DR. LEITH DAVIS
BACK TO THE FUTURE: REMEMBERING THE 1707 UNION
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 15
7:30–9:00 PM, FREE
Burnaby campus, WMC 3210

On September 18, Scots will vote in a referendum on whether Scotland should be an independent country.

In this talk, Dr. Leith Davis goes back in time to explore the circumstances surrounding the 1707 Act that united Scotland and England in the first place. Focusing on the propaganda of the time—printed pamphlets and political poetry—she considers how the Union was viewed by Scots (and English) in the early eighteenth century.

Followed by a public discussion, the audience will have a chance to do a mock vote on the issue of independence for Scotland. Bring your mobile device to participate in the vote!

This event is a community engagement initiative with English 320, Studies in 18th Century Literature, which may be taken by special audit as part of SFU's 50th anniversary celebration. Please contact Leith Davis (778-782-4833 or leith@sfu.ca) and also see english.sfu.ca/documents/doc/community_auditor_webpage_ann_1.pdf

ST. ANDREW'S AND CALEDONIAN SOCIETY LECTURE AND ST. ANDREW'S DAY

The Victorian Traveller in Scotland and the Jocelyn Pettit Band

THURSDAY OCTOBER 16, 7:30–9:00 PM
[T]HE HIGHLANDER IS GLAD TO SEE
THE TOURIST, AS THE HUNTER IS GLAD TO SEE GAME: THE VICTORIAN
TRAVELLER IN SCOTLAND

DR. KEVIN JAMES, UNIVERSITY OF GUELPH
SFU Harbour Centre, RM 7000, 515 W. Hastings
This lecture is sponsored by an endowment from the St. Andrew's and Caledonian Society
FREE.

This talk brings to life a prominent figure in Victorian travel writing: the Highland innkeeper, drawing on humorous tourists' remarks and vivid illustrations. Appraisals of Highland hospitality, which travellers claimed was dispensed in measures as limited as whisky at a Highland inn on Sunday, offer us an opportunity to consider the inn as a site of welcome and refreshment, the strictures of Victorian Sabbatarianism, and the struggles of the innkeeper against challenges thrown up by landlordism, Nature and the volatile tourist market. In the face of such inhospitable conditions, how hospitable could the innkeeper afford to be?

THURSDAY NOVEMBER 27, 7:30–9:00 PM

ROBERT BURNS DAY CELEBRATION
SFU Harbour Centre
515 W. Hastings

For the last 3 years, the Centre has hosted a very successful marathon reading that has brought old and young together in celebration of the Scottish bard. Last year’s marathon went for a record six hours! This year, we are asking people to come down and make history in a different way by joining us for a mass reading/singing of Burns’s most popular works—“To a Mouse” and “A Man’s a Man” —plus the traditional haggis-addressing and socializing. Starting at noon, our celebration will also feature performances of Scottish music and song. Check www.sfu.ca/scottish for more details closer to the event.

Awards for Students of Scottish Studies

This year, the Jennifer Prosser Wade Undergraduate Award for Scottish Studies was presented to Thomas Budd (pictured left), a piper and a student in the Department of Economics who was one of the founders of the new Scottish and Celtic Society at SFU.

The recipient of the David and Mary Macaree Graduate Fellowship was Michael Stachura, a PhD student in the Department of English working on literary connections between Scotland and Scandinavia. Regarding his PhD research, Michael writes: “While much criticism concentrates on defining Scottish literature in relation to England or the wider British state, my dissertation argues that there is also a strong translational northern dimension in the work of many Scottish writers from James Macpherson to Kathleen Jamie. This northern aspect is articulated in multiple ways: as an aspirational identity, the North as idea, the influence of the sagas, shamanism, and more recently in terms of ‘being-in-the-North’ as a geographical and environmental reality.”

Congratulations, Thomas and Mike!

SCOTTISH HISTORY

Scots in BC website brings Scottish history home

The story of the Scottish presence in British Columbia is an ongoing one. Read stories and contribute your own at www.sfu.ca/scotsinbc.

In March, 1778, Captain James Cook’s ship, HMS Resolution, dropped anchor at the location now known as Nootka Sound on Vancouver Island. It was the first European landing in present day British Columbia and the first encounter between Europeans and the First Nations people of the area.

Among Cook’s crew were a number of individuals of Scottish descent (indeed, Cook himself was Scottish on his father’s side). Over the next several hundred years, Scots would come to play a disproportionate role in the history of British Columbia. Scots like Simon McTavish and John Fraser ran the fur-trading companies that commissioned fellow Scots like Alexander Mackenzie and Simon Fraser to explore and map the west in hopes of finding a navigable route to the Pacific Ocean—First Nations people proved essential during these ventures. Later, many Scots men and women settled in British Columbia and were prominent in the fields of politics and education. The first governor of BC, James Douglas, was of Scottish origin, as was the first mayor of Vancouver, M.A. Maclean. Scottish entrepreneurs in lumber, mining, fisheries and canning also left their mark on the province, as did the many unknown men and women working in these industries. The Centre has collected these and many more stories on its “Scots in BC” website in order to provide an overview of the many and varied connections between Scotland and British Columbia.
