PREFATORY NOTE

WITH the present Volume the work of preparing a new edition of Fasti Ecclesiae Scoticanæ comes to a completion. The genesis of the undertaking may be recalled. An Overture was presented to the General Assembly in the following terms:—

“Whereas the publication known as Dr Hew Scott’s Fasti Ecclesiae Scoticanæ contains valuable information relative to the ministers of the Church from an early period; whereas it is desirable to continue a record of the succession of ministers in the various parishes since the date of that publication; and whereas this can be most conveniently carried out by a Committee representing the Church: It is humbly Overtured by the undersigned Members of the House to the Venerable the General Assembly to appoint a Committee to collect material for the continuance of the record up to the present date; or to do otherwise as the Assembly may see fit.”

Of eight signatories it may be stated that three only survive, while of ten members who constituted the Editorial Committee of 1914, four only remain.

During the earlier stages of conference as to the precise arrangement of the work, a decision was arrived at which entirely altered its original design of merely continuing Dr Hew Scott’s Fasti from 1839 to the present time. That decision involved a complete revision of all Dr Scott’s Volumes, and to this extended scheme the General Assembly gave cordial approval. The seven Volumes now issued, therefore, have been compiled and re-written following a careful perusal, not only of the documents (chiefly Presbytery Registers) available to Dr Scott, but also of numerous others to which he had no access, and which, indeed, were unknown to him, many of them having been discovered within recent years. In addition, the Editors have had the advantage of reading a very large number of Local, Family and General Histories published since Dr Scott’s day. Full use has been made of the important Separate Registers belonging to the different Presbyteries: thus most of what is purely domestic information—in the shape of family details, etc.—has been derived from official sources. Further, much genealogical data has come from the parochial and other documents preserved in H.M. General Register House, Edinburgh, to which the officials thereof gave courteous and ready access. An extensive correspondence with surviving relatives and friends of ministers has also ensured completeness and correctness as far as possible, for the records here brought together.

These Volumes, possible only through much arduous research, have been undertaken by the Editors as a labour of love, and the work has been published without expense to the Church. The Editors think it right to say that the publishers, Messrs Oliver & Boyd, have borne the brunt of the printing costs which have been considerable, aided by small bonuses provided by friends of the Church.

Having now reached the end of their long and difficult task, the Editors rejoice to be able to place before the Church and the public a compilation of much more than ecclesiastical importance, and of which critics have declared that it is a work necessary for a true elucidation of the national spirit and of the national history.

The present Volume (in which Dr Scott's original work ends at page 320) contains material assembled from many quarters and from many lands. Never before has the story of the Church of Scotland in England, Ireland, on the Continent of Europe, in the British Colonies, and in America, been told in biographical detail, and the notices of Indian Chaplains, Foreign and Jewish Missionaries are here given for the first time. The biographies of the Episcopal period, as also those pertaining to the Scottish Universities, and the carefully-collated list of Moderators, have been added in order to make this Fasti of the Church a full record of all who have served her in the ministry from the Reformation to the present year. The Volume now issued has been brought up to date.

Many helpers have assisted in the preparation of this Volume. Of these the Committee record their thanks to the following:—

The various Clerks of Presbyteries; Rev. Angus Macdonald, minister of Killearnan; Rev. Donald Beaton, minister of Free Presbyterian Church, Wick; Rev. Donald Mackinnon, minister of Free Church, Portree; Rev. Professor J. H. Baxter and the late James Maitland Anderson, LL.D., St Andrews; The late Very Rev. James Nicoll Ogilvie, D.D.; Rev. John M. SYNOD OF ROSS

THE Register of the Synod of Ross begins at 18th March 1707. As the Presbytery of Ross there is a volume commencing 25th July 1693, and ending 12th December 1701.

PRESBYTERY OF CHANONRY, OF OLD ARDMANNACH

[This Court was already at work in 1592. Its Register begins at 14th January 1707, with a blank from 6th February 1753 to 14th September 1762.]

AVOCH.

[The church of Avoch belonged to the Abbey of Kinloss. Its prebend was held by the cantor of the Cathedral of Fortrose. At Ormond Castle, in this parish, there was a chapel of St Mary, and near it was Our Lady's Well. At Killeain there was a chapel of St John.]

ALEXANDER PEDDER, vicar at the 1560 Reformation; died in 1569.

ANDREW MYLNE, exhorter; pres. to 1569 the vicarage by James VI. in 1569, to which Kilmuir-Wester and Ardersier were attached after Nov. 1574; app. one of the Visitors of Ross by the Assembly in 1586, and still min. in 1601.—[Booke of the Kirk; Orig. Par. Scot., ii., 541; Reg. Mag. Sig., v., 738.]

ALEXANDER HOME, cantor of Ross, 1586 gave a tack of the cantor's teinds to Andrew Munro of Davochcartie in 1586.—[Original at Killearnan.]

JAMES LAUDER, educated at Univ.
1607 of Edinburgh; M.A. (12th Aug. 1592); adm. to Kilmuir-Wester in 1596; trans. to Ardersier 1597; trans. and adm. before 13th July 1607; dem. in favour of his son in 1642, but still mentioned 4th Dec. 1655. He marr. and had issue—William, min. of this parish; James.—[Original Charter by Bishop of Ross at Killearnan; Reg. Mag. Sig., viii. 189, ix. 1293.]

WILLIAM LAUDER, born about 1614, 1642 eldest son of preceding; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (1632); pres. by Charles I. 11th July 1642; was a member of the Commission of Assembly in 1645. He was suspended by the Commission of Assembly for subscribing Seaforth's Remonstrance, 22nd May 1647, and was one of the signatories to the Letter of the Presb. of Chanonry to the Commission approving of their proceedings, 8th May 1651; still min. 4th April 1665 and died before 1672. He marr. Katherine, eldest daugh. of Murdoch Mackenzie, chamberlain of Lewis, of the family of Davochmaluag, and had issue—William, commissary clerk of Ross. Publication—Elogia XXXVII., XXXVIII. (Forbes's Funeral Sermons).—[Geneal. of the Mackenzies.]

RODERICK MACKENZIE, educated 1668 at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A.
 (8th July 1649); passed trials before Presb. of Glasgow and had a testimonial for licence 1st Feb. 1655; pres. by Charles II. 15th May 1668; still min. 25th Feb.
 1669.

RODERICK MACKENZIE of Avoch, 1688 son of John M., archdeacon of Ross and min. of Fodderty; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (1681);
 adm. as deacon; recommended for ordination 7th March 1683; was a protester in 1694 against the Commission for the North; died 7th March 1710. A strong Episcopalian, he defied the Presb. and held the benefice till his death. He marr. Elizabeth, daugh.
 of the Hon. Simon Mackenzie of Lochslin, son of Kenneth, Lord Mackenzie of Kintail, and had issue—John of Avoch; Christina (marr. 1707, Sir Kenneth Mackenzie of Scatwell); Isobel (marr. 1705, Alexander Matheson of Bennetsfield); Margaret (marr.

 Lewis Grant, min.). — [Reg. of Deeds,
 Mack., 15th July 1712.]

ALEXANDER M'BEAN, M.A.; as a 1712 probationer within the bounds he was called by the Presb. jure devoluto 28th Aug. 1711, but owing to the opposition of the parishioners, who were largely Episcopalian, access could not be got to the church and he was ord. at Rosemarkie 4th June 1712. He was obliged to raise an action in the Court of Session to obtain access to the church. In Aug. 1713 he complained he had been unable to carry on his ministry, the church being still barred against him and the people antagonistic.
 After much wrangling between heritors, Presb. and Synod, he was given liberty to seek another charge, and was settled at Douglas, Lanarkshire, 28th May 1714.

ALEXANDER RAE, chaplain to Mrs 1716 Ross of Balnagowan; licen. by Presb. of Tain 13th Jan. 1714; called by the Presb. jure devoluto 22nd Sept., and pres.
 by Alexander Brodie of Lethen 30th Dec.
 1715; ord. 28th March 1716; died 15th

Aug. 1735. It was greatly owing to his exertions that a process was raised for recovery of an endowment by Thomas Forbes, bailie of Fortrose, in the hands of Elizabeth, Countess of Seaforth, for support of a minister in that burgh. He marr.
 Jean Stewart, who survived him.—[Religious Life in Ross, 247, 253.]

ALEXANDER FRASER, M.A.; pres.
 1738 by Alexander Brodie of Lethen 15th
 Dec. 1735; ord. 24th Aug. 1736;
 trans. to Third Charge, Inverness, 13th Nov. 1754.

 1756 by Presb. of Elgin 1st Nov. 1748;

 Aberdeen; M.A. (30th March 1782); pres. by Miss Brodie of Lethen in July, and ord. 24th Sept. 1787; died 9th Dec.
 1830. There was strong opposition to his settlement, the majority of the congregation seceding from the church and joining the Independent (now Congregational) Church to which a large proportion of the parishioners still adhere. S. was much respected as a consistent and faithful pastor. He left £30 to the poor of the parish. rious tonnes, more like a scolding tripe-seller's wife than good minister, squirting the poyson of detraction and abominable falshood (unfit for the chaire of verity) in the eares of his tenandry, who were the only auditors." He intruded at Tranent in 1691 but was ordered by Parliament, 9th July 1695, to remove by August. He appears as chamberlain of the bishopric before 1700 and held that post for several years. Hugh Miller observes that he "was a quiet, timid sort of man with little force of character, but what served his turn equally well, a good deal of cunning," a character not borne out by established facts. FORTROSE, OF OLD CHANONRY (Q.S.).

[The parish church of Fortrose was dedicated to St Curadan, who ministered on this side of the Black Isle. He died in 716. The See of Ross was founded by King David I. in 1128. In or about 1309 the Cathedral of St Peter was built at Fortrose. By order of King James VI. the lead was stripped off the roofs of its choir and aisles in 1572. The stately fabric was in use as the parish church of Fortrose until near the middle of the seventeenth century. Oliver Cromwell razed the most part of the building, and took its stones to Inverness, where he was erecting a fort. What remained was burned by accident in 1662. On 2nd Feb. 1670, this parish was united to Rosemarkie. A church was opened 11th April 1841. The parish was disjoined again quoad sacra 17th March 1873. There were of old, in the Cathedral, chapels of St Nicholas and St Katherine. Near it was a Well of St Curadan. Fortrose held a Whitsunday fair, and also fairs of St Peter and St Curadan.]

KILLEARNAN.

[The church of this parish was dedicated to St Iurnan. Killearnan was a prebend of the Cathedral of Fortrose, held by the Archdeacon of Ross. There was a chapel dedicated to St Andrew within a mile of the parish church, at a place now known as Chapeltown, commonly called St Palmer's Chapel. Here was held yearly on 7th July St Andrew's Fair. Close by was St Andrew's Well, famous for its curative properties.

DONALD FRASER, son of John F., of 1560 the family of Fruid, Tweedsmuir, and nephew of John F., Bishop of Ross, was Archdeacon of the diocese before the Reformation, when he conformed to Protestantism. Famous for his courage and valour, he held the Bishop's Castle of Chanonry for some time against the lairds of Kintail, Balnagowan, Fowlis and Cromarty, and was slain in an engagement between the Gordons and the Forbeses at Tulliangus in 1572. A complaint was made against him in the Assembly in Aug. 1575 that he was not diligent in visitation, and that he had more offices than he could discharge. He was app. commissioner for Caithness and adm. by the Assembly in 1586. At the Assembly of 1587 complaint of his non-residence in the parish was made, but he answered that he had no knowledge of the Gaelic language and had neither manse nor glebe. The kirk, he said, was served at his expense. He afterwards resided, and died in 1602. He was proprietor of the estate of Drynie in Kilmuir-Wester and was the founder of the family of Graham of Drynie, who held that estate till 1874. He marr. There is a constant tradition that the church was set on fire and the congregation burned alive, but there is no reference to this in the complaint made by the minister in his action against Allan of Lundie.  settlement, accompanied by Muirtown, one of his heritors, he went by boat to the church, and when at a small distance from the boat they were surrounded by a great many men and women (about two hundred) who lay in ambush. Some of them had their faces blackened and a few were in women's clothes, some armed with swords (dirks) and heavy batons; all the women had batons. G. had his hat knocked off and torn in pieces, his head badly cut, and was dragged by his cravat till almost choked . . . the mob still pursuing . . .
 carried him to the top of a hill, and resolved to have killed him, had not some more tender-hearted opposed this and rescued him. John Mackenzie, who preached in the Episcopal-meeting house for that and neighbouring parishes, stood on a rising ground, feeding his eyes with their barbarous usage, and thereafter preached to the mob, most of them having pieces of G.'s clothes tied or pinned to the most open parts of their bodies, as trophies of victory."

 Complaint was made to the Lord Advocate,

The Sutherland Clearances of 1819 occurred during his ministry at Achness, where he and his entire congregation were driven from their homes. Summonses of ejection were issued and dispatched all over the district to a population of 1600. His farewell services at Achness and Achna-h'uiaghe "were felt," he wrote in his Memorabilia, "by myself and by the people from the oldest to the youngest, to be among the bitterest and most overwhelming experiences of our lives. . . . I selected a text which had a pointed reference to the peculiarity of our circumstances, but my difficulty was how to restrain my feelings till I should illustrate and enforce the great truths which it involved with reference to eternity. The service began, the very aspect of the congregation was of itself a sermon, and a most impressive one. I preached and the people listened, but every sentence uttered and heard was in opposition to the tide of our natural feelings, which, setting in against us, mounted at every step of our progress higher and higher. At last all restraints were compelled to give way. The preacher ceased to speak, the people to listen. All lifted up their voices and wept, mingling their tears together. It was indeed the place of parting, and the hour. The greater number parted never again to behold each other in the land of the living." He marr. CONTIN AND STRATHGARVE.

[These parishes were united in the sixteenth century.

Contin.—The church of Contin was founded by St Malrubh. Contin was a prebend of the Cathedral of Fortrose. Contin church stands, with its manse and glebe, on an island in the river Abhuinn Dubh ("Black Water"), called of old the Rasa. The site is very ancient, and was probably chosen for a burial place secure from wild beasts. The access cannot have been easy in early times. From the Strath Conan side it must always have been very difficult. St Malrubh's Well was beside the church. A famous tryst, called Feill Mhalruibh (St Malrubh's Fair), was long held at Contin. Near Coul, within sight of the church, is the ancient graveyard of Preas Maree (St Malrubh's Grove), now the burial ground of the Mackenzies of Coul.

Strathgarve.—The church of Strathgarve was dedicated to St Finn.]

conduct and defiance of that authority;
dep. 12th June 1716, "for sundry atrocious practices, and for joining in a wicked and ungodly rebellion for the subversion of the Protestant religion and introducing Popery by endeavouring to set a popish pretender position he continued to discharge his duties in the parish and is last mentioned 22nd Aug. 1739, as officiating within a mile of his former charge; died at Castle

Leod, in Strathpeffer, shortly thereafter.
Known as "Black Angus," he was noted for his character as a clergyman. He marr.

The Commission of Assembly in 1649 ordered that before he be absolved he must acknowledge not only in word but also in writing his "manifold prevarications," and particularly the equity of the sentence of the Assembly and their Commission at Auldearn. He refused to subscribe a declaration in these terms drawn up by the Presb., whereupon they resolved to excommunicate him. After prolonged negotiations he submitted,

KILTEARN AND LEMLAIR.

[These parishes were united about 1618.

Kiltearn.—The church was dedicated to Our Lord, whence comes its name, Cill Thighearn, or the Lord's Church. There were within the bounds four chapels. Two of these were at Balconie, St Monans, and St Ninians. One stood at Culnasgiach, and the other at Wester-Fowlis. There was also in this parish a Well of St Colmog.

Lemlair.—Lemlair was a prebend of the Cathedral of Fortrose. Its church was dedicated to St Mary, but there had been an older dedication to St Bride. At Kilchoan, in this parish, there was a chapel of St Coan.]

DONALD MUNRO, son of Alexander 1560 M. of Kiltearn, first appears as vicar of Snizort and Raasay in 1526; was Archdeacon of the Isles in 1549, when he made a systematic tour through the western islands, of which he left an interesting account along with a compilation on the "Genealogies of the Chief Clans of the Isles." George Buchanan, who made use of the first of these manuscripts for the geographical part of his History of Scotland, acknowledges indebtedness to its author as "a pious, diligent, and learned man, who travelled over all these islands and viewed them correctly." Conforming to Protestantism at the Reformation he was adm. to this charge soon after 1560. On 26th June 1563, he was app. by the General Assembly a commissioner to plant kirks within the bounds of Ross, and to assist Robert, Bishop of Caithness. On 27th Dec. following, complaint was made in the Assembly that he "was not so apt to teach as his charge required." A committee of Assembly was app. to "try his gifts" and to report. On 5th July 1570, it was again objected that he was "not prompt in the Scottish (Gaelic) tongue." Notwithstanding this, his appointment was renewed in Aug. 1573. About 1574 Lemlair was added to his charge. Tradition says that having his residence at Castle Craig on the opposite side of the Firth, he crossed by boat for his duties at both churches. He died unmarr. in or about 1589, and was buried at Kiltearn. THOMAS HOG, born Tain, 1628, "of 1654 honest parents, native highlanders somewhat above the vulgar rank"; educated at Grammar School, Tain, and Marischal College, Aberdeen; M.A. (1650); became chaplain at Dunrobin to John, Earl of Sutherland; licen. in 1654; had calls from Golspie and other parishes; ord. 24th Oct. that year. He joined the Protesters; dep. by the Synod July 1661; deprived by Act of Parliament and Decreet of Privy Council 1st Oct. 1662. He retired to the farmhouse of Knockoudie in Auldearn, where he continued to preach and dispense the sacraments, and memorable communions were observed in a sheltered hollow of the Hills of the Arstill, known as "Hog's Strype." In 1668 a complaint was made to the Privy Council by Murdoch, Bishop of Moray, whereupon H. was imprisoned in Forres, but after some months was liberated unconditionally through the intervention of the Earl of Tweeddale. Orders were again given for his imprisonment in June 1674, and Letters of Intercommuning were issued against him on 6th Aug. 1675, forbidding all persons to harbour or assist him in any way. In Jan. 1677 he voluntarily surrendered to the Earl of Moray, was removed to Edinburgh Tolbooth and sent to the Bass Rock, where he became seriously ill. An Edinburgh physician who was called to see him, petitioned the Council for his release, to which some of the members were disposed, but Archbishop Sharp stated "the prisoner did and was in a capacity to do more hurt to their interests sitting in his elbow chair than twenty others could, and if the justice of God was pursuing him to take him off the stage, the clemency of the Government should not interpose to hinder it." He was accordingly confined more closely than before. On hearing his sentence he exclaimed in bed, "It was as severe as if Satan himself had penned it." On 9th Oct. that year he was brought back to the Tolbooth, but was again returned to the Bass until set at liberty with others in July 1679, giving bond for 10,000 merks to appear before the Council when called. He remained unmolested till 8th Nov. 1683 when he was fined £277 and committed prisoner at Edinburgh till the fine was paid. Having decided to quit the country he petitioned to that effect and was enjoined to depart within forty-eight hours. He lived for a year in Berwick-upon-Tweed and in 1685 found his way to London, intending to sail to Carolina, but he was apprehended on suspicion of being concerned in the Rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth. On being freed he fled to Holland, where he became chaplain to William, Prince of Orange. He returned to Scotland early in 1688, and being restored by Act of Parliament, 25th April 1690, was a member of Assembly that year. He was appointed one of the King's chaplains and was preparing to remove to London, but died after a long and painful sickness, 4th Jan. 1692. He was buried by his own request in the doorway of the parish church, where may be seen the following inscription on his tomb—"This stone shall bear witness against the parishioners of Kiltearn if they bring ane ungodly minister in here." A commemorative slab was placed in the parish church and the Hog Memorial Church was erected in the village of Evanton. He marr. after 12th April 1656, the sister of John Hay of Inshock and Park, cadet of Errol (she died s.p.). Publication—Memoirs of His Life (Andrew Stevenson, Edinburgh, 1756).—[*Edin. Chr. FEARN,

OR SGÌR NA MANACHAINN

("The Parish of the Monastery")

[The parish of Fearn was disjoined from that of Tarbat in or about 1628, but the erection of the new parish was not carried through until 1640. Within the bounds assigned to it stood the disused Premonstratensian Abbey of St Ninian at Fearn, and the Abbey Church was restored for the use of the parish. The monastery of Fearn had been first founded in 1227 by Farquhar, first Earl of Ross, at Fearn in Edderton. Patrick Hamilton, Abbot of Fearn, who was burned as a heretic at St Andrews on 28th Feb. 1527, was Superior of this monastery. He was not, however, a monk, but held the Abbey in commendam.

On 10th October 1742, during service,
the church was struck by lightning,
the roof of the ancient Abbey gave way and fell in upon the worshippers. Forty-two were killed and many were badly injured. James Robertson, min. of Loch-broom, the preacher that day, placed his shoulder under the lintel of one of the doors which was giving way, and so helped to prevent its fall till the greater number of the people escaped. He was known thereafter as An ministear ladair—"the strong minister." The fine fabric was much damaged. It has been but partially restored. There is a Well of Our Lady at Fearn.]

TAIN AND MORINNIS.

[These two parishes were united before the end of the sixteenth century.

Tain.—The church of Tain, which has been well restored, and is kept with worthy care, was dedicated to St Duthac. In it the Saint's relics were kept, and thither many pilgrims came to see them. Hence comes the Gaelic name of the place, Baile Dhudich (Duthac's town). A collegiate foundation was given to this parish, on 12th September 1487, by Thomas, Bishop of Ross. In the Cathedral Chapter at Fortrose there was a prebend of Tain, held by the sub-chantor of the Cathedral. Tain was a highly privileged sanctuary, and to it many refugees fled. Thus, when an English army laid siege to Kildrummy Castle, Queen Isobel, the wife of Robert I., eluded the English forces, and came, with her young daughter Marjorie, to Tain. The sacred place, however, failed to save them. They were taken from the sanctuary by William, Earl of Ross, and were sent prisoners to England. Many visitors also were drawn to Tain by the fame of St Duthac's relics. To see them, James IV. made repeated pilgrimages. His last visit was in 1513, when he was about to set forth on his fatal invasion of England. In 1527 James V, too came as a pilgrim to Tain. At Tarlogie, in this parish, there was a chapel of St Talorgan. Fairs were held at Tain at Midsummer, Lammas, and Michaelmas, as well as on the feasts of St Duthac, St Berchan, and St Cormac. Near the church was a Well of Our Lady.

Morinnis.—In the Chapter of Fortrose Cathedral there was a prebend of Morinnis.]

NICOLAS ROSS, provost of the collegiate church, who voted in Parliament for 1580 the abolition of Popery and the adoption of the Protestant confession, was probably the first Protestant min. of the parish; died 11th Sept. 1569. He purchased the estate of Geanies from Balnagowan for his three sons, for whom he obtained letters of legitimation.—[Taylor's Tain, 80.]

Univ. of St Andrews; M.A. (1590); adm. early in 1599; was a member of Assembly in March that year. As sub-dean of Ross he was one of nineteen ministers who constituted a General Assembly at Aberdeen in 1605, contrary to the King's wish, and was on a leet of three for the Moderatorship. When summoned before the Privy Council he (with six others) maintained that the said Assembly was a "very lawful" one. He was accordingly sentenced to banishment and was imprisoned within Doune Castle, Perthshire, his ultimate destination being a remote part of Kintyre. From Doune he escaped with the connivance of the constable of the Castle, and finding his way back to his parish resumed his ministry, his stipend, paid through the Crown authorities, being withheld. A Privy Council letter, 24th May 1610, ordered the magistrates to "keep him prisoner in some chalmers of your town quhill he purge himself of his rebellion." What followed does not appear, no burgh records of the period being extant. He died shortly after 1st June 1630. He marr. SYNOD OF SUTHERLAND AND CAITHNESS

THIS Court was not fully organised till towards the middle of the seventeenth century. On 15th June 1646 the General Assembly annexed the Presbytery of Orkney and Shetland to this Synod. In 1725 the parishes of Orkney were incorporated as a separate Synod. Those of Shetland had been severed from Sutherland and Caithness in 1715. After that date they were several times transferred from one jurisdiction to another. It was only in 1830 that the Synod of Shetland was erected. The Register of the Synod of Sutherland and Caithness begins at 6th August 1656. This Court now holds its meetings at Wick.

PRESBYTERY OF DORNOCH

[As early as 1581 the General Assembly had in view the erection of a local Church Court at Dornoch. We do not, however, come upon any mention of the actual existence of this Presbytery until 21st November 1638. From 1690 to 1726 the Presbytery of Dornoch was under the jurisdiction of the Synod of Ross. On 11th May 1726 this Presbytery was again assigned to the Synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The Presbytery Register begins in 1707. There is a blank between 16th April 1719 and 28th Aug. 1732.]

ASSYNT (LOCHINVER).

[In the Cathedral of Dornoch there was a prebend of Assynt. When the Presb. of Tongue was founded, 11th May 1726, this parish was taken from the Presb. of Dornoch and annexed to the new Court at Tongue. On 19th May 1736 the parish of Assynt was disjoined from the Presb. of Tongue and placed again under the jurisdiction of the Presb. of Dornoch. DORNOCH.

[The ancient parish church of Dornoch was dedicated to St Finn Barr. In Dornoch stood also St Gilbert's, the Cathedral church of Caithness. In the later years of the sixteenth century St Gilbert's was made the church of the parish. It took its name from St Gilbert, Bishop of Caithness, its founder. He was buried in the Cathedral in 1245. There was within it a chapel of St James. St Gilbert's Cathedral was burned down in 1570. In 1605 it was greatly ruined by a very violent storm. In 1835 the restoration of the venerable building was begun by Elizabeth, Duchess of Sutherland, and the work went on for a number of years. In 1924 on the occasion of the Septcentenary of the founding of Dornoch Cathedral, a mural tablet was erected in memory of St Gilbert. A convent of the Red Friars was founded at Dornoch in 1271. Fairs of St Finn Barr and St Gilbert were held in the town.]

GOLSPIE, OF OLD KILMALIE.

[The ancient church of this parish, which stood at Kilmalie, was dedicated to St Maliew. It belonged to the Bishop of Caithness. That church having fallen out of repair, the parish church was removed from Kilmalie to the chapel of St Andrew at Golspie, in another part of the parish, and St Andrew's was fitted up of new for that purpose. At Golspie a fair of St Andrew was held. At Dunrobin, within the bounds, there was a Well of St John.]

KILDONAN (HELMSDALE).

[The church of Kildonan was dedicated to St Donan. In the Cathedral of Dornoch there was a prebend of Kildonan. When the Presb. of Tongue was erected, on 11th May 1726, the parish of Kildonan was taken from the jurisdiction of Dornoch, and assigned to that of Tongue. On 18th May 1727, the General Assembly again annexed Kildonan to the Presb. of Dornoch. There were two chapels within the bounds, St Peter's at Kilpheadair, and St Mary's at Kilmuir. A fair of St Donan was held at Kildonan. There was in the parish a Well of St John the Baptist. There are two mission chapels in this parish, that of St Donan at the Kirkton of Kildonan in Strathuillie, and the other at Kinbrace. At the time of the Sutherland Clearances many Kildonan people emigrated to the Selkirk colony at Manitoba, where they named their settlement Kildonan, and erected a church, a replica of that in which they had worshipped at home. [See "Kildonan in Manitoba," by W. S. Crockett, Life and Work, Dec. 1909.]]

Kildonan, however, was given back to the Presbytery of Dornoch on 18th May 1727, and, on 19th May 1736, Assynt also was put again under the jurisdiction of the latter Court. PRESBYTERY OF CAITHNESS

[A local Church Court for the district of Caithness was erected at some time between 1581 and 1593. On 12th Jan. 1697, for the reorganising of the government of the Church in the North, the General Assembly remitted to its Commission to set up a Presbytery of Caithness so soon as a competent body of ministers should be settled in the parishes there. As a temporary arrangement, the Court thus formed was attached to the Synod of Orkney. On 15th May 1725 this Presbytery of Caithness was severed from Orkney, and placed under the jurisdiction of the Synod of Ross. This change, however, lasted for a year only. On 11th May 1726 Caithness was taken from the Synod of Ross, and was annexed, as of old, to that of Sutherland. The Register of the Presbytery of Caithness begins at 6th April 1709. There is a gap in its Record from 17th Aug. 1773 to 8th Jan. 1799. Written evidence shows that there was an earlier volume of Minutes reaching from 5th Oct. 1654 to 7th Oct. 1668, but of its existence nothing more is known.]

[The old church of Reay, dedicated to St Colman, stood at the village of Reay near the sea-shore. The prebend of Reay, in the Cathedral of Dornoch, belonged to the Bishop of Caithness. There were at least four chapels in this parish, St Mary's and St Peter's, both at Lybster in Reay, St Magnus' at Shebster, and chapels at Skaill and Baillie. A fair of St Colman was held at Reay in December.]

ALEXANDER POPE, born about 1706, 1734 son of Hector P., min. of Loth; educated at King's College, Aberdeen, a contribution being recommended for him by the Synod in 1720 to enable him to prosecute his studies for the Church;
M.A. (15th April 1725); became schoolmaster of this parish shortly afterwards, as appears from an instruction given by the Presb. of Caithness to their commissioner to the General Assembly of 1721, who bore with him a recommendation for "the encouragement of Alexander Pope, schoolmaster of Reay, a hopeful young man having the Irish language"; elected session-clerk and precentor at Dornoch 28th July 1730. In the summer of 1732 he rode his pony from Dornoch to Twickenham to visit his namesake, Alexander Pope, the poet, who presented him with a copy of the subscription edition of his Odyssey in five quarto volumes, along with the Abbot de Vertol's History of the Roman Republic, and an ornamental snuff-box, all which mementoes have been preserved. He was licen. by Presb. of Dornoch 19th Feb., called unanimously 2nd April, and ord. 5th Sept. 1734; pres. to Halkirk 26th Sept. 1743, but withdrew his acceptance Jan. 1744; died 2nd March 1782, having been sometime afflicted with paralysis, which compelled him to be carried to the pulpit in a sort of litter. At his admission here the parish was in a state of semi-barbarism. Donald Sage says, "they were not only ignorant, but flagrantly vicious—Episcopalians in name but heathens in reality. P. soon discovered that they required a very rough mode of treatment, and being from his strength furnished with a sufficient capacity to administer any needful chastisement, he failed not vigorously to exercise it. He usually carried about with him a short thick cudgel, which, from the use he was compelled to make of it, as well as from a sort of delegated constabulary authority he had from Sinclair of Ulbster, the sheriff of the county, was known as 'the bailie.'" Sage relates several incidents in which "the bailie" figured prominently. In course of time the habits of the people changed for the better, the parish gradually conforming to the arts of civilised life. A man of considerable literary talent and much intellectual vigour, P. was a popular preacher and a learned archæologist. He marr. (1) 3rd July 1735, Margaret (died 22nd Dec. 1744), daugh. of Andrew Sutherland of Pitgrudy, and had issue—William, born 5th April 1736; Alexander, born 7th Nov. 1737; Harry, born 9th Jan. 1739: (2) 2nd Dec. 1745, Janet Ross, who died 13th Feb. 1793, and had issue—Abigail, born 7th June 1747 (marr. James Campbell); Thomas, born 20th Nov. 1749; John, born 14th Dec. 1750, died 9th Jan. 1752; James (twin), his assistant and successor; Charles, born 14th Aug. 1752. Publications—Ancient History of Orkney, Caithness, and the North, by Thormodus Torfæus, translated with copious notes (Wick, 1866). [This translation of Torfæus's Orcades seu rerum Orcadensium Historiæ [Havniæ, 1697 and 1715] was prepared by Pope for the press in 1780, but owing to his death its publication was delayed. After a lapse of sixty years the MS. was printed in instalments in the John O' Groat Journal. When it was nearly completed, the transcriber died. The remainder of the copy, along with a biographical sketch of the author, by Donald Sage, minister of Resolis, went amissing. Failure to find the lost portion resulted in the sheets already in type being then bound together and issued as above in 1866. In 1905 the original MS. was discovered in a London bookseller's catalogue, by John Mowat, compiler of A Bibliography of Caithness, and purchased for Wick Free Library, where it now is.] "The Description of the Dune of Dornadilla" (Archæologia, v., 216); Appendix V. (Pennant's Tour in Scotland) [deals with statistics and antiquities of Caithness, Strathnaver, and Sutherland]. He made the first Albano-Gaelic collection of Ossianic literature about 1739. Found in a drawer in the Advocates' Library in 1872, it was printed in Leabhar na Feinne, vol. i., edited by John Francis Campbell (London, 1872). See also Reliquiæ Celticæ, i., 393. THURSO.

[The church of Thurso was dedicated to St Peter. It belonged to the Bishop of Caithness. The ancient fabric was rebuilt in the earlier part of the seventeenth century and was then made the Cathedral of the restored See of Caithness. Its ruins still stand. Like other churches of its time, it is cruciform, and is a quaintly interesting example of the curiously mixed architecture then in vogue. There was in this parish a chapel of the Holy Rood, known as the Cross Kirk. Other chapels stood at Pennyland, Brims, and Murkle. There was another chapel, Kirk Ebb, which stood on the sea-shore, but all vestiges of it have been swept away by the sea. There was also a chapel between Stainland and Bleachfield. Thurso held fairs on Petermas, Georgemas, and Marymas.]

SYNOD OF GLENELG

THE Synod of Glenelg was disjoined from that of Argyll and erected by the General Assembly 19th May 1724. The Register begins 7th July 1725. The Synod now meets at Kyle of Lochalsh.

PRESBYTERY OF LOHCARRON

[This Presbytery was erected by the General Assembly on 19th May 1724 as the Presbytery of Gairloch. The name was changed to that of Lochcarron 5th June 1775. The Register begins 13th Aug. 1724, but there is a blank from 14th Aug. 1724 to January 1726. The Presbytery of Kinlochewe is mentioned 11th April 1671. Its bounds may have been nearly the same, but none of its records are known to be in existence. All the parishes now included in the present Presbytery, with the exception of Glenelg, which was in the Presbytery of Lorn, belonged in the seventeenth century to the Presbytery of Dingwall.]

APPLECROSS OR ABERCROSSAN, OF OLD COMARAICH.

[The church of Applecross was dedicated to St Malrubh. It was a commune kirk of the Cathedral of Ross. The great monastery of Applecross was founded in 673 by St Malrubh, who remained its first abbot until his death in 722. Applecross was long a great resort of pilgrims. On 30th Dec. 1726, the lands of Torridon and Kishorn were taken from the parish of Lochcarron and added to Applecross.]

his hearers." He died 15th Jan. 1760. He petitioned the Presb. 6th April 1774, for leave to go to America to fix a settlement there for himself and others who wished to emigrate. The Presb. agreed to his request, "commending his public spirit and enterprising turn." They further put on record that, "since inoculation from smallpox had been introduced the country had become far more populous than it was before, and yet no trade, manufacture, or branch of industry had opened to employ the supernumerary hands. They stated that the land rents all over the Highlands had been raised so high that to all appearance farming would become a distressful occupation and poverty was likely to be considerably on the increase." GAIRLOCH.

[The old church of Gairloch stood at Kinlochewe. It was dedicated to St Malrubh, and was a commune kirk of the Cathedral of Ross. Within the bounds lies Loch Maree, named after the patron saint of the parish. At Innis Mhalruibh, an island in the Loch, are the remains of St Malrubh's chapel, whither pilgrims came in large numbers to see his relics.]

ALEXANDER MACKENZIE. On 1583 11th Jan. 1582 Letters of Presentation under the Privy Seal were addressed to John Robertson, commissioner of the diocese of Ross, in favour of A. M., first to make trial of his qualifications, and if found qualified, to admit him to the parsonage and vicarage. He was coll. 1st April 1583; is mentioned in a contract of amity between Kenneth Mackenzie of Kintail and the Baynes of Tulloch in 1599 when he was still in this charge.—[Charter Chest of Gairloch; Seaforth Papers.]

FARQUHAR MACRAE, was selected 1608 by the Bishop of Ross as "the properest man to be min. of Gairloch that he might thereby serve the colony of English which Sir George Hay of Airdry, afterwards Chancellor of Scotland, kept at Letterewe making iron and casting cannon." In 1610 he went on a mission with Kenneth, Lord Mackenzie of Kintail, to the island of Lewis, and was translated to Kintail in 1618.—[Dixon's Gairloch, 395.]

FARQUHAR MACKENZIE, educated 1608 at Univ. of Edinburgh; M.A. (31st July 1606); adm. in 1608; trans. to Kintail in 1618.

MURDO M'LENNAN, min. in 1636; 1636 app. a Justice of the Peace 2nd Feb. that year.—[P. C. Reg., 2nd ser., vii., 182.]

RODERICK MACKENZIE, third son 1649 of Roderick M. of Knockbackster and Giles Bayne; adm. before 8th Aug. 1649; died March 1710. On 6th Aug. 1678 he informed the Presb. that he had summoned for that day "Hector Mackenzie in Mellan in the parish, and John, Murdoch, and Duncan, sons, and Kenneth, grandson to the said Hector, for sacrificing a bull in ane heathenish manner in the island of St Ruffus, for the recovering of the health of Cristan Mackenzie, spouse to the said Hector." He marr. (cont. 18th Dec. 1643), Isobel, daugh. of Alexander Bayne of Knockbain, and had issue—Kenneth, served heir 21st July 1724; Rory; Murdoch of Kernsary. —[Hist. of the Mackenzies, 517; Case of Greenshields; Index of Services; Dixon's Gairloch, 65, 411, 416; Inverness Sas., iv. 462, v. 605; Reg. of Deeds, dxxxiv., 135.]

JOHN MORRISON, trans. from Bole- 1711 skine. A call in his favour by several heritors was given in to the Presb. Nov. 1710. His translation to Gairloch was agreed to by the Presb. of Inverness early in Feb. of the following year. The united Presb. of Dingwall and Chanonry, in whose bounds Gairloch was then situated, appointed Thomas Chisholm, Kilmorack, to serve the edict, but access to the church of Gairloch was denied him. He reported to the Presb. that after he had come near the church he was seized upon by a party of men and carried back six miles to Kinlochewe, where he was detained a prisoner. He, however, contrived to read the edict before six or seven persons in a house there, Kinlochewe being one of the preaching places of the parish. The admission of M. took place at Kiltearn 1st March 1711, largely no doubt from fear of facing the Gairloch rabble, but ostensibly on account of the great distance from the parish and the inclemency of the weather. At a meeting of the Presb. on 4th April, M. reported that he could find no access to his parish. He was then sent to supply vacancies in the bounds of Sutherland. A complaint was made to the General Assembly, and the Lord Advocate was recommended to raise criminal letters against Sir John Mackenzie of Coull and his tenants in Gairloch in order to prosecute them for the "maltreatment given by them to John Morrison and Thomas Chisholm in their bounds." Mackenzie's brother Colin now gave an undertaking that Sir John Mackenzie would "give all countenance in planting vacancies in the bounds wherein he is concerned," but when a deputation from the Presb. waited on him and chased him from house to house, he insolently threw down the document they handed to him and left them, saying he would have nothing to do with the Presb. of Dingwall. M. now reported that, "after two days' sojourn in going to preach, he was interrupted at Kinlochewe by the tenants of Sir John Mackenzie of Coull, who laid violent hands on him and his servant, rent his clothes, made prisoners of them, and kept them three days under guard in a cottage full of cattle and dung, without meat or bedding the first two days, the tenants relieving one another in turn by a fresh supply every day. When the fifth day came, he was carried to Sir John's house, who declared "no Presbyterian should be settled in any place where his influence extended, unless Her Majesty's forces did it by the strong hand." On 23rd Oct. 1711 he gave to the Presb. a representation of his grievances, requesting an act of transportation, and stated, 12th Nov., "that having no glebe, manse, or legal maintenance, he was obliged to take a tack of land, and that for three or four years successively his crops were destroyed by cattle; that, in the time of the Rebellion, the best of his cattle were taken away by the rebels, and very lately his house plundered of all provisions to the value of 400 merks." His request was granted, and he was trans. to Urray 14th Nov. 1716.—[Acts of Ass., 1711; Wodrow's Corresp., i., 216.]

JAMES SMITH, called by the Presb. 1721 jure devoluto 25th April and ord. (at Dingwall) 11th May 1721. On petitioning the Assembly a sum of £1000 was allowed him, and the heritors provided a manse, garden, and glebe. He was a man of energy, and effected much in the way of reforming the morals of the people and spreading religion among them. In 1725 he had a missionary catechist at work, and he established a presbyterial library; trans. to Creich, Sutherland, 29th April 1731.

ÆNEAS MACAULAY, born 1704; 1732 educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (31st March 1726); called in 1731; ord. 7th June 1732; died 1st Feb. 1758. He marr. 30th Jan. 1747, Lillias (died 25th Feb. 1789), daugh. of John Mackenzie of Gruinard, and had issue—Donald, born 6th Nov. 1747, died 27th Sept. 1748; Donald, born Feb. 1749; Alexander, born March 1752; Katherine, born April 1753.

JOHN DOWNIE, called by the Presb. 1758 jure devoluto 23rd Aug., and ord. 27th Sept. 1758; trans. to Stornoway 22nd July 1773. Pennant, in the course of his Tour in 1772, visited Gairloch and stayed a night with D., of whom he speaks in high terms.

DANIEL MACKINTOSH, born 1735, 1773 educated at King's College, Aberdeen, 1749-53; missionary in Strathglass; pres. by George III. in July, and adm. 28th Oct. 1773; died 8th Jan. 1802. He was greatly assisted in his parochial work by Sir Hector Mackenzie of Gairloch, Bart., and his wife. He marr. 3rd June 1775, Katherine (died 24th March 1802), daugh. of William Mackenzie of Gruinard, and had issue—Lillias, born 21st July 1777; Annabella, born 20th Oct. 1779 (marr. Murdoch Macrae, Shiel House); Christian, born 17th July 1781 (marr. George Mackenzie); Simona, born 12th April 1783; William, born 27th March 1785; Alexandrina, born 10th July 1786 (marr. 22nd Sept. 1807, John Elder, merchant, Glasgow). Publication—Account of the Parish (Sinclair's Stat. Acc., iii.).—[Dixon's Gairloch, 68, 417; Hist. of the Mackenzies, 618.]

JAMES RUSSELL, born 12th Feb. 1802 1761, son of James R., tacksman of Cotes of Innes and Cardon, and factor for the Earl of Fife; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (15th Jan. 1787); licen. by Presb. of Dingwall 21st Sept. 1796; pres. by George III. 12th May, and ord. 16th Sept. 1802. Objection was made to the appointment on account of his imperfect knowledge of Gaelic, which had not been his native tongue. Many ludicrous mistakes made by him both in the pulpit and out of it are still repeated among the people. In 1825, the Presb., having instructed him to deal with one of his parishioners charged with immorality, and finding that he was too remiss in dealing with the case, suspended him from the office of the ministry. On appeal to the General Assembly he was reinstated, and the Presb. were admonished to exercise its jurisdiction over the brethren "with prudence, forbearance, and brotherly kindness." He died 12th Jan. 1844. He was known as "Am Ministèir Làidir," or the "Strong Minister," on account of his many feats of physical strength, particularly the incident in connection with the collapse of the roof of Fearn church, mentioned under that parish. Many of his parishioners, dis-regarding his remonstrances, were involved in the Rising of 1745. After Culloden he waited on the Duke of Cumberland at Inverness, and was thanked for his services to the Earl of Loudoun in his difficult march to the Highlands. Cumberland made him a present of twelve stand of arms, to be put into such hands as he might think proper to entrust them with, and a regular correspondence followed between R. and the Duke. These letters, uniformly signed "Everard Faulkener," were carefully preserved, but disappeared after R.'s death. In 1746 he greatly exerted himself in the interest of the captive prisoners at London, travelling thither at his own expense, and interceding with the Government. On one occasion he pleaded with the Duke of Newcastle for the life of Hector Mackenzie who had been condemned to death. The Duke, either stimulated by a sincere desire to save the man's life, or to get rid of R.'s importunity, held out his hand as a token of assurance of mercy, whereupon, in his ecstasy of joy, the minister gave it so powerful a grip that, in evident pain, his Grace cried out, "Yes! yes! for God's sake let go my hand; you shall have him, you shall have him!"—a promise faithfully kept. On returning to his parish he was received with demonstrations of gratitude. ALEXANDER MACKENZIE, son of

ÆNEAS SAGE, born Chapelton, 1726 Killearnan, 12th March 1694, son of Murdoch S., farmer and messenger-at-arms in Chapelton [who was shot and mortally wounded by Donald Mackenzie of Kilcoy in the act of serving a summons on him for debt], and a daugh. of Angus Macdonald of Ardnafuaran; entered King's College, Aberdeen, 1715, and was present early next year at the ebullition of Jacobitism at that College gate. Accompanied by others he carried a picture of the Duke of Brunswick fixed behind the muzzle and rammer of his gun, which was then committed to the flames. For this he had to appear before the College authorities, was fined 50 merks and expelled. Became schoolmaster of Logie-Easter in 1719 and of Cromarty in 1722; licen. by Presb. of Tain 18th Aug. 1725; soon afterwards he was app. missionary in the parishes of Lochcarron, Applecross, and Gairloch; called by the Presb. jure devoluto 7th Jan., and ord. 10th Feb. 1726; died 17th July 1774. At the time of his settlement the parishioners were in a very barbarous state. An attempt was made on his life by firing the barn in which he slept on the evening before his ordination. He caught the incendiary, but instead of handing him over to punishment he set meat and drink before him, saying, "Go and tell your neighbours how the Whig ministers avenge their wrongs." He was frequently offered personal violence in the performance of his duties and found it necessary to carry arms in self-defence. Being a man of gigantic size and great strength, he held more than his own in his encounters with his unruly parishioners. Persevering in his duty, his resolution and firmness in the enforcement of Church Discipline, he struck the vicious with terror, while his prudence in composing differences, his benevolence and hospitality gradually conciliated and gained the goodwill of his people. Having accused a co-presbyter of heterodox opinions, he was enjoined by the General Assembly, 29th May 1759, "not to be over-ready to fish out heresies without very good and justifiable reasons." He marr. 29th Aug. 1728, Elizabeth (died 10th Feb. 1780, aged 74), daugh. of John Mackay, min. of Lairg, and had issue—Katherine, born 26th Oct. 1729 (marr. 1749 Charles Gordon of Pulrossie, Sutherland); Anne, born 29th Sept. 1731, died 15th March 1739; Mary, born 6th Feb. 1734 (marr. Donald Kennedy, farmer, Kishorn); Flora, born 22nd Aug. 1736, died 22nd March 1737; John, born 19th Aug. 1740, died 7th Feb. 1753; Margaret, born 20th Sept. 1742, died 22nd May 1744; Murdo, born 10th June 1744, died 8th Oct. 1745; William, born 15th Dec. 1746, died a student about 1760; George, born 27th Nov. 1748, died 27th Dec. 1752; Thomas, born 12th Feb. 1750, died 16th Dec. 1752;

DONALD MUNRO, son of Colin M., farmer, Contin; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (20th March 1770); pres. by George III. in 1774; ord. 10th May 1775; died 6th Aug. 1781. He is spoken of as "an agreeable person, who preached the gospel in its purity."—[Tombst.]

LACHLAN MACKENZIE, born 1754, son of Donald M., Urray; educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1772-6; became schoolmaster of Applecross and afterwards of this parish; licen. by Presb. of Lochcarron 4th Oct. 1780; pres. by George III. 23rd Sept. 1781; ord. 4th April 1782. He stated in 1811 that 231 of his parishioners could read English, only two were capable of reading Gaelic, while no fewer than 645, exclusive of children, could read neither language. He died unmarr. 20th April 1819. A man of sincere and deep piety, his manners were primitive, and his habits were often highly eccentric. He was one of the most widely followed preachers in the North. Dr John Kennedy of Dingwall said of him that "owing to his genius, his peculiar Christian experience, and his great acceptance as a preacher, he retained a firmer hold of the memories of the people than any other besides." JOHN MACKENZIE, born 1773, son of Colin M., Contin, a natural son of Rorie M. of Kilchulladrum; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (30th March 1797). He was nick-named "Potato John" from a thoughtless and foolish trick. When going to College with several others and halting for refreshment by the way, one of them offered up a long and tedious blessing which so tired the others that M. is said to have whispered to Duncan M'Gillivray [afterwards min. of Lairg] to put a hot potato into the hand of the student who was praying. This he did and the grace came to a speedy close. When M. applied for licence to the Presb. of Tain some of the members opposed his application and brought the case before the General Assemblies of 1802 and 1803. The Assembly found the proceedings "irregular and injurious to him," and instructed the Presb., 24th May 1803, to license him at next meeting, and to enjoin the attendance of the four dissentient ministers who were to remain till the proceedings were over. Francis [afterwards Lord] Jeffrey made his first appearance in the Assembly as Counsel for the Presb. in this case 20th May 1803. M. was licen. 22nd June that year; ord. missionary at Strathconon 15th Jan. 1806; pres. by George, Prince Regent, 10th May, and ord. 22nd Sept. 1819; died 6th Dec. 1861. of Gaelic, which was acquired, was so deficient that he often committed the most ludicrous mistakes in the pulpit and his hearers were frequently at a loss to know which language he was speaking. This is given expression to by a local rhymster, thus—

"Nuair theid thu do'n chùbaid,

KILMUIR-IN-TROTTERNISH, OF OLD KILMALUAIG.

[The old church of this parish was dedicated to St Luag. In or near 1600 the parish church was taken from Kilmaluag to Kilmuir, where it replaced an ancient chapel. Within the bounds are the remains of two small monastic houses. One of these was at Monkstad, called of old Mugstad. The other was St Columba's Monastery of Kilcholmkill. It was built on an island in Loch Cholmkill, a sheet of water now drained away. There were a number of chapels in this parish, including that of St Mary at Kilmuir, one of St Bride, and two dedicated to St Columba, one of them on the island of Troda, and the other standing on the more distant island of Fladda Chuain.]

He was probably the best known and most distinguished minister in the Highlands in his time. Thomas Pennant, who had a previous correspondence with him, visited him during his tour in Skye in 1772, and to the English traveller he gave much of the valuable information used by him in his Tour in Scotland (1772). In 1773 when Dr Johnson and Boswell made their tour of the island they were accompanied by M. Boswell writing from Armadale says, "Being informed that the Rev. Mr D. M. was the most intelligent man in Skye, and having been favoured with a letter of introduction to him by the learned Sir James Foulis, I sent it to him by express and requested him to meet us at Raasay." The minister informed Boswell that he had "Macgillechalum's carriage, made in Norway, ready to bring the party thither." He afterwards joined heartily in the chorus of a Gaelic song, raised by the rowers, composed on the Rising of the '15. Johnson had the highest opinion of his ability. "This is a critical man, Sir," he said, "there must be great vigour of mind to make him cultivate learning so much in the Isle of Skye where he might do without it." He held his own in the discussion with Johnson over the Ossianic controversy. M. supported the Evangelical party in the Church and is mentioned with honour by Dr John Erskine in his Sketches of Church History. He was employed by the General Assembly in translating the Pentateuch into Gaelic. In connection with this work he wrote learned and interesting papers on the customs of primitive nations. He was admitted a Corresponding Member of the Society of Antiquaries on 13th Feb. 1781, and contributed to the Transactions of that Society. There is a beautiful Gaelic elegy composed to his memory in which his attractive personality, his social qualities, his mental attainments and accomplishments are enlarged upon. He marr. (1) 25th July 1744, Betsy, daugh. of John Martin of Flodigaray, chamberlain of Trotternish, and widow of James Macdonald of Cuidrach, and had issue—Isabel; Jane (marr. SMALL ISLES, or EIGG AND CANNA.

[In the sixteenth century the three parishes of Strathswordale, Eigg, and Canna were united. On 16th Feb. 1720 the Court of Teinds severed from the two others the parish of Strathswordale, called also Strath. There are still parish churches in both Eigg and Canna.

Eigg.—In early times the island of Eigg became the seat of St Donan's teaching. There he and his missionary comrades were murdered about the year 617. To St Donan the later church of Eigg was dedicated. The island of Muc [or Muck] forms part of this parish. In Eigg there are Wells of St Donan, St Columba, and St Katherine.

Canna.—The church of Canna was dedicated to St Columba. Having fallen into ruin, it lay waste for generations, but of late years it has been beautifully restored by Mr Alan G. Thom of Canna. In its churchyard stands an ancient cross of carved stone, about seven feet high. The islands of Canna and Rum together make up this parish.]

PRESBYTERY OF UIST

[The General Assembly severed the Presbytery of Uist from that of Lewis on 8th May 1742. The Register of this Presbytery begins at 17th February 1768. The records of its twenty-six earlier years were sent off to the bookbinder in 1768, but they did not reach the mainland, the boat which carried them upset, and all on board being lost. The ordinary meetings of the Presbytery of Uist are held at Lochmaddy.]

BARRA.

[Barra was annexed to South Uist, Kilpheatair, and Benbecula in the latter half of the seventeenth century, the reason being that there were hardly any Protestants in it to minister to, and the great body of the parishioners still adhere to the Roman Catholic Church. The parish was disjoined from South Uist and erected by the Commissioners of Teinds 14th Feb. 1733. The church was dedicated to St Barr. Beside it lay St Barr's Well. On the island of Barra there were chapels of St Breandan at Borge and St Mary at Kilmorie.]

BENBECULA (Q.S.).

[The ancient parish of Benbecula was united to South Uist, Kilpheatair, and Barra in or before the sixteenth century. The church of Benbecula, known as Teampull Chaluimchille, was dedicated to St Columba. Its remains were almost entire fifty years ago and stood on an islet at Balvanich called Loch-na-cille. It is said to have been built and endowed by Amie MacRuari, proprietrix of North and South Uist, and wife of the Good John of Isla, Lord of the Isles, in the middle of the fourteenth century. It is of a very early type, built of undressed stones. Its total length of fifty-six feet includes a chancel added to the older nave, but not bonded into its walls. The very low doorway of the church has a flat lintel, and the jambs slant towards one another, growing closer as they go up. A similar doorway forms the entrance to the chancel. On Benbecula are the remains of a nunnery of Benedictines or Black Nuns at Nunton. The island, formerly a mission station under the Royal Bounty, was erected a parish and disjoined from South Uist by the Court of Teinds 31st May 1895. The present church was built in 1888.]

HARRIS, OR NA HEARADH, AND HIRT.

[These two parishes were united not later than the sixteenth century, but most likely before that.]

Harris.—The church of this parish was dedicated to St Bride, and of old was known as Kilbride. At Rodel there was an Augustinian Priory, dependent on the Abbey of Holyrood. Of its buildings no trace now remains. Its church, dedicated to St Clement, still remains entire, with a square tower sixty feet high, known locally as Tùr Mór Chliamain, of much older date than the church itself. It was restored in the end of last century by the late Earl of Dunmore, and divine service is held in it occasionally. It contains fine old carved monuments, and was of old the burial place of the Macleods of Dunvegan.

There are still in the parish traces of the old chapels of St Luag, on the shore of Loch Seaforth, of St Taran and St Keith on the island of Taransay, and of St Luag and St Mary in the island of Pabbay.]

NORTH UIST, OF OLD KILMORIE IN UIST.

[When Donald Monro, Dean of the Isles, visited North Uist prior to 1549 the island was divided into two parishes, that known locally as Kilmorie and the district of Sand where there was of old a Columban Establishment. At the Reformation the parish of Sand was united to Kilmorie.
It is now included in the parish of Trumis-garry. The church, in which worship continued to be held, was dedicated to St Columba. The church of Kilmorie was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. At Carinish, in the south of this parish, stand the ruins of an ancient Chapel of the Holy Trinity still bearing the name of Teampull na Trianaid. It is nearly sixty-five feet in length, and the traces of other buildings set about it point plainly to its importance in times past. Teampull na Trianaid was founded, according to MacVurich, the historian of Clanranald, by Beathag, daugh. of Somerled, Lord of the Isles, first Prioress of Iona. There were also within the bounds chapels of St Martin at Baile Mhartain, St Olaf at Kilaulay, St Ultan on the island of Vallay, St Clement's at Hosta, St Peter's at Balelone, and Teampull Chriosd at Balishare. There are mission chapels in North Uist at Balishare and Carinish. Of the ministers, if any, who served in this parish during the latter half of the sixteenth century there is no trace.]

DONALD MACMILLAN. Bishop 1626 Thomas Knox refers to him in his report on his diocese in 1626, as "ane verie auld man," then serving in both

North and South Uist. The population of South Uist being almost entirely Roman Catholic the minister had his residence in North Uist, which was entirely Protestant. There is no further reference to him.—[Collectanea de Rebus Albanicis; Craven's Diocese of Argyll and the Isles, 49.]

ST KILDA, or HIRT.

[The island of Hirt lies fully sixty miles west of any part of the coast of Harris. Its parish church, which exists no longer, was dedicated to Christ, and was known as Cill Chrìosd of Hirta. A writer, who visited this island in the middle of the eighteenth century, tells us that the church was "twenty-four feet long, built of stone without any cement, and covered with thatch." In Hirt there were of old chapels of St Columba and St Breandan. In 1710 a mission chapel was built on the island. It was formerly a part of the parish of Harris. It belonged to the parish of North Uist, and was one of the charges originally constituting the Presb. of Long Island erected in 1724. The island was visited in 1697 by John Campbell, min. of Harris, accompanied by Martin Martin who, in 1698, published A Late Voyage to St Kilda. A catechist was proposed to be sent there by the General Assembly, March 1703 and March 1704, supported by private contribution. In 1733 Alexander Macleod, advocate, lodged in the hands of the S.P.C.K. £333, 6s. 8d., the annual interest of which was to be employed in support of the minister, catechist, or missionary. The directors of the Society in 1739 increased the yearly sum to £25, the patronage to be vested in Macleod of Harris and his heirs male. In consideration of the Society doubling the yearly payment, John Norman Macleod of Macleod relinquished his right of patronage to the Society in 1821, they "having still a special regard to persons of the name of Macleod in terms of the original mortification." In 1843 the congregation joined the Free Church, and the succession of missionaries labouring there have been supported by that Church, and by the United Free Church since 1900. The first minister of whom there is any record was a member of this Presb. The name of St Kilda is of eighteenth century origin and is not that of any saint, and its meaning is quite uncertain.]

ALEXANDER BUCHAN, a native of the Gaelic district of Aberdeenshire, 1710 and described as "an old veteran, who had spent his time in the army from the Restoration to the Peace of Utrecht, a poor stranger, who had been reduced to frailty and want, and suffered much for his good affection to the Church and State"; licen. by Presb. of Edinburgh and sent as catechist by the Commission of Assembly in 1705. In the following year the Assembly allowed him 400 merks out of the public money, and a letter was ordered to be written to Macleod of Macleod to give him due encouragement. The Presb. of Edinburgh, 24th March 1708, recommended "that a contribution be made for his encouragement in propagating the knowledge of Christ and rooting out the pagan and popish superstitious customs so much yet in use among that people"; ord. by that Presb. 15th March 1710; died of a fever in the beginning of 1730, having established a kirk-session and on several occasions dispensed the communion. He had a reputation for deep piety, and being a strict disciplinarian and sabbatarian. In a letter of 11th June 1711 he describes the state of the people, and complains bitterly of the oppression of the ground officer who was reckoned a rich man in St Kilda, but according to the minister "a godless man anywhere." He had his revenge in fining the officer's wife two merks, and causing her "stand in sack-cloth for inducing two women to sell a dog on the Lord's Day." "When any one breaks the Sabbath," he relates, "I cause them stand in sack-cloth dipped in the filthiest gutter in the town." He marr. Katherine Campbell who survived him, and who being in destitute circumstances, contributions were made from time to time for her support. They had issue—Helen (marr., pro. 25th Nov. 1753, Henry Derby, soldier in City Guard, Edinburgh); Margaret; Jean; and ten others. Publication—A Description of St Kilda, the most remote Western Isle in Scotland (Edinburgh, 1727, 1732) [reprinted by his daughter Jean (1774)].—[Miscell. Scot., ii. (Glasgow, 1818); Macaulay's History of St Kilda; Society Sermons (1822); Monro's Description of the Western Isles (Edinburgh, 1774); Glasgow Council Min., 19th Oct. 1719.]

RODERICK M'LENNAN, educated at 1730 King's College, Aberdeen, M.A. (2nd April 1719), and Univ. of Edinburgh; ord. after May 1730. During her stay on the island to which she was forcibly abducted, Rachel Erskine, wife of Lord Grange, experienced much kindness from both M. and his wife, which "helped to preserve her life and make it comfortable." She describes M. as "a serious and devout man and very painfull in the discharge of his duties." He was app. missionary in the Presb. of Tongue Feb. 1743.—[Epistle from Lady Grange (London, 1798).]

ALEXANDER MACLEOD, a native of 1748 Skye; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; app. in 1743; died about 1755. He marr. Barbara Macpherson, who died at Greenock, 21st July 1817, aged 97,

In 1785 he petitioned the Presb. that owing to his decline in health, old age, and infirmities, his position might be taken into serious consideration. The Presb. recommended the appointment of his son Lauchlan. He died shortly thereafter, probably in 1788. He marr. Margaret Mackinnon of Glasnakill in Strathaird, Skye, and had issue—Alexander in Royal Navy, and present at the Battle of Copenhagen; Lauchlan, his successor.

SOUTH UIST.

Kilpheder embraced the district known in old charters as Kendess and extended northwards to Locheynort. Its church was dedicated to St Peter. Within the bounds were at least two chapels, St Bride's on Loch Boisdale, and St Donan's at Cill Donain. There are mission chapels at Loch Boisdale and Iochdar.

Howmore extended northwards from Locheynort to Iochdar and the South Ford. It appears as Skirhough in old records. In the old burial ground are the remains of two churches, Teampull Dhiarmaid dedicated to St Columba, and Teampull Mhuire dedicated to St Mary. There were also chapels of St Kenneth at Kilchoinnich, St Michael near Aird Mhicheil, and others at Kilvandin, Kilaulay, Kilbride, and Kildonan.

Benbecula was disjoined from South Uist on 31st May 1895.

The present parish church was built in 1854. Previous to that date there had been none for many years, the population being largely Roman Catholics. There is no trace of a resident Protestant minister in this parish for many years after the Reformation.]

JOHN MACKINNON, rector on 3rd
1683 June 1633.—[G. R. Sas., xxxvi., 352.]

MARTIN MACPHERSON, only sur-1642 viving son of John Bain M. (a renowned warrior in his time, who fell defending Macdonald of Sleat in an attack by the Macleods, near the Castle of Ruaigh in Sleat); educated at Univ. of Glasgow; M.A. (1632); adm. before 6th May 1642. In 1644 the men of South Uist at the instigation of their chief Clanranald raided his lands and carried off fifty-four cows, sixty sheep, twenty-eight lambs and thirteen horses. He was obliged to seek refuge at Dunvegan under protection of Macleod. An action was raised against the raiders before Sir James Macdonald of Sleat, the sheriff of the Western Isles, and John Maclean of Borera, sheriff-depute, and on 22nd July 1658, judgment was given in favour of the minister. During his incumbency he gave shelter to General, afterwards Earl Middleton, while in concealment in the Isles in 1655, after the Glencairn Rising; adm. to Duirinish in 1661.

ANGUS MACQUEEN, son of Hugh M., min. of Duirinish; adm. to North Uist before 26th May 1642; trans. and adm. 22nd Aug. 1662; dep. after 1668. A man of talent and great force of character, he was both respected and feared and left behind him a fragrant memory. He marr. a daugh. of Angus Macdonald of Largie, and had issue—Archibald of Dunskeilor, factor in North Uist for Sir Alexander Macdonald of Sleat; Allan; Marion (marr. JOHN MACAULAY, M.A.; called by the Presb. jure devoluto and ord. before 9th May 1745. The General Assembly reversed the settlement, but he was re-adm. in 1746. From a petition to the Assembly in April 1745, by the congregation (headed by Mrs Macdonald of Clanranald, her husband being a Roman Catholic), it is stated that the Presb. had "thrust upon them their favourite J. M., contrary to the inclination of the heritors, elders and people, notwithstanding a royal presentation," dated 21st Aug. 1744, "in favour of Neil Macleod, the chosen of the congregation. This," the petition says, "will render M.'s ministry useless and perhaps his life uneasy." They prayed the Assembly to settle Neil Macleod among them who had already laboured as Royal Bounty missionary for six years within the bounds. The Presb. found him unqualified although they had annually certified his qualifications as a missionary. Further, they evaded Macleod's presentation by a measure most people would have considered not very correct by holding their meeting at a different time and place from usual, so that the presentee was not able to find them. M. rendered himself highly unpopular by his persistent efforts to betray Prince Charles when the latter was in hiding in South Uist; trans. to Lismore 30th July 1755.

PRESBYTERY OF LEWIS, OF OLD THE LONG ISLAND

At sundry times during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries we find the Ecclesiastical Courts striving after some reform in the disordered religious life of the Outer Hebrides. For long these efforts were attended with little success. It was not until the eighteenth century that efficient Church government could be set up in these islands.

For the better ordering of the civil administration, King James VI. granted a Charter to a company of adventurers, hailing mostly from Fife, giving them power to found a settlement in Lewis by force of arms, after the fashion of the Spanish Colonies beyond the seas. These "Undertakers," as they were called, set forth on their expedition in Oct. 1598, and Robert Durie, minister of Anstruther, was commissioned to go with them as a religious teacher. This first attempt of theirs to seize the island proved a signal failure. Many of the invaders lost their lives, and Durie, sharing their defeat, escaped alive with difficulty, and returned to Fife.

When the same company again took in hand an invasion of Lewis, the minister of Anstruther was once more found willing to join it. A petition was therefore laid before the Presbytery of St Andrews craving that he be again set free to go to that island "to plant ane kirk." To this that Court agreed on 2nd April 1601. In December of the same year the Lewismen routed the Undertakers with great slaughter, and their minister was glad to get safely back to his own parish of Anstruther.

In 1610 Farquhar Macrae, minister of Gairloch, was sent on a special mission to Lewis. From his report we learn that he found the people there very ignorant and "strangers to the Gospel." Few of them, he tells us, who were over forty years of age, had even been baptised.

On 19th May 1724 the General Assembly severed from the Presbytery of Skye the whole district of the Outer Islands reaching from the Butt of Lewis on the north to Barra Head on the south. Of this insular region a new jurisdiction was then formed, called the Presbytery of The Long Island, or of Innis Fada. On 8th May 1742, Harris and the islands lying to the south of it were disjoined from Lewis and erected as the Presbytery of Uist. The remaining territory to the north has since then been known as the Presbytery of Lewis.

The Register of this Presbytery begins in July 1742. There are gaps in the Record from 16th March 1766 to 15th July 1767, from 22nd Nov. 1768 to 18th Aug. 1772, and from 14th March to 27th Nov. 1804. The Presbytery holds its ordinary meetings at Stornoway.]

BARVAS, OF OLD AN CLADACH ("THE SHORE").

[The church of Barvas was dedicated to St Mary. There were a number of chapels in this parish. Among these were St Bride's at Borve, St Peter's at Shadair, St Kieran's at Lionashadair, and St John the Baptist's at Bragar. The parishes of Barvas and Ness, now named Cross, were long united, but Cross was severed again quoad sacra in 1857.]

CROSS, OF OLD NESS (Q.S.).

[The ancient parish of Ness was united to Barvas in the sixteenth century, or probably as early as the fifteenth. Its old church was dedicated to St Peter. It seems to have been a building of some dignity, and its ruined fabric is well over sixty feet in length. The modern church is on another site, near the remains of an old chapel of the Holy Rood, whence is derived the name of Cross now given to the parish. A parliamentary church for the district of Ness was built in 1828. The parish of Cross was again disjoined from Barvas on 27th May 1857. In various parts of this parish there were chapels in times gone by. Two of these stood at Eorabie, near the north end of Lewis. One of them was dedicated to St Malrubh and the other to St Ronan. Near the latter was St Ronan's Well. In the same part of the island were St Peter's Chapel at Suainabost, St Thomas's at Habost, and St Clement's at Dail. On the eastern shore of this parish, at Dun Othail, about ten miles from the Butt of Lewis, are the ruins of a chapel seventeen feet long, built in a very primitive style, of dry stone, without any kind of mortar. Of the same early type, but even ruder in form, are the dry built hermitages that still stand on lonely rocks lying off the coasts of this part of The Long Island. Such a place of solitary devotion is to be seen on the bare isle of North Rona, sixty miles beyond the furthest point of Northern Lewis, and forty miles west of Cape Wrath. The chapel of St Ronan there is perched upon the rock that rises up from the sea to a height of 350 feet. It is entered by a low doorway with a flat lintel, and, to get in, one must creep on all-fours. Thus the nave is entered, and, by another similar low opening, the tiny chancel is reached. In the small burial-ground around this hermitage chapel are several, quite plain, standing crosses, the highest of which rises only about two feet and a half above the ground. On the solitary rock of Sula Sgeir, ten miles west of North Rona, stands another hermitage of the same old-world type. Moreover, there is in this parish yet a third fabric of the kind. Its site is on the north-east side of Lewis, on Ealean Mòr, the largest of the Flannan Isles. This hermitage is called Teampull Bheannachaidh ("The Temple of Blessing.")]

SYNOD OF ORKNEY

UNTIL near the middle of the seventeenth century this Court was made up of the two Presbyteries of Orkney or Kirkwall and Shetland or Lerwick. JOHN STEWART, reader in 1566, 1566 and probably earlier; according to Craven he became reader at Kirkwall in 1567, but this is perhaps a mistake for 1576, when his name appears in the Buik of Assignations. He was reader at Holm Nov. 1570 and at Deerness.

ARCHIBALD REID, reader Nov. 1570 1570 to 1580.

On 4th June 1627 at a Visitation by Bishop Grahame, the communicants at Evie numbered 320, those at Rendall 180; there was no school in either parish and the parishioners were described as "ignorant and altogether unlearned"; in 1644 he was under censure for disobedience to the Presb., and finding no evidence of his willingness to amend, "but by the contrair of his wilful and obstinat disobedience," he was dep. 13th Nov. 1645. He disregarded the sentence and continued to perform his duties; in June 1646 he was reponed by the Assembly, and had an Act of Parliament in his favour in 1650. Having escaped the fate of those who signed the Address to Montrose he was an active agent in the re-establishment of Presbyterianism in Orkney, and was elected Moderator of the new Presb. which met at Rendall 4th July 1654. He conformed at the Restoration but took no share in the work of the Church. On 19th June 1666 he appeared before the Sheriff-Court of Orkney and "charged himself with grievous crymes" [immorality], and on 21st June, having again confessed his guilt, he was dep. HAM, OR HOLM, AND PAPLAY.

[The old name of this parish is Ham and in common speech it is so called. Ham is however a frequent place name. In the Northern Counties it is the old common term for a haven. KIRKWALL AND ST OLA.

[These two parishes were united towards the end of the sixteenth century.

Kirkwall.—The great church of St Magnus, now belonging to this parish, was of old the Cathedral of the diocese of Orkney. St Olaf's, a building of small size, still fairly complete, was then the parish church of Kirkwall. The town was increasing, and the parochial area was of wide extent. Therefore, some years after 1560, a second parish, called St Magnus', was set up, having the Cathedral church for its place of worship. The parochial district assigned to it took in nearly all the Royal Burgh, but included a mere fraction of the large landward area. Kirkwall had thus two parishes, St Magnus' for the town, and St Olaf's to be used by the rural people. In Kirkwall, as elsewhere, those were times of stress and strain in Church affairs. Hence it came about, before the end of the sixteenth century, that the parishes of St Magnus and St Olaf had to be again joined in one, with the Cathedral as their parish church. In or about 1636, the situation was somewhat relieved by the foundation of a Second Charge. This lasted until 1922, when the revenues of the suppressed Second Charge were added to the ordinary parochial endowment. St Magnus, Earl of Orkney, after whom the parish is named, was treacherously murdered in the island of Egilsay in 1104. St Ronald, his nephew, having recovered possession of the earldom, began the building of the Cathedral church at Kirkwall in 1137. Both St Magnus and St Ronald are buried here.

In the Cathedral there were of old various chapels and altars. Among these were dedications to St John the Baptist, St Christopher, St Barbara, St Nicholas, and St Augustine. This beautiful church is now being worthily restored, ample funds for that end having been left by George Hunter MacThomas Thoms of Aberlemno, Sheriff of Orkney and Shetland. At Pickaquo, within the burgh of Kirkwall, there was a chapel of St Duthac. Fairs were held in the town on St Magnus' Day, Palm Sunday, Lammas, and Martinmas.

St Ola.—This was the original parish of Kirkwall. Its church was dedicated to St Olaf the King, Patron Saint of Norway. From this church, in early times, the adjacent harbour got the Norse name of Kirkju-vágr ("The Bay of the Church"). The town, which grew up, was called by that name. St Olaf's was a prebend of Kirkwall Cathedral.]

FIRST CHARGE.

GILBERT FOWLZIE [or FOWLIE],
 1561 had been a monk in one of the religious houses within the diocese of Aberdeen. He probably came north with Adam Bothwell (parson of Ashkirk in 1552, and Canon of Glasgow, who was preferred to the See of Orkney in 1559); conformed to Protestantism and app. to the prebend of St John the Evangelist in the Cathedral of St Magnus 28th Jan. 1561; subsequently promoted Archdean of Orkney, having charge also of Birsay and Harray; was a commissioner for Orkney and Shetland, 1574-80. He took a leading part in the ecclesiastical affairs of the Island; was a member of the Glasgow Assembly in 1578; died before 1595. Part of his income was derived from the Isle of Damsay which was held in feu of him, and he had lands in Deerness. He rebuilt and restored the property now known as Tankerness House (opposite the Cathedral), the old gateway of which bears the arms of himself and his wife with the date 1574. He marr. before 1566, Elizabeth Kinnaird of the Inchturre family, and had issue—James, buried in the church at Westness, Rousay, where his tombstone was discovered some time ago, and is preserved in the vestibule of Rousay church [his wife's name was Margaret Carmichael]; Margaret, died unmarr.; Ursulla (marr. Edward Sinclair of Essenquoy, M.P., and Provost of Kirkwall), alive in 1634; Marjorie (marr. John Guthrie, Burgess of Thurso and tacksmen of lands in Rousay.—[Craven's Hist. of the Church in Orkney (1558-1662), 1, 10 [for deed of presentation to prebendary of St John], 38, et seq.; Peterkin's Rentals; Hossack's Kirkwall, 185, 228.]

JOHN STEWART, formerly reader at 1567 Evie, Holm, and Deerness; appears as reader (according to Craven) in 1567, but this is perhaps a mistake for 1576. He had the "curate's chalmers and seller in the new werk of Kirkwall, besides the third of the vicarage of St Olaf, and other perquisites"; was present at the execution of Alison Balfour for witchcraft, 16th Dec. 1594, and in 1611 styles himself "vicar of St Olave, and scollar of the Subdeanrie of Orkney." He was alive in 1615, but disappears from the record soon afterwards.—[Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 38, 108.]

JOHN HOUSTON, reader at St Andrews (q.v.); held the prebend of 1595 St Peter, and by Bishop Reid's constitution was also master of the Grammar School. This he held from 1554 until his demission, probably from old age, 26th Feb. 1595, when Andrew Dishington was appointed.—[Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 48, 83.]

ANDREW DISHINGTON, prebend of St Peter.—See under Walls and 1595 Flotta.

 Olaf's in 1615 [afterwards min. of 1615 Westray].—[Deed in Skaill Charter Chest.]

PATRICK INGLIS, M.A.; min. 16th

 1639 (1629); adm. before 11th Feb. 1639; was unable to preach early in Jan., and died 21st Jan. 1641, aged 32. He marr. Agnes Young, who survived him.—[Orkney Tests; Peterkin's Rentals.]

GEORGE JOHNSTONE, trans. from 1642 Sanguhar; pres. by the Presb. jure devoluto, and by Charles I. 22nd Sept. 1641; adm. 4th Sept. 1642; trans. to Orphir after 7th Nov. 1647.

JAMES DOUGLAS, second son of James D., min. of Glenbervie in 1647 1590, by a daugh. of Irvine of Beltie; M.A. [cf. Vol. III., 289, 300]; formerly min.

at Douglas and Carnwath; coll. and adm. 5th Dec. 1647; pres. to prebend of St John 19th Aug., and inst. thereto 9th Nov. 1648; dep. by the General Assembly July 1650, with most of the mins. of Orkney, for subscribing a loyal address to James, Marquess of Montrose; reponed by the Presb., 7th Sept. 1659, and adm. to Lady; re-trans. here; adm. by Thomas Sydserrf, Bishop of Orkney, 11th July, and inst. Nov. 1662; dem. (from infirmity and old age) July 1671; died 27th Aug. 1678. He marr. (1) Christian Leslie, alive in 1652; (2) Barbara (died 1st March 1679), daugh. of Edward Scollay of Strynie.—[Acts of Parl., vii., 24, App. 5, 6, 78; Peterkin's Rentals.]

THOMAS BAIKIE, assisted here in 1658 place of James Douglas. The Presb. considered his "entry disorderly and unhanesome." He apologised and ceased preaching [afterwards min. of Rousay].

ALEXANDER LENNOX, educated at 1659 Univ. of Glasgow; M.A. (1646); licen. by Presb. of Kirkwall 7th Sept., and ord. 21st Oct. 1659; deprived in 1661 on the restoration of Episcopacy; for holding conventicles a decret was passed against him, with others, 16th July 1671. He retired to Edinburgh and died there soon afterwards. [Wodrow's Hist., i., 329; Kirkton's Hist., 349.]

JAMES DOUGLAS, above mentioned; 1662 returned in 1662.

JAMES WALLACE, born 1642, a native 1672 of Banffshire; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (27th April 1659); became schoolmaster of Fortrose; inst. to Lady 25th Nov. 1668; pres. by Andrew, Bishop of Orkney, 23rd Sept., called by the magistrates and town council 4th, trans. and adm. 16th Nov. 1672; coll. to the prebend of St John 16th Oct. 1678; died of fever 18th Sept. 1688. He was the first historian of Orkney. His Description of the Islands was undertaken at the instance of Sir Robert Sibbald, Geographer Royal for Scotland, with whom he kept up a constant correspondence, furnishing Sibbald with information also as to Shetland. He was a man of great industry and scholarship and left in MS., "besides sermons, and many miscellaneous pieces, a 'Harmonie of the Evangelists' in folio; two large quartos of 'Common Places' extracted (with his observations) from what he collected in his reading; a 'Treatise of the Ancient and Modern Discipline'; and was writing a 'Refutation of some Popish tenets' when his last sickness seized him." He left 100 merks to the church, the Kirk-Session applying this sum in the purchase of two communion cups inscribed with Wallace's name. A house in Albert Street, Kirkwall, distinguished by a quaint porch-like doorway with the words "Welcome, Welcome," and a double heart above the entrance, belonged to Wallace and was sold by his sons in 1694. An arm-chair, originally his property, and bearing his initials and those of his wife, with date 1672, is still extant at Birsay, and many volumes from his library have been preserved. He marr. Elizabeth Cuthbert, probably of the Inverness-shire family of that name, who died 14th July 1685, and had issue—James, M.D., F.R.S., in East India Company's Service, author of The History of the Kingdom of Scotland, From Fergus, the First King, to the Commencement of the Union . . . to which is added An Account of the Rebellion in Scotland in the year 1715, etc. (Dublin 1724), and "A Part of a Journal kept from Scotland to New Caledonia in Darien [which he visited] with a Short Account of that Country" (*Trans. His son, James, published under his own name, An Account of the Islands of Orkney (London, 1710; reprinted Edinburgh, 1883. [This volume, which has no reference to his father's work, consists of the Description of 1693 with some omissions and additions—a list of Orkney plants and shells, and an extract giving an account of the ancient Earls of Orkney from a MS. belonging to Bishop Norie of Dundee.]—[Craven's Orkney (1662-88), 97, 104, 130-7 [has a Bibliographical Note on the Description]; Small's reprint; Notes and Queries, 2nd ser., v. 89, vi. 533; also 30th Jan. 1858; Nicolson's Scottish Historical Library (1702), 20, 53 [in which it is stated that "An Account from Orkney" larger than the printed copy, was sent to Sibbald]; *Dict. JOHN WILSON, born Elgin about 1654; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; 1689 M.A. (9th July 1672); passed trials before Presb. of Aberdeen, and licen. 24th Jan. 1677; became schoolmaster at Elgin and chaplain to Lord Duffus, had testimonials from Murdoch and James, late Bishops of Moray, and from Patrick, Bishop of Aberdeen, and having officiated from May 1683 was adm. to Second Charge 16th Jan. 1684 with consent of the patron, Murdoch, Bishop of Moray; trans. to Stronsay and Eday 7th May that year; re-trans. to Second Charge and adm. 20th Dec. 1687; trans. to First Charge and inst. before 17th June 1689; was ordered, 25th Oct. 1690, by Robert Elphinston of Lopness to "cist from preaching the Word, and for so doing still, God in His own time will visit him with some signal judgment." He continued preaching but was deprived by the Privy Council June 1694; lived some time in Shapinsay, and returning to Kirkwall, opened, on 21st Feb. 1703, an Episcopal meeting-house which was largely attended [see under Thomas Baikie]; was officiating in Toddrick's Wynd meeting-house, Edinburgh, 1706-7, and subsequently min. of the Episcopal congregation, Poldrate, Haddington; died about 1719. He marr. (1) 11th March 1684, Isobel Traill (died before 7th Dec. 1702), widow of James Fea of Clestran, Stronsay, and had issue—a daugh. (marr. THOMAS BAIKIE, bapt. 15th July 1697 1672, son of James B. of Burness and Sibella, daugh. of Hew Halcro of that ilk; educated at Univ. of St Andrews; M.A. (1691); called in 1696; recommended by the General Assembly to Presb. of Aberdeen for ordination 12th Jan. 1697; ord. (at Cullen) 7th April, and adm. 12th May that year, and approved by the Presb. 28th June following; died June or July 1740. He was a man of power in his day, and an uncompromising opponent of Episcopacy, being obliged on 7th June 1698 to complain to the Commission of Assembly that he had been assailed by "reproachful rhymes" and maliciously slandered because of his opinions. On 3rd Jan. 1703 he was ill and in bed, with no supply provided for his pulpit. The Cathedral bell began to ring, and his wife observed the congregation assembling and streaming into the building. She hastily assisted her husband to dress, and the pair proceeded to the church to find John Wilson, the deprived min. in the act of officiating. Mrs B. is said to have mounted the pulpit steps and to have dragged him out, while B. dismissed the congregation and had the doors locked. David Slater, the beadle, was removed from his office for having rung the bell without B.'s order. His defence was that Wilson still believed himself to be the min. of the parish, and to have right to "at least one-half of the pulpit." At the instigation of Captain Moodie of Melsetter, a charge of irreligion and blasphemy uttered in sermons preached in March 1712 was raised against B. but was ultimately departed from, the accusation being regarded as an act of revenge, the Kirk-Session and Presb. having dealt with Moodie for immoral conduct. He marr. (1) 14th Sept. 1697, Elizabeth, daugh. of James Fea of Whitehall, Stronsay, and had issue—Barbara, bapt. 24th Sept. 1700; Thomas of Burness, bapt. 31st Aug. 1704, died 1738; Anna, bapt. 19th Feb. 1705 (marr. James Traill of Quendale); Patrick, bapt. 9th April 1706; Elizabeth, bapt. 16th Aug. 1707 (marr. Robert Scollay of Odsness): (3) (cont. 14th Sept. 1726) Elizabeth (died 28th March 1783, aged 95), daugh. of David Traill of Saba, and had issue—Christina, bapt. 27th Oct. 1727 (marr. John Yule, min. of this charge).—[Smith's Church in Orkney, 61-4; Acts of Ass., 1697; Hossack's Kirkwall, 238; Wodrow's Anal., ii., 72; Lyon's Account of Episcopacy.]

ALEXANDER YOUNGSON, born 1698 about 1670, son of Alexander Y., min. of Rhynie; educated at King's College, Aberdeen (where he was a competitor for a bursary in 1683); licen. by Presb. of Turriff; called 5th, and ord. 22nd Sept. 1698; is said to have left his charge "as his health would not allow him to stay in Orkney from the hurtfulness of the air of the Isles," the parish being declared vacant by a committee of Commission of Assembly along with the Presb. 23rd April 1700. He was subsequently dep. by Presb. of Kincardine O'Neil, 6th Oct. 1709, for intemperance. Reduced to poverty, he had assistance from the Kirk-Sessions of Cramond, Saltoun, Scoonie, and others; he afterwards resided at Broomhall, in Rhynie, where he probably died.—[Peterkin's Rentals; Session Registers of Parishes mentioned.]

His intimacy with James Lyon, the Episcopalian min. at Kirkwall, called forth deep resentment on the part of the Presbyterians, so much so that, in 1708, the town council advised an exchange of benefices between him and the mins. of Shapinsay or Stronsay. On 17th June 1709, he was "sharply rebuked" by the Synod at Thurso for such intimacy. His ministry was passed in a period of religious ferment, and he was frequently in trouble from his outspokenness. Many anecdotes have been handed down as to his sayings and actions. He marr. Elizabeth Ker, and had issue—William, bapt. 12th Sept. 1707; Andrew, bapt. 17th March 1709; George, bapt. 8th Jan. 1712.—[Hossack's Kirkwall, 312] [contains account of proceedings at Thurso].

SOUTH RONALDSAY AND BURRAY.

[This parish forms the northern part of the Island of Ronaldsay. Its church was dedicated to St Peter. St Peter's was a prebend of Kirkwall. In the sixteenth century the parishes of St Mary and Burray were united to St Peter's. St Mary's was severed again in 1875, and Burray in 1904. Within the bounds were the following chapels: St Mary's at Halcro, St Margaret's at St Margaret's Hope, St Ninian's at Stow, St Columba's at Burwick, and St Andrew's at Windwick. There is now a mission chapel at Herston.

SIR THOMAS RATTRAY, vicar, 1561 1561-2; went to Shapinsay in 1566.

DUNCAN RAMSAY, pre-Reformation 1566 chaplain of the Cathedral, Kirkwall, conformed and was reader in 1566 till his death Nov. 1570.

WILLIAM MOODIE of Breckness, adm. 1570 Nov. 1570; trans. to Hoy and Graem-say before 1574.

ALEXANDER DICK, said to be son 1574 of James D., merchant burghess of Arbroath; was dean or provost of Orkney before 1560, conformed and became min. here in 1574; died before 1st Dec. 1584. All that is known of him is that he "abundantly dilapidated his benefice." His son John acquired considerable wealth by trading with Denmark, and was father of Sir William D. (1580-1655), Lord Provost of Edinburgh, well known for his riches and misfortunes. Sir William's son, John, was sheriff of Orkney in 1628.—[Craven's South Ronaldshay, 3; Hossack's Kirkwall, 226; Pitcairn's Crim. Trials, i., 413; O. and Z. Records, 266; Zetland Family Histories, 54.]

EDWARD INGSETTER [or 1574 INKSTER], reader in 1574; alive in 1607, when Earl Patrick ordered Adam Cromartie, tacksman of the island, to see that all arrears of I's stipend were paid.—[Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 48, 71.]

ALEXANDER CALLENDAR, a native 1584 of the west of Scotland, appears first under Balfron in 1560; adm. to Killearn Nov. 1572; was min. at Largs, 1574-84 (cf. Vol. III., 214); pres. by Robert, Earl of Orkney to the provostry of Orkney and to this charge in 1584; was probably dead in 1589, when his name disappears from record. He drew up a "Rentall of the Provostrie of Orkney, A.D. 1584," which has been preserved and printed privately. He had at least three sons, Daniel, min. of this parish; Thomas; Elias; and probably Walter of Bordue, witness to a deed in 1592.

NINIAN HALCRO, M.A., of Aikers and Cava, natural son of Malcolm 1590 H. of that Ilk, Archdeacon of Shetland (mentioned 1530-45, and died before 1562); pres. to Rousay and Egilsay in 1585; trans. to this charge and to the provostry in 1590; was one of those summoned to appear at Edinburgh in answer to Robert Pont's charges, June 1597; still in office at 13th Feb. 1605, at the time of James Law's appointment to the Bishopric of Orkney. He marr. Margaret Bruce.—[Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 75, 101.]

[WILLIAM HALCRO of Aikers (in the parish) and of Brugh and Cava, son
1590 of John H. (who is mentioned as deceased in 1544-5, and one of heirs of entail of the estate of the Halcros of that Ilk); said to have been min. here in 1590, and holding the deanery of Orkney; died in 1597. He marr. (1) Margaret, daugh. of James Craggy [Craigie] of Brugh, and had issue—Hugh of Aikers (now represented by Halcro of Hogarth, Rendall); Robert of Cava and Houton (now represented by, Johnston of Coubister, Orphir); Patrick in Wyre, ancestor of Henry and Ebenezer Erskine: (2) Margaret Bruce, and had issue—David of Instabillie; Barbara; Agnes; a daugh. (marr. Captain Henry Black, Kirkwall); a daugh. (marr. Bernard Stewart, brother of the Laird of Barscube, Renfrew.) [There is confusion with respect to the foregoing names—Ninian and William Halcro. Both appear as holding the same benefice in 1590. Ninian witnessed a deed as "provost of Orkney" on Sept. 1592, and was still in the charge in 1605. It is probable that the name William has been misread for Ninian, and that William was not a minister at all. Dr Craven has no mention of William.—See Edinburgh Town Council Charters, Bishopric Papers, No. 6.]

DANIEL CALLENDAR, M.A.; being 1609 recommended to the Bishop by James Douglas, gentleman of the bed-chamber to James VI., was pres. and adm. before 6th Jan. 1609 when, as provost, he witnessed a tack by Adam Bothwell to Thomas Barclay of Coplahillis of the "altarage and chaplainry" at Sandwick; at a visitation of the parish on 17th June 1627 the communicants at South Ronaldsay numbered between five and six hundred, and those at Burray about one hundred; adm. to Birsay and Harray Dec. 1640.

WALTER STEWART, son of the Laird 1636 of Culbeg, said to be descended from family of Grantully; educated at Univ. of St Andrews; had a certificate from that Presb. 28th July 1630; ord. soon afterwards and pres. by Bishop Grahame to Rousay and Egilsay before 21st Feb. 1635; pres. to Aberdour, Fife, 18th March that year; coll. 26th April 1636; pres. by Charles I. to the Deanery of Orkney, 22nd June, and inst. here Aug. that year; signed the National Covenant and conformed to Presbyterianism in 1638, and as a member of the Glasgow Assembly was (with David Watson, min. of Walls and Flotta) one of the chief accusers of Bishop Grahame; was petitioned for as one of the mins. of Kirkwall in 1641; was a member of Commission of Assemblies, 1643, 1644, and 1646; died 8th Jan. 1652. He marr. (1) 30th April 1635, Helen Sinclair, who died 16th April 1645, "a thrys worthie dame who in seven yeiris, sax children sweet brought forth, concert the seven, alas died in the birth," and had issue—James, died abroad in 1661; William of Newark; Harry, apprenticed to James Kinross, merchant, Edinburgh, 22nd Sept. 1658; Walter, apprenticed to William Calderwood, apothecary, Edinburgh, 19th March 1662, and others: (2) (cont. 16th Sept. 1645), Margaret (marr. Archibald M'Culloch, Burgess of Kirkwall and merchant in St Margaret's Hope), eldest daugh. of Matthew Mowbray, skipper Burgess of Kirkwall, chamberlain of Orkney, and widow of Patrick Scollay of Knockhall, Birsay, and had issue—Alexander of Massiter, apprenticed to James Finlayson, merchant, Edinburgh, 9th Aug. 1665, died 1722; Helen (marr. (1) William Cochrane, min. of Cross, Sanday: (2) 11th April 1674, Captain Peter Winchester: (3) 6th March 1679, John Traill of Elsness); Elizabeth. —[Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 184, 207, 215; Craven's South Ronaldshay, 7, 9; Inq. Ret. Orkney, 96; Gordon's Scots Affairs, ii., 138; Index to Services; Orkney Tests; Peterkin's Records.]

[The parish vacant five years.]

EDWARD RICHARDSON (cf. Vol. IV., 1657 211), belonged to Edinburgh and was probably connected with the family of Robert R., Master of the Mint and treasurer to Queen Mary; educated at Univ. of Edinburgh; M.A. (1624); ord. by Archbishop Spottiswood prior to his institution at Forteviot in 1635. After his deposition there in 1649, his wife petitioned the Presb. of Perth (in respect of the hard condition she and her family were in) "that the whole stipend of the year 1649 may be given to her, R. having served a great part of that year, and that she might have some allowance of the next year, in respect that her husband paid, at his entry, to the widow and executors of his predecessor." The Commission of Assembly decided in her favour. Called 15th April 1657; produced, on 22nd July, an "ample testimonial from the Presb. of Perth, also an testimonial of the heritors and elders of Forteviot, all witnessing to his soundness of doctrine and good conversation"; adm. (at Peterkirk) 19th Aug. that year; accepted Episcopacy in 1661, became dean and provost of Orkney and preached at Kirkwall, 12th Nov. 1662, at the inauguration of the Diocesan Synod; died after 1st April 1670. His ministry was uneventful. Though frequently absent from his parish on ecclesiastical affairs, his duties were discharged with exactness and fidelity, and many improvements were effected in the educational and moral life of the community. Craven's Church Life in South Ronaldshay and Burray in the Seventeenth Century (Kirkwall, 1911) furnishes copious extracts from the Session Records, all in R.'s handwriting, and kept with great care and regularity from the beginning of his ministry until 21st March 1669. His Register of Marriages and Baptisms has been fully transcribed. He marr. Margaret Reichie, and had issue—a daugh. (marr. John Maule); and perhaps others.—[Craven's South Ronaldshay, 18 et seq., 75; Peterkin's Rentals; Reg. of Deeds, Dal., vii., 775.]

ALEXANDER PITCAIRN, born St Andrews, Fife; educated at Univ. 1672 of St Andrews; M.A. (23rd July 1658); passed trials before Presb. of St Andrews and recommended for licence 27th July 1664; ord. by Bishop Honyman and inst. to Sandwick and Stromness 24th April 1666; adm. here in 1672, and became dean and provost of Orkney; presided at the institution of Murdo Mackenzie as Bishop of Orkney, 5th Sept. 1676; dep. for Episcopacy 22nd June 1698, and deprived by Privy Council in 1699; died at Kirkwall in 1715. He marr. (1) Elizabeth (died 5th Sept. 1681), eldest daugh. of John Anderson, Dean of Guild, St Andrews, Fife, and had issue—John, min. at Hoy and Graemsay; Elizabeth; Margaret (marr. Donald Calder, periwig maker, Kirkwall); (2) Alison Douglas, and had issue—Alexander, merchant, Lerwick; George of Muness.—[Craven's South Ronaldshay, 60-74, 113; Gen. Reg. Sas., 18th April 1705; Orkney Tests; Old Lore Misc., iii., 98.]

ALEXANDER GRANT (cf. Vol. I., 318), 1699 formerly min. of Fala and Soutra; after his deprivation in 1689 went to England and joined the Presbyterians, from whom he brought testimonials to the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr and was received into communion; called 14th Aug., and adm. 21st Sept. 1699; died 11th May 1707. He marr. (cont. May 1708) Barbara, daugh. of James Baikie of Burness. She survived him, and had issue—Robert, merchant, Kirkwall; Cecilia; Alexander; Thomas; James; Edward; Sibella (marr. Thomas Traill of Hobister, min. of Lady). His widow was recommended by the Presb. to the patron for half a year's stipend as a reimbursement of £300 which her husband had expended on his manse.—[Peterkin's Rentals; Kirkwall (Marr.) Reg.]

RICHARD MEIN, a native of Edinburgh; educated at Univ. of 1719 Edinburgh; M.A. (1676); ord. to Cross and Burness 10th July 1683; was accused of neglect of ministerial duty and of having taken part in a play at a feast in Stove, the allegation being that he stood upon a chair with his eyes, mouth, and nose blackened crying, "Gape and gloure who would have or kiss me now?" [this was probably a mere game at an evening party]; the charges were dismissed; on the recommendation of the General Assembly, 20th Feb. 1700, he was unanimously received into communion by their commission and the Presb. 23rd April that year; trans. to Stronsay and Eday 13th May 1703; pres. by Robert, Earl of Morton, in 1718; trans. and adm. here 6th May 1719; died in 1733, aged about 76. JOHN GERARD, born 12th Sept. 1765, 1815 son of John G., farmer, Midmar and Crossley, Fetteresso, by his second wife, Jane Jamieson, and cousin of the Rev. Alexander G., LL.D., mathematical master, Gordon's Hospital, Aberdeen; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (30th March 1781); taught for twenty-four years in the parish schools of Durris, Peterculter, Banchory-Ternan, and Arbuthnott; licen. by Presb. of Aberdeen 8th April 1800; assistant at West Parish, Aberdeen; ord. (assistant) at Lady 3rd Sept. 1806; adm. here 28th Sept. 1815; died 2nd Oct. 1850. He was an admirable specimen of the old type of country minister. Many stories are still related of his eccentricities and of his humorous sayings and snatches of rhyme. He made abundant use of the vernacular. A considerable number of his letters are extant, and afford interesting glimpses of the life and manners of the period. His son preached for him on one occasion, and on the following Sunday the father took the same text, saying to a friend, "I wanted to clear up the truth by sweeping away the fog that he threw over the text." He marr. 1795, Jane (died 30th Jan. 1837, aged 73), sister of Peter Craig, M.D., Aberdeen, and had issue — John, licentiate of the Church of Scotland (1822), born 21st April 1799, died at Stromness, 12th May 1865; Jane, born 1800 (marr. 4th Jan. 1825, David Sutherland, farmer, Farewell); Sophia, deaf and dumb; Mary (marr. ST MARY'S, OR THE LADY KIRK OF RONALDSAY (Q.S.).

[St Mary's in Ronaldsay was a prebend belonging to the Dean of Kirkwall. Within the bounds were the following chapels: St Columba's at Grimness, The Holy Rood at Sandwick, St Columba's at Hopey, and St Olaf's at Widewall. The parish of St Mary was united to St Peter's and Burray in the sixteenth century. It was disjoined again from them quoad sacra on 24th May 1875. [The General Assembly erected the Presbytery of Cairston out of that of Kirkwall on 15th May 1725. Its Register begins at 21st July 1725. There is a gap in the Record from 28th March 1764 to 3rd April 1782. The Presbytery now holds its ordinary meetings at Stromness.]

BIRSAY (Q.S.).

[Birsay was a prebend of Kirkwall Cathedral. At an early date the church of Birsay was dedicated to St Columba. There is, however, reason to think that, in later times, the dedication may have been changed, perhaps more than once. The chief residence of the Earls of Orkney, in the early Norse times, was at Birsay. There too the first Orcadian Bishops had their seat. The headland at the Brough of Birsay was strongly fortified, and within its lines there was a chapel of St Peter. In the sixteenth century this parish was united to Harray. It was severed again quoad omnia on 17th July 1876.]

FIRTH AND STENNESS.

[The three parishes of Firth, Stenness, and Orphir were united in the sixteenth century. Some few years after 1600, Orphir was severed from the two others. On 18th Feb. 1878 Stenness was disjoined quoad omnia from Firth. On the island of Damsay, within the bounds, there stood a chapel. From the name of the place it has been thought that it was dedicated to St Adamnan. Damsay, however, seems rather to point to St Adam, Bishop of Caithness, as the patron.]

1616 [father of preceding; one of the few instances in which a father succeeded his son as min. of the same parish], born at Perth in 1545, perhaps son of John S., "uptaker of the psalm in the Kirk, and master of the Sang School"; was probably present (attached to the church as a chorister or acolyte) when John Knox preached his memorable sermon there in 1559 (the origin of the Reformation movement in Scotland); became reader at Perth before 1576, under John Row; parson of Tullibole in 1578, and of Muckhart in 1583; min. of Kirkwall in 1585, being at the same time app. Commissioner for Orkney and Shetland, which office he held till 1591; app. by the Secret Council 6th March 1589, one of the Commissioners for the maintenance and defence of true religion within that sheriffdom. By the Assembly of 25th April 1593 he was again chosen as Commissioner for Shetland, in which he continued till 1601. He probably died soon afterwards. In 1627 he had among his emoluments "ane little piece land called Bigquoy, not far distant from the kirk." There was then a manse but no school, "and yet there is a greit necessity for one." The number of communicants was 800. He marr. Anna Hepburn, and had issue—Robert, died 1612; Janet (marr.,

GEORGE LOW, bapt. 29th March 1747, 1774 only son of John L., farmer and beadle at Edzell [whose ancestors had long occupied the farm of Meikle Tallo] and Isabella Coupar; educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1762-6, and Univ. of St Andrews; tutor in the family of Robert Graham, merchant, Stromness, 1768; licen. by Presb. of Cairston in 1771; pres. by Sir Laurence Dundas, Bart., and ord. 14th Dec. 1774; died 13th March 1795, and was buried beneath the pulpit in Birsay Church. His whole life in Orkney was devoted to the study of its natural history and antiquities. He specialised as a microscopist, constructing a water-microscope (still extant at Skaill), and commencing in 1769 a series of "Microscopical Observations," adorning his work with beautiful Indian-ink illustrations. In 1770 he began an exhaustive History of the Orkneys, initiating his labour by a translation of Torfæus's History. In 1772 he formed the acquaintance of Sir Joseph Banks, then visiting Orkney on his return from Iceland with Dr Daniel Solander and Dr James Lind. By them he was introduced to the notice of Thomas Pennant, who gave him much encouragement. In 1774, at Pennant's expense, he made an extended tour of the southern Orkneys and the whole of the Shetland Islands, furnishing Pennant with valuable data for the concluding volume of his Tour in Scotland. In 1778 he visited the northern Orkneys, of which he wrote an account. His manuscript was purchased at an Edinburgh book sale in 1899 by Sir Arthur Mitchell, and has been edited by Gilbert Goudie for the Viking Society (London, 1915). The holograph is now in the Library of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. In 1782 he was elected a corresponding member of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. Failure to get his writings published, though their value was repeatedly acknowledged, filled him with bitterness and despondency. A form of ophthalmia (the result of his incessant microscopic work) attacked him in 1790, and in three years he was almost totally blind. He solaced himself with music, preached with a new fervency, and pursued his studies as far as he was able, but increasing weakness soon shattered his never robust constitution, and when he died, the sorrow of his people was profound and genuine. He marr. 27th Aug. 1775, Helen (died in childhood 2nd Dec. 1776), only daugh. of James Tyrie, min. of Sandwick and Stromness. Publications—Most of L.'s MSS. came into the possession of his early friend, George Paton, Edinburgh. The Fauna Orcadensis was published by William Elford Leach, M.D. (Edinburgh, 1813). The History is owned by the representatives of Dr Omond. The Tour of 1774 was edited by Joseph Anderson, LL.D., with an appendix of ancient documents and an Introduction containing extracts from Low's correspondence (Kirkwall, 1879), and the MS. is in the library of the Univ. of Edinburgh. A Specimen of the Norse Language was edited by David Laing, LL.D. (Edinburgh, 1861). A commonplace book entitled A Cabinet of Curiosities, and dated 1766, written while a student, is also extant in manuscript. The MS. of the Flora Orcadensis cannot be traced. Some of his books and papers are at Skaill.—[Dict. Nat. Biog.; Birsay Church Hist., 71-6; Memoir in Fauna Orcadensis; *Edin. New Philos. ORPHIR.

[Orphir was a prebend held by the Chantor of Kirkwall Cathedral. Its old church, round in form and now much ruined, was built about the year 1100. It was dedicated to St Nicholas. Near this round church are some ruins of an ancient residence of the Earls of Orkney.—[See Old Lore Miscell., iii., 197; Saga-Book, iii., 184.]

MAGNUS HALCRO of Brugh, son of 1560 Andrew H., who is mentioned as deceased in 1544-5; Chantor of Orkney and parson here from 1555; continued to hold that office at the Reformation.
Having been excommunicated for various offences, he referred his case to Douglas, titular Archbishop of St Andrews, and was

"absolved"; banished in 1575 by Lord Robert Stewart and compelled to discharge his heritage. He marr. Margaret, daugh. and heiress of Sir James Sinclair of Sanday, and had issue—Janet (marr. (1) Ronald Elphinston; (2) William Sinclair of Ethay); a natural son, Henry.—[Calderwood's Hist., iii., 303; Ronald St Clair's MS. on Orkney, 1909-10; Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 20.]

THOMAS STEVENSON, had a "donation, collation, and disposition" of this benefice in place of preceding 1574 in 1574, from Adam Bothwell, Bishop of Orkney, Firth and Stenness being also under his charge; he removed to Evie and Rendall in 1580, but returned here that year; died Nov. 1585. He marr. Sibella Stewart, and had issue—Henry; Abraham.—[Reg. Assig.; Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 111; P. C. Reg., ix., 164.]

HENRY COLVILL, youngest son of 1580 Robert C. of Cleish and Francisca, daugh. of Patrick Colquhoun of Drumsheath, and cousin of William, Abbot of Culross; had a presentation to the parsonage and vicarage of Muckhart by James VI. 24th Oct. 1577, and 28th Aug. 1579, also to the provostry of the Cathedral of Kirkwall 11th Jan. 1579, but declining acceptance of either, was pres. to this parish by James VI. 6th June 1580. On 9th July 1596, he was murdered on the Noup of Nesting, tradition says, by four brothers of the name of Sinclair, whom in some way he had defrauded of their inheritance. That he had "sett the teinds grit and small, to his wife and bairns with consent of the Bishop and Chapter" is hardly likely to be the reason. Gilbert Pacok, servitor to the Master of Orkney, was "dilatit airt and pairt of the slaughter" before the Justice-Depute 7th Aug. following, and sentenced "to be tane to the Mercat Croce of Edinburgh and his heid to be strikin fra his body." John Stewart, Master of Orkney, appears to have instigated the crime, and was duly summoned to appear before the High Court of Justiciary on 14th Oct. Failing to appear, he was "adjugit to be denouncit our sovereign lord's rebel and put to the horn." This sentence was soon taken off, as on the margin of the record is written "This Act, ordanit be his Majesty's Warrant to be extinct and delet." On 26th Oct. Sir Patrick Bannatyne of Stenhouse appears to have been summoned, whilst William Bannatyne of Gairsay and James Lokie, writer in Edinburgh, were tried for being "airt and pairt" in the murder, and were acquitted. He marr., and had issue—William. James Colvill of Huip, grandson of the min., was served his heir 8th Aug. 1638.—[Scots Peerage, ii., 570; Ing. Ret. Orkney, 26; Pitcairn's *Crim. JEROME TULLOCH, belonged to a family who held considerable property in the Orkneys after the Reformation. He was sub-chantor in the un-Reformed Church, and conformed in 1560 or soon afterwards. He had charge (with readers) of a wide district which included Sandwick, Rousay, Egilsay, Wyre, and Enhallow. He owed his position to friendship with Earl Robert, and had his residence at Quholme near Stromness (granted him by a charter of 1584), where stood of old a chapel of St Mary. In 1588 he had the lands of Dale "in the Outertown of Stromness." He died before 1594. He marr. Alison Lindsay (marr. On 6th Aug. 1611 he signed, with nine others, a Resignation of the Dignities in Orkney in favour of Bishop Law, but as no designation is appended to his name, he was probably then retired.—[Craven's Orkney (1558-1662), 109.]

ANDREW DISHINGTON, min. in 1599; trans. to Rousay and Egilsay in 1601.

JAMES GUILD, called 3rd Aug. 1659, John Graeme of Breckness having desired that G. might be heard by the congregations of both Sandwick and Stromness; called again unanimously 10th Nov. following, the previous min. protesting against his admission until payment had been made to him for building a manse at Sandwick and purchasing glebes for both parishes; ord. 22nd May 1660; received a testimonial from the Presb. 10th July 1663, and trans. to Stracathro between 8th Oct. and 5th Nov. following (q.v.).

He marr. 12th July 1682, Isabella, daugh. of John Graeme of Breckness and granddaugh. of Bishop Grahame, and had issue—John, min. of this parish.—[Smith's Church in Orkney, 150; Craven's Orkney (1662-88), 62, 98, 110.]

In a letter to the Committee of Commission of the General Assembly and Presb. of Orkney, he says: "At the time of the Revolution, I being minister at Tillicoultry, some few people in that parish took a prejudice against me for my preaching Prelacy, and threatened to rabble me from my charge. And blessed be God, I was not afraid to byd tryall as to my life and conversation, yet, finding that my ministry was not like to be acceptable, I chused rather to remove than stand in the way of any other that might be more acceptable. Therefore I willingly gave in demission of my ministry, and having lived for some time a retired life, it pleased the Lord in his Providence that I happened very accidentally to be acquainted with Sir William Craigie of Gairsay, who prevailed on me to come to Orkney"; called March 1693, but not regularly adm. to the charge; continued to preach for more than five years, when, 10th June 1698, he was inhibited by the Presb. from preaching or exercising any other functions of the ministry in Orkney. On 13th June it being reported that his successor at Tillicoultry [Robert Gourlaw] had testified that "he was one of the best of that way, a good, harmless man, and had no hand in the persecution of his parishioners," he was unanimously received into communion, was rebuked for his compliance with Prelacy, taking the Test, and intruding here; called 27th June, and adm. (at Stromness) 27th July 1698; died before 3rd Dec. 1712, aged about 65. Through the instrumentality of Patrick Gordon [afterwards min. of Rhynie] he renounced Popery, and was received by the Synod of Moray in 1734. He signed the Confession of Faith and the Formula, and was commended to the Commission of Assembly as an itinerant preacher in the Highlands; became catechist at Bellie and Rathven, and in 1736 was appointed to labour at Fort William. On 19th Feb. 1742 he was ordered to go to Orkney, and in a letter to the Presb. of Cairston, of 28th Aug. that year, the Committee of the Royal Bounty "desires and expects that you will receive him as a brother, and give him all due countenance, and recommend him as such to ministers and people in your country, and thereby encourage others to do as he has done, especially seeing that his popish relations and others show much ill-will against him." It was stated also that his removal from Fort William was "owing to his want of the Irish (Gaelic) language." that Christina Crawford, Lady of Melsetter, had refused payment of stipend for crop and year 1727. She had "encroached on the town of Fea, one-third of which was glebe, and chiefly the property of the Crown, and under the tacksman of the bishop, intending to have three dwellings built there without acknowledging either, as her son's property. She came in person with her bailie, and locked up the school-house door, built by the session and parish, and carried away the key, not allowing the schoolmaster to enter, but had given it to her wright as a workshop, though the Presb. had written earnestly to her to encourage a school in her bounds, and were ultimately obliged to apply to the steward of the county." She had also "fined the miller in £10 Scots for grinding victual to any family in an enclosed island where I can never beg nor borrow many times any sort of victual, were my family to starve for want of bread. Lest the world should know such barbarity she has discharged her tenants and ferrymen to transport any letter to me, and to catch [intercept] all letters direct for me wherever they can find them, and carry them to her or her bailie to be stopt and destroyed." The matter was referred to the General Assembly, the Presb. considering it to be "without a pallel in this Church." Ultimately, after a visitation of the parish, 8th Sept. 1730, concessions were made and an amicable settlement arranged by both sides. K. died 18th April 1746. Rousay.—The old church of Rousay still stands roofless at Swendro. At Cobberow, on the island of Weira and in this parish, is the ancient chapel of St Peter, now without a roof. this is not quite certain [he had a brother George, and another, Thomas of Craigstone]; educated at Univ. of St Andrews; M.A. (29th July 1609); adm. in 1617. On 24th June 1627, at a visitacommunicants in the parish was 637, and there was then no school. He dem. his charge 7th Nov. 1635, "though the most notable congregation in the land, whereunto many strangers did resort." He was allowed by Bishop Grahame to arrange for his successor, but at the same time, was given liberty "to set an tack for six years of the greatest part of his stipend," to the considerable disadvantage of the new incumbent. He probably went to Ireland, as on 17th June 1642, his widow, Anna Halyburton, in consideration of her present distress, appealed for aid from "the first of the contributions for the distressed people fled from Ireland" [at the time of

W. appealed to the Archbishop, the Lords of Session, and Court of High Commission, and twice went south to prosecute the matter, and proposed to make another journey when the bishop reminded him that "if he took this thyrd it would be over many in one year." He was frequently absent from his charge and in trouble with co-Presbyters and parishioners. Bishop Grahame publicly called him a "swindger," and he was more than once admonished. In Feb. 1637, he expressed regret for his actions, begging that he "be not altogether put from the calling of the ministry," but allowed "to live amongst you in such place to the glorie of God and the welfare of the people." After 1638 he was a zealous Covenanter, and latterly adopted Brownist or Independent notions. In 1639 he exchanged charges with James Haigie, min. of Rousay and Egilsay; was called as colleague to his father at Orphir, 7th April 1644, but continued at Rousay; pres. to this parish by William, Earl of Morton, coll. 30th April, and adm. 20th July 1645; dep. (by a Committee of Presb.) 23rd March 1660, for "contempt, separating from the Church, and often deserting his charge." He took up residence in Kirkwall, but was removed to the Tolbooth there, Aug. 1660, for treasonable speeches, and on a complaint from the Commissioners of Trade to Parliament, authority was given, 25th Jan. 1661, for him to be "sent south from sheriff to sheriff till he reaches Edinburgh, there to be incarcerated." He afterwards went to Holland, where he died in 1662. He marr. and had issue—Isobel (marr. Edward Brown, Stronsay).—[Acts of Parl., vi. pt. ii. 569, vii. App. 5; *Presb. WESTRAY, or THE LADY KIRK OF WESTRAY, AND THE CROSS KIRK OF WESTRAY.

[These two parishes were united in the sixteenth century.

The Lady Kirk of Westray.—This parish is the northern part of the island of Westray. Its church, built on the Bay of Pierowal, was dedicated to St Mary. On the island of Papa-Westray, in this parish, there was a chapel of St Curadan, known as the Kirk of How. On that island also were chapels of St Tridwal and St Nicholas.

The Cross Kirk of Westray.—The ruins of the Cross Kirk of Westray still stand on the Bay of Tuquoy. As its name implies, it was dedicated to the Holy Rood. At Rapness, within this parish, there is now a mission chapel.]

North Ronaldsay. Conforming to Protestantism he was app. by the General Assembly in 1576 co-commissioner with Gilbert Foulzie for the planting of churches wherever necessary. He resided in Kirkwall in what of old was known as the "Laverock" [now Victoria Street], and was alive in 1605. He was pioneer of the Reformed Church in Orkney.—[Craven's Hist. of the Church in Orkney (1558-1662), 35, 111; Hossack's Kirkwall, 229; Peterkin's Notes, App., 58.]

SYNOD OF SHETLAND

THE General Assembly erected this Court on 31st May 1830. Until 1848 the Synod contained only the two Presbyteries of Lerwick and Burravoe. The meetings of Synod are held at Lerwick.

PRESBYTERY OF LERWICK, CALLED OF OLD SHETLAND, AND LATER SCALLOWAY

[On 15th June 1646 this Court, then styled the Presbytery of Shetland, was annexed to the Synod of Sutherland and Caithness. The settlement thus arrived at was of but short duration. On 9th August 1648 the Presbytery was taken out of that Northern Synod, and made directly subject to the authority of the General Assembly without any Synodal oversight. On 23rd March 1704 this Presbytery of Shetland or Scalloway was joined a second time to the Synod of Sutherland and Caithness. It so remained until 13th May 1715, when it was brought once more under the direct control of the General Assembly as a single, separate Presbytery. On 31st May 1830 the Synod of Shetland was set up, and this local Court was incorporated in it. The Presbytery Register commences on 14th June 1700.]

BRESSAY, BURRA AND QUARFF

[The church of Bressay was dedicated to St Mary. In the sixteenth century, the three parishes of Bressay, Quarff, and Burra were united. In 1833, Quarff and Burra were severed again from Bressay, and became a united parish quoad sacra apart from it. In Bressay were the following three chapels: St John's at Kirkabister, St Olaf's at Gunnista, and the Kirk of Noss. The finely carved monument, known as the Bressay Stone, now in the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries in Edinburgh, was brought from the ancient burial-ground of this parish at Kolbeinsbroch. Dr Zachary M. Hamilton, minister of Bressay, found it there, beside the ruined church of St Mary, in 1864. It is a cross slab of Pictish design, with an inscription in ogham writing.]

DUNROSSNESS AND FAIR ISLE.

[These parishes were united in the sixteenth century. In 1600, or very soon after that, Sandwick and Cunningburgh were joined with them, making a union of four parishes. The united parishes of Sandwick and Cunningburgh were severed again quoad sacra from Dunrossness and Fair Isle 24th Oct. 1870.

Dunrossness. — There has been much controversy as to the patron saint of Dunrossness. The likeliest account seems to be that which states that the parish church was dedicated to St Matthew. At St Ninian's Isle, on the western coast of Dunrossness, there stood a chapel of St Ninian. In its burial ground, in 1875, Gilbert Goudie discovered several stones inscribed in ogham writing. At Clumlie, also in this parish, there was a chapel of St Columba. At Bigton now stands a mission chapel.

Fair Isle.—The old church of this parish was dedicated to the Holy Rood. The church of Fair is now in use as a mission chapel.]

He left a curious and interesting diary, published by the Scottish History Society in 1889. In July 1799, James Haldane preached at Dunrossness, and after service M. stood up [he was then 88 years of age], and in a commanding tone warned the people "to take heed to the words they had heard, more especially as this visit was a new and unheard-of occurrence in their history." It is said that as M. went up to the pulpit and Haldane came down, "the two men met upon the stairs and embraced each other affectionately with many tears, and that this sight produced a profound impression upon the congregation." During the delivery of his discourse, Haldane broke one of the brackets of the book-board by a vigorous blow, and M. refused to allow it to be mended that it might remain as a memorial of the great evangelist's visit. In 1786, he raised a process before the Court of Teinds, for augmentation of stipend, which had been fixed in 1722; the

MAGNUS NORSEK, is said to have 1598 gone to Norway to learn the Norse language in order to qualify himself for preaching to the Zetlanders, who at that time understood no other. He probably was a Norwegian himself, judging from his name. He became min. of Yell before 1586; trans. to this parish before 1593, and acquired the lands of North Sandel, Norwick, and Hugea. He died May 1632. His lands, it is said, he designed giving to his eldest son, but the youngest, supposing his father might become dependent in old age, required a share else he would not contribute to his support. To obviate his objection, the lands in North Sandel, Norwick, Unst, were given to him, and those of Hugea to the eldest. His second son continued to reside with him, and when an attempt was made to oust his father from the living, he endeavoured to keep possession until extruded by a military force, when he escaped at a back window and fled to his brother in Hugea, who also came to render assistance, but found the soldiers had gone. N. marr.

ROBERT LEIGHTON, D.D., formerly min. of Newbattle (cf. Vol. I., 332); Principal and Professor of Divinity, Univ. of Edinburgh, 1653-61; went to London, where he was re-ord. and consecrated (on his own choice) as Bishop of Dunblane 15th Dec. 1661; pres. by Charles II. 7th June 1662; held Archbishopric of Glasgow in commendam, but app. to the See by Charles II. 20th Nov. 1671; res. in 1672 (having failed to bring about his proposed "accomodation" between the upholders of Episcopacy and Presbytery), but not accepted till Aug. 1674, when he returned to Edinburgh, and soon afterwards removed to Broadhurst, Horsted Keynes, Sussex, the home of his sister, widow of Edward Lightmaker. On 22nd June 1684, he journeyed to London for an interview with the Earl of Perth, the Scottish Chancellor, and died of pleurisy at the Bell Inn, Warwick Lane, three days afterwards. He had frequently expressed the wish to die in an inn. He was aged 73, unmarr., and was buried in Horsted Keynes church, beside his brother, Sir Elisha. He was the great peacemaker of the Church of Scotland, a man of singular toleration and goodwill, fervent in his piety, abundant in his charity. His character has everywhere called forth the most sincere encomiums. He founded a bursary in Edinburgh Univ. in 1663, and bequeathed another in divinity, besides funds for the support of two bursars in Univ. of Glasgow, 1677 and 1684, and for the support of two poor men in the Bishop's Hospital there. His library he left to the clergy of Dunblane, where 1200 volumes are still preserved. Thirty-one volumes are also in the manse of Newbattle. ST ANDREWS.

JOHN DOUGLAS, Principal of St Mary's College, St Andrews; pres. by James VI. 6th Aug. 1571; consecrated 10th Feb. 1572; died Oct. 1576. He was the first to hold a Protestant Episcopate in Scotland. (See page 417.)

PATRICK ADAMSON, born Perth, 1578 probably on 15th March 1536-37, son of Patrick A., baker; educated at Grammar School of Perth and Univ. of St Andrews; M.A. 1558 (under the name of Constyne, Constean, Coustane, or Constant); declared qualified to preach by General Assembly of 1560, and adm. min. of Ceres (cf. Vol. V., 130); dem. some years later and travelled as a tutor on the Continent, where he was imprisoned for six months, having published a poem (in thanksgiving for the birth of a son to Queen Mary) which gave offence to the French Government. On being released he found his way to Geneva, where he studied divinity under Theodore Beza. In 1567-8 he was again in Paris, but finding it in the throes of civil war he fled to Bourges where, disguised, he hid in an inn for seven months, during which period he translated the Book of Job into Latin verse, composed a tragedy on the subject of Herod, and rendered the Confession of Faith into Latin. Having returned to Scotland he became min. of Paisley, Aug. 1572, and resumed his name of Adamson; was chaplain to the Regent Morton, and nominated Archbishop of St Andrews 14th, and received the Royal confirmation 21st Sept. 1576, with a command for his consecration. Almost immediately he came into conflict with the Presbyterian party, various charges being brought against him, and threats made which forced him to shut himself up within the castle of St Andrews, where he was seized with an illness that baffled the skill of his physicians, but yielded to the treatment of a woman, Alison Pearson, through whom he made a complete recovery. [Though escaping for a time, Alison was ultimately tried before the Court of Justiciary and burned as a witch.] In 1583 he went to London, where he preached to large crowds and gained the friendship of many English churchmen. In May 1584 he was back in Scotland, but found himself increasingly detested by the people, who, on one occasion during his sermon in St Giles, left the church almost in a body. At a meeting of the Synod of Fife, April 1586, following a violent attack on his character and conduct by James Melvill, he was excommunicated, but immediately restored by the Assembly. In June 1587 and May 1590 other charges were preferred against him, amongst them that he had solemnised the marriage of the Earl of Huntly with the daughter of the Duke of Lennox, and had defaced and mutilated entries in the Assembly's Registers. The case was referred to the Presb. of Edinburgh by whom he was excommunicated, the Assembly concurring. He died 19th Feb. 1592, worn out with vexation and worry, weighed down by sickness and poverty. According to Spottiswood [Hist., vi., 385], he was "a man of great learning, and a most persuasive preacher, but an ill administrator of the Church patrimony." James Melvill characterised him as a "man of many great gifts who especially excelled in the tongue and pen." He marr. Elizabeth, daugh. of William Arthur of Cairns, and had issue—James, died before 10th Oct. 1593; Andrew; Violet (marr. Thomas Wilson, advocate, was contracted in marriage in 1584 to James Wemyss, apparent of Lathockar, but marriage did not take place); Margaret (marr. (1) cont. 15th Sept. 1588, David Orme of Mugdrum: (2) Andrew Leitch, min. of Maryton); Patrick, served heir of his brother James; Elizabeth. Publications—De papistarum superstitiosis ineptiis (Edinburgh, 1564); Genethliacon Jacobi VI Carmine (Paris, 1566); Catechismus Latino Carmine redditus et in libros quattuor digestus (St Andrews, 1572); Confessio Fidei et Doctrinæ per Ecclesiam Reformatam Scotice recepta (1572); A Declaration of the King's Majesty's Intention in the late Acts of Parliament (Edinburgh, 1585); The Recantation of Maister Patrick Adamson (1598); Reverendissimi in Christo

GEORGE GLEDSTANES, born about 1563, son of Herbert G., clerk and 1604 bailie of Dundee; educated at Grammar School there and Univ. of St Andrews; M.A. (1580); became a teacher of languages at Montrose and reader in the Second Charge, 1586-7; ord. to Ecclesgreig [St Cyrus] before 23rd July 1587; trans. to Arbirlot May 1592; trans. to St Andrews 19th July 1597; app. Bishop of Caithness 1st Nov. 1600 (retaining his parochial charge); adm. a Privy Councillor 24th Nov. 1602; was a commissioner for the Union in 1604; promoted by James VI. to this See 12th Oct. that year, but fearing the displeasure of his co-Presbyters did not inform them of his appointment until 10th Jan. 1605; refrained also for a time from assuming the title of Archbishop, and was not consecrated until 13th Jan. 1611. He attended the Conference at Hampton Court in 1606, and on his return was app. constant Moderator of Presb. and Synod, against the wishes of the members, who declared that they "would rather abide the horning and all that follows thereupon, than lose the liberty of the kirk." [The leading opponents were imprisoned and one was outlawed.] He was mainly instrumental in having the Court of High Commission established in Scotland, and much of his time was spent in Edinburgh on Privy Council and parliamentary affairs; died 2nd May 1616. He marr. Christian (died 1617), daugh. of John Durie, min. of Montrose, and had issue—Alexander, D.D., min. of St Andrews; Margaret; Elspeth (marr., cont. 13th April 16—, Sir John Wemyss of Craigton, Commissary of St Andrews) [said also to have marr. Dr George Haliburton, father of Bishop of Aberdeen]; Christian (marr. Patrick Wemyss, min. of Hoy); Euphame (marr. JOHN SPOTTISWOOD, M.A., formerly min. of Calder-Comitis 1615 [Mid-Calder] (cf. Vol. I., 176); trans. from Archbishopric of Glasgow and installed 6th Aug. 1615; died at London 26th Nov. 1639. His son, Sir John of Dairsie, died in 1679; Sir Robert, Lord President of the Court of Session, born 1596, was beheaded at St Andrews 20th Jan. 1646; a daugh. marr. George Simpson, bailie of Dysart. JAMES SHARP, born Banff Castle, 4th May 1618 [not 1613 as in Dict. 1661 Nat. Biog.], son of William S., provost and sheriff-clerk of Banffshire, and Isobel, daugh. of John Leslie of Kininvie, and grandson of David S., merchant, Aberdeen, by a daughter of Haliburton of Pitcur; educated at King's College, Aberdeen; M.A. (1637); studied divinity under Drs John Forbes of Corse and Robert Baron; proceeded to Oxford where he was an intimate of Jeremy Taylor; became Professor of Philosophy, Univ. of St Andrews, 1643; ord. to Crail 27th Jan. 1648; elected one of the mins. of Edinburgh in 1650, the General Assembly sustaining his call against the refusal of the Presb., but the invasion under Cromwell intervened and prevented his acceptance. In 1651 he became leader of the Resolutioners; on 28th Aug. that year he was made prisoner by Cromwell's forces at Alyth, and taken to London, where he lay in the Tower until 10th April 1652 when he was released on giving his bond not to remove from the city; on 17th June he was allowed to return to Scotland, and later he was given full liberty. In 1657 he went to London to interview Cromwell on behalf of the Resolutioners, but did not succeed. In 1659 he identified himself with the programme of General Monk, and penned the Declaration which, in Monk's name, was widely circulated, and led to the Restoration. In 1660 he was one of the deputation of six ministers sent to London to represent the views of the Resolutioners, and in May he had an interview with Charles II. at Breda; app. a royal chaplain, and had the Chair of Divinity at St Andrews, 12th Jan. 1661; nominated Archbishop of St Andrews and consecrated (at London) 15th Dec. following; app. a Privy Councillor in 1664. On 9th July 1668 he narrowly escaped a pistol shot in the High Street of Edinburgh by James Mitchell [Bishop Honyman of Orkney (q.v.), his companion, was wounded, and never fully recovered; the assailant was executed in 1678]. On 3rd May 1679, at Magus Moor, near St Andrews, he met his death at the hands of John Balfour of Burleigh, and others, whose intention was the capturing or slaying of the sheriff-substitute of the shire, the chief offender in the persecution of the local Covenanters. He was buried in the parish church of St Andrews, where an ornate marble monument was erected by his son. His portrait, by Lely, is in the Scottish National Portrait Gallery. By the Presbyterians, Sharp was execrated as a traitor, bent on his own aggrandisement and advancement, sharing and abetting the King's duplicity. Episcopalian opinion has regarded him as the victim of circumstance, who yielded only when he found that Presbyterianism could no longer be maintained. Recent research has not altered the first of these judgments. The editor of the Lauderdale Papers (Osmund Airy) [vol. i., p. x.] declares that "a careful perusal of the whole series will save any future biographer from the temptation of endeavouring to palliate a life of petty meanness such as has seldom been exceeded in history. In the most comprehensive sense of the word Sharp was a knave, pur sang, and one who, to retain the price of his knavery, eagerly submitted to be cajoled, threatened, bullied, or ignored, by bolder men as served their turn." He marr. 6th April 1653, Helen, daugh. of William Moncrieff of Randerston, and had issue—Sir William of Scotsraig, created a Baronet 1683, died Jan. 1712; John, bapt. Feb. 1665; Isabella (marr., cont. 18th Dec. 1679, John Cunningham of Barns; Catherine; Margaret, born 8th Dec. 1664 (marr. 11th Oct. 1683, William, Lord Saltoun), died 1734; Penelope (marr. BISHOPS

[Following the Concordat of Leith in 1572, the Tulchan Bishops came into prominence. Their Episcopal character was only a butt for popular ridicule. The first actual Episcopal period after the Reformation lasted from 1610 to the Glasgow Assembly of 1638, the second period from 1661 to the Revolution. The Archbishops were those of Glasgow and St Andrews. There were fourteen Bishops.]

GALLOWAY.

ALEXANDER GORDON, born about 1558 1516, second son of John, Master of Huntly, and Jane Stewart, natural daugh. of James IV. and Margaret Drummond, and brother of George, fourth Earl of Huntly; brought up at Court as a companion to the young King, James V., with whom he was a special favourite; appears in public life for the first time in 1544 as administrator of the diocese of Caithness, whilst Robert Stewart, the Bishop-Elect, was in England under forfeiture for treason. In 1547 he was nominated Archbishop of Glasgow by the Dean and Chapter, but the election being disputed by the Regent Arran, James Beaton was appointed in 1551, Pope Julius III. conferring on G., as a compensation, the titular Archbishopric of Athens; app. Bishop of the Isles 26th Nov. 1553, but it is doubtful if he was ever consecrated, no evidence being found to that effect; trans. to this See Sept. 1558, holding in commendam the Abbeys of Tongland and Inchaffray. In 1560 he identified himself with the Reformers and voted in Parliament, 1st Aug., for the Acts establishing the new doctrines, and on 17th Jan. 1561 he subscribed the First Book of Discipline with this stipulation, that existing prelates should possess their revenues for life on condition of embracing the Reformation, and making provision for the ministry within their dioceses. [Both Knox and Wodrow refer to him as the only Bishop who joined the Reformers, but that is an error]; app. a Privy Councillor 3rd Nov. 1565, and an Extraordinary Lord of Session 26th Nov. following. In 1567 he was accused of not having visited the kirks within his charge for three years, of having haunted the Court too much, and of holding offices incompatible with his sacred calling. He pled guilty, but his commission was continued, with an admonition to be more diligent and exemplary. On 4th Jan. 1568 he resigned his See in favour of his son John, and thereafter much of his life was concerned with the cause of Queen Mary, whom he served with fidelity, though she had told Knox, in an interview at Lochleven in 1563, that G. was "a dangerous man." On 8th May 1568 he signed the bond for the Queen's restoration after her escape from Lochleven, whereupon the Assembly cautioned him as to his conduct, and in the following year inhibited him from "any function in the kirk." He continued to pray for Queen Mary, and on 17th June 1571 preached in St Giles (Knox having found it necessary to retire from Edinburgh), saying in the course of his sermon that "na inferior subject has power to deprive or depose their lawfull magistrat, he or she whatsumever, albeit they commit whoredome, murther, incest, or ony uther cryme, being anes by God just and lawful prince or princess to reign above you, not chosen as the imperiall magistrats are." In Aug. 1572 he was charged by the Assembly with intruding into the ministry at Edinburgh and acknowledging the Queen's authority, and in the following year he was ordered to do public penance in sackcloth on three successive Sundays, a sentence which, March 1574, was reduced to one day's penance without sackcloth. He attended the Assembly which opened on 6th Aug. 1575; died on 11th Nov. that year at Clary, Penninghame. He marr. Barbara Logie of Ennis (she survived him and marr. (2) Alexander Gordon of Grange of Barquhill), daugh. of — Logie of that Ilk, and had issue—John, his successor as Bishop of Galloway; Alexander, died young; Laurence, Commendator of Glenluce, died 1611; George, Bishop of Galloway; Robert, in the service of Queen Margaret of France (slain in a duel); William, probably died young; Barbara of Clary (marr. Anthony Stewart, rector of Penninghame). JOHN GORDON, born 1st Sept. 1544, 1568 son of preceding; educated at Univ. of St Andrews, and at Paris and Orleans (when he had a yearly pension from Queen Mary out of her French revenues). On 4th Jan. 1568 the temporalities of this Diocese were resigned in his favour and confirmed by James VI. He was then in France in the service of Prince Louis of Condé, but returned to England and engaged under Thomas, Duke of Norfolk, attending him at the Conferences held at York and Westminster to consider the question of Queen Mary's guilt. When Norfolk was sent to the Tower of London in Oct. 1569, G. attached himself to the service of Mary herself until Jan. 1572 when she was deprived of her Household. At her recommendation he returned to France and became a gentleman of the bed-chamber to Charles IX., Henry III., and Henry IV. He is said to have rescued a number of

Scots and English at the massacre of St Bartholomew; is mentioned as Bishop of Galloway in 1583 but his connection was nominal, the revenues going to his father and his brother George. At the age of 59 he was recalled from abroad by James VI., and taking orders in the Church of England, was app. Dean of Salisbury Oct. 1603; D.D. (Oxford, 13th Aug. 1605), "because he was to dispute before the King, his kinsman." He preached frequently at Court, and was held in high esteem by James, who spoke of him as "a man well travailled in the ancients." In 1611, at his brother's death, the Barony of Glenluce was bestowed upon him by Royal charter; died at Lewston House, Dorsetshire (while on a triennial visitation), 3rd Sept. 1619, and was buried in Salisbury Cathedral, where an inscribed stone marks his grave. on the Episcopal side in the controversy which followed the Perth Articles of 1618, and it was in this defence that he published his Irenicum in 1629. He declined to sign the National Covenant (1638), and in 1640 was cited to appear before the Assembly at Aberdeen, his case being remitted to the Presb. of Edinburgh, but still refusing to yield, he was deprived 20th April 1641. To escape persecution after the sanctioning of the Solemn League and Covenant, and the subscription demanded by all, he sailed for Campvere, 5th April 1644, with his son George, visited the chief towns in the Netherlands, making his headquarters at Amsterdam, preaching frequently in the Scots and English churches, and producing his monumental work Instructiones Historico-Theologicæ. In July 1646 he returned to Corse, where he died 29th April 1648, and was buried in the Churchyard of Leochel, the Presb. of Aberdeen having refused permission for his remains to be laid beside those of his father and wife in the Cathedral Church. No monument marks his tomb. In personal intercourse he is described as a man of great charm. "His portrait, with its broad forehead, long nose, and firm, quiet mouth, all the features well cut and well proportioned, betrays a man of race and intellect; and his eyes are full of the understanding which comes when knowledge is subject to charity. He was sociable and hospitable, but his main characteristics were his deep spirituality, his sensitive conscientiousness, simple faith, the genuineness, reverence and unabashed resolve of one who stood or fell to God not to men. His learning and theological insight gained for him a widely honoured renown." Hemarr. before 1619, a Dutch lady, Soete Roosboom ("Sweet rose-tree,") she died 19th Jan. 1640, and had issue—Henry, died August 1623; George; and seven others who all died young. Shortly afterwards he was charged with teaching heretical doctrines to the students, and the matter was referred to a committee of the most learned men in the Church who reported in favour of his orthodoxy in Aug. 1647. Further charges having been made, he resigned in April 1650 on a pension. He died while on a visit to Edinburgh, 20th June 1654, and was buried in Greyfriars Churchyard there. He marr. From 1580 onwards each Principal has acted as primarius Professor of Divinity, or first Master.]

In 1590 he became rector of the Univ. of St Andrews, which office he held until 1597, and at the coronation of the Queen, 17th May 1590, he recited a Latin poem; was again app. Moderator of the General Assembly, 7th May 1594, but on a visitation of the Univ. by the King in June 1597, he was deprived of his rectorship; attended the General Assembly at Dundee, March 1598, but was ordered to withdraw by the King. In 1599 he was app. Dean of the Faculty of Theology. He caused the Synod of Fife in 1599 to censure certain propositions in the Basilicon Doron by the King. At the Assembly at Montrose in March 1600 he unsuccessfully claimed his right to sit, but was successful in that at Burntisland May 1601. He took part in that held at Aberdeen in 1605 and offered, with others, a protest to Parliament at Perth in 1606 in favour of the right of free Assembly. For this he was summoned with others to London, where he was cited before the English Privy Council for writing a bitter Latin epigram against the accessories of Anglican worship and placed under the custody of John Overal, D.D., Dean of St Paul's, and afterwards of Bilson, Bishop of Winchester. Again brought before the Privy Council, he broke into a violent tirade against that Court and was committed to solitary confinement in the Tower. Henri de la Tour, Duc de Bouillon, having obtained his release, app. him to the Chair of Biblical Theology in the Univ. of Sedan, and M. embarked for France 19th April 1611; died unmarr. after a series of illnesses at Sedan in 1622. SAMUEL RUTHERFORD [more correctly RUTHERFURD], born 1647 at Nisbet (now part of Crailing), Roxburghshire, about 1600. Nothing certain is known as to his parentage, but he belonged to the Hunthill family (from whom Sir Walter Scott was descended) and his father is believed to have been a farmer or miller. A brother was schoolmaster of Kirkcudbright, and Reader there, and another brother was an officer in the Dutch service; educated at Jedburgh Grammar School and Univ. of Edinburgh; M.A. (1621); app. regent of Humanity at Edinburgh in 1623; dem. that office in 1626, because of immoral conduct with Euphame Hamilton (afterwards his wife) (Minutes of Edinburgh Town Council, 3rd Feb. 1626); adm. to Anwoth in 1627, probably without Episcopal sanction. In 1630 he was summoned before the Court of High Commission, but the charge of non-conformity was not persisted in. Mainly for his publication of a work against Arminianism he was again accused in 1636 by Bishop Sydserff, and after proceedings at Wigtown, was cited before the Commission and prohibited, 27th July, from exercising ministerial office, and ordered to reside in Aberdeen during the King's pleasure. During this period he wrote most of his well-known Letters. In Feb. 1638 he returned to Anwoth and attended the Glasgow Assembly that year as one of two commissioners from his Presb. Shortly afterwards he was elected one of the mins. of Edinburgh, but the Commission of Assembly appointed him, in preference, Professor of Divinity at St Andrews, which office he only accepted on condition that he should be allowed to act as colleague with Robert Blair, one of the mins. of St Andrews, 7th Jan. 1639. He was a member of succeeding Assemblies and consistently supported the Covenanting Party therein. In 1643 he was appointed one of the Commissioners of the Church of Scotland to the Westminster Assembly and preached several times before Parliament, remaining in London for four years; app. to Principalship in 1647; was offered in 1648 a Divinity Professorship at Harderwyck in Holland, in 1649 the Chair at Edinburgh, and in 1651 he was twice elected to a Professorship at Utrecht, but all these he declined. In 1643, 1644, 1650, and 1651 he was elected rector of the Univ., and in 1650 on Charles II.'s visit to St Andrews, he made a Latin speech to him on the duty of Kings, and in 1651 he joined the Protesters. After the Restoration he was one of the first marked out for persecution, his work Lex Rex was ordered by the Committee of Estates to be burnt at the Crosses of Edinburgh and St Andrews, and he was deprived of his office of Principal. Further, he was cited to appear before Parliament on a charge of treason, but he died 29th March 1661 [the date—20th—on his tombstone is an error]. One of the classical figures of the Church of Scotland, his influence during his lifetime, as scholar, preacher, and writer, was profound and wide, and after his death his name received a popular canonisation which it retains to this day. Some forty editions of his Letters have been reprinted (Bonar's edition contains 365), and innumerable anecdotes of his sayings and doings are enshrined in, and constitute no inconsiderable part of the Scottish tradition. Among his last words were: "Glory shines in Immanuel's Land," on which Mrs Anne Ross Cousin founded her hymn, "The Sands of Time are sinking." He was buried in the churchyard of St Regulus. In 1842, a massive granite obelisk to his memory was erected at Anwoth, where the site of his manse—Bush-o'-beild—and "Rutherford's Walk" and "Witnesses" are still pointed out. His church stands ruinous in the churchyard. He marr. (1) 1626, Euphame Hamilton, who died June 1630, and had issue—Marie, bapt. 14th April 1628; (2) 24th March 1640, Jean M'Math, buried in Greyfriars Churchyard 15th May 1675, and had issue—Agnes (marr. William Chiesley, W.S.), died 29th July 1694, and six others who predeceased him. THE MODERATORS OF THE CHURCH

OF SCOTLAND

MODERATORS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY

[Moderators of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland from 1560 to 1928, with the dates of Assembly over which they presided, and places where the Assembly convened. The names of those who presided over the first four Assemblies have not been recorded. It is probable that John Knox constituted these meetings, but the first reference to his doing so does not occur until the fifth Assembly. When a Moderator held that office more than once, this is indicated by numbers at the end of his name.]

- 1560, 20th December. At Edinburgh. The first General Assembly of the Reformed Church met in the Magdalene Chapel, in the Cowgate. It consisted of forty-two members, of whom six only were ministers. They sat as "the ministers and commissioners of the particular kirks in Scotland, convened upon the things which are to set forward God's glory, and the weal of His Kirk in this realm." The chief business of this Assembly was to give approval to a number of persons who were recommended as Readers, Ministers, and Superintendents. Acts were also passed in regard to the laws of consanguinity, the election of ministers, elders, and deacons, the confirmation of testaments, and ordaining that those who had held office in the Popish Church, and were of honest conversation, should be supported with the alms of the Kirk, as other poor: that the Parliament should be petitioned to admit none to public offices but such as were of the Reformed religion, and to punish sharply all sayers and hearers of Mass. This Assembly seems to have continued its sittings during seven days, when it adjourned to meet on the 15th of January 1561.
- 1561, 15th January. Assembly appointed to meet on this date; if it met, there is no record.
- 1561, 27th May. At Edinburgh.
- 1561, 15th December. At Edinburgh.
- 1562, 29th June. At Edinburgh.
- 1562, 25th December. At Edinburgh. JOHN KNOX, min. of St Giles, opened, "calling upon God's name for the assistance of His Holy Spirit."—[Booke of the Universall Kirk of Scotland [Peterkin], 18.]
- 1563, 25th June. At Perth. JOHN WILLOCK, opened with prayer.
- 1563, 25th December. At Edinburgh. "It was proponed be the hail Assemblee that ane Moderator should be appointed, for avoiding confusion in reasoning. The Lords of the Secret Council, with the hail brethren of the Assemblee, appointed Mr John Willock, Superintendent of the West (cf. Vol. I., 50), Moderator during this Assemblee."—[Booke of the Kirk, 17.]
- 1564, 25th June. At Edinburgh. JOHN WILLOCK (2).

1567, 25th June. At Edinburgh. GEORGE BUCHANAN, born at Middle Ledlewan, or The Moss, Dumgoyne, Killearn, Stirlingshire, about 1st Feb. 1506, fifth [not third, as in Dict. Nat. Biog.] son of Thomas B. [son of Robert B. of Drumkil, an insolvent laird] and Agnes Heriot, said (on slight authority) to have been a daugh. of Heriot of Trabroun; educated first at Killearn School and, as appears probable (from a Letter of Robert Baillie, iii., 402) at the Grammar School of Glasgow. In 1520, having shown remarkable promise of scholarship, he was sent by his uncle James Heriot to Paris, where he gave himself chiefly to the study of Latin composition. His uncle died, and his widowed mother being too poor to maintain his residence abroad, he returned home; served with the French troops brought by John, Duke of Albany, to Scotland, and was present at the siege of Wark-upon-Tweed in 1523. In 1524 he became (with his brother Patrick) a student at St Andrews under John Mair, or Major, and graduated B.A. 3rd Oct. 1525. The summer following he entered the Scots College at Paris, and was M.A. in March 1528; taught grammar in the College of St Barbe and tutor to Gilbert Kennedy, Earl of Cassilis, 1531-6. He returned to Scotland in 1536, when James V. appointed him tutor to his natural son, Lord James Stewart, afterwards Abbot of Kelso. Being prosecuted for the writing of two Satires against the Franciscan friars, he fled to France in 1539, spent two years at Bordeaux as Latin Professor in the College of Guienne, and had Montaigne as one of his pupils. In 1547 he went with the Portuguese, André de Góuvéa, to teach in his newly-established seminary at Coimbra. When in prison in 1551 charged at the instance of the Inquisition as a heretic and anti-Romanist he solaced himself with translations of the Psalms into Latin verse. In 1552 he escaped to England but soon returned to France, where he became tutor in the family of Maréchal de Brissac, a post which he held for five years. Returning to Scotland about 1560, he became a favourite at Court and was classical reader to Queen Mary, from whom he received a grant of the temporalities of Crossraguel Abbey. He openly embraced the Reformed doctrines, took an active share in the government of the Church, was a member of several General Assemblies, and was elected Moderator [not as a layman, as commonly represented, but in virtue of his office as Principal of St Leonard's College, St Andrews (to which he was app. in 1566) min. of the parish and Professor of Divinity] 25th June 1567. In 1568 he was one of the commissioners sent to England to defend the Scottish nobles for having deposed and imprisoned their Queen. He believed her guilty of the murder of Darnley, and penned his memorable Detectio Mariæ Reginae (1571) in which the proofs against Mary were assembled with remorseless skill. In 1570 he was named tutor to the young King, James VI., and resigned his Principalship; was made Director of Chancery and Keeper of the Privy Seal, with a seat in Parliament and in the Privy Council. In 1578 he was one of a Government Commission to examine a work on the "Policy of the Kirk," and the General Assembly placed under his revision (with others) Adamson's Latin version of the Book of Job. In 1579 he published De Jure Regni apud Scotos, the most important of his political writings, and in 1582 his Rerum Scotticarum Historia, the work of twenty years, dying within a month thereafter in Kennedy's Close, High Street, Edinburgh, on 28th Sept. His grave in the Greyfriars Churchyard is unknown. To his memory David Laing, the antiquary, erected a cenotaph (with bust) in the churchyard. Old Greyfriars Church contains a fine memorial window. An obelisk, 103 feet in

- height, was erected at Killearn, in 1788. Buchanan's reputed skull is in the Anatomical Museum of Edinburgh University. In honour of the 400th anniversary of his birth, an academic Celebration of great interest and brilliancy was held at St Andrews in July 1906. A similar Celebration took place at Glasgow. ARMY AND NAVY CHAPLAINS

[Following the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, in which several ministers of the Church of Scotland served as chaplains, a Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains (now Chaplains to His Majesty's Forces) was appointed by the General Assembly in 1860, with John Cook, D.D., St Andrews, as Convener. He was succeeded in 1863 by Kenneth Macleay Phin, D.D., minister of Galashiels. In 1878 the Committee became a Sub-Committee of the Colonial Committee. In 1900, under the Convenership of Theodore Marshall, D.D., it again became a separate Committee, James Alexander M'Clymont, C.B.E., D.D., being Convener from 1909 to his death on 19th Sept. 1927. During the European War (1914-18) a large number of ministers were engaged on chaplaincy work abroad and at home. As far as possible their periods of field service have been noted at their respective parishes. In 1928 the complement of commissioned Presbyterian chaplains in the Regular Army was twelve, of whom nine held permanent and three temporary commissions. Six of these appointments were held by ministers of the Church of Scotland. Three ministers were exclusively occupied as officiating chaplains at London, Caterham, Dover, and Hythe. Seventeen held appointments at military stations in or near their home parishes. A large number of ministers were chaplains of the Territorial Army. In the Royal Air Force there were three chaplains. In the Royal Navy the Church of Scotland was represented by one commissioned chaplain and an officiating chaplain at Portsmouth. Nineteen parish ministers acted as officiating chaplains to the Presbyterians on H.M. ships stationed in their neighbourhood.]

SYNOD OF THE SCOTTISH CHURCH IN ENGLAND

[On 4th May 1836, by recommendation of the General Assembly, the Presbyteries of Lancashire and North-West of England, under whose jurisdiction were congregations connected with the Church of Scotland, met at Manchester and agreed to constitute themselves into a Synod with the designation of the "Presbyterian Church in England in connection with the Church of Scotland." In 1839 they were joined by the Presbyteries of London and Newcastle-upon-Tyne; in 1840 by the Presbytery of Berwick-upon-Tweed; and in 1842 by those of Northumberland and North-West of Northumberland. In 1843 the Synod became identified with the Free Church, and the latter part of its designation was dropped. For some years the eighteen scattered congregations which adhered to the Church of Scotland (the Presbytery of London excepted) carried on their work mostly as independent units. In 1850 these were again united into Presbyteries, and a Synod was constituted in 1851 as "The Scottish Synod in England in connection with the Church of Scotland." On 28th May 1927, the General Assembly enacted and ordained "that with the concurrence of the Scottish Synod in England, the congregations embraced in that Synod shall be attached to such Presbyteries of the Church of Scotland as may be determined by the General Assembly," having "the same status as that which belongs to other congregations in each such Presbytery," such incorporation to take effect when the necessary financial and other implications have been mutually agreed upon by the General Assembly and the Scottish Synod in England, and finally approved by the General Assembly. In 1928 the Synod comprised three Presbyteries, consisting of ten congregations.]

PRESBYTERY OF NORTH OF ENGLAND

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED.

[JOHN ROUGH, a pre-Reformation priest who conformed to Protestantism, was the earliest Presbyterian preacher in the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed. Appointed by Lord Protector Somerset in 1547, he removed soon afterwards to Newcastle and Hull, and ten years later suffered martyrdom at Smithfield. In 1549, JOHN KNOX followed Rough at Berwick, where he exercised a remarkable influence on the morals and manners of the people. JAMES MELVILLE was at Berwick from 1610 till his death on 13th Jan. 1613. A monument commemorating his ministry has been erected in the parish church. JOHN WELSH, min. of Ayr, lived in exile at Berwick, preaching sometimes on the frozen surface of the Tweed to avoid the ecclesiastical penalties of both countries. In 1648 JOHN OXENBRIDGE was min. of Berwick when a new parish church was built. He was succeeded in 1653 by NICHOLAS WRESSEL (afterwards ejected) who had for colleagues LUKE OGLE (cf. Vol. II., 21) and GILBERT RULE (cf. Vol. I., 39), ejected min. of Alnwick, afterwards Principal of Edinburgh Univ. PATRICK WARNER assisted at Berwick and Tweedmouth till his admission to Irvine in 1688. GILBERT LAURIE of Crossrig (cf. Vol. II., 52) was colleague to Luke Ogle till his admission to Hutton and Fishwick 19th Dec. 1693.

In the first half of the eighteenth century there were at Berwick three congregations of Presbyterians, known as the Low, the High, and Middle Meetings, corresponding to their localities in the town. The Low and High Meetings continued in connection with the Church of Scotland and were united in 1879 to form St Andrew's Church in Hide Hill. The Middle Meeting was erected in 1756, soon after the foundation of that congregation. The first min. joined the Relief Synod on resigning his Berwick charge, and on the accession of the third min. the congregation was received into the same communion and became Chapel Street Secession Church.]

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

[The succession of this congregation dates from 1732. Its first temporary place of worship, fitted up for the purpose by Scottish residents in Sandgate, was a house in Sommerville's Entry, otherwise Ebenezer Entry and Meeting House Entry. A new church known as Wall Knoll, was opened 18th Oct. 1764, the site being bought from Christopher Gray, merchant, who stipulated that "the building cannot be devoted legally to any other purpose than that of a place of worship for Protestant Dissenters of the Church of Scotland, and no preacher can be called except a licentiate of that Church." Because of disagreement amongst the congregation, the galleries were set up one side sloping, the other level. From 1842-92 the congregation leased the Caledonian Church in Argyll Street from the North Eastern Railway Company, at a rental of £40 annually. In 1892, services were held in the Geographical Hall, St Mary's Place, Barras Bridge. A fifth church (that in use) was erected opposite Benton Terrace, Sandyford Road, in 1905.]

CROWN COURT, COVENT GARDEN.

[This congregation is first found in 1711 as one of two which worshipped together in St Peter's Court, St Martin's Lane (in a two-storied building erected over the archway through which entry was had to the court from the lane), under the pastoral care of George Gordon and Patrick Russell. The tradition that one of those congregations had worshipped in the chapel of the Scottish Embassy (Scotland Yard), destroyed by fire in 1697, is probably correct. The building in St Peter's Court, vacated in 1719, was afterwards used as a studio by Rubilliac, the famous sculptor, and the Academy for the Improvement of Painters and Sculptors which he founded, precursor of the Royal Academy of 1768.

On 24th March 1719, a new church in Crown Court, Russell Street, Covent Garden, was completed at a cost of £611, 10s. 11d., and "the Most Noble the Peeres of North Britain, by Mr Russell's interest, did contribute to him for the building of the chapel," afterwards known as the Scottish National Church. It was rebuilt in 1777, and in 1847, and again in 1909. (See Black's Scots Churches in England, 75-111).]

PATRICK RUSSEL or RUSSELL, M.A. (Edinburgh, 13th July 1695) (cf. Vol. I., 269); formerly min. of Drumelzier. Went to London, where he was associated with George Gordon in the pastoral care of the two congregations worshipping in St Peter's Court, St Martin's Lane, 1711-14. On Gordon's death, both congregations resolved that they will have "only one minister in time to come, and they unanimously did make choice of Russel." He removed with his congregation to the new chapel erected in Crown Court 24th March 1719, and ministered till his death 27th Nov. 1746; buried in Bunhill Fields. Walter Wilson says of him that he "enforced with serious earnestness the uncorrupted doctrine of the Gospel . . . preaching but the Sunday preceding his death." He marr. and had issue—Thomas, bapt. 3rd Sept. 1711 (as appears from the earliest of the church records); Patrick, stationer, Old Bailey, London, bapt. 10th Feb. 1713.—[Jones's Bunhill Memorials, 249; Wilson's Dissenting Churches, iv., 5.]

He instituted the first Sunday School at Crown Court (1814). He left a widow who resided at Gravesend. In early life he and his wife offered for foreign service under the London Missionary Society, and were captured by a French privateer which landed them in South America. With great difficulty they succeeded in returning to Scotland.—[Portrait in Crown Court Vestry; Jones's Bunhill Memorials, 69.]

(Edinburgh, 8th July 1843); dem. his charge 21st July 1879 (when a sum of £3000 was raised as a testimonial); died at Chiswick 5th July 1881 and buried in Kensal Green. He was one of the most popular preachers in London, attracting great congregations and rebuilding his church with sittings for a thousand worshippers. He took keen interest in many philanthropic schemes, became prominent as a controversialist, a champion of the Establishment principle, and a determined opponent of the Papacy, his public discussion at Hammersmith in 1839 with Daniel French, a Roman Catholic lawyer, creating much excitement and winning him wide admiration. The printed Report was extensively circulated. In 1863 he lectured against Bishop Colenso. He was the first to hold services in Exeter Hall, his Sunday audiences numbering over 4000. He established Ragged day and Sunday Schools, attended up to 1879 by 16,250 children. His interpretations of prophecy gave him wide celebrity, and he clung stoutly to the view that the "last vial" of the Book of Revelation was to be poured out from 1848 to 1867. The Times described him as a "luminary blazing in the mid-heavens, and outshining the light of day." He was a voluminous author, and his works had a wide vogue. CHARGES IN ENGLAND, NOW EXTINCT, OR MERGED WITH OTHER CONGREGATIONS

[Ministers connected with the Church of Scotland who have served Charges in England, now extinct, or merged with other congregations.]

[The Restoration of Charles II. in 1660 proved a calamitous event in the history of English Presbyterianism. On 19th May 1662, there was passed the Act of Uniformity by which Episcopacy obtained complete ascendancy and Presbyterianism was rent asunder. Re-ordination by Bishops was made compulsory on all ministers whose previous ordination had been other than Episcopal. Abjuration of the Scottish League and Covenant became obligatory, and the unlawfulness of taking up arms against the King, no matter the provocation, had to be acknowledged. The time limit of three months expired on St Bartholomew's Day, 24th August 1662, when over 2000 ministers of the Church of England, mainly Presbyterian in their convictions, were driven with their families from their churches and homes. The Conventicle Act forbade any religious gathering of more than five persons unless they were Episcopalian. The Five Mile Act prohibited ejected ministers from entering the towns and burghs. The Oxford Act debarred all save Episcopalians from the Universities. Breaches of any of these Acts were punished with severe fines or by long periods of imprisonment. Many Presbyterian causes in Northumberland and elsewhere are traceable to this dark, obnoxious time.

The Revolution of 1688 and the arrival of a Presbyterian ruler, William of Orange, brought relief to the stricken Presbyterians, who, however, were only "tolerated" by the Episcopal party. They were allowed to build their own "meeting-houses," but anything in the nature of Presbyterian organisation was banned. No Presbytery or Synod was possible. The result was that many Presbyterians adopted a purely independent position and became, for all practical purposes, Congregationalists. The teaching of the pulpit also and the conduct of divine service, which was subject to no control, succumbed not seldom to the unorthodox tendencies of the times. Arianism and Unitarianism replaced evangelical Christianity, and were often regarded as only another name for Presbyterianism. With the advent of the eighteenth century there came a revival of Presbyterianism, mainly brought about by the influx of Scots immigrants to the northern and central districts of England and into London, where a Scots congregation had existed since 1672, and a Presbytery in connection with the Church of Scotland was established in 1760. Not a few congregations were created also by those who adhered to the Secession and Relief Churches in Scotland. With one or other of these bodies, the surviving English Presbyterian congregations largely associated themselves, but that the Scottish influence prevailed is seen in the designations of the two Presbyterian groups when they came to constitute themselves into a broader organisation. In 1836 there was formed the Synod of the Presbyterian Church in England in connection with the Church of Scotland. In 1843 the latter part of this designation was omitted [see under Scottish Church in England]. On 13th June 1876, a Union effected between the Presbyterian Church in England and the English U.P. Synod resulted in the reconstituted Presbyterian Church of England.]

The first documentary evidence of the existence of a Presbyterian congregation is in the Indulgence Book of Charles II., in the Public Record Office, in which are lists of persons licensed as teachers or ministers, and their permitted meeting-places. On 5th Sept. 1672, a licence was granted to Burnand to hold services in the house of William Atkinson at Brampton. Atkinson appears to have been a glover there till his death in 1684. Calamy says that Burnand removed to Harwich, thence to London, where he died in poverty. — [Nonconformist Memorial (Palmer's edition), i., 296.]

LONDON AND MIDDLESEX

FOUNDERS' HALL.

[Walter Wilson speaks of this congregation as having been "collected in the reign of Charles the Second." Tradition has given the year as 1672, a date confirmed from a search of the Minutes of the Founders' Company. In 1764 the congregation moved to a new church to which was given the name of London Wall. In 1843 minister and congregation joined the Free Church. In 1857 another transfer took place to the district then called De Beauvoir Town, but now known as Canonbury, where the congregation of Canonbury Presbyterian Church of England represents in unbroken succession the earliest of London Presbyterian foundations.]

ALEXANDER CARMICHAEL, M.A. (cf. Vol. III., 319); formerly min. of Pettinain. In March 1672 the Scottish Privy Council ordered the Earl of Linlithgow "to transport the person of Alexander Carmichael guarded by four musketeers" from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh to the Tolbooth of Burntisland, whence he was deported by ship on 1st April. On reaching London, he was chosen to preach to a number of his own countrymen "who formed themselves into a Society upon the model of the Church of Scotland," thus establishing, at the Hall of the Founders' Company, off Lothbury (behind the Bank of England), the earliest congregation of Scots Presbyterians in England, of which he was minister till his death in July 1677.

JEREMIAH MARSDEN, born 1626, second son of Ralph M., Puritan min. at West Kirby, Cheshire; educated at Univ. of Cambridge; became a school teacher and occasional preacher; pensioner of Christ's College, Cambridge, 1647-8. He suffered much persecution as an itinerant preacher from 1654 onwards, travelling all over the north of England (under the name of Ralpham) and in parts of Ireland, and was frequently imprisoned. In 1676 he became min. at Founders' Hall. He was unjustly suspected of political plotting and ordered to desist from preaching; on his refusal he was committed to Newgate Prison, where he died in 1684. Publication.—He left a MS. autobiography Contemplatio vitæ Miserabilis, and several Treatises unnamed.—[Dict. Nat. Biog.]

NICHOLAS BLAKIE, M.A. (cf. Vol. III., 323); formerly min. of Roberton, Lanarkshire; transported to London where he had a meeting-house somewhere; adm. to Founders' Hall in 1684, probably from Blackfriars, where he was licen. 2nd April 1672 (given liberty to preach in his own house); returned to Roberton about 8th July 1690; died in London before 17th Dec. 1698.

ROBERT FLEMING, born 1660, son of Robert F., min. of Cambuslang; educated by his uncle, John Sinclair, min. of Ormiston, and later, at Univs. of Leyden and Utrecht. At the age of 13 he signed a Covenant of Dedication to the ministry; was privately ord. in Holland 9th Feb. 1687-8 without entering on a charge; spent four years in England as a tutor and became min. of the English Presbyterian Church at Leyden in 1692; succeeded his father as min. of the Scots Church, Rotterdam, 1694. In 1698 the congregation of Founders' Hall invited him to become their minister, an application strongly supported by King William III. and Principal Carstares, both of whom had known Fleming in Holland and desired his aid in arranging the Presbyterian basis of the Church of Scotland. On 19th June 1698 he was settled in London, where his abundant labours greatly influenced the prospects of the Church, and gave him wide celebrity and esteem. He was one of the six Merchant Lecturers at Salters' Hall and assisted as a leader of the three denominations in presenting a congratulatory address to Queen Anne at her accession in 1707; declined Principalship of Univ. of Glasgow offered by his kinsman, Lord Carmichael; died 21st May 1716. A ripe scholar, he lived up to his motto libere sed modeste, and had "no liking for the observation, censure, and talk of this noisy, troublesome, and tumultuous world." He left a widow and several children. Publications—Mirror of Divine Love [Poetical Paraphrase of the Song of Solomon] (1691); Miscellaneous Poems (1691); Apocalyptical Key: an Extraordinary Discourse on the Rise and Fall of Papacy (London, 1701, 1793, 1794; Edinburgh, 1809, 1841 [with Memoir]); Discourses on Several Subjects (portrait) (London, 1701); The Rod or the Sword (1702); Practical Discourse on the Death of King William (1703); Christology, 3 vols. JOHN CUMMING, born in Ulster of Scots parentage, 1685; educated at Univ. of Glasgow; M.A. (1705); went to England and held a charge at Cambridge; removed to London June 1716 as successor to preceding, Fleming himself having made the nomination; D.D. (Edinburgh, 8th Nov. 1728); died 1729. He was an able and diligent divine, took a prominent part in the Salters' Hall controversy of 1719, and in the discussions which followed. His sincerity and staunch Protestantism gave him an assured place in the hearts of his English Presbyterian brethren. He marr. his cousin, daugh. of John Cumming, min. of the Presbyterian congregation at Shepton Mallet. Publications—The General Corruptions and Defection of the Present Times; The Conspiracies of Evil Designing; Remarks upon a Sermon on Popery (London, 1715) [answered in Reflections on the Scandalous Aspersions cast on the Clergy by the Author of "Remarks," etc. (London, 1717)].—[Wilson's Dissenting Churches, ii., 487-94].

WILLIAM WISHART, D.D. (cf. Vol. I. 33, 140, III. 474); formerly min. of Tron Parish, Glasgow; adm. to Founders' Hall in 1730; adm. to New Greyfriars, Edinburgh, and to Principalship of Univ. of Edinburgh in 1737.

JOHN PARTINGTON, a native of Scotland; educated at Univ. of Glasgow; M.A. (2nd July 1719); licentiate of Church of Scotland but went to England and became min. at Northwich, Cheshire, before a meeting-place had been opened there. At a meeting of the Cheshire Classis, 2nd Aug. 1720, he was "examined, approved, and allowed to preach as a candidate," and ord. 4th Sept. 1722; min. at Knutsford 1722-4, Great Meeting, Coventry, 1724-32, Hampstead 1732-8, and Founders' Hall 20th March 1738, till his death in 1749.—[Wilson's Dissenting Churches in London, ii., 496; Sibree's Non-conformity in Warwickshire; Journ. Hist. Soc. of England.]

ROBERT YOUNG, born Dalkeith, 1777, son of Robert Y.; educated at the Academy of Alexander Christison [afterwards Professor of Humanity, Univ. of Edinburgh] and at Univ. of Edinburgh; licen. by Presb. of Dalkeith; min. of Low Meeting, Berwick-upon-Tweed; elected min. of London Wall and adm. 31st Aug. 1803, after a vacancy of ten months; D.D. (Edinburgh 1804); chaplain to Regiment of Loyal North Britons, before whom he preached at a Thanksgiving Service for the victory of Trafalgar 5th Dec. 1805; died at Cheltenham 8th Oct. 1813, and buried in Bunhill Fields. His heretical opinions brought him before the Church Courts, and, refusing to give a sufficient explanation, his licence was suspended in 1831. He was one of Irving's intimates and held his views.—[Oliphant's Life of Irving, 283; Story's Memoir of Robert Story, 186; Hanna's Chalmers, ii., chap. 15.]

FERGUS JARDINE (cf. Vol. V., 95); ord. to London Wall 2nd Dec. 1830; adm. to Kinghorn 22nd Dec. 1831.

ARTILLERY STREET.

[Founded by secessionists from London Wall Church, during the ministry of Robert Young. In 1809 the congregation re-united with London Wall.]

JAMES YOUNG. In Sept. 1798 the Presb. of London instructed J. Y. to "supply the pulpit as often as he could."

ROBERT SIMPSON, D.D., of Hoxton Academy; had a call to this charge, but the Presb. refused to take any steps until S. laid before them an extract of his licence as a preacher "from some Presb. of the Church of Scotland." (See under Bolton.)

DAVID BRICHAN, D.D. (cf. Vol. VI., 417); ord. 28th Sept. 1803; pres. to Dyke and re-ord. there 9th June 1808.

CALEDONIAN CHURCH, CROSS STREET, AND NATIONAL SCOTS CHURCH, REGENT SQUARE.

[On 28th May 1778, twenty-five Highlanders in London instituted the Highland Society of London, having for one of its objects the establishment of systematic Gaelic preaching in the metropolis. In 1812 a chapel in Cross Street, Hatton Garden, was purchased for £4150 from a body of Swedenborgians, and, controlled by the Directors of the Caledonian Asylum, steps were taken to form a Gaelic congregation, the building to be known as the Caledonian Church. On 19th May 1823 a scheme was launched for a National Scots Church in London, and a freehold site was acquired in Regent Square for £1500. The foundation stone was laid by John, Earl of Breadalbane, on 1st July 1824, in the absence, through illness, of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence, afterwards King William IV. On 11th May 1827 opening services were conducted by Dr Chalmers, the total cost of the building being over £21,000. At the Secession of 1843, minister and people joined the Free Church. Regent Square is now one of the historic congregations within the Presbyterian Church of England.]

JAMES BOYD (cf. Vol. III., 476), ord. to Caledonian Church 18th Jan. 1818; adm. to Auchinleck 6th May 1819 [afterwards of Tron Parish, Glasgow].

ALLAN MACNAUGHTON (cf. Vol. III., 316); ord. to Caledonian Church 2nd March and adm. 27th Oct. 1819; adm. to Second Charge, Campbeltown, 2nd May 1821 [afterwards of Lesmahagow].

EDWARD IRVING, born Annan, 4th Aug. 1792, second son of Gavin I., tanner, and Mary Lowther (from Dornock); educated at Annan Academy and Univ. of Edinburgh; M.A. (10th April 1809); master in the mathematical school, Haddington, 1810-12 (where Jane Welsh, afterwards wife of Thomas Carlyle, was one of his pupils); master of Kirkcaldy Academy 1812-18; licen. by Presb. of Kirkcaldy June 1815; had thoughts of going to Persia as a missionary, "labouring after the Apostolic fashion," but having been invited to officiate in St George's Church, Edinburgh, Thomas Chalmers, D.D., being one of his hearers, he became assistant to the latter at St John's, Glasgow, Oct. 1819. Preached a trial sermon at Caledonian Church, London, before George, Duke of York, President of the Caledonian Asylum, on Christmas Sunday 1821; was invited to become min. but difficulties (afterwards adjusted) emerged on account of his ignorance of Gaelic (then necessary under the trust-deed of the Asylum) and did not enter on the charge until 16th Oct. 1822, having been ord. by Presb. of Annan in July preceding. A reference by George Canning in the House of Commons to Irving as a preacher assisted his growing reputation, which speedily developed into fame. Crowds from all classes flocked to hear him, admission by ticket was instituted, and on 11th May 1827, a new church in Regent Square was opened for worship. Attracted to the study of prophecy through the work of the Spanish Jesuit, Manuel Lacunza, Irving developed various fantastic theories on the near imminence of the second advent, the gift of tongues, and the doctrine of baptismal regeneration, on which he published considerably and lectured widely both in England and Scotland. In Dec. 1830 he withdrew from the jurisdiction of the London Presbytery on an attempt to prosecute him for unsound doctrine. On 12th March 1832 the trustees of his church originated proceedings before the Presb. and he was removed from his charge 26th April following, but 800 communicants accompanied him to a new place of worship where they assumed the name of the Holy Catholic Apostolic Church. On a charge of heresy as to the sinlessness of Jesus, he was deposed by the Presb. of Annan, 13th March 1833, a circumstance which broke his heart. He died of consumption at Glasgow, 7th Dec. 1834, his last words being, "If I die, I die unto the Lord." He was buried in the crypt of Glasgow Cathedral. An orator of the pulpit, peerless in his generation, spoken of as "the greatest preacher the world has seen since Apostolic times," Edward Irving was the most striking and the most tragic figure of Scottish ecclesiastical history. With all his faults there was about him a sublimity as of the old prophets. His confident estimate of his own powers and of the rôle he was fitted to fulfil, carried him forward to vast successes, but he was always humble, and his personal life was that of a saint. The genuineness of his beliefs in the "unknown tongues" (first heard on 28th March 1830 from Mary Campbell, at Fernicarry, on the Gareloch, and continued by others at private prayer-meetings, and in the public services at Regent Square) has never been questioned. A statue of Irving [by J. W. Dods, sculptor, Dumfries] was unveiled at Annan by Professor Archibald H. Charteris, D.D., on 4th Aug. 1892, the centenary of Irving's birth. He marr. 13th Oct. 1823, Isobel (died before 1862), elder daugh. of John Martin, D.D., min. of Kirkcaldy, and had issue—Edward, born 22nd July 1824, died at Kirkcaldy, 11th Oct. 1825; Margaret, born 2nd Oct. 1825, died about 1854; Mary, born 22nd Feb., and died 14th Dec. 1827; Samuel, born 1828, died 6th July 1830; Gavin, born and died 28th July 1829; Martin Howy, professor at Melbourne, Australia, born 21st Feb. 1831; Ebenezer, born 1832, died 21st April 1833; Isabella, born 1834 (marr. 1856, Samuel Rawson Gardiner, LL.D., D.C.L., the historian), died 1878.

In 1643 he attended Maitland when a commissioner to the Westminster Assembly; app. vicar of Long Benton, Northumberland, and ord. 20th April 1647, by members of the fourth London Presbytery. His politics and ecclesiastical connection were obnoxious to Sir Arthur Hazlerigg, who procured his banishment from England; he retired to Scotland till 1653 when he was adm. to Whittingham, Northumberland, but ejected by the Uniformity Act of 1662. He became chaplain to Lauderdale, and declining to take the Oxford oath, was deprived by the Five Mile Act of 1665. In 1669 he travelled in France, returned to London, and became chaplain to Alderman Plampkin, upon whose death he was elected minister of a Presbyterian congregation in Bishopsgate Street Without. The congregation was broken up, and he preached privately at Theobald's-in-Cheshunt, Hertfordshire, till 1687, when he was called to a Presbyterian congregation in Drury Lane; died 29th Jan. 1707, and buried in Bunhill Fields. His funeral sermon was preached by Robert Fleming (secundus) (London, 1707).—[Wilson's Dissenting Churches of London, i., 398; Jones's Bunhill Memorials, 90; Dict. Nat. Biog.]

GOODMAN'S FIELDS, WHITECHAPEL.

[A congregation which originated at Whitechapel early in 1842 had a place of worship opened in Church Street June 1843. When the Presb. met, 13th June (in the Scots Church, Woolwich), to arrange for the admission of James Ferguson, the minister appointed, a majority of their number declined to induct him in connection with the Church of Scotland, their sympathies being now with the Free Church. They further carried a motion declaring "that that portion of this Presbytery's immemorial designation, to wit, 'in connection with the Established Church of Scotland,' shall henceforth be renounced, discontinued, and annulled." Protest was made by eight of the minority—four ministers (Samuel Blair, Dudley; James Reid Brown, D.D., Swallow Street; John Cumming, Crown Court; Alexander M'Glashan, St Andrew's, Stepney), with four elders, who forthwith left the meeting and "at a convenient place did resume procedure as the Scots Presbytery in London in connection with the Established Church of Scotland." Mr Ferguson, a licentiate of Presb. of Strathbogie, was adm. 29th June 1843, "with the verbal alterations necessary in consequence of recent events." See Black's Scots Churches in England, 347-52, for extracts of Minutes of both Presbs.]

A church was erected in 1755 on the refusal of the proprietor to renew the lease to "Dissenters." After the death of Dr Duncan the reliable history of the congregation seems to cease.]

SWALLOW STREET, PICCADILLY.

[The date of this foundation is not known with certainty, but it was formed apparently soon after the Revolution. A meeting-house in Glasshouse Street was the first place of worship. In 1710 the congregation purchased the lease of a chapel (afterwards reconstructed) in Swallow Street, built on Crown land about 1692 by a body of French Protestants, and about this period the cause was greatly strengthened by an accession of English Presbyterians worshipping at a meeting-house close by, which had originally been that of Richard Baxter after his ejection from Oxendon Chapel. In 1734 Dr Anderson and a section of his congregation quitted Swallow Street and established a separate place of worship at Lisle Street (q.v.). In 1880 the long, chequered career of Swallow Street was brought to a close, the building sold, many of its members connecting themselves with Crown Court, and Marylebone Presbyterian Church of England.]

Biog.*]; educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1705-9; licentiate probably of Presb. of Aberdeen. In 1709 or 1710, he removed to London, where he "collected a congregation from amongst persons of the Scottish nation who resided about Westminster," and opened a preaching-place in Glasshouse Street, removing soon afterwards to the French Protestant chapel in Swallow Street. In consequence of a difference with his people he migrated with a portion of the congregation to Lisle Street, Leicester Square (q.v.); died 28th May 1739. He had some reputation as a preacher, was known as "Bishop Anderson," a voluminous author, and an ardent Freemason. WILTSHIRE

HORNINGSHAM.

A constant tradition affirms that a number of Scots workmen engaged in the erection of Longleat House, near Horningham, for Sir John Thynne, declined to attend worship at the parish church, and built a meeting-place for themselves, with a piece of land attached for a graveyard.

This building is still in existence, thatched as of old, and is now used as a Congregational Chapel. Though unquestionably dating back to 1566, as appears from a stone in the end wall, there is no substantial evidence of its original construction as a Scots Presbyterian Church. See Journ. Presb. Hist. Soc. of England, Vol. I., 73, 79, for a full account, with list of its Presbyterian (English) mins. from 1650.

IRELAND

[Ministers connected with the Church of Scotland who have held charges in Ireland from 1613.]

[Presbyterianism in Ireland owes its origin to Scottish colonisation and to the religious persecution in Scotland during the reigns of James VI. and Charles I. The collapse of the Irish Rebellion and flight of the Earls of Tyrconnell and Tyrone in 1607, placed at the disposal of the Crown nearly 4,000,000 acres of forfeited territory in the North of Ireland. Thither a steady stream of immigration passed from Scotland, until in a short period the whole of Ulster became prevaillingly Scottish. The paucity of Irish Episcopal ministers being insufficient to cope with the new population, ministers from Scotland were happily and providentially found, as a result of the triumph of Episcopacy in 1613. They were welcomed by Archbishop Ussher and his colleagues, and settled in Episcopal charges, yet allowed to retain their Presbyterianism. Amongst these were Edward Bryce [or Brice], Robert Blair, James Hamilton, Josias Welch, John Livingstone (infra), who had all suffered for conscience sake. But their successes in the fresh field led to embitterment on the part of the Bishops, until, in 1636, the Presbyterian ministers were ejected from their livings and driven from the country. On 23rd Oct. 1641, the Irish Insurrection broke out, when vast numbers of Protestants were massacred by the native Irish. A relief force of 10,000 men was despatched from Scotland under Major-General Robert Monro, who quelled the Rebellion and remained to quieten the country. To this was due the re-introduction of Presbyterianism through the regimental chaplains who were now the only ministers, the Bishops having fled and most of their clergy slain. On 10th June 1642, there was formed the first Irish Presbytery, that of Carrickfergus. From the Church of Scotland help was immediately forthcoming, and a revived Presbyterianism was soon in ample evidence until in 1660, there were in Ulster 80 congregations, 70 ministers, 5 Presbyteries, and 100,000 communicants. The Restoration of 1660 brought an abrupt, unwelcome check to the progress of the Church, and inaugurated a period of persecution which lasted for over a century. In 1661, sixty-four ministers chose ejection rather than submit to prelatie re-ordination (Latimer's Hist., 129). Better times came with King William. At his death in 1702, there were 9 Presbyteries, 3 Sub-Synods, and a General Annual Synod. Later, the Irish Presbyterian Church became a centre of keen doctrinal dissension. A body of "New Lights," opposed to the Westminster Confession, and organised in 1725 as the Non-Subscribing Presbytery of Antrim, became excluded from the Synod in 1726. In 1741 the Secession Church of Scotland began a mission in Ireland, and on 12th April 1750, the first Associate Presbytery was instituted at Artikelly, near Limavady. In 1829 the Synod of Ulster became divided on the Arian Controversy, when seventeen ministers, who espoused those views, formed themselves into the Remonstrant Presbytery of Ulster. Their separation prepared the way for a junction between the Ulster Synod and the Seceders. This Union was consummated on 10th July 1840, when ministers and people thus incorporated, assumed the designation of "The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland." In 1854, the isolated congregations in the South and East, which comprised the Synod of Munster, joined in, giving to the Church at last a position and a power in the land, which, but for her great oppressions, should have been hers long years before.]

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND OVERSEAS

CONTINENT OF EUROPE

[On the Continent of Europe the Church of Scotland conducts regular services at Brussels, Geneva, Paris, and Venice. A chaplaincy at Brussels was begun in 1830, but was discontinued on account of the national troubles in Holland. Temporary appointments followed at a later period. In 1908 a permanent chaplaincy was instituted, and a place of worship erected at 181 Chaussée de Vleurgat, near Avenue Louise. At Geneva (associated with the work of John Knox in earlier days, and, in modern times, as headquarters of the League of Nations, upwards of forty International Societies having also their offices there) summer services were inaugurated in August 1867 by Alexander Mitchell, D.D., Professor in the University of St Andrews, and continued yearly by ministers of the Church of Scotland. In 1926 a permanent chaplain was appointed. Worship is held in the beautiful Chapel of the Maccabees in the Cathedral of St Pierre. The chaplaincy at Paris dates from 1858, when the congregation worshipped in the dome of the Oratoire. A church situated at 17 Rue Bayard, Avenue Montaigne, near Avenue des Champs Élysées, was purchased in 1884 for £5000, and opened 1st Nov. 1885. In 1900 the Chaplaincy at Venice became connected with the Church of Scotland. Services were conducted at Dresden for many years previous to 1914, when they were suspended. In 1884 a church and manse were purchased. At Homburg also summer services have been discontinued since 1914.]

HOLLAND

[Ministers of the Church of Scotland and others who have served in Scottish Churches in Holland.]

AMSTERDAM.

[The Scottish Church at Amsterdam was built about the year 1400. Originally a Chapel connected with the ancient order of nuns known as Baguines, who lived in the Bagynenhof (Baguines' Court) nearby, it was assigned in 1607 by the municipal authorities as a meeting-place for a congregation of refugees from Scotland and England, of whom, during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, large numbers fled to Holland, and of British merchants attracted to Amsterdam, then one of the busiest marts of the world. The founding of the congregation is thus described in the Church Records: "In the yeare of our Lord and Saviour 1607, the third day of the moneth commonly called February, about four of the cloke in the afternone is the Church in the Round Bagijnhof opened and in presence of Mijnheer de Schout and D. Petrus Plancius, minister of the Reformed Dutch Church in Amstelredamme is the praeching-stoel brought in that same Church and set up for the English-people dwelling at Amstelredamme in Holland. The next day following being the Lord's day about nyn of the clocke in the forenoon after prayer and thancksgeiving unto God hath D. Johannes Pagetius (infra) of the English Church praecht the first sermon in that foresaide Church, and the text was, Create in me a claene hart, O God, psalm 51, verse 10." While the first ministers came from England, since the middle of the eighteenth century they have been called from the Church of Scotland. In 1709 a Second Charge was instituted, which continued to 1863. Till a century ago there was also a special visitor of the sick, the Ziekentrooster, and Deaconesses were appointed, with short intervals from 1665 to 1861. The Act of Uniformity in 1662 sent many English clergymen to Holland, who became identified with the congregation and were its most learned and zealous workers. An enlargement of the church took place in 1665 when many families sought refuge in Amsterdam after the Restoration of Charles II. In 1727 the building was practically reconstructed. It contains many beautiful memorials, and gifts, the brass desk on the pulpit with lion, monogram "W.M.R.R., Anno 1689," and lion's claw, together with two candlesticks, having been presented by William of Orange and his Queen. The Tercentenary of the congregation was celebrated on 1st Feb. 1907, when the delegate from the Church of Scotland was James Robert Mitford Mitchell, D.D., then Moderator-Designate.]

JOHN PAGET, M.A., was in 1598 rector of Nantwich, Cheshire, but ejected from his charge for Puritanism, took refuge in Holland; accepted the Dutch Confession of Faith 18th Jan. 1605, and was app. chaplain to the English troops in the service of the States General. CAMPVERE, OR VEERE.

[Campvere was an important seaport of Holland in the island of Walcheren and was originally known as Kamperveer, from the veer, or ferry for Kamper, on a neighbouring island. After the submersion of that island the name Kamper was dropped and the place is now known only as Veere.

From as early as the year 1644, and for upwards of three centuries and a half, there existed between Scotland and this ancient town (in 1928 a mere village with a population of 890) an almost uninterrupted commercial intercourse. It was the Staple Port for the whole of Scotland. The Scottish Staple was an organisation of merchants of the Royal Burghs for the monopoly of foreign trade, with the Convention of Burghs as governing body. Business abroad was carried on by "factors" who disposed of the imported merchandise upon commission, returning to the owners the proceeds of the sale. Of the early church history of Campvere little is known. In a contract of 1541 it was stipulated that the Scots should have "the choice and option of a suitable place in the collegiate church, with a chaplain" so as it shall please the said nation." According to the Dutch chronicler, Ermerins, John Dawson held that position in 1552. There was, however, no regular minister or church for the next sixty-two years, notwithstanding repeated recommendations by the Convention of Burghs. In 1613 Andrew Ramsay (infra) declined appointment as minister, when Alexander MacDuff (infra) accepted the charge. In 1642 the congregation became connected with the Presbytery of Edinburgh, the first instance of any foreign congregation having a direct official communion with the Church of Scotland. In a letter to William Spang, Archibald Thomson, the Clerk of Assembly, wrote: "We conceive that your presence may be behoofful for that correspondence which our Church intendes, God willing, to keep with our brethren abroad." Commissioners were also invited to the Synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and to the General Assembly, but this was frequently omitted because of distance and expense. On 29th May 1644 the Solemn League and Covenant was signed by all the members. From 1792 to 1799 this kirk suffered greatly from the Revolutionary troubles of the time, the antagonism of the civil authorities, and, during its last stages, from disharmony (on political grounds) with the Classis of the Dutch Church. The complete collapse of trade and the hostility of the State combined to reduce the congregation to poverty. Finally, on 11th Oct. 1799 the Dutch Republic issued a decree by which the Staple Contract was annulled, the minister, James Likly (infra), preaching his farewell sermon on Sunday 24th Nov. The Records of the church, extant from 1630, are preserved in the Stadhuis at Veere. A set of four communion cups of Campvere Church (presented by the factors in 1620) were bought, as old silver, by Lord Egerton of Tatton from a firm of London jewellers, 23rd July 1875, and presented by him to Manchester Cathedral, where they still are. In 1894, Arthur Wellesley Frater (infra), minister at Middelburg and Flushing, appeared at the bar of the General Assembly in support of a commission in his favour from "the kirk-session of the remanent congregation of the Scotch Church at Campvere, presently worshipping in Middelburg." The Assembly refused to sustain the commission, but at a subsequent session, by a majority of two, resolved "that the Church of Campvere remain on the Roll of Assembly."—See "The Church at Campvere," in Davidson and Gray's The Scottish Staple at Veere, 270-336 (London, 1909); Dr Mair's Digest of Church Laws, 4th edition, 368-75 (Edinburgh, 1923); Steven's History of the Scottish Church, Rotterdam, 288-94 (Edinburgh, 1835); and Bibliography appended to the present volume.]

An entry in the church records during the ministry of Jervey is of interest in connection with the Porteous Mob. On 11th Jan. 1738, the minister informed his session that George Robertson "some time ago tryed and sentenced to death by the Lords of Justiciary in Scotland for crimes libelled and proved against him, having escaped from justice and settled himself in this place, desired to have his child baptized, which extraordinary and straitening case he referred to the Consistory for advice." The Consistory unanimously found that "the said George Robertson being actually under sentence of death, could by no means be permitted to present his child to baptism, that being such a scandal as no church could purge, far less overlook. But that the child be not deprived of the privilege of baptism for the father's crimes, do allow Helen Purves, lawful wife, and mother of the child, to present the same, and to take on the vows, they knowing nothing against her character and conduct." Robertson's name further appears on 9th May 1757, DELFT.

[An English Staple and market existed at Delft from 1621 to 1635. In that year the Staple was removed to Rotterdam, but the manufacturers and tradesmen who remained were not deprived of their place of worship, the town continuing its grant of 500 guilders for a resident minister. DORDRECHT, OR DORT.

[Before 1618, the year of the famous Synod of Dordrecht, or Dort, many Scots people had settled in that town. ROTTERDAM.

[The Scottish Church at Rotterdam is one of the most interesting on the Continent. It was founded on 13th Sept. 1643 with Alexander Petrie (infra) for its first minister, and, placed officially under the care of the Dutch Classis was accorded all the privileges of the Dutch Church, with full liberty to observe Scottish use and wont for worship. It was the central place of worship for the Scottish Brigade, consisting of three regiments, raised in 1572 for service in the Netherlands under the Earl of Leicester, and left by him there when he returned to England. For over two centuries these regiments aided the States General in their wars with Spain and France. They were always recruited from Scotland, and in 1688, as the earliest standing army in Europe, they formed the nucleus of William the Third's forces. The regimental chaplains were associated with the ministers of this congregation, and, until 1815, the church supported in Rotterdam, the Scottish Poorhouse, on the Schotsche dijk (now Schiedamsche dijk), for the education of orphan children of soldiers, and as a means of dispensing charity to invalided pensioners. The first meeting-place was a house in the Wynstraat, granted by the magistrates. In 1662 the congregation had the use of the ancient chapel of St Sebastian (demolished in 1910) in the Lombardstraat. Here ordination services, forbidden at home, were held by the banished Presbyters during the days of the Covenant. Amongst others, Richard Cameron was set apart to the ministry by Brown of Wamphray (q.v.) and Robert MacWard (infra) who (with his hand still upon Cameron's head) is said to have uttered the prophecy, fulfilled within a year: "Here is the head of a faithful minister and servant of Jesus Christ, who shall lose the same for his Master's interest." Colonel Wallace, the leader of the Pentland Rising, was an elder for a considerable time, and Sir Robert Hamilton, leader at Bothwell Bridge, was a communicant. On 13th Dec. 1695, there was laid the foundation of a new church, which was opened in Oct. 1697 by Robert Fleming the younger (infra). All the stone-work was brought from Pittenweem and Queensferry. In 1894 this building underwent a complete renovation. It contains many interesting memorials, and has some valuable communion plate. The ancient pulpit of St Sebastian's has been preserved. The early records of the congregation are extant.]

A sentence of extreme barbarity was passed, but before that could be carried out he escaped from prison 9th Nov. [by the aid of two Scotsmen, Livingston and Anderson, with whom he exchanged clothes]. A fortnight later he was captured in Bedfordshire, and on 26th Nov. he endured the first part of his sentence, "receiving thirty-six stripes upon his naked back with a threefold cord, his hands tied to a stake, standing almost two hours in the pillory in the frost and snow, branded in the face, his nose slit, and his ear cut off." After spending ten years in prison he was released by order of Parliament in 1640, which declared, 21st April 1641, the illegality of the Star Chamber's proceedings, cancelled his fine of £10,000, voted him £6000 in compensation for his losses and inhuman treatment, and in 1642, appointed him Keeper of Lambeth House, then turned into a State prison. He died in 1649. Portrait in British Museum. The name of his first wife (mother of Robert, Archbishop of Glasgow) is unknown. He marr. (2) a daugh. of Sir William Musgrave, Cumberland. In 1841 William Strauchan (infra) was sent out by the Church of Scotland chiefly with the view of ministering to the troops. He formed a congregation, but joined the Free Church, 14th June 1843, formal recognition not being given until March 1849. From that date ministers of the Free Church were sent out in succession. SOUTH AFRICA

[From 1652, when the earliest Dutch colonists landed at Table Bay, the Dutch Reformed Church has been the leading Presbyterian denomination in South Africa. In 1806 Cape Colony came under British rule. Prior to that date there had been formed at Cape Town the first Scottish Presbyterian congregation in the colony composed chiefly of men belonging to the Sutherland Fencibles raised in 1793 and enrolled as the 93rd Regiment in 1800. Their minister was George Thom, D.D. (infra) "who performed divine service according to the ritual of the Church of Scotland." In 1821 Dr Thom was commissioned by Lord Charles Henry Somerset, Governor of the Cape, to proceed to Scotland for a supply of ministers and teachers connected with the Church of Scotland. He secured twelve men [Andrew Murray, Alexander Smith, William Ritchie Thomson, Henry Sutherland, Colin Fraser, George Morgan, ministers (infra), and, as teachers, James Rose Innes (afterwards Superintendent-General of Education), William Robertson (infra), Archibald Brown, William Dawson, James Rattray, Robert Blair] whose careers, however, are rather with the history of the Dutch Reformed Church, which, in 1928, comprised the vast majority of the white Presbyterian population in South Africa.

The first Presbytery in South Africa, apart from the Dutch Reformed Church, was constituted in Kaffraria in 1824 by missionaries of different churches working under the Glasgow Missionary Society, an independent organisation unconnected with any denomination in the homeland. In Dec. 1837 this Presbytery became divided on the Voluntary Controversy, one section [Bennie, Laing, Ross] (infra) adhering to the Church of Scotland, the others [William Chalmers and Robert Niven] (originally of the Relief Church) taking sides with the Secessionists. For some time thereafter they continued to meet as one Presbytery and never alluded to the points on which they differed. On 30th Aug. 1843 the Presbytery of Kaffraria unanimously allied itself with the Free Church.

In 1892 there was formed at Kimberley a Federal Council representative of various scattered congregations and small Presbyteries of English-speaking (as distinguished from the taal, or Cape Dutch-speaking) Presbyterians throughout the colony, and on 17th Sept. 1897 the Presbyterian Church of South Africa was constituted. In 1928 there were 80 congregations, with over 13,000 members and 60,000 adherents.]

INDIA

[Alphabetical list of ordained Chaplains of the Church of Scotland on the Indian Ecclesiastical Establishment, and in connection with Colonial Committee.]

INDIAN CHAPLAINS.

[Previous to 1813 the Scottish population in India was dependent for religious ministrations on the Anglican Establishment maintained by the East India Company. In 1813, when the Company sought a renewal of their Charter from the British Government, opportunity was taken to secure new concessions favourable to the progress of Christianity in the East. Of these the most important was the free permission granted to missionaries to labour in India "for the religious and moral improvement of the people." But of more immediate interest to the Church at that period was the establishment by the East India Company, for the benefit of their Scottish employees, of three Chaplaincies of the Church of Scotland, one at each of the Presidency towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay. Dr James Bryce arrived in November 1814, as the first Chaplain, and proceeded to organise a congregation of his Scottish fellow-countrymen at Calcutta. In 1815 John Allan, M.D., D.D. (infra) was appointed to Madras, and James Clow (infra) to Bombay. In 1822 three additional chaplains were appointed, and the Presidency towns were constituted collegiate charges. In 1859 the number was increased to thirteen, as a result of numerous petitions representing the needs of Scotsmen in the Mofussil or rural districts of India. In 1928 the total number of chaplains serving with the Forces throughout India was eighteen. All these chaplains were in the service of the Government. Generally, seven were occupied in ministering to Scottish regiments; seven were in charge of Scots congregations at important towns, while four were on furlough. To meet the needs of Presbyterian communities at other centres, seven chaplains were provided by the Overseas Committee of the Church.]

The Presbytery, on his motion, overtured the General Assembly of 1918, and in conjunction with the United Free Church, it was resolved, in 1919, to erect a Church and Hospice. COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

AUSTRALIA

[New South Wales.—Australia was discovered in the seventeenth century by the Dutch, who called it New Holland, but they abandoned it as apparently barren and unprofitable territory. In 1770 it was rediscovered by Captain James Cook, whose ship the Endeavour anchored at a place to which, from the variety of new and remarkable plants, he gave the name of Botany Bay, south of the modern city of Sydney. The entire eastern part of the country Cook took possession of for Great Britain under the designation of New South Wales. In 1788 colonisation commenced with a shipload of 850 convicts, accompanied by 257 soldiers, artisans, agricultural labourers, and others, over whom and the new Colony Captain Arthur Phillip was appointed Governor. In 1809 the first Presbyterian Church [Ebenezer Church, still extant] was erected on the banks of the Hawkesbury River, near Portland Head. Services were conducted for a long period by James Mein, a catechist. No minister was settled in the Colony until 1823, when John Dunmore Lang, D.D. (infra) became the pioneer of Australian Presbyterianism. In 1832 there was formed the Presbytery of New South Wales. In 1838 Dr Lang, displeased with an Act passed by his Presbytery during his absence in Scotland, severed his connection and along with a number of ministers who had just arrived from home, he instituted the Synod of New South Wales. In 1840 those two bodies reunited to form the Synod of Australia in connection with the Church of Scotland. But in 1842 Dr Lang again seceded and organised a second Synod of New South Wales on the principle of self-support and the withdrawal of all State aid to religion. In 1846 the Synod of Australia was again divided, over the question of the Scottish Secession of 1843. Of twenty-two ministers, sixteen adhered to the Church of Scotland, while six went out—three to form the Free Synod of Eastern Australia, one to found the Free Presbyterian Church of Australia Felix (afterwards Victoria), and two who stood aloof and declared for neutrality and entire independence. On 8th Sept. 1865, after a preliminary union between the Synod of Australia and the body represented by Dr Lang, a Union was effected between all the foregoing sections which brought into being the Presbyterian Church of New South Wales, followed by the establishment in 1867 of St Andrew's Presbyterian College for the training of ministers connected with the Colony, thus eliminating the necessity for supply from Scotland and Ireland upon which the earlier Church had been mainly dependent.

Victoria.—The Church of Victoria originated as an outpost of the Church of New South Wales by settlers who had emigrated from that Colony to Port Phillip (afterwards Melbourne). James Clow (infra) was the first minister to hold services, in 1837, followed by James Forbes (infra) and others. On 7th June 1842, the Church of Scotland Presbytery of Melbourne was erected. In 1846, Forbes resigned his pastorate of the Scots Church, Melbourne, and set himself to organise the Free Presbyterian Church of Australia Felix, with a Synod constituted on 9th June 1847. On 18th Jan. 1850, a Synod of the United Presbyterian Church of Port Phillip came also into existence, brought about mainly through the efforts of Andrew Mitchell Ramsay, a Relief minister from Hawick, who had arrived in 1847. Between these three bodies (comprising in all fifty-five ministers) a union was consummated on 7th April 1859 as the Presbyterian Church of Victoria, the Port Phillip District having been created a separate Colony in 1851, and named Victoria in honour of the Queen. In Ormond College (named after its chief benefactor, Francis Ormond) the Church possesses a great Presbyterian institution for higher education, with a well-equipped Divinity Hall. This Church's Mission among the South Sea Islanders has been rendered famous by the apostolic labours of John George Paton, D.D., a native of Torthorwald, Dumfriesshire.

Queensland.—Originally a part of New South Wales, containing the Moreton Bay penal settlement (1825-42), Queensland became a separate Colony in 1859. Thomas Mowbray (infra) was the pioneer of Presbyterianism. On 12th Dec. 1849, he began services at Brisbane, where a church was opened in May 1851. Ministers of various denominations from Scotland and Ireland followed, and in 1866 the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Queensland was organised, passing in 1869 into the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of Queensland.

South Australia.—The Colony of South Australia commenced in 1831 through the efforts of the South Australian Company founded by George Fife Angus. In 1834 it became a Crown Colony. The first Presbyterian minister to be settled was Ralph Drummond from the United Associate Synod, who opened a church at Adelaide in 1839. The Church of Scotland came upon the field in 1841, when Robert Haining (infra) was settled in Adelaide. Chalmers Church, Adelaide, in connection with the Free Church, was begun in 1850 by John Gardner, formerly minister at Birkenhead (q.v.). A Presbytery of the Free Church was constituted in 1854, and the name assumed of the Free Presbyterian Church of South Australia. On 10th May 1865, a union of all the foregoing churches brought into operation the Presbyterian Church of South Australia.

West Australia was founded under the name of the Swan River Settlement by a private Company in 1829. On the failure of the Company it became a Crown Colony and a penal settlement, but transportation ceased in 1868. Presbyterianism began with David Shearer, formerly minister at Gateshead, who opened St Andrew's Church, Perth, in 1878. In 1892 the Presbytery of West Australia was formed in connection with the Church of Victoria.

Federal Union.—In 1886 the Churches of New South Wales and Victoria, of South Australia, Queensland, and Tasmania entered into a Federal Union. In 1901, following the inauguration of its six States into the Commonwealth of Australia, the Federal Union became an Organised Union by the formation of the Presbyterian Church of Australia, with a General Assembly which meets every second year at Melbourne and Sydney alternately.]

Greatly influenced by the appeal of his brother George, who had emigrated to New South Wales, he offered himself for service there; was ord. by Presb. of Irvine 30th Sept. 1822, and arrived 23rd May 1823, the first ordained Presbyterian min. to settle in Australia. He continued to be the ruling spirit in all movements of the Church throughout the early stages of its history; made repeated journeys home, disseminating information on the new colony, engaging licentiates, teachers, mechanics, and others, and obtaining Government grants in aid of his emigration schemes, whereby thousands of persons were enabled to leave for Australia; D.D. (Glasgow, 2nd May 1825). On 6th Nov. 1835 he assisted in constituting the first Presb. of Van Diemen's Land. On 11th Dec. 1837, having disagreed with his Presb. on the subject of settlement and payment of ministers, he and others constituted themselves into a separate body—the Synod of New South Wales—but on 5th Oct. 1840, a reunion was effected as “the Synod of Australia in connection with the Established Church of Scotland.” In 1839 he advocated the annexation of New Zealand to the British Crown, on the ground that these islands had been included in the Commission of 1787 to Captain Arthur Phillip, and in Feb. 1840 they were so annexed. His frequent absences from his charge of the Scots Church, Sydney, led to complaint, when he was admonished by the Presb. Having declared his intention of adopting the Voluntary System of Church government he renounced connection with the Synod, was suspended from the exercise of the ministry 7th April 1842, and afterwards deposed, the Presb. of Irvine confirmed the sentence, without examining the case, or giving the accused an opportunity of defence. An appeal to the General Assembly was dismissed, whereupon he instituted proceedings in the Court of Session, which decided that L. had a right to prosecute on the ground of an admitted grievance. The Assembly accordingly reversed its previous finding, and directed the Presb. of Irvine to rescind its decision, and reinstate L. as an ordained min. of the Church of Scotland. From July 1843 to 1846 he was a member of the Legislative Council for the District of Port Phillip. In 1846 he was in Britain for the sixth time, returning in 1850 with a considerable quota of ministers and students. On 3rd April 1850 he formed the Synod of New South Wales on the Voluntary basis. From 1851 to 1869 he sat in Parliament, in which he was a constant and successful advocate of reform; Moderator of General Assembly, New South Wales, 1872; died at Sydney 8th August 1878, and was buried first in Devonshire Street Cemetery (now abolished) and afterwards at Rookwood. His statue was erected in Wynyard Square, Sydney. His intellectual powers, literary labours, indomitable energy, self-sacrificing zeal, his prodigious efforts for the advancement of the spiritual and material interests of his adopted country, his moral courage and fearless denunciation of unrighteousness, his enlightened statesmanship, and high-toned character, have given him an imperishable name in the annals of the Southern Hemisphere. TASMANIA

[Tasmania was originally called Van Diemen's Land in honour of Anthony Van Diemen, Governor of Batavia, who fitted out the Dutch Expedition which led to its discovery by Abel Tasman in 1642. In 1803 it became a British Colony, used chiefly for penal purposes until 1852 when transportation ceased and the name Tasmania was adopted. Archibald MacArthur, a minister of the United Associate Presbytery of Edinburgh, was the first Presbyterian minister to be settled at Hobart Town in 1823, where he continued for twelve years, during which period St Andrew's Church and manse were built. On 6th Nov. 1835 the Presbytery of Van Diemen's Land was established by ordinance of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, with John Dunmore Lang, D.D. (who went with authority from the Presbytery of Sydney) as first Moderator. John Lillie, D.D. (infra) the first Church of Scotland minister, arrived in 1837. In 1853 there was formed the Free Presbytery of Tasmania with only three congregations. In 1880 the Presbytery of Van Diemen's Land was divided into North and South, and a Synod of Tasmania formed by the two Presbyteries of Hobart and Launceston. In 1896 a union was effected with the Free Presbytery, and in 1912 the Tasmanian Church linked herself with the Church of Victoria. In 1927 there were 32 congregations and over 1600 members.]

NEW ZEALAND

[The Colony of New Zealand was established by royal charter in 1840. Presbyterianism was long represented by two Churches—the Presbyterian Church of New Zealand extending over North Island and the northern half of South Island, and the Presbyterian Church of Otago and Southland, confined to the southern half of South Island. In 1840 over 150 emigrants landed at Port Nicholson, the southern point of North Island. Amongst them were many Presbyterians accompanied by John MacFarlan (infra) as their minister. He was thus the pioneer of Presbyterianism in this Colony. In 1856 there was formed at Auckland the first Presbytery of the Church, which, at the close of the century, had on its roll 8 Presbyteries, comprising 88 ministers, 156 congregations, and 8149 communicants.

The Presbyterian Church of Otago and Southland originated with the Free Church of Scotland whence most of its ministers were drawn. The first of these was Thomas Burns, D.D. (infra), formerly minister of Monkton, who arrived at Dunedin (then New Edinburgh) in March 1848 accompanied by 236 Free Church emigrants. In 1854 the first Presbytery of the Church of Otago was constituted with three ministers and two elders. By the end of the century these had increased to 78 ministers, 150 congregations, and 11,000 communicants. A union of the Churches of North and South, though actually achieved in 1861, was dissolved after a year, difficulties having emerged over the incorporating Articles. In 1901 this barrier was surmounted, and the first General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of New Zealand was held at Dunedin. In 1927 the membership of the united church was over 50,000, with adherents numbering about 250,000, representing one-fourth of the population. Knox College, Dunedin, the seat of the Theological Faculty, was erected at a cost of £40,000.]

CONTINENT OF AMERICA

DOMINION OF CANADA

[Ministers of the Church of Scotland from 1765 to the Union of the Churches in 1875, with some of later date.]

MARITIME OR EASTERN PROVINCES

CAPE BRETON.

[The Island of Cape Breton has been a British possession since 1758, when, after a siege of forty-eight days, the fortified city of Louisburg (the Gibraltar of North America) surrendered to General Wolfe. Robert Macpherson [educated at Marischal College, Aberdeen, 1748-52, licentiate of Church of Scotland, and chaplain to the Fraser Highlanders] is believed to have been the first Scottish minister to conduct services in Cape Breton, in June 1758. In 1798, and again in 1818, James M'Gregor, D.D., Secession minister at Pictou, made laborious missionary journeys throughout the Island. Immigration commenced in 1802, the first vessel arriving on 16th Aug. with 299 settlers mostly from the Western Highlands of Scotland. They had no minister for many years. The first resident Presbyterian minister was Norman M'Leod, a native of Stoer, Sutherland (licentiate of Presbytery of Genesee, U.S.A.) who settled at St Ann's Harbour, 20th May 1820, where he remained for upwards of thirty years. At the age of seventy he left for New Zealand with a ship-load of his followers. Donald Macdonald arrived in 1824 and itinerated for two years, afterwards removing to Prince Edward Island (q.v.). Dugald M'Kichan (infra), first regular minister of the Church of Scotland, was settled at River Inhabitants for eight years.

In 1828, Donald A. Fraser of Pictou, and John M'Lennan of Prince Edward Island (q.v.) proceeded on a missionary tour to Cape Breton, exploring and evangelising throughout every part of the Island. (See statement appended to Third Annual Report of the Glasgow Colonial Society, April 1829.) In 1830 there was formed the Edinburgh Ladies' Association "to help in sending missionaries, catechists, and teachers to the Island of Cape Breton." Alexander Farquharson (infra) arrived in 1833. His account of the condition of the people is almost without parallel in the annals of Colonial missionary endeavour. They had built six churches before his arrival and in the following year ten more were erected. These he divided into parishes over which he and three others [John Stewart, James Fraser, Peter M'Lean (infra)] were settled. In 1844 all the Cape Breton ministers joined the Free Church, yet at the census of 1851 it was found that over 5000 persons still adhered to the Church of Scotland. A Presbytery of Cape Breton in connection with the Church of Scotland was instituted in 1836. In 1844 it became a Presbytery of the Free Church of Nova Scotia. None of its early records have been preserved.]

FARQUHARSON, ALEXANDER, born Strathardale, Perthshire, 29th May 1793, son of John F., farmer; educated at Univs.

His tombstone says that "he was the first missionary sent directly to Cape Breton by the Church of Scotland, and the first Church of Scotland minister to spend his whole life here. He lived a life of eminent usefulness, self-sacrifice, and self-denial, and he finished his course with joy." He marr. Ann Mackenzie, and had issue—Alexander, min. of Free Church, Sydney, Cape Breton, born 16th June 1835, died 21st Oct. 1892; and others.—[Murray's Hist. of the Presbyterian Church in Cape Breton (portrait), 51, 232; Gregg's Hist. of Presbyterian Church in Canada, 340.]

NEW BRUNSWICK.

[On 30th January 1833 there were five ministers of the Church of Scotland in the Province of New Brunswick. At that date they constituted themselves into the Presbytery of New Brunswick. This continued to 12th June 1835 when, their numbers being doubled, it was erected into a Synod, divided into the two Presbyteries of St John and Miramichi. On 17th March 1845 three (out of thirteen) members of Synod, who sympathised with the Free Church, organised the "Synod of New Brunswick adhering to the Standards of the Westminster Confession." The remaining ten continued their Synod until 1st July 1868, when they united with the Synod of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, the united bodies assuming the name of the "Synod of the Presbyterian Church of the Maritime Provinces of British North America in connection with the Church of Scotland." In 1845, the same year in which it was constituted, the Free Synod, because of the paucity of its members, reverted to a Presbytery, but in 1854, when its members had increased, the Presbytery became again a Synod under the name of the Presbyterian Church of New Brunswick. On 2nd July 1866 a union was effected with the Synod of the Lower Provinces (formed on 4th Oct. 1860 by a union of the Synod of Nova Scotia with the Synod of the Free Church of Nova Scotia), and under that name it continued until 1875 when, with 131 ministers on its roll, it entered the general union of the Canadian Churches.]

NOVA SCOTIA.

[The Province of Nova Scotia (then including New Brunswick), ceded by Louis XIV. of France to Queen Anne, became a permanent British possession in 1713 under the Treaty of Utrecht. New Brunswick was constituted a separate Province in 1784. In 1758 Prince Edward Island and Cape Breton, which had remained in the hands of the French, passed under British rule, and were separate Provinces until 1820 when Cape Breton was conjoined with Nova Scotia. After 1713 British authority for a long period was exercised only with the greatest difficulty. The inhabitants of Nova Scotia, called Acadians, of French extraction and chiefly Roman Catholics, refused the Oath of Allegiance and were constantly in league with the native Indians and often in armed resistance to the British. To counteract this disaffection immigrants were brought from Britain and the Continent of Europe, and the Hon. Edward Cornwallis (appointed Governor in 1749) was entrusted with the task of organising a British colony. He was founder of the city of Halifax. In 1755 a deportation of the Acadians became necessary. They were forcibly removed to the older English colonies of America, and from those older colonies settlers were invited to occupy the lands left vacant by the deportees. A large number of the newcomers were Presbyterians, and one of their first requests was for religious ordinances. James Lyon, from the Presbytery of New Brunswick, in New Jersey, laboured for a time in Halifax and elsewhere from 1764. Samuel Kinloch, a licentiate of the Burgher Synod of Scotland, arrived in 1766 but returned home in 1769. The first permanent minister, who may be considered the pioneer of Presbyterianism in Nova Scotia, was James Murdoch, a native of County Donegal, who fixed on Horton as a centre for his missionary labours. He met his death by drowning in the Musquodoboit River in 1799. The first Church of Scotland minister in the Province was James Fraser, formerly chaplain to the 71st Regiment during the American War. He became pastor of a Scots congregation at Shelburne, to the West of Halifax. In 1783, Thomas Russell (infra) became minister of the Protestant Dissenters' Church (afterwards St Matthew's) organised at Halifax in 1749.

The first meeting of a Presbytery and the first ordination of a Presbyterian minister, in the Dominion of Canada, took place at Halifax on 3rd July 1770, when Messrs Lyon and Murdoch, with two Congregational ministers [Seccombe and Phelps] set apart an earnest and pious-minded Dutch fisherman, Bruin Romcas Comingoe, to the office of the ministry. He laboured at Lunenburg for fifty years and died in 1820 at the age of 96. In 1786 there was organised the Associate or Burgher Presbytery of Truro, and in 1795 the Anti-Burgher Presbytery of Pictou. On 3rd July 1817 a union was effected between those two Presbyteries, together with several ministers from the Church of Scotland, the united body assuming the name of the Synod of the Presbyterian [Secession] Church of Nova Scotia. On 30th Aug. 1833, with an increase in the number of ministers from the Church of Scotland, there was formed the Synod of Nova Scotia in connection with the Church of Scotland. In July 1844 this Synod repudiated all connection with the mother church, and took the name of the Synod of Nova Scotia adhering to the Westminster Standards, altered in 1848 to the Synod of the Free Church of Nova Scotia. On 4th Oct. 1860 these Synods—Secession and Free—united to form the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of the Lower Provinces of British North America, to which was joined, on 2nd July 1866, the Synod of New Brunswick [Free]. At the close of 1844 the Church of Scotland was represented in Nova Scotia by only two ministers. On 4th July 1854 a Synod in connection with the Church of Scotland was revived in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island, and retained a separate existence till 8th July 1868, when, by union with the kindred Synod of New Brunswick (1833) [see under that section] there came into operation the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of the Maritime Provinces of British North America in connection with the Church of Scotland. In 1875 both Synods entered the larger union of the Canadian Churches. The entire Presbytery of Pictou, however [A. W. Herdman, Pictou; George Coull, New Glasgow; William Stewart, Maclellan's Mountain; A. J. McKichan, Barney's River; Charles Dunn, Stellarton and Westville; William MacMillan, Salt Springs; J. W. Fraser, Roger's Hill and Cape John; Robert McCunn, River John; James McColl, Earltown], declined to unite, and retained their association with the Church of Scotland. But one by one, at different times, the survivors of those ministers and their congregations passed into the united Church.]

M'DONALD, DONALD, born Drumcastle, Rannoch, Perthshire, 1st Jan. 1783, son of Donald M. (originally Mackay, who changed his name to M'Donald or MacDonell after settling on the estate of Glengarry, following the Battle of Culloden in which he fought for Prince Charles) and Christian Stewart; educated at Univ. of St Andrews; licen. by Presb. of St Andrews; ord. (by Presb. of Abertarff) 2nd Aug. 1816; missionary at Glengarry, 1816-24; emigrated to Canada after 24th June 1824; was for two years a missionary in Cape Breton, where "with the zeal and heroism of an Xavier, he braved the wild beasts of the forest, the almost arctic severity of the climate, and, above all, the indifference and degradation of the people. His feet were covered with untanned moccasins. He walked on snow-shoes, and blazed his way through the pathless forest with his hatchet. He had no home to shelter him, but was contented with the chance shelter of the rudest hut and with the coarsest fare. He carried no scrip, and he had no money in his purse, nor would he take any reward for his labours except the primitive hospitality of the people, who learned to love and honour him." In 1826 he went to Prince Edward Island, laboured there for more than forty years, itinerating from one settlement to another, and enduring all manner of hardness. Before his death he had erected thirteen churches, and had the spiritual oversight of over five thousand adherents distinguished for the exemplary character of their lives. He ordained elders in every district, united the people of every nationality, and brought his flock up in the doctrines and usages of the Church of Scotland, though he himself was subject to no Colonial Presbytery. All his congregations he left to the care of that Church, and desired a suitable Church min. to be selected as his successor. His ministry was marked by outstanding revivals in 1829-30 and 1860-1. A stern Calvinist, he was a man of singular kindness of heart, and had a keen appreciation of the humorous; died unmarr. 21st Feb. 1867, and was buried in the graveyard at Orwell Head, where a massive marble monument was erected. WESTERN PROVINCES

ONTARIO AND QUEBEC.

[Ministers of the Church of Scotland in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec from 1765 to the Union of the Churches in 1875, with some of later date.]

[The original Province of Quebec came into permanent possession of Great Britain on the capture of the city of Quebec by General Wolfe in 1759, and the surrender of Montreal to General Amherst in 1760. The European population then numbered about 70,000, almost all Roman Catholic. In 110 rural parishes there were only nineteen Protestants. The first Presbyterian minister to be settled in the Province was George Henry (infra) who organised a congregation in Quebec about 1765, services being held in a room of the Jesuits' College. The first Presbyterian minister to be settled in Montreal was John Bethune (infra) who organised a congregation in 1786. In 1791 the Province was divided into the two Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada—now Quebec and Ontario. An American Presbyterian preacher, Jabez Collver, organised a congregation in 1793 in the county of Norfolk, where he settled on a tract of land of a thousand acres granted by the Government. Robert Dunn (infra) came in 1794, and John Ludwig Broeffle, a minister of the Dutch Reformed Church, laboured amongst German Presbyterians in the counties of Stormont and Dundas from 1795 to his death in 1815. The first Presbytery of the Canadas was constituted at Montreal, 9th July 1818, by five ministers belonging to the Burgher Synod of Scotland, who unanimously decided that the basis of their recognition should be "the doctrines, discipline, and worship of the Church of Scotland." On 8th June 1831 there was organised at Kingston the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland. On 17th June following, the Presbytery of the Canadas, which had assumed the name of the United Presbytery of Upper Canada, was reconstituted as the United Synod of Upper Canada. On 3rd July 1840, these two Synods coalesced to form the Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland, with a membership of 76 ministers, of whom 60 were drawn from the Church of Scotland, and 16 from the United Synod of Upper Canada. On 25th Dec. 1834, there had been formed what was known as the Missionary Presbytery of the Canadas, a branch of the United Associate Secession Church in Scotland, later transformed into a Synod, and in 1847, following the lead of the U.P. Church at home, it took the name of the United Presbyterian Church in Canada. In addition there were the small Presbytery of Stamford connected with the Associate Synod of North America, and the Presbytery of Niagara, unconnected with any Synod, whose members were drawn from the United States, and having 25 churches under its care in 1837. With the Scottish Secession of 1843 a similar Secession divided the Canadian Church into two. At a meeting of Synod on 9th July 1844, whilst a majority of 56 to 40 favoured the retention of the words "in connection with the Church of Scotland," 23 ministers declared for separation and assumed the designation of the Synod of the Free Presbyterian Church of Canada. In Sept. 1844 the seceding ministers (now increased to 26) were declared to be "no longer ministers of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland, or of the Church of Scotland in Canada." There were now (not including Stamford) five distinct self-governing Presbyterian organisations in the Provinces. On 6th June 1860 a union was effected between the Presbyterian Church of Canada (1840) and the United Presbyterian Church of Canada (1847) under the title of the Canadian Presbyterian Church, having on its roll of members 226 ministers, of whom 68 had been ministers of the U.P. Synod and 138 ministers of the Free Presbyterian Church. In 1870 the Synod became a General Assembly. Negotiations for a wider union proceeded for the next five years, and on 15th June 1875 a union was consummated not only between the Presbyterian Church in Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland and the Canada Presbyterian Church, but also between the Presbyterian Church of the Lower Provinces and the Presbyterian Church of the Maritime Provinces in connection with the Church of Scotland (q.v.). The Articles of Union were subscribed by Principal Snodgrass, Moderator of the Church of Scotland Synod; Principal William Caven, Moderator of the Canadian Presbyterian Church; George Monro (afterwards Principal) Grant, Moderator of the Synod of the Maritime Provinces; and Peter Gordon M'Gregor, Moderator of the Synod of the Lower Provinces. John Cook, D.D. (infra), was elected first Moderator of the reconstructed Presbyterian Church in Canada. On its roll were the names of 623 ministers, of whom 35 were from the Synod of the Maritime Provinces, 129 from the Synod of the Lower Provinces, 115 from the Canada Synod in connection with the Church of Scotland, and 344 from the Assembly of the Canada Presbyterian Church. Twenty-one ministers declined to enter the Union. Twelve of these held charges in Ontario and Quebec [Gavin Lang, Montreal; Robert Dobie, Milton; Robert Burnet, Hamilton; Thomas Macpherson, Lancaster; David Watson, Thorah; William Simpson, Lachine, John Macdonald, Beechridge; John Davidson, Williamsburg; Neil Brodie, Lochiel; Peter Watson, Williamstown — all Church of Scotland (infra) with John Ross, Brucefield, and Lachlan Macpherson, Williams, of the Canada Presbyterian Church]. One by one, at different times, their successors and congregations joined the Church in Canada, and in 1908 St Andrew's Church, Montreal, and Lochiel in Glengarry, were the only two remaining out. St Andrew's finally became incorporated with St Paul's, Montreal, in 1918.

On 16th June 1925, a still wider Union was effected between the Presbyterian Church of Canada and the Methodist and Congregational Churches, under the designation of the United Church of Canada. Into this Union a considerable number of congregations declined to enter, and remained as the Continuing Presbyterian Church of Canada.]

NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES

MANITOBA, Etc.

[In 1810 Thomas Douglas, fifth Earl of Selkirk, secured from the Hudson's Bay Company an immense tract of land, nearly the size of Great Britain, including the valleys of the Red River and the Assiniboine. He undertook to establish a Colony and assumed all the costs. After a long and tedious journey his company of settlers, consisting of seventy Highlanders mostly from Kildonan, Sutherland, reached the Red River in 1812. Much opposition followed from half-breeds and the rival North-West Company. Order was restored only on the arrival of Lord Selkirk himself in 1817. The name of the home parish in Scotland was given to the settlement and a minister of the Church of Scotland was promised. Donald Sage, afterwards minister of Resolis, was appointed, but delayed his departure for a year to perfect his knowledge of Gaelic. For some unexplained reason he never set out, and for nearly forty years the people had no minister. Services were conducted by an elder, James Sutherland, who was given authority to solemnize marriages and dispense the sacraments. When he was forcibly removed by the North-West Company the people had no alternative but to accept the ministrations of the Church of England. In 1851, John Black [born Garwaldshiels, Eskdalemuir, 8th Jan. 1818, son of William B., farmer, and Margaret Halliday; educated in U.S.A. and in Canada; ord. 31st July 1851; D.D. (Queen's College, Kingston, 1876); died 11th Feb. 1882], proceeded to Manitoba and was thus the first Presbyterian minister in any part of the great North-West Territories.

A church was soon erected—the replica of that at Kildonan—with a graveyard, spoken of as the “Westminster of Western Canada,” where are buried many of the missionary pioneers—Dr Black himself; James Nisbet, D.D., first Presbyterian missionary to the Red Indians, and founder of the city of Prince Albert; James Robertson, D.D., Apostle of Home Missions in the North-West; Principal John Mark King, D.D., and others. In 1870 the Presbytery of Manitoba was organised. It became a Synod in 1884. In 1871 a log building was opened as a college at Kildonan by George Bryce (infra). Thomas Hart, D.D. (infra), followed as Professor in 1872. In 1874, as a more suitable location, a building was erected on Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, and was much enlarged in 1892. The University of Manitoba was founded in 1877. Within the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, there were in 1928 thirty-three Presbyteries and three Synods.]

He left for New Zealand in 1865. A church was erected in 1863, crowned with the Scottish thistle. It was destroyed by fire in 1883, and immediately replaced by the existing edifice. The second missionary was Robert Jamieson (infra), appointed by the Church in Canada in 1862. Daniel Duff laboured from 1864 to 1867, when he returned to Ontario. In 1863 the Church of Scotland sent out its first missionary, James Nimmo (infra). After him were Thomas Somerville and William Clyde (infra). BERMUDA

[The Scots Congregation [now United Free Church] at Warwick, Bermuda, dates from the first settlement of the Colony in 1612, and is thus the oldest Presbyterian Congregation in the British Colonies. The first settlers brought with them in the Plough, their minister, George Keith, a Scotsman, who was followed two years later by Lewes Hughes, the ejected minister of Great St Helen's, Bishopsgate, London. Keith removed to Elizabeth City, Virginia, 1617, and in 1621 Hughes returned to England and took an important part in the struggle against Prelacy. From 1623 till his death about 1637, George Stirke, a Scottish Puritan, was minister. Services were conducted on semi-Episcopalian lines, the Prayer-Book being discarded, and elders appointed, notwithstanding frequent injunctions by the Bishop of London to conform to the Church of England ritual. In 1644 Patrick Copeland, another Scottish Puritan, with two other ministers of Bermuda, declared for Independency and renounced their orders, becoming deacons in a congregation of which Nathaniel White was chosen pastor. UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

[American Presbyterianism owes its origin mainly to the Church of Scotland. On the persecution which followed the return of the Stuarts in 1660, many Church of Scotland ministers, with others from Ulster, forced from their homes, found new homes and new spheres of service beyond the Atlantic. From the Restoration to the Revolution a steady stream of emigration flowed westward. Settlements were effected in Carolina and Maryland, but the great majority were drawn to the Middle Colonies, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania, where William Penn gave the Scottish element a specially hearty welcome. Churches were erected in various centres, the first being at Freehold, in New Jersey, in 1692. By the end of the century upwards of thirty congregations had been formed, one-half of which were in New Jersey and Pennsylvania. To Francis Makemie, born near Ramelton, in Ireland, a student of the University of Glasgow (1675-81) and licentiate of the Ulster Presbytery of Laggan, belongs the honour of being the official founder of the American Church. In 1683 he was sent by his Presbytery in charge of a company of colonists to Maryland. After itinerating here and there on preaching expeditions he settled in 1699 as minister of a congregation at Snowhill, Maryland. In 1704 he went to London appealing for ministers and funds. Upon his return he took with him John Hampton and George MacNish (infra), both graduates of Glasgow. In 1706 these three united with four others—Nathaniel Taylor, a Scot (infra), and Jedediah Andrews; John Wilson and Samuel Davis, missionaries in New England—in forming the Presbytery of Philadelphia, the first ecclesiastical court in the country, whose earliest recorded meeting was for the ordination of John Boyd (infra) at Freehold, 29th Dec. that year. Rapid development followed that step. British Presbyterianism was tapped for men and money at its chief sources, and met with a generous response. In Scotland, the Synod of Glasgow took up the appeal, and, mainly through the exertions of Principal John Stirling, a large number of ministers—students of his own University of Glasgow—were recruited for the work. In 1716 the one Presbytery had become four, out of which grew the first American Synod of Philadelphia. In 1775, on the outbreak of the American Revolution the Synod had increased to eleven Presbyteries and 132 ministers. In the War, largely guided by John Witherspoon (infra), almost the whole strength of Presbyterianism went to the Colonial side, an attachment which brought complete consolidation to the Church and gave her a place in the hearts of Americans, which she has never lost. In 1789 sixteen Presbyteries met at Philadelphia, and forming the first General Assembly, settled its Constitution on the altered lines rendered necessary by the country's Independence. Scottish models were followed, and the Westminster Confession adopted, "all being conditioned by the declaration 'God alone is Lord of the conscience.'" In 1921 there were 1,772,361 members, 9,979 ministers, and 9,842 congregations, representing about two-thirds of the Presbyterian community of the United States. In 1850 a number of Scottish Presbyterians raised a subscription for the erection of a church, the Legislative Assembly voting a sum in aid of the enterprise, with an annual stipend of £300. The first minister appointed was David Arthur, formerly min. of New Chapel, Stewarston (cf. Vol. III., 127), who arrived in 1851. Following him were John Jackson (1876-88) and John Mackersie (1889-90), both connected with the Free Church. SOUTH AMERICA

BRITISH GUIANA.

[British Guiana has been a British possession since 1814, when it was ceded from the Dutch. In 1826 the counties of Demerara and Essequibo were divided into parishes, of which five—St Andrew's, St James's, St Luke's, St Mark's, and St Mary's, were allotted to the Church of Scotland. The Presbytery of British Guiana was established in 1831. In 1836 Berbice was also divided, four of its newly-formed parishes—All Saints', St Catherine's, St Clement's, and St Saviour's, being allotted to the Church of Scotland, and included within the Presbytery. In all three counties alternate parishes were allotted to the Church of England. In 1840, with acquiescence of the Colonial Committee, the Presbytery was divided into two—the Presbytery of Demerara and Essequibo, and the Presbytery of Berbice. But these were found to be too small, and without sufficient influence in the colony, and for administrative purposes proved a failure. They maintained a precarious and stormy existence until about 1858-60, from which time they were not recognised by the local government as having control over the Church of Scotland in the colony, and were unable to exercise any of the Presbytery's disciplinary functions. In 1869 a new Presbytery of British Guiana was constituted by the ministers and elders in ten parishes, upon the recommendation of the Colonial Committee, with a membership similar to the original Presbytery, and received Government recognition and establishment by Ordinance 3, of 1872, the Ordinance which, with amendments in 1904 and 1917, still governs the Presbytery. As now constituted the Presbytery consists of representatives from the parishes of St Andrew's, St Thomas's, All Saints', St Mark's, St Mary's, St James's, St Luke's, St Saviour's, St Clement's, and St Catherine's. In 1920, the two last mentioned were joined under one minister, but each continues to send a representative elder to Presbytery, which, therefore, includes nine ministers and ten elders. The Presbytery carries on Missions to Aboriginal Indians at Supenaam Creek and Saxacalli, on the Essequibo River, and it provides and manages schools in all its parishes, the colony's educational system being denominational.]

ARGENTINA.

BUENOS AIRES, ETC.

[British merchants established themselves at Buenos Aires in the early years of the nineteenth century. While their chief object was commerce, many of them invested in large tracts of land, and thus felt a lively concern in the pastoral and agricultural interests of the country. In 1825 the independence of the Argentine Republic was recognised by Great Britain. An agricultural colony, projected by John and William Parish Robertson (natives of Kelso), brought out a number of settlers from various parts of Scotland to a place called Monte Grande, some fifteen miles from Buenos Aires, where they arrived on 8th August 1825, after seventy-eight days at sea. They soon took measures to obtain a minister and schoolmaster. On the recommendation of Thomas Chalmers, D.D., William Brown (infra) was ordained by Presb. of Glasgow, and towards the end of 1826 proceeded to his destination. But within three years the country was plunged in civil war, the colony collapsed, and its founders were involved in ruin.]

The first Presbyterian minister in Buenos Aires was a Mr Parvin, agent for the North American Bible Society. He set up a printing-press and opened a place of worship, the Scots in his congregation predominating. On 22nd Dec. 1828 the Scottish Presbyterians met with the view of securing the permanent services of a minister of the Church of Scotland. A coalition was arranged between them and the Monte Grande congregation, and on 15th March 1829, a temporary chapel was leased, with William Brown as minister. On 25th April 1835, St Andrew's, the first Scottish National Church in South America, was opened. This was demolished in 1893, and replaced by the present handsome edifice, opened 10th April 1896.

St John's Church, Quilmes, was opened on 18th Feb. 1855; St Andrew's Church, Chascomus, built in 1857, was replaced by a new structure opened 10th Nov. 1872. There are Chapels at Jeppener, Barracas, and Bahia Blanca.]

CHILE.

VALPARAISO (UNION CHURCH).

[David Trumbull, D.D., a graduate of Yale College and theological student at Princeton (who claimed descent from John Alden and the "Puritan maiden Priscilla" of Longfellow's Courtship of Miles Standish) landed on Christmas Day 1845 at Valparaiso, after a voyage from America of more than 130 days. He had offered himself to the Foreign Evangelical Society of the United States, and at their request had gone to conduct services in Spanish and English on board the ships in the Bay. In 1847, in response to an application from Scottish and English residents at Valparaiso to the New London County Association in the State of Connecticut, a congregation was organised on 5th Sept., fifteen persons being present. In 1855 a church was erected. Objections taken by the Romanist authorities that the establishment of such a congregation was an infringement of Article Five of the Constitution of the Republic of Chile led to the imprisonment of the builder, who was soon released. It became necessary, however, to hide the edifice behind a high barricade. In 1869 the present place of worship in Calle Condell was built, the Chilean Congress having declared in favour of religious liberty for all.]

FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

[Alphabetical List of Ordained Foreign Missionaries of the Church of Scotland from 1822 to 1928.]

[A discussion in the General Assembly of 1796 on the subject of Foreign Missions concluded with a resolution, by fifty-nine votes to forty-five, that the time was unfavourable for the General Assembly adopting any particular measure in regard to missionary work, but "that they will embrace with zeal and thankfulness any future opportunity of contributing by their exertions to the propagation of the Gospel of Christ which Providence may hereafter open." In that same year there were founded two Societies—the Scottish (later called the Edinburgh) Missionary Society, and a similar Society in Glasgow, both undenominational. Under the auspices of the first-mentioned, Peter Greig, from Donibristle, Inverkeithing, undertook a mission to Sierra Leone, where, shortly afterwards, he was murdered by the natives of the Fulha country. The same Society commenced a mission (under Henry Brunton) to the Tartar tribes at Karass, in the Caucasus. This mission was abandoned on account of interference from the Russian Government. India and Jamaica became their next fields. In 1835 those missions were transferred to the Church of Scotland, and the Society passed out of separate existence. The Glasgow Society confined its operations to Kaffraria, where a mission was established in 1821, the work eventually passing to the Free and United Presbyterian Churches. In 1822, Donald Mitchell (infra) was sent to India by the Scottish Missionary Society. In 1824 the General Assembly resolved to undertake Foreign Mission work as an integral part of the work of the Church. This decision was arrived at largely as the result of a commanding appeal from James Bryce, D.D., chaplain at Calcutta (cf. Vol. VI., 112). John Inglis, D.D., min. of Greyfriars, Edinburgh, was appointed Convener of the first Foreign Mission Committee, but it was not until five years afterwards that Alexander Duff (infra) was commissioned to India.

India.—In 1837, a College, known as the General Assembly's Institution, was opened at Calcutta, and had a continuous record of success. Dr Duff joined the Free Church in 1843, building a new Institution (after his death called Duff College) in connection with his denomination. On 1st June 1908, the whole of the work at Calcutta was amalgamated with that of the United Free Church, under the name of the Scottish Churches Mission. The separate Colleges of the two Churches became the Scottish Churches College, the largest missionary institution in India, with a normal staff of twelve Professors appointed equally by the two Churches. In 1835 a station was opened by John Wilson (infra) at Bombay, and continued until 1864, when it was considered advisable to transfer operations to Poona, in the same Presidency. In 1836 a Mission was founded by John Anderson (infra) at Madras, with a College similar to that at Calcutta. In 1911 this also was conjoined with the Madras Christian College of the United Free Church. In 1900 a Mission was began at Arkonam, forty-two miles distant from Madras. In 1857, the year of the Indian Mutiny, there was inaugurated the Panjab Mission, under Thomas Hunter (infra), the largest of the Church's Missions in India, having nine principal Stations—Sialkot and District, Gujrat, Wazirabad, Daska, Youngsonabad, Jalalpur, and two in the Native States of Jammu and Chamba. At Sialkot, the Murray College, opened 27th Oct. 1909 and named after Captain Murray, an old Panjab officer, is affiliated with the Panjab University. In 1870 the Eastern Himalayan Mission was founded, comprising, in 1928, three divisions, each with its Headquarters and many out-stations: (1) Darjeeling and Kurseong; (2) Kalimpong and the Dooars, the special field of the Young Men's Guild and Woman's Guild of the Church of Scotland; (3) the Scottish Universities Mission, with a Training College at Kalimpong and a Mission in Independent Sikkim, mainly supported by the Missionary Associations of the four Scottish Universities. In 1843, with the exception of one lady missionary, afterwards the wife of John Anderson, minister of Culter, Lanarkshire (cf. Vol. I., 247), all the missionaries of the Church of Scotland joined the Free Church. In 1903 there was formed the Presbyterian Church in India, uniting in one Church the converts of the majority of the Presbyterian Missions in that Dependency.

Africa.—The Mission of the Church of Scotland in Africa was founded in 1876, in Nyasaland, as a memorial of David Livingstone. Its Headquarters are at Blantyre, with stations at Domasi, Mlanje, and Zomba, each with its European staff, besides fifteen District Churches or Parishes. In 1913, work was extended into Lomweland, Portuguese East Africa. In 1920 the Iringa Mission, Tanganyika Territory (formerly a German Mission) was undertaken by the Church of Scotland. A Mission at Kikuyu, in Kenya Colony, founded (at Kibwezi) by the Imperial British East Africa Chartered Company, was transferred to the Church of Scotland in 1901 along with considerable tracts of land, and an Endowment Fund of £38,000. In 1909 a station was opened at Tumu-Tumu on the slopes of Mount Kenya. In 1926 a mission was opened at Chogoria, Kenya.

China.—In 1878 mission work was begun by George Cockburn (infra) at Ichang, province of Hupeh, China, one thousand miles up the Yangtse from Shanghai. There is an Institution for the Training of Native Workers, and extensive medical work is carried on in a large and well-equipped hospital.]

James D. and Jean Rattray; educated at Moulin and Kirkmichael Schools, Perth Academy (dux), and Univ. of St Andrews (where he was greatly influenced by the teaching, missionary fervour, and personality of Thomas Chalmers, then Professor of Moral Philosophy); M.A. (Honorary 1824); licen. by Presb. of St Andrews April 1829; ord. (by Presb. of Edinburgh) 12th Aug. following as first (official) missionary of the Church of Scotland to India; left Edinburgh on 19th Sept. and sailed 14th Oct. He was twice shipwrecked on his eight months' voyage, off Dassen Island, near the Cape, losing in the Lady Holland all his library to the number of over eight hundred volumes, his presentation Bible and Psalm Book alone being recovered [the latter is in the Mission Museum at 22 Queen Street, Edinburgh], and again in the Lady Moira, off Saugar Island at the mouth of the Hoogly. At Calcutta (arrived 27th May 1830) he announced his policy to afford, by means of the English language, education inseparably allied with the Christian faith as its animating spirit, believing that English was destined to become the chief medium of upper education in India. He espoused the ideal of a native ministry as the surest method of Christianising the vast heathen masses of that country. His school, opened 13th July 1830 with five young men, became an immediate success, attracting within a few weeks upwards of three hundred applicants with whom he removed to a commodious building. He received considerable encouragement from Sir Charles Trevelyan, Foreign Under-Secretary, and from the Governor-General, Lord William Bentinck, by whose efforts a Minute of Council (7th March 1835) decided in favour of the promotion of European science and literature through English alone. From 1834 to 1840 he was in Scotland, his health much broken by the climate and his ceaseless activities. He addressed the General Assembly in a three hours' speech of impassioned eloquence and earnestness, and travelled up and down the country collecting funds, creating interest in missions generally and his own in particular;

D.D. (Marischal College, Aberdeen, 22nd Oct. 1835). In 1840 he returned to India. Joined the Free Church in 1843; declined Chair of Divinity, New College, 1846; elected Moderator of Free Church Assembly 22nd May 1851; visited U.S.A. in 1854, where he was received with such enthusiasm as to call forth the statement: "No such man has visited us since the days of George Whitefield"; LL.D. (New York 1854). That same year his evidence on the subject of education before Indian Committees of Parliament resulted in the famous Despatch of Lord Halifax to the Governor-General, in which Duff's early views were officially homologated. He was in India again from 1856 to 1863; condemned the policy of the Government in the Mutiny, and was a chief instrument in establishing the Univ. of Calcutta in 1857. In 1864 he finally left India, his health having become so impaired as to necessitate a permanent change of occupation and scene. Numerous memorials were devised in his honour, amongst others the erection of a marble hall in the educational buildings at Calcutta, the founding of four Duff Scholarships, the painting of his portrait, and the placing of a bust in one of the colleges. A gift of £11,000 from Scotsmen in India he handed over as a fund for invalided missionaries of the Free Church. On his homeward journey he visited South Africa and its mission stations, and on arrival in Edinburgh was app. Convener of the Free Church Foreign Mission Committee. He raised a sum of £10,000 for a Chair of Missions in the New College, and became its first occupant as Professor of Evangelistic Theology. He carried through the arrangements for the inauguration of the Free Church Mission in Nyasaland; travelled in Syria, and collaborated in the establishment of the Gordon Memorial Mission, Natal [founded to commemorate the sixth Earl of Aberdeen, who was lost at sea, and his brother the Hon. James Henry Hamilton Gordon]. On 22nd May 1873 he was elected a second time Moderator of the Free Church, and was one of the inspirers of the Alliance of Reformed Churches holding the Presbyterian System; died at Sidmouth, Devonshire, 12th Feb. 1878 and buried in Grange Cemetery, Edinburgh. His personal property he left to found the Duff Missionary Lectureship. (Edinburgh 1896); F.R.S.G.S.; died at Kikuyu, 13th Oct. 1907. To the work at Blantyre (begun in 1874) he gave all his remarkably eager powers as a missionary administrator, retrieving its disasters, and steadily up-rearing one of the most successful foreign missions of modern times. Under his inspiring personality, his courage as a leader, his devotion as an educator, varied accomplishments as translator, industrial organiser, and his wise and humane statesmanship, the evils of barbarism became broken, and a populous Christian community established. A cathedral-like church at Blantyre was erected from his own design by his own hands and those of the men whom he trained in every detail of the work. In 1901 he became head of the Mission at Kikuyu (founded and endowed in memory of Sir William Mackinnon and Alexander Livingstone Bruce, and gifted to the Church of Scotland). Almost his last public act there was to lay the memorial stone of the Hunter Memorial Hospital, and within a few hours of his death he raised himself up in his bed to baptize Karanja, his personal attendant, the first convert of the Kikuyu Mission. "Marvellous purposes are in store" were his farewell written words. He marr. One of the most industrious and indomitable of missionaries, he gave himself to the work with apostolic enthusiasm and energy, scarcely ever halting during his long-extended career. Specially devoted to vernacular education, he set himself to acquire the dialects of a varied population, with whom he was able to converse with ease and fluency. He was the first to establish schools for native girls and a native church on Presbyterian principles. In 1832 he founded a more advanced institution, out of which grew the well-known College called by his name. He made considerable journeys throughout his own and other Presidencies, collecting manuscripts and amassing Oriental knowledge. Apart from his purely missionary labours, his work of examining the antiquities of the cave temples, his deciphering of the hitherto unsolved rock inscriptions of Asoka, at Girnar, and, during the Mutiny, his expiscation of the rebels' cryptic correspondence, and a pilgrimage to Palestine in 1843, were principal incidents in his well-filled life. He was one of the most learned of Asiatic scholars and a leading member (President of Bombay branch 1835-42) of the Royal Asiatic Society. His private life was ennobled by a truly religious spirit, and his influence radiated over the whole of India. He marr. JEWISH MISSIONARIES

[Alphabetical List of Ordained Missionaries in connection with the Jewish Mission Scheme of the Church of Scotland from 1841 to 1928.]

[In 1838 the General Assembly appointed a Committee to consider the subject of a Mission to the Jews, and a Deputation [George Keith, D.D., minister of St Cyrus ; Alexander Black, D.D., Professor of Divinity, Marischal College, Aberdeen ; Andrew Bonar, minister of Collace ; Robert Murray M'Cheyne, minister of St Peter's, Dundee, and Robert Wodrow, a Glasgow elder] was appointed to visit the chief Jewish communities on the Continent and in the East. Their Report led the Assembly of 1840 to adopt a Jewish Mission as one of the greater Schemes of the Church. As the members of the Deputation were travelling across the desert from Egypt to Palestine, Dr Black fell from his camel and was rendered unconscious. He recovered sufficiently to accompany his colleagues to Jerusalem and other places in Palestine. But the heat of summer and the roughness of the mode of travel obliged Drs Black and Keith to proceed homewards by the shortest route through Hungary, to the nearest Continental port. At Pesth, Dr Keith was seized with an illness so serious that his life was despaired of. Dr Black also was taken ill, and the hapless condition of the two Scottish strangers evoked sympathy in the city. Their situation became known to the Protestant Archduchess Marie Dorothea, whose husband was Viceroy of Hungary. She ministered to them personally, heard the story of their mission, and encouraged them to think of the Jews at Pesth, assuring them that should the Church of Scotland decide to plant a Mission there, she would aid them to the utmost of her power. Thus it was that the first Jewish Mission of the Church of Scotland had its origin in Hungary—at Pesth and Jassy, on 21st August 1841. In 1843 all the missionaries, four in number, joined the Free Church. Among them was the well-known "Rabbi" Duncan (infra). Many of their converts rose to positions of eminence and influence in the Church. Of these, Alfred Edersheim, D.D. [author of The Life and Times of Jesus the Messiah, minister of the Free Church, Old Machar, of the English Presbyterian Church, Torquay, afterwards a clergyman in the Church of England, Select Preacher to the University of Oxford, Warburtonian Lecturer at Lincoln's Inn, and Lecturer on the Septuagint in the University of Cambridge, born 1823, died 1889], and Adolph Saphir [B.A. (Glasgow, 1854), D.D. (Edinburgh, 1878), minister of Belgrave Presbyterian Church, London, author of Christ and the Scriptures and other works, born 1831, died 1891] are the best known. Both were baptized (in April and on 9th May 1843 respectively) and admitted members of the Church of Scotland. Following the Secession of 1843, the Continental stations remained with the Free Church. Missionaries of German extraction and training were for a time employed by the Church of Scotland, work being carried on in India, Arabia, and Persia, by the Rev. Jacob Samuel, a Jewish convert, who had gone from Glasgow to Calcutta in 1830. Tunis, in North Africa ; Cochin, on the Malabar coast of India ; Karlsruhe, Darmstadt, Speyer, and Würzburg, in Germany, were occupied for longer or shorter periods, and in London a Mission was also in operation [see under Halkin Street, London]. After the Crimean War the Near East was definitely fixed upon as the most suitable sphere for the Committee's work, and between 1856 and 1864 the following stations were opened : Salonica and Smyrna (1856), Alexandria (1858), Constantinople (1859), and Beyrout (1864). The Committee's agents were all home-trained men. From 1861 to 1867 an important and interesting work was carried on among the Falasha or Jews of Abyssinia. Its agents, Messrs Staiger and Brandeis, were thrown into prison with other Europeans, by the Emperor Theodore, but were rescued by the British Army. In 1882 medical mission-work was begun at Smyrna under Levi Prinski Scott (M.B., C.M., Edinburgh 1880), a converted Jew. As all the stations, except Alexandria, lay within the Turkish Empire, missionary enterprise was abandoned during the Great War (1914-18). Two medical missionaries, Dr Sandler, Constantinople, and Dr Mackenzie Newton, Smyrna, died at their posts. Salonica and Beyrout were closed. In 1920 work was resumed at Smyrna and in 1921 the Church of Scotland with the United Free Church inaugurated a joint Mission at Galata, Constantinople. In Sept. 1922 the Kemalists took possession of Smyrna, the city becoming a scene of massacre and desolation, the Mission property being destroyed. In 1928 the stations of the Committee were three in number, Alexandria, Constantinople, and Jaffa. In the preceding year the Jewish Medical Mission at Edinburgh was placed under control of the Church of Scotland. A Mission to Jews is also carried on in Glasgow in co-operation with the United Free Church.]

Influenced by one of his associates, Robert Wodrow, a member of the Jewish Mission Committee, he interested himself on behalf of the Jews, and proceeded to Berlin for the study of German and Hebrew.
