THE

PREFACE.

Readers a genuine Account of the late Rebellion, as it occurr'd to me from occular Demonstrations; for as I had the Honour to be a Volunteer under his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland; so I took all Opportunities of writing a fournal; which contains the most material Things that happen'd during that Period; and those Circumstances that did not fall directly under my Observation, I have taken Care to collect from the most authentick Accounts I could procure. It is through want of Care in this Particular, that in many ancient, and in some modern Histories, we are so much at a Loss about the Dates and Circumstances relating even to the most remarkable Events; and in these a strict Regard ought to be paid to so memorable, as well as melancholy a Series of Transactions as this History contain, carried on by a Set of Men whose desperate Fortunes, and unreasonable Prejudices, made them fit Instruments for our common Enemy to work upon, delude, and at last engage to join them in distressing the Nation, endeavouring to depose the KING, and fet on the Throne of thefe Realms an abjured Pretender; bred up and instructed in Popish Superstition, and Arbitrary Principles; to the utter Subversion of our Religion, our Laws, our Liberties and Properties; the very Name whereof, had they succeeded, had been extinet; ___for France, to design, and do its utmost to effect all this Mischief, had been no Wonder; --- but, that any of our Fellow-Subjects, and Protestants, (who could not be ignorant or insensible of the cruel Spirit of Popery, and intolerable Yoke of Despotick Power; and had tasted the Sweets of Liberty; and shared all the Advantages of a mild and legal Government,) should be such Traitors to their Country,

Country, as to affist the common Enemy in enflaving and bringing it under a foreign furifdiction, is Matter of Wonder; and what can scarce be parallell'd in History.

THE Barbarians indeed that over-run your Country, where like the antient Goths, intrepid, bold, and daring, innur'd to Hardships and Fatigues from their Infancy; and what is still more, headed by Men of desperate Fortunes, to whom they paid an implicit Obedience; hut, that they, who were so small a Number, and some of them unarm'd, should penetrate so far into this Kingdom, is what future Ages, when they read of it, will hold in Derision: However, if it is consider'd, that at that Time, the Nation was destitute of its chief. Defence, our Troops, with their brave Commander, being then abroad; a Rebellion and Invasion bad been long laught out of Countenance by the Presumption of the Malecontents, nay, even many of his Majesty's best Friends, some of high Dignity, were fallen into a Lethargy of Disbelies as to that Monster Rebellion ever appearing among us; our Nation

Nation not only undisciplin'd as to Arms, but thro' a long Peace and great Plenty, undisciplin'd also as to the more noble Exercises of the Mind, Sobriety, Temperance, true Virtue and Publick Spirit; torn in Pieces by Ambition and Faction among the Great, and in all Degrees of Life, by an Abuse of the most extensive Liberty, and best Government ever People were bles'd with: When we consider that many Jacobites had been lavish of Promises to the Scots Rebels, who repaid the deluded, unthinking English, who join'd them, by forcing them to stay at Carlisle, where the Consequence must be that Martyrdom which they boasted of when they found it unavoidable: Add to this, that the French, our inveterate Enemy, remarkable for Deceit, Perfidiousness and every Art of Political Villainy, even when meditating against us, solemnly denying it, and forming an Expectation of finishing their Conquest of Flanders when our brave Troops were drawn thence; when these Things are consider'd our Wonder in some Degree ceases. But if you would continue to deserve the Name of Britons, unite in the vigorous Defence of your Liberties and your Country. Be not amus'd with Party-Names, nor let any Distinction for the future subsift umong us, but that of such as are, or are not Friends to our King, our Country, and the Protestant Religion, and Enemies to France and Slavery, Popery and Bigotry; for in Proportion as we are good Subjects and truly virtuous, we shall recover our former Honour, and yet become a Scourge to France.

To conclude, I have taken Care through the whole of my History, to relate Facts with the greatest Perspicuity and Exactness; and will only add, that when the Nation became rouz'd from its Lethargy, never was there a greater Spirit of Love and Loyalty than appear'd amongst all Ranks of People, (some Male-contents excepted;) which plainly shews that his Majesty King George reigns in the Hearts of all his faithful Subjects. I hope that great Example of theirs will spread its Instuence, through the Dwellings of the Disaffected, and convince them, (and such as are of unsettled Opinions and Prejudices) that it would be a wife Part in them to discountenance all Popish Imposters, and defend to the last Drop of their Blood—that illustrious and heroick Family, by which kind Providence has made us a free and happy People.

A Com-

Compleat HISTORY

REBELLION.

S foon as a War broke out upon the Continent, the Irish and Scots Patizans of the Chevalier, at the Court of Madrid, judged it a fit Opportunity to put their Scheme of Rebellion into Practice, and proposed an Invafion both in Ireland and Scotland, pretending they had very clear and good Proofs, of a strong Spirit of Discontent, working in both Countries; fo that with a small foreign Force a Revolution might with Probability of Success be attempted.

This was very well received at Rome, the eldest Son of the Chevalier de St. George having studied for some Years every thing he thought requisite, to furnish himself for an Expedition of this Nature: But perhaps it had not taken Effect so soon, if his future Secretary Mr. Murray had not reported to him, that it was easy to raise the Clans, if he could be fure of any Affistance from France. At this very Time the Spaniards were employed, in driving the Preneb into a War declared against us; and Cardinal Aquaviva, being let into the Secrets of the Chevalier's Intelligence, undertook that his Catholick Majesty should make a Point of this likewife, and oblige France to take a Part in this Scheme; and grant Prince Edward fuch Succours as might appear requifite for carrying his intended Invation into immediate Execution. But upon Application to the Court of Verfailles, many Difficulties arose; for several of the French Ministers being perswaded they had already more upon their Hands than they could well manage, vehement ly opposed adding a new and expensive Project, to those with which they were perplexed before. But there were three Persons in the Council of that Kingdom determined to support this Disposition from very different Motives, who, though they did not avow it publickly, were however determined to bring it about. Cardinal Tencin owed his Hat to the Chevalier, and was always his declared Partizan. M. de Saxe had an irreconcilable and hereditary Hatred to be gratified by this Measure. And M. de Belleisle judged it agreeable to his general System; the Basis of which was, that the more his Majesty's Affairs were embroil'd, the more necessary his Services would be; and the more, confequently, himself and his Family confider'd.—But though these great Men concurred in the Defign, they would, none of them venture proposing to invite the Chevalier or either of his Sons into France, but refolv'd to procure that Step being taken without Formality, by the Interpolition of Cardinal Aquaviva, that they might afterwards be able to difavow it. Ac-

Accordingly this Method was taken, and Cardinal Aquaviva follicited the Chevalier to confent to his eldest Son's fetting out, even before a formal Invitation came from Paris;—for he was fatisfied, that notwithstanding any Appearances, the great Men at Court might wear, they would be very glad to see and assist the young Man, who, on his Side, was fo defirous of shewing himself, and so confident of Success, that he never left teazing his Father, (whose Experience made him less sanguine,) 'till he obtain'd his Consent; but this was not 'till he had certain Advice from France that they were meditating an Invasion on England, which was in the Winter of 1743, and then he enter'd on the necessary Preparations. It was the Month of February 1744, before every Thing was ready, and the necessary Remittances fixed, in case he should think proper to act upon his own Plan of going into Scotland, instead of landing with the French Troops, who were on the Point of embarking when he left Rome. The Manner of his Departure, which was entirely entirely in the Italian Strain, and his Journey to Genoa, where he took up tome Bills of Exchance, which were duly paid, made a fine Italian Piece—which was presented to all the Friends of the Family at Rome.

On his Arrival at Paris he was very coldly received, more especially by the Ministry; and the King seemed a little surprized at the Abrubtness of his Appearance.—But notwithstanding this, iome of the Ministers, and the Relations of his Family, welcomed him in another Manner, and perswaded him to go and parade at Dunkirk, where they were Itill carrying on the Farce of an Invafion; in which he was brought to act his Part, but not without Reluctancy. This threw him in some Measure out with the French Court, who left him to mind his own Scheme and Projects, without any apparent Countenance, all the next Winter.

By this kind of Management, he split his own little Party into Factions, who B 2 were were as warm in their Debates, as furious in their Contests, and as much sour'd in their Opinions, by these different Sentiments about the Measuers he was to take, as if that all their Projects had not been alike empty and chimerical. Those who follow'd him from Rome were absolutly moulded by his Inclinations; they were perfect Courtiers, had nothing to loose but their Lives; and by having experienced a long Scene of Misfortunes, were grown in some Meafure careless about them. They magnified the Project, extolled the Courage, and hoped mighty Things from the Fortune of their Chief; his very Person was an Army, and his Presence sufficient to make a whole Nation revolt. The old Cavaliers, who had remained long in Exile in France, and were heartily weary of the Usage they had met with, ran very eafily into the same Way of thinking, and were eager for entering upon Action. But the wifest Heads, and greatest Men among them, were in Sentiments directly opposite; they said, he ought well to consider his first Expedition;

pedition; for if he fail'd in that, it would never be in his Power to make another; that risking his Person was nothing in Comparison of risking his Friends; and that every Measure he took towards raising an unsuccessful Rebellion, was a Step in Favour of his Enemies. The latter Party were so much in Earnest, that they applied to the French Court, to desire they would interpose; and received a Promise to that Effect. The French Ministers began now to be well pleased to see Things take this Turn, hoping he would make a desperate Attempt himself, at much less Expence than if abetted by them; perfuaded, that whether successful or not, he would do their Business, and create such a Disturbance in Britain as might affect our publick Credit.

In Publick therefore, and even under their Hands, they opposed and discountenanced his Scheme for an Invasion, but privately applauded it, and expressed a vast Confidence in the heroick Disposition of the young Pretender, and made no Scuple of faying, That by venturing upon such an Exploit, he would surprize his Friends, amaze and confound his Enemies, and put the King and his Ministers under a Necessity of owning, assisting, and supporting him for ever. Thus they managed, cheated, and betrayed both Parties.

The Arrival of the Pretender's Son in France, could not but give great Reafon to suspect that something was meditating there in his Favour; nor was it long before there appear'd evident Signs of an intended Invasion, though, as I have shewn, this perfidious Court pretended to have no Knowledge of the young Chevalier's Journey; and it was even suggested by the French Party in Holland, that M. de Amelot was remov'd, and disgrac'd, for having given the young Adventurer those Hopes which drew him into France.

However, in the Summer of the Year 1745, it was known, that some Preparations were privately making for an Expedition pedition in Favour of the Pretender; and for that Purpose, an Officer in the French Navy raised a Company of one hundred Men, under Pretence that they were for the East-India Company's Service, which were stiled Grassins de Mer, and were handsomely cloathed in Blue faced with Red; (who we have fince had the Pleafure of seeing Prisoners of War at Carliste,) They were put on board a Frigate carrying eighteen Guns; and every Thing being now ready, the young Deputy Pretender came privately from the House of the Duke de Fitz-James, to Port Lazare in Britanny, where on the 14th of July he embarked with about Fifty Scatch and Irish, in order to have failed round Ireland, and to land in the North-West of Scotland. This Frigate of his was joined off Belle-Ifle by the Elizabeth, a Man of War of fixty Guns, taken from us by the French in the last War, and now extremely well mann'd for this Service. In their Paffage they fell in with a Fleet of English Merchant-men, under the Convoy of three Men of War, one of which, viz. the the Lion, Capt. Brett, engaged the Elizabeth for nine Hours; but soon aster the Engagement began, the Frigate bore away, and continued her intended Voyage. The Elizabeth, when Night came on, made all the Sail she could to get clear, and returned to Brest, quite difabled, having her Captain and fixty-four Men killed, and one hundred and thirty wounded. She had on board a large Sum of Money, and Arms for feveral thoufund Men, which were to have been landed with the Pretender, for the Use of his Adherents. As for the Frigate, beforementioned, the stood in for the Coast of Lochabar, and anchored betwixt the Islands of Skie and Mull. * and there landed

August, and chose for his Motto, Tandem Triumphans, i. e. At length Triumphant.

As the Camerons were the most diffinguished Clan in the Rebel Army, and of which the celebrated Miss Jenny is a Branch, I thought it might not be improper to give the following Account of them.

Of the CAMERONS.

HE Clan of the Camerons is very numerous in Scotland: The prefent Lochiel, Chief of that Name, pretends to be lineally descended from Hugh the first of that Family, which is of about 700 Years standing. There has been a constant Succession of Great Men down from the faid Sir Hugh, to the present Lochiel, famous in the late Rebellion. The Revenue of the Estate is about 500 % per Annum, exclusive of the Wood there is now on it. Some of the Merchants of Whitehaven have of late had large Dealings with young Lochiel for Timber. The

The present Sir Hugh Cameron having refided long in France and Rome, is strongly attached to the House of Stuart: He came over with the Pretender in 1715, and went back again with him to France. When the late Rebellion broke out in 1745, he embark'd with the Chevalier in his Expedition against Scotland; where, though he was eighty Years of Age, he behaved with furprizing Activity. As for young Lochiel he was never Abroad with his Father, but lived quietly at Home upon his Estate; and it is supposed he knew nothing of the intended Invasion 'till after the young Pretender landed in Scotland; when he received a Summons to raise the Clan, come at their Head, and join the Standard. But young Lochiel not liking to meddle in so dangerous an Affair, delay'd it for the Space of fix Weeks, though the young Pretender, and his Father, were all that Time at the House of Mac Donald of Kinlock Moidart. At last the young Deputy Pretender came to Acnacary, with about fifty Persons in his Retinue, together with

with old Sir Hugh Cameron; on their Arrival the old Gentleman immediately shewed himself to his Clan, who were overjoy'd to see their old Chief amongst them again; and the Son had nothing left him but to obey his Father's Command like his other Vasilals.

The Clan of the Camerons are about eight hundred fighting Men; there are but a few Gentlemen of the Name set-led in Scotland, though there is a considerable Number of them in the Service of France and Spain. The chief Branch of this Family was Mr. Cameron of Glandessery, Father of the celebrated Miss Jenny. The Estate of Glandessery does not exceed 150 l. per Annum, yet he can raise very near as many Men as his Chief.

Mr. Cameron was a Gentleman of good Parts, and bore a good Character in his Neighbourhood: He bestowed a liberal Education upon all his Children, but seemed lavish in his Expence upon Miss Jenny, who was his Favourite; but but out of mistaken Tenderness for her; was so long before he would put her under the Restraint which her Education requir'd, that some Passions were suffered to take so deep Root in her Mind, that neither Time, Care, nor Expence could afterwards eradicate. Now Miss must prepare to go to Edinburgh for her Education; where she was put under the Tuition of an Aunt of Lochiel's, an old Lady of great Prudence and strict Virtue.

Miss with some Difficulty was at length brought to apply herself to her Education, in which she made so good a Progress, that in two Years Time she learn'd to write, to dance, to speak French, to play upon the Spinnet, and became a compleat Mistress of her Needle. She was now grown tall and well-shap'd, her Skin clear, and her Features agreeble; she had large sparkling Eyes, with a wanton Sostness about them, and such an alluring Attraction, as never fail'd to please if they design'd to make a Conquest; so that if she might not be reckon'd reckon'd a perfect Beauty, at least she may be allowed to be agreable. at this Interim was about fixteen Years of Age; but not putting a proper Restraint on her Inclination, a Discovery came to light that the had carried on an Amour, about fix Months, with one Sawney, a Footman, who having formerly liv'd with a Man of Quality, had learn'd all the Fashionable Vices and Follies of the gay Part of the Town; this Intrigue brought on its Effects, and Miss began to be surpriz'd with an uncommon Alteration in the State of her Health, and being ignorant of the Cause, made Application to her Aunt for Advice, who, to her Sorrow, knew the Difease too well, but had the Prudence not to difcover it to Miss, she being resolv'd to find out the Author of this Missortune; and that very Night let her into the Secret:-for Mils was unwarily caught in the Arms of Sawney; the News of which afflicted her Father in so affecting a Manner, that he took to. his Bed, and died of Grief in about eight Days after. Way---and some say, he was violently dispatched;—for he was never heard of after.

Miss went about two Months longer, and then miscarried, either by Accident, or Means used to cause Abortion; but if the latter, who to lay it upon must be left.

Her Mother, and the rest of her Relations, willing to bury the Scandal she had brought upon them, with one Opinion, resolv'd to send her to France, and put her into a Nunnery; which being executed, the had not long been there until other Intrigues began to be afresh formed, notwithstanding the Laws of the Place laid her under a Restraint to undergo a severe Penance. The Favourite Father she pitch'd upon was an Iriskman, of the Order of St. Francis, a Person much fitter for a Gallant. Miss had not confessed many Weeks before she found herself pregnant by the Church: However, her ghostly Father soon eas'd her of that Burthen by forcing an Abortion, tion, by which she was near loosing her Life; but escap'd without Discovery, and was recover'd enough to appear at the Grate. Some Time after her Confessor happen'd to bring with him an Officer belonging to the Irish Brigade. young Colonel was much charm'd with the Conversation of Miss Jenny, propos'd to free her from the Cloister; to which she readily consented. Colonel, who had received Orders to go directly for Flanders, carried her with him to the Camp, where the arriv'd in the Beginning of the Year 1713, and centinu'd with him until the Conclusion of the Treaty of Uirecht, where he died and left her an odd Sort of a Widow.

Miss was now absolutely destitute; her Money, Jewels, and all she could get together, would not raise above 100l. Her Attairs were in this bad Situation when she accidentally met Sir Hugh Cameron of Lechiel, who knew her Missortunes in Scotland, but was ignorant of her Transactions in France. He, and some other of those Resugees that left the Kingdom Kingdom in the Year 1715, advised her to return to Scotland to her Brother Mr. Cameron of Glendesfery.

About two Years after her Arrival, her Brother married, and his Lady and Sifter liv'd for some Time in the greatest Harmony, when the Wife became jealous of a criminal Correspondence being carried on betwixt the Brother and Sister; so that continual Jars on that Account made Mrs. Cameron's Life very miserable, who died in a short Time after; her Husband did not furvive her long, leaving his eldest Son a Minor, and little better than an Ideot: He left Miss Jenny his Executrix, and when he arrived at the Age of Fourteen, the Boy himself chose her Guardian to his Estate, which she has manag'd ever fince; for tho' her Nephew is of Age, yet his Incapacity is such; that he cannot transact any Business, but leaves it entirely' to his Aunt. So much for the Historical Part of Mils Jenny's Life; now Iproceed to known Facts.

When

When the Chevalier Charles, Deputy-Pretender, came to Lochiel's House, Lochiel sent an Order to Mr. Cameron, of Glendessery, to raise his Men and join the Family Standard; Mr. Cameron, incapable of obeying fuch a Summons, his Place was supplied by his Aunt Miss Jenny, who foon got together two Hundred and fifty Men, and marched at the Head of them to the Pretender's Camp: She was dress'd in a Sea-green riding Habit, with a Scarlet Lapell, trimm'd with Gold, her Hair tied behind in loose Buckles, with a Velvet Cap, and Scarlet Feather; she rode on a Bay Gelding, deck'd with green Furnirure, which was fring'd with Gold; instead of a Whip, she carried a naked Sword in her Hand, and in this Equipage arriv'd at the Camp.

A Female Officer was a very extraordinary Sight, and it being reported to the young Chevalier, he went out of the Lines to meet this Supply; Miss Jenny, who indeed had seen more terrible Fellows abroad, rode up to him without the least least Concern, and gave him a Soldierlike Salute, and thus address'd him, That as her Nephew was not able to attend the R-I Standard, she had rais'd his Men, and brought them to bis H-hn---s; that she believed them ready to bazard their Lives in bis Cause, and tho' at present they were commanded by a Woman, yet she bop'd they had nothing Womanish about them; for she found that so glorious a Cause, had rais'd in her Breast every manly Thought, and quite extinguish'd the Woman; what an Effect, then added she, must it bave on those who have no Feminine Fear to combat, and are free from the Incumberance of Female Dress? These Men, Sir, are yours, they have devoted themselves to your Service; they bring you Hearts as well as Hands; I can follow them no further, but I shall pray for your Success. This Speech being ended, she order dher Men to pass in Review before the Chevalier, who express'd himself pleas'd with their Appearance, but much more with the Gallantry of their Female Leader. He conducted her to his Tent, and treated her in the most polite Manner;

ner; her Humour was extremely free, and as full of Gaiety as if she had been but sisteen; the young Pretender was much delighted in her Conversation, and while she continu'd in the Camp, he spent several Honrs with her, and frequently call'd her Colonel Cameron; which Name she has chiefly bore ever since.— The Succours which she now brought, and the early Assistance her Family had given him, were sufficient Motives to cares her more than ordinary; and as to other Obligations he may be under to her, I leave the Reader to imagine.

She continu'd with the Army 'till they march'd into England, and join'd them again on their Return to Falkirk, from whence the Pretender fled with so much Precipitation, on the near Approach of his Royal Highness the Duke of CUMBERLAND, that he forgot to carry off his Female Colonel who was taken Prisoner; and when I return'd from the Highlands to Edinburgh in May, she was then a Prisoner in the Castle.

The Pretender being now join'd by the whole Clan of the Camerons of Lochiel, the Mac Donalds of Glengary, the Stuarts of Appin, and some other of the Clans, his Army amounted to about two thousand Men, when, on the 20th of August, he appear'd with his Forces near Fort William, and about this Time dispers'd many of his Father's Manifesto's; one of which was dated in 1743, that plainly shew'd a Diversion was then intended; another in 1745, declaring his Son Regent; and a Third, containing large Promiles to the People of Scot-Soon after this, two Companies of St. Clair's Regiment fell in with the Rebels, whom they were fent to reconnoitre, and were most of them taken Prisoners; as was Capt. Sweetenham, of Guise's Regiment, foon after, but he was releas'd upon his Parole, after which he immediately posted up to London, where he gave the first and most distinct Account of the Force, Situation, and Design of the Rebels; who now began to think themselves strong enough to march march Southward; which they immerdiately prepar'd to do:

Lieutenant-General Sir John Cope, Kt. of the Bath, was at that Time Commander in Chief of the King's Forces in Scotland, and had the Direction of Military Affairs there; in Pursuance of which, he drew together the Troops then in that Kingdom, arm'd the Militia, and took what other Precautions he thought necessary, and then judg'd it proper to march Northward in order to find out the Rebels, expecting. to meet with them at the Chain; which is the Name given to the great Road leading a-cross from Fort-William to Inverness, where the General arrived with his Forces after a fatiguing March, but found himself disappointed; for the Rebels instead of marching through the Pass at Korryerrock, they took the Way over the Mountains, and the first News he heard of them was, that they had taken Possession of Perth, on the 4th of September, and on the 5th proclaim'd the Pretender.

It was now publickly known, that several Persons of Distinction had join'd the Pretender, particularly the Person call'd the Duke of Perth, (Chief of the Family of the Drummonds, and Son of the Earl of Perth, Chancellor of Scotland, who follow'd the Fortune of the late King James, and was by him created a Duke in France,) the Marquis of Tultibardin, then stiling himself the Duke of Athol, eldest Son of the late Duke, (but attainted for the Share he had in the late Rebellion,) Lord George Murray, his Brother, and several others.

On the 11th they began their March for the Firth of Forth, which they crossed on the 13th, at the Ford of Frew, in Number about three Thousand; they took their Rout for Glascow, which they summon'd; but receiv'd no Answer: The Substance of their Summons is as follows:

Need not inform you of my View in coming, that is already sufficiently known;

known : ---- All those who have their Country, and the true Interest of Britain; ought to with for my Success, and do what they can to promote it. It would be a needlefs Repetition to tell you, that all the Privileges of your Town are included in my Declaration, and what I have promised I never will depart from. I hope this is your Way of thinking; and therefore expect your Compliance with my Demands, a Sum of Money not exceeding 15,000 l. Sterling,' (besides what is due to the Government,) and whatever Arms. can be found in the City, is all at present I require. The Terms proposed are very reasonable, and what I promise to make good. I chose to make those Demands; but if not complied with, shall take other Measures, and you shall be answerable for the Consequence:

' EEKY, Sept. 15, 1745.

ward, towards Edinburgh, which they

they enter'd on the 17th, being not only invited but sollicited therete by the Jacobites in and about that City, who well knew that the well-affected Inhabitants would have baffled any Attempt upon it, if they had got the fencing of the City finished, and the thousand Men levied and trained, who were to be raised by the voluntary Subscription. Besides these, five Hundred of the chief Inhabitants of the City, Lawyers, Writers, Physicians, and even Divines, took up Arms for the Defence of the Town. About twenty-three Patteraroes, and Ship Guns, were placed at the Gates and on the Bastions of the City-Walls. These Volunteers, &c. continued under Arms all Sunday Night, and likewise on Monday, 'till Five o'Clock in the Afternoon; at which Time Gardiner's and Hambleton's Dragoons retired from Colt-hridge, towards Musselburgh, on the Approach of the Van-guard of the Rebels, who put the Inhabitants of the City into some small Confusion, imagining that the whole Body of the Rebels were approaching. However, the Volunteers, Ec. Gc. continued under Arms, waiting for Orders to take their respective Stations; which they were resolved to defend to the last.

At this Time, several Persons presented a Position to the Provost, desiring that a Meeting of the Inhabitants might be call'd, to consider, whether they should stand out, or deliver up the City. The Fire-Bell, was accordingly rung; which the Persons under Arms took as a Signal for bringing them to the Place of Rendezvous, and immediately draw up, headed by their Officers; and the Meering intended for the Inhabitants, in the new Kirk-Isle, was, filled immediately with Persons who had been strolling in the Streets, many of them disaffected to the Government.

In this Moeting, a Letter from the Chevalier was preferred, intimating his Intention to enter the City; but the Reader thereof was foon interrupted, and the Question oput, Whether the Town was or was not tenable? some affirming that that the Dragoons had left them; and others that it was false, and that they were ready to defend the City to the last, if requir'd.—In the mean Time, the Secretary at War acquainted them, That he had an Order from the General to request, that the two Regiments of Dragoons might enter the City, if the Inhabitants desir'd it --- This occasion'd forme warm Debates; when a Gentle-1 man, who had been prefent at a Council of War fume Days before, afferted, that the general Opinion of the Officers was, that the City was not tenable, and that bringing the Dragoons into it, would be cooping them up to their Do-Aruction. Immediately the Vote was put, Whether to receive the Dragoons, or not? when it passed in the Negative; and so they went and joined General Cope.

No Orders being given what Part the Volunteers should act, they deliver'd their Arms into the Castle; the Governor of which sent for the Cannon, on the Walls and Gates, to be brought into the Castle, or nail'd up; but for Want of Orders from some Person in Town, they could not be carried away, and so fell into the Rebels Hands.

At this Time, Sir John Cope was at Inverness, from whence he dispatch'd Orders Southward, for Transports to be fent to Aberdeen, where he embark'd his Men, and on the 16th of September enter'd the Harbour of Dunbar, at which Place he landed his Men the next-Day, as he did also on the 18th his Artillery. Here he received Advice of the City of Edinburgh being in the Hands of the Rebels, which it was suspected the Prov-s had treacherously deliver'd up to them the 16th in the Evening; for about Five the next Morning, the Netherbow-Port being open'd to let in a Coach, the Rebels enter'd at the same Time, without the least Resistance; so that some of the well-affected became a Prey to their Enemies. General Guest had retir'd into the Castle with a small Number of regular Troops; the Bank, and

and most of the Publick Offices being, remov'd into that Fortress before.

Brigadier Fowke, with Hambleton's and Gardiner's Dragoons, having join'd Sic John Cope's Army, they on the 19th, march'd from Dunbar, and encamp'd that Night on the West Side of Haddington: The next Morning early, they continu'd their March, and in the Evening seached Preston-Pans. The Rebels having get a good Supply of Arms, and what elfe they wanted at Edinburgh, and their Army being now augmented to five thousand Men, they march'd out of the City to engage the King's Troops, General Cope had no looner pitch'd on a Piece of Ground, and got his little Army form'd, than the Rebels appear'd on the high Ground to the South of He thereupon form'd a full Front to theirs, when the Armies exchang'd several Huzza's, and probably from their not liking our Disposition, they began to alter their own, and made a large Detachment of their Left towards Prefrom, as many be supposed, in order to ner; her Humour was extremely free, and as full of Gaiety as if she had been but sifteen; the young Pretender was much delighted in her Conversation, and while she continu'd in the Camp, he spent several Honrs with her, and frequently call'd her Colonel Cameron; which Name she has chiefly bore ever since.— The Succours which she now brought, and the early Assistance her Family had given him, were sufficient Motives to cares her more than ordinary; and as to other Obligations he may be under to her, I leave the Reader to imagine.

She continu'd with the Army 'till they march'd into England, and join'd them again on their Return to Falkirk, from whence the Pretender fled with so much Precipitation, on the near Approach of his Royal Highness the Duke of CUMBERLAND, that he forgot to carry off his Female Colonel who was taken Prisoner; and when I return'd from the Highlands to Edinburgh in May, she was then a Prisoner in the Castle.

The Pretender being now join'd by the whole Clar of the Camerons of Lachiel, the Mac Donalds of Glengary, the Stuarts of Appin, and some other of the Clans, his Army amounted to about two thousand Men, when, on the 20th of August, he appear'd with his Forces near Fort William, and about this Time dispers'd many of his Father's Manifesto's; one of which was dated in 1743, that plainly shew'd a Diversion was then intended; another in 1745, declaring his Son Regent; and a Third, containing large Promiles to the People of Scot-land. Soon after this, two Companies of St. Clair's Regiment fell in with the Rebels, whom they were fent to reconnoitre, and were most of them taken Prisoners; as was Capt. Sweetenham, of Guise's Regiment; soon after, but he was releas'd upon his Parole; after which he immediately posted up to London, where he gave the first and most distinct Account of the Force, Situation, and Defign of the Rebels; who now began to think themselves strong enough to march take us in Flank, their Number being superior to ours. The General, with feveral of his Officers, having upon this reconnoiter'd their Defign, immediately order'd the Front to be chang'd, forming our Right to the Sea, and our Left. where the Front had been: This Difposition disappointed their Project of taking us in Flank; and that Part of their Army immediately countermarched. From this Change of theirs, we were again oblig'd to take new Ground. The Night coming on, and the Enemy for near, we lay on our Arms, and in the Night, with a Train of fix Pieces of fmall Cannon, threw fome Shot amongst an advanc'd Party of theirs, who had taken Possession of the Church-Yard of Tranent, that lay between their Front and ours.

The Forces under Sir John Cope were, Major-General Hamilton's and Colonel Gardiner's Dragoons; Lieutenant-General Guise's, Colonel Lee's, Colonel Murary's, Colonel Lascelle's, and the Earl of Leudon's Regiments of Foot; but of these,

these, there was only one compleat: A great Number of Volunteers from Edinburgh and other Places offer'd to join them; but Sir John Cope refus'd their Affistance for fear of confusing his Men. About Three in the Morning, it being very dark, our Patroles could scarce perceive any Motion they made, every Thing seemed so quiet: But about this Hour, the Patroles reported them to be in full March, in great Silence, towards the East; at Four they reported; that they were continuing their March North-East. From this it appear'd they defign'd to attack our Left Flank with? their main Body; and upon the General's being inform'd that this was their Intention, he order'd the Disposition to be chang'd, by which he brought our Front to theirs, and secur'd our Flanks by several Dykes on our Right, towards Tranent, with our Left Flank inclining to the Sea. The Moment this Dispofition was compleated, three large Bodies' in Columns, of their pick'd-out Highand the Column which was advancing) towards towards our Right, where our Train was posted, after receiving our Discharges, alm it in an Instant, and before Day appeared, seiz'd the Train, and threw into the utmost Confusion a Body of about one Hundred Foot which the General had posted there to guard it. All Endeavours, in every Shape, were tried by him, Brigadier Fowke, the Earls Loudon and Hume, and the Officers about them, to remedy this Diforder, but in vain. This unhappily, with the Fire made (though a very irregular one) by the Highland Column on our Right, where Gardiner's Dragoons were placed, put that Regiment in great Diforder, their Horses taking Fright at the first Fire; however their Officers rallied thorn again, and as they were returning alongfide of Lord Grange's Park-Dyke, in order to charge again, an Ambuscade of the Rebels gave them a second Fire, which made them reel, and ride quite off: Hambleton's Dragoons follow'd their Example, and went off likewife. Foot not being supported by the Horse, were surprized, and thrown into Confusion fusion in their Turn; they firing too, foon, and their Bayonets not fix'd, the Rebels fell furiously upon them, Sword in Hand, and being surrounded, about two hundred of them were killed, and about one Thousand made Prisoners.-Lord Loudon's Regiment being plac'd with General Cope's Baggage, as a Body of Reserve, were fallen upon next; they behaved well, gave the Rebels a smart Fire, which kill'd many of them; but being overpower'd by Numbers, they were oblig'd to furrender Prisoners, and, the Field Pieces and Baggage were all taken. The Earls of Loudon and Hume, after rallying the Dragoons, went offwith them to Lauder, and from thence. the next Day to Berwick. Brigadier Foruke, and Colonel Lascelles came back to Dunbar, and Sir John Cope went to, Berwick.—This is by some call'd the Battle of Preston-Pans, from the Place near it, which takes its Name from the Number of Salt-Pans there; but it is more properly stil'd the Battle of Glaidfmuir, since that was the Field of Battle, being a wide barren Heath, about seven Miles East of Edinburgh.

Before I conclude this unfortunate Affair, I will only observe, that notwithstanding our Soldiers were struck with fuch a Pannick as occasion'd them to act beneath the Dignity of the Cause in which they were engag'd; yet it is universally allowed, that all their Officers did their Duty, and well supported the Honour of that Character due to true Britons; in particular, it will be doing Fustice to the Merit of the brave Col. Gardiner, to say, that he did all that could be expected from the most gallant and experienc'd Officer to rally his Dragoons; but finding his unnost Efforts in vain; and seeing an Officer (who commanded the Foot) fall, the Colonel instantly dismounted, snatch'd up a half Pike, and took upon him the Command of the Foot, at whose Head he fought 'till he was brought down by three Wounds, one in his Shoulder by a Ball, another in his Forehead by a Broad Sword, and the Third, which was his mortal Stoke, in the hinder Part of his Head, by a Lochabar Ax; this Wound was given him by a Highlander who came behind him, while he was reaching a Stroke at an Officer with whom he was engag'd; he is regretted not only by his Friends, and those of the present Government, but even amongst those against whom he fought, who agree with all others in acknowledging, that he finish'd , a worthy and exemplary Life, with a most honourable and heroick Death; for he very eafily might have escap'd with the rest, if like them, he would have deserted his Duty. He was decently interr'd on Thursday Sept. 24, in the Parish Church of Tranent, where eight of his Children lie: This fatal Action happen'd almost by the Walls of his own Seat at Bankton; his Lady and eldest Daughter, at that Time, had been left by him at Sterling Castle.

I know it will be expected, that I should inform you, what were the Number on both Sides in the Action — Of the King's Troops, there were about two Thousand eight. Hundred who should have fought; and the Rebels were no less than five Thousand Mera; and it was so dark when they attack'd us, that they could could not be perceiv'd but like a black Hedge moving forward, and the Artillery, confisting of fix Pieces of Cannon, being planted all on the Right, and at some Distance from the Army, guarded only by a hundred Men, the Rebels were immediately possessed of them, who, turn'd them on our Dragoons, at the same Time giving a most hedious and frightful Shout: The Dragoons seeing the Cannon in the Possession of the Enemy, and that it was to be pointed at them, thought proper to provide for themselves by a sudden Retreat; as knowing that,

He that fights and runs away, May turn and fight another Day; But he that is in Battle slain, Will never rife to fight again.

Soon as the Affair was ended, the Rebels incircl'd their Dead and buried them with all Expedition to conceal their Number. The following is an exact List of the Loss sustain'd on our Part, in this unhappy Action.

The Pretender lay at Pinkey-House: the Night after the Battle, and the next E 2 Day Day return'd to Holy-rood-House. That Day they carried their Mock Prince from that Palace to the High-Cross, where they proclaim'd his Father a second Time King, and him Regent, with great Formality; although sew or none of the Inhabitants of any Credit attended the Ceremony.

The King's Heralds being compell'd to it, perform'd this Office; after which they were oblig'd to read a Manifesto, which promis'd much more than the Scots believ'd would be made good. The same Day was issu'd a Proclamation, commanding all within the City, and twelve Miles round, who had any Arms, to bring them in, and deliver them at Holy-rood-House; and all who had any Horses of his Majesty's Dragoons, to send them to the Camp at Didiston, under Pain of Military Execution. The next Day another Proclamation was read at the publick Cross, by which all who had taken Arms, Clergy or others, were declar'd Rebels, if, in so many Days, they did not make their Submission; which which occasion'd all the Clergy to desert the City, and was the true Reason of Divine Service being suspended, during the Time it was posses'd by the Rebels; notwith-, standing Mr. Neal M'Vicar continu'd to perform Divine Service as usual: On which the Pretender sent a Messenger, requiring that he should pray for bim, and forbid him to mention King GEORGE in his Prayers; yet Mr. MVicar pray'd for the Royal Family as usual; but in mentioning his Majesty, he said, Bless the King: Thou knows what King I mean; may the Crown fit long easy on his Head, &c. And for this Man that is come amongst Us to seek an Earthly Crown, we befeech Thee, in Mercy, to take him to Thyself, and give him a Crown of Glory. At this Time the Rebels had taken Possession of the Custom-House of Leith, in which were Seizures to a great Amount; which they fold to the Smugglers, from whom they had been taken, and to none else, for one third Part of the real Value.

The Pretender demanded of the City of Edinburgh 6000 Pair of Shoes, 2000 Targets, and 1000 Tents, to be made with all Expedition; to be paid when the Troubles were over.—

He then publish'd several Declarations to recall all Gentlemen and Tradesmen, who had lest the Town, to their Houses and Occupations therein; to order all Farmers and Husbandmen to repair to the Markets as usual; to command all Countrymen within the Neighbourhood of Edinburgh, to be ready at twelve Hours Warning, with Carriages in Proportion to their Ploughs, for the Conveyance of Equipage, &c.

The next Act of his Mock Government was, to order all the Receivers of publick Offices, Stewards of Counties, Burroughs, &c. to make up their Accounts immediately, and to pay him the Ballance that remain'd in their Hands.

He levied a Contribution of 2000 T. on the Earl of Hopton, besides his usual Land-Tax; seiz'd on the York-Buildings Estate, formerly the Earl of Wintoun's, and made the Tenants pay Half-a-Crown in the Pound of their Rent.

A Proclamation was issued for the Citizens to withdraw the Cash, or Money-Banks from the Castle, and carry on their Business as usual; but they being disregarded, another immediately followed; forbidding the furnishing the Castle with Provisions on Pain of Death: In Answer to which, General Guest gave the Citizens to understand, that he would lay the Town in Ashes, to clear a Passage for the receiving Supplies, and advised them to provide for their personal Sasety by the next Morning.

The Rebels having plac'd Guards at all the Avenues leading to the Castle, began to fire upon it, but were foon silenc'd by the Garrison. General Guest's Threats occasion'd the Chiefs of the City to apply to the Pretender, to take a proper Method to prevent their threaten'd Ruin: He thereupon wrote to the Governor of the Caltle, and a Truce was concluded for fix Days; during which Time the Castle was suffer'd to receive Provisions from the City and Country; which Space being elaps'd, the Fire began on both Sides with greater Fury: During this Interval, the Rebels not lik-ing to lie idle, divided themselves into fmall Parties, and went several Ways into the Country, pilfering and stealing all they could lay Hands on. A large Party of them got to Lord Somerville's House, and had began to plunder it, but the Alarm Bell being rung, a great Number of Colliers came out of the Coal Pits, attack'd the Rebels, kill'd some of them, and took others Prisoners, whom they carried with them into the Pits: Anether Party went to the Earl of Stair's, where they pillag'd the House and carried off all the Cattle. Six of them one Night broke into a House (the Gentleman's Name I forgot) near Kerntouloch, fix Miles from Edinburgh, a very mortified Gentleman, remarkable for his great Charity,

Charity, Piety and absternious Life, who lay every Night in his Coffin and Winding Sheet: The Highlanders having secur'd what Arms was in the House, set a Guard on the Servants, and pack'd up all the Plate and Linnen they thought they could carry off. The Chamber where Mr. —— lay, was without Furniture, and the last they visited as they were going off, having lock'd the Servants in a Room; seeing the Coffin, they concluded a Corple was inclos'd in it, and that it might have a good Winding-Sheet, thought it would be a Pity to leave it behind them; they therefore, with a Design of taking what the dead Man would never mils, remov'd the Lid off the Coffin; on which Mr. - raising himself up, they were struck with such a Panick at his ghostly Appearance, and imagining that the Devil had taken Posfession of the Corpse, and that he would have them next, they all took to their Heels, and Mr. — running after them to the Door, at their rushing out fasten'd it upon them, though the Precaution was needless; for they fearing the

The main Body of the Rebels, after the Battle, stay'd about Diddiston and Musselburgh two Days, and on the 24th return'd to Edinburgh: On the 28th and 29th, they sent the Prisoners to Perth, 'Drummond Castle, &c.

Sometime after this, a hundred and ten Highlanders of Lord Loudon's Regiment, who were made Prisoners at the Battle of Glaidsmuir, on their Petition, were set at Liberty by the Rebels, on swearing not to carry Arms against the Chevalier. About this Time two Hundred more of our Soldiers, who had been taken Prisoners at the same Place, made their Escape, and join'd those under the Command of General Blakeney, at Stirling Castle.

On the 30th they sent out Parties to Haddington and Dunbar; and began again to take their Measures for cutting off the Communication between the Castle of Edinburgh and the City; which confidering they had no heavy Artillery, was a wild Attempt. On the 1st of October they open'd their Trenches on the Castle Hill, a little below the Reservoir; upon which they began to fire upon them from the Castle, kill'd three Men and wounded a commanding Officer, so that by Four in the Afternoon they abandon'd their Works; on which two hundred Men from the Garrison sallied out and took Possession of them, and with their Fire clear'd the High-street, which is faid to contain more People than any Street in London; yet there was not a Person then to be seen in it: The Weigh-House in which the Rebels kept their Guard, was fet on Fire by the Artillery from the Castle, so that the Citizens apprehending the entire Demolition of their Metropolis, left the City, and flying for Safety to Leith, met in their Way the Inhabitants of that Town

Town flying for Shelter to Edinburgh; for the Rebels being in Possession of Leith, and prohibiting Provisions being carried to the Fox Man of War lying in the Road, she fir'd furiously upon that Town, so that the distress'd Citizens and Townsmen knew not where to find Refuge.

The Rebels had erected a Battery against the North-West Side of the Castle near Mr. M'Vicar's Church (who made the remarkable Prayer already taken Notice of) and fir'd from thence; but were foon filenc'd by the Fire from the Castle, which beat down a House, where Captain Taylor, a Shoe-maker liv'd, (who had promis'd to present the Pretender with the Keys of the Castle) and several other Rebels; many of whom were kill'd, and those who escap'd, (among whom was the faid Taylor) were taken by a Party of the Garrison, who flung themselves down with Ropes, and with the same hoisted up their Prisoners: Thus the Captain took Possession of this Fortress, though he could not find the Keys to make good his Promise. The Rebels plotted several Ways to surprize the Castle, and had once almost got it by Treachery; for one of the Centinels had undertaken to betray it, but was luckily seiz'd wich his Ropes, Letter of Instructions, &c. about him; and afterwards none but Men of Character were posted within the Draw Bridge.

The City of Glasgow was summon'd a second Time, and 15,0001. demanded by way of Contribution, but were constrain'd to compound for 5000 Guineas, which was directly paid.

Hostilities continu'd betwixt the Garrison of the Castle of Edinburgh and the Rebels till the 5th in the Evening, when several Houses being beat down by the Artillery, and the Rebels having lost twenty Men, in an Attempt to drive Part of the Garrison from the Castle-Hill, the Communication betwixt the Town and the Castle was restor'd, and Hostilities ceas'd. On the 7th the Rebels demanded Half-a-Crown in the Pound from the F

Landlords of Houses in Edinburgh, and began to have some Thoughts of quitting the Place, sinding the Fortress impregnable, both against their Forces and French Bribery, which has been elsewhere so persuasive, that some, thought to be the most steady Patriots of their Country, have sold their Faith and Honour for Louis d'Ors.

The Rebels one Night broke into the House of Mr. Thomas Areskine, an eminent Brewer, and a Preacher among the People call'd Quakers, and one of my Acquaintance. He has fince shew'd me the Drawers which they broke, and robb'd him of all the Money he had then in the House, with some Linnen and other Things of Value: Upon which great Injustice, the fair-dealing Quaker makes his Application to their Prince, affuring him, That Method he pursu'd would never prosper, or answer bis Expectation; for, said he, our GEORGE takes only a Part of our Money, but Thou even verily, takes all; and Thou may'st as well take my Life, as take away the the Prop that Supports it. Upon which Complaint the Highland Prince answered, That he (Mr. Areskine) was many Years in Debt to the Revenue of his Father's Excise, and it was but the proper Dues to his Government.

On the 14th the Rebels receiv'd confiderable Reinforcements, headed by old Gordon of Glenbucket, Forbes Lord Pitsligo, Lord Kilmarnock, and others; they likewise receiv'd from Abroad, Supplies of Ammunition, Small Arms, Field Pieces, Military Stores, &c. There was one Mr. Boyer came over at the same Time, whom they were pleas'd to dignify with the Title of Ambassador. About the 20th a great Part of their Army march'd to Dalkeith, to which Place they remov'd their Field Pieces and Ammunition, and having erected a Battery at Alloway, to secure the Passage of the Firth, they transported from Montross, Stonebive, and other Places, the Supplies they had receiv'd from Abroad.

About

About the latter End of October, the Mock Prince came to the Camp at Dalkeith, where he caus'd the Palace belonging to the Duke of Buccleugh, said to be one of the most magnificent Seats in Scotland, to be fitted up for his Reception, and there fix'd his Head Quarters, which lay convenient for fending Spies to see what was doing in the North of England; where he had but cool Encouragement, some refusing to read his Letters, and several of his Emissaries were feiz'd at Newcastle, Berwick, &c. But notwithstanding this, Measures were taken for marching Southward, and happy was it for us, that they stay'd so long with their Friends at Edinburgh; for had the Rebels, flush'd with Victory, follow'd their Blow, whilst the Hearts of his Majesty's Subjects were dismay'd by General Cope's Defeat, and very few disciplin'd Troops in England, it is hard to fay what would have been the Confequence; by which it appears, that an over-ruling Providence retarded them.

On the 6th of October, one Hixton, who kept an Inn at Perth, was taken up at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, as a Spy, who thereupon cut his own Throat, tho' not mortally. On fearching him, a Letter, or rather Paper of Instructions, was found in the Top of one of his Gloves, of which the following is a Copy, viz.

YOU are hereby authorized and directed to repair forthwith to England, and there to certify to my Friends, and particularly those in the North-West, the wonderful Success, with which it bath pleased God to favour my Endeavours for their Deliverance: You are hereby to let them know, that 'tis my full Intention, in a few Days, to move forwards to them, and they will be inexcusable before God and Man, if they do not do all in their Power to assist and support me in such an Undertaking. What I depend upon and expect is, that as many of them as can, should take Care to provide Provisions and Money, that the Country may suffer as little as possible by the March of my Troops; let them know there is no more

Time for Deliberation; NOW or NEVER is the Word. I am resolved to conquer or perish in the Attempt: If the last should happen, let them consider what they and their Posterity have to expect.

Sign'd, CHARLES, P.R.

Ņ,

About this Time, his Majesty had been pleas'd to appoint Field Marshal Wade to be Commander in Chief of the Army which was intended for the North, and our Forces began to move that Way; the Dutch were landed at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, as also Part of our British Forces from Flanders, under the Command of the Earl of Albemarle. At that Time the Tryal Sloop brought into Bristola French Ship, on board of which were five thousand Fusils with Bayonets, one hundred Barrels of Gunpowder, and seven Chests of Money, Gr, design'd the Use of the Rebels.

At Bristol, on the 11th of October, Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, &c., embled at the Guildball, when the uke of Newcastle's Letter was publick-ly read, authorizing the Magistrates, by Command of his Majesty, to call the City to Arms, and Officer them at Difcretion; intimating, that his Majesty was highly pleas'd with the Zeal and Unanimity of so considerable a Body of his Subjects: After this was read the Association which the loyal Citizens had so readily enter'd into, when the Mayor, in the Name of the Chamber, subscrib'd the Sum of 10,000 le and the Master of the: united Company, of Merchants 5000 l. for that Society; which was follow'd by the fingle Subscriptions of the whole-Beneh of Magistrates, and a great Number of other principal Citizens, some of whom subscrib'd 500, 300, 200, 100, 50 1. &c. Such a noble Spirit and Refolution had diffus'd itself throughout that opulent City, as will redound to its lasting Honour.

His Grace the Duke of Devonshire was one of the first that rais'd Men for his Majesty, who arm'd and kept them at his Seat at Chatsworth, on his own Expense; and when the Rebels came forward, join'd the County Regiment: He also sent to Derby, and rais'd the Pcake Miners, who destroy'd the Turnpikes from Whaley to Baxton; the spoiling those Roads prevented the Rebels from marching that Way; and the Derby-shire Regiment prov'd of signal Service in keeping the Country quiet.

By this Time the Militia in the Northern Counties were rais'd; Affociations and voluntary Contributions were fet on Foot in most Parts of the Kingdom; and in the County of York particularly. Through the timely Vigilance and Zeal of the Archbishop, assisted by the Nobility and Gentry, four new Regiments were rais'd, cloath'd and disciplin'd, at the Expence of the County. William Thornton, Esq; also rais'd and maintain'd, at his own Expence, a Company, and march'd them into Scotland. There was likewise a large Body of Gentlemen Volunteers, well mounted, who appear'd under Arms, ferv'd at their own Expence, and put themselves under the Command of Major-General Ogle-

Oglethorpe, stil'd the Royal Hunters; so that there was an Army form'd in the North of England of fourteen thousand Men. At the same Time, a considerable Body was form'd in the North Highlands of Scotland, by the Care and Vigilance of the Lord Ray, Lord Su-therland, and Duncan Forbes, Esq. Lord Prefident of the Court of Sessions, who distinguish'd himself by his Zeal and Loyalty, in granting Commissions for raising Independent Companies; which were all put under the Command of Lord Loudon, for the Security of Inverness, Fort-William, and other Garrisons there. Those Companies much retarded the Increase of the Rebels; which, together with other Military Preparations, join'd to a true Spirit of Loyalty, that in a distinguishing Manner slow'd through the Nation, no Doubt, was a great Chagrine and Disappointment to the Disaffected, and was the Cause of drawing off many that went to Edinburgh to join the Chevalier. Those Troops, tho' they did not enter into immediate Service, yet they shew'd the Spirit of the Nation,

Nation, protected the King's well-meaning Subjects, and kept the Rebels under a manifest Restraint for some Time.

November 1. The Pretender fent off his Baggage and Ammunition, on about one hundred and fifty Carts, and about the same Number of Sumpter Horses, escorted by two Detachments, the one by Pennycock, and the other by Lone-Head, both on the Way to Peebles and Carlifle, and were follow'd by the whole Army in three Columns. At this Time he who stil'd himself the Duke of Perth, had the Title of General; Lord George Murray, Lieutenant-General; Lord Elcho, eldest Son to the Earl of Weems, commanded the Pretender's Life Guards: the Earl of Kilmarnock acted as Colonel of the Hussars; and Lord Pitsligo, had the Command of the Angus Horse: But though, in regard to their Interest, these People were honour'd with such high Commands, yet it was known that the Pretender confided most in a few that came over with him. At the Head of his Council were Sir Thomas Sheridan, an Iri/h

Irish Gentleman, of a middle Age, and reputed a Man of Capacity, and who had been long about him; Colonel Sullivan, who acted as Engineer; General Macdonald, an Irish Officer, who was his Aid de Camp; Mr. Kelly, that was so long in the Tower, on the Affair of the late Lord Bishop of Rochester; and Mr. Murray, who acted as Secretary.

As Mr. Sullivan was a Person the most concern'd of any in the Rebellion, and whose Councils the Pretender chiefly relied on, I thought the following Character, remitted to me by a Friend, might not be disagreeable.

'He is by Birth an Irishman, and was educated in a Romish College a-

' broad, where he had enter'd into

' Priest's Orders: He had afterwards the ' good Fortune to be recommended to

" Marshal Maillebois, of whom he was retain'd as a Domestick Tutor to his

' Son. The Marshal perceiving in him fome Symptoms of a Genius better adapted to the Sword than the Gown,

encourag'd him rather to apply himself to the former than the latter Profession, ' which he did with fuch Success, that " having attended his Master to Corfica, ' when the French design'd to deprive those poor People of their Liberties, ' he acted as his Secretary. The Mar-' shal was a Bon-Vivant, and used to get drunk every Day after Dinner; ' this made him for the greatest Part of ' the Day incapable of Business; during ' which Time, the whole Power de-' volv'd on Sullivan, who executed it ' in fuch a Manner, as to do great Ho-' nour both to himself and Master; hav-' ing here again a very high Military ' Reputation, as well as much Know-' ledge in what is the Art of making irregular War: He afterwards served ' two Campaigns, one in Italy, and the ' other on the Rhine; in which latter ' Campaign, a French General giving ' a Character of him, said, that he un-' derstood the irregular Art of War, better than any Man in Europe; nor was his ' Knowledge in the Regular much infe-' rior, to that of the best General. the

'the Abilities of this Man we may justly 'attribute the Success, with which a 'Handful of Banditti have so long been 'able, to over-run and plunder a great 'Part of this large and populous N.- 'tion.' On the 6th their advanc'd Guard enter'd England.

It may perhaps be expected, that I should give some Account of the young Pretender himself, and his Behaviour among his People. What I have been able to collect on this Head, take as sollows:

'His Dress was a Highland Garb of fine Silk Tartan, red Velvet Breeches, and a blue Velvet Bonnet, with a Gold Lace round it; on his Breast a large Jewel, with St. Andrew appended; is about fix Feet high, walks well and streight, and speaks both English and broad Scotch very well. For a while he affected to imitate the Example of Charles XII. of Sweden, marching all the Day on Foot, and every River they were to cross, he was the first G

'Man that leap'd into it; he din'd with his Soldiers in the open Field, and flept on the Ground, wrapp'd in his Plaid; at this Time the Weather was warm: This Course of Life he fol-

warm: This Course of Life he fol-

' low'd for some Time; but his Italian 'Constitution not being enur'd to such

'Kind of Hardships, after his Arrival at Edinburgh, he indulg'd himself in fall the Conveniences he could procure

' for his Ease and Pleasure.'

Thus having given a particular and functions Narrative of the most material Transactions that happen'd during the Progress of the Rebellion in Scotland, and trac'd the Rebels to the Borders of England, I shall for a while leave them, and proceed to mention, at this critical Conjuncture, what was doing in Ireland, where it is well known, that a great Number of the Inhabitants of that Kingdom are profess'd Papists; however, by the Care of the Government, in erecting Protestant Schools, many of them have got their Eyes open, and are at length come to the Knowledge of Truth.

Truth, and what consequently tends to their true Interest, notwithstanding the artful Endeavours of their bigotted Priests to keep them in Ignorance and stupid Blindness: Add to this, the Unanimity which at all Times, but more efpecially then, appear'd among the Protestants, who, in general, express'd the most unshaken Zeal and Affection to his Majesty's Person and Government, and the utmost Abhorrence and Detestation of the unnatural Rebellion, and glaring Infolence, which had broke out in Scotland: The News of which was no fooner confirm'd, but an Affociation was immediately form'd and recommended to be fign'd, by all his Majesty's faithful Subjects of every County in Ireland; a Copy of which is as follows:

HEREAS a Rebellion is raised in North-Britain by the eldest Son of the Pretender, against our rightful Sovereign King George II. to subvert our Religion and Liberties, and to entail Popery and Slavery upon us, and our Posterity: We his Majesty's true Protestant Subjects in the County of -, having the utmost Detestation of so ' horrid an Attempt, do hereby in the " most solemn Manner Vow to Almighty 'God, and do Pledge our Faith and 'Honour to one another, that we will, 'every one of us, to the utmost of our Power, and at the Hazard of our Lives and Fortunes, oppose all Attempts 'against his Majesty's Person and Government; and particularly that abominable and unnatural Rebellion now carried on in Favour of a Popish Pre-'tender: And we do hereby promise and engage from Time to Time, whenever it may be necessary, to concert and execute Measures, for effecting the Purpose of this our Association, the Defence of ourselves, our Religion and Liberties, against Popery, France, and Arbitrary Power.'

September 17, a Proclamation was iffued by the Lord-Mayor of Dublin, offering a Reward of 50,000 l. for apprehending the Pretender and his eldest Son,

Son, or either of them, that shall attempt to land in Ireland. Measures were concerted for raifing feveral Independent Regiments of Horse and Foot, to be as well train'd and disciplin'd as the regular Forces; so that there was quickly rais'd an Army of fixty-five thousand Men, who were well cloath'd, arm'd, and disciplin'd, and many of them march'd to fuch Places as it was judg'd they might be of the most Service in. There were sent to them from England several thousand Muskets, for the Use of such of the Militia as had not any of their own. Those early Military Preparations, join'd with excellent Admonitions of well-affected Persons, had so good a Tendency, that not the least Signs of Dissaffection appear'd amongst them: What contributed not a little to the quiet Behaviour of the Papists in Ireland at this Time, was the following Letter of that true Patriot and Friend to his Country, Dr. Swift, Dean of St. Patrick's, wrote in a plain and pathetick Stile, and so full of Conviction, that whoever reads it, though a \mathbf{G}_{3} Papift, Papist, ever so much bigotted to his own Principles, must see Truth and Reason run through every Line and Sentence of it.

The DRAPER'S LETTER to the good People of Ireland; particularly to the poor Papists.

' My dear Countrymen,

T is now fome Time fince I troubled you with my Advice; and, as I am growing old and infirm, I was in good Hopes to be quietly laid 'in my Grave, before any Occasion offered of addressing you again: But my Affection for you, which does not decay, tho' my poor Body does, obliges me once more to put you in Mind of your true Interest, that you may not unwarily run yourselves into Danger and Distress, for Want of Understanding, or feriously considering it. I have many Reasons to believe, that there are not a few among you, who fecret-Iy rejoice at the Rebellion which is now raised in Scotland; and, perhaps, con-conceive Hopes of some Alteration for the better, in their Circumstances and · Condition, if it should succeed. Such mistaken People it is my Design to talk to in my Letter, and I defire nothing more of them, than to give me a fair Hearing; examining cooly with · themselves, whether what I shall say be true. It is no Objection to my fpeaking to them, that they are gene-rally Papists. I do not know how other People are disposed, but for my Part, I hate no Man for his Religion; I look upon a Papist as my Countryman and Neighbour, though I happen myself to be a Protestant; and if I · know what Advice is good for him, I can see no Reason why I should not give it him, or why he should not take it. A Papist has Sense, I supopose, like other Men, to see his Interest and Advantage; and the same natural Defire to embrace it, where he finds it; and if I can shew him where 'it lies, he will not, I believe, kick it from him, barely to spite a Protestant. I have nothing to fay to the Populh 'Gen-

Gentry of this Kingdom; they would 'hardly take such a plain Man's Ad'vice; and besides, they have so many 'Ways of coming off themselves, tho' the poor People were undone, that I 'need not be concerned for them. My 'Care is for the common People, the Labourers, Farmers, Artificers, and Tradesmen of this Nation, who are in Danger of being deluded by their Betters, and made Tools to ferve their Purposes, without any Advantage to themselves. It is possible, that among the Lords and Esquires, one, perhaps of a Hundred, would get something by a Change: Places and Employments would be promifed them, no Doubt; and a few of those Promises, perhaps, the French and Scotch Friends of the Pretender might give him Leave to keep; but, what are the poorer Sort the better all this while? Will the Labourer get one Farthing a Day more? Will the Farmer's Rent be al-'lowed? Will the Artificer be more employed, or better paid? Will the Tradesmen get more Customers, or ' have

' have fewer Scores in his Book? I . 'have been bred in a careful Way of 'Life, and never ventured upon any . Project, without confulting my Pillow. * first, how much I should be a Gainer ' by the Upshot: I wish my dear Coun-'trymen would do fo too; and before ' they grow fond of Change, ask them-' felves this fober Question, Whether it 'would better their Condition if it were really brought about? If it would not, to what Purpose should they wish it? 'If the poor Labourer, when all is over, is to be a Labourer still, and earn his "Groat a Day, as hardly as he did before, 'I cannot find why he should fancy 'it worth his while to venture a Leg, or . an Arm, and the Gallows too into the Bargain, to be just where he set out; 'If he must dig and delve, when the . Pretender is settled on the Throne, he ' had as good stick to it now, for any ' Difference I can fee.

^{&#}x27;I believe my Countrymen are not fo 'mad as to imagine, that the Pretender 'can or will give every one of them 'Estates;

* Estates; and I am sure if he does not, they can be only where they were. 'If a Farmer must pay his Rent, I see 'no Reason that he should be much concerned, whether he pays it to one 'Man or to another. His Papist Land-'lord will, I suppose, demand it as soon 'and as strictly as a Protestant; and if ' he does not pay it, feize his Cattle, or 'distrain his Goods, as readily at least, 'as a Protestant. I have not observed 'that Tenants of Popish Landlords wear 'tighter Cloaths, ride better Cattle, or 'spend more Money at Markets and · Fairs, than Tenants on Protestant Estates; therefore I cannot believe that they are any better used; no, the contrary, I know, from long Experience, that there is more Money taken in my 'Shop from Protestant Tenants than ' from Popish; and therefore, I suppose, 'that generally speaking, they are in better Circumstances. I wish that all of them had better Bargains; but fince 'they will not be mended by the best Success that their own Hearts could ' wish to the Pretender, they may as well

'be quiet, and make the best of such as 'they have already.

'There is not a more foolish Trade 'than fighting for nothing; and I hope 'my good Countrymen will be too wise 'to be persuaded into it. Fine Specches, 'and fair Promises, will not be wanting 'to delude them; but let them remem- 'ber the Warning I now give them, 'that when all is over, the very best that 'can befall them, is to have their Labour 'for their Pains.

'I doubt not but you are told that 'you will be made; and I do not expect that you will take my Word to the contrary. I defire only that you will trust the Understanding that God has given you, and not to be fooled out of your Senses. Will the Manufacturer be made by an entire Stop to Business; or the Tradesman, by being obliged to shut up his Shop? 'And yet you all must know, that in a Civil War no Work can be carried, on, nor any Trade go forwards. I hope hope you are not yet so stupid, as to ' think that People will build Houses, ' buy rich Furniture, or make up fine ' Cloaths, when we are all together by ' the Ears, and no body can tell to ' whose Share they will fall at last. ' And if there be no Buyers you can ' have no Employ. Merchants will not ' stock themselves with Goods, when there is no Demand for them; to have their Shops rifled, and their Storehouses broken open, and plundered by one Side or the other. Indeed, ' my good Friends and Countrymen, ' let designing Peeple say what they ' please, if you enter into their Schemes, ' you will be ruined in the Struggle, ' let it end which Way it will; and it ' well deserves your Thought, whether ' it is worth your while to beggar yourfelves and Families, that the Man's ' Name upon the Throne be James in-' stead of George; you will probably ' see neither of them while you live, ' nor be one Penny the richer for one or for the other; and if you take ' my Advice, you will accordingly not trouble trouble your Heads about them, but peaceably follow your own Eufiness while you have any; and if your Business is put a Stop to, you will account those your Enemies who are the Cause of it.

' You may think it a fine Thing ' when you get drunk over your Ale, to throw up your Caps and cry, Long live 'King James! But it would be a wise 'Thing to think how you'll live your-' selves, after you are beggar'd in his Will he make good your ' Cause. ' Losses? Pay one Man for the Plun-' dering of his Warehouse, and another ' for the rifling of his Shop? Will he ' give you Money, think ye, to release 'your own and your Wives Cloaths, ' which you must pawn for Bread, when 'no Work is stirring? Will he buy ' new Looms and Tackle for you, be-'cause yours have been burn'd or de-'ftroy'd? If you fancy fo, you are 'sfrangely imposed upon indeed; he ' will have other Things to do with his 'Money; or if he had any to spare, H 'there there will be hungry Frenchmen enough about him to snap it up, before it comes to you. I will not fay any thing to you about the Dangers of a · Civil War, tho' they are very dread-ful, and more horrid than you can possibly imagine, because I cannot think that there is any need of it. I ' have shewn you very plainly, that if ' you should be deluded to take up Arms ' for the Disturbers of your Quiet, you ' fight for less than nothing, for the undoing of yourselves and Families: And if this Agrument will not prevail upon 'you to be quiet, I can only pray for you, that God will be pleased to referre you to the right Use of your Understandings.

'I am

' Your old faithful Friend,

'The DRAPER.

By this Time Field Marshal Wade, with the King's Troops under his Command, mand, were encamped at Newcastle upon Tyne; by which Means, with the Care and Vigilance of some of the neighbouring Gentlemen, and of the Magistrates and Inhabitants of Newcastle, the Town and adjacent Country were preferved from falling a Prey to the Rebels, and obliged them to make their Way into the Western Road, to which their Chiefs at first seemed least inclined. The Rigour of the Season, the forced Marches, &c. occasioned a Flux amongst the Soldiers, which retarded the Operations of the King's Troops for some Time; but good Quarters, proper Refreshments, and an extraordinary Care of the Officers foon overcame those Difficulties.

November the 9th, the Rebel Army appeared on a Moor two Miles distant from Carliste, on whom the Garrison began to Fire, and continued it briskly for some Time; the Pretender took up his Quarters at Mr. Lowrey's of Blakewell, from which on the 10th, he dispatched a Messenger, to whom he gave two Guineas, with a Letter to the Garrison, which was received in at the Sally-Port; the Summons was as follows.

CHARLES, Prince of Wales, Regent of the Kingdoms of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, and the Dominions thereto belonging:

Being to recover the King our Father's just Rights, for which we are arrived with all his Authority, we are forry to find that you are prepared to obstruct our Passage: We, therefore, to avoid the Effusion of English Blood, bereby require you to open your Gates, and let us enter as we defire, in a peaceable Manner; which, if you do, we shall take Care to preserve. you from any Insult, and set an Example to all England, of the Exactness with which we intend to fulfill the King our Father's Declarations and our own. But. if you shall refuse us Entrance, we are fully resolved to force it by such Means as Providence has put into our Hands, and then it will not perhaps be in our Power prevent the dreadful Consequences which ulually ufually attend a Town's being taken by Assault. Consider seriously of this, and let me have your Answer within the Space of two Hours; for we shall take any further Delay as a peremptory Refusal, and take our Measures accordingly.

CHARLES P. R.

November 10, 1745; Two in the Afternoon.

For the Garrison of Carlisle.

On which the Garrison thought proper to confine the Messenger, and returned no other Answer but from the.

Mouths of their Cannon.

On the 11th the Pretender drew off his Army, and marched them to Brampton, seven Miles distant from Carlisle.

H₃; In

Carlille, in the Forest of Inglewood, is the Metropolis of the County of Camberland; it has a pleasant Situation, being bounded on the North by the large River Educ, over which is a fine Stone Bridge of nine Asches, from which is Seven Street, leading to the Seven Gass of the City: On the South by the Peterst; the Suburbs on that Side are called Butcherly, leading

In Point of Force at the Time of the late Rebellion, there was the whole Militia of the two Counties of Cumberland and Westmorland, who were about 1600 Men, besides the Inhabitants, and eighty Invalids in the Castle; Colonel Durand was at that Time Governor of the Castle, to the English Gate; and on the West by the River Caude, or Cauda, which Name the Suburbs bear, leading to the Irifh Gate; and besides those natural Fences it is fortified with a strong Wall and Castle, said to be first built by one Luel an eminent British King, who was Prince of the County before the Romans Time. and from him called Caer Luel. i. e. Luel's Town, to which it retains an Affinity of Sound. It was a flourishing City in the Time of the Romans, after whose Departure it was ruined by the Caledonians, &c. but in 680 Egfrid rebuilt it, and walled it round, and afterwards being almost ruined by the repeated Incursions of the Danes, it lay about 200 Years in Ruins, till William Rufus rebuilt it, and planted a Colony of Southern. English in it; to which Colony the first Tillage ever known thereabout is by all Records abscribed: He is faid likewise, by Campden, to have enlarged the Castle, and fortified it with a ftrong Fortress, as it now flands in the North-West Corner of the Town. the Middle of the City stands the Cathedral Church, the upper Part of which (being new) is a curious Piece of Workmanship, built by King Henry VIII. but thelower Part is much more ancient. King Henry I. erected it into an Episcopal See, Anno 1133, out of the Diocefes Castle, which was well supplied with Ammunition, partly from Whitehaven: They might likewise have been well stored with Provisions, as being in a plentiful Country; but the Gates being shut up for three Weeks obstructed their Markets, and the whole Garrison being kept upon Duty five Days and five Nights, without any Relief, were very much fatigued.

The

Dioceses of York and Durbam, and bestowed many Privileges on it, which were much augmented by his Successors. In the lower West Part of the Town is the Parochiel Church, as old as St. Cuthbert, after whom it 's called. King Henry VIII. also fortified this City against the Scots, and built an additional Castle or Fortress, on the South-East Side near the English Gave. The City has three Gates, which I have already named; and the Walls round it are now fo thick that three Men may walk a-breast on them within the Parapet, which is well planted with Cannon. This City has given the Title of Earl to the Howard's Family ever fince the Restoration of King Charles II. It is the Key to Eng. land on the Wost Sea, as Berwick is on the East Sea; it's a wealthy populous Place, having a good Thorough-Fare and Inland Trade: The Houses are most of them well built, and the Streets neatly paved; and is a Sea Port, but without Ships or Merchants. situated in Longitude 21 Degrees, 31 Minutes West, and 25 Degrees, 25 Minutes North Latitude. This Town in Times past, has been considered as a Bulwark against the Scors.

The following Speech of the Person who calls himself the Duke of Perth, at a general Council of War held at Brampton, near Carlille, in Presence of the Pretender's eldest Son, is inserted, as supposed to be authentick; if it should not prove so, I can only say, that it contains too many Particulars, of true History, to be neglected; and therefore wants not its Merits as to Matter of Information. It being communicated to me, I thought it might not be amiss to give it a Place.

May it please your Royal Highness,

I am in, to see so little Unanimity, and so much Heat and Animosity prevail in this Honourable Assembly; but my Concern wants Words sufficient to express it, when I reslect, that there are so many Reasons to complain of our present Situation, that there are so many Circumstances daily occurring to perplex us in our Projects, to weaken our Strength,

Strength, and disourage us in our Undertaking.

"Our Disappointments are so many, that we can number them only by the Days that have elapsed since our first Insurrection; and their Greatness to be measured only by the Danger into which we are now plunged.

Our Hopes, before your Highness's Arrival in Scotland, were raised to the highest Pitch; and could only be equalled by the Zeal which Subjects of all Ranks in that Kingdom expressed for his Majesty. We flattered ourselves, that your Highness would have appeared backed by a numerous Army, well supplied with Arms, Money, and Ammunition; their Number, we were made to believe, would not be less than 10,000 Men, and those of the best Troops of France. These were solemnly promised by Mr. Kelly, when with us last Spring; we were told they were ready in the Ports of France, with Transports, and a Fleet sufficient to protect tect their Landing. But when the Time came, how were we disappointed? Your Royal Highness landed in the West, with a Retinue scarce sufficient fer a private Gentleman: However, this did not discourage your faithful Clans from joining you; being still flattered that the promised Succours were at Hand, and would certainly arrive before there was any Occasion of coming to an Action.

"The Numbers of the faithful High-landers still increased, till they were strong enough to venture for the East. When I had the Honour of joining your Highness at Perth, I was then assured that the French were actually embarked, and waited only a fair Wind; and that a considerable Insurrection would presently appear in the North, and several other Parts of England. The Places of the several Risings were particularly mentioned, and we were made acquainted with the Names of many considerable Men in England, who had under-undertaken to appear openly in his Majesty's Interest.

- " We were assured, that his Most Christian Majesty would certainly detain the English Forces in Flanders; and would hinder the Dutch from fending any Troops into Great-Britain, by openly declaring your Royal Father his Ally. But how have we been disappointed in every Article of these Promises! The long promised Succours are. not to this Day embarked; the Brest Squadron, which we were made to believe was to conduct the Transports, has long fince sailed; but whether no Man knows; only we are certain, they could not be defigned for this Kingdom, for they have had both Time, and frequent: fair Winds to have brought them long before now.
- "His Most Christian Majesty has been so far from declaring himself openly in Favour of his Majesty, that his Minister at the Hague, peremptorily declared to the States, that his Master.

had no Hand in the Don Quixote Expedition, as he was pleased to term your Highness's Undertaking in Scotland. The Dutch were allowed, without Molestation, to fend over 6000 of those Forces which were made Prisoners by the French King's Arms: Troops which could be of no Use to the Dutch in their own Country by the Capitulation with France; Troops, which his Majesty of France could hinder being made Use of against us, by a Simple Declaration, that your Royal Father was his Ally; yet this was thought risking too much in Favour of a People who had ventured their All upon the Assurances, Promises, and Faith of the French King. And what makes this Disappointment sit the heavier upon us, is, that we are fure, if the Dutch had not fent these very identical Troops, they would have been very much embaraffed to have spared others, to perform their Engagements with the Elector of Hanover.

English Forces was as ill performed as the other, tho' that folely depended upon his Most Christian Majesty's General. They had it in their Power to have hinder'd every Man of them from returning to England; and either I am very ill inform'd, or they might have made most of them Prisoners, had the French General been as fanguine at the latter End of the Campaign, as at the Beginning of it. But they were allow'd to embark at Williamstadt, without Interruption, and are now almost all landed in England, without the Loss of a Transport; tho' the Possession of Oftend enabled his Most Christian Majesty, had he been so inclin'd, to have annoy'd them much.

"As to our Hopes from England, they have been as delusive as French Promises. When we arriv'd at Edinburgh, and had the Fortune to deseat Sir John Cope, our Assurances of a speedy Insurrection in England were renew'd, and the Days fix'd; but these, and many others, have passed by, and not the least Appearance of any such Design; tho' on the Faith of them, we continu'd unactive at Edinburgh. We might have proceeded Southward, while the Panick of Cope's Defeat was fresh upon People's Minds, and before the Elector's Forces could possibly be got together; but the Opportunity was lost, in Hopes, Sir, that your English Friends would declare for you, and supercede the Necessity of your loyal Clans going out of their own Country. But instead of any such Nunbers declaring for you, we were enter-tain'd with nothing but Affociations in all the Parts of England, in Defence of the Elector's Right; and not a Man from that Kingdom either join'd us in Scotland, or made any Interest to promote an Infurrection in your Favour, in their own Country.

"At last, Sir, the Scene was shifted, and new Conditions annex'd to old Promises. We were now told that the French Embarkation was delay'd 'till all the English Forces were drawn Northward; and that then an Invasion would be made in some Part of the South, now sup-supposed to be left destitute of Troops to defend them; and that the English in the North are now intimidated from Rising, by the Vicinity of the Enemy's Troops; but promise faithfully to join us, so soon as our Army sets Foot on English Ground. The general Disposition of the People is represented to us, as strongly in our Interest; and we are affur'd, that the Gates of all Towns will almost open of themselves to receive us; and that the People ardently wish to join us.

Notwithstanding the numerous Diappointments we met with from the first Beginning of this Assair, yet we were again persuaded to listen to delusive Promises. We march from Edinburgh and enter England; but instead of that Disposition to join us, which we were slatter'd with, we find those who cannot oppose us, sly us; and those who have the least Shelter from our Resentment, despise us, and treat us with the utmost Contempt.

"We were affur'd by a Gentleman, upon whose Veracity I always thought I might depend, and who now hears me, that the City of Carlisle we have just now pass'd, would open its Gates to us at our first Appearance; nay, that your Highness would have receiv'd the Keys of the City some Miles from the Place. But how we were disappointed, you all know, and with how much Contempt your Highness's Summons was treated.

The Value of the Place I know to be infignificant; nor do I believe the Possession of it would be of any real Service to the main Cause; yet the Repulse we have met with from that paultry Town, has this Influence upon me, to convince me, and I am assaid too late, that we are all made the Tools of France; a Nation, whose Faith like that of Carthage, is become a Proverb; and there is as little Dependence on the Promise of English Malecontents, whose Zeal for your Royal House these fifty Years past, has manifested itself in nothing else but Womanish

Womanish Railing, vain Boasting, and noisy Gasconades; their Affection for you is most elevated when in their Cups; and their Sense of Loyalty only conspicuous in the Absence of their Reason: Warm'd with Wine and a Tavern Fire, they are Champions in your Couse; but when cool, their Courage and Zeal, Sir, for you, and yours, evaporate with the Fumes of the Wine.

"Thus, Sir, I conclude that we have no Dependence on English Assistance; to what Purpose proceed we any further then? The Elector's Forces are by far superior to ours in Number, daily supplied with Money, Arms, Carriages and Ammunition; while we are destitute of all these. Your loyal High-landers will fight for you with as much Zeal and Courage as Men can boast of but shall we lead these brave Men to certain Destruction? Were the Engmy's Number but equal to us, or but exceeded us in a small Proportion. I doubt not, but from the Justiness of our Cause, and the Courage of our Men we might hope for Success; but when they are Three to One, and that we must expect to diminish rather than increase, I would think myself guilty of the grossest Barbarity, should I give my Voice to proceed any further into England, until such of this Nation as have promis'd to declare for the Cause, actually join us.

I enter'd, Sir, into this Affair, with as much Chearfulness as any Man here; I have contributed as much to support it as any; and I think, I may say without Offence, that I have as much to lose by the Event as most Men, and as little to hope. I shall venture my Life with Pleasure to promote his Majesty's Interest; yet I think I owe something to the Sasety of those People who have follow'd my Fortune: I think I am bound in Duty to prevent their Ruin, as much as in my Power, which I think inevitable if they proceed any surther; therefore I propose that we return to Carlise, and attempt to possess that Ci-

On the 13th the Rebels began to move back towards Carlifle, (by what Invitation I don't pretend to fay.) That Evening a Non-commission'd Officer went round the Walls, giving Orders that none should presume to fire except he saw something approach him, but nothing appearing, the Night was spent in Silence. In the Morning it was perceivable, that the Rebels had thrown up a considerable Entrenchment under the Covert of a Thorn Hedge, about two bundred Yards distant from the Wall on the South-East Side, on which the Fire from the Garrison was renew'd; but the Rebels made no Return, only in Derision, with their Bonnets, holding them up on the End of their Spades, except one Musquet that was fir'd from behind a Hay Stack. By this, and some other Threats, the Town was so intimidated, that in a Confultation, it was refolv'd to capitulate, which they did on the 14th; a Deputation was sent to the Pretender at Brampton, and the Town and Castle was deliver'd up on the 15th. I cannot positively say what the Articles of Capitulation confisted of, but it appears, that the Garrison were not to march out with the Honours of War, nor to carry any Pieces of Cannon with them.

On the 14th I was on the March with a Party from Whitehaven, intending to have thrown them into the Town; but it having capitulated before I reach'd it, prevented me sharing the Fate with them, in taking the Oath not to serve against the House of Stuart for a Year and a Day: which, if impos'd, I should have been unwilling to keep. We likewise had sent off several Cart Loads of Powder and Shot for the Use of the Garrison, which was sav'd from falling into the Hands of the Rebels; but they got all the Arms of the Invalids, Militia, and the Light-Horse of the two Countics.

At this Time Whitehaven had rais'd ten Companies of 50 Men each, for the Defence of the Place; and rais'd Breatt-Works before the Avenues leading to the Town, on which they planted Cannon; but on hearing that Carlifle, altho' a strong Garrison, had surrender'd. Whitehaven being an open Town, it was thought adviseable to dismount the Guns, and put them on board the Ships, that they might not fall into the Enemy's Hands; and many of the Houses and Shops were difrob'd, so that all the Horfes and Carts with many People, were employ'd for a Day and a Night, in. carrying Goods to be put on Board the Ships to be fent to Dublin, the Isle of Man, &cc. So low was the Rebels Credit in Whitehaven, that I saw an old Woman carrying away a large Basket full of Empty Bottles, rather than tout. them to their Highland Civility.

Lochiel, as I mention'd before, having had large Dealings with some of our Merchants for Timber, and there being a Dispute to the Amount of twelve or sourteen hundred Pounds betwixt there, it was imagin'd he would come and take by Force, what the Law would not give him a just Title to, which was the chief Reason

The 16th in the Morning, the Pretender was proclaim'd at Carlisse, and after the Proclamation was over, the Corporation walk'd in their Formalities to meet the Mock Prince, and conduct him into the City. Thus have I given you an Account of the Siege of Carlisse, and, for further Information shall refer you to the following Letter.

from Carlille, who generally complained of very ill Usage in that Place;
and though perhaps some of them may exaggerate Matters through Resentment, yet by all Accounts, the Conduct of that reputed Loyalty. An Officer in the said Militia, who is a Man of Fortune and good Credit, declares, that Carlille merits.

no greater Honour by its Surrender to the Rebels than Edinburgh did. The Garrison wholly consisted of the Cumberland and Westmoreland Militia, together with a few Voluntiers, and two imperfect Companies of Invalids. There were befides some Independent Companies of the Town, who would not assist the said Garrison, with more than two or three Men out of a Company; so that last Week they were obliged to he continually upon Duty, and the Week before one half relieved the other alternately. The Militia were also put to other great Hardships; many of the Inhabitants making them pay an exorbitant Price for Provisions; and they could not, for any Money, procure a fufficient Quantity of Straw to lie upon the Walls. Captain Wilson, Son of David Wilson, Esq; Member of Parliament for Westmoreland, paid One Pound Ten Shillings for the Use of a Cobler's Stall under the Walls. Upon the first Approach of the Rebels, the Garrison gave out that they were 3000 strong; upon which the Rebels durst not attempt the City immediately, but went forward towards Brampton:

ton; from whence they returned on the 13th. The Garrison kept continually firing until that Evening, when they were order'd to desist, and they continu'd so all Night, when on the 14th in the Morning it was observed, that the Rebels had entrench'd themselves before the Town, on which the Garrison renew'd their Fire, until they were order'd by the Managers of the Town to desist, and come off the Walls; by which it may be suppos'd, the Terms of Capitulation were agreed on. The Duke of Perth, with his Division, were the first of the Rebels that enter'd Carlisle, which they did on the 15th, the Pretender being then seven Miles from the City. They made the Garrison to swear never to appear in Arms any more against them, and Perth shaking the Men by the Hands, told them they were brave Fellows, and offer'd them Money to enlift with him. The Rebels have taken above two bundred good Horses, and all the Arms from the Militia, besides 1000 Stand lodged in the Castle. They also found a rich Booty in the Castle; the People of the Country round about, having K brought brought thither for Safety, the most valuable of their Effects. One of their Chiefs was kill'd by the Fire from the Walls on the 10th. The Town capitulated on the 14th, and on the 15th about Ten o'Clock in the Morning it was given up, and the Rebels enter'd the City. Several of the Militia endeavour'd to escape, without being oblig'd to take the Oath, as also did some of Cope's Men, who had deserted from the Rebels, one of which they threatned should be shot as an Example to deter others.

As foon as Marshal Wade had Intelligence at Newcastle, of the Rout which the Rebels had taken, he resolv'd, notwithstanding the Severity of the Season, to march from thence to the Relief of Carlisse; and accordingly on the 16th, the Army began to move for that Purpose. His Excellency intended to have begun his March as soon as it was light, but moving from the Lest, the Swiss Troops had the Van, which delay'd their Motions for several Hours, to the great Prejudice of the Expedition; for for the Weather being extremely cold, attended with a deep Snow and hard Frost, the Troops suffer'd much. The Major Generals Howard and Oglethorp, and the Brigadiers Cholmondeley Mordaunt, marched on Foot, at the Head of the Infantry, to encourage the Soldiers. It was past Twelve o Clock at Night and very dark, before the front Line got into the Camp at Ovington; and tho' the Soldiers marched with great Chearfulness, yet as the Roads were excessive bad and full of Ice, it was apprehended that many of the last Column might drop through Fatigue, and therefore the Major Generals Husk and Oglethorp sent out Countrymen with Lights and Carts to assist the Reur-Guard, and bring up the tired Men, in which Service they were affiduously employed until Morning. On the 17th Marshal Wade continued his March to Hexham, where he arrived with his first Line about Four o'Clock in the Afternoon; but the Rear did not come up uhtil Midnight. His Excellency having Intelligence that Carlifle had furrender'd, K 2

resolved to march back to Newcastle, which he accordingly did; but the Weather continuing bad, and the Roads being almost impassible, he did not arrive there with his Forces until the 22d, and even then they were so exceedingly satigued, that had it not been for the peculiar Care taken of them by the People of Newcastle, who shewed the utmost Zeal and Affection in providing them good Quarters, they must have suffer'd much more by their cold and dirty March.

This Invasion of the Rebels having thrown all the Northern and Western Parts of the Kingdom into Consusion, Directions were given for forming another Army in Lancashire, under the Command of Sir John Ligonier, Knight of the Bath, a Man of great Experience, Courage and Conduct. The following new rais'd Troops, viz. The Dukes Montague's and Kingston's Horse; the Duke of Ancaster's, the Earls Berkley's Hallifax's, Cholmondley's, and the Lords Gower's and Herbert's Regiments of Foot, together with eight old Regiments, ments, were assigned for this Services and ordered to march for Staffordshire. The City of Chester was also put in a Posture of Desence, in a surprizing short Time, by the Care and Vigilance of the Earl of Cholmondley. At Liverpool likewise, all necessary Precautions were taken, and the Inhabitants of the Town shewed all the Spirit and Resolution that could be desired.

The Inhabitants of Liverpool, sensible of what Dangers their Zeal in the Cause of Liberty might expose them to, they were justly alarmed at the rapid Progress of the Rebels, and accordingly the Magistrates, with the principal Merchants and others of the Town, consulted proper Means how to provide for their Safety. The Result of their Deliberation was, to petition his Majesty to raise a Regiment of Foot, which they readily obtain'd, and immediately began to raise able Men. This Body, when completed, confisted of near 700, whom, at their own Expence, they K 3 cloathed cloathed, and paid whilst in the Services The Field-Officers were appointed by the King, and the Command given to the Honourable Colonel Graham, an experienc'd Officer. To this Service, the Corporation (befides the worthy Example they fet their Fellow-Townsmen, by their own private generous Subscriptions) voted, at two different Times, 2000 /. Here I cannot forbear observing, the Chearfulness and Alacrity with which every one contributed to the forwarding this noble Design, since even the poorer Sort did not refuse to cast in their Mite; and the Rich were not flack in giving according to their Abilities. The next Point to be consider'd was, how to dispose of the Regiment; this caused a Difference of Opinion: Many were for fortifying the Town, and employing these Men as a Garrifon wothers argued from the Situation of the Place, that this was scarce practicable. However, upon mature Deliberation, and reflecting, that to provide for their own private Security, while that of the Publick lay at Stake, was mean 4 11.2 3 mean and ungenerous; and therefore unanimously agreed to fend them as a Reinforcement to the Royal Army. Accordingly, after having broke down several Bridges, &c. and thereby embarraised and greatly retarded the Rebels, they join'd the King's Forces, under the Command of the Duke, and were present at the Siege of Carlisse. His Royal Highness was surprized to find them so well disciplined, considering the short Time they had been raised, and honour'd them with some handsome Compliments on that Account.

In the mean while, the Corporation knowing that the Northern Counties had been severely plunder'd by the Rebels, and searing least the Royal Army should be much distress'd for Provisions, resolv'd to send a Supply; and holding a Consultation of what Quantity they could raise, fent two Gentlemen of their own Body as Committeen of their with the Offers of Bread and cother other Necessaries during that Time; the Former of which he was graciously pleas'd to accept. After the Reduction of Carlifle, his Royal Highness having no further Occasion for their Service, disinis'd the Liverpool Blues (for so they were called) with Honour; and in two Letters wrote by Sir Everard Faulkener, by his Command, was pleated to thank the Magistracy and Gentlemen of the Town, for their Zeal and Affection for the present Government, which they had so signally demonstrated.

While they were thus taking Care for the Publick Good, they were not entirely unfolicitous about their own particular Security: They confider'd that many Papifts and ill-affected Persons liv'd among them, and to prevent any Distinguances these People might possibly occasion, they raised six Companies of seventy Men each for their Desence. These they arm'd and disciplin'd, and made Use of them in the Night as a Guard. They were Officer'd by the principal principal Gentlemen of the Town, and thew'd great Courage and Firmness of Mind; of which I will, to conclude the. Account of this Place, give a remarkeble Instance. While the Pretender's Army were at Wigan, it was expected they would pay a Visit to Liverpool; and one Day there was an Account brought that they actually were marching that Way. Hereupon the Gentlemen affembled together, and arm'd as many Men as they could, besides the fix Companies, with a View to defend the Town. Towards Evening they sent out a Party on Horseback to reconnoisse the Encmy, who on their Return found the Avenues of the Town guarded; and the lower Stories of the Houses illuminated, with Men planted in the up-per ones in Readiness to fire, if a Body of the Rebels should enter the Town: However, on their being affur'd that there was no Appearance of Danger, and that the Rebels had not mov'd from Wigan, the Apprehensions of the People were dissipated, and every Thing perfectly quieted. Tho' this was only a mere mere Preparation, and the Valour of the Men not put to the Trial; yet the Ardour they express'd, and the Readiness they were in, if there was Occafion to engage the Enemy, and not to fuffer their Town to be plunder'd without Resistance, sufficiently evidence their Strength of Refolution, and undoubted Fortitude of Mind. There was no Regiment in the Campaign that made a better Appearance than the Liverpool Blues; their Officers were a Set of Soldier-like Gentlemen, tho' they had never been bred in the military Way, being mostly Gentlemen, Tradesmen, &c. yet had acquired a very good Discipline, having thrown up their Trade and Merchandize for a Time, and ventur'd their Lives, their Fortunes, and every Thing that was dear to them, in Defence of their King and Country. Such Men ought to be had in the greatest Esteem, by all true Lovers of our happy Establishment.

At this Time the Magistrates of Liverpool remov'd all the Powder out of their their Magazine on board some Ships in the Harbour, as did many of the Merchants and Traders their best Effects, to prevent their falling into the Hands of the Rebels; they likewise remov'd all the Boats and small Crast from the Shore, and put them under the Care of the Ships of War lying in the Road; at which Time his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland was pleas'd to send them the following Letter:

LITCHFIELD, Nov. 29.

Gentlemen of the Magistracy of LIVER-POOL,

THE Proofs of Fidelity and Zeal which you have given upon this important Occasion, and of which Col. Graham has made a very exact Report, are, as they ought to be, very agreeable to me; and I must earnestly recommend to you to persevere in the same laudable and honourable Course, and at the same Time let you know, how much it will be for the King's and Nation's Service, that you should not be induc'd, either by Intrea-

Intreaties or Menaces, to call back your Boats and Vessels of what kind soever. which you have fent off, and put under the Protection of his Majesty's Ships of War, but that you leave them there, in the Persuasion the utmost Care will be had of them, and which, by this Messenger, I recommend in the strongest Manner, to the commanding Officer of those Ships. I am very forry your Courage and good Affections are put to this fevere Trial, and that you are expos'd to so great Inconveniences; but I hope the Time of your Deliverance draws nigh, and that by the Bleffing of the Almighty, those infolent Plunderers will very soon receive the just Reward of their Villainies. This Army will formed in a Day or two, when I shall endeavour to pursue such Courses as will most effectually contribute to that End. I can't help taking Notice to you, how much I am pleas'd with the Account which Col. Graham gives me of your Regiment: Be affur'd, I shall be glad to do any Thing that may contribute to your Ease and Contentment; and to give you you the most effective Marks of my Esteem; and that I am, truly,

Your good Friend,

WILLIAM.

By His Royal Highness's Command;

Everard Faulkener.

In my Proposals I only promised to give a Description of the Towns throwhich I passed with his Majesty's Army; but as * Liverpool has distinguished itself by its most unshaken Loyalty, in this Time of Trial, I thought proper to give a short Description of this Mercantile Town, by Way of Note.

The

^{*} Liverpool, or Lirpool, is not a very antient Town, but is very neat and populous, the People very palite, courteous and well-bred. It has three large Churchet, that call'd St. George's, is a very curious Piece of modern Architecture, from the Top of which you have a View of the Town and adjacent Country, and towards the Sea, a most agreeable Prospect of the Ships in the Roa

The following contains the Route of the Robel Army from Carline to Derby.

At the same Time when they set out, I did also, in order to reconnoitre them, and go to the King's Army.

They took Leave of Carlifle, flush'd with their Success; some of them being well

Road and Harbour. There are also four Meetinghouses for Dissenters, viz. Two for the Presbyterians, one for the Quakers, and one for the Baptists, all which live in perfect Harmony with each other; a Virtue deterving to be imitated. There was also at the Time of the Rebellion a large Mass House, which the Mob could not be refrained from pulling down. At the Head or Extremity of four Streets, which are clean and well paved, stands the Exchange, where from Eleven to One o'Clock, every Day, Merchants, and Masters of Ships meet for Business; over which is the Town-Hall, where, the Mayor and Aldermen meet, to regulate the Affairs of the Corporation. It is the most flourishing Sea-Port Town in these Parts, and it may be justly said to vie with the City of Briffel, the fecond Port in England, its Cultoms being encreas'd eight or ten Fold within these formal ears past; and tho' the Town is faid to be above three Limes as large, as it was in the Beginning of the King James's Reign, yet they continue still to build erapide rably, being well provided with Clay for making of which there are many stately Houses raised. And promise Softmale area.

well mounted and accourred, with the Spoil of our Country Trainbands, made a tolerable good Figure; but for the most Part they were a very despicable Mob;

The Inhabitants are mostly Merchants, who drive a raft Trade, with good Success and large Stocks, to all the Northern Parts of the World, particularly Hamburgh, Norway and the Baltick; to the British Colonies in America; to Guinea, Ireland, France, Spain, Portugal and Italy; so that there is no Trade but that of Turkey. Greenland and the East-Indies, in which they are not concerned. As it imports almost all Kinds of foreign Goods, it has consequently a large Inland Trade, and almost equals that to Ireland and Wales, with Bristol; for as Briftof trades chiefly to the South and Well Parts of Ireland, from Deblin in the East, and to Galloway West, this Town hath all the Trade of the East and North Shores, from Dublin to Landonderry. As Briffel has the Trade of South Wales, and the South-West Counties in England, and some North of it as high as Fridgmorth and Shrewsberry; - Liverpool has North Wales, and all the Northern Counties in England, befides what Goods it sends to Chefbire and Staffordfoire, by the new Navigation of the Rivers Mersey, Weaver and Dane. This Port has wet Docks, in which, by the Help of Flood-Gates, Ships of the largest Burthen may ride a float when the Tide is out; I saw them this Summer making a Dry-Dock, into which they carry Ships of large Burthen, and keep them dry at High-Water. Here they have brought the Delit and Earthern-Ware to very great Perfection, with which they drive a confiderable Trade. Their Delft Ware very much resembles China. and - and had it not been for the Arms they carried, it might well be thought that there was a Famine in Scotland, and that they came to England to beg; but they foon undeceived us, letting us know they were sturdy Beggars, committing all Manner of Rapines as they ran along the Country; and their Chiefs threaten'd the Towns where they came with Military Execution, if their Demands were not comply'd with, viz. in raising Contributions and collecting the Excise.

November 20, after leaving a Garrison in Carlisle, this formidable Army, or rather a plundering Mob, to the Number of about 6700 took their Rout in three Columns by Way of Penrith (fixteen Miles from Carlisle, of which I shall give a Description hereafter) to * Kendal, where

^{*} Kendal, called also Kirby Candele, i.e. a Church in the Valley, fituated on the River Can, which runs round half of the Town, over which are three Bridges of where on the 22d their Vanguard arrived, headed by Col. Stuart, confisting of 120 Horse, mostly Gentlemen, and 60 Foot; the Quarter-Masters took a of Stone with several Arches. It is the largest Town. in the County of Westmoreland, and is enriched by, the Industry of the Townsmen and the Woollen Manufacture, with which they have drove a confiderable Trade throughout England ever fince the Reign of Edward III. As early as Richard II, and Henry IV. special Laws were enacted on purpose for regulating Kendal Cloths. Queen Elizabeth erected it into a Corporation by the Name of Aldermen and Burgesles; and King James I. incorporated it with a Mayor, Recorder, Town Clerk, twelve Aldermen, twentyfour Burgeffes, and two Attorneys; of whom the Mayor, Recorder, and two Senior Alderma are always Justices of the Peace. It is of Note also for the Manufacture of Cottons, Druggets, Serges, Hats, Worsted and Yarn Stockings, &c. There are seven trading Companies belonging to the Town, wire. Mercers, Sheermen, Cordwainers, Tanners, Glovers, Taylors and Fewterers, who have each their Halt. Altho' this Town is fituated nigh a very hilly, mountainous Country (refembling the Highlands of Scotland; yet it has a very plentiful Market for all Kinds' of Provisions and Woollen Yarn, which the young Women (who are not so handsome as those in Lancafbire) bring in large Bundles under their Arms to fell. Just opposite the Town, on the East Side of the River. upon a Mount, stands the Ruins of an old Caitle, which was formerly of great Note. From Kendal to Lancafer is 16 computed Miles.

Lift from the Constables of all the Lodg. ings in the Town; and after reviewing all the Houses, deliver'd the Billets themselves. The 23d came in the Lords Murray, Kilmarnock, Ogilvy, Nairn, &c. with their Companies, most of which were quarter'd in Strietland-Gate. The 24th in the Evening came in the Highland Clans, with their pretended Prince in their Front; he had walk'd from Penrith that Day, which is twenty Miles, and was quarter'd on Thomas Shepherd, Esq. Soon after came in the Duke of Perth with 200 Men, who convoy'd their Artillery and Baggage. The Morning after they first came to Town, they made a Proclamation in the Name of their Mock Prince, that the Country-People who brought any Sort of Provisions to Town, both their Persons and Horses should be safe; which was observ'd for that and the next Day until Night, when the Rebels went out in Parties, took several Horses, and plunder'd the Country in a shameful Manner: These and several other Outrages they committed on Sunday; which so chagrin'd grin'd the Country People and Inhabitants of the Town, that on Monday, when the main Body of the Rebels went out (tho' there were upwards of 1000 in the Town) they attack'd feveral of the Horse-Stealers, amongst them were two of their Hussers on Horseback, whom they immediately dismounted, and retook their Horses.

Their Huffars were most of them young Men dress'd in close Plaid-Waistcoats, and large Fur-Caps; but having very bad Horses, it occasion'd them to exert all their Vigour in bringing them to a Gallop, tho' very often the poor Beafts, notwithstanding the Severity used by their Riders, would drop that Speed and take one more fuitable to their Age and Infirmities. If the common Men got a Belly-full of Victuals. they were not very curious about the Goodness of it; and as to Lodging, if a little Straw was provided to lie upon, they were intirely easy. The Excise they collected here for fix Weeks.

On the 24th, the Van of the Rebel Army continu'd, their March by the Way of Burton (a Town half Way between Kendal and Lancaster) to Lancaster, where they demanded the publick Money; but I shall leave them until I give you an Account, that on the 22d of November, his Majesty's Ship the Sheerness brought into Deal a French Privateer, call'd the Soliel, with a great Number of Arms, design'd for the Use of the Rebels, together with 22 Officers and 60 private Men, exclusive of the Ship's Crew.

The 26th, the last Column of the Rebels enter'd Lancaster, in such Haste, that they only stay'd to eat some Bread and

and Cheese standing in the Streets, their first Column being then at Preston. From * Lancaster to Preston is twenty Miles.

Lancaster, the County Town, so call'd from the Ri ver Lon. (on the Side of which it stands, near its Mouth) gives Name to the County. 'Tis the antient Longovicum, where the Lieutenant of Britain kept a Company in Garrifon, called the Longovici. There are sometimes found the Coms of Roman Emperors, especially where the Benedictine Friars had once a Cloyster, which Camden says, was the Area of an antient City, that in the Year 1322 was Lurnt to the Ground by the Scots. After this they began to build nearer the River, on the Side of a Green Hill, on the Summit of which flands a fair and strong Castle, and upon the Top of it, at one Corner, is a square Tower called John a Gaunt's Chair, from whence there is a pleasant Prospect of the adjacent Country, and the Course of the River Lon; and towards the Sea you have a most extensive View, even to the Isle of Man. Close by the Castle is a large handlome Church, the only one in Town, and a very neat Presbyterian Meeting House. At the Bottom of the Hill there's a very fine Bridge over the Lon, to which Ships of Burthen come; and on the steepest Part of it, there hangs a Piece of very antient Roman Wall, now called Weary Well; in digging a Cellar, several Cups have been found used in Sacrifices. King John confirmed to the Burgesses all the Liberties he had granted to those of Bristol; and Edward the III. granted to the Mayor and Bailiffs, that Pleas and Sessions should be held here, and no where elie in the County. It is at prefent a populous thriving Corporation, trading to the West-Indies, with Hard-Ware and Woollen Manufactures, and in Return import Sugars, Rum, Gotton, &c. The.

The 27th they were at Gar/lang, which is a good thorough-fare Town, half Way betwixt Lancafter and Preston, where the same Day I was going, but that I met with some Acquaintance at Lancaster Town-end, who told me there was not a Pollibility for me to pass that Evening, for that the Road was full of straggling Robels, who robbed all' that fell into their Hands; so I returned to my Quarters at the Sun in Lancaster, where the Magistrates and Gentlemen had taken Care for my Safety, by directing me where to call upon People well affected to the Government, who always were free and willing to give me the best Advice how to proceed. On the 28th I got to Garstang (being my first Stage) about Nine in the Morning; and as directed, I alighted at Capt. Gardner's at the Royal Oak. At my first setting out to reconnoitre the Rebels, I purposed to pass and repass them in the Road in the Station of a Trader, going about my own private Affairs; for which I was provided with Bills of Parcels, Letters of Orders, Er. in case I should be search'd 1. . /

fearch'd by them, to make it more evidently appear I was the real Person pretended to be: 'But being advised not to venture among them, least I should find it a great Difficulty to acquit myself of their Enquiry, as they might be too peneurating not to fee through fuch a Difguile; and finding my Defires could not be readily fulfill'd this Way, I resolved to take some other Method, which should be full as prejudicial as the former, viz. in taking up their Stragglers; and being informed that there were two Town which happened to stay their Command, I resolved to go and take them; for which Purpose I borrowed a Fuzee and a Case of Pistols; when being shewed to their Quarters, I immediately went in and made them Prisoners, and after difarming them I supply'd myself with their Arms, and committed them to the Care of a Constable, who, with his Guard, conducted them fafe to Lancaster Castle. In the Road to Preston, I picked up another Straggler following his Company; and within two Miles of that Town I met the Rebel-Post, returning with

with Dispatches from their Army to Scotland, whom I also made Prisoner, and took from him 49 Letters. I conducted him and the said Straggler to * Preston, intending to deliver them to the

* Preflon, or Priests-Town, so called from the Religious, who were formerly here in great Numbers. As it was first ornamented with the Beauty of Holiriess, to it you may add Female Beauty, with which it now thines, the Ladies being very agreeable, and a large Number of Gentry live here. This Town is fituated on a clean, delightful Eminence, having handsome Streets, and Variety of Company, who liking the Situation of the Place, are induced to board here; it being one of the prettieft Retirements in England, and may for its Beauty and Largeness compare with most Cities; and for the Politeness of the Inhabitants, none can excel. 'Tis incorporated and govern'd by a Mayor, Recorder, eight Aldermen, seventeen Common Council Men, and a Town-Clerk. It was incorporated by King Henry II. and had Privileges and large Immunities granted and confirmed by several of his Successors. There are Traces of a Roman Military Way over the Common, from Rib-thester to the Mouth of the Ribble, the Name of a fine River (a large Stone Bridge being extended over it) which plentifully supplies the Town with Fish. It is vulgarly called Proud Prefton on Account of its being a Place of the best Fashion. 'Tis the Residence of the Officers belonging to the Chancery of the County Palatine, Here is a handfome Church and M a Townthe Magistrates; but they would neither receive the Prisoners nor Letters, fearing the Consequence of so rash an Undertaking, the Rebels being but just gone out of the Town; and as I had brought those two Rebels into it, they obliged me to carry them out; telling me, that amongst the Crowd in the Streets, there were several who had wore white a Town Hall, where the Corporation meet for Bulk pels, and the Gentlemen and Ladies for Balls and Afsemblies. Here is likewise a spacious Market-Place in the Middle of which stands a fine Obelifk; the Streets are neatly paved, and the Houses well built of Brick, and cover'd with Slate. This Town being a great Thorough fare, there are many commodious lans for the Reception of Travellers, but one in particular, known by the Sign of the Black Bull, kept, by Mrs. Charley: I never met with a better, for all kind of good Eatables, proper, Attendance, civil Ulage, and a moderate, Charge; and where you may have all Things done after an elegant grand Manner, if required. The Trade of the Town is pretty confiderable for Linnen, Yarn, Cleth, Cotton, &c. And, is remarkable for the Defeat of Duke Hamilton, rear it, in 1648, when he came to refene King Charles I, from his Imprisonments, and also for the Defeat of the English Rebels, who took up Arms against King George I. on November 12, 1715. After they were secured; I sled a cross the Country, intending to have gone to Ribchester, with the Letters, expecting to have been pursued by the Rebell Hussars; but without my Knowledge, the Gentlemen of Presson had taken Care for my Sasety, by planting a Guard upon the Bridge, with strict Orders to let no Person pass, to prevent the Rebels from having Notice of what had happen'd until I was got out of their Reach. In the Evening I met with a Countryman, of whom I ask'd the Way, and desir'd him, that if he met any of the Rebels enquiring after me, to turn them a contrary Way; which he promised to do; and hinted, that it was not fafe to proceed to Ribchester, but on the contary advised me to make my Way for Clithero. Before I got into the right Road for that Place, I came to a deep Brook, over which was a long Stone laid for Foot-Travellers, and in riding over it, one of the hinder Feet of my Horse slipped, and we both fell backwards into a Brook of Water, where I was well dipp'd; but my Horse and self, after a little Toil, got out without any other Damage. Having no Time to lose, I immediately mounted, the Water dripping plentifully from my Cloaths, but my Boots continued full, and my Fire-Arms were likewise wet; which render'd me incapable of making little Refistance, in case I had been closely pursued. In this Plight I continued for some Hours, the Night being very cold and frofty, and knew not the Road until I came to a House, where I hired a Guide, who conducted me over Longridge Fell, to Clithero, where I arrived about Ten the same Night, and had the Letters opened by a Justice of Peace. Upon

Upon Bramination, there appeared little in them of Consequence, except boasting Epithets of Favours, which they had never received, alledging, among other Things, that the People of Lanaghire had joined them, that their Army was encreased to 24,000 Men, and that they were going directly for London, without Opposition: Two of thesis deserves particular Notice, and shall be given in their own Words, via.

These Letters, if they had gone to Scotland, would have been of bad Confequence, in spiriting up the People to Rebellion, especially those who waited to see the Issue of Things; for all the fore-mention'd 49 Letters, whatever Stile they were writ in, agreed in one Particular, of their going directly to London: Such an Infinuation could not have fail'd of making some think it next to Madness in them to stay behind, and not to follow their Friends to so fine a Place as that huge City, and get a Part of the rich Plunder that was to be had there. When the Rebels were at Lancaster going South, amongst the Multitude which quartered at the Sun, there happened to be two Lowland Gentlemen; the one was complaining of his Horse, which in some Respect did not please him, to which the other answer'd, there were monny guid Hors's in London; the

the first replied, I ken that right week, we'l ilke' a ene get a Hors in enst we woon there, and monny a guid Thing beside.

The Rebels were at * Wigan on the 28th, when a Party of them went thro' Leigh, and an advanced Party enter'd Manchester the same Day.

Wiran is a fair built Town in the high Post Road, pleasantly situated near the Rise of a Rivulet called Dugles. Tis a Corporation erected by King James I. It has a stately Church, said to be the best endow'd in the County, and the Rector of it is always Lord of the This Town is famous for its Manufacture of Coverlids, Rugs, Blankets, and other Sorts of Bedding, Brass, Copper, &c. Likewise for extraordinary Coal Mines, which lie contiguous to it, on the Estate of Sir Roger Bradshaw, Bart, which they call Kennel Coal, yielding in burning a very clear Flame, and confumes to a white Ash, like Wood. Of these Coals they make many curious Toys, it bearing to be turn'd and polith'd, so as to look like black Marble or Jet, being formed into Snuff-Boxes, Nutmeg-Boxes, Candle-Sticks, Salts, &c. by one Tootell, a Turner, who lives here: It cannot be work'd far distant from where it is got, by Reafon of the Hardness which it will acquire through Time when conveyed to distant Places. o'Clock in the Afternoon, who tode upto the Bull's-Head, on Horses with Hempen Halters (a just Emblem of what the deserved) were they dined; after Dinner they best up for Recruits, and in less than an Hour listed about thirty. They were likewise joined by several others, some of desperate Fortunes, who were modelled into what they called the Manchester Regiment; mostly People of: the lowest Rank, and the vilest Principles; which occasioned him, who called himself the Duke of Perth, to say, ' That if the Devil had come a recruiting, and profer'd a Shilling more than his Prince, they would have prefered? ' the former;' which so Doubt was a great Disappointment to them; for they had flattered themselves with the Hopes. of a confiderable Infurrection in their: Favour.

On the 29th, a confiderable Body of Robel Horse enter'd Manchester, about Ten in the Forenoon, and the Bellman was sent about the Town, requiring all such as had any Publick Money in their Hands

Hands to bring it in. About Two in the Afternoon the Pretender, at the Head of a Party of pick'd Highlanders, and in their Dress, marched into Manchester; he took up his Quarters at Mr. Dickinson's, in Market-street-Lane, and was proclaimed in Form. In the Evening the Bellman was again sent about to preder the Town to be illuminated; and at Night the Rear of the Army arrived, where they continued for two Days.

On the 30th I got to Richdale, where I very narrowly escaped being taken by a Party of the Rebels, who were there to demand the Militia Arms, Land-Tax, &c. near the End of the Town I met with some Men that had made their Escape, who told me the Rebels were in Pursuit of them to take their Horses; on which I turn'd back with what Speed I could make, until I got to a Mill; the Miller shewed me a Path leading out of the Road to a Village, where one Dr. Bentley lived, to which I hasted, stripp'd my Horse, hid the Furniture up in the Hay-Lost, and drew off my Boots, that if the Rebels chanced to see me, I might pretend that I lived there; by which I In the Dufk of the Evening I set forwards towards Roebdale, and in my Way thither met with a Man, who told me, he had been round the adjacent Country, to order the Arms to be bro't in, and fent to the Rebels next Day; onwhich I resolved they should not have mine, so threw them over a Garden-Hedge, near the End of the Bridge. where I went late in the Night, with my. Landlord, and brought them from: thence; and by the Resolution of Ro-bert Entwisse, Esq; and some other Gentlemen, the Arms were not fent to the Rebels as agreed on. At Rachdale I met with P M a Gentlemen well affected to the Government, who gave me a List of the Road to Macklesfield, by which Direction I got safe, altho' not without Difficulty. The Rebels carried off all the Horses they could find about Manchester,, not excepting their Friends, who, if they follicited on that Score, got for Answer, 'That if they had a Regard for P. C., fure they, they would not refuse so small a Trisle as a Horse for his Service. They also borrowed all the Shoes and Boots they could meet with, so that many were deprived of their Understandings.

On the 30th, an advanced Guard of the Rebels marched, Part for Stockport, (by fome called Stopford, being a Market Town on the Edge of Chefiire, noted for its Silk-Mills and a very antient Church; fituated on the Banks of the River Merfey; over it is a neat Stone-Bridge, which divides Laneashire and Cheshire,) and the rest for Knotsford. The said Bridge being broke down by the Liverpool Blues, (already taken Notice of) they cross'd over above it.

The next Day a Party of the Rebels, mostly mounted on Horses taken at Preson-pans, were at Ashton, receiving the Excise, Land-Tax; &c. I was there that Evening, and took Advice of the Reverend Mr. Penny, how, to proceed. It is very remarkable, that in

in their whole Progress, no Discoveries could be made of the Routs they intended to take, because they were never given out above an Hour before their March began, and neither Officers nor Soldiers knew over Night where theywere to go, or what Service they had to perform the next Morning; which Secreey, in all Probability, preserved them from Destruction; since however formidable they might be at a Distance. it was the Opinion of others as wellas myfelf, that they were very far from making a dreadful Appearance. In the mean Time the Duke's Army was forming in Staffordshire; for upon the Approach of the Rebels, it was resolved that his Royal Highness should be fent down to command the Forces in that Part of the Kingdom; and accordingly he arrived at Litchfield on the 28th of November; his Troops at that Time being canton'd, with a Line of Cavalry in their Front, from Tamworth to Stafford, making a very fine Appearance, being well furnished with Artillery, and whatever else was requisite for

for the Service. As for the Forces of which his Army confifted, I will only fay, that the following was looked upon at that Time to be the most authentic Account.

An exact L I S T of bis Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland's Army.

The Army under the Command of Field-Marshal Wade began to move towards the latter End of the Month, the N Cavalry

Cavalry having reached to Darlington and Richmond by the 25th; and on the 29th, the Marshal with the Infantry was at Persbridge, from whence he proposed to march for Weaterby, and there to canton the whole Army in the adjacent Villages; looking upon this as the most convenient Situation, either for distreffing the Enemy, in Case they should attempt to return, or for co-operating with his Royal Highness's Forces, as Occasion should require. By these well concerted Dispositions, all Apprehensions of Danger were in a great Measure taken off, and the Country People began every where to recover their Spirits, and put themselves in the best Posture of Defence they could, in Case of their being visited by these Highland Invaders. Such was the Situation of Things at the Close of November, 1745.

The Inhabitants of Scarborough being fensibly alarmed at the rapid Progress of the Rebels, and the Danger their Town was exposed to, if visited (they having some Time before subscrib'd 220 l.

320 1. for the Service of the Government) on the 22d of November chose out of their Body a Committee of twelve Gentlemen to confider how this Money should be applied, who unanimously agreed to lay it out in fortifying the Place; which they immediately fet about with so much Alacrity, and without Distinction, under the Direction of Mr. Vincent, their Engineer, that in three Weeks Time, with the Labour of 1000 Hands daily, raised Breast-Works and Batteries before the Avenues leading to the Town, from the South to the North Seas, and planted thereon 99 Pieces of Cannon, which were taken from the Shipping in the Harbour, and had in Readiness 2000 Small Arms, and Plenty of Ammunition; which with the Affistance of the Sailors, who seldom fail in their Undertakings, were determined to defend the Town for the Honour of the Government and their own Safety,

I will now return to the Progress of the Rebels, so long as they continued to persist in their wild Notion of marching South.

South. They were very industrious in collecting the Excise, and that none might escape them, they had ordered Officers to go about the Country in Foot-Walks: I got Information of one of these Sort, carrying his Bag on his Shoulder, whom I purfued, intending if I came up with him, to have assumed the Office of Collector-General for that Time. I fet out from Ashton with a Guide, who conducted me to Samuel Chetham, Esq; of Mellor, on the Edge of Derbysbire, one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for that County; he fent a Servant with me to Mr. Royle's at Bullock-Smithey, where I left my French Fuzee. Thus I kept to the Left of the Rebels in the Day, having fometimes a View of them, and the Quarters they left in the Day, I always came to at Night; by which I obtained the most authentic Accounts, as well from the best Judges as from my own Observations, of their Proceedings from Place to Place.

December 1. The Mock Prince, with the main Body of his Army and all his Artil-

Artillery, entered Macclesfield. The Afternoon was spent in scaling and putting in Order their Fire-Arms, as if expecting a Battle foon to come on; but what was the real Intention of the Deputy Pretender and his Council of War it is impossible to say, since it was first be-lieved they intended to have marched into Wales; but perceiving if they should accomplish that Scheme, they would certainly be shut up there, and reduced to great Necessities in a mountainous Country, with which they were not acquainted, they abandon'd this Project as impracticable. On the 2d, as their Rear was marching out of Macclesfield, one of their Boys wanting to buy a Cap, was shewn to a Shop by one that had deserted from the King's Army, who drew a Dirk from the Boy's Side, with which he stabb'd him in the Thigh, and running through the Angel Inn, escaped backwards; upon which Part of the Rebels returned, threatening to burn the Town; and as he who committed the Fact could not be found, they carried away, as Hostages, the Land-N 3 lord

lord of the Angel, and the Master of the House adjoining the Shop where the Fact was committed. This shews with what Injustice their arbitrary Power was executed, often punishing the Innocent for the Guilty. That Day I was accompanied by Mr. Royle's Son from Bullock-Smithey, to within half a Mile of Macclessield, when being informed

Macchifield, or Maxfield, gives Name to a spacious Forest on the Edge of Derbysbire, which is water'd (besides other Rivers) by the Bolin, on which the Town stands. 'Tis an ancient, large Town, one of the fairest in the County, and was erected into a Borough by King Edward III. It is govern'd by a Mayor, and enjoys great Privileges and Jurisdictions, by Virtue of the Court, and the Liberties of the Forest. The Church, or rather Chapel, (it being in the Parish of Presbury, is a fair Edifice, with a very high Tower Steeple, and a College adjoining to it, with Monuments of the Savages, and other Persons of Note. There is also an Oratory in it belonging to the Earls Rivers, where are two Brass Plates, on one of which, is a Promise of 26,000 Years, 26 Days Pardon, for thying five Pater-nofters and five Aves. Their chief Manufacture is Buttons. The Free-School is of an-antient Foundation. It first gave Tit'e of Earl to Lord Gerrard, of Brandon, in the Reign of K. Char. II. but new to one of the Tellers of the Exchequer, the Right Hon. George Parker, Son of Thomas Parker, who was steated Earl of Mucclesfield, and Lord High Chancellor, by King George I. that the Rebels were all gone out of; the Town, and thinking that I was quite fafe, he left me; but as some of the Rebels had returned on the above Occafion, I rode into the Town too foon, and alighting at the Angel Inn, narrowly efcaped being taken. I immediately applied to the Mayor, who took proper Care for my Safety; but not chusing to trust much to their Highland Civility, I was afraid of falling into their Clutches, being fensible they would be more fond of meeting with the Person who had intercepted their Letters, than the Man who had made his Escape thro' the Inn, was unwilling to give them that Satisfaction; and as the Favours for which they were indebted to me were contained in my Journal, I thought proper to commit it to the Flames, and would have left my Arms with the Mayor, but he told me, if the Rebels should return, and upon Search find any of their Instruments of Death, they might be provok'd to burn his House, he therefore advised me to leave them at my Inn, they not being accountable for what a Traveller left; on which I hid them in my Room, and only acquainted the Hostler. After I was gone (as I was inform d at my Return) the Chamber-Maid went to make my Bed, and by drawing the Curtains shaked the Red-Tester, on which a Handful of Bullets trundled out of a disjointed Corner, which excited a Curiofity in her to stand on a Chair to see them from whence they came, where she found my Highland Pistols, which were a Piece of curious Workmanship, the Stock, Lock and Barrel being of polish'd Steel, engraved and inlaid with Silver; and on sweeping under the Bed, she found my Sword, which was also of the Highland Make, by that curious Workman Andrew. Ferrara; when she came down Stairs, she reported to the House, that some of the Rebels had left their Arms; but the Holler told her they did not belong to the Rebels, and that he would take Care of them until the Owner returned.

On the 2d of December, about 2000 of their Foot passed by Gosworth, and the

the fame Number of Horse and Foot enter'd Congleton +.

The same Day in the Evening a Detachment went for Ashburn, as if they intended to go to § Newcastle-Under-Line; a Party of their Hussars advancing as far as Talk o'the' Hill, where they took Capt. Vere Prisoner in the Red-Lyon Inn. The Alarm of the Rebels Approach was immediately sent to Newcastle-Under-Line.

At

of the River Trent. Mr. Cambden fays, that the New Castle from whence it was denominated, stands not far from Chesteran Under-Line, which is now levelled. It

At this Time an advanced Party of the King's Troops which lay at New-castle-Under-Line, consisting of about five Regiments of Horse and Foot, hearing of the Approach of the Rebels, the Drums beat to Arms; which put the Inhabitants into the utmost Consusion. The Regiments were all drawn up on the Parade, and rested under Arms for some Time, when about Twelve o'Clock at Night, they marched out of the Town, leaving their Baggage unloaden in the Market-Place, and retreated to Stone-Town-Field, where his Royal High-was incorporated by King Henry I. and is governed by a Mayor, two Justices, two Bailiss, and twenty-four Capital Burgesses. The Corporation has a Court, vested with Privileges of holding Pleas for Action under 40 1. Here is a Castle which was built in the Reign of King Henry III. The Streets are broad and well paved. but most of the Houses are low and thatch'd. They have four Fairs and a Weekly Market, and a great Trade for Cloth. It had four Churches formerly, which are reduced to one, having fuffer'd much in the Barons Wars. The Town is furrounded with Coal-Pits; and about three Miles from it is a Manufacture of Earthen Ware, which imitates brown China, and makes curious black Tea-Pots, &c. refembling Japan, being neatly figur'd and gilt. ness ness the Duke of Cumberland drew up his Army and Artillery, in Expectation that the Rebels would come and give him Battle; but they not caring to risk the Hazard of an Engagement where his Royal Highness commanded in Perfon, filed off towards Leek and Ashburn, about sisteen Miles from Derby. On the 3d his Royal Highness ordered his Army into Stone, for Quarters, which were very hard to get, it being but a small Town; and so many Soldiers soon occasioned a Consumption in the Victuals and Drink.

December 4. The young Pretender enter'd Derby, with about 500 Horse and 2000 Foot; and in the Evening, the rest of his Troops, in all about 7000, arrived with a Train of Artillery, confisting of 15 Pieces of small Cannon, and one Co-horn, with all their Baggage.

That Evening the Duke of Perth, asking for a News-Paper, the St. James's Evening-Post was brought him, dated Nov. 30, which contained the following Adver-

Advertisement, with a Reward; which he carried to the Pretender the next Morning.

RUN away from their Master at Rome, in the Dog-Days of last August, and since secreted in France, two young Lurchers, of the right Italian Breed; and being of a black Tan Colour, with sharp Noses, long Claws, and hanging Ears, have been taken Abroad for King Charles the Second's Breed; but a Bitch from Italy unfortunately broke the Strain in 88, by admitting into the Kennel, a base Mongrel of another Litter .-They are supposed to be on the Hunt for Prey in the North. They go a full Dog-Trot by Night for fear of being catch'd. They answer to the Names of Hector and Plunder, and will jump and dance at the Sound of the French Horn, being used to that Nate by an old Dog-Master at Paris. They prick up their Ears also at the Musick of a Lancashire Hornpipe.

This is to give Notice, that whoever can secure this Couple of Curs, and bring them back, either to the Pope's Head at Rome, near St. Peter's Church, or to the Cardinal's Cap at Versailles, or to the King's Arms at Newcastle, or to the Thistle at Edingburgh, or to the Three King's at Brentford, or rather to the Sign of the Axe on Tower-Hill, shall have the Reward of Thirteen-pence Half-penny, or any Sum below a Crown, and the Thanks of all the Powers of Europe, except France, Spain, and the Pope.

N. B. They have each a French Collar on, stamp'd with their Father's Arms, a Warming Pan, and the Flower-de-Lis, with this Inscription, We are but Young Puppies of Tencin's-Pack.

Beware of them, for they have got a Smack of the Scots-Mange, and those that are bit by them run mad, and are called JACO-BITES.

Their whole Force being now together, and the Stragglers and English O Recruits

Recruits all come in, they made the most formidable Appearance possible in Derby; yet they used all the Precaution imaginable to hinder an exact Account from being taken of their Number; which was a Point they laboured to manage with the utmost Diligence, during their whole March, often demanding Billets for ten thousand Men, when they had not above half that Number with them. On their first coming into Derby, it was judged, both from the Measures they took, and from the Behaviour of their Chiefs, that they were still disposed to march on. In the Evening they held several Councils of War; in which the Debates amongst their Chiefs grew too high to be concealed; yet they agreed vicon nothing the first Night, except levying the Publick Money; which they did with the usual Threats of Military Execution, as they had done in all the Towns they marched through. They also endeavour'd to levy Men here, and beat up publickly for that Purpose, but with very little Success; for there were very few that took on with them in the Town,

Town, and those of the lowest Class, both in Point of Morals as well as Condition; which plainly shews how low their Credit was sunk.

They continued in Derby the next Day; and in the Afternoon held another great Council, in the Presence of the young Chevalier; in which, as it was afterwards known, a final Resolution was taken for returning into Scotland. 'There has been various Reasons assigned for their making this sudden Retreat: But as it is my Defign to relate known Facts, rather than Conjectures, I shall pass them by, and only offer my own Opinion, which I take to be the true Cause, viz. The Disappoinment they had met with in the Augmentation of their Forces; for they flatter'd themselves with a great Insurrection in England in their Favour; Lancashire being the Place most depended upon, as appeared by their Letters, for imaginary Succours; which County they had gone through without receiving the expected Supplies, few having joined! them, and those such as I have already described. 0.2

described, People of desperate Fortunes and vile Principles: All of any Worth or Reputation appear'd hearty and zealous for the Cause of their King and Country, exerting themselves in their feveral Stations, as became Men who valued the true Interest of a Protestant Government. There was scarce a Town that I came to, when on the Reconnoitie, where I was not known; but there was an Officer came to take me up for a Rebel; but when he found his Miftake, I was visited by the Magistrates and Gentlemen of corporated Towns, who congratulated me on my good Success; with which they appeared to be well pleased. I look upon it as no Discredit to Lancashire that the Rebels got some Recruits amongst them, fince they were mostly such as were a Nusance to the Country; and I think it would have been better if fuch in every Country had distinguished themselves according to their Inclination for then they might have had a Chance to be hang'd, or dispatch'd in a readier Way; by which the Country would have been eased of a Load not worth worth to be bore above Ground; and if they had escaped without receiving their Deserts, yet honest Men might know how to place a just Value on such detestable Wretches. It seems most probable, that the small Encouragement which the Rebels met with in the Place where they had the greatest Dependance, might be the Cause of their sudden Retreat.

The Case was much the same in the Year 1715; for although a great many-Lancasbire Gentlemen, with their Servants and Friends had join'd the Rebels, yet they were most of them Papists; which made the Scots Gentlemen and Highlanders mighty uneasy, very much fulpecting the Cause; for they expected all the High-Church Party to have join'd them; who, according to Patton's History of that Rebellion, are never right hearty for the Cause, 'till they are mellow over a Bottle; and then they do not care for venturing their Carcases any further than the Tavern; there indeed, (fays he) with High-Church and Ormond, they would make Men believe; (who

(who do not know them) that they would encounter the greatest Opposition in the World; but after having consulted their Pillows, and the Fume a little evaporated, it is to be observed of them, that they generally become mighty tame, and like the Snail, if you touch their Houses, they hide their Heads, shrink back and pull in their Horns. Upon the ' Whole, it may be faid of the English Jacobites, no People in the Universe know better the Dfference between drinking and fighting: It is true, the latter they know not practically; and I believe they are so well satisfied of the Truth of what they have by Relation, that they never will. Would toasting Healths, down with the Rump, &c. reduce Kingdoms, mighty Feats would have been perform'd by the Power of the Bottle and Glass; and if the French Monarch had a large Body of these Men in his Service, he would bid fair (if Blusterings could do it) of succeeding in his favourite Scheme of Universal Monarchy.

Notwithstanding all the Artifice used to prevent it, there was, I believe, the

most true and curious Calculation made of their Number during their Continuance at Derby; which was the more easy to be done, because they staid there so long, had their whole Army with them, and were more regularly quarter'd there than in any other Town during their March: This List being communicated to me, I thought proper to give it a Place here, as it was made by the principal Inhabitants of Derby in all its Parishes; and that it might be the more exact, it was taken both the first and second Nights; so that the small Difference between those Calculations, plainly shews how much they may be depended upon.

The Rebels, during their Stay at Derby, were inform'd, that a Subscription had been set on Foot in that Town, for the King's Service, a little before their Arrival, and that the Money was paid in they presently found Means to procure a Copy of the Subscription Roll, which sum they demanded under Pain of Military Execution. They were very industrious in providing themselves with Cloaths, Stockings, Shoes, and other Necessaries while at * Denby; and it is

^{*}Derby is the County-Town, and has its Name from having been a Park, or Shelter for Deer, which is partly confirmed is not to be supposed that such Customers would pay the full Value for what they had; so that the Difference between their Price and the just Price of the Commodities and Manufactures they took, might be consider'd as a second Contribution.

Thus have I given a Journal of the Rebels Proceedings whilst they continu'd confirm'd by the Arms of the Town, viz. a Buck couchant in a Park. It flands on the West Side of the River Derwent, and the South Side of it is water'd by a Rivulet, call'd Mertin-Brook, which has nine Bridges over it before it falls into the Derwent. It has a fair Stone Bridge of feven Arches over the latter, on which formerly flood a Chapel dedicated to St. Mary, but is now. converted into a Dwelling House. When this Town was first built there is no certain Account; but some old Churches, and certain Privileges which it enjoys, denotes its being ancient; for we read that it was a Royal Borough in the Reign of Edward the Confessor, and exempted from paying Toll in London, or any Place except Winchester, and some sew other Towns. In the Time of the Saxons, the Danes had their Head Quarters here, until Ethelfred at the Head of the Mercian Forces took it by Surprize, defeated an Army of the Danes here, and put them to the Sword. In the South-East Corner of the Town there was formerly a Castle, of which there are now no Tokens but a Hill call'd Coav-Caftle Hill, and is a Street leading to St. Peter's, which in ancient Deeds is. called Cafle-Gate.

in their wild Notion of marching Southwards; which, I doubt not, will be more acceptable to my Countrymen from me (being an Eye-Witness) than from Strangers, who must write only upon. Hearsay.

On the 4th, the Weather being extremely cold, I rode all Night with a Guide, and about Four o'Clock in the-Morning I got to Stafford, where his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland was with the Army. The Town was very full; however, I got my Horse taken Care of at the Crass-Keys: By the Length. of my Journey, the Roads very bad, the Weather exceeding cold, and the Want of Sleep, it may be supposed I was pretty much fatigued, yet had no Opportunity to get to Bed; but the Satisfaction of being amidst the King's Troops, with the Help of some good old Beer, and a Fricasee of Rabbits, I was fit to undertake another Day's March. At Half an Hour past Six, I went to his Royal Highness, and acquainted him with the Observations I had made, and repeated the most material rial Part of the Letters which I took from the Rebel-Post, not having them with me for fear of being taken. Being joined the King's Army, and having nothing to fear but common Fate, I resolved to take my Chance with them in so good a Cause. There was a House by some Accident set on Fire the Morning that I went into * Stafford.

On the 6th the Rebels made a Feint as if they would have marched for Lough-

^{*} Stafford is a Town of great Antiquity; Cambden fays, it was first built by Edward the Senior, under the Name of Betbeny, where one Berteline, who was afterwards canonized for a Saint, for his great Piety, and leading an Hermit's Life: It was afterwards call'd Statford, and new Stafford; it is situated in a fruitful Soil, and a sweet Air, on the Bank of the River Sow; is adorned with two Churches, one whereof is very large and spacious; and a Free School; beautified with a large and uniform Market-Place, in which is a House where the Affizes are held for the County; the Streets are clean and well paved; the Buildings of Stone and Slate, and some of them very handsome, with several good Inns. I was well accommodated at the Cross-Keys. King John made this Town a Corporation, and Edward VI. confirmed -and enlarged the Charter.

borough, but fuddenly retreated North-ward, with the utmost Speed, and fled to Ashburn that Night. His Royal Highness having taken all the necessary Precautions to prevent their penetrating any further South, and to bring them to a Battle, march'd his Army that Day to Litchfield, and the next Day to Meriden, and advanced with the Horse to Coventry. of the Foot encamped on Meriden Common, between Coleshill and Coventry. The Soldiers had here the Quakers Gift of Flannel Waistcoats. They being a quiet peaceable People don't swear and fight for the King as we do; the former of which might be omitted without the least Prejudice to our Military Discipline; for I never heard that bloody Oaths without Action were able to defend a Town; but Action without Oaths may; and I don't know any Reason but that an Officer may bear as good a Command with Yea and Nay, as with D-m-me Bl-d and O-n-s. the Quakers are not in the Practice of fighting for the King, as I have just observ'd, it being contrary to their Principles to bear Arms, yet they contribute to them that do, do, in paying the regular Taxes, due to the Government. I have not met with any of them, during the late Rebellion, but what were zealous Friends to the Government.

Spoken extemporary by a Soldier, the Day after he received a Flannel Waistcoat, thro' the Bounty of the Quakers.

HIS Friendly Waistcoat keeps my Body warm, Intrepid now Imarch, and fear no Harm! Beyond a Coat of Mail, a fure Defender, Proof against Pope, the Devil, and Pretender. The Highland Plaid of no such Power can boast, Arm'd thus, I'll rush the foremost in the Host; Exert my utmost Art, my utmost Might, And fight for those whose Creed forbids to fight.

At this Time his Excellency Field Marshal Wade had marched the Army under his Command to Wetherby, where they encamp'd on the 5th; and the same Day Orders were given for the Horse and Dragoons to proceed to Doncaster, whither the Foot were to follow. By thus ranging the Troops, had the Rebels delay'd marching for two or three Days, their Retreat would have been compleatly cut off; and to have proceeded South, they must have now with, and been obliged to fight the Duke's Army; which I really believe they never defign'd.

It is to be observed, that the second Son of the Pretender was arriv'd in France about this Time, where great Preparations were made for invading this Kingdom; though by the timely Care and prudent Precautions of the Right Hon, the Lords of the Admiralty, they were prevented by the Vigilance of Admiral Vernon, who was intrusted with the Command of a Fleet of Men of War in the Channel: Notwithstanding, this occasion'd much Confusion, and prov'd in that Respect of some Service to the Rebels; but in another Sense, prov'd of great Importance to the Nation, fince it heighten'd and augmented that Spirit of Zeal and Loyalty which had so conspicuously appeared since the breaking out of the Rebellion, and of which all Ranks and Degrees of People gave at this Time such lively Testimonies, as were fufficient to convince even our Enemies, that his Majesty reigned in the Hearts

Hearts and Affections of his Subjects, as well as over their Persons; yet in Scotland the Flame of Rebellion began again to spread itself, by the Assistance of the French, a Party of whom were landed under Sir John Drummond; an Account of which is as follows:

November 21. About Five o'Clock in the Evening, a Ship attempting to come into the Harbour of Montrose, having no Boat to conduct her, run ashore on the South-Side of the River, and upon the Hazard Sloop's firing the put out British Colours; but some Hours after it was known the was a French Man of War of fixteen Carriage Guns besides Swivels, and that she had brought over the Lord John Drummond, with two Companies and a half of his Regiment: She came out in Company with three other Ships, who had on board the rest of the Regiment, but had parted with them in stormy Weather, and they obferving the Hazard Sloop in the Harbour, fupposed her to be one of their Consorts, but on finding their Mistake, they were employ'd employ'd that Night in carrying the Cannon ashore from their stranded Ship, and erecting a Battery to command the Harbour.

Admiral Byng, who had the Command of the English Ships of War on the Scotch Coasts, having Information that Lord John Drummond was embark'd for Scotland, the Admiral order'd some Ships to cruize on the Coast, particularly between Montrose and Stonehaven, where the French Ships had somerly landed;

but they had been driven off by a Storm.

On the 22d, a Boat belonging to the Hazard Sloop was attack'd by a Party'of Rebels that had been hovering about the Harbour of Montrofe for some Time, who killed one, and took four Prisoners and the Boat. On the 24th, the Milford and Ludlow-Castle, which had been blown off the Coast, return'd much shatter'd.

About this Time the Rebels made a Shift to get Possession of the Hazard Sloop

Sloop of War, which they effected in this Manner, viz.

Capt. Hill, her Commander, had sent a Party ashore in his Boats, who seized: all the Cannon and Arms on board the Ships in the Harbour of Montrose, which he put on board a Vessel, in order to be transported to Leith. That Night about 200 Highlanders came into the Town, and kept very quiet, fuffering no Intelligence to go to the Captain, who next Day sent his Long-Boat with twenty Men ashore, to make further Search for Arms; the Rebels, as foon as they obferv'd the Boat fast a-ground, rush'd forward, kill'd one Man, and made the rest Prisoners, without being observed by those on board the Ship; and afterwards, with the Afliftance of some Seamen, they mann'd out feveral Boats, and boldly boarded the Vessel loaded with Cannon and Arms, which rode at some Distance from the Hazard, and made themselves Master of her; then, with the Assistance of this Ship, they attack'd the Hazard, who having lost somany.

many of the Crew, was obliged to strike, after making some Resistance. They gave the Command of the Hazard, in the Pretender's Name, to one of the Ship-Masters, who had his Vessel burnt by Capt. Hill's Orders; this Man was very instrumental in taking the Hazard. There was another large Ship from Dunkirk at Montrose; but the Ludlow-Castle, which rode at the Mouth of the River, not being a Match for her, was under a Necessity to cut her Cables and put to Sea. Admiral Byng, with four Men of War, came before that Harbour; but the Rebels had planted their Cannon fo advantageously upon the Beach, that it was impossible to get at them; the Milford lost her Bowsprit, and received confiderable Damage in her Rigging in attempting it.

About this Time, Lord Lewis Gordon, with about 600 Men, was joined by Glenbucket with 300, who took Poseffion of and laid Aberdeen under Contribution, besides obliging them to raise 500 Men, or to pay 5 l. for each Man wanting wanting of that Number. Here they proclaimed the Pretender, and likewise his Son Regent, with great Solemnity. Provost Mearison, and the Aldermen, who kept a constant Correspondence with the Lord Prefident, fled the City, and had follicited Succours from him and the Earl of Loudon, who with Expedition fent a Detachment of Eoo Men, to recover Aberdeen out of the Hands of the Rebels; but they in that Interim had quitted the City, to go meet Lord John Drummond, who was landed at Montroje, and whose Force then amounted to about 1700 Men; who hearing of Lord Loudon's Detachment on the Road to Aberdeen, marched with the greatest Speed possible to get thither before them, and gain'd his Point, while the others were twelve Miles short of the City at Inverary, where they intended to lodge that Night; here they thought themselves fecure, as having had no Intelligence of this forced March of the Rebels back from Montrose. Their Men were dispo-Led of in the neighbouring Village and Farm Houses, except one Company, which which stay'd with Captain Monroe of Culcairn, who commanded the Detachment, which, the Evening before, had marched through Straithbogie, where 600 of the Grants were under Arms; those had promised the Lord President to join Captain Monroe; but they let him set forward without sulfilling that Promise.

The Night Captain Monroe came to Inverary, where he quartered with one Company, he was fallen upon (between Eight and Nine o'Clock, when it was very dark) by the whole Force of the Rebels under Lord John Drummond, and Lord Lewis Gordon; they immediately assaulted the House in which were Captain Monroe and some other Officers, fome of whom were undressed and going to Bed. Notwithstanding this Surprize, the Rebels met with a very resolute, sharp and obstinate Resistance; in which there were about 100 Men killed, of whom 40 were Loyalists: Captain Monroe and Captain Macked, with a few of the brave Clans of their Names, fought their Way through:

through the Multitude; but several other Officers and Men were taken Prisoners and carried to Aberdeen, from whence they were removed to Pertb.

Lord John Drummond on his landing about 500 Men at Peterbead and Montrose, was very soon joined by the Party which Lord Lewis Gordon had been railing in the North, as well as by others of the disaffected Clans, such as the Mackenzies, the Mackintoshes, the Farqubarsons, and the Fraziers. to the Number of about 3000 Men; with which Force he drew down towards Perth, about the Time that the Mock Prince was at Derby.

December 21. Lord John Drummond fet up the French Standard at Dundce, and read the French King's Declaration there, under a triple Discharge of his Artillery; containing in Substance, That he, Lord John Drummond, Commander in Chief of his most Christian Majesty's Forces in Scotland, was come to make War against George King of England, Elector Elector of Hanover, in support of the Family of the Stuarts; declaring that his Most Christian Majesty and the King of Spain, are the Allies of the above Family; that they are resolved to support them with Men, Arms, Ammunition and Money; that whoever shall join and assist Charles P— of W——, Shall have the highest Tokens of Favour; and that whoever shall resist, shall feel the Weight of Military Resentment, in Proportion to the Zeal they shew for his present Majesty.

The villainous and cruel Method this Desperado took to raise Men for his Master's Service, was not only the readiest Way to stagger the most violent Friends of Jacobitism. and Arbitrary Power, but to enslame the Indignation of the loyal Part of the Scots Nation against him: For he sent his Men thro' the Country, with lighted Faggots in their Hands, who called at Gentlemen and Farmers Houses, enquiring how many Men Servants they had; and if they did not immediately send out what-Ever Number they demanded, they fet Fire to their Houses. The Fact will best appear by giving you the Order in full, which was as follows:

By Order of the Right Hon. Lord Lewis Gordon, Lord Lieutenant of the Counties, and Governor of the Towns of Aberdeen and Bamff.

HEREAS I defired and ordered J. Moir of Stonywood, to intimate to all the Gentlemen and their Doers, within the faid Counties of Aberdeen and Bamff, to fend into the Town of Aberdeen a well-bodied Man for each 100 l. Scots, their valued Rent, Jufficiently cloathed; and in Consequence of my Order be wrote circular Letters to all the Heritors, and the above Counties, desiring them to send in a Man sufficiently cloathed, &c. for each 1001. Scots, of their valued Rent, which Defire they have not complied with; therefore I order and command you, to take a sufficient Party of my Men, and go to all the Lands in the above Counties, and require from the Heritors, Factors or Tenants, Tenants, as you think most proper, an able-bodied Man for his M-K-1-'s Service, with sufficient Highland Cloaths, Plaid and Arms, for each 100 l. of their valued Rent, or the Sum of 51. Sterling Moncy for each of the above Men, to be paid to J. M. of Stonywood, or his Order, at Aberdeen; and in Case of Refusal of the Man or Money, you are forthwith to burn all the Houses, Corn and Planting upon the aforefuid Estates; and to begin with the Heritor or Factor residing on the Land; and not to leave the said Lands until the above Execution be done, unless they produce Stonywood's Lines, shewing they have delivered him the Man or Money.

Given at Aberdeen, this 12th Day of December, 1745.

Subfribed,

Lewis Gordon.

The Earl of Loudon, who was at the Head of a small Body of Men for the King's Service in the North, spared no Pains or Diligence in exciting the well affected affected Clans to join him; and by the Reinforcements he received from the Lords Sutherland and Ray, the Macheods, the Grants, the Monroes, and the Guns, he was soon 2000 strong. At Edinburgh likewise, and at Glasgow they began to raise Men for the Service of the Government, with great Chearfulness and Success; so that two good Regiments were compleated, besides Independant Companies.

December 7. His Royal Highness got certain Intelligence that the Rebels were marching North; on which he put himielf next Morning at the Head of his Horse and Dragoons, with some Volunteers, in order to follow the Rebels and stop them until the Foot came up, which was impossible, for the Rebels Fears were so great that they run Day and Night, until they had got to Carlisle, where they had left a Carrison; their Route was as follows:

December 7. They marched from Afhburn to Leek, destroying in their Passage

fage what they judged might be of Use to the King's Troops that were in Purfuit of them, and shewing a warm Spirit of Resentment for the Disappointments they had met with, which provoked the Country People to do them all the Mischief they could; they carried their Train of Artillery with them.

The 9th about Noon, their Van-Guard reached * Manchester, and that Evening

^{*} Manchester is situated on the Bank of the River Irwell, over which is a stately Stone-Bridge, going into Salferd, which Village is only separated from Manchesver by this River, as the City of Landon from Southwark by the River Thames, Tho' this is no City, Corporation, nor so much as a Town, strictly speaking, the highest Magistrate being a Conslable or Headborough. vet it may be filled the greatest meer Village in England, and is more populous than, ? ork. or most Cities in this Kingdom. The People here, including Salford, are computed to be no less than 30,000. As this Town is very populous, fo the Inhabitants are very industrious, driving an extraordinary Trade in Fustian Manufactures and that called Manchester Cottons for Women's · Wear; which it has been famous for above 100 Years, and has been very much improved of late, by fome Inventions of Dying and Printing, which with the great Variety

As an Inland Town, it has the best Trade of any in these Northern Parts. I have already said that this Town is the most populous, and the Inhabitants the most industrious; to which I may add, that the Buildings are the most sumptuous of any hereabout. Here is a fine Garbie Church, which is Collegiate, built in 1742, a very large, beautiful, and flately Edifice, with a Choir remarkable for its neat and curious carved Work; there belongs to it at present, a College confishing of one Warden, four Fellows, two Chaplains, four finging Men, and four Choirfters. The College was originally founded by Thomas West, Brother to the Lord Delawar, by the Name of St. Mary's, in Honour of the Virgin Mary, to whom the Parish Church was before dedicated It was founded a-new by Queen Elizabeth, in 1578, by the Name of Christ's College in Manchester, which Foundation was afterwards confirmed by King Charles the First, in 1636, and incorporated by the same Name, . the Statutes for it being drawn up by Archbishop Laud. Near this Church stands the Presbyberian Meeting House, which was pulled down by the Jacobite Mob at the Time of the Rebellion in the Year 1215, but was quickly rebuilt, and is now a very stately Structure, not inferior to any in London. This Town has a good Market Place and a modern Exchange, with many other elegant and magnificent Buildings. Here is I kewise a small Baptiff Meeting House, and a Jacobite Nonjuring Chapel: I don't know of what Body the Congregation confifts, they not allowing any to come amongst them but such as are of their own Sort, who (like the more worshipful Society of Free Masons) are whiler an Oath not to divulge what is transacted there. except it be to a just and lawful Jacobite, as he or they shalf appear to be upon Examination.

In this County the Women are generally very handsome, by which they have acquired the Name of Lancashire Witches, which Appellation they really deserve, being very agreeable; but some of the pretty Jacobite Witches chuse to distinguish themselves by wearing Plaid Breast-Knots, Ribbons and Garters tied above the Knee, which may be remonstranced as dangerous to the Constitution; for that above a Lady's Knee is of so attracting a Quality,

If rightly confidered, the Fair Sex should exert all their Ch rms to oppose this Popish Scheme, as one of them well represents it thus;

the contrary, the Town's People, or at least the Mob, gave them some pretty visible Marks of their Dislike; which was punished immediately by an Order or Precept in the Name of the Mock Prince, and signed and sealed by Mr. Murray, his Secretary, directed to the Constables and Collectors of the Land-Tax for the Towns of Manchester and Salford, requiring them to levy and collect, by the next Day at Noon, the Sum of 2500 l. to be paid to Mr. Murray, with a Promise of Repayment, when the Country should be settled under his Government.

On the 10th the Rebels left Manchester, and continued their March by Pendleton-Poole towards Leigh and Wigan, which last Place they reach'd that Evening, and pushed on from thence to Presson the next Day, being extremely apprehensive of finding themselves surrounded in that Neighbourhood.

To no base Rebel prostitute your Charms; In War, disband the Lover who desert his Arms; So shall you fire each Hero to his Duty, And British Rights be sav'd by British Beauty.

On the 13th, in the Morning, they quitted Preston, and continued their March to Lancaster, where they fet open the Goal, and released the Rebel-Prisoners taken by me, with some others, and behaved in a very rude Manner, as appears by the following Letter transmitted to me by a Friend.

Lancaster, Dec. 19.

THE Rebels in their Passige thro' this Town last Week, behaved like a Parcel of the most con-' fummate Villains: The meaner Part of ' them pilfer'd and stole every Thing portable for their Purpose; and their Chiefs fent Ruffians to plunder and extort Money, in a most brutal Manner, from Gentlemen who had exerted themselves most against them. From Mr. Gillison they got 21.1. and a Party of the fiercest of them were fent to Dr. Fenton's, the Vicar of this Town, who committed an the Outrages there, their Malice sug-Vicar of this Town, who committed all gested. The Doctor was sled; but they presented

e presented several Pistols and drawn · Swords at a Time to the Breasts and ' Heads of his Servants, and caused' ' every Room, Chest, Drawer, and Box ' in the House, to be opened or broke open; out of which they took what ' they pleased; and then swore most ve-' hemently they would burn the House, " unless 20 l, was paid to redeem it. 'This fo terrified an old Lady in the ' House, that she advanced that Sum in Behalf of the Doctor. No fooner had they got the Money, but they bid the ' Doctor's Servants tell him, that they ' would shoot him thro' the Head when-' ever they met with him; for they swore they were well informed that he was the greatest Enemy they had in Lan-cashire, by his frequent preaching against ' them, and intimidating and restraining their Friends as a Justice of Peace.'

When they were in this Town, a false Report arose and was carried North, viz. that the King's Troops had come up with, and totally defeated the Rebels near Lancaster; which caused great Rejoicings

joicings in that Country, and many Candles and Tar-Barrels were burnt at White-baven on that Occasion, with some Gunpowder.

On the 14th the Rebels continued their Route from Lancaster to Kendal, where the Duke of Perth with the advanced Guard, to the Number of about 100 Horsemen, enter'd in the Forenoon, but met with a bad Reception from the Townsmen, who were up in Arms to fall on those who had escaped at the supposed Battle; so that they fired on Perth's Men, and there were some killed on both sides: I have since seen the Place where one of the Rebels was buried, which is about four Miles from Kendal, where he dropp'd and died of his Wounds.

On the 15th, Perth and his Horsemen got to Penrith, where the Townsmen fell on them also; on which the Rebels retreated and fled, the Townsmen pursuing for several Miles, so that there was a pretty Sort of a Hunting Match; although the Gentlemen of Penrith are not not accustomed to hunt on a Sunday, yet they followed the Chase that Day with great Alacrity, until they lost both Sight and Scent of them. When the Rebels got back to Shap, which is a little Village in the Road betwixt Penrith and Kendal, the Beacons were lighted on every Side; and being informed that it was done to raise the Country, and that the People were disposed to fall on them, they thought proper to retire to Kendal, which they accordingly did about Two in the Morning, where the Pretender with most of his Forces arrived. This Affair was, likely to prove of bad Consequence to the Towns of Kendal and Penrith, had not his Royal Highness been so nigh.

On the 16th, by Break of Day, the Rebels began their March for Penrith, which they thought to have reached that Night, but finding it impracticable, they thought fit to halt at Shap; where I will leave them for the present, that I may the better give my Readers an Account of the Motions of the King's Forces, in order to overtake them.

December

December 8. His Royal Highness set out from Meridan Camp, in Fursuit of the Rebels; and to facilitate his March, the Country People, firm and loyal to their King, brought in Horses to mount 1000 Foot Soldiers, draughted out of several Regiments, that were to follow the Duke in order to overtake the Rebels; our Foot Soldiers not being accustomed to riding, I thought they look'd odd on Horseback, : with their Muskets and Knap-Sacks slung over their Shoulders; but their Defire to come up with the Rebels, was visible in every one of their Countenances; with fo much Pleasure they rode along, and the Countrymen with fresh Horses coming to remount our Soldiers, running themselves on Foot very chearfully, that it really afforded a most pleasing Prospect.

On the Duke's Arrival at Cheadle, in Staffordshire, the Country People brought in a Rebel Spy, which they deliver'd to our Army, when on their March to Macclessield, where he was hang'd on a Gibbet, and order'd to swing until Eight o'Clock that Night; when, about that Time,

Time, Mr. $G \longrightarrow A$ —, an Apothecary and Surgeon, in that Town, went to the Centinel to buy the Body, which he bought for 4 s. 6 d. The Drugoon who fold it thought it a good Price, and the Doctor was likewise well pleased with his Bargain; intending to anatomize his Carcase, and expected to have had Leather of the Skin (worth his Money) which he accordingly gave to a Tanner to dress; but the Miracle Mongers faid, that the Hide was of so holy a Nature, that it would not Tan, nor be confin'd to lie under Water, by any Weight that could be put upon it; so that the Tanner, after much Labour loft, was obliged to take his holy Hide and bury it. As the Person died a Martyr to a good Cause, as they call it, and enlifted himself under the Banner of Rebellion, with a holy Refolution to murder the King and Royal Family, with all other Hereticks out of the Pale of their Catholick Church; if this Skin had been opreferv'd and well manag'd, by a skilful Priest, there might have been as many Miracles wrought by it, as any holy Relict lict brought from Rome, though bought there at an high Price.

On the roth, the Duke arrived at Macclesfield, with two Regiments of Dragoons, having a Body of 1000 Foot, at no great Distance; from whence he sent Orders to Manchester and other Places, that nothing might be neglected, that would contribute to retard or distress the Enemy.

On the 11th, Major Wheatley was detached with an advanced Party of Dragoons to harrafs the Rear of the Rebels, and to join the Light-arm'd Troops that were expected from the other Army; the Motions of which shall be next accounted for to this Time; after which the Pursuit was entirely under his Royal Highmess's Direction.

His Excellency Field-Marshal Wade, having received certain Intelligence of the Proceedings of the Rebels, and of the Situation of the King's Troops, under the Command of his Royal Highness, held, on the 8th of December, a R great great Council of War at Ferry-Bridge, to consider of the most effectual Means for cutting off the Retreat of the Rebels; and in this Council of War it was resolved to march directly by Wakefield and Halifax to Lancashire, as the most likely Way to intercept the Highlanders; but arriving at Wakefield on the 10th, and having Advice that the main Body. of the Rebels were at Manchester, and, their Van-Guard moving from thence to. Preston, his Excellency now finding that it was impossible to come up with them, judged it unnecessary to fatigue his Troops with hard Marches, and therefore detached Major-General Oglethorpe, on the 10th, with the Cavalry under his Command; and then he began his March with the rest of his Forces for Newcastle.

On the 13th, a great Body of Horse and Dragoons, that were, as has been said, under the Command of Major-General Ogletberpe, arrived at Presson, having marched 100 Miles in three Days, over Snow and Ice, which was a noble Tostimony of Zeal and Spirit, especially in the new-rais'd Troops. His Royal Highness

Highries arrived about One o'Clock at the same Place, and immediately gave his Orders for continuing the Pursuit of the Rebels, with the utmost Diligence; there was a Rebel Spy taken and executed here.

On the 14th, General Oglethorpe advanced towards Lancaster, which Place the Duke reached on the 16th. General Oglethorpe continued his Pursuit at the Heels of the Rebels, and on the 17th, the Major-General and his Royal High-ness of coming up with the Enemy than any Time during the March; and the Dispositions which were made by the Duke for that Purpose were such, as shewed the utmost Penetration and Military Skill.

On Wednefday the 18th of December, the King's Light Horse, after ten Hours March, came in Sight of the Rebels; near Lowther-Hall, where they surprized the Duke's Running Footman and took him Prisoner; from whom they learned, that his Royal Highness with his Cavalry was coming up at a little Distence; on which Information the Rebels threw themselves into the Village of Clifton, from whence Lord George Mursay, who commanded the Rear-Guard, dispatch'd his Aid-de-Camp to Penrith, which is three Miles, to acquaint the Pretender therewith, who immediately ordered a Body of Horse and Foot to reinforce Lord George, and a Defign was formed to surprize the Light-Horse; to which End, a Party marched through Lord Lonsdale's Park to get behind them; in. the mean Time, the Rebels at Clifton had posted themselves in the most advantageous Manner, by lining every Hedge, Orchard, and Out-house, from the South End of Clifton, to Thomas Savage's, a Quaker, at the Foot of the Moor, where a Party of the Rebels were posted, and from whence they made the first Fire at the Duke's Hussars. By this Time his Royal Highness, with the Dragoons, was come up, and the Rebels Ambuscade was fully formed; from whence, it is very likely, the King's Troops might have received confiderable Damage, had not Jonathan Savage, who who went thro' the Fields in Danger of his Life, acquainted the Duke with the Rebels Defign. His Royal Highness having before sent a Party to Lowtber-Hall, and to the Wood, and another Party under General Oglethorpe, which mov'd to the Right, drew up his Troops on Clifton Moor, and advanc'd; but finding it impossible to come at the Rebels on Horseback, ordered Detachments from Bland's, Lord Mark Kerr's and Cobbam's Dragoons to difmount and attack the Ambuscades, and the Posts the Rebels were in Possession of, which they regularly did with great Resolution: The Action was very sharp and desperate while it lasted, but at last ended in our Favour, notwithstanding the Rebels, from their Situation, had greatly the Advantage of us, we being obliged to go over the Hedges up to the Boot Tops in Water; not only fo, but it being late in the Evening, they could fee our Buff-Belts and Lac'd Hats, when we could not so well discern their Blue Bonnets and Dark-colour'd Plaids; fo, that we directed our Fire at their Fire, which was very hot on both Sides. R 3 Not-Notwithstanding these Disadvantages, we push'd them with such Intrepidity, that in about an Hour they quitted the Field and the neighbouring Village, and sled to Penrith.

It was so late before the Affair was over, and the Country so cover'd, that it was impossible to follow them with any Probability of Success, so that his Royal Highness took up his Quarters at Thomas Savage's House, who rejoiced much in Spirit, that such a Guest was come under his Roof. There were of the King's Forces eleven kill'd, and twentynine wounded; of the former there were seven of Bland's, three of Cobham's, and one of Mark Kerr's; amongst the latter, were four Officers, viz. Colonel Honywood, Captain East, and the Coronets Owen and Hamilton. On the Side the Rebels their Loss is not certainly known, we found five dead in the Field; and a Countryman told me, that there were about thirty seen, whom the Rebels had thrown into a River, that the Number of their Slain might not be known: One of the Duke's Hussels took Mr. Hamilton, Captain of the Rebel Hussels, and cut him in the Head. I saw him the Night after the Skirmish in a very bloody Condition, and afterwards saw him executed at York; of which I shall give an Account in its proper Place. One Ogden of Manchesters, was likewise taken by an Hussel, who after he had begg'd his Life, privately drew a Pistol and shot at the Hussel, but missed him; he in Return, cut Ogden down the Side of his Head: I have since been informed that he died in Lancaster Goal.

The King's Troops continued under Arms all Night, which was very rainy, and in the Morning we had about fixty of the Rebels Prisoners, many of them being pick'd up by the Country People. Whilst the Rear-Guard of the Rebels was engaged with the King's Forces at Clifton, their main Body was at Penrith, and so apprehensive of being overtaken, that at Ten o'Clock that Night, they order'd their Artillery and Baggage to advance towards Carlisle; and on the 19th in the Morning

Morning they enter'd that City, excessively satigued, and in much Consusion; where I will leave them at this Juncture, until I give an Account of the Means used to recover the City.

On the 19th, his Royal Highness enter'd Penrith with his Cavalry, and continued there two Days, until his Infantry came up: His Presence at that Time afforded much Satisfaction to the Town's People; for nothing but the Intrepidity of the Pursuit could have sav'd the Town from the Resentment of the Rebels, as they had threaten'd them, for driving back the advanced Guard, already taken Notice of, and another Affair that I had forgot to mention in its proper Place, which was as follows:

On the 27th of November; Lord Kilmarnock's Son, with eighteen other Rebels, came from Carlifle to Penrith, all on Horseback, with their Swords drawn, and demanded Billets for 1000 Men, whom they pretended were to follow them; but on perceiving that the Town's People were consulting to fall upon them, they

they rode off in great Haste that Night to Lowther-Hall, the Seat of Lord Londy dale, where they lock'd fast the Gates, and set three of their Number to watch the Approach of Disturbers; the rest went into the House, where they broke fourteen Locks, in order to plunder: They order'd as fine Supper, and got Liquor of all Kinds, expecting to be all well mounted the next Morning; but one of Lord Londsdale's Stewards getting away to Penrith, he returned with about 30, brave stout young Men well armed, who were refolved to conquer or die in the Attempt they got to Lowther-Hall about, Eleven that Night, when the Guards having alarmed the Gentlemen, who were just sitting down to Supper, they immediately got to Arms, and there was? pretty imart firing on both Sides for about half an Hear, the one Party being with-in, and to other without; but the Penrith Men forced their Way in, and took, eleven Prisoners, who were sent to Marshal Wade's Army: Three of the Rebels, it was thought, died of their Wounds : There

There was but one of the *Benrith
Men that was flightly hurt; and as a Recompence for their Bravery, they got fifteen Horses and some good Arms.

Lord

* Benrith is a pretty Market Town, and I believe may be reckon'd the second Town for Wealth in the County of Cumberland, It is pleasantly situated on a good Soil, and was fortified on the West Side with a Royal Castle, which in the Reign of Hear VI, was repaired out of the Ruins of Maburgh, a Danillo Temple hard by, but is now in Ruins itself. It is adorned with a handform Church, and has a large Market Place, where there is an Edifice of Timber, for the Use of such as refort hither to Market, garnished with Bears chinbling up a ragged Staff, which was the Bevice of the Earls of Werwick. The Town is built of Red. Stone, from whence it is called Pourith, which in Brieiß fignifies a Red Hill, or Head. In the Church Yard here, on the North Side, are erected two large Pillars! of about five Yards Distance from each other; it is faid. they were fet up in Memory of one Sir Ewin Calarius. in old Times a famous Warrior, of great Strength and Stature, who lived in these Parts, and kalled wild Bears. in the Forest of Inglowood, which muc iffested the Country. He was buried here, they fay, and that the rude Figures of Bears, which are in Stone, and erected two on each Side of his Grave, between the Pillars, are in Memory of his great Exploits upon. those Creatures. Upon the North Outside of the Vestry in the Wall, in rude Characters, is this Writing, for a-Memorandum to Posterity, Fuit Pestis, &c. i. e. There was a Plague A.D. 1598, of which there died at Kendal 2500; at Richmond 2200; at Penrith 2256; and at Carlifle 1196.

Ford Kilmarnock's Son, and one C-v-ga of Northumberland, and fome others, having been brought up at Lowthen School, and knowing all the Roads about the House, escaped.

The Rebels did not continue long at Carlifle; for after changing the Garrison; on the 20th of December, they continued their March Northward, croffing the River Esk, tho' very deep; but they chose rather to venture drowning (which was the Fate of some) than stay to give. the Duke Battle; fo that Day the young Pretender entered North-Britain, leaving the Garrison to shift for themselvesas well, as they could: At his leaving them, he comforted the Garrison with the Promise of a speedy Relief; for as Lord John Drummond was landed in Scotland with some French Forces, he promised to return with them, and defired that they would hold out the Garrison; which they promised to do, to the last Extremity: For this Purpose, they having all the Cannon with them, mounted them on the Walls, and carried all the Providens they could find, into into the Castle, leaving the Inhabitants very little to subsist upon; and they could get none from the adjacent Country, as knowing, that whatever was carried into the Town would be taken from them by the Rebels: But they did not continue in this diffressed Condition long; for on the 20th, the Kings Infantry arrived at Penrith, and an advanced Party marched to Hesket, within eight Miles of Carlifle; but having no Cannon, that Day I was fent to Whitehaven, to order the battering Cannon from thence; the People arose in a Body, and got Horses and Carriages ready with all Expedition: They were ten Pieces of Eighteen Pounders, of which four were drawn by forty Horses of Sir James Lowther, Bart. which went along pretty brifkly; but I faw 16 or 18 of the Country Horses to a Gun, and often set, the Roads being very fost. At my Return, on the 22d, I found that Carlifle had been invested on the 21st by the King's Troops. 'Major-General Bland with St. George's Dra-1 goons, and 300 Men of Bligh's Regiment, had taken Post on the Scotch Side, with Orders to prevent any Passage over the Bridge upon the River Eden, which leads directly to the Scotch Gate: Major Adams with 200 Foot, was posted at Butcherby near the English Gate, to prevent any of the Garrison escaping that Way: Major Meriac at Cawdey, near. the Irish Gate, with the same Orders: And Sir Andrew Agnew at the Salley-Port, with 300 Men. All the Horse and Foot Guards were canton'd round the Town at a Mile or two Distance. His Royal Highness had fix'd his Head Quarters at Blackball; and a great many People came out of the Country to affift the King's Army, with Clubs and Staves, and fuch other Weapons as they had; the Game-Law forbidding the Use of Fire-Arms. The Countrymen. being most of them of no Use, and their Number being about 10,000, his Royal Highness ordered them all to return Home, except a few who were employ d in cutting Fascines for the Batteries; the Duke's Regular Forces at this Time, were about four Thousand.

Field Marshal Wade having Intelligence of what had passed at Clifton, detached a confiderable Body of Foot to reinforce the Duke's Army, and gave fuch other Orders as were requisite for hastening thither the Artillery and Ammunition that was wanting to carry on the Siege; but all those Wants were supplied from Whitehaven. On the 26th, Part of the Cannon from thence arrived: The Rebel Garrison, mostly composed of English Recruits, and Gordon of Glenbucket's Men, commanded by one Hamilton, formerly Steward to the Duke of Gordon, in all about 400 Men, appeared at first to make a vigorous Defence, firing their Cannon on every Body that appeared.

On the 28th, about Eight in the Morning, our Forces began to batter their four and feven Gun Batteries, with fix Eighteen Pounders; at which the Rebel Garrison were as much surprized as if they had felt the Shock of an Earthquake, wondering from whence those roaring Guns came, knowing knowing that the English Army brought none with them; thus we continued playing upon them until Mid-Afternoon, by which Time many of the Rebels Cannon were dismounted, and their Batteries put to Silence; then they retreated to their ten Gun Battery which pointed Eastward, and continued firing from that Time until Morning: In the Night the Rebels were much perplexed with Cohorns that we flung into the Castle; the Sailors from Whitehaven affifted in working the Cannon, so that apwards of eleven hundred Shot were fired that Day. We had one Man killed; and the Rebels 16 killed and wouned. On the 19th, it was found necesfary to abate the Firing from the Battery for want of Shot. That Day I was sent to order two thousand Cannon Shot, Eighteen Pounders, to be made at a Furnace about twenty-four Miles Distance from the Garrison. this Interval, the Rebels had got their Batteries repaired, and began afresh to fire on our Battery; but in the Evening several Horses arriving at our Battery loaden with Shot, his Royal Highness immediately gave Orders to renew the Fire, and that the Guns should be levelled at the Salley-Port, where he intended the Breach should be made; at which they confinued battering very briskly for two Hours, and rent the Walls very much.

On the Night of the 29th, his Royal Highness ordered Belford, Major of the Train, to raise a new Battery of three Eighteen Pounders, about fifty Yards to the Northward of the former, which was compleated by the Morning; but on the first Platoon of the old Battery firing, the Rebels hung out a White Flag; whereupon the Battery ceased, and they called over the Walls, that they had two Hostages ready to be delivered at the English Gate; which is on the oppofite Side of the Town. About this Time there was a Man taken and brought to the Duke, who produced two Letters, one directed to his Royal Highness, and the other to the Commander of the Dutch Troops, supposed to be with his Army. They were from a Person stilling himself the Commander of the French Artillery, and the Prench Garrison that was at, or might come to Carlisle, who subscribed his Name De Geognegan, for the Desence of the Town and Citadel; the Contents of them were, to summon the Commander of the Dutch, to tetire with his Troops from the English Army, under the specious Pretence of the Capitulation of Tournay.

His Royal Highness's Message to the Rebels at Carlisle, on their hanging out a White Flag, on Monday Morning, Dec. 30, 1745.

HIS Royal Highness will make no Exchange of Hostages with Rebels, and desires they will let him know by me, what they mean by hanging out the White Rlag.

To let the French Officer know, if there is one in Town, that there are no Dutch Troops here, but enough of the S 3 King's King's Troops to chaftise the Rebels, and those who dare give them any Assistance.

Sign'd Col. Conway, Aid-de-Camp to his Royal Highness.

The Answer of John Hamilton, to his Royal Highness the Duke's Message to the Rebels in Carlisle, Dec. 30, 1745.

IN Answer to the short Note sent by his Royal Highness Prince William Duke of Cumberland, the Governor, in Name of himself, and all the Officers and Soldiers, Gunners, and others, belonging to the Garrison, desire to know what Terms his Royal Highness will be pleased to give them upon Surrender of the City and Castle of Carlisle; and which known, his Royal Highness shall be duly acquainted with the Governor and Garrison's last, or ultimate Resolution, the White Flag being hung out on Purpose to obtain a Cessation of Arms for concluding such a Capitulation.

John Hamilton.
This

This was given to the Duke's Aid-de-Camp.

His Royal Highness's Declaration to the Rebels, sent by the Colonels Conway and Lord Bury, Aids-de-Camp to his Royal Highness, on receiving John Hamilton's, Letter, December 30, 1745.

ALL the Terms his Royal Highness will, or can grant to the Rebel Garrison at Carlisle, are, That they shall not be put to the Sword, but be reserved for the King's Pleasure.

If they consent to these Conditions, the Governor and Principal Officers are to deliver themselves up immediately, and the Castle, Citadel, and all the Gates of the Town are to be taken Possession of forthwith by the King's Troops; all the small Arms are to be lodged in the Town Guard Room, and the rest of the Garrison are to retire to the Cathedral, where a Guard is to be placed over them. No Damage

Damags is to be done to the Artillery, Arms, and Ammunition.

By his Royal Highness's Command,

RICHMOND, LENOX, AUBIGNY,

Lieutenant General of the King's Forces.

Head Quarters at Blackhall, Dec 30. half an Hour part Town in the Afternoon.

The Rebels Answer to the Ferms offered them by his Royal Highness the Duke of CUMBERLAND, December 30, 1745.

THE Governor of Carlifle, and all the Officers composing the Garrison, agree to the Terms of Capitulation given in, and subscribed by Order of his Royal High-ness, by his Grace the Duke of Richmond, Lenox, and Aubigny, Lieutenant General of his Majesty's Forces, recommending themselves to his Royal Highness's Clemency, and that his Royal Highness's Clemency, and that his Royal Highness.

ness will be pleased to interpose for them with his Majesty; and that the Officers Cloaths and Baggage may be safe, with a competent Time to be allowed to the Citizens of Carlisle, to remove their Beds, and Bed-Cloaths, and other Houshold Furniture impressed from them for the Use of the Garrison in the Castle.

December 30, 1745, at Three o'Clock in in the Afternoon.

After the Capitulation was agreed upon, Brigadier Bligh immeditately took Possession of the Town with a Detachment of 400 Guards, 700 Foot, and 120 Horse. The Officers yielded themselves Prisoners immediately, and their Men laid down their Arms in the Market-Place, and retired into the Cathedral; so that they defiled the Temple, which used to be the House of Prayer, but was now become a Den of Thieves, where a Guard was fet 'till his Royal Highness could otherwise dispose of them: Such was the Issue of this wild Undertaking; and so soon were those who pretended tended to defend the Place to the last Extremity, reduced to furrender it and themselves Prisoners at Discretion.

Of the above-mentioned Prisoners there were seven that had deserted from the King's Army at Preston-Pans, and joined the Rebels; who, with four others of the same Sort, were hanged at Harriby.

At the entering of Carlifle, I got a Basket-hilted Back-Sword of curious Workmandship; I suppose made in France, for one of the Rebel Chiefs: The Basket-Hilt was close and well wrought, fit only for a small Hand; the Blade in Proportion was light, well mounted, and gilt, with the Pretender's Essign engraven on it, holding a Globe in one Hand, and a Scepter in the other, with this Inscription,

Long live King James the Third of Great-Britain,

And on the other Side was,

With this good Sword thy Caufe I will maintain. And for thy Sake, O JAMES, will breathe each Vein.

Although the whole was a Piece of neat Work, yet I had no Fancy to wear it on Account of its Motto.

On the first of January, his Royal Highness entered Carlisle with all his Army, which filled the Town very sull, but did not continue so long; for the next Day the Liverpool Blues and some other Regiments began to march off: I had very good Quarters at the George, which I much wanted for some Time past, not having been in Bed, nor my Boots off all the Time that we lay before Carlisle; and as we had bad Weather, the Army in General was very much satigued with sollowing the Rebels.

It may be expected that I should give the Names of the Officers taken at Carliste.

After his Royal Highness had given such Orders, and disposed of all Things as he judg'd most proper, leaving the Command to General Hawley, he fet out from Carlisle, on Thursday the Third of January, and was at London on the Sunday following.

On the 3d there was an Accident happen'd at the House of Mr. Himor, in Carlifle: A Box, in which was some Gunpowder, being laid in a lower Room Window, near fome Grenado Shells ready fill'd, and a Case of Pistols, together with some Muskets in the same Room; it being in the House where the Recorder kept his Office, there was a great Resort of People to it, getting their Paffports figned; when a Boy accidentally happening to fnap one of the

The Pistole, it went off, and fired the Grenado Shells, Powder Box, Pistols and Musquets, which all flew off at once: By the Explosion, the Window and one Man were blown quite into the Street. This caus'd a great Surprize and Confusion, the Occasion not being known; the Guards stood to their Arms, and the House being all in a Smoak, such as could find the Way to the Door came out with their Hair singed; yet it is very remarkable there was no body killed.

Before I follow the Rebels into Scotland, I think it proper to return to London, (having already mention'd what has been done for the Defence of the Government, in several different Towns and Places; and to note by the Way, that the Coasts were well secured against the threatned Invasion from France, by the Vigilance and Activity of our Sea Commanders) to shew what was doing in that great Metropolis.

His

His Majesty having resolved to form an Army near London, to be ready upon any Emergency that might happen; Orders were issued December the Fourth, for the Regiment of Scots Highlanders, and some other Regiments of Horse and Foot, that were quartered about Deptford, in Kent, to march to Finebley-Common, to encamp there. Days after, a Train of 32 Pieces of Cannon, with Carriages, Powder-Waggons, &c. were drawn out of the Tower, and twenty-four Chests of Arms were sent from the same Place for the Use of the Army, which his Majesty was determined to command in Person; but upon Advice that the Rebels were retreated out of England, and that there were 'Grounds to apprehend an Invalion in the South and South-East Part of the Kingdom, the forming a Camp on Finchley-Common was countermanded, the Artillery carried back into the Tower, and the Forces which were cantoned at Bar-? net, and in the neighbouring Towns and Villages, were ordered into Kent and ` Suffex. (On

On the 7th, a great Number of Saifors attended at the Admiralty, in Confequence of the Intimation that they had that Day received, that their Country flood in Need of their immediate Service, and entered themselves with remarkable Chearfulness and Alacrity; they were ordered on board several Privateers and small Vessels lying in the River, which were taken into the Service of the Government, and were to fail directly to prevent the Landing of the French Troops, said to be actually embarked at Offend and Dunkirk. Signals were ordered to be placed on the Suffex, Kentish, and Effex Coasts, by hoisting Flags in the Day, and firing Guns in the Night, by which Means Notice of an Invalion would be at the Tower and St. James's Park in a few Hours. All the Life-Guards and Horse-Grenadiers were grdered to be ready at the firing of some Guns, which were to be as a Signal. Orders were fent by the Lords of the Admiralty to all Commanders of Ships in the River, not to fire a Gun upon any Account, that the Signal-Gunsonight be the more plainly heard, in Case of any Invasion or Insurrection. Thousand Foot and One Thousand Horse were ordered for the Coasts of Essex and Suffolk, and Four Thousand Foot and One Thousand Five Hundred Horse for the Coasts of Kent and Suffex, in order to be ready to oppose any foreign Invasion. All the Forts and Castles in the Kingdom were ordered to be doubly garrison'd, and a Magazine of Arms to be established in each of the Forts on Castles, in order to obviate the Inconveniency and Danger of waiting for Arms from the Tower of London, upon any fudden Emergency.

The Lord-Mayor and Court of Lieutenancy of London ordered, "That
"whereas his Majesty had been pleased "to direct, that Alarm-Posts should be "appointed, and proper Signals to give "Notice to the Guards to march on the "first Notice of any Tumult or Insur"rection in the Cities of London or
"Westminster; and that the said Signals
"should be seven Cannon, one fired
"every

" every half Minute from the Tower," " to be answer'd from St. James's Park, "and, vice versa, every Officer and " Soldier in the Six Regiments of Militia, " without waiting for Beat of Drum, " cr any other Notice, do immediately, " on hearing the faid Signals, repair " with their Arms, and the usual Quan-" tity of Powder and Ball, to their re-" spective Rendezvous; the Red Regi-" ment upon Tower-Hill, the Green in "Guildhall-Yard, the Yellow in St, " Paul's Church-Yard, the White at " the Royal Exthange, the Blue in old " Fish-street, and the Orange Regiment " in West-Smithsteld." The two Regiments of Tower Hamlets had also the like Orders; the First to meet on Tower-Hill, and the Second in Sun-Tavern Fields, Shadwell.

The Veteran Scheme was now in high Esteem, as well for the Benevolence and Humanity in the Design of it, as for the actual Service it did the Common Cause, by animating and encouraging the Soldiers to fight bravely for their Country, that that large Sums were daily enterd into the Subscription-Books, which were opened the 27th of Navember, in the Chamberlain's Office at Guildhall. His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales sent. the Gentlemen who were the Managers, a Bank Note of 5001. the Lord Chief Justice Lee, the Master of the Rolls, and the Judges subscribed 12001. the Chamber of London 1000 l. the Gentlemen of the City of London paid in 523 l, 198. the Body of Civilians in Doctors Commons 500 l. the Drapers Company 300 l. the Fishmongers Company 3001. and &weral other Companies 1001 each, befides Abundance of other Donations both publick and private, that were continually fent in, and subscribed; to the faid Scheme; fo that the Managers were enabled to furnish the Soldiers: with all the Necessaries they had Occafion for, to defend them against the and Inconveniencies of Hardships Winter Campaign, and the Severities of the Northern Climate."

The 10th of December, at a general Meeting of the Subscribers to the Subfcription raifed for the better Support and Encouragement of the Soldiers during the Winter Season, towards the Suppresfion of the Rebellion, a Committee of the principal Subscribers was chosen, for the Disposal of the Money arising from fuch Subscription; the Proceedings being communicated to his Royal Highners the Duke of Cumberland and Marshal Wade, defiring their Opinions how the Money should be best applied, who unanimously resolved, that they should contract for 12,000 Pair of Breeches, 12,000 Shirts, 10,000 Woollen Caps, 10,000 Pair of Woollen Stockings 12,000 Pair of knit Woollen Gloves, 9000 Pair of Woollen Spatterdashes, and 1000 Blankets, to be immediately provided and sent to the Army; and likewife resolved that the Sum of 5000 l. Part of the faid Subscription-Money already raifed, be fet a-part for the rewarding of fuch Soldiers as should be maini'd or wounded in the Service; and that the further Sum of 300 l. be applied as Marthal 11 I

Marshal Wade should direct, for the more speedy Recovery of the sick Soldiers under his Command, in Augmentation of the Allowance granted by the Crown on that Behalf.

At this Time the Stage-Players were not wanting in their Contribution towards the Soldiers; the whole Amount of three Nights acting the Beggar's Opera, proposed by Mrs. Cibber, who acted Polly gratis, making 600 l. was, on the 10th of December, paid into the Chamber of London, by Mr. Rich, for the Encouragement of the Soldiers: Every Comedian play'd gratis, and the Tallow-Chandlers gave the Candles.

At which Time the following PROLOGUE was spoken.

M Ethinks, I fee Britannia's Genius here,
Who smiles to find her Guardian Sons your Care;
Whilst Every Heart with Indignation glows, Warm'd with the Sense of injur'd Britain's Woes.

If aught be glorious in a Soldier's Name, To your Affections now, how just his Claim! For you his unremitted Zeal defies
The changeful Season, and the inclement Skies:
With painful Steps the tedious March endures,
And gives his own Repose to purchase yours.
Conscious how much we to their Valour owe,
Let us with usual Warmth united shew
Ingratitude's a Crime we dare not know

Flush'd with Success these lawless Vagrants come; From France their Maxims, and their Gods from Rome. Russians who sight not in fair Honour's Cause, For injur'd Rights, or violated Laws; But like the Savage Race they roam for Prey, And where they pass Destruction marks their Way!

O! thou who dost o'er human Acts preside, If Britain is thy Care, be WILLIAM's Guide; The noble Youth, whom ev'ry Eye approyes, Each Tongue applauds, and ev'ry Soldier loves; In the dire Conslict may thy Power afford Strength to his Arm, and Vict'ry to his Swerd; On Freedom's Basis may he fix the Throne, And add new Lustre to his Father's Crown.

Whilst the Rebels were doing the Business of the French in the North, vast Preparations were still making on the Coasts of France and French Flanders, for invading this Kingdom; and the Informations which the Government received of their Embarkations, particularly at Dunkirk, induced his Majesty to give such Directions as were necessary for appointing proper Alarm-Posts, at which the Troops were to affemble, and fuch Signals as I have already observed: And at the same Time a Proclamation was issued, commanding all Officers, Civil and Military, to cause the Coasts to be carefully watched; and upon the first Approach of the Enemy to direct all Horses, Oxen, Cattle, and other Provifions to be driven and removed twenty Miles from the Place where the Enemy should attempt to land; and such Regiments of regular Troops as were at that Time quartered as I have said, in and about London, were ordered down to the Coasts of Kent, Susjex, &c. These timely Precautions, join'd to the Zeal and Spirit thewn by the Gentlemen, Clergy, and other Inhabitants of the Maritime Counties, had fo good an Effect, together with the Officers of his Majesty's Navy, who served on board the Squadron then in the Channel, that the Defigns of the French were totally defeated, notwithstanding they frequently changed their Schemes, which served only to fatigue their Troops and to distress their Subjects

Subjects to the last Degree, by ruining the little Trade still left in that Kingdom.

As Lord John Drummond, Lord Lewis Gordon, and the rest of the Rebel Chiefs, in Scotland, were all this Time labouring with great Diligence, as well as much ·Violence, to draw together a confiderable Force, in order to join the Pretender on his Return into that Country: The King's loyal Subjects there shewed the greatest Zeal and Spirit, in exerting their utmost Force, in order to oppose them. The City of Glasgow particularly distinguished itself upon this Occasion, by levying fifteen Companies of 60 Men each at their own Expence; and having compleated them about the 1st of December, they marched from thence under the Command of the Right Hon. the Earl of - Hume for Sterling. The City of Edinbargh also having received his Majesty's License for that Purpose raised 1000 Men for the King's Service; and the Earl of Loudon, with the Forces under his Command, by marching from Inverness, Inverness, obliged a Body of the Rebels to raise the Blockade of Fort-Augustus, which they had formed under the Command of the Son of Lord Lovat; and at the same Time the Macleods and Man-roes scoured all the North of the Rebels as far as to within 12 Miles of Aberdeen. Such were the Transactions in South and North-Britain to the Close of the Year. But I proceed to give an Account of the Rebels from their Retreat out of England to their besieging Sterling-Castle.

On the 20th of December, after the Rebels had passed the Esk, they divided into two Bodies; the Lesser, consisting of about 2000 Men, march'd to Eecleseekou, where they staid all Night, and the next Day march'd to Mossat; the larger Body of about 4000, proceeded to Annan, where they staid all Night, except 500 who continued their March towards Dumfries: The Report having reached thither of the Deseat of the Rebels near Lancaster, the Inhabitants of Dumfries being mostly very loyal People,

People, were preparing to fall upon the dispersed Rebels, as they had done at Kendal and Penrith; but to their Loss, they found that instead of a few Stragglers which they expected on the 21th; the Body of 4000 marched into Dumfries, where they lodg'd until Monday the 23d, and imposed a Contribution on the Town of 2000 1. Sterling, to be paid directly; although this was remonstrated against, as a Thing not only hard, but impracticable, yet it was peremptorily infifted on; but at last, 1100 l. was accepted in Ready Money; they took Mr. Riddel and Mr. Crofby, as Hostages for the Payment of the Remainder. The Rebels also insisted on: 1000 Pair of Shoes; paid nothing for their Quarters; and at their marching off, ordered their Baggage to be fent after them; and if any Person durst presume to molest any of their Stragglers, the Hostages should suffer for the Fault. ويغو ومنونا العراب

They continued their March from Drumlanenig to Glafgow, at which City they arrived on the 25th, they being but a very indifferent Christmas-Box to the Inhabitants, and many of them got it on the Side of their Head: In the mean Time, the Northern Rebels were moving towards Perib, under Lord John Drummond, Lord Lewis Gordon, the Master of Lovat, and some other Chiefs; so that now it appeared plainly their Defign was to collect all their Strength upon the Forth, in order to beliege Sterling Castle. This Body of the Rebels had some Artillery, Ammunition and Money with them, which had been landed from on board some Spanish Privateers, and brought from the West-Coast to Perth, which they had fortified for a Place of Arms; they fitted out an arm'd Sloop there, as they did the Hazard, which they had. taken, and a flout Privateer at Montrofe.

The main Body of the Rebels continued feveral Days at Glafgow, to the Sorrow of the Inhabitants of that City: It is matural to imagine that the Condition of these People must be remarkably unhappy muhappy, as having the Enemy within their Walls, and many Circumstances extending their Situation, capable of fileling them with very afflicting Apprehaufions, for in the first Place, this City had been always confidered as the Head-Quarters of the Whigs in the Reigns of Charles and James II. and was thereby exposed to very indifferent Treatment; in the next, it has been always, fince the Revolution, and more aspecially since the Union, the best affected Place in North Britain to our Establishment; and lastly, even since the breaking out of the late Rebellion A they had not only Down the greatest Loyalty to the Government, in railing a Regiment Mornits Service; but had also marched them to Edinburgh, (and thereby left themselves defenceless) for fear shat the Rabels should force them to disband it : Such was the State . of this Place at this critical Juncture, when the Mack Prince enter'd it mathe Head of his Forces, and thereby had the Inhabitants at his Morey. But, no Doubt, they were fonfible of their Dan-Botanka Apan Adiq mothing contrary to their . · 11:

their Duty to deliver themselves: On the contrary, they shewed very visible Signs of Sorrow and Sadness; and the Chevalier, though he often appeared in Publick, was scarce attended so much as by the Mob. It is not at all strange, that the Behaviour of the Rebels, all Things confidered, should be worse at Glasgow than at other Places; but so it was; they found themselves in a very rich City, abounding in whatever they wanted; and therefore they considered it as a Magazine, and began to furnish themselves with Broad-Cloth, Tartan, Shoes, Stockings, and Bonnets, to the Amount of 10,000 l. Sterling; so that by this Means the Pretender in a Manner new-cloathed his Army, which proved a great Means of keeping them together; otherwise it is to be supposed, many of them would Have deserted, the and it inachino ment

On the 3d of January, having finished their Business at Glaseow, glean'd up what they could, and enlisted about 60 Recruits, then it was judged Time to remove, and accordingly they marched that that Day to Kilfyth. The Pretender's Son lay at Mr. Campbel's, ct Shawfield, near Killyth; ordered his Steward to provide every Thing, and promis'd Payment; but next Morning told him, that the Bill should be allowed to his Master at accounting for the Rents of Killyth, it being a forfeited Estate. The next Day they proceeded to Bannockburn, and on the 5th, having most Part of their Forces, together, they i fummon'd the Town and Castle of Sterling to surrender ;; abut General Blakeney answered, That he would defend the Place to the last Extremity; for as he had liv'd, he . was determin'd to die a Man of Honour. Thus I have given you a Journal of the Rebels Proceedings, from their leaving North-Britain to Derby, and back again; only it is to be observ'd in general, that the Roman Catholicks and Jasobites were very officious in throwing themselves in their Way, in the Towns and Villages as they marched through, making low Bows; but the Rebels quite out-did them in Complaifance, for they stooped even to their Feet, and stripped them of their Shoes, Sides, so that they left many of their Friends and others Bare-soot; and if Complaint was made to their Officers, their Answer was, If the Men want Shoon, i.e. Sides, they must bave them. The Town of Sterling is of no great Strength; for after some Time spent in Treaty, it surrendered, and the Rebels entered it on the 8th; when having again summoned the Cattle to as little Purpose as before, they took a final Resolution of besieging it in Form, with what Artillery they had; and accordingly put it in Execution.

His Majesty having thought sit to appoint Lieutenant-General Hawley, Commander in Chief of his Forces in North-Britain, and Major-General Huske to command under him, the Troops that formed the Army in the Neighbourhood of Edinburgh, marched from Newcastle with great Expedition, and whatever was requisite for their Use, or could contribute to facilitate their Motions, was so readily supplied them on their

their Route, that by the 10th, it was a judged expedient to dispose Things for advancing towards the Relief of Sterling Castle. In the mean Time, the Rebels were very busy in preparing to carry on the Siege.

Lord George Murray, and Lord John Drummond had been at Alloway, concerting how to bring over the Cannon, brought from Perth in Floats, and afterwards survey'd the Passage at Cambes, to see if it could be done more conveniently there; they also went to Dumblain, leaving 100 Men at Alloway.

Before the Rebels entered the Town of Sterling, the Militia Officers, with all their Arms, went into the Castle; their Men by small Parties making their Escape. Major-General Blakeney was well provided with Men and Provisions, resolving to hold out the Garrison. The Rebels having got all the Cannon over the Forth, broke Ground on their 2th, between the Church of Sterling and a large House call'd Mar's Work, and was was for erecting a Battery there against the Castle: For this Purpose, five large Pieces of Cannon were lying ready in the Market-Place, and three small ones were coming from Airth; they also sent several Expresses te their Troops in Pertbskire, to hasten their March towards Sterling, where they shut up their Ports, and planted Guards at all the Out-lets of the Town, to prevent the People from coming in for, or going out with Intelligence to the King's Troops. main Body of the Rebels being about Falkirk, had Orders to march upon the 13th towards Linkhgow, with all the-Waggons and Carts they could get together, for carrying off all the Provisions they could meet with.

On the 13th, Major General Huske, marched with eight Regiments from Edinburgh to Linlithgow: On his Arrival there, the Rebels, on the 14th, marched towards: Sterling, to their main Body, who had got most of their Friends to the South-Side of the Forth, and were endeavouring to spirit up their Men to Action;

Action; the same Day they got together w two Pieces of Cannon of fixteen Pounders, two of eight, and three of three Pounders, and expected four more by Water, for their Battery in the Town: They had also a great Number of Pascines, but had not been able to plant their Cannon; General Blakeney having fired several Times upon them from the Castle, and demolished their Works. Major General Huske, with the Forces under him, and the Remains of Gardiner's and Hamilton's Dragoons, on the 16th, took Possession of Falkirk, and were joined there by 1000 Argyleshire Men, under the Command of Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, and were followed foon after by General Hawley, with the rest of the Army and the Artillery; early in the Morning of the 17th, Cobbam's Dragoons came up, when it was refolved to march the next Morning to attack the Rebels, who, by all Accounts, lay in the Enclosures near Torwood; but, by the Reports of several People who were fent out to reconnoitre, they were observ'd to be in Motion early in the Morning

ing, as they had also been on the 16th; fome reported that they had been entrenching themselves in Torwood, others that they seemed inclinable to raise the Siege of Sterling Castle; but many affirm'd that they meant to advance and meet the King's Troops, who lay encamped on a Spot of low Ground, a Quarter of a Mile South-West of Falkirk. The Rebel Army had been encamped on Plene-Moor, to the Westward of Torwood, about three Miles Distance from one another: They decamp'd in the Morning, marching Eastward; because the Wind was South-West, they then marched to the South of Torwood, in order to get the Windward. At this Distance is is easy to say, Care should have been taken to obtain better Intelligence; but let us remember, that if an Enemy be irresolute (as was the Case) no certain Intelligence can be obtained.

Lieutenant General Hawley, having confidered the Situation of Affairs, and the feveral Accounts received, resolved to defer attacking the Rebels until the next next Day, as well in regard to the Foulness of the Weather, as because he was defirous of obtaining such Intelligence as might enable him to make the most advantageous Dispositions for acting against them with his Cavalry and Artillery: Some Dragoons that had been fent to re-connoitre, returned about Noon, with Intelligence that the Rebels were actually in Motion, in oder to attack the King's Forces; and by One in the Afternoon, they were feen about three Miles Distance marching in two Columns towards fome rifing Ground to the Southward, upon a Moor near Falkirk; upon which our Troops go: under Arms, and formed immediately in the Front of the Camp, and bent their March towards the fame Ground, to which it was apprehended the Rebels were going, being a large Mile to the Lest of the Camp; no sooner were the Troops got thither, but they saw the Rebels moving up, their Right extending Southward; but as there was a Moraís, or Boggy-Ground, upon our Left, we could not stretch so far as they;

they; so that their Left was almost opposite to our Center: Our Foot were formed in two Lines, Part upon Plain Ground, and the rest declining; our Dragoons were on the Left Flank with General Hawley; Major General Huske commanded on the Right: In this Difposition we moved forwards, having the Morass on our Lest; the Dragoons were ordered to advance about fifty Paces before the Front-Line and attack the Rebels Sword in Hand, to give the Left Time to form, and the Lines to ad-The Dragoons attack'd most gallantly, and received the Rebels Fire, which disordered some of the Horses, and they broke upon our Foot, who fired too foon, by which some of the Dragoons were unfaddled; in this Confusion, some of the Dragoons rade quite off from the Field of Battle, and did not stop till they got near Linkthgow; on which it was reported that they were all that had ofcap'd from the Battle: This Disorder occasioned our two Lines of Foot to give Way, and many of them went off: But this Misfortune, which which at first looked like a lost Battle, was quickly recovered; the Dragoons bravely returned to the Charge, and retrieved their Honour; Barrel's and Ligonier's were immediately rallied by Brigadier Cholmondley, and being afterwards attacked by a Body of Rebels twenty deep, fairly drove them back, and put them to Flight. At this Time a Body of Foot, by the Care of Major-General Hu/ke, formed in the Rear of these two Regiments, which the Rebels feeing, durst not advance; and about the same Time Brigadier Mordaunt rallied the Remains of the scattered Battallions into their feveral Corps, in which he was affifted by the Officers; it was then four o'Clock in the Afternoon, when it rained heavily and blew hard, which, in à great Measure, was the Cause of our Misfortunes, for our Men could not se before them, and consequently the Rebels had the Advantage of us greatly in that Particular: Besides, as it rained hard' before, many of the Firelocks were for wet, that it is believed not above one in' five, that were attempted to be fired; X 3 went went off. Our Loss was but small, not exceeding 300 Men; and it was believed the Rebels lost three Times that Number. It was a Misfortune we could not get up our Artillery to us; for it rain'd so heavily in the Night, and having a steep Hill to ascend, and the Horses but bad, they could not get forward; and when we returned to our Camp, we found the Captain of the Train had abandoned it, and the Drivers off with their Horses; which obliged us to leave some Pieces of Cannon behind: The Grenadiers of Barrel's Regiment drew down one to the Camp, and Horses were got at Falkirk to bring off three others. The Evening being excessive rainy, it was thought proper to march the Troops to Linkthgow that Night, and put them under Cover; otherwise we should have continued in our Camp, being Masters of the Field of Battle; and Brigadier Mordaunt was ordered to take Post there. When we came to strike our Tents, and finding that many of the Drivers had run of with their Horses; immediately the General

neral gave Orders that what Tents were left frould be burnt, which was accordingly done.

During the Time the Army was on its March to meet the Rebels, a Body of them, with some Colours, passed the River Carran, towards the Right of the Camp, with a Design, I suppose, to attack it; but the Argylestire Men being posted in the Front, kept them in Awe, and effectually strustrated their Intention. The Glasgow Regiment was posted at some Farm - Houses, where it was thought they might be of Use, when the Action began, and remained formed there, notwithstanding they saw that the Dragoons, and Part of the Foot, had given Way.

I have also to add, that it had been resolved that the Army should remain at Lindithgow, whither it had retired on the 17th at Night; but upon Examination, it was found that the Troops had no Powder that would take Fire, from the excessive Rains for Twenty-four Hours

Hours before; and therefore a Refolution was taken upon the 19th in the Morning, to march to Edinburgh and the Places adjacent, where the whole Army arrived that Afternoon, about Four o'Clock.

The Abandoning the Camp, and the Loss of the Cannon, look'd so like a Defeat, that it gave the Jacobites a Handle to vaunt, as if the Rebels had got the Victory, whereas they were indeed beat by a handful of Men, and fled shamefully. The Facts are true, that the Camp was abandoned and the Cannon loft; but the first was done with Judgment, and preserved the Men, who must have lain upon their Arms all Night, which was so rainy and stormy that they were wet to the Skin, had no Provisions, and would have been subject to continual Alarms all Night; and the last was occasioned by the Misbehaviour of the Officer who had the Charge of the Train, who finding that he was to be tried by a Court-Martial, cut an Artery in his Arm, which bled him to Death, and so made his Escape, by going out of the World. Oh the Whole, the Rebels have neither gained -Honour nor Advantage by an Action, in which two Regiments, with Part of the Old Buffs, and some others rallied by Major-General Hufte, in all making not above four Regiments, the Dragoons excepted, fairly drove them out of that Field, which they entered with fo promising a Prospect; and in the End, General Hawley drew off his Men, and retreated in good Order to this Camp at Falkirsk . The Enemy did not venture to pursue them, which was greatly owing to the gallant Behaviour of two Squadrons of Cobham's Dragoons, and four Battalions of the Right Wing, which composed the Rear-Guard, under the Command of Major-General Hufke.

Sir Robert Monroe was wounded and afterwards taken Prisoner, together with his Brother; the latter was a Surgeon and an eminent Man in his Pro-

Profession, who attended Sir Robert to the Field, merely out of brotherly Affection; both of which, at the same Time, the Rebels dered in cold Blood. There was no Account of the Killed and Wounded published by Authority: The Officers in general distinguished themselves extremely, and fome very particularly, such as Brigadier-General Cholmondley, who was dangeroully wounded, and contracted a Pally from the Cold he caught in the Field; Major-General Hufke, by his great Vigilance and Presence of Mind shewn on this Occasion, acquired the highest Reputa-tion; and Brigadier Mordaunt was allowed to have done all that could be expected from the most knowing and experienced Officer: It is but also just to the Memory of Colonel Legonier, to mention, that although he was in a bad State of Health, for which he was blooded and blifter'd, yet he could not be restrain'd from leading his Men to the Field of Battle, where he got wet to the Skin, Skin, by which he contracted a violent Cold and Quinsey, and died thereof: Nay, even in the Battalions, where the Men did not behave so well as might be expected, their Officers shewed themselves to the greatest Advantage, and gave glorious Examples of Intrepidity, though they were but ill copied; this made the Loss fall heavier amongst them, in Proportion, than has been on the like Occasions. I have endeavoured to calculate the following List of Officers kill'd, &c. from the best Accounts I could then procure.

Major Lockbart was made Prisoner, and carried away to the Highlands, but joined the King's Army at Aberdeen, after having made his Escape, and brought off Prisoner the Rebel Officer that guarded him.

William Thurnton, Esq, of Cattal, in Yorkshire, maintained a Company at his own Expense, marched them to the Battle of Falkirk, where he distinguished himself very gallantly .- I wish I could fay that he met with that Respect due to his great Merit. An Officer in the Establishment blishment, behaving well, is Praiseworthy, yet he only does his Duty: But a Volunteer that ventures his Life and Fortune in Defence of the Government. in Times of the most imminent Danger and Difficulty, deserves to be had in the highest Esteem, by all true Lovers of our happy Constitution. — Captain Thornton and his Men suffered much at the Battle of Falkirk, many of them being taken Prisoners; of twenty that were in Jeopardy, he only, with Difficulty, escaped. As this Action proved fatal to so many Officers, it proved as fortunate to a great many others; for the Rebels having fent most of the Officers that were taken Prisoners at Preston-Pans, to Glames, Coupar, and Lislie, when they were drawing together their Forces about Sterling, the loyal Inhabitants of Dundee, and other Places, formed a Design of rescuing them, and conducted them back to Edinburgh, which they executed with great Spirit and Diligence; and they accordingly arrived at that City on the 19th, the very Day after the Army returned thither from Linlithgow. The releasing of those Officers at this Juncture, was a very seasonable Service, as it visibly preferved them from being hurried by the Rebels into the North, as would undoubtedly have been the Case, if they had remained Prisoners but a few Days longer: It was likewise a full Proof of the fleady Loyalty and fincere Attachment to the Government, of those who undertook to rescue them, since they did it at a Time when the Rebels were flushed with their late Advantage; but the Consequence of the Thing will, best appear, by giving the Reader an Account of the Persons that were thus fet at Liberty.

When the News of the Battle reached London, it made it necessary to provide for the immediate Extinction of to dangerous a Flame, by fending down a sufficient Number of Forces, not only to render the Army in Scotland more formidable than before, but to encrease its Strength to such a Degree, as to free the Nation from any Apprehensions of its Consequences, in Case the Enemy should grow more: numerous, or the French or Spaniards perfift in their Design of attempting an Invasion for their Support, in any-Part of his Majesty's Dominions, It was with this View that a Resolution was taken for embarking the Hessian Troops in British Pay, then in the Neighbourhood of Antwerp, for Scotland; it was also thought convenient, in order to restore the Spirit of the Soldiers, to extinguish all Animosities and encourage the well-affected in North-Britain, that his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland should immediately go down thither: It is true, the embarking the Hessians at that Time, was

was in some Respect inconvenient, as the French had just discovered their Design of attacking Brussels; but the Necessity of restoring our internal Tranquility, was confess'd both at Home and Abroad, of fuch high Importance to the Common Cause, as well as of fo fingular an Import to ourselves, that it was generally approved; as the Consequences which have at-tended it shews, that it was undertaken upon right Motives. I might here mention some other Methods that were taken to frustrate the Designs of our Enemies, which I will omit for the prefent, in order to return to the Progress of the Rebels, in the Siege of Sterling Castle.

Soon after the Battle, the Pretender Son returned with his Forces to Sterling, when the Rebels summoned the Castle to surrender in the Morning, and again in the Afternoon; but General Blakeney answered, as before, That as he had always been looked upon as a Man of Honour, the Rebels should find be would die so; which they found too true in the End.

fanuary the 24th, the Siege proceeded but very flowly; the Castle had fired so often on the Men at work upon the Batteries, and with so much Exactness, that the Rebels could not get any of their own People to go near them; for which Reason the Irish Brigade, and Drummond's Regiment from France, were ordered to do that Service.

On the 27th, the Rebels had got two Batteries crected, the one on Ganwan-Hill, within forty Yards of the Castle, and the other on Lady's-Hill, On the 28th, they got Cannon mounted on them, consisting of two Pieres of 18 Pounders, two of 16, and three of 12 Pounders; and whilst this was doing, they continued to fire upon the Castle with Small Arms, which did little or no Mischief, tho' at the same Time it exposed their Men extremely, and they suffered by the Fire of the Castle

Castle very severely, which put them; more and more out of Humour with the Siege; and what contributed to en-crease their Uncasiness, was the great Want of Provisions, which obliged them to send out Parties, in order to carry off what Meal they could find on all Sides of the Country. The greatest Part of their Army returned into the Neighbourhood of Falkirk: They fent away the Prisoners to Down Castle on the 24th, except the Officers; and the Hazand Sloop, to which they gave the Name of Prince Charles Snow, was refitted and fent to France, with the News of their Success; which they magnified in very high Terms, as appeared by the Accounts of it printed at Paris. The Rebels begun to be heartily tired of the Siege, they not liking to fight against Stone-Walk; although it must be owned they spared no Labour in getting thither their Cannon, though harraffed all the Time by the Vulture Sloop, and by Small Craft fill'd with Soldiers, which did them confiderable Damage; neither when it was brought thither :

thither and planted could they do much their Batteries being injudiciously erected; and the Highlandmen shew'd a great Aversion for that Kind of Service, for which they are naturally unfit; and at the same Time the Garrison did them a great deal of Mischief, tho' they were able to do little or none to the Garrison. As it had been customary for the Rebels to deny their Mortality, General Blakeney would not permit them to bury their Dead; in order to convince them, that their Men were not invulnerable; after that about fixty of the Rebels were killed in one Day, and exposed to View; then they were convinced of their Frailty. A Drum had been fent about the Town, with Notice, that every Person that was taken near the Castle should be shot; and that if any of the Town's People entertained any Wives or Children of the Soldiers who were in the Castle, should be punished with Military Execution.

Notwithstanding all the Pains the Rebels had taken in order to carry on the Siege, yet it could scarce be said to advance all the Time they lay before it; but whether they might or not have fucceeded, 'tis requisite to mention what Advantages they proposed to themselves. by becoming Masters of this Place, and, those (though they were many) might be reduced to these Three: First, it would have given them Reputation at: Home and Abroad, as Sterling Castle is. famous and reputed a Place of greater. Importance then it really is: Secondly, if they could have got this Place, and fortified Renth, they might have focured? the Country behind them for the Winter; Thirdly, it would have afforded. them Means of maintaining themselves along the Coasts; on both Sides of the Island: which would have facilitated their receiving Supplies from Abroad: But the Gallant General Blakeney, who still defended the Castle with so much Constancy and Courage, made the Scats Rebels quite fick of the Siege, so that their Commanders found it necessary.

to entrust their Works entirely to the Irish and French, who by this Means were excessively weakened and satigued, having seven French Officers kill'd in one Day, which put them into great Confusion; where I shall leave them for the present, and re-assume the Progress of our Army.

After the necessary Preparations were made for taking the Field again, and marching a second Time to the Relief of General Blakeney, the Troops seemed to be exceedingly mortissed at the late Miscarriage, and shew'd an earnest Defire to repair it, by marching again to attack the Rebels; for which the necessary Preparations were made, and the Army, in a few Days, was in every Respect in a better Condition, and better provided than before.

On the 30th in the Morning, to the great Surprize and Joy of the Army, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland arrived at Edinburgh, after a Journey amazingly expeditious, considering fidering the Rigour of the Seafon.-He was receiv'd with all the Testimonies of Loyalty and Affection that could possibly be express'd, the Army looking upon his Presence as a sure Omen of Victory, and all Ranks and Degrees of People being delighted, at beholding a Prince, with whose Reputation they were so well acquainted, and by whom they had just Reason to expect being restor'd to the peaceable Possession of those Blessings, which, under the mild Government of the King his Father, they had, until the breaking out of this Rebellion, constantly enjoy'd. The Sight of the Duke banish'd, all Remembrances of the late untoward Accident, and the Troops shew'd uncommon Ardour to be led (bad as the Weather was) into the Field again.

His Royal Highness review'd the Forces next Day, and march'd them in two Columns, consisting of fourteen Battalions; the Argyleshire Men, together with Cobham's Dragoons, leading the Van. He quartered that Night at Linlitlgow with eight Battalions; Brigadier Mordaunt was at Burrowsfouncs; the Dragoons lay in adjacent Villages; and Colonel Campbell with his brave loyal Highland-Men, took Post in the Front of the Army, towards the Avon. There was at this Time a considerable Body of the Rebels at Falkirk, who immediately retired towards Torwood, where it was given out that they were to be join'd by the rest of their Forces from Sterling; though it was afterwards known there never was any such Intention.

The next Morning his Royal Highness made the necessary Dispositions for continuing his March; at which Time, all the Officers and Soldiers, shewed the greatest Alacrity imaginable. The March was not long begun before Advice was brought, that the Rebels; instead of preparing for an Engagement, were actually re-passing the Porth, with all the Diligence imaginable; and what gave Credit to this, was their advanced Guards Guards retiring every where with the utmost Precipitation. This News was foon after put out of Dispute, by the Noise they heard of two great Reports, like the blowing up of Magazines; upon which Brigadier Mordaunt was detached with the Dragoons and the Argyleshire Men to harrass the Robels in their Retreat. The Brigadier with the Troops under his Command, arrived at Sterling late that Evening, where they found the Rebels had abandon'd their Camp, with all their Artillery, and had blown up their Magazine of about 6000 Weight of Powder, which they kept in the Church of St. Ninian, a small Village just at the Entrance of Sterling; they set Fire to it by discharging a Musket into the Powder; there were three Men ordered to perform this Operation, but the first Firing ferved; the Church gave a terrible Shock, and destroyed several of the Rebels who were the Actors of this Tragedy, and nine of the Townsmen were also buried in the Ruins, which some of our Soldiers dug out for their (... M. . 7. Cloaths.

Clouths, whilst we halted at Sterling: Its great Shock also broke all the Windows in the Village, so that they appeared like to so many Bawdy-Houses: The Rebels likewise left behind them all the wounded Men they had made Prisoners in the late Action, and about twenty of their own sick Men; but it was so late when the King's Forces arrived, that it was judged needless to continue the Pursuit that Night.

The Rebel Army passed the Forth, at a Ford about sour Miles above the Town; for one Arch of the Bridge was blown up by General Blakener's Order, so that they could not pass over it.

February the 2d, about One in the Afternoon, his Royal Highnels enter'd Lierling *, and receiv'd the Compliments

^{*} Stering is much like Edinburgh, all up Hill, the Call e making the Toplof the Town: The great Street in this rown looks very grand, the Houses are exceeding

ments of General Blakeney, and the Officers of his Garrison, on that memorable Occasion: At the same Time his Royal Highness was pleased to testify his entire Satisfaction, with Respect to the gallant Defence the General had made, by which a Place of so much Importance had been preserved, and the Designs of the Enemy defeated.

One of the great Arches of Sterling-Bridge being blown up, the King's ing high, and there are feveral very antique Buildings in the highest Part of the Town, but greatly decay'd by being neglected. The Cattle is not to very difficult of Access as that of Edinburgh, but is esteemed equally: as strong, being built on a very high Rock. The Worls are capable of mounting more Cannon; there is also a Battery that commands the Bridge, which is of great Emportance, and feems to be the main End for which it was built: The Walls, with Variety of Casemats, and all the Outworks, are very firm, and in good Condition: The River Forth suns very near the Castle, having a great many winding Turns, which begins a little below the Bridge at Sterling, and continues to Alloway, the Seat of the Earl of Mar, which is 24 Miles by Water, and only 4 by Land: The Bridge of Sterling is a very noble Structure, confisting of four very large Arches. with Watch Towers on each Side.

Forces were obliged to flay until it was built up with Boards, which was done in two Days; during which Time, there was a great Number of the Rebels brought in to the Duke, who had hid themselves in Holes and Corners, and had not timely Notice of their Brethren leaving their Quarters. A whole Company of the Irish Brigades, that had deserted from the Rebels, came and delivered themselves up to his Royal Highness. From hence the Mock Prince fled with fo much Precipitation, that he neglected to carry off his Female Colonel Cameron, who was taken, and some Time after sent to Edinburgh Castle. In the mean Time, the Rebels were making what Dispatch they could to get out of the Way, whilst the Bridge was repairing, Part of them taking the Road by Tay-bridge, toward the Hills, the rest, consisting of Lord Lewis Gordon's Men, the Remains of the French, those commanded by Lord Ogilvie, and the few Horse they had, got into Perth that very Night that Brigadier Mordaunt arrived at Sterling; and though they had taken taken a great deal of Pains in throwing up feveral Works for the Security of that Place, yet they began to abandon it, and continued their March Northwards the next Morning. Lord John Drummond, with the Remains of the Scotch and Irifb that came from France, made the hest of their Way towards Montrofe; and on the 3d of February the Town of Perth wa totally evacuated: They left behind them thirteen Pieces of Iron Cannon, of eight and twelve Pounders nailed, up, and threw a great Quantity of Ammunition into the River, together with fourteen Swivel Guns that had been taken out of the Hazard Sloop, and let at Liberty the Sailors that had been confined there from the Time that the Veffel, was taken; but they thought fit to carry off Captain Hill, who commanded her, and some other Prisoners of the bester Sort. Jour Ting I

Notwithstanding their Retreat was made in so much Haste, yet it was but just in Time; for on the 4th the Bridge of Sterling was repaired, so that the Army passed over it at Six in the Morning, and the advanc'd Guard, consisting of the Argyleshire Men and the Dragoons, marched that Day to Crief; but the Foot were canton'd in and about Dumblain, where the Duke took up his Quarters that Evening; and the next Day the advanc'd Guard took Possession of Perth.

It is here to be observed (and I believe no History can shew a more illustrious Instance of the Effects of a General's Reputation, than this I have given you) that, in the Space of one single Week, his Royal Highness quitted the Court of the King his Father, put himself at the Head of his Troops in Scotland, and saw the Enemy slying with Precipitation before him; so that it may be said, that his Progress was like Light'ning, the Rebels sled at the Flash, searing the Thunder that was to solve.

On the 6th, the main Body of our Army got to Ferth *.

* This Town lies in a Hollow, and has formerly been called St. John's Town, in Honour of an antient Church dedicated to St. John: The English in Time of the War between the Bruces and Baliols, fortified it with large Bulwarks, the greatest Part of which the Scots demoilshed. It is, notwithstanding, a pretty little City, pleasantly situated between the Inches, which are two Greens so called, where they bleach their Linnen Cloth, of which they have a great Manufacture here; it has three long Streets, and many cross ones, with an old Wall in Ruins, furrounding every Side, excepting that which is hordered by the famous River Tay, the largest in all Scotland, by which it is supply'd every Tide with Commodities from the Sea in their light Veffels, which come up to a handsome Key joining to the Town. Perth is the second Town in Scatland for Dignity; near this formerly stood the old Town of Pereb. which being overflowed by an Inundation of the Tay. eccasioned the Building of this where it now stands; dris River produceth a great Quantity of Salmon for Export tation: About a Mile from this Town stands the famous Palace of Scone, extending 200 Feet in Front, and has been honoured with the Coronation of all the Kings of Scotland, ever fince Kenneth; who having, hard by, made a general Slaughter of the Pids, placed a Stone here, inclosed in a wooden Chair, for the Inauguration of the Kings of Scotland; it was brought out of Ireland into Argylesbire, and from thence hither, but was carried sway by the victorious King Edward the First, and placed in Westminster Abbey, where it now is.

On the 7th, the fourteen Swivel Guns that had been thrown into the River by the Rebels were taken up; and on the 8th, two Detachments of 500 Foot each were ordered forwards, one to Dunkeld, under the Command of Sir Andrew Agnew, with the Addition of 150 Argyleshire Men; the other under the Command of Lieutenant-Colonel Leighton, to Castle Menzie, a Mile on the other Side of Tay Bride; the rest of the Army remained at Perth four Days longer, in order to rest the Regiments of Foot: As the Rebels had fled quite off, and dispersed into small Parties, it was to no Purpose to fatigue our Men with forced Marches. After some little Rest at Perth, his Royal Highness continued his March to Aberdeen, where the Van of the Army arrived on Wednesday Feb. the 2.5th.

His Royal Highness, the Duke having Intelligence of a Magazine of the Rebels, at an old Caftle call'd Cargads fituated in a Defart among the Moutatains, near the Head of the Rives Don, about.

about fifty Miles from Aberdeen, detach'd 300 Foot under the Command of Major Morris, of Legonier's late Regiment, now Conway's, and 100 Dragoons under the Command of Captain Stuart, of Lord Mark Kerr's, the whole commanded by Lord Ancram, with Orders to take and destroy it; which they effectually did, bringing away 367 Firelocks, 370 Bayonets, and 12,000 Musquet Balls, which they scattered about the Country amongst the Snow and Hether, and flav'd and threw into the River Don 64 fingle Barrels of fine Spanish Powder, and then returned to Aberdeen on Thurfday, March the 5th, with the Lofs only of one Horse, and a Man lest behind at Tarland, ill of the Small-Pox, who afterwards died; though they had endured great Fatigue from the Badness of the Roads thro' the Mountains cover'd with Snow, and the Severity of the Weather, neither Officer nor Soldier had taken his Cloaths off for feven Days, from their setting out until their Return to Aberdeen.

As I had fallen fick with the Cold I, had got whilst our Army lay before Carlifle, and the excessive Fatigue I had endured before and after, made me not in a Condition to go this March with the Army; I followed them as soon as I grew better, by the Way of Edinburgh, crossing by Water from Leith to Kinghorn. When I was at Edinburgh , the ^{} Edinburgh, although built on a Hill, may be faid to lie in a Valley, by reason of two Hills which cover it, so that it is not feen until you just enter the City; one is called Salisbury Craigs, i.e. Rockse; the other makes the Foundation of the Castle. By the Highlanders, this town has been called Dun Eaden, i.e. Eaden Town; and by the Romans, Caftra Alasa, i. e. the Winged Camp; for, as Camden observes, Adian, in the British Tongue, signifies a Wing, and so Edinburgh (from a Word compounded of the British and Saxon Tongue) is nothing else but the Winged Borough. This City, in regard of its high Situation, the Goodness of the Air, and Fertility of the Soil, so many Seats of the Nobility lying round it, its being watered with excellent Springs, and reaching from East to West a Mile in Length, and half a Mile in Breadth, is, upon this Account, justly esteemed the Metropolis of Scotland; it is strongly, walled, and adomed with publick and private Buildings, well peopled and frequented, for the Advantage of the Sea, which the neighbouring Port of Leich affords; and as it was formerly honoured with the King's

the 6000 Hessians in British Pay were arrived there; they made a fine Appearance,

King's Refidence, fo it is now the facred Repository of the Records, and the chief Tribunal of Judice. At the Extremity of the East End of the City stands the Palace of Holyrbod: House; leaving of which, a little to the Left, you come through a populous Suburb, to the Entrance called the Water-Port; from hence, turning Well, the Street goes on in a streight Line through the whole City to the Cattle, which is above a Mile in Length, and faid by the Scots, to be the largest, longest and finest Street for Building and Number of Inhabitants in Europe: From the Palace Door, which stands on the Level with the lowest of the plain Country, this Street begins to ascend very gradually, being no where steep; but this Atcent being continued for fo long a Way, it is easy to understand that the farthest Part must necessarily be very high; for the Castle which stands, as it were, at the Extremity West, as the Palace does East, makes on all Sides (that only excepted which joins it to the City) a frightful and inaccessible Precipice. Besides the continual Ascent of this great Street, you are to suppose it running along the Top of a Ridge, so narrow, that the Street and the Row of Houses on each Side takes up the whole Breadth; fo that whether you turn to the Right or Left you go down Hill immediately, which is fo steep that it is very troublesome to those who have bad Lungs, to walk in those side Lanes, which they call Wynds. By this Description you will perceive, the City Hands upon a narrow Ridge of a long ascending Mountain: The Castle is situated on so high a Rock, and firongly fortified with a great Number of Towers, that it is looked upon as impregnable; this the Britains ance, and observed a good Discipline, and the Men in general were very handsome;

called Myned Agned; the Scots the Maiden Castle, and the Virgin Callle, because the Maiden Princesses of the Blood-Royal of the Pills were kept here in old Time. The Aicent upon which the City stands, has on the North Side a Pool, called the North Lock, and was formerly guarded by another on the South, called the South Lock, but this was drained many Years ago, and upon the Banks of it are built two feveral Tracts of Houses; the Magistrates have also with great Expence. brought one of the best Springs in Scotland into the City, which they did by Leaden Pipes, from a Hill at about three Miles Distance, and to make it more convenient, they have erected several slately Conduits in the Middle of the High freet, to serve the Town with Water. From the Palace-Gate Westward, this Street is called the Canon gate, as belonging to the Canons of the Abbey, which is a Kind of Suburb by itself; in this Street are several very magnificent Houses of the Nobility, built for their Residence when the Court was here; besides these, there are a great Number of Bawdyhouses in this Street, which amongst the Frequenters of them, it is a common Question to ask, if they have got a Pair of Canon gate Breekes, meaning the Venereal Disease, which rages here as well as in other Places of Note, and had made its Appearance about 200 Years ago; so early did they fall into the French Fathion: At the Upper or West End of this Street, where, it joins to he City, is a Gate, which like Ludgate, parts. the City from the Suburb, but does not discontinue the Street, which rather widens, and is much more spacious when you are through the Gate than before; this is the famous handsome; but their Women are quite the Reverse; which made me think they A a were famous Netherhow-Port, whose Doors were like to have been taken away by the Parliament, when the Affair of Captain Porteus was under their Consideration. Just at this Gate, on the outside, are two Streets, one of which is called St. Mery's Wynd, and the other the Leith Wynd; the first leads out of the City, South, into the great Road of England, by the Way of Keljo; and at the Foot of it is a Gate called the Cow Gate, which turns West to the Low-Street, because the Cattle are driven to and fro from the great Market Place; the other leads North into the Suburb called the Calton, from whence there is a very handsome Gravel Walk continued to the Town of Leith, which is kept in Repair at the publick Charge; we now enter the City at the Netherbow-Port, and have an open View up the High-Street, where stands the Tron Kirk, and near it. in the middle of the Street, stands the Guard-house, where two Companies of Soldiers, at the Charge of the Town, do Duty every Night, and keep the publick Peace of the City: About the Midway between the Netherboav and the Castle, stands the great Church. which before the Reformation was Collegiate, and dedicated to St. Giles, but it was afterwards divided into several preaching Places, and Districts of the City were allotted to them, so as to be Parochial. When King Charles the First erected a new fishoprick at Edinburgh. which before that Time was in the Diocele of St. Andrew's, it was made a Cathedral, and the Dean was Forenoon Minister of that Part of it called the New Kirk, which is the Choir, Chancel, or Eastern Part: the great Cross under the Tower is called the Old Kirk, and the Front or West Part of it is divided into two were given them for a Curse, as ours are for a Bleffing; at least this might be reckoned two Parts: that on the South is called the Tolbooth Kirk. and that on the North Haddo's Hole, from the Lord of Haddo, who being a great Loyalist and Anti-Covenanter, was kept Prisoner in a Vault there until he was belieaded; in the Steeple, which is very high, is a Set of Musical Bells, and the Town gives a Man a yearly Salary for playing on them, from half an Hour after Eleven, 'till half an Hour after Twelve every Day, Sundays and Holidays excepted. On the South-Side of this Church, formerly the Church-yard, is a Square of very fine Buildings, called the Parliament Close, the West and South-Sides of which are mostly taken up with the Parliament-House, the several Courts of Justice, the Council Chamber, the Exchequer, the publick Registers, the Lawyer's Library, the Post-Office, &c. The great Church makes up the North-Side of the Spuare; the East and part of the South-Side is built into private Dwellings, which are very flately, lofty and strong, being seven Stories high in the Front of the Square, and the Hill they stand on having a very steep Descent, some of them are no less than sourteen Stories high backwards; in the Middle of the Square or Court is the Statue of King Charles the Second, in Brass. erected upon a stately Pedestal, at the Charge of the City : the great Opening into the High-street, being the only Passage into it for Coaches, is at the North-East Corner. a little from which is the Market Cross, where all the Proclamations and publick Acts are read, and published by Heralds and Sound of Trumpet. Here is the great Parade where Gentlemen meet for Business or News and ferves as an Exchange every Day from Eleven to One: Near the East End of the great Church stands reckoned as an Antidote against that Love and Respect which ours justly methe Tolbooth, or common Prison, as well for Criminals as Debtors; the great Church and the Prison standing in the Middle of this Street, obstruct its Breadth and Beauty for some Space; but beyond those Buildings. and the middle Row, called the Lucken-Booths, the Street opens again to its former Breadth, and is now called the Lawn Market, from the Linnen Market being kept here; this Street extends West, to a narrow Part which leads to the Castle Hill; here the Street parts in two, one of which leads directly to Castle Hill, as already noticed, and the other stands South West, which descending gradually, leads to the Grass-Market, a Place like Smithfield, on Account of a weekly Market. for Black Cattle, Sheep, Horses, &c. Without this is a Street called the West-Bow, inhabited mostly by Wholesale Dealers, in Iron, Pitch, Tar, Oil, Hemp, Flax, Lintseed, Drugs, Woads, and such like heavy Goods.

The next remarkable Buildings are, first, Heriot's Work, which is a large stately Pile, adorned with a consecrated Chapel, and pleasant Gardens: It was built by the Rev. Dr. Paleangubal, to whom George Heriot, Jeweller to King James VI. left near 17001, to be disposed of in pious Uses; which this worthy Dean did, by building and endowing this House, and giving Statutes to it, which he ordered should be unalterable. It is a Nursery for an infinite Number of the Sons of Freemen, who are maintained, cloathed, and educated in useful Learning, 'till they are fit for Apprenticeships, or to go to the University, where they are allowed handsome Salaries and Exhibitions. The next most remarkable, is the Royal Infirmary, lately erected, but not quite finished; but by our fick and wounded Soldiers it was pretty well filled, where they had very good Care taken of them: It is a large beautiful Building, and has a great many Conveniencies. The Amphitheatre for Operations, is faid to be the grandest and best designed of any. It was built by the liberal Contributions of many well disposed Persons; and there was so general a good Will to the Work. that the like has not been known any where, except that of the Temple: I am told that the Proprietors of several Stone Quarries made Presents of Stone to it. others of Lime; Merchants contributed Timber, and the Wrights and Malons were not wanting in gratis Work; the neighbouring Farmers likewife agreed to carry Materials gratis: His Majelty was also pleased to. give 100 l. towards it. The following is the Inscription. on the first Stone, The Royal Infirmary at Edinburgh. founded August 2, 1738, Earl Cromartie, G. M. Next is the Royal Palace, a very handsome Building, rather. convenient than large; it was formerly both a Royal Palace and an Abbey, founded by King David I. for the Canons Regular of St. Auflin, who named it Holyrood House, or the House of the Holy Cross: It was burnt down by Oliver Cromwell, but re-edified by King Charles the Second, and of which his Grace the Duke of Hamilton is heriditary Keeper. It is now almost neglected. The long Gallery is adorned with the Pictures of all the Scots Kings from Fergus I. This ferved for a Lodging Room for our Soldiers upon. Straw, as did most of the other Rooms.

The adjoining Park belonging to this Abbey is about four Miles in Circumference, but there is neither Deer nor Tree in it; but there is a craggy Rock' about half a Mile high, called Arthur's Seat, for dribur the British King, I was told, used to view the adjacent Country from thence: This Palace, or Abbey, and the Park, are a Sanctuary for Debtors. Close to this Abbey is a neat Physick Garden, abounding with great Variety of curious Plants, with Stoves, under the Direction of Doctor Charles Alfton, the present Botanical Professor: Next, and lastly, is the College or Univer-Sty, which stands near the Potter-row-Port; it consilts of three Courts; those Courts are encompassed with meat Buildings for the Use of such Students as please tolodge in them; for they do not live in common as in the College of Dublin, nor are they obliged to refide, bur only to attend their Classes at certain Hours.

This City has, in former Ages, been very variable and inconstant; sometimes it was subject to the Seots and sometimes to the English, who inhabited the East Rart of Seotland, until it became wholly under the Scots Dominion, about the Year-960, when the English being overpowered, and quite oppressed by the Danes, were forced to quit all their Interest here, as unable to grapple with two such potent Enemies. Edinburgh is sertainly a sine City, and I believe can boast of the highest Houses in Europe; notwithstanding it has its Faults, for the City being very close built, and the Want of Common Shores to carry off, occasions the Fown to be very nasty; and about Seven o'Clock in the Morning it stinks intolerably, before the Excrements marched to Perthshire, where they were joined by some British, in order to stop the

are swept away from the Doors, which they throw, out of the Windows in the Night; for after Ten. o'Clock, it is Fortune favours you, if a Chamber-Pos. with Excrements, &c. is not thrown on your Head a if you are walking in the Streets, it is then diverting to Strangers, to hear all Passers by cry out with a loud Voice, sufficient to reach the Tops of the Houses, which are generally fix or feven Stories high in the Front of the High freet .- Hoad yare Hand, i. e. bold your Hand, and means, do not throw 'till I am. past. Every Stair Case is called a Turnpike or Land, with the Addition of some Name to distinguish it from another; as for Example, hold your Hand in Bell's. Land; this, with Variation is the common Cry all over the Streets, at Ten o'Clock at Night and after: It is very rare to see a single House inhabited by a single Family in the High-fireet, for generally People of the best Rank have but one Floor, which is the first and fecond, the poorer Sort ascend higher. They keep their Close Stools in their Bed-Rooms, which they call. Boxes, and are emptied out of the Windows at Night: fo shitten Luck often lights on the Person who walks as: late Hours in the Streets.

The Ladies of Edinbargh are very handlome; they use the Seats Plaids about their Heads and Shouldese, and at Church they almost cover their Faces, by which they obscure those Charms which the strictest Modesty might allow them to expose; I thought they look'd demure and hypocritical; although in an Undress (I man without their Plaids) shey are very agreeable:

the Western Passage, in Case the Rebels should attempt to return to England again.

I fet out from Edinburgh the 10th of March, for our Army at Aberdeen, having received proper Instruction from Lord Chief Justice Clerk; but the Weather being very stormy, so that no Passage Boat could cross to Kingharn, I was detained twenty-four Hours at * Leith, during which.

They are also very industrious, and take great Pride inhaving most Part of their Cloaths the Product of their own working; are great Admirers of white Thread Stockings, and need not be assamed of shewing them. upon their Legs, they being of their own making; for it is not common to see a Scote Woman sit idle. Over the Tea Table they are generally at work, either upon their Thread to make them Lianon or Plaids, or else knitting themselves Stockings or Gloves, most curious and sine; a Piece of Industry not common to Ladies in other Parts; but more the Pity: Their Men on the contrary live altogether as idle, as appears by so many of them having spent their Fostunes and enter d into the Rebellion.

^{*} Leith is a large Sea-port Town, a Mile from Edipburgh, built on both Sides the River Leith, over which is a stately. Stone Bridge, to which Ships of Burther may.

which Time I had very good Quarters and kind Usage at Mr. Andrew Carr's, near the End of the Gravel Walks.

On the 11th I croffed the Firth, from Leith to Kinghorn, which is a straggling, dirty Town; as I did not stay in it all Night, I made no surther Observations, only in general, that the Kinghorn Horse-hirers and Boatmen, of which the Town chiefly consists, are noted all Scotland over for their Impudence and Impositions: I rode that Evening along the Shore sive or six Miles, to Kirkaldy, which is composed only of one very long Street, built close on the Beach by the Sea-

may some, and at High Water lay their Sides close to the Shore: Here is a fine Quay well warfed up with Stone, and fenced with Piles. The First is here 7 Miles across to Kingbern on the other Side, where are Ferry-Boats for Men and Horses passing every Tide: Formerly this Town was strongly fortified by one Desgr a Frenchman, for the Security of Edinburgh; after which, great Numbers of People slocked thither, and in a short Time from a mean Village is grew to a large Town: In the Reign of our King Henry VIII. the Sufferings and Calamities both of it and its Neighbours were grievous and.

Sea-Side, inhabited mostly by Fishermen, and Coalminers; they rise great Quantities of Coal hereabouts; they have likewise several Salt Pans for boiling and making of Salt.

My next Stage was to Cooper in Fife, the Shire-Town, pleasantly situated upon the Banks of the River Eaden, furrounded with tall Trees, which is a great Rariety in that Country: I baited at the Widow inexpressible, being both burnt and plunder'd by Sir-John Dudley, Viscount Leflie, Lord High Admiral of Bugland, who came with a powerful Army, and broke down the Pier, burning every Stick thereof, and took away all the Shipe that were fit to force him; which kind of Execution was done likewife at Dunber. Afterwards when Francis King of France had taken to Wife Mary Queen of the Scota, Procedures were in Hopes and conceited they had grapled all Scaland, and even began to gape for England. A. D. 1560. they strengthened it again with new Foreifications; but Queen Elizabeth being follicited by the Nobles, (who had embraced the Protestant Religion) to fide with them; by her Wifdom and Management the fo effected a the Matter, that the Franch were enforced to return into their own Country, and all their Fortifications were laid: level with the Ground, and Scotland hath ever fince bean. freed from the French, and Leith is become a very fine! flourishing Town, and Port for Edinburgh.

Withow Cooper's, at the Cooper's Arms, who keeps good Entertainment: About twelve Miles further, over a good pleafant Country, I arrived at the Firth of Tay, (here I hired a Boat to ferry over to * Dundee,) which is three Miles broad; it being a rough Tide, and the Wind not very fair, that Evening I was obliged to stay at what they call the West-Port, until Morning.

From Dundee I proceeded to Arbroth, and travelling eight Miles of very bad

^{}Dunder is fituated near the Top's Month, to which from the Ferry is joined a Causeway or Walk, well paved with flat Free-Stone, and Rows of Trees are planted on either Side of the Walk, which makes it very agreeable. The Name seems to be derived from Dan, a Hill; and the River Toy, is situated on the North Side of it: It is a Town of Note, good Trade, and well built, has two very long and large Streets, with a large Market Place in the Middle, said to be the largest and fairest in Sootland, except that at Aberdeen. This Town stands in a pleasant Plain, and besides the Advantages just now mentioned, hath two Churches, and a Harbour for Ships of Burthen. The Inhabitants are generally rich, and those that fall to Decay have a large Hospital provided for them. The great Church bad Road, I came to Montrose, where is a Ferry to cross over the River South-Est; here I saw the French Man of War that was wreck'd, which brought over Lord John Drummond. This Town is well situated for Trade, having a good Harbour. Montrose makes a very sine Appearance from the Ferry, and lies near the Sea; it consists only of one very sine Street, and was formerly Collegiate, and a very large Building; but Part of it was demolished in the Civil War, when this Town was formed by Cromwell. The Tower upon the Church is a handsome square Building, large, antient, and very high, and is a good Ornament to the Town.

From Dundee, it is twelve Miles through the Shire of Angus, and a good Road, which is mostly by the Sea-side to Aberbrothock, commonly called Arbroth: It is a Royal Borough; where stands the stately Ruins of the greatest Abbey in Scotland, the Walls being mostly standing; yet looks very grand at a Distance, and was a Place of old dedicated to Religion, by King William of Scotland, who died in 1214, in Honour of St. Thomas Becket, and endowed by him with large Revenues; he lies here interr'd, and has a stately Monument. It is also savoured with a Mineral Spring, much frequented for many Diseases: Is a pretty little Town, pleasantly stuated, with a Harbour. The chief Manusacture here is Thread, which passes for Dundee Thread, the most moted in Scotland.

another short one going off at the End of it: Here is a very pretty Kirk and a Town-House; the Streets is very broad and well pav'd; the People very genteel but disaffected. I quartered in going North at the best Inn, (I forgot what Sign they kept) however they did not forget to make an extravagant Charge; I supposed they had used the Rebels more kindly, who had been there a little before; but in my Return from the Highlands I had very agreeable Quarters at Montroje; there were four Troops of Lord Cobham's Dragoons at this Time in Town, and when on the March with the Army, I being a Volunteer, was always put to Gentlemen's Houses to quarter; so at this Time I was billeted on a most agreeable young Lady, whose Parents were lately dead, but the had a great Regard for Charley; and at Breakfast, there being no other in Company, the with a pretty innocent Freedom alk'd me, If I did not think that P-C was the Right Heir to the Crown? To which I answered, Madam, you cannot think that I am of that Opinion, when YOU

you consider how far I have gone to bear, Arms against bim, and in the Station of a Volunteer. Pretty Mis replied, that was the only convincing Reason which could be given; for had you bore a Com-mission, continued she, I should have doubted your Sincerity, and think it strange you should be so much biass'd in your fudgment. Had this Discourse proceeded from one of my own Sex, I-should have been out of Humour; but from fo agreeable a Person, nothing could come amis. I told her, That I had endured a great deal of Fatigue in the Government's Service, during the Time of the Rebellion, received no Pay, nor got any Plunder; but that if I could get so pretty a Rebel Lady as she was, to carry with me to England, I should be fully recompensed for all my Trouble. To which Miss replied, That Gentlemen on their Travels don't like to be troubled with Ladies; and that she thought she might rather seem to be a Plague, to torment me, for the Sins I had committed, in rebelling against a lawful Prince. In this Manner we fat about two Hours at the

Tea-Table; at which Time I was as much in Love with her agreeable Company, as the was with her Mock Prince.

It is remarkable, many of the prettiest Ladies in Scotland are Jacobites, and Members of Nonjuring Meeting-Houses; although I could wish that all such, as my pretty Hostes, were married to Men well-affected to the present Government, who by kind indulgent Methods, might bring over the valuable Fair to a better Way of Thinking, many of the Scots Ladies being very handsome; and I am sure, that if their Bodies and Minds bear a just Resemblance, by good Usage they might be reclaimed; so that in those Cases the Husband should be answerable for the Wise's Default.

After leaving Montrose about a Mile, I came to the North-Esk, where there is a small Ferry for Foot-Passengers, but the Horse fords it when there is little Fresh in the River, which runs with a very strong Currant; however, my Horse being heavy, I got very well over, by keeping up against the Stream; after which I cross'd over over eight Miles of a most wretched Country to Bervie; the Road being excessive bad, I lost a Shoe from my Horse; it likewise rain'd and blew hard; which much fatigued me: At the go-, ing into the End of this Town, which had a miserable bad Appearance, I met with a discreet looking Man, considering the Place, of whom I asked the Question; If there was even an honest Smith in the Town, that would not take Pleasure in. lameing the King's Horse? (though it was given me by his Royal Highness after the Siege of Carlifle, where my own had failed me.) To which the Gentleman aswered, That their Smiths were no accustomed to shoe such Horses, but defired me to alight, and he would order his Servant to take Care of my Horse, In this bad Country, I was defirous to know who I had met with that thew'd fuch Civility to one in the Government's Service; whom I afterwards understood to be a Minister of the establish'd Church, who were always zealous Friends to the Government: He took me to his House, and whilst my Horse was shoeing, had B 2 Dinner

Dinner dress'd and brought to the Table, in a very neat Manner, by a Man-Servant; as the Minister was a Batchelor, he kept no other but Men-Servants, who brew'd his Drink, dress'd his Victuals, and did the other Business about the House, with as much Decency as any Maid-Servant I had feen in the Country: At and after Dinner we had extraordinary good Ale of their own brewing, and as a Fence against the Inclemency of the Weather, was advis'd to drink fome very good Brandy, I suppose of the Produce of France, and perhaps never paid Duty; for this and all other little Towns along the Shore, appear to live mostly by Smuggling and Fishing.

From Bervie, I got to Stonehive that Evening, eight Miles farther: This little Town is built close under an Hill, by the Sea-Side, so that there is no House to be seen until you come directly to the Town. I put up at an Inn kept by one Doctor Lawson, which is the best in the Town; in the Morning I met with Capt. Hayes, whom I was glad to see, as

I was travelling alone in that wild Country; he with some other Officers were; on their March to the Army, with about the Number of two Companies of recovered Soldiers, that had been left fick at Blair-Caftle, and other Places. At this Town there is a pretty little Harbour for imall Ships, it being mostly an Inlet betwixt great Rocks. From Stonehine it is twelve Miles to Abaudein; the latter half Way is the most wretched'st Country that I ever faw until then; but had the Pleasure, such as it was, to fee a great deal more of the same Sort afterwards, producing nothing but Peat, it being to burren, that Hether won't grow, and lies to thick with Coble-Stones, as to render the Road hard and fought; but having good Company made it formswhat agreeable.

About a Mile before you come to the City, there is a stately Stone-Budge, confishing of seven Arches, with Watch-Towers (built by Gawin Dunbar, their Bishop of Abardeen) a grass the River Dee: you then travel along the Bank of this River, and have a most pleasant Prospect of * New Aberdeen.

On

New Aberdeen is fituated near the Sea 57 Degrees 27 Minutes North Latitude; is the Capital of the Sheriffdom of Aberdeen, the Scat of the Sheriff for trying Causes, and much exceeds the rest of the Cities in the North of Scotland, in Bigness, Trade and Beauty. Air is very wholsome, and the Inhabitants well bred: The River Dee runs along the Back of the Town, and is pretty broad, but hath many Sands, which are almost dry at low Tide. About half a Mileifrom the Town. Ships of the largest Burthen may come up, and smaller Craft come even with the Middle of the Town: There are also great Quantities of Salmon catched here, which the Proprietors pickle, and export to London: There is likewise great Plenty of all Sorts of white Fish: The Streets are well paved, and the Houses built with Stone and Slate, and are generally four Stories high : The Town confuls of three or four good Streets; that called the Broad firses is the Principal, and is really a ane Street of stately Houses: Here is likewise a fine Market Place called Cafile-Street, which is very spacious s in the Middle of which flames an ancient and curious Crois, with many Antique Figures round the Upper Part of it; and below are two or three little Shops: Where People fell Things on Market Days: and a little higher there is a very useful Conduit, as there is in every Street; where there is a constant Refort of People for TWater to them. (Opposite to the Market-Crofs, in the Tofbesth, which ferves for a Prilon and Stade house; near the lame Place is the Guard-House:

On the 15th of March I arrived here; at which Time his Royal Highness had ordered the Army to be divided into three Cantonments, and the Battalions were daily marching off; the whole first Line, consisting of six Battalions, the Duke of King ston's Horse, and Lord Cobham's Dragoons, were ordered to Strathbogie, within twelve Miles' of the Spey, under the Command of Lord Albemarle and Major-General Bland; the Reserve, consisting of three Battalions, with four Pieces of Cannon, under the House; I had Occasion to be at all the three different Places in one Day, with a Rebel Prisoner that I had taken. Here are three Churches, viz. the Colleges Church, an ancient Building; likewise the Old and the New Churches, adjoining each other, both large Buildings. The New Church is in very good Order; but that Part called the Old Church the Roof is fallen from some Part of it, and out of Repair; however it served for a Magazine, to keep our Straw and unthreshed Corn in In the Church-yard, along the Walls, stood about 3000 Horses that belonged to our Train of Artillery picquet, ed; here they remained Night and Day, notwithstanding the Severity of the Weather. There are two Episcopal Meeting Houses, one of which is very handsome.

Command of Brigadier Mordaunt, to Old Meldrum, half Way betwixt Strathbogie and this Place; and the whole second Line, confisting of fix Battalions, and Lord Mark Kerr's Dragoons remained here.

On the 21st an advanced Party, confisting of a Captain, with 50 Highlanders, and 30 of King ston's Light Horse, had been detached by General Bland to Keith, where a Party of Rebels were just preparing to sit down to Dinner; but on the Approach of the King's Men the Rebels sled, having a neat Organ, and many other Ornaments; the other was likely to be attainted of Treason; I don't know how it far'd; but there were two other Episcopal Monjuring Meeting Houses in Town; whom our Soldiers burnt, but with good Hussandry and Progality, not confiming the Pile at once, as was often the Case; the Wood being industriously reserved to heat our Bakes Overs. What gave me the most Concern was, that to many of the landsomest of the Saxx Lasties were Attendants of these Meeting-Houses; but their agreeable accomplishments were a fulficient Protection, from the Resentment of well-bred Men; as for their pretty Genderen, we could manage well enough when we see with them.

fled, and left their Dinner to be eaten by those it was not intended for; but they being informed of the Number of our. Men, resolved to return and sall upon them in the Night; our loyal Highland Men, who, to do them Justice, were always willing and ready to do the hardest Duty, had desired Kingston's Men to go to-bed, expecting all was safe, and that they would do the Duty for that Night; accordingly they fixed their Guard in the Church-Yard: The Resolution of the Resolution

The greatest Ornament of this City is its College, called the Marshalian Academy, being founded by George Keith, Earl Marshal, in the Year 1554. There City of Aberdeen hath been very much adorned with serveral additional Buildings, besides a Primary Professor, who is called Principal: It has four Professors of Philosophy, one of Divinity, and one of the Mathematicks; and there is lately added a Professor of Physicke: It has also, a very good Library, founded by the City, eplarged by the Gifts of several learned Men, and well furnished with Mathematical Instruments. This College, with that of the Old Town, make up one University, called the University of King Charles II. I happened to get acquainted with the Keeper of the Library, who gave me fled to, and entered the Town at both Ends, falling upon the Campbells, who bravely defended themselves for half are Hour, during which Time there was a brisk Fire on both Sides; but being over-powered by Numbers were obliged to submit, and the whole Party was lost, except a Cornet and five of King ston's Men, two Horses, and one Highlander, who made their Escape; one of the Troopers that escaped was shot in the Arm, and was obliged to have it cut off at Strathbogie: I happened to be at the Duke's Quarters when the above Account

me this Account of it. This City is built upon three Hills, but the greatest Part is upon the highest, and at the Head of which flands an old Castle, mostly in Ruins; but it likewise served for a Magazine to keep our Hay and Corn in: The other Part of the Town is spread out upon the Plain, from whence there is an easy Access by an Ascent every Way, except that Side next the River. whose Bank is steep: There had formerly been a Minthere, as appears by Silver Coin stamped, with this Inscription, U. bus Aberdena, which are still preserved in the Closets of the Curious.

came by one of King/lon's Troopers, who was a Man of no very good Conduct, he being subject to drink, and had like to have quarrelled with one of Lord Mark Kerr's Dragoons: I out of Regard to the Cohort he belonged to, took my Horse and convoyed him safe out of the Town, likewise through Old Aberdeen, and over the Bridge of Don, about three Miles in his Way. The River Don is remarkable for the Abundance of Salmon and Trout taken in it: The Bridge is samous for its Extent, being only one Arch over that large River, and is reckon-and in the Middle another Spring bubbles up, call'd the Aberdenian Spaw; it is faid to come near the Spaw-Water in the Bishoprick of Leige, both in Taste and Quality, particularly concerning which Dr. William Barclay wrote a Treatise. The Manufacture here is chiefly Stockings, of which they make vast Quantities all round the adjacent Country; and every Morning the Women bring in Loads to sell about the Town to Merchants, who have themsequed for Exportation to Lendon, Hamburgh, and Holland; they are generally all white from the Maker, and knit mostly plain, some ribbed, and a great many with Squares, which greatly please the Dutch. They make Stockings here in common, from one Shilling a Pair to a Quinea and Half; and some are so fine as ed a curious Piece of Workmanship; this immense Arch of Stone is sprung from two Rocks, one on each Side, which serve as a Butment on the Arch, so that it may be said to have a Foundation co-equal with Nature, and will last as long; this Bridge has been remarkable to Travellers, but more so at this Time, for we had taken a Rebel Spy, who was hanged on a Tree close to this Bridge, with this Writing fixed on his Breast, A Rebel Spy; which of Consequence would hinder Crows frow building Nests in that Tree for a Season.

to fell for five Guineas the Pair. They have an Exportation of Pork, which they pickle and pack up in Barrels, and fell to the Dutch, for victualling their East-India Ships and their Men of War: The Aberdeen Pork has the Reputation of being the best cured in Europe, for keeping in long Voyages.

Old Aberdeen is a Mile from the New City, and confifts of one long Street, has one Church, and a College more noted than that of the new Town; this old Town was formerly the Bishop's Seat, and has a Cathedral, commonly called St. Machar's, a large stately Structure, which was antiently much more magnificent; It suffered greatly

Although the continued bad Weather for some Time past had raised the Waters, and retarded the Proceedings of the Army against the Rebels, yet there was always something doing, that help'd to lessen their Interest, and put a Check to any further Risings of them.

About the 20th his Royal Highness the Duke got certain Intelligence, that the Earl of Airly, Father to the Lord Ogilvie, was raising his Men to join the Rebels; and he not having complied with greatly at the Time of the Reformation, but more fince the Revolution. The Windows of this Church were formerly very remarkable for their stained Glass: and fomething of its antient Splendour still remains: The Steeple, besides other Bells, has two of a very extraordinary Bigness. The chief Ornament of this Town is the College, confishing of a fine Square, with a good Pump in the Middle of it, and makes a grand Appearance at a Distance: It was founded by Bishop Elphingflane, in the Year 1500, and the greatest Part built by him; but King James IV. taking the Patronage upon himself, it was call'd the King's College. A Bull was procured from Pope Alexander VI. in 1510, endowing it with as ample Privileges as those of Paris and with the Order to defist from such treafonable Practices, his Royal Highness ordered Capt. Hewett, with an 100 recover'd Men, who were coming up to the Army, to take Possession of his House, and to make him Prisoner in it, until his Reople should bring in their Arms, and behave in such a Manner as became good Subjects; which had so good an Effect, that a Number brought in their Arms, and desisted from their Intention of joining the Rebels: His Royal Highness likewise ordered Major Benomia. There is in this College a Principal, a Subprincipal, three Regents or Professors of Philosophy, a Professor of Humanity, a Professor of Divinity, a Doctor of Phylick, a Professor of the Oriental Tongues, a Profestor of the Civil Law, and a Prosessor of the Mathematicks. This Town being pleafantly fituated, I used to ride out here often, taking a Turn to the Sea-Side, over the Links, being green Fields to called, running along the Shore to the Brockbonfe, a Fort planted with Cannon at the Mouth of the River Des, which commands the Entrance of that River; along the Banks of which it is very pleasant and much frequented by People walking or riding, to lobserve the Ships in the River, it being about a Mile from New-Aberdeen to the Block-House; there are several Houses all the Way inhabited by Fishermen, Alesellers, &c.

La Faufille with 300 Men, to go to Glen-E/k, which is one of the most rebellious Parts, to attack all whom he might find in Arms against the Government, and to burn the Habitations of such as had left them, and were with the Rebels: Accordingly the Major disarmed all the Rebels in Clova and Glen-Esk, and joined the Army with near 500 recovered Men: Two Hundred of Stoneywood's Men (belonging to the Rebels, whom they attempted to embark at Findorn) deserted from them, and several of the Deserters said, that the Rebel-Army were in great Want of Money, having received no Pay for feven Days, but that the Hazard Sloop was expected with a Supply.

Lord Loudon, for very good Reasons, abandon'd Fort St. George, at Inverness, and drew off his Men, leaving only a small Garrison in it under the Command of Major Grant, with Orders to defend it, which afterwards fell into the Hands of the Rebels without much Refistance; for which, Major Grant was

try'd by a Court-Martial and broke: The Rebels likewise made themselves Masters of Fort Augustus, and the Old Barracks, and made the Garrison, consisting of three Companies of Guise's Regiment, Prisoners: The Advantages the Rebels expected by taking Fort George and Fort Augustus, and the Retreat of Lord Loudon, was to draw the Seat of War amongst the Hills, and protract it a little longer; for the only Junction they gained there, was some few of the Mackenzies, headed by the Lady Seaforth, but the Lord of that Name was with Lord Loudon, as was Mr. Mackinsoft, whose Lady likewise join'd the Rebels at Inverne/s, and was reckon'd the Beauty there. She got together all her Clan, and marched at their Head (with a white Cockade, &c.) and presented them to the Mock Prince; for which (without Doubt) she was most kindly received by him; and as he had abandoned the Female Colonel Cameron, in his Flight from Sterling, the Loss of her might now be made up by this Lady.

The Siege of Fort William by the Rebels (of all their Undertakings) was the most regularly carried on from the 14th. of March to the 3d of April with 1500 Men, 8 Pieces of Cannon, and 7 Mortars, under the Command of Brigadie Stapleton, and under him, Cameron of Lochiel, and Clanronald, with three or four more Chiefs of the Macdonelds, Stewarts, and Comerons: The Garrison being bravely defended by Capt. Scott, having several Reinforcements sent him, and it being not in the Power of the Rebels to cut off the Communication by Sea, on the 14th they raised the Siege, and lest the Garrison in Possession of all their Artillery. At this Time the Caftle of Blair had been attack'd by a Party of the Rebels under the Command of the Lord George Murray, and another Body of them had proceeded to Castle Menzies? another Seat of the Duke of Athol's: Sir Andrew Agnew, who defended Blain Caftle, although he was much distressed for Want of Provisions, brazely held out until the 3d of April, at Five o'Clock Cc3 in the Morning, when the Earl of Crawford, with a Party of Dragoons arrived there, and was followed by the Duke of Athol, upon whose Approach the Rebels raised the Siege, and retired to Ruthven; as did likewise those from Castle Menzies: The Prince of Hesse likewise marched from Perth for the Relief of Blair; and on the 4th, his Royal Highness the · Prince set out from Dunkeld for the Castle, with all the Cavalry and Hussars, and was followed by 1000 Foot: This Relief was very feafonable, the Garrison in the Castle having been, (as I was informed, which is highly to the Honour of Sir Andrew Agnew) obliged to eat Horse Flesh several Days.

There is at the End of Aberdeen, a stately large House with Gardens, &c. called Silerton's Works, built by one of that Name; and after his Decease, both were bought by the Town for an Hospital, but it never came to any Perfection in that Way. This House his Royal Highness the Duke fortified with a deep Trench, Pallisadoes, Horn-Works.

Works, &c. for the Use of a Magazine and Hospital for our Sick and Wounded Soldiers; and at the same Time left a sufficient Force in it, under the Command of Major Crosby, to secure the Town and it from any Insults from Glenbucket's People, or any other.

For some Days before we march'd, there were scandalous written Libels drop'd about the Town by the Rebel Party; I happen'd to find one of them in the Lane going out of Broad street to the Duke's Quarters, where I carried it; the Substance of which was, to admonish our Soldiers of the Danger that attended us in the Pursuit of the Rebels; and that there were several Mines about the Spey ready for blowing us up on our approach. In order to find the Authors of which, feveral of the Inhabitauts were oblig'd to shew their Hand-writing to People appointed for that Purpose, which, by comparing with the Libels, was hoped would be found out; but it proved ineffectual.

His Royal Highness spared no Pain s or Trouble to put every Thing in Readiness to be in Motion sooner, but bad Weather and contrary Winds had hitherto prevented him; at length a few Days of dry Southerly Wind brought up our Transports with Bligh's Regiment, our Firing and Provision. His Royal Highness having sent two Officers to reconnoitre the Spey, they returned with an Account, that the Waters were much abated. On the 6th of April he gave Orders for the Army to march next Day; but before it began, Captain Mackay, Lord Rea's Son, and Sir Henry Monroe, Son of the late Sir Robert, both Captains in Lord Loudon's Regiment, arrived with the agreeable News, from Capt. O'Brien, of the Sheerness Man of War, now here, that he after chafing the Hazard Sloop above fifty Leagues, had drove her ashore, and obliged the French and Spaniards who were on board, to quit her; but they landed five Chests of Money, to the Value of 12,000l. and upwards, in order to join the Rebels. Had this this Landing been in a rebellious Country they had been safe; but the Lord Rea, in whose Country they landed, being well-affected, and at whose House Capt. Mackay, Sir Henry Monroe, Lord Charles Gordon, and Capt. Macleod, with some other Officers, and about eighty Men of Lord Loudon's Regiment (who had been driven thither by the Rebels) being now join'd by some of Lord Rea's People, march'd out and attack'd them, and after killing four, and dangerously wounding eight, took the remaining 156 Prisoners, amongst whom were forty experienced French Officers, who were immediately embarked on board the Sheerness and the Prize, in which were a great Number of Fire-Arms, Broad Swords, &c. together with the Officers and Men, that made this Capture, who all arrived at Aberdeen 1. This Affair put a Stop to our March, until the next Day. Thus the Rebels long expected Succours happily fell into our Hands, and undoubtedly must be a great Disappointment to them.

On Tuesday the 8th of April, his Royal Highness marched from Aberdeen, with six Batalions of Foot, and Lord Mark Kerr's Dragoons, in order to seek the Rebels: It being fine Weather, our Transports, at the same Time, moved along Shore, with a gentle Breeze and sair Wind. We marched through Old Aberdeen, which I have already described, from thence passed through several small Villages of no Fame (except New Maccher, noted for a samous Bawdy-house, kept by an old Woman and her two Daughters) to Old Meldrum, a poor old dirty Town, where the Army quarter'd the first Night after 12 Miles March.

Our next March was to Bamf; in our Way thither we came to Turreff, a poor little Town, built irregularly on a Hill-fide, which made a much better Prospect at a Distance. The chief Manufactury here, as well as at Old Meldrum, is Stockings. From hence I passed with the Advanced-Guard over a fine hilly Country, until I came to * Bamff, where his Royal Highness gave the Army a Day's Rest.

Here were two Rebel Spies taken; the one was knotching on a Stick the Number of our Forces, for which he was hanged on a Tree in the Town; and the other a little out of Town; and for want of a Tree, was hanged on what they call the Ridging-Tree of a House, that projected out from the End, and on his Breast was fix'd in Writing. A Rebel Spy, which, with the Addition of good Entertainment, might have been a very samous Sign.

That Morning the Army marched from Bamf; as I quartered two Miles short of it, the Gentleman's Servant were I Lodged was sent with me, to conduct

* Bamff is a Royal Borough, the first Sea Port Town we came to after we lest Aberdeen, and situated at the Mouth of the River Deveron in the Boine, 58 Degrees North Latitude, which divides the Shire of Bamff from that of Buchan. Before we could enter Bamff we were obliged to ford this broad River.

me over the Water, and a nigher Way than that of the common Road. Riding along the Path-Way through the Fields, I past by Dr. Abernetby's House, who was made a Prisoner at Carlisse; and as I have been informed since, was condemned to die at London, but reprieved for a Time; during which he fell sick and died at a Messenger's House.

I had but just come up with the Army and taken my Station at the Head of the Duke of Kingston's Horse, which compos'd the Van-Guard, when we saw a great Fire burning vehemently, at about a Mile and a half Distance on our Left; the Officers not knowing what it was, I propos'd to go and see; when I came there, I found it to be a Nonjuring Meeting-House, set on Fire by a Party of Kingston's Horse, that were reconnoitring the Hills. After about fix Miles marching, in our Way to Cullen, we came to Portfoy, a pretty small Village, with the Sea coming full up to the Town: Here we were joined by the whole Army, which was too numerous to get Quarters, so that the Foot encamped ed that Night on some ploughed Ground to the Right of the Town, and the Horse lay in the Towns. From Portsoy to Cullen is three Miles.

Cullen is a small Town, consisting of one Street, at the Entrance of which is a fine Seat belonging to the Earl of Finlater, but had been plundered by the Rebels: His Royal Highness quartered here, and the Lord and Lady Finlater accompanied the Duke, in all the March from Aberdeen to Inverness; here the People are well affected to the Government.

From Cullen, our next Day's March was to Fochabers, eight Miles: In the Way thither, we pass'd by large barren Mountains on our Left, and then came to some better Land, where we had a pleafant Prospect of our Transports and Men of War, standing in close to the Shore, who discharged some Shot at a Party of Rebel Hussars on the other Side of the Spey, which when we came in Sight of, we observed the Rebel Army were affembled fembled with their white Flags displayed, making a formidable Appearance. Our Army continued their March to within half a Mile of the River, when the Duke of Kingston's Horse, which was the Advanced-Guard, stop'd for Orders at the Head of a plowed Field, above the Town of Fochabers. It was a general Rule that I observ'd during the Campaign, always when an Engagement was expected, that I fed my Horse, by which he was enabled to go through any hard Service. During the Time we halted here, I rode down a Field to a Man that was fowing Corn, who was Servant to the Duke of Gordon, and he fed my Horse. By this Time the Foot with the Cannon came up, when the Rebels fet Fire to their Barracks, likewise to their Guard-House, which looked as if they did not intend to fland an Engagement. At this Time his Royal Highness gave Orders for the Duke of Kingston's Horse to advance. Accordingly we marched through the Town of Feehabers, which confifts mostly of one very long Street, where I observed seveгal ral good Houses, and People of Fashion standing looking at us; but not one Person to wish us good Success.

We again halted by the River-Side, about 500 Yards above the Ford, for farther Orders; (at this Time the Foot were moving down to the Right of Fachabers;) which we received from the Lord Ancram, to continue our March and cross the River. I was then in my Station at the Head of the Regiment, where I very narrowly escaped being shot; for some of the Rebels fired at us across the River, kneeling and taking Sight as at a Black-Bird: We entered the River with a Guide, wading on Foot, to shew where the Ford lay; which was bad enough, having loose Stones at the Bottom, which made it very difficult for Man or Horse to step without falling; the Water Belly-deep, and very rapid; the Ford not lying right a-cross, we were obliged to go Midway into the River, then turn to the Right and go down it for about fixty Yards, and then turn to the Left. inclining upwards to the landing Place:,

In this Situation, had the Rebels flood us here, it might have been of bad Consequence to our Army, they having a great Advantage over us, and might have defended this important Pass along Time, to cur great Loss; but they wanted to draw cur Army over, and farther into their Country, from whence (in their Imagination) we were never to return: When we got up the Banks on the other Side of the River, the Rebels were all fled, and appeared on a Hill about half a Mile's Distance, from which they retreated out of Sight, as we advanced: The Campbells were the next that followed us, and one of them chanced to get a Shot at a Rebel, and killed his long Tail'd White Horse, on which he had rode about very briskly. Our Army sustained no Loss in crossing the River Spey, excepting a Dragoon and a Woman, who fell from a Horse and were drowned. After the Rebels were fled out of Sight, our Foot encamped on the North Side of the Spey, and Straw being wanted to bed the Tents, they were obliged to use Barley unthresh'd, which was

was very bad to lie upon; the Horse were ordered to repass the River and quarter in the Town of Fochabers, (where I had very bad Quarters) and the utmost Precaution was taken to prevent any Surprize.

This Vigilance of his Royal High-ness was not without good Effect, as the Rebels then and fince have experienced; for though there and at Nairn, they made Attempts to steal an Advantage, yet his Royal Highness prevented their Defigns. After that his Royal Highners had formed the necessary Dispositions, he took up his Quarters at the Minister's House on the North-Side of the Spey, which had been Lord John Drum! mond's Quarters. After we had done scowering the Hills, I drank a Bottle of very good Ale there, provided at the Rebels Expence; the Gentleman of the House being overjoy'd that he had, an Opportunity of disposing of it in another Manner than what it was intended for. The Chief and only Ornament in Foehabers is Gordon Castle, situated nigh D d 3

the Sper Side, and was formerly called the Bog of Gicht, the noblest Palace in this Part of the North, being the Duke of Gordon's chief Seat, and is adorned with pleasant Gardens, Park, and fine Canal, with a most agreeable Fountain and Statues, which the Rebels had defaced, by shooting at them for their Diversion.

The River Spey produces vast Quantities of Salmon: It is customary for the Highlanders, who live nigh these great Rivers, to make little Boats of Willows, in the Nature of Baskets, and cover them over with Hides; in which they go a sishing; which a Poet remarks thus:

Great Saz v drives forward with impetuous Force, Huge Banks of Sand, and knows no certain Course: Here for a Boat, an Ofice Pannies row'd, By some bold Peasant, glides along the Flood.

Sunday April 13, about Six in the Morning our Troops left Fochabers, croffing the Spey again, which divides the Shire of Murray from that of Bamff; bere I had an Opportunity of observing the the Rebels Barracks, which were very long, so that about 2000 Men might sleep in them, built close to a Bank above the River, with Sods, Earth and Sticks, according to their Highland Architecture. As our Army continued their March, the Rebels fled before us; we had a good. Road over a level Country to * Elgin, and encamped in the Parish of Alvis, four Miles on the other Side, which was more hilly; from whence we had a pleasant Prospect of the Sea, it being fine Weather: I rode Part of it twice over that Day, for as I had not been in Bed the Night before, I expected better Repose that Night, and accordingly returned from the Camp to the Town of Elgin.

Late

Elsin in Murray, is a Royal Borough, pretty large, confishing of one very long Street, and others shorter, and hath a neat Kirk. It is noted for the Ruins of one of the most startly Cathedral Churches in Scotland; most of the Ends and some of the Side Walls are still standing, and many noble Pillars, which shews its former Greatness.

Late in the Evening a Report was spread in the Town, that 200 Rebels were coming from the Spey Side; on which the Lord and Lady Finlater, Mr. Gomez, Commissary of the Bread, and some Volunteers rode directly to the Camp, which gave fome small Alarma there, about Twelve at Night. I being unwilling to be beat out of my Quarters by Hearfay-Stories, went through the Town to see what Soldiers I could muster, to make a Defence if the Rebels came; but could only meet with ten of the Campbells, who quartered at Sir Henry Innes's; the Commander of them went with me to enquire into the Particulars of the Story, and we found that it was not without some Foundation; for two Men had made Oath of it, but did not agree in Circumstances; on which we went to-bed.

On Monday the 14th, the Army decamped early; as I was four Miles behind them, and having a wild Sort of a hilly Country to ride over, I should have been been glad of Company; but the Campbells who were to wait for some Baggage not then come up, were not ready to march, so that I set out alone, and had not rode far before I was told, that three armed Highland Men were on the Road before me; by this, and what had been reported the Night before, it appeared that there might be some straggling Parties of the Rebels sculking in Corners; and as I had picked up several of them was now in Danger of being served in kind.

At this Time there was a tir'd Soldier on the Road, whom I took up behind me; we had not rode a Quarter of a Mile, when the three Highlanders, I had been told of, appeared; on which I bid the Soldier alight and make ready his Firelock; I likewise primed my Pistols afresh, and when we came close up, defired to know who they were? They told me that they were Deserters from the Rebels, and shewed me their Pals, given them by Order of his Royal Highness, and that they were then going to Aberdeen.

Merdeen. About this Time, a great many of the Rebels deferted, and went to his Royal Highness with their Arms, who order d them Protections to go to their Places of Abode: A little farther I overtook another tir'd Soldier, and as I could not carry them both, being unwilling to leave them behind, I order'd them to press two Horses at the first House we came at. We overtook the Army before they were got to * Forress, which is eight Miles distant from Elgin; here is good

This Borough of Forreis, is pleasantly situated at the End of several Ridges of Mountains, and is made up of one long Street, with a Kirk, Tolbooth, and the Ruins of an old Caffle, which it's faid, the Kings of. Scotland used to reside in: Just before we enter'd this Fown on the Right Hand, we were presented with an. Obelisk, a flat square Pillar of Stone, which rises about 23 Foot above Ground, and is faid to be no less than 12 or 14 Foot below, and its Breadth near five; it is all one entire Stone; great Variety of Figures are carved thereon, some of which are diffinct and visible, but the Injury of the Weather has obscured those towards the Upper Part; what the Import or Signification of it is, I could not be informed: Camden says, it was erected as. a Monument of the Fight between King Malcolm, Son of Keneth, and Sueno the Dane. From Forres to Nairn is eight Miles.

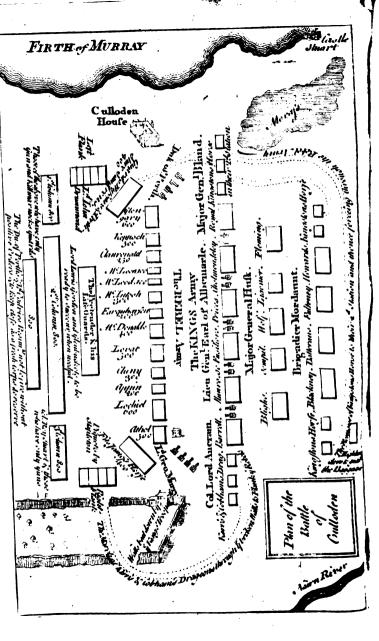

good Road over a hilly Country, from whence we had a Prospect of the Sea and the Ships in Findorn Harbour, a small Sea-Port, four Miles distant from For-res.

When we had marched about a Mile of the Road, we were obliged to ford a broad and deep River, that disembogues itself into the Sea at Findorn, and therefore is called Findorn-River: I saw, in crossing here, an Officer's Horse with Baggage carried down the Stream. In this River is a great Salmon-Fishery carried on.

From this to Nairn is a very Moorish Country; to the Left of which, we perceived a Body of the Rebels at a Mile's Distance, on which we drew up; but perceiving they did not advance, we fell into marching Order until we came within half a Mile of them, and then observing they did not form but kept in a moving Posture, the Duke of Kingston's Horse, with four Companies of the Campbells were ordered to advance; on this the Research

bels fled, and being purfued by some Volunteers, we had a fine Hunting-match after them; we took some Prisoners, of whom I had the good Fortune to get two, the one a Frajer, who could speak no English, and had not the Sense to stand when shot at, until he was cut twice in the Head; the other was a Montross Man, called Sanders Stewart: (I heard of him in my Return, that he ferved an Apprenticeship to a Barber there;) he told me, that the Rebels were 5000 the Day we croffed the Spey, under the Command of Lord John Drummond, and that the Chevalier and the rest of his Army were then at Inverness: After I had got these two Fellows tied together with my Horse-Collar, they proved very troublesome to drive, and I had above two Miles over a Moor to go with them to our Army, who were then encamped at * Nairn; which before I enter'd, I had Occasion to go through that Wing of OHE

our Army where the Old Buffs were pitching, and my Prisoners were condemned to various Deaths by the Old Buff's's Wives. I deliver'd my Prisoner to the Provost, and in the Evening went and dress'd the wounded Highlander; by this Time the Quarters were all taken up, so that I did not get to-bed the two Nights the Army lay there.

On Tuesday the 15th of April, 1746, being his Royal Highness the Duke's Birth-Day, the Rebels to make a Bonfire on that Occasion, set Fire to and burnt Fort Augustus; and expecting to find us merry, they marched in two Columns to attack us in our Camp, the one under the Command of Lord George Murray, the other under Lord Lewis Gordon; but they not arriving in due Time (our Men being got under Arms) they returned without making us a Visit.

On the 16th, we marched from Nairn, betwixt Four and Five in the Morning, with our Foot divided into three CoE e Columns,

Columns, of five Battalions each; the Artillery and Baggage followed the first Column on the Right; our Cavalry covered the Left Wing, and composed the fourth Column: After we had marched about eight Miles, our Advanced-Guard perceived the Rebels at some Distance, making a Motion toward us on the Left. This was a Point we imagined the Rebels would strive to gain, as we had the Sea on our Right, and the Hills on our Left; therefore this Rule was observed in all our March, that the Horse covered the Left Wing. On Notice of the Rebels Approach, we immediately formed; but finding they were yet a good Way off, and that their whole Body did not move forwards, we put ourfelves into marching Order as before, and continued it until within half a Mile of them, where we made a Stand to reconnoitre their Situation and form our Army; we having a Morass on our Right, which secured our Right Flank; the two Regiments of Dragoons covered our Left in order to fall upon the Rebels Right; King flon's Horse were ordered to the Referve: firve; four Companies of our Highlanders were on the Left with the Dragoons; the other Eight were ordered to guard' the Baggage; the ten Pieces of Cannon were disposed two in each of the Intervals of the first Line; and in this Dispofition we continued for about half and As I had the Honour of being a Volunteer under his Royal Highness, and of Consequence at Liberty to chuse my own Station, I had taken Post in the Front of Lord Cobham's Dragoons; when the Lord Ancram was pleased to ask me If I charged there to Day? as knowing that I had at several Times before joined the Duke of King ston's Horse. I told his Lordship, That I intended to take my Chance with that Regiment To-Day. His Lordship then wished me good Success. During the Time we remained in this Position, I observed a Man standing by the End of a House, about half Way between the Rebels Army and ours, whom I supposed to be a Rebel reconnoitering us; on which I drew one of my Pistols, and was riding off towards him; but being called back by Mafor Sheban, E e 2 to

to know where I was going, I turn'd and told him, pointing to the Man; he defired me to take Care how I came up to that House, for as I did not know what Number of Rebels might be in it, I was in Danger of being shot; but as I was a Volunteer, he said, he would not hinder me to proceed; however; he cautioned me not to go beyond it, for that I might be in Danger of being taken Prifoner. I humbly thanked him for the Care he had for me, and gallop'd off; but when I came to the House, I found none there but the Man who lived in it, who appeared to be a Friend, and gave me what Information he could. Between our Lines and that House I could gallop my Horse all the Way, but the Ground forward appeared to be foft and marshy: I had there a good View of the Rebels, who were formed into a Line, with Culloden-House on their Left, and their Right extended to a Park-Wall, within which it appeared to be good hard Ground. faw them close to the Right, as if they intended to bring their greatest Strength there; on which I returned to my Station, tion, and gave an Account of what Obfervations I had made: At which Time his Royal Highness was pleased to address the Officers and Soldiers who were nearest to him (and ordered it to be published through the Battalions) in the following Manner:

Gentlemen and Fellow-Soldiers,

"I have but little Time to address my-" felf to you; but I think proper to ad-" quaint you, That you are instantly to " engage in the Defence of your King " and Country, your Religion, your " Liberties, and Properties; and thro " the Justice of our Cause, I make no " Doubt of leading you on to certain " Victory. Stand but firm, and your "Enemies will foon fly before you.
"But if there be any among you,
"who through Timidity, are diffident " of their Courage or Behaviour, which " I have not the least Reason to suspect; " or any others, who through Confcience or Inclination, cannot be zen-" lous or alert in performing their Du-Ee 3 # ty;

"ty; it is my Desire, that all such would immediately retire: And I sur- ther declare, that they shall have my free Pardon for so doing; for I had much rather be at the Head of One Thousand brave and resolute Men, than Ten Thousand amongst whom there are some, who, by Cowardice or Misbehaviour, may dispirit or disorder the Troops, and so bring Dishomour and Disgrace on an Army under my Command."

At this Time our Army being formed, we moved to the House at which I had been; near which was the Place of Action; and finding that the Moras on our Right was ended, which left that Flank uncovered, the Rebels outstretching us, his Royal Highness immediately ordered Pultenay's Regiment from the Reserve to the Right of the Royals, and Kingston's Horse, with about fixty of Cobban's, who had been patrolling, to cover the Right Flank, commanded by Major-General Bland; the Left Flank was commanded by the Lord Ancream;

the Center by the Earl of Albemarle: the second Line by Major-General Huske; the Reserve by Brigadier Mordaunt; and his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, by whose Direction our Army was formed, was on the Right; and Lieutenant-General Hawley on the Lest. In this Disposition, some Time was spent in striving who should gain the Flank; at which Time a heavy shower of Rain came on, which was very discouraging, remembring the Falkirk Affair; but at this Time we had the Wind, which was of some Comfort.

His Royal Highness having sent Lord Bury forward, within a hundred Paces of the Rebels, to reconnoitre something that appear'd like a Battery, found it to be several old Walls; behind which the Rebels were posted, and from whence, about One o'Clock, they began to fire upon us with their Cannon. At this Time the Weather grew fair: But their Cannon being ill served, and as badly pointed, did us little or no Damage. Ours joined in Concert, which made made a strange Slaughter-house of the Rebels Battery, and began their Confufion: They not liking that Way of Fighting, came running forward in their furious wild Way on our Right, where his Royal Highness had placed himself to receive them, imagining the greatest Push would be there. They came down three several Times within a hundred Yards of our Men, firing their Pistols and brandishing their Swords; but our brave Soldiers appear'd as if they took little Notice of their Bravado's. After those feint Attempts, they made off, and immediately their whole first Line came down upon our Left: Their Right somewhat out-flanked Barrel's Men, which was our Left; but Bligb's and Semple's Regiments, from the second Line, gave a finart Fire upon those that out-flanked Barrel's, and soon repulsed them: Then a Body of the Rebels threw away their Mulkets, and engaged Barrel's Men Sword in Hand, in a noify, confus'd, tumultuous Manner, and pressed so hard, that they made a small Breach in Barrel's first Line; which was in an Instant made up. They killed Lord Robert Kerr, and feventeen of our Men there: But the Rebels paid dear for this rash Attack, for of about 500 of them who enter'd this Breach, I believe there was not a fingle Man of them that escaped. At this Instant General Hawley, with four Companies of the brave Campbells, had broke down the Walls of a Park-Dike which Place we loft two Captains and five private Men of that Party) through which our Dragoons passed, under the Command of Lord Ancram: same Time an Officer with a Party of Lord Mark Kerr's Dragoons, were fent to dislodge a Party of the Rebels that were lurking under the Walls, firing at us, where three Dragoons were killed. We lost but one of Lord Cobbam's Men, who was fhot close by me, at the Rising of the Hill, where we fell upon the Right Flank of the Rebels fecond Line, while King ston's Horse, who behaved well in the Action, with fixty of Cobbam's Dragoons, wheel'd on their Left, being led by Major-General Bland; then we foon knocked off many of their Bonnets;

at the Sight of which, their Mock Prince wheel'd off and fled, and his Clans followed him; so that he had then the Honour of being in the Front, which he led on with fo much Courage, that he cross'd the River at the nearest Place to the Hazard of drowning, and never stop'd nor look'd behind him until he got to Aird, Lord Lovat's House; where he staid all Night. His Royal Highness gave Orders for Lord Ancram to pursue with the Horse, and there was much knapping of Noddles; which he did with so good Effect, that above 500 were killed in the Pursuit, and a great many Officers and Soldiers were taken Prisoners. In their Flight I came up with a pretty young Highlander, who called out to me, Hold your Hand, I'm a Cambell. On which I asked him, Where's your Bonnet? He reply'd, Somebody have fnatched it off I only mention this to shew my Head. how we distinguished our loyal Clans from the Rebels; they being dress'd and equip'd all in one Way, except the Bonnet; ours having a red or yellow Cross of Cloath or Ribbon; theirs a white · Cockade

Cockade: He having neither of these Distinctions, I desired him, if he was a Campbell, to follow me, and I would have him taken Care of, being slightly wounded, which he promised; but on the first Opportunity gave me the Slip.

This Day's Action was crowned with a most glorious Victory; which I think would have been more compleat, had their Mock Prince, with all his Clans, engaged us: It also would have faved the Trouble of much hanging afterwards, and of Consequence been a Loss to the Hempen-Manufacture; for as there were but two of our Foot Regiments on the Left of our Front-Line engaged, all the Rest of the Officers and Soldiers had very little Share in the Action, who defir'd nothing more than a general Engagement, every one of them being in high Spirits, and willing to exert themselves in their several Stations. Who could do otherwise, when animated by the Presence of so brave a Commander? That ordered all Dispositions, perhaps, as just as the Mind of Man could conceive; whilst the Rebels minded minded very little Order or Discipline, throwing down their Firelocks, and engaging with their Broad-Swords, in a wild, confus'd Manner, against our Soldiers Bayonets, who were also supported by a quick and well-timed Fire playing upon those giddy Rebels. In the End, our Firelock and Bayonet, fo far exceeded their Broad Sword and Target, that there were killed of the Rebels that Day in the Field of Battle, and in the Pursuit, above 2000, whilst our Loss in the whole did not exceed 50 killed. We likewise took all their Artillery and Baggage, confifting of 22 Pieces of Cannon and 8 Swivels, 190 Broad Swords, 2500 Muskets, 1500 Musket-Cartridges, 1019 Cannon-Shot, 500 Weight of Musket-Shot, 27 Barrels of Gunpowder, with 22 Ammunition Carts, &c. We also took 350 Prisoners; but if we had known that they had receiv'd strict Orders before the Battle to give the Duke's Troops no Quarter, we should not have troubled ourselves with making fo many Prisoners.

The Prisoner of the greatest Note taken that Day, was the unhappy Lord Kilmarnock. Four of their principal Ladies also sell into our Hands, viz. Lady Ogilvie, Lady Gordon, Lady Kinloch, and Lady Mackintosh, who was at the Hand of the Clan of that Name. The Ladies, after Tea, were preparing to dress for a Ball in the Evening, expecting the Rebels had gain'd the Victory; but the King's Red Coats were so rude as to interrupt them, and lead them up a Dance they did not expect.

The Rebels had ordered the Inhabitants of Inverness to provide all the Oatmeal they could spare, and with it bake Bannocks for their Suppers, against their Return from the Victory; but their Disappointment was very pleasing to us, who came to eat it in their Stead; many of them having lost their Stomachs, and gone to-bed Supperless: After the Pursuit was mostly over, and we were on our March to Inverness, Major General Bland received a Letter from a French Officer to this Effect:

The Day after the Battle, we were amused with a Report that the Rebels would stand another Battle, having 1000 Men at Badenoch, who had not joined them at the Engagement; but we were afterwards informed, that on holding a Council of War, it was agreed, as they had neither Money, Arms, nor Ammunition, all of them were to shift for themselves. Brigadier Mordaunt was detached into the Fraser's Country, with 900 Foot, where he got great Numbers of Cattle, and a Quantity of Oatmeal; that was design'd for the Use of the Rebels: He went likewise to Lord Lovat's House, that Nest and Cage of unclean Birds, where much Treason and Rebellion had been hatch'd; he only found the Nest, for the Birds were flown: However he thought proper to purge it from all Pollutions by Fire.

The Rebels being now dispersed all over the Highlands, and skulking in secret Corners. Detachments were sent from the Duke's Army, and encamped at different Places for the greater Safety of the Country, and Conveniency of apprehending the Rebels, of which they fent in great Numbers; fo that all the Goals were foon full of Prisoners, notwithstanding the great Number that was ship'd off for Newcastle. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cumbertand was pleas'd to give his Protection to as many as return'd to their Obedience, by coming in and delivering up their Arms; who were at Liberty to go to their Places of Abode.

of another memor, ble Defeat, which, on the 15th, one of their Chiefs, the Earl of Cromartie, received by fome of the loyal Claus. Vengeance being pronounced against Lord Ray and his People, on Account of the Hazard-Sloop, already taken Notice of; the Earl of Cromartie was sent with a Detachment to destroy his Country with Fire and Sword; but he was himself surprized and made Prisoner at Dun-Robin Castle, in the Manner following: After Lord Ray's People had surfurprized the Crew of the Hazard Sloop, and was reinforced by some of the Menroes, and the Lord Sutherland's Militia, they engaged the Earl at Golfpy, and took him and his Son, the Lord Macleod, &c. Prisoners.

Ensign John Mackay, of the Earl of Sutherland's Militia, having kept a private Intelligence with some Person in his Lordship's House at Dun-Robin, he gave an Account of their fetting out for the intended Destruction; Mackay informed the loyal Clans thereof, who to ward off this threatened Blow, affembled and posted themselves in private Places; the Rebels pursuing their Design, past them undiscovered, and was followed by the Earl and some other Chiefs. Mackay having received the proper Signal from the Top of the Tower of that House, ran with 26 Men down to the Water of Golfpy; as the Body of the Rebels, confifting of about 400, had march'd fome Distance before Lord Cromartie, &c. Mackay' with his Men got betwixt the Officers and the main Body, and by firing brilkly on them, drove the Officers: back to Dun-Robin; who fecured the Gates, and by ringing a Bell on the Tower, and displaying a white Flag, gave the Alarm to their Men to return to their Relief. In the mean Time, Mackay having dispatched five Men to call the loyal Clans from their different Stations to his Affistance, fell upon the Rebels in their Return to Dun-Robin, who perceiving the Militia coming down from the Hills in such Numbers, and despairing of Success, directly made the best of their Way to the little Ferry; but Lord Sutberland's Men pursued them so close, that by drowning and firing, they killed about fifty of them, and took 164 Prisoners; after which, they returned to Dun-Robin, where Mackay directly asked Leave to speak to the Earl of Cromartie; which being granted, he told him plainly, That if he did not surrender the House, the Numbers that were without would blow it up. Lord Cromartie asked half an Hour to confider of it; but on finding that his Men were mostly killed or taken. and that it was impossible for him and his fmall signall Party to hold out, the Gate was opened, and Lord Sutherland's Men took Possession of the House; disarmed and thade Prisoners the Earl, and those with him, and immediately sent a Letter of Advice to Capt. Dove, of the Hound Man of War, who received all the Prisoners, and brought them to the Camp at Inverness.

Thus

Thus I have given a just, impartial, and, I hope, a satisfactory Account of the Rebellion, from its first Rise, until the decifive Battle at Culloden Moor:
After which, our Foot encamped near Inverness, and the Horse quartered in the Town and adjacent Villages, which we found generally very ill provided; the Rebel Army being there so long, had occasioned a Consumption in the Victuals; neither was there any Drink to be had but Water; that in the River Ness coming off a Brimstone Mineral, and not agreeing with those that are not accustomed to it, threw many of our Men into a Flux: Whereupon Proclamarion was made for any that had Malt to get it brewed; but at that Time there was none to be found, neither were there any Markets; but it was not long before there was an Alteration for the better; the Weekly Markets being now sup-ply'd with Flesh, fresh or salted in the Hide of the Beast, and extream bad Goats-Milk-Cheese: Here you may have Butter of several Colours, which is brought to the Market in the Membranes G g that that hold the Calves: Further in the Gountry, when Cow-cleaning is scarce, be they have an artful Way of making it up in Rolls or Balls, bound in Straw-Ropes; For the Quality it is falted up in little Dishes that hold about two or three Pounds; if fresh, it is entirely so, and called sweet Butter; then the Salt is brought with it to the Table, where you may leafon; it to your Palate; you may likewise have fresh Hung-Beef; for it is customary, in the Highlands, when the Cattle die, to hang the Hinder-Quarters, (I cannot fay in the Chimney, because there is none, in the Smoak near the Tire, without Salt. As the Weather besome more warm, it brought still greater Plenty; for you might see the Highlandmen coming over the Hills, with Milk of several Sorts, as Sheep, Goats, Cows, Eg. which they carry on their Backs in a Gont-Skin, with the Hinder-Feet over each; Shoulder, held in their Hands, and a small Wooden Pigger, that floats n the Milk, with which they measure t cut to their Customers. The nices of amenimination of the core of them 2.1

their has a more ingenious Way of carriving the Goat-Skin, by the two Fore-Legs; and as there is naturally a Hole at the other End, in which they affix a Tap; it is followed by a Candy, i.e. h Boy, with his Piggen, who draws the Milk off as Occasion requires.

I shall only at present mention one other Piece of their Ingenuity; which is, that they can boil a Quarter of Flesh, whether Mutton, Veal, Goat; or Deer, in the Paunch of the Beast, which is prepared by cutting it open, and turning it in-fide out; by this Method it is made clean; then they affix it with Scivers on a Hoop; to this they tie a String or a Thong, cut from the Skin of the Beast, and by this Thong they hang it over the Fire.

The Highlanders have been reckoned an indolent People; although, by what I have faid, it may appear that they are ingenious and industrious; for the Truth of which I appeal to any of our Military Gentlemen, who have had the Honout to serve the Government in that Part of the World: But as these are Secrets that have not been known in England, I should not have divulged them without a Patent, or at least some valuable Consideration; and especially, fince the Rebels have fail'd in their Scheme of establishing the Pretender; for had they succeeded, in all Probability, there would have been a Colony of those Norwegians planted in the South, who might have taught our good Women their Way of lousewifry, and Cookery. Our Mechanicks might likewise have been infuructed in their Arts as to Building, Gc. The Highland Houses are very oddly erected, and the Inhabitants are generally their own Architects, which they perform with very few Materials, being chiefly composed of Clods of Peat, Stones, Sticks, Broom or Ling. They have generally two Apartments in their Houses, (I mean the common People,) by Means of a flight Partition; one End they lie in themselves, having a Fire in the Middle; as to Chimnies, as I have already said, they have none: There is fometimes. (J)

fometimes a little Hole left open in the Top of the House for the Smoke's Exit'; other Times it is in the End, but most frequently the Door performs this Office. The other Apartment is the Cow Pailout for their Oxen, Calves, &c. and is seldom used otherwise, except at Weddings or Christenings, when they can very readily remove the Partition, and lay Board, propt up with Butments of Clods, for a Table, which they cover with green Rushes or Hether Tobs, and strew the Floor with the same.

Their Cattle are exceeding small, but very, sweet Meat when in good Order. A full-grown Ox is not much bigger than one of our Calves of a Year old. The Smell of the Cattle's Dung, which is generally very thick about the House, and their Peat-Fire, I suppose, contilbutes not a little to keep them in Health, but not free from the Itch; which is very common here, although not regarded; for they seldom mind to cure it any other Way than by their Dumb-Musick, (being always provided with G g 3 that Instrument,) which they have a very good Knack of playing, and would be much more diverting to Strangers, if it was not for fear of being presented with the Fiddle.

The Highlanders, in all Reigns, have been remarkable for disturbing the established Government of Scotland, by taking up Arms on every Invasion for the Invaders; had they been employed at such Times in Desence of their Country, it would have shewn a noble Spirit; on the contrary, they have been the Ringuleaders and chief Promoters of all Rebellions, and of bringing Ruin and Destruction upon the Place of their Nati-

As I proposed to give a particular Account of the Highlanders, what is wanting from my own Observations, I may wenture to supply from so worthy an Author as Mr. Buchanon, who has formerly well described them as solutions.

... In their, Diet, Apparel, and Housholds Furniture, they follow the Parlimony of the Antients; they provide their Diet by fishing and hunting, and boil their Flesh; as I have already faid, in the Paunch of Skin of the Beast: While they hunt they eat it raw, after squeezing out the Blood; and when they bleed their Cattle, which is generally twice a Year; they with great Care preserve the Blood, which they mix with Oat-Meal to eat. and is esteemed by them a most nourishing Dish. Their Drink is Meat-Broth or Whey, of which they have Plenty at their Entertainments; but most of them drink Water. They also brew Ale, which is generally drank (in the Lowlands as well as here) the same Day 'tis brew'd. Their Bread is a Composition of Oats and Barley, the only Grain which their Country produces, which they likewise prepare after various Forms with Water, sometimes boiled, but mostly raw; they cat a little of this in the Morning, and contenting themselves therewith through Necessity, hunt, or go about their Business, without eating any more until until Night; when they travel farther from Home, they carry a Bag of Oat-Meal, and a little Dish, with which, when they are hungry, they take up forne Water at the first Brook they come to, stir in some Meal with their Finger, and sup it up; by the Help of which they can out-travel many Horses. They delight most in Cloaths of several Co-sours, especially striped: And the Co-sours they are fondest of, are Purple and Blue. Their Ancestors, as many of them do still, made use of Plaids, very much variegated; but now they make them rather of dark Colours, more like the Crops of Heath, that they may not be discovered while they lie in Heath's waiting for Game. Being rather wrapped up, than covered with these Plaids, they endure all the Rigour of the Season; and sometimes sleep cover'd all. over with Snow. At Home they lie upon the Ground, having under them Fern or Heath, covered with a Sheet or Blanker, the latter laid with the Roots undermost, so that it is almost as foft as Feathers, and much more healthful:

ful; for the Quality of Heath being to draw out superfluous Humours, when they lie down weary and faint upon it at Night, they rife fresh and vigorous in the Morning. They affect this hard Way of sleeping, and whenever they bappen to come into any Place where there is better Accomodations, they pull the Covering off the Bed, and lie down upon it wrapped in their Plaids, least they should be spoiled by what they call a barbarous Effeminacy. They go naked from below the Knee, to the Mid-Thigh, wearing a Broad-Sword, Dirk, and Pistol at their Girdle; and a Target at their Shoulder. They are desperate in Fight, fierce in Conversation, apt to quarrel, mischievous, and even Murderers in their Passion. The old Scots Language, called Erfe, has lost so much Ground by the spreading of the English in Scotland, ever fince the Norman Conquest, that 'tis now confined to the Highlands and the Isles, where most of the People of Note do also understand and speak English.

Mr. Mackay, tells us, that the Highbriders differ as much from the Lowlanders, in their Dreis, Manner, and Linguage, as the Indians in Mexico do from the Spaniards; that the old Scots Language is here spoken in its native Purity, and written in the genuine Characters, which is more like the Greek, or Hibrew, than the Roman: Whereas the Welch, though they have preserved their Language, yet have entirely lost their old Character, and write in the Roman.

^{}Inverness or Inverness, is but a small, dirty, poor Place, although the Capital of the Highlands, built close along the Banks of the River Ness from Lockness. From that River, and from Enners, which, in the old Scots Language, signifies an Harbour, the Town and Country derives its Name. It lies in a great Hollow, which joins the Murray Firth. 1At the Key, there is a very commodious Harbour for small Shipping; and those of the largest Burthen, at a little Diltance, may ride in Safety; and lies convenient for Trade. It is a Royal Burgh, and a Seat of the Sheriss, and of a Presbytery, containing ten Parishes. It stands on the South-Side of the Ness, over which is a Bridge of hewn Stone, with seven.

Arches, in the Butment of one of which is a Goal, or Place of Confinement, with an Iron Trap Door going down into it. It has two tolerable good Streets, and two Churches, one for the English, and the other for the Irish, or what they call Erse; for, in this Town, both Languages are spoken indifferently among the Rich as well as Poor. Near to the Bridge, upon a pleasant Hill, are the Ruins of, a Callle, which was formerly the Residence of the Kings of Scotland, and from whence there is a fine Prospect of the Town, the Ships in the-Harbour, and of the adjacent Countries. The Duke of Gordon was hereditary Constable both of the Castle and of its Superiorities. It has of late been rebuilt and call'd Fort George, which was a great Ornament to the Town, before the Rebels blew it up; and was not a Place of Force, but a beautiful Barrack. Their chief Engineer, who laid the Plan for blowing up this Fort, was mounted up into the Air by one of the Blasts, and was kill'd, whose Dog far'd better than his Master, for although he was also blown up at the same Time, a great Height, and thrown near to the other Side of the River, yet liv'd, but was fadly lamed. The Manufacture here is chiefly in Linnen and Plaids. This Town, above all others in Scatland, is noted for handsome Women. They are generally of a fair Complexion; reddish Hair is also common amonst them; many of them are taught Musick, (as the Spinct) and Dancing: They also speak the best English here of any Place in Scotland, which 'tis thought they formerly learnt from Oliver Cromwell's Forces, who a long Time garrifon'd here in a large Pentagon Setting aside their Principles, his Wife and he were very agrecable People; on Enquiry, I was informed by the Minister of the established Church, that during the Time that Town had been possess'd by the Rebels, Mr. Hayes, who was my Landlord, had made it his constant Practice to go about amongst the Rebel Officers, making Interest for his Neighbours that were well affected to the Government; which was now returned at their Request; for I protected him from any Injury he might have received from our Soldiers. when they came in as usual on such Occasions, with Pretence to fearch for Arms. I gave them for Answer, (being well affured) that there were no Arms there but what belong'd to me; and, as 'twas my Quarters, would not fuffer it to be abus'd; which they always took as a fatisfactory Answer, and went off; so that my Landlord fuffered no Damage. I have heard fince that he has conformed. This Town is pretty well affected to the Government, perhaps from the good Example (or fom: of the Breed) of Oliver Cromwell's Soldiers. i (D. On the 28th, all the French Prisoners were shipp'd for Newcastle. Almost all the Pretender's Servants came and submitted to the Duke; and as they were French, and had not been with him before he came to France, his Royal Highness gave them Passports to go home. Lord Sutherland remained with 900 of his People in the Head of the Frazers Coun-Lord Loudon, with 1300 Men, were in the Isle of Sky, and ordered by his Royal Highness to land in the Country of the Glenranolds, and to march up towards Fort-Augustus. It lies amongst the Mountains half Way between Inverness and Fort William, which is on the Sea-Shore in the West Highlands, as Inverness is on the East, and about sixty Miles from it. Fort-Augustus is situated in a Valley at the Head of Lochnes; it was a fine old Building, about 200 Yards Distance. On a more rising Ground is another large Building, which is called the old Barracks, both which were burnt by the Rebels. The Town of Kilwhumen consists only of a few Earthern miserable H h Huts.

Huts, thatched with Heath or Heather, and is fituated just by the old Barracks. Fort-Augustus is fince rebuilt, and is now a very strong Fortress, having most commodious Barracks, and surrounded by two Trenches filled with Water, with Draw-Bridges, Strong Walls and Bassions. In coming to which, from Inverness, you travel along the Banks of the River Ness, four Scots Miles (which are generally very long) till you come to the Lochness, from whence the River runs and discharges itself into the Murray Firth at Inverness. In this River is a great Fishery, in which they catch vast Quantities of Salmon.

Lochness is a most remarkable and beautiful Loch 24 Miles long, and two broad; on each Side of this Loch is a Ridge of most terrible barren woody Mountains; you travel along the Banks, which makes the Foot of these Mountains, for about 12 Miles, and through a Road made with the greatest Difficulty, by blowing up monstrous Rocks, which in many I'les hang declining over Passengers, and higher than Houses, so that 'tis frightful frightful to pass by them; you then com? to a poor small House of Entertainment (yet the only one on the Road) called the General's Hut, from General Wade, who once lived there when he commanded the Forces, in making those surprizing and useful Roads through the Highlands of Scotland: Before you come to this Place on the other Side of the Lock, are the Ruins of the famous Castle of Urqubart, confishing of seven great Towers, faid to be built by the Cumins, and overthrown by King Edward: About four Miles to the Westward of which Castle, on the Top of a very high Hill, two Miles perpendicular, is a Lake of cold fresh Water, about 30 Fathom in Length, and 6 in Breadth, no Stream running to it or from it; its Depth could never yet be fathomed, and at all Seasons of the Year it is equally full, and never freezes: A little Way after you have this Hut, you are presented on your Right with a most remarkable Cataract, or Fall of Water, more than 20 Yards high; it being a small River obstructed by vast Rocks on the Edge of a Mountain, from whence it Hh 2 falls into the Lock at the Foot of this Mountain; here the Mountains and Rocks that inviron this Lock are inaccessable: You leave it on your Right, and travel over continued barren Mountains, and see Lochness no more 'till you come to Fort-Augustus; from whence to Fort-William is 30 Miles, quite in a Valley, as it is from Inverness to this Place, and full of Lochs all the Way from Sea to Sea; East and West. This Valley is supposed to be 20 Foot lower than the Sea; and there are not above eight Miles of the Way from Inverness to Fort-William but what are either Lochs or Rivers. This Fort was erected in Honour of King William the Third, as the Village is called Maryborough, in Honour of his Queen Mary, to curb the Highlanders, who, upon all Revolutions used to be very unruly. This Garrison over-awed the Neighbouring Highlanders, when they armed for the Pretender in 1715. It is so situated, that if it be ever so much straitned by a Blockade or Siege by Land, 'tis open to the Sea, and may thereby receive constant Supplies. The Water in Lochness is of

of a brown Colour, faid to abound much with Sulphur; and is the lightest Water in Scotland: Amongst the Natives it is accounted the best of Water; as is that of the River Ness, at Inverness, and never freezes; but our Soldiers complained of it giving them the Flux, as already taken Notice of. Upon Lochness is built a very handsome Sloop, which serves the Garrifon with Necessaries from Inverness, and at this Time was of great Use in bringing up Forage and Provisions for the Army, &c. and carrying the Sick from hence to Inverness, of which there were but too great Plenty, after the excessive fatiguing Marches, inclement Weather, and now invironed with black barren Mountains covered with Snow, and Streams of Water rolling down them; the Sight of which is sufficient to give a well-bred Dog the Vapours, and occasioned Numbers to fall fick daily, as well in their Minds as Bodies. This might have been still worse, had it not been for the Duke's Presence, which afforded Pleasure to every Soldier as often as they beheld him a and to divert their Melancholy, Hh3:

his Royal Highnels and Officers frequently gave Money to be run for by Highland Horses, sometimes without Saddles or Bridles, both Men and Women riding: Here were also many Foot-Races, perform'd by both Sexes, which afforded many Droll Scenes. It was necessary to entertain Life in this Manner, otherwise the People were in Danger of being affected with hypocondriaeal Melancholy. At this Time most of the Soldiers had Horfes, which they bought and fold with one another at a low Price, and on which they rode about, neglecting their Duty; which made it necessary to publish an Order to part with them, otherwise they were all to be shot. faw a Soldier riding on one of these Horses, when being met by a Comrade, he asked him, Tom, What bast thou given for the Galloway? Tem answered, To which the other Half-a-Crown. replied, with an Oath, He is too dear; I saw a better bought for Eighteen-Pence. Notwithstanding the low Price, the vast Quantities of Cattle, such as Oxen, Horses, Sheep and Goats, taken from the the Rebels, and bought up by the Lump, by the Jockies and Farmers from Yorkfbire and the South of Scotland, came to a great deal of Money; all which was divided amongst the Men that brought them in; who were sent out in Parties, in Search of the Pretender; and they frequently came to Rebels Houses that had left them, and would not be reduced to Obedience: These Sort our Soldiers commonly plunder'd and burnt, so that many of them grew rich by their Share of Spoil.

Many of the Rebels, after their Defeat at Culloden, dispersed themselves over the Country, and retired to their respective Homes, still keeping their Arms, without giving the least Marks of quitting their traiterous Disposition, although the Duke's Clemency in granting Protections to those who brought in their Arms, (which a great many did) might have induced those harden'd Wretches to desist.

His Royal Highness issued out a Proclamation, requiring all Magistrates and Officers of the Law, to make Search for and commit such Persons when sound, in order for Trial; to seize and secure their Arms; and to take Informations from the Ministers of the Established Church of Scotland, touching the Behaviour of the Inhabitants, within their respective Parishes; and of the Haunts and Places of Abode of fuch Rebels as might be lurking in their several Neighbourhoods, &c. Notwithstanding the Prisoners that were shipp'd off from Inverness, the Prisons continued full with others that were daily sending in. Prisoners at Aberdeen, Montrose, Sterling, and Perth, were likewise filled.

The Marquis of Tullibardine, and an Italian, who called himself Machell, and said he had been 30 Years in the Service of the Pretender, sled through Ross-shire, endeavouring to make the Sea-Coast, or find a Passage to the Isle of Mull;

Mull; but their Horses tiring, and the Marquis being in a bad State of Health, went April 27, to the Seat of William Buchannon, Esq; Justice of the Peace, and furrender'd to him, who committed them both to the Castle of Dumbarton: The Marquis was afterwards transmitted to the Tower of London, where he William Murray, Esq. Brother to the Earl of Dunmore, furrender'd himself to a Justice of Peace in the Shire of Mearns. The Lord Pitsligo, with some of his Followers, lurk'd about the Coast of Buchan, in Hopes of making their Escape to France. Misery and Distress of the fugitive Rebels was inexprefible, Hundreds being found dead of their Wounds, and thro. Hunger, authe Distance of 112, 14, or 20 Miles from the Field of Battle. 'General Campbell marched towards Lechaber, in order to clear that Country of the Rebels, who were dispersed all over it, and had begun to rob and plunder. Lord Cobban's Dragoons marched to Montrose, Barvey, and Stonebaven. Lord Mark

As I have steadfastly adhered to Trush and Justice, through the Whole of my History, I beg Leave to make this general Remark: That though the Flame of Rebellion was kindled and raised in Scotland to a high Pitch, yet it is very unjust (as fome ignorant People are apt) to brand the Country in general with the infamous Name of Rebels, fince, from what I have abready faid, it plainly appears, that there are no People better attach'd to his Majesty's Person and Government, than many of the Scots; for the Confirmation of which, I refer you to his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland's Letter to the Right Hon. the Earl of Leven, his Majesty's High Commissioner to the general Assembly of the Church of Scotland.

My Lord Commissioner,

WILLIAM,

Both Houses of Parliament likewise addressed the King upon this glorious and important Victory; and in the Address of the House of Commons, the concluding Paragraph ran in these Words:

The next Day, purfuant to his Majesty's Message of the 13th, the Commons voted (Nem. con.) that an Additional Revenue of 25,000 l. be settled on his Royal Highness William Duke of Cumberland, and on the Heirs Male of his Body, for the signal Services done by his Royal Highness to his Country; to be issuing and payable out of the Duties and Revenues, composing the Aggregate Fund.—His Royal Highmess had before only 15,000 st per Ann.

The Work in the Highlands being mostly over, and I having had the Pleafure of feeing and lending a Hand in reducing the Evenies of my King and Country to an unwilling Obedience, had a Defire to deave these Parts (so long-harraffed by the Highland Banditti, that it more resembled the Habitation of Savages, than the Residence of a civilized Society), and to return to England. My Horse being wounded at the Battle of Culloden, and not fit for so long a Jour-ney, ney, the Adjutant-General gave me an Order to the Commissary, to receive another Horse so that I soon after turned. my Back upon these hideous Mountains and Rocks, covered with Snow, and the noify Ding of the great Falls of Water, (which is the Winter Appearance) to a more agreeable Prospect, the Weather being now pretty good, the Vallies and adjacent Hills covered with Ling or Heath, began to look beautiful. This inspires a Soldier in the Day of Battle with true Courage and Fortitude, being not only engaged in the Service of the Government, but that of the Ladies, our Mistresses, or our Wives, which are the better Part of queselves: He that does not act under those Principles, is divested of that Honour due to the Dignity of a Volunteer; so that is may justly be faid, that our whole Life is dedicated to the Service of the Ladies; and if in Return we have their Thanks with a Smile, a kind Look, their Hand, or perhaps their Heart, Itis more than sufficient Recompence. His Majesty's Reign had hitherio been unspotted with Blood, but now the Mildness of the Government should give Place to Justice. It was therefore become requifite for the Security: of the Constitution, restoring the Vigour of the Laws, and maintaining the future Tranquility of the Kingdom, to make Examples of fuch as had disturbed it. The Voice of the Nation demanded it: and the Legislature had provided that this should be speedily and effectually done, by passing an Act agreeable to the Practice of former Times, for regulating the Trials. of such as had been guilty of High-Treason. The Prisons were crowded with Officers, taken in Arms; who were to be tried pursuant to this Act; and for this Purpose his Majesty issued a Special Commission of Over and Terminer to the Judges and other proper Persons, to sit for

But as many of the Chiefs who were nost guilty were not taken, a Bill of Attainder was brought into the House of ommons in the Beginning of the Month f May, and Witnesses were examined to rove the Guilt of the Persons nameth herein. On Monday the 23d of June, eight of the Judges went in the infual State from Serjeant's-Inn to the Hall on St. Margaret's-Hill, Southwark, wherethey opened the Special Commission for the Prial of the Rebel Prisoners; when a Grand Jury, of which Sir William Richardson of Bermondsey, Knight, was Foreman, and three other Knights, and nineteen Esquires of the County of Surry, were impanelled, to whom a learned Charge was given; after which they withdrew, and sound Bills of Indictment for High Treason inlevying War, against the Earls of Cromartie and Kilmarnock, and against Lord Balmerino. At the same Time they likewise found Bills of the same Nature against thirty-seven Commoners, who had a reasonable Time given them to prepare for their Trials.

The House of Peers being informed that Bills had been found against the three Lords, directed that a Writ of Certiorari should be issued for bringing the said Indictmens before them, and appointed also a Committee to consider of the proper Methods for bringing the said Lords to their Trials. Before I proceed to the Detail of what happened in Reserence, to these Judicial Proceedings, it becomes absence for necessary to take Notice of a very mean dinary. Step the French Court thought:

thought fit to make on this Occasion. The Reader will observe, that the Pretender's Son was at this Time in Scotland, that many of the unhappy Persons engaged in this Rebellion had been drawn into it by Assurances given them" that their Cause would be supported by France; to keep up this Notion therefore, and thereby the Spirits of these deluded People, and perhaps to hinder the good Effects that might have attend-1. ed that Spirit of Tenderness and Compassion, which had always distinguished his Majesty's Administration, an Attempt was made to deter the Government from bringing those People to Justice.

There has been various Conjectures up on the Occasion of those Proceedings, which I'll pass by, and only add, that is most likely, that the French Court did it to serve their own Purposes, as they did every Thing else from the Beginning of these Troubles,

The French Minister therefore, for For reign Assairs, wrose a very strange Letter upon upon this Head, from the Camp, to the Dutch Ambastader at Paris, befeeching him to exert that Sort of Eloquence, for which he is famous, upon this Occasion; which he accordingly did, but the Application, was received here in the Manner that might be well expected, and his Majerly's Principal Secretary of State gave the Dutch Minister such an Answer, as shewed how little Impression French Threatnings made here, and how very highly his Conduct, in this Respect, was resepted. These Letters are of such Consequence in themselves, and belong so immediately to this History, that I cannot avoid inferting them.

The Character of the British Nation in general, cannot likewise but inspire all Englishmen. with the Sentiments of Admiration, for a Countryman, fo distinguished by, his Talents and heroic Virtues. All these Reasons ought naturally to favour the Fate of Prince Edward; and at the fame Time we may expect from the, 'Moderation and Clemency of the King, of England, that he will not fuffer those. Persons to be prosecuted with the ut-'most Rigour, who, in the Time of, 'Trouble and Confusion, followed the 'Standard which was lately overthrown, by the British Arms, under the Command of the Duke of Cumberland, Ne-'vertheless, Letter from M. Van Hoey, to the Duke of Newcastle, in which the former was inclosed.

My Lord,

' Have the Honour to send to your Excellency a Letter I just now re-'ceived from M. D'Argenson, in Rela-' tion to the present State of the Affairs ' of the Pretender's eldest Son, and those of his Adherents, fince the Defeat they have met with from his Royal High-'ness the Duke of Cumberland. ' Excellency will perceive thereby, how 'much that Court confides in me, what 'Credit I, by my long Residence there, ' have gained, and how far it is inclined to believe, that my Love of Peace and 'Equity

'Equity will furnish me with Arguments 'to enforce its Recommendations. I 'wish, my Lord, I was Master of the 'greatest Eloquence upon Earth, and were able effectually to employ my whole Life to convince Mankind, that 'by doing to others as we would they 'should do unto us, is the Foundation ' of the Supreme Happiness of States, 'Nations, Kings, their Subjects, and in general, of human Kind. This is a 'Duty well known by your Excellency; 'and Providence expects from you a ' Compliance, from the high Station with 'which he has bleffed you. May Per-' fuafion flow from your Lips like Honey, ' and every one will be convinced, that we 'are only happy in Proportion to the Good we do to others. May you, my Lord, banish that pernicious Art which Discord hath brought into the World, of seducing Men to destroy one another, Wretched Policy! which substitutes Revenge, Hatred, Jealousy and Avarice, to take Place of the Divine Precepts which form the Glory of Kings and Happinels of their Subjects. You 'know

'know, my Lord, that Courage, by way of Excellence, is called Virtue, and that because it is founded on the Love of * Happiness, and directed in all its Mo-'tions by Equity, Moderation and Goodness. True Heroes make their Victo-' ries become profitable to those they con-'quer, and raise for themselves immor-'tal Trophies of Honour, by subduing Refentment and Revenge, Passions so ' natural to Mankind, and so difficult to get the better of. Thus has Clemency been revered by wife Men in all Ages, 'as the most magnanimous, the most 'useful, and the most pious of all Royal 'Virtues. I am sensible, my Lord, that 'I am guilty of an Indifcretion, in lay-'ing before you what Wisdom, Experi-ence and Religion have so strongly ' impressed upon your Heart. It is not that I prefume to add to your Convict-ion, but how is it possible to forbear 'infifting on a Subject which we love? to know Truth, and be inflamed with 'its divine Beauties, is, as your Excellen-'cy well knows, but one and the same Thing. May two so great Kings never cease to emulate, which shall be the highest Example of Humanity, Cle-mency and Greatness of Soul. May their Love to Mankind increase and 'add daily to their Glory, and cause it 'to shine with greater Splendour; that their Subjects in particular may owe ' their Peace, and all Europe in the Reestablishment of its Tranquility to them; ' that their Wisdom may perpetuate their 'Memories, and be made Examples of 'Posterity to the latest Ages; may they 'long on Earth enjoy the just Return of 'Human Kind, and more and more sccure to themselves eternal Happiness hereafter. I have the Honour to be, ' &c.

Paris, June 2, 1746.

His Grace the Duke of Newtaftle's Anfwer to M. Van-Hoey's Letter.

SIR,

Yesterday, the Letter which your Excellency was pleased to honour me L 1 2 'with,

with, dated the 2d Instant, N.S. inclosing one which the Marquis D'Argenson had wrote to you on the 26th of • MAY. I laid it immediately before the King, who was in the greatest Astoinishment at the Contents of that Letter; which as well in what relates to the Sub-* ject of it, as to the Manner of treating it, is so contrary to his Majesty's Hoonour and to the Dignity of his Crown, that his Majesty cannot but consider ' himself as too much offended by it to make any Answer to it. You know, Sir, and so do the French Ministers, ' with how scrupulous an Exactness his ' Majesty has on his Part executed the ' Cartel agreed on between him and the ' most Christian King, in its utmost Extent, even to the releasing on the Pa-' role all the Officers in the French Ser-" vice, who were made Prisoners within ' the Limits of these Kingdoms, and who were not his Majesty's natural-born Sub-' jects, although the Service on which they were then employed might very sjuftly have excused his Majesty from it. It is impossible, after this, to doubt of his Majesty's fincere: Desire .to. do every thing which the Law of Nations can require between Powers at War with each other, even beyond what is usually practised: But as to what re-'lates to his Majesty's own Subjects, neither the Law of Nations, the Car-'tels, nor the Practice and Example of any Country, authorize any foreign Power at War with his Ma-'jesty, to intrude themselves to make 'any Demand from his Majesty thereto. The most Christian King knows too well himself the Right inherent in every 'Sovereign, to imagine that his Ma-"jesty can think otherwise. I cannot conceal from your Excellency his Majesty's Surprize, to see that the Ambassador of a Power so strictly united with him, and effentially interested in every thing that concerns the Honour and Security of his Majesty's Person 'and Government, could charge him-' self with transmitting to his Majesty so unheard of a Demand. And I am very ! forry, Sir, to be obliged to acquaint Ll 3

you, that his Majesty could not avoid complaining of it to their High Mighti-

'nesses the States General, your Masters.

I have the Honour to be, &c.

Whitehall, June 3d, 1746.

But this was not all the Mortification that M. Van-Hoey received; his Majesty's Minister to the States General, Robert Trevor, Esq; prefented a Memorial to their High Mightinesses, in which he complained of the Indignity offered to the King his Master, in Terms suitable to the Offence. The States General readily promifed all the Reparation and Satisfaction in their Power, and accordingly fignified to M. Van-Hoey the Sense they had of his ill Conduct, in stronger Terms than are usually employed by them to Persons in his Station; and at the same Time fignified their Pleasure, that he should write to the Duke of Newcastle in so submiffive a Stile, as to atone for what was past; admonishing him likewife, to avoid every thing capable of giving ing either Umbaage or Offence for the future.

To all this M. Van-Hoey gave a very exact Obedience, wrote a very handsome Letter to the Duke, in which he expressed how sensible he was of his Missortune, and having by his Indiscretion drawn upon himself the Displeasure of his Britannic Majesty; and has since that Time given such Marks of the Sincerity, with which he made this Submission, as have procured him Thanks for his good Offices upon subsequent Occasions; so that whatever the French Views were in this strange Business, it is certain they were absolutely deseated. But it is now high Time to quit this Subject, and to return to the Thread of my Narration.

On Tuesday the 22d of July, the Trials of those Rebels against whom Bills had been found at St. Margaret's-Hill being over, the Right Hon. the Lord Chief Justice Lee, in the Presence of Sir Martin Wright, Sir Michael Foster, Sir Thomas Reynolds, Sir Thomas Abney, Mr. Baron

Baron Clive, and other Commissioners, passed Sentence of Death upon 17 who had been found Guilty on their Trials, after having had Council allowed them. Of these the following Eight were reprieved, viz. Charles Deacon, William Pattragh, John Saunderson, Christopher Taylor, James Wilday, Thomas Furnival, James Gadd, and Alexander Abernethy.

On Wednesday the 30th of the same Month, the other Nine were carried on three Sledges to the Place of Execution (Kennington-Common) and there suffered as is usual in Cases of High-Treason, viz. Francis Townley, Esq; one of an antient Family in Lancashire, who acted as Governor at Carlisse; David Morgan, Esq; Barrister at Law; George Fletcher, Tho. Chadwick, James Deacon, Thomas Deacon, John Barwick, Andrew Blood, and Tho. Siddal. Mr. Townley was the only professed Papist among them.

The House of Lords having upon the Petition of the Peers that were Prisoners, granted them Solicitors, and whatever was necessary for their Defence, addressed his Majesty to appoint a Lord High Steward for their Trials. The same was accordingly done; and the Prisoners on the 28th of July were brought before the Peers, sitting in Westminster-Hall. Right Hon. Philip Lord Hardwick, Lord · High Chancellor of Great-Britain, acting by his Majesty's Commission as Lord High Steward; when Arthur Lord Balmerino pleaded not guilty; upon which the King's Council opened the Indictment; called the Witnesses for the Crown; and the Fact being plainly proved, their Lordships unanimously found the Prisoner guilty.

On the 30th of the same Month, William Earl of Kilmarnock, being brought before the same Judicature, made a long and moving Speech, and at the same Time pleaded guilty; as did George Earl of Cromartie. Then Lord Balmerino moved in Arrest of Judgment; and at his Request Request had Council assigned him to argue the Point, if he thought proper. On Friday the 1st of August, the Lords were again brought up. Lord Balmerino having waved the Point he had formerly insisted upon (being informed by his Council that it would be of no Service to him) the Lord High Steward, after addressing himself in a very elegant, pathetick, and tender Speech to the Prisoners, pronounced Sentence as usual, in Cases of High Treason.

It will be expected that I should give some Account of those unhappy Noblemen, who by their Indiscretion in taking up Arms against the Government, subjected themselves to the Loss of Life, and deprived their Families of their Titles, and Fortunes.

EORGE Earl of Cromartie, was of the noble Family of the Mackenzies, the Chief of which was the Earl of Seaforth, who was in the Rebellion in 1715; his Lordship was the Grandson of the first Earl of Cromartie; and this unhappy pappy Nobleman was himself the Second who bore that Title, his Father having never lived to enjoy it. How he came to be embarked in the Rebellion is not eafy to be accounted for, as his Lordship had always warmly professed the Revolution Principles, and besides, was under partizular Obligations, as having received conaiderable Favours from the present Government. But his Lordship loved Company, and it feems was drawn by Company to do as they did; which was attended with another Incident, the drawing his eldest Son the Lord Mackleod into the same Misfortune, who being taken with his Father, as I have before observed, was then a Prisoner with him in the Tower. His melancholy Case, the several Circumstances tending to extenuate his Guilt, his fincere Repentance, the great Distress of his Family, and the affecting Situation of his Countefs, big with Child, being laid before his Majesty, whose generous Disposition inclines him always to see the Arguments for Clemency in the strongest Light, he was graciously pleased to reprieve him, and the other true I and the other true. him; and the other two Lords were ordered dered for Execution; which frees me from the Necessity of saying any thing more of him, except that he is said to have expressed all the Duty and Gratitude towards his Majesty, which so high and undeserved a Mark of Mercy ought to excite in the Mind of a Gentleman and a Christian.

ILLIAM BOYD, Earl of Kilmarnock, and Lord Boyd, takes his Title of Earl from a Royal Borough of that Name, in the Shire of Cunningham. The first remarkable Man of his Family, and the first who assumed the Sirname of Boyd, is faid, by Scotch Genealogists, to be Robert, the Son of Simon, third Son of Allan, Lord High Chancellor of Scotland in the Year 1111, from whom the late Earl was lineally descended. The first who was created a Baron, and called to Parliament by the Name and Title of Lord Boyd of Kilmarnock, was one Robert, a Man remarkable for his Abilities, both as a Soldier and Statesman, whose Son Robert, a Nobleman of quick Wit and penetrating Judgment, was on the 25th of October, 1466, by Letters

atent created Regent of Scotland, during he Minority of King James the Third, who created his Son Thomas, in the Lifeme of his Father, Earl of Arran, and ave him in Marriage the Lady Mary tewart, eldest Sister to the King, He as shortly after sent on an Embassy to enmark, on a Treaty of Marriage beveen the young King, his Brother-inw, and Margaret, a Daughter of that own, whom he espoused in the Name his Royal Master: But by the Practis of his Enemies against him, was rced afterwards to take the Opportunity one of those Ships which convoyed the neen, and retired to Denmark, with his ife, the King's Sifter; whence going pay a Visit to Charles then Duke of rgundy, Anno 1470, he died at Antrp, and was honourably intersed at the pence of that Duke, who erected a fub Monument to his Memory.

William the then furviving Deform
t, a Man of Wit and Learning,

folid Parts, was created by that Prince, Earl of Kilmarnock. The Family having remained in a private Station, from the Time of the famous Earl of Arran in James IIId's Reign, till this Period, when they again appeared in Parliament with their ancient Lustre.

William, his Great-Grandson, the 4th and late Earl, who was confined in the Tower of London, was but very young when his Father died. His Father's Death leaving him too foon at Liberty to be his own Master, and the Indulgence that is generally given to young Noblemen, added to the natural Sprightliness of his Temper, soon gave him an Aversion to a rigorous Study of Letters, though he had made some Progress in Classical Learning, and had acquired some tolerable Notion of Philosophy and the Mathematicks; but. there was too much of the Volatile in his Disposition, to continue long at Exercises that required Application: He was more happy, in acquiring those which are called enteel Accomplishments; such as Riding, lencing, Dancing, and some Mulick; in Hadonardh, and whan Account of his all which he excelled, and was esteemed by Men of Taste, a polite Gentleman.

When he came to the Estate, it was pretty much incumber'd, and great Part of the old Patrimony alienated: The Earl's Disposition was by no Means cut out for improving it by Parlimony; on the contrary, as his Income was infinitely short of what the Generosity, or rather the Profuseness of his Disposition would prompt him to spend, he found his Affairs daily growing worle, and therefore thought of bettering his Circumstances by an advantageous Match: To this Purpose he fixed his Eyes upon Lady Ann Levinston, Daughter of James Earl of Linlithgow and Callendar, a young Lady of considerable Fortune, and great Beauty. The Earl made his Addresses to the Lady, but her Friends, who knew the low Ebb of the Earl's Fortune, refused their Consent: However, his Lordship's agreeable Person, and genteel Address, raised a Friend for him in the Lady's Bosom, who married him without her Mother's Confert.

His Lordship's Excesses added to the Charge of a Family, reduced the Estate so low, that it was not now sufficient to support them with any tolerable Decency; his Lordship was therefore obliged to apply to the Ministry for a Pension, which he obtain'd, and has ever since enjoy'd it.

It does not appear to me that the Earl was in the original Defign of the Rebellion, for I believe it was far advanced before his Lordship so much as thought of joining them. But his Lady happening to be at Edinburgh when the young Pretender enter'd that City, The was charmed with the Gaiety of his military Court, and the Affability with which he treated her and all the Ladies . The Countels is naturally of a very gay Disposition, fond of Publick Diversions, and generally the First at all Parties of Pleasure; and finding herself more than usually cares'd by Region who personated Sovereignty, which flatter'd her Vanity, and puffed up her Ambition; the was foon converted to the Tacobise 1. 17

Facobite Faith, and her Lord had not Refolution enough to with fland her Solitinations especially after the Battle of Preson-Pane, which elevated the Julion to the Land of Madnets and Infatuation in every Body who did not immediately join their Standard. Among the rest the Earl of Kilmarnock joined them, and was received by the young Chevalier with Marks of great Esteen and Distinction; declared of the Privy Council, made Colonel of his Guards, and promoted to the Degree of a General.

His remarkable Abilities, accompanied with a great Sedateness, soon recommendated him to a Seat on the Bench, where he discharged that high and important Trust with great Honour and strict Integrity. He was esteemed an able and just Judge, always avoided mixing Party Spirit with the Bench.

This worthy Lord died about a Year before the Rebellion broke out, but left mo Issue. He was succeeded by Arthun the late Earl, the Son of John, the fourth Lord Balmerino, by his second Wassi Daughter of Arthur Ross Archbishop of Sc. Andrew.

Mis Lordship, in Queen Ann's Time, was in the Service; had a Company of Foot; at the Head of which he fought, under the Duke of Argyle, at the Battle of Dumblain; but afterwards, joined the Earl of Marr; he was pardoned at the Intercession of his Father, and lived privately in Scotland; until the breaking out of the last Rebellion.

On the 18th of August 1746; about Eight in the Morning, the Sheriffs Black ford and Cockaym went to the Tower to secence those unfortunated Noblemen, the Earl of Kilmarnock and the Lord Balmer rim; about Ten they were brought out and conducted to a House prepared for their Reception, where the Earl, who was called to fuffer first, spent about an. In addresting himself to the Company, he said, Gentlemen. I shall detain you no longer, and feemingly with an easy Chearfulness, saluted his Friends, and hastened to the Scaffold, which he mounted with so willing an Air, that it greatly aftonished the Spectators: As his Lordship lived in the Acts of Treason and Rebellion, so he died in the Aggravation of his Crime, having the Insolence to wear the same Regimentals

His Lord-Thip putting on his Spectacles, and taking a Paper out of his Pocket, read it with an audible Voice, in which he mentioned his Majesty King George, as a Prince of the greatest Magnanimity and Mercy. Having delivered this Paper to the Sheriff, he then examined the Block; and calling for the Executioner, who appearing, and being about to alk his Lordship's Pardon, he said, Friend, you need not ask me Forgiveness, the Execution of your Duty is commendable. Upon which his Lotdship gave him three Guineas, saying, I never was Rich, this is all the Money I have now; I wish it was more; and pulling off his Cloaths, which he likewife gave him, he put on a Flunnel Waistcoat, and then taking a Plaid Capout of his Pocket, put it on his Head, faying, he died a Scotchman; after shewing ing the Executioner the Signal for the Stroke, clapp'd him on the Back, and encouraged him to do his Work like a Man; and then kneeling down to the Block, gave the Signal fo unexpectedly, that the Executioner was in Confusion, and could not perform his Office under three Blows: His Lordship was in the 58th Year of his Age. The Execution being thus over, the Body was carried back to the Tower, and together with that of the Earl of Kilmarnock, deposited in St. Peter's Church, in the same Vault where that of the Marques of Tul-libardin lies.

HARLES RATCLIFFE, Esq; was the younger Brother of the unhappy Earl of Derwentwater, who suffered for the Rebellion in 1715: They were the Sons of Sir Francis Ratcliffe, ly Mary Tudor, natural Daughter to king Charles II. by Mary Davis, descended from the ancient and noble Family of the Ratcliffes, Earls of Sussex. He was a Prisoner in Newgate, and under Sentence of Death when his Brother fuffered, and after receiving several Reprieves, made his Escape from thence, when his Life was in no Danger. went immediately to France, from thence to Rome, and afterwards returned to Paris, where he married the Widow of Lord Newburn, by whom he had a Son, who embarked with his Father in Favour of the late Expedition, and were taken by his Majesty's Ship the Speerness, already taken Notice of, and confined some Time a Prisoner with him in the Tower. from whence, on Friday the 21st of November, he was brought under a strong Guard to the Court of King's-Bench in Westminster-Hall, to be arraigned on his Sentence in the Year 1716, when he efcaped out of Newgate. He pleaded that he was a Subject of France, in which Country he had refided 30 Years, and had his Commission; and that he was not Charles Ratclisse, meaning that he was Earl of Derwentwater; then a Jury was impannelled to find him the identical. Person. On Saturday the 22d, Mr. Ratcliffe Nn 2

Ratcliffe being brought up to the Bar of the Court of King's-Bench, was again arrai ned, but refused to hold up his Hand, or acknowledge any Jurisdiction but to the King of France, insisting on a Com-mission he had in his Pocket from the French King, and appealing to his Sicilian Majesty's Minister, who was present in Court; but on hearing his former Indictment and Conviction, which were read to him, he faid, he was not Charles Ratcliffe therein named, but that he was the Earl of Derwentwater; and his Council informed the Court that this was the Plea he relied on; to which the Attorney General replied, with the Averment of his being the fame Charles Ratcliffe, and thereupon Isiue was joined: Then the Council for the Prisoner moved to put off his Trial upon his own Affidavit (to which he had libscribed the Count de Derwentwater) that two of his material Witnesses, naming them; were Abroad, without. whose Testimony he could not safely go to Trial: This Affidavit not proving satisfactory, because the Prisoner did not therein aver, that he was the Person formerly'

merly attainted; a Jury was impanelled, one of whom he challenged peremptorily, which the Court disallow'd; then the rest of the Jury were sworn, and after a clear Evidence of the Identity of the Person in Behalf of the Crown, the Prisoner producing none on his Part, the Jury with, drew about ten Minutes, and then brought in their Verdict, that he was the same Charles Ratcliffe, who was convicted of Treafon in the Year 1716. Then the Attorney-General moved to have Execution awarded against the Prisoner on his former Judgment; to which the Prisoner's. Council objected, rendering a Plea of Pardon by Act of Parliament, in Bar of Execution: But the Court said, as, he had already pleaded such a Plea as he, onose to rely on, and as that was found against him, nothing more remained for them to do at present, but to award Execution; for which the proper Writs were made out.

On Monday the 8th of December all Things were put in order for his Execution, though the Notice was fo short that the Carpenters were forced to work on the Scaffold on Sunday, and all the following Night. In the Morning about Ten o'Clock, the Block and a Cushion, both covered with Black, were brought up and fixed on the Stage, and foon after Mr. Ratcliffe's Coffin, covered with black Velvet, with eight Handles, which and the Nails were gilt with Gold; but there was no Plate or Inscription upon it. near Eleven, the Sheriffs, Mr. Alderman Winterbottom and Mr. Alderman Alfop, with their Officers, came to fee if the Scaffold was finished, and every Thing prepared for Mr. Ratcliffe's Reception, which being to their Satisfaction, they went to the Tower, and demanded the Body of Mr. Ratcliffe, of General Wildiamjon, Deputy-Governor; upon being delivered, he was put into a Landau, and carried over the Wharf, at the End of which, he was put into Mourning Coach, · ... · and convey'd into a small Booth, joining to the Stairs of the Scaffold, lined with Black, where he spent about Half an Hour, in his Devotion; and then, prededed by the Sherists, the Divine, and some Gentlemen his Friends, came to the Place of Execution.

When he came upon the Scaffold, he took Leave of his Friends with great Serenity and Calmness of Mind; and having spoken a few Words to the Executioner, gave him a Purse of ten Guineas, and putting on a Damask Cap, kneeled down to Prayers, which lasted about seven Minutes; all the Spectators on the Scaffold kneeling with him: Prayers being over! he pulled off his Cloaths, and put his Head on the Block, from whence he foongot up, and having spoke a few Words, he kneeled down to it again, and fixing his Head, in about two Minutes gave the Signal to the Executioner, who at three Blows struck it off, which was received in a Scarlet Cloth held for that Purpose, He was drefled in Scarlet faced with black! Yelvet trimmed with Gold, ia Gold-laced Waist-5

Waistcoat; and a white Feather in his Hate He behaved with the greatest Formude and Coolness of Temper, and was no way shocked at the Approach of Death; on the contrary, he met it with the atmost Screwity and Composite. He was buried on the 11th at Night in St. Giles's in the Fields, near the Remains of his Brother.

Li Baylori, al-The last Person I have to mention up on this Occasion is Simon Lord France of Louet, who being taken in the Highlands, and fent up Prisoner to London, remained a long Time confined in the Tower ; and as the Adventures of the former Parts of his Life made his Lordthip's Stury pactty well known, there is no need that I should dwell long upon it here. He was of an ancient and honourable Family in Scotland, whose Genea logy I thall forbear to trace, my Book being swelled above my Proposals, se that I shall conclude for the present with the following Remarks on the latter Part of his Lordhip's Life; which he spent in practifing the Maxims of Government he had adopted from France and Rome, by distressing distressing and impoverishing such as had any Business or Concern with Nim: Several Gentlemen, who were not immediately under his Subjection, he ruined, by hiring Ruffians to kill their Cattle, and, firing their Corn-Fields and Barns, on the. flightest Quarrel or Misunderstanding between them: His restless and active Disposition conduced not a little to draw, him into Snares; but a ready Invention and speedy Execution helped him out of theme. In Business he was unjust and unconscionable, and declared his own Profit or Pleasure had always been the Rule of his Actions; and to them, he, on all Occafions, sacrificed every other Concern:, This led him into Violence, Rapes, Cru-elry, Treachery, and every base and infamous Practice; being guilty of all Manner of enormous Crimes, render'd him a fit Instiument for carrying on this Hellbred Scheme of Rebellion, in which he was early engaged, and for which he was: impeached by the House of Commons who charged him with several Acts of Treason; such as engaging in traiterous Defigns in 1743; sending over Agents to. manage

his Lordship was brought up to take his Frial, and being unanimously found guilty by his Peers; the House of Commons on the 19th of the fame Month demanded, and his Lordship received, Judgment in the usual Manner; and he suffer d accordingly, on Thursday the 9th of April. He kept up not only his Spirits, but his Gaiety to the very last.

Perfusion of a Set of People in Prance, called Jansenists, who deny the Installibility of the Pope; but he desir'd that Mr. Baker, a Romisto Priest belonging to the King of Sardinia's Ambassador, might attend him in private till his Execution; which was granted.

About

About an Hour before his Execution, the great Scaffold next the Bars on Tower, Hill, being over-loaded with Spectators, broke down; by which about eighteen Perfons were killed, and many more hurt, who died afterwards: So that as he caused much Destruction in his Life, the like Fate attended him on the Day of his Death. On Monday, April 17, his Corpse was brought from the House of Mr. Stephenson in the Strand, attended only by one Coach, and interr'd in the Tower,

Thus I have brought my History down, from the first Contrivance of the Rebellion Abroad, to the Death of the last Person who suffer'd for it, without Partiality, and with all the Clearness, Candour and Exactness in my Power, as well from the best Informations I could procure, as my own Observations; and I may venture to say, that no Man in Britain, in a private Station, had so great a Share in the Fatigue.

I was likewise a Volunteer in 1715, although but 15 Years of Age, and rode in one of the King's Troops; so that I have been concerned in driving out both the Popish Pretender and his Son; and now conclude with a hearty Wish, that nothing of the like Kind may happen for the future; and that the British Nation in general may be truly sensible and thankful, for the Blessings God has given them in the auspicious House of Hanover, under whose Succession may they live in the quiet Possession of their Laws, Liberties and Properties, till Time shall be no more.
