PRINTED & PUBLISHED BY W. SHEPHERD, CASTLE ST.

1888.

THE Publisher has to thank the increasing number of Advertisers for their support, and all who have supplied the information for the DIRECTORY for 1889.

Though rather later than usual in being issued, he hopes it will merit the success which has attended former issues.

Every endeavour has been made to ensure correctness. Any suggestions which would tend to obviate inaccuracies, &c., in future issues, will be gladly received.

ANECDOTES OF BYGONE TIMES.

IT was Count Charles de Morny's practice, whenever he dined at a table d'hôte, to instruct his valet to come in and sit down with the company, place himself at the bottom or top of the table, treat his master as a perfect stranger, and help him to the best of everything!

DR. KITCHEN, Bishop of Llandaff, from an idle abbot under Henry VIII. was made a busy bishop; Protestant under Edward, he returned to his old master under Mary; and at last took the oath of supremacy under Elizabeth, and finished as a parliament Protestant. A pun spread the odium of his name; for they said that he had always loved the Kitchen better than the Church.

THE most honourable kiss, both to the giver and receiver, ever recorded, was that which Queen Margaret of France, in the presence of the whole Court, impressed upon the lips of the ugliest man in the kingdom, Alain Chartier, whom she one day found asleep, exclaiming to her astonished attendants, "I do not kiss the man, but the mouth that has uttered so many charming things." It was worth while to be a poet in those days.

WHEN Junius Brutus and the sons of Tarquin asked the Delphic oracle who was to succeed Superbus on the throne of Rome, they received for answer: "He who shall first kiss his mother." While the two Princes hastened home to fulfil what they thought was indicated, Brutus fell to the earth, and exclaimed, "Thus kiss I thee, oh earth! the great mother of us all!"

JAMES THE SECOND, who so seldom said a good thing, one day said a very ill-bred one. He declared, in the midst of his courtiers, that "he had never known a modest man make his way at Court." To this observation one of the gentlemen present boldly replied, "And, please your majesty, whose fault is that?" The King was struck, and remained silent.

THE favourite studies and amusements of the learned La Mothe le Vayer consisted in accounts of the most distant countries. He gave a striking proof of the influence of this master-passion, when death hung upon his lips. Bernier, the celebrated traveller, entering and drawing the curtains of his bed to take his eternal farewell, the dying man turning to him, with a faint voice inquired, "Well, my friend, what news from the Great Mogul?"

CHARLES THE SECOND laid it down as a rule, that in his convivial parties the King was always absent. Being one night in a select party of this kind, one of his courtiers, who had contributed a good deal to his mirth, ventured to ask him for a place. Charles, though he liked the man as a companion, was yet unwilling to break through a fixed rule; and he therefore quickly replied, "You may depend on it, I will speak to the King to-morrow about it."

SOME soldiers once fell upon a watchman in a small town in Ireland, in a lonely street, and took away his money and coat. He immediately repaired to the captain of the regiment, to complain of his misfortune. The captain asked him whether he had on the waistcoat he then wore when he was robbed by the soldiers. "Yes, sir," replied the poor fellow. "Then, my friend," rejoined the captain, "I can assure you they do not belong to my company, otherwise they would have left you neither waistcoat nor shirt!"

FREDERIC THE GREAT had five libraries, all exactly alike, and containing the same books, ranged in the same order: one at Potsdam, a second at Sans Souci, a third at Berlin, a fourth at Charlottenburg, and a fifth at Breslau. On removing to any of these places, he had only to make a note of the page at which he had left off, to pursue his studies without interruption on his arrival. Accordingly, he always bought five copies of all books which he wished to possess.

A MUSICIAN complaining that the tyrant Dionysius gave him nothing, after promising him much, for the exercise of his art—"You fool, we are quits," said the tyrant; "you tickled my ears, and I did the very same by yours."

SYLVESTER, the translator of "Du Bartas," considered himself fortunate when he found in the name of his Sovereign the strongest bond of affection to his service. In the dedication he made his loyal changes on the name of his liege, James Stuart; in which he finds a just muster.

It appears by an Act dated in 1515, that in those days the Bible was called Bibliotheca, that is, per emphaſim, "The Library." The word library was limited in its signification then to the Biblical writings; no other books, compared with the Holy Writings, appear to have been worthy to rank with them, or constitute what we call a library.

LOUIS XII. one day looking at himself in his mirror, was astonished to see a number of grey hairs on his head. "Ah!" said he, "these must be owing to the long speeches I have listened to; and it is those of M. le ——— in particular that have ruined my hair."

A PERSON, who had some small interest in the farming of the taxes, was one day pronouncing an eulogium upon the financiers, maintaining that they alone were the support of the State. "Yes," replied his antagonist, "as the rope supports the criminal — by hanging him."

THE Constable Anne de Montmorency had a singular species of devotion. He was accustomed to count his beads during the march of his army; and as he fingered them, he would give orders, sometimes to set a village on fire—sometimes to surprise a party, to massacre a garrison, or to hang a soldier.

THE Duke de Nivernois was intimately acquainted with the Countess de Rochfort, and never omitted going to see her a single evening. As she was a widow, and he a widower, one of his friends observed to him that it would be more convenient for him to marry the lady. "I have often thought so," replied the Duke, "but one thing prevents me: in that case, where could I pass my evenings?"

THE Spaniards, who disliked Sixtus V., circulated a report that he had sold himself to the devil, on condition of his enjoying the Popedom for six years. Afterwards, said they, it happened that a young man, aged nineteen, committed a murder in Rome, and his judges represented to the Pope that, though guilty, his execution could not take place, the law requiring twenty years of age before a capital punishment could be inflicted. The Pope, vexed at this disappointment of the ends of justice, answered, without thinking, "O, if that is all, I will lend him one of mine." At the end of five years, Sixtus fell sick; the devil appeared, and told him he came to carry him off. Sixtus told him his time was not come, as only five years out of the six allowed him had elapsed; but the devil reminded him of his promise on the execution of the young man, and immediately put an end to his life.

QUEEN ELIZABETH loved the Earl of Essex so well, that in a tender moment she gave him a ring, telling him that if he ever should be guilty of undertaking anything against the State worthy of death, he had only to send to her that ring in order to ensure his pardon. The Earl of Essex some time afterwards fell in love with another lady, and finally revolted, and was condemned to death. In this last extremity he trusted the ring to this lady to be conveyed to Elizabeth. As the lady knew the secret connected with the ring, she preferred keeping it, and allowing her lover to be beheaded, to running the risk of seeing him unfaithful.

STATE LOTTERIES IN ENGLAND.

THE first lottery in England, so far as is known, began to be drawn on the 11th of January, 1589, at the west door of St. Paul's Cathedral. The scheme, which had been announced in 1567, shows that the lottery consisted of forty thousand lots or shares at ten shillings each, and that it comprehended "a great number of good prizes, as well of ready money as of plate, and certain sorts of merchandise." Any profit that arose from the scheme was to be devoted to the reparation of harbours and other useful public works.

The last State lottery in England was drawn on the 18th of October, 1824, the ceremony taking place in Cooper's Hall, Basinghall Street, London. The abolition of lotteries deprived the Government of a revenue of £250,000 or £300,000 a year; but it was rightly thought that the inducement to gambling held out to the public was a great moral evil helping to impoverish many, and diverting attention from legitimate industrial modes of money-making.

Whilst lotteries lasted they gave rise to many curious anecdotes, and some of these we shall set down here.

Early in the reign of George II., the footman of a lady of quality, under the absurd infatuation of a dream, disposed of the savings of the last twenty years of his life in two lottery tickets, which proving blanks, after a few melancholy days he put an end to his life. In his box was found the following plan of the manner in which he would spend the five thousand pound prize, which his mistress preserved as a curiosity:—

"As soon as I have received the money I will marry Grace Towers; but as she has been cross and coy I will use her as a servant. Every morning she shall get me a mug of strong beer, with a toast, nutmeg and sugar in it; then I will sleep till ten, after which I will have a large sack posset. My dinner shall be on table at one, and never without a good pudding. I will have a stock of wine and brandy laid in. About five in the afternoon I will have tarts and jellies, and a gallon bowl of punch: at ten a hot supper. If I am in a good humour, and Grace behaves herself, she shall sit down with me. To bed about twelve."

On the 31st of August, 1731, a scene was presented which strongly marks the infatuation and ignorance of lottery adventurers. The tickets for the State Lottery were delivered out to the subscribers at the Bank of England; when the crowd becoming so great as to obstruct the clerks, they told them, "We deliver blanks to-day, but to-morrow we shall deliver prizes;" upon which many, who were by no means for blanks, retired; and by this bold stratagem the clerks obtained room to proceed in their business.

A gentlewoman in Holborn, whose husband had presented her with a ticket, put up prayers in the church the day before drawing in the following manner: "The prayers of the congregation are desired for the success of a person engaged in a new undertaking."

In the lottery of 1770 the holder of the ticket entitled to the first prize of £20,000 was Captain Towry of Isleworth. A very remarkable circumstance put it in his possession. Mr. Barnes, a grocer in Cheap-side, purchased four following numbers, one of which this was; but thinking the chance not so great in so many following ones, he carried this very ticket back to the office, and changed it for another.

On the 5th of January, 1774, at the conclusion of drawing the State Lottery at Guildhall, No. 11,053, as the last drawn ticket, was declared to be entitled to the £1,000, and was so printed in the paper of benefits by order of the Commissioners. It won besides a prize of £100. But after the wheels were carried back to Whitehall, and opened, the ticket No. 72,248 was found sticking in a crevice of the wheel. Being the next drawn ticket after all the prizes were drawn, it was advertised by the Commissioner's order as entitled to the £1,000 as the last drawn ticket, "which affair," we are told, "made a great deal of noise."

What were known as "Little Goes" were little lotteries on the same plan as the great State Lotteries, and drawn in the same manner. There were generally five or six "little goes" in the year, and they were actually set up and conducted by two or three of the licensed lottery-office keepers. The State Lottery was the parent of these "little goes." Persons who had not patience to wait till another State Lottery gambled during the vacations in a "little go."

A ROMANCE OF A BEDSTEAD.

RICHARD III. slept in Leicester at the Blue Boar Inn, opposite the Grammar School, the night before Bosworth Field, and the bedstead whereon he is supposed to have lain is still preserved, and its history has been handed down. In 1613, Mrs. Clarke, keeper of that inn, was robbed by her servant-maid and seven men, and the story is thus given by Sir Roger Twisden, who had it from persons of undoubted credit, who were not only inhabitants of Leicester, but saw the murderers executed:—

When King Richard III. marched into Leicestershire against Henry, Earl of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII., he lay at the Blue Boar Inn, in the town of Leicester, where was left a large wooden bedstead, gilded in some places, which after his defeat and death in the battle of Bosworth was left either through haste, or as a thing of little value—the bedding being all taken from it—to the people of the house; thenceforward this old bedstead, boarded at the bottom (as the manner was in those days), became a piece of standing furniture, and passed from tenant to tenant with the inn.

In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, this house was kept by one Mr. Clarke, who put a bed on this bedstead, which his wife was going to make hastily one day, and jumbling the bedstead, a piece of gold dropt out. This excited the woman's curiosity; she narrowly examined this antiquated piece of furniture, and finding it had a double bottom, took off the uppermost with a chisel, upon which she discovered the space between them filled with gold, part of it coined by Richard III., and the rest of it in earlier times. Mr. Clarke concealed this piece of good fortune, though by degrees the effects of it were made known, for he became rich from a low condition, and in the space of a few years mayor of the town; and then the story of the bedstead came to be rumoured by the servant.

At his death he left his estate to his wife, who still continued to keep the inn, though she was known to be very rich, which put some wicked persons upon engaging the maid-servant to assist in robbing her. These folks, to the number of seven, lodged in her house, plundered it, and carried off some horse-loads of valuable things, and yet left a considerable quantity of valuables scattered about the floor. As for Mrs. Clarke herself, who was very fat, she endeavoured to cry out for help, upon which her maid thrust her fingers down her throat, and choked her, for which she was burnt; the seven men who were her accomplices were hanged at Leicester some time in 1615.

CURIOUS ANCIENT STATUTES.

Ale.—If any ale-house keeper shall sell less than a full quart of ale for a penny, or of the small ale two quarts for one penny, he shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of twenty shillings.—1st James I, chap. 9.

Fairs.—The King commandeth that from henceforth neither fairs nor markets be kept in churchyards, for the honour of the Church.—13th Edward I, Stat. 2, chap. 6.

Woolen Caps.—All persons above the age of seven years shall wear upon Sabbath and Holydays, upon their heads, a cap of wool, knit, thicked, and dressed in England, upon pain to forfeit, for every day not wearing, three shillings and fourpence.—13th Elizabeth, chap. 19.

Fast Days.—Whosoever shall, by preaching, teaching, writing, or open speech, notify that eating fish, or forbearing of flesh, is of any necessity for saving the soul of man, shall be punished, as spreaders of false news are and ought to be.—5th Elizabeth, chap. 3, sect. 40.

Pins.—No person shall put to sale any pins, but only such as shall be double-headed, and have their heads soldered fast to the shank, and well-smoothed; the shank well-haven; the point well and round filed, and sharpened.—34th and 35th Henry VIII., chap. 6.

TANTALLON CASTLE.

THE ruins of Tantallon Castle are situated about two miles and a half east of North Berwick. It is not known at what time this famous Castle was built. The great strength of the place gave rise to the saying, "Ding down Tantallon, and build a brig to the Bass," as feats of equal difficulty.

A very accurate description of Tantallon is to be read in the fifth Canto of "Marmion":—

"But scant three miles the band had rode,

When o'er a height they passed,

And, sudden, close before them showed

His towers, Tantallon vast;

Broad, massive, high, and stretching far

And held impregnable in war,

On a projecting rock they rose,

And round three sides the ocean flows

The fourth did battled walls enclose

And double mound and fosse.

By narrow drawbridge, outworks strong

Through studded gates, an entrance long

To the main court they cross.

It was a fair and stately square;

Around were lodgings, fit and fair,

And towers of various form,

Which on the court projected far

And broke its lines quadrangular.

Here was square keep, there turret high,

Or pinnacle that sought the sky,

Whence oft the warder could descry

The gathering ocean-storm.

THE BRAVE DRUMMER.

SAD memories are attached to the bridge over the Neckar at Heidelberg. In the year 1799 the Austrians and the French fought a bloody battle here. The French, far superior in numbers, were driven back seven times by two hundred Hungarian infantry and eighty lancers, were forced to leave the place of action, and did not return to it till the next morning after the little band of heroes had left in the dead of night. Much blood was shed here, and an immense number of the French were either killed by the grape shot of the Austrians, or found their graves in the waters of the Neckar.

The brave act of a French drummer is worthy of being committed to posterity. Beating to the a-sault, the drummer, who was scarcely beyond the age of boyhood, advanced to meet the enemy. A ball shattered his leg. Leaning against the parapet of the bridge, however, he still continued beating his march, and strove to put fresh courage into his comrades by the music of his drum. On seeing this, one of the enemy's officers is said to have dismounted from his horse and, slinging a drum across his shoulders, constituted himself a rival drummer.

During the Baden revolution in 1819 this bridge over the Neckar was threatened to be destroyed, for the insurgents had already undermined it, in order to spring it up on the approach of the Prussians, and we have only to owe its preservation to the courageous resistance of several citizens of Heidelberg.

The bridge where these events took place is a beautiful structure: Goethe said it was not to be equalled by any bridge in the world. It was begun in 1786, and completed in 1788: it is 700 feet long, 30 feet broad, and built of strong red sandstone.

"If in February there be no rain,
It's neither good for hay nor grain."

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL in Newgate Street, London, of which a picturesque portion is shown in our engraving, was founded by Edward VI. on the 26th of June, 1553, ten days before his death. The object was to establish an hospital for poor fatherless children and foundlings.

It is commonly called "the Blue-coat School," from the dress worn by the boys, which is of the same age as the foundation of the hospital. "The dress," says Peter Cunningham, "is a blue coat or gown, a yellow petticoat, a red leather girdle round the waist, yellow stockings, a clergyman's band round the neck, and a flat black cap of woollen yarn, about the size of a saucer. Blue was a colour originally confined to servant men and boys, nor till its recognition as part of the uniform of the British navy was blue ever looked upon as a colour to be worn by gentlemen."

The following curious story is told by Pepys the diarist in connection with Christ's Hospital in 1695: "Two wealthy citizens are lately dead, and left their estates, one to a Blue-coat boy, and the other to a Blue-coat girl in Christ's Hospital, the extraordinariness of which has led some of the magistrates to carry it on to a match, which is ended in a public wedding—he in his habit of blue satin, led by two of the girls, and she in blue with an apron green, and petticoat yellow, all of sarsnet, led by two boys of the house, through Cheapside to Guildhall Chapel, where they were married by the Dean of St. Paul's."

SLAVERY IN SCOTLAND.

PERHAPS no passage in our older Scottish poets has been oftener quoted than the lines on Freedom in Barbour's Metrical History of the Bruce:

"Ah, Freedom is a noble thing;
Freedom makes men to have liking.
To man all solace Freedom gives;
He lives at ease who freely lives;
And he that aye has lived free,
May not well know the misery,
The wrath, the hate, the spite, and all
That's compass'd in the name of Thrall."

The author of these lines was a slave-dealer! From deeds which are extant, it appears that the Chapter of which he was the arch-deacon trafficked in serfs, selling or letting them on lease, like the cattle or granges on their lands. In their own words, they "set and in tack let the whole barony of Murthill, with its hawkings, huntings, and fishings, with its serfs, bondages, natives, and their issue. The date of this lease is 1388: Barbour died in 1396. Many provisions as to the condition of the born thralls, serfs, or bondmen, occur in ancient laws; though some Scottish legal writers, it is said, such as Craig, Stair, and Bankton, have denied that slavery ever existed in Scotland.

One of the statutes of Saint David, who reigned from 1124 to 1153, is "of a man found without a lord." It enacts that "if any man be found in the King's land who has no proper lord, after the King's writ is read in the King's court, he shall have the space of fifteen days to get himself a lord. And if within that term he finds no lord, the King's justice shall take from him eight cows for the King's use, and keep his body for the King's behoof until he finds a lord."

About the same period it appears to have been a moot point whether one might of his own will renounce his freedom; and it was determined by a statute that "any free man may if he choose abandon his freedom in the King's court, or in any other court; and if he do so he shall never recover it."

THE GIPSY'S PROPHECY.

THERE is a singular anecdote told of Charles the First in connection with Hampton Court Palace. The King was one day standing at a window there, surrounded by his children, when a gipsy came up and asked for charity. Her appearance excited the King's ridicule, and he appears also to have threatened her, which so enraged the gipsy that she took from her basket a looking-glass and presented it to the King. He saw in it his own head decollated.

Probably with a natural wish to propitiate so prophetic a beggar, or for some other reason, money was given her. She then foretold that the death of a dog in the room where the King was then would precede the restoration to his family of the kingdom which he was about to lose.

It is supposed that Oliver Cromwell afterwards slept in the room referred to. He was constantly attended by a faithful dog, who guarded his bed-chamber door. On awaking one morning he found the dog dead, on which he exclaimed in allusion to the gipsy's prophecy, which he had been told of, "The kingdom is departed from me." Shortly afterwards the Protector died.

OLD EDINBURGH.

WE have a glimpse of old Edinburgh in our illustration, which represents the Bow-head corner house, with which every visitor to the Scottish metropolis used to be familiar. It was one of the finest of the old timber-fronted burgher dwellings in the city, and was taken down in 1878. There were two elevations—one towards the Lawnmarket, the other towards the West Bow. "The street floor only," say the Messrs. Dunlop, "had a stone wall, the chimneys being carried up in the gables of the houses on either side. A piazza was on the ground floor, towards the Bow, and the beams of the upper floors projected over it, and over each other with a boldness which made a stranger hold his breath.

"Perhaps this seeming over-weighting of the house is best described in the words of one of its own tenants—an old man who had been born and who had lived for more than seventy years literally under its roof, for to him belonged the so all attic windows in the gable towards the Bow. 'Feared to bide up here on a windy nicht?' said he: 'no' me! The hoose was built afore Sir Isaac Newton invented the centre o' gravity, but depend upon it, the man that built it kent o' something just as guid!"

"The northern front was the more ornate. On its second floor there were Doric pilasters between the "King Charles, two days before his death, which took place two years after the massacre, having called for Mazzille, his chief physician and complaining of the pains he suffered, asked him if it was not possible that he and so many other celebrated physicians that were in his realms could give some alleviation to his disorder: 'for I am,' said he, 'cruelly and horridly tormented.' To which Mazzille replied, that whatever had depended on them had been tried, but that in truth God only could be the sovereign physician in such complaints. 'I believe,' said the king, 'that what you say is true, and that you know nothing else. Draw from me my custode (or large cap), that I may try to rest.'

"Mazzille withdrew, and left orders that all should leave the king except three, viz., La Tour, St. Pris, and his nurse, whom his majesty greatly loved, although she was a Huguenot. As she had just seated herself on a cotter, and began to doze, she heard the king groan bitterly, weeping and sighing; she then windows, which last were filled with panels of glazed lattice-work.

"The Bow-head house was specially a coign of vantage on the occasions of the state entry of the rulers of Scotland into their capital. The law of precedent, always powerful in court ceremonials, was to enter the Grassmarket by the West Port, thence up the steep zigzag of the Bow into High Street, then to pass slowly down between the then unbroken lines of its towering houses to the Nether-Bow Gate, thence by the burg of Canongate to the royal home at Holyrood. In some cases the Castle was visited. This was done by Queen Mary on her state entry on the 2nd of September, 1561."

SMITTEN WITH REMORSE.

IN the massacre of St. Bartholomew, according to Sully, 70,000 Huguenots, or French Protestants, including women and children, were murdered throughout the kingdom, by secret orders from Charles IX., at the instigation of his mother, the queen dowager, Catherine de Medicis.

approached the bed softly, and drawing away his custode, the king said to her, giving vent to a heavy sigh, and shedding tears plentifully, insomuch that they interrupted his discourse—

"Ah! my dear nurse! my beloved woman, what blood! what murders! Ah! I have followed wicked advice! O my God! pardon me, and be merciful. I know not where I am, they have made me so perplexed and agitated. How will all this end? What shall I do? I am lost for ever! I know it."

"Then the nurse thus addressed him:—'Sire, be the murders on those who forced you to order them; your majesty could not help it, and since you never consented, and now regret them, believe God will never impute them to you, and will cover them with the mantle of justice of His Son, to whom alone you should look for aid. Ah! for the honour of God, let your majesty cease from this weeping.'

"Having said this, she rose for a handkerchief, for his was drenched with tears: Charles having taken it from her, made a sign that she should retire and leave him to repose."

The dreadful narrative of the massacre of St. Bartholomew is detailed in the history of De Thou.

A TRIAL BY COMBAT.

AN extraordinary scene in the shape of a solemn jousting took place on London Bridge on St. George's Day, the 23rd of April, 1390.

John de Wells, the English ambassador in Scotland, having boasted at the Scottish court of the prowess of his countrymen, a famous knight of that country, David Lindsay, Earl of Crawford, offered to test the question and lower the pride of the Southerner by resorting to a trial by combat on London Bridge. A royal safe-conduct was granted, and Earl David travelled to London with a retinue of twenty-nine persons.

The day of battle came. Both parties, fully armed, were most honourably conducted to the bridge, which was splendidly decorated with rich hangings of tapestry and cloth of gold. There were crowds of noble spectators, the place of honour being occupied by Richard II.

The combatants approached. "The signal being given," says an old writer, "tearing their barbed steeds with their spurs, they rushed, with square-ground spears, and a mighty force, impetuously to the conflict. Neither party was moved by the vehement impulse or by the splintering of their spears; so that the common people affected to cry out that David was bound to the saddle of his horse contrary to the law of arms, because he sat unmoved amidst the splintering of lances on his helmet and visor.

"When Earl David heard this, he presently leaped off his charger, and then as quickly vaulted upon his back again without any assistance; and taking a second hasty course, their spears were a second time shivered by the shock through their burning desire to conquer. And now a third time were the valorous enemies stretched out and running together; but then the English knight was cast down breathless to the earth, with great sounds of mourning from his countrymen that he was killed!

"Earl David when victory appeared leapt suddenly to the ground—for he had fought without anger and but for glory, that he might show himself the stronger of the champions—and casting himself upon Lord Wells, tenderly embraced him till he revived and the surgeon came to attend him."

RICHMOND CASTLE.

To Alan Rufus, son of Hoel, Count of Bretagne, a kinsman of William the Conqueror, who accompanied him in his expedition to England, is generally attributed the foundation of both the Castle and town of Richmond, in the North Riding of Yorkshire; though by some authorities the town is said to have been in existence prior to the Conquest. William conferred upon Alan the title of Earl of Richmond, and the estates of the Saxon earl Edwin, embracing nearly two hundred manors and townships, and a jurisdiction over all Richmondshire, about a third of the North Riding.

In the situation of his castle, Earl Alan selected what was admirable for purposes of defence: its foundation was laid upon an almost perpendicular rock, on the left bank of the Swale, about a hundred feet above the bed of the river. To the original buildings of the fortress additional walls, towers, and outworks were erected by the successors of the founder.

The walks round the castle present a succession of varied and romantic scenery. Swaledale is in many parts skirted with bold rocks, almost covered with trees and shrubs. From the hills to the north-west of the town the castle and town appear to be situated in a valley.

"TOO MUCH!"

FABRO CHIGI, who was afterwards Pope, under the title of Alexander VII., while Nuncio in France, was present at the death of Mary de Medicis. He asked her if she pardoned all her enemies, and particularly Cardinal Richelieu. She said she did, from her heart. "Madame," said he, "as a mark of reconciliation, will you send him the bracelet you wear on your arm?" "Nay," replied she, laying her head on the pillow, "that is too much!"

THE SCOT IN ENGLAND.

IN the year 1596, William Armstrong, of Kinmont, a noted border trooper, was taken prisoner by the warden of the Western marches of England, and lodged in Carlisle Castle. This was in defiance of a truce which then existed between the wardens of the borders.

The Lord of Buccleugh, who had the charge of Liddesdale, after in vain demanding that Kinmont Willie should be set at liberty, gallantly took the castle of Carlisle by surprise one night with a body of two hundred men, and effected the prisoner's delivery. He crossed the Esk at nightfall, broke open the postern gate, seized the sentries, forced open Kinmont's cell, and was again on Scottish ground almost before the English garrison could draw breath.

The consequences of this enterprise are thus mentioned by Spottiswood:—"This fell out on the 12th of April, 1596. The queen of England, having notice sent her of what was done, stormed not a little. One of her chief castles surprised, a prisoner taken forth of the hands of the warden, and carried away so far within England she esteemed a great affront.

"The lieger, Mr. Bowes, in a convention kept at Edinburgh the 22nd of May, did, as he was charged, in a long oration, aggravate the heinousness of the fact, concluding that peace could no longer continue betwixt the two realms unless Buccleugh were delivered up in England, to be punished at the queen's pleasure.

"Buccleugh comparing and charged with the fact, made answer:—"That he went not into England with intention to assault any of the queen's houses, or to do wrong to any of her subjects, but only to relieve a subject of Scotland, unlawfully taken, and more unlawfully detained; that in the time of a general assurance in a day of truce, he was taken prisoner against all order, neither did he attempt his relief till redress was refused; and that he had carried the business in such a moderate manner as no hostility was committed nor the least wrong offered to any within the castle; yet was he content, according to the ancient treaties observed betwixt the two realms, when as mutual injuries were alleged, to be tried by the commissioners that it should please their majesties to appoint, and submit himself to that which they should decree.

"The convention, esteeming the answer reasonable, did acquaint the ambassador therewith, and offered to send commissioners to the borders, with all diligence, to treat with such as the queen should be pleased to appoint for her part."

The end of the matter was that Buccleugh was not delivered up. He, however, was subsequently surrendered into English hands for making an in-road into England, for which no justification could be pleaded. On this occasion Buccleugh seems to have remained in England from October, 1597, till February, 1598.

According to ancient family tradition Buccleugh was presented to Elizabeth, who, with her usual rough and peremptory address, demanded of him "how he dared to undertake an enterprise so desperate and presumptuous."

"What is it," answered the undaunted chieftain, "what is it that a man dares not do?"

Elizabeth, struck with the reply, turned to a lord in waiting: "With ten thousand such men," said she, "our brother of Scotland might shake the firmest throne of Europe."

ROYALTY AND A WOODEN SOLDIER.

IN 1806, on the approach of the French, the Bourbon King of Naples made so hasty a retreat into Sicily, that they forgot and left behind them a superannuated princess of the family, who was half-sister to old King Ferdinand. Though this venerable spinster was of illegitimate birth, she received the honours paid to the royal blood, and was allowed a sentinel of the household troops, who mounted guard at her door and presented arms at all her exits and her entrances.

At first it was feared that the French conquerors, who were not always liberal in these matters, would stop her allowance and leave the old woman in absolute want. The new King of Naples, Joseph Bonaparte, however, secured her in part of her pensions; but no sooner was she relieved from the fear of starvation, than she was made wretched by what appeared to be an equal calamity, and this was the refusal on the part of the French to allow her a soldier as a guard of honour. She petitioned over and over again; she supplicated that this distinction and delight of her life should not, towards its close, be withdrawn from her; but Napoleon, who had declared in his lordly manner that the Bourbons had everywhere ceased to reign, was not likely to pay royal honours to a neglected off-shoot of that race.

The old woman's heart was absolutely breaking under this privation, when, in a lucky moment, one of the few friends or attendants who remained about her person thought of substituting a wooden soldier for a soldier of real flesh and blood. Accordingly, a figure was made and dressed up, and, with a musket on its shoulder, was posted at the outer door of the princess's apartment, in an old house she occupied at Portici, not far from the royal villa of that name.

This simple contrivance had a happy effect on the old woman, who then thought that all royalty had not departed from her; but she soon began to complain that the statue did not present arms to her, which, by a very easy exercise of mechanical ingenuity, it might have been made to do. She therefore, after a time, confined herself to her apartments, enjoying at a distance, through unfolded doors, the sight of her mute sentinel, but never exposing herself to the mortifying proofs that he was motionless as well as mute. The recluse died before the restoration of the Bourbons of Naples. In 1816 her wooden sentinel was still to be seen at the old house at Portici.

LAWFUL WITCHCRAFT.

LORD MANSFIELD had an old woman brought before him as a witch, and among other things she was charged with riding through the air. The great judge dismissed the case, observing: "My opinion is that this good woman should be suffered to return home, and whether she do so walking on the ground, or riding through the air, must be left to her own judgment; for there is nothing contrary to the laws of England in either."

The history of witchcraft in England is a conspicuous proof of the length to which superstition will sometimes go. The number of persons put to death in England on the charge of witchcraft, up to the year 1716, has been estimated at not fewer than thirty thousand!

A MODEST REQUEST.

A COMMON saying among certain of the Irish is that they are "the boys fit for anything." The hero of the following anecdote must have thought himself one of that gifted set.

When the Duke of Ormonde was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in the beginning of Queen Anne's reign, a certain Irish baronet, a man of some interest in his country, requested his grace would give him a bishopric, or a regiment of horse, or make him Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench—he was not particular which.

COUNTERFEIT KINGS.

JOHNES, in his translation of Froissart's Chronicle, Vol. I., p. 421, says that at the battle of Poitiers, "King John was armed in royal armour, and nineteen others like him."

This custom of arming several in like manner to the commander of an army seems to have been usual, and was probably carried down at least to Richard the Third's time. Shakespeare makes Richard say, in the Fourth Scene of the last Act:

"*I think there be six Richmonds in the field:
Five have I slain to-day, instead of him.*"

Also, in the First Part of Henry the Fourth, Douglas says:

"*Another king! Thou grow like Hydrus's heads
I am the Douglas, fatal to all those
That wear these colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeitst the person of a king?*"

THE WIG-RIOT.

IN the year 1764, owing to changes in the fashion, people gave over the use of that very artificial appendage, the wig, and wore their own hair when they had any. In consequence of this, the wig-makers, who had become very numerous in London, were suddenly thrown out of work, and reduced to great distress. For some time both town and country rang with their calamities, and their complaints that men should wear their own hair instead of perriques; and at last it struck them that some legislative enactment ought to be procured in order to oblige gentlefolks to wear wigs, for the benefit of the suffering wig-trade. Accordingly they drew up a petition for relief, which on the 11th of February, 1765, they carried to St. James's to present to his Majesty George the Third. As they went processionally through the town, it was observed that most of these wig-makers, who wanted to force other people to wear them, wore no wigs themselves; and this striking the London mob as something monstrously unfair and inconsistent, they seized the petitioners, and cut off all their hair par force.

Horace Walpole, who alludes to this ludicrous petition, says, "Should one wonder if carpenters were to remonstrate, that since the peace their trade decays, and that there is no demand for wooden legs?"

A HUNT BY TORCHLIGHT.

THE Marquess of Winchester of the time of James the Second had some singular habits. Amongst these was his custom of sitting at table for twelve hours at a time. He went to dinner at six or seven in the evening, and his meal lasted till six or seven the next morning, during which time he ate, drank, smoked, talked, or listened to music. The company that dined with him were at liberty to eat or amuse themselves, or take a nap whenever they were so disposed; but the dishes and bottles were all the while standing upon the table. When Bishop Cartwright went to see him dinner appears to have been made a little earlier than usual. "I was received by the noble marquess," says the bishop, "with all kindness imaginable at dinner from one at noon till one in the morning!"

A contemporary, Abraham de la Pryme, in his "Manuscript Ephemeris," tells us also that the marquess would make all his men rise at midnight, and go hunting by torchlight, as our artist has represented them in the above illustration.

It is said, however, that these eccentricities were adopted for a purpose, that purpose being that he might be thought unfit for public affairs at a time when things were going in a way of which he did not approve. The marquess put off his folly, and appeared in his true character of a man of spirit when there was a prospect of saving the country from the effects of James's policy.

PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

It is related of Fagou, physician to Louis XIV., that in the middle of an oration on the pernicious effects of tobacco he paused, and taking his snuff-box from his pocket, refreshed himself with a pinch, to enable him to rebew his argument.

BERWICK BRIDGE.

FROM an early period there appears to have been a bridge across the Tweed at Berwick, though not on the same site as the one here shown. A wooden bridge which stood about a hundred yards higher up the river was carried away by a flood in 1190. It was re-built by William, King of Scotland, who then held possession of Berwick, after some objections on the part of the Bishop of Durham, to whom the south shore belonged. The bridge of stone shown in the engraving took upwards of twenty-four years in building, and was finished in October, 1634. Its length from shore to shore is 924 feet, but it is only 17 feet wide. There are fifteen arches.

AN APPEAL TO CHANCE.

THE father of Francesco Sforza, Duke of Milan, when at work in the field was accosted by some soldiers, and asked if he would enlist. "Let me throw my mattock on that oak," he replied, "and if it remains there I will." It remained there; and the peasant regarding it as a sign, enlisted. He became soldier, general, prince; and his grandson, in the palace at Milan, said to Paulus Jovius, "You behold these guards and this grandeur. I owe everything to the branch of an oak, the branch that held my grandfather's mattock."

LIFE SAVED BY LAUGHTER.

"THE health of Erasmus," says Mr. Charles Butler, "was always very delicate, and he at last began to feel the infirmities of old age. He was afflicted by an imposthume, and the worst was feared, when he was cured of it in an extraordinary manner. . . . The perusal of the celebrated 'Literæ Obscurorum Vivorum' threw him into a fit of immoderate laughter; the imposthume burst and the laughter was cured."

A like tale is told of Dr. Patrick Scougal, a Scottish bishop in the seventeenth century. An old woman earnestly besought him to visit her sick cow; the prelate after many remonstrances reluctantly consented, and walking round the beast, said gravely, "If she live, she live; and if she die, she die; and I can do nae mair for her." Not long afterwards he was dangerously afflicted with a quinsy in the throat; the old woman having got access to his chamber walked round his bed, repeating the charm which she believed had cured her cow; whereat the bishop was seized with a fit of laughter, which broke the quinsy and saved his life.

An old English dramatist alludes to a third instance:

*"I am come to tell you
Your brother hath intended you some sport:
A great phisitian, when the pope was sicke
Of a deepe melancholly, presented him
With severall sorts of mad-men, which wilde object
(Being full of change and sport) forc'd him to laugh,
And so th' impost-hume broke; the self-same cure
The duke intends on you."*

A FINAL SKIRMISH.

THE first skirmish of the civil wars took place at Kingston-upon-Thames in January, 1642, and the last curiously enough happened at the same place in July six years later.

The first was when some Royalists attempted to assemble an armed force to seize upon "the magazine of arms" deposited in the town. The committee appointed by Parliament to inquire into the truth of the rumours relative to this assemblage reported "That there were about two hundred men there that are officers, and that the town is full of horses; that they have pistols and carry themselves in a disorderly manner, to the terror of the people; that my Lord Digby was there on horseback with pistols; that Colonel Lunsford and two others of that name were there also; and that there were two cart-lads of ammunition going to them."

Colonel Lunsford was apprehended, and committed to the Tower, and the attempt of the Royalists was defeated. Throughout the civil war, however, Kingston remained faithful to Charles I., and in consequence was repeatedly occupied by both parties.

The last outbreak of the civil war took place, as we have said, at Kingston, in July, 1648. The Earl of Holland, the Duke of Buckingham, and Lord Francis Villiers, had assembled six hundred horsemen at Reigate, but had to retreat upon Kingston, pursued by a considerable body of Roundheads.

On a hill near Kingston they made a final stand, but "after a gallant defence and as sharp a charge," says one of the Parliamentarians, "as ever I saw in these unhappy wars," were routed. They retreated to Kingston, but withdrew during the night, having lost Lord Francis Villiers and twenty others slain, and one hundred made prisoners.

“Lord Francis behaved,” says Lysons, “with signal courage; and after his horse had been killed under him, he stood with his back against a tree, defending himself against several assailants, till at night he sank under his wounds.” Upon the tree within whose deep shadow he died, the initials of his name were carved by some faithful adherent, and there they remained till the tree was felled in 1680.

*“Stay, passenger, and lend a tear,
Youth and virtue both lie here.

Virtue tomb'd at but fifteen.
And if after thou shalt see
Any young and good as he,
Think his virtues are reviving,
For examples of those living.
Practise these, and then thou stay'st

A NOVEL CAPTURE.

At the time of Pichegru's irruption into Holland (1795), the frost was unprecedentedly severe, and the Texel so completely ice-bound, that he ordered some squadrons of cavalry to charge across the frozen element, and capture the Dutch fleet locked up in it.

They accordingly clapped spurs to their horses' sides, surrounded the ships, and made a capture of them at the first summons, though their whole means of offence against a broadside were a few hundred sabres and horse pistols! We believe that the occurrence stands without a parallel in ancient or modern story.

DOUGLAS CASTLE.

DOUGLAS CASTLE is an ancient ruin in Lanarkshire, not far from Douglas Town. The Douglasses, the ancient owners of the castle, who so closely linked the district of Douglasdale to Scottish story, were, says John Hill Burton, the historian, “children of the soil, who could not be traced back to the race of the enemy or stranger, as, whatever may have been their actual origin, they were known as rooted in Scotland at the time when the Norman adventurers crowded in.”

The castle, besides all its old-world memories, is specially interesting as the Castle Dangerous of Sir Walter Scott's last romance, and the last place to which he made a pilgrimage in Scotland.

A ROYAL CHESS PLAYER.

A SPANISH lord having frequently played at chess with Philip II., and won all the games, perceived when his majesty rose from play that he was much ruffled with chagrin. The lord, when he returned home, said to his family, “My children, we have nothing more to do at court: there we must expect no favour; for the king is offended at my having won of him every game of chess.” As chess entirely depends on the genius of the players, and not on fortune, King Philip, the chess-player, conceived he ought to suffer no rival.

PUNISHMENT FOR BANKRUPTS.

IN an early and rude state of society, bankruptcy is always looked upon with harshness and punished cruelly; and perhaps it is really then less excusable than it becomes when commerce is more advanced, and the returns of transactions are less certainly to be depended on. Even Venice in old times had its stone of shame for bankrupts.

Edinburgh followed the example of that mercantile city, and set up one of her own in the beginning of the seventeenth century. In 1606, the Privy Council ordered the magistrates of the Scottish metropolis to erect "a pillory of hewn stone near the Market Cross; upon the head thereof a seat to be made, whereupon in time coming shall be set all dyvoors (bankrupts), who shall sit there on one market-day, from ten hours in the morning till one hour after dinner."

The unfortunates were obliged to wear a yellow bonnet on these occasions and for ever after—the livery of slavery in the middle ages—unless they paid up their debts in full, a not uncommon event in old Edinburgh, when they could return to their own taste in the matter of apparel.

An act of the Lords of Session in 1688, quoted by Dr. Chambers in his interesting "Domestic Annals of Scotland," is more particular regarding the indignities to be visited upon dyvoors. It "ordains the magistrates of the burgh (where the debtor is incarcerated), before his liberation out of prison, to cause him take on, and wear upon his head, a bonnet, partly of a brown and partly of a yellow colour, with uppermost hose or stockings on his legs, half brown and half yellow coloured, conform to a

AN EARLY NAVIGATOR.

Who first doubled the Cape of Good Hope? In this enlightened age the reply of every schoolboy to this query will be, "Why, Vasco de Gama, to be sure." In Portugal, however, a much more ancient navigator has been mentioned. Vieyra, an old preacher of great renown at Lisbon, said in one of his sermons:—"One man only passed the Cape of Good Hope before the Portuguese. And who was he? and how?—it was Jonas in the whale's belly. The whale went out of the Mediterranean, because he had no other course; he kept the coast of Africa on the left, scoured along Ethiopia, passed by Arabia, took port in the Euphrates on the shores of Nineveh, and, making his tongue serve as a plank, landed the prophet there."

Dr. Southey says that the sermons of Vieyra, perhaps more than any other compositions in any language, display the strength and the weakness of the human mind.

IN HENRY VIII.'S REIGN.

A WRITER in the early part of the sixteenth century tells us that in his time, in the reign of Henry the Eighth, the luxury of the table had descended even to citizens, and that there were few whose tables were not daily provided with spoons, cups, and a saltcellar of silver. Those of a higher sphere affected a greater profusion of plate; and the quantity accumulated by Cardinal Wolsey, though the precious metals are now so copious, still continues to excite our surprise. At Hampton Court, where he feasted the French ambassadors and their splendid retinue in 1528, two cupboards, extending across the banquet chambers, were piled to the top with plate and illuminated; yet, without encroaching on these ostentatious repositories, a profuse service remained for the table. Two hundred and eighty beds were provided for the guests; every chamber had a bason and ewer of silver, beside other utensils.

PLAIN DEALING.

DURING Sir Robert Walpole's Administration, when bribery was common if not universal, there was one particular question which he wanted to carry in the House of Commons, to which he knew there would be violent opposition, and which was disliked by some of his own dependents. As he was passing through the Court of Requests, he met a member of the opposite party, whose avarice he imagined would not reject a large bribe. He took him aside, and said, "Such a question comes on this day; give me your vote, and here is a bank-bill of two thousand pounds," which he put into his hands. The member made this answer: "Sir Robert, you have lately served some of my particular friends; and when my wife was last at Court, the king was very gracious to her, which must have happened at your instance. I should therefore think myself very ungrateful (putting the bank-bill into his pocket) if I were to refuse the favour you are now pleased to ask me."

WHITFIELD IN PHILADELPHIA.

In his autobiography Franklin gives his recollections of the first visit of Whitfield to Philadelphia: "In 1739 arrived among us the Rev. G. Whitfield. He was at first permitted to preach in some of our churches, but the clergy, taking a dislike to him, soon refused him their pulpits, and he was obliged to preach in the fields. The multitudes of all sects and denominations that attended his sermons were enormous, and it was a matter of speculation to me, who was one of the number, to observe the extraordinary influence of his oratory on his hearers, and how much they admired and respected him, notwithstanding his common abuse of them by assuring them that they were naturally half beasts and half devils. It was wonderful to see the change soon made in the manners of our inhabitants. From being thoughtless or indifferent about religion, it seemed as if all the world were growing religious, so that one could not walk through the town of an evening without hearing psalms sung in different families of every street. And it being found inconvenient to assemble in the open air, subject to its inclemency, the building of a house to meet in was no sooner proposed, and persons appointed to receive contributions, but sufficient sums were received to procure the ground and erect the building, which was a hundred feet long and seventy feet broad; and the work was carried on with such spirit as to be finished in a much shorter time than could have been expected. Both house and ground were vested in trustees, expressly for the use of any preacher, of any religious persuasion, who might desire to say something to the people of Philadelphia."

NOTES ON BELLS.

THE oldest bells have often mottoes such as we might expect in the times before the Reformation. Dedications and invocations to patron Saints are frequent, or to the Blessed Virgin. There is one with the letters S. T. O. P. N., which is read "Sancte Thoma ora pro nobis," the Saint Thomas not being the primitive apostle, but Thomas a Becket. Sometimes the legend is in poetry, as in the hexameter line:—

"Virginis egregiæ dicor Campana Mariæ."

In less remote times the inscriptions were sometimes made to sound human merits as well as Divine praises. Prayers were asked for the donor of the bell; or the donors, when the peal was the result of combined benevolence, which led to the comical couplet:—

*"At proper time my voice I'll raise,
And sound to my subscribers' praise."*

This lively gratitude is frequent in the inscriptions of bells of the eighteenth century, as in those of Leominster:—

*"Kind Heaven, increase their bounteous store,
And bless their souls for evermore."*

Sometimes the praise is not graven on the bells but on adjacent tablets, as where a brass plate informs us that—

*"Here lies George Theobald, a lover of bells,
And of this church, as this epitaph tells;
He gave a bell freely to grace the new steeple,
Ring out his praises therefore ye good people."*

These trivial records are after all rare and exceptional in their bad taste, for the mottoes of most of the bells, old and new, are worthy of their uses and of the places which they occupy. Here are some of them:—

"Te Deum Laudamus."

Eastbourne.

"Venite, Exultemus Domino."

Peterborough Cathedral.

A TRAITOR'S END.

THE central figure in our illustration is Lord Wenlock, a nobleman of the reign of Henry VI., who played a prominent but not quite consistent part in the affairs of those troublous times. Rewarded for his services to the Crown, and wounded in defence of the king at the battle of St. Albans, he went over to the Duke of York, whom he afterwards deserted in order to plot with the Earl of Warwick for the restoration of Henry. Having been appointed to high authority by the Earl of Somerset, he was to have supported that nobleman at the battle of Tewkesbury, but failed to do so. Enraged at his treachery, the Earl on finding him with his troops, cleft his head in twain with a blow of his battle-axe.

THE LIFE OF MAN.

IN St. Saviour's, Southwark, there is an alabaster tomb of an alderman and his two wives, and on it is this inscription, supposed to have been written by Francis Quarles. The style is certainly his, but that quaint poet has been credited with many productions with which he had nothing to do.

Like to the damask rose you see,
 Or like the blossom on the tree,
 Or like the dainty flower of May,
 Or like the morning of the day,
 Or like the sun, or like the shade,
 Or like the gourd which Jonas had,
 E'en so is man, whose thread is spun,
 Drawn out, and cut, and so is done.
 The rose withers, the blossom blazeth,
 The flower fades, the morning hasteth,
 The sun sets, the shadow flies,
 The gourd consumes, and man he dies.

WINDSOR CASTLE.

WINDSOR as a royal castle and domain has existed from the Saxon era of our history. The name, according to Camden, is from Windlesofra, or Windleshora, from the winding course of the Thames in this part. Stow, however, gives two other etymologies—from Wind us over, from the ferry-boat, rope, and pole, and from the Wind is sore, because it lies high and open to the weather.

One of the most romantic incidents connected with Windsor Castle is the imprisonment of James I., the poet king of Scotland. His captivity here lasted eleven years, and it was at Windsor Castle too that he first saw the lady whom he afterwards made his wife.

He had been taken prisoner by the English when on his way to France to complete his education. In justice to his captors, one must allow that they treated him well: they by no means stinted him in learning. He was taught, and taught thoroughly, says an old chronicler, "to fight with the sword, to tourney, to wrestle, to sing and dance; he was an expert musician, right crafty in playing both of lute and harp, and sundry other instruments of music, and was expert in grammar, oratory, and poetry."

After he had been long at Windsor, romance found for him a bride, and strange to say it was the very match that policy would have dictated.

He was at the time lodged in what is known as the Maiden's Tower, or the Maid of Honour's Tower, on the south side of Windsor Castle, and south-east of the Round Tower, or Keep. He had risen at day-break, he tells us in his poem of "The King's Quhair," and oppressed with thoughts of his captivity, had strayed to the window, to look out on the active world in which he had no share. The window overlooked a little garden, a sweet spot, laid out with arbours and green alleys, and so thickly encompassed with trees and hedges that passers-by could hardly see into it.

Perched on the green twigs, the nightingale was singing, and inspired by her song, the royal poet thought of love, a passion to which he had hitherto been a stranger. When indulging in tender reflections, he cast his eyes downwards, and beheld "the fairest and the freshest young flower" that he had ever seen. It was a handsome young lady. Her name, her station, he knew not. She was accompanied by two female attendants, and about her sported a little hound jingling with bells, "probably," says Washington Irving, "the small Italian greyhound, of exquisite symmetry, which was a jairoler favourite and pet among the fashionable dames of ancient times."

The lady was no other than Jane, or Joanna, Beaufort, a damsel of royal descent by both parents. She was cousin-german to the king. Without knowing anything of her station, James fell violently in love.

History is silent as to how they met, and how he declared his passion, but we know this much, that Joanna Beaufort gave her heart to her royal lover, and that they lived long in mutual love and sincere affection.

The wedding was celebrated with great splendour. James then moved northwards with a stately train, enlarged from his own country as he crossed the border, and was crowned at Scone on the 21st of May in the year 1424. The only thing giving a mercenary touch to the arrangements was a demand made by England for forty thousand pounds to pay for the expense of his maintenance; but the French wars made money a strong object with the English Court, and the fourth part—ten thousand pounds—was remitted as a marriage-portion for the young queen. James's fortune was one little known among kings—to fall in love with a fair damsel casually seen, and just the right one too.

THE WOUNDED WARRIORS.

ONE of the illustrious monarchs of Ireland was Brien Borombe, who was killed at the battle of Clontarf in the beginning of the eleventh century, after having defeated the Danes in no fewer than twenty-five engagements. It was he of whom Moore wrote the well-known song:—

"Remember the glories of Brien the brave."

There is an interesting circumstance related of the Dalgaiss, the favourite troops of Brien, when they were interrupted in their return from the battle of Clontarf by Fitzpatrick, Prince of Ossory. The wounded men entreated that they might be allowed to fight with the rest.

"Let stakes," they said, "be stuck in the ground, and suffer each of us, tied to and supported by one of these stakes, to be placed in his rank by the side of a sound man."

Between seven and eight hundred wounded warriors, pale, emaciated, and supported in this manner, appeared, mixed with the foremost of the troops! Never was such another sight exhibited. To this incident Moore has alluded in the song just mentioned:—

"Forget not our wounded companions, who stood

*In the day of distress by our side:
While the moss of the valley grew red with their blood, [died!*

*They stirred not, but conquered and
The sun, that now blesses our arms with its light,*

*Saw them fall upon Ossory's plain:—
Oh! let him not blush, when he leaves us to-night,*

To find that they fell there in vain!"

VALIAN'T BEHAVIOUR.

WHEN General O'Kelly was introduced to Louis XIV., soon after the battle of Fontenoy, his majesty observed, that Clare's regiment behaved well in that engagement. "Sire," said the general, "they behaved well, it is true; many of them were wounded; but my regiment behaved better, for we were all killed!"

AT THE PLAY.

EMERIC GOBIER DE BANAU'T, while ambassador in Spain, was present at the performance of a piece representing the battle of Pavia, and, seeing a Spanish actor beat down the person who played Francis I., set his foot upon his neck, and compel him to ask quarter in the most ignominious terms, was so transported with rage, that he leaped upon the stage, and in the presence of the whole audience ran his sword through his body.

THE CITY WATCH IN 1714.

"ALL the streets," says Defoe, writing of the Metropolis in 1714, "are extremely well guarded by watches, or guards, who carry no other arms about them than clubs, or great staves; for, as this is a country of drinking, which often makes mankind fool-hardy, fire-arms would be of dangerous consequence, if used here, as they are in the more southern countries. The watchmen are generally so civil as to lead a strayed stranger to his lodgings with a lantern; and if he prove mutinous, but not outrageous, they only carry him to their round-house, where he passes the night at a small expense, till the fumes of his wine are evaporated: but for vagrant rogues they are very useful in carrying them immediately to prison: and thus they keep the peace of the city."

THE KING'S THREE DAUGHTERS.

FOULQUES DE NEULLY, a celebrated preacher of his day, addressing himself in a prophetic style to Richard I., King of England, told him he had three daughters to marry, and that, if he did not dispose of them soon, God would punish him severely. "You are a false prophet," said the king; "I have no daughter." "Pardon me, sir," replied the priest, "your Majesty has three, Ambition, Avarice, and Luxury: get rid of them as fast as possible, else assuredly some great misfortune will be the consequence." "If it must be so then," said the King, with a sneer, "I give my Ambition to the Templars, my Avarice to the Monks, and my Luxury to the Prelates."

A TALE OF VOLTAIRE.

ONE day Voltaire, when a young man of about twenty-four, read to La Motte, who had a prodigious memory, a tragedy which he had written. La Motte listened with the greatest possible attention, to the end. "Your tragedy is excellent," said he, "and I dare answer beforehand for its success. Only one thing vexes me; you have allowed yourself to borrow, as I can prove to you, from the second scene of the fourth act." Voltaire defended himself as well as he could against the charge. "I say nothing," answered La Motte, "which I cannot support, and to prove it I shall recite this same scene, which pleased me so much when I first read it that I got it by heart, and not a word of it has escaped me." Accordingly he repeated the whole without hesitation, and with as much animation as if he had composed it himself. All present, at the reading of the piece, looked at each other and did not know what to think. The author was utterly confounded. After enjoying his embarrassment for a short time—"Make yourself easy, sir," said La Motte, "the scene is entirely your own, as much your own as all the rest; but it struck me as so beautiful and touching, that I could not resist the pleasure of committing it to memory."

REVENGE ON A BANKER.

IN the Irish rebellion of 1798, J. C. Beresford, Esq., a banker, and member for Dublin, rendered himself so very obnoxious to the rebels, in consequence of his vigilance in bringing them to punishment, that whenever they found any of his bank notes in plundering a house, the general cry was, "By thunder! we'll ruin the rascal! we'll destroy every note of his we can find!" and they actually destroyed, it is supposed, upwards of £20,000 of his notes during the rebellion.

OUT ON BAIL.

THERE were at Rome four different ways of detaining the accused in custody, viz., the common jail; commitment to a military guard; commitment to the care of the consuls, or other magistrates, in their own houses; and lastly, security for the person's appearance, which is what we call being out upon bail.

OLD PLAYING CARDS.

CARDS, which were invented at the close of the fourteenth century, as they were drawn and painted by the hand, were proportionably dear, and were not in general use until the reign of Edward the Fourth. The price of a single pack was 18s. 8d., a very considerable sum in those days. They were originally very different from those in use at present. In shape they were square; and instead of suits of spades, clubs, hearts, and diamonds, their marks were rabbits, pinks, roses, and flowers of columbine. The figured cards were very prettily devised; a queen riding on horseback with a rabbit beside her, marked the queen of rabbits, or of clubs. A rustic-looking man, grotesquely dressed, and standing in a strange attitude, with a pink beside him, signified the knave of pinks, or diamonds.

"ONE OF THE RIGHT SORT."

M. FLEURY was in 1848 private secretary to the Duchess of Orleans. When the Revolution of February broke out, a rabble invaded the Palais Royal, where the princess resided, and began smashing works of art, pictures, statuettes, and knick-knacks. All the household was seized with panic except M. Fleury, who, throwing off his coat, smeared his face and hands with coal, caught up a poker, and rushed among the mob, shouting, "Here—I'll show you where the best pictures are!" So saying, he plied his poker upon furniture of no value, and, thus winning the confidence of the roughts, was able to lead them out of the royal apartments into the kitchen regions, where they spent their patriotic fury upon the contents of larder and cellar. A few days after he had saved the Palais Royal, M. Fleury was recognised in the streets as the Duchess of Orleans' secretary, and mobbed. He was being somewhat roughly hustled when a hulking water-carrier elbowed his way through the throng, and roared, "Let that man be! He is one of the right sort. He led us to the pillage of the Palais Royal the other day."

A LACONIC INSCRIPTION.

THE following lines were found, in 1813, engraven on a stone, among the ruins of the Friary, at Guildford:—

"*Si sapiens fore vis, sex serva quæ tibi mando
Quid, dicas, et ubi, de quo, eni, quomodo, quando.
Nunc lege, nunc ora, nunc cum fervore labora,
Tunc erit hora brevis, et labor ipse levis.*"

Translation.

"If you are willing to be wise,
These six plain maxims don't despise:
Both what you speak, and how take care,
Of, and to whom, and when, and where.
At proper hours, read, work, and pray,
Time then will fly, and work be play."

AN INVASION OF ENGLAND.

WHEN Prince Charlie invaded England in November, 1745, two thousand Highlanders of his army crossed the Esk at Longtown. The tide was swollen, and nothing was seen of them during the passage but their heads and shoulders. When they reached the opposite shore the pipers struck up, and they danced reels till they were dry again.

The Prince entered England on the 8th of November, and took up his quarters at a place called Reddings, in Cumberland. On the succeeding day he was joined by the western column, who brought with them the unpleasant news that they had lost thirty carts of the baggage in consequence of a surprise by the country people at Lockerby.

Even thus early on their progress southwards, the Highland army lost a great portion of its number by desertion. The eastern column, led by Charles himself, suffered most by this cause, the disinclination to a southward march prevailing chiefly among the Camerons and Macdonalds. The Lanarkshire and Stirlingshire roads are described as having for some days absolutely swarmed with the men who thus abandoned the standard; and great quantities of arms were found lying in the fields adjacent to the line of march, which the deserters had flung away to facilitate their progress towards the north.

A CERTAINTY.

"Honest Harry's alive!"—"How do you know it?" says Ned.
 "Oh, I'm perfectly sure—for Dick said he was dead."

TINTERN ABBEY.

THE picturesque ruins of Tintern Abbey are situated in Monmouthshire, eight miles above Chepstow, on the river Wye. The style is a transition from Early English to Decorated, and in beauty of composition and delicacy of execution the abbey yields to few edifices in the kingdom. Tintern was built on the spot where Theodoric, King of Glamorgan, was killed whilst fighting under the banner of the cross against the pagan Saxons in the year 600. The abbey was founded in 1131. Tintern has always been a favoured locality for poets and visitors of a poetic turn of mind.

SUMMARY JUSTICE.

THE laws made by Richard I. for the preservation of good order in his fleet when sailing to Palestine, are worthy of notice. They were as follows:—"He that kills a man on ship-board, shall be tied to the body, and thrown with it into the sea. If he kills one on land he shall be buried with the same. If it be proved that any one has drawn a knife to strike another, or has drawn blood, he shall lose his hand. If he strikes with his fist without effusion of blood, he shall be thrice plunged into the sea. If a man insult another with opprobrious language, so often as he does it, to give so many ounces of silver. A man convicted of theft to have his head shaved, tarred, and feathered, and to be left on the first land the ship shall come to." Richard appointed officers to see these laws executed with rigour, two of which were bishops.

A CHILD'S TOY.

FOR the amusement of Louis the Fourteenth, when a child, a piece of mechanism was constructed by a M. Camus, that probably was never exceeded by the ingenuity of man. It consisted of a small coach, drawn by two horses, in which was the figure of a lady, with a footman and page behind. This coach being placed at the extremity of a table of a determinate size, the coachman smacked his whip, and the horses immediately set out, moving their legs in exact imitation of the natural action of those animals. When the carriage reached the edge of the table, it turned at a right angle, and proceeded along that edge. When it arrived opposite the place where the king was seated, it stopped, and the page getting down opened the door; upon which the lady alighted, having in her hand a petition, which she presented with a curtsy. After walking some time she again curtsied, and re-entered the carriage; the page then resumed his place, the coachman whipped his horses, which began to move, and the footman, running after the carriage, jumped up behind it.

POPULAR PASTIMES.

THE popular pastimes of the time of James the First are enumerated in the following lines, in a little work entitled "The Letting of Humour's Blood in the Head-vaine; with a new Morisco daunced by seven Satyres upon the bottome of Diogenes' tubbe." 8vo. Lond., 1611.

"Man, I dare challenge thee to throw the sledge,
To jump or leape over ditch or hedge,
To wrestle, play at stoolball, or to runne:
To pitch the barre, or to shoote off a gunne:
To play at toggets, wine holes, or ten pinnes:
To try it out at foot-ball by the shinnes:
At ticktack, Irish noddie, maw, and raffie,
At hot-cockles, leap-frog, or blind-man-buffe:
To drinke halfe-pots, or deale at the whole can:
To play at base, or pen-and-yukhorne Sir Jhan;
To daunce the morris, play at barley-breake,
At all explaytes a man can thinke or speake:
At shove-groate, venter-poynt, or crosse and pile,
At beshrow him that's last at yonder style;
At leaping o'er a Midsummer-bon-fier,
Or at the drawing dum out of the myer;
At any of those, or all these presently,
Wagge but your finger, I am for you, I!"

THE BANK IN DANGER.

DURING the formidable riots of 1780, the Bank of England was in considerable danger. In one night there had arisen the flames of six-and-thirty fires. The Catholic chapels and the tallow-chandlers' shops had been universally destroyed; Newgate had been sacked and burned. The mob, half thieves, at last decided to march upon the Bank, but precautions had fortunately been taken there. The courts and roof of the building were defended by armed clerks and volunteers, and there were soldiers ready outside. The old pewter inkstands had been melted down into bullets. The rioters made two rushes; the first was checked by a volley from the soldiers; at the second, which was less violent, Wilkes rushed out, and with his own hand dragged in some of the ringleaders. Leaving several killed and many wounded, the discomfited mob at last retired.

These were the celebrated "No Popery Riots." Blue ribbons were generally mounted to give assurance of sound Protestantism, and it was a prevalent movement to chalk up "No Popery" in large letters on doors. A foreign Jew in Houndsditch, we read, inscribed on his door, "This house is a sound Protestant." Grimaldi, an Italian actor newly come to England, with exquisite satire, put up on his door "No religion!"

The leader in this strange outburst was Lord George Gordon, who was thrown into the Tower and tried for high treason, but a jury decided that the case did not warrant such a charge, and he was acquitted. The best condemnation that could be administered to the zealots he had led was the admission generally made of his insanity.

A PROOF OF LEARNING.

In the old romance of the Seven Sages of Rome it is related that these masters ascertained if their pupil was sufficiently learned by placing four leaves of ivy under each post of his bed. Unaware of what had been done, the pupil betook himself to rest, but in the morning when he awoke—

"The child looked here and there,
Up and down and everywhere,
His masters asked, 'What him was?'
'Parfai!' he said, 'a ferby case!
Either I am of wine drunk,
Either the firmament is sunk,
Either wazen is the ground
The thickness of four leaves round:
So much, tonight, higher I lay,
Certes, than I lay yesterday."

The sages were now fully satisfied.

"The masters then well understood
He knew enough of all good."

A PHILOSOPHER'S EPITAPH.

PAUL PATER, professor of mathematics at Dantze, died on the 7th of December, 1724, in his 68th year, leaving this epitaph for his tomb; "Hic situs est Paulus Pater, mathematicum professor, qui nescivit in vita quid sit cum morbis conficiari, ire moveri, cupiditate aduri. Decessit vita celestis." In English it may run, "Here lies Paul Pater, professor of mathematics, who knew not in this life what it was to be afflicted with disease, to be moved by anger, or inflamed by avarice. He lived and died a bachelor."

Epitaphie est celle d'un véritable philosophe, says his biographer; and perhaps truly, if the French academy be the true school of philosophy. I think that he was a better and a wiser man, who, concealing his name, caused his grave to be inscribed, "Vixi, Peccavi, Poenitui, Naturae Cessi." "I lived, sinned, repented, and died."

This epitaph was, in Camden's time, to be seen "in the cloister on the north side of Saint Pauls, now ruined."

CURIOSITIES OF PARISH REGISTERS.

THROUGH scarcity of paper or the waywardness of the keepers, many strange notices have found their way into parochial registers, those barren abstracts of the annals of mortality,

"—where to be born and die
Of rich and poor makes all the history."

An old record of funerals at Aberdeen gives a recipe for averting the pains to which weak brains are exposed by a debauch overnight, or as it is phrased, "Against the heid aiking by to muckill drinking." Another legal record at the same place is enlivened by two fashionable songs of the year 1507. A private note-book is elsewhere preserved, where Scripture texts, memoranda of Puritan sermons, and the last words of dying Covenanters, are huddled up with such profane tunes as "If the Kirk would let me be," "The Rantin' Laddie," and "Green grow the rushes." More useful, but scarcely less impertinent, entries occur in English registers. At Richmond, in Yorkshire it is written, "Buried, Mr. Matthew Hutchinson, Vicar of Gilling,—worth £50 a year;" and, "Buried, Mrs. Ursula Allen,—worth £600." This superfluity is perhaps more to be commended than the slovenly style of the clerk of Lincoln's Inn Chapel: "1722. This day were married by Mr. Holloway, I think, a couple whose names I could never learn, for he allowed them to carry away the licence."

France furnishes still more amusing examples. The curate of Saint André-des-Arts subjoins to the entry of a marriage on the 31st July, 1589, the following amiable reflections: "On the first day of August, 1589, Henry de Valoys, some time King of France, was in arms at Saint Cloud, with his heretics and the King of Navarre and his abettors, laying siege to Paris, of which he had given the pillage to the robbers of all sects who accompanied him, having sworn the death of every person of condition within its walls, except heretics and their adherents, so that he might overthrow the Church of our Lord, and establish heresy in the heart of France. But by the just judgment of God, who would not suffer such a perverse tyrant and hypocrite to reign any longer, he was slain by a religious of the order of the Jacobins, called Friar Jacques Clément, which religious (may his soul rest in peace!) was instantly murdered by the attendants of the said Henry."

"On the 30th of June, 1644," writes the priest of La Villette, "I said mass for the repose of the soul of François Caignet, who was my good friend, and made several gifts to my church." Another curate of the same place expresses himself thus: "Buried on the 21st of December, 1675, Jean Tessier, labourer, . . . a mild and peaceable man, who on all occasions showed great deference and respect to his pastors."

AN OLD COLLECTION OF JESTS.

A CURIOUS book was left in manuscript by the poet William Drummond of Hawthornden. On the title-page of it was inscribed, "DEMOCRITIE, a Labyrinth of Delight, or Worke preparative for the Apologie of Democritus; containing the Pasquills, Apotameas, Impresas, Anagrames, Epitaphes, Epigrammes, in French, Italiane, Spanishe, Latine, of this and the late age before." Specimens of this collection have been printed in the Archæologia Scotica. The following extracts from it will, we hope, be found not uninteresting. Some of them, it will be observed, carry the genealogy of certain familiar jests a hundred years beyond the work of Mr. Joseph Miller.

A Frenchman said, above all the pies in England, he loved occupy.

A physician wondered how his horse could be sick, and not change his colour.

One examining a milkmaid, asked her if she did keep the ten commandments? "No," says she, "I keep sheep."

One who had fired a pipe of tobacco with a ballad, swore he heard the singing of it in his head thereafter for the space of two days.

A gentleman of Bedlam being asked if ever he was married, "You know all," says he, "I am mad, yet was I never so mad as to marry."

At Oxford, a professor having got a new gown, someone saying it was too short, answered, "Let it alone, it will be long enough ere I get another."

A painter being challenged for having painted a unicorn without a horn, replied, "It was not yet a year old, and that with time the horn would come."

When they told George Buchanan that the Earl of Mar had gotten the government of the young king, he asked presently, "Who then shall have the government of the Earl of Mar?"

An honest man falling unawares in a ditch, desired his servant to help him out of it. "Stay a little," replied his servant, "till I see if this be in my covenant, otherwise I will call some other to help you."

George Buchanan said to one who complained, as they were riding, of the weakness of his memory, "that his horse was a great deal more forgetful, for being but even now stricken with his spurs, he forgot it presently."

Queen Elizabeth entering Bristol, a speech was to be delivered to her. The honest man begun, "May it please your sacred majesty, I am the mouth of the town;" and then, all amazed, forgot the rest. She, sporting, said once or twice, "Speak, good mouth!"

One asking alms, being inquired what calling he was of, answered, "He was a poor scholar;" but when he was set to read, and could do nothing, he replied, "He told them truly that he was but a poor scholar, for he could not read so much as a single letter."

Two Low Country men being in Scotland, the one asked the other how it was possible the men were so tall and big, and the horses so little? "Do you not know that," said the other, "the men here eat all the horses' bread?" meaning, of our oat bread which the commons use.

The Marquis of Hamilton came to visit Sir Francis Bacon after the time of his great disaster, but found few to open his doors; and asking him how he did, "Well," replied he, "your lordship is come to see a ruinous building, for the rats and vermin are all fled away from me."

WHAT'S IN A SURNAME?

THERE is a great deal in surnames. What glimpses of old life they sometimes give us; they are little bits of history; revelations of human interest; scraps of poetry and humour; notes of affection, ridicule, sarcasm, and impertinence; often stories condensed into a single word. It is not surprising that they go to form a subject possessing a peculiar fascination, and that some people on their way through the world keep their eyes on signboards and their fingers turning over directories.

It is a common error to suppose that surname is a corruption of sirename, and only another way of saying father's name. The word either means over-name—a name given over and above the Christian name—or had its origin in the fact that at first the family name was written over (sur) the other name, as

"de Cobbeham John."

Names certainly go back to Adam, but the origin of surnames is nothing like so remote. They cannot be traced much farther back than the latter part of the tenth century. They were first employed in France, and particularly in Normandy, and at the Conquest were brought into England.

According to Mr. Lower, the practice of making the second name stationary and transmitting it to descendants came gradually into common use during the eleventh and three following centuries. It was not, however, established on anything like its present footing till the time of the Reformation. The introduction of parish registers may have materially contributed to encourage the practice.

Partnerships sometimes bring about peculiar conjunctions of names. There are well-authenticated instances of Sparrow and Nightingale, Birch and Schooling, Able and Willing, and several others equally appropriate. Catchem and Cheetham for a legal firm is, however, probably an invention, and so with Pen, Quill, and Driver. The best that can be said of these is that they are quite possible: so are Coy and Shy, Quarrel and Millachap, Bagwell and Sackit, Rushforth and Hastaway, Elinks and Winks, Bacon and Mutton, Child and Littleboy, Trip and Golithly, Found and Pickup, Gabble and Chataway, Gaze and Stare, Breeze and Blow, Charity and Scattergood, Strongfellow and Stenderman, Angler and Fish, Mouser and Cat, Day and Knight.

In Scotland the locality of some names is particularly well defined. We have MacDonald, MacKenzie, Robertson, and Stewart, in the north; Scott, Kerr, Elliot, Johnston, and Maxwell, in the south; Gordon, Forbes, Grant, and Ogilvie, in the east; and Campbell, Cameron, MacLean, and Kennedy, in the west. "This arises from the clansmen having made a practice of taking the name of their chiefs and considering themselves members of their family by adoption if not otherwise."

There are some names met with in England which appear never to have crossed the Border. Amongst those of which England may thus claim to have a monopoly, we find Churchyard, Deadman, Scamp, Swindler, Gotobed, Slaughter, Startup, Trentymann, Albion, Littleproud, Fudge, Puddle, and Wildblood.

The most prevalent surnames in Scotland, according to Mr. George Seton, are Smith, the name of one person in every sixty-nine; MacDonald, one in seventy-eight; Brown, one in eighty-nine, Robertson, one in ninety-one; Campbell, one in ninety-two; Thompson, one in ninety-five; and Stewart, one in ninety-eight. "One person in every twelve in Scotland," says Mr. Seton, "will answer to one or other of these seven names."

The Smiths in England and Wales are calculated to be about one in every seventy-three of the population. If we take the three common names of Smith, Jones, and Williams, one person in every twenty-eight will answer to one or other of them.

Life with a good number is a struggle at the best, and the success that attends us is influenced more than people sometimes think by the names we bear. Even the sound of a name is of consequence. "Harsh names," says Isaac Disraeli, "will have, in spite of all our philology, a painful and ludicrous effect on our ears and our associations. It is vexatious that the softness of delicious vowels or the ruggedness of inexorable consonants should at all be connected with a man's happiness, or even have an influence on his fortune."

Some names, indeed, are almost fatal to success; they simply suggest jokes and encourage familiarity. A man has no hesitation in proving "by thumps upon your back how he esteems your merit" if you are called Twigger, or Tapp, or Trundle, or Littleboy, but he would hardly venture on it were you a more aristocratic Montgomery, or a Gascogne.

For a man to inherit an absurd or insignificant name is to have a stone laid round his neck in childhood to keep him all his life in the depths of obscurity. It would be difficult to find a famous character in literature, art, or anything else, with a surname the least approaching in character to say, Toothaches, or Bang, or Baby. Who could fancy a Squib, or a Gabble, visited at any time by the inspirations of genius?

John Wilkes expressed this idea once in conversation with Dr. Johnson. They were speaking of Elkanah Settle, the last of the City Poets. "There is something in names," said Wilkes, "which one cannot help feeling. Now Elkanah Settle sounds so queer; who can expect much from that name? We should have no hesitation to give it for John Dryden in preference to Elkanah Settle from the names only, without knowing their different merits."

Considerations such as these—not to speak of testamentary injunctions and conditions attached to deeds of entail—have induced people from time to time to change their names. The world being as it is, and man's instinct leading him to fasten on and worry the ridiculous, it is often a sensible proceeding. Cuthbert is made to take the place of Cuddy, McAlpine of Halfpenny, Belcombe of Bullock, De Winton of Wilkins, and Epirain Bug is transformed into the aristocratic Norfolk Howard.

It seems to be the established law both of England and Scotland that one can take a surname or change it at pleasure without any royal, parliamentary, or judicial authority whatever. No permission is needed; the only difficulty is to get other people to recognise the change. The ordinary method, however, is to obtain a royal licence, the chief use of which appears to be in proving identity, should that ever be necessary.

In connection with short names, a pleasant anecdote is quoted by Disraeli from Fuller: "An opulent citizen of the name of John Cuts (what name can be more unluckily short?) was ordered by Elizabeth to receive the Spanish ambassador, but the latter complained grievously, and thought he was disparaged by the shortness of the name. He imagined that a man bearing a monosyllabic name could never, in the great alphabet of civil life, have performed anything great or honourable; but when he found that honest John Cuts displayed a hospitality which had nothing monosyllabic in it, he groaned only at the utterance of the name of his host."

The various spellings of the name Shakespeare have been collected by Mr. J. O. Halliwell-Phillips, and the following list, which gives the result of his researches, "is very instructive," says Mr. A. J. Ellis, "as to the capabilities of the English language to indulge the tastes of those who hold that variety is charming."

Chacsper	Shagspere	Shaxperer

In Scotland the most remarkable instances of the various spelling of surnames are found in Lindsay, Stirling, and Montgomery, which appear to have been written respectively in no fewer than eighty-eight, sixty-four, and forty-four different forms.

INCOME TAX.

Incomes amounting to £150 a year and under £400 are rated at 6d. in the pound, but £120 of the total income is not taxed. Annual incomes of £400 and upwards are rated at 6d. in the pound without any deduction.

GOVERNMENT INSURANCE AND ANNUITIES.

The lives of the persons of either sex between the ages of 14 and 65 may be insured for not less than £5 nor more than £100; or if the amount does not exceed £5, not under the age of 8 years. The Postmaster-General is also empowered to grant Immediate or Deferred Annuities for any amount not less than £1 or more than £100 to any person not under the age of 5 years.

The following examples show various ways in which Insurances may be effected:—The life of a Male or Female between 21 and 22 years of age may be insured for £10, by an annual payment throughout life of 4s. 4d. (1d. a week); or by an annual payment to the age of 60 of 4s. 8d.; or by a single payment of £4 4s.; or a person between 21 and 22 years of age having, say, £9 deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank, the interest on which is 4s. 6d. a year, can direct that 4s. 4d. of this amount of interest be applied to the payment of premiums on a Life Policy for £10; he can thus maintain his Life Insurance without decreasing his capital of £9.

A sum of money may be insured on the attainment of the age of 60 years, or sooner in the event of death, by the payment of a single or annual premium, and a sum of money may be insured at the expiration of 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, 35, or 40 years, or sooner in the event of death, by the payment of a single premium according to the age of the insured person.

ECLIPSES IN 1889.

In the year 1889 there will be three Eclipses of the Sun, and two of the Moon:—

Jan. 11.—A Total Eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich.

Jan. 17.—A Partial Eclipse of the Moon, partly visible at Greenwich.

June 28.—An Annular Eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich.

July 12.—A Partial Eclipse of the Moon, partly visible at Greenwich.

Dec. 22.—A Total Eclipse of the Sun, invisible at Greenwich.

REGISTRATION OF BIRTHS, &c.

In England an infant should be registered within six weeks after its Birth. No fee is payable; but after 42 days, a fee of 7s. 6d. is chargeable.

Notice must be given of Deaths to the District Registrar. Let this be done early, as a certificate must be obtained to give to the minister who performs the funeral service.

In Scotland a Birth must be registered within 21 days. A Marriage must be registered within three days. A Death must be registered within eight days.

INTEREST TABLE.

Without giving an elaborate series of tabulated figures to ascertain the interest due on any given sum, at 2½, 3, 5, or any other rate per cent., any person may calculate for himself the amount of interest by a very simple process.

The amount of interest upon one pound for every month at 5 per cent. is one penny. Having ascertained what any given sum amounts to at 5 per cent., other rates may be calculated by adding to, or dividing it, thus: 6 months,

5 per cent. for £50 would be £2 0 0
2½ per cent., which is one-half	1 0 0
3 per cent. is six-tenths ..	1 4 0
3½ per cent. is seven-tenths	1 8 0
4 per cent. is four-fifths ..	1 12 0

If the interest should be more than 5 per cent., then the extra rate of interest must be added. Thus for 6½ per cent. add one-fourth; for 7½ per cent. add one-half.

POST-OFFICE INFORMATION.

RATES OF POSTAGE.

To and from all parts of the United Kingdom, for prepaid letters. Not exceeding 1 oz. 1d.
 Excdg. 1 oz. but not excdg. 2oz. 1½d.
 " 2 oz. " 4 oz. 2d.
 " 4 oz. " 6 oz. 2½d.
 " 6 oz. " 8 oz. 3d.
 " 8 oz. " 10 oz. 3½d.
 " 10 oz. " 12 oz. 4d.
 and so on at the rate of ½d. for every additional two ounces. A letter posted unpaid will be charged on delivery with double postage, and a letter posted insufficiently prepaid will be charged with double the deficiency.—An Inland Letter must not exceed 1 foot 6 inches in length, 9 inches in width, or 6 inches in depth, unless it be sent to or from a Government Office.

REGISTRATION.

By the prepayment of a fee of twopence, any letter, newspaper, or book-packet may be registered to any place in the United Kingdom or British Colonies. The Post-Office will not undertake the safe transmission of valuable enclosures in unregistered letters; and unregistered letters found to contain coin will, on delivery, be charged with a registration fee of 8d. If a registered article be lost the Post-Office is liable to the extent of 45s.

REGISTERED LETTER ENVELOPES

Are sold at all Post-Offices, and by rural messengers, according to size, from 2½d. to 3d. each.

POSTAGE ON INLAND REGISTERED NEWSPAPERS.

Prepaid Rates.—For each Registered Newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet—One Halfpenny; but a packet containing two or more Registered Newspapers is not chargeable with a higher rate of postage than would be chargeable on a Book-Packet of the same weight, viz., One Halfpenny for every 2 oz., or fraction of 2 oz.

Unpaid Rates.—A Newspaper posted unpaid, or a packet of Newspapers posted either unpaid or insufficiently paid, will be treated as an unpaid, or insufficiently paid, Book-Packet of the same weight.

The postage must be prepaid either by an adhesive stamp, or by the use of a stamped wrapper. Every Newspaper or packet of Newspapers must be posted either without a cover or in a cover open at both ends. If this rule be infringed, the Newspaper or packet will be treated as a letter.

No Newspaper, whether posted singly or in a packet, may contain any enclosure except the supplement or supplements belonging to it. If it contain any other, it will be charged as a letter.

No packet of Newspapers may exceed 14 lbs. in weight, or two feet in length by one foot in width or depth.

INLAND PARCEL POST.

For an Inland Postal Parcel, the rate of postage, to be prepaid in ordinary postage stamps, will be—Not exceeding in weight 1 lb., 3d.; and for every additional lb. up to the maximum of 11 lbs., 1½d. Maximum length 3 feet 6 inches; maximum length and girth combined, 6 feet.

A Parcel Post Service has been established between the United Kingdom and the countries of the Continent of Europe and the British Colonies and Foreign Possessions generally. For rates and other conditions, see the Post Office Guide, published quarterly.

INSURANCE AND COMPENSATION.

The Postmaster-General will, subject to rules, give compensation for loss and damage of inland parcels as follows:—

(I.) Where no fee except postage is paid, the Postmaster-General will give compensation to an amount not exceeding £1. (II.) Where, in addition to the postage, an insurance fee of 1d. is paid, the Postmaster-General will give compensation to an amount not exceeding £5. (III.) Where, in addition to the postage, an insurance fee of 2d. is paid, the Postmaster-General will give compensation to an amount not exceeding £10. In no case will a larger amount of compensation than £10 be paid.

INLAND BOOK POST.

The Book Post rate is One Halfpenny for every 2 oz. or fraction of 2 oz. A Book-Packet may contain not only books, paper, or other substance in ordinary use for writing or printing, whether plain or written or printed upon (to the exclusion of any written letter or communication of the nature of a letter), photographs, when not on glass, and anything usually appertaining to such articles in the way of binding and mounting, or necessary for their safe transmission by post, but also Circulars, when these are wholly or in great part printed, engraved, or lithographed.

Every Book-Packet must be posted either without a cover or in a cover open at both ends; it may, however, be tied with string.

No Book-Packet may exceed 5 lbs. in weight, or one foot six inches in length, nine inches in width, and six in depth.

A Book Packet, if the rules are infringed, is chargeable if under 8 oz. in weight as a letter packet, and if over 8 oz. it is transferred to the Parcel Post, and charged a fine of 1d., in addition to any deficient Parcel Postage.

POST CARDS.

Post Cards, bearing a halfpenny impressed stamp, are available for transmission between places in the United Kingdom only. They are sold at 7d., or of finer quality at 8d. per doz. They can also be had in smaller numbers or singly. Reply Cards are now sold. Foreign Postal Cards, 1d., 1½d., and 2d. each.

MONEY ORDERS.

Money Orders are granted in the United Kingdom, as follows:—
 For sums not exceeding - £1, 2d.

MONEY ORDERS PAYABLE ABROAD.

Foreign Orders are issued at the following rates:—

If payable in Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Danish West Indies, Dutch East India Possessions, Egypt, France, German Empire, Austria-Hungary, Holland, Italy, Japan, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and United States, &c., or the British Possessions and Colonies:—On sums not exceeding
 £2 0s. 6d. | £7 1s. 6d.
 £5 1s. 0d. | £10 2s. 0d.

POST-OFFICE SAVINGS BANK.

Deposits of one shilling upwards will be received from any depositor at the Post-Office Savings Banks, provided the deposits made in any year ending the 31st December do not exceed 30l., and provided the total amount does not exceed 150l. exclusive of interest. When principal and interest amount together to £200, all interest will cease.

"TAKE CARE OF THE PENCE."

At every Post-Office in the United Kingdom forms can be obtained, free of charge, on which twelve penny postage stamps can be fixed, and when the form has been thus filled up with twelve penny stamps it will be received at any Post-Office Savings Bank as a Savings Bank deposit for one shilling.

STOCKS CAN BE BOUGHT

At any Post-Office Savings Bank. Any depositor who wishes can invest £10, or any larger sum up to £100, in Government Stock at the current price of the day. Not more than £300 stock in all can be credited to any one account. The same facilities are afforded for selling out stock. The commission for purchase or sale of Stocks is for any amount not exceeding £25, 9d.; and 6d. for each £25 after.

POSTAL TELEGRAMS.

Charge throughout the United Kingdom, 6d. for twelve words; names and addresses of sender and receiver included. Usually, however, there is no necessity to telegraph sender's address. Each additional word, ½d. Numbers in addresses counted as one word.

In Monthly Parts, price 7d.

Cathedrals, Abbeys, and Churches of England and Wales.

With about 300 Original Illustrations.

(To be Completed in 20 Parts.)

"This would be a beautiful Work if it had nothing but its illustrations to recommend it; but the publishers have wisely thought that a book about cathedrals should be designed for the mind as well as for the eye. The historical and antiquarian description of each cathedral has therefore been entrusted to competent hands—how competent may easily be judged when we say that Dr. Jessop has written about Norwich, Precentor Venables about Lincoln, and Prof. Creighton about Newcastle."—Guardian.

“The most interesting, instructive, and entertaining history of our country.”—Standard.

"Truth is stranger than Fiction."

In MONTHLY PARTS, 7d., an ENTIRELY NEW WORK, entitled

The World of Adventure.

With Several Hundred Original Illustrations.

With PART 1 is issued a LARGE PRESENTATION PLATE, handsomely printed in Tint.

* * Each Monthly Part will contain 64 Quarto Pages of Letterpress and Illustrations, with a Handsome Engraving as Frontispiece in addition.

SCARLETT'S "THREE HUNDRED" AT BALACLAVA: SOUNDING THE CHARGE.

IN 'THE WORLD OF ADVENTURE' we shall relate the wonderful stories of daring, bravery, and peril, which the thrilling and noble deeds of the present day and of past centuries have placed at our command. Whilst these stories will be absolutely true, they will be found more interesting and exciting than the most startling works of fiction.

"Every age and every country will be laid under request, and will contribute its quota to the store of heroic actions, 'golden deeds,' and stirring chronicles. Soldiers and Sailors, Travellers, Firemen, Pirates, Buccaneers, Smugglers, Bandits, Wearers of the Victoria Cross, Captains of Industry and Science—all shall walk in our pages, and in their true colours. Escapes from Fire, from Prison, from Shipwreck; Deeds of Battle, Life-boat narratives, stories of Alpine daring, of African and Arctic exploration, of Siege, Famine, Earthquake, and Pestilence, shall all find their place."—Extract from Prospectus.

Cassell's Saturday Journal.

DURING the past year the popularity of "Cassell's Saturday Journal" has advanced by leaps and bounds. Since its enlargement, 12 months ago, "Cassell's Saturday Journal" has nearly doubled the immense circulation it had then attained, whilst in our distant Colonies as well as in our large cities and towns at home, and in the recesses of our country villages, this Journal has become a household word.

"The best and cheapest pennyworth of popular literature ever produced."
—The Times.

Cassell's Saturday Journal is also published in Monthly Parts, price 6d.
