janvare seven hundred and four
 From Katrinbegh we marched awae
 Three bonie short ligs the way pretie good
 Til we came to the toun of Bredae
 And for our quarters they put us in guards
 And aloued us fire and strae
 And the nixt day in Breda we did stay
 And some arms they aloued us withae
 The nixt morning we marched right soon
 The straught way to Bargaenopeshom
 And we wan [there] and got our quarters
 Before that the sun vent down
 Our meat and our drink is heir pretie cheap
 Bot we buye our fire right dear
 Five pence for our quarters we weekly do pay
 And we drink bot the stiver beir
 Into this same toun each man got a croun
 For our redemption monie
 With magasin arms we mounted our guards
 And we took a drink hartesomlie
 Five regiments of men lay in Bargaenopeshom
 And a regiment of yellow dragouns
 Many of them deserted and some was hanged
 That regiment was native Wallounes
 The great Count Noyell who was a Felt Mershal
 Had a lodging in Bargaenopeshome
 The Prince of Holstenbeg there had comand
 Who was likeways a general person.
 This Bargaenopeshom is a pretie big toun
 Al Zieland most pay to them rents
 Five or six Popish kirks I suse be in it
 And one for the Protestants
 Ful seven year and more they have been repairing
 Thes works of Bargaenopeshom

The works and forts they have made it about
 Hath coast them many a pound
 Three noble forts at the northeast nock corner
 Is made for defence of this toun
 The name of a Sanct take this for no taunt
 They give to thes forts each one
 Within thes draubridges we keep our guards
 And weel pilisoded are they
 And good counterscarfs they have in thes forts
 And we kepted them night and day
 And at the west side the watter so broad
 Doth come like a raging sea
 Both ships and boats and al watter works
 They have in great plentie
 And the water sconsen is a very strong fort
 And abundance of canon is heir
 And a strong guard every day they send to it
 To keep thes shipes at the peire
 Out at the Buss port as ye do resorte
 The works are strong on that side
 The walls of the toun with good ston and lime
 Are builded with splendor and pride
 That Liney side is both large and broad
 And two good guardhouses their
 With good feel was and three rows of pilisods turf
 These out works are made fair
 With rows of stockades on the top of thes wals turf walls
 The outworks are mounted right strong
 Within it is mined with noble engine
 This work has been working right long
 Ten regiments of men this Liney within
 Can al do their exercise
 In or out from the toun they can come soon
 And exercise ther with easse
 The counterscarfs and works is tedious to reherse
 That is on this side of the toun
 With noble engine with good ston and lime
 This work is built square and sound
 Out of al the garissoun of Bargaenopeshom
 Five hundred men was detached
 For to keep Fort Duell that filthy drount holle Doel
 Al year we were with it fashed troubled
 Sixtie men of a regiment to Fort Duell was sent
 And relieved at a fortnights end
 And in big boats up the river they took us
 And so our money we spend
 Four regiments of men in Fort Duell was than
 Besides our oun garissoune

For the French rogues from the woods and the bogs
 Was come to this Iland down
 And near to Fort Duel two sconses the[y] held
 To kept garissoun in them two
 The one fort is called the Liliiekies houck
 And the other is*called Lile
 The Liliiekies house it stands in a nock
 And the French a garde keep ther
 And the village Lilo it hath a brave showe
 A kirk and a steeple most fair
 And a man of war lay on the watter
 She belonged to the Hollands peire
 Some boats her beside right boldly do bide
 Bot the French boats durst not come near
 And al our fort Dulle is three ligs length
 A lig and a half it is wide
 And an old dike doth compase it round
 To keep it from watter and tide
 Their is old Dulle and new Dulle and some dorps more
 Right worthie to put in our versse
 The ditches and stanks that runs throu the land
 To many are heir to rehearse
 And a bouers house hath a stank it about
 Wherein the water does so float
 That ye canot get in albeit ye would fain
 Except he would send you his boat
 And on our Dulle nock the French did atacque
 In time of the froast and the snow
 And when the thew came it was so deep than
 The starkest was wext to win throw
 Six thousand of our men in Fort Dulle lay long,
 To keep our fort from the French.
 By it the French bide with courage and pride,
 And their they made a strong trench.
 Our men fel to work to hold the French off,
 And strongly they wrought in the ground.
 Til they made a sconsse and called it a fort,
 It was founocked and round.
 Two hundred men a day on guard munted we,
 And we had their a strong batterie.
 And several good guns was planted theiron,
 And we fired them very brisklic.
 And their we had morters for throuing of boams,
 And likewayes Cowhorns granadires.
 And one priming fired six of them,
 Which held the French at uneasse.
 In the morning earlie the canons did play,
 And their boams they throw in the night.

Some brack in the water some brack in the aire,
 Some sank in the ground out of sight.
 Al this winter and spring each day firing,
 And throwing of granades very hott.
 The French did asaiel for to take Fort Dulle,
 Bot the divel a inch of it they gott.
 For half a years time this strong firing,
 At Fort Dull was several men slain.
 The French kept their ground bot durst not come in
 For al their pover and engine.
 Apriel the twentie one our rout being come
 Our magasin arms we gave in
 And from Bergenopeshom away we did come,
 And marched by the touck of the drum
 And five ligs of way we marcht that day,
 And at night we lay in a dorpe.
 In barns on straw by companies we lay,
 To our tents we were not come up.
 Apriel the twentie two we came through Breda,
 And came on our way to the Buss.
 We loadged on bovers some beir they alawe us, boers allow
 And each companie lay in a housse.
 Apriel the twentie three we took our jurney,
 That night we came to the Buss.
 And into the Briel they took us for bield, shelter
 And fire and straw alued us.
 And the nixt day in the Buss we did lie,
 And we were provided for our camp.
 New guns new swords new belts new bags,
 A baginet patrontash and belt, cartridge-pouch
 Our tents and tent poles our pins and our males, malls for driving
 In the Buss they did them al make. tent-pegs
 Nixt morning earlie we marched away,
 And our bagage al on our back
 On the twentie fift of Apriell we marched right weel
 And we came on near to the Grave.
 And stil with the train they brought us along,
 That march was six ligs and a half.
 Two ligs of way on the twentie sixt of May (? April)
 We marched near to the Maze side
 There we set tents down and guarded the train
 And their a wholle day we did bide.
 With boats and boards we bridged the Maze,
 The nixt morning marched the train
 On the twentie eight day ful six ligs of way,
 We marched ore we pitched again, ere
 On the twentie ninth day five ligs of way
 And our train did still with us go.

Venlo

To the toun of Finelo at night we dide go,
And their we got fire and straw.

Roeremonde

And on the thretieth day to Roariemount came we,
And rested their for a day.

A barell of beir to each company,
Our Officers did for us paye.

On the second of May we marched away,
And marched ful seven ligs long.

And on the bovers we got quarters,
And barnfulls of straw to ly one.

On the thrid day of May to Mastrick came we,
And to camp they marched our train.

And in Mastrick toun our regiment wan in,
Got an old housse to keep us from rain.

And on the fourth day to camp marched we,
Which was now a lig out of toun.

And with our armie that day joyned we,
And al our tents we set down.

From Bargaenpeshom since that we did come,
Which was the twentie one of Apriel.

And on the fourth of May we joyned the armie,
Which was fourtie ligs and a mille.

Into Mastrick camp our Cornall came up,
And revieued us in a morning soon.

He bade us belieue it and he would cause give it,
To each man a pair of new shoon.

He comanded indeed as we stod in need,
Our Captans for us should them buye.

We got them that year, and so did them wear,
And we thanked him heartilie.

Into this month of May the noble Mallberie,
At Masstrick convened an armie.

Of English and Daines Hanovers and Sweeds,
And marcht them to Germanie.

From Mastrick camp a comand was sent out,
And with them a deal of workmen.

And several dayes at Tonguere they laye,
And the ports they did undermine.

The ports of Tonguere they bleu up with power,
And back to our camp came again.

They call it a village and no more it is,
And so it is like to remaine.

On the third day of June we marched anone,
And before the tuelfth hour at noone

The French armie we bravely did see,
In haisste their tents they took down.

From Mastrick camp six ligs we marcht off,
And at night our tents we pitche.

And al that afternoon as we marcht alonge,
 Against us marched the Frenche.
 On the fourth of June we marched stil on,
 And dreue on towards the line.
 In noble rank and file we marched a while,
 To prosecute our designe.
 Our Captan Campbell he began for to call,
 Out our granadires in al haiste.
 For Tops Dragounes as bold as lyeones,
 Within the French line was passt.
 So al our granadires marcht up from our reires
 With the Lieutenants Tassie and Scott.
 With noble designe to take in the line,
 Bot yet in their way was a motte.
 The French cavalerie and granadires too,
 Was come to the passe of the line.
 And our cavalerie and our granadires too,
 Dreue up in the field before them
 And al our armie with courage on hie,
 Came within a lig of the line.
 About twelve acloak their was dropping shots,
 And one of our troupers was slain.
 An hour or two we rested al there,
 And our generall gave a comande,
 To every regiment in good file and rank,
 To wheele upon that same land.
 So in good file and rank we came a lig back,
 And then we pitched our camp.
 The nixt day we resst us nothing did molesst us,
 And the line we did not atacque.
 The sixth day of June we marched againe,
 And came to the ston wind mille.
 There we pitched tents and foradged our horsse,
 And three dayes time did lie stille,
 The ninth of June we marched againe,
 And came to the hunting housse.
 A lig from Tonguere and we camped there,
 Til the fivetenth day of the month.
 On the fivetenth of June we marched again,
 And our camp by Hassel was set.
 There we ressted a day without any fraye,
 Bot our camp ground was very weet.
 On the sevententh day three ligs marched we,
 And camped at a village called Berge.
 And at Berge camp our bread it grew scant,
 And I wot our monie not large.
 The twentie fifth of June we marched again,
 And camped at Mull and at Baal.

Mull was our right houff and Baal was our left,
 And there we camped a while.
 In our front the French lay so upon a day,
 With our foradgers they had a bouté.
 And throu our armie it came with a cry,
 And al our pickets turned out.
 Our picket marched out to a village on our froant,
 And returned that same very night.
 Our horsse and dragouns took sixtie prissoners,
 And the resst was put to the flight.

provost's

To our provoes garde was these prissoners had,
 And lay till they were releaved.
 Some who had disserted was in our camp hanged,
 Disserters was sadly misscheued.

In the front of our armie they set up a tree,
 Under it made a trench in the ground.
 And at the trench nook they draue in a stoupe,
 And the mare fast to it was bounde.
 A very strong fire was burning hard bye,
 And the provoes they drewe near.
 They strangeled and shot and in the fire put
 The bougerer and his gay mare.
 From Mull and Baal camp a comand was detached,
 A hundered men and some moe.
 And the nixt morning another comande,
 From our armie forth they did go.
 A thrid comand after them fast marched,
 And a regiment from Masstrick came.
 And from the toun of Luke came many men out,
 And above Tonguere did al joyne.
 Ful five thousand men together now joyne,
 Al fit for our noble designe.
 Major Generall Tronie he did us comande,
 And he dreue us on to the line.

perish

And we at the line for hunger like to tine,
 Lay the space of a long summers day.

The French cavalrie and their granadires too,
 Very bussie a coming were they.
 Two men on one horsse they came to the passe,
 And dreue them to an ambushe.
 Ay waiting the time when we wold go one,
 They were al ready at a pushe.
 And in the evening as the sun vent doun,
 We were brought off in good order.
 We came a lig back and lay at a stanck, . . . stagnant pool
 A lig and a half from that border.
 The comande from our armie marched to Howeye, Huy
 And the rest to their garissoune.
 And our granadires lay one night at Hassel,
 Then back to the camp made them boune.
 On the ninth day of July then al our armie,
 Came marching from Mull and Balle.
 And on that day seven ligs marched they,
 And camped at night by Hassele.
 There they ressted a day and the eleventh of July,
 Our armie came to Sant Troye. St. Tron
 And there they did rest because it was besst,
 And marched on the fourtenth day.
 On the fourtenth day they marched from Sant Troy,
 A lig above the ston winde mille.
 Near to the same ground the French lay then
 A few dayes there we lay stille.
 Our armie dreue out into the same camp,
 And fired a brave victorie.
 And with many hossaes we flang up our hatts,
 For our armie in Germanie.
 On the seventen of Jully we fired it bravely,
 For a field battel¹ was wone.
 Our General Mallberie and our English armie,
 Had made the French for to rune.
 On the eighten of Jully again marched we,
 And camped two ligs above Howie.
 The woods so wide and to the Maze side,
 Our camp lay al in a bowie.
 Major Generall Tronie took out a partie,
 And took them within the French line.
 They lay in the trenches belonged to the Frenches
 Al night untill the morninge.
 Earlie in the morning the Frenches came doun,
 Tronie he behoved to flee.
 The French perseued bot he had a rire garde,
 And saffellie he wan to Sant Troye.

Our armies granadires at even was prepared,
 Bot they were countermanded againe.
 In the morning earlie then al our armie,
 Doun tents and marched amaine.
 With courage on hie that day marched we,
 Till of that place we got sight.
 And al these trenches was filled with Frenches,
 So we came back againe night.
 Then they gather boats and bridged the Maze,
 And a trench was amaking likeways.
 The Generall Murray¹ was left on comande,
 And regiments for to keep that pass.
 They made up the trench and held off the French,
 And boldlie there did abide.
 The armie marched away these regiments did stay,
 And camped by the Maze side.
 The twentie thrid of Jully marched our armie,
 And crossed the Maze very soon.
 And throu the thick woods our passage was cutt,
 And we camped al night by a burne.
 Tuentie regiments from this was detashed,
 To go to the sidge of Namuire.
 The morrou at ten acloak our regiment marcht,
 To it: where we camped secure.
 We were put to work and a trench did make,
 And in haiste they brought up our train.
 We made batteries as soon as could be,
 And planted our guns on them.
 The French armie the camped right nie,
 On the other side of the toun.
 And on the rock heads they batteries hade,
 And fired many a canone.
 Two or three dayes we wrought on this wisse,
 And al night was bussie at work.
 And in to the toun fleue many a boame,
 Out over these walls so starke.
 The French batteries on our trenches plaide,
 And some of our men there was slain,
 And every night on our trenches did mounte,
 The number of four thousand men.
 No resst we got there, the truth to declare,
 Bot night and day was at work.
 Boombarding that toun which took fire within,
 And the air was filled with smoak.
 Some priessts they did say came to our armie,
 To plead in behalfe of the toun.

The Generall himsell he can it best tell,
 What was the contrabution.
 Our workmen one night was comanded on sight,
 For to bring off al our train.
 They brought it off right ore the day was light,
 And then yoacked horsse into them.
 Our regiments in trenches in spite of the Frenches,
 Came off as they were comande.
 With beating of drums and collors flourishing,
 And the French was firing right harde.
 Upon the second night after we came to it,
 A comand of granadires was detasht.
 And al their comanders and under Officers,
 And away to Dineant they have marcht,
 And when they came to it the French fled out,
 And haisted them over the Maze.
 And our granadires to Dineant wan in,
 And took up the French quarters.
 And over the water at an old ston cassele,
 The French there fired bold.
 With some pateraras they plaid very brisk,
 And boldly kepted that holde. petards
 A comande of our men over the water wane,
 In a boat they wan throu withall.
 And the forelorn hope so bravely marcht up,
 And advanced in on the casstle.
 A regiment of Spaniards in that casstel was,
 At the first they fired boldlie.
 And seeing again that they were al tane,
 In haiste they behoved to flee.
 From that bit casstel they were beat all,
 Our men was brought back to the toun
 And of tome barrels together tyed fasst, empty
 A bridge ore the Maze was made soon.
 Our armie and traine marched from Namuire,
 And pitched their camp on a plain.
 South east from Namuire three ligs they fure,
 And there a while did remaine. fared, went
 That day that we marcht four regiments detasht,
 With the Major Generall Tronie.

 Over that barell bridge our picket was led,
 Right late in an evening tide.
 And ay as we staped these barells they jouked,
 Bot fast together they bide.
 Then they got boats and made a bridge for us,
 And then some better we goe.
 Two or three dayes wrought on this wisse
 And defended ourselves from our foe.
 The casstel of Dinant is lying now slighted,
 The old broken rock now dung down.
 The French man himsele distroyed this casstell,
 Its a ruineous like thing in a toun.
 Our regiments and pairties and the granadires,
 Passt very weel up at Dineant.
 And our troupers passt out ful fiveten ligs,
 And from that contrabution was sent.
 Then in a morning soon our orders did come,
 To march and keep a strong rire.
 Then from Dineant we marched right stark,
 And the French began to appear.
 Near to our armie that day marched we,
 And camped there for a night.
 On the morrou earlie marched our armie,
 And we folloued at our flight.
 On the thrid of August our armie marcht this,
 And came back over the Maze.
 So upon our old ground that before we lay on,
 Our tents was pitched in rawes.
 On the nixt morning two ligs we marcht down,
 And camped not far from the line.
 And out from Leidge a comand came to us,
 And brought out with them a train.
 On the eleventh of August we marched down yet,
 Til within a lig of Sant Troye.
 To us there again new tideings did come,
 Of another brave victoreye.
 A great field fight² which was at Donaverte,
 Where our armies victorious were.

 Our Scots Officers they made their coursses,
 And many their horssees did run.
 So several dayes was spent with these playes
 And the foremost behoued to win.
 On the seventh of October we marched over,
 And set down our camp at Barchloe. Borchloen
 The night being weet and the night very clat
 With speed we provided for strae.
 Then wood we did fetch and made up our kiells,
 And lay there for a long time. coals
 Six regiments were detashed to go to a sidge,
 Some to the camp came for them.
 The twentie ninth of October we marched out heire,
 And came to the Sant Peters berge. the St. Pietersberg

 The moneth of November it was I remember,
 When our clyne armie marcht ine
 The twentie one of November our regiment together,
 And al our armie marcht offe.
 To the toun of Howie that year marched we,
 Got quarters on night at Fineffe.
 In that long village we got good quarters,
 On the maroue to Howie we came.
 About Sant Germans port our quarters we got,
 And lay there in open loane.
 Our beding and fire the bourgers gave there,
 Al winter we lay pretie thronge.
 Theres an old timber bridge over the river broad,
 It stands on five pillars of stone.
 And to the toun some times we walk in,
 And in to the market crosse.
 And a pleassant weel of very good water,
 Springing up at four or five quarters.

¹ The soldier seems to have misplaced the names of the two actions in Germany. The first was Schellenberg, near Donauwerth, and the second Blenheim or Hochstadt.

CHAP. V

The progress of the Lord Dalrimples regiment, with the Hollands
armie, in the year 1705.

Five regiments together lay in Howie al winter,
Til the outsetting of our armie.
We kept the forts and al the toun ports,
And some times marcht on pairtie.
In the spring of the year as sumer dreu near,
The French made strong at Namuire.
They made a new fort a very strong worke,
Where our armie had trenched before.
With brave counterscarffs and abundance of guns,
They call it now Sant Peters worke.
It is made so strong and with noble engine,
That Sanct Paull it dar not atacquē. St. Paul
At the toun of Namuire they gathered great pouer,
And a deal of forces brought there.
And some of them sware the boombarding of Namuire,
Howeye should repent it ful saire.
Our regiments pretent come to us in Lent,
To camp we behoved to goe.
In the toun of Howie rewieued were we,
And the resst of the regiments also.
And with half mounting they maide for us then,
For every man a pie coatt.
Red faced with yellow for to make a show,
Bot divell a bit lineing they got.
On the tuelfth day of May we marched from Howie,
And lay one night into Leidge.
From Luke to our camp then we marched up,
And we camped on Sant Peters berge.
Our English armie camped bye Fissie, Vise
Closse by the Maze water side.
Betwizt the Maze and Jarr we camped fair,
Upon the plain field did bide.
A bit of a trench was made about us,
On it was planted smal guns.
And from Masstrick came out bread and flesh,
And abundance of beire in tunns.
To Masstrick toun our Officers came,
With our recruits from Scotland.
A hundered men to our regiment then came,
And got caps was made in England.

Our coats on our backs our caps on our tops,
 That day we passt a reuieue.
 My Lord Dallrimple¹ that day came us till,
 enough In number we were men eneuie.
 On the front of our caps two ramping lyons,
 Standing by a rock to your thought.
 The FIRM motto you may read alsso,
 With diversse collours was wrought.
 A granade and gun the granadires signe,
 Weel wrought with both reed and blew.
 fusilier These fizanire caps we got on our tops,
 Like walliant Scotmen and true.
 On the front of the camp they dreu us al up,
 Our Officers stod to their posts.
 And al our Generalls came rideing alongs,
 Weel mounted upon their fine horsse.
 On the fivetenth of May al our English armie,
 Marcht of in the morning right soon.
 Over the Maze water a bridge was made clear,
 And they wan al over by noon.
 The Generall Mallberie with the English armie,
 From Foussie marcht in good order.
 And up the countrie they marched dayelie,
 And joyned with the Emperoure.
 Our litele armie yet still we did lie,
 And presentlie were set to work.
 Upon our lefft hand a strong trench we made,
 To gurade our selves in our camp.
 And every day we wrought bussielie,
 And a very strong trench did make.
 Full ten foot wide and fourtie foot deepe,
 And a litele compass we take.
 We made batteries for guns and then laid them on,
 So it was a right strong counterscarffe.
 And al the corners weel planted with guns,
 So we thought to hold the French offe.
 The Maze water we froanted theretill,
 And the Jarr was now in our rire.
 And Masstrick toun lay on our left hand,
 So they dreu our armie in there.
 All this moneth of May entrenched they laye,
 And all the long moneth of June.
 For meat and drink we need not want,
 Enough came out of the toun.
 And up the Maze watter from Holland came stor,

Of comodaties for our moneye.
 The butter and chisse the good speck and grisse, fat bacon
 And enough of genever and brandie.
 The suttrigs tobace and what we did laiike, sutlers
 Came to us in great plentie.
 And drye forage they gave to our horsse,
 In this camp for our securatie.
 And over the Maze water we did make a bridge,
 At the end of our bridge a trench.
 And al our train horsse grassed over the Maze,
 On them a strong garde for the French.
 Our English armie was now in Germanie,
 And in May the French did set out.
 Come over their line with trumpets sounding,
 And al their splendor and pompe.
 And over Luke land marched their train bande, Liège
 And on the twentie sixth day of Maye.
 The French hoast with brage and boast,
 Laid sidge to our old toun of Howie.
 Four regiments of men in Howie lay then,
 The Governour called Crumstrum.¹
 After the death of Tronie they had Labadie, M. Abbadie
 And Crumstrum he releaved him.
 The valliant Crumstrum gathered al in,
 Provisions that was in the toun.
 The brandie and beir to the castel they beare,
 And the magassines filled with provision.
 The French batteries in haiste they do make,
 And fired on that casstell.
 And many a boam they threu in upon them,
 And a strong sidge laid to their taill.
 Our valliant Crumstrum did boldly defende,
 And al his men he did poste.
 And from the castell our canon plaide sneell, sharply
 Fireing upon the French hoast.
 The valiant French did strongly entrenche,
 And hold them in on each side.
 Two regiments of men in Fort Joseph lay then,
 And perforce they behoved to abide.
 And into fort Sare was a regiment and mair,
 Who kepted it night and day.
 And al the French camp lay them round about,
 Ready to atacquie them were they.
 This sidge was strong and lassted right long,
 Till al these forts was dung down.

And of the casstel a great pairt fell,
 ground And the walls made flat with the grune.
 On the thretenth of July the French took it in,
 And al the forts of that place.
 That day Crumstrum and al his men,
 Behoved to come in their grace.
 All prissoners of war they were made there,
 Valenciennes And sent to the toun Walenshine.
 These four regiments in prisson lay long,
 The whole lenth of the campine.
 The French of Howie took possession anewe,
 And there they mounted the guard.
 mettlesome To keep the casstel with men in arms fell,
 And a few to keep the Picarde.
 The French from Howie came marching away,
 Liége And pitched their camp about Luke.
 And in Luke toun the French wan in soon,
 Bot yet the casstel held out.
 rows On each side of the Maze the French lay in raus,
 And from thence the squadrons came down,
 And some of our train horsse as they lay at grasse,
 Was tane by the French dragouns.
 In a morning earlie it happened to be,
 A guard of ours they surprissed.
 And in a thick misst ore our armie wisste,
 They took some horsse and the guard.
 And their grand leagure lay down towards Tonguere,
 haunts And Tonguere was one of their houffes.
 With good Tonguere beir their heads put a stire,
 No danger they dreaded from us.
 To Malbrough in haiste the tideings is passt,
 As they lay in the Emperours hoast.
 How we lay entrenched sorround by the French,
 How dear this war might us coast.
 Then Mallbrough in haiste with his armie marcht,
 So came down the countrie with speed.
 Two hundered ligs over waters on bridges,
 To help us in time of our need.
 And on the lasst of June within sight they came,
 Which made us al merie indeed.
 The French armie their coming did see,
 And dreue af their armie with speed.
 The English armie they rested a daye,
 And camped at the Maze side.
 On the second of July earlie marched they,
 In our trench no longer we bide.
 Straught towards the line we marched that time,
 Five ligs ore we pitched our camp.

Three ligs the nixt day before we did staye
 Not far from the line we encampe.
 Then of good horsse we were eightie squadrons,
 And a hundered betallions of foot.
 Our armies nou joyned together in one,
 Ready their foes for to hitte.
 Our Hollands armie was thousands fiftie,
 We camped on the left of the line.
 And twelve regiments was shortlie detashed
 To sidge Howie once againe.
 On the eighth of July our Hollands armie,
 Two ligs to Howie did march.
 On north side of the toun we set our camp down,
 And lay to cover our sidge.
 And over the Maze we did make a bridge,
 A litele beloue the toun.
 And on either side our sidgers did bide,
 And it was sidged al round.
 It was aledged that the French had engaged,
 To cut our bridge in the night.
 Our picket turned out and marched to it,
 To keep it til the morning greu light.
 And several days we wrought on this ways,
 Before that we wan the casstel.
 And they from within did bravely deffende,
 And at us shot many a ball.
 And our batteries was worthy to praisse,
 The fired with a great skille.
 The casstel wall was made now to fall,
 And made flat above the lime kell
 And the Picarde was sidged now hard,
 Til about twelve hours of the day.
 A pairtie of our men upon it came down,
 And the French began to array.
 And some of them fired and some of them fleed,
 And down to the casstel they ran.
 Our men them perseued as fast as they could,
 And the Picarde we now wan.
 On the hie batterie our canon played brissklie,
 And their guns were dismounted all.
 One of them got a stroak that made it to roack,
 And she came down over the wall.
 The nixt day at noon our canons were playing,
 And their senterie that stood on the wall
 Diserted his posst whatever it coast,
 Coming down the rock gun and all.
 The Governour heard tell thus hou it befelle,
 Surrendered the casstel right soon.

A parlie was beat and al was sillent,
 And so we wan Howie againe.
 The threeten of July it was we wan Howie,
 With the casstel and the Picarde
 And al the French there was made prissoners,
 And sent away with a garde.
 Our men was put in to keep this old toun,
 And the casstel they began to mend,
 Workmen fel to work and mounted it up,
 And wan some money to spend.
 At the sidge of Howie the French cavalrie,
 Came out on our English armie
 And in a dark night they came to their right,
 Which raissed the hue and the crye
 Our Scottish dragouns lyeing on the right wing,
 Very haistielie ran to their arms.
 The French cavalrie on the front of the armie,
 Put al the wholle hoast in allarme.
 And back to their line the French fled againe,
 And wan out of sight very soon.
 A pairtie very strong perseued after them,
 And bot litele harme was done.
 Our Hollands armie countermarched from Howie,
 On the seveneten of July it was.
 And al our bagage to the right did march,
 And again by the rire it did pass.
 Our regiment on comand marched with the train,
 That day to the English we joyne.
 With the big armie our Holland train laye,
 And we ressted there all afternoon.
 And on the evening our orders did come,
 To take down tents and to march.
 Of pouder and ball we were provided all,
 And expecting to meet with the French.
 So al our armie they marched brisklie,
 And the night it was pretie darke.
 In the morning earlie our General Mallberie,
 A garde of the French he did take.
 A lig above Sant Leu at the village Landoe,
 Fourscore French horsse he did take.
 And secured them no kind of warning,
 They could to their armie nou make.
 The water of Hessepe was bridged in haiste,
 And our cavallrie over did passe.
 And now the French line boys we have goten tan,
 And a joyfull tideings it was.
 On the aughten of July in the morning earlie,
 Our armie did take the French line,

the Scots Greys

Leeuwe Landen

taken

And al our regiment with valliant hearts,
 Came marching on with the train.
 And al our armie came on and dreu nigh,
 More bridges ore the water was made.
 Which made a great throng bot ere it was longe,
 We raillied on the other side.
 Brave Generall Overkirke our horsse he dreu up,
 In squadrons upon that hill side
 And the French cavallrie came on and dreu nigh,
 In battell array they did ride.
 And about ten acloack these gallants did yocke,
 And fired their carabines all.
 And without more words they pulled out swords,
 Rideing crosse like a brassen wall.
 At the first going on our Scotish dragouns,
 Ramcountered the Housshold of France.
 Sharp swords over crouns which made many wounds,
 Our squadrons did brissklike advance.
 Till two or three squadrons rode quitte throu the French
 And defended themselves pretie weel.
 And on the other side was wounds deep and wide,
 Till the French began for to reell.
 Some were killed some cutt some set upon foot,
 The French they behoved to flee.
 Our squadrons of horsse perseued the chasse,
 And made their foes for to die.
 The French foot and train was nou coming down,
 Bot in haiste they turned and fled.
 And left their canon standing on the ground,
 Back again they both ran and reed.
 And by tuelve acloack our armie wan upe,
 Right strong they stood in a rowe,
 And al our train was coming this time,
 As fastt as horsse could them drawe.
 Four regiments of foot from our armie detached,
 Was come throu the water of Hespe.
 They came to a village where the French keept garde,
 And they brunt the village in haiste.
 It was a great fray the French wan away,
 And fled up towards Namuire.
 And al our armie with courage on hie,
 Perseued two ligs and some more.
 Fiveten great guns that the French brought on,
 Our armie them did all catche.
 And eight of them had three barrells in one,¹
 Al made for keeping the passe.
 Many French was slain and many was tane,
 Our prissoners of war to be.

And many French horsse was catcht in the place,
 Bot the great part away did flee.
 Then to Tarliemount our armie marcht up,
 The French had left them their room.
 Thereabout for a night our tents we pitch
 And lay about that old toun.
 From Tarlimount to Loven our armie marcht on,
 On Jully the ninetenth day.
 And the French armie they gathered a wie,
 And boldly again did array.
 At Loven they bide by the watter side,
 And kepted that pass of the watter.
 And from our right hand the pairties vent doun,
 At the pass they had a wie blatter.
 The French made a trench and kepted the pass,
 And boldlie there did abide.
 So at Loven both the armis lay then,
 Full nine days long they did abide.
 Til the threeteth of Jully then did our armie,
 A stronge comande did detashe.
 Major Generall Slaniburgh he got the comande,
 That night for to take a passe.
 And on the evening al our armie right soon,
 Took doun tents and marched away
 A lig above Loven we marched that time,
 To take that pass we essaye.
 And by the break of day our canons did playe,
 And a bridge on this watter was made.
 Some regiments of frontires and granadires,
 In haiste over the water they gede.
 And al our armie now in battel arraye,
 Was readie now just to fall one.
 And on the other side the French had a garde,
 Bot they quicklie fled from it anone.
 Now the French armie came on and dreu nigh,
 And a very sure pace they do keep,
 And for our frontires and these granadires,
 On that side was wading right deep.
 And upon our right the English had bridged,
 And fired canon right thick.
 Our Generall Mallberie this engadgement did see
 And he said this work will not work.
 For al our brave horsse can get no passage,
 The marash in that place is so deep.
 Our bridgeing was smal could do nothing at all,
 The foot nothing could them keep.
 A counsell of war in haiste he called there,
 Which was by a stroak of a drum.

Then al chieff comanders and head officers,
 In haiste into him did come.
 Gentelmen did he say it pleasseth not me,
 To many men we may loosse.
 I think it amiss in such a place as this,
 No passage is heir for our horse.
 So call our men back and let us drau off,
 So in haiste they were called back.
 The French canon was now bringing doun,
 And they fired with many a crack.
 The rire of our armie marched foremost away,
 And slouly we marcht in platounes
 Til our armie got off with very litele looss,
 And brought of al our great guns.
 And then our coper boats in haiste we took off,
 As soon as our men was come in.
 The French canon they fired briske than,
 On our rire they made a great din.
 Then al our armie came marching away,
 And left the French at the pass.
 And all our men displeassed was than,
 And cursed that fogie marashe.
 And the Generall Slaniburgh he got an ill word,
 Some said he was now to blame.
 For he in that work had proved to slack,
 Which brought a disgrace to his name.¹
 From this pass of Loven we marched slou on,
 And our camp coller men they were sent.
 Above to a place where the water runs in grains,
 And the howff it was called Busswite.
 There we pitched camp the watter on our front,
 And lay there a fortnight and more.
 The harvest dreu near we gathered our beir,
 And the French lay straught as before,

¹ The following account of this incident is given in a contemporary letter from Major Cranstoun of the Cameronian regiment: 'Our people loitered and were in suspense as it were in laying the bridges, and indeed they say that where they did lay them the ground on the other side was impracticable for cavalry, being marescageux, whereas they might have found firm ground a very little further below that. However they were but laying the second bridge about break of day when the Duke himself came there, and being, as it is said, asked by Brigadier Ferguson, who commanded as Brigadier in that detachment under Oxenstiern, why we halted, and if we should not march on, the Duke made him answer, grasping his hand, "Hold your tongue, you know nothing; I have given my word to do nothing without consent." From that it is said his Grace rode and called the Dutch Generals together in council, and asked if they thought it proper to go on and push the thing.'—Hist. MSS. Com. Report. See Marlborough Despatches, vol. ii. pp. 194, 195.

We lay in this place til the fiften of Augusst,
 Then we marched with the morning light.
 We marched three ligs and then we did pitche,
 And camped only for a night.
 On the sixten day we marched earlie,
 And came to the place called Genappe.
 We set out our guards for fear of the French,
 And there a nights time we did camp.
 On the sevententh day we marched earlie,
 And came to the village Brandileue.
 And about noon we set our camp down,
 And the French who thought to perseue.
 Our pickets in haiste was now called out,
 And took with them pouder and ball.
 To the pass of Waterloo in haiste they did go,
 Nassau Audenburg comanded them all.
 Fiftie men of each regiment this time was sent,
 And brisklie out they did march.
 Til they came to a hedge at the mouth of the pass,
 Which was weel lined with the French.
 The French in ire upon them did fire,
 And our men they fired againe.
 With firing thick the hedge was brunt,
 And several men there is slain.
 The French fleed away no longer they staye,
 As fasst as ere they could rune.
 Our men they perseued and charged and fired,
 And so the passe we have wone.
 Some French lay dead some wounded did bleed,
 And some for fear fleed away.
 Our picket there so bravelie behaved,
 We gained the praisse that day.
 On the morou earlie then al our armie,
 We marched away to the right.
 The pass of Waterloo we did not go throu,
 Although we had gained it at night.
 Brave Nassau Audenburg wan honor with sword,
 And our Scots men he did comende.
 And two pistols to drink his good health,
 To our regiment he did sende.
 On this nineten day from Brandileu marched we,
 Throu a water at a paper mill.
 Throu a pass of the wood we marched right hott,
 And the French before us were still.
 Now all our armie for batel made ready,
 And in haste we formed in platonnes.
 Above Loven we were at this time,
 And the French was bringing doun guns,

We have them weel seen a water us betuen,
 And they lined the hedges ful weel.
 Within a lig of way we were the same day,
 And we made all ready for a reel.
 The bushes was long mad the French ground strong,
 And in haiste they began to entrench.
 So we stod in arms ready to engage,
 Within a short lig of the French.
 And when the evening came we got a comande,
 To pitch our tents on that ground.
 So we pitched our tents and al our quarter guards,
 And lay til the moroue after noon.
 On the twentie day of August from this we marcht,
 About twelve hours of the day.
 From the French we came off by wheeling about,
 And our banners al did displaye.
 And throu another pass back againe we march,
 To Walshwaver we came right.
 About two ligs of way that afternoon came we,
 And pitched our camp at night.
 At Walshwaver three dayes we lay stille,
 Then we marcht near to Gebleue.
 On the twentie thrid of August our camp was pitcht,
 At a place I never weel knowe.
 On the twentie sixth day we marched again,
 Two ligs and then we did pitche.
 At a place called Brewie and there we did lie,
 On the twentie ninth of August we march.
 On this twentie ninth day then al our armie,
 Got a very long march as I trow.
 Regiments on comand that day was detashed,
 To go to the sidge of Sant Lew.
 And al our armie marched on haistilie,
 To cover the sidge they did camp.
 Lieutenant Generall Didime the sidge did comande,
 And al things made ready for work.
 Between Sant Leu and Sant Troy the sidgers did lie,
 And about to the side of a loch.
 On the twentie one day of August then we,
 Camped that none could get fourth.
 With both foot and horsse we besidged it closse,
 And a train unto us did come.
 Our troupers on horsse did take down fassines,
 We foot fell to and brake grounde.
 The French in this toun was very few men,
 And many of them was falen sick.
 Bot abundance of canon they had now within
 And a very great strength they did keep.

The works of that toun they could not be won,
 By our armie for a long space.
 The counterscarfs and works is tedious to rehearse
 And the foussies sorounding that place
 And a strong citydail they might it keep weel
 With their amonition and canon.
 The Governour perchance was gone unto France
 And another was left in his room
 The French now within made very litle dinn
 Sometimes a canon they fire
 And some of their ball on the ground did fall
 And some of them sunk in the mire
 Now in a short space our men got a trench
 And with men our trenches we keep
 And al the night time we were busie working
 And the toun they durst not weel sleep
 Some dropping shots they fired out on us
 And some of our workmen was slain.
 We now ran our trench near hand the toun ports
 And our cover fired on them
 We made up batteries for morters and guns
 Our canons was likewayes tane down
 We planted our guns and morters for boams
 And their mussels was al to the toun.
 They might weel have shot if they had been fired
 Bot the toun prevented this fray
 The Governour came out to our General
 On September it was the fifth day
 Speak what ye think bot they took a drinke,
 And heartesomely held a carire
 And assigned that toun to the Stats of Holland
 And so made an end of that weir
 Our comands were sent in for to take the toun
 And boldly they entered the port
 And al these draubridges to them was laid down
 And they marched into the fort
 Eighten pice of canon was found their within
 And magasines pretie weel filled
 In Mallboroughs name this place was now tan
 And al that belonged their untill
 Of good wine and beir enough was found heir
 And magassines filled with bread
 Our armie now got it intending to keep it
 And a very strong place itt indeed
 A regiment of Spaineards was taken prisoners
 And some with us took pairtie
 And the Governour with us was secure
 Again to the French vent not he

After this time we fell a working
 Al the French line we dang down
 Al above Sant Leu to the ground we threw
 And made it both plain and sound.
 On the sixtenth of September it was I remember
 We marched away from Sant Leu
 Our regiment this time marched with the train
 Three ligs that night we marched now
 At a place called Carres al night we did rest
 And the nixt day we marched by Diest
 Our grand armie came now from Sant Leu
 And beneath that toun they have pitched
 On the morou earlie marched our armie
 And came to a place called Arescote
 That day pretie soon we came to our ground
 Within the line we pitched camp
 On the ninetenth of September we pitched there
 And presentlie we fell to work
 Of every regiment in haste they comande
 And promised to pay them for it
 Twentie four men of each regiment was called
 The first on comand their to be
 And was set to the line and did it undermine
 And we wrought it down manfullie
 A scilling a day to each man they pay
 For the working down of the line
 So we wrought on and dang down the line
 And camped their eight days time
 Then from Arescot our armie marched off
 And we marched to Heirindall
 And on a bare hathe our tents we did pitch
 Our water was not good at all
 And still on our front the French did encampe
 And many a partie sent out
 And severalls of our men the French did gefang
 Al our wholle camp round about
 For a long month time this ground we lay on
 And many of our men did fall sick
 The wather was cold and our tents groun old
 And we gathered sticks for to ricke
 On the twentie ninth of October we marched off
 And our Hollands armie had the rire
 And the French cavalrie came on and dreue nigh
 And put us a litele in a stire
 General Overkirke on foot he did lighte
 Our Major Generall Muraye also
 Comanding to march on for the French was acomane
 So our rire right quicklie did go

 The French armie was coming us nigh
 As fast as they could weel ride
 Some dropping shots they fired on us
 As the rire of our armie came up
 And we now again fired upon them
 At last our bridges we took up.
 Brunt them in a fire near by a big mire
 The French they could not win over
 Then in to that toun they rode very soon
 And presentlie catcht what was their

 The French armie they came presentlie
 And at Herindalle pitched I guesse
 Thes French cavalrie with courage on hie
 They rode back again into Diest
 Where some of our men was left on comand
 No warning they got in the least
 Til the French came on this very weak toun
 Which could not a moment hold out
 Our yellow dragouns was now in this toun
 And so were al tane without doubt
 Some comandments of foot and some men that was sick
 Together were al prisoners tane
 This litle misluck or eville conduct
 Was the worst of al our campine
 Now two days march our armie did pass
 And set to the sidge of Sanefleet
 My Lord Orknaye¹ this sidge did comande
 And our train took to it compleat
 Al our armie this time lay a cover to them
 And it was now right late of the year
 Betwixt that and Antwerpe lay now the French camp
 And so we were still in a stire.
 And every night then our picket stod in arms
 While the grand round came about
 In contempt of our foes our flags of defiance
 Was planted far out on our front
 Our sidgers at Sanefleet the sidge held compleat
 And shortlie they made up a trench

 And al winter we lay their
 Our caps was tan in to our Officers room
 For a skilling the pice and no mair
 And with our old hats, the streets we did passe
 In the best fashon that we can
 The brigadire Capolle the comand he had wholle
 For Crumstrum was not yet come.

CHAP. VI.

The progress of Cornall Borthwicks regiment to the battel of Ramellie which after fals to be the progress of Cornall John Heyburns regiment with the Hollands armie in the year 1706.

This winter lay we in the town of Howie
 And kepted guards on the ports
 In the castel and picards we likewayes kept garde
 Bot the French had demolished the forts.
 Crumstrum did now come his regiment with him
 Into France they had prissoners been
 Bot being releaved and of confinement eassed
 They got al out new mountinge,
 Our regiments Cornal my Lord Dalrimple,
 To prefferment changed his place
 And Cornal Borthwick¹ in his room he put
 Who was our Cornal a very short space

¹ See vol. ii. pp. 23 and 33. Lord Dalrymple, now Earl of Stair, exchanged with Colonel Borthwick, who had succeeded Major-General James Ferguson in command of the Cameronian Regiment. Lord Stair's discharge to Samuel Ferguson's heirs is among the Kinmundry papers.

In the spring of this year as sumer dreu near
 Cornall Borthwick came up to Howie Huy
 And with good intent took out the regiment
 And rewieued us al very truelie
 And with Cornal Borthwick came a good honest man
 The regiments minister for to be
 And Mr. George Andersoun¹ he hath to his name
 Whilles on Sunday he preaches a wie Sometimes a little
 The burgers of Howie had gathered up money
 This toun again to reparaie
 Both massons and men was set a working
 Five hundered by day and some mair
 Fort Joseph and Sairr they both do reparaie
 And strong casamades they did make
 Both Sunday and week day the workmen wrought ay
 And a pretie good wage they did take.
 Slote windews they made about thes casamades loopholes casemates
 For smal guns for to shot out
 Three slots in each one al of hewen ston
 The whole casamade al about
 The wholle work then, vent very fast one,
 Til that the sumer did come
 Then our camp set out we behowed to leave it
 And let al that working alone
 The castel of Howie was now mounted bravely
 And strongely built for defence
 And many a canon they had now theiron
 Before that we came from thence
 And before the castell they placed right snell
 A batterie of sixten guns
 On the strong rock the batterie was built
 To defend al futur envassions
 Our regiment this time got half mounting
 And harden for to lyn our coats harn or coarse linen
 Our old pie coats they turned them to us
 And again we got out our caps
 The States of Holland to Howie did come
 And rewieued al regiments was their
 They rewieued al the works and fortifications
 And allowed al the coast very faire
 On the tenth day of May our regiment took waye
 And left our old toun of Howie
 And at Sant Gills the first night we camp Sant Gil
 A lig out of Luke we did lie.
 And the nixt day we joyned our armie
 Who camped by the toun of Tonguere

And with Tonguere beir, our heads put astire
 For nine or ten days we lay their
 Our Generall Mallberie with the English armie
 Did joyñ us upon the same ground
 We behowed now to march with the French
 Else they to us would have come
 On the twentieth day of May marched our armie
 That day was abundance of rain
 And at the hunting house our camp we pitch
 No way we could bring up our train
 On the twentie second day againe marched we
 And came to the stone wind mill
 And the sponce at Sant Leu shot canon anewe
 For the French the countrey did fill
 On the twentie thrid day of this month of May
 In the year seven hundred and six
 When the Duke of Bovaire Villieroy and Declare
 Did draw up their hoast of the French
 In the morning earlie al the French armie
 Did march in a very good order
 They thought awenged to be on our English armie
 Who before had taken their border
 At the village Ramelie al the French armie
 They took up that ground very strong
 In battel araye their stil they did stay
 Their standarts on front stod alonge
 We English and Dutch was now on our march
 And we rested by a wind mille
 Where our camp collor men they came back againe
 And tideings of the French brought us till
 Then al our armie did bravely arraye
 And with good will we marcht one
 Our foot in four lines our horsse on our wings
 Over the old line we were anone
 Our horsse and dragouns marcht up in squadrons
 Our foot in bregades now did joyñ
 Now if we shal se the French make a plea
 Weel pay them of the same coyn
 A pairt of our train came now up amaine
 And quickly began for to play
 And when our great guns this battel began
 It was twelve hours of the day
 Our second canon ball a standart made fall
 And dang down some of our foes
 The French canon now played anone
 Bot we got no damage of those
 Our General Malberie this time was bussie
 In ordering of this battell

Earl of Clare

Ramillies

And Overquerke old with courage right bold
 The horsse comanded himselle
 The Duke of Argille¹ in time of battell
 Came galoping fast throu our hoast
 He was our brigadire without dread or fear
 He spaired no travell nor coast :
 The Housold of France their fame to advance
 On the right hand of their armie
 The best of our horsse set for the purpose
 Ramcountered them manfullie
 And when they did yock so thicke was the shot join
 The echoe redounded throu the aire
 This thicke fireing that was them betwene
 Lasted half an hour and some mair
 Two times our horsse was put to the worsse
 Which Mallberie weel did see
 To Overquerke he spake who could it not help
 Your horsse had need of suplie
 Four regiments of foot in haste was called up
 And set on the left of our horsse
 This was the thrid time the horsse was engadging
 And the French was put to the worsse
 The French coming down ready to fall on
 Our foot shot at them with ball
 The which did them grieve and sadly mischieve
 Many horse and men their did fall
 Mallberies steed this time was shot dead
 And another brought to him anone
 And a French ball did kill a Cornall
 Holding stirope til that he lap on²
 The French horsse was beat and sadly defeat
 And fled away in great fear
 Our horsse and dragounes al into squadrouns
 Persewed now close on their rire.
 On our right hand for battel did stand
 Our gallant horsse and dragouns
 The marash was bad no pasage they had
 And could not weel win at the louns
 Our Scottish dragouns got throu al at anes
 To show their vallour withall
 The French cavalerie did so multiplie
 Right like to have taken them all

¹ See vol. ii, pp. 5 n., 6-9, etc.

² While [Marlborough] was remounting, a cannon-ball struck off the head of Colonel Bingfield, his equerry, who held the stirrup. He, however, succeeded in escaping, and regained his own lines in safety, though severely bruised. His danger redoubled the energy of his troops, and in full gallop they returned with new spirit to the charge.—Coxe's Memoirs of Marlborough, ch. xlv.

Til some more of our horsse this bog did crose
 And relieved them in good speed
 The French was grieved and sadly mischieved
 Many wounded and strongly did bleed
 The center of our armie was now very busie
 And it was a very strong stoure
 A hot battel and many men fell
 It lasted I think a long hour
 Our bregade got comand to the left march on
 And the French fired now thick indeed
 Some was wounded and hurt as we marched up
 And some were shot instantlie dead
 And with good hearts and our screwed baginets
 We advanced on a deal of rye
 And al our bregade they proved pretie lads
 And the French they proved bot kie
 Like cowardlie tikes standing behind dikes
 They fired thick for a wie
 To the lenth of a pike we came to the dike
 And then a brisk fire gave we :
 Our bregade in platouns did fire their guns
 Then advanced close to the hedge
 The French saw no grace to look in our face
 Bot few durst stay to engadge
 From hedge to hedge, we beat of the dogs,
 And we fought it couragiuslie
 Within a short time, front line and rire line
 Of the French began for to flee
 About seven bregades of our pretie lads
 Beat of the French grand armie
 Our second and thrid line, was never brought on Bot stod and the battel did see
 Some of the French horsse, who were beat on the left
 Stod still behind their rire line
 They stil did stay, til their foot wan away
 And our horsse was coming on them
 A regiment of French was caled Picardies
 Whom our Scots Fizanires, had beat out
 From the center of our armie could not win away
 They were forced throu hedges therabout
 Cornal Borthwick did call, to his regiment all
 Gentle men to the right hand about
 And in our coming back, we losst Captan Clerk ¹
 Who before had proved right stout
 The French Picardies, their guns did discharge
 And ran back again throu the hedge
 Our Cornall Borthwick his regiment took back
 Thinking with them to engadge

Fusiliers

¹ This proves the fact conjectured in vol. ii. p. 33.

Into the same yeards our guns we discharge
 Upon these bold Picardies
 Who in a desperat sort shot many a shot
 And away to an other place flees
 Their our Captan Denune,¹ in his body got a wound,
 Which mortal proved to be
 Upon a mans back he was borne off
 And two dayes after did die
 Some French sones of whores thought to take our collers
 Our regiment to put to disgrace
 Our Captan Campbel for granadires did call
 Who fired just in their face
 Now Cornal Borthwick before his regiments
 Was marching down the hie way
 He was a strong man, with a sword in his hand
 He valliant proved that day
 Til a cowardlie tike set a gun throu the dike
 And shot our Cornall throu the head
 And in a minutes time, our Cornall fell down
 And on the ground he lay dead.
 Our Cornal Heybrun had now the comande
 And he led on the regiment
 Al the French armie was now fled away
 We for a persute was now bent
 When this battel began the French had the wind
 And to us it came now about
 So the French losst the day, and fast fled away
 That armie was put to the rout.
 At this fight of Ramelie, did many men die,
 Though it lasted bot a short space,
 And many a man lay dead on the ground
 As we marcht back throu the place
 Six men we now left and along they have brought
 The corps of Borthwick and Clerk
 And in a wagon, along they were draun
 No time now for buring wark burying
 The galant French horsse, stod yet in squadrons
 To let their foot win away
 Our horsse and dragounes advanced in squadrons
 And the French vent of in araye
 The Duke of Bovarie, rode of in dispaire
 Cursing this woefull mischance
 For al this voyage he got litele wage
 When he vent back into France
 And the Vilieroy, to flee was right coye unwilling
 Bot yet he might not weel bide
 He with the cavalrie, away now did flee
 As fast as they could weel ride

The Lord Declar was wounded right sore
 Perforce of the field he must flee
 He rode to Brisels toun and their he lay down
 And within three dayes he did die
 And his testment, to the King of France sent
 Which he told before he did die
 That Generalls without heads his armie on leads,
 The which makes a hartless armie.
 On this field of battel, of the French hoast fell
 Six thousand, seven hundred, and sixtie.
 And five thousand men were prisoners tane
 Who had not feet for to flee
 And sixtie five stan of their collors was tane
 Eleven standarts that wanted collors
 And fiftie four pice of canon was left on the ground
 And the number of six ketel drums
 And of wounded men they had four thousand
 Three hundred and twentie eight
 Far moe broke away and ran throu the countrey
 Then al that was slain at the fight
 Their books and beides, Roman Catholicks creeds
 That day they threu al to the divell
 Their books of religion, was al throun down
 And they cursed their sucesse so eville
 Of our Hollands armie, in battel did die
 Three thousand seventie and seven
 And of wounded men we had six thousand
 Nintie five on that night at even.
 Al of brave cavalrie that was slain at Ramelie
 Upon the Lords day at noon
 Who valiantlie did die like noble cavalrie
 Before that the battel was won
 Three Cornals of horsse their lives did losse
 And three was wounded also
 And four of their Majors was killed likeways
 Ten Captans six Lieutenants so.
 Four Cornets eight serjants left life in pledge
 And wounded was many moe
 Three Lieutenant Cornals and twentie four Captans
 And twentie seven Lieutenants also
 And twentie eight Cornets and eighteen Serjants
 Al of our horsse and dragounes.
 In field of battel was wounded they tell
 To their praise in war it redounds
 And of our foot bregades was slain of pretie lads
 A thousand seven hundred sixtie eight
 And of our wounded men in field we left then
 Two thousand eightie nine on this night stands

more

Three Cornalls of foot was killed dead at it
 And one Lieutenant Cornall
 Two Majors and nine Captans of foot
 And ten Lieutenants in all
 And ten Ensignes was killed likewayes
 And thretie Serjants also
 And of Officers wounded upon the same field
 Their number it will be far moe.
 First Cornalls three was wounded that day
 And three Lieutenant Cornalls
 And four of our Majors and fourtie three Captans
 And three and fiftie Lieutenants
 And fourtie eight Ensignes was wounded this time
 And Sixtie and seven Serjants
 Of our wounded men this number was tane
 And Officers of such like ranks
 From the fight of Ramelie, the Frenches did flee
 And our armie perseued in good order
 And at the watter of Hespe the Frenches left Hespan
 Two canon and heaps of their povder
 Their swords and guns and their amonitions
 The Frenches left on the field
 And towards Loven right fast are they run Louvain
 And their they got a short bield
 Our noble General from this field of battel
 Sent out a comande of our horsse
 Which took the French bagage, and al their train wagons
 Ore they the watter could crosse
 Bot when it grew late our armie did hault
 And we lay al night on our arms
 To the watter of Hespe our rire was come closse
 And we marcht in the morning betimes
 With our horsse and foot we stil them perseued
 And that day ore it was noon
 We came to Buswite and pitched our camp Bosauyt
 And our tents into us did come
 And a strong guard was heir on comand
 Sent away with the French that was tan
 And another comand with our own wounded
 Marcht away on the nixt morning
 To Mastrick toun the French was sent down
 And put into prisson most strong
 And to the toun of Luke they took our wounded Liége
 And hospitals now was al throng :
 The French armie, from Loven did flee
 And vent away in a fray
 They wanted amonition to hold out the toun
 And no courage they had for to stay

Louvain

The toun of Loven to our General did send
 Their keyes and the keeping of their toun
 Al that was his will they promist to fulfill
 And to it our armie marcht down
 And with our coper boats they made for us bridges
 That our armie might pass in three lines
 The twentie fift of May we marcht in good araye
 And Loven they set up our signes

Pays-bas

The Spanish speybae we entred now withae
 And pitched our camp on that night
 And above Loven, our camps was set down
 And the countrey was al in a fright
 News of our victorie ran throu the countrey
 And touns they durst not gainstand
 Mallberies name with honour and fame
 Was blazed abroad throu that land
 And above Loven our Cornall Heyburn
 Caused make a grave in our front
 And for the funerall was made ready all
 Fiftie men with guns for to shot
 And in the evening he caussed bury then
 Cornall Borthwick and Captain Clerk
 Both the one and the other, laid in the bed of honor
 And so ends now our Ramelie work.
 A comand of men was sent into Loven
 Detashed throu al our armie
 For to keep this toun we made provission
 And that colledge so seemlie to see
 The toun of Loven it is pretie long
 With a ston wall round about
 And they have a colledge both comely and large
 And a great many students in it
 On the twentie sixt of May from Loven marched we

Erussels

Towards Brissels toun we aproache
 The French that day from it fleed away
 And the bourgers set open their ports
 The bonie toun of Brissels which is a wealthy place
 They made weelcome our armie
 And touns great and smal came to our Generall
 Chused him their ruler to be

Vele(?)

And at Volea our lines now we drawe
 And our housse quarters was there
 And our oficers to the fair toun of Brissels
 Right frequently made their repaire
 Nixt morning earlie ore we marched away
 Orders throu our armie now came
 And in Mallberies name with his titles of fame
 Al along in our front they procleam

Since it hath pleased God, in his providence good
 To grant us the victorie
 And King Charles the thrid he is now procleamed
 The right King of Spain for to be
 This Spanish speybae it belongeth now all Payz-bas
 To his Catholick Majestie
 Therefor at large we do now discharge
 Al spoiling of this countrie marauding
 To prevent millroding or stealing or robing
 Under the pain of your death
 If this countrie ye wrong ye are for to hang
 And afterward reckon your skaith
 And now afterhind the bouers did come in peasants
 With enough of provission to sell
 The price of meat and drink was agreed on I think
 And for every thing money we tell
 A deal of proclamations came throu after this
 Of the prices of bread and of beir
 And for sixpence halfpennie each skilling get we
 And that is full seven pence heir
 On the twentie seventh of May we marched awaye
 And crossed beneath Brissels toun
 Crossed Brissels cannal with our armie all
 And at Granberg our camps we set down Grimbergen
 And there our armie long time did not tarie
 The next day we marched to Hossie Asche
 And then from that we marched towards Gante Ghent
 And fired our victorie
 The right of our camp lay now towards Gante
 And their we lay two three days
 And for our Ramelie we fired victorie
 And procleamed it with many hassaes. huzzas
 The great toun of Gante, was afrighted therat
 And rendered themselves very soon
 And with our armie, they acorde and agree,
 In Bridgees the like they have done. Bruges
 That strong place Dam they have done the same Damme
 With the English they acorde and agree
 And King Charles the thrid they al have proclamed
 And themselves his servants to be
 The noble Orkneye, rode from our armie
 And with him good horssmen anewe
 To the city Auntwerpe, that old antient work
 And made them likewayes to bowe
 And in three dayes time, they came back again
 And joynd with our armie.
 The French at Audenare, a litele camp had Oudenarde
 Bot shortlie awaye they did flee.

Dendermonde

The town of Audenare did likewise surrender
 As soon as the French fled away
 A command of our men, was now put therein
 In it all this summer they lay
 And a little camp, we had hard by it
 As soon as Doremount was sidgeing
 That castle strong held out very long
 At last to yield was obliged
 All this summer time Doremount was a sidgeing
 At it lay part of our army
 And with canons and mortars fired right brisk
 And they fired again bitterly
 This Doremount castle we do hear tell
 Is strongest in all the country
 With water all about theirs no wining to it
 Yet we conquered it with our army
 The weather proved dry and we wrought bussilie
 All the later end of the campaign
 And fresh commands with weapons in hands
 Made our foes to yield it through time
 Away from Gaunt we marched in rank
 And marched four ligs as they say

Deynze

We came near Deensie, and there camped we
 Our train through Gaunt came that day
 The Duke of Argille, was our brigadiere still
 And ordered yet in our brigade
 And with the General he passed up well
 And many Officers he preferred
 Our Major Hamelton he got his commission
 Our Lieutenant Cornal to be
 And for Captain Campbell, he brought out another
 And our regiments Major is he
 And three new Captains in Heybrons regiment
 Was placed after Ramelie
 The which is called, the Captain Cathcarte¹
 Lytster:¹ and young Ogilvie¹
 And Cornal Heybron gave to Tassie² commission
 His Captain Lieutenant to be
 And Lieutenant Heliburton³ he got the command
 Of the Captain Mouats⁴ company
 Our old adjutants was made new Lieutenants
 Most part through all our army
 And several cadets got adjutant commissions
 And all was advanced a degree.

Bot the poor sojor lads, in several bregades
 That engadged on the field Ramelie
 And threu down their wallats, with stockings and linens
 Some again them never did see
 And when the French host they had put to the worse
 And chased them of several wayes
 And had them perseued, with courage renewed
 In marching nine or ten dayes
 Some was left behind our walats to bring
 And foloued us far behinde
 Some wallats was losst whatever they cost
 And no redress we did find
 The toun of Namuir it was now secure
 After the fight of Ramelie
 A French governour was sent to Namuire
 And the whole comand ther took he
 The Spanish governour he losed the pouere
 And from the castel was put
 And moe fresh men they have put theirin
 This castel strong to hold out
 To the field Ramelie, came the French cavalrie
 Three dayes after the bettale
 And tuelle pice of canon they did their gefang take
 And al they could find in the field
 Some of our wounded men they took in with them
 Unto the strong toun of Namuire.
 Where good churgions, their wounds did pance attend to
 And great pains took for their cure
 Bot our armie had losse of many fine horsse
 Was lost in that batel so hott
 Which made our trowper men, on foot walk along
 Before new horsse could be got.
 The number of the horse which our armie did losse
 Was nine hundered and nintie killed
 And three hundered and fiftie was wounded
 And the horse hospitals they filled.
 And from Deensie camp, our armie marched off
 To a place called Wentergrim Wontergem
 And among thick hedges our tents we pitch
 And lay their a fortnights time
 The news came their of victorie mair
 Prince Eugine and the Duke of Savoye
 Had made the French armie from Turain to flee Turin
 To which was a valliant ploye affair
 The French huge host, with terrible boast
 Lay sidgeing this toun of Turain
 And with strong work, and a great many folk
 They thought this toun for to gain

This city Turain is the chieftest toun
 That is in al Savoyes land
 The Prince Eugine he with a pretie armie
 Beat them French away from the same.
 He raised the sidge and them did oblidge
 To flee out of the countrie
 And six weeks time he perseued after them
 And wan a great victorie
 Three Provinces of land he wan back again
 Into the great Duke of Savoye
 And the toun Turain was set at freedom
 Nothing can them now anoye
 graf The Curff Van Hanover comanded horsse their
 Which releaved al Millanie
 This tideings right soon to our armie came doun
 And we fired for it victorie
 At Wentergrim, our armie was lieing
 When thes tedings came to our armie
 later than Within a moneths time it was after hinde
 The fight we had at Ramelie.
 Heir our Major Campbell gave his company all
 To each man a felt matt of beir
 gelt, money And every feltmet cost nine pence suert guilt
 And we drank it although it was dear
 fiend Bot the fin a drop since his honor doeth aloue us
 And his good health we never nou drink
 We canot weel for shame beg drink every time
 For he riches and wratches we think
 And from this place our army did detashe
 Away for the sidge of Hostend as he gets rich
 he becomes niggardly
 Ostend
 Rousselaer Nixt morning we march and at Russelay we pitch
 And lay their a cover to them
 The General Overkirke comanded the sidgers
 That sidged Hostend upon land
 And al our armie lay now at Russelay
 To keep them from the French band
 And likeways by sea we had a nawie
 Of our English and Dutch men of war
 Who by apointement, came quickly about
 Before the French ships was aware roads Upon Hostend reed some French ships abade
 To keep the mouth of that water
 And when our fleet was come theirabout rattle The canons began for to blater
 By sea and by land we sidged Hostend
 And the French shipe their was tane
 And one noble shipe and very weel mounted
 Which they called the old Queen of Spain

These ships and men was al prisonners tane
 Upon the reed of Hostend
 Then upon the toun they fired canone
 And gave it a cruell gobende
 Our sidgers by land, was bussie sidgeing
 And trenching on the land side
 And strong bateries before it they raise
 Weel planted with canon, that tide
 Our fleet upon sea, fired so briskely
 The toun they were likely to burn
 Bot to prevent that losse a mesenger went fourth
 And they made the capitulation.
 The toun of Hostend was not able to defende
 Our armie by land and by sea
 The ships on the harbor toun and al together
 Was conquered by our armie
 And when it was won our men was put in
 To keep this toun of Hostend
 And the French ships our men got to manage
 And the toun we began for to mend
 And at Russelay our armie stil lay
 Until the same was al done
 And from Russelay marched our armie
 On the fourth day of July right soon
 So our armie all did crose that canalle
 Beloue the toun of Coutrige
 Then we pitcht camp, in good file and rank
 And our hous was in Erelbege
 From Coutrige and Erelbege, the French was fled
 And left that old open toun
 A comand of our men to Coutrige marcht in
 And tents on that wall set down
 And al our sick was put into Coutrige
 And our armie was lying near by
 Then to Pong the Pire we marched but fear
 On the tenth of this moneth of July
 The passe of Pong the Pire, we did strongly secure
 And our camp ran their al alonge
 And a strong comand we there detashed
 To go to the siege of Minone.
 This litele wie toun it was very strong
 And abundance of canon they had
 And every day ther canons did play
 And morters they fired like mad
 The old French king for his oun designe
 Had made this toun very strong
 And men and provission, enough was within
 And this sidge it lasted right long.

And for noble works half moons and counterscarfes
 And foussies about this wie toun
 And for draubridges and double barires
 None stronger this countrey al round
 So thretie regiments, from our armie was sent
 To sidge this toun of Minone
 Who did break ground and fell a trenching
 And so the work it vent one
 And many a night, the French saillied out
 And many a man was slain
 And many a time with strong fireing
 The French was beat back againe
 Till our batteries was made both long and broad
 And our canons was planted also
 And morters for boams and throuing of stones
 We had al set in a rowe
 And several nights great pairties of French
 Came down our sidge for to raise
 And some were slain and some were tane
 Some fled off several wayes
 Now al our armie advanced a wie
 About half of an English mile
 And to cover Minone moe regiments was sent
 And they marched in rank and file
 This sidge of Minone continued still one
 And when our batteries did lousse
 And our great guns, fired in platounes,
 Such work I think was no mousse
 For threten days time this strong fireing
 Continued at this sidge of Minone
 Which beat down that wall and made it to fall
 For spairance I think it got none
 This time our armie remoued a wie
 And we marched a lig to the right
 Our camp towards Minone, ran now al along,
 To defende our sidge in the night
 To make an ataque upon their out works
 The Duke of Argille took in hand.
 To lead on our granadires which post dangerous
 He was pleased to take for comand.
 To the port of that toun he marched before them
 In the heat of a strong ataque
 Where many a man, was wounded and slain
 And many was forced to draw back
 The French sprang mines and cruell engines
 Made many a man for to die
 Right like to Keyezersuerd, it may be compaired
 Yet it lasted bot a wie.

The French fled in, as our men marched one
 And so left al their out works
 Our granadires in file, with the Duke of Argille
 Advanced up close to the ports.
 Few days after that a parley was beat
 And the toun it was to surrender.
 And to march away, upon the nixt day
 Their governour that noble defender
 His men in arms with their screwed baginets¹
 Six canons two morters also
 With flourishing collours and beating of drums
 And so away they did go
 And some covered wagons they took too alongs
 And marched out in good order
 And went back to France their fame to advance
 And they losst a strong toun on their bordour
 Our armie of Minone did take nou possession
 And repaired the toun in al haste.
 And regiments of men the same to defende
 And a new Governour was placed
 And many hurt men, was wound at Minone,
 And brought down to Coutrige all
 And many sick men from the camp came in
 And put heir in an hospitall
 And from Coutrig to Gaunt they did them transport
 As our armie marched awaye
 And al our armie their about did lie
 Ful nine long weeks and a day.
 Of times on the front our armie foraged
 And near to the walls of Turneye
 Strong comands of our men the foradgers defende
 Some times they were put in a fray
 On the twelth of September our armie altogether
 Marched off from Pong the Pire
 Our General gave comand which was needful indeed
 To march and to keep a strong rire
 And over the Skeel, marched our armie all
 Two ligs: then we pitched our camp
 And thretie regiments from that was detached
 To march to the sidge of Atte
 And we Heybrons regiment to that sidge was sent
 So we marched out from our camp
 On the fiftenth of the month al them regiments
 And our train that night it dreu off
 On the morou earlie we marched awaye
 And at night our camp we set down

And rested a day, and the sidge ordered they
 And the thrid day we did it soroune
 And round about Atte we pitched our camp
 Without any noisse or dine
 And our big armie did lie for a covere
 And so this sidge did begine
 The twentie day of this month a comand vent forth
 To break ground late on that even
 And every regiment had orders to make
 The number of nine hundered fassines
 And some of our men, to Atte was sent down
 When that it grew dark in the night
 And of sheep and cattel they catched all
 And againe came off at the flight
 The French within, did hear a great dine
 And fast to the walls they did croude
 To save that toun, together they came
 That allarme it was very loude
 A comand of our men and a cover with them
 Broke ground on the other side
 And themselves did entrench before it was light
 Full busie they wrought that tide
 Soon the nixt morning the French hath them seen
 And they fired now canon anone
 Both day and night we stile did entrenche
 And this sidge went on very fast
 We made batteries, for canons and morters
 Which was both long and large
 And our great batterie for guns one and thretie
 And for that work we got wage
 The best of our train we planted theiron
 Twentie one guns we had on another
 And twelve and ten al good canone
 They were al made ready together
 On the twentie fite of September, they began to fire
 And so continued still one
 With great canon ball to beat down that wall
 Which wall proved to be strong.
 The French within, did briskely defende
 And fired their canon right bold
 And al their collors on the wall did florishe
 And that toun they manfullie hold
 The General Overkirke had comand of our work
 And the sidgeing of this strong toun
 And three foot regiments was still in the trenches
 And releaved by the whole armie round
 And on that night our regiment was in trenches
 We fired a brave victorie

All round about that toun we fired than
 For a victorie was won at sea ¹
 And the nixt day in the trenches we lay
 And our Officers bought us the brandie
 We kept the trenches and held in the Frenches
 And beat them back when they saillie
 Right near to that toun our trenches did run
 And in upon their out works
 And through their piliesods, we wrought several roads
 And their set our gabiones
 The French this time was bussie fireing
 No rest they got night nor day
 This was hot work and a dangerouse poste
 Many of our good men they did slay
 And one outsconce we took now perforce
 And the French to the toun did flee
 And out from the toun they fired againe
 And held it out right manfullie
 On the first of October, near the evening border,
 On the wall a parlie they beat
 And our Generall, he came at their call
 With that Governour for to treat
 Who offert to surrender the toun altogether,
 Providing they had leave for to go
 With collours florishing and drums abeating
 This our Generall refused to do
 Now in a short space six of our great boams
 And several great shoures of granades
 Fired in on the toun which made a great dine
 And destroyed many of the French lads
 Our Generall did comand six regiments of ours
 To make al ready for a storme
 And to come to the trenches nixt day afternoon
 Which we were al willing to performe
 About ten acloak we were ready to march
 Bot the French did surrender the toun
 A comande of our men to Atte marched in
 And the French their arms threu down
 The second of October, they did it surrender,
 Al prisoners of war they were made
 And on the nixt day they were sent awaye
 Without any longer abade

¹ The reference is probably to the capture of Alicant held for the French. After the place had been hotly bombarded by a division of ships under Sir George Byng, it was stormed on July 28th, on one side by the troops, and on the other by the seamen of the fleet. The citadel held out until August 24th.

Ath Our armie of Atte now possession they got
 And this toun they began to repaire
 A deal of workmen thes walls for to mend
 And the work was al payt very fear.
 Awaye from Atte we removed a bite
 Til on the threeten of October
 Our armie then marcht and with them we joynd
 And to Camerie we marched together
 Cambrai On Camerone plain we camped that time
 Cambron And set out guards on our front
 Mons The French about Monse did us mickle donse blows, damage They in pairties were still coming out
 A partie of the French did ataquie on our front
 On our smal out guard in the night
 Our smal guard of men, was al prisoners tane
 And far moe was put in a fright
 And at our armie it was raissed the cry
 The picket the picket the picket
 And al our armie got up haistilie
 From many a sundry wicket
 And when it was day and the alarme awaye
 Our pickets was al turned in
 And a strong comande and some partizans
 Marcht out on the morou at even
 And marcht towards Monse upon a litel sconsie
 And their an alarme did make
 The French fired canon and smal shot at them
 And their heels they behoved to take
 An officer and some men that night was slain
 And the rest came marching home
 The French about Monse they heard al this
 And got now a fearful alarme.
 On the twentie sixt day marched our armie
 We marched of from Camerie plain
 And we had now prepared a strong rire guard
 And a comand along with our train
 And on our coper boats the water we cross
 And so came marching along
 The French armie now acoming we see
 That day they could do us no wrong
 Enghien Half way to Anguine our armie did come
 And their we pitched our camp
 And lay on that ground for a fortnights time
 And then our camp did break up
 Courtrai The General Muray was made gouvernour of Cutrie
 And that toun they did now repaire
 And sixteen regiments to Coutrig was sent
 To cover the workmen was there

The Duke of Argille was preffered this year
 A Major Generall to be
 With honor and fame atending his name
 He rules in the English armie
 The Lord John Haye¹ this year he did die
 And left our old Scottish dragounes
 And our Cornall Heybron his coach brought home
 Which coast him above twentie crouns
 The Lord Dalrimple that place came till
 And the Scottish dragouns he comands
 And Sir James Campbell² their Lieutenant Cornall
 His honor in prefferment now stands
 Before our armie marcht, thes detachments
 Marcht of in a morning right soon
 And now our train was called back again
 Our armie lay stil two dayes time
 On the sixt of November our camp brake up
 And marcht the countrey now down
 And at Sant Quentine Linox that night we pitcht Lennick
 The nixt night beloue Brissels toun
 Our badgage in our gate that night cast us late
 Many regiments wan not to the ground
 Bot in a cold night we lay without tents
 The nixt day that camp was set down
 Two or three days, we lay in that place,
 Our camp ran along the water side
 Our Major John Campbell and some Officers moe
 For Scotland they went of that tide
 And from Brissels toun we came marching down
 And we were yet a pretie armie
 And to garisoun touns they daily marcht in
 And so we grew less a degree
 That night we came on and throu Loven toun Louvain
 And I wot we marched right latte
 And in Loven park our camp was now set
 And for supper it was very blatte
 And the nixt morning we came marching one Tirlemont
 And camped beside Tarliemount
 And the nixt day we marched on brisklie
 And at Sant Troye our camp we set. St. Trond
 And at Sant Troye we rested a daye
 And then we broke off pretie soon

Venlo To the toun of Finelo we were now to goe
 This year for our garissoune
 And at Dindick we camped at night
 Hasselt A lig from the toun of Hassel
 To a village called Harse the nixt day we march
 And camped beside an old castel
 And the nixt day we marched earlie
 And came down to the Maze watter
 Maaseyck And beneath Maziick we marched a lig
 To Highoue: where they did us flater
 Beside that village, our tents we pitche
 And lay in a cold froastie night
 Before it was day we brunt al our strae
 And marched when it grew light
 Roggele To a village called Rugline that night we came
 And got quarters on these bouers
 And on the nixt morning we marched againe
 From Finello we were now four houres
 To the toun of Finello marcht in regiments two
 And likewayes two squadrons of horsse
 And with a flying bridge they took us into it
 Aud so the Maze water we crosse
 It was the eighteen day of the moneth of November
 When our regiment marched into Finello
 And that same very night although it was latte
 We releaved al their guards also
 A regiment marched out which had a long route
 Bruges They were for to march to Bridgees
 Which was a long way in such a short day
 Over waters over heaths over ridges
 Our regiment got quarters on Finelo burgers
 And beding we had therein free
 And amonition coals to warm our soles
 Was aloued us for moneths three
 On al that toun ports we mounted our guards
 And a main guard we had also
 And over the Maze water they have a big sconce
 Which belongs to this toun of Finello
 Amonition and canon they have in the same
 For to defende their wie toun
 A very pretie work, it is round about
 And within is a great deal of roome
 A sconce Governour, and likewayes a Major
 Stayes in it al dayes of the year
 And in it they keep, a great deal of sheep
 And sudlers their to sell beir sutlers To the toun of Finelo the come and they go
 They have of the toun good rents

And the Governour is an old popish bouer,
 The Major for the Protestants
 And al the toun do plead for religion
 The poppish have rulled ther long
 And the Protestants had bot a wie church
 Bot lately they are groun strong.
 The popish made bond, for they were comande,
 The great church for to give over
 Against such a day, of the moneth of May,
 Nixt to come without any hover
 And the sponce Governour, was to loss that pouer,
 And the Major advanced to that place
 The noble States of Holland do chieffie comande
 And promotes the Protestant race
 This Finelo did belong, to the Spanish Guilderland,
 And the French had it in possession
 Til our Holands armie with courage on high
 Did win it and keeps the sucesion.
 The King of Prushea that Protestant true
 Doth cleam a right to that toun
 Bot the States of Holland both powerful and strong
 Doth keep it in spite of his croun

CHAP. VII

The progress of the Cornall Heyburns regiment, with the Holland Armie in the year 1707.

A Dutch brigadire and a wantont caviliere
 Comanded in the toun of Finelo Venlo
 And in the winter time he stayed not at home
 Bot away from it he did go
 Our Cornal Heybroun comanded that toun
 And the keys had in keeping indeed
 And when the ports was sticked he lay and slept shut
 And the keyes al hard by his head
 And Sightermans regiment, from Finelo they marcht
 Right soon in the spring of the year
 Cornal Heyburns regiment the toun did keep
 No rogues the toun durst come near
 And six companies did mount on the guards
 And six companies did exercise
 And we were ay fain when it blatered on a rain
 For we sat in the house at our easse
 And al our new mounting was busie a making
 Our breche our coats and our vest

And stockings and hatts in Finelo we got
 We behoved to buy al the rest
 First a General came and revieued us al
 Nixt the States of Holland did come
 And fiftie men we mounted on them
 And releaved with collors and drum
 And two three dayes ther stayed the States
 And revieued and mustered us all
 And gave us a rout to the camp to march out
 Bot we stayed yet a week withall
 To Finelo toun when we first came in
 They aloued us a good preaching housse
 On Sundayes afternoon Mr. George Andersoun
 He alwayes preached to us
 And after Ramelic we had a fast day
 And preaching throu al our armie
 And with thanksgiveing and prayer condigne
 To God : who made our foes flee :
 Al true Protestants, to God they gave thanks
 For our noble and great victorie
 And prayed likewayes for our armies sucesse
 And our General the great Mallberie
 And to our regiment was given catechissems
 After the fight of Ramelic
 From the city Rotterdam, to Flanders they came Sent from Cornall Borthwicks leady
 Our regiment took march from the toun of Finelo
 On the seventen day of Apriell
 And over with the bridge we were al convoyed
 And we marcht with good rank and file
 Ther on that green it might weel be seen
 No man was druken that day
 To win some tuns of beir, our Cornal promist there
 We came al then so sober away
 Four ligs we did march and came to a dorpe
 Called Neert : and quartered al night
 And on the bouers we got good quarters
 And marched nixt morning on sight
 Ful three ligs of way we came to Strimproye
 And rested their for a day
 The twentie day of the month we again did march
 At a dorpe called Noveen we lay
 We marched again Apriell the twentie aue
 And at night to a dorpe we did come
 Which was called Soundoun : where we got room
 And bear to our supper got some.
 On the twentie second day we marched earlie
 And came to a village called Speelbeik village

Nederweert

Stamproij

Zonouen

Where we rested a day without any fray
 And our diet we needed not seek
 On the twentieth fourth day we marched earlie
 And marched five ligs of way
 And came to a dorpe and when we were quartert
 The bouers were al fled away
 On the twentieth fifth day, two ligs marcht we
 And came near the town of Loven
 In villages near theirby, that night we did lie,
 And the next day we marched againe
 On the twentieth sixth day throu Loven marched we
 And three ligs farther we came
 And came to Cranum, where we did cantyne
 And lay theirabout a long time
 And at Weesbeck our Cornall was quartert
 And there we kept a garde
 A bit of that kirk for it was aloued,
 And our arms lay in that kirk yeard
 And from Cranum we were removed then
 Our troupers to that village did come
 In villages theirabout, a while we quartert
 And al night we lay in a barn
 And by companies we lay in these barns
 Al day with the bouers we cantyne
 The bread and the beer was not very dear
 The bouers for our money was kind.
 A deal of our armie, therabout did lie
 Betuen Brissels and the town of Loven
 For both foot and horse was lying in dorps
 And so a whilles time we did spend
 And about Brissels wood we had many guards
 And throu on the other side
 We had a wie sconce, to hold of the French
 A strong guard at it did bide
 In middle of that wood we had a strong guard
 At a Capescines cloyster was their
 And still throu that wood in pairties we went
 And dayely we did so repaire
 And above the door head of that cloyster indeed
 It was written upon a fine ston
 In good Latine this sentance divine
 Which ye may thus read now anone
 For the Lord shal comforte Zion
 Comforte al her waste places shal He
 And like to Eden with pleasnt planting
 He shal make her wilderness be
 And her deserts and solitary pairts
 Like the garden of the Lord shal be

Their joy and gladness our tongues shal expresse
 Thanksgiveing and voice of melodie
 And al these gardens and pleasant orchards
 Wherein they walk and make motion
 Is filled with images of the holy fathers
 To minde them of their devotion
 And at every corner, they have our Saviour
 Hanging crusified on the Cross chapel And in the Capell they have Peter and Paul
 Mary and the Babe beside those Whom I shal not name nor yet spend my time
 Very long : in this garden so fair
 In thes pleasant walks and comodious rests
 With floures and herbs very rare
 cantonments To us in cantyne, our Officers did come
 With our recruits from Scotland
 And al their mounting was given to them
 And every thing ready to hand
 Near a hundered men to our regiment then came
 And we were al merie and glad
 We were caled to arms and they among us
 And the Articeles of War was read
 And our Cornal, to Brissels did send
 And bought us six tuns of beer
 And twelve companies got half a tun a pice
 We drink we dance we carire
 On the fifteenth of May now al our armie
 Did march : and pitched our camp
 Not far from Brissels toun our camp was set doun
 Inerbeck (?) Our houf was called Inerlocke
 Our armie there did gather together
 And four or five dayes we did lie
 Notre Dame Then our armie all marched to Noterdam Hall
 Halle On the twentie first of the moneth of May.
 And Noterdam hall was Overkirks quarters
 Halbeck And in Halbeck lay Mallberie
 And our regiment to Halbeck was sent
 And there for a cover lay we
 And the thrid day that we there did lie
 It hapened on that forenoon
 General That Cardugals cock, like a drunken sot
 Cadogan's cook That village most pairt did burn.
 blaze For the first house did burn in a glose
 And the second kendeled ful soon
 And a brave kirk that stod hard by it
 Did burn til it was al done.
 So four good houses was brunt al to ashes
 Yet Mallberies quarters was saffe

And regiments al about did take down tents
 That fire with the wind so drave
 On the twentie sixt of May marched our armie
 And our regiment did march with the train
 And up to Swinie we advanced that day Soignies
 And several of the French was slain
 When the first of our armie advanced to Swinie
 They meet with some of the French horse
 And above thretie men, was prisoners tane
 And the rest fled back toward Monse
 And our regiment was comandt to the left
 On the left of the horse we did stand
 A regiment of a bregade on the wing camped
 Our regiment got it first for comand.
 The French armie did march away shortlie
 And towards Luke land are they gone
 And our armie turned back from Swinie
 And in haste we marched back again
 On the twentie eight of May earlie marcht we
 And camped at Noterdame hall Halle
 On the twentie nint day by Brissels marcht we
 And at Diggum now camped we all Dichem
 And at Diggum camp, a day we did rest
 And then we marcht to Loven Louvain
 The thretie first night of May at Loven camp we
 And made ready for marching again
 Our Major Campbell this night he did call
 For brandie to his own companie
 And Duncan MacKnab with a budiel ons back bundle (?)
 Fetcht it from the right of our armie
 The first of June we marched right soon
 Like two armies we marched that day
 And over Loven water we wan altogether
 And advanced then in battel araye
 At Melder and Hogar was our hous quarters Meldert Hougaerds
 And in Melder did Malberie lie
 And in Hogar did Overkirke quartere
 It was near the left of our armie
 The Prince Eugine he with the Emperours armie
 Did advance on the city Talloun Toulon
 And with great engine and an armie right fine
 Laid sidge into that strong toun.
 And still our armie did hear of the neus
 And long we lay still in one place.
 The Duke of Wandum the French did comand, Vendome
 And they lay in the same casse.
 For a cover to Namuire they lay at Geblewe, Gemblourg
 And kepted their ground very weel.

Meldert Hougaerde

And at Melder and Hogare our armie lay then
And for foradge right offt out did reell.

hussars

In that countrie round good foradge was found
On our right on our left on our rire.
And our armies hoesaes was still dealing blows
And ready to catch a French mare.

The French on our front they passed weel up,
And caught some of our horsse.

Bot never a battell there was al that year,
Bot the armies camped most crosse.

Toulon

Til the neus came againe from the Prince Eugine
Who lay at the sidge of Talloun.

That on a certain day the French with an armie
Came to raise the sidge of the toun

And the Emperours armie did beat them away,
And a cruell slaughter was made

Bot the Prince Eugine at the sidge did lie still
And our armie at Hogar yet bade.

And in Hogare on a day calm and clear,
A housse in a fire was set.

Was the Stats quarters it burnt al in ashes
Bot the rest no harm did get.

At Mallberies quarters an allarme was likeways,
And some conspirassie found out.

Which made the Generall for horssemen to call,
Which guarded the housse round about.

Then news came againe from the Prince Eugine,
Who was beat from the sidge of Talloun.

That countrie did gather with the French together,
And beat them away from the toun.

So he was oblidged for to leave the sidge,
And draw off his armie from that.

The toun was so strong and with many canon,
And a great relieffe it then gat

Its called a seaport toun rich in every thing,
And the strength of all the countrie.

The French canon doth cast in that toun,
Off the Kingdom of France its the keye.

On the tenth of August our ordours came fast
From Melder and Hogare to march.

So at three afternoon we took our tents doun,
And our armie marched from thence.

All towards the right our armie did march,
And they came throu a very strong passe.

Wavre

Beneath Walshwaver al night we marcht over,
The French armie got the same sausse

In midele of the night the French upon sight,
Took doun their tents in all haiste.

And marched away all in a great fraye,
 The divell they thought had them chaste. chased
 Then to Genape our armie marcht up,
 And camped in a circle round.
 The nixt day at noon we marched againe
 And towards Novell we were bound. Nivelles
 The twelvth of the month at Novell we campt,
 And the French was there in the passe.
 And our granadires that night was called out,
 And al to expelle them from thence.
 Our granadires the nixt day cleared the way,
 And the French from the passe did flee.
 And all our armie for battell was ready,
 Yet still at Novell taried we.
 On the other side of that wood so wide,
 This time was the French armie.
 The passe us betwen our armie cleared soon,
 The French away still did flee.
 On the fourten of August our armie did march
 And the French away they were fled.
 It rained al that day and we had a deep way
 And to Swinie our lines they were led. Solgnaies
 And at Swinie our armie did lie,
 Till the last day of August was come.
 And on Cameron plain the French armie then Cambron
 Did encampe on abundance of roome.
 All down towards Atte then lay the French camp, Ath
 And the toun al the time was closed up
 Our armie from Swinie was still making way
 Till the passage to Atte it was cutt.
 The French this time was still in alarme,
 And their picket turned out in al haste
 For comands of our men was bussie working,
 Throu these hedges some passages traiste.
 And al our bagage got comand for to march,
 Back to Cassey to Notterdam the hall. Cauchie Halle
 So they marched away August the thretie day,
 No bagage stayed with us at all.
 August thretie one our armie marcht on,
 And towards Atte we advance.
 The French armie took down tents haistilie,
 And away they did march towards France.
 Our armie at Atte now pitched their camp,
 And lay till the third of September.
 There the Generall Malberie with his cavalrie,
 Wieued all the French hoast I remember,
 On the third of September we marched away,
 And left Atte at full libertie.

Our armies designe was thought to be then,
 To secure our old toun Coutrie.
 And at Gruniar we had our houss quarters,
 And camped there only one night.
 Then towards Audinare the next day we fare,
 Throu thick woods our passage was dight.
 The French pairties was hid among trees,
 And caughted straglers that day.
 And our houss quarters was at Audenare,
 And our bagage came another way.
 Till over the Skaille marcht our armie all,
 On the fifth of September I troue.
 And the front line took a very long time,
 Before Audinare they wan throue.
 Above Audinare a lig we marcht there,
 And then our camp was set down.
 And there we lay and rested one day.
 And the passage to Elleshine made sound.
 On the seventh of September our armie altogether,
 Marcht on to the place called Elleshine
 And there we did camp a long moneths time,
 In that place we were weell to be seen.
 And then we did go for wood and for stroe,
 And hutted our selves in that campe.
 The passe of Pong the Peire we keepit clear,
 And the French us durst not ataque.
 Til the eight of October the armie lay there,
 And foradged on front and on reire
 And a strong comand behoved to be sent,
 When they foradged beyound Pong the Peire,
 There the Generall gave comand over all,
 For milroding the roots of the ground.
 Whole regiments together and with them a cover,
 Gathered in all greens could be found.
 Then Coutrige and Minons garissounes marched in,
 On the twelfth of October it was.
 And al our armie marched off on that day,
 And Audenare was their houss quarters.
 And on the threeten they marched againe,
 Half way betwixt that and Hulse.
 Where they lay a day then marched away,
 The fourten of October it now was.
 Upon the fiveten they marched all bedeen,
 And beyond Hullse camped againe.
 Where they did hutte and lay a long month,
 And there they ended the campine.
 Bot Coutrige toun and the garissoune of Minone
 Marcht in on the twelvth of October.

To keep these frontiers for fear of the French,
 Til all the campine it was over.
 The Generall Murray was Governour in Coutrie,
 And kept that toun in good ordoure.
 Ten regiments of foot he took into it
 It lay then on the French bordoure.
 Some squadrons of horse in Coutrige lay close
 And mounted the guard in Minone,
 And two days time on guard at Minone,
 They were til winter was gone
 And at Erelebege was also a garde,
 Kept in that village all year.
 And in a litle sconse made for the purpose,
 We lay all night without fear.
 A comand was sent down to Ceeseffiellgaunt,
 From thence to bring up a traine.
 Amonition and canon in boats was brought up,
 And a deall of handlangers with them.
 And round Coutrige toun was batteries of canon,
 Weel planted round on the wall.
 And all their magassines was pretie weel filled,
 With al kinds of powder and ball.
 And round all the toun they fell a working,
 And making of forts in the ground.
 And these Inginires did hire our sojors.
 And all the workmen could be found.
 So some of our men was still a working,
 And others did mount on the guards.
 We lay in barroks and pretie chambers,
 Bot they allowed to us no yeards
 Bot magassine beds with strae and cloathes,
 Our barroks was furnished weell.
 With banks and planks and tables likeways,
 By order to us they dealle.
 Our coalls for to burn from Neucassell came,
 And candle was allowed also.
 One bread a week we behoved to take,
 The Generall did order it so.

[CHAP. VIII.]

A brief account of the War in the year One thousand
 Seven Hundered and Eight.

Now of the seven hundered and eight,
 My purpose is for to relate.
 The Pope and French King did plot and combine
 All Protesstants for to defeatte.

And for that designe they plot and combine
 A popish King to enthrone.
 In the Isle Britan to make an invasson,
 They have condeshended upon.
 King James the third their own true blood,
 A sword they put in his hand.
 With Frenchmen aneue and Irish men true,
 That hosst he got to comande
 The shiping right good they did him provide,
 And with him good Generalls three.
 Then that Navie of French men of war,
 At Dunkirk made ready for sea.
 The Prince of Walles¹ to conquer these Isles,
 Set out with courage most stout.
 And all his Navie to guard him at sea,
 Till England they compast about
 The Churchmen in France their joy to advance,
 Was nou in devotion most fervant.
 With humble masses and double adresses,
 Processions for the purpose subservant.
 Both late and soon their mussick bells rang,
 And clergie men racked to church.
 To make intercession for the holy profession,
 Which they thought was promotted by such.
 The Britans union they thought was broken,
 Their own Native King called home.
 And the French Navie was saffe over sea,
 And the King was set on his throne.
 And throu Flanders it was the tideings,
 That the French : Scotland did invade.
 And twelve regiments marched from Flanders,
 Without any longer abade.
 And at Hostend right soon they got shiping,
 And saffely past throu the sea.
 And at Neucassel they lay at an anchor,
 Al ready to give them suplie.
 The French Navie ran to the North sea,
 And near the Coast of Scotland.
 The Dutch and English fleet perseued after that,
 And instantlie came on that bande.
 It came to passe not far from the Basse,
 A sea feight hapened to be.
 Near the Coast of Scotland the Frenches did stand
 Til at length they were forced to flee.
 With cruel like pride and many a broad side,
 The battel was managed a while,
 And the Dutch fleet stod very weel by it,
 And the battel was fought without guile.

Til the French Navie was broken on sea,
 And scatered from thence abroad.
 And on that uncouth coast was cruely tosst, strange
 Coming off in many a roade.
 What ships were sunke and what were burnt,
 I shal not now tel to you.
 Bot Captan Gordoun that day got tane, took
 A French ship and her whole crewe.¹
 The Scottish men was now gathering,
 To defend themselves on the land.
 Some of the French was tane prissoners,
 And delivered saffe to their hand.
 The Prince of Wailles with broken sailles,
 Came stealing back to France.
 And at Dunkirk came saffe to land,
 After that sudene mischance.
 Up that countrie right fast passed he,
 And the nixt day vent to the messe.
 With the French armie to camp vent he
 In hopes of some better sucesse.
 These tideing then to Flanders came,
 That the French was beat on the sea.
 The third of Apriele our garissones all
 Fired for the great victorie
 In Coutridge toun al the garissoune,
 Did keep the Queens birth day. 6 February reception
 And our General had a noble caball,
 And the musickes sweetlie did play.
 And at the State housse that old antient place,
 Two lantrons was made to give light.
 With hunders of candels burning into those,
 Which was a great shew on that night.
 Each several torch of these sumptous lantrons,
 Of diverse collours was dyeed.
 And in al the windous was burning candels,
 Throu the Market place as we hyeed.
 In the spring of the year as summer dreu near,
 Our forces was brought back againe.
 Twelve English regiments for England that vent,
 To Flanders they came now amaine.
 In the moneth of May reviewd were we,
 Al that lay in that garissoune.

¹ See Clowes's The Royal Navy: A History, vol. ii. p. 517. The vessel taken was the Salisbury, formerly a British ship, and she was captured by the Leopard, Captain Thomas Gordon. Three other vessels foundered at sea or were wrecked, but the Salisbury was the only capture, Byng stopping his pursuit at Buchan-ness.

And several dayes we musstered likeways,
 And marched that Market Place round
 From every regiment we sent detashments,
 To keep al their garisoun touns.
 So al the regiments made ready for camp
 And for marching out we were boune.
 On the twentie third of May we marched away,
 Towards Audenar we walked alonge.
 The garissoune of Minone to us they did joyne,
 By the walls we camped right throng,
 The General Muraye had comande over all,
 Twentie one regiments on that night.
 Nixt morning earlie we marched awaye,
 To Gramunge the way we took right.
 Beside Gramunge our camp was set down,
 And there we rested a day.
 In a very strong place between two waters,
 We camped in a noble araye.
 Then from Gramonge we marched along,
 Til we came near to our armie.
 Who at Noterdam hall was now camped all,
 On their right that night camped we.
 On the twentie seventh day of this moneth of May,
 We marched and joyned our armie.
 So at Noterdam hall we were camped all,
 And the French was then coming nie.
 At the village Swinie al the French armie,
 Was then camped in good order.
 The Duke de Wandum with an armie right strong
 There lay and kepted that border.
 Then from Noterdam hall our armie marched all,
 And advanced to the front half a lig,
 So at Sentinal our housse they did calle,
 In two lines we camped a rig.
 Bot Overquerks quarters lay still at Hall,
 At Hallbeck lay the left of our camp.
 And so we lay al in battel araye,
 Our horssemen of courage most ramp,
 A hundered and eightie good squadrons of horsse,
 In camp we had pitched I troue.
 With a hundered and fiftie betalions of foot,
 With courage and conduct most true,
 And the French hoast with great brag and boast,
 Was camped now on our froant.
 The Duke Wandum he, had as great an armie,
 Of courage and vallour not blunt.
 There for battel we were ready all,
 And stronglie did garde for surprise.

Stil waiting upon the French armies motion,
 Bot we were deceived with our spies.
 On the first day of June four regiments of men,
 On comande was sent to our traine.
 And there we lay a pairt of that day,
 And at night we came home againe.
 And the nixt morning al out for foradgeing,
 Our horssees was sent on comande
 Bot the French armie was marching brisklie,
 From our spies no warning we fande.
 So now againe our horsse was called home,
 And our armie got orders to march.
 Three shots of canon our armie did warn,
 Tho our spies seemed false in their search.
 The second of June our armie at noon,
 Took doun our tents in al haste,
 And then we marched doun towards Brussels toun,
 As the divel the hindmost had chaste.
 Our camp collour men our camp pitched then,
 Besides Enerleeck on that night.
 Bot before our armie came, they had got comande,
 And they marched from that at the flight.
 So al that night long, our armie marcht one,
 And we were both wearie and weet.
 And on the thrid of June that Sabbath morning,
 Our camps towards Loven was set.
 In the cloister Catenburgh our General did loadge,
 Not far from the toun of Loven.
 And towards Diggum our campe ran alonge,
 In the passe lay guards of our men.
 The French armie with courage on hie,
 Did camp on the other side.
 Between Walshwaver and the village Novelle,
 Boldly now that hoast did bide.
 The passe of Loven they could not get then,
 For al the haiste they could make,
 The front of both armies near come to the passe,
 So the passe they could not then take.
 Both armies did lie now at full libertie,
 And foradged the countrie about.
 On either side right boldly they bide,
 Like courageous armies and stout.
 Our Protestant armie comanded were they,
 For to keep the sixth day of June.
 With fasting and prayer and service devine,
 Each Protestant regiment had sermon.
 This day was set apairt by our Generals comand,
 And a publick order gave he.

To keep the sixth of June, for service devine,
 And sermon throu al our armie.
 Our ministers text it was thus,
 For al this assembly shal knowe,
 That not with sword nor by spear,
 The Lord our saffetie doth showe,
 For the battel is the Lord and he will,
 Deliever you to your hand.
 This with confidence David he asertes,
 Golliahs hoast could not stand.
 Al the moneth of June we lay on that ground,
 Our armie their foradge they got.
 Doun towards Mechline and that countrie round,
 And about the village Arescot.
 In Catenberge camp to our armie came up,
 Good Protestant Princes anewe.
 The Prince of Hanovere to our armie came their,
 And al our hoast did rewieue.
 On the twentie day of June, he came our front along,
 And al our armie did see.
 Like a comely young man elected and chosen,
 The King of Britane to be.
 Before this time to the front we were tane,
 And rewieued by the Duke Mallberie.
 And al his court that was him about,
 Who came to rewieue our armie.
 The French armie by Walshwaver did lie,
 And foradged doun towards Namuire.
 And that strong passe at Walshwaver that was,
 They lay and keep secure.
 On the second of July then al our armie,
 From foradgeing was called home.
 Bot yet that day we marched not awaye,
 And the French they were not yet gone.
 On the fifth day of July that morning earlie,
 We marched al off from Loven.
 And the French armie was marching busiely,
 Before that our spies did it keen.
 At the village Hallbeck the French made bridges,
 And there they crose the cannall.
 And towards Anguine they marched beeden,
 That passe they secured withall.
 About Brissels toun our armie marcht round,
 And some camped by the wall,
 And at Enerleleck our camp it was set,
 Bot before we came to it all.
 The French cavalerie with courage on hie,
 Advanced near to our camp.

Then for battel we made ready all,
 To meet thes horssemen most ramp.
 At this alarme we stod al to arms,
 Til our armie at length did come.
 And at our right hand our General did stand,
 With horssemen to keep the grune. ground
 Both horsse and foot was sent on comande,
 That night they marched to the right.
 Near the half of our armie again was made ready,
 For battel by the morning greu light.
 The French armie they marched haistilie,
 Doun to the great city of Gaunt.
 And they were tan in and made weelcome,
 And gave our armie the taunt.
 Fiften thousand men they left them behinde,
 The which did beguile our armie,
 In battel array in a passe they did stay,
 When our armie advanced they flee.
 And al that night in arms most bright,
 Most part of our armie did stand.
 In the morning we advanced and cleared the passe,
 And litele resistance we fande.
 The Duke of Wandums mulles with their cariages, mules
 Our armie did catch on their rire.
 Bot the French hoast over the watter was crosst,
 And at Gaunt they did quicklie apeare.
 On the sixth day of July it was that our armie,
 Came back to their tents for a while.
 And then afternoon we marched againe,
 Tho the French gave us a beguile.
 That night at Asst we pitched our camp, Asche (?)
 Our right it ran towards Hulst. Hulst-Alost
 And the French armie took Gaunt haistilie,
 For that sidge was quicklie discust.
 The bourgers of that toun called the French in,
 And weelcomed them to good chear.
 And our Governoure gave the castel soon over,
 And marched away in great fear.
 The French hoast throu Gaunt now began for to ran,
 And replenisht that toun of the new.
 It is a big toun bot not very strong,
 The bourgers to us was not true.
 And al about Hulse the French held the passe,
 There our armie could not atacquie.
 The water us betwen made the grund so strong,
 Wandume of his project can crack. Vendôme
 Til the ninth of July then al our armie,
 From Asst we marched away.

And al that day long our armie marched one,
 Englien By Aungine a while we did stay
 We lay on our arms two or three hours,
 And al night we marched againe.
 Halle And by Notterdam Hall our train marched all
 At Aungine that night lay our train.
 On the tenth of July we marched busily,
 Our train with our armie came one.
 Grammont We came to Gramunge then our camp set down
 Our march had been very longe.
 Oudenarde On the eleventh day we marched earlie,
 Towards the toun of Audenare.
 And some field pieces did on our froant march
 With comands before marching far.
 Both horsse and foot marching on our froant,
 And the coper boats they took along
 And beneath Audenare bridged the water,
 Four bridges was made very strong.
 The French armie on the tenth day of July,
 Sent out a comand of granadires.
 Ath Bot towards Atte they were turned back,
 advance guard By a few of our armies forires.
 On the eleventh of July that morning earlie,
 The French took march in a haiste.
 forced Up that water towards Audenare,
 Where the front of our armie them facete.
 The Duke de Wandum saw our armie come,
 And this speech he made to his courte.
 That English armie is al coming ye see,
 The divell has brought them aboute.
 Bourgogne The Prince of Wailles¹ with the Duk de Burguni
 Burgundy And the whole French court dreu near.
 At the village called Lee the purpose to stay
 As our English squadrons did apeare.
 Over the hil of Audenar and on to the water,
 And in haiste took the bridges four.
 The froant of our armie both foot and cavalrie,
 Came marching one and got over.
 The battel began, before it was noon,
 And the canons began for to play.
 And al our armie was marching quicklie,
 And came one to the battel that day.
 The French armie was marching bussie,
 By the villages called Ram and Lee.
 And there they did stand with wapons in hand
 To fight for their king and countrie.
 Then our armies froant both horse men and foot
 Were engadged in battel that day,

¹ The Chevalier (see note, p. 404) lately returned from his abortive attempt in Scotland.

The word was sent back to march up quick
 So we came on in battel araye.
 As the French armie marcht by the village Lee,
 A lig beyonde Audenare.
 Comands of our armie came up haistilie,
 And so their marching did mare.
 The left of our armie marcht foremost,
 As soon as our bridges were laid.
 With some pice of canon and several comands,
 Some canon of both armies plaid.
 Our armie and train was coming amaine,
 And crossed the watter good speed.
 Brave General Cardugen brake throu the French line,
 And nobelie acted indeede. Cadogan
 The platouns of smal shot in battel so hot,
 Which gave a sound in the skie.
 At meting of squadrons with swords over crouns,
 Til our grand armies they dreu niey.
 Near tuelue at noon the shot did begine
 When the froant began to engadge.
 And at four afternoon the armies meeting,
 Some forced were to change badge.
 Til the French armie was beat back againe,
 And forced for to retire.
 With rich horse pranceing in batele advanceing,
 Gave them a close charge in the rire.
 The French was beat back with many a cracke,
 Ore the rire of our armie wan up.
 Til nine acloak at night lasted the great fight,
 The French their horses did whipe.
 Our Hollands train was brought up amaine,
 And planted close on our rire.
 By that it was night we wanted day light,
 And our enomies they did retire.
 They dreu then away and likewayes that day,
 The night it began for to rain.
 The French left the ground and pairt of their canon,
 Many of both sides were slain.
 Bot yet in that spote few persons of notte,
 Were slain in our Hollands armie.
 A Major General we lossed there withall,
 And brigadires about two or three.
 And seven thousand men we had wounded and slain,
 Al into that batel so hot.
 Major General Lauder¹ he was wounded there,
 And a noble victorie we got.

George I.

Our Prince of Hanover with courage and valour,
 Advanced on to this battel.
 Upon a good steed weel mounted indeed,
 Bot thus the casse it befelle.
 There came a French ball that made his horse fall,
 His highness to ground was brought.
 The elected King of the Kingdoms of Britane,
 Was killed as many men thought.
 Al his other horse with gromes and pages,
 Was sent away off the field.
 His highness did take a half pike in hand,
 His foes were made for to yeald.
 No Prince nor Peire we losst in that weire,
 Therefore we need not relent.
 In al our armie that time had not we,
 The losse of a whole regiment.
 The Prince Eugine in our armie was then,
 And ordered on the right hand.
 The Prince Oranje in our Hollands armie,
 That day he had the comand.
 The Duke Mallberie Captan General was he,
 And comander of our armie.
 As a bold Chiftan that battel he wane,
 And highly renoued was he.
 The Duke of Wandum the French Chiftan,
 Had a strong guard him about.
 Of their Jande arms to keep them from harme,
 In a castel that was pretie stout.
 The Dolphine son of France his fame to advance,
 Proved in this battel right bold.
 The Duke of Bargunie and heir of their croun,
 Was weel keeped in that hold.
 The Prince of Wailles caled King of the English,
 Right valiant proved that day.
 And when the French folk from him was beat back,
 Againe he did them araye.
 Three several times he comanded these lines,
 With him again to advance.
 And to prove stout into the same boute,
 For honor of the thing caled France.
 And their Irishmen he ralied again,
 In battel with him to perseue.
 He promised to bring their report to the King,
 Both valiant noble and true.
 So late at night they al took the flight,
 And backwards again did retire.
 And many a gun was shot after them,
 And many shot dead in their rire.

In hedges and dikes they lay like dead tikes,
 As the dark night began to draw near,
 For fear of alarms we stood in our arms,
 Until the day light did appear.
 Next morning early the right of our armie,
 Advanced on their foes manfully.
 With eight pieces of canon from our English train,
 Who soon made the Frenches to flee.
 From the passage of a wood where the French stood,
 And fired out bitterly.
 An Officer of our Royal, both valiant and loyal,
 And a few men with him did die.
 The right of our armie advanced briskly,
 And some canon on that day did play.
 The French fled away all towards Denessie,
 Not long that day they durst stay.
 Our armie anon was called back again
 And further they did not perseue
 A new Ramelie we wan victorie,
 On the twelfth day of July anew.
 At Audenar battell of the French hoast felle,
 The number of ten thousand men.
 And fiveten hundred was tan prisoners.
 And moe then weel I do keen.
 Hundres of Officers was tane prisoners,
 And great many of the Houshold of France,
 And many Generals was tane prisoners,
 And gentlemen fel in that chance.
 Our Hollands armie on the twelfth of July,
 At Audenar pitched our camp.
 And our wounded men to the hospitals then,
 After that battell so ramp.
 At Audenar we lay in camp there,
 Til the fourteenth day of July.
 Then sixteen regiments from our armie detached,
 And marched before our armie.
 July the fiveten our armie marched then,
 And left the French in our rere.
 We came to Ellshine and set our camp down,
 And a comand at Pong of the Pire.
 July the sixteen our armie marcht one,
 And marcht by the town of Minone.
 And at Verwick our camp we did pitch,
 Our front in the line past anone.
 Our regiments and horse before us that marcht,
 Was camped within the French line.
 The French that time was fled from their line,
 And we took the possession of it syne.

 So we wrought it down al smooth with the ground,
 And burnt al the guardhouses syne.
 So several days we wrought on that way,
 In working down of that line.
 Al down towards Epper the line was slighted,
 The defence of the cuntrey they tine.
 July the twentie one our armie marcht in,
 A lig within the French line.
 To the village Cumine, our camp lay then,
 Bot our houss at Verwick lay still sine.
 The ninetenth of July was set apart wholie,
 For thanksgiving and devotion.
 To God most hie thanksgiving to paye,
 From him doth flou the promotion.
 So on the forenoon we had a sermon,
 With prayer to God most hie.
 And on the afternoon, our smal guns and canon,
 Did fire for our victorie.
 At Verwick and Cumine our armie lay then,
 Within and without the French line.
 Our armie had won now al the French line,
 Bot Bridges and Gent we did tine.
 After the battel right thus it befelle,
 To Bridges the French marcht down.
 And with a great hoast and terrible hoast,
 They conquered that old toun.
 And at Bellum their camp it lay then,
 They made that ground very stout.
 In Bridgees and Gent the Frenches did raunt,
 And al that countrey about.
 Our armie this time did take the French line,
 And conquered al Picardie.
 And contrabution was raissed this time,
 Throu most part of that countrie.
 The French in Flanders they turned comandars,
 And contrabution did raise.
 Our armie towards France this time did advance,
 So serued them in the same ways.
 On the twentie fifth day of the moneth of July,
 A comand from our armie marcht out.
 Up throu Picardie and al about Doveye,
 And al the whole countrey about.
 Our litele armie did take Labassie,
 And began to repaire it anewe.
 The English and Hollands they did it conquess,

 And the Count Tilie ruled our cavalrie
 And kepted them in good order.
 Who wrought worthilie in al that countrey,
 These conquerers on the French border.
 That litel armie came to us againe,
 On the thrid day of August at noon,
 And an other armie cam again the same day,
 Both gatherers of the contrabution.
 The twentie seventh day of the month July,
 The last armie had marcht out,
 Fourtie squadrons of our armies fine horse,
 And fourteen betalions of foot.
 The thrid of August they returned al back,
 And joyned them to our armie.
 A new comand at even marcht out,
 And away from the armie marcht we.
 The Prince Eugine he did us comande,
 So late at night marched we.
 Full Fiftie squadrons and fiveten betalions,
 A pretie litele armie to see.
 That night we passt on by the toun of Minone,
 And halted there for a night.
 We lay on our arms for fear of alarms,
 And we marched with the morning light.
 Straught by Ellshine we marcht alonge,
 A lig beloue Pong the Pire.
 There our Hosaes spyed some French horse,
 Who from that pass did retire.
 We bridged the water and then marcht over,
 A lig beloue Pong the Pire.
 And then at night we pitched our tents,
 Weel guarded on both front and rire.
 And the nixt day we marched awaye,
 Five or six ligs before night.
 And near to Atte we pitched our camp,
 Bot the Germans marched on sight.
 The German armie at Atte now did lie,
 For more than a fourteenight before.
 Under these walls to shelter themselves,
 And spend upon their own store.

The German armie was thousands fiftie,
 Of horse and foot that lay there.
 And the Prince Eugine he did them comande,
 And every thing did prepare,
 And from our armie for his better suplie,
 He brought out a strong comande.
 So to his oun armie nou joyned were we,
 And so made up a train bande.
 For to garde our train that was a comeing,
 This armie was now ready boune.
 And towards Swinie from Atte marched we,
 At Swinie our camp was set down.
 Ten regiments Hanovers was lying at Brissels,
 And bringing up of our train.
 So al our great guns and amonition wagons,
 At Swinie came to us amaine.
 The Prince Hanovers men they marcht back again,
 To Brissels for to keep that pass.
 Prince Eugine then took charge of the train,
 And a very big train it was.
 Hunders of guns al four and twentie ponders,
 And many big morters also.
 And thousands of wagons with boams and ball,
 Stil in four lines they did go.
 Prince Eugines armie was thousands seventie,
 At Swine when we did lay.
 Between our two lines they dreu up the train,
 And we marched on the nixt day.
 Our armie and train on the nixt morning,
 Came marching on in good order.
 The French armie now at Gent did lie,
 Bot durst not ataque on our border.
 Then hard by Atte our train was draun up,
 And stod there in noble array.
 And east from Atte along we encampe,
 And we rested there for a day.
 And then from Atte the nixt day we marched,
 The streight way to Pong the Pire.
 Our horse al round did trivisse the ground,
 And guarded us weel in the rire.
 And al that night long our train was marching,
 And our front did lie at the Skeell
 Al round about our guards was set out,
 And the French durst not with us melle.
 The eleventh of August our coper boats marcht,
 Earlie by the break of the day.
 And our pountouns that morning right soon,
 Four bridges for us did lay.

Then al our armie marcht over that day,
 And camped just at Ellshine.
 Bot the French hoast for al their boast,
 That time they durst not be seen.
 On the eleventh day from Mallbroughs armie,
 A strong comand was sent out.
 The Prince of Oranjie their Chiftan to be, Orange
 Nine regiments that seemed to be stout.
 In rank and file they dreu towards Liele, Lille
 And as they came within sight.
 At Merket Cloister the French guard there, Marquette
 They forsed for to take flight.
 Our comand did take the Bride of Merket, Bridge or Pont
& Marquette
 And the French fled into the toun
 Our comands did lie one night and one day,
 And the next day we did it surroun.
 On the tuelth day Prince Eugins armie,
 Took the pass at Pong of the Pire. Pont l'Espierre
 Some French cavalerie from it they did flee,
 And we perseued on their rire.
 Prince Eugins armie marched towards Turney, Tournai
 And the French on them did come out.
 And lay in a hedge as our armie did passe,
 Our front with them had a bout.
 As our Hossaes marched throu the passe, hussars
 They fired on them manfullie,
 Ore our armie could come up to the same ground,
 Some of our Hossaes they made die.
 Bot in a short time our horssemen came,
 And our armie in noble array.
 The French with might that day took flight,
 To Turney they fled the hie way.
 Our armie did wheel the way towards Liele,
 And Turney we left it behinde.
 In midele way we camped that day,
 And foradge enough we did finde.
 On the thretenth day in noble array,
 We aproached to the toun of Liele.
 The French had got in abundance of men,
 To keep that toun very weel.
 The Prince Eugins armie and the Prince of Oranjes,
 That day they did it souroune.
 And late at night our camp was pitcht,
 And the sidge of Liel was set down.
 Within a lig of that toun we camped al round,
 And our train by Minone did come.
 We had now beleagured that toun large and wide,
 And their canon was shoting Lamdume. Probably Lam
Dum, representing the sound

From Prince Eugines armie comands were sent out,
 To lie in the passes at Doveye.
 And Mallbrougns armie at Ellshine did lie,
 And covered our sidge very truelye.
 From Malbrougns armie were sent for suplie,
 Both amonition and men.
 Fiveten full regiments reconed of the best,
 And Oranjie to be their Chifftan.
 So about Liel toun the sidge was set down,
 By Prince Eugine and his armie.
 And of the grand armie the Prince of Oranjie,
 And with him a pretie armie.
 About seven ligs long our camp circled round,
 In sidgeing of that strong toun.
 Our strong German horsses lay stil in the passes,
 Till al the sidge was set down.
 At Labassie some regiments did lie,
 And there did keep the countrie.
 To cover our sidge they then did begine,
 That same place to fortifie.
 And of the bouers in Brabant and Flanders,
 Ten thousand did now conveene.
 At Prince Eugines quarters as they musstered,
 Great floaks of bouers to be seen,
 Al ready for work they gathered in flocks,
 Thru the countrie of Picardie.
 And near to Dunkirk they came there for work,
 Being sent out for a levie.
 Our armie al round gathered contrabution,
 And the countrie they did so compell.
 For to furnish men and them for to send,
 And so the casse it befelle.
 So the first work that our armie did make,
 Was our lines of interlocatione.
 And with engine they wrought at this line,
 Al round for our own preservation.
 We made a strong trench to hold of the French,
 On the out side of our armie.
 And pretie litele forts in several pairts,
 Al our armie they did fortifie.
 With strong baries on passes and wayes,
 And guards on every entrie.
 Comands of our men was dayelie working,
 And strongly we did fortifie.
 Cornal Heypburns regiment our first ground was set,
 Upon the east side of that toun.
 And four or five days we lay in that place,
 And then they fitched our groune.

By Merket Cloister our camp was set there,
 Beyond the Bride of Merket.
 Then several regiments their camp did fitch,
 And so the sidge was close set.
 Our regiments comand with which we began,
 Our fatigue was to meet our train.
 In the morning earlie from Merket marcht we,
 And at night we came back again.
 So from Minone our train it did come,
 And amunition good store.
 And beside Merket our train it was set,
 And the Daines did camp it before.
 And on their front the workmen did work,
 And made a trench wide and deep,
 For fortification betwixt them and the toun,
 And al our great train for to keep.
 The Duke de Buffelar the French Generall,
 Comanded in the toun of Liele.
 He sent his men out the toun al about,
 And foradged themselves pretie weel.
 And some villages they brunt into ashes,
 And hewed down al the green trees.
 And al this time they were bussie working,
 And the divell come pay them their fees.
 Lieutenant General Lee, that Irish rogue he,
 Nixt Buffelar he had the comand.
 With Brigadires and Cornalls and under Officers,
 Weel resolved their post for to stand.
 With one and twentie regiments of men,
 And four good squadrons of horsse,
 The toun of Liel they thought to keep weel,
 And banish their foes off perforce.
 On the twentie third of the Moneth of August,
 In that morning pretie earlie.
 The French came out al in a great route,
 And made a shew very fairlie.
 Towards our train they came in their marching,
 In battel rank and arraye.
 Their drums beating and collours flying,
 They put all our hoast in a fraye.
 The Generall Sparr with the Prince of Oranjie,
 In haiste gave out a comande.
 To six regiments lyeing nixt to Merket,
 Before the train for to stand.
 So then in haiste our regiments they marcht,
 And dreu al into our train.
 The Daines and some Dutch and Cornal Hebrons,
 That day we advanced on the plain.

Comands of our horse did likeways advance,
 And stode close by a hedge side.
 Upon their foes ready to enclosse,
 They boldly there did abide.
 The French canon ball did shot from the wall,
 And made some slaughter that day.
 We regiments of foot where we were comanded,
 On plain field behoved to stave,
 The French canon played brisklie still on,
 As fast as they could discharge.
 Our horse and foot did bravely stand to it,
 Al ready on field to engadge.
 The French dreu away but longer delaye,
 And dreu in againe to the toun.
 Our regiments did stay in battel array,
 And on that ground did sit down.
 The Prince of Oranjie his Hienesse then he,
 With advise of our chief Engenires.
 Of three regiments he detashed of each,
 A hundred of good granadires.
 Down to the windmille above the cappell,
 And there to stay on comande.
 From our three regiments these granadires vent.
 And by that windmille did stand.
 And in that place they stayed a long space,
 The wallour of two or three hours.
 Til our Generalls and al our Engenires,
 The ground al round about scoures.
 Into their vest coats they ran al alongs,
 And reviewed the ground very weel.
 And concluded soon there for to break ground,
 And make a trench before Leil.
 And then our granadires had comand to retire,
 And march away from that place.
 And several comands from these villages,
 Retired within a short space.
 And as our granadires began to retire,
 The canon did shot from the wall.
 Severals of our men was wounded that time,
 And some killed dead there withall.
 And new comands to that place was sent down,
 And lay in them dorps round about.
 Ten regiments with arms at night was warned,
 For a cover if the French did come out.
 And full sixtie men of every betalione,
 That night was comanded for work.
 And in the evening as the dark night came,
 We brake ground hard as the corke.

value, extent

Above the cappell to work we felle,
 And in haiste did make a strong trench.
 And doun to the side of the water it gede, went
 We wrought it in spite of the French.
 On the other side a trench then was made,
 That ran doun towards the citydaille.
 Then about midenight the French fired thick,
 Tho litle it did them a vaille.
 For al that night with courage on height,
 We wrought in despight of the French.
 And in the morning about the day dauing, dawn
 Ten regiments marcht in our trench.
 The French having seen what work was done,
 Both horsse and foot they came out.
 And at the cappell the horssmen stod still.
 And fired boldly round about.
 So al that day right fast fired they,
 Their canon did shot from the wall,
 Our men in the trench did hold in the French,
 No further they durst come at all.
 Our armie had comand when the sidge it began,
 Each regiment to make fassines.
 And dailie then we were making them,
 With pickets malles and gabines. mallets
 Both day and night our workmen did work,
 In carying in thes fassines.
 And great batteries we were making likewayes,
 And carying in our gabines. gabions, bags filled with earth
 This sidge was strong our trenches right throng,
 At night when they were releaved.
 The French fired thick when that it greu dark,
 Our workmen was hurt and mischieved.
 Yet every day we wrought bussilie,
 In making up of our trench.
 And every night some ground we brake,
 And wrought ay near to the French.
 A grand batterie a making were we,
 Which held guns fourtie and three.
 And every gun ful twentie four pound,
 Of a ball : they might let it flee.
 Another batterie there likewayes made we,
 A litle beloue the same place.
 And one and twentie guns was planted thereon,
 Within a very short space.
 Above the capell where first we asaille,
 A litle batterie there was made.
 And five canon was planted thereon,
 And on the capell they first plaide.

We continued on, at this sidgeing so strong,
 In working our trench near the toun.
 Three thousand workmen day and night working,
 From once the sidge was set down.
 Our foes within were of noble engine,
 And managed their out works weell.
 And their Governour in many a stoure,
 He proved as true as the steell.
 And at al ataques upon their out works,
 His men did boldly defende.
 And the Governour stil for their sucore,
 A fresh releafe did them send.
 Within and without both valiant and stout,
 For doughtie deeds they were keend.
 The famous sidge of Liel it was named weel,
 And shall to the worlds end.
 What need I tel more of cruel blood gore,
 Was sheed before the same toun.
 For many a man left their lives in paune,
 In thes beds of honor laid down.
 A very cruel work and many an ataque
 Was made in sidgeing of Liele.
 For every day some wounded or slain,
 The effects of the war did feele.
 The French within did boldly defende,
 And threu up squibs in the air
 And al for to warn the Duke de Wandum,
 Who to them could not repaire.
 And al thes dayes they sent forth spies,
 To fetch releafe in their need.
 And kepted their forts thes strong out works,
 And they were now besidged indeed.
 From Magdalen port we trenched al about,
 The which was fortified weel.
 On that side of the toun to the citydaille doun,
 The strongest forts about Liele.
 There ground we brake and many an ataque,
 We made with courage most stout.
 Where many good men was wounded or slain,
 In many a bold bloody boue.
 The sidge of Leile I mean for to reele,
 In order as it was wrought.
 Where valiant men in battel was slain,
 The wounded to hospitals brought.
 At the Cloister Merket the wounded was drest,
 And many men died there anone.
 And those who were beter in hops to recovere,
 Were sent away to Minone.

relate

Upon the twentieth fourth of the month August,
 As it drew on towards night,
 Three hundred grenadiers from our army,
 Got orders to march upon sight.
 Eleven of our regiment and likewise an antient, ensign
 Were sent upon this command.
 And as they marched down they got all grenades,
 And a kindled match in their hand. lighted
 All in to the trench in haste they did march,
 And advanced down to the capell.
 Which was a strong fort kept by the French,
 So began that battle so fell.
 Fifty French grenadiers defended the place,
 So a cruel ramcounter was there.
 All noble grenadiers did throw out grenades,
 And fought like mad men in despair.
 That fort was strong and hard to be won,
 All in it they proved right stout.
 The pillboxes were won do all that they can,
 And the fosses that were them about. palisades fosses
 These French did defend till most part was slain,
 In a cellar some of them did flee.
 For to save their lives they got quarters,
 And our general did them see.
 To prison straight a few men were sent,
 Which our grenadiers did let live.
 And very little thank our grenadiers got,
 Though they them quarters did give.
 The capell was tan and our men were in,
 That night it was very dark.
 And many men slain before it was tane,
 Because the place was so stark. strong
 In that night dark about that old kirk,
 Many of our men there were slain.
 And many wounded who there did attack,
 Before that place they could gain.
 Then we trenched in haste about the same place,
 So our trench ran by the capell.
 The French about they fired thick out,
 And many a man they did fell.
 On the twentieth sixth day the French did sallie,
 Before the sun it was set.
 And on that capell they thought to assault,
 'Tis a regiment of Swiss with them met.
 Our regiments in trenches alerted with the Frenches, alert (?)
 Stood ready all on command.
 So at the capell a few men fell,
 Not long the Frenches did stand.

Bot fled in haiste as they were defeate,
 And ran al in to their toun.
 And with that capell they durst no more melle,
 Our trench was run from it doun.
 On the twentie seventh day our great batterie,
 Was loused upon that strong toun.
 Canon ball half a lig did flee over ridges,
 That strong toun wall to ding doun.
 They French that day their morters had ready,
 And fired out boams enewe.
 In the aire unseen they came out flying,
 When they brake in pices they fleu.
 Our great batterie played very brisklie,
 To make a breach in the wall.
 And every day with strong firing,
 They made some part of it fall.
 On the twentie ninth day our armie arraye,
 Three hundered granadires again night.
 And six regiments that had the picket,
 Got orders to march upon sight.
 All doun to our trenches against the Frenches,
 Their purposes to fullfile.
 To make an ataque upon a strong work,
 The French had at a wind mille.
 About the wind mill it was fortified weel,
 With a strong foussie about.
 And rows of piliesods about the milsides,
 Weel kepted with granadires stout.
 Bot near to that fort our men had entrenched,
 Before that we were to ataque.
 And al that long night we lay in the trench,
 No noisse we were ordered to make.
 And our granadires with granads and match,
 Lay on a plain field al the night.
 A German Generall had the comand all,
 His conduct was nothing like right.
 For in the morning about the day breaking,
 Our granadires did advance.
 And with noble courage discharged their arms,
 Then made their granads to dance.
 The French granadires fired their foussies,
 So a bold ramcounter was there,
 Both in and out the granads did mount,
 Which wounded many ful saire.
 The French from the wall fired a drake ball,
 Which wounded seven of our men.
 A cruel massacre was at the ramcounter,
 To smal purpose that I keen.

opened fire

fusils

In desperate sort our men took the fort,
The Officers were al slain.
The French did flee out of it a wie,
Bot fresh men took it again.
To hot a post it was in that fort,
Being open upon the toun side,
The day greu light the ball fleu thick,
Our men in it could not bide.
The wounded and hurt away being put,
And the rest was weet and wearie.
Both in and out that foussie so deep,
They wade al above the knee,
Our regiment that night being the picket,
In time of this woeful atacque.
We advanced on in the trench al alonge,
Til the General comanded us back.
In our old place again we stay an hours time,
And our men came out of that fort.
The wind mill again the Frenches got tane,
Our possession of it was bot short.
Our regiment then got leave to come home,
At night we march to the trenches,
Beneath the capell our post we came til,
On the ground was won of the Frenches.
Bot yet the wind mill the French keep stil,
And the Germans did work it about.
The French in ire of it made a fire,
Which brunt the night all throughout.
They brunt al down even flat to the ground,
Al housses that was thereabout.
From al the reedouts the Frenches was beat,
Where they had proved right stout.
On that side of the water thereafter in order,
The Germans mounted alwayes.
And manfulie wrought and trenched therabout
Tho many was slain on thes dayes.
From Magdalen port the French sailied out,
The time that our trenches releaved,
Our regiment amain was called back again,
And the boams us sadly mischieved.
The French came out al into a route,
Two hundered and some moe.
Our trenches alarte was in every pairt,
To defend themselves from their foe.
The French on our trench our trench on the French,
Fired bitterlie for a wie.
Bot ere our regiment was come to our ground,
The French began for to flee.

And into the toun right fast they did run,
 Tho some lay dead on the plain.
 One regiment in our trench did beat of the French,
 By the voyage nothing they gain.
 Of that sortie a smal skaith had we,
 We were dismisst very soon.
 The Prince Oranjie the trench ruled bravely,
 Til that short battel was done.
 With orderly mounting and night and day working,
 A right hard deutie had we.
 To help our bread we got in our need
 Our share of the work monie.
 King Davids¹ justice then they did,
 In our armie displaye.
 Who to battel vent got an equale pairt,
 With them by the stuff that stay.
 A equal pairt was for every regiment,
 That was in our sidgeing armie.
 Our Officers took for the wounded and hurt,
 And some who shortlie did die.
 The creple and blind they made us maintain,
 So taught us Divinatie.
 Some absent from work got an equal pairt.
 When they distribute our monie.
 So we wrought on in trenching right throng,
 And making of strong batteries.
 And every day the French fired aye,
 The smal ball as thick as pisse.
 On the side of the water the Germans post,
 We were making a strong baterie.
 So day and night stil in the French sight,
 We wrought: where draik ball did flee.
 Many wounded and hurt ore that we got up,
 And finisht our English baterie.
 And beneath the capell in great perill,
 We made bateries two or three.
 The French this time was bussily working,
 And making of their batteries.
 And our canon ball over the toun wall,
 Fleu in like big Hollands chiesse.
 From the grand armie came for the suplie,
 Five hundered good granadires.
 And detashed men with them came along,
 Strong comands of good fizanires.
 The seventh of September it was I remember,
 This suplie al to us was brought.
 And at one afternoon in the trench they went in,
 A strong comand as men thought.

¹ See 1 Sam. xxx. 21-25. The warrior king referred to in a recent despatch from South Africa, re services on lines of communication.

Then our batteries was brisklie playing,
And the trenches was filled throng.
The comand of the armie was ordered shortly,
And many workmen to go on.
So in the twilight as it dreu towards night,
All was silent for a while.
Our men in the trenches and also the Frenches,
Was standing in rank and file.
By a warning gun our granadires then,
Did advance on the French piliesods.
The French mean time was waiting for them,
And boldlie stood in the roads.
This atacque began late in the evening,
Upon the French works al about.
Both sides of the water atacqued together,
And the defence proved most stout.
As our men marched on upon the plain ground,
The distance was fiftie pace wide,
The French mean time was bussie firing,
The ramcounter was awefull to bide.
With thick firing and granads throuing,
The fire did glance and give light.
Many wounded and slain in a very short time,
Dead men in heaps lay that night.
The atacque was strong and lasted right long,
The French works could not be tane.
Our men got the worsse and by open forsse,
That night was repulssed againe.
And in our own trenches to advance on the French,
We were comanded once more.
Til after midnight continued the feight,
And many was bathed in blood gore.
Many good granadires and bold Officeires,
Was killed that night ful cold.
So our comanded men was repulssed againe,
And the French then waxed more bold.
Our men the third time was comanded again,
To advance anewe on the French.
And yet perfsse we were put to the worsse,
And beat back again to the trench
All the times was a constant firing,
No slackness in it was found.
Five hundred good men on that night was slain,
Bot gained not a foot breadth of ground.
From Heypburns regiment to that atacque went,
A Captain and a Lieutenand.
And our granadires was joyned to the English,
And our Captain did them comand.

He valiantlie marcht on before his platoon,
 And couragiouslie did them guide.
 Bot the third time as he was marching one,
 He was instantlie shot in the side.
 Having received a wound he fel to the ground,
 And the wound proved mortal to be.
 And in a short time he was caried in,
 And in the trench he did die.
 Being dead and gone he was caried home,
 And laid in his tent then was he.
 At our quarter guard after he was buried,
 So ended Francis Ogillvie.¹
 The Lieutenant Mackenen in the leg got a wound,
 With the Captain he was brought home.
 And many a man was wounded that time,
 Whom I have no leassure to name.
 By the Generals comand our armie did stand,
 Under arms til after midnight.
 The Duke of Argille our regiment came till,
 And we were dismissed on sight.
 And then moe men was sent on comand,
 The wounded for to help hame.
 To relate dieing men who died in dressing,
 It were a lamentable theme.
 Bot such as were slain upon the plain ground,
 No man to them durst come near.
 The French al the night fired so thick,
 None out of the trench durst stire.
 So with these ataques and bloody exploites,
 Many granadires being slain.
 By ordour then the first on comand,
 The granadires cap they took then.
 And on to that weir past for a granadire,
 To ramforsche our trench in the night.
 And to cover workmen each night aworking,
 And came off as the day it greu bright.
 Some regiments on picket were sent to the trenches,
 Some nights to be the ramforsche.
 Then day and night many men for comand,
 Still wrought come better or worsse.
 And every day our canons did play,
 Til amunition grew scant.
 Before the toun was like to be tane,
 They thought we powder should want,
 And so from Holland to bring amunition,
 The grand armie they did send.

war

¹ At Lille. Not, therefore, 'probably at Oudenarde,' as was suggested in vol. ii. p. 40, n.

Fourten foot regiments and also some squadrons,
 Was sent the same to defend.
 Brave General Cardugen the horse did comand,
 And General Weeb al the foot.
 So down the countrie they marched brisklie,
 And ordered as they thought fit.
 The French armie who wanted not spyes,
 To informe them of that comand.
 They did then consult to make an assault,
 So strong none could it gainstand.
 The Count de Lamote his orders then got,
 With fiveten thousand of men.
 And at Flaxindale¹ they thought to assaille,
 And canons they had nine or ten.
 And so it fel out to be a strong boue,
 Upon a strong pass in the way.
 The French canon did take up the ground,
 And their men al in battel array.
 Our comand throu the pass began to advance,
 With courage conduct and skille.
 The French bregads stronglie canonaded,
 And some of our men they did kill.
 Our regiments that day advanced in array,
 And brisklie cleared the pass.
 The Royal Scots marching in the frount,
 They dear enough payed for the sausse.
 Our horse and foot with many a shot,
 Forssed the French to retire.
 With their canon they dreu of anone,
 And our men perseued in the rire.
 At a village near by the Frenches did stay,
 Expecting that night a supplie.
 Thretie thousand men to them was a coming,
 And a Chiftain the Duke of Bourgundie.
 For to suport the Count de Lamotte.
 Bourgunje did come the same night.
 Bot our amonition so quicklie marcht on,
 Of it they never got sight.
 So our amonition weel guarded along,
 Came saffellie to us at length.
 And the French hoast their travell al loost,
 And dreu back to their oun strength.
 And we at the sidge this time was oblidged,
 To strengthen our grand armie.
 Elleven regiments of foot on day marcht out,
 And taried dayes two or three.
 Cornal Hebrons regiment to the trenches was sent,
 Two dayes without a relieffe.

The French threu boams thick amongst us,
 Which did right mickle mischieffe.
 For with one boam we had two men slain,
 In the trench by our great batterie.
 We releaved at night and in the twelght,
 We wan home bot did not weel see,
 At the sidge we did lie and besides our deutie,
 The trench we behoved to ramforsse.
 Til our amonition up to us did come,
 Guarded with both foot and horsse.
 The time of this sidge our armies in fields,
 They lived at mickle unrest.
 The French armie the toun to supplie,
 Or releave as they could do best.
 And Mallbroughs armie was labouring dayelie,
 The sidgers for to defende.
 To every ataque that we sidgers did make,
 A fresh suplie he did send.
 Our grand armie at Ellshine did lie,
 When Eugine advanced to Liele.
 Mallberies armie lay there for a cover,
 Defending the sidge very weel.
 The Duke de Wandum his host dreu alonge,
 And led them out towards Monss.
 And in good array their banners displayed,
 Besides that weel fortified sconsse.
 Malbroughs armie on wing being ready,
 Their mottion for to attende.
 Beneath Pong the Pire they crossed the water,
 Marching several dayes upon end.
 And near to Atte one night they did camp,
 And the nixt day marched againe.
 The Duke de Wandum to Liele could not win,
 Although he would fain never so.
 The thretie of August the French great host,
 From Monsse began to advance.
 To releave Buffelar was nou in despaire,
 Mallberie prevented that chance.
 With courage on hie came our grand armie,
 Within two ligs of Liele toun,
 Between Liele and Turney they came noblie,
 And there the camp was set down.
 The French hoast was nou on their march,
 Approaching fast towards Liele.
 Bot Mallberies armie encamped already,
 Did cover the sidge pretie weel.
 Then both the armies camped on the fields,
 Within three ligs of Liele toun.

Lessines

Vendôme

Pont l'Espierre

Malbroughs armie they wrought bussielie,
 Entrenching about them al rounde.
 So both the armies camped on the field,
 Confronted against one another.
 And in battell array dreu out several dayes,
 Bot to feight they were in a suither.
 The thretie of August they there did encampe,
 Untill the seventen of September.
 Then both on one day they marched awaye,
 And left us at the sidge I remember.
 Bot while they lay there the sooth to declare,
 I purpose with a good intent.
 Two English regiments on comand at a village,
 By Mallberies orders were sent.
 On the frount of our armie that village did lie,
 And two regiments lay there on comand,
 From the French armie a brisk cavalrie,
 Advanced on throu the land.
 And then in great ire they bitterlie fire,
 And the place sourounded about.
 Our English regiments camped in that place,
 Did feight with courage most stout.
 So for a long time the thick firing,
 Continued on every side.
 The French horsse right thick did advance,
 And bold in battell did bide.
 Til many a man was wounded and slain,
 Before these French did retire.
 Our English regiments had there a great loose,
 And the rest stood in a great fear.
 The eleventh of September the French hoast there,
 Advanced al in battell array.
 And with their canon they fired anone,
 Our armie to put in a fray.
 Our grand armie in trenches were they,
 Al made ready for a battell.
 Still expecting then the French should have come,
 And so fallen on to pell mell.
 Elleven regiments did march from our sidge,
 To strengthen our grand armie.
 And with Albemalle ready for battell,
 Thousands of brisk cavallrie.
 Our horsse from the sidge al ready to march,
 And joyn them to our armie,
 The French mean time with strong canonading,
 Their ball in the aire made fie,
 And on the tuelth day the canon did play,
 From morning till it was night.

hesitation

Two long dayes then tho it proved in vain,
 Canonading all the day light.
 The two armies standing to their arms,
 Bot did not joyn in battell.
 The French armie at last did retire,
 Hou far I canot weel tell.
 The sidgers and train returned againe,
 Our armie lay still on their ground.
 The toun of Leile was ringing their bells,
 Bot no reliefe yet they found.
 For two dayes time our regiment lay then,
 A reserve for our trenches to be.
 The tuelfth of September before it was noon,
 The besidged did saillie a wie.
 The thick fireing in our trenches began,
 And continued for a short space.
 By forse again the French was beat in,
 And nothing did gain by the race.
 Our regiment that day before the train lay,
 With other two for the reserve.
 In time of that saillie we quicklie did raillie,
 And marched our oun to preserve.
 And in our marching countermanded againe,
 So we wheeled and lay til the night.
 To ramforce our trench at night we did march,
 And came of with the nixt day light,
 So we continued our deutie right hard,
 In sidgeing of that strong toun.
 With night and day working at sapeing and mining,
 Our trench was now worn down.
 With canons fireing evening and morning,
 The wall was pretie weel breacht.
 One row of piliesods which was the French roads,
 The trench alongest it was streacht.
 Then about the raveling that hie basstin,
 We were bussie entrenching each day.
 And every day than new batteries amaking,
 For canons upon them to play,
 We mounted new batteries to play on the basstins,
 And also entrenched with gabins.
 To fagot the foussie preparing were we,
 Binding stons in mids of fassines.
 And every day we caried them in,
 And laid them down into heaps.
 A dollour in hand was promist each man,
 To lay a bridge in the deepths,
 To free bolgers on sight for some hours of a night,
 To lay a bridge throu a foussie.

So some was wounded in wining that wage,
 And some at bridgeing did die.
 In several nights than with dangerous working,
 We bridged a foussie right weell.
 And to make a breach on the ravelling,
 Our canon each day they did reell.
 We got a supplie from our grand armie,
 On the twentie first of September.
 A comande of granadires and some fizanires,
 That morning did come I remember.
 And all that day in our trench they lay,
 And atacqued in the twilight.
 At three shot of canon they had the warning
 The atacque it began upon sight.
 These granadires did clim up to the raveling,
 On hands and feet they did go.
 And some from the wal did back again fall,
 Yet they atacqued it so.
 The battel was hot by the desperat shot,
 Was poured out from the basstine
 And with cruel work that night we did take,
 A corner of that ravelling.
 A number of men we had wounded and slain,
 And dunk back in the foussie.
 The desperat fireing lasted a long time,
 And the French a wie bit did flee.
 Bot in the bassting that night they remaine,
 On a side of that ravelling.
 And al the night long ful fast fireing,
 Was these men of arms so keen.
 Bot our workmen was set aworking,
 On a corner of that bassting.
 And made loadgements within a short space,
 In time of that cruel blasting.
 The besidgers that night two times was repulsed,
 Before these loadgements was made.
 With constant fireing and desperat like working,
 On that raveling they abade.
 Til the twentie third day then without delay,
 That night was another atacque.
 Then our granadires with hand granads,
 Out over the raveling brake.
 And by open force did beat out the French,
 From the mide part of the basstine.
 Such desperat shot and baths right hot,
 In wored was not to be seen.
 A litele bit ground by force we did win,
 And loadgements made in it soon.

i.e. pushed

Bot the French did bide with courage that tide,
 On a quarter of that half moon.
 On either side the Frenches did bide,
 And fired in desperat sort.
 And many a man was wounded and slain,
 In working upon the same fort.
 On the twentie ninth day our granadires they
 Was massters of this half moon.
 And from that corner the French kept there,
 They stormed them very soon.
 Nixt St. Andrews port that basstin we got,
 And many a man we had slain.
 Three several ataques and much cruel work,
 Before that fort we did gain.
 Besides these ataques and cruel smal shot,
 The canon still brisklie did play.
 And many a boam was every day throun,
 Til the slain unburied they lay.
 For a long months time the French was throuing,
 Carcashes like illshapen clews.
 These illeshapen boams throun by their morters,
 Like stinking boardels from stews.
 These illshapen carcashes to kendle our trenches,
 They long time made a great fire.
 Comands of our men with scups ran along,
 To quench it threu dirt and mire.
 The pick and tar it had a vile sar,
 While al the carcash did burn.
 And store of granads did break al in blads,
 In each carcash was a curn.¹
 The goads of iron which did them invirone,
 Was crocked and crossed about.
 The fire did burn and about she did turn,
 The sparks fleu as she came out.
 The boams in Liele was scant I trow weell,
 When such caracshes was made.
 Some russtie rough smith fel aworking with pith,
 And made them four nocked and broad.
 Bot at our boam baterie al the time of the sidge,
 We had good boams enewe.
 In times of ataques the French threu boams,
 Our boamanires every day threu.
 The French had batteries upon their basstins,
 Which fired a great many stones.
 The stones came fleing no man them seeing,
 Til they had broken their bones.
 Our bateries threu boams upon their basstines,
 One day still after another.

For four dayes time was a constant firing,
 Of Musskie and her Granmother.¹
 From the twentie second day to the twentie seventh day,
 Our boams was throun in great number.
 To dismount their bateries stood on the basstins,
 And to do them a deal of more cumber.
 Besides al the work and cruel ataques,
 We had who lay at the sidge.
 The great armies had many falsiefies,
 The French Buffelar to oblidge. feints
 Did send for suplie three thousand cavalrie,
 With amonition for the toun.
 Who for Holanders past by our out guards,
 These horssemen was coming down.
 Til a smal officer was standing by there,
 And saw powder them behinde.
 He gave a loud cry al Frenches are they,
 What the divell nou are ye all blind.
 Our horsse all about gathered in a doupe,
 And boldlie upon them did fire. clump
 Til a thousand of them did flee back againe,
 And some lay dead in the mire.
 And some of their knapsacks did quicklie dispatche,
 And burnt upon their horsse backs.
 And two thousand horsse our line did crosse,
 So quick that none could them take.
 Then in Leile ports entred the French horsse,
 And along the streets did al prance.
 The sojors did cry like thunder in skie,
 O vi wellie Roy de France. vive le Roi
 This cry for joy continued a wie,
 In midele of the same night.
 For amunition was come to the toun,
 Two thousand horssemen most wight.
 September twentie eight in mids of the night,
 This suplie they wan into Liele.
 And on horsse backs they had in knapsacks,
 Powder to furnish it weell.
 They received in weight of powder that night,
 Eighten hundered and six pound.
 They thought with powder the toun to recover,
 But the contraire after they found.
 The nixt day then our armie did blame,
 A Jermain Major Generall.
 He had been false, divell break his halse,
 Some bid, divell take him all. neck

 He had the comand of all the horsse guards,
 That night the Frenches wan in.

¹ The musket and large cannon. The Scots Highlanders called the cannon 'the musket's mother.'

Although he had sold his trust for French gold,
 He was sent away without din.
 Seven or eight regiments of English and Dutch,
 That day got orders to march.
 At one afternoon we took our tents down,
 And came to the place upon search.
 Along the line as we were amarching,
 In mids of the Jerman armie,
 We pitched no tents bot lay on our arms,
 And got ordours all ready to be.
 Then two regiments lay in the same place,
 Where the French before had come in.
 Without any stire all night we lay there,
 And the nixt day all the forenoon.
 And then we came back and pitched our camp,
 In a place just east from the toun.
 Near to the same place where first we did pitch,
 That time the sidge was set down.
 And every day that there we did lie,
 Our workmen came to the trenches.
 It was a hard sidge they did us oblidge,
 To win it all with hard pinches.
 And still Liele cat¹ before the breach sat,
 Which many a man did fear.
 For at her taill they durst not assaille,
 On her top they durst not apeare.
 So our Generalls their counsellis did call,
 What way that thing should be done.
 For five thousand men might be hurt or slain,
 Bot the cat could not be tane soon.
 The Generall Mallberie he made this replie,
 Since cats see best in the night,
 We will nou assaye with her for to play,
 In the forenoon with the day light.
 A hundered men that night fell a bridgeing,
 Betwen the ravelling and the cat.
 A hundered crouns to them was payt down,
 Bot thretie was killed thereat.
 On the third of October our regiment together,
 To mount the trenches took way.
 And three hundered men from the grand armie came,
 And at Marquetet they stood in arraye.
 When al the regiments for mounting the trenches,
 Came and dreu up in their place.
 The three hundered men they made ready then,
 And marched in a short space.

¹ The cat (see New Eng. Dict. and Ducange s.v. cattus), Fl. katte or storm-katte, represents an external bastion for protection of a gateway or breach. It was no doubt manned by a powerful garrison at night and less by day. Hence Marlborough's joke.

A serjant of the Royal and ten granadires,
 That day did march in the front.
 An Officers comission was promist the serjant,
 And to win it he semed not blunt.
 And Captain Macaye¹ he nixt passed by,
 Comanding all the granadires.
 And several Officers passed by after him,
 And platones of good fizanires.
 Along the trench in haiste they did march,
 Without any noisse or dine.
 And all the trenches for the relieffe,
 In regiments was marching in.
 The French strong cat was nothing alarte,
 Til that our men did win in.
 The serjant and granadires who was the forires, forlorn hope
 In that hie basstine did clim.
 The French sentinal who stood on the corner,
 Our serjant he did him dispatche.
 The granadires did clim in fast after him,
 And so the cat they did catch.
 That serjant of the Royall he passed up weell,
 And stroake at a French Officer.
 And in the arm he gave him a wound,
 And worthy he was to preffere. for promotion
 And that Officer he took prissoner,
 And brought him to the Generall.
 Himself with a shot was wounded in the back,
 Which seemed not deadly at all.
 The Captain Macaye he passed up brisklie,
 With the granadires at his back.
 And on the hie basstin they nimblie clime,
 The smal guns began for to crake.
 The French out of ordour they were altogether,
 When our granadires came them upon.
 And expelled them thence in a very short space,
 And the neus to Leile ran anone. news
 Their cat was tane by our brave Englishmen,
 Which was the defence of their toun.
 Some cryed Morbleue it could not be true,
 And some for fear fell a swoune.
 Six hundered men the first on comande,
 All ready in the Market place.
 Their Chieff Officer was dineing with Buffelar,
 And they were surprisid in the casse.
 They did expect no atacke before night,
 And was ordering for the defence.
 Bot on that forenoon a comand of our men,
 By force expelled them thence.

Their armed men russed to the wall,
 And fired out from the toun.
 Our men on the basstine no cover had then,
 Some sudenlie dead was dung down.
 Our Captain Macaye was wounded badlie,
 And no way could be got off.
 The thick fireing lasted a long time,
 And boams were throun aloafe,
 About two afternoon one boam throun in,
 Did fire a great magassine.
 Where earth and stons mens bodies and bones,
 In the aire to flee might be seen.
 The earth did quake two milles round about,
 When that magassine bleu in the aire.
 The French in the trench beyound the grand breach,
 Did end their lives in disspaire.
 Two hundered granads did flee al in blads,
 And three tuns of povder did bloe.
 And thretie sojourns did suffer deaths shours,
 Sudenlie in the aire all did goe.
 Buffelar did protest the toun it was loost,
 For al the defence they could make.
 That fatal day Morbleue they did cry,
 Euginea the toun he shall take.
 Our comand of men al that day alonge,
 Upon the hie basstine did stay.
 Dead or alieve wounded or yet wholle,
 No man of them wan awaye.
 A Dutch brigadire was wounded that day,
 And Cornall Hebron called in his place.
 Both day and night he ordered in it,
 To acompany the Generalls grace.
 Eiftie men of each regiment that was in the trenches
 Was called the first on comande.
 And the Generall ordered Major Campbell,
 Upon the hie basstine to stand.
 And with these men he had on comande,
 He kepted the cat¹ all the night.
 The wounded men and the first comande,
 Came off with the evening light.
 The Captain Macaye alieve brought away,
 Bot his wounds proved mortal to be.
 Tho the best doctours was employed for his cure,
 Yet within few dayes he did die.
 Several Officers more was wounded ful sore,
 And stille on the basstine did lie.
 These bold granadires at night was releaved,
 And home wards again did them hie.

Our Cornall and Major by Generals ordores,
 Upon that hie basstine did stay.
 And al the regiments lay in the lou trenches,
 Til they were releaved nixt day.
 And day and night then a deal of workmen,
 Did work on the hie basstines,
 To make loadgements and a fortified trench,
 With pickets and double fassines.
 I canot endite nor yet put in write,
 The working was there about.
 The cruel ataques and many night works,
 And slaughter of men very stout.
 And constantlie on both day and night then,
 We wrought in dangerous places.
 And many brave men at working was slain,
 And many men got bloodie faces.
 On the fifth of October a comand by order,
 Upon the French did ataque.
 And in that evening on the hie basstine,
 To storme they proved not slack.
 And in with a boat they thought to escape,
 No longer they could make debaite.
 Since off the hie basstins with cruel ataquing,
 The Frenches at last they were beat.
 And in their boat was the Officer shot,
 And several of their men slain.
 Before the grand breach saileing there alongs,
 The boat was broken amaine.
 The French a long time by night was working,
 And throuing out wood on the breaches.
 Til the long big trees in heaps lay alongs,
 In the sloopes of the wall it streaches.

breaches

Our canons did play al the sixth and seventh day,
 In order to make a new breach.
 And threu a water port the great canon shot,
 Was directed the wall for to reach.
 Upon the eight day our comands did array,
 Another storme for to make.
 On the low piliesods by Magdallen port,
 That strong place from them to take.
 The French in crouds in these piliesods,
 A noble deffence they did make.
 And al the evening the desperate fireing,
 The earth al about it made quake.
 The boams flieing there both out and in,
 And the smoake it filled the aire.
 And a terrible mine the Frenches did spring,
 And a cruel like slaughter was there.

And twice by forse our men was repulsed,
 And lost there three hundered men,
 The French in heaps lay dead in the depths,
 Whose number I do not weel keen.
 The French from the toun came out there bedeen,
 And crouded in these piliesods.
 This Magdalen port to it they resorte,
 And strongly kepted these roads.
 Our men fel to then with saping and mining,
 And wrought in to them in roads.
 And bit and bit after this we did get,
 A pairt of these low piliesods.
 Bot stil Leile toun did boldly defende,
 Til provision began to grow scant.
 Then Buffelar caused slay fiftie horsse in a day,
 And told them they should not want.
 And caused destribute them in the garissoune,
 For to suplie them in need.
 Te Lavian de cheval¹ they parboile and boyle,
 And made a soupe to their bread.
 The sidgeing strong continued stil one,
 With many a bold essaye.
 With constant working sapeing and trenching,
 And mineing both night and day.
 Upon the threeten we atacqued again,
 In storming of a half moon.
 And at that atacque was a cruel work,
 And a very great slaughter was done.
 And from that place our men was repulsed,
 And beat back from the half moon.
 And on the fiftenth we stormed againe,
 And masters were of it soon.
 In the low piliesods beneath the grand breach,
 A constant battel was kept.
 Our men and the French was stil within reach,
 And some in their shoes stil slept.
 From the low piliesods before the grand breach,
 The French at lenth was beat out.
 Bot at Magdalen port that fortified spote,
 They kepte with courage most stout.
 To our granadires for several atacques,
 Was payt five scilings each man.
 Tho several died yet they who surviued,
 Whiles of beir was taking a cane.
 And free vollgers got money likewayes,
 These dangerous works to make good.

¹ La viande de cheval. There was chevrit before Ladysmith.

The dead mens wage to them who surviue,
 Was payt and the price of their blood.
 The French stil on was fireing canon,
 Upon a strong water sluice.
 To let the water come in to our trench,
 They thought in breaking the clouse.
 On the fourteenth day and on the fiftenth,
 Our men was working bussie.
 And three great saps before the grand breach,
 Was wrought into the foussie.
 Then at a great sape we several days wrought,
 The water for to let away.
 And when it was done and the water let in,
 From the grand foussie it made way.
 On the eighten day our canons did play,
 Upon the port Sant Andrewe.
 And an infinite number of firie granads,
 Within their byaes we threue.
 On the nintenth day we wrought bussilie,
 And raissed a trench very hie.
 To defend our folk from the great gun shot,
 And shot of the French musquetrie.
 The twentieth day at noon the Frenches begane,
 To throu out fagots and fire.
 To kendle the wood lay on the grand breach,
 Fire balls they threu out in ire.
 The wood on the breach the fire did catch,
 A strong burning did begine.
 All day and all night it burned ful bright,
 And they rejoyseed withine.
 A melodious noise with trumpets and hoe boys,
 The French had within the breach.
 The brim burning flame it did them defende,
 No danger then could them reach.
 The twentieth first day our great guns they,
 Began at eleven of the cloake.
 And continued on in constant fireing,
 And al the breach it did smoake.
 And our granadires fired on the breach,
 Right offt to hold the French down.
 At night the free volgers was laying a bridge,
 Ore the great foussie nixt to the toun.
 Throu three galleries they handed fassines,
 And some the bridges did laye.
 So throu the foussie into the grand breach,
 They made a plain patent way.
 One bridge was made both patent and bread,
 And another was half way throu.

On the twentie second day for a capitulation,
 The bold Buffelar he did boue.
 At four afternoon as our workmen went in,
 A parlie did beat on the breach.
 A flag was set up ore our shot it left off,
 A parlie called for by a speach.
 A General cam out and stayed in our trench,
 Some of ours went in to the toun.
 And that same very night they began for to make,
 A long and sure capitulation.
 The Duke de Bufelar gave up the toun there,
 In name of the Duke de Bargunie.
 The City Leile he surendered all,
 To the Prince Eugine of Savoyie.
 The Emperours General and Chief comander,
 And the Viseroye of al Flanders.
 To the armies of the Alies who wan it by conquest,
 With advise of al noble comandars.
 The Duk de Buffelar he obtained there,
 For three days time to provide.
 Then the French horse with bag and bagage,
 Away from Liele were to ride.
 These horsse who came in with the amonition,
 By night in time of the sidge.
 From thence to Dowey were to march away,
 Their conditions so did oblidge.
 Their sick and hurt men had six weeks time,
 Provided them to stay in toun.
 Then al equipages with bag and bagage,
 Were to go off al saffe and soun.
 And noble men of France were to pass hence,
 Convoied to the nixt garisoun.
 Equipages and servants and every thing else,
 Was to be convoied off soune.
 The burgers of Leile they provided weell,
 For the liberties of their toun.
 Their stor masters and al Officers,
 No way was to be put down.
 So every man that belonged to the toun,
 In his office was to continue,
 Each in his oun post was to officiat,
 The uplifters of the Revenue.
 The Duke de Buffelar the touns governour,
 With al the men that he had,
 Was to pass without faile to the citydail,
 There to bid sidgeing tho bad.
 His post in the toun he was to lay down,
 Within a very short space.

On the twentie thrid day our Generals they,
 Both made and sealed that band.
 And al felt merchals and chief officers,
 They sealed the same with their hand.
 And al the whole time of the capitulation,
 We orderly marcht to our trench.
 And al the workmen had no ocapation,
 Bot converse and look to the French.
 About the same time of this capitulation,
 The French a sidge did set down.

Lefingen

To a place called Lochfine down towards Ostend,
 A strong sconse in a smal toun.
 And in a short time they conquered Lochfine,
 And some was wounded and slain.
 A Major General and five hundered men,
 In it were al prisoners tane.
 Bot at the sidge of Liel was killed a deal,
 Of men : of every degree.
 About eighteen thousand was reckened the slain,
 Which belonged to our armie.
 And likewayes in Liel was killed a deal,
 Of French who kepted the toun.
 About twentie two regiments in Liel was once
 When first the sidge was set down.
 Al killed or disabled and in the war died,
 Bot the number of six thousand men.
 Who now alieve were when the bold Bufelar,
 The citydaille took to defende.
 The twentie fifth of October we got orders,
 Sixten regiments to march in the toun.
 And that day afternoon we marched al in,
 By beating our drums gave a soune.
 At Magdalen port in order we enter,
 Then marcht to the market place.
 There every regiment in order was set,
 And in arms stood a long space.
 And towards night they have us dismisst
 When we had stood long in the weet.

Some wood for to burn into us they bring,
 In corners of that foule street.
 That same day together marcht away,
 The French horsse al in a route.
 Buffelar and the foot to the citydalle flite,
 To keep that sconse very stout.
 Three hundered of our men in prisson in toun,
 That day they were al set free.
 To their several regiments away they did pass,
 To places where they might be.
 On the twentie sixt day the Prince Eugine he,
 Vent to Sant Pauls Coledge kirk.
 And the O Te Deum he sweetlie did sing,
 And a Pater Nos: in the mirk.
 Our regiment did stay so posted were they,
 In arms at the port de Labae,
 And throu the splenade from Sant Andrew,
 Our ingenires lines caused drae.
 The Munsie de Maye was now put away,
 Who had been our chief enginire.
 Some said he was cause he was blamed for loose,
 Of many was slain in our weire.
 At sidge of the toun he planted the guns,
 And breached the wall to soon.
 So from the grand breach offt fired the French,
 Killed many men ore it was done.
 So young Cowhorns¹ they did now suborne,
 And chused him for head Ingenire.
 With magick and logick in many a project,
 He ordered each point of our weire.
 When fiftie engenires was killed this year,
 Whom the sidge did waste and destroy.
 Bot at the citydaille no man we had of vaille,
 Bot Cowhorne whom they pleased to employe.
 Comands of men was set a working,
 And trenched along on the wall.
 Between the end of the street and the out port,
 Earnestlie to work they did fall.
 The French this time was bussie working,
 And mounting their hie batterie.
 Men of many nation at fortification,
 Ful bussilie working we see.
 A strong out work the Frenches did make,
 Weel planted with new pilieosods,
 And without port Debare our people aworking,
 Made trenches there by the roads.
 On both sides the men wrought day and night then
 And did make no mollestation.

Son of the famous Dutch engineer, who in 1708 was an old man.

Til the twentie ninth day at four afternoon,
 Then was ended the capitulation.
 The men was working the horses feeding,
 Al out on the citydaille ground.
 And in the sunshine Buffelar walked then,
 With him his hauke and his hunde.
 He walked about and had a fine courte,
 The dayes of that capitulation.
 And some gentelmen wan the citydaille in,
 To pass time for recreation.
 Some noblemen then with Buffelar did dine,
 And at the chaff they did play.
 And five large muton he got from the toun, sheep
 Al good for a super were they.
 On the twentie ninth day then Buffelar did cry,
 Now gentlemen al have a caire.
 For without doute the time is now out,
 Therefore for war you prepaire.
 Three warning guns discharged at anes,
 And fired al without ball.
 And then after them the canons ramdum,
 Did play upon our toun wall.
 The folk in toun for fear fel aswoune,
 When canons again they hard play.
 From port Debae they flited awae,
 No longer there they durst stay.
 Great pairt of that toun was in a confussion,
 And many they quacked for fear.
 And cursed Buffelar the toun distroyer,
 No peace he wil make this year.
 Great pairt of our toun it is now dung doun,
 Betwixt Magdalen and Andrew.
 And now port Debare it will pay for all,
 This sidgeing sore we may rewe.
 The Prince Holstenbeg by order was made, Holsteinbeck
 The head Governour nou in Leile.
 And General Coliour made under governour, Colyear
 And so provided were weele.
 Al round the toun our armie was lyeing,
 As they were al the time of the sidge.
 To the citydaile sidge they sent men in arms,
 For their orders so did oblidge.
 The sidgers al round again new begane,
 Their workmen for to put out.
 And the strong citydaile we did then asaill,
 And trenched the splenade about.
 At the port Debare we did then prepaire,
 And mounted a large batterie.

And then thereon we planted canone,
 And dressed them up orderlie.
 Then several batteries al about we did raise,
 And canon and morters brought on.
 From Liele Market place in a very short space,
 For our train that time stod thereon.
 We were dayelie working and batteries making,
 And trenching throu the splenade.
 And many a man for working they came,
 From many a sunderie bregade.
 Nine or ten regiments did come in likeways,
 And lay in some barocks in Liele.
 They came for suplie from our big armie,
 And so they did very weele.
 Each regiment of them mounted double men,
 With arms and workmen got wage.
 Both they and we wrought on constantlie,
 Which put our foes in a rage.
 They fired canon upon our workmen,
 And some time some in the toun.
 To preserve them we fel a working,
 And blinds on the street set down.
 And with musquet ball they fired withall,
 Right desperatlie day and night.
 Some of our workmen was wounded and slain,
 Who constantlie wrought in their sight.
 Throu from port Debar our trenches did run,
 About by the hie may polle.
 The French from within did fire right keen,
 From many a sundery wie holle.
 By mineing and saping we wrought on them,
 And holled al their out piliesods.
 We wrought our mines and then sprang them,
 And throu their works made roads.
 And every day then the French was throuing,
 And casting out fierie granades.
 Which in our trench brak with many a crak,
 And fleu about al in blades.
 In order to this some of our granadires,
 Was comanded to throu upon them.
 Granades and match was brought to our trench,
 And al for to pay them home.
 So several dayes we wrought in this wayes,
 Til we wan al their out piliesods.
 In sight of the French we advanced our trench,
 And wrought ay nearer our roads.
 And throu the splenade a working we had,
 A foussie to take off the water.

As the fousse was made al throu the splenade,
 Their guns still at us did blater,
 The outer fousse was dried thereby,
 And a folding bridge we got one.
 Our men wan over without any hovere,
 On the other side trenched anone. delay
 Bot when our workmen to the trench was got in,
 The French did desperatlie fire.
 So that many good men was wounded and slain,
 And many was plunged in the mire.
 The French came out offtimes with a spoute,
 Our workmen for to destroy.
 Our granadires soon beat them off againe,
 With stroaks which did them anoye,
 When our workmen had wrought the night time,
 And set gabins al in order.
 The valiant French came out on them,
 To beat them off from their border.
 With many a saillie and valiant raillie,
 Far moe then heir I can number.
 The French pulled down and took away in,
 Our gabines to make us cumber.
 Stil our granadires fired on their nosse,
 And stil beat them in again.
 Some at the gabines got stoped out eyes,
 And wounds which did them a pain. blinded with sand
 Many wounded and hurt with desperat shot,
 Was at this work every night.
 And many a gabines our workmen set up,
 The French puled down upon sight.
 Twentie stivers or a croun the French got then,
 For each gabine they took ine.
 Our men and them about the gabines,
 Was like to stop other ston blind.
 Likewayes our workmen for seting gabines,
 Had exterordinary wage.
 Which was payed to them after the working,
 By the engenire or his page.
 Our ordinar work monie was payt orderlie,
 Each regiment got their oun pairt.
 Which was destribute the armie throughout,
 So passed off in many an airt. direction
 Al with detashed men this sidge it vent on,
 And stil we wrought nearer and nearer.
 And in Liele toun al kinds of provision,
 To us grew dearer and dearer.
 So we wrought on in saping and trenching,
 Ay nearer to the citydaille.

The French sallied out in many a route,
 Bot nothing it could them availle.
 And stil the French men continued on,
 In fireing out canon ball.
 The port Debare was sloaped right sair,
 And lumps of it stil did fall.
 One boam was throun one carcash anone,
 And both at the port Debair.
 A litele guard housse they brunt in a bliesse,
 And a smal building did mar.
 The French canon still fired upon,
 The bridge where our workmen did passe,
 And then by night that place was releaved,
 By day they might pay for the sasse.
 The ston scilder housses on the citydail corners,
 The French stil fired there from.
 The men in our trenches was wounded and slain,
 And never one knew weel by whom.
 Then our constabels workmen and handlangers,
 Did mount up a litele batterie.
 And two or three guns was planted thereon,
 Who fired as sneel as could be.
 So two or three dayes we fired with these,
 And thes litele ston houses dang down.
 Except thes wie housses that stood on the corners,
 Al the citydaile was kept sounde.
 Tho several batteries was mounted besides,
 Oposite to the citydaille wall.
 And al the canon set with the platforme,
 Magassines made for pouder and ball.
 Tho by degrees al our batteries,
 Was wrought near the citydaille.
 And heaps of stones and likewayes boams,
 Was gathered in for an asaile.
 And tho we wrought in without noisse or dinn,
 With our scupes pickaxes and hows,
 And al things ready the walls for to breach,
 Yet our batteries did never lousse.
 And Buffelar within made likewayes provision,
 Of engines to set in the breach.
 And double swans fethers¹ to run upon wheels,
 When a storm upon them did reach.
 And al the planting he had cutted down,
 And gather together in heaps.
 With heaps of trees in magazine doors,
 And the weel of water he keeps.
 Of many good horsse they cuted the throats,
 Of horsse flesh they had no scant.

¹ Swan's feathers, or, a machine covered by overlapping timber, like feathers, and placed on wheels, which the men pushed before them when making or resisting an attack.

For supe to their bread they boiled it indeed,
 Their allowance they never did want.
 With bread and beir and other good cheire,
 Their sojors was provided weel.
 Some pork and pisse some buter and chisse,
 And several sorts of good meal.
 A can of wine to every six men,
 Was destribute at the least.
 And enough of brandie Buffelar gave largelie,
 To such as he pleased to feast.
 A guard of granadires Buffelar he provided,
 In casse of a muttenie.
 So in and out they stayed him about,
 To them the brandie gave he.
 The boams he brake and poudere did take,
 And leasurely did it wasste.
 So the amonition ful fourtie days time,
 Buffelar he made it to laste.
 Buffelar did provide and to them he coyned,
 The copper in place of monie.
 And that motto he put on it also,
 For defence of King and countrie.
 Their workmens wage was payed right large,
 And he promised to them also.
 Good monie in France to them to advance,
 When home again they should go.
 Our armies ingenire Cowhorn was heire,
 And he wrought in with noble engine.
 On an evening late from our trench he went,
 To wiewe the French works that time.
 And four granadires he took to alongs,
 And the cart of the place in his hand.
 Tho the fire was thick and the night very mirk,
 No manner of hurt then they fand.
 The four granadires was in a great fear,
 When near on the French they did come.
 Our engenire and his men al safely came in,
 Bot sloaps in his cart there was some.
 He told the granadires they needed not fear,
 So they marched to the foussies brink.
 Our noble engenire gave them a pissstole,
 And bad them his good health to drink.
 He pleased to hire a valliant sojor,
 Nixt night to come naked man,
 To drau out a clousse in the foussie mouth,
 End to imitate the white swan.¹

¹ Evidently a swan used to frequent the place, and the unclothed soldier was mistaken for it.

So in the French sight he did come by night,
 And drewe that clousse in the water,
 The French thought harm to hurt the swan,
 That thereabout ussed to swater.
 While we were stil working and constantlie sidging,
 And dayelie working in mines,
 Ingenire Cowhorn he still did ordaine,
 Al works with noble engines.
 And Buffelar stout the castile held out,
 Til their armie was beat in the field.
 The French beat from Brisels and Audenar field,
 Before that Buffelar did yeald.
 The French grand armie they marched away,
 From Liele the sevennten of October.
 And Malberies armie marched the same day,
 With manlie courage and sober.
 So both the armies marched several dayes,
 Although they marched not far,
 The French at Pong the Pire passed in this weire,
 And camped about Audenar.
 And in on that toun some boams they threu,
 And some housses they did burn.
 Bot stayed not to sidge as many aledge,
 Bot away from it they did turn.
 Then to Brissels toun they marched anone,
 And there set down a strong sidge.
 Where General Muraye with thretie thousand,
 Did keep that toun and oblidge.
 Al burgers in toun he ordered that time
 To keep themselves al within.
 With men in arms these fortifications,
 He kepted and made no much dinn.
 The French right soon beleagured that toun,
 And likewayes began for to trench,
 General Muraye then did so bravely defende,
 Of it they wan not an inch.
 Upon an out sconce the French did advance,
 And made a cruel ataque.
 Which was to their coast three hundered they loost,
 And at last from it was back.
 The French grand armie their cover did lie,
 Betwixt Audenar and Grammunge.
 The sidge of Brissels did dayelie encrease,
 Some of the wall down was dung.
 Now Malberies armie was lying at Russelay,
 And kepted the country right weel.
 And sometimes to us they sent a suplie,
 In the time of our sidgeing at Leil,

In the moneth November the General Cardugen,
 For foradging vent on comande.
 It was reported that the toun of Jepere,
 Sent out a very strong bande.
 Our armie this time was stil foradgeing,
 In al that countrey about.
 And the garisoune of Jeper in a bulke together,
 From their old toun saillied out.
 So some officers and some of our horsse,
 One day they happened to take.
 Between them and their toun the General Cardugen
 In haiste his progrese did make.
 Few men in the toun they had in the time,
 Altho the toun it was strong.
 Had it been besidged as it was aledged,
 It could not hold out very long.
 In the suburbs and out villages,
 Our cavalerie lay for some dayes.
 Al about Jeper so floateth the water,
 No horsse passage in thes wayes.
 No designe of sidgeing the Jeper was fearing,
 As afterwards ye may hear.
 In noble araye our horsse rode awaye,
 And left it for al that year.
 Malberies armie they lay stil at Russelay,
 Til they were ordered to march.
 And beside Denssie on night they did lie,
 And for a whiles fire did search.
 The nixt morning they marcht againe,
 As fast as they might weel drie.
 The Prince Eugine was marching this time,
 From Liele with a litele armie.
 Malberies armie marcht on constantlie,
 Til they were beneath Audenar.
 And with coper boats that water they bridge,
 The French mussicks for to mar.
 Our armie that time soon in a morning,
 Past over that water with speed.
 In spight of al France that day they advance,
 And made their foes for to bleed.
 Our English horsse did noblie prance,
 And brake in on the French line.
 The French cryed railie in a ferie fery,
 The field that day they did tine.
 And into great fear they began to retire,
 And fled off in a good order.
 And their granadires possted on their reires,
 Til they wan quitte from that border.

Bot many a time they turned againe,
 And fired from behind a hedge.
 From hedge to hedge perforce they were beat,
 Some left their arms in pledge.
 Three shot of canon soon in the morning,
 Put the French hoast to the run.
 And al the day long with feighting and fleing,
 Ore night there was enough spun.
 Our horsse and dragouns made many sore crouns,
 When they wan to with broad swords.
 The French granadires in retiring did fire,
 Great slaughter made in few words.
 At the same very play that same very day,
 Thousands of men there was slain.
 Our armie perseued with courage renewed,
 Til to hault at lenth they were fain.
 The French armie ran and over a water wan,
 Towards Atte ore that they did blinde,
 There on a plain field again they raillied,
 And cuted the bridge them behinde.
 That same very time the Prince Eugine,
 Advanced on to Pong of the Pire.
 Where some Irish regiments who keepeed that passe,
 Fleed off as he did appeare.
 The German cavalerie advanced brisklie,
 And stronglie did them perseue.
 So many of them was prisoners tane,
 And killed and wounded not fewe.
 The sidge of Brissels was raisseid likewayes,
 The French fleed off in great fear.
 General Muraye soon came out of the toun,
 And perseued them closse in the reire.
 A pairt of their train that day it was tane,
 As they fleed off from the toun.
 Both collours and drums was left them behinde,
 And abundance of arms throun doun.
 The fight of Audenar may weel be compaired,
 And their fleeing from Gramunge.
 To the batel Ramelie where the Frenches did flee,
 From Ramelie doun to Gedunge.
 Between Gramung and Atte the French did hallt,
 And in a body they hovere.
 And by the mids they cut a ston bridge,
 That our armie could not get over.
 And from Brissels they fleed off likewayes,
 Til they wan in behinde Monsse.
 Betwixt Monss and Atte Sant Gillim doth stand,
 The which is a very strong sconssse.

St. Ghislain

Two ligs from Mons that fortified sconsse,
 In a strong place of the countrie.
 That very sconss is the defence of Monss,
 And lets in al their suplie.
 From Fort Sant Gillim the Frenches out came,
 For to asiste their armie.
 Our garissoune of Atte advertised of that,
 Marcht in that sconss for to se.
 A French serjant and a very few men,
 Our Dutches did there gefange. capture
 The toune of Monss had now loost their sconss,
 The keepers they woved to hange. woved
 The French armie advertised presentlie,
 And so came marching from Monss.
 And with an hoast of both foot and horsse,
 They laid sidge to that same sconss.
 Ful four hundreded men was then within,
 Who proved both valiant and stout.
 Had they amonition and enough of provission,
 That sconse they might have held out.
 Our valiant Officer and his men there,
 Right nobelie made their defence.
 And fired canon their foes stile upon,
 Was worthie of a recompence.
 For four dayes time this sconss they defende,
 With manlie courage and skille,
 And the French hoast for brag nor for boast,
 That strenth they could not come tille.
 Til they within grew scant of provission,
 And nothing they could get ine.
 The French armie about them did lye,
 They might fastt til they grew bline.
 When four dayes time was both come and gone,
 No kinde of releaf they can see.
 They wanted bread in time of their need,
 Their friends them could not suplie.
 A parlie they beat and began for to treat,
 And so the fort did surrender.
 Al honorable terms and al good conditions,
 They grant to our nobele defender.
 So from that sconss they were tan to Monss,
 And kept in open confine.
 They did bot stay for two or three dayes,
 Til they were releaved againe.
 The moneth November was al passed over,
 And the French beat off from the field.
 The citydail of Leile Buffelar he held still,
 Four dayes before he did yeald.

The Prince Eugine was now come againe,
 And al his brisk cavalrie.
 And al the foot to Leile was come back,
 Bot stille yet at sidgeing were we.
 Now in December the cold and hunger,
 Began to bite at our sidge.
 Buffelar the citydaile he thought no to yeald,
 Til needcessatie did them oblidge.
 A deal of men in the citydaile dyeing,
 Provisions now was near spent.
 The cold and the froast the earth it congealed,
 The night was now in its lent.
 Buffelar might be wearing scant of provission.
 And might be fearing a storme.
 We had our trenches wrought pretie near in,
 Stil thinking the same to performe.
 Several tideings of victorious wars,
 Came to us from Germanie.
 The Duke of Savoy with the Emperours army,
 Had made the French armie to flee.
 Three provences of land retaken again,
 And the French hoast put to the route.
 The fifth of December it was I remember,
 When the regiments at Leile turned out.
 And al our camp round lying at sidgeing,
 And al the comands in our trenches.
 Al very gladly we fred victorie,
 And cryed futie al ye Franches.
 One batterie with ball we had charged weel,
 When we fired the victorie.
 And at the saillie port our ball then was shot,
 Some did in the citydaille flee,
 On the seventh day in the morning earlie,
 Buffelar caussed beat his apelle.
 And had libertie for to march away,
 With al his men and himsell.
 And al their arms and every thing elsse,
 Which they pleased for to take.
 His bagage in ships he was to take off,
 This capitulation they make.
 And four dayes time for to provide ine,
 And then they were to march out.
 And leave the citydaille entirely and whole,
 Which is Leiles castel most stout.
 What bread they had left our sojors it bought,
 And some other kinds of provission.
 So on their day they marched away.
 Each one into their divission.

Some old some young some creeple some lame,
 Until the nixt day did stay.
 Buffelar and the men had arms caryng,
 In order they marched away.
 Nine regiments of our men in arms did stand,
 And the French marched them by.
 A Corporal of a company was standing therby,
 Ordered for deserters to spye.
 Buffelar he rode off on a boroued horsse,
 And with him a brave company.
 Of nobels in toun which did him convoye,
 With a deal of their French courtressie.
 Ful three hundreded men was slain now and then,
 Which belonged al to our armie.
 At the citydaill sidge which lassted I aledge,
 Off dayes just one and fourtie.
 The French marched off with men then alieve,
 And left their filth them behinde.
 Our regiments marched in al the citydaill round,
 A deal dead unburied they finde.
 Five hundreded good horsse they eat in that place,
 Some pairt was fat and some lean.
 And a hundreded guildens was payed afterwards,
 Their slaughter housse to make clean.
 Our regiments progress I had near forgot,
 Til memory againe me oblidge.
 We lay near port Defever in some barocks there,
 At the time of the citydaill sidge.
 On beds of strae we throng enough laye,
 When we were free of comand.
 And al our tents with a quarter guard,
 A long time in camp did stand.
 Besides our sidgeing and constant working,
 Comands vent to Hermitire.
 And at the Red Bridge we mounted on guards,
 And other places not near.
 Al throu to Labassie right offt foradged we,
 And got some pairt of good haye.
 And day and night we guarded our horsse,
 And marched with them al the way.
 It was in winter about the mids of November,
 When our tents in camp was tan doun.
 And al our horsse and gran bagage,
 Was al brought into the toun.
 When our regiment al passt to the citydaille,
 To lie in garissoune there perchance.
 Then the French hurt men in wagons was tan,
 And they marcht of into France.

Armentières
 Pont Rouge

On the threeten day Prince Eugins armie,
 Marched from about the toun.
 And on the east side that night they did bide,
 Left regiments to keep garissoune.
 The fourten day in the morning earlie,
 The armie marched from Leile.
 The train in shipes they took it alongs,
 So doun the countrey they reel.
 Trou hedges over ridges til they wan to Bridges,
 For the French was there in that toun.
 Bot our greatest armie with a quick semblie,
 The sidge of Gaunt did set doun.
 The Count de Lamotte governour was in Gaunt,
 And thretie thousand French men.
 Great store of victual was provided withall,
 Whereon a long time they might feen.
 Arms and amonition enough they had in,
 And a large wide toun for to keep.
 Bot Cessfielgaunt the water did stoop,
 That about Gaunt it stod deep.
 The out works at Leile was mounting right weel,
 And the grand breach abuilding was now.
 Three Officers and a hundered men in arms,
 Day and night stood at it I trow.
 The French haistilie came to Labassie,
 In that countrey about the carire.
 And al our out guards to Leile was brought in,
 From that red bridge and Hermitire.
 Cornal Heypburn then sent out a comande,
 With the regiments horsse to Holland.
 The recruiting Officers with them vent alongs,
 In their voyage for Scotland.
 And the twentie thrid day from Leil marched we,
 Til we came to the sidge of Gaunt.
 Tho the wather was fair the field was bot bare,
 And our provissions bot scant.
 And at the armie our Officers they,
 Vent off to the toun Cessfielgaunt.
 Where they were expecting for to get shiping,
 And every thing they might want.
 And from Gaunt toun the French canone,
 Was fireing on our armie.
 Our armie than was bussilie working,
 At this sidge which lassted a wie.
 Four great batteries our armie did raise,
 Oposite to four ports of the toun.
 Our armie all at their Generalls call,
 Ready thes walls to beat doun.

The twentie thrid day it was that our armie,
 At Gaunt did break the first grund.
 And continued on in trenching and working,
 Til the French to peace they were bound.
 The twentie eight day it was that our armie,
 Upon the French made a storme.
 And detashed granadires upon their out works,
 Boldly did the action performe.
 Ful fiveten regiments the governour sent,
 For to defend these out works,
 Arms or amonition they then wanted none,
 Nor spaidis pickaxes nor forks.
 Bot in a short space so happened the casse,
 The Frenches there was defeate.
 Some threu doun their arms and catched no harms,
 Bot yealded their fortune to fatte. fate
 And Mallberies pass they obtained likewayes,
 And so vent doun the countrie.
 Some droues for Antwerp and others to Brussels,
 Went off and let the war be.
 A great counterscarfe and al their outworks,
 That night our armie did take.
 On the thretie day in the morning earlie,
 A capitulation they make.
 The Count de Lamotte he gave Gaunt up,
 And the touns Bridges and Lochfine.
 Al saffe and sound to their own garissounes,
 They were to march al their line.
 These garissons al on the second of Januare,
 Al with their arms marcht out.
 And as they marcht some of them deserted,
 And turned to the right hand about.
 Our armies then within a short time,
 Marched into their garissones syne.
 With countinace sorie Ile wind up the storie
 Of this long and bloodie campine.

[CHAP. IX]

The progress of Cornal Heyburns regiment, with the most remarkable actions of the Armie of the Allies in Flanders in the Year 1709.

Now of the seven hundered and nine,
 The progress I do begine.
 We lay into Leile and bought the dear meall,
 And we made the gruell bot thine.

And aye the longer we lay in this toun,
 Our victuals grew dearer and dearer.
 By this we may see our oun destanie,
 Our deaths draues nearer and nearer.
 When back from Holland was come the comand,
 And threeten days marching got done,
 Our weekly pay we got willinglie,
 Bot the divell a doyt for our shone,
 The States came indeed and highted our bread,
 They made it full fivepence a bread.
 For thripence halfpenie now fivepence pay we,
 And we eat it al up in our need.
 Four stivers a week as many men speak,
 They allowed of gratuitie.
 Bot when it is payed I canot tell you,
 And I wot not who can tell me.
 When with black banes we are filling our wames,
 With mickle black cair and sorow.
 It is the question that many are asking,
 Wherewith wil we dine on the morowe.
 By just calculation of prophets divine,
 The worlde is now wearing old.
 The azur skies we see with our eyes,
 Produces much hunger and cold.
 When to the toun we go for provission,
 And round al the merket place.
 The signs of hunger with dismale collour,
 Is painted in many mens face.
 The hunger and cold nipeth very sore,
 And likewayes the dearth of the meall,
 Which makes us to cry in curssing the day,
 That ever we came into Leille.
 Since I of war have writen so far,
 With al its willfull projects.
 I beg your pardon although I set down,
 Some pairt of its woeful effects.
 As the dearth of meal in the toun of Leile,
 Which every day we do see.
 The great desolation and cruel wasstation,
 Of wind milles once standing hie.
 Al round the toun are brunt and broke down,
 The housses of these villages.
 So sadly anoyed and partily destroyed,
 Are the bouers of these tillages.
 And part of this toun by war throun down,
 And al the provissions made scant.
 The sojors in flocks runing through the street,
 To buy bread in their great want.

shoes

stomachs

And about the toun great store of dead men,
 In several places were found.
 And hungrie dogs for lack of their food,
 Found eating the dead in the ground.
 The Prince Helstenbege an order he made,
 All massterless dogs to destroye,
 For eating the dead and dogs runing wood, mad
 It might the people annoye.
 Likewayes the destruction and cruel wasstation,
 That armies did make in the fields.
 Al sorts of grain destroyed by them,
 And al fruits that the earth yealds.
 In marching and camping and rough foradgeing,
 And bringing in things that they need.
 And that millroding and housses dounrouging, marauding downpulling
 Ocassioneth the dearth of our bread.
 The cruell sidgeings of fortified touns,
 Causseing armies together lay long.
 Within and without and al their about,
 The price of provissions runs wrong.
 Of batels and blood there cometh no good,
 Theirfore we have reason to fear.
 That the Judgement of God for sheeding of blood,
 On this generation draus near.
 I heartiely wish that God would send peace,
 Although that I should be contente.
 In my oun countrie to go theire and die,
 Or live on a sober rent.
 Yet in my progress I will me redress,
 And again my Musse I 'le implore.
 To assiste my pen in making of ryme,
 The naked trowth to adore.
 In the moneth Januare into the same year,
 One thousand seven hundered and nine.
 On the fourth or fifth day it was I heard say,
 When our armie endt the campine.
 Then al our armie were detashed quicklie,
 And marched in to garissoune.
 Twentie regiments of foot by order were sent,
 To lye then into Leile toun.
 Seventen regiments to keep the toun guards,
 And three for the citydalle strong.
 A severe storme came presentlie on,
 The nights grew cold and right long.
 The frost and snow right biter did blow,
 The earth was congealled together.
 The storm did increase still worsse and worsse,
 The streets of Leile they grew slider. slippery

All the garissoune late on an evening,
 By order was turned out.
 And a alarme post each regiment then got,
 Planting on the walls all about.
 Then al the canon fired one after one,
 And then the smal guns begane.
 Three times al round the walls of the toun,
 And the citydaille fired to thane.
 And with a hussae we ended it all,
 Called it a brave victorie.
 Our sucess in weir in the bypasst year,
 By the prospering of our armie.
 And in the Merket place a great show there was,
 Of fire works that was there.
 About big trees burning in a bleasse,
 And squibs which flew in the aire.
 A very great croud then crying alloude,
 With aclamationes of joye.
 The King of Spain they called Sovereaigne,
 And Prince Eugine the Wiseroye.
 And then a comand from Leile was detashed,
 Thretie men of every regiment.
 And in good arraye they marched awaye,
 And likewayes from Minnon was sent.
 A deal of detashments from several pairts,
 That time was sent on comande.
 Between Dainssie and Courtrie a fortnight they laye,
 In villages their throu the land.
 Amonition in ships long lay their abouts,
 The detashments did weel keep.
 They mounted strong guards alwayes on the ships,
 When the snow was lyeing right deep.
 To Wallkine castell was transported all,
 That amonition they had.
 And Coutrie garissoune a guard put theirein,
 In time of this storme so bad.
 All other detashments from Hive did march,
 In haiste to their own garissoune.
 Al the winter time no shipeing did come,
 To us who lay in Leile toun.
 Til the cruel storme its course did performe,
 And ended the moneth of Januarie.
 The nipeing cold a long time did hould,
 None severer ever could bie.
 Some blautening of thoue and melting of snow,
 Was in the moneth Febervar.
 Then with renewed force it congealled a cours
 Its effects was stil grouing wore.

Bot March was come ore the storm was done,
 And the wind did blou and the rain.
 The froast and the snou did then go awae,
 The water did flou up amaine.
 In the lou countrie the water rose hie,
 And brake out over the land.
 Which did great skaith to men and beast baith,
 Drouning villages down in Holland.
 Then both far and near the victual grew dear,
 And dearer yet seemed to be.
 The comities for peace meet in many a place,
 Bot pairted and could not agree.
 The Brigadire Huffel was sconsse Governour,
 Comanding three regiments haille,
 Huffels and Bavers and Cornall Hebrons,
 Lyeing in the citydaille.
 A pretie litle spark and proud pice of work,
 The fort Major walked about.
 A perfect pleasure he took every hour,
 To see the guards turning out.
 Our regiments then at our first coming in,
 Did gather some wood for to burn.
 Bot afterward who was catched with wood,
 Got the gantelate for the same turn.
 In the citydaille we kept guards weell,
 In time of this storme so bad.
 And a litle garde we had then detashed,
 And sent out to the splenade.
 Without the out works of that noble sconsse,
 For to keep guard day and night.
 Without any housse or shelter for us,
 The sun and moon for our light.
 Within a short time we got a guard then,
 In a barock belonged to the toun.
 And throu the splenade our senteries stood,
 Without the citydaille roun.
 Then we got a guard out in a wie sconsse,
 Fort Lewis I think it was called.
 There with a boat we wan in and out,
 And kept guard in that halld.
 A pretie litle thing a four nocked basstine,
 And a guard housse stands in the midle.
 To it in a boat we passt and repasst,
 For mussick some plaid on a fidele,
 With water round the fort is environed,
 The fousies do keep it right weell.
 The ships pases by with wood frequentlie,
 And other things bringing to Leile.

This litle sconsse is an advanced post,
 And belongs to the citydaille fair.
 And in the spring they fel aworking,
 That litle sconsse to repaire.
 And in the citydail throu al the winter,
 The timber men wrought every day.
 In puting in windous in al the barocks,
 And seting of things in arraye.
 And making bedsteds and tables and banks,
 And such things as was aloued.
 Til the citydaille was furnished weell,
 And a deal of timber they heued.
 In the citydaille the French wrought weell,
 And a deal of great timber did cutt.
 And in the winter time by constant working,
 That timber to usse it was put.
 In sentrie boxes and other necessaeres,
 A constant working was their.
 And round Liel toun was fortification,
 And for a new sidge they prepair.
 Our regiment stil lay in the citydaille,
 Al this cold winter and springe.
 In the moneth March with the bovers wagons,
 Amonition to Leile they did bringe.
 A deal of comands stil with them did marche,
 For to keep them in the way.
 Betwixt Minnon and the toun of Leile,
 They were marching every day.
 Tho deep was the way yet day after day,
 They filled al Leile magassines.
 With pouder and ball to provide us all,
 Bot dear we bought the black banes.
 Amonition meall they brought up a deale,
 And other good victuals also.
 Amonition bread came alwayes in need,
 Al things in Leile was dear tho.
 To keep that toun they made provision,
 It was now fortified weel.
 They provided both for peace and for ware,
 By counssel and conduct in Leile.
 And men with recruiting was stil a coming,
 From many a sundrie countrie.
 Most pairt of the regiments that lay in that quarters,
 Was recruited as soon as could be.
 In the moneth Apriell in good rank and fille,
 Our regiment a comand they sent.
 To bring up our mounting was coming from Holland,
 And so they did meet it at Gaunt.

Menin

When our mounting up to us was come,
 The tayelours was put to warke.
 To make our mounting by constant working,
 Every thing was made ready for camp.
 A deal of shiping to Leile was still coming,
 With meal with oats and with hay.
 Of every regiment comands they were sent,
 To be their guard in the way.
 Most part of the men were reserved at home,
 In the citydaille got comande.
 And were marched all into the toun wall,
 And al day they behoved to stand.
 Two hundered men of each regiment then,
 Being sent to be the convoe.
 Cutrige and Minone comands sent alonge,
 And thro' foes them durst not annoye.
 In the moneth of May right frequentlye,
 The shipes was a coming alonge.
 And strong comands them dayely atendes,
 Marching all the way very throng.
 Some part of troupers and Jerman Hossaes,
 Was now sent up into Leile.
 And out on comand about al the toun land,
 They rode scouring the coast weell.
 Great rumor of groats was going likeways,
 Some expecting to get them right soon.
 Some Officers then some money did lend,
 To sojors for to buy shoon.
 Some said Leile would pay very weell,
 The groats for our service monie.
 Some said Cornall Hebron in that would not faille,
 To pay us the same pleasantlie.
 Some said the money was received already,
 Which we belived as our creed.
 Bot then missbeliefe stole in like a thieff,
 And sware the groats was al dead.
 Then some fell aswoun for fear of their shoon,
 Being terifyed for the nixt day.
 And some Officers without any orders,
 They stopte a pairt of their paye.
 So continueing in constant stooping,
 And swearing the groats was nou dead,
 The victuals being dear both heir and elsewhere,
 The sojors at heart now do bleed.
 And when our Major¹ came by in honour,
 Rideing with a new scarlet coat.
 Sojors in a croud cryed out alloud,
 Minde sir the groats that we got.

A deal of shoon he caussed buy soon,
 To the men of his oun companie.
 And when the groats for the regiment was got,
 All payed they behoved to be.
 In the moneth of May on the fourteen daye,
 Our regiment did pass a revieue.
 Without port Magdallen we were musstered then,
 And all our mounting on newe.
 Upon the fiveten then a great comande,
 Was sent out for a convoe.
 Two hundered men vent of every regiment,
 To meet the ships with the haye.
 We marcht from Leile toun on that afternoon,
 And at night we past the Red Bridge,
 Al night while day we lay on the way,
 And then we marcht half a lig.
 To Warlietongue a pretie litle toun,
 And there a while we did staye.
 Til al the ships to that was come upe,
 Weell loaded with oats and with haye.
 And strong convoes of both foot and horsse,
 With them they had al alonge.
 Above the Red Bridge ore they past that clousse,
 The shipes was their very thronge.
 And a litele boat and four men in it,
 A great shipe did it overune.
 And two Swize sojors and one of the skipers,
 That day was drowned in a linn.
 On the sixten day of this moneth of May,
 The ships dreu up towards Leile.
 Convoied al the way without any fraye,
 And they passed another clousse weel
 At eleven acloak at night we had orders right,
 For to march al sloulie hame.
 Our Cornall Hebron he led on the vane,
 And the rest foloued at their time.
 On the eighteen day of this moneth of May,
 Our regiment again was reviewed.
 Our new mounting was al got on then,
 And our granadires caps renewed.
 Our Cornall had got a new coat of arms,
 The which did make a great shewe.
 And Gratus Essto it is the mottoe,
 Off these valliant Scotsmen and true.
 White black red and green the chieff collours seven,
 With all their inferiour mixtures.
 On these caps may be seen by discerning eyen,
 Weell wrought into the same pictures.

Off the knot of Union made by the Britans,
 That sign on our caps ye may see,
 And a sheaf of aroues the Hollanders arms,
 And a lyon as fierce as can be.
 A hand with a shable a horse at the amelle, a short sword
 Are curioslie wrought and weell.
 And guns and granads in several pairts stands,
 And the pictures of shabels of steell.
 And on the farrat of each granadires cap, front
 Are leters for the Cornalls name.
 An I and an H wrought throu other twisse,
 John Hebron for to expreme. express
 On this coat of arms both vallour and courage,
 Displayes in a noble forme.
 Off valliant actions the honour redounds,
 To them the same who performe.
 And in Liel toun they had amonition,
 And their magassines were filled weell,
 Bot indeed the victuall at a dear rate did sell,
 And the poor great hunger did feell.
 To the bakers chops they gathered in floaks, shops
 In seeking their bread for tou buye.
 At the doors open of the corn magassine,
 There was a great tumult and cry.
 The rable in toun they conveened sometimes,
 And a mutinous noisse they did make.
 They gather together in seeking for victuall,
 By forse some pairt they did take.
 Then our Governour gave out an ordour,
 For a picket stil ready to be.
 To keep the magassines he firmly designes,
 When the rable did break loose a wie.
 So al this year the victuall held dear,
 And no otherwayes it could be.
 Such vast multitudes for hunger in crouds,
 Great pitie it was them to see.
 A popelous place in a very sad casse,
 Gathering together in the streets.
 And seeking for bread in times of their need,
 Murmuring for want of their meats.
 A large wide toun and much people therein,
 Many thousands of poor famelies,
 The victual being dear they falling in fear,
 Wanting bread for their suplies.
 And a deal of negotion they made of devotion,
 And oft did keep holy day.
 At meetings and feasts was cloathed these priests,
 Like mountibanks for a stage play.

The priests in pulpits did persuade and teach,
 And admonished their ignorant crewe.
 To honor all Sancts and hate Protestants,
 And they made them believe it for true.
 That we had cloven feet like the eviell sprite,
 And worse then divells in graine.
 And discharged catholicks on their greatest perrills,
 From our companie for to refraine.
 They sadlie do grumble and their prayers mumble,
 And highlie their masses do singe.
 Til God in his judgements righteous,
 Such trash in heell shal flinge.
 On the thritieth day of this moneth of May,
 A solemnisation they made.
 And to three Sancts to doe sacrifice,
 Upon an alter right broad.
 To adore these Sancts al the inhabitants,
 Were gathered out to the streets.
 And in the Market place with al tokens of grace,
 These priests and friers did all meet.
 And al their Capieschines Archbishops and Deans,
 About the alter did crowde.
 On the alter they ascended and their worship extended,
 With imprecations most loude.
 Before that alter they bowed down there,
 Stille craving these Sancts intercession.
 And with green branches al round these places,
 In time of this holy procession.
 And caryng a thing most like a coffene,
 And a Crusiefixe going before.
 And then the portrages of al these three Sancts,
 Which they in procession adore.
 And so that course they walked about,
 To the place where they were to stand.
 And in the daytime and with the sunshine,
 Burning candels they held in their hand.
 And al the tradesmen in rank foloung.
 Each trade had a sunderie picture.
 Which they bare along to make intercession,
 For al the trade without mixture.
 And with the portrature of a mortal creature,
 Who they say was chieff of the trade.
 After devote confession along in procession,
 From street to street they were lede.
 With devotion true they made a great shew,
 In the best array that could be.
 Who did them meet walking on the streets,
 Bare headed kneeled on the knee.

And many dayes with songs of his praise,
 They past on with their procession.
 And their great ones rideing on good horse,
 Bot they lighted in time of confession.
 On the second of June being Saboth morning,
 Their poor came throu al the toun.
 And four nocked balads in Latine printed,
 Wherein was this sentance profoune. four-cornered bills
 First three several Sancts of great worthinesse,
 The ballade by name did expreme.
 We suplicate yow to pray for us now,
 And at the hour of our death Amen.
 These poor proselites were ready to catche,
 Al that unto them was given.
 And the sick people had recompence triple,
 Sancts prayers to bring them to Heaven.
 So with processions and devote confessions,
 These Sancts long time they adore.
 Whose meritorious works of supererogations,
 Might support them at their dead sore.
 And very frequentlie a pairt of the clergie,
 In procession did serve in their turne.
 And with cross signs of sanguine collores,
 Their garb doth show them to marne. blood red
 At their worship in kirks and devotion in mirks,
 Which frequentlie they did usse. darkness
 And with burning lights in gold candelsticks,
 The light of the day they abuse.
 Their devotion excells in ringing of bells,
 Al for the expelling of evils.
 Yearly from Rome they fetch a new tone,
 For cleanging the aire of the divells.
 So for the promotion of the holy devotion,
 The bells in mussick do sound.
 By day and by night with torches most bright,
 At worshipe in kirks of the toun.
 In cloisters and kirks the priest closely sits,
 And releaveth other by touers. turns
 At divine worship they stay in the church,
 The space of fourtie eight hours.
 These clergie men enough have to spend,
 And lives on the fat of the earth.
 And at the masses and solemn addresses,
 They excell in musseicall mirth.
 Of that religion reckened in the toun,
 Are a hundered thousand famelies.
 Of gold and monie a vast quantatie,
 Maintaineth that clergie in fies.

Great store of victuall is brought in withall,
 And put in the cloissters to keep.
 No maner of war the cloissters do scare,
 They eat they drink and they sleep.
 When rich people dies great pairt of their geires,
 Falls in to be the church rent.
 Tho the poor in streets goes beging in fleets,
 After al their geirs they have spent.
 The rich after death for venial faults,
 Are condemned to the place purgatorie.
 And in few years by monks priessts and friers,
 They are transported to glory.
 Off the popish religion in heell their falls none,
 Bot some poor and moyenless fiends.
 For the masses they sing and prayers condigne,
 Releaveth the soulls of their friends.
 By allms deeds pater nosters and creeds,
 And works of supererogation.
 The counting of beads and repeating of creeds,
 And the holy Sancts invocation.
 As Peter and Paul to rescue their soull,
 And bring them from purgatorie.
 Their goods after them pays for the whole crime,
 Their friends need be no more sorie.
 Off Roman Catholicks in cloissters and kirks,
 Off their worship and their faire.
 And of the multitudes and popelous crouds,
 To masse making dayely repaire.
 I shal let alone from it I 'le be gone,
 And return to my progress of war.
 I have transsgresed in what I expressed,
 In things that my method do mar.
 The French Protestants in Leile had a church,
 And joyned in their worship divine.
 A hundered famelies upon the Sabath dayes,
 Some of them in an equipage fine.
 And some regiments who were protesstants,
 Had sermon upon the Lords day.
 Beside the main guard that kirk was prepared,
 For regiments in toun that did stay.
 Our regiments minister al along the winter,
 In Holland his time he did spend.
 And about the Beltan he came up again,
 To instruct us our lives for to mend.
 Some Saboth dayes in the moneth of May,
 In Leil citydaille he did preach.
 His text he did chusse in the first of the Romans,
 As Paull the Apostel did teach.

How the Roman wariours became victorious,
And gained to themselves the Impire.
In every cuntry they wan victorie,
And ambitiouslie did asspire.
To many dieties they worship divisse,
And gave tolleration to all.
The kinds of religion that was in each kingdom,
So to idolatrie they did fall.
Professing themselves for to be wisse,
Fools in effect they became.
To stir up devotion by the seeing motione,
Images they made for a sham.
And the Glory of the incorruptible God,
Proffainely changed have they.
And images made like coruptible man,
Whom God formed of the clay.
They made images like four footed beasts,
And like the fouls of the aire.
And creeping things and fishes with finns,
To the Infinite God they compaire.
Then to uncleanness God did give them up,
And to the lussts of their own hearts,
And so disshonoring their own bodies,
Among themselves in some pairts.
And changed the trouth of the true God,
Into a falsshode or lie.
And worshiped and served the creature,
More than the Creator most hie.
And for the same cause God did give them up,
Into their affections most vile.
For even their women the natural usse change,
To usses contraire natures fille.
And also the men leaving usse of the women,
Into their vile lussts did burne.
Men with men by unseemly working,
To foul sodomie they did turne.
So in themselves receiving recompence,
Of their error as it was meet.
God did them blinde to a reprobat minde,
He did bind them over compleat.
And as they liked not to retain the true God
Into their knowledge and will.
By their own device things not convenient,
He permitted them to fullfille.
With all unrightiousness fornication wickedness,
And covetousnesse they were filled.
Malitious envy deceit murther debaite,
Whisperers with malignity filled.

Backbiters God haters dispiteful proud boasters,
 Inventers of eville things.
 And to their parents as inobediants,
 All wickedness in them so reigns.
 Without understanding and natural affection,
 And most vile covenant breakers.
 And implacable in their courses most ille,
 Unmerciefull and dutie neglecters.
 And also knowing Gods judgements condigne,
 The acters of death was worthie.
 Yet did the same and took pleasure in them,
 Who comited such things as ye see.
 And tho the Romans was brave conquerours,
 Yet from one thing to another.
 Still on by degrees they did apostatize,
 Til idolatrie became mother.
 From every religion that was in each region,
 They apostatized to none.
 In making imagerie worshieping deiaties,
 With absurdaties many an one.
 Tho now the church of Rome be called crisstain,
 And adorers of al the good Sancts.
 And the papal throne and their clergie each one,
 Off holiness make their vaunts.
 Yet Gods holy word they do it forbide,
 As unlawfull for people to know.
 And their own tradition which we call superstition,
 To the vollgar people they show.
 Altho they do confess Christ come in the flesh,
 And all the Apostells wholle creed.
 Yet with cheating tricks and Sancts reliques,
 Their works say false tongue they lied.
 They grant Christs Passion, Death and Resurrection,
 And how he was pierced with a sword.
 Many a portrature they make of our Saviour,
 Which is contraire to his word.
 By makeing imagrie to increasse idollatrie,
 And worshieping of God by them.
 Upon the Saboth Days with feasts and with plays,
 Gods day and name they profane.
 The city of Leil observes very weell,
 All the statutes of the church of Rome.
 In fasting the Lent many holy dayes spent,
 So God shal reward them at doom.
 When the imitants of all holy Sancts,
 And such as pretend holy liffe.
 Before Gods Tribunal shal be assembled all,
 God word shal then end al striffe.

When rich and poor and al most appear,
 Before his tribunal seat.
 The Pops triple croun shal then be cast doun,
 And AntiChrists kingdome deffeat.
 Al kings of the earth most then be brought fourth,
 When Christ in the clouds shal descende.
 With voice of archangell and the triumph of God,
 Then just mens works shal be kende.
 Matters of religion doth litle concerne,
 Men in a millitarie liffe.
 To clergie men who do better keen,
 We leave to debaite the striffe.
 A deal of new balads past throu the streets alwayes,
 Selling bussilie every day.
 The wiffe and the man vent throu and them sang,
 Al French songs gallant and gay.
 And frequentlie there was a stage play,
 And a doctor al winter was their.
 And men for play he kept alwaye,
 And crowds to that did repaire.
 His skile and arte in many a pairte,
 He set out with elloquent tongue.
 To gather monie he ussed some play,
 And made mens pursses grow clunge.
 Great crouds of people he gathered together,
 In the litele Market place.
 Some aproved of his cure and others forbare,
 Bot he stayed there fore a long space.
 A great deal of people in the toun of Leile,
 In two market places conveene.
 Throu the Royal Exchange some people do range,
 That stands in the midle between.
 All sorts of ware is to be sold there,
 The merchant stans round about,
 All glistering geir for ready silver,
 Two ports to go in and out.
 In the Royal Exchange are al sorts of things,
 All glistering goods for to sell.
 All French histories and ballads and toyes,
 Bot the prices I shal not now tell.
 Al gold most glister and likewayes the silver,
 Bot al is not gold that glisters.
 For brasse and tinn they make so to shine,
 Dazelling folks eyes in their missters.
 All silks and decking ornaments for women,
 There is to sell in good store.
 All kinds of kanes, knives, jewells and ringes,
 All ussefule things and much more.

 The merchants stands dry tho never so rainie,
 And a brave pavement to walk on.
 Great confluence of people resorteth theretille,
 And a dayelie market they keep.
 The ports firm and sure there goods to secure,
 In the night when people do sleep.
 In the midele of Leile the Exchange stands weell,
 Between the two market places.
 Its fournocked within and a compact thinge,
 And the wares doth shine in the casses.
 And al that toun compactlie doth stand,
 In it is many a street.
 Both broad and long and the induellers throng,
 In the market places they meett.
 To the toun of Leile we must bid fareweell,
 And for the camp now prepaire.
 All the regiments did get up recrutes,
 And tents and waggons al clare.
 Cornal Hebrons regiment the time we got spent,
 And lay still in the citydaille.
 From the threeten of December to June twentie four,
 And our victuals was dear al the whille.
 In the spring of this year in March and Apriell,
 Cornal Hebrons regiment together.
 We did exercise on the rampar walls,
 Frequentlie as they did consider.
 Stil two regiments mounted on the guards,
 And the third they did exercisse.
 A regiment was ay exercissed each day,
 Or twice on the day as they please.
 So with exercisseing and other dissipline,
 And guards and comands that we had.
 The victuals was dear and the fields very baire,
 The state of affaires looked sad.
 Although the circumstance of many a place
 Might oblidge the peires to make peace.
 Yet pride and ambition envyous superstition,
 Permites not the war for to ceace.
 King Philip in Spain this year did obtaine
 Victorie in the day of battell.¹
 So he with pride in Spain thinks to bide,
 With peace he will not yet mele.

 And the war it did hurt into all.

¹ Probably a reference to the actions of La Gudiña, 7th May 1709.—Stanhope's War of Succession (1832), p. 282.

The several countries were desirous of peace,
 And the comities several times seet.
 To conclude and agree and please every partie,
 They partied at last: as they meet.
 Then both far and near prepared for war,
 With al the haiste that they could.
 In the moneth of June begane the campine,
 No peace our armie then would.
 The French armie came to Labassie,
 And began to work up a line.
 For to save themselves in time of batell,
 And so they began the campine.
 The first week of June the Stats of Frizeland,
 Our garissoune again did rewieue.
 Our orders to march at a minutes warning,
 To be ready: for what might ensue.
 Prince Eugines armie dreu up the countrie,
 At Ellshine they did encampe.
 And the Duke Mallberie with the biggest armie,
 Off foot and horsse men most rampe.
 A hundered and sixtie thousand in two armies,
 Conveened to the field of campine.
 And by degrees they dreu up to Leile,
 To conquere the touns that remaine.
 Yet unconquered still tho belonging untill,
 The rights of the crown of Spain.
 Tho now al Flanders the Spanish loulands,
 From the French are reduced again.
 To the obedience of the present King Charles,
 Who is now the right King of Spain.
 All Flanders being wone to the Emperour son,
 And the French beat al away hame.
 Bot yet Namuire the French keepeth sure,
 And both Monss and Charlieroye.
 Condie. Arras. Dowie. Newport. Jeper. Turneye.
 To surrender themselves seemeth coye.
 Till war or peace againe them reduce,
 From under the French King againe.
 To whom they have been now long in subjection,
 By right they belong al to Spain.
 The Emperours son who is now King of Spaine,
 With armies that do with him stand.
 In many years war advanced so far,
 In conquering al the lowland.
 And from Jermanie was came an armie,
 To Prince Eugine now Visseroye.
 And our Confederat armie rulled by Mallberie,
 Ready their foes to destroye.

Our armies in arraye their banners displaye,
And advanced one towards Leile.
In the moneth of June on the morning right soon,
On the twentie third day I trow weell.
All Leile garissoune on that afternoon,
Marcht out and joyned the armie.
And the Prince Eugine pitcht on the right hand,
With his Jermene cavallrie.
Some French in a passe on the right of the camp,
Right boldlie fired that day.
Bot the Jerman hoast coming up very closse,
And beat them from it awaye.
Both our armies weell camped above Leile,
On the twentie thrid day of June.
Our regiment this time were very few men,
We got orders to march to Minone,
On the twentie fourth day but longer delaye,
Our regiment came marching from Leile.
And some English regiments by order was sent,
To keep that garissoune weell.
Our regiment then came marching to Minone,
And there we had orders to stayer
Till our recruits came and we were moe men,
Theire in garissoune then we laye.
And mounted the guards and marcht on comands,
Convoeyeing bread for our armie.
In marching alongs guarding the waggons,
And other things for their suplie.
And meeting the shipes up the water that comes,
From Coutrige alonge to Minone.
Such dayelie repaire made our dutie right saire,
Till a while of the summer was gone.
Our grand armie on the twentie seventh day,
Marcht off on the morning right soon.
Away from Leile in order they reille,
With martial and mussical tone.
The French in their line lay closse at the time,
On plain field they durst not advance.
Our armies circling they trivissed the ground,
Al round on the borders of France.
Our armies cavallrie with marching brisklie,
And the infantrie in order allso.
Till round Turneye they marcht in arraye,
And therein sorounded their foe.
On each side of that toun our camps set down,
And regiments detashed for sidge,
The French in Turney was oblidge to stayer,
So the fate of war did oblidge.

Our armie for sure they did them secure,
 All the passes of the countrie.
 That the French hoast they could not nor durst,
 To Turneye send any supplie.
 Yet them to help they vainlie atempe,
 Several times in batell most keene.
 Bot our armie kept al the countrie,
 From Leile til near Walenshine.
 Our armies round besidged that toun,
 And a crosse sidge to it did laye.
 Our armie soon did gather provission,
 Needful for the sidge of Turneye.
 The later end of June this sidge was set doun,
 To the strong and big city Turneye.
 And a strong train was convoyed alonge,
 And brought there without delaye.
 Our armie then fell to and brake ground,
 And trenched al round that big toun.
 And great batteries in haiste they did raisee,
 That strong city walls to beat doun.
 And for a long time in constant working,
 In making great store of fassines.
 And near the toun walls they wrought by degrees,
 With pickets, maells, and gabines.
 Four chief bateries which our armie did make,
 By our Generals names they did call.
 And al at once was made ready thosse,
 And loused al on the toun wall.
 Al the moneth of July brisklie bateded they,
 And made four breaches right wide.
 The French from withine firing upon them,
 Who in their trenches did bide.
 At the first seting doun of the sidge of the toun,
 Right many deserters did rume.
 Away from our armie they fled to Turneye,
 As tho a priesse they had woone.
 And deserters like those now turned our foes,
 Proved valliant in their defence.
 It was reported then that six hundered men,
 Fleed from our armie to thence.
 It was whispered about by private reporte,
 That the French did saillie by night.
 Upon our workmen on the glasseye working,
 All armless wanting daylight.
 And with baginets stabled them to the hearts,
 And destroyed near five hundered men.
 This eville conduct was but a misslucke,
 No stranger ought it to keene.

Our armies shame our Generals blame,
 The like before was not seen.
 To send out workmen no cover with them,
 On their foes so cruell and keen.
 Our armie about both valiant and stout,
 Let no releafe to the toun.
 The bold Buffelar he could not win their,
 Tho it should have gained him a croun.
 The French armie lay behinde Labassie,
 On plain field they durst not appear.
 Bot frequentlie they made a falsifie,

 And wanted a deal of their paye.
 And the whole armie in great povertie,
 To fight they durst not assaye.
 The French armie sent out a partie,
 In the time of the sidge of Turneye.
 And the toun of Jeper they sent out another,
 Near ten thousand men then made theye.
 That fleing armie came doun instantlie,
 Out over the land they did reelle.
 And came to a village that lyes on the water,
 Midway twixt Minone and Leile.
 A regiment of our men was lieing therein,
 And the Frenches did them suroune.
 Our men manfulie made ressistance a wei,
 And held out that litle toun.

 Long time it could not keep out.
 That thin ston wall could bot litle availle,
 And the French so strong theirabout.

 In the village called Varlatongue.
 And the French in haiste they marched from it,
 And to it our armie sent some.
 And by constant working and bold fireing,
 Our armie they sidged Turneye.
 And al these outworks they atacqued at once,
 And the pilisods then took theye.
 The Jermans did atacque on a strong counterscarfe,
 And the French did boldlie defende.
 And before it was got the Jermans they losst,
 The number of five hundere men.

 To the citydaille past for vexation.
 The toum of Turneye was redussed plainely,
 To obedience of the Spanish King.
 The armies of the Allies were victorious,
 And prosperous in every thing.
 The old ragged cross the Germans collours,
 Flourished in the toum of Turneye.
 And the Floure of Deluce with the blood red cross,
 Was subdued and banished awaye.
 When the capitellation was ended and done,
 And our men posseste of the toum.
 Into the citydaille the French passed all,
 And the citydaille sidge was set down.
 All new regiments our armie detached,
 And sent to the citydaille sidge.
 By martial deeds their foes for to yeald,
 Perforce they would them oblidge.
 Then all our armie removed presantlie,
 And advanced on to the French line,
 And the housse quarters of our great armie,
 At Orssie was setled that time.
 The right of our armie lay down towards Dowie,
 And the lefft near to Santimaesse.
 Near five ligs of lenth from the right to the leffte,
 Along the line our camps drauesse.
 Our horsse and dragouns did brisklie advance,
 Into the Fortt Santiemaesse
 A veell fortified place a very great passe,
 And the French away from it draws.
 This litle citie is not far from Condie,
 And the French the fort they have losste.
 Our armie the same did take in possession,
 And before it encamped our hosste.
 The citydaille of Turneye defended brisklie,
 Throu the moneth of August most clear.
 The strongest citydaille it is without faille,
 That's in Flanders both far or near.
 Both strong and stout al mineed about,
 The walls are both thick and hie.
 Amonition and canon enough is therein,
 The sidgers it canot come nie.

The great gun shot played both in and out,
 Right constantlie both night and day.
 The sidgers still working in trenching and mineing,
 With many a valliant assaye.
 And several times in making of mines,
 They did the sidgers much hurte.
 A deal of ingenires and many mineanires,
 With pouder they said was bloun up.
 Cornall Hebrons regiment the time they spent,
 In the garissoune of Minone.
 From the twentie fourte day of the moneth of June,
 Til the eighten of August was come.
 The third pairt of Minone is al lyeing down,
 Since our armie did it besidge.
 And Jeper port it stands alwayes shutte,
 Their conditions so did oblidge.
 And one magassine they did not opene
 Since the Frenches yealded that toun.
 From Jeper port to the market place,
 The housses is al lyeing down.
 Bot the high church it standeth in state,
 And a sentrie stands on the tope.
 To see al pairties as they come alonge,
 Either down that water or upe.
 The Roman Catholicks stil in the hie church,
 Their masses they sing every daye.
 In a litle cappel that stands it beside,
 The Protestants they preach and they praye.
 So every Lords day when we in it laye,
 We had sermon in the cappel.
 Bot nou from devotion we most walk alonge,
 Our progress of war for to tell.
 The toun of Minone was then pretie strong,
 With repairing from our armie.
 Eighten thousand bread was their dayelie made,
 And taken of for their supplie.
 A deal of magassines we had in keeping,
 Of victual of wood and of haye.
 And at three ports the bouers in floaks,
 Comes in on the market daye.
 To martial deeds we most now proceede.
 And be ready to march at demande.
 Our recruteing Officers then sent up letters,
 From Holland when they came to land.
 A comande was sent to the city of Gaunte,
 To bring the recruits saffe alonge.
 On the twentie third day of the moneth Julye,
 They were brought into Minone.

Above a hundered and thretie of men very likelie,
 That time came to our regiment.
 Our Cornal and Major did them al musster,
 And then for the camp we were bent.
 Our Cornal presentlie sent to the armie,
 That his regiment it was full.
 And with moyen of Generalls ediecanes,
 The regiment to camp he did pull.
 The Cornal to Leile he past for a while,
 And the regiment in Minon did stay.
 And the recruites made in companies,
 Exercised on the wall tuice a day.
 Without Bridges port our Major us took,
 And the regiment did exercisse.
 By tuck of drum and three words of comande,
 We exercised there at our easse.
 Cornal Bavers regiment to Minon was sent,
 For to releave our regiment.
 Our Cornal with joy was presentlie ready,
 Having fulfilled his intent.
 On the eighten of August it was that we marcht,
 Weell mounted and in good order.
 With old men and new the regiment full now,
 So we marched of from that border.
 That night we did camp beside a village,
 Within half a lig of Leile toun.
 On the morow earlie we marched away,
 And so for the camp we were boun.
 We entred our camp near by the right hand,
 And marched throu Eugines armie.
 On the front of the English along we marcht,
 On the lefft of the Hollands camp we.
 On the twentie day our regiment they,
 In the camp we were al reviewed.
 All the front line being draun up syne,
 And our post in the armie renewed.
 The Generals and their court alongs on the front,
 Came rideing upon their fine horsse.
 A deal of pretie men with galant mounting,
 Out over these fields did cross.
 And al the rire line upon the twentie one,
 Was reviewed on the front of their line.
 And al Officers in these dayes of reviewing,
 Was drest in their mounting most fine.
 Our camp dutie vent on brisklie,
 Til the moneth of August was done.
 The citydail of Turney was sidgeing brisklie,
 Some said it would not yeald soon.

Both night and day the canons did playe,
 And made a hidious noisse.
 And they within did boldlie defende,
 Like valliant men and choisse.
 At that citydaille no force could prevaile,
 Bot our miners dayelie did mine.
 Til underneath the ground they were working in,
 With mickle slight and engine.
 Our canon ball did beat down their wall,
 And al the housses dang down.
 On every side the sidgers did bide,
 And had strong guards in the toun.
 The citydaille of Turney both pleasant and bonie,
 Was laid all in reuineous heaps.
 Bot the cassamads so strongly was made,
 The men it saffe enough keeps.
 Til the moneth of August was very near done,
 Then they began for to treat.
 And by degrees made a capitulation,
 No longer they could weel stane be it.
 Comands of granadires from our armie detasht,
 In order upon them to storme.
 To Turney citydaille they came without faille,
 Valliant exploits to performe.
 On the second of September the Frenches together,
 They marched al off with their arms.
 So leaving Turney they marched to Condie,
 Without any further alarmes.
 Our armie at Orsie a cover did lie,
 Til the moneth September was come,
 And the French from Turney they marche,
 With flieing collours and drum.
 On our armies front strong guards we had out,
 In passes of the strong wood.
 At four dayes time they releaved them,
 With counsel and conduct most good.
 Our armie that time was dayelie foradging,
 And grassing out on our front.
 The French mean time defending their line,
 With wapens that were not blunt.
 A grand foradgeing our armie had then,
 Seven or eight ligs in the rire.
 On the twentie sixth day of August most clear,
 These comands marcht with a carire.
 And on that night a while they did resst,
 Two leags it was beneath Lille.
 And the nixt morning twixt Leil and Minone,
 We foradged their very weell.

The way being long and the foradgers throng,
 Al night we were by the way.
 Both horsse and men sore travelled then,
 Came home upon the third day.
 The citydail of Turney surendered already,
 And the moneth September begune.
 Our armie al over with one thing and other,
 Bot short whille rest they had sune.
 The Prince of Heess on comand was detasht,
 Upon the third day of that month. Hesse
 With twentie squadrons of good Jerman horsse,
 At his comand marching forth.
 And a hundered men of every batalion,
 Which had not been at Turneye.
 Which made the number of four thousand men,
 In detashments were sent awaye.
 At six acloak at night they marched on sight,
 To ataque the Sant Gullian sconsse. St. Ghislain or
St. Guislain
 For to clear the way and make it ready,
 For our armies sidging of Monsse.
 This Prince passed on by the scurt of Mortaigne,
 To ocupie the lines of Giverie. Mortaigne

 Lieutenant General Ross was likeways detasht,
 With thretie squadrons of cavalrie.
 Ten squadrons of the right and ten of the lefft,
 And ten of Prince Eugines armie.
 And at the same time he marched with them,
 And past by the village Orsie. Orchies
 And on the fourth day before break of day,
 From Orsie marcht our armie.
 The pass of Mortaigne and Anthonie then,
 They passt oposite to Turneye. Anthoing
 Our armie that day marching very earlie,
 And passing the scourt of Mortaigne,
 Bot our rire guard that river not crossed,
 Till earlie the nixt morning.
 Our sidging armie they rested at Turney,
 To observe the enomies motion.
 Our great armie moving throu the countrie,
 Observing a great deal of caution.
 Upon the fifth day yet al our armie,
 Did prosecute forth their march.
 My Lord Mallberies standart that night it was pitcht,
 At Erbizoel upon search. Erbizeul
 Prince Eugines quarters that night was
 At a place they call Balieoile. Baillœul
 And six squadrons that was the rire guard,
 Nixt morning came with much to Ille.

The body of our armie a moveing was dayelie,
 And on the sixth day very soon
 We marcht by the lefft and came to a heath,
 By Monsse before it was noon.
 The Prince of Hesse that morning timeousse,
 Did take the lines of Giverie.
 He entered not in bot lay at the line,
 Bot our armie dreu on and came nie.
 The French at the line had a regiment of men,
 Who fled to the City of Monsse.
 So about noon our whole armie came,
 Enomies then did them no donsse.
 Seven or eight thousand of detashed men,
 To keep passes of that line.
 Which the Prince of Hesse had taken I guesse,
 By two houres of that morning.
 He entred not in bot marched his men,
 Into the hights of Framiere.
 The toun of Monss, was nou blockked up,
 And our armie come to it right near.
 The Duke Mallberie with the right of our armie,
 Took his quarters then at Haverie.
 The lefft of our armie at Hermigenes,
 Fronting towards our enomie.
 The Count Tillie that night passed he,
 Near the toun of Sant Gullian
 The Prince Euginne rested his armie,
 That night on Sant Denies Hayne.
 On the seventh day in the morning earlie,
 About the place called Troveille
 There several overtures was made of our lines,
 Which was to make them suit weelle.
 In expectation our armie was then,
 To rest themselves for a day.
 With constant marching and sore travelling
 Al sadly fatigued were they.
 Bot after midday as our Generalls they,
 Were set at the table to dine.
 They received a repporte in a haistie sorte,
 That the French advanced their line.
 To atacke our armie in plaice where they lay,
 And do them a great deal of donsse.
 Our General gave comande right instantlie than,
 To ramforsse the blocks about Monsse.
 And al the armie to march instantlie.
 And these orders past quicklie about.
 And presentlie we were al made ready,
 And the armie al turned out

Cornal Hebrons regiment camping on the left,
 Marched first over the line.
 And al the armie in that action bussie
 Marched out in a very short time.
 Out over the water and towards Chiuera,
 Our tents in camp yet did stand.
 Bot that night bagage and tents al in haiste,
 Was brought up by special comande.
 Without any alarme we lay on our arms,
 And rested al the long night.
 Not far from the toun we lay on the plain,
 Bot the French hoast came not in sight
 Some horsse on our van advanced to Quiveran,
 And some deserters did catch.
 Who told that Buffelar in camp was arived,
 And orders had for to dispatche.
 And give batel in person himselfe,
 By comand of the King of France.
 And al his armie in batel surelie,
 Their honours al to advance.
 Earlie the eight day marched our armie,
 By the Haine of Sant Gullian.¹
 Then we pitched camp our front oposite,
 To the enomies at Quiveran.
 In batel araye two hours rested we,
 Upon the heights and the plain.
 Waiting for to see if the enomies moved,
 Whose front to the wood has come than,
 About the miday our Hoseaers quickly,
 Encountered with a partie.
 Behind the wood of Sart as they were advanced,
 Four hundreed of the enomie.
 Our Hoseaers assisted by our front guards,
 Did take prisoners there perforce.
 A Lieutenant General and some Officers,
 And the number of twentie French horsse.
 And thretie sojors was tane prisoners,
 And several deserters came in.
 Major General Grovestin being sent on comande,
 Near the enomies camp did begine.
 Perilouslie encountred at back of the wood,
 Just near by the French armie.
 About a hundered dragouns who boldly withstod
 Til their Captan in batel did die.
 Their Captan Comidante being slain in the spote,
 And fiftie men prissoners tane.
 And several dragouns received deaths wounds,
 And the resst did flee off amaine.

And on the ninth day the French hoast in araye,
 Came up to the height of Tasseneire.
 And to Longeveille right fast they reelle,
 And throu the woods did apeare.
 Prince Eugine of Savoye with the Duk Malberie,
 And Munje Gosline Staits depute.
 Being resolved that day the French hoste to see,
 And al the fields thereabout.
 The Prince de Navair to be their cover,
 By eight acloake was detashte.
 With many squadrons of our armies horse,
 And out to the height they marcht.
 Their hieness did see al the French armie,
 In plain movement coming one.
 And their cavalrie acoming they see,
 Throu the wood advancing anone.
 In two litele woods the cavalrie enters,
 Their infantrie likewayes came one.
 On the right and the lefft of thes litele woods,
 They posted themselves then anone.
 Their hienesse presentlie ordered the armie,
 In haiste to go to their arms.
 And to march out all in batel ranke,
 Without any further allarms.
 Our foradgers soon that day was called in,
 And to arms ran al our armie.
 And by eleven acloak our armie marcht out,
 With trumpets sounding on hie.
 Our armies right hand was posted at Sart,
 And the lefft just at Bleron.
 So out from our camps in strong batel ranks,
 Our confederat armie marcht one.
 The Munje Villars and the Duk of Buffelar,
 Comanded the armies of France.
 In woods and vilages the ground they did chusse,
 Where our armie could not advance.
 Our armie right soon planted their canone,
 And fired to a good effect.
 And in the same maner the French armie there
 The time they did not neglect.
 The canonading that day did begine,
 And the armies confrunted did stand.
 And ready for batel the armies was all,
 Waiting for the word of comand.
 The great action was the canonading,
 Which continued al affternoon.
 Our lines dreu back and on arms did rest,
 When fulie set was the sun

The Holands bregade posted on the lefte,
 Was draun in to the wood side.
 Lying on their arms the woods for to watch,
 And so al night we did bide.
 And our Generals with the Staits deputie,
 Al night togither they resst.
 Stil waiting to see what the French armie
 Of war would make manifest.
 Upon the tenth day the French bussilie,
 Entrenched themselves more and more.
 Working in their shirts til triple entrenchments,
 They made their armies before.
 A baterie good they made in the wood,
 And stronglie did fortifie.
 And al that day right brisklie did play,
 The canon of either armie.
 And Monjor Den Honst from Turney arived,
 And in short time after did come.
 Monjor Randwick the Stats depute,
 Of encouragement it was some.
 Lieutenant General Didime that day did march,
 And troups with him on comande
 From the blocks of Monss he did lead them out,
 And ataqued with sword in hand.
 On the Sant Gullian that litle wie toun,
 He took it but longer abade.
 And two hundred men in that garrissoun,
 Prissoners of war they were made.
 My Lord Allbimale from Turney arived,
 With a pairtie of moe Generalls
 From Turney citydaille the sidgers all
 Conjoyned with our armies were all.
 The Comtde de Lottum that same day did come,
 And the Baron of Sculenbergh to
 With their detashments of horse and foot
 Our armie weel gathered was now.
 The French armie was ramforced that day,
 With horse foot and dragounes.
 A hundred thousand men they were augmented,
 From several garissoune tounes.
 Comanded in Chief by the Monje Villare,
 And the Duke of Buffelar also.
 The Marishal Buffelar qualatie voluntar,
 Before the Kings Houshold would go.
 This Chiftan bold the Kings Housholde,
 Took wiselie to lead and guide.
 And the Monje Villar with noble men there,
 In time of battel to bide.

Albemarle

Was never an armie in any countrie,
 Was better posted then they.
 Standing in a wood with artilerie good,
 By villages strong did stay.
 With strong fortresses and triple entrenchments.
 Foussies half-moons and redouts.
 Everything to render the post unatackable,
 Chiftains ussed in strong bouts.
 On the eleventh day on the morning earlie,
 Al was ready for the batell.
 And both the armies for the enterprise,
 And so the casse it befelle.
 Our General did post in the wood of Sart,
 The armie that came from Turneye.
 At our armies right hand and the enomies left,
 And for a reserve they did stave.
 The Prince Eugine and the Duk Malberie,
 Came rideing in the intervaille.
 On the front of our armie and the enomies,
 Who fired great canon baille.
 And several sojors was slain passing through,
 In presence of their Generalls.
 Their Highnesses either without fear or danger,
 Past ordering al the batells.
 Several times then two several mornings,
 We had prayers throu al the armie.
 For aide and counsel for strength in batel,
 For our sucesse and victorie.
 And then the signal for begining batell,
 About eight acloak of the day.
 Was the discharge of our artailerie,
 Our armie advanced in array.
 At the same time by general comande,
 At three several pairs we atacque.
 And then the smal shot in batel so hot,
 Began with many crick crake.
 It were imposible to rehearse or to tell,
 The violence of that fire.
 At the encountering in batel most keen,
 Of these armies meeting in ire.
 Our armies atacquing and valerous acting,
 And the defence of our foes.
 Who entrenched stood in a desperate moode,
 And in bloody batell enclosse.
 The French made defence and strong rersistence,
 By force of povder and ball.
 Of our regiments that first did atacque,
 Many wounded and slain did fall.

The situation of the Frenche armies,
 For their own defence it was good
 The bowd trees made strong like barires, boughs
 In several sides of a wood
 Betwen Monsse and Momebuisse that ground they chuse, Maubeuge
 And entrenched themselves very strong.
 With blocks of trees before their neisse, nose
 And they stood in it right long.
 In trench after trench there railed the French,
 And a trench to which they retire.
 These triple retrenchments and blocks of trees,
 Coast our Hollands armie right deare.
 Our regiments was beat and sadly defeate,
 They retired and railled againe.
 And many an atack in the batel brake,
 And railed anew on the plaine.
 This strong batel and cruel assaille,
 Did last for five or six hours.
 And thousands of men lay dead on the plaine,
 By balls stile flying in shoures.
 The forwardness of our Generalls,
 Of the two Comanders in Chieffe.
 It far doth excelle the trouth for to telle,
 The comone reporte or beleaffe.
 The constant presence of our Generalls,
 Encouraged so our armie.
 That on the plain field we railed again,
 In sight of our enomie.
 Our enomies thought our hoast was defeat,
 And perforce we behoved to flee
 And throu the litle wood in batell persued,
 By our foes we were cruelie.
 The French in ire did cruelie fire,
 And over the trench did advance.
 In hot batel where many men fell,
 Bot gained nothing by the chance.
 In range of batel with many an assaille,
 We encountered our enomies.
 In their treple trenches we forced the Frenches,
 Tho many lay dead among trees.
 That cruel batel firm constant assaille,
 Increased still on by degrees.
 More famous deeds in bloody war weeds,
 No mortal could se with their eyes
 When our enomies did se with their eyes,
 And our armies vallour perceive.
 And firm resolution to a bloody effussion,
 How brisklie we did behave

Our armies defence Generals experiance,
 In resisting of our foes.
 The constant fireing and strong encountering,
 And advanceing just on to their nosse.
 The Prince Eugine in batell was seen,
 With his sword draun in hand.
 At the head of the Hollands infantrie,
 On foot his hienes did stand.
 And on al sides we did them atacque,
 And they in trenches did stand.
 The French infantrie behaved bravelie,
 In batel with sword in their hand.
 Several batalions of our foot did advance,
 And three squadrons of the Daines horsse,
 In cruel ramcountering ore they could gaine,
 A second passage of that boesse.
 In this cruel assult the way being cut,
 Then entered our cavalrie.
 And a cruel batel in that place befelle,
 As any man ever did see.
 The best of our horsse being put in disorder,
 By these the Houshold of France.
 Which the Duke Malberie did presentlie see,
 And comanded new troups to advance.
 And to good effect they made this assult,
 And charged them home sickerlie.
 The French Houshold in disorder was put,
 And retired to their infantrie.
 Our armie this time having gained of them,
 A second wood in the batelle.
 They fled away thence with great diligence,
 And so the casse it befelle.
 In disorder and fear the French did retire,
 And left their bagage behinde.
 Some pices of canon and their amonition,
 Upon the ground we did finde.
 Our armie al throu the field of batell,
 Did range with courage renewed.
 The Jandarms of France being put to the worsse,
 And our armie brisklie perseued.
 Where one of the French in order vent off,
 Then two vent of in confussion.
 The French armies right hand in trenches did stand,
 Til the batel was near a conclusion
 The French armie ran to the village Quiveran,
 And a strong rire guard did bide.
 And brave squadrons posted for the purpose
 At a water was their beside.

Our armie detasht and quicklie they marcht,
Eighten squadrons of our horsse.
To disperse the batel ore our enomies all,
In haiste the river did crosse,
That great Monjour the Duke of Buffelar,
In persone their he did stand.
Besides that river til his armie wan over,
He stod with the sword in his hand.
The enomies did post behind a wie boess,
And our dragouns did advance.
The Cornal de Lippe and a cornet of horsse,
Was prisoners taken by chance.
Being to far advanced and so were enhaunced,
As our armie was drauing near.
Our eighteen squadrons did range throu the plain,
And their foes vent of in a fear.
Tho long the French stood at lenth they fled,
In three columnes they retire.
And in a minutes time they made bridging,
Over that river in their rire.
The French they ran to the vilage Quiveran,
Crost the river in great fraye.
Where their rire guards and many squadrons,
With the Duke of Buffelar did stay,
Our noble squadrons as bold as lyones,
Ranged throu the field of batelle.
And with volt face perseued the chasse,
Their foes before them fast felle.
At the vilage Quiveran in batel did stand,
A bregade of French infantrie.
Our horsse vent up at a great gallope,
And charged them instantlie.
So forcing them to make a bridge soon,
And passe the river in haiste.
And many a man was wounded and slain,
Some in the water was chaste.
In a cruel throng and total confusion,
In the river was wounded not few.
Our armie turned again at the vilage Quiveran,
And no farther did perseue.
The French right and left and center at last,
In thriee bodies they did flee.
Our armie ranged throu the field of batell,
Perseueing the great victorie.
Being filled with joy having gained the day,
And made their foes for to flee.
Which made the journey seem most glorious,
And compleated al the victorie.

The Prince Eugine in the head got a wound,
 When first the action began.
 Yet his hieness did stand sword draun in hand,
 Til he this great batel wan.
 Sometimes on the front of the infantrie,
 In batel he took the comand.
 Sometimes on the head of the cavalrie,
 His hieness was pleased to stand.
 To prevent the disorder of the one and the other,
 That day with conduct and skille.
 While the Duke Malberie new troupes did raillie
 Which marvelous things did fulfille.
 Al broken troups he caused drau up.
 And kept them for a reserve.
 Ay waiting til they did gain victorie,
 In order he did them preserve.
 By the sage presence and wise governance,
 Of these General persons two.
 In this glorious jurney we got victorie,
 And so overcame our proud foe.
 In Prince Eugines presence both men and horsse
 That day was slain and dung dead.
 By the enomies baterie oft passed he,
 Out throue the armie with speed,
 The Prince Euginae with Officers moe,
 And Generalls in the battell.
 To the admiration of al people then,
 Did marvelous things for to tell.
 All the passages of several atacquies,
 Was marvelous for to see.
 The gratest battell on this day befell,
 That ever in world could be.
 We have to regreet by certain report,
 The great loss in our armie,
 Off brave Generalls and Officers ellse,
 Who there in battell did die.
 On that day was slain the Count Oxenstern,
 Tatau Pendergrasse and Liloie.
 Lantahlem and the Baron of Hauben,
 And severall Generalls moe.
 In battell was wounded the Count of Harack,
 Wakerbert Weeb Fagell and Spare.
 May and Lauder¹ My Lord Montandere,
 And Lord Lumlie in the War.
 Prince Nassau Woodburgh was also wounded,
 Monje Robright wounded allso.

 The French armies loss of both men and horsse,
 Was thought to be greater by far.
 The Houshold of France was sadly defeat,
 And losst many in that war.
 Their best infantrie destroyed mightilie,
 And losst into that battell.
 Besides a great number was tane prissoners,
 All to their loss it befeell.
 The Marquess Ambignie they lost certanlie, Aubigny
 And the Prince Lambece perchance.
 Both grand children to the Prince Armagne,
 The greatest Esquire in France.
 And several pices of their canons,
 That day was left on the field.
 And many a standart and many collours,
 To our armie in battell they yeald.

 Comanding the French infantrie.
 A cruel slaughter as ever befelle,
 Was the battel of Malplakie.
 About Longveille along al the field,
 Both men and horsse did ly dead.
 In numbers great which caused regreat,
 To after beholders indeed.
 The cruell slaughter the product of war,
 The death and dessolation.
 Off brave Generals and chief Officers,
 May be for a lamentation.
 Some brave Scottish men in batel was slain,
 Both of mean and of noble degree.
 And brave English men under the comand,
 Of the great Duke of Malberie.
 Off France and Spain the Dons many ones,
 And the seigniour of Jermanie.

The Dutch and Swize and Irish and Daines,
 Was slaughtered most cruellie.
 A great deal of land covered with dead men
 Which was great pitie to see.
 In hedges and ditches the dead lay in heaps,
 At a wood side many did die.
 The trees of the wood was guilded with blood,
 Hospitales with wounded was filled.
 Since the war began such a number of men,
 In one day was never killed.
 Four regiments of foot camping on the left,
 Under Brigadire Dowglass comand.
 Upon the left of al the Dutch horse,
 In camp we were then to stand.
 Cornall Hebrons regiment and my Lord Tilibairnes,
 All Scotsmen noble and true.
 And Meterals Swize and Pallands Dutch,
 Upon their foes to perseue.
 When the armie all marcht out to battell,
 In noble rank and arraye.
 Then our bregade marched on the left,
 And all our collours displaye.
 When al our lines for batel did forme,
 And toward their foes did advance.
 And the French armie for batel readie,
 For defence of the Kingdom of France.
 Then our bregade advanced to the wood,
 And marched along the wood side.
 To keep the passes from suden charasses,
 Our orders was there to bide.
 The two armies confronted did stand,
 That night and all the nixt day.
 We lay on our arms ay waiting on orders,
 And the canon brisklie did play.
 The French was working and bussie entrenching,
 And fortiefication did make.
 Our armie to wrack if we did atacque,
 For defence that method they take.
 We were made ready on the batell day,
 And then our picket calt out
 The bregades picket marcht up throu the wood
 With manly courage and stout.
 After the signall given for the battell,
 Our lines began to drau near.
 Both horse and foot the armie throughout
 In ordour began for to stear.
 Our Cornall and Major in a very good order,
 Dreu us on along the wood side.

And our enomies was hiveing like bees,
Stronglie entrenched did bide
Then came an edicane on horsseback rideing,
To our Major ordours gave he
That the regiment on sight should close to the right
And advance on our enomie.
Our Cornall and Major and the regiment after,
Did presentlie break throu a hedge.
We formed platouns advanceing at anes,
And in a strong batell engadge.
And so did advance on the enomies trench,
With shouting for the battell.
The French from their trench fired so thick,
That many men droped and fell.
Many wounded and slain in a very short time,
Our men in great number did fall,
Til our regiment was beat and sadlie defeate,
Many knockt down with the French ball.
Our brigads picket advanced throu the wood,
And on their foes did atackue.
On the right hand of the French armie,
In battell they proved not slack.
With shot and baginets on the French trench,
They advanced with courage most bold.
And from their first trench stood some of the French
No longer could they it hold.
But the rest of the trenches filled with Frenches,
Beset our picket right sair.
Our mens amunition in short time was done,
And no releafe they got there.
Some part of our picket in batel there died,
Being slain by the enomie.
And in despaire hardlie beeset there,
The rest was forced to flee.
In this batell hot was the cruelest shot
That ever in world was seen.
And our enomies in great multieplies,
Crouded in batell most keen.
Our regiments right hand was not able to stand
So many was slain and dung down.
And many wounded men away being tane
None brought to fill up their room.
Our regiments left hand did by the wood stand
Bot had not the half of the loss.
Up to the French trench then did they advance,
On their foes who was standing closse.
And as our regiment inclined to the left,
In number we were very few.

Which our foes did behold and waxed more bold,
 Out over their trench did persue
 In broken araye our regiment gave way,
 And pice and pice did retire.
 The French cruelie at that they wannie,
 They martired down on our rire.
 Our lieutenant Cornal¹ was wounded right sair,
 And was not able to flee.
 The French presentlie they did him overhie,
 And as soon as they came him nie.
 His gold purse and watch he quicklie pulled out,
 And they from him did it take.
 He beged of them in the French oun tongue,
 To give him quarters for godsake.
 So into the wood they quicklie him hurled,
 He thinking to get some remeade.
 So for an officer he began for to call,
 Instantlie they stobed him dead.
 Our Cornall Hebron in battel was slain,
 And Lieutenant Cornall Hamiltoun.
 And Major Campbell² in frount of batell,
 Received a grivious wounde
 Out throu the head our Cornall was shot,
 And without longer delaye.
 Men gathered about and then took him up,
 And carried his corps away.
 The Major by a shot got his arm broke,
 Right near to his shoulder bone.
 And from the batell he got of himselff
 And a man waiting him upon.
 Lieutenant Ronalds and Seatoun and antient Henderson
 Was al killed dead in the place.
 And Captan Tassie³ McFerlin and Hearte,
 Died all within a short space.
 The Captains Ogilvie⁴ McQueen⁵ and Kenadie,⁶
 Was wounded in the battell.
 And antient Crauford was griviouslie hurt,
 And down to the ground he fell.
 And was caried away in great jeopardie,
 And tane to the hossipall.

² Campbell, though promoted to the command of Tullibardine's regiment, died in a few months. His name has thus been omitted from the list in vol. i. p. xxxv, probably owing to his having died before final confirmation by the States.

His leg and thigh bone being broken in twain,
 He died shortlie after all.
 And Captan Hoom¹ received a wound,
 And Lieutenant Campbell also.
 Lieutenant Pinkertoun and antient McLaude,
 Wounded from the battell did go.
 And many a man we had wounded then,
 And others did take them awaye.
 And bot very few men in our regiment was than
 Along by our collours to stay.
 As we did retire in disordour and fear,
 Our collours was like to be tane.
 Yet by several men they were caried one
 And wan saffe out to the plain.
 My Lord Tilibairne was then advancing,
 And his regiment at his back.
 Upon our left hand by generall comande
 They ordered were to ataque.
 In this cruel battell right thus it befell,
 Ful many was instantlie slain.
 And so being beat and saddie defeate,
 They retired al out to the plain.
 The Marquess Tiliebairn² in batel was slain
 And the Lieutenant Cornall Swintoun³
 And Captan Graime⁴ was killed that time,
 And a Captan called James Broun.⁵
 A deal of their officers killed likewayes,
 And both their standarts was tane.
 Having lost their collours along the wood side,
 They were forssed to retire to the plain.
 So all the bregade in batel engadged,
 And was al beat off to the plain.
 The field officers and chief onleaders,
 Al in the batell was slain.
 Upon the nixt ground at our regiments right hand
 The Hollands bleu guards did advance.
 The French batterie upon them did play
 Which did them a cruel mischance.
 Till heaps of men lay dead on the plain,
 Which was great pitie to see.
 A strong half moon the Frenches stood in,
 Where many a man did die . .
 Within the half moon the Frenches did stand,
 Till many of them was slain.

And tho the bleu guards very many had losst,
 They atacqued again and again.
 Al the Holland foot did sadlie pay for it,
 And many in batel did die.
 This fourtie year so great loss in weir,
 Was not in their infantrie.
 Our Scotch regiments serving in the English
 Were engadged in batel allso.
 Lieutenant Cornall Crankstoun¹ in batell was slain
 And many brave officers moe.
 Our Scotch Dragouns upon the right wing,
 Stood of our British armie.
 So they in battel boldlie did assaile,
 At the battell of Malleplackie.
 Many of our horsses in paitience perforce
 No passage they had to advance.
 Under the canon ball they behoved to stand,
 And sadlie was grived at the chance.
 Some expected ordour in the batell hour,
 That Dragouns would atacqued upon foot.
 Bot the Scots Dragouns al in their squadrons,
 On horsses back was ordered to sit.
 The Earle of Staire in person was there,
 Comanding the Scotch Dragounes.
 And Sir James Campbell² their Lieutenant Cornall
 Did ordour them in squadrons.
 The Scots Dragouns when in batel engadged,
 In bravery they did excelle.
 When the houshold of France on them did advance
 And joynd in bloody battell.
 A French officer in that ramcounter,
 Meet Cornall Campbell indeed
 Then with fair play and without delaye,
 The Cornall stroke of his head.
 The Houshold of France was good men and horsses
 And near broke the Scotch Dragouns.
 A cruel ramcounter on that day was seen,
 In batell between the squadrons
 The general Mallborie to that had an eye,
 And sent suplie very soon.
 More squadrons of horsses he caused advance,
 And noble actions was done.
 Til the French was beat and sadlie defeat,
 And forced in batell to flee.
 The Jandarms of France they had a great loss,
 At the batell of Malleplackie.

² Brother of Major Campbell, and one of the officers to whom this book is dedicated.

The French right hand entrinched did stand,
 Their horsses dreu up in their rire.
 Til at the last that al the French host,
 In disordour was foret to retire.
 We the broken regiments on our armies left,
 Did stand in good fille and ranck.
 Our Granadires march we boldly did beat,
 And still the wood side we did flanck.
 Our regiments comander was Captan Litestler,¹
 And Lieutenant Maclaude allso.
 And Lieutenant Scot and two antient Hebrons
 Unwounded we had no moe.
 And antient McQueen and Donald McQueen,
 Who had our collours in hand.
 And about a hundered men I think we were,
 Round about our Collours to stand.
 And Brigadire Dowglass² was wounded likeways,
 In field he could not then bide.
 Bot being dreest away in all haisste
 He from the battell did ride
 Major Generall Hamiltoun³ took the comand,
 Of that near broken brigade.
 And his edicane on horssback he came,
 He seemed a dark colloured lad.
 In the Generals name he did us comande,
 On the enomie to atacque.
 And for the honor of our native cuntrye
 A new assaut we must make.
 And Hebrons regiment was formost to march
 Along down by the wood side.
 Our officers slain we were bot feu men,
 About our standarts to bide.
 Then pice and pice we began to advance,
 Which our enomie weel did see.
 And began to fire up on us in ire,
 And the ball among us did flie.
 Several of our men was hurt there againe,
 And the rest a litele did fear.
 Our neighbours the Swize made for us place,
 So did a litele retire.
 Closse by the wood side in order we bade,
 On the left wing of the armie.
 The Granadires march we several times beat,
 Which our enomies weel did see.
 Lieutenant Haliburtoun was yet saffe and sound,
 With us again did advance.

aide-de-camp

¹ See vol. ii. p. 40.² Vol. ii. pp. 20 and 47.³ Vol. ii. p. 29.

Bot antient Denune had got a smal wound,
 And was passed from us thence
 Our Sarjant Major he took mickle caire,
 To plant sentries in the wood.
 And so it befell that with a French ball,
 He was shot throu the bacood.
 The French armie from their left did flee,
 And went off in a great route.
 Which al our armie then bravely did see,
 And for joy we gave a great shoutte.
 The German armie before wrought bussie,
 And cuted a pass throu the wood.
 So first they wan throu yet enough had to doe,
 With the French their put to make good.
 Til our English armie did act nobelie,
 And a pasage got made and wan throu.
 The jandarms of France being put to the worsche
 And in batell was killed not few.
 The French armie then pairtly did flee,
 And to the right made their repaire.
 Some of our armie then shouted for joy,
 Some throu their hatts in the aire.
 Major General Hameltoun on horsseback came doun,
 And an officer of the traine.
 They wiewed the ground and presentlie than,
 They brought two canon amain.
 And in al haiste these horsse they loused,
 And the constables with all speed
 Fired the canon with a lam lam dum,
 This helped us weel in our need.
 The canon again we fitched amain,
 And dreu them to a fit place.
 And three several times we discharged them,
 Ore: our enomies did take the race.
 Lieutenant McLaude in order right good,
 With our regiment he did advance.
 And at the wood nock right near to the French,
 We waited a litele perchance.
 The French armie they kendeled strae,
 And raisse up a great smick:
 And presentlie they haisted awaye,
 And we saw not for the ricke.
 Our regiment then marcht to the right hand,
 And as the bregade took their place.
 With joyful hearts out over thes trenches,
 We advanced in a short space.
 Then al the French hoast away they were fled,
 And our armie advanced on their ground.

In field of batell where long they did duelle,
 Than none bot dead men was found.
 The left of our armie al night did lie,
 Beyound the field of batell.
 Not far from the right of our enomies trench,
 Where that cruel slaughter befelle.
 Of this batell and hou it befelle,
 It far surpasseth my airte.
 When I have writen al that I can,
 I omite the hundered pairte.
 That night at even with wagons anone,
 We convoyed our wounded awaye.
 Into the villages in great multitudes,
 Our hurt and wounded they laye.
 The corps of our Cornal and Lieutenant Cornall,
 In a wagon was brought to that place.
 And the nixt morning at their burying,
 Was many a woefull alace.
 Their graves was made on the front of the regiment,
 And they were interred in clay.
 In bed of honour they lay at this houre,
 Both killed they were in a day.
 Our armies tents that night was brought up,
 And the camp was pitched indeed.
 The wounded and hurt away they were pute,
 And we buried a pairt of the dead.
 Captain Patersoune¹ being Faggells edicane,
 Our regiment over he led.
 Over the ground where the French armie stood,
 But the French armie they were fled.
 Three wagons also he did us procure,
 To cary our wounded awaye.
 And al the night long they were drauing them,
 And the morning of the nixt day.
 On the tuelth day at noon the orders came,
 Al the armie to march back againe.
 And so we did march back to our old ground,
 And the French came to bury the slain.
 A comande came along by permissione,
 Some chieff officers to begraffe. bury
 But they nor we then did not tarie,
 To bury the dead by the halffe.
 The bovers was burieing long afterhinde,
 And puting the dead in the ground.
 For al the countrie was oblided surelie,
 To bury al dead could be found.

Our Regiments valats was throun in heaps,
 Before the battell begane.
 Our Cornal did ordour for to leave them there,
 And win and wear them who can.
 After the batell a comande was sent theire,
 And keepled the bagage al night.
 And with our bae horsse it was al got upe,
 Nixt morning with the day light.

Havre-Duché

Our armie at Havrie again they did lie,
 The vallour of nine or ten dayes.
 The most of our work was keeping the hurte,
 And transporting them several wayes.
 It was pitie to see our Hollands armie,
 Their number it was so thine.
 And very few tents set up in a regiment,
 And few men to lie thereine.
 The armies of our allies they had a great loss,
 Twentie thousand eightie and two.
 And the French armie they losst as some saye,
 Eighten thousand and some moe.
 Bot no just account could ever be got,
 And the lists could never agree.
 For wounded men was dailie dieing,
 Which was great pitie to see.
 As the wounded men was still removeing,
 And caried from place to place.
 With excessive pains of their broken bones,
 They scribed and cryed alace.
 The Generall Faggel alouded a village,
 For al our wounded and hurt
 And still some men was there on comande,
 With arms to be for their scurt.
 When our regiments wounded together was gathered
 And in waggons brought to that place.
 The housses and yeards with hurt men was filled,
 And they were in a sad casse.
 Tilibairens corps was taken to Brissels,
 And buried into the same toun.
 In bed of honour and martiall grandour,
 Like a noble man of renoune.
 They had a designe for his body transporting,
 To his oun native Nation.
 And to bury him by his predecessours
 According to his hie station
 Bot his bloody wounds so badly perfumes
 His body they could not weel keep
 So they buried him with fame and renoune,
 And friends al for him did weep

escor

Our Major was then with the wounded men,
 And dresst by the Doctors there
 His cruell pain and dangerous wound,
 Tormented his honour right sair
 It was thought fit him for to transporte,
 To the noble Earlle of Stair
 Where his dear brother and also his doctour,
 Might of his body take cair
 Tuellve men on comand was pressentlie called,
 On the threeten day of September.
 So we caried him alongs al the line,
 On that afternoon I remember.
 With the Earlle of Stair when that he lay there,
 By the generals advice and consent.
 Cornalls comission they for him procure,
 Off the Lord Tilibairns regiment.
 The Brigadire Douglass obtained likeways,
 The grant of Hebrons regiment.
 That regiment to him it was aloued then,
 His preferement for to augment.
 Bot al their comissions was held in suspence
 Till Staits and Counsells did hear.
 And in our old ordor we continued ever,
 Til it was far in the year.
 Al the broken regiments that was in the camp,
 Was ordered al to garissouns.
 And new regiments was ordered for camp,
 To march from several touns.
 On the sixten day that broken armie,
 From the camp came marching away
 And by Saint Denies that night we camp,
 And marched againe the nixt day.
 Throu the pass we came in the morning soon
 Then marched along al the heath
 And in the evening our camp was set down,
 About a long lig from Atthe
 And the nixt day we marched on aye,
 And camped at the village Luze.
 A quarter of a loaf for every mans usse,
 From Atthe was brought up to uss.
 The nixt day soon we marched againe,
 And camped at night by Turneye.
 Then we marched weel and came into Leille,
 Of that moneth the twentieth day.
 The broken regiments being marched from camp,
 All into the garissoune touns.
 And new regiments were marched to camp,
 For to make up all their roomes.

St. Denis (?)

Leuze

The wounded and hurt awaye being put,
 And sent into hossaetaells all.
 To Brissels Antewerpe and Loven,
 These tounes were filled full all.
 The trouth for to say some died by the way,
 And others were kept and cured.
 And some with pains of their broken bones,
 A cruell torments endured.
 Cornal Hebrons regiment and the Lord Tillibairns,
 This time was sent into Leille
 And at Port Mories they sent us to barocks,
 And there we lay pretie weel.
 We mounted parades and all the toun guards,
 Untill the campine it was done.
 Two men of each companie was sent into Coutrie,
 Of each companie lay in the toun
 And at the red bridge we kept a garde,
 And releaved it once in a week.
 And our officers took men on comande,
 Their oun comissions to seek.
 Some to Coutrie went and some to the camp,
 And some to the Hagge they did ride.
 To seek out comissions some better than others,
 A long time there they did bide.
 On the Ninetenth of September our armie together,
 Removed and advanced to the toun.
 And with double lines and warlike engines,
 A crosse sidge then was set down.
 A noble train was brought up amaine,
 And the sidgers bussilie wrought.
 In breaking of ground before that strong toun,
 And their foradge was very far sought.
 Our great armie foradged far and nie,
 Weel guarded al round about.
 And the French armie they durst not come nie,
 To atacke our armie so stout.
 This toun of Monss besidged was crosse,
 And the sidgers al round it did lie.
 With works and engines and martial désignes,
 The water at Monss for to drie.
 The water about Monss in great quantaties,
 Overfloues by the city near round.
 That men of weire they can not win near,
 Bot in a danger to droune
 That city strong was hard to be wone,
 And weel fortified rounne about.
 Aboundance of canon and amonition,
 They had for to keep it out.

No maner of work the sidgers could get,
 Bot at two ports of the toun.
 And very strong forts without thes ports,
 And the water it doth them soroune.
 This city stout hath hills round about,
 And fortifications right strong.
 The sidgers without right bussilie wrought,
 The sidge endured right long.
 And four bateries the sidgers did raise,
 On a hill upon the east side
 Which fired constantlie upon the city,
 On the walls none was able to bide.
 And day and night these sidgers they wrought,
 Ay nearer and nearer thes ports.
 And made al ready with dexteratie,
 For a storm upon the two forts.
 Then on a strong fort without the toun port
 They made an ataque on a night.
 Where many was slain and into the toun,
 The Frenches was forced take flight.
 This sidge most strong continued one,
 And the sidgers wrought bussielie.
 And in a nights time by constant working,
 They raised a strong baterie.
 And then the canon they planted thereon,
 In that fort not far from the toun.
 And then the horn works was nixt to the port
 Our canons was batering down
 The Frenche the toun did boldlie defende,
 And fired canon illk day
 And likewayes smal shot did fire al night,
 Many slain on ground they did lay.
 From the ninetenth of the moneth September,
 Til the twentie one day of October.
 This toun it held out with courage most stout,
 And then they did give it over.
 The twentie one day it was I heard say,
 The Frenches did beat the shemade.¹
 And by capitulation did give up the toun,
 And marched off in a bregade.
 The general capitelation condceded upon,
 At surrendering the city of Monsse.
 To their hie puissances the estates Generals,
 Off the unitted Provinces.
 In the first articiele by consent mutuelle,
 It was made for the conservation.
 Of religion Catholick, Roman Aposstolick,
 And their most saffe preservation.

The free exercise of al the offices,
 Of them in ecclessiall station.
 Tho they changed Governours by martial overtures,
 Yet the Clergie had free tolleration.
 In the second article to the hie Allies will,
 The city was now to surrender.
 Bot eight dayes time they demanded then,
 For securatie of the defender.
 And then to surrender if they were not releaved
 By the armies of the two crouns.
 Bot this was denied and after agreed,
 And brought within the said bounds.
 From eight acloak in the morning October twentie one,
 Untill the twentie third day.
 Even at the same time al kind of French men,
 Was to march without further delaye.
 In the third articele agreed thereintill,
 It was a cessation of arms.
 The French in the toun and our armie al round,
 Was to do to other no harms.
 And strong barires with locks bars and keyes,
 Stood weel crossed them between.
 As the Allies came in without noisse or dine,
 No kind of disorder was seen.
 The Monje Duc de Croy Governour and Bailley,
 Off al that Provence lay rounde.
 The Marquess Gremaldi Lieutenant Generall
 And comander of the toun.
 Don Antonie Gremaldi¹ Lieutenant Generall,
 And the second comedant.
 And the noble Prince Francis de Nassau,
 A great Marisshal of the camp.
 Dom Pedro de Zuigna² another Marisshal of camp,
 And al their wholle Brigadires.
 Both of their infantrie and their cavalerie,
 With al Officers and gran peires.
 And al the sojourns cavilliers and dragouns,
 Of the troupes of these two crouns.
 And who was there belonged to Bavaire,
 From camps or from garissounes.
 And al the Officers and the aide Majors,
 And the Stait Major of the touns.
 And al the kinds of Officers and sojourns,
 Of the artaillerie of the two crouns.
 And al ingenires that belonged to Bavaire,
 And al Officers of the King.
 And Monje the Compt de Bergioek General,
 Ministers of War in that Winge.

Grimaldi

Bergeick

¹ The Marquis Grimaldi had a nephew with him in Mons.—Marlborough Despatches, vol. iv. p. 630. ² M. Zuniga, 'a Lieut.-General to the French king.'

And al comissoners in dispensing their wars,
 And threasurers to their troupes all.
 Doctours of Medicines Churirgons Potichares, apothecaries
 And Directours of their hossipital.
 And al sorts of persons that there was imployed,
 In the service of the two crowns.
 Without exception of any persone,
 Named or not named in the boundes.
 Al at Nimi port they were to pass out,
 By ten a cloke in the forenoon.
 Al troupes of France to march to Mumbuisse, Maubeuge (?)
 And so were ordered soon.
 The Spanish troupes and those of Bavaries,
 They were to march to Namuire.
 And four dayes time was allowd on them,
 And a saffe convoye and a sure.
 Al their equiepages bag and bagage,
 Their arms amonition and all.
 Their drums beating and collours flourishing
 And in every mans mouth a ball.
 And ten pice of canon al of twentie ponders,
 And four good morters also.
 Al double cartoves and their cariages,
 Along with them were to go.
 The Compte de Bergeick and Monje de Brockeen,
 Were to stay still in the toun.
 To order the affaires of the toun of Monsse,
 And of the countrey all rounde.
 This capitulation was al agreed then,
 In articelles twentie and two.
 How the French Officers and their equipages,
 How and when they were to go.
 And horsse with them for drauing their train,
 And al things out of the toun.
 And their wounded men they left al behinde,
 Untill they were saffe and soune.
 And days and times allowd on them,
 Til they were recovered and weell.
 And our Generals and Chief comanders,
 The capitulation did seall.
 October the twentie sealed Eugine of Savoye,
 And the Prince and Duc Mallberie.
 And Monje Randwick and Monje de Hoose, Hesse
 And Gossline the Staits deputie.
 The French Generals then subscribed the same,
 Monje Vegelin of Claerbergen.
 And the Marquess called Seva Grimaldi,
 These al have sealed the same.

The Duc of Arsscot in Monss he was put,
 That touns Governour for to be.
 And regiments with him the same to defende,
 Comanded from our armie.
 The Duc Albiemalle hath the comand all,
 And is Governour in Turneye.
 Both Turney and Monss the Frenches hath losst,
 And are banished from them awaye.
 Our armie then having planted the toun,
 And began to repaire the same.
 In the King name Charles of Spaine,
 The city Monss in obediance came.
 Shortlie affter this our armie they marcht,
 And camped on Cameron plaine.
 Al in good array several dayes they did stay,
 And then did close the campine.
 When the moneth October was al passed over,
 Then our armie al did dismisse.
 Near the month later end closed the campine,
 The fields being bare of al blisse.
 So being detasht our armie all marcht,
 From camp into garissouns.
 And marched each day the readiest way,
 Unto many several touns.
 Two stately touns Turney and Monsse,
 This year our armie did wine.
 And a field batel called Longaveille,
 The French was beat of the grund.
 At Longaveille into that battell,
 Our Hollands armie did tine.
 Eight thousand good men in batell slain,
 Nine hundred ninety and nine.
 The English and Jermans eight thousand did losse,
 And likewayes of good cavalrie.
 Two thousand were losst killed in the place,
 In al nineten thousand did die.
 Yet our armie victorious did afterwards flourish,
 As the best informed do tell.
 Ful thretie thousand they increased stronger,
 Then when they engadged in batell.
 The French armie they losst very many,
 And many were prissoners tane.
 And many Officers and their onleaders,
 Who in print are expressed by name.
 Throughout al this weir year after year,
 The French were forssed to flee.
 And pice and pice our armies advanced,
 And conquered al the countrie.

This years campine let us closse with the time,
 In October the nine and twentie.
 Our armie then marcht to garissounes,
 With trumpets sounding on hie.
 Two regiments of men to Leile did come ine,
 On the thretie day of October.
 And two regiments away they did march,
 With manly conduct and sober.
 The Prince of Holsstine to Leile he did come,
 At the upbreaking of the campine.
 With his equipages and al his lackies,
 In al their mounting most fine.
 A new loadging for him was abuilding,
 And their his hieness did stay.
 Near the port Defever with ston and timber,
 This lodging was builded right gay.
 The second of November two regiments together,
 Came marching into Leile toun.
 Threeten or fourteen regiments we were then,
 Ordored to keep garissoune.
 Two Scots regiments Hebrons and Tilibairnes,
 In Leile behoved to bide stille.
 To do our deutie without any suplie,
 And al their comands to fulfille.
 The Prince gave comande to these regiments than,
 To do deutie with the resst.
 Bot one night in bed some companies had,
 So the weakest was sadly opresst.
 The orders did come to each garissoun toun,
 To fire a brave victorie.
 For our arms prosspering throu al the campine,
 And the sucesse of our armie.
 So in Leile toun al the garissoune,
 In arms marched to the wall.
 And al the canon three times fired round,
 And likewayes we mussquatires all.
 November fiveten right late in the even,
 Was Captan Monjes¹ funerall.
 Drums covered with black before the corps beat,
 Dru to the kirk of the wie citydaille.
 Sixtie granadires comanded with arms,
 Marcht before the corps to the grave.
 Three times we did fire at the funerall,
 And like brave lads did behave.
 Captan Litster was our regiments comander,
 Under our Major Campbell.

Who was our Cornall or chief comander,
 No man could perfectlie tell.
 Then Captan Cathcart did come up from Gaint,
 And a Lieutenant Dundasse.
 And that comand to the regiment came back,
 Who in Holland garissounes was.
 Full two campines the Lieutenant Dundasse,
 With his comand was awaye.
 And Captan Cathcart and another comande,
 At Gaunt and Cess they did staye.
 Then al these comands from garissoun touns,
 Was sent back to their regiment.
 And some wounded men with them came along,
 Our companies for to augment.
 The Captan Cathcart as chief comidante,
 The regiment he did rewieve.
 The twentie fifth day of the moneth November,
 Our companies to the wall dreue.
 And in companies we stood in a hedge,
 And was rewieved on the wall.
 And an exact list of absent and present,
 And the names and number of all.
 Some new serjants on companies placed,
 And ordered to their dutie.
 And likewayes acount of al vacant posts,
 That was in each companie.
 Al changed arms in times of batells,
 Was ordered to be tane ine.
 For half a doller a pice to the right ouners,
 Where they their oun arms did finde.
 When long the Officers had waited for possts,
 And comissions had layn in suspence.
 And many cadies had dazelled their eyes,
 In waiting for a recompence.
 The Brigadire Douglass was established,
 The Cornal of Hebrons regiment.
 And nixt unto him was Captan Gibsone,¹
 For Lieutenant Cornal was sent.
 MacQuen² by his touer cleamed to be Major,
 And so al down by degrees.
 Home :³ Guterie :⁴ and Hebron⁵ to Captans did wine,
 And assigned to their companies.
 And Lieutenant Halliburton⁶ was also preffered,
 The youngest Captan to be.

And to go to Scotland for the recruiting,
 With Officers of each degree.
 Lieutenant McClaude¹ was also preferred,
 A Captan Lieutenant to be.
 And Brigadire Douglass gave him the charge,
 To oversee his oun companie.
 And several cadies received comissions,
 And on the first day of December.
 From the city of Leile they took jurney all,
 Al these cadies I remember.
 And the most of them was sent a recruiting,
 For Brigadire Douglass regiment.
 Al new Officers that received comissions,
 To Scotland they were to be sent.
 And several of them disapointed was then,
 And got no comissions at all.
 A new Officer and some for serjants,
 The Brigadire sent up withall.
 And likewayes a letter which ordered all,
 The three youngest serjants to prison.
 Except that they would take a corporals paye,
 And the serjants halbert fling down.
 Til a counsel of war one after another,
 Restored them al to their places.
 Without a fault they could them not break,
 The Law did favour their casses.
 Major John Campbell was established Cornall,
 Of the Lord Tillibairens regiment.
 After the battell from the Generall,
 His comission unto him was sent.
 In the Earlle of Stairs quarters he lay several dayes,
 Till the sidge of Monss was set down.
 Then in his oun cheese he was taken thence,
 And caried into Brissels toun,
 Cornal Hebrons coach and also two horse,
 Was kept in his custodie.
 A loadging in Brissels was for him prepared,
 And the weekly rent payed he.
 And Doctor Kennadie still with him did stay,
 Labouring his wound for to cure.
 And ussed al means in applying medicines,
 So long as his life did endure.
 His pages and servants and several friends,
 Day and night did wait him upon.
 Many Scots Officers was paying him vissits,
 Till al his liffetime was gone.

Unto the regiment wherein he long served,
 He had the greatest desire.
 To his own countrie men a love he bare stille,
 Till all his dayes did expire.
 Bot the Staits Generalls in several counsell,
 Gave him Tillibairns regiment.
 And Brigadire Douglass of Hebrons maid choise,
 By the General Murrayes consent.
 Tho they in camp received comissions,
 Shortlie after the batelle.
 And before the Staits it was ratified,
 As the best informed do tell.
 Tho Cornal Campbell had friends at counsell,
 There dayelie for him to plead.
 Yet at the Hagge in several counsell,
 This processe on they did lead.
 With generals decreets then all pairties,
 Might be contented right weel.
 And both the regiments behoved to submitte,
 All winter to lye in Leile.
 Bot Cornal Campbell being wounded so ille,
 And very weak of bodie.
 And from the bed was not able to risse,
 And death aproached him nie.
 Tho stille Officers of both the regiments,
 Sent letters unto him by possts.
 And all his doctours and onewaiters,
 Spent large enough on his cossts.
 Being used to travell he did take the gravell,
 Which grived him very sore.
 And the gravell ston increased still one,
 His pain increased still more.
 No passage of urine he got a long time,
 By lay in sad agonie.
 His wound did not heal bot putrayed still,
 Untill the day he did die.
 His arm broken so near his body,
 It could not be taken away.
 Bot plaister after plaister applied theretill,
 And he by degrees did decaye.
 It was no marvell for of his gravell,
 Remedie there could be got none.
 Tho some said ever that he would recover,
 Till all his lifetime was gone.
 Full earnestlie to God prayed he,
 For to forgive all his sin.
 His cruel rash swearing he could not forbear,
 Was then a griffe unto him.

He lay a long time in trouble extreame,
On death he often did thinke.
Al earthly things was usseless to him,
Bot some litle cordial drink.
The day and hour apointed are sure,
When every man he must die,
None can gainstand when he comands,
Nor change Gods blessed decree.
Upon the last night of the moneth November,
Cornall John Campbell did die.
And al his friends did sadly lament,
Who did it hear of or see.
Shortlie after this along with the posst,
A leter was sent up to Leile.
Which gave at length the acount of his death,
Our Officers then knew it weele.
All his country men who weel did him keen,
Lamented right sadly indeed.
Espesialie them who long time with him,
Had served and gotten their bread.
A leter was sent away in all haiste,
His brother James to informe.
Who at Roterdam was found at the time,
Having busines for to performe.
For grieff of heart for sorow and smart
The noble man was confussed.
For his dear brother who he loved weell,
For al the means could be ussed.
He was then dead no other remeade,
To death submitt al we must.
For in short time death shal bring doun,
And equal al with the dust.
As men do come in Gods oun time,
To the world both naked and bare,
So in like maner must they return,
As Divine Scripture declare.
Death makes separation of every relation,
None togither in world can stay.
Nothing we brought in the world with us,
And nothing we cary away.
It is vain for us mortal men,
To freet repine or to murne.
Since God at first made man of the dust,
And to dust shal he return.
Since Adam first did sin commit,
There hath died many a man.
The strong nor wise can not gainstand,
With al the art they can.

know

Comanders of our armies all,
 Within short time must die.
 No strength of hand can death gainstand,
 The swiftest canot flee.
 Therefore let us with patience,
 To God submit our casse.
 And chierfulie let 's live or die,
 In Gods apointed place.
 Desiring God of his free grace,
 To bring us to his Glore.
 Where we shal happie be and blisst,
 And live for evermore.
 All worldly prefferments shal cease,
 Within a few years space.
 For death doth come on every man,
 In Gods oun time and place.
 Lieutenant Cornal Campbell sent a leter,
 And the charge of the funerall.
 To my Lord Cumberland his oun sister son,¹
 He entirely comited it all.
 This Scots nobleman my Lord Bocarus son,
 He was then in Brissels toun.
 And for the death of his dear Uncle,
 The tears they came trinceling doun.
 He was a Captan in the Royall regiment,
 A pretie young man and a tall.
 And unto him it did then belonge,
 All the charge of that funerall.
 Cornall John Campbell they did enbouelle,
 And took his entralls all out.
 And al his friends gathered in the room,
 In weeping made a great shout.
 The gravell stons was found out then,
 Had been the cause of his death.
 In number four all increased more,
 Till they had stopt his breath.
 A litele coffen was provided soon,
 Wherein his entraells were put.
 The Doctors work that work dexterous,
 In stiching his bellie was cut.
 His burying place then provided was,
 In a cloisster of the Capieshines.
 And for burieall at good rates they sell,
 And with it augmenteth their means.
 A shirecloth good for him they have made,
 And wraped about his bodie.
 A brave coffen they put him therein,
 Al daintiely graithed was he.

¹ Lord Cumberland's mother was a daughter of the second Earl of Roxburghe. Douglas's Peerage, vol. i. p. 171.

On the second day of the moneth December,
 About six acloak of the night.
 Was the buriall of Cornall John Campbell,
 And the torches shined ful bright.
 His corps in coach along they did march,
 The streets to the buring place.
 Seven hired coaches al filled with friends,
 Al marching with a slou pace.
 Four Minzie brothers vent at the coach doors,
 With burning flamboes in hand.
 And sixtie granadires with burning flamboes,
 Al in order vent by comand.
 And every granadire that flamboes did bear,
 Had aloued upon him a croun.
 So Cornall Campbell got his burieall,
 Like a noble man of renoun.
 For hired coaches and everything elsse,
 Was aloued payment at large.
 A thousand pound as I am informed,
 Defrayed not his funeral charge.
 Into Brissels toun among the noble clan
 Stands the corps of Cornall Campbell,
 Who lived in honour and died at his hour,
 And had a sumptious burieall.
 His servants and horssees and whole equiepage,
 And al his goods and his geir,
 Was al to be kept for his brothers usse,
 Although he was not then near.
 For the horsse and men he shortlie did send,
 Who vent to him to the Haeg.
 And many things that they left behinde,
 Which availed him never a feige.
 In Brissels toun of the wounded men,
 In the Hospitaell Magdallen.
 In that one Hospitael there died in all,
 In number fiveten hundere men.
 And many a man died shortlie than,
 Al buried in other places.
 In hospital yeards they were buried,
 And laid altogether in casses.
 And those that did mend away they were sent,
 Al to their several regiments.
 And a deal of lameiters for in villagers,
 Which fell al in to these rents.
 Lieutenant Campbel did weel recovere,
 And came up to the regiment.
 And al the men that were able to march,
 Along with him they were sent.

From Brissels toun they came marching along,
 And came saffe up into Leile.
 Into the regiment of Brigadire Douglass,
 And augmented the same very weel.
 The Brigadire Douglass lay long in his wounds,
 Weel kept by his ladie.
 In Courtrige toun in his oun loading,
 So he came not his regiment to see.
 Lieutenant Cornal Gibson to Leile he did come,
 For to comand the regiment.
 And at his entrie right largelie gave he,
 Monies he aloued to be spent.
 Four pistols of gold to the drums of the regiment,
 He gave at his first entrie.
 And likeways gold to drink his good health,
 He gave to his own companie.
 And Major McQueen to Leile he did come,
 And Captan Hoome at his hand,
 And Captan Hoome having now fullie goten,
 That companie for to comand.
 Which once did belong to Major Campbell,
 Tho they ware then very weak.
 And very few men in the company then,
 When he possession did take.
 When he came to the toun he ordered soon,
 Al the men of his oun companie.
 For a days time to be free of the garde,
 Until he did them all see.
 A pistole of gold to drink his good health,
 He bestoued on the companie.
 And another day we were free of the garde,
 And we drank it off merielie.
 Then Major McQueen and Captan Robert Hoome,
 To Scotland behoved to go.
 So they again did take jurney then,
 And from Leile they partied us fro.
 And Captan Guterie brought up his leadie,
 And stayed with his companie.
 And some litele monie to drink his good health,
 He gave them at his entrie.
 And so the regiment of Brigadire Douglass,
 Was then established weell.
 And al the year the victual was dear,
 We behoved to tarie at Leile.
 The Lieutenant Cornal having ordered then,
 The regiment for to rewieve.
 And six companies to mount al the guards,
 Which to the regiment was due.

So on the eighteen of the moneth December,
 The six oldest companies.
 In order all drew out to the wall,
 And the Lieutenant Cornal them sees.
 The six youngest companies monted the guards,
 And the eldest they were rewieved.
 Bot on the nineten before the rewieuing,
 The comands again was renewed.
 The Prince and Governour by martial pouer,
 Sent out of the garissoune.
 A hundered and twentie of every regiment,
 That was lieing in the toun.
 Lieutenant Cornal Gibson went on the comand,
 And Officers of each degree.
 December nineten late in the evening,
 In the best order that might be.
 The nixt night at even they came back again,
 And ships did come up with haye.
 And al the men came marching along,
 And guarded them by the way.
 So we in Leile continued on stille,
 And tho our victuals was dear.
 Of al sort of grain enough was therein,
 And so we ended the year.

[CHAP. X]

The continuation of the progress of War in the Year 1710.

O weekly musse I do the implore,
 To assist and sucour my pen. muse
 In this progress of war extending so far,
 As the year seven hundered and ten,
 Into Leile toun we kept garissoune,
 And mounted still on the guards.
 And cets of hoiboyes before us they playe,
 In our mounting of the perads. sets
 The toun being strong in fortification,
 And al the works very stout.
 And the windmills the victual that grinds,
 In great numbers the city about.
 From Douglass regiment away then was sent,
 Al the cripled and the lame men.
 And to the Holanders to be in villagers,
 Al that were unable were send.
 And al in a ship from Liel they did slipe,
 On the fourtenth of Febervare.

From every regiment very many was sent,
 Which was wounded in the war.
 Our governour he made an ordour,
 All the garissoune for to rewieue.
 Two three regiments a day al in good araye,
 At Magdalen port out he dreue.
 So on the ninth day of the month Febervar,
 On the afternoon of the day.
 The Prince Holstenbege began to rewieue,
 Three regiments al in good array.
 And on the tenth eleventh and tuelth,
 And on the threetenth also.
 He continued on in regiments rewieuing,
 Ten in rank before him did go.
 And muster rolls of every regiment,
 Was writen and shoun to him.
 And an exact acount of absent and present,
 Al Officers galant and trime.
 Did pass rewieue and gave their word true,
 What number of men they had there.
 And what Officers they had then absent,
 The trouth they were to declare.
 On the sixtenth day did passe, in rewieue,
 Three regiments with good intent.
 The Brigadires and Brodies¹ two Scottish regiments,
 And likewayes a Spanish regiment.
 And Lieutenant Cornal Gibson then had the comand,
 Of the Brigadire Douglass regiment.
 In head of the regiment he passed rewieue,
 And the number of men was keent.
 On the sevententh day rewieued were they,
 The regiments in the citydaille,
 In the month Febervar on the city wall,
 Was rewieued that garissoun haill.
 Some of our wounded men from Antwerp did come,
 Being then recovered right weell.
 Under cure they had been al the winter time,
 Since the battell at Longaveille.
 Upon the fourth day of the moneth of March,
 Which was the fasstens even day.
 The Brigadire Douglass to Leile he did come,
 With equiepage gallant and gaye.
 A brave loading was provided for him,
 And a sentrie set at the door.

The regiments collours was tane to his loading,
 And twelve serjants marcht them before.
 The Prince and Governour and Officers more,
 Vent out on comand the same day.
 And three thousand men of the garissoune,
 To meet the skipes with the hay.
 The nixt night at even they came back again,
 And the skipes they came up to Leile.
 Weel loaden with hay they arived saffelie,
 To furnish the garissoune weell.
 Upon the seventh day of the moneth of March,
 From several garissoun touns.
 A strong comand from Liele they were sent,
 Weill ordered al in platounes.
 A comand from Turney that day marched by,
 And Leile comand folloued one.
 A comand from Gaunt did likewayes come up,
 And from Coutridge and Minone.
 Comands of men then did al conveine,
 And gathered to Varlatongue.
 About that wie toun to make fortification,
 These strong comands did al come.
 Men with provissons from garissoun tounes,
 At Varlaetongue did conveine.
 And began eagerlie that toun to fortifie,
 And fell to work there beedene.
 And night and day they wrought constantly,
 And there cast up a strong trench.
 About Varlaetongue a defence they got soon,
 To secure themselves from the French.
 These good ingenires and workmen in thousands,
 Day and night did work bussilie.
 And a deal of canon they had to with them,
 And constables the best that could be.
 A deal of piliesods and other necessars.
 Was sent to it out of Leile.
 So at Varlaetongne the work it vent one,
 Till it was fortified weell.
 At Varlaetongue when first they brake ground,
 The French cavalerie did apeare.
 And our Dutch horse on them did advance,
 And forssed them to retire.
 Likewayes Veruick and Cumine was both fortifieing,
 And these works vent orderlie on.
 At these litle touns standing al by the water,
 Betwixt big Liele and lilele Minone.
 All touns in Flanders did send detasshments
 These smal touns to fortifie.

And for a long time they continued on :
 In guarding of the countrie.
 The sojors by touers did work and entrinche,
 Great numbers did work every day.
 And for their working it was aloued them,
 Illk day eight pence and their pay.
 And so their bread was given them indeed,
 And so that work it vent one.
 A deal of marchie tenters from several touns,
 Came their to sell their provisoune.
 March the threeten day twelve skipes with hay
 Came up the water to Leile.
 Comands of men with them came alonge,
 From toun to toun very weell.
 Six and thretie skipes filled with amonition haye,
 Was put into Liele magassine.
 For the armies horsse and camp foradge,
 Untill the fields did grow green.
 The Brigadire Douglass was then into Leile,
 And ordered then his regiment.
 Their acoutraments he caused make new,
 And al things belonged to a tent.
 On the eighteen day of the month of March,
 He caused them to pitch their camp.
 Without Magdalen port and himself he came out,
 And among the tents he did lamppe.
 And there the drumers he caused them beat,
 A new march and a taptue
 And to continue the same for to beat,
 By ordours he did them aloue.
 Al his drumers that could not weell beat,
 He had ordered to put awaye.
 And caused take men and make drumers of them,
 Who weel before him did play.
 A set of good drums he provided soon,
 To please his oun fantassie.
 Bot in the regiment bot few men was yet,
 In Leile to do the deutie.
 The regiments barocks he having al seen,
 And caused them to get anone.
 Their litle ambries for holding their bread,
 And strae for the beds they ly one.
 Their poudre flasks was then al ready,
 And bags for holding their ball.
 And al their hatchets tent polls and pins,
 They were then provided in all.
 And orders given to make ready soon
 That regiment for the campine.

Readie at a call they were to be all,
 With arms in order most fine.
 The Brigadire being wounded right sair,
 Is now not able to go.
 In a litle carosse he comes and he goes,
 In the streets of Liele to and froe.
 He is most peremtor in al his orders,
 With the regiment he doth comande.
 Right badlie he hauls along as he walks,
 With a crock headed staffe in his hand.
 He did comande another Officere,
 Our barocks again to rewieue.
 And to the drumers he did give comande,
 Again to change the taptue.
 And with swords at their sides to walk on the street,
 And handsome and neat in their cloaths.
 And every day they were learning to playe,
 A deal of new beatings for shows.
 And at Varnatongue the work it went on,
 Right orderlie and right weel.
 And frequentlie the skipes with the haye,
 Was a coming up unto Leile.
 On the twentie second day of the moneth of March
 The detashments marched from Leile.
 To Warlaetongue and releaved their men,
 Right orderlie and right weell.
 The garissoune of Turney on the twentie sixth day,
 Some of their men did releave.
 And a pairt of them continued their still,
 And at Warnatongue they did live.
 Untill the third day of the moneth of Apriell,
 Then al the detashments was there.
 Together was releaved and five regiments,
 To that place made their repaire.
 Then ful regiments into it did lye,
 And guarded it very weell.
 And al nesessars for fortification,
 Was brought to them out of Leile.
 About Warnatongue was constant working,
 And strong barires there was made.
 And a deal of our works half moons and counterscarfs,
 Was a making both large and broade.
 At Berwick and Cumin and at Kenavae,
 Lay strong comands of our men.
 Along by the watter twixt Minon and Leile,
 Al thes passages to defende.

Our Hollands regiments they had al detasht,
Men to lie in the garissoun touns.
And from Leile and Turney marched were they,
And at Gaunt they conveened these platouns,
So doun to Holland these men they were sent,
To keep their garissoun touns.
And al the regiments ordering for the camp,
In each place throughout al their bounds.
The Brigadire Douglass al by the companies,
His regiment he did rewieue.
And al his drums with his Coat of Arms,
He caussed for to make newe.
And on the new drums was pictured fair,
The bloody heart and the crown.
Which Douglass obtained for his Coat of Arms,
With very great fame and renoun.
When Robert the Bruce in Scotland was King,
And had won Scotland all free.
And on the great field of Bannochburne,
Had made al his enomies flee.
There thretie thousand of gallant Scotsmen,
Obtained a great victorie.
Over three hundred thousand outlandish men,
From battel was forssed to flee.
Then Englishmen was banished al home,
And the cruell wars then did ceasse.
And King Robert did reign over all Scotland,
And after long war he got peace.
Sir James Douglass a Chiftan most bold,
Was stout and true to the King.
In Bruces war he had a great share,
With martiall vallour on winge.
He was original and first principalle,
Of that most ilussterous name.
And so of him are descended and come,
The Douglasses of great fame.
Our Scots Chronicles doth shew forth in versse,
So many Douglasses have been.
Off one surname al good of one thing,
Was never in Scotland seen.
King Robert the Bruce died at Cardrosse,
Off his reign the twentie fourte year.
And buried he was at the toun of Drumfermling,
As the Chroniceles doth bear.
Shortlie after this Sir James the Douglass,
Was chossen as Chiffan most bold.

To pass with the heart of King Robert,
 Enclosed in a casse of gold.
 To Jerusalem there to bury the same,
 Conforme to the Kings oun direction.
 Beside the Sepulchere of our Savioure,
 Within the Temple for protection.
 Because he had awouched and also awoved,
 To have passt with an armie of men.
 Against the Turks and the Sarasines,
 In defence of the faith Christian.
 If so had been that he had not been hindered,
 Or detained by the war at home.
 And now at last prevented by death,
 Else that voyage he had gone.
 Sir James Douglass wilinglie he did passe,
 Acompanied with noble men
 Expressed by name Sir William Sinclare,
 And likewayes Sir Robert Logane.
 With many other valliant and noble,
 Passing on in their companie.
 With reverance and great solemnatie,
 The Kings heart they did burie.
 With sweet spices it was enbalmeed,
 And pretious ointements also.
 The heart of the King in the casse of gold,
 To the place apointed did go.
 Within the Temple at Jerussalem,
 That Kings heart they did place.¹
 Beside the Sepulcher of our Blessed Lord,
 Weel closed in the golden casse.
 Sir James Douglass did noble exploites,
 With valliant and noble men.
 Against the Turks and the Sarassines,
 Many victories they did obtaine.
 And great honour he purchased sure,
 To al the wholle chrisstian name.
 With great aplause for worthie exploites,
 And very much grandor and fame.
 By boisterous wind in his returning,
 He was driven in into Spain.
 With the King of Aragon against the Sarasines,
 He engadged in war there againe.
 At last an ambushment against him was laid,
 By the Sarasines his enomies.
 And the valiant Douglass and his valiant men,
 Al together in battell there dies.
 Thus ended Douglass one of the worthieste,
 And noblest Knights in his dayes.

¹ The soldier was not aware that the 'Good Sir James' fell in Spain when on his way to the Holy Land, and the heart was brought back and laid in Melrose Abbey.

Most highlie renouned and in vallour crowned,
 And chronicled to his praisse.
 That againest the Turks and the Sarassines,
 Threeten times he wan victorie.
 And seven and fiftie times against the English,
 In battel a victor was he.
 And at Danskine even in our oun time,
 There was a gate called Douglass port.
 Nou reediffied again and called Hochindore :
 As the Chronicelles doth reporte.
 The same Douglass got the bloody heart,
 And set in his Coat Armour.
 And still the Douglasses come of that race,
 Doth cary the heart to this hour.
 Nou Brigadire Douglass paints on his drums,
 The bloody heart under the crown.
 And weapens of war with the points standing out,
 About a broad circle al roun.
 Our pouder flasks slipes and ball bags,
 We got all out handsomelie.
 And on the tuelfth of the moneth Apriell,
 Rewieued and musstered were we.
 The Stats of Holland to Leile being come,
 Al the garissoune for to rewieue.
 And five regiments by day made ready,
 At Magdalen port out we dreue.
 On the eleventh day of Apriell in the toun of Leile,
 The Staites began to rewieue.
 Five regiments by day mustere did they,
 And muster rolls certan and true.
 So Leile garissoun al musstered was then,
 On the eleventh and tuelfth of Apriell.
 And the Officers called the names of the sojors,
 Who were marching in a fille.
 After that rewieue and mussters was over,
 Brigadire Douglass did ordaine.
 That his regiment in arms exercisseing,
 Before him again should be seen.
 So on the fourteenth of the moneth Apriell,
 The whole regiment marched out.
 At Magdalen port and in companies,
 We were exercised there about.
 The Brigadire Douglass did come out in coach,
 Right handsome and neat in his weed.
 And Lieutenant Cornal Gibson came out after him,
 Weell mounted on a good steed.
 The Brigadire did begin in the exercising,
 The motions of war for to teach.

Dantzic

He caussed the regiment to forme batalion.
 And afterwards gave them a speech.
 The rire half files to the right about,
 He caussed them march to the rire.
 And the granadires to post on the flanks,
 He handsomelie did them leave.
 Like a four nocked basstin the regiment stood then,
 And in order right handsome to see.
 And in good araye facing every way,
 So in that quadrangle stood we.
 The Officers and the drums he caussed come in,
 In mids of the regiment to stand
 And al the regiment to face the inwards,
 With a word he did them comand.
 The Brigadire began a fair speech,
 In the midle of al the regiment.
 I hope gentlemen in the Staits service,
 With us ye are al content.
 And to you Officers I say in the first place,
 Let us live in amatie.
 After al this avertion backwardness and contention,
 I wish that we now could agree,
 And you shal al see I shal cairful be,
 Al along such methods to take.
 As may contrabute for our living in union,
 And no needless contention let 's make.
 Then to the sojors he directed his speech,
 Gentlemen I am weell content.
 That I should be chossen to be the comander,
 Off such a brave noble regiment.
 And to be the Cornal of you that have been,
 Such brave noble and valiant men.
 The meanest of your suits I am willing to hear,
 Your legal complaints let me ken.
 I shal do justice to you that are meanest,
 As the laws of the place shal aloue.
 To be true to your collours is the principal thing,
 That can be expected of you.
 If ye should deserte to another pairt,
 Or serue in the Hollands armie
 Ye shal not have reason to say ye are better,
 Than ye still had stayed with me.
 The regiments he caussed outwards to face,
 In plattouns he did them divide,
 And caused them al to make ready and fire,
 And the officers them for to guide.
 And al the platounes three times fired round,
 And then he gave them comande.

To make ready together and give a good fire,
 Upon the ground where we did stand.
 We fired the volie and gave a hosae,
 Then the Lieutenant Cornal did say.
 Into the Brigadire was standing him near,
 And the regiment al weel in arraye.
 Sin such a hosae and behaviour brave,
 What doth it deserve do you thinke.
 Then the Brigadire to him did answer,
 They shal surelie have something to drink.
 To that they agree and then presentlie,
 He caused the regiment retire.
 At tuck of a drum in disorder they ran,
 And formed again in the rire.
 The whole batalion he marcht back againe,
 And dreu them up very soon.
 He ordered them to wheell by divissione,
 And acordinglie it was done.
 Which caused the rire to stand on the frount,
 Of which he discoursed some space.
 So by the left hand he wheeled us again,
 And brought every man to his oun place.
 When of exercising we were wearieing,
 He dismissed the regiment right weell.
 And told the Officers that then he had orders,
 That the regiment should lie still in Leile.
 Shortlie after this the Brigadire Douglass,
 For six weeks got a forelooffe.
 So on the nineten of the moneth Apriell,
 Away from Liele he marcht off.
 And thretie men with him on comande,
 The regiments half mounting to bring,
 And Captan Cathcart was their Comedant,
 Weel ordered for the same thing.
 At Cessfiele Gaunt the mounting they meet,
 And conducted the same very weell.
 Right regularlie they journied aye,
 Til they brought it up into Lielle.
 Six companies of Douglass regiment,
 At port Mories did lie still.
 And six companies to the citydail vent,
 And kepted the guards thereuntill.
 The armie this time was then encamping,
 And advanceing up the countrie.
 Both horsse and foot was all gathered out,
 In the best order they could be.
 The Armies of the Allies in an aweful wisse,
 Their banners al did displaye.

Sas-van-Ghent

From every garissoun they were then marching,
 In good ordour and arraye.
 Tho many comitties for concludung of peace,
 Had sitten in many a toun.
 And Ambassadors had riden by towers, turns
 The Cruell war to bring doun,
 The prepossales of peace was printed and published,
 And sold through the toun of Liele.
 In thretie six Articleles condescended upon
 And the most pairt pleased were weelle.
 Yet earlie this year in ordour of weire, war
 Our armie drew to the field,
 Right valliantlie and with courage on hie,
 With weapens themselves for to shield.
 Apriell the threeten with courage most keen,
 From the garissoune of Turneye.
 A strong comand from it was detashed,
 Upon their foes to make essaye.
 So they that night with conduct most right,
 Did ataque upon their proud foes.
 The Castell Mortainie they did it assaillie, Mortagne
 And sudenlie they did it enclosse.
 They took that Castell yet thus it befelle,
 The next day on the forenoon.
 The French againe upon them did storne,
 And a cruell ataque was begune.
 Til they within were all prissoners tane, Douai
 And sent to Dowie to keep.
 The French granadires within that castell,
 In saffetie did not long sleep.
 The third night again a comand of our men,
 Marched from the toun of Turneye,
 A strong comand did come up from Gaunt,
 In noble rank and arraye.
 And six pice of canon they had to with them,
 In a boat up the water they creepe.
 And in the night time they ataqued againe,
 On the French in time of their sleep.
 And they that storne did boldlie performe,
 Like noble men in the weires.
 And in short time they have prissoners tan,
 Two hundered French granadires.
 The Castell Mortanie thus taken have they,
 And then without longer dellaye.
 The French prissoners they sent to be kept,
 All into the toun of Turneye.
 The Castell Mortanie and passe of the countrie,
 Was then secured right weell.

Idsinga

The Armies of the Allies was dayelie advanceing,
 Til they came betwixt Turney and Leile.
 Upon the eighten of the moneth Apriell,
 The garissoun of Leile marched out,
 And joyned the armie twixt Liele and Turney,
 Camping on fields thereabout.
 Then Dowglass regiment and Cornal Woods,
 Was then detained in Leile.
 And likewayes Jetchingaes Cressoos and Floors,
 To defend the city right weell.
 These Scottish regiments being few for camp,
 In the city behoved to stay.
 And al the magassines we got for to keep,
 And many a shipe full of haye.
 So continueing on our dutie right throng,
 From day to day in the toun.
 Bread and foradgeing to our armie was sent,
 Comands we got up and down.
 To Leile and Turney came abundance of hay,
 And necessares for the armie.
 And every day they were fetching the hay,
 And things for the armies supplie.
 Then Cornall Wood¹ did come up to Leile,
 His businesse for to perseue.
 Into his oun regiment then he did come,
 Being made a Cornall off newe.
 And Captan McLaude² in Douglass regiment,
 Was preffered a Captan to be.
 To Leile he did come about the same time,
 His oun companie for to see.
 A large tun of beir he on them bestoued,
 And with them drank and made merie.
 A pretie young man in clothing right fine,
 And so far advanced was he.
 And in England he had made his recruiting,
 Before his comission he got
 And Lieutenant Hellieburton was gone to Scotland,
 No advancement yet fell to his lot.
 Captan Robert Hoome recruited in England,
 And his recrutes he had sent.
 His oun companie they did weell suplie,
 And others in Dowglass regiment.
 Above twentie men to the regiment they came,
 Near the midele of the moneth of March.

² Vol. ii. p. 47.

Then Captan Robert Hoome he past to Scotland,
 For more recroutes for to search.
 And in short time he came back againe,
 And several young Officers moe.
 And of good men they brought from Scotland,
 The number of seventie and two.
 Upon the twentie day of the moneth Apriell,
 If I do calculate right.
 The Armies of the Allies did then take ther march,
 Upon that same very night.
 And before five acloak on the nixt morning,
 They advanced on to the French line,
 Aprielle the twentie one they dreu them al in,
 Al the armie in order most fine.
 The French comands at the line durst not stand,
 Bot fled all from it awaye.
 Eugine and Mallberie with their noble armie,
 Valiantlie did their banners displaye.
 The Duke Mallberie with brave cavalrie,
 Took the line in the morning right soon.
 And the infantrie marched on all the day,
 In the line their camp was set down.
 A litele armie lay still at Turneye,
 To keep the toun and countrie.
 And comands to all passes our armie detasht,
 In the best ordour that could be.
 From Lielle and Turney they fetcht oats and hay,
 For foradging to the armie.
 And every day they were gathering up,
 All the plain fields near Labassie.
 Foradgeing and bread for our armies need,
 Was convoyed from Liele and Turneye.
 And regiments anewe was still passing throu,
 And the armie encreassed each day.
 Some Staites came again to the toun of Leile,
 On Apriell the twentie fourth day.
 Two Scots regiments and one of the Dutch,
 In good ordour and arraye.
 Was revieued and musstered before the Staites,
 And continued to lie in Lielle.
 And night and day on guards we laye,
 And kept the magassines weelle.
 Many shipfulls of hay at the harbour then lay,
 Right throng by the water port.
 Horsse from the armie for fetching of hay,
 Dayellie to Liele did resorte.
 The shipes was emptieing and many men working,
 And making up stacks of the haye.

deputies of the States

In five or six places they made magassines,
 And the armie still fetching away.
 The regiments in toun hard deutie had then,
 Which made them to irke and to tire.
 With standing sentrie by night and by day,
 For fear of the hay taking fire.
 The Armies of the Allies continued their march,
 And surrounded the toun of Dowie
 Full fiftie regiments they did then detashe,
 For to be the sidgeing armie.
 Dowie was right strong and a great magassine,
 And fortified all about.
 And two and twentie regiments into it was put,
 Off valliant Frenches and stout.
 A Lieutenant Cornal was apointed withall,
 To be Governour of the toun.
 Hees called an Irishman Albergotti¹ by name,
 With others of fame and renoun.
 Their magassines ful of al kind of provission,
 And amonition good store.
 The toun of Dowie was fortified stronglie,
 And canon planted it before.
 The armies of the Allies advanced with courage,
 And trivised all the ground.
 They two or three dayes about it did march
 And no resistance they found.
 All round the toun the sidgers set down,
 Like valliant men and right strong,
 And the French within began to deffend,
 The sidge seemed to last long.
 The grand armie advanced from Doweye,
 A lig and a halff or thereby.
 And pitched their camp the sidgers to cover,
 Upon these fields fair and dry.
 To keep of the French they made a strong trench,
 Al along the front of the armie.
 Likewayes in the rire left room to retire,
 If beaten in battell they be.
 The armies train was brought up amaine,
 The armie for to deffende.
 And every thing in ordour was put
 Which was proper for the end.
 The sidgers began to aproach to the toun
 Bot before they wan to it near.
 The French did raille and on them saillie,
 And was forssed again to retire.
 The French held a castel a lig without Dowey,
 Bot the same they were forssed to yeald.

¹ He was not Irish but Italian.

A hundred therein was all prisoners tane,
 And some was slain in the bielde. shelter
 Near the later end of the moneth of Apriell
 Our armie that casstell did take.
 And al the French that into it that was,
 Prisoners of war they did make.
 On the first day of the moneth of May,
 These prisoners was brought into Leile.
 And was al put in the gavalehouse, gabelle or custom house
 And there was kept right weell.
 The sidgers brake ground before Dowie toun,
 And themselves did stronglie entrinche.
 The toun for to take provission they make,
 And they wrought for it every inche.
 The French in the toun was likeways right strong,
 And ordered for the defence.
 To gain their honour in the martiall houre,
 Expecting a large recompence
 And Monje Villare the French Generall,
 Having gathered up his armie.
 To raise the sidge by force or arte,
 He with his hosst did drau nie.
 The French armie foot and cavallrie,
 Being al draun out to the fielde
 With their Generalls and head Officers,
 The Kingdom of France for to shielld.
 The French armie with courage on hie,
 Thinking their purpose to gain.
 No atempt they could make for raising the sidge,
 For why it was labour in vain.
 The sidgers still was bussielie working,
 And strong batteries they make.
 A noble train unto them was tane,
 No amonition they lake. lack
 And when the bateries they had al readie,
 Upon the fourteen day of May.
 The guns and mortters in order right good,
 Began right brisklie to play.
 And still the toun did boldlie defende,
 In fireing guns great and small.
 And many a man was wounded and slain,
 By force of powder and ball.
 The sidgeing then vent orderlie one,
 And a cruell slaughter was there.
 The two armies confronted did lye,
 For battell they did them prepare.
 The besidged in toun much bolder was then,
 And on the nineten day of May.

They made a sortie came out instantlie,
 Many dead in the triches they lay.
 On that same night was a cruell fight,
 And many was wounded and slain.
 Three regiments of men in the trenches then,
 A very great loss did sustaine.
 The French that night out over the trenches,
 Advanced and did not delaye.
 Our regiments was beat and sadlie defeate,
 The French right many did slaye.
 Untill that fresh men upon them did come,
 And beat them back to the toun.
 And many of them was wounded and slain,
 In their going back did fall down.
 May the twentie one they saillied againe,
 And so made another sortie.
 The sidgers did beat them and sadlie defeat them,
 And forced them for to flee.
 The regiments in trenches that night was alart,
 And fired on them right closse,
 The besidged then fled back to the toun,
 That night they had a great losse.
 So many a saillie and many a raillie,
 Was at the sidge of Dowie.
 And every day then some men there was slain,
 And the armie still did them suplie.
 Some Clergie men from within Dowey toun,
 Did come out to our armie.
 The Universatie within Dowey toun,
 Is the biggest in all the countrie.
 When the sidgers batteries were ready made,
 The English cloister came out.
 And got libertie from the Duke Mallberie
 To pass he gave them a routte.¹
 The English and Irish, priests and Jesuites,
 Did come to the toun of Liele.
 And did there remain al time of the sidgeing,
 And lived there very weell.
 Some burgours then came out of the toun,
 And desired leave for to go.
 Bot the Gernerall did grant libertie,
 To priessts ladyes and no moe.
 The French Officers prisoners into Leile,
 Did walk at their full libertie.
 A deal of their clergie was then in the toun,
 And a great plot happened to be.
 Upon the eighten of the moneth of May,
 Near the mid hour of the night,

¹ On 3rd May 1710 the duke wrote to M. Huffel, Governor of Lille, that he had given a passport 'au Père Paston du Collège Anglais à Douai' to retire to Lille with fifty-nine students of his college.

A fellow was runing to the hay magassine,
As fast as he could weell or might.
Then in a fire he fleu sudenlie,
Before that he wan to the hay.
The sentries soon did him apprehende,
And the toun it rose in a fraye.
The waterport guard was al alarmed,
And likewayes great pairt of the toun.
A picket of men was made ready soon,
And to that place marched down
And on the streets they stood with their arms,
Al night til the morning grew light.
And patrolied throu the streets theirabout,
And catched moe traitors on sight.
So other sixten on that night was tane,
And put in prisson most strong.
Upon suspition of this plot makeing,
The ports stood cloose very long.
Till the toun was searched and ploters discovered,
And a bakers house was sought throu.
Where that povder train had been amaking,
Back doors in it was not few.
The fellow the train did bring from the same,
And was runing along to the hay.
When his pockets took fire his cloaths altogither,
Was brunt: and so rose the fraye.
Our armie did lie at the sidgeing of Dowie,
And foradged from Turney and Leile.
All the moneth of May with amonition hay,
They were provided right weell.
At Dowey toun right many was slain,
And the sidge it lasted right long.
The French did raillie and often saillie,
And in their asaults proved strong.
On the twentie third day of the moneth of May,
The besidged in their dispaire.
Three times that night they saillied out,
And a very great slaughter was there.
Tho many was slain yet still back againe,
The French was beat to the toun.
The French armie aproached right nie,
With splendant fame and renoune.
The Armies of the Allies advanced likewayes,
Upon the twentie fourth day of May.
So both the armies ready for battell,
Severall dayes on arms they laye.
And al the regiments from al the outposts,
To the armie was called in.

And all the front guards on other advanced,
 As they to feight would begin.
 So severall days they wrought on this wise,
 Bot at that time it befelle.
 That the two armies lay within half a lig,
 And never joyned in battell.
 The French detashed and boldlie atemped,
 To take a clouse at Bavie.
 Our guard therein the same did defend,
 Til our armie sent a suplie.
 Strong comands of men from the armie came,
 And kepted the clousses right weell.
 Till shipfulls of bread did pass up in need,
 To the sidgers it came up from Leile.
 The sidge of that toun continued one,
 Throughout al the moneth of May,
 A constant working trenching and mineing,
 Was at it by night and by day.
 In the moneth of June it continued one,
 With guns firing great and small.
 And al along full many a man,
 Was killed or hurt with the ball.
 Some made reports that the Kingdom of France,
 Was then opressed right sore.
 And that the armie behoved to detashe,
 Away from Dowie therefore.
 The Duke of Savoy and the Jerman armie,
 In the French countrie did advance.
 The Duke of Muscovie and all the musquiviters,¹
 Was for the invading of France.
 Bot the French from Dowey marcht not far away
 Bot lay til the sidge it was done.
 A quag of a bog before them they had,
 And the toun surrendered not soon.
 These Scottish regiments Dowglasses and Woods,
 Was al this time into Leile.
 Beside our comands and all our outguards,
 We kepted the magasines weell.
 On the twentie fourth day of the moneth of May,
 The recruits to these regiments did come.
 And was devided throu both the regiments,
 Each companie of them got some.
 And Captan Hoom to Liele then did come,
 To stay with his oun companie.
 On the twentie ninth day of the moneth of May,
 In arms he did them all see.
 The Lieutenant Cornall the regiment rewieued,
 Two companies still on a day.

¹ The Russians had at one stage of the war an army on the Rhine.

Bavay

sluices

Of new men and old he did take the list,
 Standing in rank and arraye.
 So Captan Hoom gave his companie then,
 Of good promissive monie.
 To drink his good health that same very night,
 In scillings twentie and three.
 So altogither we drank his good health,
 And spent it right merielie.
 And when it was done they began for to joyne,
 And drank on their oun monie.
 All the armie throu the moneth of May,
 Was dayelie fetching the hay.
 The sidge of Dowie went on orderlie,
 And the armies confrunted they lay.
 Tho both the armies some days stood in arms,
 Right like to joyne in batelle.
 And the front guards on other did charge,
 Yet thus the casse it befelle.
 On the thretie day of the moneth of May,
 The armies both did retire.
 And all the out posts from the armie detasht,
 And guards on frount and on rire.
 And from the armie did come orderlie,
 Comands in time of much need.
 To guard the clousses betwixt Liel and Dowie,
 And convoyeing up ships with the bread.
 It was said then the French was a coming,
 The clousse at Bavie for to take.
 A garde from Liel did keep it right weell,
 Till the armie a releife did make.
 The posts on the water they did weell secure,
 Between Liele and the sidge of Dowie.
 The ships with bread free passage then had,
 And things for the armies suplie.
 The sidge vent on in the moneth of June,
 And many a man ther was slain.
 And many men hurt and to hossipitals put,
 Who would never be able againe.
 The armie then foradged on the fields,
 And coued the same very bare.
 Nothing on the ground near the camp could be found,
 Bot destroyed with the armie repaire.
 The first day of June that Sunday foornoon,
 The magassine burner in Leile.
 Between two fires was toasted and roasted
 Till the paines of death he did feell.
 By sentance condigne into the prisson,
 He for his wicked offence.

clipped

Between two fires to death he was burnt,
 So received a just recompence.
 They oyl and water upon him did cast,
 His torment for to augmente.
 Till by degrees he wasted and died,
 No man for him did relent.
 He caried a train for a wicked designe,
 The hay magassine for to burn.
 So with great fire his liffe did expire,
 And no man for him did murn.
 The rest were freed tho largelie they payed,
 Their monie made the recompence.
 Makers of the plot they were never got,
 Only one died for his offence.
 The water port guard they got a rewarde,
 Because they passed up weell.
 And kepted the hay by night and by day,
 And caught the ploters in Leile.
 Some pistols of gold at this time was told,
 And destribute to the men.
 Who was on the guard when the plot was found out
 Who's names and number they keen.
 The Officers was aloued two pisstolls,
 And the sojors three scillings a man,
 And the two sentries that caught the ploter,
 Each of them a pisstoll got than.
 Two regiments of men from our armie detachd,
 Came marching in into Leile.
 On the eight day of the moneth of June,
 Al night they loadged in it weell.
 To Warnatongue upon some designe,
 They marched on the nixt day.
 And four hundered men that same afternoon,
 In the toun of Leile did array.
 We marched out at Magdallen port,
 In the affternoon of the day.
 Late in the evening at Warnatongue,
 We came in rank and array.
 They marched us out thorou Warnatongue,
 The night it sadlie did rain.
 The way greu bad clatie and cloged,
 Of which we were nothing faine
 Both wat and wearie sadlie daubled were we,
 And in the morning right soon.
 We did aproache near to Jeper port,
 Upon the tenth day of June.
 It was whisspered then by many a man
 That the toun of Jeper was sold.

And every man who did enter therein,
 Would receive a pistol of gold.
 The day being broke and about two a cloak,
 We came to the outer barire,
 And the horssmen to enter began,
 Bot the toun was all in a stire.
 The plot discovered and the city alarte,
 A sentrie fired his gun.
 And then the smal shot did fire ripe rape,
 And the canon fired lamdume.
 And when the canon fired from the toun,
 The day was grouing right light.
 The toun al ready with alarme and cry,
 Our men retired on sight.
 Some horse and men was prisoners tane,
 Who entered in the barire.
 The Generall Shankloe; he seeing it so,
 Gave comand again to retire.
 The Hollanders there dreu off from Jeper,
 And a dissapointment they got.
 The toun of Jeper in arms was all,
 And so discovered the plot.
 In five severall wayes al the detashments,
 Marcht of to their garissouns.
 To Coutrig and Minon Cumine and Leile,
 They marched off in platounes.
 We drank the beir and so did retire,
 And left Jeper in a fraye.
 The bouers complained for loose of some goods,
 Who the Generall redressed that day.
 The regiments and horse retired right close,
 And came back to Warnatongue.
 The garissoun of Leile in order right weell,
 That day to their quarters did come.
 The regiments lay still at Warnatongue,
 The space of nine or ten dayes.
 And back thorou Leile they returned againe,
 Then passt to the armie likeways.
 To Dowglass regiment and also to Woods,
 Some few recruites moe did come.
 On the fourteen of June with Captan Hebron,
 And corporals and cadies came some.
 On June the nineteen and the twentie and two,
 Was great processions in Leile.
 And all the trades with drums and collours,
 Along the streets they did reille.
 And all their signs caried were allongs,
 A priest on every trades rire.

Warneton

And on the Lords day they past in arraye,
 And sumptiouslie they carire.
 And all the divines in order most fine,
 With temples embroidered weell.
 With Arks Crusifixes and antient aspects,
 They caried up and doun Leile.
 And adorned horsse drawing in waggons,
 Some whores like virgins most clear.
 And pictures of Sancts and holy virgins,
 These waggons allongs did them bear.
 The twentie fourth day likewayes kept they,
 With all kind of fervent devotion.
 St. John the Baptists day it was they did say,
 They spent it in holy negotion.
 Bot to the Millitarie now let us away,
 Divines we must let allone.
 The sidging of Dowie continued still,
 Throughout all the moneth of June.
 With much hard work and big canon shot,
 Till many a man was shot dead.
 The toun held out with courage most stout,
 As long as lasted their bread.
 To the twentie fifth of the moneth of June,
 The sidging continued so long.
 These who were besidged being wearied,
 In the toun although it was strong,
 The sidgers also with travell and woe,
 Was wearied and toyllid right sore.
 And many slain many wounded and hurt,
 The space of nine weeks and more.
 On the twentie fifth day they beat the parleye,
 And the capitulation was made.
 For four dayes time the French in the toun,
 And then without longer abade.
 On the twentie ninth day they marched away,
 French men all in arms did go.
 With twelve covered waggons and six pice of canon,
 And two morters withe them allso.
 The sconsse of Dowey that same very day,
 Marcht off in order right fine.
 Officers and men and two pice of canon,
 All saffellie conducted they were syne.
 All chief Officers and their equiepages,
 Saffellie conducted did go.
 Some to Arrase away they did pass,
 And some to Cambrae allso.
 Our armie then having got Dowey toun,
 Out and in to it they repaire.

The wall of the toun was all broken doun,
 And a cruell wasstation was there.
 The Hollanders then did take the possession,
 Of all magassines that was there.
 And a deal of canon was found in the toun,
 And they again did prepare.
 The toun of Dowie for to fotiefie,
 And build up the breach of the wall,
 For massons and bovers for working by toures,
 And so to work they did fall.
 A deall of the regiments who had been the sidgers,
 Were sent in to garissounes
 And many regiments from several touns,
 Was brought to camp in their rooums
 Brigadire Dowglass to his regiment did come,
 Who was then lyeing in Leille.
 On the thretie day of the moneth of June,
 He was then mended right weelle.
 And all the regiment he called to arms,
 Upon the third day of July,
 And mustered them both new men and old,
 And likewayes then ordered he.
 A deal of lame men for invillageing,
 Who was expecting that rent.
 Into Leile toune they were to remaine,
 And all the rest of the regiment,
 To be ready to march he did them advertise,
 As soon as the orders did come.
 Which was the nixt day without any delay
 Some glad was and sorie was some.
 The Brigadire Douglass in his regiment,
 Did ordour as he thought best.
 Quartermaster Denune¹ degraded was then,
 Which displeased some of the rest.
 Tho the quartermaster and the agietente,
 Was both provided in horsse, adjutant
 It happened then that throu the campine,
 Their backs they never did crosse.
 The Brigadire called for the two horsse,
 And as soon as he did them see.
 He ordered his groome that same very time,
 These horsse to take in custodie.
 The quartermasters he did then bestoue,
 On Archbald McDonald² his man.

¹ See vol. ii. p. 511. Gilbert Roull appointed Adjutant v. Wm. Denune July 8th, 1710. It would appear from the text that Denune had been acting also as quartermaster.

And David Simson who was the schoolmaster,
 To officiate in it begane.
 And Gillbert Rulle¹ was made Agietente,
 In place of Lieutenant McClaude.
 Till his comision out for him did come,
 Of monies he gained a saude.
 The Brigadire and the Lieutenant Cornall,²
 Did meet in Liele Market place.
 And as they confere of the regiments affaires,
 They discorded in a short space.
 They passed some words about drauing of swords,
 Their contention not easielie ceaste.
 And the Brigadire by his martial pouer,
 Put the Cornall in arieste.
 The regiment then on the nixt morning,
 Made readie to march out of Liele.
 The regiment then before it was noon,
 Of that toun took their fairweelle.
 The Brigadire led out the regiment,
 Our course to camp we did stear,
 And Cornall Gibson armless in his coach,
 He marched closs in our rire.
 On the fifth of July from Liele marched we,
 Three regiments in good arraye.
 Creesoos and Woods and Douglass regiments,
 From garisson marched that day.
 And other regiments were sent from the camp,
 To keep the brave toun of Liele.
 And on the 6 day of the moneth of Jullie,
 We joyned our armie right weell.
 And al these regiments joyned their bregades,
 And camped with the armie.
 Who were lieing then in order most fine,
 A guard to the toun of Dowie.
 Our armie had then regiments in the toun,
 And abundance of povder and ball.
 And great canon they also drew one,
 And planted al on the wall.
 Our armie had made a trench on their front,
 All the time of the sidge of the toun.
 Comands of men were set a working,
 And al that trench they threw down.
 When the armie then had throun down the line,
 And made it plain with the ground.
 They made ready to march out towards Arras,
 And the French to defend it were bound.

James Gibson.

The Armies of the Allies did take their march,
 On the tenth of the moneth July.
 The French at Arras they kept that passe,
 Till our armie marched them by.
 When that our armie on the tenth of July,
 Did march on towards Arras.
 And the French armie who did them weel see,
 They drew themselves into the pass.
 Six hundered men did stay on comande,
 On the rire of al our armie.
 And cuted a way to let throu the water,
 For defence of the city Dowie.
 So the right of the armie lay towards Arras,
 And there they rested a day.
 And the left of the armie near to the old trench,
 And al in order they lay.
 On the tuelfth of July that morning earlie,
 Our armie they marched againe.
 Bot the pass of Arras they did not atacque,
 That time it could not be tane.
 The French armie with courage on hie,
 Sent double guards to the pass.
 And hanged the man who had there a duelling,
 And naught bot suspicion it was.
 Our armies Hoasaes in time of this march,
 Rode in throue the French countrie,
 And caught for prize five hundered bullocks,
 Was al coming to their armie
 A very great prize they caught that time,
 And brought in to the armie.
 In good array marcht al our armie.
 Which the French at Arras did see.
 The Bregads of our horsse marcht on very close,
 And the armie in battell arraye.
 And the French armie at Arras surelie,
 And al the toun was in fraye
 Commands of our horsse stood out on the front,
 Till al our armie marcht by.
 To pass the water between the armies,
 None of the armies did try.
 Our Keyzar armie¹ that same very day,
 Marcht on and came to Bethune.
 And al our armie marcht on orderlie,
 Til by ordour our camp was set down.
 And several dayes we camped in that place,
 And foradged on front and on rire.
 The French our foradgers chast several times,
 Bot our camp they durst not come near.

On the fourteen of the moneth of Jullie,
 By general ordours of new.
 The armies front line in order most fine,
 On the front they passt a rewieve.
 And al the rire line upon the fiveten,
 Was rewieved on front of their line.
 And al the Generals and their attendants,
 Rode by in equipage fine.
 With arms presented the lines did salute,
 As the Generals passed along.
 The drums al beat the general march
 For hermonie and for song.
 Regiments was detasht that same afternoon,
 And ordered tents to take down.
 And to march a way that same very day,
 And lay on the sidge of Bethune
 The Keyzar regiments detasht for the sidge,
 Planted on far side of the toun.
 On the other side the Hollanders bade,
 And so the sidge was set down.
 Then Douglass regiment continued to camp,
 And lay stil with the armie.
 To the sidge of Bethune they were not sent down,
 Til the twentieth day of Julie.
 And al this time both marching and camping,
 Cornall Gibsone was in arresste.
 Several counsels of war was in the armie then,
 Before the contention it ceasst.
 Then Generalls did meet in Courtmerchalls,
 These discords for to agree.
 And mickle consulting to apeasse the discord,
 By the fittest methods could be
 An English Officer to the regiment came there,
 And without longer delay.
 And for disertion he catched Simson,
 And prissoner took him away.
 On the nineten of the moneth Jullie,
 On the afternoon of the day.
 Then orders did come to Cornal Gibson,
 That he without longer delay.
 Should march the regiment al in file and rank,
 And joyn with the sidging armie.
 Which was lieing then at the city Bethune,
 From arresst it did set him free.
 In the morning earlie of the twentieth day,
 The regiment tents pulled down.
 And in good array they marched away
 And joyned the sidge of Bethune.

And Brigadire Douglass by ordours likeways,
 To the sidge came marching that day.
 Some canons and morters with him al along,
 To the regiment he came on the way.
 Some more regiments was marching likeways,
 And joyned the sidge of Bethune.
 And several dayes they gathered in foradge,
 To al the camps lieing round.
 And General Faggell he had the comand,
 Of al the sidging armie
 All the English and Holanders at the same sidge,
 All at his will rulled he.
 The Keyzar regiments that were at the sidge,
 Their camps they had al set down.
 Great flushes of water filed the field,
 Between them and the sidge of Bethune.
 On the twentie third day of the moneth Jullie,
 The ordours came before night.
 For comands of men for breaking of ground,
 Al ready to march upon sight.
 That night at even the ground was broken,
 With no loss of men at all.
 Untill the day light the Frenches had sight,
 Then they sent out canon ball.
 And in the morning three regiments marcht,
 The trenches for to keep weell.
 And many workmen was busie working,
 And the Frenches therof had feell. many
 So they from the toun fired the canon,
 When our workmen did releave.
 A French canon ball made six men to fall,
 At which our armie did grieve.
 And the nixt day they mended that way,
 And made a trench al alonge.
 To defend the workmen as they marched in,
 To the sidge which lasted right long.
 That same forenoon the French from the toun,
 Did saillie out in a route.
 Both horsse and foot from the toun ished out,
 With manly courage and stout.
 Out over the trenches russed the Frenches,
 And made our men to retire.
 And al our workmen then took a runing,
 In the trenches was a great stire.
 The French three times advanced and retired,
 Til many was wounded and slain.
 And fresh regiments was brought to the sidge,
 And the French was beat in again.

The sidge of Bethune continued on,
 And trenching both day and night.
 And the Ingenires for the enterprize,
 They ussed both cuning and slight.
 A deal of workmen was constantlie working,
 In making a deep foussie.
 To cary the water away from Bethune,
 A dayelie work and bussie.
 A lig from the toun that work was begun,
 And ingeniouslie they did try.
 Til they brought the water away from the toun,
 And the big flush it ran dry.
 Tho the Holanders began the first trench,
 And also batteries did make.
 Yet the Keyzars did make the great breach,
 Which was the toun for to take.
 On the twentie eight of the moneth Jullie,
 The French did make a saillie.
 Our men in the trench beat them in again,
 The lairme lasted bot a wие.
 The French grand armie advanced brisklie,
 And dreu down towards Bethune.
 The Confederat armie in defence of the sidge
 To closs order they dreu down.
 The sidgeing armie advertised were they,
 And regiments on picket did lie.
 Ready for to march when they got ordours,
 So several dayes passed by.
 The sidge of Bethune was still caried on,
 With vallour and worth courage.
 The French in the toun did boldly defende,
 None beter was seen in our age.
 The Hollands regiments first brake the ground,
 And then their batteries did make.
 Bot that side of the toun was fortified strong
 The toun they could not there take.
 For many a mine with noble engine,
 The French had made on that side.
 The Hollands armie was trenching daylie,
 And sapping themselves for to hide.
 The Brigadire Douglass in time of the sidge,
 Was reckened a chief Ingenire.
 For contriueing of mines and cuting of trenches,
 And al the engines of the weire.
 In sapping and mining some of our workmen,
 One of the French mines did find out.
 The pipe of the mine with noble engine,
 For safetie they quicklie took out alarm a little

And above a hundere of barels of povder,
Was taken out of that ground.
It was a great mine and cruel engine,
By work and engine it was found.
Bot many a mine on that side of the toun,
And the strong outworks thereabout.
The counterscarfes and al the half moons,
Most invincible were and most stout.
And al the long day the canon did play,
And the smal shot fired al night.
The toun of Bethune it could not be win,
By any cuning or slight.
When the Hollands bateries began for to lousse,
They fired in towards the toun
And great canon ball did flee at the wall
Some pairt of it to ding down.
As soon as the armie by constant working,
Had gotten the foussie made deepe,
And the water in it began for to run,
And by degrees it did creepe.
Away from the toun by degrees it did run,
Doun throu the countrie along.
Til the loch did dry on that side of Bethune,
Which had stood there very long.
The Keyezer regiments in haiste for to work,
And made a trench very soon.
They made a baterie both large hie and broad,
And as soon as it was done.
Both night and day the workmen wrought aye,
Till the canon was set thereupon.
On the loch ground they planted canon,
After the water was gone.
All time after then the city Bethune,
Was bated on every side.
With great canon ball to beat down the wall,
The Frenches also in pride.
Did fire canon still out of the toun,
And threu their boams also.
So many men at working was slain,
And wounded was many moe.
The wounded and hurt was to hospitaes put,
And dressed and kepted right weell.
From the camp hospital they did them transporte,
All into the city of Leile.
There to be kepted till that they were cured,
The English and Hollands hurt men.
From the sidge of Bethun they sent them in,
And some died and never did mend.

By general appointment it was ordered,
 The French out works to atacke,
 The granadires for that was detasht,
 And so they proved not slack.
 The Hollands and English boldy did advance,
 Near by the mids of the night.
 Without makeing dinn so the Frenches within,
 Of them they might not get sight.
 Til the English granadires and bold Holanders,
 In the French piliesods did advance.
 Some sleeping some wakeing they were at the time,
 Unwarned they were of the chance.
 The atacke did begin with thick fireing,
 And brim batell for a wie.
 Where some were killed and others were hurt,
 And the French behoved to flee.
 Our men did stand and made good the ground,
 And the French fired out of the toun.
 Before that our men themselves got secured,
 With ball some was knocked down.
 Yet the first night our men did atacke,
 Upon the French piliesods.
 They gained the ground and did it maintain,
 And beat the French to the roads.
 At the same time of that same very night,
 The Keyezerlicke did atacke.
 With smal gun shot in battell most hot,
 The granadires proved not slack.
 In throuing granads they boldy advance,
 And beat the Frenches all in.
 A counterscarfe that night they did take,
 Spilling blood they thought it no sin.
 On that counterscarfe they youcked to work,
 And planted a great baterie.
 And in short time at the city Bethune,
 The canon ball they made flye.
 From that same place they made the grand breach
 For the takeing in of the toun.
 Al the moneth August with it was discusst,
 In battering of the wall down.
 On the other side of the city Bethune,
 The out works was very strong.
 Tho the Holland bateries had played many dayes,
 Yet the toun held out very long.
 The Hollands regiments again did detashe,
 Granadires for another atacke.
 They lossed their pain no ground they did gain,
 For al the asult they did make.

fierce

Some dayes after then they ataqued again,
 Bot could not beat the French out.
 The works was so strong and the Frenches within,
 Most valliant proved and stout.
 The French many times did spring up mines,
 When the Hollanders did ataque.
 And all their engines to the full they extend,
 The sidgeing armie to wracke.
 When comanded men for the fousseie bridging,
 Did march the work to begin.
 Of twentie men the most pairt was slain,
 The foremost that ever vent in.
 The rest stood aback and let the work slack;
 That purpose they could not there gain.
 The French their shot so thick poured out,
 That very many was slain.
 Our batteries each day so brisklie did play
 Batering both the sides of the toun
 Tho the wall was hie and also right strong,
 Yet a pairt of it was dung down.
 And many a boam was in the toun throun,
 Which break with many a crack.
 And some of the shelves fleu high in the aire, splinters
 And others did flee away back.
 And many a man was wounded by them,
 Who about in trenches did bide.
 Within the toun was such a confusion,
 Themselves they could not weell hide.
 The canon and morters fired every day,
 And the smal shot al the long night.
 The French the toun did boldlie defende,
 With all their cuning and slight.
 On a certain day in time of the sidge,
 In Brigadire Douglass regiment,
 The Brigadire being then in the rire,
 In Captan John Hebron his tent
 And with the Officers he did there confere,
 Then instantlie at a word.
 The Captan Cathcarte on the Brigadire,
 In anger did drau out a sword.
 The rest about they did him prevente
 And a noise did rise in the rire.
 And Brigadire Douglass in a short space,
 On horsse back he did retire.
 Lieutenant Cornal Campbell from the Scottish dragouns,
 Did come to the Brigadire.
 Requesting of him for the Earle of Staire,
 That he the suit would forbear.

No other answer he granted him there
 Bot he would not do such a thing.
 Bot Captan Cathcart before a Court Mershall
 He promised for to bring.
 Then Captan Cathcart being put in ariste,
 In his tent keepled was he.
 While Brigadire Douglass with his complaint,
 Did pass to the grand armie.
 A Court Mershall was held about the contesst,
 Douglass complained of wrong.
 And several sojors for the probation,
 With him he had taken along.
 Hou their hieneses that matter did myesse,
 It is not weell knoun to me.
 Bot Captan Cathcart short time after that,
 From arieste he was set free.
 Captan Cathcart from the regiment he past,
 And he in another bregade.
 The sidge of Bethune it continued on,
 Til August the twentie eight day.
 And many men at Bethune was slain,
 Many wounded and caried away.
 Til the Keyezerlicks they got a great breach
 And bridged the foussie withall.
 And everything proper for the usse,
 Was ready to storne the wall.
 The French bateries most pairt was dismantled,
 No more defence they could make.
 And the Keyezers armie before the gran breach,
 All ready the toun for to take.
 On the twentie ninth night of the moneth August,
 And the afternoon of the day.
 The Governour of the toun of Bethune,
 With advice and counsel did say.
 This toun tho stout we canot keep out,
 Therefore they beat the apelle.
 And the flag was set out on the Keyezers side,
 And Generall Faggell heard telle.
 To the French he did come in a very short time,
 Being filed with anger and pride.
 To see the treatie begun in the toun,
 And no flag set on his side
 As he said then he ought to have been,
 Acknouledged for his oun pairt.
 As soon as any Keyezerlicks Generall,
 That ever came frae the airt
 For the Queen of England he stood on command,
 And the Staits General there he was.

find in fault

that quarter

And never a flag set up on his side,
 That thing he would not let pass.
 He comanded then to fire canon,
 And to bring in all the train.
 And so al round fire them on the toun,
 So they fired again and again.
 The toun was then expecting no harme,
 In the time of treatie for peace.
 The great canon ball destroyed young and old,
 Before they got ordores to ceasse.
 Then a flag was set up on the Holanders side,
 And Faggel the same did see.
 A Captan he sent on horsseback rideing,
 To aquant the Duke Mallberie.
 Some persons chossen rode into the toun,
 And the capitulation was made.
 On the thretie day the French marched away,
 And then without longer abade.
 Regiments on comand marcht in to Bethune,
 And began the toun to repaire.
 It being tane for King Charles of Spain,
 His subjects themselves they declare.
 Al round the toun they threu trenches down,
 And workmen to work they began.
 To build al the breaches of the walls of Bethune,
 With all expedition they can.
 The sidging armie got orders to march,
 And joyn them with the armie.
 After two three days they did take their march,
 And marched dayes two or three.
 Regiments was detasht in time of the march,
 And sent to seidge Sevenae.
 And general persons them to comande,
 All from the armie they draue.
 The armies of the Allies did brisklie advance,
 And compasste the toun of Aire.
 And a sidging armie was detasht orderlie,
 About it they made their repaire.
 Our armie then their housse they have tane,
 At the village called Leilaire.
 And everything for sidging these touns,
 By ordour they did repaire.
 A battering train to them was to come,
 And amonition theretille.
 Fourtie good shipes on their voyage from Gaunt,
 Bot their sucess proved bot ill.
 Upon the sevenen of the moneth September,
 As these ships up the water did come.

St. Venant (?)

Lillers

bottom

The French from Jeper on them did advance,
 To sink these ships to the grune.
 Five thousand men the Frenches was than,
 Who fell upon the convoe.
 Five hundred men had the ships in guarding,
 Til the Frenches did them destroye.
 Al the English was there was in sad dispair
 No quarters they would to them give.
 Some of the Holanders they stript and took,
 And granted them for to live.
 Al ships with povder was instantlie burnt,
 And the other ships they were sunk.
 Where Dainssie and Coutrie it happended to be,
 Where the convoe meet a misluck.
 No ships nor boats on the water could pass,
 For the broken ships there lay.
 Til many men by ardent working,
 Removed them out of the way.
 And regiments of men from the armie came,
 And guarded the workers was there.
 Til amonition provision and al needful things,
 To the armie made their repaire.
 And guards of men from the armie came,
 And posted along al the way.
 Betwixt the armie and the toun of Leile,
 In the villages did they stay.
 Tho the French partisans with litle pairties,
 Frequentlie about Lermietire
 Came out of the bushes and seized the passers,
 And stript and did them much dire.
 Til comands of our men did catch some of them,
 And chased some others away.
 Then the way was free that to the armie,
 They saffe did pass every day.
 The sidgeing then vent orderlie on,
 At Sevenae and at Aire.
 Both ships and waggons with al nessesares,
 To the armie made their repaire.
 From Sevenae some water to draue,
 Workmen right bussielie wrought.
 Some part of it to a good effect,
 Within short time it was brought.
 As soon as trenches about it was made,
 And bateries made up also.
 The canon ball fleu over the wall,
 And did the Frenches much wo.
 After the bateries in order was set,
 They fired in a short space.

Deynse Courtraï

Armentieres (?)

So in the toun some persons was slain,
Walking in the market place.
In that village then was six hundered men,
Of valliant Frenches and stout.
And several times upon the besidgers,
They valliantlie saillied out.
Where several men about it was slain,
And others was wounded also.
The French from Sevenae would have gone awae,
Bot houeuer they partied not so.
The besidgers without with vallour most stout,
Held them in on every side.
That from Sevenae they could not get awae,
Still in distress they must abide.
Major Generall Hamelton had the comande,
Of that litele sidgeing armie.
And everything proper for the end
With good conduct ruled he.
And Captan Hom of Douglass regiment,
Did act as his edicane.
In comanding of men at trenches makeing,
The hie aplausse there he wan.
There Lieutenant Campbel of Douglass regiment.
On horsse back was rideing about.
And the French on the wall perceived it weell.
And canon ball they sent out.
So throu the head his horsse was shot dead,
Then on foot he behoved to go.
Tho he loost a horsse his body was saffe
And it very weel happened so.
In Sevenae their great magassine,
By chance did let in the rain.
And that litele village tho weell fortified,
The sidgers behoved to gain.
Above twentie dayes as my Author says,
Was the sidgeing of Sevenae.
Til that the sidgers wan in to the village,
And the Frenches was put awae.
To the sidge of Aire nou let us repaire,
Which was both cruell and long.
For valliant men they did it defende,
And the fortifications was strong.
The sidgeing armie with courage on hie,
Wrought nearer and nearer the toun.
And great bateries against it did raise,
The strong wall for to ding down.
The French canonires like brave Ingenires,
Did the sidgers sadly annoye.

And with canon shot they dexterouslie wrought,
 The entrinched men to destroy.
 Lieutenant Hebron of Douglass regiment,
 Vent to the sidging of Aire.
 To se a friend was there in the trenches,
 To him as he did repaire.
 A canon ball was shot from the wall,
 That both his legs took away.
 Seven legs of Officers that ball took off,
 Altogither buried were they.
 Tho al the men was alieve at the time,
 Long livers of them was none.
 None did recovere nor live long after,
 Bot antient MacDugall alone.
 Whose wound was dressed some times in the camp,
 And then he was brought into Leile.
 Where he did mend and got a tree leg,
 And on it walketh right weell.
 So every day there at the sidge of Aire,
 The canon did fire most snell.
 And the execution of their canon shot
 Was miraculous for to tell
 Likewayes the smal shot in batell most hot,
 Every night at the sidging of Aire.
 That many a man was wounded by them,
 And a very great slaughter was there.
 And several nights with very dark lights,
 The French saillied out of the toun.
 And came stealing on upon the workmen,
 And many was slain and dung doun.
 On a certain night al the Frenches they saillied,
 And came runing out at the flight.
 Generall Coliours regiment was in the trenches,
 And had ordours that very night.
 With arms in hand their foes to withstand,
 In casse they did make a sortie.
 And for to advance alongs a bit bridge,
 With al the speed that could be.
 And before midnight the French did come out,
 And on the trench did atacque.
 And Coliours men advanced on them,
 And a bold encounter did make.
 Along the smal bridge bravely they advance,
 And formed their ranks on the plain.
 The shot past between most cruel and keen,
 And many was wounded and slain.
 There Coliours regiment brisklie behaved,
 And stood and kepted the ground.

Colyear's

And another regiment near by the same pairt,
 A cruell encounter they found.
 So that same night at that cruell feight,
 Very many was wounded and slain.
 And the French was beat and sadly defeat,
 And forssed to run in againe.
 And many a saillie and bloodie detalze,¹
 There was at the sidgeing of Aire.
 For discouragement to that dangerous work,
 The wather it never was fair.
 The night being long and frequentlie rain,
 And the ground marashie and weet.
 Made the trenches al ful of water to stand,
 And workmen no working they gat.
 The workmen working about a trench nock,
 A fousse of water brake in.
 Which made to swim fassines and gabines,
 And stood in the trench like a lin.
 What water what rain beneath and above,
 Workmen in a pudelle wrought aye.
 And such a long time they had to work in,
 Most saddie fatigued were they.
 Beside the hurt men wounded at sidgeing,
 Sicknes came to the armie.
 And many a man fel sick that season,
 And some of sickness did die.
 Many bouers and wives then ended their lives,
 Who lived the armie about.
 In al the villages the most pairt was sick,
 And died thereafter no doubt.
 Death and desolation and cruel wasstation,
 There was at the sidgeing of Aire.
 The toun was strong and the defence long,
 The ataqueing both cruel and saire.
 And many atagues upon the out works,
 And many men there was slain.
 And many nights wakeing and cruel hard working,
 Before the out works was tane.
 The water was weet and the way very clat,
 Al round with the armies repaire.
 The foradge grew scant al the armie throughout,
 And the ground was barren and bare.
 A very great train our armie had then,
 Who fired in on the toun.
 There many a housse was driven to rubish,
 And the great kirk battered doun.

livres ?

About the midle that kirk was cut through,
 Bot the stipelle stood on the end.
 Five hundered thousand as many men said
 Was litele the kirk for to mend.
 Much rich Imagerie Crusiefixes and Alters,
 Within the great kirk of Aire.
 Was broken to pices and dung al in rubish,
 Tho priests lamented it saire.
 For great canon ball and boams not small,
 Was dayelie shot into the toun.
 And many houses dung al in to rubish,
 As the walls was in battering doun.
 The Armies of the Allies had three batteries,
 Which battered still on the wall.
 And three great breaches was all made at anes
 And the out works taken were all.
 And the great foussie was bridged at length,
 And everything ready to storme.
 And all the time the French did defende,
 And dexterouslie did it performe.
 The French canonires of engine dexterous,
 Had canon still on the wall.
 And dayelie did fire upon the besidgers,
 And did execution not small.
 When the bridge was a laying in to the gran breach
 Quite thorou the foussie most deep.
 A French canon ball killed seven or eight men,
 Yet the toun they could no more keep.
 Upon the eight day of the moneth November,
 The French a parlie did beat.
 The capitulation was made in the toun,
 And after this maner they treat.
 That for the space of nine moneths time,
 Nine weeks nine dayes theruntill.
 The toun of Aire the French should forbear,
 With any designe that was ill.
 Unless that their armie a battel did win
 And were massters of the field.
 Or elsse that peace about the same place,
 Were made and all reconceilled.
 The eleventh of November the French alltogether,
 Did march from the toun of Aire.
 And six Holland regiments from the armie detasht
 Was placed in garissoun there.
 And the Generall Prince Nassau Audenbergh,
 Was made Governour of the toun.
 And of StVenant he got the comande,
 And all the villages rounne.

After the French from StVenae marcht,
 And our armie entered therein.
 Thereabout all the way of thicke mirie clay,
 Was wrought in mortar most thin.
 Two regiments of foot was in StVenae put,
 The time of the sidgeing of Aire.
 And al the armie camping on the fields,
 And to and fro made repaire.
 Cressoes regiment and Brigadire Douglases
 Did lie within StVenae.
 The way out and in so clatie was then
 Mens legs in dirt they did thraue.
 The constant sidgeing thorou all the campine,
 Did weaken all the armie.
 The killed and wounded at every sidge,
 In number reckon shall we.
 The first of the campine nou let us define,

¹ Scots Brigade (old).² Scots Brigade (new).³ The Royal Scots.

After our armie had made the conquesst,
 Of StVenae and of Aire.
 Dowey and Bethune being fortified strong,
 To break up camp they prepare.
 Upon the sixtenth of the moneth November,
 The armie marched from Aire.
 And on the eightenth towards Leile they did come,
 And camped one night there.
 The Armie then detasht right soon,
 And brake up camp there at Leile.
 And marched away all doun the countrey,
 Both horsse and foot they did reelle.
 Then Douglass regiment got orders to march,
 From StVenae into Aire.
 On the sevententh day it was I heard say,
 When Douglass regiment marcht there.
 About the walls of the toun of Aire,
 In tents for a while they did lay.
 When the nights was long and the wather was cold,
 And sometimes not very dry.
 A comand was sent then from the regiment,
 That day that they left StVenae.
 In order right weel they came into Leile,
 To bringe their bagage awae.
 And Major McQueen in Scotland had been,
 And was returned right weell.
 And sixtie recruits he had brought alongs,
 And they were lieing in Leile.
 Some hurt and sick men in Leile was then,
 That belonged to the regiment.
 And some of them vent up with the bagage,
 Some for the invillage was sent.
 Major McQueen to Leile he did come,
 On the first of the moneth November,
 And arms and cloaths got for the recruits,
 And all was weell I remember.
 On the fourth of that moneth the Major rewieved,
 Al the hurt men was in Leile.
 He ordered lameiters for the invillage,
 And al that could never be weell.
 Such as were thought able afterwards for travell,
 To the regiment was to repaire.
 A ship was provided from the toun of Leile,
 To cary the bagage to Aire.
 With the regiments bagage and wives and bairns,
 The ship was loadened right weell.
 On the twentie first day of the moneth November,
 They took their voyage from Liele.

The comande and recruites on foot they did march,
 Guarding the ship al along.
 With bagage and wives and sick men and bairns,
 The ship was crowded right throng.
 Then Brigadire Douglass was at Lagoerge,
 There on comande he did stay.
 And rewieued the recruites when they did come by,
 And the ship on water there lay.
 On the twentie sixth of the moneth November,
 The ship arievied at Aire.
 And was unloaded that same very day,
 And the men to the regiment joined there.
 The regiment then for nine dayes time,
 Had layen on the wall about Aire.
 And there the workmen was bussie working,
 That toun again to repaire.
 To barroks then all the men was brought in,
 And old housses broken doun.
 A ruineous place it was for a space,
 For the most pairt of the toun.
 The sojors barroks was broke in the tops,
 And the beding it was most scant.
 All kinds of provission was pretie dear,
 Bot fire we did not want.
 And many workmen was constantlie then,
 Working on the walls of Aire.
 Within and without the builders they wrought,
 Thes ruines for to repaire.
 And many sojors got workmens wage,
 For dayelie work on the wall.
 And without the toun the workers was working,
 Repaireing the outworks all,
 Great pairt of the wall being broken doun,
 And many a housse in the toun.
 And the big kirk was ruineous like,
 And much fine work broken doun.
 The fine carved work within the big church,
 Was laid in a ruineous heap,
 The clergie they procured the senteries,
 All thes fine things for to keep.
 Within that church was still men working,
 And takeing the rubish away.
 That winter the stiple fell all doun together,
 And not one man it did slay.
 Most pairt of the guard was bateder likewayes,
 And all the ports of the toun.
 From Arras port to the port Noterdam,
 Was al the housses dung doun.

La Gorgue

The builders did work throu all the whole week,
 And builded these housses againe.
 And on the Sabbath day they wrought bussielie,
 And very great wages did gaine.
 Besides the main guard and al the toun ports,
 That releaved once in the day.
 A comand to Leil Aire and kept guard there,
 And a week all at it they lay.
 A deal of provission and much amunition,
 Was dayelie acoming to Aire.
 The breaches of the wall rebuilded was all,
 All for the defence they prepaire.
 A pretente did come to Douglass regiment,
 To march back to StVenae.
 And on the twentie fourth of the moneth December,
 From Aire we did come awae.
 The badgage and sick was put into skipes,
 And the regiment marched on land.
 From Aire to StVenae transported was all,
 And the Major then had the comand.
 So Douglass regiment from Aire was sent back,
 In StVenae for to lie.
 At both the ports the way in and out,
 This time it never did drye.
 The clatie teugh clay and very bad way,
 Was all round about StVenae.
 A barrook and a half for each compane,
 With acomadations bot smae.
 In the village StVenae for the regiment all,
 Was gotten out beding right soon.
 And there we did stay and mounted the guards
 And so that year it was done.

[CHAP. XI.]

The progress of Brigadire Douglass regiment with a short relation of the actions of the Armies of the Allies in Flanders in the Year 1711.

Douglas regiment lay at StVenae,
 The first day of the New Year.
 And Captain Home was pleased that time,
 To alloue his companie beir.
 So late at even he made them conveye,
 And gave them abundance of beir.
 He and his Lieutenant did companie with them,
 And held a noble carire.

He caussed fill drink to all that were present,
 And sat himself at the table.
 Till above eightie cans came at his demands,
 And all drank what they were able.
 And for two men absent on guards or comande,
 A six pence for each he did give.
 To drink his good health in times afterwards,
 And a joyfull liffe for to live.
 A storme of froast began and increased,
 And sharp and cold was the air.
 With mounting of guards and breaking of ice,
 Sojours was fatigued right sair.
 All round the village the foussies did frize,
 And men were sent on comande.
 Both day and night the ice for to break,
 With great big trees in their hand.
 And a deal of men with sickness lay then,
 In Janvaire moneth most cold.
 In Douglass regiment was many men sick,
 And weak was both young and old.
 And some men died and others recovered,
 And the storme it vanished away.
 A comande we had then lay at Lagorge,
 And guarded the ships with the hay.
 The hay was transported away from Lagorge,
 And tane to the city Bethune.
 Yet several comands we had in that time,
 And fatigued both up and down.
 In conveying the ships with all the provissions,
 For the maintaining of Aire.
 In time of the storm the water was frozen,
 And shiping could not win there.
 And when the storme away it was gone,
 The water it swelled up hie.
 The boats for some time they could not get up,
 Til after it assuaged a wie.
 A great many ships with hay and provissions,
 Was convoyed from Liele unto Aire.
 And great comands alongs with them marcht,
 Til they safelie arieved all there.
 Ships with all provission free passage got then,
 From Liele to the toun of Aire.
 By land and water in all time after,
 The passengers made their repaire.
 And amunition hay transporting was aye,
 Unto Dowie and to Bethune,
 And alwayes comands alongs then did march,
 Conveying the ships up and down.

La Gorgue

In the moneth Febervar, the fifth of the same,
 In StVenae and at Aire.
 And throu al Flanders they got orders,
 With all the guns they had there.
 To fire victorie and make solemnatie,
 For the good sucesse of the war.
 King Charles of Spain the last campine,
 Had vanquished his enomies far.
 The twentie fourth of August by passt last,
 Was a great batell in Spain.
 And King Phillips Armie was beat uterlie
 And lossed much of their train.
 And another batell likewayes there befelle,
 And King Charles Armie did gain.
 And King Phillips was beat and sadlie defeate,
 And loossed much of their train.
 And on the twentieth of the moneth Janvaer,
 A battell was also in Spain.
 Where King Charles Armie at sidgeing did lie,
 And was beat from it againe.
 Six or seven regiments of the best of the English,
 Was there al prissoners tane.
 And for that thing their chieff commanders,
 Was all broke and degraded amaine,
 The Emperours Generall gained much honor,
 Tho he loossed the battell that day,
 He burnt his own train and marched off then,
 And thousands were slain by the way.
 On the fifth of Febervare by publick ordours,
 Our armie in garissouns all.
 Did fire victorie in every city,
 And canons did play from the wall.
 And great fireworks in each Market place,
 And squibs flieing up in the aire.
 For the victories of the Allies armies,
 We rejoiced then like ever maire.
 Lieutenant Cornall Gibsone to the regiment did come
 When they lay at StVenae.
 He rewieved all the barroks and sick men in beds,
 In the time of the froast and the snae.
 From that he past to the toun of Aire,
 The Governour for to see.
 Prince Nassu Audenbergh did him entertaine,
 According to his degree.
 Twelve granadires did guard him alongs,
 From StVenae unto Aire.
 And returned again that same very day,
 Bot the Cornall remained there.

Till that a routt came possting about,
 From Aire into StVenae.
 That Douglass regiment with all their bagage,
 Were to march from it awae.
 Two ships was hired to cary the bagage,
 And on the nixt morning soon
 All was to be ready for marching earlie,
 And acordinglie it was done.
 Captain Hoom was the regiments comidante
 For a long time in StVenae.
 And several times he rewieued the regiment,
 After Major McQueen vent awae.
 Granadires for his guard each day then he had,
 And the collours in his quarters was ay.
 He passed up weell in provideing for ships,
 To cary the bagage awaye.
 Upon the seventh day of the moneth of March,
 The regiment al weel in array.
 From StVenae they did take their march,
 And elatie and deep was the way.

miry

Over ditches and rigs near seven or eight ligs,
 They marched on to Hermitire.

Armentieres

Except a few men in ships that were then,
 Al night their coursee they did stire.
 The regiment then upon the nixt day,
 Did march to the toun of Leile.
 The ships with the bagage came afterwards,
 And arieved there very weelle.
 The regiment then at Leile did remaine,
 And did their beding receive.
 And mounted their guards in time after that
 By order along with the leave.

the rest

The Lieutenant Cornall obtained the favoure,
 For the first week there at Leile.
 That no outguards the regiment should mount
 Til their shoes were all mended weell.
 To Warnatongue and to Hermitire,
 The guards was sent out of Leile.

Warneton

And releaved againe at a fortnights time,
 And all was ordered weell.
 A train was convoyed from Leile to Doueye,
 In March on the sevenent day.
 The which consisted of twelve battering guns,
 And amonition in waggons that lay.
 From Douglass regiment a comand was sent,
 Their mounting up for to bring.
 From Liele they marched March the fiveten,
 Being ordered for the same thing.

Douai

At Cessfiell Gaunt the mounting they meet,
 And convoyed it saffellie and weell.
 On the twentie third of the moneth of March,
 They returned with it to Liele.
 The Brigadire Douglass to Liele then he came,
 And gave the mounting out soon.
 And ordered it for to be made for to the regiment,
 As soon as it could be weell done.
 And Douglass caps for all the regiment,
 Was brought up at the same time.
 They were not given out till the mounting was made,
 And they shall not be put in the ryme.
 A deall of tayelours was set to work then,
 The regiments cloaths to make soon.
 For in a fortnight and litele more time,
 That whole work was to be done.
 The general perssons in Flanders gave ordours,
 In preparations for the campine.
 And al the regiments sent out detashments,
 Weell mounted in order most fine
 So the detashments came from East Flanders,
 Out of each garissoun toun.
 And up the countrie they marched each day,
 And still on Turneye was boune.
 A hundered men of every regiment,
 From touns in the lou countrie.
 Came marching up in order right good,
 Til on March the twentie and three.
 That night near Liele they lay right weell,
 And others they lay at Turneye.
 And then they advanced on to Ourssie,
 And in big guards there they laye.
 The whole detashments of the lou garissones,
 In villages near to the line.
 And kept strong guards from that time forth,
 Till the outsetting of the campine.
 And all the garissounes that were in West Flanders,
 Got orders after this time,
 Three men of each companie were to be ready,
 With arms and mounting all fine.
 And without fail one the fifth of Apriell,
 At Gaunt they were to conveene.
 And each detashment was there to have orders,
 As afterwards it was seen.
 Liele and Douie St Venae and Aire,
 And al garissounes near to the line.
 Got orders to send their detashments to Gaunt,
 And so they detashed them sine.

The third of Apriell the garisounes all,
 Their detashments sent them away
 And unto Coutrige they marched that night,
 And there that night they did stay.
 The fourth of Apriell they marched to Dainssie,
 And the fifth they marched to Gaunt,
 And every detashment got some orders there,
 To touns where they were to haunt.
 So all the detashments that came from frontires, outposts
 Were sent all doun this countrie.
 To keep the garissounes on the Hollands borders,
 In the fittest way that might be.
 The detashments of Douglasses Woods and others,
 Was ordered then unto Dame. Damme
 And in good good array on Apriell the sixth day,
 Away from Gaunt they all came.
 We came marching on and loadged at Bellum, Bellem
 And the nixt day to Ullam we came.
 And on the eight day of the moneth of Apriell,
 We came all in into Dame.
 And there we lay on old rotten strae,
 Till the twentieth day of Apriell.
 Then Faglans regiment from Dame marched out,
 Towards Brudges in rank and in fille. Bruges
 And we detashments mounted on the guards,
 And did all the deutie in Dame.
 They put us to barraks and gave us all beds,
 And so we were ordered than.
 All the winter and spring was great preparation,
 For maintaining the war into Spain.
 King Philips armie great part of the countrie,
 They had redussed back againe.
 The Duke Argille being made Generall,
 From England to Flanders did come.
 And after he was sent for Portugaill,
 And with him Officers some.
 And several regiments was afterwards sent,
 To maintaine the war against Spaine.
 Except Barsalonie that very big city, Barcelona
 The rest was all to regaine.
 And several regiments of English and Dutch,
 Was put to the sea we did hear.
 And in ships did lie courseing on the sea,
 Throu the great part of the year.
 The armies in Flanders dreu out to the fields,
 Within the month of Aprielle.
 And above Dowey they pitched their camps,
 And there they lay a long while.

And the French armie at Arras did lie,
 And there defended their line,
 Within three ligs of way both the armies they lay,
 Confronted for a long time.
 Then Douglass regiment with the armie did camp,
 In their ordore and arraye.
 Their Officers with recuites from Scotland,
 Came up in the moneth of May.
 And Brigadire Douglass did meet his recuites,
 At the toun that's called Coutreye.
 And marched them weel the straught way to Liele,
 Upon the twentie third day of May.
 An esscort with him he took then along,
 Bot before he came near to Liele,
 He sent back his esscort and then marched up,
 Expecting all would be weell.
 Then sudenlie he happended to see,
 Two men advanceing him till.
 The which was his Lieutenant Cornall and Major,
 Altho their intentions were ill.
 Lieutenant Cornall Gibson and Major McQueen,
 Came rideing along the hie way.
 And on the Brigadire Gibson he advanced,
 And instantlie without delaye.
 The Lieutenant Cornall with a cocked pisstol,
 On the Brigadire he came than.
 And near to his breast he did it present,
 Saying sir you are a dead man.
 The Brigadires left arme with that shot was broken,
 So that he could make no defence.
 Bot his horsse presentlie did cary him away,
 And before he was got from thence.
 He looking back in that dangerous place,
 And there he declared he did see.
 Major McQueen towards him advanceing,
 To shot him throu the bodie.
 What did him prevent that he did not him shot,
 As in that time it befelle.
 His horsse with him fell then in a ditch,
 As the spectators did tell.
 The Brigadire then to Liele he wan in,
 Right badlie wounded that day.
 The Lieutenant Cornall then made his escape,
 And rode from that place away.¹

¹ See vol. ii. p. 47, where Gibson is noted as retired from 5th July 1712, and pensioned in 1715.

The Brigadire Douglass being in Liele,
 He caussed write his declaration,
 Off his Tragedie hou it happened to be,
 It was the formall naration.
 The witnesses in it was inserte,
 By name they were thus set down.
 Lieutenant McKinnen and antient Monje
 And the minister Mr. Andersoun.
 All in Douglass regiment personalie present,
 And inserte in his declaration.
 He expecting than himself a dyeing man,
 Of the cause he gave a naration.
 Which was printed and put in the Gazite,
 And sold throu all the countrie.
 An ague he took and trembled and shook,
 Bot yet he did not then die.
 And also the news came then posting through,
 Off the death of the Emperour.
 And King Charles his son shortlie after then,
 Was fullie enstalled in the pover.
 In this sumer thus it did befallie,
 To all the countries great losse.
 That the noble Prince of Oranzie did droun,
 As he at the ferrie did crosse.
 At a place called Muirdike he vent in a boate,
 To cross at that ferrie withall.
 Between Dorte and Bredae it was said to be,
 Where that misluck did befallie.
 That Noble Prince with all his atendants,
 And others of fame and renoune.
 In a fair sumer day when they dreaded no danger,
 All the companie happened to droun.
 A big chariot being put in the boat,
 The day was fair and right clear.
 The boatmen was weell ussed in the way,
 And no maner of danger they fear.
 Til arose a high wind called the hoariecane
 And soon overturned al the boat.
 Near the midle of the Firthe they perished all
 And no rescue ever they got.
 Save one skipers son who could very weel swime
 His life that day he did keep.
 Bot the Prince of Oranzie and all the rest then,
 Of that companie died in the deep.
 O disemal fatte we have cause to regreat,
 For that noble Prince of renoune.
 About his affaires he past at that place,
 And unlucielie happened to droune.

Ye States of Holland have cause to lament,
 For him the chief of our clan.
 Who was good and kinde and noble in minde,
 And a pretie handsome young man.
 Ye Souldiours all Ye both great and small,
 That ever came in the countrie.
 Lament for him who in a short time,
 Was chossen your chieftan to be.
 Stout and vallaint he was in each part,
 Rulleing among us the armie.
 With a blast of His winde he perished soon,
 And loost in the waters was he.
 That unhappie sea still cursed may be,
 Which drowned much of the land.
 And large monie was given to the doukers,
 Before his dead body they fand.
 In the watters ground before he was found,
 Cold dead a long time he lay.
 And constantlie they were seeking for him,
 With woe and sorow each day.
 His noble lady gave wages to doukers
 To bring his body to land.
 And many a one for him was lamenting,
 Who lay buried in the sand.
 At length he was found and honorablie buried,
 According to his degree.
 And great lamentation was made for that losse,
 In al pairts of the countrie.
 The Noble Stare on his breast that he weare,
 Was given his leady to keep.
 She with many moe in sorow and woe,
 A long time after did weep.
 Many of the touns he had in possession,
 In this his liffetime so short.
 Did then fall into the Prusshea King,
 As the best informed reporte.
 Bot Frizeland all to whom it may fall,
 It was not presentlie knoun.
 Bot a better Prince in it shall not reign,
 While seed on the earth is soun.
 Though men on earth take great delight,
 In this our Millietary sport.
 Yet sertainlie Princes they must die,
 And their time on earth is bot short,
 For youth and age must both engage,
 And feight the battell death.
 All must resigne in Gods oun time,

To him their boroued breath.
 Since time posteth on and quicklie is gone,
 And men to death they are bound.
 For in short time no man nou living,
 Shal in this world be found
 And by passed time we cannot regaine,
 And time to come we see not.
 None bot present time we have to work in,
 And each man comes to his lot.
 Tho it's certain that all maner of men,
 Must pay this debt that they owe.
 Yet the hour and day the maner and way,
 No man doth certainlie knowe.
 Tho some may foresee and divine prophessie
 To us manifesteth in plain.
 That Christ at the last with a trumpet blast,
 Shall raise all the dead up again.
 And Job did know and divineliè did show,
 That Christ shall stand on the earth.
 With pover to raise all the dead from their graves,
 And all that are drowned in the Firth.
 And tho the worms his skin did destroy,
 And then his corps all corrood
 Yet in his flesh to his great joy
 He trusted to see God.
 Whom his eyes should behold and not another,
 Tho his reins were consumed within
 Tho death be the lot of all living men,
 And the just punishment of their sin.
 Yet blessed are the dead who die in the Lord,
 For they shall live evermore.
 Christ by his death did purchase their liffe
 And blessed be his name therefore.
 Bot now of the war we may not yet mar,
 The progress of the same year.
 For every mans actions must have such constructions,
 As their morall actions will bear.
 All we the detashments keeping garissounes,
 Continued throu the campine.
 And the armie in Flanders camped on the fields,
 And performed actions most fine.
 Likeways the garissounes had many comands,
 Convoeyeing ships up and down.
 Which to the armie passed frequentlie,
 With all the sorts of provission
 Comands from Osstende from Sluce and from Dam,
 At Brudges did all copveene.

Upon the tenth night of the moneth of June,
 They lurked and was not seen.
 Til the nixt morning in order right fine,
 They marched the way towards Gaunt.
 A ship full of povder passed up the water,
 To supplie the armie when scant.
 So all that day we did it convoie,
 And brought it to Gaunt at night.
 Another comande from Gaunt did us meet,
 Bot no enomie came in our sight.
 Near nine hundered men was on that comande,
 When we came to Gaunt toun.
 To the burgers guard the ship was convoyed,
 And the sojors charge of it laid down.
 And on the nixt day without longer delaye,
 The comands al back again came.
 The nixt day at Muirkirk we took a fine drink,
 And then returned to Dam.
 The detashments in Dam throu all the campine,
 Did keep the guards of the toun.
 And each hour of the night we had it in ordours,
 To patrullie all the walls roun.
 The Generall called Veglin de Claerberghen,
 Having the comand of the toun.
 Bot with his regiment he marched to camp,
 And another did come in the room.
 That Governour then was called Trokmorten,
 Who comanded the toun of Dam,
 And when the armie marcht out to the fields,
 To officiat in it he came.
 And very hard dutie to sojors gave he,
 There in that litele vie toun.
 By ordering the rounds and the patrullies,
 Each night about the walls roun.
 Captan Harie Bennet¹ was made comidant,
 To all the detashments was there,
 And a sentrie each day before his door stood,
 And who with him might compare.
 The Scots fizanires in Gaunt was this year,
 And lay and kept that toun.
 And they in Gaunt did get a pretent,
 To Brudges for to come down.
 They were stout and strong in many a throng,
 In camps in former years.

Nou in garissoun and from toun to toun,
They drag the poor fizanires.
To Brudges they came on the twentie of June,
And mounted all the guards there.
They had but few men throu all the campine,
And they vent for to recruite mair.
Both Officers and serjants they sent for recrutes,
To Scotland and England also.
On the twentie seventh day of the moneth of June,
They began that voyage to go.
And thorou Dam all their Officers came,
And their comand marched by.
And from their aquantance they took their fairweells,
And I wot they pairted not dry.
Our Scots Officers some dayes vent to Brudges,
And they them largelie did treat.
And their Officers some dayes came to Dam,
So they very offten did meet.
And brandie and wine they drank every time,
And caroused ay when they came.
Ay when they did meet they did other treat,
Both at Brudges and in Dam.
Captain Harie Bannet to Brudges he vent,
And drank there all the long day.
And came home at even near druken with wine,
And the rest in Brudges did stay.
And that same very night before the day light,
A sickness sore did him seize.
And severall dayes in Dam he lay sick,
And nothing on earth could him easse.
The Phessicians in Brudges for their oun easse,
Did ordour that he should remove.
Where they had time to wait him upon,
And do all for his behove.
To Brudges toun he was taken then,
And lay there dayes two or three.
No man on earth his liffe could preserve,
For then he behoved to die.
Captain Harie Bannet died in Brudges,
In the same moneth Jullie.
By some Scots Officers and other aquantance,
Right honorable buried was he.
The Scots fizanires did after get ordours,
To march back again into Gaunt.
On the second night of the moneth August,
No longer there they might halt.

Bot in al haiste they back again marcht,
 And lay and kept that toun.
 The French in pairties and litele armies,
 Throu Flanders was coming down.
 So each garissoun toun got ordours soon,
 And prepared themselves to defende.
 And generall persons sent expresse ordours,
 In every place to be kende.
 So in every pairt al men was alarte,
 Waiting the events of the war.
 The Armies of the Allies out over the line,
 Was nou advanced right far.
 And beyond Cambray advanced were they,
 And valliant deeds there was seen.
 They in good ordour upon the French bordour,
 And laid down sidge to Busshine.
 Great things in negotion by Millitary motion
 Was to be performed this year.
 And each garissoune alarmed was then
 So al was in a great stire.
 Besides Military motion a fervant devotion,
 Was performed in every toun.
 And many kirn masses and solemn adresses,
 And things caried in procession.
 So every toun had their solemn set time,
 For the keeping of their kirn masses,
 Each touns kirn masse for nine or ten dayes,
 Continued with the adresses.
 The kirn masse in Dam solemnlie began,
 In Jullie the twentieth day.
 And continued to the twentieth and eight,
 And then it vanished away.
 The twentieth of Jullie that Sabath solemne,
 That great kirn masse it began.
 The countrey people then floacked together,
 To that convention in Dam.
 Earlie in the morning the bovers they began,
 To walk round about al the toun.
 For holy pennance in a penitent dresse,
 Devotlie they vent it all roune.
 Some carying a chield some carying a dog,
 The men all bare headed did go.
 The women and youngsters counting their beads,
 With countinances full of woe.
 In boats over the water they past and repast,
 And every time payed the fare.

The bridges was tane up and boats was in usse,
 All the time the kirm masse was there.
 At eleven acloake the clergie came out,
 And all of the holy profession
 And al streets of the toun they walkt anone,
 And caried about in procession.
 Several antient pictures on standarts hanging,
 Was caried still them before.
 The picture of our Lord hanging on the Cross,
 The multitude al did adore.
 And in a great biere both long broad and wide,
 The crepeled and lame did sit.
 And the great crusiefixe stood up in the midst,
 And strong men for to bear it.
 And five or six women possest with the divell,
 They took to with them along.
 Each one of these women was led by two men,
 In the multitude crouding most throng.
 Some said that these women in the cloister has been,
 Long time kepted very weell.
 And divells out of them spake many a time,
 And made the spectators to reell.
 Whiles barking like dogs whilles maueing like cats,
 Resembling the divell and worsse.
 And in the procession they were taken about,
 For to see Christ on his Crosse.
 And holy masses dayelie in the churches,
 Was made for these women opresst.
 In expectation the divell out of them,
 Should afterward be dispossest.
 By carying the lame and crepled alonge,
 And the picture nailed on the crosse.
 And an antient portrage hanging on a standart,
 Caryed by a man on a horsse. portrait
 And a great multitude of both young and old,
 All folk of the holy profession.
 And a great number of idle spectators,
 For to behold the procession.
 On that Saboth day devotlie passt they,
 Throu al the wayes about Dam.
 And every day while the kirm masse did last,
 The people vent and they came.
 And dayelie patrullied about the toun,
 And devot pennance they did.
 After the procession some made their confession,
 Of many sins they had hid.

By devot masses and frequent processions,
 No future danger they fear.
 From purgatorie they may be set free
 And heell they will not come near.
 By allms deeds in penitent weeds,
 At Heavens gattes they will knock
 Petter with his keyes he will not refuse,
 To open and let in the folk.
 All time of the kirn masse the burgers of Brudges,
 Both late and earlie they came.
 Some in their coaches some in pleasure boats,
 They passt and repasst to Dam.
 Along all the way the violls did play,
 With many a mussicall tune.
 And meat and drink in plentie was sold,
 Till all the kirn masse was done. •
 The merchant stans stood on Dam streets,
 The space of eight or nine dayes.
 The people daylie vent out and in,
 With dances carolls and playes.
 We soldiours then that lay into Dam,
 Had bot few night in our bed.
 We had double sentries on the barires,
 And mounted moe men on the guard.
 When the kirn masse was done with fewer men,
 We mounted the guard each day.
 So many fell sick they behoved after that,
 To take the main garde away.
 Till afterward some plot was discovered,
 About the toun of Osstende,
 And every toun got orders right soon,
 From perille themselves to defende.
 This news to Dam most privatlie came,
 And the Governour ordered soon.
 That no sojors should go out of that toun,
 Till that allarme was done.
 A Captain Lieutenant of Flores regiment,
 Was then Captan Comidant.
 He viewed al the batteries and the walls round,
 Both towards Osstende and Gaunt
 And then at night a strong out guard,
 And a picket to lie on the street.
 With patrullieing round about the toun,
 Canonires for the batteries compleat.
 So the divell was adoe and mickle mair to,
 About the keeping of Dam.
 The sojors then had not one night in bed,
 Bot never no enomie came.

The French was disapointed their plots all disjoynted,
And into their oun garissounes.
They were forssed to go since it happened so,
The news was sent to the touns.
Then to their old ordour in mounting the guards,
Each garissoun then was redussed.
It was eight nights time before that in Dam,
That allarme it effects had produssed
The detashments in Dam then began to grow thin,
Some disserted and many fell sick.
And bot few men to mount on the guards,
That old city Dam for to keep.

RULES

1. THE object of the Society is the discovery and printing, under selected editorship, of unpublished documents illustrative of the civil, religious, and social history of Scotland. The Society will also undertake, in exceptional cases, to issue translations of printed works of a similar nature, which have not hitherto been accessible in English.

2. The number of Members of the Society shall be limited to 400.

3. The affairs of the Society shall be managed by a Council, consisting of a Chairman, Treasurer, Secretary, and twelve elected Members, five to make a quorum. Three of the twelve elected Members shall retire annually by ballot, but they shall be eligible for re-election.

4. The Annual Subscription to the Society shall be One Guinea. The publications of the Society shall not be delivered to any Member whose Subscription is in arrear, and no Member shall be permitted to receive more than one copy of the Society's publications.

5. The Society will undertake the issue of its own publications, i.e. without the intervention of a publisher or any other paid agent.

6. The Society will issue yearly two octavo volumes of about 320 pages each.

7. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be held at the end of October, or at an approximate date to be determined by the Council.

8. Two stated Meetings of the Council shall be held each year, one on the last Tuesday of May, the other on the Tuesday preceding the day upon which the Annual General Meeting shall be held. The Secretary, on the request of three Members of the Council, shall call a special meeting of the Council.

9. Editors shall receive 20 copies of each volume they edit for the Society.
