INTRODUCTION.

The compiler of this genealogy does not wish it to be merely a catalogue of names, she ventures in these introductory pages to give a brief account of the founders of the family, trusting that this human touch will rouse the interest and pride of their descendants.

Even though it covers only seven generations it includes over four hundred direct descendants. It is interesting to note that they are found in Australia, Africa, India, the British and Channel Isles, and in many of the principal cities of the United States. Also, since the war which began in 1914, they are found in all parts of Europe, because so many of the family belong to the army.

No effort has been made to trace the Brown Genealogy farther back than William Brown, born in 1715, of good Scotch-Irish stock, at Cairnkirn, County Antrim, Ireland. William's eldest son, Patrick, on becoming an insurance agent in London, found his Irish name such a drawback, that he changed it to John, "in the hope of improving his business." William's third son, Stewart, emigrated before he was thirty years of age to Baltimore, Maryland, where he became a general merchant. He was the progenitor of a large family, with whose genealogy we are not here concerned. The middle son, Alexander, born November 17, 1764, in Ballymena, grew up in a section of country where every cottage harbored a spinning wheel or loom, and where every green served as linen bleaching ground. The linen thus spun from good Irish flax was sold either from the cart or on the Belfast Market Place, or in its "linen hall," by local auctioneers. Foremost among these, owing to his talent as a salesman, and his expert knowledge of textiles, was Alexander Brown, who ere long won an enviable reputation. He was married in 1783 to Grace Davison, a woman of strong character and laudable ambitions. Their four sons—William, George, John A. and James—attended a dame-school. Although the presiding genius "wholopped them and wholopped them," the boys utterly failed to learn. An aunt suggested a visit to an oculist. Thus, an hereditary defect in vision—later designated as "the Brown sight"—was discovered and so far remedied that the four boys learned so rapidly that no further "wholloppings" were necessary.

Political troubles between Ireland and England determined Alexander Brown to emigrate to Baltimore in 1800. He set out with his wife and son William—then sixteen—leaving his three younger boys in a school where the economically minded schoolmaster assured the boys, "the more pudding they ate the more beef they could have."

Two years after, "on a hot Sunday in July," the three younger boys also landed in Baltimore, "dressed in thick woolen Irish suits and heavy plaid stockings." Hastily borrowing from neighbors garments better suited to the climate and season, the stanch Presbyterian mother hurried her brood off to church to offer thanks for their reunion.

In Baltimore, Alexander Brown began his career as a linen merchant, for he knew that trade thoroughly. This does not mean, however, that Alexander was not ready to take advantage of other legitimate lines of business.

Five years after landing in Baltimore, Alexander had prospered so satisfactorily that he took his son, William, into partnership. The new firm, "Alexander Brown & Son," continued until 1808, when George's admission as a partner made the addition of an "s" necessary to the firm's name. In 1810, William—who, owing to ill-health, had meantime returned to England—established himself in business with a cousin at Liverpool, as a branch of the Baltimore house, leaving his brother, John A., to take his vacant place in the firm of Alexander Brown & Sons.

In those days, the same roof often sheltered home and office, and it was so in this case. Father and sons sometimes discussed business matters in the presence of wife and mother, whose shrewd common sense often proved helpful to them. Once, during a financial crisis, when one of the sons seemed to "lose his grip," the brave little woman effectually braced him by scornfully exclaiming: "I should be ashamed if any son of mine were not man enough to bear misfortune when it comes."

Although Baltimore, in 1800, was the chief trading center of the United States, Philadelphia, owing to its rapidly growing iron manufactory, soon became so important that, in 1818, Alexander Brown dispatched John A., his third son, thither to open a branch house, laying down as a principle, which was to govern all future undertakings of the firm, "never to enter upon any business which did not meet with the general approval of all the partners."

Seven years later, in 1825, James, the youngest son, was sent to New York—then the smallest and least important city—to open a similar branch there. Owing to the influx of trade brought about by the opening of the Erie Canal, the same year, this soon became the most important of the three offices in America.

In 1827, Alexander Brown and his son George induced twenty-five leading citizens of Baltimore to interest themselves in starting the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and they were among the first to favor steam-boat navigation.

Although located as far apart as Baltimore, Liverpool, Philadelphia and New York, the four Brown brothers and their father met as frequently as possible, kept up a lively correspondence of queerly sandwiched family and business affairs, and steadily preserved "that spirit of mutual confidence embodied in the family motto, 'Est concordia fratrum.'" Not only did they take counsel with each other as far as the slow and difficult means of communication permitted in the beginning of the nineteenth century, but they loyally upheld one another in all business ventures, whether they resulted well or ill.

They took a lively interest in many charitable and philanthropic enterprises and each of the brothers contributed to the special charities in which they then were engaged. Notwithstanding a harmony so marked that Alexander Brown declared he believed his four sons could always live together in peace in the same community, he once added, with a twinkle in his eye, that he feared that it might not be so easy for his daughters-in-law to remain on friendly terms were they forced into too constant and intimate relations.

Alexander Brown lived to see his four sons firmly established in the merchant-banking business which he had created. When seventy years old he contracted pneumonia while trying to save his fellow-citizens from the effects of a financial panic, and died in his home in Baltimore in 1834. An editorial in the "Baltimore American," of April 4, 1834, refers to him in the following paragraphs:

"In the death of Alexander Brown, Esq., the head of the well-known mercantile firm of Alexander Brown & Sons, a venerable and much regretted citizen has been removed from among us.

"Few men occupy so large a space in the esteem of a whole community as the deceased. As a merchant he stood in the first rank for ample means and the skill and enterprise with which his large concerns were managed. His energy was not more remarkable than the liberality of spirit which marked all his undertakings, and diffused widely among others the benefits of his business success. In his social relations the same enlarged feelings made him always prominent in sustaining works of public utility, and forward in encouraging all charitable and philanthropic associations. . . .

“As a citizen he was eminently valuable, and his loss is a subject of universal regret. . . .

“Not less estimable in his private relations, to his family and personal friends this bereavement is an afflicting dispensation.”

His second son, George, continued the business in Baltimore. Like his father, he was “modest and retiring in disposition, independent in judgment, and wise in counsel.” He, too, proved so public spirited “that there was scarcely an institution of importance in Baltimore of a philanthropic or public nature in which he was not more or less interested.” He built the Brown Memorial Church, which remains a permanent monument to his memory. His grandson, Alexander Brown, the great-grandson of the original Alexander Brown, is now carrying on the business in Baltimore, and has been head of the firm of Alexander Brown & Sons in that city for many years.

William, eldest of the four brothers, established himself in Liverpool in 1810. Here he carried on the merchant-banking business in the same conservative spirit as his father, whom he most closely resembled. Later he became a founder of the London branch of the firm, known as Brown, Shipley & Company, and entered Parliament. In 1862, in recognition of his services to the city of Liverpool, to which he gave its public library, Queen Victoria bestowed upon him the title of Baronet. Two years later Sir William Brown, having outlived his nine children, died, leaving no grandson old enough to take his place in the English branch of the firm.

John A. Brown, the third and most conservative member of this unique quartette of brothers, settled in Philadelphia in 1818. Although he nominally retired from business in 1837, he continued to manage the finances of many leading institutions of the city, taking a lively interest in all its benevolent undertakings and contributing generously to church and hospital until his death in 1872.

James Brown, the youngest of the four brothers, and head of the New York house, was actively connected with the business of the firm, and carried it safely through the financial crises of 1837, 1857, and the Civil War. A founder of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, he served as its president for thirty-two years, and was also founder, manager, president, vice-president and director of many other charitable and educational institutions. The work he loved best, however, was in connection with the Presbyterian Church, to which he made important contributions. When he, too, died of pneumonia in 1877, he was still, at eighty-seven, in full possession of his mental and physical powers. He was twice married and the father of twelve children. He trained five sons, hoping that they might be associated with him in business. Of these, the eldest, James Alexander, was accidentally shot in a Fourth of July celebration; the second, William Benedict, lost at sea in the steamer Arctic with his family, and the third, George Hunter, debarred by ill-health from continued business activities. The youngest son, Clarence Brown, was a member of the Seventh Regiment, and served from 1861 to 1863, first as a private and afterward as an officer. He was Major on General McDowell's staff, and later received an appointment as inspector with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel on General Reynolds' staff. He entered the office in 1863 and became a partner in 1867, but retired in 1868.

Because his father greatly depended upon him, the fourth son, John Crosby Brown, renounced a cherished hope of studying for the ministry and after three years' training in the Liverpool office became, in 1864, a partner of Brown Brothers & Company, in New York City, continuing in active business until the time of his death. During the later years of his life, he was the senior partner of the firm. He wrote a history of the firm, entitled "A Hundred Years of Merchant Banking."* In this able monograph he records that out of forty-seven partners of the firm, thirty-two were either direct descendants of the original William Brown, or closely allied by marriage to one of the partners. Among the present partners of the New York house are two great-grandsons of Alexander Brown, James Brown and Thatcher Magoun Brown, and another great-grandson, James Crosby Brown, is a partner in the Philadelphia house. Sir Alexander Hargreaves Brown, the great-grandson of Alexander, is the senior partner of the London firm of Brown, Shipley & Company, and Edward Clifton Brown, James Clifton Brown and Walter Hargreaves Brown, the great-great-grandsons, are also partners. Almost all of the forty-seven partners received their training in one of the firm's banking houses.

Although separated by the Atlantic Ocean, or by such land distances as intervene between New Orleans and Boston, "confidence, absolute confidence, at first between father and sons, later between the brothers, and later still between the partners, was the cornerstone of the success of the house.

"Living under different systems of government, to which they were loyally attached, belonging to different branches of the Christian Church—Presbyterian, Episcopal, Church of England, Society of Friends—they lived in perfect harmony, respecting one another's views and sympathizing in one another's efforts to promote the general welfare. God-fearing men, they consistently maintained a high standard of integrity in all their business relations. Not specially concerned to amass great fortunes . . . their ambition was to lead simple lives, attend to their calling, and devote a good part of their leisure to the various civil, philanthropic and religious institutions with which they were connected, and to which they gave liberally of their time, talent, and money."

Bygone members of the Brown family are noted for their piety, industry, sterling integrity, good judgment, reticence, generosity, confidence in each other, shrewd knowledge of mankind, and conservative principles. They are, therefore, ancestors of whom one may justly be proud. Their admirable record imposes upon their descendants the obligation to practise their virtues, emulate their industry, benefit the world as much as they did, and leave as clean a record behind them, when their earthly books are balanced for the last time.

MARY ELIZABETH BROWN.

I wish to acknowledge the kindness of relations and friends in replying to my letters and looking up data for me, especially those of the family connection in England who have lost dear ones in the war.

I also wish to acknowledge my great indebtedness to Miss Susan G. Flugel, who has done the technical part of my work for me.

It is interesting to note that this genealogy has brought to light several crossings of family lines hitherto unsuspected.

This record has only been carried to January first, 1916, as it was found impossible to record births, marriages and deaths occurring since that date.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

To find the line of ancestry of any direct male descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN, for example, HOBSON⁶ BROWN, proceed as follows: According to the index, Hobson⁶ Brown is to be found under personal serial No. 101, where he appears as the third child of ALEXANDER⁵ BROWN, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*Neilson*⁴ (35), *Alexander*³, *John A.*², *Alexander*¹). Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 35, you find the account of NEILSON⁴ BROWN, whose paternal ancestry is given in italics in a similar manner, his father being (*Alexander*³ (12), etc.). In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers successively to 12. ALEXANDER³ BROWN; 4. JOHN A.² BROWN; and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.

To find the line of ancestry of a male descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN on the maternal side, for example JOHN KENNEDY TOD⁶ FORSMAN, proceed as follows: According to the index John Kennedy Tod⁶ Forsman is to be found under personal serial No. 104, where he appears as the second child of STANLEY NICOLI⁵ FORSMAN and MARY LOUISA⁵ POTTER, the latter the daughter of Howard Cranston⁴ Potter (39) and Alice⁴ Kershaw. Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 39 you find the account of HOWARD CRANSTON⁴ POTTER, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*Howard*³ (17), *Alonzo*², *Joseph*¹). Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 17, you find the account of HOWARD³ POTTER, whose wife, MARY LOUISA³ BROWN, was the daughter of James² Brown (5) and Louisa Kirkland² Benedict. In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers successively to 5. JAMES² BROWN; and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.

To find the line of ancestry of a female descendant of ALEXANDER BROWN, whose father is the direct descendant, for example, HELEN GILMAN⁶ BROWN (48), proceed as in the case of a male descendant.

To find the line of ancestry of a female descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN, whose father is the descendant on the maternal side, for example, MATILDA BACHE EMORY⁶ WHITRIDGE, proceed as follows: According to the index, Matilda Bache Emory⁶ Whitridge is to be found under personal serial No. 93, where she appears as the second child of HORATIO LORENZO⁵ WHITRIDGE, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*William*⁴ (30), *Horatio*³, *William*², *William*¹). Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 30, you find that his mother, ELIZABETH⁴ GRAHAM, was the daughter of William Hamilton³ Graham (10) and Isabel³ Brown. Turning back in a similar manner in the personal serial numbers to No. 10 you find that ISABEL³ BROWN was the daughter of George² Brown (3) and Isabella² McLanahan. In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers successively to 3. GEORGE² BROWN and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.

To find the line of ancestry of any female descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN, whose mother is the descendant on the paternal side, for example, BETTY BROWN⁶ TAILER, proceed as follows: According to the index Betty Brown⁶ Tailer is to be found under personal serial No. 95, where she appears as the second child of THOMAS SUFFERN⁵ TAILER, and HARRIET⁵ STEWART BROWN, the latter the daughter of Alexander⁴ Brown (31) and Bessie⁴

Montague. Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 31, you find the account of ALEXANDER⁴ BROWN, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*George*³ (11), *George*², *Alexander*¹). Turning back in a similar manner in the personal serial numbers to No. 11 you find the account of GEORGE STEWART³ BROWN, whose ancestry likewise follows his name in italics, his father being (*George*² (3), etc.). In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers successively to 3. GEORGE² BROWN; and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.

To find the line of ancestry of a female descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN, whose mother is the descendant on the maternal side, for example, CICELY GRACE⁷ SCRYMGEOUR-WEDDERBURN, proceed as follows: According to the index Cicely Grace⁷ Scrymgeour-Wedderburn is to be found under personal serial No. 110, where she appears as the second child of FREDERICK LEWIS⁶ SCRYMGEOUR-WEDDERBURN and ZAIDA GRACE⁵ ERSKINE, the latter the daughter of Lt.-Col. Sir Ffolliott Williams⁵ Erskine, Bt. (54) and Grace⁵ Hargreaves. Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 54, you find the account of Lt.-Col. SIR FFOLLIOTT⁵ WILLIAMS-ERSKINE, BT., whose wife, GRACE⁵ HARGREAVES, was the daughter of Captain Thomas⁴ Hargreaves (22) and Sarah⁴ Jackson. Turning back in a similar manner in the personal serial numbers to No. 22, you find the account of CAPTAIN THOMAS⁴ HARGREAVES, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*John*³ (6), *Thomas*², *John*¹). In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers to No. 6, where you find the account of JOHN³ HARGREAVES, whose wife, GRACE³ BROWN, was the daughter of Sir William² Brown, Bt. (2) and Sarah² Gihon.

Finally, turn back successively to 2. SIR WILLIAM² BROWN, BT., and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.

To find the line of ancestry of a descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN on the maternal side through the paternal line, for example, EDMUND STAIRS⁶ TWINING, JR., proceed as follows: According to the index Edmund Stairs⁶ Twining, Jr., is to be found under personal serial No. 108, where he appears as the only child of EDMUND STAIRS⁵ TWINING and URSULA WOLCOTT⁵ BROWN, the latter the daughter of George Hunter⁴ Brown (45) and Cornelia Emily⁴ Moss. Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 45 you find the account of GEORGE HUNTER⁴ BROWN, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*George*³ (19), *James*², *Alexander*¹). Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 19 you find the account of GEORGE³ BROWN, whose paternal ancestry is given in italics in a similar manner, his father being (*James*² (5), etc.). In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers successively to 5. JAMES² BROWN; and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.

To find the line of ancestry of a descendant of ALEXANDER¹ BROWN on the paternal side through the maternal line, for example, MARY RUTH⁷ ERSKINE, proceed as follows: According to the index Mary Ruth⁷ Erskine is to be found under personal serial No. 109, where she appears as the second child of Lt.-Col. SIR THOMAS WILFRID HARGREAVES JOHN⁶ ERSKINE, BT., after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, his father being (*Ffolliott*⁵ (54), etc.). Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 54 you find the account of Lt.-Col. SIR FFOLLIOTT WILLIAMS⁵ ERSKINE, BT., whose wife, GRACE⁵ HARGREAVES, appears as the daughter of Captain Thomas⁴ Hargreaves (22) and Sarah⁴ Jackson. Turning back in the personal serial numbers to No. 22 you find the account of CAPTAIN THOMAS⁴ HARGREAVES, after whose name is given in italics his paternal ancestry, viz. (*John*³ (6), *Thomas*², *John*¹). In like manner turn back in the personal serial numbers to 6. JOHN³ HARGREAVES, where you will find that his wife, GRACE³ BROWN, was the daughter of Sir William² Brown, Bt., and Sarah² Gihon. Turn back successively to 2. SIR WILLIAM² BROWN, BT.; and 1. ALEXANDER¹ BROWN.
