VOLUME VIII

MINISTERS OF THE CHURCH FROM DATE OF PUBLICATION OF VOLUMES I-VII, 1914-28, TO UNION OF THE CHURCHES, 2nd OCTOBER 1929, AND ADDENDA AND CORRIGENDA 1560-1949

PREFATORY NOTE

DURING the years 1915 to 1928 were published the seven volumes of this work containing the record of the Ministers of the Church of Scotland from 1560 to the date of the issue of the various volumes, viz. I Synods of Lothian and Tweeddale, 1915; II Merse and Teviotdale, Dumfries and Galloway, 1917; III Glasgow and Ayr, 1920; IV Argyll and Perth and Stirling, 1923; V Fife and Angus and Mearns, 1925; VI Aberdeen and Moray, 1926; VII Ross, Sutherland and Caithness; Orkney and Shetland, with Churches Overseas, also University Principals and Professors in the Faculties of Divinity, 1928.

Towards the end of 1936 the General Administration Committee decided that a supplementary volume should be issued to complete the Record of Ministers of the Church of Scotland as it existed before the date of the Union of the Churches on 2nd October 1929 and also to add all the additional information that had been collected since the above-mentioned volumes were published. A sub-committee of the Committee on General Administration was formed to which several others were co-opted to carry out the work—Sir Francis J. Grant, K.C.V.O., LL.D., Convener and General Editor.

Since these seven volumes were printed the present Convener, who had been Joint Editor of the same, has been collecting additional information and keeping the work up to date, and therefore the foundation of the present volume existed and was used as a basis on which to work.

Certain records of the immediate Post-Reformation Period which had not been systematically gone over have now been done so, and many new names and information as to the Clergy, Readers, and Exhorters previous to 1600 have been recovered and many blanks filled in. In regard to these the Committee are indebted to Dr Gordon Donaldson, formerly of the Historical Department of H.M. Register House, and the late Rev. William Stephen, D.D., Inverkeithing. For the continuation of the accounts of the various parishes, presbyteries and synods the Committee have to thank their various members who undertook this work and particularly to the late Rev. William Burnett, B.D., for the Presbytery of Edinburgh; the late Rev. Arthur P. Sym, D.D., for the Synods of Merse, Teviotdale and Dumfries; the Rev. Walter R. Henderson for the Synod of Galloway; the Rev. James P. Wilson, B.D., for the Synod of Ayr; the late Rev. Alexander Mason Shand, M.A., for the Presbytery of Paisley; the late Rev. John Muirhead, B.D., for the Presbytery of Hamilton; the Rev. R. Marcus Dickson, D.D., for the Presbytery of Lanark; the Very Rev. Andrew James Campbell, D.D., for the Presbytery of Glasgow; the Rev. William McLauchlan Goldie for the Presbytery of Dunbarton; the Rev. Angus J. McVicar, M.A., for the Synod of Argyll; the Rev. John Scott Macnaughton, D.D., for the Presbytery of Perth; the Rev. David J. Maclaren, M.A., for the Presbytery of Auchterarder; the late Rev. William Stephen, D.D., for the Synod of Fife; the late Rev. James Taylor Cox, D.D., for the Synods of Aberdeen and Moray; the late Rev. Archibald Macdonald, D.D., for the Synod of Ross and Sutherland; the Rev. George Frederick Cox, B.D., for the Synod of Orkney, and the Rev. Professor G. D. Henderson for the University of Aberdeen. The Clerks to Presbyteries and the Officials of H.M. Register House and the Ministers' Widows Fund and many others have also contributed much new matter.

The most valuable part of this volume will be the very large additional information regarding the earlier clergy which has been gathered from many sources too numerous to mention and involving much research in records. The volume has further been enriched by a number of Ecclesiological Notes on parishes by the late Dr William Stephen.

The Editor regrets that ten of his valued helpers have passed away since the volume was first undertaken and have not seen the results of their labours and that latterly he has had to complete the same alone.

CORSTORPHINE

In 1128 the church, than a dependent chapel of St Cuthberts, was granted along with 2 bovates and 6 acres of land to Holyrood Abbey by David I; and, probably soon after, Norman, Sheriff of Berwick, made a similar grant to the abbey under the designation "my Chapel of Corstorphine." The chapel was a church before 1158. In the church there was an altar dedicated to the Holy Trinity to which on 18th May 1465 a tenement of land under Edinburgh Castle was granted by Sir John Marschall, chaplain in the collegiate church of Corstorphine, and an annual rent of £5 was granted by Hugh Barr from a tenement in the Cowgate on 16th Dec. 1475. There was also in the church an altar dedicated to St Ann, at which a chaplain was founded in 20th Sept. 1473 by William de Camera, vicar of Kirkurd. In the churchyard and adjoining the church, a chapel dedicated to John the Baptist was founded by Sir Adam Forrester of Corstorphine, who died before 6th Nov. 1405. On 25th Feb. 1425-6 James I gave and confirmed £24 for the endowment of three chaplainries in the chapel, £20 being from the King personally and £4 being an annual rent from Edinburgh, bestowed by the late Sir Adam Forrester; and on 20th May 1429 Dame Margaret Forrester, relict of Sir Adam, and their son, Sir John Forrester, gave an annual rent of £21 13s. 4d. for the support of two additional chaplains and two clerks in the chapel. Probably soon afterwards, and in any case prior to 6th Jan. 1436-7, the said Sir John erected the chapel into a collegiate church for a provost and four prebendaries and two singing boys, and for endowment consigned 120 gold ducats; and on the foregoing date Pope Eugenius IV issued a Bull which, after narrating that Sir John had stated that if the rectory of Ratho Church which was served by a perpetual vicar could be added to the collegiate church, four or five priests could from its fruits be instituted in the said collegiate church, gave mandate to the Abbot of Holyrood, if he found the statement true, to confirm and approve the said foundation and endowment, etc.; and to make appropriation of the said rectory when it became vacant, and after such appropriation that five other priests be instituted. A further Bull of Pope Eugenius, 13th June 1440, suspended notu proprio the taking effect of the said appropriation pending a certain contingency; but still another Bull of the same Pope, 15th June 1444, gave mandate to the Abbot of Holyrood to carry out the annexation and appropriation of the rectory and the institution of prebends. Later, however, on a further representation by Sir John Forrester that the priests and two boys could not be maintained and live on the said fruits, the Pope ordered the reduction of the priests from five to four, the establishment thus consisting of a provost, eight prebends, and two boys. On 30th Oct. 1444 the institution was confirmed by James Kennedy, Bishop of St Andrews. Subsequently, on 23rd Jan. 1450-1, papal remit was made to the Abbot of Holyrood to confirm and approve an agreement between the said bishop on the one hand and, on the other, the provost and chaplains of the collegiate church, whereby the latter, in return for the rectory of Ratho being surrendered by the Bishop, should celebrate for ever on the Wednesday after the Feast of St Thomas the Martyr a solemn mass with music during the bishop's life and, after his death, a requiem mass. The prebends were Gogar, Haddington, Haltoun, Dalmahoy, Bonyngtoun, Platt, Nortoun, and Byres. The fruits of the Church of Clerkington were included in Bishop Kennedy's confirmation charter. After the Reformation the Church of Corstorphine was again attached to St Cuthbert's, and was served by a reader. But on 7th March 1587-8 Sir James Forrester and other parishioners presented to the presbytery a claim that Corstorphine was a parish church, and that they should not be "compellit to hant any other paroch kirk nor their awn qlk had been fundit of auld to yt effect." After due enquiry the presbytery on 19th March interponed their authority on the claim, and asked the "Lords Modifiers" to supply a stipend for the minister out of the Thirds of Holyrood. Up to 1633 the collegiate church and the parish church seem to have existed side by side. The collegiate church, however, was dissolved by the provost and first prebend in 1634, an action ratified by Parliament seven years later; and the collegiate building became the parish church in 1646, when, on 6th May of that year, the Kirk Session had estimates for taking down the old parish church and putting up a new aisle, attached to the collegiate fabric, and apparently on the site of the old church.—[*Reg. CRAIGLOCKART

ALFRED WILLIAM ANDERSON, 1903 died 20th Oct. 1934.

GOGAR

The church of Gogar was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham of St Andrews on 23rd May 1247. The chapel of Ochterogate (Gogar ?) was united by the Ordinary to the Trinity College, Edinburgh, and on the petition of James III, patron of the said chapel, and his mother, Mary of Gueldres, the union was confirmed by Bull of Pope Pius II, 10th July 1462. The hospital of Ochterogate occurs in 1394.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, xi, 450, Petitions i, 615; Reg. Great Seal, vi, 137; Lockhart's Ch. of Scotland in 13th Century, 60.]

CRAMOND

On 11th Jan. 1478–9 Alexander Currou, vicar of Dunsyre, founded a chaplainry at the parish altar of St Columba in the "Parish Church of St Columba of Nether Cramond." Another chaplainry in the church was founded by James Howieson in Cramond Regis, with endowment in part from land in the burgh kirk of Cramond. Part of the reddendo was 2 sh. annually for the maintenance of the lights of the Blessed Virgin Mary in the church, indicating the existence of an altar dedicated to the Virgin. There was also in the church an altar dedicated to St Thomas. The church was rebuilt in 1654, and enlarged in 1711 and again in 1811; and in recent years it has been twice altered. The tower, which belongs to the 15th century, was finished with the present parapet in 1811. The New Statistical Account records that the bell, which has the inscription "Michael Burgersdyk facit me 1619. Soli Deo Gloria," was "restored from the body of the Civil War by Monk in 1658." In 1569 Patrick Murray was chaplain of the altar in the church founded by John Howieson in Cramond Regis, and in 1571 occurs Matthew Stewart, chaplain of Cramond Regis.—[Reg. of Abbrev. of Feu Charters of Church Lands, ii, 69; *Comps. DUDDINGSTON

The church was granted to Kelso Abbey probably in the 12th century and certainly not later than the early part of the 15th, but the exact date of the gift and the identity of the donor do not appear to be on record.

The church is as old as at least the early part of the 12th century, and consisted of a nave and chancel separated by an arch which is the internal feature of the building.
By Act of Presbytery of Edinburgh of 18th May 1631 an aisle was appointed to be added to the church for the accommodation of the proprietor of Prestonfield and his tenants, the aisle to be built and supported at his expense. This aisle, on the north side at the east end of the nave, bears the date 1631, and the tower at the west end was added at the same time. The church was described in 1843 as "enlarged, repaired, and painted about 4 years ago."

CANONGATE (HOLYROODHOUSE)

In the Monastery of Holyrood was a parochial aisle with parochial altar, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, founded by Sir John Eastoun, curate. Part of the endowment was "the merck lands called the Crosshouse of the tenements of the Chaplainrie." On 25th May 1487 sasine of 30s. from the Community of the Canongate was given to the image of the Virgin at the said altar, and to Sir George White, chaplain. In the yard of the Palace was a chapel dedicated to St Anne. A short distance north of the Girth Cross was the original boundary of the sanctuary of Holyrood Abbey, there was situated a chapel dedicated to St Thomas the Apostle, with almshouse for seven old men, founded by George Crichton, Bishop of Dunkeld 1527–43, who had previously been Abbot of Holyrood.—[Acts of Parl., vii, 82–3; James Young's *Prot. ST CUTHBERT'S

In 1128 David I with consent of his son, Henry, granted to Holyrood Abbey the church with the parish and all things pertaining to the church, and with the kirkton, and with the land on which the church is situated, and with the other land which lies beneath the Castle, and two chapels pertaining to the church—the chapel of Corstörphine with two bovates and 6 acres of land, and the chapel of Liberton, with 2 bovates of land, and with all the teinds and rights, both living and dead, of Legbernarde, which Macbeth of Liberton gave to the said church and which the King confirmed. Manifestly the church was founded long prior to the foregoing date; and it may be that it owed its origin to one of the followers of St Cuthbert, or even to that saint himself. There is, however, no certain information with regard to the foundation. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 16th March, 1241–2.

 On 3rd July 1486 William Tours of Inverleith and Alison Home, his wife, granted to a chaplain at the altar of St Anne, mother of the Virgin Mary, situated in St Anne's aisle on the north side of the church, 14 merks annually from a tenement near the place of the Minorite Friars, Edinburgh; and in 1558 George Tours of Inverleith stated that the altar had been founded by his predecessors. On 10th Dec. 1488 Mr Alexander Currou, vicar of Livingstone, granted to a chaplain at an altar in the church dedicated to the Holy Trinity annual rents from tenements on the north and south sides of High Street, in the Canongate, and in le Forstan's Wynd on the south side of High Street. There was also in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. By Act of Parliament in 1633 St Cuthbert's Church was dissolved from Holyrood; and by Charter of 29th September of that year Charles I annexed it to his newly formed Bishopric of Edinburgh.
 After the Revolution, when the bishopric was dissolved, the church became independent.

It is presumed that when, in May 1544, under the direction of the Earl of Hertford, the English leader, "the towne (Edinburgh) and also the Abbey of Holyrodehouse" were wholly burned and desolate, St Cuthbert's Church was involved in the conflagration. In any case in 1550 the church is described as "the new parish Church of St Cuthbert's," indicating that at that date a scheme of rebuilding had very recently been carried out. In 1593 the fabric of the church underwent considerable repairs. The Steeple "yat is auld," was taken down in whole or in great part and rebuilt, the walls of the church were heightened, and the roof was covered with slates in place of thatch which had done service. The foregoing description of the steeple clearly indicates that it was of much earlier date than the rest of the church, and therefore had survived the fire of 1544. At the same time a new church was erected at the west end of the church, on the site of the existing tower and the triangular piece of ground adjacent thereto. In Gordon of Rothiemay's map of Edinburgh, 1647, there is a sketch of the church showing it as a plain building consisting of nave and choir, with a south transept at the junction of the nave and choir, and on the south side of the west end a massive square tower. Later illustrations reveal considerable alterations in the external appearance of the building, including the heightening of the nave and an addition in the outside stair to the end of the south transept. These alterations were due to the need of providing lofts for additional accommodation. Mention in 1649 is made of the West Loft called Braid's Loft, at the north end of which provision was made in that year for accommodation for the Town Council, who had become a heritor, entrance to the Council's Loft being secured by a door "broken through the wall." In September 1650, after the battle of Dunbar, in connection with the siege of Edinburgh Castle by Cromwell, the new church was demolished, and of the old church practically nothing but the bare walls remained. In the following year restoration work was begun; and in 1652 sufficient repairs had been carried out in "roof, walls, and windows" to enable the church to be reopened for worship in April of that year. But even in 1655 internal renewal work was still being carried on, for on 13th June of the latter year the Town Council, on the ground that "St Cuthbert's was straitened for fault of lofts and seats therein, that the most part of the congregation goe stragling and wandring up and down to uther kirks and under pretence thereof spend the holie Sabbath ydlie and profanlie," and that their loft if repaired, would provide needed accommodation and thereby make the people "inexcusable for disorderlie living," ordered their said loft to be rebuilt. Probably it was in this connection that the Town Council on 7th Nov. 1655 arranged for a partition wall of "good and sufficient lyme and stane work" being built in the church. In the same period, 1652-5, the walls and roof of the new church were restored, and repairs were carried out on the churchyard dykes which had been built in the early part of 1601. In March-June 1689 the blockade of the Castle, then held by the Duke of Gordon on behalf of James II, led to further severe damage being done to both churches. In course the old church was repaired, while the new church was externally restored. The latter does not appear again to have been used for worship, and in 1753, when it was in a ruinous condition, the roof was removed, and in 1772 the walls were demolished. In 1772 the old church, including the tower, was also demolished, and its place was taken by a building which was opened for worship on 31st July 1775. At the same time the first stage of the tower, which has a sundial with the date 1772 and the motto Vivite Fugio, was built, and in 1789 the tower was completed with funds privately subscribed. The church of 1775 gave place to the present church, which was opened for worship on Wednesday, 11th July 1894. The name, West Church, applied to St Cuthbert's in the 17th century, seems to have originated in the early Covenanting days. But it never really supplanted the old name. Indeed, it had a restricted use, and in course it disappeared. The church lands and glebe, with barn, cornyard, etc., were situated on the east side of the churchyard.

In the parish there were several chapels and religious houses. Near the West Port on the south side of the Castle there was Barras or Barres Chapel, so named from the enclosure for tournaments in the vicinity. Dedicated to the Virgin Mary, it was built by James IV in 1507-8, and appears to have been completed in May of the latter year. On 10th May foresaid King James supplied taffeta red and white "to the courtingis and ruf of the Chapel of the barres" at a cost of £42 5s., and later in the same month, on the 20th and 27th respectively, he made offerings in the chapel then designated "the Chapell of conscience beside the barres." On 25th Feb. 1532-3 James V provided for the chapel, vestments and altar furnishings, and also a bell and an image of the Virgin Mary. The lands of the chapel are described on 31st Oct. 1566 as lie Barres and the tail adjoining the same on the west side, and extending to St Margaret's well, lying under the Castle on the south, between Polcatsher's and Orchardfield on the south, the public way leading to St Cuthbert's on the north, the said well on the west, and the lands called Kingis-Stabillis on the east. The first chaplain, presented by James IV on 6th June 1508, was Sir James Ellem or Allane, and his successor on 15th Sept. 1545 was Henry Achesoun. At the Burgh Moor, on the ground of St Giles' Grange, there was a chapel founded in honour of St John the Baptist and St John the Evangelist, apparently on 15th Feb. 1512-13, by Sir John Crawford, prebendary of St Giles. Provision was made for (1) a chaplain to celebrate in the chapel, the endowment being 18 acres of the Common Moor, 1½ acres of land given of charity by the Town Council, and 3½ acres of said moor held by Sir John off the Town Council in feu, and (2) for "a man of advanced age" who "shall reside at the said church, wearing always a white robe and carrying on his breast a sign, viz. the head of John the Baptist, proclaiming his hermitical life, who shall have for his sustenance an acre of land with house and garden adjacent to the same on the south. On 5th Jan. 1516-17 Sir John Crawford conveyed the chapel with the churchyard, houses, yards, lands, to the adjacent Convent of St Catherine of Sienna, and the chapel became the chapel of the convent. Near the foregoing chapel there was a chapel dedicated to St Roc or Rok, founded probably about 1501-2. At that period

James IV made various gifts to the chapel, and included in the outlays was a gratuity to the French Friar "that brocht ane bane of Sanct Rouk to the King." Further gifts followed in 1507 and 1512. On 24th Nov. 1532, "for suffrage and prayeris to be done in Sanct Rokis Kirk on the Burowmuir for the souls that lie in the said Kirk and Kirkyard," the Town Council granted to Sir John Young, chaplain in the chapel, and his successors in office 3 acres of the Burgh Moor, with another acre on the south side of the kirkyard of the chapel, to build a yard and house upon—the successive chaplains to "uphold the Kirk in sclates watherticht, glaswyndows, and all uther necessour thingis." Evidently the Town Council was the patron of the chapel, for on 11th Aug. 1537 it granted authority for £10 expenditure "upon heting and mending Sanct Rokis Chapel for the present year," which "is allegit to thame to be reuynous and falling down." At Newhaven there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St James. In the 16th century up to 1560 it was variously designated the "Chapel of the Blessed Virgin," "Our Lady Kirk of the New Haven," the "Chapel of St Mary at lie New Haven or Port of Grace"; but later, and certainly in 1601, it was called the "Chapel of St James, Newhaven." Included in the revenue granted by Crown Charter of 2nd March 1614 to the minister, elders, and deacons of South Leith Church for the Royal Foundation of the Hospital and Poor of Leith, was the place where was the Chapel of St James, Newhaven, formerly called the Chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary, with the garden of the chapel. Within the lands of Bristo there was a chapel dedicated to St Sebastian, founded on 8th May 1511, by Sir Matthew Doweile, chaplain; and in a charter of 14th April 1439, quoted in a Crown Charter of 2nd Sept. 1458, there appears "the Church of St John the Baptist under the Wall of the Castle." This latter was the chapel attached to the Hospital of the Knight Templars and later the Knights of St John at the Bow Foot in the Grassmarket. In St Ninian's Row in the Low Calton there was a chapel dedicated to St Ninian. Lepers at St Ninian's Chapel are referred to in a charter of 15th Feb. 1541-2, indicating that attached to the chapel there was a house for lepers. The west pier of Regent Bridge is situated on the site of the chapel. The Dominican nunnery of St Catherine of Sienna, the foundation of which was confirmed by Bull of Pope Leo X on 29th March 1517, was situated at the place called the Sciennes. Land for the nunnery was given by John Cant, burgess of Edinburgh, and Sir John Crawford, prebendary of St Giles, and the expense of erection was borne chiefly by Jane Hepburn, wife of George, fourth Lord Seton. Dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the Carmelite convent of St Mary of Placentia was situated a short distance from the south-east corner of the city wall. Alike of the name of the founder and of the date of the foundation nothing is known. The name survives in the pleasance. The hospital, or almshouse, with chapel was situated at the foot of St Leonard's Lane in the old barony of Broughton. It was in existence in the first half of the 12th century, and was granted to Holyrood Abbey by David I, probably at or soon after his foundation of the abbey in 1128. It seems to have had a somewhat chequered career. At any rate, towards the end of the 15th century "time, war, and other inconvenients" had made it "waste and uninhabitable," and on 18th July 1493 it was refounded by Robert Bellenden, Abbot of Holyrood, for six old and frail poor men, and their successors as beneficiaries, with sustenance for them, consisting of two crofts, the Terraris Croft and le Hermitis Croft in the said Abbot's territory of St Leonard, and 23s. annual rent from a tenement in the Canongate. Provision was also made for a chaplain for the hospital, who had a manse near the gate of the monastery on the north side of the High Street of the Canongate. Of the two crofts and the annual rent of 20s. sasine was granted by the abbot on 2nd Sept. 1494 to six poor men in the hospital, John Rudry, Thomas Blak, Robert Murray, John Burne, Thomas Rannald, Thomas Huchonson, and their successors.—[Reg. Great Seal, i, 805, 1812; ii, 616, 1692, 2192, 3818; iii, 170; iv, 2813; vi, 1181; vii, 1015; viii, 243; Reg. Sec. Seal, i, 1689, ii, 2455, iii, 1322; *Acts Scott. NORTH LEITH

The Act of Parliament, 9th July 1606, which erected the parish, the church then having 1,000 communicants, narrates that the inhabitants of the north and south parts of the Water of Leith being “unable to repair to thair Parish Church of Holyrood, upon thair awin expenss and charges has biggit to themselffis ane kirk upon the north side of the brig of Leith, and has had ministers there 20 years bygone” serving the cure and ministering to them the sacraments. The General Assembly had ratified and approved the erection in 1602. The “kirk” in the narrative has reference to the Chapel of St Ninian which Robert Bannatyne, Abbot of Holyrood, founded in 1493 at the north end of the Bridge of Leith, and to which, for two chaplains to serve at the chapel, he conveyed by charter of 18th July 1493, land or building at the south end of the bridge and various annual rents. In or about 1586 the inhabitants of North Leith acquired the chapel, the chaplain's house, the tithes of certain lands and houses, and also the tithes of fish brought into the harbour. At that time the chapel was rebuilt, or at least enlarged. In 1736 the church was in great measure rebuilt; and of this church only the steeple now remains. The present church is situated farther to the west.—[Acts Scott. Parl., iv, 301-2; Reg. Great Seal, i, 2193; the Stewarton Case, 114.]

In 1128 the church, at that time a dependent chapel of St Cuthbert's, was granted along with two bovates of land by David I to Holyrood Abbey. Apparently about a century later Liberton was erected into a parish. There was in the church an altar dedicated to St John the Baptist; and lands in the parish called Reinyenielandis and Ninianeslandis indicate that there may also have been in the church an altar dedicated to St Ninian. The church was rebuilt in 1815. On the east side of the Edinburgh-Straiton road, about a quarter-mile north of the Kaimes cross-road, at the place called St Catherine's, there was a chapel dedicated to that saint, termed St Catherine-of-the-Kaimes. Of the chapel it is said on 30th March 1420 that it was "founded of old," and is "devoutly resorted to by Christ's faithful on the Feast of St Catherine," and "for want of means cannot be completely constructed or fittingly ornamented, unless through Papal succour"; and on that date Papal Indulgence was granted to all Christ's faithful giving free caritative subsidies to the construction of the said chapel, or visiting it on the said feast. The spring, called the Balm-Well, which was attached to the chapel, still exists. On the surface of the water there always floats petroleum, issuing, in all probability, from a bed of shale below. To the well curative properties were ascribed. It was visited in 1617 by James VI, who ordered it to be fenced with stones from bottom to top, and a door and staircase to be made for it to facilitate access to the water. In 1650 it was destroyed and filled up by Cromwell's soldiers; but after the Restoration it was again opened up and put in order. It is covered by a small vaulted structure. By charter of 5th June 1502 Archibald Wauchope of Niddrie-Marschall, with consent of Elizabeth Scougal, his wife, granted to Sir William Warrok, chaplain, and his successors in office, for perpetual celebrations at the high altar of the Holy Rood built by him in the town and territory of Niddrie-Marschall, 12 merks annual rent from the lands of Pylmure in the barony of Niddrie-Marschall, in the parish of Currie, land built, planted, and open in the said town and territory of Niddrie-Marschall, and the East Croft, called the Scotis-patis-croft, also in the said town, for glebe and manse, with pasture for two cows in the commony of the said town. The above description is incomplete; but evidently it implies that the chapel was dedicated to the Holy Rood. Attached to the chapel there was a graveyard which in 1685 was transferred to the south-west side of the garden. At that time or somewhat later there was built the Tomb-house which occupies the site of the chapel. To the latter may have belonged ecclesiastical details which are found in the Tomb-house. After 1511 Sir Simon Preston of Craigmillar, Kt., who died in or before 1520, built and endowed a chapel at the south end of the bridge of Craigmillar. The chapel was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The New Statistical Account tells of a chapel at Bridgend, built by James V, near a place that he used as a hunting lodge, and at the time (1845) that the account was written served as a stable. It may be, however, that the latter chapel was identical with the chapel of Sir Simon Preston, and was erroneously ascribed to James V. There was also at Craigmillar a chapel built and used as a place of worship for the Presbyterians during the Indulgence by James VII. It, too, a century ago was used as an out-house.—[*Reg. RATHO

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 5th May 1243. By mandate of 15th June 1444 Pope Eugenius IV, at the instance of Sir John Forrester of Corstorphine, Kt., annexed the rectory and vicarage of the church to the Collegiate Church of Corstorphine. About four years later William de Lauder, lord of Haulton (Halton), and all the parishioners of Ratho represented to Pope Nicholas V that on account of said annexation the church and its great and populous parish had been “much weakened and neglected,” and that “the cure of the parishioners” could “ill be borne,” and accordingly by Bull of 2nd Jan. 1450–1 Pope Nicholas separated from the said collegiate church all the tithes, etc., formerly belonging to the Vicar of Ratho, not exceeding £8 stg. in value, and granted and assigned them for the portion of a vicar to be again instituted in the said Parish Church of Ratho, and moreover erected the said Parish church into another vicarage, and made provision of it, not exceeding £8, to Thomas de Lauder, priest of the Diocese of St Andrews, of a race of barons, by unmarried knight and an unmarried woman.—[Lockhart's Ch. in Scot. in the 13th Century, 52; Collegiate Churches of Midlothian, 289–303; *Cal. BORROWSTOUNNESS or KINNEIL

The Church of Kinneil was granted to Holyrood Abbey by Herbert, Chamberlain of Malcolm IV, with consent of his sons, Stephen and William; and this was confirmed by Charter of King Malcolm in 1158-9. Before 1163 there pertained also to the Abbey the teinds of the mill and salt pans of Kinneil. In 1634 the inhabitants of Bo'ness built a church in which the parish minister conducted worship in turn with the parish church at Kinneil. In 1649, Bo'ness being then in a flourishing condition through the increase of trade, the inhabitants petitioned Parliament to the effect that their kirk had been planted with a minister, and that it was expedient that it should be erected into a kirk by itself, "they pledging themselves to provide a stipend of 800 merks for the minister"; and on 9th March of that year Parliament passed an Act dissolving and dividing the church from Kinneil and erecting it into a separate church with an area attached, the stipend as stated to be allocated among the inhabitants. In 1669 William, Duke of Hamilton, and Anna, Duchess of Hamilton, laid a petition before Parliament stating that Kinneil had only 300 communicants, that through the decay of trade and the poverty of the inhabitants of Bo'ness the stipend there could not be yearly collected or recovered without a great deal of trouble and expense, and that the erection of Bo'ness Church into a parish church was for the time illegal as wanting the lawful authority, and done in the absence of the late James, Duke of Hamilton, then a prisoner in England, who had right to the superiority and property of all lands in the barony of Kinneil, and to all the teinds thereof; they craved therefore that the said erection be declared null and void save in relation to the stipend of 800 merks payable by the inhabitants of Bo'ness, and that the Kirk of Bo'ness, situated in the most fit and convenient place within the barony, should be declared the only kirk of the barony and parish, they being willing to provide at Bo'ness for the minister a manse and glebe in lieu of the same at Kinneil. On 23rd Dec. of the same year Parliament passed an Act in terms of the petition, declaring the Kirk of Bo'ness to be the parish church, and annulling the erection of the parish of Bo'ness in 1649 except in regard to the stipend of 800 merks which, with the teind stipend at Kinneil, was to constitute the stipend of the minister. The parish church at Bo'ness was repaired in 1672, when the Duke of Hamilton added a large aisle for himself and his tenants. In 1775 the aisle was removed, and the church was very largely rebuilt to a size of 69 × 48 ft., and in 1820 the south wall and part of the east wall were rebuilt and the galleries reconstructed and made uniform. The present church was built in 1886–8, being opened for worship on 14th Oct. of the latter year. It consists of a nave with aisles, transepts, chancel, and a tower at the north end, and contains a Dutch pulpit said to have been a gift from Dutch sailors, and a ship in the gallery of the west transept, both transferred from the old church. The latter church was for a time the place of worship of the congregation of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, and is now a cinema house. It was burned on Sat., April 7th 1945. Within the policies of Kinneil are the remains of the Church of Kinneil—the west gable with double belfry, and foundations, which show a nave and a chancel with a cross aisle on the south side of the latter. In the vestibule of Bo'ness Church there is a bell which is said to have belonged to Kinneil Church. It is medieval, and has this incomplete inscription on the shoulder in Lombard lettering: EN : KATERINA : VOCOR : UT : PER : ME : VIRGINIS : ALME (Lo, Katherine I am called, that by me . . . of the Blessed Virgin . . .).—[Charters of Holyrood, 12, 13–14, 15, 167–171; *Acts Scott. CARRIDEN

In 1124-42 the church was granted to Holyrood Abbey by Robert, Bishop of St Andrews. It was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 7th May 1243. In 1766 the church was removed from the churchyard in the vicinity of Carriden House, a new church being built on a site on the east side of the road a short distance south of Bridgeness. The latter consisted of a nave with a north transept in the middle, and the walls were of rubble. A tower at the east end and a vestry at the west were added considerably later. From the old church to the new there was transferred the pulpit which had the date 1655 and is said to have come from Holland. In 1905 steps were taken to deal with the dilapidated condition of the church, and after protracted negotiations with the heritors it was agreed on 20th March 1907 that that body contribute £1,800 to the building of a new church at a minimum cost of £4,800, the Kirk Session being responsible for the balance of the cost. The church, built to plans by Dr Macgregor Chalmers, Glasgow, was completed prior to 8th Sept. 1909, and ten days later was designated the parish church by the Presbytery. It occupies a site on the North Glebefield, in the vicinity of the old church. The bell and a ship, which presumably had been in the older building in the churchyard prior to 1766, were removed from the old church to the new. The bell is Dutch and bears the inscription PIETER OSTENS GOOT MY TE ROTTERDAM A^s 1674. After the old church was abandoned the heritors agreed to dismantle it, leaving only the tower and vestry intact.—[Charters of Holyrood, 10; Heritors' Records.]

FALKIRK

In 1166 Richard, Bishop of St Andrews, for the souls of David I, Malcolm IV, his predecessors, Robert and Arnold, Bishops of St Andrews, Alwin, his uncle, etc., granted to Holyrood Abbey "the Church of Eeiglesbrac" (Falkirk) called Varia Capella, "speckled church." On 12th June 1242 the church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham of St Andrews. On 24th Feb. 1449 Papal confirmation was given to the erection of the church into a collegiate church by Sir Alexander Livingstone, but the erection was subsequently quashed. There were in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and an altar dedicated to St Michael the Archangel, founded on the north side in 1531 by Sir Robert Batho, chaplain of the said Altar of the Virgin. At Manuel there was a chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, with regard to which there was presented to the Pope by Rankine de Crawford, nobleman, temporal lord of Manuel, and all the inhabitants of Manuel in the parish of Falkirk, a petition to the effect that the church or chapel of the said place of Manuel had from time immemorial a cemetery, baptistry, chism, vase, burial-place, and a priest who celebrated divine offices there and administered the sacraments to all the inhabitants of the temporal lordship, but that, although other similar neighbouring churches or chapels had their own district and special clerk-minister to the priests and chaplains serving such churches or chapels in divine offices, elected and presented by the inhabitants of such places, the said church or chapel was without such a clerk-minister. The petition craved a clerk-minister, so elected and presented. In response a Papal Mandate was given 4th Apr. 1454 to Robert Lauder, Bishop of Dunblane, to grant power to the place and lordship to elect, with the consent of the chaplain, a clerk-minister to help and minister, according to custom, to the chaplain or priest of the said church or chapel, the emoluments, similar to those in other cases, to be provided by the inhabitants. On 21st Oct. 1300 Edward I made an offering of 7 sh. "at the High Altar of the Priory of Manuel." In the west end of the parish, near St Helen's Loch, which no longer exists, there was a chapel dedicated to St Helen.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, x, 691–2; *Cal. Docs. KIRKLISTON

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 11th Sept. 1244. In response to a petition by James Kennedy, Bishop of St Andrews, the Church of Kirkliston was appropriated by Papal Bull of 26th June 1451 to the episcopal mensa of St Andrews. The petition stated that “the said Parish Church is situated within the barony of Kirkliston (which belongs to the episcopal mensa of St Andrews, and is not more than six miles distant from the most populous town of the realm, at which town the King of Scotland at times resides) and has a convenient manse for the Bishop's residence.” The actual appropriation was to take effect on the resignation or death of the rector, John Gray. By Act of Parliament in 1598 the parsonage and vicarage of the church were dissolved from the Bishopric of St Andrews, and granted to James Law, minister of the parish. In 1383 and later the church was called Liston; and another alternative name was Temple Liston. By Papal Decree of 4th Oct. 1387 the church was annexed to the mensa of the Bishop of St Andrews.—[Cal. Papal Reg., Letters, x, 220; *Acts Scott. LINLITHGOW

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham of St Andrews on 22nd May 1242. Nearly two years before, on 6th July 1240, Bishop de Bernham confirmed to the Priory of St Andrews the Church and Chapels of Linlithgow, and particularly the Chapel of Binnie, afterwards Church of Binny, and the Chapel of Retrevyn (Torthraven), which had been granted to the priory by his predecessor, William Malvoisine, Bishop 1202–38. The Church of Binny was dedicated to St Giles. In 1120–57 William de Lindsay confirmed to the church $\frac{1}{2}$ caracut of land which had been given by his ancestor, Durand. The patronage of the vicarage of the church belonged to the Priory of Elcho in Rhynd. The Chapel of Torthraven was dedicated to St Leonard the Abbot. To the chapel Sir Richard de Melville, who lived cir. 1180–1215, gave $\frac{1}{2}$ caracut of land; and his grandson, George or Gregory, cir. 1262–70, 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ marks annually from the fermes of Lochbersard. On 24th May 1401 Sir James de Douglas of Dalkeith granted to Friar William Cochar, Prior of the Provincial Order of the Carmelites, and to the Chapel of the Virgin (Mary) of Linlithgow and the friars of the Order there, a piece of land of 4 acres at the south side of the chapel, and an acre called “the Hermit’s Acre,” for building a refectory, dormitory, cloister, etc. This appears to denote the completion of the settlement founded by the burgesses of Linlithgow in 1290. On 26th April 1571, on presentation by James, Lord Ross of Halkhead and Melville, patron, Sir Robert Alisoun was instituted chaplain of the said “Kirk or Chapel” by John Kirkpatrick handing over to him “the Book, the Door Key, and the Desk” of the same. On 2nd Feb. 1502–3 James IV granted to the burgesses of Linlithgow and certain chaplains of Linlithgow Church, the church lands of Magdaleneside, amounting to 6 arable acres, and in exchange received from them 6 arable acres of land beside the hospitium of Sir James Erskill, Chaplain. The latter lands the King gave “for building a Place for the Augustine Friars,” no doubt the Hermit Friars of the Order of St Augustine, Observantes. From the King there came to those friars further gifts noted in the Lord High Treasurer’s Accounts of 1503: 14th Sept. To the Augustine Freris to thair bigging in Linlithgow, X French Crowns, VII lib.; 29th Oct. To the Augustine Freris at Linlithgow, XIII Sh.; 13th Dec. To the Augustine Freris of Linlithgow to thair bigging, X French Crowns, VII lib. Of the Place nothing further seems to be known. At Linlithgow there was also a leper house dedicated to St Michael. Probably it was to the inmates of this house that James IV made various contributions in 1496 and 1498, under these descriptions: “The pur folk, seke folk, and gangors in Linlithgow”; “The sek folk,” “The pur folk”, and “The Seik folk at the toun end of Linlithgow.” In 1641 Parliament ratified a charter of James VI, 8th May 1591, granting to the town council the endowments of all altarages and chaplainries in the burgh, for the maintenance of a reader at the kirk, and of the poor of the hospital of the burgh.—[The Church of Scotland in the 13th Century, 48; *Reg. MUIRAVONSIDE

The Cistercian nunnery at Manuel, which was situated on the left bank of the river Avon and was dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded by Malcolm IV before 1164, and very probably in 1156. By Charter 1165-71 King William the Lion confirmed to the nuns that land in Manuel which King Malcolm, his brother, gave to them, by its right marches as perambulated . . . with common pasture and easements of wood for building, fencing, and fuel, so far as necessary for their own use. The same Charter also confirmed a tenth of the Mill of Itham (Yetholm) given to the nuns by Walter Corbat, and a holding in Rokesburg (Roxburgh), given by Rawenild of Itham (Yetholm). By Charter of 22nd June 1224 Alexander II granted to them 1½ chalders of salt from the teinds of his saltpans which Ralph Baret then held. The lands of Manuel comprised the lands, town, and manor of Manuel, lands of Walkmilton with the Mill, Myrehead, Williamcraigs, in the barony of Manuel. Other possessions of the nunnery were the grain mill called Mongall, with the mill and mill lands, and the dry multures of Nether and Over Mongall, lying in Mongall, in the barony of West Kers, and at least one half, one and a half fifth-parts and a fifth part of the land of Whitebaukis in the barony of Bellormie. To the nunnery there also pertained an annual rent from the fermes of the Burgh of Linlithgow. On 16th June 1506 Pope Julius II, in response to a petition of James IV, gave commission to the Abbots of Cambuskenneth and Balerimo, and the Provost of Trinity College, Edinburgh, to convert the nunnery into a house of the Hermit Friars of the Order of St Augustine, Observantes. The King stated that no house of the Order existed in Scotland, that he desired the establishment of such a house, and that in the Nunnery of Manuel five nuns were resident. He asked, therefore, that the said nunnery be "suppressed and extinguished," the nuns transferred to another place, and said Order of Friars introduced, a house to be built for their use with church, bell tower, small bell, cloister, refectory, churchyard, etc.; but it is apparent that the change was not carried out. On 10th Jan. 1545-6 the lands of Manuel, as already described, were set in feu by Janet Livingstone, prioress of the nunnery, to Alexander Livingstone, in life rent, and his second son, William, in fee for defence, promised by said Alexander, against those who might do her harm—an illustration of the danger of lawless steps being taken in the interests of a rival to usurp the office of prioress in such houses. Then or soon afterwards the other local possessions of the nunnery were also set in feu by the said Janet. Associated with the office of prioress for a time was a prior. The seal of James Hopper, "Prior of the Monastery of Manuel and the Convent of the Carmelites in Linlithgow," is attached to a charter of 11th Jan. 1559-60.—[Scotichronicon, i, 453, Ed. 1759; Hailes' Annals, i, 130, Ed. 1819; *Misc. PRESBYTERY OF BIGGAR

The church in 1545 was erected on the site of the old building dedicated to St Nicholas. Associated with the church there was a hospital, dedicated to St Leonard, called the House of Biggar. On 10th Aug. 1531 John Tweedie of Drummelzier granted an annual rent of £10 from his lands of Drummelzier to Sir Andrew Brown, Chaplain, and his successors as chaplains, for perpetual celebrations in Biggar Church for the soul of John, Lord Fleming, slain on 1st Nov. 1524 by said John Tweedie's son James and his kinsmen and associates. The grant was in fulfilment of a Decreet Arbitral with reference to the foresaid murder between Malcolm, Lord Fleming, son and successor of the said John, Lord Fleming, and the said John Tweedie. On 10th Jan. 1545-6 Malcolm, Lord Fleming, erected the church into a collegiate church in honour of the Trinity and the Virgin Mary, for a provost, 8 canons and prebendaries, 4 boys having children's voices, and 6 poor men. At his own charge Lord Malcolm built "a stately Church in the village of Biggar, dedicated to our Lady of Assumption." The foundation was confirmed by the Papal Legate on 14th March 1545-6. To the provostry was assigned the Church of Thankerton, with its rents, fruits and emoluments and manse and glebe, the provost being held bound to pay to a curate having the care of the souls of the parishioners of Thankerton £10 Scots besides 2 acres of land of the provostry beside the church for a manse and garden. The First Prebendary was called the Prebendary of the Hospital of St Leonard. He was the preceptor of the Song School; and to him were assigned the lands of Spittal. The Second Prebendary was the Preceptor of Grammar Study; and to him were assigned the lands of Auchinreoch in the barony of Auchtermoney in the county of Stirling. The Third Prebendary was the sacrist of the church; and to him were assigned the chaplainry of St Mary at Kirkintilloch, founded upon the lands of Garnegaber and Auchyndavy, 6 merks annual rent in Kirkintilloch and 2 acres for a manse and garden pertaining to the said Chaplainry. The Fourth Prebendary was the preceptor of the praying poor and the administrator and distributor of their victual and other emoluments; and to him were assigned £10 Scots annual rent from the lands of Drummelzier, and £7 6s. 8d. from the fruits, etc., of the parsonage and vicarage of Biggar. To each of the other prebendaries was assigned £7 6s. 8d. from the parsonage and vicarage, and of the church lands of the same. The Eighth Prebendary was the vicar-pensioner of the "Parish Church of Biggar erected into a College"; and he had a seat with the other prebendaries in the choir, and sang and exercised the divine office there except when he was occupied with the cure of the said church and the administration of the Sacraments to the parishioners. In 1555 the Church of Dunrod was collated to the collegiate church. One of the altars in the church was dedicated to the Holy Rood.—[*Reg. THANKERTON

About 1180 Agnes de Brus granted to Kelso Abbey the church of the town of Thankerton, which is called the Wodekyrch (Woodchurch); and at the same period Simon Lockard made a similar grant, the designation being “the Church which is called the Wudechirche.” The confirmation charter of Jocelyn, Bishop of Glasgow, also about the same date, has the description, “the Church of Wudekirche with the whole parish as well of Thankerton as of the town of Symon Lockard.” On 1st May 1542 the Archbishop of Glasgow ratified the transference of the patronage of the church by Kelso Abbey on 26th Nov. 1540, with consent of David Hamilton, Rector of Thankerton, to the Collegiate Church of Biggar which Malcolm, Lord Fleming, intended to build. To a vicar-pensioner for Thankerton there was reserved 20 merks Scots with 4 acres of land at Kelso. The consent of the Commendator (Gavin) of Kelso to the transference bears that “all of them in these evil times in the increase of Lutheranism” are “obliged to contribute to so good a work,” and that Lord Fleming might not be diverted from so good a work nor receive any prejudice by the abbey having the patronage.—[Book of Kelso, i, 227, 318–20; *Reg. EDDLESTON

In later medieval times the church was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. About 1140 Eddleston appears on record as Pentjacob or Pentejacob. On 5th April 1170 the designation is Gillemorestun, the "town" of Gille More, St Mary's servant or devotee. Somewhat later, 1176-89, the lands were granted by Richarde de More-ville, constable of Scotland, to Edulf, son of Uchtred, from whom arose the designation Eddleston, Edulfston. The church was rebuilt in 1829. Possibly Harehope in this parish was the site of the "House of St Lazarus of Harop," the Master of which,

Friar William Corbert, in 1296 had letters from Edward I of England to the Sheriff of Edinburgh for restitution of the lands of his house in the shire of Edinburgh. Land in the parish called St Mungo's Row suggests either a chapel or an altar dedicated to that saint.—[Ancient Church Dedications in Scotland; Reg. of Glasgow, i, 3–5, 23, 39, 140–3; *Lord High Treas. PEEBLES

The earliest patron of Peebles was St Mungo; and St Mungo's Well still survives.
 About 1116 the church with a caracute of land belonged to the See of Glasgow; and added to it there occurs in 1186 among the possessions of the see the dependent Chapel of Manor. On 29th Oct. 1195 the church was dedicated by Bishop Joceline of Glasgow, and it may be that it was at that date that St Andrew took the place of St Mungo as the patron. Before 1214 Peebles had become a prebend of Glasgow.

In the church there were altars dedicated to—St Mary the Virgin (St Mary of Childbirth); Holy Rood; St Andrew; St Mary of the Geddes Aisle, founded with the aisle or chapel by John Geddes early in the 15th century; St Mary Major; St James, designated also the Altar of St James and St Katharine in a Charter of 17th April 1469, by which William Smaill, priest, granted two annual rents from properties on the north side of High Street, Edinburgh, for masses at the altar; St John the Baptist; St Laurence, founded probably about 1470 by Sir Richard Purdie, Dean of Peebles and Vicar of Pettinain; St. Martin; St Michael the Archangel; St Christopher, founded 29th April 1517 by William Alane, burgess of Peebles; St Peter and St Paul, founded 20th Jan. 1520–1, in virtue of an indenture between the community of the burgh and Sir Patrick Stenhouse, chaplain of the Chapel of St Mary, who gave part of the chapel lands as the endowment. By Crown Charter of 8th June 1543 there was confirmed the erection of the church into a collegiate church by the Bailies, Council, and Community, and John, Lord Hay of Yester, for a provost and 12 prebendaries, and “two young persons having a youthful voice to chant Divine Service.” The prebends, identical with the altars, were in the following order: The Virgin Mary of Childbirth, Holy Cross, St Michael the Archangel, St Mary Major, St Peter and St Paul, St John the Baptist, St Mary of Geddes Aisle, St Andrew, St James, St Laurence, St Martin, St Christopher. Each prebendary was to have 24 merkes, a chamber with garden “in the ancient town of Peebles” adjoining the messuage of the Archdeacon of Glasgow, and an acre of the church lands. There was at the Castle of Peebles a chapel founded by David I. To Kelso Abbey King William the Lion (1145–1214) confirmed the chapel, with a caracut of land, and also an annual rent of 10 shillings from the fermes of the burgh of Peebles assigned to the chapel by his grandfather, David I, for perpetual celebrations for the soul of Henry, father of said King William. The abbey was also held bound to make the chapel fitting and beautiful, to equip it with suitable ecclesiastical ornaments, and to provide a chaplain who “shall minister perpetually in it for the soul of Earl Henry.” By letters of David II of 8th March 1362–3 the community were enjoined to assign a stance in the common muir to build a Chapel of the Virgin Mary. In the chapel there was an altar dedicated to St Osyth. The Church of the Holy Cross is said by Fordun to have been founded by Alexander III. According to the narrative, the royal action was prompted by the discovery of a stately and venerable cross at Peebles on 9th May 1361. The cross, it was believed, had been hidden by some of the faithful about 296, when the Maximian persecution was raging in Britain. Soon after there was found close to the same spot an urn containing ashes and bones of a man’s body torn from limb to limb, as it were. The clue to the identity of the ashes and bones was thought to lie in the inscription on the outside of the stone in which the cross was lying, “Tomb of the Bishop St Nicolas.” Miracles were wrought at the place to which people from Scotland and the north of England continued to resort in crowds, bringing offerings to God. And so, with the advice of the Bishop of Glasgow, the King reared a handsome church on the spot in honour of God and the Holy Cross. The church was placed in the custody of Trinitarian or Red Friars; and on 3rd Feb. 1473, in response to a petition by James III and Margaret, his queen, Brother Robert, Head Minister of the Red Friars at the Monastery of Mathuron, Paris, sanctioned the erection of a Trinitarian Monastery at the church, and the annexation thereto of the Trinitarian House at Berwick on Tweed, which had been destroyed by the English. Among the possessions of the house at Berwick on Tweed, so annexed, was the Church of Kettins. James V increased the resources of the monastery by the annexation of the Trinitarian House at Dunbar on 1st July 1529, the monastery being described as the place “quhar ane part of the verray croce that our Salvatour was crucifyit on is honorit and kepit,” and by the annexation of the Trinitarian House at Houston in the parish of Prestonkirk, on 2nd Dec. 1531. The high altar of the church was the Black Rood; and there were also altars of the Holy Blood and St Sebastian. After the Reformation the Cross Church became the parish church, and was so used till 1784, when a new church was built on the Castle-hill. The latter gave place to the present church in 1887. At Eshiels near Horsburgh Castle there was a hospital with chapel bearing at first the name of St Laurence, and later the name of St Leonard and, maybe, under the invocation of both. Regular payments to the hospital were made from the customs of the burgh, the first occurring in 1327. The site is now called Chapelyards. About 1462 there was founded near the Chapel of the Virgin Mary an almshouse, also dedicated to St Leonard. By Charter of 19th Nov. 1621 James VI granted to the burgh for "the commune workes of the burgh" the endowments of the following prebends of the former collegiate church, St Mary, Holy Rood, St Michael the Archangel, St Marie major, St John the Baptist, St Mary dallgeddes, St Andrew, St James, St Laurence, St Christopher, "with the chaplanrie callit St Marie"; the lands, tenements, houses, biggins, kirk kirks, with "the hie and Cross Kirk" and kirkyards, chapels, yards, orchards, crofts, rents, teinds, fruits, duties, emoluments, "almous silver, obite silver and anniversaries" pertaining to chaplainries, alterages, prebends founded in any kirk, hospital, chapel, college or hospital in the burgh, or due from any land or tenement in the burgh to any kirk, chaplainry or prebend founded outside the burgh in any part of Scotland. —[*Acts Scott. WEST LINTON

There was in the church an aisle of St John the Baptist, no doubt with an altar of that dedication.

In its early designation, Lyntunruderick (Linton Roderick), West Linton is linked up with Roderick (d. 603), Christian King of Strathclyde, Rydderick Hael (Roderick the Liberal), supporter of St Mungo, to whom the church was dedicated. In 1569–72 George Fairhous had the chaplainry of “ye Lady of Linton” to “sustain him at the Schools,” indicating the existence of a chapel dedicated to the Virgin.—[*Ancient Ch. PRESBYTERY OF DALKEITH

BORTHWICK

The Church of Lockerworth was granted to the Abbey of Scone by David I 1124–53, along with a piece of land which the abbey subsequently gave to David de Lyn in exchange for 1 acre of land and a piece of land beside the river under the orchard of the church. The exchange was confirmed by Roger, Bishop of St Andrews, 1188–1202. The teinds, fruits, etc., of the church were granted by William, Lord Crichton, for the institution of prebends of the Collegiate Church of Crichton on its foundation on 26th Dec. 1449. In response to a petition by the Presbytery of Edinburgh which stated that the church had been destitute of the exercise of religion for several years bypast on account of the absence of stipend for a minister, all the teind sheaves and all the teinds of the rectory, great and small, and all the fruits of the parish that pertained to the prebends of Crichton Collegiate Church, and the vicarage of Borthwick, alias the vicarage Lochorquhart of Torcrek, with manse and glebe, resigned by Nathaniel Harlaw, Minister of Ormiston, were, by Crown Charter of 4th April 1596, ratified by Parliament in 1606, dissolved from Crichton, and annexed to Borthwick, to be called the Rectory of Borthwick.—[Book of Scone, 5–6, 14, 33; *Reg. CRANSTOUN

The church was granted to Kelso Abbey by Hugh Riddel, Lord of Cranston, and in 1165–78 the grant was confirmed by William the Lion. On 2nd March 1316–17 the church, with the lands of Preston or Easter Cranston pertaining thereto, was conveyed by the abbey to William Lamber-ton, Bishop of St Andrews, in exchange for the Church of Nenthorn, with the Chapel of Little Newton. The vicarage of the church became a Prebend of St Salvator's College and Collegiate Church, St Andrews. At least twice at the end of the 16th century the parish was designated Cranston-Riddell. The present church was built in 1825 at the sole expense of Sir John Dalrymple. The old manse, which was situated at Prestonhall, is said to have been a rest-house for pilgrims to Melrose (Kelso ?) Abbey. Over one of the windows was the inscription "Diversorium infra, Habitaculum supra," literally, "Inn below, dwelling above," expressive of the idea of Pilgrimage on earth, Home in heaven. At the village of Cousland there was a chapel dedicated to St Catharine, originally a dependent chapel of Inveresk Church, and as such appearing among the possessions of Dunfermline Abbey confirmed by Robert, Bishop of St Andrews, apparently before 1153, and certainly not later than 1158-9. On 4th June 1509 William Ruthven of Ruthven, Kt., fiar lord of Cousland, and William, Lord of Ruthven, and his wife, Isabel Livingstone, life-renters of Cousland, granted to the chapel 12 merks annually from the lands of Cousland, and a house and garden on the west side of the chapel. The date when Cousland was attached to Cranston parish has not been definitely ascertained; but it is said to have been at or soon after 1560. All traces of the chapel seem to have disappeared some time prior to the close of the 18th century; but local people of that period had recollections of a bell which had been taken away, and of a churchyard.—[*Acts Scott. CRICHTON

On 26th Dec. 1449 William, Lord Crichton, Chancellor of Scotland, "out of thankfulness and gratitude to Almighty God for all the manifold deliverances He has vouchsafed unto him," and "to the praise and Honour of God Omnipotent, and our Lord Jesus Christ, the ever Blessed and Glorious Virgin Mary, St Kentigern, and All Saints and the Elect of God," with consent of his son and heir, Sir James of Frendraucht, founded the Collegiate Church of Crichton in the parish church. Three days later confirmation was given by James Kennedy, Bishop of St Andrews. The foundation was for a provost, eight chaplains or prebendaries, one of whom was to be master or instructor of the school of music, and another master or teacher of the grammar school, two boys, and a sacrist whose duties were to attend to the ringing of the bells, locking the doors, vestments, chalices, and other vessels, and also for the repair of the fabric, furnishing the altar and choir, and other necessities. The provost was to have the whole fruits of the Rectory of Crichton, along with the rector's manse as residence, subject to a provision of £10 annually with $\frac{1}{2}$ acre of land for manse and garden, to a perpetual vicar who was to have the parochial cure of Crichton, and was also to be the Prebendary of Crichton. To the provost also pertained the Temple Lands of Crichton. The fruits of the Church of Lockerworth (Borthwick), annexed to the collegiate church, were in the first instance for the provision of a perpetual vicar of Lockerworth, who was to have the church lands or glebe of Lockerworth for his own use, along with the manse and garden formerly pertaining to the rector, and all the teind sheaves and other teinds of Haukerston, and all the teinds of Douglasland and Goldlan. The fruits of the Church of Lockerworth further provided for three prebends—the First Prebend of Middleton and the Second Prebend of Middleton, which had all the teind sheaves and other teinds of the town of Middleton and of Cauldsyde, along with all the teinds of the town of Osperton, and the Prebend of Lockerworth, later called the Prebend of Vogrie, which had all the teind sheaves and other teinds of the lands of Little Lockerworth, with all the teinds of the domicile lands of Lockerworth. For the fabric of the church and the repair of the fabric, and for ornaments, vestments, etc., further teinds of Lockerworth were devoted—the teinds of Arnoldston, Hervistoun, Rathquhillintoun and Catkin, with the teinds of the mills of Catkin and Lockerworth and Vogrie. This appears to be the Prebend of Arnoldston mentioned in a Crown Charter of 4th April 1596. The other three prebends were the prebend called , with endowments of lands and annual rents in lie Buithraw in Edinburgh; the Prebend of Hogston, with endowments of an annual rent of 16 $\frac{1}{2}$ merks from a teneement in Edinburgh, along with the town of Hogston near the Burgh Muir of Edinburgh; and the Prebend of Furde in the barony of Crichton, with endowments of £5 Scots from the east half of the lands of Uggings between Sleden and Furde, £5 Scots annual rent from the lands of the barony of Crichton, and $\frac{1}{2}$ acre for manse and garden. For the education and sustentance of the two boys there were set apart the teind sheaves and other teinds of Auchinlekhill and Curry, with all the teinds of the lands called lie Stanis; and the provision for the sacrist was all the teind sheaves and other teinds of West Caldmure, all portions of the fruits of Lockerworth Church. The Act of Parliament of 1641 which declared the collegiate church to be the parish church for all time, converted and appropriated all the teinds, fruits, rents, emoluments, and other duties whatsoever, "due to the vicares or prebendaries thair," to the said parish kirk and the minister serving or to serve the same.—[*Acts Scott. DALKEITH

In Dec. 1372 Robert II granted licence to Sir James de Douglas, Kt., of Dalkeith, to found a chaplainry or chaplain in the Chapel of St Nicolas, Dalkeith, with an endowment of £6 13s. 4d. stg. annual rent from the lands of Horsbruke in Peebles, and also to Sir Henry de Douglas, Kt., to infest the foresaid chaplain in 5 merks annual rent from whatever source he pleased. The same king on 25th Oct. 1375 confirmed a charter of Sir James de Douglas, Kt. of Dalkeith, founding in the chapel another chaplainry in honour of the Virgin Mary and St Nicolas, for the souls of Sir John de Douglas, his father, and Lady Agnes, his mother, the endowment being the lands of Suylt and Fethenane in Peebles. On 1st June 1406 Sir James erected the chapel, which he had enlarged and decorated, into a collegiate church for six chaplains, one of whom was provost. To the provost were assigned the lands of Dythment and Holden in the barony of West Calder. The provision for the first chaplain was the tenpound lands of Suylt and Fethenane to the extent of 20 marks annually; for the second, £10 stg., to wit 2 merks of the lands of Louchurde and 40s. annual rent of the lands of Kirkurde in Tweeddale; for the third 10 merks annual rent of the lands of Horsbruke "granted by us," and £3 annually from the lands of Winkiston, Corstunyngeisfelde and Dillay-islande in the Sheriffdom of Peebles, granted by Sir Henry de Douglas, brother of Sir James, the chaplain to celebrate at the Altar of St Peter in the said chapel (collegiate church); and for the other two chaplains 22 merks and half the lands of Spittalhaulch and Ingalston in Tweeddale, formerly given by "our predecessors to the Culdees and pious uses," in equal portions. Manses were also provided for the provost and chaplains. On 17th May 1477 James, Earl of Morton, erected the collegiate church anew for a provost and six canonries or prebends which were reorganised and augmented, the Churches of Newlands, Kilbocho, and Mordington being appropriated to the collegiate church. The prebends were—Newlands; Romanhouse; Bordland; Kilbocho; Horsbruke; Mordington. Besides the Altar of St Peter, there were at least an Altar of the Virgin Mary, an Altar of the Holy Rood and an Altar of St John the Baptist. On 31st May 1504 James II confirmed a charter, apparently of 21st July 1503, by which Alexander Gifford, Recorder of Newlands, founded two chaplainries in the church, one at the Altar of the Holy Rood, with lands and tenement in Edinburgh, and other buildings, and 14 acres of "my Temple Lands" in Gul-lane, and the other at the Altar of St John the Baptist in the south aisle, with 5 merks apx. from "my Hospital in the town of Dalkeith on the south side of the highway of the same."

Originally Dalkeith formed part of the parish of Lasswade; but in 1467 the inhabitants of Dalkeith made representations as to the very great inconvenience and danger to which they were exposed during tempestuous weather in having to cross the streams that fell into the Esk, as they resorted to their parish church of Lasswade about 2 miles distant, and also that the vicarage teinds were ample to support two vicars, and craved Patrick Graham, Bishop of St Andrews, to disjoin Dalkeith from Lasswade. On 10th Oct. of the same year the Bishop consented to the proposed disjunction and erected Dalkeith into a separate parish, the inhabitants of the town and Castle of Dalkeith, of the park commonly called Graham's Park, and of Easter and Wester Coldane, etc., to be under the spiritual jurisdiction of a separate vicar who was to perform Divine Service at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the collegiate church, and was to have the fruits of the said town, etc. The actual disjunction was to take effect upon the death or demission of Mr. James Lewington, vicar of Lasswade. The Altar or Chapel of the Virgin was thus constituted the Parish Church of Dalkeith. The Earl of Morton granted two roods of land for a manse. The rectory of Dalkeith was attached to the deanery of Restalrig; and on the dissolution of the deanery by Act of Parliament in 1592, Dalkeith secured full status as a parish. On 25th Nov. 1531 an indentor was made between James, Earl of Morton, and Sir John Crichtone, vicar of Dalkeith, by which the said vicar, considering the cost and expense incurred of James, Earl of Morton, John, Earl of Morton, and now James, Earl of Morton, "to find and obtene coles of Colden and Dalkeith," and the importance and emoluments the vicar and his successors might have, "if coals were won," for "the utilitie, augmentatioun, and ampler profit of the Kirk and Vicarage of Dalkeith," set and let to the Earl "all and hail the teynd coles of Colden and Dalkeith, with the teind sheaves of the lands of Braidwood," and the Earl, "to the laude glore and Honour of God Omnipotent, the blessit virgine Sanct Marie, His moder, patrones of the paroche kirk of Dalkeith, the bishop Sanct Nicolace, patron of the said nobill and mighty Lordis College and Chapel of Dalkeith, and of all the Sancts," to pay to the vicar and his successors 40s. Scots annually.

On 5th Dec. 1384 Sir James de Douglas founded in Dalkeith Castle a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St John the Baptist, in memory of his wife, Agnes Dunbar, the endowments being the lands of Louchurde and Kirkurd, subsequently annexed to the collegiate church. Provision was made for the services being conducted at Lasswade amid interruptions of war or repairs to the Castle. On 27th June 1396 Sir James de Douglas also founded a "House of God near our Chapel of Dalkeith," for six poor and miserable persons, the endowment being the following annual rents: £6 3s. 4d. stg. from the lands of Esterhopkelyack, £4 stg. from lands of Newby in Peebles, £3 4s. 8d. stg. from lands of Morton in Dalkeith. Described as "two mean old houses called the Beid Houses," the hospital was sold for the benefit of the poor about 1752, when the charity workhouse was built. One house was opposite the old manse, the other a little to the east of the church.—[Reg. Hon. de Morton, ii, 98–9, 124–6, 151–4, 197, 211, 226–35, 247, 259–80, 294, 324–8; *Coll. GLENCORSE

In or about 1230 Sir Henry de Brade granted to Holyrood Abbey the teinds of Baveley (Bavelaw) for the support of the chapel then called the Chapel of St Katherine in Pentland, and later St Katherines (or St Catherines)-in-the Hopes. The grant was confirmed by Charter of King Alexander II in 1236, and Bull of Pope Gregory IX in 1237. In Jan. 1243 David de Bern-ham, Bishop of St Andrews, confirmed the chapel to the abbey; and a Bull of Pope Innocent IV to the same effect followed in 1247. The foregoing facts hardly support the picturesque story of the founding of the chapel by Sir William St Clair of Rosslyn, which narrates that while hunting in the Pentlands King Robert the Bruce was baulked by a white deer specially fleet of foot, and in his difficulty asked his attendant nobles whether one of their dogs could secure the animal. Without hesitation Sir William St Clair pledged his head against the forest of Pentland Moor that his two dogs would kill the deer before it crossed the march Burn. The king assented; and then came the chase, which went on till it was close on the Burn. In despair of securing the animal, Sir William threw himself from his horse and invoked the aid of St Katherine. At once one of his dogs stopped the deer in the middle of the stream, and the other turned it back to the winning bank and killed it. Sir William's reward was the lands of Logan House, Kirkton, and Earnsraig; and in gratitude for St Katherine's help he built a chapel to her honour on the spot where he had knelt in prayer. While the story can hardly be true, it may be that in some way Sir William was a benefactor of the chapel which was in existence more than a century earlier. Some time prior to 1560 Glencorse became a parish with the chapel as the church; and in the 17th century there occur the designations the Church of St Catherine-in-the-Hopes; and under that designation the church was attached to the Bishopric of Edinburgh on its erection by Charles I in 1633. At an earlier period, apparently in or soon after 1602, the parish had been united to Lasswade. But on 18th June 1612, on the ground that "Glencorse is not able to interteine ane minister for the present as is allegit," and also on account of the distance of Lasswade from Glencorse, the Presbytery consented "to the union of the twa kirks," Glencorse and Penicuik, "ane reasonable augmentation" to be "provyded fra Glencors for the present minister of Penycuik and his successors." The union with Lasswade, however, was not disannulled; and the minister of Lasswade retained his right to the double benefice. In any case the arrangement does not appear to have yielded satisfactory results for Glencorse; and on 20th Oct. 1615 the parishioners complained to the Presbytery "of ye want of the Word and Sacramentis," and desired "most earnestlie ane pastor." The minister of Lasswade agreed, "provyding that in respect of his strict and grit necessities his stipend was not imparit." The lack of stipend prevented Glencorse being made a separate charge; but on 23rd Dec. 1615 the Presbytery resolved that a colleague be appointed to the minister of Lasswade, his particular duty being to overtake the work at Glencorse. In this arrangement the people of Glencorse concurred; and the emoluments of the colleague were provided by the heritors of both parishes. By Act of Parliament on 8th March 1647 Glencorse was disjoined from Lasswade and made into a separate parish. In the same year, on account of the church being situated at the west end of the parish—it was only 20 yards from the March Burn—a new church was erected in a central position on the Erneraig. The work does not appear, however, to have been wholly satisfactory, for on 6th June 1661 there was laid before the Presbytery a reference of the Kirk Session of 1st May narrating the "ruinous state of that part of the kirk from the Eastern door to the Western door, which is holden up for the present by props of timber, notwithstanding whereof the whole side wall in that bounds is most like to fall," and craving speedy repairs. Four years later the church was in large part rebuilt. A new church was in process of building in 1694–5, and in the latter year was burned without being completed. Rebuilding took place in 1699. A scheme of renovation was carried out in 1811, when the tower was added.

The last service took place in the church on 5th Dec. 1885; and thereafter the church, whose ruins still stand on Erneraig, gave place to the present church situated near Milton Bridge. Within the latter church is a baptismal font which was discovered deep down in the middle of the floor of the old church during the renovation work of 1811. Probably it had been removed from the Church of St Catherine in 1647. For the "increase of Glencorse stipend Parliament in 1648 mortified a yearly sum of 140 merks which had previously been paid out of the lands of Castlclaw for the maintenance of the organs and singers of the Chapel Royal of Stirling. —[Charters of Holyrood, 45–6, 64, 65–6, 179–80; *Acts Scott. INVERESK

There was in the church an altar dedicated to St Ninian, and in St Ninian's Aisle there was also an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. On 6th March 1475–6 Simon de Preston of Craigmillar, Kt., granted 10 merks of the lands of Cameron for a perpetual chaplain to celebrate in the church. Later this was designated the “Chaplainry of St Ninian called Cameron.” In 1804 the old church was taken down and the existing church built. There were at least three chapels in the parish. The chapel dedicated to St Mary Magdalene, called Whitehill, was situated at Hailes on the banks of the Niddry Burn. The chapel dedicated to St James was in existence before 8th Sept. 1491, and may have been the chapel which stood at the head of Market Street where, in the first part of the 19th century, there were the ruins of an almshouse. The beginning of the Chapel of Loretto, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is narrated in the Diurnal of Occurrents under date 19th April 1533: "In this mene tyme, thair come an here-meit, callit Thomas Douchtie, in Scotland, quha haid been lang capitane (captive ?) befor the Turk, as was allegit, and brocht ane ymage of our Lady with him, and foundit the cheppill of Laureit beside Musselburgh." There followed on 27th Jan. 1533-4 a charter of the bailies, burgesses and community of Musselburgh, granting in pure alms to Thomas Duchty, hermit of the Order of St Paul, first hermit of Mount Sinai, for his lifetime and for his successors, hermits, for building the Chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Loretto, with small house and garden, as might be pleasing to them, a piece of vacant land of their territory and liberty, containing 5 roods, at the east boundary of the burgh near le chaypule, bounded by the common green on the east and west. On 1st Aug. 1534 James V supplied furnishings and vestments for the altar of the chapel, provision being made for embroidering the royal arms on the vestments and "frunlett." The "small house" was a cell, the residence of the hermit, adjoining the chapel; and it may be assumed that Thomas Duchty was "Thomas, Hermeit in Lareit," to whom Alexander, Earl of Glengairn, addressed a satire exposing the hypocrisy of the clergy—"Ane Epistell direct fra the halie Hermeit of Alareit to his Brethern, the Gray Friars." The chapel was destroyed in Hertford's expedition in 1544, but was repaired; and on 10th Dec. 1568 Sir Gavin Walker, hermit of the chapel, with consent of the patrons, the bailies and community of Musselburgh, set in feu to Andrew Sanderson, burgess of the burgh, the chapel with its room and garden. In 1590 the stones of the chapel were utilised for the building of Musselburgh Tolbooth.

The church was dedicated to St Michael and All Angels.—[Cal. of Scott. Supplications, 119, S.H.S.; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 1228; iii, 1403; iv, 1909; *Lord High Treas. LASSWADE

Of the old church, apparently of the 13th century, and therefore in all likelihood the church dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 6th May 1240, only a portion of the south wall in the old graveyard survives. There is also the ruin of a north transeptal aisle, now a mausoleum of the family of Clerk of Eldin, belonging to the 17th century. The medieval floriated finial cross above the entrance of the Drummond mausoleum in all likelihood belonged to the old church, as also did two sculptured fragments which are in the National Museum of Antiquities of Scotland. The present church was built in 1793. Apparently a short time prior to 1451 the church became a mensal church of the Bishopric of St Andrews. But on 26th June of that year a Papal Decree, in answer to a petition by Bishop Kennedy of St Andrews, revoked and dissolved the appropriation of the church to that purpose, the actual severance to be effected with Kirkliston Church, which was to take the place of Lasswade as a mensal church, became vacant by the death or resignation of the rector thereof. The connection with St Andrews was renewed however, when, during a voidance in the Church of St Andrews and with the consent of the Chapter, Prior David, vicar general, at the instigation of George Abernethy, who had become rector of Lasswade before 5th May 1465, united Lasswade Church in perpetuity to the capitular mensa of St Salvator's Church, St Andrews, the said George Abernethy being received as a Canon of St Salvator's. The union did not at once take effect; and on 20th Dec. 1468 the Pope, Paul II, made remit to delegates to enquire into the matter, and if they found that union had been decreed as stated, "to unite in perpetuity the said Church of Lasswade not exceeding 40 merks to the said mensa, so that on the resignation or death of said George Abernethy, the Dean and Chapter take possession of the Church and cause its cure of souls to be governed by one of the Canons or Chaplains of St Salvator's." Succeeding stages are marked by Bulls of Pope Sixtus IV, one on 31st May 1473, which united Lasswade (along with other churches) to the episcopal mensa of St Andrews, on the death or demission of the rector, and the other on 17th March 1477, which joined to St Salvator's Church a canonry and prebend in the Church of Lasswade, Robert Blackadder, rector of Lasswade, being made canon and prebendary, and 5 merks annually to be paid from the canonry to the common table of St Salvator's. The election of Robert Blackadder to the See of Aberdeen in 1480 rendered the parsonage vacant; and by Bull of Pope Sixtus on 8th Aug. 1482 it was united once more to the mensa of St Andrews. Five years later a Papal Bull effected the dissolution of the union with St Andrews, and united Lasswade to the collegiate church, Restalrig, attaching it to the deanery thereof. On 5th June 1592 an Act of Parliament dissolved the Deanery of Restalrig, constituted Lasswade a separate parish, and, excluding Dalkeith which also pertained to the deanery, erected "the haill permanent fruitis of the said deanry of Restalrig and qlk pertenit thairto of auld in ane severall and distinct personage to be callit the personage of Leswaid," and with the vicarage of the church, "quhen it sal happen to vaik," to become the stipend of the minister and his successors "in all tymes cuming." In 1601 the vicarage became part of the stipend; and in 1648 Parliament ratified the mortification by Mr James Fairlie, parson of Lasswade, to Mr John Weir, parson of Restalrig, of the endowments of the parsonage of Lasswade not lying within that parish, Lasswade thus becoming dependent entirely upon its own parochial endowments. By Bull of 11th March 1478–9 Pope Sixtus IV gave faculty and licence to a hospital, “lately erected” near the church of Lasswade by Robert Blackadder, rector, to God and the Blessed Virgin, and under the invocation of the Blessed Mary of Consolation, “for the poor, for pilgrims, for the infirm, the sick, and other miserable persons wishing to betake themselves to it for a time.” By another Bull of the same date the Pope gave executors and keepers of the hospital, and by still another of 4th April previously he had granted indulgences for its erection and maintenance. Beside the “brig of Leswaid” there was a hospital with chapel, dedicated to St Leonard. To it belonged the lands and mill of Powtoun (Polton), which in July 1500 Sir David Ramsay, parson of Foulden and chaplain of the hospital, with consent of his nephew, Sir Alexander Ramsay of Dalhousie, patron of said hospital, granted in feu to William Ramsay of Powtoun (Polton). Evidently one of the Dalhousie family had founded the hospital, the patronage of which continued with that family.—[Lockhart’s Ch. in Scot. in 13th Century, 46; *Report of Anc. Mon. NORTH ESK

On 7th June 1649 there was submitted to Parliament a supplication of heritors, members, ministers and kirk session, and inhabitants of Inveresk, to the effect that upon a decision of Synod in Nov. 1648 the Presbytery had visited Inveresk on 5th April 1649, had come to the finding that over 2,000 communicants of the church “was too much for one man.” and therefore deemed it necessary that a division of the parish was necessary, and that “the Burgh of Musselburgh and the Fisherrow be erected into a new parish by itself.” Having perambulated the bounds, the Presbytery did design the place where a kirk should be built, and it now asked Parliament to ratify the same and “grant an Act for the erection of the said kirk in a paroch by itself, that so with all diligence convenient some course may be taken for building of the same.” The matter was remitted to the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks, etc., and the division of 1650 was the outcome.—[*Acts Scott. PENICUIK

The present church was built in 1771 and enlarged in the first half of the 19th century.
Near it are the ruins of the earlier church, post-reformation and probably 17th century. In April 1251 the Church of Mount Lothian was confirmed as a chaplainry to Holyrood Abbey by David de Bernham, Bishop of St Andrews; and it was attached to the Bishopric of Edinburgh on its erection by Charles I in 1633. The ruins of the church are situated in the churchyard in a wooded enclosure north-north-east of Mount Lothian. Newhalls House is said to have been the site of a Cistercian convent. About 60 yards south-west of the house are fragmentary remains of a chapel, of which in the middle of the 18th century there existed considerable portions of the walls, the east gable showing a pointed window. The ground on the west side of the chapel was termed Chapel Yard. At the close of the 18th century there still remained vestiges of a hospital, termed Back Spittal or Old Spittal House, at the side of the stream on the north of Spittal Hill. There was also a hospital farther south at Spittal Farm. In the same area are Friarstown and Glebe Croft, the latter possibly identical with St Robert's Croft described as situated at the confluence of the Spittal Burn and Monk's Burn. At Polmathorn there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary.—[*Charters of Holy-

ROSLIN

The Chapel of Roslin, in the old civil parish of Lasswade, is the former Collegiate Church of Roslin founded in 1446 by William St Clair, Earl of Orkney, and Lord of Roslin, in honour of the Holy and Undivided Trinity, Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and the Most Glorious Virgin Mary, Mother of the Lord Jesus, and Matthew, the Apostle and Evangelist. At his death, between 4th Dec. 1476 and 29th March 1482, the building was unfinished; but the work was carried on to some extent by his younger son and successor as baron of Roslin, Sir Oliver Sinclair. The church, however, remained incomplete, the nave never having been begun, and of the transepts the east walls only having been erected. Besides the High Altar of St Matthew, there were in the church altars dedicated respectively to St Matthew, St Pater, St Andrew, and St Mary the Virgin, the last being situated in front of the central pillar, with a figure of the Virgin above it. There was also a lady-chapel which constituted the retrochoir, and contained, in addition to elaborate carving, a representation of the dance of death. The church, with the Castle of Roslin, was pillaged by an unruly mob during the night of 11th Dec. 1688. Dedicated also to St Matthew, there was a church prior to the collegiate church. Remnants of it exist in the cemetery, outside the west wall of which is St Matthew's Well.—[Chart. Coll. Churches of Midlothian, xciii-c., 327, 32.]

The roofless walls of the old church stand in the churchyard on a slope a short distance below the village of Temple and near the bridge which spans the South Esk. The main part appears to belong to the 13th century, but the west end, which shows signs of a heritor's loft, was rebuilt some time after the Reformation. A belfry of the 17th century crowns the east gable, and a weathering at the east end of the north wall may indicate that there a sacristy had existed. The present church occupies a site on the estate of Braidwood on the north side of the road opposite the churchyard. Designed by Thomas Brown, architect, Uphall, it was built by Thomas Creak, Temple, at a cost of £868 in 1831–2, and was ready for occupation in April–May of the latter year. Near the gate an offering house was built. The bell pertained to the old church. In part at least the manse has been built upon the walls of the buildings of the Templar Preceptory; and there have been found on the west side of the manse grounds traces of an old wall running parallel to and near the ravine of the South Esk. The patronage of the Church of Clerkington was granted in 1338 to Newbattle Abbey by Christine Bisset, Lady of Clerkington, widow of Sir John Bisset, Kt., with confirmation in 1359 by her son, Walter Bisset. Later its fruits belonged to the Collegiate Church of Corstorphine. The site of the church, within the grounds of Rosebery, is marked by several old tombstones. The Chapel (or Church) of Moorfoot, now in a very ruinous condition, is situated a short distance from Moorfoot farm. It was linked with the lands of Moorfoot, which in 1142 were granted to Newbattle Abbey by David I.

Temple was formerly called Balantroda. To the Knights Templars David I gave a grant of the lands of Balantródach, where they established their first seat. In 1312 their place was taken by the Knights of St John. Friar Thomas was Master of the Hospital of St John of Jerusalem at Balantroda in 1354. The church was dissolved from the collegiate church of Corstorphine in 1634; and that was ratified by Parliament in 1646, "that the samine may remaine as ane several kirke and benefice dismembered thairfrom." How long the church continued to be used for worship is uncertain. On 17th Dec. 1669, when Parliament ratified the Crown Charter whereby Sir John Nicolson of Lasswade acquired the barony of Clerkington including the parsonage and vicarage and the patronage of the church, it was decreed that in time coming Nicolson be "the propper names and designations respective of the forsaid lands, paroch kirk, and Parochine." In 1749 reversion was made to the name Clerkington.—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 433, vii, 425; Reg. Great Seal, i, 326, App., ii, 1173, 1218; Retours, iii, 212, xlvi, 166, 170; *Hist. MSS. Commis. PRESBYTERY OF HADDINGTON

In the churchyard there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. At Kilspindie on the north-west side of the village there is said to have been a Culdee settlement. Within the policies of Luffness, a short distance south-west of Luffness House, are the ruins of the church of the Carmelite Friary of Luffness, with its churchyard. In the first half of the 18th century part of the cloisters and portions of the walls of the place still survived. In the north wall of the east end of the church there is an arched tomb with a solid stone coffin and the effigy of a knight with shield on breast and sword in hand. In 1723 it is described as "the tomb of Bickerton," evidently one of the family of that name, who, in the latter part of the 13th century and the first part of the 14th, in the persons of Walter and John de Bickerton, held Luffness off the successive crown vassals, Robert de Pinkeny and his brother and heir, Henry. It may be that the friary was founded by a member of the Bickerton family in the 13th century, the period to which the ruined church appears to belong. In 1361 it received a charter from David II; but no details are available. In 1335-6 it is narrated that from the lands of Luffness there was payable to the friary the sum of ten merks in alms annually as "constituted of old." The friary also held other lands and tenements, including five tenements in the town of Aberlady. At Ballincrief there was a hospital dedicated to St Cuthbert and said to have been founded in the 12th century. On 23rd Nov. 1296 it is stated that from the two mills of Ballincrief the hospital received twenty shillings yearly as alms from the late Robert de Pinkeny, as from the foundation of his ancestors, and that by the gift of said ancestors and said late Robert it possessed nine bovates and nine acres of land. At Edinburgh Castle on 29th July 1291 Walter, Master of the Hospital, swore fealty to Edward I; and similar fealty was sworn at Berwick on 28th August 1296 by William Tornall, Guardian of the Hospital. At Gosford there was another hospital, said to have been associated with the Collegiate Church of Dunglass. The site, Red Spittal, may indicate that the house belonged to the Red Friars; and the place may be identical with the establishment of Red Friars in this parish, which is said to have been founded by the Earl of Dunbar (Patrick, 7th Earl, died 1289) in 1286. The vicarage of the church was erected a prebend of Dunkeld Cathedral by Bishop Lauder of Dunkeld 1452-76.—[Retours, i, 173; Cal. of Docs. Rel. to Scotland, ii, 125, 227, iii, 338, 386; *Reg. ATHELSTANEFORD

The church belonged to the Priory of Haddington. At the Byres there was a chapel dedicated to St Lawrence, which in 1328 David Lindsay, Lord of Crawford, granted to Newbattle Abbey, along with 2½ acres of land beside the chapel for a house to be built, and grazing in the common pasture of Byres, the abbey to supply the chapel with a monk or secular priest, and keep it in repair. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 7th April 1244. It was built about the middle of the 12th century by Countess Ada, daughter of the Earl Warrenne and Surrey, and wife of Prince Henry of Scotland, and given by her to the Priory of Haddington. The present church was built in 1784. To Bernard Fraser of Drem Gilbert, Prior of St Andrews 1166–8, granted permission to have a chapel at Drem in return for certain lands and with oblations and obventions for the Church of Haddington which was then the mother church. On the same conditions the permission was repeated by Simon, Prior of St Andrews, who in 1225 resigned the office to become Prior of Lochleven. About 1412 William, Lord Lindsay, founded the Lady Chapel of Drem for himself, Christian, his wife, etc., and endowed it with certain lands and tenements at Drem. In 1483 the chapel was annexed to the “Chaplainrie and Alterage foundit within the paroche kirk of St Andrews at the altar called the Trinity Altar, situat within that part of the said paroche kirk callit the Lord Lindsay’s Yle.” In the garden west of Drem House are the ruins of the Chapel of St John, probably of the 15th century, which belonged to the Knights Templar. At Fortune there was a hospital with lands attached, which about 1268–70 were given to the House of the Red Friars at Houston, Prestonkirk, by Christina de Moubray, widow of Sir Bernard Fraser of Fortune and Linton.—[Chart. of Newbattle, 117–20; Cal. of Papal Letters, xii, 114–6; *Reg. 1578 in succession to Andrew Simson and was admitted to the office before 16th Feb. 1578–9 by Patrick Adamson, Archbishop of St Andrews; on the latter date David Forsyth, min. at Bolton, and the parishioners raised an action against the archbishop, who, not possessed of the power of visitation in the region in which Bolton was situated, intruded Sinclair (a "new minister") in the parish; the parishioners, who had for the most part sustained the minister themselves till order be taken thereanent, had procured a royal order to the archbishop to receive and admit David Forsyth; the archbishop refused because he had given admission to Sinclair, who was still vicar and reader of Dumfries and without standing; and on said admission Sinclair forcibly entered the church, and took institution to the vicarage, and left the burgh of Dumfries, and thus deprived said David Forsyth of a portion of the teind sheaves of Bolton which belonged to the vicarage; the Privy Council referred the matter to the Commissioners of Parliament; before 20th June 1587 Sinclair was deprived for non-residence.—

GLADSMUIR

The first church was built at Thrieplaw in 1650 to serve the west part of Haddington parish. It continued in use till 1695, when it was replaced by the church, built by Sir William Baillie of Lamington, and now a ruin in the churchyard north from the present church, which was opened for worship on 20th Oct. 1839. After 1695 the old church passed to decay, and its walls in part were incorporated in colliers' houses. At a later period four cot-houses there were designated the "Old Kirk"; and the place, about 1½ miles south-east of the present church, is now called "Gladsmuir Kirk." At Samuelston, which prior to the erection of this parish was in the parish of Haddington, there was a chapel dedicated to St Nicolas. In the garden adjoining Longniddry House there is a fragment of a building known as "John Knox House," from its reputed connection with the Reformer.—[Retours, xviii, 202; *Report, Royal Comm. on Anc. GULLANE

About 1170 William de Vaux granted the patronage of the church to God and St Mary and the Church of St Nicolas and the Canons of Dryburgh serving God in the said Church of St Nicholas on the island of Elbottle (Fidra), for the soul of King William, etc. There were reserved the rights of the Nunnery of South Berwick in the church, as contained in the "writings" (scriptas) made between said William de Vaux and the nunnery. The grant was confirmed, apparently soon after 1214, by William de Vaux' son and successor, John, for the soul of King Alexander, etc., and by William, Bishop of St Andrews 1202-38. The foregoing rights of the nunnery led to a dispute which was settled about 1221 when Sir Gregory, Master, and Froelina, Prioress of South Berwick, and the convent thereof, surrendered in favour of William de Vaux of Dirleton, and William de Vaux, parson of Gullane, apparently the uncle of William de Vaux, all their rights in the church, with the reservation of what they had when the lawsuit was moved, and also the teind sheaves of the lands of Kingston which they "shall take and hold" after the death of the said William de Vaux, parson. David de Bernham, Bishop of St Andrews, dedicated the church on 8th Oct. 1242, and in the same year he reduced it from a parsonage to a vicarage, to be served by the Canons of Dryburgh, and a priest whose annual payment was 12 merks. Two years earlier Alexander de Vaux had confirmed the patronage of the church to Dryburgh Abbey. About 1220 William de Vaux granted to the Canons of Dryburgh the island of Elbottle itself, and 20½ acres of the lands of Elbottle on the mainland, the lands of Stodfauld, etc. Two canons were obliged to reside and celebrate on the island in the Church of St Nicholas. But about 1240 Alexander de Vaux "in consideration of the imminent dangers of the times present and to come," relieved Dryburgh of the necessity of maintaining that chantry on the island as hitherto, or of building, or sending canons to live on it. Instead a canon was to be provided at Stodfauld on the mainland, and another in Dryburgh, to pray for the souls of his ancestors and successors. It would seem, therefore, that the Church of St Nicholas, whose ruins are on the east side of Fidra about the landing stage, was never really completed. About the same time also Alexander de Vaux confirmed to Dryburgh the grant of the island of Elbotle, etc., made by William his father in 1220. Besides St Nicholas Church, there were other religious foundations in the parish. The Chapel of St Patrick, whose ruins were still visible in the second half of the 18th century, was situated on the shore at the point on the north of Gullane Bay. About 1221 William de Vaux founded at Dirleton a chapel dedicated to All Saints, for the privilege of which he paid a stone of wax annually to Gullane Church, whose rights in other respects were fully conserved. At the same period on behalf of himself and his heirs he conveyed to Gullane Church what services they had to render on their own charges to the Chapel of St Andrew at Dirleton. The chaplain of the chapel had to render fealty to Gullane Church and also pay annually to the same one pound of frankincense. At Congalton, on a site still called chapel, there was founded by a lord of Congalton a chapel, with regard to which there was made in 1224 an agreement between Sir Walter and William de Gullane, rector of Gullane, whereby the said William had to supply a chaplain for the chapel, and in turn was to receive the oblations and offerings made at the same, while Sir Walter and his wife, and the men in the town of Congalton, were to attend at Gullane Church on three festivals, St Andrew's Day, Christmas, Easter, and at penances and the Sacraments. In the 15th century east range of Dirleton Castle there is an apartment which was used as a chapel, with piscina, credence, and benatura. Obviously there was at Stodfauld, somewhere on the mainland not far from Fidra Island, a cell or chapel for the celebrations by a canon of Dryburgh, to which reference has been made. About 1225 a dispute between William de Gullane, rector of Gullane, and the Nunnery of South Berwick, regarding what is called the Chapel of Dirleton, was settled by the arbiter, William, Bishop of St. Andrews, on the basis that the nunnery possess the chapel with the teinds of Elbotle, Dirleton, and Karmuchoc, during the lifetime of the said William, and that the oblations made at the chapel by William de Vaux and other lords of Dirleton pertain to the rector of Gullane. It is uncertain whether the foregoing has reference to the nunnery at Elbotle, a cell of South Berwick, said to have been founded by David I. South Berwick had another cell, described as being near Gullane Church, and also said to have been founded by David I. There was at Dirleton a House of the Red Friars. On 2nd May 1507 Royal Letters of Donation "of the Chapel of St Andrews in Dirleton of the Order of the Trinity, founded by the predecessors of Patrick, Lord Haliburton, the patron," were made to "Friar Alexander Blith of the said Order." The chapel had been vacant for three years through the failure of the Order to supply ministrations, and was at the king's disposal by the death of the said Patrick. Further information regarding the house occurs in 1588 in a charter of "the lands called the Friarlands of Dirleton extending to 10 merks old measure with tenement, land, garden lying in the town of Dirleton, called the Chapelyard, which pertained to the Minister, Prior, and Monastery of Fail, and the Prior of Dirleton, as part of the temporalities of the same, and came to the king by annexation, and which the king incorporated in the tenandry of Craigflat." At Gullane there was a hospital of St John of Jerusalem. On 19th April 1557 Patrick, Lord Ruthven, granted to Janet Stewart, Lady Ruthven, a charter of the provostry, chaplainries, and chapels of Dirleton; and on 19th Dec. 1561 the said Patrick gave to Sir Robert Hoislair, presbyter, the provostry of the Chapel of Dirleton, near the castle, with the lands of Corrige, vacant by the death of Sir Robert Hoppringill. An altar, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, was founded by Sir Andrew Congalton in Gullane Church. The foundation was confirmed by George Dundas, lord of St John's, preceptor of Torphichen, on 18th May 1523, and the patronage was declared to belong to Henry Congalton of the same.—[Book of Dryburgh, 15, 16–18, 19–21, 23–6, 27–8, 32–7, 232–7; *Excheq. HADDINGTON

The church with its chapels was granted to the Priory of St Andrews by David I in 1139. The later building, which is now generally accepted as the church designated "The Lamp of Lothian," seems to have been erected towards the end of the 14th century or early in the 15th. It suffered serious damage in 1548 when the English, who garrisoned Haddington and used the tower of the church for defensive purposes, were besieged by the Scots and French. In a condition of dilapidation it remained till 1562, when work of restoration was inaugurated, the plan being to "byg, beild, and reedyfie sufficiently the fabric extending from the steeple to the west gable, and to roof in the south tufall" (aisle); the north "tufal" to be rebuilt, and "lyhts and glass" provided for the whole building; afterwards the "croce kirk" (transepts) to be proceeded with and "perfittit and byggit with wallis, ruffs, lychts, and utheris necessaris." At that time the choir, which stands roofless, was abandoned. Within the church there were altars as follows: Virgin Mary, St Catherine, Holy Trinity, John the Baptist, Holy Blood, St James, St Peter, St Nicholas, St Ninian, St John, St Michael, Holy Rood, Three Kings of Cologne, St Blaise, St Salvador, and the two brothers Crispin and Crispinianus, patrons of shoemakers, whose altar was upheld by the cordiners of the burgh. There were altars belonging to the Baxters and the Fleshers, but these may be included in the foregoing list. There were chapels with the following dedications: St Laurence; St Anne, situated at what is now St Anne's House; St Catherine, on the south side of the croft of the Franciscans; St Kentigern; and St Ninian in the west area of the town, to the chaplain at which on 9th March 1488 George Kerr of Samuelston granted in pure alms a tenement on the north side of the burgh. The Church or Chapel of St Martin, built probably about the beginning of the 12th century, and situated with its graveyard at the east side of the Nungate, was a dependency of the nunnery, having been granted by Alexander of St Martin's. The nave still survives. At Stevenston there was a chapel, for the erection of which (chantry and oratory) William de Golin (Gullane) received permission from Henry, Prior of St Andrews 1225–35. On 23rd March 1539–40 the church was designated "the Collegiate Church of Haddington," which may indicate that its organisation had something of the collegiate form. On the erection of the Bishopric of Edinburgh in 1633, the church became a prebend of St Giles Cathedral; and by Act of Parliament of 1641 it was separated from the Bishopric of St Andrews and its disposition given to the Earl of Haddington. In 1178 on a site about a mile east of the town a Cistercian monastery or nunnery, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded by the Countess Ada, mother of Malcolm IV and William the Lion. In July 1292 Alicia, the prioress, made homage to Edward I. Similar fealty was declared in Aug. 1296 by Prioress Eve, to whom in consequence the rights of the nunnery were restored. "Destroyed and burned by the calamity of wars between the kings of Scotland and England," involving the loss of its writs, the nunnery in 1359 received a Charter of Inspeximus from William, Bishop of St Andrews. In Hertford's expedition in 1544 the nunnery was burned; and it suffered again four years later during the invasion under Somerset. A small part of the graveyard still remains; and the place is also recalled by Abbey Village, Abbey Mill, and the Abbey Bridge. A friary of the Grey Friars, dedicated to St Duthac, and said to have been situated where Elm House now is, was founded prior to 1242. It was given to the flames by Edward III in 1355. Probably some years elapsed before the church at least was rebuilt, for there appears in the Exchequer Rolls on 14th Aug. 1362 the sum of £6 13s. 4d. "given to the Minorite Friars of Haddington for building their Church." The friary further suffered from fire at the hands of Hertford's men in 1544, and also during the siege of 1548. Repair followed; but the church was finally demolished in 1572-3. There were in the church an altar dedicated to John the Baptist, at the north wall of the nave, founded on 22nd July 1389 by Sir William Haliburton, laird of Carlowry, with an endowment of 10 merks annually from the lands of Drem; an altar dedicated to St Clement, founded on 4th Feb. 1494-5 by William Bertram, Provost of Edinburgh, nephew of Sir William Bertram, vicar of Swinton; and an altar dedicated to St Francis. Probably there was also an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. There was also a friary of the Black Friars, founded probably in the 13th century. It may be identical with the religious establishment cleared away in 1765 to make room for the Episcopal church. In the Church of the Friary there was an altar called "the Altar of the Holy Rood of Lucanus." About a mile west of the town there was a leper hospital dedicated to St Laurence, founded by Richard Guthrie, Abbot of Arbroath cir. 1450-5, and belonging to the Order of Dominicans. It was refounded in 1480; and in 1532 it was annexed with its lands to the Dominican nunnery of Sciennes, Edinburgh. Its site is at St Laurence House; and its lands are incorporated in the farm of Spittal Rig. Before 11th June 1478 Sir John Haliburton, vicar of Greenlaw, erected in the Poldrait an almshouse dedicated to St Helen. There was also a hospital dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the custody of which on 19th July 1319 was granted by Edward II to Thomas de Gayregrave. A piece of land in the Poldrait was called St Andrew's Land. By charter of 24th March 1566-7 Queen Mary constituted the Royal Foundation of Ministers and Hospitals of Haddington, to maintain ministers and readers and other ecclesiastical burdens, and to provide a hospital for the poor, the mutilated, and miserable persons, and for orphans and other children bereft of their parents. The foundation was granted to the provost, bailies, town council, and community, and was to be administered with the advice and approval of the ministers and Kirk Session. The endowments were all property and annual rents, etc., of chaplainries, altarages, prebends in the burgh, property and annual rents, etc., of monks in the burgh, annual rents levied within the burgh for chaplainries, altarages, and churches elsewhere in Scotland, and dues payable from the Common Good of Haddington to churches outside the burgh. At Garleton (Gamriltoun-Noble) there was a chapel dedicated to St Kentigern. The Hospital of St Laurence near the town for poor men was under the patronage of the Crown, and was served by secular clerics and presbyters. On its becoming vacant in the early part of the reign of James V, that monarch by Letters deprived it of its "hospital nature" and united and incorporated it with the "religious brothers of the Order of St Augustine." None of the Order took up residence there; and indeed no additional accommodation suitable for the friars was provided; and accordingly the king intimated to Pope Leo X (1513-21) that he had appointed his chaplain, Walter Ramsay, to the void house and vacant rectory, and craved the Pope that the house be separated from the Order and restored to its original position. In the Church of Haddington there was an altar dedicated to the Saviour, founded by Mr William Wawane, official of Lothian.—[*Reg. HUMBIE

The church was granted to Dunfermline Abbey by Alexander I 1107–24. In the 12th century the parish was described as the Parish of Addockis Ket (Keith) and Siwynis Ket, apparently with the name of the person to whom each district belonged. In a dispute between Dunfermline Abbey and the Church of Crichton, it was decided in 1199, in the time of Pope Innocent III, that the Chapel of Keeth should belong for ever to the Church of Crichton, one merk silver to be paid annually by Crichton Church to the abbey. In the Rental of Kelso Abbey in 1567 Humbie appears under “Lands” and under “Kirkis and Teinds.”—[Reg. of Dunfermline, 3, 48–69, 96–7; Reg. of Kelso, ii, 492–3.]

NORTH BERWICK

The church was situated on the "Auld Kirk Green" near the harbour. Before 1199 it was granted to the Nunnery of North Berwick by Malcolm, son and successor of Duncan, Earl of Fife. In the church were an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary, for the support of a chaplain at which Agnes Faulaw, wife of Robert Lauder of the Bass, and daugh. of George F., burgess of Edinburgh, with consent of the said Robert, on 20th Oct. 1491 granted a charter of 10 merks annually and 5 merks annually from tenements in Edinburgh and Leith respectively, for celebrations of the souls of King James IV, etc., and of her late husband, William Carreboris, burgess of Edinburgh; an altar dedicated to St Ninian, in the north transeptal aisle; an altar dedicated to "Our Lady of Peace," erected in St Ninian's aisle with consent of the bailies and community of North Berwick in 1497 by William de Carrick, indweller in Mains of Tantallon; an altar of the Holy Rood; and an altar dedicated to St Sebastian. In addition to St Ninian's aisle there was an aisle of the Lauders of the Bass called "ye lords of bassis yill." About the middle of the 17th century the church was in a decayed condition, and it passed out of use soon after 1656. In 1659 there was begun the erection of a new church on a site on the east side of Law Road, which after considerable delay was completed in 1664 and was used for the first time on 5th June of that year. All that now remains of the earlier church is a small vaulted building which had projected from the south wall. Corrosion by the waves has gradually carried away the graveyard, which does not appear to have been in use after 15th April 1673. During the period between the abandonment of the old church and the completion of its successor, worship was conducted in "the great tenement or Lodging" within the burgh, belonging to William Dick of Braid, the site of which is now occupied by the Dalrymple Hotel. In 1770 the church of 1659-64 was in great part rebuilt and at the same time enlarged, and the tower erected; and in 1828 it was re-seated. Forty-six years later attention was turned to the provision of a new church. The last service in the old church was held on 3rd June 1883, and its roofless walls stand in the churchyard. On the south-east corner is a sundial purchased in 1680 and bearing the dates 1660 and 1770. On the east side of the tower in a mutilated condition is another sundial of date 1679. The new church, erected on the site of the old manse in High Street in accordance with a design prepared by Sir Rowand Anderson, was opened for worship on 10th June 1883. The design was completed by the addition of the tower and porch in 1907. In the front of the north gallery is a clock which was in the Luchie Loft of the preceding church, and is said to have been a gift in 1770; and in the vestibule is the bell which was in use in all the three churches, and passed out of use in 1928 when a new bell was given by Mr J. R. Menzies of West Links House, in memory of Mr J. R. Burt, minister of the parish 1904-28. It has this inscription: "Jacobus Monteath me fecit Edinb. . . . gh pro templo de North Berwick Anno Domini 1642, Ipero Meliora." On the Bass Rock are the ruins of St Baldred's Chapel, "newly erected in 1492 by Robert Lauder of the Bass," who himself was the lay rector and patron. Designated the "paris kyrk in the craig of the Bass," it took the place of a cell founded by St Baldred; and it was consecrated and dedicated on 5th June 1542 by Mr William

Gibson, suffragan of Cardinal David Beton, Archbishop of St Andrews, in the presence of Mr John Lauder, Archdeacon of Tweeddale. The intrusion of this parish church into the parish of St Andrews' Church which belonged to the nunnery led to a dispute between the nunnery prioress and Robert Lauder, the outcome of which is not known. There was also a chapel at Tantallon Castle. Apparently in or about 1150 Duncan, Earl of Fife 1136-54, founded a Cistercian nunnery on the lands called Gillecameston given to the nunnery by himself. To the nunnery Earl Duncan also gave two hospitals, built and endowed by him in connection with the Earl's Ferry. One was situated at the port of landing on the south side, the harbour of North Berwick, and the other at the port of landing on the north side, Ardrross, in Fife. The hospitals were for "poor folk and pilgrims." On 10th Oct. 1242 the church of the nunnery was dedicated to the Virgin Mary by Bishop de Bernham. It would appear that at first the nunnery was governed by a prior or master, and a prioress. While we find a sub-prioress acting as the head in 1220, James, Prior, occurs in 1238; and he is probably identical with James, Master, who is mentioned about the same time. Master and prioress are found together representing the nunnery in 1254-9; Master again occurs in 1293; and on 28th Aug. 1296, William, "vicairie de eglise de Laneta," warden of the nunnery, swore fealty to Edward I. Thereafter Prioress alone occurs. An alternative designation in 1383 is abbatesse. In addition to lands, etc., the nunnery held the following churches: North Berwick, granted, as we have seen, before 1199 by Malcolm, son of Duncan, Earl of Fife, and himself Earl of Fife 1203-29 in succession to his father; the gift was supplemented by the perpetual vicarage of the church, which was given by Bull of Pope Clement VII 18th Feb. 1383-4, the nunnery being held bound to appoint a chaplain to minister at the church and have the cure of the souls of the parishioners, and also to provide for him a fixed stipend; Logie (Airthrey), confirmed by Simeon, Bishop of Dunblane, about 1178; Kilconquhar, granted about 1200 by Duncan, Earl of Fife 1154-1203, while Adam, lord of Kilconquhar and Earl Carrick, resigned the patronage of the church and ratified Earl Duncan's concession of the same to the nunnery on 16th Feb. 1266-7; Kirkbride in Carrick (now united with Maybole), confirmed by Joceline, Bishop of Glasgow, in 1199, on the petition of Roger de Sealebroc; Largo, granted by Duncan, Earl of Fife 1154-1203, and confirmed by Malcolm, Earl of Fife, 1203-29, and by William, Bishop of St Andrews, 1203-34; Maybole, granted by Duncan, 1st Earl of Carrick, who died on 13th June 1250. Upon the condition of the nunnery in the 14th century light is thrown by a petition presented to Pope Gregory XI by Beatrice the prioress, and "the greater and more sane" portion of the nuns. They narrated that to the nunnery, which was known to occupy a notable and prominent site, resorted nobles and other secular persons, and that this intercourse had increased of late from the building of a number of castles and forts in the neighbourhood. The result was that the nunnery, aiming to render the highest service, had lapsed from devotion, and its sacred cult had suffered great diminution and fallen into contempt; and the said prioress and nuns genuinely feared that greater hurt and more irreparable scandals would follow in the future, unless the remedy suggested by them was applied. It was that, as exit from and entry to the nunnery had been notoriously open from the time of its foundation, the access of such persons as had been mentioned should be prevented by a perpetual enclosure, and that the prioress and nuns should be ordained to live in continual seclusion within the walls of the monastery. The Pope, in reply, on 12th Aug. 1375 gave a mandate to William, Bishop of St Andrews, ordaining an enclosing wall to be built at the expense of the prioress and convent, and that the prioress and nuns reside within the enclosure and continue so to do in all time to come notwithstanding any statutes or practices to the contrary. That, however, was not the only trouble that befell the nunnery. In the Papal Bull 18th Feb. 1383-4 annexing the perpetual vicarage of the Church of North Berwick to the nunnery, there were given as reasons for the annexation the oppressions and hardships caused by the frequent devastations of the plundering of the nunnery possessions through the ravages of war, and the lamentable burning of the church by an invading enemy. The church, however, was rebuilt; and there are records that in it were a chapel of John the Baptist 4th Jan. 1524-5, and an altar of the Holy Rood, of which on 3rd March 1539-40 Sir William Fowlar was chaplain. At the Reformation the prioress and nuns were dispersed, and the buildings, with the exception of the church and cloisters, which still survived at 28th Jan. 1568-9 but had disappeared before 12th Jan. 1587-8, became ruinous. "The Mansion or lodgeing called the Newark" was built on part of the site before 28th Jan. 1568-9, and became the chief residence of Sir Alexander Home, son of Patrick H. of Polwarth, to whom a Crown Charter of 20th March 1587-8 conveyed the possessions of the nunnery, at the same time creating them into a barony. An Act of Parliament of 1592 ratified the infetments of Sir Alexander Home, and another Act of 1597 dissolved the nunnery. The existing ruins appear to belong to the period immediately after the Reformation. In addition to the Ferry Hospital at the harbour there was a hospital for poor brethren (monks) which was situated on a site now occupied by the Dalrymple Hotel in Quality Street. Described in 1544 as "built by the late Robert Lauder of the Bass," presumably Robert Lauder 1495-1579, it had an endowment of 20 merks annually from lands on the south side of the street of the burgh of Lauder, and other lands, including "Lawrenceland," within the liberty of the said burgh. To the perpetual chaplainry of the shrine or chapel attached to the hospital, Sir Robert Lauder of the Bass, the patron, appointed George Lyall in Sept. 1560 in succession to the late Sir James Cowhen (Cowan), and invested him in possession by presentation of the key of the said chapel and the lodging built over it.—[Carte Mon. de North Berwic, xi, xvii, 4-15, 19-20, 31, 37-8, 40, 47, 54-5, 71, 76-7, 84-5; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 2068, iv, 55, 382, 1598, 1599, 1919, v, 1492; *Reg. Sec. PENCAITLAND

The greater part of the church was rebuilt in 1631; but the aisle probably belongs to the early part of the 13th century. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bern-ham 1st May 1242. About 1343 John de Maxwell, son of the deceased Sir John M. of Pencaitland, Kt., granted to Dryburgh Abbey the patronage of the church with the Chapel of Payston. Subsequent to the

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 21st April 1244. Near the Castle of Herdmaston there was a chapel dedicated to St John the Evangelist. About the beginning of the 13th century John de Sant Clair received from the abbot and convent of Dryburgh permission to build the chapel for the use of himself, family household, and guests, the rights of the mother church of Saltoun being reserved. The site with the ruins is in the grounds of Herdmaston House.—[Retours, xxxv, 162; Bk. of Dryburgh, 135; Lockhart's Ch. of Scot. in 13th Century, 58.]

TRANENT

Bishop de Bernham dedicated the Church of Tranent on 11th April 1244, and the Church of Seton on 23rd May 1247. In the parish was a Well of St Clement. At Seton stood the Hospital of St Germain of the Order of Cross-bearers with the Star of Bethlehem, under the rule of St Augustine, alternatively designated in brief, the Order of Bethlehem, the Order of St Mary of Bethlehem, and the Order of St Mary of the Star. The Order, about which some uncertainty exists, was one of Canons Regular of St Augustine, but originally they may have been simple hospitaliers. They wore a black mantle on which was a red star with a blue centre, and possibly they also bore a cross. Of the actual founding of the establishment there is no record, but it took place prior to 1222, when Milone Cornet, prior of St Germain, appears as a witness of a Holyrood writ. In 1296 Bartholomew, Master of the Hospital of St Germain, swore fealty to Edward I; and subsequently the head is designated Master or Rector, and sometimes both. The hospital was subject to the Bishop of Bethlehem, who had the right of collation, provision, and disposition. The See of Bethlehem was erected by Baldwin, the first Latin king of Jerusalem, with consent of Pope Paschal II; and the bishop was a suffragan of the Bishop of Jerusalem. After the expulsion of the Latins by the Saracens in 1266 the Bishops took up residence in France, where a hospital was bequeathed to them by William, Count of Nevers, a crusader; and thereafter they were appointed by the Pope on the nomination of the Counts of Nevers, and held a merely titular dignity. To the Hospital of St Germain belonged the churches of Abergairn (Glengairn) and Glenmuick in Aberdeenshire, and Aberlethnott (Marykirk) in Kincardineshire. In addition to the lands of St Germain on which it was situated, the hospital possessed also the lands of Lochhouse in West Lothian; part of the lands of Kinblethmount in Angus, designated "the lands of the Hospital House of St Germain, called the Temple-lands of Kinblackmount"; land in Leith on the south side of the Water of Leith; the lands of Braidleys in the constabulary of Crail in Fife; and the land of St Germain at Inverkeithing. It is likely that to the hospital pertained also St Germain's acre at Inverteil, Kirkcaldy; but in any case the foregoing list cannot be regarded as exhaustive. In 1372 Sir John Rollo was master of the hospital. About the beginning of the 15th century John Rollok, Chaplain of the Apostolic See, occupied the same position; and after his death the office was held by various individuals in somewhat rapid succession—Roger de Edinburgh, "a notorious schismatic," deposed in or before 1410; Henry de Ramsay, "of noble birth"; Richard de Maryton, Canon of Scone, in whose favour Robert, Duke of Albany, petitioned Pope Benedict XIII in 1410; John Fleming, secretary of Alexander, Earl of Crawford, "son of a priest and an unmarried woman," and chaplain of the Chaplainries of Kilgeny and St George in the Church of Dundee; and Richard de Langlands, priest of the Diocese of St Andrews, collated and assigned, and provided by John, Bishop of Bethlehem. The right of each of these was challenged; and in reality they constituted claimants and counter-claimants to the office. Later, in Feb. 1434–5, Dominic, Bishop of Bethlehem, claimed that the hospital belonged to the Episcopa Mensa of Bethlehem, as against the right of Patrick Rode, who had been collated Master by authority of the ordinary and its ordinance. Patrick Rode resigned his claim, and the Pope ordered the admission of Dominic as Master and granted to him the hospital itself to hold as long as he should be Bishop of Bethlehem. Later Dominic appears to have withdrawn his claim to the hospital, the sentence given in his favour not having been executed. In any case he died soon afterwards; and thereafter the Bishops of Bethlehem seem to have lost St Germain. In the hands of Dominic's successor as Master, Patrick Piot, the hospital passed under a cloud; and in Dec. 1470 it was charged against him that he "has dilapidated the precious movables of that Church, which is wont to be held by brethern of the Order of the Cross-bearers with Star, and in which there have been wont to be a poor-hospital, and a number of brethern of the said Order, and has kept up no hospitality therein nor kept any brother of the said Order, but on the contrary has profaned the Church, in which there used to be Altars and other Chapels, and the relics of saints, and other ecclesiastical sacraments, and has allowed and still allows laymen to dwell therein with their wives and families, as if it were a private house, with occasional bloodshed, etc., and without the celebration of divine offices." Patrick Piot was deprived of office in or about 1476, and his successor was John de Camera (Chalmers), priest of the Diocese of Aberdeen. The latter ceased actively to hold the office in 1475, and by Papal Bulls of 22nd Dec. of that year he received as an annual pension or in place of a pension 25s. from the teind sheaves of the "vills of de Bernes and de Ecclesmaldeis (Eglismaldie, now Inglismaldie) in the parochial bounds of Aberbthnot (Aberlethnott), belonging to St Germain's Hospital." The next in order seems to have been Thomas Piot, priest of the Diocese of St Andrews, who was certainly in office in 1486. But less than a decade later the condition of the hospital was again revealed as deplorable. The funds had greatly diminished owing to continuous litigation, and not within the memory of man had the institution served the purpose of its founder. The buildings, except the chapel, had become ruinous; and the resources of the hospital were being applied to secular ends. So runs the narrative in the Bull of Pope Alexander VI, 9th Feb. 1495-6, by which on the petition of James IV the hospital was annexed to King's College, Aberdeen. The revenues of the hospital, amounting to £30, were thus devoted to college uses, with the reservation that one "religious person" of the Order of St Augustine should act as chaplain at the hospital, and should uphold and direct the chapel, and that at the hospital three "poor persons" should be maintained. It was also provided that three poor students should be supported at King's College. On 9th Aug. 1497 Thomas Piot resigned the hospital in the hands of William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen and Chancellor of the University, and received in return on 18th Aug. the Prebend of Cruden and the vicarage of Banff; and on 10th Feb. 1504-5 John Chalmers resigned his right to the hospital and his pension from the teind sheaves of the parish of Aberlethnott, and as part compensation was appointed to the parsonage of Fetterneir and the chaplainry of St Mary Magdalene in St Nicholas' Church, Aberdeen. On 2nd April 1541 Sir Peter Hutchesone was chaplain and preceptor of the hospital; before 12th Aug. 1577 the office was held by Alexander Moresone, alias Moreis, son of late Alexander Moreis, burgess of Edinburgh; and John Smysoun was in possession before 8th Feb. 1585-6.

The Church of Seton was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 23rd May 1247. On a petition of George, 3rd Lord Seton, craving that the Church of Seton be erected into a collegiate church for a provost, 6 canons and prebends, and 2 boys and a clerk, Pope Paul II gave mandate on 13th April 1470 to the Bishop of Whithorn and the Abbot of Newbattle to make enquiries and, if they saw fit, to carry out the erection. Delay ensued; and the actual erection was made on 20th June 1493 by George, 4th Lord Seton, following a Bull of Pope Alexander II in 1492. The collegiate church had the cure of souls of the parishioners. In the church there was an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary, situated in the aisle of that name.—[Charters of Holyrood, 49; Deeds relating to the Homage of Scotland, 134; Cal. of Papal Registers, Petitions, i, 599, 639, Letters, viii, 488, 567, 638, xii, 337, 346, 356; Cal. of Supplications Rel. to Scotland, 13, 64-5, 83, 85-6, S.H.S.; Fasti Aberdonenses, 2, 9-11, 15-19, 50-1; *Spalding Club; Reg. YESTER

The usual name was Bothans; but the church when it was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham in 1241 was designated the Church of Yestrith (Yester). It was also called St Bothans, apparently from a supposed connection with St Bathan or Baithene; but the actual reason for the designation is not clear. In any case the church was dedicated to St Cuthbert. In 1708 the church was removed to Gifford. The old church is near Yester House, and became a mausoleum of the Hay family. On 1st Aug. 1420 William Hay, Kt., Sheriff of Peebles, Thomas Boyd, Lord of Kilmarnock, with consent of his son and heir, Thomas, Eustace Maxwell, and Dougal McDowel of Malcarriston (Makers-toun), co-lords of the Lordship of Yester, and patrons in turn of the Church of St Bothans, petitioned Henry, Bishop of St Andrews, for the erection of the church into a collegiate church; and on 22nd April 1421 the Bishop granted a foundation Charter. The collegiate church was for a provost and four chaplains, for each of whom provision was made, including a manse and garden. The third chaplain had reserved for him the whole land of Kirkbank, and three husband-lands and five cotelands in Duncanlaw; and to the fourth chaplain pertained the fruits of the Church of Morham which was annexed to the collegiate church, the annexation to operate when Morham became vacant, and Morham to be served by a chaplain. Among other details, all furnishings, ornaments, candles, etc., were also to be provided by the founders. There was also a clerk trained to read and sing at the high altar. Subsequently the organisation of the church expanded, and there were the following prebends: prebend of Morham; prebend of the Altar of St Mary the Virgin, on the east side of the church; prebend of Blans; prebend of the Altar of St Ninian; prebend of Kirkbank; prebend of the Altar of the Holy Rood; prebend of the Altar of St Edmund, King and Martyr, in the south transept or St Edmund's aisle. There was also an Altar of our Lord—St Salvator. Probably the first provost of the church was Sir John Richardson, who had been rector of the church and resigned to facilitate the collegiate foundation. At any rate he was provost on 13th Dec. 1432. Succeeding provosts were: Mr Stephen Kerr, in office on 20th Feb. 1442, and died before 28th May 1454; Sir David Ramsay, rector of Keryntoun (Carrington), presented 28th May 1454; Mr Fergus Makdowell, died before 18th March 1470-1; Mr Andrew Hay, Clerk to the Diocese of Glasgow, presented 18th March 1470-1, said to be identical with Mr Andrew Hay, second son of Sir David Hay of Lockerworth, and rector of Biggar, still in office 28th June 1494; Sir Thomas Young, in office 6th Aug. 1496 and 16th Feb. 1504-5; Mr Robert Walterston, in office 23rd May 1513, and still on 12th Dec. 1542, resigned soon after; Mr Thomas Hay, mentioned on 12th Dec. 1542 as future successor of Mr Robert Walterston, provost and usufructurer of the collegiate church, described as Archpriest of Dunbar on 10th Feb. 1542 in a Bull of Paul III allowing him to retain the said archpresbytery resigned by Robert Walterston, along with the provostry of St Bothans, in office as provost 21st March 1542-3, and died before 3rd May 1558; Mr Andrew Hay, chaplain to the provostry, presented 3rd May 1558; Sir William Dobson, chaplain and prebendary in the church, presented on 29th July 1540 and died before 21st Oct. 1566, when Gilbert Brown, minister of the Church of the Holy Cross, Peebles, received presentation to the emoluments of the office. At Duncanlaw there was a chapel dedicated to St Nicholas.—[Cal. of Yester Writs, 16, 40, 53, 54, 55, 59, 79, 85, 86, 87, 92, 110, 116a, 152, 153, 162, 229, 235, 285, 354, 393, 478, 569, 601,

The church, whose ruins are situated on the shore not far from Aldcambus, is said to have been erected in the latter part of the 12th century. At Aldcambus there was a hospital for lepers, belonging to Coldingham Priory. In the time of William the Lion (1165–1214), David de Quinwood, baron of Quinwood, son of Arnold de Quinwood, endowed the hospital by giving to it and the lepers abiding there, a half ploughgate of land at Aldcambus, formerly held by Ralph the Tanner.—[Carr's Coldingham Priory, 96–7, 98, 265.]

DUNBAR

The earliest Christian settlement is said to have been associated both with St Abbs and Old Cambus. Three Northumbrian princesses, having found it advisable to seek refuge in Scotland from a virulent war which had broken out in their father's dominions, set sail for the Firth of Forth in a small vessel along with some friends and domestics. Having been compelled by a contrary wind to land near St Abbs Head, they were entertained by the Prior of Coldingham; and out of gratitude to their respective saints through whose intercession they deemed that they had been preserved, they erected severally a chapel at their own expense, viz. St Abb's (Ebba) on the summit of the "Head"; St Helen's at Old Cambus; and St Bees (Beya) on the shore at Dunbar. Whatever historical value may be attached to the story, certain it is that St Beya was the patron saint of Dunbar. There was a "St Bais Well" which, as indicated in a Charter of 1603, was close to the shore; and the exact locality is denoted by the modern name Bayswell, attached to the area overlooking the sea at the north-east part of the town. But the chapel or cell there must have disappeared at an early date, for the medieval church was situated where the modern church stands. It has been suggested that that church was of Saxon style, and that, when the collegiate church was founded in 1342, to the east end of the Saxon church or parish church of Dunbar were added a Gothic choir and transepts, entrance to the old west portion being by a Saxon arch. As completed, the church was cruciform, with a length of 123 feet, a breadth of 20–25 feet, and the cross-aisle or transepts 83 feet. An altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary was erected anew in 1342 in the nave or old portion of the church, and is described in 1507 as being "in the parish Church of Dunbar." In the church was a chaplainry called Saulpriestis. "Extensive repairs were carried out on the church in 1779; and forty years later plans were made for a new church on the same site. The last service in the old church was held on 7th March 1819; on 17th April of that year the foundation stone of the new church was laid; and the latter, not quite completed, was opened for worship on 20th April 1821. Patrick, 7th Earl of Dunbar, who died at Whittinghame on 24th April 1289, was interred in the north aisle of the church. At the shore there was a chapel dedicated to St Anne. Hence the modern "St Anne's Court." There was also a chapel dedicated to St John, of which in the Lord High Treasurer's Accounts of 1501 there is this entry: "Item, the xix day of October to Schir Andro Wod to the bigging of Sanct Johne's Chapell in Dunbar, x li." Apparently in 1218 Christian Bruce, 2nd wife of Patrick, 5th Earl of Dunbar, and widow of William Bruce of Annandale, "biggit and foundit ane hous of religioun in the toun of Dunbar, and gave the sammin with all the rentis and profitis thair of to God and the brethern of the Ordour and religioun of the Trinity (Red Friars), the hous to be subject to the cure and reull of the minister of the place and brethern of Trinity at Berwick, the minister to be haldin to sustene and uphold in the said place and hous of Dunbar ane brother of the said Ordour to do divine service therein." In 1473, on account of Berwick having been held for many years by the English, and the Trinity House there "destroyit and put down," the rents, etc., of that house were transferred by James III to the Red Friars of Peebles. This transfer was held as equivalent to the House of Dunbar and its rents, etc., also being transferred to Peebles; and in Letters of 1st July 1529 to the Ministry and Brethren of Peebles, James V disannulled all dispositions and nominations, etc., to the House of Dunbar that might impede the House at Peebles in the use of Dunbar House and its rents, and ordained Peebles to take all the profits of Dunbar for the sustentation of their place "to the Honour and Glory of God and of the Holy Croce there honorit and keptit." Specially revoked was the gift of the House of Dunbar made by the King to Sir John Scharp, Chaplain, on 8th March 1528-9. On 1st June 1558 Friar Gilbert Brown, Minister of the House of Peebles, set in feu to James Home in Dunbar 52 acres of land at Dunbar, rented 20 merks, that belonged to the House there. The Charter describes the various lands in detail, and includes also le Mason-dew in the north part of the town. By Charter of 31st March 1567 Queen Mary gave the lands, annual rents, etc., of the house to the burgh of Dunbar. The house itself was situated at what is now called Friar's Croft, south of Friar's Vennel, where the tower of the church may still be seen in use as a dovecot. In 1263 Patrick, Earl of Dunbar, founded a House of White Friars (Carmelites). All trace of the building has disappeared, but its situation, according to a Charter of 1576, was on the north side of "3 acres of lands of Newtonleys," in the region of the burgh common. At the head of High Street there was a Maison Dieu which was removed in 1728 to make room for a bowling green. It appears to have been the hospital connected with the collegiate church. Within the burgh there were—Priest's Croft; the lands of the Virgin Mary; the lands of St John; the "Frier-land," called the Kirkhill; and "the lands Franciscan, the Frier-landis," in the vicinity of the churchyard. Queen Mary's Charter of 31st March 1567 to the burgh included also the lands and annual rents that once pertained to the prebends, canons, chaplainries in the collegiate church and choir of the same, with all annual rents of lands in the liberty of the burgh or paid from the burgh common lands.—[*Reg. INNERWICK

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 17th Oct. 1242, the patron saint being St Michael. The present church was built in 1784. By Letters of 4th Oct. 1468 Pope Paul II united the perpetual vicarage to the mensa of the Collegiate Church of Dunglas. On the shore at Skateraw, at a place still called Chapel Point, there was a chapel dedicated to St Dionysius, the ruins of which still existed in the second half of the 18th century. There was also a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary.—[Theiner's Vet. Monumenta, 457; Lockhart's Ch. in Scot. in 13th Century, 52-3; Armstrong's Map, 1773; Mackinlay's *Anc. Ch. OLDHAMSTOCKS

Before 30th Nov. 1423 Sir Alexander Home of Home and Dunglas founded at Dunglas a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. On that date he granted to the chapel 3 husband-lands with a half land on the east side of Kello in Edrom parish, and an acre of land with "Mansion Place" in the town and territory of Dunglas near the fount called Bryan's Well. By Sir Alexander Home's son and successor, Sir Alexander Home, Kt., the Chapel of the Virgin was erected into a collegiate church for a provost, 3 chaplains, and 4 boys to sing in the choir. The erection was confirmed by Crown Charter of 22nd August 1450, which described the church as "lately founded," and by a Papal Bull of 2nd Jan. 1450-1, which narrates that Sir Alexander's motive for the erection was his desire "by a happy commerce to change earthly things into heavenly and temporal into eternal." The Bull also states that he "of the goods granted him by God caused a church to be built to the honour of Mary the mother of Jesus, and at his own cost to be constructed in a godly manner," which indicates that he had considerably enlarged and embellished the chapel built by his father. Provision for each chaplain was 12 merks annual rent derived as follows: First chaplain, from lands and annual rents of Kello; second chaplain, from lands and annual rents of Balevley and Gour-dounshal in Crail in Fife; and third chaplain, from lands and annual rents also of Balevley and Gourdounshall. There was likewise provision for manses for the provost and chaplains. The support of the 4 boys was an annual rent from lands and annual rents of Hutton, Herrsile, Cockburnspath, and Pinkerton in Berwick. The Papal Bull of 2nd Jan. 1450-1, in addition to confirming the erection of the collegiate church, also appropriated, for the purpose of securing full provision for the "Provost and other persons" at the church, the greater and lesser teinds of the "Rectory of the Parish Church of Dunglas" (Oldhamstocks), value £5 yearly, the reasons assigned being that the whole rents provided for the foundation and endowment of the collegiate church were not wholly sufficient, and that the rectory of the Parish Church "so abounds in wealth that the rector for the time can be sufficiently provided for life without the greater and lesser teinds." The scope of the foundation of the church was extended; and there are on record 8 prebends at least—Oldhamstocks—13 merks annually from the lands of the same, given by Patrick Hepburn of Hailes and Oldhamstocks 7th Aug. 1450; Trefontaine or Strafontaine—lands of, in Abbey St Bathans, given on 11th Jan. 1451-2 by James II for the souls of his father and mother, James I and Queen Joan, for his own soul, and for the soul of Marie, his queen; Kello—13 merks annual rent; Chirnside—4 husband-lands, a merk land, and 8 merks annual rent from the Mains-lands, all at Chirnside, given by Sir Alexander Home 5th Aug. 1450; Upsettlington—lands of, given by Alexander Benystoun of the same, lord of Upsettlington, 8th June 1460; Dewingham; Barnside—5 acres of land, in parish of Coldingham; Redspittal—lands of, in the parish of Aberlady; and Vigorushauch—lands of, in Roxburgh, and an annual rent of 40s. from Mains of Mordington, given on 16th Sept. 1503 by Patrick Hume or Home of Polwarth and his second wife, Helen Schaw, to a chaplain "celebrating and to celebrate Mass, chanting and to chant, within the Collegiate Church of Dunglas, and principally at the Altar of St Cuthbert on the south side of said Church." By Charter of 26th April 1451 William, Earl of Douglas and Avondale, granted to the church one husband-land in the town and territory of Hutton, and the church and hospital of the same; by Papal Bull of 12th Nov. 1458 the vicarage and tithes of Edrom Church were appropriated to the Provostry of Douglas, which was valued at £5, John Hume, vicar, having resigned; and by similar Bull of 4th Oct. 1468 the perpetual vicarage of Innerwick, not exceeding £12, was appropriated to the capitular mensa, the fruits of which were insufficient for the maintenance of the "8 canons and other beneficiaries" of the church. There was in the church an altar of the Virgin Mary, called "Our Lady of Piete" (Pity), to which George Hume of Ayton granted 20 merks annual rent from his lands of Cadschele and his husband-lands of the town of Duns, a Royal Precept of Confirmation being granted on 14th Nov. 1500 "to a perpetual Chaplain to sing at the Altar." The ruins of the church, which in 1711 was used as stables, still stand. Sir Alexander Home also founded near the church a hospital with chapel "under the invocation of the Most Glorious Virgin Mary and St John the Baptist" for the reception and maintenance "of the poor and other miserable persons." For the purpose of fulfilling Sir Alexander's desire to extend the scope of the work of the hospital Pope Sextus IV granted Indulgences to it on 5th Aug. 1480.—[*Reg. PRESTONKIRK

There is a legend to the effect that at the death of Baldred, the patron saint, which is variously said to have occurred in 607–8 and 756–7, a claim to his body was made by his three churches, Preston (kirk), Aldhame and Tynninghame. In the course of the dispute a pious sage advised a night of prayer, to enable the Bishop in the morning to reach a decision. When the morning came, there were found three biers with three bodies, covered with clothes and alike in every detail. One was sent for interment to each of the claimants. About 50 yards east of the church there is St Baldred's Well, and in the Tyne adjacent is St Baldred's Whirl. There was in the church an aisle of St John the Baptist, for a chaplain of which Patrick Hepburne of Bolton gave on 23rd July 1545 a grant of £10 annually from the lands of Plewlands. The present church, with the exception of the choir, which appears to belong to the middle of the 13th century, was built in 1770. According to one account of St Modevanna or Monenna, an Irish saint, whose period is said to have been the latter part of the 5th century and early part of the 6th, and who left her native land in the company of two handmaidens, Dunselder Hill (Traprain Law) was one of the sites on which she founded a church or chapel. At Wauchton in the north part of the parish there was a chapel which was subject to the mother church. Another chapel, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was situated at Markle. In its later stages it had a collegiate organisation with a provost and prebends, but the erection does not appear to have been confirmed. What remained of the Chapel in the first half of the 19th century is described as the "old ruins of a religious house on the farm of Markle," and under the description "Markle (Ruins of Monastery)" the site is explicitly indicated on the O.S. Map of 1908 in a field on the south side of the railway west of East Linton Station. In her widowhood Christine de Moubray, daughter and heir of Sir Bernard Fraser of Fortune and Linton, and wife of Sir Roger de Moubray of Barnbogle, who died before Jan. 1268-9, founded in the territory of her Manor of Houston in this parish a house of the Order of the Holy Trinity and Redemption of Captives (Red Friars), which was called "The Grace of God." The endowment was the whole land of her Manor of Houston, the whole land called Lynerynham (Lingeam, Lerigamhill) in the tenement of Houston, the whole land which belonged to the Hospital of Fortune, in the parish of Athalestaneford, the whole land which belonged to the late Thomas de Lessendun, in the territory of Fortune, and the whole land of Crauchot (Crawho, Cracho), with which there appear, at a subsequent date, the Mills of Cracho and fishings. To the foregoing were added later annual rents from lands in the burgh of Haddington. The foundation was confirmed by Alexander II on 26th Jan. 1271-2. In August 1296 John, Master of the Hospital, swore fealty to Edward I, and a little later there was issued to the Sheriff of Haddington a writ to restore the property of the place. By Letter of 2nd Dec. 1531 James V gave the hospital and its endowments to the Red Friars' Convent at Peebles, and the union was made perpetual by a Charter of the same monarch, 8th Jan. 1541-2, which confirmed Christine de Moubray's foundation and its confirmation by Patrick, 7th Earl of Dunbar, and also the resignation made by David Kinloch, Minister at Houston, in favour of Friar James Paterson, Minister at Peebles, of Houston Hospital and its possessions. The exact site of the hospital can hardly be determined. Descriptions of the endowments in the 16th century and later reveal that included in the town and territory of Houston, in the neighbourhood of East Linton, there were, in addition to the lands of Lingeam mentioned in the foundation, Mains of "Houston," the Waulk-Mill of Houston, with 4 acres attached, lands called Hoigslan and Taitlie, the lands of Friarlie, on the east side of Quarrelbog or Quarrybog, in the town and territory of Linton, and salmon fishings in the Tyne, and other fishings, belonging to the said place (of Houston). The Mill of Houston, no longer used as a mill, stands on the right bank of the Tyne, opposite East Linton; and it would appear that somewhere in the region stretching from the mill the Red Friars' hospital was situated.

The patronage of the Chapel of Markles belonged to the Earls of Bothwell. The chaplainry of St John the Baptist in the Church of Prestonkirk was also under the patronage of the said Earls; it was designated the Provost, and therefore may have been provisionally set aside, probably by the 1st Earl of Bothwell, as the endowment of the provost in a plan to erect the Chapel of Markles into a collegiate church. The endowment included 2 crofts of arable land with house and garden in the territory of the town of Preston or Linton. In the Castle of Hailes there was a chapel dedicated to St Michael the Archangel, the endowment of which was the Waulk-mill of Hailes, with multures, etc., and mill lands, and the lands of Loslett or Lochsleyt. At the Reformation Sir Walter Robeson, vicar of Aberdour, was chaplain both of the Chaplainry of St John the Baptist and of the Chapel of Hailes.—[*Reg. Mag. SPOTT

Spott was at first a dependent Chapel of Dunbar, and probably remained a parochial chapel until the Reformation. The church may have been dedicated to St John, for St John's Well was situated to the west of the church. Of the well, the Old Statistical Account says: "It is carried in pipes two miles to Dunbar for the supply of water to the inhabitants."—[Scott. Hist. Soc. Mis., vi, 82, 102.]

STENTON

There was in the parish a chaplainry of Burnham. Pitcocks was a dependent chapel of Dunbar Church prior to becoming a prebend and was served by a parochial chaplain. The proximity of the Rood Well to the ruins of the old church suggests that the church was dedicated to the Holy Rood. The present church was opened for worship by Dr Chalmers on 4th Oct. 1828. The major part of its construction was borne by Mr H. R. Ferguson.—[Reg. Mag. Sig., viii, 1905; Miscell. Scot. Hist. Socy., vi, 82, 93.]

ALDHAME

The church, dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 23rd April 1243, was demolished in 1770. There is a well of St Baldred. At Scougal, about a mile south-east of Aldhame, there was a chapel founded by one of the Scougal family.—[Chalmer's Caledonia, iv, 547; Lockhart's Church in Scotland in 13th Century, 53.]

TYNNINGHAME

At Tynninghame there was a Saxon monastery associated with Lindisfarne, to which belonged "the whole land pertaining to the Monastery of St Balthere (Baldred) from Lammermoor as far as Exmouth" (Inveresk). The church and town were burned and destroyed by Anlafus the Dane in 941, shortly before his death. By Bull of Pope Sixtus IV, 24th Feb. 1473, the church became a mensal Church of St Andrews.—[Chron. of Melrose, 29; Fordoun, Scott. Hist., i, 134; The Apostolic Camera and Scott. Benefices, 173; see Prestonkirk.]

WHITTINGEHAME

Whittingehame was an affiliated Chapel of Dunbar, but it was served by a perpetual vicar. There was also an affiliated Chapel of Dunbar at Penshiel within the bounds. It served the higher part of the parish in the Lammermoors, whereas Whittingehame served the lower. Near the site of Penshiel Chapel are the Chapel Stone on the south, and on the north the Chapel Cleugh with St Mungo's Well, which may indicate the dedication of the Chapel.—[*Misc. ECCLES

The Church of St Cuthbert of Eccles, with its dependent chapels—Chapel of St Mary the Virgin at Leitholm, Chapel of St John at Mersington, and the Chapel of St Mary Magdalene at Birgham—belonged to the Priory of Eccles. In 1567 there is reference to the parsonage and vicarage of the four kirks and parishes, "Our Lady Parochin, Sanct John's Parochin, and the Magdalene and Sanct Cuthbert's Parochinns," and in 1609 there are "the Parish Church of Eccles called the Lady Kirk, and the Chapels of St John, St Cuthbert, and St Magdalene." It would appear, therefore, that for a time after the Reformation the Lady Chapel at Leitholm was regarded as the parish church. It was situated on a knoll called the Chapel Knowe at the north-west end of the village. The burial ground of the chapel has long since disappeared. The chapel at Birgham was situated in the north end of the existing parish burial ground. In 1649 Parliament ratified a petition of the Presbytery of Duns for disjoining from Eccles the lands east and north of Lamdenburn, and the erection of a new church at East Mersington; but apart from the disjunction of Lamden from Eccles, nothing appears to have been done. In 1774 the old Church of St Cuthbert at Eccles was removed with the exception of the north transept, which appears to have become a burial place and still exists in a ruinous condition; and on a site to the west the present church was then built. The Old Statistical Account states that the old church was Gothic in design, cruciform in shape, vaulted and covered with large flagstones, dedicated to St Andrew in 1248, and ornamented with a cross and a very excellent steeple. It will be observed, however, that in the records of the 16th and 17th centuries there is not only no reference to St Cuthbert having been supplanted by St Andrew, but the name of St Cuthbert is continued. The church was "won" by the English invaders on 27th Sept. 1544. There is a death-bell of 1715 inscribed "For the people of Ekkles." The Cistercian Priory of Eccles, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is variously stated to have been founded by Gospatrick, Earl of March and Dunbar, in 1154, and a second time by him in 1156, and also to have been founded by the Countess of March. The Church of Eccles and its dependent chapels were granted to the priory by Gospatrick; and the priory held also the Church of Bothkennar. After being burned by the English under Hertford in Sept. 1545, the priory was not rebuilt. By Charter of 28th Jan. 1568-9 Margaret Home, the prioress, conveyed to Alexander Home of North Berwick the mansion called the Newark, and the house, buildings of her monastery, with dovecot, gardens, and orchards, belonging to the monastery (except the church and cloisters of the same), which "through turbulent times, chiefly for the cause of religion, when the said Prioress and the Nuns had been dispersed, had fallen into ruins, so that they were in the least degree habitable"; and by Crown Charter of 20th March 1587-8 the King, understanding that "the superstitious monasticism," for which the monastery had been founded, was abolished by the laws of the king, granted to Alexander

Home of North Berwick the place in which the church and cloisters had been situated (foundations now gone), and the Newark Mansion, etc. All that remained of the priory in 1834 was "a wall forming part of the East gable of Eccles House," i.e. the Newark Mansion House, "and two vaulted cellars contiguous to the Churchyard." The said wall appears to be identical with what is now the east wall of the rose garden of the present Eccles House built at the site of the former Newark Mansion; and the two cells and the fish pond of the priory are situated within the private grounds of Eccles House. In 1939 the church was entirely reconstructed internally and refurnished, a new hall and vestry being added.—[Reg. Great Seal, iv, 1919, v, 1492; Acts Scott. Parl., vi, (2) 306; *Report Hist. require "that he shall not preach any more in the parish or on the border of it."—[Hist. MSS. Comm. Report, MSS. Earl of Home, 132–3.]

ANDREW RUTHERFORD; an Order 1655 of the Commissioners under the Commonwealth for visiting Universities and placing and disciplining Ministers, of date at Edinburgh 10th July 1654, narrates that as Mr Andrew Rutherford is elected Minister at Eccles, and "hath a lawfull call by certain Godly and wel affected persons in the said parish to exercise his ministeriall duties, the Commissioners approve and authorise him to uplift the stipend, forbidding any one to disturb him in his parish, providing that he shall not revile the Government, nor keep the people disaffected by praying and preaching agt. it."—[*Hist. COLDINGHAM

At West Reston there was a chapel dedicated to St Nicholas. It may be that the chapel was identical with the chapel dedicated to "St N., Bishop and Confessor," which, it was proposed about 1540, should be erected into a parish church, with cemetery, baptismal font, bell tower and bells, and all the other rights and insignia of a parish church. The inhabitants of the area had built, founded and suitably embellished and repaired the chapel. The chief reason for the proposal was that at certain seasons the river E. (possibly the Eye) which lay between the towns R. and R. (possibly East and West Reston) on the one hand, and the parish church and churchyard on the other, was difficult of crossing on account of storms, floods, and frost, by the inhabitants who desired to attend the parish church for such services as were beyond the functions of the chapel, and for funerals proceeding to the parish churchyard. It was desired that the rector of the parish church should provide for the vicar of the new church 20 merks annually over and above all the fruits of teind, sheaves and other emoluments which the rector enjoyed from the teinds of grain and goods within the limits of the said towns of R. and R. On the basis that the reference was to this chapel the proposal was not carried out.

St Ebba died in 637, and soon afterwards the monastery was burned through carelessness. It was rebuilt, but was destroyed by the Danes in 870. On a peninsular promontory at St Abbs are the foundations of buildings called "St Abb's Kirk," with a small burial ground—the remains of a cell or chapel attached to Coldingham Priory, and erected at a later date than St Ebba's monastery. King Edgar gave the Priory of Coldingham to St Cuthbert's Canons Regular of Durham, who controlled it and drew the revenues. It was colonised by monks sent by the Abbot of Durham. By Charter of 25th July 1378 Robert II annexed the priory to Dunfermline Abbey, but this did not take effect. Fully a century later, in 1487, James III suppressed the priory and annexed one half of the Chapel Royal at Stirling, the other half to be devoted to the erection of a collegiate church at Coldingham. The King's action induced or precipitated a rebellion which, led by Alexander, Earl of Home, culminated in the Battle of Sauchieburn and the murder of the King. In 1504 the priory was annexed to the Scottish Crown; and five years later, by Order of Pope Julius II, the project of Robert II was carried out and the priory was withdrawn from Durham and annexed to Dunfermline Abbey—a condition that existed till 1560. The priory was under the joint invocation of St Mary, St Cuthbert and St Ebba, but in actual practice the name of the Virgin alone was used. To the priory belonged the following churches: Edrom, with the Chapel of Ercildone (Earlston) and other chapels, granted by Cospatrick, Earl of Dunbar, and confirmed by David I in Sept. 1139; Fishwick and Swinton, confirmed by Robert, Bishop of St Andrews, in 1250; Ednam, with Chapels of Newton, Nenthorn and Nesbit; Earlston, granted by Walter de Lindsay to Kelso in 1150, and in 1171 given in exchange for Gordon and St Lawrence at Berwick; Stitchell (Chapel); Smailholm, granted by Walter Olifard, justiciary of Lothian, who died in 1242; Holy Trinity at Berwick, granted or confirmed by Bishop Bec 1282–1309; Ayton; Lamberton; Aldcambus. In a Den west of the village there was a Well of St Andrew, whence came the supply of water for the priory. In 1305 Edward I instituted a Fair of St Luke.—[Acts Scott. Parl., ii, 171, 179–82; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 839; Carr's Coldingham Priory, 131, 227, 235, 238–9, 243, 310, 317, 319, 320, 327; Thomson's Coldingham Priory and Parish, 45–6, Appendix VI.]

In the “town and territory” of Eyemouth there were lands designated the “four husband lands of Ninewells,” a name that may indicate that here there was a dedication to the Nine Maidens. In 1581 there are mentioned two tenements of land in “the place of St Colin,” now called the Loches in the common of Eyemouth. On account of the distance of Eyemouth from Coldingham Church, and also because the prosperity of its harbour had increased its population, James VI by Charter of 27th Jan. 1618 dissolved the town of Eyemouth with its lands, etc., and also the Lands of Beinryhous from Coldingham, and erected the Church of Eyemouth into a distinct parish church, with the foregoing lands as its parochial area. The Charter, which was confirmed by Act of Parliament on 28th June 1633, narrates that the inhabitants had erected not only a suitable church but also a sufficient manse and glebe for the pastor placed there by John, Archbishop of St Andrews. The stipend was all the vicar's teinds within the above boundaries, along with a chalders of victual formerly assigned to Coldingham.—[Reg. Great Seal, vii, 1761; *Acts Scott. MORDINGTON and LAMBERTON

In note on Lamberton, line 6, for "Henry VIII" read "Henry VII."

In a description of the liberties of Berwick 20th Jan. 1478-9 there occurs "the place of the Cross of St Mary of Mordington," which may indicate that Mordington Church was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. On the site of the old church there is a burial vault which has on the inside of the west wall a panel with a carved representation of the Crucifixion, an incised inscription IHUS MARIA, and figures of the Virgin Mary and John the Baptist.

The Church of Lamberton, now a burial vault, is situated in the churchyard on the west side of the Dunbar-Berwick road, 4-5 miles from Berwick. Lamberton was united to Ayton by the Lords Commissioners before 20th May 1610, because they were adjacent to each other and formed an "inconsiderable parish." At Charterhouse there was an establishment of the Carthusians, governed by a prior. The Church of St Mary-in-the-Forest, apparently Selkirk, was united to Charterhouse on 22nd July 1439.—[Monastic Annals of Teviotdale, 321; *The Apostolic Camera and Scott. HASSENDEAN

The church was granted to the Bishopric of Glasgow by David I; and the grant was confirmed by Pope Alexander III in 1170. About twenty years later there was a dispute regarding the patronage of the church between King William the Lion and Joceline, Bishop of Glasgow; and as it appeared impossible otherwise to settle the dispute, they agreed to give the revenues to charity. Accordingly in 1193–4 the Bishop with the consent of the King gave the patronage—lands, tithes, dues—to Melrose Abbey for the purpose of building and maintaining a house at Hassendean for the reception and entertainment of wayfaring poor and pilgrims to Melrose. The hospital was known as Monk's Tower, and its lands were designated Monk's Croft. Some time after 1666 a new church was built at the west end of Robertson parish; and in 1690 Hassendean Church was wholly suppressed. Teviot floods made repeated inroads on the church and churchyard, and in 1796 a specially severe flood completed the destruction.—[*Reg. LAUDER

In 1268 the patronage of the Church of Lauder, which was at first a dependent chapel of the Church of Channellkirk, was resigned by John Baliol in favour of Dryburgh Abbey, and like resignation was made by John Baliol's wife, Devorgilla of Galloway, daughter and heir of Alan de Galloway, late Constable of Scotland. Confirmation was given by John de Haddington, Prior of St Andrews. The church stood on the north side of the town, facing Lauder Fort, which now forms part of Thirlestane Castle. The present church, on the south-west side of the town, was built in 1673, and repaired in 1820. The Chapel of Kedslie was dedicated to St John, and though no remains of it now exist, it is perpetuated in the name of the estate and mansion of Chapel-on-Leader. There was a chapel attached to the Hospital of St Leonard. To God, St Mary, St Leonard and the sick brothers of the Hospital of Lauder (St Leonard's), Richard de Morville, Constable of Scotland, for the souls of himself, his wife, his heirs, his father and mother, and his ancestors and successors, gave about 1170 that land where the house of the hospital is situated, according to the boundaries as perambulated by John, Bishop of Glasgow, Avicia, wife of Richard, and William, son of Richard, etc. Evidently the hospital was for leprous monks, and the foregoing date may be approximately the date of its foundation.—[Book of Dryburgh, 5-6, 7-9, 267-8, which gives boundaries of the hospital lands; Procs. of Berwickshire Naturalists' Club, xiii, 139, which see for details of hospital.]

A church existed here in 1127 when "John, priest of Ledgaesude" signed a charter in connection with Coldingham Priory. In 1164 the church passed by charter into the possession of the Church of St James, St Mirin and St Milburg of Passelet (Paisley) and the priors and monks there till the Reformation.

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 30th Oct. 1242. The Hospital of Morriston was at Aldenston. It belonged to Melrose Abbey, and was for "sick brothers," monks afflicted with leprosy. Probably it was founded by Walter, son of Alan, Steward of Scotland. At any rate, towards the end of the 12th century he gave to the hospital and the sick brothers there residing a plough-gate and a half of land, to wit, a plough-gate in the town of Aldenstoun, and a half plough-gate which Dame Emma de Ednam (Ednam) held, with right of pasture and easements in the forest of Birkenside and Leggardeswude (Legerwood), and liberty to grind at his mills without paying multures. Nichol de Lychardeswode, Chaplain, warden of the hospital, swore fealty to Edward I on 28th Aug. 1296. At Birkenside there was a chapel dedicated to St John.—[Retours, iii, 135, xiii, 118; Bk. of Melrose, i, 70; Mon. Annals of Teviotdale, 265; *Cal. of Docs. STOW

Stow was anciently called Wedale. Tradition narrates that fragments of the Cross of Christ were brought from the Holy Land by King Arthur, and were preserved with great veneration in the Virgin Mary's Church of Wedale. The early church was situated on the estate of Torsonce, and in the first half of the 19th century a part of one of the walls, three feet thick, was to be seen built in with a common drystone dyke. Near by was the "Lady's Well," and a huge stone, removed in the course of the formation of a new road and subsequently broken up, was said to bear the impression of the Virgin Mary's foot, made on the occasion of one of her descents to visit this favoured sanctuary. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 3rd Nov. 1242. A later church, apparently of the late 15th century, but largely rebuilt in the 17th century, with a south aisle added at the same period, stands a ruin at the south end of the village. Here also was a Lady Well.—[Report Hist. Monuments Comm., Midlothian, 168; Lockhart's Ch. in Scotland in 13th Century, 53; Chron. of Melrose, 79.]

MELROSE

The oldest religious building in the parish was burned by the Danes in the seventh century, and what was left of its ruins became a cell of "Solitaries." It was one of the first head places of pilgrimage in Scotland in visiting which wonderful spiritual privileges were obtained. The Cistercian Monks built the later Abbey of Melrose, and part of it was used as the parish church till the beginning of the nineteenth century. The chapel at Blainslie was Chield (= knight) Lyell's.

Originally the church belonged to the Priory of Coldingham, but in 1124-47 the priory conveyed it to David I in exchange for the Church of St Mary of Berwick. Subsequently it belonged to Melrose Abbey. In 1321 the Bishop (Simon) of Whithorn granted an Indulgence of 40 days to all who for the purpose of devotion visited the Chapel of St Cuthbert of Old Melrose, and gave of their means for rebuilding said chapel lately burned by the English. Of the chapel it was further said that it "has led the monastic life and flourished by miracles." "Sanct Robertis' Well," Blainslie, occurs on 5th April 1547.—[Coldingham Charters, 5, No. 18; Raine's North Durham; Book of Melrose, ii, 390-1; Corbet's Prot. Bk., 35.]

The first four ministers mentioned (Vol. ii, 187) were probably never settled at Melrose, John Knox being the first regular minister.

SELKIRK

The church, which was sometimes called the Church of the Forest, has been claimed to be St Mary's Kirk of the Forest in which in 1297–8 the Scottish Parliament met and gave to Sir William Wallace investiture as Guardian of the Kingdom, though Yarrow Church, St Mary's Kirk of the Lowes, is generally assumed to have been the meeting place. In 1511–12 the church was rebuilt. Apparently there was delay with regard to the steeple, but that it was erected, if not then, certainly at a somewhat later date, is shown by subsequent reference to it as the "high steeple with four turrets." There was in the church an Altar of the Holy Rood. There were two aisles, Ker's Aisle and Brydone's Aisle. The latter aisle, which was repaired in 1617, may have been the aisle for which Sir William Brydone, a vicar of the church, left money to provide a shrine. At dates between 1695 and 1714 extensive repairs were carried out on the church, but in 1735 it had reached an unsatisfactory condition, and in August 1747 its walls were removed down to the ground. Unfortunately the internal woodwork was indiscriminately destroyed, involving two painted panels, one of the Merchant Company's Loft, portraying Justice, blind-folded and holding scales in the hand, with the motto "A false balance is an abomination to the Lord." and the other, on the Tailor's Loft, depicting Adam and Eve in scanty attire, representing their first effort at tailoring. The new church was built in 1748, the congregation having worshipped meanwhile in the Grammar School. In 1858 attention was directed to the internal condition of the church, including its lack of accommodation, and a year later it was resolved to provide a new building. Opposition to that proposal and also a "battle of sites" caused considerable delay, but ultimately the building of a new church was begun in 1861 on a site on the upper portion of the Back Brae Park in the north part of the town, and the church itself was opened for worship on 1st Feb. 1863. It is noteworthy as being constructed of dressed whinstone. On the carved label-stop on the right side of the doorway is a representation of the proverbial "kirk mouse." The roofless walls of the old church, with the aisle of Murray of Philiphaugh on the south side, stand in the churchyard in the Kirk Wynd. In the belfry hangs the bell which, as being the parish bell, was removed from the Council House in 1748. In 1113 Earl David, son of King Malcolm, founded at Selkirk, apparently near his forest castle, a monastery under the invocation of St Mary the Virgin and St John the Evangelist, and in it he placed 13 reformed Benedictine Monks from the Abbey of Tiron in Le Perche, one of their number, Ralf by name, being made first abbot. Thirteen years later Earl David, then David I, with the advice of John, Bishop of Glasgow, and on the ground that Selkirk was "a place unsuitable for an Abbey," removed the monastery and erected it "at the Church of the Blessed Virgin on the banks of the Tweed beside Roxburgh in the place called Calkou" (Kelso). William, also of Tiron, was the 2nd Abbot of Selkirk, 1115–16, and the 3rd was Herbert, in whose time the change took place. The forest castle of Selkirk may have been on the Peel Hill at Haining, near Selkirk.—[Craig-Brown's Hist. of Selkirkshire, i, 74–5, ii, 229–32; Recs. of Selkirk Heritors, i, 186, 190, 234, 236, 252, 274; ii, 32; Reg. of Kelso, i, 4, 5 and vii.]

YARROW

The church may have been the meeting place of the Scottish Parliament which invested Sir William Wallace with the guardianship of the kingdom. A fire in the spring of 1922 destroyed all save the walls of the church, but the building was restored on a handsome scale. At Catslacknowe there was a well bearing the name St Philip.—[Craig-Brown's Hist. of Selkirkshire, i, 74–5; Mackinlay's Anc. Ch. Dedications (script.) 247.]

DALTON

From James VI and the Lords of Council special commission was received by John Spottiswood, Archbishop of Glasgow, to visit in the bounds of Annandale ("in the parts sometyne called the borders") and "take order for building and repairing of the kirks within the samyn." The report of the Archbishop bore that "the povertie of the inhabits in these parts is so great that it is impossible that the said kirks can ather be repaired or yet be sufficientlie planted with ministers in regard of the meannes of the parochines, unless certain of the said kirkis ly and next adjacent to other be united and annexit together." Following upon the report, Parliament by Act of 24th June 1609 effected various unions, one of which was Meikle Dalton, Little Dalton, and Mouswald, with the church at Little Dalton to be the church of the united parish. Later, by Act of July 1615 the Privy Council decreed that the Church of Mouswald be "the place of preaching, etc.," for the parishes of Dalton and Mouswald. A further step was taken on 18th June 1633 when Parliament disjoined the Kirk of Meikle and Little Dalton from Mouswald, and ordained that Meikle and Little Dalton "be ane severall cure and paroche kirk per se fra Mowswald." The other unions carried out by the Act were, Cummertress and Trailtrow; Gretna and Redkirk; Kirkpatrick-Fleming and Kirkconnel; Middlebie, Carruthers, and Pennersaugh; St Mungo and Tundergarth; Applegarth and Sibbaldie; Hoddam, Ecclefechan, and Luss (Luce); Hutton and Corrie; also St Leonards and Lanark (q.v.). —[*Acts Scott. LOCHMABEN

Robert de Brus, son of Robert de Brus, lord of Annandale, whom he predeceased in 1191, granted the church with its lands, teinds, and possessions to the Priory of Giseburn (Guisborough) in Cleveland, Yorks, which had been founded by his grandfather, Robert de Brus, in 1129. By the said Robert de Brus, lord of Annandale, who died in 1194, William, his son and successor, and William the Lion, charters confirming the grant were given apparently about the close of the 12th century. In 1223 the monks of the priory and the Bishop of Glasgow, between whom had arisen differences as to the effect of the grant, reached a settlement whereby the monks retained the tithes of the corn of the church, and received 3 merks yearly from the rector for the maintenance of lights, and the bishop had the right of collation and ordination to the church and the dependent chapel of Rokele. There was in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. In 1592 the church was burned by the Johnstones of Annandale, in order to compel the surrender of the Maxwells of Nithsdale, who, defeated in a fight with the Johnstones, had fled to the church for refuge. Its place was taken by a Gothic building with large choir, which was demolished in 1818; and the new church was opened in the following year. In the parish there was a chapel dedicated to St Thomas, apparently the Apostle.—[Dugdale's Monasticon, vi, Pt. 1, 266–9; Reg. Epis. of Glasgow, i, 105, 106–7, ii, 619–20; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 1650; McDowall's Dumfries, 318; McKinlay's Ancient Ch. Dedications, (script.) 258.]

GEORGE BUCHANAN, M.A., was 1637 dep. by the General Assembly at Glasgow 21st Nov. to 20th Dec.
1638 for declining the Assembly, and continuing in his contumacy and refusing to compear before the Commission; and on appeal the Assembly at Edinburgh 26th Aug. 1639 reaffirmed the sentence. On 2nd July 1639 Charles I addressed a letter to James, Lord Johnston, desiring him to see that “Mr George Buchanan, minister at Moffat” be maintained in his place and no other man planted at the church; and by another letter of 13th July the King forbade the Presb. of Lochmaben and Middlebie to proceed further against him or to admit any other man to his church “as they intend to do.” Lord Johnston and the Presbytery acted in spite of the royal letters; and as the sentence of the Assembly at Edinburgh 26th Aug. 1639 designates Mr Buchanan as min. at Kirk-cudbright, it would appear that he was adm. to the latter charge between 2nd July and 26th Aug. 1639.—[*Peterkin’s Recs. of

EWES

There were two churches, the Nether Kirk situated at Kirktown, and the Over Kirk, situated at Unthank. In 1296 there swore fealty to Edward I, Robert, son of Randolph, parson of St Cuthbert of Ewesdale, and Mr William Cramond, parson of the Church of Wynchedurres of Dumfries. In a writ of the time of Alexander III, 1249–85, Robert, parson of the Church of St Mark of Ewesdale, appears as a witness; and under Edward I of England warrant was given to John, Bishop or Ely, chancellor, to issue presentation to John de Ponteburges to the vacant Church of St Martin in Ewesdale in Scotland. Obviously reference in each case is to the Over Kirk; and the probability is that St Mark of the earlier writ is an error for St Martin, whose name here, in view of St Ninian's influence seems appropriate. The Over Kirk was abandoned, apparently soon after the Reformation.—[Rymer's Fed., i, Pt. 3, 35, 1745; Rotuli Scotiae, i, 25; Registrum Honoris de Morton, ii, 8; *Cal. of Docs. PRESBYTERY OF ANNAN

ANNAN

Robert de Brus, son of Robert de Brus, lord of Annandale, whom he predeceased in 1191, granted the church with its lands, teinds, and possessions to the Priory of Giseburn (Guisborough) in Cleveland, Yorks, which had been founded by his grandfather, Robert de Brus, in 1129. Confirmation charters were granted by the said Robert de Brus, lord of Annandale, who died in 1194, and by his son and successor, William, and King William the Lion, apparently about the close of the 12th century. In 1223 the monks of the priory and the Bishop of Glasgow, between whom differences had arisen as to the effect of the grant, reached a settlement whereby the monks retained the tithes of corn of the church and received 3 merks yearly from the rector for the maintenance of lights, and the bishop had the right of collation and ordination to the church. Early in the 17th century Annan was without a place of worship, and the place being so "misertably impoverished" that the people "no-hable to build a kirk to themselves," James VI "granted and disponed to the town and parish the house called the Castle of Annan, the hall and tower thereof to serve for ane kirk and place of convening to heiring of the word and ministrations of the Sacraments." On 24th June 1609 Parliament ratified grant "with power to repair, redifie, flitt, and remove the stones and timber thereof to ony place they think most convenient for building their kirk when they should find themselves thereto." The present church was built in 1790.—[Dugdale's Monasticon, vi, Pt. 1, 266-9; Reg. Epis. of Glasgow, 105-7, ii, 419-20; Acts Scott. Parl., iv, 441.]

TRAILTROW

Robert de Brus, son of Robert de Brus, lord of Annandale, whom he predeceased in 1191, granted the church, with its lands, teinds, and possessions, to the Priory of Giseburn (Guisborough) in Cleveland, Yorks, which had been founded by his grandfather, Robert de Brus, 1129. Confirmation charters were granted by the said Robert de Brus, lord of Annandale, who died in 1194, and his surviving son and successor, William, and by William the Lion apparently about the close of the 12th century. In 1223 the monks of the priory and the Bishop of Glasgow, between whom had arisen differences as to the effect of the grant, reached a settlement whereby the monks were to retain the tithes of corn of the church, and the bishop was to exercise the power of collation and ordination to the church. When Cummertrees and Trailtrow were united in 1609, it was decreed that the church of the united parish be at Trailtrow.—[Dugdale’s Monasticon,

ST MICHAEL'S, DUMFRIES

The church, with the Chapel of St Thomas, a toft belonging to the chapel, and 5 acres of land given by William the Lion to the church and chapel, was granted to Kelso Abbey by William the Lion, 1165–1214. There were in the church an Altar of Our Lady of Pity, an Altar of the Holy Blood, founded by William Cunninghame, burgess of Dumfries, in the aisle of the Virgin Mary, apparently on 15th Nov. 1506, an Altar of St Gregory, founded apparently on 5th Nov. 1508 by Sir Herbert Gladstone, Rector of Dornock, an Altar of St Andrew founded 24th July 1547 by Sir David Wallace, son and heir of late Adam Wallace, burgess of Dumfries, and a Chapel of St Nicholas. Doubtless there were an Altar of the Virgin Mary in the aisle bearing her name, and an Altar of St Nicholas in the chapel bearing his name. In St Nicholas' Chapel there was a chantry in honour of God, the Virgin Mary, and All Saints, the erection of which was confirmed by David, Earl of Carrick, on 27th Dec. 1394, the endowment being two stone houses on the east side of the Market Cross of the burgh. In or near the Gallow-gait of the burgh there was a Chapel of St Mary of Willies; and in the liberty of the burgh there was the Chapel of St Mary of Casteldyakis, to which pertained $\frac{1}{4}$ acre of the lands of Kingisholme near the chapel. In the territory of the burgh there was a Chapel of the Virgin Mary, commonly called lie Casteldikis. On 8th May 1537 Roger Macbrair, Provost of the burgh, and Herbert Cunningham and Edward Johnstone, bailies, on behalf of the community, granted to John Makilreve, custodier and administrator of the chapel, and his heirs male, 4 acres of land called the Chapelland, held by the late Duncan Ferguson, Andrew Ferguson, and Patrick Ferguson, custodiers and administrators in the said chapel, with houses, buildings, gardens, and orchards, lying at the said chapel, bounded by the High way, the rivulet flowing from the well of the chapel, a piece of the common land occupied by Thomas Welsche, and the common lands, the custodier being held bound to provide for the celebration of certain masses.—[*Reg. DUNSCORE

Among the witnesses of a charter of Edgar, son of Donald, in the time of King William the Lion, is Murchereach, priest of St Capre of Dunescor (Dunscore). There were four saints named Cairbre (Cairpre, Coirpre), but there is nothing to show which was associated with Dunscore. On 18th March and 8th April 1645 the Synod decerned that a new church be built by the heritors and parishioners at Dalgonar, near the centre of the parish; and that was ratified by Act of Parliament on 13th Feb.
1647. The church, manse and churchyard dykes were completed before 16th March 1649. The church was rebuilt in 1823.—

KIRKGUNZEON

The patron saint is Findbarr of Moyville, who was for some time in Whithorn, and whose death is recorded in 579. The alternative name of the church in the 12th and 13th centuries, Kirkwynnin, contains the Welsh form of Finnan or Finnen, which is a diminutive of the name of Findbarr. By Bull of 3rd Feb. 1216 Pope Innocent III confirmed to the Abbey of Holm-Cultram in Cumberland the Chapel of Kyrke-wynnin, which the abbey had held for forty years in peace by concession or confirmation of Jocelin, Bishop of Glasgow 1175-99. In the time of Pope Honorius III, Walter, Bishop of Glasgow, challenged the right of the abbey to the chapel, complaining that the monks of Holm-Cultram had usurped churches in his diocese and expelled the clergy, and craving that the chapel should be restored, but eventually on 27th May 1222 he agreed that the abbey should hold the chapel in accordance with the confirmation of Pope Innocent and Bishop Jocelin. In the latter part of the 14th century and early part of the 15th, the wars between Scotland and England rendered somewhat precarious the abbey's hold upon the chapel, now a church, with the result that the church was "of little profit" to the abbey, and its services suffered from neglect, being carried out, not by a monk of the abbey as formerly, but "now by one priest, now by another"; and on 17th June, 1391, Pope Clement VII (anti-Pope), on a petition of the Abbot of Holm-Cultram, committed the church temporarily to Thomas de Glenluce, of that monastery. Subsequently the church was granted in commendam to various persons; and later still, on a petition of Patrick Leche, Clerk, of the Diocese of Glasgow, M.A., which stated that on account of the commends which had gone on for forty years, it would be difficult for the union of the abbey and the church to take effect, and that the church had been so long void that there was no certain knowledge of the mode of voidance. Pope Martin V on 27th Sept. 1424 gave mandate to the Official of Glasgow to summon the interested parties and make enquiries, and, if he found the facts as stated, to suppress both the commends and the alleged union, and collate said Patrick to the church. What emerged is not clear; but before 20th April 1447 the abbey had ceased to have any right to the church, which was then in lay hands, possibly the family of Herries of Terregles. Towards the close of the 18th century the medieval church was almost a ruin. Its roof, of peculiar construction, is said "to have been formed at Holm-Cultram in Cumberland, and brought hither when the parish of Kirkgunzeon belonged to the Abbey." In 1790 it was replaced by the present church.—[Reg. and Recs. of Holm-Cultram Abbey, 21, 48, 49, 51, 53-4; Cal. of Papal Regs., Petitions, i, 385, 576, Letters, vii, 67, 344, x, 280, xi, 261, 625, xii, 45, 225; *Reg. TERREGLES

On the petition of Archibald, Earl of Douglas, lord of Galloway, Papal Commission was given on 7th May 1389 to the Bishop of Glasgow to convert the Nunnery of Lincluden into a collegiate church. The Earl narrated that the nunnery had been founded by his predecessors for eight or nine nuns and a prioress, that only four nuns and a prioress remained, that these were living disgracefully and insolently, that by their carelessness and negligence the buildings had become unsightly and ruinous, that they had no wish to repair them, and that to the repair of the vestments and ornaments they gave no attention. He asked that the prioress and nuns be transferred to another monastery or place either of the Benedictine or the Cluniac Order. The collegiate church was to be for a provost, 8 prebends, extended later to 12, and 24 bedesmen; and for the support of the establishment there were set apart the revenues of the nunnery and of the Hospital of the Sacred Grove (Holywood), situated near the nunnery and annexed to the collegiate church. The hospital, which was dedicated to St John the Baptist, had its origin in a house and chapel founded and built by Edward Bruce, brother of Robert I, within the bounds and limits of the Monastery of Holywood, and founded anew by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, whose charter was confirmed by Robert II on 2nd June 1372, for the reception of poor, weak, and sick people to the number of 18, the endowment being the lands of Crossmichael and Troqueer in the lordship of Galloway. The churches belonging to the collegiate church included Caerlaverock; Kirkbean; Preston; Colvend;

Terregles; Lochrutten; Kirkanders, made a prebend by Alexander, Bishop of Glasgow, 16th Jan. 1447–8; Lochmaben, made a prebend by William, Bishop of Glasgow, confirmed by Pope Nicholas V, 3rd March 1449–50; Kirkpatrick in Nithsdale, made a prebend before 9th Aug. 1453; Kirkbride, annexed before 23rd June 1487. On 22nd Sept. 1429 Margaret, Duchess of Turaine, widow of Archibald, Duke of Turaine, Earl of Douglas, for the souls of Robert III and Queen Annabella, her father and mother, etc., founded a chaplainry in the church, the endowment being the lands of Estwood, Barschryve, Le Bank, Carvorland, Dummokhead, le Maynys, Suthake, and de Barnes, in the Constabulary of Kirkcudbright and lordship of Galloway. By Bull of 11th Dec. 1482 Sextus IV annexed the provostship to the Episcopal Mensa of Moray, during the lifetime of Andrew Stewart, Bishop of Moray; but in 1488 Parliament declared the annexation to be null and void, the patronage to remain with the King, and the pretended annexation in favour of Andrew, Bishop of Moray, to be of no effect. By James IV the provostship was annexed to the Chapel Royal of Stirling, confirmation being granted by Pope Julius II on 2nd June 1508; and on 11th July 1527 James V declared “that his mynde and will is that the foundation of his Chapell riale of Striveling and the unions of Inchmahomo (Inchmahome) and Lincluden be observit and keptit in tyme to cum efter the form of the erection and union maid tharupon by his mest noble fader . . . and that supplication be direct to our haly fader tharupon.”—[*Acts Scott. SANQUHAR

The present church was built in 1823-4 on the site of the medieval church whose foundations have been outlined by flagstones. In the church there were an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary; an altar dedicated to the Holy Rood; and an altar dedicated to the Holy Blood, founded in 1519 by John Logan, vicar of Colvend, a native of Sanquhar. In the south-west corner of the present church there is the effigy of a churchman, which bore the name of "The Saint of the Choir." St Bride's Well was situated in the midst of a grove called Welltrees behind the knowe at Broomfield. It is now covered by the railway, but its waters have burst forth in another direction. In the vicinity of Newark there was a chapel dedicated to St Nicholas, at the site of which about twenty years ago there was discovered the sculptured effigy of a bishop, in robes and with crozier, and at his feet a figure presenting a scroll. The head and arms are missing. Near the farmhouse of Dalpeddar there is an old burial ground called Chapel Yards, the site of a chapel which is said to have been dedicated to St Peter. There was another chapel in Eliock House which was in existence till in the middle of the 18th century extensive alterations to the house led to its disappearance; and still another was situated at the farmstead of Tower, where there survives the Chapel Well. The Chapel Hill at Carco on Crawick Water, and the Chapel Rig and Our Lady's Well at Knockenstob, indicate two other chapels. Tradition tells of a chapel and religious house for women at the farmhouse of Orchard, and of a religious settlement at Goosehill, formerly Olive Hill. In the burgh, on the site behind the town hall, there was a house designated the Mansion House of St John the Baptist, but of its exact nature nothing appears to be known. Sanquhar Hospital, said to have been dedicated to St Mary Magdalene, was situated near the farmhouse of Newark. It was in existence before 28th Aug. 1296, when Bartholomew de Englisham, chapeleyn, warden of "the new Place at Senerwar" (Sanquhar), swore fealty to Edward I.—[Wilson's Annals of Sanquhar, 9-10, 36-7, 39-40, 41-2; Cal. of Docs. Rel. to Scotland, ii, 206.]

ROBERT CRICHTON, M.A., parson 17th Jan. 1554 and 20th Dec. 1565; was chaplain of St Nicholas called the Newark; died 15th June 1570.—[Reg. of Deeds, i, 56; xii, 261; Edin. Tests, ii, 159.]

JOHN YOUNG, reader, called vicar pensionary in 1574; died before 20th April 1583.—[Reg. of Abbrev. of Feu Charters of Church Lands, ii, 135.]

JAMES BLACKWOOD, app. before 28th March 1576, but a year later was accused of "brooking" both Sanquhar and Saline, and serving "not ane"; pleaded that he dared not go to Sanquhar for fear of his life to work there, and asked to be allowed to serve at Saline till he got security of Sanquhar and not compelled to resign either; ord. by Assembly to "travell" at Saline till next Assembly and meantime John Fullarton to support Kirk of Sanquhar upon his costs, and the Commissioners of the County ordained to admonish the tutor of Sanquhar (William Crichton) to make no impediment or trouble to Blackwood in using his office and serving Sanquhar; still "brooked" Saline 11th June 1578, when he was ordered by Assembly to demit the same; entered at Sanquhar probably soon after and was deprived some time before 16th Dec. 1594 for diverse treasonable causes.—[The Book of the Universal Kirk, i, 386, 397, 424, 465, 472; P. C. Reg., 30th June 1574, 23rd March 1576-7; P. S. Reg., lxvii, 23, 36; Reg. Abbrev. of Feu Charters of Church Lands, ii, 133.]

ROBERT HUNTER, pres. by the church to parsonage and vicarage 1594 16th and 28th Dec. 1594 on dep. of James Blackwood, the patron, Lord

Crichton of Sanquhar, having failed to present a lawful person in due time.—

SORBIE, KIRKMADRYNE and CRUGILTON

About 1200 Ivo de Vipont granted to Dryburgh Abbey the Church of St Foylen (Fillan of Greater Sorbie), and about 1220 Robert de Vipont granted similarly the Church of St Michael of Lesser Sorbie. In the latter case confirmation was made by Alan, father of Robert. At the request of Dryburgh Abbey, Gilbert, Bishop of Whit-horn, about 1250, on the ground that the two churches were sufficient only for the support of one man, consolidated the two, and decerned the Church of St Michael of Lesser Sorbie to be the mother church of each place. Before the middle of the 19th century there remained no traces of the churches, but their sites were pointed out, one at Culnorg in the north-west, and the other at Gilfillan near the centre of the parish. The church in the village of Sorbie was rebuilt about 1750, and thoroughly repaired in 1824. A new church was built at Millisle in 1874–6.—[Book of Dryburgh, 53, 56, 59–60.]

Kirkmadryne. The saint is Draigne, Draighne, which, with gh silent in med. and mod. Gaelic, becomes Drine in English.
Draigne is said to have been one of the ten sons of Dina, daugh. of the King of the Saxons, and Bracan, King of Brachineoc, of the Britons. To the Priory of Tralles-holm (St Mary's Isle of Trail) William the Lion granted the Church of Egarresse (Kirkmadryne) given by Rolland, son of Uchted.—[Cal. of Charters, i, 14; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 162–3.]

Crugilton. In 1420–7 Alexander, Bishop of Galloway, appropriated the church to the Capitular Mensa; and on 9th Aug. 1427 Pope Martin V gave mandate to the Provost of Lincluden to confirm the appropriation if he deemed it fit.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, vii, 526.]

The Augustinian priory of St Mary's Isle was a dependent cell of Holyrood Abbey.

In 1324 King Robert I confirmed to Whithorn Priory the following churches—Church of St Kenere of Carnesmoll (Kirkinner) and the Church of St Mathew of Wigton, the gift of Edward Bruce, "our brother," lord of Galloway; Church of St Brigid in Lair in Man, the gift of Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray; Church of St Columkill in Kintyre, the gift of Patrick McSciling and Finlach, his wife; and the Church of St Michael of Gemelston (Gelston), the gift of John de Gemelston, son and heir of late John de G., Kt. In a letter of Edward I of England, 21st Sept. 1301, William de Dorem narrated that his spy told him that these Scots (who had retreated from Nithsdale towards Galloway) heard that my lord, your son, was on pilgrimage of St Ninian (Rineyan), and they removed the imagine (of the same?) to New Abbey, and on the morning they hoped to find it, and it had gone back to St Ninian. The reference is to the image of the Saint at Whithorn.—[Reg. Great Seal, i, App. I, 20; Cal. of Docs. Rel. to Scot., ii, 311; Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, vii, 368.]

CARSPHAIRN

On 25th Jan. 1633 there was laid before the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks a supplication from heritors and inhabitants of lands in the parishes of Kells and Dalry situated 12–16 miles from each of the two parish churches, to the effect that they were defrauded of the comfort of the Word and the benefit of the Sacraments, while poor people were oftentimes buried in the fields, having none to carry them the long distance to the churchyard, and craving that said lands be erected into a separate parish. The Commission ordered the supplication "to be insert in their books qill (till) the erection should be passed." Thereafter at a village called Tantallochholme which on 31st July 1635 was erected by Charles I into a Burgh of Barony under the name of the Burgh of Kirkton a church called the Church of Carsphairn (Scarefernhome) was built by voluntary subscription by the heritors and inhabitants and opened for worship in or just before 1636, and a minister was settled whose stipend was also provided by the same means. On 15th Dec. 1638 a supplication from the church, which then had 500 communicants, was presented to the General Assembly, craving help from Presbyteries towards the provision of "competent means" for a minister, and this was renewed on 27th Aug. 1639, when the Assembly commended the appeal to “the bounds there designed for that contribution.” The position was regularised when, after approval of the erection of the parish by the General Assembly on 4th Feb. 1645 and by the Committee of Parliament on 7th Feb. 1645, the erection was ratified by Parliament on 8th March of the same year. The church was rebuilt in 1815 and thoroughly repaired in 1837.—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 596b, vi, (1), 398, vii, 159; Reg. Great Seal, ix, 374; Peterkin’s Recs. of Kirk of Scot., 184, 262.]

The laird of Corsock, John Neilson by name, was one of the martyrs of the “killing time.” The site of his castle is still visible, and here the first conventicle was held. The circumstances were these. In the year 1662 a throng of men and women fugitives from the neighbouring parish of Kirkpatrick Durham came with their minister, Gabriel Temple. The hospitality and protection of Neilson having been given, services were held in the hall of the manor. Large numbers flocked to them and, the accommodation being limited, the congregations assembled at length on the green, and in this way the first of the “Field Meetings” or “Conventicles” was held. Later Neilson was taken prisoner at Rullion Green and eventually put to death after being tortured on “the boot.”

KIRKCUDBRIGHT, GALTWAY, DUNROD

The Church of Kirkcudbright, designated in the 12th and 13th centuries the Church of Desnesmor and Denesmor, and in the 14th century the Church of Kirkcudbright of Denesmor, was granted to Holyrood Abbey by Uchtred, son of Fergus, lord of Galloway, cir. 1161–74. On a request by the General Assembly 29th June 1564, Queen Mary granted the Church of the Grey Friars for use as the parish church instead of St Cuthbert's. The latter church stood in the churchyard about quarter-mile east of the town. On 24th

Dec. 1580 Sir Nicol McClellane, Sir Herbert Anderson, Mr. Edward Forrester and Ninian Anderson, prebendaries and Stal-laris of St Andrew's Church, Kirkcud-bright, with consent of the patron of the church, Thomas McClellane of Bombie, disposed the lands, etc., pertaining to the church to Robert Forrester, burgess of Kirkcudbright. The Church of Galtway belonged to Holyrood Abbey before 29th July 1163, and appears to have been granted by Fergus, lord of Galloway, who died in 1161. It was situated about two miles from the town.

The Church of Dunrod, dedicated to St Mary and St Brioc, was granted to Holyrood Abbey by Fergus, lord of Galloway, with confirmation by Christianus, Bishop of Galloway, 1154–86. It stood in the churchyard in the south-east part of the parish, about six miles from Kirkcudbright. On 5th May 1555, at the instance of Mr John Stevenson, precentor of Glasgow, vicar of Dunrod, and first provost of Biggar Collegiate Church, the perpetual vicarage of the church, with fruits and rents, was added, with consent of the patrons, the Canons Regular of Holyrood, and of the Ordinary of the Diocese of Galloway, to the said Collegiate Church of Biggar, on condition that there be provided for a vicar-pensioner of the Cure of Dunrod 20 merks Scots, with house and garden and an acre of arable land. The Charter of Collation of the Bishop of Galloway bears that the vicarage was granted in consideration “of the singular zeal and pious affection towards God and the Catholic Church, which were shown in these unhappy days of Lutheranism by a sometime mighty and noble Lord, Malcolm Fleming, in found the Church of Biggar at his own expense.” The collation was on the supplication, 5th March 1555, of James, Lord Fleming, who had right to the patronage and right of the vicarage of Dunrod, and was ratified by Queen Mary on 14th May 1556.—[Charters of Holyrood, 19, 20, 22–4, 38, 40, 61, 95–6, 294–8; *Reports Hist. RERRICK

One cannot now definitely locate the site of the parish Church in years before the Reformation. There seems to have been at that time not only a parish church, but some chapels in the parish. There was a church, perhaps the parish church, at Kirkcarswell (which is a corrupt form of Kilkos-wald); there was also in close proximity to a holy well, known as St Glassin's Well, a chapel at Kirkland, and the names Chapel-ton and Chapelhill appear to point to some chapel as being located in their neighbourhood. The Abbey Church of Dundrennan was the church of the monks and of the parishioners generally. Soon after the founding of the monastery in the 12th century, the parish church was "appropriated to" the abbey; that is to say, its endowments were transferred to the abbey as part of its revenues and henceforth the duty of ministering at its altar would develop upon the monks, who would perform other parochial duty. When the Reformation took place in 1560, the parish church once again came into its own, but no certainty exists as to its site at that time, and not until the early part of the 18th century have we definite knowledge that the old chapel at Kirkland was now constituted the parish church. It continued as such till 1865, and on a part of its wall still left standing in the centre of the kirkyard there was on its demolition affixed an inscribed stone with this inscription: "This Church, originally a chapel, was enlarged in 1743 and taken down in 1865." On the demolition of this old church at Kirkland, a new church was erected in the village of Dun-dreannan and was opened for public worship in 1866.

In 1161-74 the church was granted to Holyrood Abbey by Uchtred, son of Fergus, lord of Galloway. The Cell of St Salvator, near the monastery, and its garden called the Chapel Yard, pertained to the vicarage. The Church of Balnacross was originally a chapel dependent upon Kirkcormack and belonging to Iona. TWINHOLM and KIRKCHRIST

The parishes were united after 31st July 1643. The Church of Twynholm was granted to Holyrood Abbey by Uchtred, son of Fergus, lord of Galloway, whose time was cir. 1161-74. It was rebuilt in 1730 on a new site about quarter-mile from the earlier building. Portions of the walls of the Church of Kirkchrist stand in the churchyard on the west bank of the Dee opposite Kirkcudbright. At Kirkeoch in the Parish of Kirkchrist there was a nunnery, the existence of which is recalled by place names of the neighbourhood, High Nunton, Nun Mill, Low Nunton. Manifestly this is the nunnery cited in a Papal Bull of 22nd May 1423 giving assent to a petition by John of Inverkeithing, Canon of Holyrood, who craved that the Cistercian Priory of St Evoca the virgin, situated in the Diocese of Whithorn, value not exceeding 10 libs., be given to him in commendam for five years. The priory had been governed by "holy nuns and matrons," but on account of the meagre amount of the fruits had long since been deserted by them, and was now empty and derelict, and he was desirous that goods set apart to God and religion should not be devoted to lay and secular uses. About forty years later, the nunnery, designated "the Church or Chapel of Kirkeoch" where "a nun or otherwise religious woman used to dwell of old," was the subject of a petition of Robert de Colston, Rector of Kirkchrist, which narrated that his predecessor held as united to the said Parish Church of Kirkchrist, the church or chapel called Kyrknok or Kyrkenok (Kirkeoch) situated in the bounds of the parish, took its tithes, etc., and exercised the cure of souls of the parishioners who dwelled thereby, and that he had continued the said possession for about eight years, that there was no further proof of the said union, and therefore his use of the tithes and his possession might be interfered with, that no nun or religious woman had for thirty years lived a regular life in the said church or chapel, and that its buildings had fallen, and it had been so long void that there was no certain knowledge of its voidance. Pope Pius II on 10th Jan. 1463-4 gave mandate to the Bishop of Brechin, etc., to make enquiries, and if they found the facts as stated, to confirm the said union.—[Vatican Transcripts, 1421-59, 90, *MS. AYR

It is uncertain as to when a Christian church was first planted at Ayr, but that a Christian church existed at Ayr at the beginning of the 13th century can be authenticated, and indeed it may even date from the latter part of the 12th century. The earliest reference to this church is 1233 in the Chartulary of the Abbey of Paisley. It was a prebend of Glasgow, and of the Chapel Royal at Stirling. The Ayr church in pre-reformation days was never collegiate; it was only a parish church of the larger type with its twelve altars at least and its numerous clergy staff.

In 1652 Cromwell had his citadel built at Ayr with stones which, it is said, were taken from the old castle at Ardrossan. The church, which was included in the fortifications, was utilised as a military store, the chancel being kept as a place of worship for the soldiers. In 1660 the citadel was abandoned and gradually demolished, but the church remained intact. At the Indulgence it was purchased by John Moor of Park, and the Rev. Wm. Eccles, who had been "outed" for refusing to sign the Test Act, was brought back and ministered within its walls from 1687 and 1689, while the curates occupied the present old parish church. In 1690 it was once more derelict until 1706, when the structure was bought by four burgesses of Ayr. One of these gave his fourth share of the stones to build a steeple to the Tolbooth, and the remainder of the stones were in time used to build dykes in and about the town. The tower, which was left, has been restored by the Marquis of Bute and is open to visitors. It contains four apartments.

The alternative name of the parish, Dalmakeran, Dalmakerane, or Dalmul-kerane, is Dail Mhaoil-Chiaran, "Holme of St Ciaran's servant." The church was granted to Paisley Abbey by Duncan, son of Gilbert, Earl of Carrick, and himself Earl of Carrick, on condition that the abbey erected in Carrick a monastery of the Cluniac Order, and gave the church to the said monastery. The grant was confirmed by Florence, Bishop-Elect of Glasgow, in 1202, and by Alexander II 5th Aug.
 1236. In terms of that condition the church was given to Crossraguel Abbey on its foundation soon after 18th July 1244. In 1696 the church was removed to a central position, and was rebuilt in 1766.—[Reg. of Paisley, 427–8; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 417; see Kirkoswald.]

DUNDONALD

In or about 1221 the church, along with the Chapels of Crosbie and Riccarton, was granted to the Convent of St Mary of Dalmullin by Walter (II), son of Alan, Seneschal of Scotland. In 1238, when the said convent became a cell of Paisley Abbey, the church with its chapels also became part of the abbey possessions—confirmed by William, Bishop of Glasgow, in 1239. The Chapel of St Ninian, situated near the Royal Castle of Dundonald, where Robert II died in 1390, was termed the Chapel Royal of Dundonald. On 9th July 1511 Sir John Leith was indicted for breaking into the chapel and the chest of ornaments, and carrying off “the book, chalice, and ornaments of said chapel.”—[Reg. of Paisley, 18, 22, 225–6; Diocesan Reg. of Glasgow, i, 493, 495, 511; ii, 23–4, 369, 383–4, 415, 500; *Excheq. MAUCHLINE

(Note by Rev. D. E. Easson)

There was no monastery at Mauchline, and the frequently repeated statement that there was a monastery here (it goes back at least to Habakkuk Bisset) rests on nothing better than conjecture. Melrose had evidently something in the nature of a grange there; and in the sixteenth century a hospitium was erected. But the only ecclesiastical building, properly so called, was the Parish Church of St Michael, which was appropriated to Melrose.—[Reg. Mag. Sig., ii, 3514, iii, 1369.]

About 1204–14 Walter, son of Alan, and 3rd High Stewart of Scotland, and his wife Beatrice, daugh. of Gilchrist, Earl of Angus, granted to Melrose Abbey the territory of Mauchline and the Church of St Michael situated thereon. On 30th June 1315 Robert Wishart, Bishop of Glasgow, for himself and his successors, granted to the Abbey of Melrose, and specially permitted the said abbey to hold, the chapel or church in the territory of Mauchline, already built, the said church to have the insignia of a parish church, to hold all teinds great and small, and be equipped with cemetery, etc.; and this was confirmed by John Lindsay, Bishop of Glasgow in 1326. There was at Mauchline a hospital belonging to Melrose Abbey.—[Book of Melrose, i, 64, ii, 368–9, 371–4; Reg. Great Seal, iii, 2567.]

John Manisty Hardwick, assistant master, Rugby School); Mary Campbell, poetess (marr. 12th Sept. 1895 George Smith, M.A., headmaster, Merchiston Castle, afterwards Master of Dulwich College); his sons—Campbell Cowan, D.Litt. (Dublin), Department of Antiquities, Cairo, died 10th May 1938; Charles Samuel, professor of Greek, Stellenbosch, South Africa; his daugh., Magdalen Grace, died 18th May 1943.

JOSEPH MITCHELL, Moderator of 1890 General Assembly, dem. 1st Oct. 1930, died at Bridge of Allan 18th March 1931; his wife, Helen Honeyman Litster, died 25th June 1921; marr. (2) 31st Oct. 1924 Jean Walker, J.P., eldest daugh. of William Brown Robertson, 20 Albany Street, Dundee.

NEW MAUCHLINE

The division of the Parish of Mauchline and the erection of a “new kirk” were approved by the Presbytery on Aug. 15th 1649; and on Nov. 7th 1649 the Presbytery decided upon a site for the new kirk (as well as a kirkyard, manse and glebe) on part of the land of Gilmilnscroft. The New Kirk of Mauchline had a minister, John Blair, whose career is given in the “Fasti.” But he seems to have been the first and last minister of the “new” parish; and although the Parish of New Mauchline is mentioned in 1672 [Privy Council Register, 3 Ser., iii, 443, 445], its separate existence must have terminated in the last quarter of the 17th century, a period for which the Presbytery records are unfortunately missing. There is no trace on the lands of Gilmilnscroft of any church, nor has the factor been able to find any record of it. Most of the lands which are mentioned as included in the "New" parish are now in the Parish of Sorn.

On 29th Nov. 1371 Sir John Kennedy of Dunure, for the souls of himself, Marie, his wife, and their children, founded beside the churchyard of the parish church a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, for a clerk and three chaplains. The endowment for the support of the chapel, chaplains, and clerk was 18 mercates of land beside the chapel, 18 bolls of meal of day multure yearly from said lands, 10 merks stg. yearly from the lands of Balmaclawhane, 5 mercates of the lands of Barrycloych, 6 mercates of the lands of Treuchan. Later he granted to the chapel the lands of Glenap and others which his ancestors had given to the Abbey and Canons of Bangor, Ireland, but which the Scottish King had regarded as forfeited. On 1st March 1383-4, with the approval of Pope Clement VII, Sir John erected the chapel into a collegiate church for three chaplains, one of whom was to be provost, and a clerk. The provision for the provost was the whole lands of Barclach, Barclay, Over Balmaclawnathan, to wit, Archylone and Ardowray; he was to pay 20 sh. stg. to one of the chaplains as hereafter stated; he was also to have one mercate of the lands of Kynach. For the second chaplain there were provided 3 mercates of the lands of Maybole, with the mill situated there, 1 mercate of the lands of Knokneby, 4 mercates of the lands of Treuchan, 2½ merks annual rent of the lands of Nether Balmaclathane, and 1 mercate of the lands of Kynach. The third chaplain's provision was 4 mercates of the lands of Pennyglen, 3 mercates of the lands of Knyleteycowyn,

3 mercates of the lands of Maybole, 1½ merks annual rent from the lands of Nether Balmaclathane, and 20 sh. stg. from the provost as foresaid, and also 1 mercate of the lands of Kynach. For the maintenance of the clerk there was set apart one mercate of the lands of Kynach near the church. Two additional chaplainries were forthcoming. One was founded by Gilbert Kennedy of Dunure on 18th May 1451, for celebrations at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the church, for the souls of himself, Katherine Maxwell, his wife, and their children, the endowment being the lands of Larginlen and Broklach, in the Earldom of Carrick. The other was founded by Ergidie Blair, widow of James Kennedy of Row, on 24th April 1516, when for the souls of King James V, Gilbert, Earl of Cassilis, and his consort, Elizabeth Campbell, and for the soul of her late husband, herself, and their fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, she granted to God, and the Virgin Mary, and Sir James Douglas, Chaplain, and his successors as chaplains, 10 merks annual rent from the lands and barony of Dunure, which she had purchased from the said Gilbert, Earl of Cassilis. On 17th July 1516 she also gave 1 acre with a rood of land near the church; and to the chaplainry there likewise pertained 2 acres of land in the same area, resigned by Sir John Kennedy, chaplain of the third stall, on 17th July 1516. There were thus at least five chaplainries or prebends. Each chaplain had a manse and garden. Apparently further endowments were made, as evidenced by a Crown Charter of 1586, which contains the following possessions of the provostry—4 mercates of the lands of Barclach, 1 mercate of the lands of Harkagstoun, 2 mercates of the lands of Auchinernie, 40 sh. of the lands of Barclay, 9 sh. of the lands of Rowestoun, 8 sh. of the lands of Knokinche (or Knokinlard), 8 sh. of the lands of Holmheid, 16 sh. of the lands of Balliecullie, 8 sh. of the lands of Clunloch, 26 sh. of the lands of ———, 2 mercates of the lands of Gilberstoun, 2 mercates of the lands of Balsayrt, 1 mercate of the lands of Little Enoch, 2 mercates of the lands of Artreis—set in feu to Elspit

McGill, wife of Thomas Kennedy of Culzean, and their son and heir, Thomas, the combined reddendo being 40 lib. Scots. The same charter contains the following endowments of the second prebend—2 mercates of the lands of Ballefatownes, 1 mercate of the lands of Whitefauldis, 3 mercates of the lands of Drummorane, Knokune, and Broichhill, called the 40 sh. lands of Drummorane, with the mill called Deanis-mylin, with dry multures, etc., in the Bailery of Carrick—reddendo 22 merks 40 pence. A charter of 1598–99 contains 5 sh. of the lands of Smythstoun as pertaining to the third prebend. There was a Maisondeu in the burgh, possibly attached to the collegiate church.—[*Reg. TARBOLTON

In 1335 John de Graham, lord of Tarbolton, granted the patronage of the Church of Tarbolton, with the lands of Unthank, to his kinsman, Robert de Graham of Walston. Subsequently John de Graham conveyed the patronage to Friar John, Minister of Fail, in exchange for a white horse, which the said Friar John later took back. On 21st Feb. 1340, on the plea that he had been led astray by the wiles of Friar John, John de Graham revoked the gift of the patronage to Fail, conceding that Robert de Graham was the patron; and on 11th July 1342 Robert de Graham bestowed the patronage upon Melrose Abbey. A vacancy in the rectory of the church in 1404 brought forward three claimants to the patronage, Melrose Abbey, the Ministry of Fail, and John Seneschal, lord of Tarbolton; and ultimately the claimants by Notarial Instrument of 14th Dec. 1414 agreed to keep their dispute in abeyance by constituting King James I their procurator in making a presentation to the vacant living. What steps were subsequently taken to arrive at a settlement is not clear; but it is on record on 22nd July 1422 that the patronage of the church was "of Laymen," showing that Melrose and Fail had been eliminated. In 1426-37 the church was erected into a Prebend of Glasgow by John Cameron, Bishop of Glasgow, with the consent of Sir John Stewart, Kt., lord of Darnley and Tarbolton, who was obviously the patron of the church. Prior to that, on 22nd Feb. 1422, the said Sir John Stewart presented a supplication to the Pope, stating that he proposed to found and partly endow a college for six priests with church and offices in his domain of Darnley and craving the Pope to incorporate, annex, and perpetually unite the Parish Church of Tarbolton to the said college. The project was not carried out. The Red Friars' Monastery at Failford, on the right bank of the Fail, already noted, was founded by Andrew Bruce in 1252. The monastery held the churches of Barnewell, Symington, Galston, Torthorwald, and Inverchaolain. In answer to a petition by James II and his queen, Mary of Gueldres, Pope Calixtus III decreed on 3rd Nov. 1459, that the monastery be suppressed, and the house and church and their revenues be assigned as a hospital for poor infirm from the same erection. The superior or minister of the house was Provincial of the Order of the Red Friars in Scotland, and sat in Parliament among the abbots.—[Book of Melrose, ii, 414-15, 417, 420, 421, 422-4, 425, 510-12; *Reg. BARNWELL

The church was dedicated to the Holy Rood. In or about Oct. 1459 James II and his queen, Mary of Gueldres, presented a petition to the Pope, Pius II, stating that the ministers and friars of the Trinitarian House of Fail (in this parish) were neglecting their duty and living in uncleanness, etc., to great public scandal, and that on account of their exemption from episcopal control and dangers from sea and land, and the negligence of their superiors, their enormities and shameful life were not corrected, and further that they had become so involved in evil that they could not be brought back to decency and the observance of their rule. The petition craved the suppression of the house and its annexation to "a certain great Hospital, with Church, houses," etc., which the Queen had erected and endowed. On 3rd Nov. 1459 the Pope gave mandate to the Bishops of Glasgow and Whithorn and the Archdeacon of Glasgow to make enquiries, and if they found the statements were true, to remove the said ministers and friars to other houses of the same Order in the country, suppress said Order in said house, and unite and appropriate the said house and annexes to said church and hospital in perpetuity. The appropriation was not carried out. Manifestly the reference is to the Trinity Collegiate Church and Hospital, Edinburgh.—[*Cal. BEITH

The Church of Beith was situated near Lochwinnoch, and from it "most of Beith" was distant three to four miles. Because of that and "by reason of storms of weather and of deep and evell wayes adjacent thairto," Parliament passed an Act on 28th June 1633 for a new church and manse to be built in the middle of the parish, the old buildings to be applied to the use of the builders and for the provision of a new manse and glebe. On the site of the new church a chapel seems to have stood prior to 1560. There was in the parish a chapel with burying-ground, dedicated to St Bride. Near at hand was a well of the same name. There was also a chapel called Chapel of Trearne (Treehorn), in existence in the first quarter of the 13th century, to which belonged 2 acres of land on the south side of the chapel.—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 52, 161; Reg. Great Seal, v, 341; vi, 207.]

There were originally two churches in the parish, one on the east of the village, and the other on the west. The latter, situated "near to ground called the Old Glebe," appears to have been the parish church which was dedicated to St Margaret of Antioch. St Margaret's Fair was held in the parish on 31st July, St Margaret's Day, Old Style, when it was customary to kindle a bonfire, called a "tannel." Early in the 17th century, apparently 1600–8, a single church was built to take the place of the two old churches. In 1771 a new church was built. It was repaired in 1821 and rebuilt 1871–3. Up to about the middle of the 18th century remains of the church to the east of the village still existed.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, ix, 144–5.]

The church was rebuilt about 1766, and again in 1835, being opened in December of that year. The Chapel of the Virgin Mary was situated at Chapelton, about $\frac{1}{2}$ mile distant from the village. The writer of the Old Statistical Account suggests that the chapel was really the pre-Reformation church of the parish, and that later its place was taken by a church on the present site.

 Univ., whose mother was Elizabeth Mure, daugh. of William Mure of Glanderston, by his wife, Jean, daugh. of Hans Hamilton.
 In the south-east corner of the churchyard there is a marble monument in memory of Hans H. and his wife. Erected by their son John, Viscount Clanderboyes, in the peerage of Ireland, it consists of a vaulted chamber under which they are buried, and is called the "Picture-House." His son, Patrick, min. of Innerwick.—[Reg. Pres.

IRVINE

There were in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary in the north aisle, an altar dedicated to St Catherine in the south aisle, an altar dedicated to St Nicholas, an altar dedicated to St Peter in the north aisle, between the Altar of the Virgin Mary on the north and the Altar of St Ninian on the south, and an altar dedicated to St Michael, described 16th Nov. 1446 as situated "in the new aisle of St Mary the Virgin." The Altar of St Ninian and St Katherine was founded by Mr William Cunningham of Dundonald on 1st March 1418-19. The Altar of St Salvator and St Thomas the Martyr was situated in the aisle described on 17th Nov. 1506 as "built by Rankine Brown (then alive), burgess of Irvine, in the nave of the Church on the north side." The Altar of St Conval, St Stephen the Martyr, and St Sebastian the Martyr was situated in the south aisle. At the Altar of St John the Baptist, St Christopher the Martyr, and St Ninian the Pontiff, situated in the nave of the church, a perpetual chaplain was founded on 4th Oct. 1540 by Alexander Scott, Provost of Corstorphine Collegiate Church.—[Monuments of the Burgh of Irvine, i, Pref. xxxiv-v, 125, 136, 145, 149, 158, 161, 166, 198, 199, 202.]

KILBARCHAN

The Chapel of St Catherine in the churchyard was founded in 1401 by Thomas Crawford of Auchenames. At the same time he founded in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. For the support of a chaplain to serve both in the chapel and at the altar he gave Lynnernoch and other lands. At Ranfurly of Prieston farm, a little to the east of the castle, there was a Chapel of St Mary, founded by a member of the Knox family. St Bride's Chapel was situated at the village of Kenmuir in the south-west corner of the parish. On 12th Dec. 1564 David Coull, chaplain of the Chapel of St Katherine, conveyed the glebe and chapel lands of the chapel to John Chalmers, brother of James C. of Gadgirth.—[Reg. Abbrev. Feu Charters of Church Lands, i, 10, 14; Origines Parochialis Scotiae, i, 84.]

LOCHWINNOCH

On 21st April 1504, John, 1st Lord Sempill, founded in his park near Castle Sempill, for his own soul, for the soul of Margaret Colville, his wife, and for the souls of his progenitors and successors, and all the faithful departed, the Collegiate Church of Lochwinnoch, to the Most High God and the Glorious Virgin, the Mother of Jesus Christ, for a provost, six chaplains, two singing boys, and a sacrist, the chaplains to include a clerk in Holy Orders, a precentor, and a schoolmaster. The provost was to wear on feast days a lawn surplice, a scarlet hood, and an almuce on the arm. The chaplains, the singing boys and the sacrist were each to wear a linen surplice at the daily service; and in addition the chaplains were to wear red hoods lined with black lamb's wool. The duties of the sacrist were to take charge of the porch, the copes, and the altar ornaments; array the altar itself; regulate the clock; ring the bell for the church services, with double ringing on feast days; sweep the church, and decorate it with leaves and flowers. General endowment of the church was the fruits and revenues of the Church of Glassford; and particular endowments were as follows: Provost, the teind sheaves of Glassford, extending to 45 lib. Scots, with the whole glebe except a piece of ground and the manse attached to the vicarage; First Chaplain, the teind sheaves of Nether Schelis, Schavtounhill, Ridrane, and the hill of Drumtall, and Gruderland, in the parish of Glassford, extending to 10 and 8 merks Scots; Second Chaplain, the teind sheaves of the village of Chapelton and Nether Schavtoun, West Ridrane of Drumbow, and de flat, extending to 10 and 8 merks Scots; Third Chaplain, the fruits and emoluments of the parish clerkship of Lochwinnoch, extending to 10 and 8 merks Scots, the chaplain to provide for the support of the clerk; Fourth Chaplain, all the lands of Upper Pennale occupied by Archibald Reid, and the place, dwelling, garden, and orchard, and 40 sh. of pension from East Bryntschellis and West Bryntschellis in the parish of Kilbarchan, extending to 10 and 8 merks Scots; Fifth Chaplain, all and whole the lands of Nether Pennale, with the mill, extending to 20 and 4 merks, and the emoluments of the parish clerkship of Kilbarchan; he was to act as organist and in the singing school teach the boys in the Gregorian Chant plain or pointed; he was also to make provision for the support of the boys and of the parish clerk of Kilbarchan; Sixth Chaplain, all the fields of Auchinlodmond, with the mill and mill lands, extending to 22 merks Scots; he must be learned in grammar and skilled in the Gregorian Chant plain or pointed, and instruct the boys in the first and second parts of grammar; Sacrist, the fruits, revenues, and emoluments of the parish clerkship of Glassford, extending to 6 merks Scots; he had to make provision for the support of the parish clerk of Glassford. There were granted also to the provost and chaplains 10 roods in Lochwinnoch Park for building manses and for gardens near the church; and for entertainment and fellowship, for bread, wine, and wax, 5 merk lands of Easter Welland in the parish of Kilbarchan, and the lands formerly annexed by the founder's progenitors to St Brigit's Chapel in Kenmuir Village in the Parish of Kilbarchan, the lands which pertained to the founder's chapel in Kilbarchan, and the lands annexed to the Chapel of St Conal in Paisley Parish, situated in the village of Ferans.—[Reg. Epis. of Glasgow, ii, 505–16.]

JAMES BOATH DALGETY, his widow, Jane Balfour, died 21st Feb. 1924.

JOHN WALLACE, his widow, Mabel Blanche Powell, died at Reading 23rd Feb. 1945.

ALEXANDER RUTHERFORD HOWELL, Senior President of 1918 - Edinburgh University Dialectic Society 1894–5. Licenser. 1895, he was first a reader and then an assistant in St Giles Cathedral; during the war (1914–18) he served for a time in France as General Superintendent of the Scottish Churches Huts. It was during his ministry in the abbey that the restoration of that church was completed, involving the entire rebuilding of the choir and many other alterations. Into this work Mr Howell threw himself with characteristic energy, and the exquisitely restored building owes much to his artistic genius and comprehensive knowledge of church architecture. The stately and appropriate form of service observed in the abbey is also largely his work. He resigned his charge in Paisley 13th April 1937 owing to ill health and retired to St Andrews; died at Edinburgh 2nd Dec. 1943. In the wider work of the Church of Scotland Mr Howell took a considerable share. For a year he acted as Organising Secretary for the Foreign Mission Committee. At the invitation of the Colonial Committee he ministered for a period in 1907 at Homburg, and in 1927–8 at Cairo. He was on the Council of the Church Service Society and in 1935–6 was President of the Scottish Ecclesiological Society. Publications—Paisley Abbey: its History, Architecture and Art. To the devotional literature of the Church he contributed a book of Church Prayers for War-Time, which has had a large circulation. On artistic questions his judgment was fine and his advice greatly valued. On the Executive Committee of the Scoto-Russian Fellowship of St Andrew, a member of the Executive Committee for the Restoration of the Church of the Holy Rude, Stirling, and was convener for some years of the Ceremonials Committee of the Presbytery of Paisley. An enthusiastic student of antiquity, he was a trustee of the Dalrymple Archaeological Fund. His sons—Edward Alexander, in the R.A.F., O.B.E. and D.F.C.; David Logan, Navigator in a Bomber Squadron. The daughs.—Anne served in the A.T.S. and Isabella in the W.A.A.F. (marr. 3rd Sept. 1945 Flight Lieut. Leslie Shepherd, Sevenoaks).

PRESBYTERY OF GREENOCK

CUMBRAE

In 1325-35 the church, then a chapel annexed to the Church of Largs, was confirmed to Paisley Abbey by John, Bishop of Glasgow. The Church of Cumbrae is mentioned apart in 1561. On 20th Nov. 1510 Mr. Patrick Shaw, vicar of Monkton, was "farmer of the fruits of the Churches of Largs and St Kenote"; and that, in view of the conjunction of Largs and Cumbrae Churches, may indicate that the Church of Cumbrae was dedicated to St Kenneth. The church was rebuilt at the Kirktown in 1612 and again in 1802.—[Reg. of Paisley Abbey, 238-9, 240-2; Original Parishes of Scot., i, 90; see Largs.]

INVERKIP

There was in the parish a chapel dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Manifestly this is identical with the chapel designated the "Holy Trinity of Cristelwell" or "Castelwell." Other designations were Cristiswell and Chrystswell. It was under the patronage of the Crown, and therefore was in all likelihood the chapel to which the following reference is made in a record of Charters of Robert III, 1390–1406, “Charter for ane foundation of a Chapel att Chrystswell.” If the first part of the name refers to Christ, the Holy Trinity may have been a later dedication. The endowment of the chapel included the £5 lands of Auchymillin and mill in the bailery of Cowell and the Forty-Penny lands of the “prebend of chaplainry of Crystiswell called the Chapelands of the said Chapel of Crystiswell.”—[Transcripts from the Vatican, i, 341, *MS. BOTHWELL

On the petition of Archibald, Earl of Douglas, Papal Mandate was given on 21st Feb. 1397–8 to Matthew, Bishop of Glasgow, to erect the church into a collegiate church for a provost and six chaplains or prebendaries. For the collegiate church the Earl assigned two parish churches of which he was patron, and a chapel having Masses for his progenitors in the territory of Orbenistoun—the Chapel of St Catharine, Orbiston. To this chapel Walter Olifard, Justiciar of Lothian, granted in 1242 an endowment of 10 lib. annual rent from the lands of Oberniston, which failing from the Mill of Bothwell. On 18th May 1410 there was given Papal Validation of the erection of the collegiate church in spite of an incorrect statement in the Papal Commission thereanent. The prebends of the church, increased to eight, were—Kittymuir, Stonehouse, Hessildene, Netherfield of Strat-haven, Overtoun of le Newtoun, Cruik-burnie, the Church of Hawick, and the Church of Bertram-Shotts. The Churches of Stonehouse and Strathaven were included. The Church of Hawick was erected into a prebend on 4th Oct. 1447 by the Dean and Chapter of Glasgow, with the consent of Gavin, Provost of Glasgow Collegiate Church, and William, Earl of Douglas, lord of Hawick. On 15th Nov. 1457 and on 21st May 1471 the provost of the church is described as "Provost of St Mary's, Bothwell," and on 30th April 1476 the church is designated the "Parish Church of St Mary of Bothwell." It would appear, therefore, that in all likelihood, when the church was made collegiate, the name of the Virgin was added to that of St Bridgit. In 1719 the porch of the choir which constituted the church was taken down "to admit of a modern addition to accommodate the congregation." About 1779 the church was repaired; and in 1795 it is described as "an old structure in the Gothic style, of excellent workmanship . . . near the outer base of the spire the name of the Master-Mason is writ in Saxon Characters, Magister Thomas Tron." In 1833 there was added a new church or nave "in Gothic style corresponding to the old fabric," with a tower 120 ft. high between the old work and the new. But the old and the new were separate and at different levels, the new being used as the place of worship. But a scheme of renovation carried out in 1933 at a cost of £10,000 united the buildings into an harmonious whole, comprising nave, choir, and transepts. The interior of the church of 1833 was completely cleared out, including the plaster on the walls and gallery and ceiling; and the floor was lowered to a common level with that of the ancient choir. For the support of the tower there was introduced a massive steel structure encased in freestone, and beneath the tower a large central arch was constructed to lead into the crossing. The vestibule formerly separating the nave and choir was opened up by four arches to form transepts, and the wall that filled the choir-arch was taken down to open up the interior from end to end. The roof of the nave was lined with timber; and an old vestry at the west end was transformed into a vestibule with pillared arcade. New flooring, seating accommodation, and furnishings completed the scheme. Niches in the walls of the nave were made to contain architectural fragments of a 12th century Norman church discovered during the course of the reconstruction. In 1939 the north transept was converted into a suitably appointed baptistry. On 15th Aug. 1529 the Chapel of St Lessert—Lasrach or Lassert—was in the King's hands on account of the death of James, Earl of Arran. On 22nd Sept. 1300–1 Edward I made an offering of 7 sh. "in his Chapel of Bothwell" in honour of St Mauricius.—[Transcripts from the Vatican, ii, 30, 199, MS. Reg. Ho.; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 2453; *Reg. CAMBUSNETHAN

Cambusnethan is "Neighton's bight" or "bend." At this bend stood the old Church of Cambusnethan; and the name doubtless commemorates a Welsh saint of that name; may be identical with Nathalan, Nechtan, whose day was 8th Jan. and who died in 679 and was buried, it is said, at Tullich, Upper Deeside.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 329–30.]

HAMILTON

To Pope Nicholas V a petition was presented by James, 1st Lord Hamilton, to the effect that he, considering that the Church of Hamilton, otherwise called of old "Cadzow," whose Rector is Dean of Glasgow, was wont to be governed by only one vicar, and had, as it now has, a wide parish, with many inhabitants of both sexes, beside a multitude of souls, men making daily journey by land or water, and coming to the church for masses and to hear other divine offices, and that the cure of souls could not be conveniently exercised nor the church duly served by the vicar alone, granted and gave to the said church 20 lib. worth of lands and annual rents within his lordship for divine service and the cure of souls, and support of the said parish church, that he desired the erection of the church into a collegiate church for a provost and 6 chaplainries for as many chaplains, in addition to the rector, who was non-resident, and that he had also given 4 chaplainries founded by his ancestors and of his patronage, the Chapel of Machan, the Chapel of Hamilton within his lordship, the Chapel of St Thomas near Glasgow, and the Chapel of Lanark, to be erected and incorporated for the chaplains, the present vicar to be installed as provost, and for the erection he proposed to enlarge and adorn the said church. The Pope gave mandate to William Turnbull, Bishop of Glasgow, on 4th Jan. 1450–1 to make due enquiries and carry out the erection. On 9th Aug. and 18th Sept. 1451 the Bishop, "being occupied daily about the King in arduous and necessary business of the realm," gave commission to Thomas Spens, Bishop of Galloway, and Archibald, Abbot of Holyrood, to carry out Lord Hamilton's wishes; and on 15th March 1452–3 the Abbot of Paisley was given Papal Mandate to confirm the erection carried out by the said bishop and abbot. But a dispute arose as to the patronage of the provostry, George de Graham, vicar of the church, being presented by Lord Hamilton, and Martin Waus by Thomas Waus, Dean of Glasgow. Appeal was made to Rome, and by Bull of 10th April 1462 Pope Pius II gave decision for Lord Hamilton, confirmed the collegiate erection, and directed the Archdeacon of Glasgow and the Provost of St John the Baptist's Church, Corstorphine, to induct and install George de Graham as provost of "the new College." The fruits of the perpetual vicarage of the church were appropriated to the provostry. On 5th Jan. 1450–1 Relaxation of Penance was given by the Pope to all visiting and giving alms on the Assumption and Annunciation of the Virgin for the building, enlargement and conservation of the "Collegiate Church of St Mary, erected by Lord Hamilton"; and it is on record that Lord Hamilton "built new the parish kirk of Hamilton, the queere, and two cross isles, and steeple, all of polished stone." The church, as noted, was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. By deed of gift in 1552 the Abbot and Convent of Paisley united the Church of Carmunnock to the collegiate church, and made supplication to the Archbishop of Glasgow to confirm the union. But it appears that the confirmation did not take place. On 12th Oct. 1538 Sir David Hamilton is recorded as Rector of Kilbride and Prebendary of Hamilton, which may indicate that the Rectory of Kilbride was a prebend of Hamilton Collegiate Church.—[*Cal. EAST KILBRIDE and TORRANCE

The right to have a chapel in the Castle of Kilbride was granted to Roger de Valons by Joceline, Bishop of Glasgow, 1175-99—ratified by Parliament 1182-9. By charter of 11th June 1618 James VI mortified to Glasgow University the Church of Kilbride, and also, on the resignation of the Archbishop of Glasgow, the Church of Torrens, “a small parish and least of all able to sustain a ministrie” and “inseparably united to Kilbride.” The Charter further narrated that Torrens had “always been a pendicle of Kilbride, and that the entire parishioners through diverse years have frequented Kilbride.”—[Reg. of Glasgow, SHOTTS

Before 1476 James Hamilton, lord of Bertram-Shotts and Hamilton, founded and built at Bertram-Shotts a chapel dedicated to St Catharine, which the Bishop erected into a parish church. At the church he also built a hospital to receive the poor of Christ. The reason that he assigned for the church was that "the desert-place of Bertram-Shotts is distant about 8 miles from the Parish Church of St Mary of Bothwell, and is remote and like a desert though inhabited; and it is an infertile and cold mountain region, on account of which cold and the distance of the place many of the inhabitants there die without receiving the sacraments, and incur many other dangers," to avoid which he had founded the chapel. He further stated that as the rector of the church for the time being, and the poor of the hospital were alike without means of sustenance, he proposed to endow the church and hospital, and to provide to the said parish certain new possessions reclaimed by him at great cost from the sea by permission of the King. In a petition to Pope Sixtus IV he narrated the foregoing, and asked the Pope to confirm the foundation and to declare the possessions reclaimed or to be reclaimed from the sea, which are new and have never paid teinds or first fruits to any church, to belong to the said church and the hospital, although the lands are situated in the bounds of the Parish of Kinneil (on the Forth), and to provide the teinds and first fruits to the church and the rector for the time. On 30th April 1476 a Bull in terms of the prayer of the petition was issued by Pope Sixtus. Before 13th Oct. 1488 the patronage of the church belonged to the Collegiate Church of Bothwell. It would appear that St Catherine gave place to the Virgin Mary, for in 1552 there is reference to the "Church of the Blessed Virgin Mary in Bertram-Shottis."—[*Reports Hist. MSS. DOUGLAS

By Papal Bull of 27th March 1423 assent was given to a petition by Archibald, Earl of Douglas, for the erection of the church into a collegiate church, and the annexation of the Churches of Crawford and Carmichael to the same. The fruits of the church were to be devoted to the provision of a perpetual vicar and also of canons and prebendaries. On 7th Aug. 1448, in response to a petition by William, Earl of Douglas, Pope Nicholas V granted mandate to William Turnbull, Bishop of Glasgow, to erect the church into a collegiate church for a provost and 13 prebendaries. The Earl had assigned for the purpose various rents and goods, and the fruits of the Churches of Foresta (Carluke), Culter, and Glenquhon (Glenholm), said churches to be united and appropriated to the caputular mensa. The Bishop was authorised to create and institute the provost from the fruits of Douglas Church, and from the said other fruits to create the 13 prebendaries. The Churches of Carluke, Culter and Glenholm were to be served each by its corresponding prebendary. On 1st Feb. 1450–1 relaxation of penance was granted to all who "visit and give alms for the completion, conservation, and maintenance of the Parish Church of Douglas erected by Papal authority into the College Church of St Bride, which William, Earl of Douglas, has by wonderful and expensive work caused to be built anew"; somewhat earlier, on 15th Jan. 1450–1, there occurs, unnamed, "the Provost of the College Church of St Bride of Douglas"; and on 31st Jan. 1488–9 George Douglas, son and heir apparent of Archibald, Earl of Angus, received a charter which included the "patronage of the Provostship of Douglas." The erection, however, was not completed. On 7th March 1483–4 Archibald, Earl of Angus, granted to a chaplain at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the church, 2 oxgates of land in le Scrogtoun, and this was repeated on 16th June 1506; and on 11th March 1535–6 Sir John Purvis, chaplain, was presented to the Altar of St Thomas in succession to the late Sir John Inglis. Barbour (the Bruce) narrates that the bones of "The Good Sir James Douglas" were brought back from Spain, whence he had gone for the purpose that is set forth in a Bull of Pope John XXII, 6th Aug. 1331, granting absolution on the petition of Thomas, Earl of Moray, "to those who at the King's bidding took out his heart to be carried into Battle against the Saracens," and "richt honorabilly / Intill the kirk of Douglas war / Erdit with dule and mekil car,/" and that by his son, Archibald, there was erected there an alabaster tomb, which is considered to be identical with a tomb in a still existing portion of the old church. The present church was erected in 1781. By charter of 22nd June 1531 James V granted to Sir George Eirmare and his successors as chaplains in the Chapel of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Parrockholm the 4 merk lands of Parrockholm, with enclosures of the same, in the Lordship of Douglas. This may refer to the foundation of the chapel. At Crookbat of Douglas Hugh, Earl of Douglas, who died after 1347, founded a chapel, dedicating it to St John the Baptist, the endowment including fees from the ferry boat, with provision for keeping the boat in repair.—[*Reg. LANARK

To Dryburgh Abbey David I gave the church and, along with it, the Chapel of Pedynana (Pettinain) and the Chapel of Imbristoun. The gift was confirmed by Herbert, Bishop of Glasgow 1147–64. Walter, Bishop of Glasgow 1208–32, confirmed to Dryburgh the Chapel of Clegern (Cleghorne), granted by Bishop Herbert. In the church there were altars dedicated respectively to the Virgin Mary and the Holy Rood; and probably the “Altarage of Sorrowflat,” described as in the burgh, referred to an altar also situated in the church. To the Altar of the Virgin, James IV on 18th Oct. 1500 granted a tenement in the Burgh of Lanark which had fallen to the Crown through the bastardy of the late owner. To the building of “the Chürch of St Nicholas of Lanark” Andrew Allan, Lanark, bequeathed 5 merks in 1550, which may indicate that the Chapel of St Nicholas, as it is usually designated, underwent extensive repairs or rebuilding at that time. In the chapel there were altars dedicated respectively to the Virgin Mary, St Catherine, the Holy Blood, and St Michael. On 7th March 1491–2 James IV, for the use of the lieges and for his favour towards Sir Stephen Lockhart of Cleghorne, Kt., patron of the Altar of St Catherine, granted to the chaplain of the said altar to have and hold a passage-boat across the Clyde at Clydsholm for the transportation of the lieges and goods, with free passage, entry and exit, and right to the profits arising therefrom. The boat had been placed there by the said chaplain, to meet the needs of the lieges who converged upon that place in great numbers, and in the absence of a bridge or other means of transportation were liable to be exposed to danger and to perish in the waters. On 1st Aug. 1526 James V by letter ratified and approved the gift made by Thomas Newton, Sub-Prior of Dryburgh and the convent of the same, to Sir Thomas Mudy, chaplain, of a chaplainry founded in St Nicholas Chapel by the predecessors of the said sub-prior and convent. Apparently the revenue of the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the chapel was derived from the barony of Jerviswood. The church or chapel at Nemphlar was united by King William the Lion to Lanark Church, of which it became a dependent chapel. It was situated on temple lands called Oldmanis-Apletree or Almansaple-tree, which were part of East Nemphlar. The Hospital and Chapel of St Leonard, founded before 1319, were situated beside the east well of the burgh. After the Reformation the church or chapel seems to have had an attached area; and on 24th June 1609, under the designation of “Kirk of St Leonard's,” it was united to the Kirk of Lanark, “weir the samin hes bene continwalie servit in tymes bypast.” The friary of the Greyfriars was founded by Robert I either towards the close of 1328 or in the early part of 1329, the site granted by the King within the burgh being a manor and orchard enclosed by a wall, which by excambion he had acquired from Elene Quarantlay. In response to a petition by David II and his queen, Johanna, confirmation was granted on 29th Nov. 1346 by Pope Clement VI. In 1550 Andrew Allan, Lanark, who desired that his body be buried in the "Aisle of St Mary" in the Church of the Friary, made bequests to the Church of the Friars of Lanark 40 sh., to the Church of the distinguished Friars (fratrum egregiorum) 40 sh., to the Church of the Friars 2 merks. Probably the various sums were bequeathed to the Greyfriars for different purposes, the scribe who copied the testament considering that he did enough if he stated merely the sum and the legatee; and the term "egregiorum" would be used not in regard of another Order of Mendicants, but as appreciative of the Greyfriars.—[*Reg. BALFRON

Apparently in 1303 the patronage of the Church of Bruthbren (Balfron) was granted to Inchaffray Abbey by Sir Thomas Cromennane, and on 3rd Oct. of the same year Robert, Bishop of Glasgow, granted power to the abbey and convent, on the death of the rector of the church, to convert the church to their own use, the church to be served by a vicar, or a secular chaplain, or one of the canons of the abbey. The power was granted “in compassion for the plunderings, burnings, and innumerable afflictions which the Abbot and Convent of Inchaffray had suffered through wars, and desirous of relieving, so far as he could, their poverty and low estate.”—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, 113.]

In the church there were also the following altars: St Mary the Virgin on the south side; St Peter; St Sebastian; and the Holy Rood. In 1519–20 Andrew Danielston, natural son of Robert Danielston of Culgrane, acquired from Robert Feriar of Fareland the office of custodier of the light of the Holy Rood in the church. On 11th May 1453 the Town Council conveyed to Mabel, Countess of Lennox and Duchess of Albany, the Chapel of St Mary the Virgin, of which the Council was patron, with its lands, rents and patronage, to enable the Countess to erect the chapel into a collegiate church. To the Pope, on 3rd Jan. 1453–4, the Countess addressed a petition to the effect that “some years ago her late husband, Murdoch, Duke of Albany and Earl of Fife and Menteith, and her father (Duncan) Earl of Lennox, and their children, namely the sons and brothers of the said Countess, were, by order of the late James, King of Scots, who was evilly counselled or informed, disinherited and put to death (on the Heading Hill at Stirling Castle in 1425), leaving no successor in the right line excepting the said Countess, a solitary widow and very poor, who succeeded by paternal right to her father,” and that “for the welfare of their souls and in lasting memory of them” she desired to erect into a collegiate church for a provost and chaplains the said Chapel of the Virgin Mary, which “she is to enlarge, build and repair for the purpose.” The Pope on 4th Feb. 1453–4 remitted to the Bishop of St Andrews and the Prior of Inchmahome with power to make enquiries, and to erect the collegiate church for a provost and such perpetual chaplains “as they deemed reasonable.” At the same time, likewise on the crave of the Countess, the Hospital of Polmadie, with its annexed Church of Strathblane, and also the Church of Fintry, were assigned to the collegiate church. The Bishop and Prior were also granted faculty to “collate and assign for this turn the Provostship” to George Abernethy, Clerk of the Diocese of Glasgow, rector of the said Hospital of Polmadie, “a son of the sister (Maria ?) of the said Countess,” by her husband, Sir William Abernethy of Saltoun. George Abernethy was still provost on 6th March 1468–9. Further endowments granted by the Countess to the church were the following lands—Strathblane; Stuckroger and Ferkinch or Forkinch in Lues; Balernicbeg in Cardross; Knockdouriebarber in Rosneath; and Ladytown in Bonhill. The Church of Bonhill, which also pertained to the collegiate church, appears likewise to have been her gift. The collegiate church was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The Bedesmen Hospital was probably attached to the church. By Crown Charter of 12th March 1551–2 there was conveyed to Paisley Abbey the patronage of the collegiate church and of the chaplainries of the hospital and the begging poor, lie bedemen; and a further Crown Charter of 1st Feb. 1552–3 to the same effect described the gift as “the Patronage of the Provostry, prebends, prebendaries, and chaplainries of the Collegiate Church of the Virgin of Dunbarton, with the Hospital and the Wayfarer’s Inn (or Hospitium) and the poor, lie bedemen, of the same.” The Fair of St John the Baptist was instituted by Crown Charter of 11th March 1225–6.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, x, 623–4, xii, 670; Reg. Great Seal, i, 760, iii, 188, iv, 683, 747, 811, v, 188, vii, 190; Reg. Sec. Seal, ii, 809; Book of Assumptions of Benefices.]

LUSS

On 8th March 1315–16 Robert I granted to God and St Kessog the privilege of gyrrh round the church for three miles on every side, both land and water.—[Hist. MS. Commiss., iii, 387.]

Sir Thomas Henderson was on 12th April 1556 presented and invested at the Altar of the Blessed Virgin Mary of Luss in the south part of the church, and to the office of clerk of the parish by delivering to him a missal book, cup, and other vestments of the altar.—[Chiefs of Colquhouns, i, 117.]

JOHN LAYING (LAING), M.A., par-1555 son in Feb. 1555–6, having succeeded Mr James Colquhoun, son of Walter C., 3rd son of Sir John C. of Luss by his first wife, Elizabeth Stewart; designated prebendary of Luss in 1561, and parson and vicar in 1563, when it is narrated that he has been possessed of "the parsonage and vicarage years bygone and his furneist and sustenit ministeris for reading and edifeing of the parochinaris thair of yeirlie sen the alteratioun of the religioun conforme to ordour taken thairant lyk as he yiet dois"; parson of Kirkpatrick-Juxta 1539–53, perpetual vicar of Dreghorn 1553, Canon of Glasgow 1564, Dean of the Faculty of Glasgow Univ. 1552–5, and Judge-Commissary of the Archbishop of St Andrews 1564; died in Sept. 1571.—[Chiefs of Colquhoun, i, 89, 97, 118, 123, 124, ii, 82, 247, 262, 345; Acts and Dec., xxiv, 73, xxvii, 32, xxviii, 143, xxix, 79, xl, 153; Notes on the Black Book of Paisley, 93, 95; Edin. Tests., ii, 232.]

JAMES COLQUHOUN, M.A., min. in 1560 or soon after 1560; parson 28th April 1566; died before 1st Nov. 1572; had issue—John, James. He was nephew of Mr Archibald Colquhoun, parson of Stobo.—[Reg. of Deeds, viii, 201, x, 222; Chiefs of Colquhoun, i, 222; Edin. Tests., viii, 311.]

JAMES LAYING, reader; Clerk of the 1567 Diocese of Glasgow in 1534, and Chaplain of the Diocese 1550; conformed and became reader here in 1560; dem. apparently in 1572; later was parson.—[Chiefs of Colquhoun, ii, 336, 96; Notes on the Black Book of Paisley, 96; Compts. Sub Coll. of Thirds, Stirling, etc.]

WILLIAM CHIRNSYDE, min., and 1572 also parson in succession to Mr John Laying; on Jan. 10th 1572–3 he set in feu to Sir Humphrey Colquhoun, son of Sir John C. of Luss, the parsonage manse, place, and yard, situated at the south side of the Rotten Row of Glasgow; trans. apparently before 27th April 1576.—[Notes on the Black Book of Paisley, 96; Colquhoun Cart., i, 397–400; Chiefs of Colquhoun, ii, 435.]

JAMES LAYING, above mentioned, 1576 parson 27th April 1576.—[Chiefs of Colquhoun, ii, 435. See Kirkpatrick-Juxta.]

MALCOLM STEVENSON, Chaplain 1585 of the Diocese of Glasgow; vicar-pensioner here at the Reformation; his claim for his pension of 20 merks for 1561–2 was refused in 1563 by Mr John Laying, parson, because he "his maid na service thairintill this lang time bypast as he aucht to have done," and "he is bot ane feall and pensioner"; subsequently, in 1563, he is designated exhorter, and he appears to have continued to discharge that duty.—[*Comps. DUNCAN ERROLL, on 1st March 1599 1600 he was presented by Alexander Colquhoun of Luss to the parsonage and vicarage, vacant by the death of Mr William Chirnsyde; by act of Assembly 1605 he was deprived of the living, and on 26th Feb. 1606 the Synod ordained the presb. to put into execution against him the Act of Assembly, and that they should make provision, before his deposition from the ministry, for the maintenance of himself, his wife, and bairns, seeing he had served so long in the ministry. He was, however, supported by Alexander Colquhoun of Luss and the parishioners, and in spite of his deprivation he continued in full possession till his death, administering the Word and Sacraments and receiving the stipend. He marr. —. Buchanan.—[Chiefs of Colquhoun, i, 180, 218.]

JOHN CAMPBELL, the patron, Alexander Colquhoun of Luss, made a 1607 presentation in favour of Mr Malcolm Colquhoun, but the presb. presented Mr Campbell, jure devoluto, on the ground that Mr Erroll had been lawfully deprived, and that a successor had not been timeously presented by the patron; objections to the presbytery's procedure were set aside and Mr Campbell was settled.—[Chiefs of Colquhoun, i, 218–20.]

The church was granted to Paisley Abbey by Anlay or Amelec, brother of Maldouin, Earl of Lennox, with confirmation by said Maldouin, and by Alexander II, 12th March 1225–6. It was dedicated to St Nicholas. Traditionally, however, the dedication is said to have been to the Virgin Mary, but the probability is that that was the dedication of the Chapel of Kilcreggan —hence the popular interpretation of Ros-neath "isle" as the Virgin Promontory.
 On 1st June 1621 the parishioners unsuccessfully petitioned Parliament for the removal of the church from the "island" to the mainland at Ardinconnel, where Rhu Church was subsequently built. Besides the chapel at Kilcreggan, there were in the parish the Chapel of St Modan in the churchyard where the relics of the saint were kept, the Chapel of St Bean at Fass-lane, and a chapel at Port Kill, "harbour of the Chapel." The chancel of the church was extended in 1922 by H.R.H. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, in memory of her husband, John, 9th Duke, and of George, 8th Duke. The reredos was erected by her in 1931.—[Reg. of Paisley

STRATHFILLAN

Part of the endowment granted by Robert I to the Chapel of St Fillan, which he founded in 1314, was the 5 lib. Lands of Wichtertiry (Uchterteris) in Glendochart.
On 26th Feb. 1317–18 he granted the patronage of the Church of Killin to the Abbey and Convent of Inchaffray on condition that the abbey provided a canon to serve at the chapel; and the grant was repeated on 18th April 1318 without condition. Apparently the original design of the King was a chapel with a canon, but soon after the foundation the chapel was converted into a priory, as is shown by a charter of William Sinclair, Bishop of Dunkeld, dated 28th Oct. 1318, granting to the Prior of Inchaffray and to the canons the Church of Killin (whose patronage, as just stated, had been granted by Robert I), and all the teinds, fruits, revenues of the same, to be converted to the use of the prior and canons living at the said chapel for the worship of God, provided that according to the capabilities of the place a sufficient number of canons should be settled there by the Abbot of Inchaffray. The Prior of St Fillan's Chapel, on the occurrence of a vacancy, was to be presented by the abbot and convent, and instituted by the Bishop. It may be that to the enlargement of the place, in order to render it fitting for a priory, there has reference an entry in the Exchequer Rolls in 1329 to the following effect—Payment through Sir Robert de Bruce, natural son of King Robert, of a sum of 20 lib. for the building of the Church of St Fillan. In 1543-4 the church was repaired at a cost of 300 merks.—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, 116-20; Reg. Great Seal, i. App. 2, 658, ii, 347, 2458, iii, 2705; Excheq. Rolls, i, 214.]

GOVAN

There was in the church a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, of which the parishioners were patrons.

At Polmadie there was a hospital, in existence in the time of Alexander III, 1249–85, dedicated to St John, and, according to a statement in 1453 by Isabel, Countess of Lennox, widow of Murdoch, Duke of Albany and patron of the hospital, “founded and endowed by her predecessors.” By Bull of Pope Martin of 12th Jan. 1426–7 the hospital with its attached Church of Strathblane was erected into a prebend of Glasgow. The prebendary had to give 16 merks for the support of four boys to sing in the choir of Glasgow Cathedral, and also had to make provision for a vicar to serve the Church of Strathblane. In 1453 the foresaid Countess of Lennox declared that the hospital was so remote from Lennox that her "predecessors could not conveniently visit and reform it, so that it is neglected and forgotten, and is turned from its original purpose"; and on her petition at that date the Pope decreed that the hospital with its annexes, including the Church of Strathblane, be attached to the Chapel of St Mary of Dunbarton, the future collegiate church of that town, and that in it "shall be observed the same hospitality as has been wont to be observed in the said hospital from the time of its foundation."

In the parish at "the Bridge of Glasgow" there was also a leper hospital, with chapel, founded by Marjory Stewart, daughter of Robert, Duke of Albany, and wife of Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochow, afterwards Lord Campbell, and dedicated to St Ninian the Confessor and Pontiff. For the rebuilding and endowment of the chapel William Stewart, Prebendary of Killearn and Rector of Glasford, by Charter of 31st May 1494 granted a tenement in Glasgow and also various annual rents.—[*Reg. ST MUNGO or HIGH CHURCH

On 31st March 1464 Pope Pius II granted plenary indulgence to people dying within the poor Hospital of St Nicholas the Confessor, in Glasgow, founded near the Episcopal Houses by Andrew Muirhead (de Durrisdeer), Bishop of Glasgow, who "proposes" to endow the hospital and chapel. On 20th June 1506 the Chapel of St Roche, situated "without the north gate" of Glasgow, was described as "founded and about to be built." The founder was Mr Thomas Muirhead, Canon of Glasgow and Prebendary of Stobo, and also Prebendary of Govan, who died before 24th Nov. 1512. On or about 11th June 1511 he founded a chaplainry in the chapel, or church as it was sometimes called. On 18th March 1506–7 there is reference to the lands of the Chapel of St Mungo founded in the Church of the Gallowgate—generally called "St Mungo's Kirk without walls" or "Little St Mungo" in contradistinction to the cathedral.—[*Cal. KIRKINTILLOCH

Before 1195 William, son of Thorald, Sheriff of Stirling, gave the Church of "Kirkintulach" to Cambuskenneth Abbey. The grant was confirmed by Alexander II 27th March 1226-7. On 23rd July 1451 Robert Fleming of Biggar founded a chaplainry at the High Altar of St Ninian's Church of Kirkintilloch, alias Lenzie, the endowment being the 10 merk lands of Auchinrivoch in the lordship of Auchtyrmoine in Stirling, 6 merks annual rent from the lands of Panmure in Forfar, 2 merks from the lands of Kirkintilloch, and a tenement in Kirkintilloch. It will be noted that at that date Lenzie appears as an alternative name to Kirkintilloch; and in 1530 the church is designated St Ninian's Church of Lenzie. There was also in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. In 1621 the Earl of Wigton and the parishioners petitioned Parliament for licence to transport the church from the west end of the parish to the middle of it; but at that time nothing was done. The church, however, was included in Cumbernauld when that parish was erected in 1649; and thus it lost its parochial status. The church has disappeared. Its precincts, situated in the churchyard, are designated "The Old Aisle." By Charter, confirmed by Robert III on 17th Aug. 1399, David Fleming, Lord of Biggar, mortified to the Chapel of the Virgin Mary at Kirkintilloch his whole lands of Drumtieblae in Lenzie. On the site of the chapel there was built in 1644 a church which became the church of the parish of Kirkintilloch five years later. Alterations were made to the church in the early part of the 19th century, when galleries were introduced; but it is still a good example of a 17th century attempt to revive the Gothic tradition in architecture. It stands in the old churchyard, on the line of the Roman fortifications.—[Reg. Epis. of Glasgow, ii, 309; Diocesan Reg. of Glasgow, ii, 406-7, 421; Acts Scott. Parl., iv, 607b; *Reg. CUMLODDEN

In 1840 the presbytery resolved to build a church at Cumlodden for the people in that area of Inveraray and in the adjacent part of Glassary parish. The church was built in the following year at a cost of £548, towards which contributions were made by General Assembly's Committee on Church Extension, £225; Duke of Argyle, £200; Sir Archibald Campbell of Garscube, £100.

"MR JACKSON," a probationer, was 1841 appointed in 1841, to "preach and visit"; his salary was forthcoming from the General Assembly's scheme for the employment of probationers £20, from Sir Archibald Campbell £10, and contributions from other individuals in the district and presbytery; apparently he was identical with Donald Jackson who was ordained to Lochgilhead in 1843.

GLENARAY

On 27th Dec. 1651 the Commissioner for the Plantation of Kirks modified stipends for the respective Irish (Gaelic) and English Churches of Inveraray.—[Recs. of Synod of Argyll, 251, S.H.S.]

DONALD MACILVORICH or Mc-1595 ILVORIE; on 1st May 1650 his widow, Janet Campbell, represented to the Synod of Argyle that she was “in great necessity, and that through the burning of Mr Donald’s parish, houses and dwellings (by the Irish under Alexander McDonald in 1644) she is disappointed of that composition which ministers’ wives get either from Ann or for contentation of glebe and manse, and so left very poor and indigent”; the Synod granted to her the share of her husband from the money granted by the Estates for distressed mins. of Argyle. His daughs.—Anna (marr. cont.
22nd March 1624 Alexander MacIver or Campbell of Pennymore); Katherine (marr.

INVERARAY

The saint of the old Church of Glenaray at Kilmalew, Kilmalieu, is said to have been Liubha or, in its earlier form, Liba, Kilmalieu being Cill Mo Liubha, “my Liubha’s Church.” There are various saints of that name. Another view is that Kilmalew is “Church of St Maluog” or “Moluoc,” probably a friend of Columba, and equivalent to “my dear little Leu” or St Lupus. The site was at the old town on the north shore of the bay where the river Aray joins the sea. About 1778 the old town was removed and the present town of Inveraray built. The church was demolished at the same time as the town; and for fifteen years there were only temporary places of worship. Eventually in 1794 the existing two churches, with a steeple 107 ft. high, were built at Inveraray from a design by Mr Milne, London. They were repaired in 1838, having suffered serious damage from lightning in the previous year. The steeple, having become dangerous, had to be taken down in 1941. The name Kilmalew remained with the churchyard.
Mundu or Munnu is an affectionate form of the name of St Fintan. Hence Kilmun, the name of the place on the west side of Glen Aray, where stood the chapel dedicated to that saint.—[Watson’s Celtic Place Names, 304–5, 307; Johnston’s Place Names of Scotland, 220.]

ALEXANDER GORDON, one of the leading characters of Neil Munro's 1650 "John Splendid." It is stated that he was min. of a church at Tynemouth, Northumberland, now Howard Street Church, North Shields. He had sasine in the lands of Knock in Ayrshire on adjudication 16th April 1670.—[Brit. Weekly, 11th Jan. 1931; G. R. Sas., 3 Ser., xxiv, 310.]

ALEXANDER MCTAVISH, marr. Margaret, daugh. of John Campbell 1775 of Lerags; his son, John, went to Jamaica.

JOHN FINLAY DAWSON, dem. 21st Nov. 1930; died 24th June 1941; his 1904 wife, Flora, daugh. of John Thomson, burgh chamberlain, Inveraray, died 21st July 1939; he dem. to facilitate union 21st Feb. 1930.

(Both charges united March 1930.)

There was in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the endowment of which included the lands of Pennykill and Darrok in the barony of Craignish, 3 merks of the lands of Auchafyne, and the 40 sh. lands of Aithaned in the barony of Ardskeodenis.—[Reg. Great Seal, v, 131, 2249.]

NEILL CAMPBELL, son of Neill C., Bishop of Argyll, became Bishop of 1574 Argyll in 1580, rector 8th July 1585, on which date his natural son, Nigel, received letter of legitimization, apparently identical with Mr. Nigell, rector of Craignish.—[Reg. Mag. Sig., v, 839.]

DONALD CAMPBELL, had issue— 1628 Neill, Robert.—[G. R. Sas., 2 Ser., viii, 33, 6th June 1654.]

(2) 16th Jan. 1929 Adelaide Mary Louisa Fletcher, daugh. of James Bapty and Anne Renton; his daugh., Margaret (marr. 3rd Aug. 1926 William Christopher Miller, M.R.C.V.S., Edinburgh).

NORTH KNAPDALE

In the second quarter of the 15th century there occur references to the Perpetual Vicarage of St Ferchanus's in Knapdale, probably Kilberry, Ferchan being an erroneous form of Bearchan, Saint of Kilberry. The writer of the new Statistical Account states that the mother church of the two Knapdales, built by Cormaig Mac O'Charmaig, was called Kilvic O'Charmaig. The saint may be either Baetan Maccu Cormaic, abbot of Cluain mac Nois, who died 1st March 664, or Abban Maccu Cormaic of Magh Arnaide, whose day was 27th Oct. The Church of Kilmichael Inverlussay was built in 1820, and the Church at Tayvallich in 1827.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, viii, 596, 625; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 282.]

On 12th March 1439–40 Lord Duncan Campbell of Lochow gave $\frac{1}{2}$ merk from the lands of Ardenslate for the maintenance of lights and wax candles before the image of the Virgin Mary in the church. The church was dedicated to St Mary; and by Bull of Pope Pius II 4th March 1461–2 it was united to the mensa of Lismore. In the church there was an Altar of the Holy Rood, founded on 21st Aug. 1420 by John Campbell, inhabitant of Dunoon. The church was enlarged in 1911 by addition of transepts and the flat ceiling opened up and supported with transverse beams of pitch

INVERCHAOLAIN

The Churches of Inverchaolain and Kilmorie in Strathlachlan were united, apparently some time after the Reformation; on 27th Dec. 1651 the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks dissolved the union, made Inverchaolain "a distinct kirk" and modified to the same a stipend with manse and glebe. The church was rebuilt in 1745.
At Toward Point there was a chapel dedicated either to St Fillan, but which of that name is uncertain, or, as the designation

Kyllenane also occurs, to St Finan.—[*Recs.

KILFINAN

The church was granted to Paisley Abbey by 1230–40 by Duncan, son of Ferchar or Ferhard, and Laumann, son of Malcolm and nephew of Duncan—confirmation by Angus, son of Duncan, 9th July 1270; in 1253 the church was designated "the Church of St Finan which is in Kethromecongall" (in the quarter of Cowal), and at that time it was known as "Kerry or Caathramh," i.e. "the fourth part." Of a Charter of 6th July 1452 Sir Robert Dewar, "vicar of St Serf's of Kilfinnan," is a witness; but of this dedication nothing further is known. There was in the church an altar dedicated to St Fynnan, to which pertained the 4 lib. lands of Awchingyle.
Whether this was a second altar to St Finan is not clear. At Ardmarnock, St Marnock's Field, there was a chapel dedicated to that saint. A small portion of the chapel still exists. A short distance above the chapel there was a cell, to which St Marnock was wont to resort for fasting, penance and devotion.—[Reg. Great Seal, iv, 791, v,

KILMUN

The Church of St Columba, Kyllemine (Kilmun), is mentioned on 24th Aug. 1391.
To the Glory of God and in honour of St Mundus and all saints, Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochow erected the church into a collegiate church for five chaplains, one of whom was to be provost, and another was to serve the cure of the parishioners; and by Charter of 4th Aug. 1442, confirmed by James II, 12th May 1450, for the souls of James I and Joan, his consort, James II himself, Marjorie (Stewart), his late wife, Margaret (Stewart), his wife, and the late Celestine, his eldest son, he gave an endowment to the church—the 3 merk land of Auchinlochir in the barony of Kilmun, the 6 merk land of Blairmore and Garronletter in said barony, the 2 merk land of Cragha-was in the barony of Cowal, the 2 merk land of Cafflade and Clogyne in the barony of Kilmun, the 1 merk land of Kilmolew in the barony of Lochow; 2 merks Scots annual rent from the lands of Dalmeloncharde, 1 merk Scots annual rent from the land of Auchingar, 2 merks Scots annual rent from the lands of Greghane and Gawane. He also gave the Church of St Conan of Dysart (Glenorchy) and the Church of the Three Holy Brethren (Lochgoilhead). By mandate to the Archdeacon of Argyle Pope Eugenius IV confirmed the erection. In answer to a petition by the provost and chapter of the collegiate church, which stated that after the erection by the Archdeacon, George (Lauder), Bishop of Argyle, united the parsonage of Kylmalew (Inveraray), with the consent of the patron, to the Capitular Mensa of the collegiate church. Pope Paul II, by Bull of 26th March 1466, gave mandate to the Official of Argyle to make enquiry and confirm the erection and the appropriation and union of the parsonage of Kylmalew.

Among the witnesses of a Charter of 6th July 1452 are the provost and seven chaplains, which serves to show that to the original foundation three chaplains were added.—[Reg. Great Seal, ii, 346, iv, 791;

LOCHGOILHEAD

The parish was variously termed Ken-lochgilpe and Lochgilpe. The church was dedicated to the "Three Holy Brethern," whose identity is uncertain. It was granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochow to the Collegiate Church of Kilmun on its foundation in 1442. At Kilmore there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, which cir. 1230–40 was granted along with the land of Kilmore to Paisley Abbey by Duncan, son of Ferchar or Ferkard, and Laumann, son of Malcolm and nephew of Duncan. The grant was confirmed by Duncan's son, Angus, on 9th July 1270.—

KILMORIE IN ARRAN

The church was rebuilt on the original site in 1785, an aisle with a gallery was added in 1810, and in 1881 complete renovation was carried out by the Duke of Hamilton. The Chapel or Church at Shisken, which was the place of worship of the district, was rebuilt in 1805, and the min. of Kilmorie conducted a service there every third Sunday. It was the Pre-Reformation Chapel of St Malise or St Molios,—Mo-Laisse, Mo-Laise, a reduced form of Laisren, with mo (my) prefixed. He died in 639, and his grave is said to have been in the middle of the ground at Shisken.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 305. See Lochranza and Kilbride.]

LOCHRANZA

On 26th Dec. 1651 the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks, in view of the largeness of the parish of Kilmorie, 24 miles long, ordained that a new kirk be erected beside Lochranza for all the lands between the Water of Irsay and the north end of Arran, and dismembered the lands of the laird of Skelmorlie, within the parish of Kilbride, from that parish, and annexed them to the said new kirk which was to be served per vices with Kilmorie.
A stipend was modified for the min. of the two kirks, with manse and glebe at Kilmorie. To what extent the decret was put into effect is not clear. The present church was built in 1795 and seated in 1830 for 300 people. The work was then carried on by a licentiate who acted as assistant to the mins. of Kilmorie and Kilbride and whose remuneration was in part the annual revenue of a mortification made for the purpose by Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, about 1700. A condition of the mortification was that the min. at work should not possess ordained status. The "Convent" of St Bridget at Lochranza is associated with the "Nunnery" of Sir Walter Scott, where for a time lived the "Maid of Lorn." It does not appear that there actually was a convent here. The building in question seems to have been a chapel.—[*Recs. of

SOUTHEND—KILCHOLUMKILL

The Church of Kilcholumkill was granted to the Priory of Whithorn by Patrick Macseilinges and Finlach, his wife. There does not appear to be any authority for the statement that the Church of Kilblaan belonged to the said priory. It is not included among the churches pertaining to the priory in James II's Confirmation Charter of 1st July 1451; and on 25th Sept. 1538 the rectory is recorded as belonging to the Crown.—[Reg. Great Seal, i, App. i, 208, ii, 460–1; Reg. Sec. Seal, ii, 2724.]

DUNCAN OMEY, on 1st Oct. 1640 he 1629 declared himself “through age and infirmities unable to execute the function of the ministeriall calling,” and “out of tenderness of conscience least the people should want services” he “voluntarily and freely resigned his office and benefice in the Assemblies hands, reserving to himself yearly all that the stipend will exceed fyve hundred marks”; he appears to have dem. before 7th Oct. 1641.—[Recs. of Synod of Argyle, 19, 23, S.H.S.]

The church belonged to the Priory of Ardchattan. Kilbrannon in the parish suggests a dedication to St Brendan. At Cill Sleibhein are the ruins of a chapel dedicated to St Slebhine; and near the Laggan river there once stood Tighlagh Chill ma-Cheallich, the law-house of the Chapel of St Calloch. In Loch Finlagan near the centre of the parish there is St Finlagan's Isle, on which there was a chapel dedicated to that saint. The chapel was associated with the Chapel of St Columba in the services of a single chaplain. On 5th April 1661 there was presented to Parliament in name of the parishioners a supplication to the effect that "the scarcity of honest and able ministers haveing the Yrish tongue, and the Remotenes of the place hath kept their congregation desolate and without a satled minister for some tyme bypast, and being necessitat to make use of ane expectant Mr Robert Campbell who can only preach to these who understand the English and for want of the Yrish tongue cannot be admitted to be their minister, Thairfor humbly desyreing that a compitent maintenance furth of the stipend of Yla might be appointed for the said Mr Robert his paines." Parliament answered the supplication by modifying "300 merks to be payied to said Mr Robert Campbell for his bygone service at the Kirk of Yla and ordainis the same to be payed to him out of the said stipend of Yla for this crop and year 1661." The alternative name, "Kirk of Yla," will be noted.—[Reg. Sec. Seal, i, 911, 3882, ii, 4546; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 2887; Acts Scott. Parl., vii, 128; *Orig. PRESBYTERY OF LORN

A "new Church" was built at Appin by Sir Donald Campbell of Ardnamurchan before 7th Oct. 1641, on which date he petitioned the Synod to ordain Mr Duncan McCalman, min. at Lismore, to conduct services per vices at the said new church. The Synod left the matter to the discretion of the min. On 10th Oct. 1642 the Synod, regarding Lismore and Appin as an unsuitable charge for one min., and considering that there was a sufficient maintenance for two charges, deemed it expedient that Lismore be constituted a charge by itself, that Appin and Duror be erected into a parish, with a min. at Appin Church, and that Elen-Mun, including Glencoe and Mamore, be annexed to Appin, and that the preaching every third Sunday be at Elen-Mun. On 7th Oct. 1643 it was intimated to the Synod that Sir Donald Campbell of Ardnamurchan, who was tackman of one half of the teinds of Lismore, aided by others, fearing that the erection of Appin into a separate parish with provision from the teinds of Lismore would be to his prejudice, sought to bar the project by locking the door of Appin Church, thus refusing the min. entrance, and even seeking to hinder the people from attending worship in the churchyard by the min. as enjoined every third Sunday. The Synod ordained the Presb. of Lorne to cite parties, and, if they pleaded guilty, to ordain them to make repentance at Appin Church, and, if not, to proceed further against them. On 5th Dec. 1657 the Commission on the Plantation of Kirks dismembered and disjoined Appin and Duror from Kilmaluag in Lismore, and Glencoe from Illanmoun, Appin, Duror and Glencoe to be erected into a new parish with a church to be built at Kil-collumkill in Duror. A stipend was also modified for a min. at said new church, with a sufficient manse and glebe. The decret of the Commission was not ratified by Parliament, and therefore would take effect only if all parties interested were agreed. Though the min. of Lismore acquiesced, it does not appear that the opposition disclosed at the Synod was waived; and apparently the decret was without result. The Recissory Act of 1661 had no bearing upon this case. Appin Church was rebuilt in the district of Strath and was repaired prior to 1791.—[Records, Synod of Argyll, 26, 57, 83, 237.]

The patron saint was not Modan, but Baodan, Baetan, the earlier name of the place occurring in several forms, Balivedan, Balliebodane, Ballebadin, Ballibodan, Ballebhodan, which is Baile Bhaodain, the town or dwelling of Baodan. There were at least five saints bearing the name Baetan, late Baodan, but it is not clear which saint of that name was the patron here. In Glen Salach in the parish there was a large block of stone, called Suidhe Bhaodain (Baodan's Seat). It was broken up long ago. Of the church, which has been long a ruin, it was said in the early part of the 18th century that it "is above the bigg church a litle on the syd of ane hill in a pleasant place where the sunn useth daylie to rise upone when it ryseth upone one pairt of the country, and this is called Kilbedan." The present church was built in 1836. The Priory of Ardchattan was dedicated to John the Baptist. The seal of the priory has a figure of the Baptist holding on a plaque the Agnus Dei, and bears the inscription SIGILL. CONVENTUS DE ARDKATTAN IN ARGADIA. In addition to the Church of Balivedan (Ardchattan), which had an early dependence on the Bishop of Dunkeld, the priory held also the Churches of Kilniniver, Kilbrandon, Kirkapoll (Tiree), Kilmonivaig and Kilmarow (Kilarrow). In a clan feud the Church of the Priory was burned by the Macdonalds in 1644, and all that now remains is some ruins. The prior's dwelling constitutes the mansion house of the local estate.—[Skene's Celtic Scotland, ii, 408; Origines Parochiales Scotiae, ii, (1), 148, 149; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 122–3, 262, 300–1; Mackinlay's *Anc. GLENORCHY and INISHAIL

The parish was sometimes called Dysart. The church was granted by Sir Duncan Campbell of Lochow to the Collegiate Church of Kilmun on its erection in 1442. It was rebuilt in 1811. The Church of St Findoc of Inchealt (Inishail) was granted to Inchaffray Abbey on 29th June 1257 by Ath, son of Malcom Macnaughton. The saint is Findoc, Findoca, the virgin whose day is 13th Oct. The Church of Inishail was removed to the mainland in 1736.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, xii, 242-4; Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, 75-6; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 286-7.]

KILMORE and KILBRIDE

The Church of Kilmore was dedicated to St Bean.

On 10th Oct. 1649 Mr Archibald Campbell of Dunstaffnage made a claim to the Synod for "better accommodation" for the parishioners, and suggested a central church for both parishes. The Synod referred the matter to the Commission on Plantation of Kirks, and on 15th April 1651 that body decreed that instead of Kilmore and Kilbride there be built at Oban a new church, to be called the Church of Oban, with manse and glebe there. The min., Mr Nicol McCalman, was to have the choice of continuing to live in the manse at Kilmore or transferring to the new manse at Oban. The decret did not take effect. Kilbride Church is of the 15th century, and Kilmore Church was rebuilt in 1740.—[Recs. of Synod of Argyle, 243, S.H.S.; Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, vii, 407.]

On 5th Dec. 1651 the Commission on the Plantation of Kirks dismembered and disjoined Appin and Duror from Kilmaluig in Lismore and decerned Lismore with the lands of Kingarloch to be a distinct parish, and the kirk to be removed from Kilmaluig to the most central part of the parish, the Presbytery of Kilmoir to visit the parish and determine whether the church should be removed or not. The decret apparently did not take effect. In 1791 there were in the parish four places of worship, Lismore, Appin, Glencoe, and Kingarloch, and the min. had the assistance of a missionary.—

MUCKAIRN

Another form of the old name Cladh Choireil, and Kilespikural, indicating that the cell or chapel in the graveyard was dedicated to St Cyrillus, St Cyril. At first the chief place was Kilmaronag in the east part of the parish, where there was a church dedicated to St Cronoc, a name borne by thirty saints. Shortly before the Reformation the church was removed from Kilmaronag to Muckairn and took the place of the chapel in the graveyard there, the walls of which still existed at the close of the 18th century. It is said that the bishopric was at Muckairn prior to its removal to Lismore; and for a time Muckairn Church was a possession of the Bishops of Dunkeld and was a mensal church. The present church was built in 1829. On a small island in a lake called Kilvarie or Kilmorie Loch, in the west part of the parish, there was a chapel dedicated to St Maelrubha. Near it is Balindeor, the town of the Dewar or hereditary keeper of a relic of the saint, called in a manrent of 1518 Arwachyll, maybe a bachull or pastoral staff.—[Skene's Celtic Scotland, ii, 408, 412; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 303,]

ARDNAMURCHAN

The patron saint is Comgan, said to have been the brother of Kentigern, a daughter of Callach Cualann of Leinster, who died in 734.—[Cal. of Papal Regs. Letters, viii, 10; Cal. of Scottish Supplies, 457; Watson's Celtic Place Names.]

EILEAN FINAIN. The island, named Eilean Fhionain, on Loch Shiel, was the burial place of the Clan Ranalds until the close of the 16th century. On the island are the ruins of St Finan's Chapel, which is said to have been built by Alan MacRuairidh, one of the Clan Ranald Chiefs. There survives the altar of rough stone; and upon it is St Finan's bell, said to have been brought from Ireland by St Finan himself. Noteworthy is the face of Christ on the stone crucifix.—[Seton Gordon's Highways and Byways of the West Highlands, 168–70.]

KILFINICHEN and KILVICHEOAN

According to Dr Watson, the saint of Kilfinnichen, Cill Fhionnachain, is Findchan, a contemporary of Columba, who founded the Monastery of Artchain in Tiree. The same authority gives Kilvicheoun, Kilviceuen, as Cill Mhic Eoghain, Church of the son (Mhic) or of the sons (Mhac) of Eoghain, probably the latter, for Gorman gives "the three sons of Eoghain," whose day is 19th May. A further suggestion is "Church of the son of Ewen," i.e. Ernan Mac Eoghain, son of Cumad, sister of Columba. In Papal records the saint is erroneously given as St Ouen (St Eugenius). On the petition of Donald, Lord of the Isles, nephew of the late Robert III, on behalf of his chaplain, Adam Dominicus, Perpetual Vicar of the Parish Church of St Eugenius (Kilvicheoan), which stated that "by reason of wars in the Western Highlands of the King of Scotland, ecclesiastical benefices are for the most part so poor and slender that a single priest can hardly be sustained respectably on the fruits of any one benefice, especially because custom is in these parts for every beneficiary continually to hold free hospitality for God's sake," Papal dispensation was granted for two years to the said Adam on 24th Nov. 1421 to hold another benefice along with Kilvicheoan; and a little later this was extended for life. Papal dispensation was also given to the said Adam on 9th Jan. 1428-9 to hold along with Kilvicheoan the Perpetual Vicarage of St Kenithus. This may mean Inchkenneth, Isle of St Kenneth, where, according to Fordun, there was a parish church. There was, however, a Church of St Kenneth at Lochbuie.—[Cal. of Scottish Supplications, 268-9, 275; *Cal. MORVERN Killundine in the parish is Cill Fhionntain, Church of Fintan, evidently St Fintan or Finten, a follower of St Columba. On 27th Dec. 1651 the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks ordained that a new church be built on the lands of Finarie instead of the two churches at Kilcolumkill and Kilintach, the parish to be called the Parish of Finarie, and modified a stipend with a manse and glebe beside the church; it does not appear that the order took effect.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 93, 304; Recs. of Synod of Argyle, 251, S.H.S.]

TIREE

The Church of Sorobie was dedicated to St Columba. At the ancient burial ground at Kirkapol there are two sculptured slabs of the West Highland type, and also a portion of a shaft and one arm of a cross. There are two monasteries founded in the time of St Columba. One was at Artchain, "The Fair Cape (or Height)," founded by St Findchan. The other was on Campus Lunge, or Campus Navis, "Ship's Plain" (Magh Luinge), founded by St Columba, and ruled for a time by St Baithene, St Columba's cousin and his successor as abbot of Iona. Brigit Maigi Luinge is one of the fifteen saints named Brigit in Rawl. At Kilchainie are the walls of a chapel that was dedicated to St Cainnech, probably St Cainnech, who was the honoured guest of St Columba at Iona and accompanied him on his visit to King Brude. Among the rocks beside Ben Kenavara, near the south-west shore, are the foundations and east gable of a chapel, dedicated to St Patrick and called Temple-Patrick. In the rocks on the shore below are several round holes, one of which is called St Patrick's Vat. Close to the ruins are some stones with incised Latin crosses. At Kilmoluag about half a mile north-west of Loch Bharapol there was a chapel dedicated to St Mo-Luoc, who died in 592 and whose day was 25th June. All trace has disappeared, and the burial ground has been ploughed up. In the latter part of the 6th century St Congal founded a monastery, of which there is no information.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 92, 188, 292; Mackinlay's Anc. Ch. Dedications, (non-script.), 62, 63,

The Synod suspended him ab officio et beneficio till next Synod, and warned him of absolute deposition if anything further occurred. On 15th Oct. 1651 the Synod continued him under the sentence of suspension till next Synod. In 1662 the Privy Council awarded him £100 stg. from vacant stipends of Coll and Tiree for his loyalty and as a preacher in Sir Lachlan McLean's Regiment, and for the loss of all his goods and plenishing at the hands of Sir Donald Campbell of Ardnamurchan.—[Recs. of Synod of Argyle, 121, 217; *Recs. TOROSAY

On 30th May 1393 Papal Indulgence was granted to visitors to the Parish Church of St John the Evangelist in Ard of Mull (Torosay) who contributed to the repair of the said church, "to which for the cause of devotion a multitude of people are wont frequently to resort with fitting honours." When the parish lost its status as such is not clear. But in 1720 Murdoch McLean, yr. of Lochbuie, in name of himself and other heritors, applied to the Synod of Argyle, praying them to erect Torosay into a parish out of the parishes of Kilvicuen and Kilninian, and to allow part of the Synod funds for a stipend to the min. The Synod approved of the plan, and granted £300 Scots £25 stg.) of their teind duties for promoting it. Apparently the said teind duties were the grant made by Queen Anne in 1705 to the Synod of Argyle, of the haill rents, revenues, casualties, and emoluments of the Bishopric of Argyle and the Isles for crop 1705, and of all former years resting owing, and in time coming, during Her Majesty's pleasure, and for the uses therein expressed.—[Transcripts from the Vatican, i, 328; Ninian Elliot's Teinds in Story's Church of Scotland, vi, 569.]

KILMONIVAIG

The church was called variously the Church of St Munengs, St Monewog, St Monevog, St Monawk, St Moneiveg and Moneweg Church. On 13th Nov. 1393 Benedict John of the Diocese of Argyle prayed Anti-Pope Clement VII for a dispensation to hold, in addition to another living, "the Church of St George of Monewog." Of this dedication nothing further is known. The church belonged to the Priory of Ardochattan. On 10th Oct. 1649 it was reported to the Synod that the church had been vacant since the Reformation. On 27th Dec. 1651 the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks decreed that there be two kirks in Lochaber, Kilmallie and Kilmonivaig, and that both continue as before. It was further ordained that a kirk "be bigged" on the lands of Kilfinen and Auchadrome, to be served per vices with Kilmonivaig, that the lands of Glengarie and Auchadrome be transferred from Kilmallie to the said new Kirk of Kilfinen, and the lands of Mamore from Illan Moune to Kilmallie, and the lands of Garviche, Gleneves, and the two Achitors from Kilmonivaig to Kilmallie. A stipend was also modified for each kirk with manse and glebe. The church was rebuilt in 1812.

The name is Cill. Mo. Naomhaig, the church of Naemoc, now Naomhag, “Little saint.”—[Cal. Scott. Supplices., 143, 147, 171, 172, 173, S.H.S.; Cal. Papal Regs. Petitions, i, 573, 678; *Recs. CLUNIE

The church was built in 1840, taking the place of the church erected in 1732 and repaired in 1788. Besides the Chapel of St Catherine on the island of the loch there were in the parish four other chapels, of all of which at the close of the 18th century remains with cemeteries existed, and, in the case of three, vestiges are recorded in 1845. They were situated, respectively: within the manor of Little Gourdie; at Chapelton; at another site called Chapelton; at Chapelhill in a park called Laighwood, a little north of the church. Dedicated to the Holy Ghost, the chapel at Little Gourdie was built by David Scrymgeour of Fardill, who died between 2nd July 1527 and 27th Oct. 1528; and by charter of the latter date Mr James Scrymgeour, precentor of Brechin, brother-germane of David Scrymgeour, and his heir of tailzie and testamentary executor, granted to a chaplain to make perpetual celebrations in the chapel daily, and in winter in the Church of Cluny, where the said David was buried, 5 merks annually of the lands of Ards, 4 merks of the lands of Easter Fardill, 4 merks of the lands of Wester Fardill, 3 merks of the lands of Drummadirte, in the barony of Fardill, and a piece of land at the Manor of Little Gourdie near the fount called le Gryis-well. Further endowments were a tenement on the south side of Argyle-gait, Dundee, and an annual rent of 4 merks from lands also on the south side of Argyll-gait at Sereis-Wynd. The Scrymgeours of Fardill retained the patronage of the chapel. In 1575 it was called Cluny Kil-marenock. There was in the church an Altar of the Virgin Mary.—[*Reg. DUNKELD

By Malcolm IV, 1153–65, the Church of the Holy Trinity, Dunkeld, was granted to Dunfermline Abbey, the grant to take effect on the death of Andrew, Bishop of Caithness, who had been a monk of Dunfermline and held the fruits of the church. Of the grant there were various confirmations, Episcopal, Papal, Royal, but of the church nothing more appears to be known. The choir of the cathedral was built by Bishop Sinclair 1312–38. On 27th April 1406 the nave was founded by Bishop Cardny, who built it to the second arches or blyndstoriis. It was completed by Bishop

Lauder, who dedicated the church in 1464. He also laid the foundation of the west tower on 5th March 1469–70 and completed it in 1476; and by him also was carried out the building of the chapter house, whose erection began in 1457. The Altar of the Virgin Mary was endowed out of property in Cluny by Bishop Macknachtane; the Altar of St Katharine, Virgin and Martyr, was built by Bishop Livingstone 1476–83; and about 1506 Bishop Brown founded a second Altar of the Virgin Mary, called S. Marie Libera nos a Penis Inferni, to which pertained 4 bolls of “white and good meal called twyce schelit meil from the lands of Easter-Eschindy,” for the purpose of annual distribution to “the poor of Christ” at the hands of the chaplain of the altar. Bishop Brown further chose seven vicars for altars not yet founded—St Martin, St Nicholas, St Andrew, Holy Innocents, All Saints, St Stephen the Proto-Martyr, and St John Baptist. Of these the Altar of All Saints was set up and painted by Master John Donaldson, Chancellor of Dunkeld. There were also in the cathedral an altar dedicated to St Adamnan, of which the patron was Scott of Balweary; an altar dedicated to St Peter, founded before 2nd April 1490 by James Laicok, Sub-Dean of Dunkeld; and an altar dedicated to St Thomas. The Altar of the Holyrood was in the Rood Loft. On the top of an eminence called Hillhead, east of Dunkeld, there was a chapel dedicated to St Jerome. On a site now occupied by buildings in Athol Street there was founded about 1420 by Bishop Cardny a chapel dedicated to St Ninian, which became the place of interment of the bishop, who died 16th Jan. 1436–7. The foundation of the Hospital and Chapel of St George by Bishop Brown in 1510 was actually the restoration of a hospital prebend of the cathedral, the revenues of which, from the lands of Ferdischawe, had been applied by his predecessors to their own table. As the fruits were insufficient for the purpose, he added the Church of Logytride to the prebend and instituted a hospital with master, for seven old men who had a free house, 5 bolls of meal, and 5 merks Scots.

The hospital was burned in 1689 and was replaced by small cottages, and later by substantial buildings. In connection with the Chapel of St George, Bishop Brown founded in honour of the Blessed Virgin of Consolation a scholastic perpetual chaplain who was to celebrate in the chapel and rule a grammar school. In 1490 Bishop Brown also restored a house at Guay which, about 1340, had been erected by a Bishop of Dunkeld, but which subsequent bishops had closed, with consequent misapplication of rents.—[*Reg. DOWALLIE

St Muireach or Mhuirich, Muireadhach.
Of that name there were Muireadhach, Bishop of Cell Alad, whose day was 12th Aug., and Muireadhach, Abbot of Hi, who died in 1011. Near the public road some distance east of Ballinluig is a praying-stone associated with St Moroc's (Muireach) Chapel on the terrace above. On the top of the bank above Dalshian, not far from Pitlochry, is the site of a chapel dedicated to St Catherine, apparently of Alexandria. It is situated in the centre of an old Pictish fort, known as the "Fourich"—the place of watching.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 293; Mitchell's Pitlochry District, 84-5.]

LITTLE DUNKELD

The old church, 130 ft. long, 20 ft. wide, described in 1793 as "ruinous and uncomfortable," was replaced by the present church in 1798. At Kinnaird there was a chapel with well dedicated to St Laurance. In the burgh and town of Little Dunkeld there were lands called the crofts of St Thomas the Apostle, pertaining to the Chaplainry of St Mary the Virgin of Inver in Dunkeld Cathedral, and also the lands of St Mary the Virgin and the lands of St Katharine the Virgin. The Church of Laggan-Allochie was added to the Archdeanery of Dunkeld, for the purpose of increasing the revenues of the latter, by Bishop Sinclair 1312-38. The church was rebuilt just prior to 1793.—[Reg. Great Seal, v, 1138, 1189; Myln's Lives of the Bishops of Dunkeld, 16-18.]

DUNCAN McNAIR, pres. to the

GLENSHEE

Prior to the concluding part of the 18th century there was a chapel here in which the minister of Kirkmichael conducted services every four or five weeks. The present church was built in 1831.

THOMAS CRAWFORD, his widow, 1881 Elizabeth Carmichael, died at Davidson's Mains 4th Nov. 1928.

JOHN THOMSON, dem. 15th May 1908 1941, died 10th Jan. 1943.

KINCLAVEN

The Church of Kinclaven was granted to Cambuskenneth by King William the Lion before 13th May 1195. In the following century a letter of Richard, Bishop of Dunkeld, dated 2nd Nov. 1260, stated that the Church of Kinclaven had been divided into two parts, one of which belonged to the Dean and Chapter of Dunkeld, and the other to the Abbot and Convent of Cambuskenneth, a position that caused great danger to the souls of the people of Kinclaven from the church not being well served. Therefore, with consent of the respective parties, the granters ordained that the Church of Kinclaven, with its cure and possessions, should henceforth belong to the precentory of the Kirk of Dunkeld, the precentor to pay 6 merks annually to the abbot and convent, and to serve the Church of Kinclaven by a qualified chaplain.—[Chartulary of Cambuskenneth, 43–4, 267.]

LETHENDY and KINLOCH

In the parish there was a tenement of land called St Katharine's land, indicating a dedication to that saint. There is mentioned also "a tenement with yard and croft foundit and left to our Lady Altar in the Church." This was an altar dedicated to the Virgin, and situated apparently in an aisle or transept.—[Book of Scone, 230; Reg. Great Seal, viii, 65, 553; Retours, xv, 10.]

The fair, feill mo-Cholmoig ("My Colmocc's Fair"), was held at the end of February, and this indicates that the saint was Colman (one of many saints of this name), whose day was 18th Feb. At Chapelton of Clurly there are the ruins of a chapel with praying-stone, probably of 7th century, and at Faskally land called Dysart, which indicates a Culdee retreat or place of contemplation. On a neolithic burial mound at Old Faskally, beyond the Pass of Killiecrankie, there are the remains of a chapel with the socket of a praying-stone a short distance to the north. At Pitlochry there was a spring called St Fergan's Well, Tobar Fheargain, probably Fergna ("the Briton"), who was fourth Abbot of Iona, and died in 623. His day was 2nd March.—[Retours, vii, 335; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 2814; Mitchell's Pitlochry District, 85; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 322, 278.]

DULL

Dull was one of three Abthanes, Dull, Kirkmichael, Madderty, which King Edgar granted to his youngest brother, Ethelred, Abbot of Dunkeld. About 1159-89 Malcolm, Earl of Athol, granted the church with its chapels and lands to St Andrews.
This was confirmed by King William the Lion, and the Chapter of Dunkeld, the latter including the Chapel of Fossach (Foss), and reserving the Church of Bran-both in Glen Lyon and an annual rent of 20s. payable to the chapter and their clerics from the Abthane of Dull. In a burial ground on a rocky mound, called Chapelton, near the head of Glenfincastle are the ruins of a church or chapel in use till about 1770; and another chapel is indicated by Chapelton, the name of a house near a burial ground, a short distance beyond Borenich on the way to Loch Tummel. Another chapel was situated at Duntanlich on the east side of a field opposite the Queen's View.—[*Reg. Priory of St

FOSS

The Church of Foss was at first a dependent Chapel of Dull. It is said to have been founded by St Chad in or about 650. Here was a fair of St Patrick; and the Atlas of Scotland, 1832, gives the Well of St Peter, the name being probably a mistake for St Patrick.—[Mitchell's Pitlochry District, 84.]

GLENLYON

On 5th Feb. 1500-1 there was made an agreement between the Dean and Chapter of Dunkeld, with consent of the Bishop (George Brown), and Sir Donald Maiknachtane, vicar of Fortingall (anent a controversy between them in and upon the pension of the said vicar given and assigned by the Chapter, and a portion assigned by the vicar), whereby Sir Donald renounced for all time his right and claim to said portionary of Fortingall, so that for the future he and his successors shall have the old erection of the vicarage, 13 merks Scots, with manse, etc., and the chapter shall pay yearly to the vicar for his time 12 merks Scots for sustenance of a chaplain of Bambrow, otherwise Glenlyon, to have care of the souls of Glenlyon and answer to the ordinary for such souls; and after his death the chapter shall have a perpetual chaplain at Glenlyon who shall have a yearly pension of 12 merks Scots, with all the rights which the chapter had to the glebe of the said chapel, commonly called Fybart of Brabo, etc. On 11th Sept. 1639 Parliament referred to the Commission for Augmentation of Stipends, etc., the desire of the General Assembly to have the lands of Glenlyon dismembered from Fortingall and erected into a separate parish. Objections were raised and nothing was done then.—[Reports, Hist. MSS. Commis., vii, 710b; Acts Scott. Parl., v, 597a.]

GRANTULLY

The Chapel of St Mary was the Parish Church of Grantully. On 3rd June 1533 Alexander Stewart of Grantully, with consent of his son and heir, Thomas, gave to God, the Blessed Mother Mary, St Andrew, St Adamnan, and Bean the Confessor, Croft Dawe, for a suitable chaplain-curate personally residing at and making divine celebrations in the Church of St Mary of Grantully, sasine being given to Alexander Young, Sub-Prior of St Andrews, as representing the curate. The church was for a time the burial place of the barons of Grantully. The decorative paintings executed in 1636 comprise scriptural subjects, armorial bearings, and monograms. Among the first are figures of the four evangelists and a representation of the Day of Judgment—the graves giving up their dead, the redeemed ascending, and the condemned falling into eternal night.—[*Reg. KENMORE

It is uncertain whether the earlier name of the parish, Inchadney, or Inchadin, indicates St Aidan as the patron saint. In Gaelic Inchadney is Innis Chailtnidh ("Keltney Haugh"). The principal fair at Inchadney was called "the Nine Maidens"; and it might be conjectured that that was the dedication of the church. The present church was built in 1760, and a new wing was added in 1832.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 517–18.]

WILLIAM RAMSAY, graduated M.A., KILLIN

On a small promontory on the south side of Loch Tay, called now Ard-Eodhnaig, formerly Ard Eodhnain ("Adamnan's Cape"), there is an ancient site called Cill Mo-Charmaig ("My Cormac's Church"), the inference being that the church was founded from Iona in Adamnan's time and that the land was gifted to Adamnan and to Cormac, the cleric in charge.

On 26th Feb. 1317–18 Robert I granted the patronage of the church to the Abbey of Inchaffray, the vicarage of the church to be served by a canon, or if more agreeable to the Abbey, by a secular chaplain. There is a tradition that the site of the earliest church was near the village, beside what is called Fingal's Grave, which is marked by a stone. It is more likely, however, that it was situated in the churchyard wherein stood the medieval church. The ruins of the latter existed in 1842. The present church was built in 1744, which date along with the name of the builder, Thomas Clerk, appears on a stone built into the wall. It was repaired in 1832. Killin is said to be Gaelic cill fhiom ("White Church").
 But there is at Garve in Ross-shire a Killin which is regarded as Cill Fhinn, and, as Loch Garve is still called Loch Maol-Fhinn ("Fionn's servant's loch"), it may be that there is involved in Killin a Saint Fionn.

 No saint of that name, however, is on record. New churches were also built in 1744 at Strathfillan and Ardeonaig; and it was customary for the min. to preach alternately in them and the parish church.
 Later, a missionary was appointed to each of the two chapels. The salary of the missionary at Strathfillan accrued from a sum mortified for a chaplain in that district by Lady Glenorchy, under the management of the S.P.C.K., and there were also manse, glebe, hill pasture. The salary of the Ardeonaig missionary was paid in equal portions by Lord Breadalbane and the S.P.C.K., and there were also manse and glebe.—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey,

WEEM

It is said that in the course of his missionary journeys, 651–61, St Cuthbert came to a town called Dul, and for a time gave himself to a solitary life in the woods of a height in the district called by the inhabitants Doilweme (Rock of Weem). There he brought a fountain of water out of the hard rock, erected a large stone cross, built an oratory of wood, and out of a single stone near the cross, fashioned a bath, in which it was his habit to immerse himself and spend the night in prayer. Accused by the daughter of the king of a base action, he had resort to prayer, whereupon at a place called Corruen the earth opened and swallowed her up. On this account he never permitted a female to enter a church—a practice adopted by the Picts. Later he left the district. To the hollow stone called St Cuthbert's Bath people were wont to go in search of health. In the Newhalls district were Cill Daidh, St David's burying ground, and Feill Daidh (St David's Fair), which, held in March, was removed to Kenmore. St David was also associated with a spring about the middle of the Rock of Weem. If, it was said, anyone made a suitable offering in the spring, at the same time "wishing a wish," St David, the patron, would grant the fulfilment of the desire. According to tradition, also, he had a chapel on a shelf of rock called Craig an-t'Sheepail. At Killiechassie there was a chapel with a graveyard in which are buried descendants of the Wolf of Badenoch. The saint's name is from Cass, which along with its derivatives Cassan, Cassin, Caissin, constitutes the names of various saints. West of Killiechassie House is Tom a Chanoin, "the Canon's Knoll," and in the Tay opposite Aberfeldy is Poll a Chanoin ("the Canon's Pool").—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 312–13; Skene's Celtic Scotland, ii, 206.]

ABERNETHY

The church is said to have been founded in 460 by Nectan, King of the Picts, who gave Abernethy, whose boundaries are described, to God and St Bridget till the Judgment Day. Another story is to the effect that the "Collegiate Church of Abernethy" was founded and built by Garnald, son of Dompnach or Makdompnach, who reigned 584-96, and that after St Patrick brought St Bridget and her Nine Maidens to Scotland, Garnald conveyed to God and the Blessed Mary and St Bridget and her Maidens all the lands and teinds of Abernethy which the priory and canons possessed of old. Still another story ascribes the foundation to another King Nectan who was subsequent to Garnald. Apparently there is a confusion of facts; but it may be that Abernethy was originally a nunnery which later became a collegiate establishment of monks. In any case, in or about 1173 Laurence, son of Orm of Abernethy, apparently Lay Abbot of Abernethy, granted to the Abbey of Arbroath the Church of Abernethy with its pertinents, the Chapels of Dron, Dunbog, and Errol. Subsequently there arose a question as to Abernethy Church between Clement, Bishop of Dunblane, and the Abbot of Arbroath; and in 1239 this was settled by an ordinance of Papal delegates, in accordance with which the abbey ceded to the Bishop the whole altarage of Abernethy and certain lands, the Bishop to provide, from the fruits of the altarage, for the service of Abernethy and for a vicar of the choir to serve at Dunblane, while the abbey was to retain certain lands and the teinds of the church, with the rights and emoluments of the chapels, and the abbot was to be installed a Canon of Dunblane Cathedral and granted a toft at the Cathedral for a manse. Up to the first half of the 15th century the church was designated the "secular and Collegiate Church of Abernethy," and it was governed by a prior and canons. On 8th Feb. 1364 the secular prior and chapter, with consent of Margaret, the elder Countess of Angus, patron of the church, petitioned to the effect that the church was founded in honour of St Mary the Virgin and St Bridget by lay patrons, the lords of Abernethy, ancestors of the said Countess, for a prior and five canons, that upon the express desire of some patrons to augment the rents of the church the number of canons was, upon such hope, raised to ten, that the augmentation of rents did not take place and that in consequence of wars, fire, and ruin, the prior and chapter were brought to straits, and accordingly Walter, Bishop of Dunblane, with the advice of the said patrons and David II, reduced the canons to the original number, five. To the Bishop of St Andrews, Pope Gregory XI gave mandate to make enquiries, and on the Bishop's report that the net revenue did not exceed 200 gold florins per annum, 50 merks Stg.—a sum insufficient if the prior and canons did not add to it by their industry, the Pope confirmed the reduction by Bull of 30th Oct. 1375. Apparently after 1450, and before 1456, George Earl of Angus founded anew the collegiate church; and after 1456 the head of the church is designated provost, which indicates a regular collegiate constitution. The number of prebends appears to have been six. At least that number is on record—Forevenschip (Flisk), Balmanno Pettinbrog, Petmeddin, Colsy and Balmanno, Colsy. Abernethy Church was itself a Prebend of Dunblane, the Abbot of Arbroath being the prebendary. Of the collegiate church it was narrated in 1722 that "yet the ruins of it remain. Likeway there is in it a great Church with pillars which yet remain in its noble fabric; it was destroyed from its primitive magnificence by Kenneth, King of Scots."—[Chronicles of the Picts, Skene, 6, 7, 28, 201, 389; Fordun's Scotichronicon (*Scott. DRON

The Church of Pottie belonged to St Giles, Edinburgh. In the Act of Parliament of 1592 ratifying the patronage of the Church of Dunbarney to Edinburgh for the endowment of the college, it is described as a pendicle of Dunbarney. A lead seal of a Papal Bull (Nicolas IV, 1288–92), discovered in what was the burial ground of Pottie Church about the middle of last century, was given to the Museum of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland.—[Lees' St Giles, 85; Acts Scott. Parl., iii, 582; Laing's Lindores Abbey, 432.]

ECCLESMOGHRIDAIN

The church belonged to Lindores Abbey, and was served by a chaplain. After the Reformation it had no parochial status; and in view of that, and the further fact that of old divine worship had been performed by a chaplain, King James on 31st March 1600 granted power to Patrick Leslie, son of Patrick L., Commendator of Lindores, to appoint a reader for the church or chapel at an annual payment of 40 merks.—[Acts Scott. Parl., iii, 582.]

DUNBARNEY

The church belonged to St Giles, Edinburgh; and when St Giles was made a collegiate charge in 1466 it was decreed that in addition to his “pension” the provost should receive certain fruits, rents, and profits from the Church of Dunbarney, with the adjacent manse or parsonage and glebe of the church, and that he should appoint a curate to whom he was to allow 25 merks annually, with a house beside the church. Moncrieff Church also belonged to St Giles, and is described as a pendicle of Dunbarney in the Act of Parliament of 1592 ratifying the patronage of Dunbarney Church to Edinburgh for the endowment of the college.—[Lees' St Giles; Acts Scott. Parl., iii, 582.]

ERROL

At Polcack there was a chapel dedicated to St Nicholas, Bishop and Confessor. Gilbert de Hay, Lord of Errol, Constable of Scotland (died 1333), gave to the Abbey of Cupar the right of patronage of the Parish Church of Errol, founded by his ancestors and situated within his Barony of Erroll. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 9th Aug. 1243. In 1430, on the resignation of Richard de Crech, the church was united to Charterhouse, Perth. On 6th Dec. 1495 Sir David Ogilvie of Inchmartin gave to Sir John Simon, Chaplain of the Chapel of the Virgin Mary of Carsgrange, 2 acres of Langland of Carsgrange beside the lands of Carsgrange, in augmentation of the service.—[*Reg. FORTEVIOT

Forteviot was a residence of the Pictish kings and later monarchs. To Forteviot, according to the legend of St Andrew, Regulus and his followers proceeded with the relics of the apostle after they had landed at Kilrimont (St Andrews) in 736 according to one view, and according to another, in 761. There they met in residence the three sons of Hungus, King of the Picts, who himself had gone on an expedition into Argyle. To God and St Andrew the three princes gave a tenth of the "town" of Forteviot, whereupon Regulus gave them his blessing, and in commemoration of the gift he and his followers erected a cross. Regulus and his retinue then proceeded to Kindrochet in Braemar, where they met Hungus on his return from Argyle. Before the relics of the apostle exhibited to them, the King and his nobles prostrated themselves; and thereafter the monarch gave the place to God and St Andrew, and there built a church. Proceeding southward over the Mounth, he and the holy men came to Monichie (Monikie) where he also built a church in honour of God and the apostle; and then they passed to Forteviot, where Hungus built a church ("basilica") to God and St Andrew. The site of the church is considered to be the Halyhill (Holy Hill), upon which also in all probability stood the royal residence. About 1830 there was discovered under the Holy Hill in the bed of the river May a semicircular arched stone cut in the form of an arch of 4 ft. span and 21 ft. in height, and carved in relief on the front with a cross standing on a pedestal over the centre of the arch, and having on one side the Agnus Dei, and on the other a robed figure in a sitting posture, bareheaded, and his feet resting on an animal; and on the opposite side of the cross below the Agnus Dei three figures habited in the same manner, but with helmets on their heads and swords in their right hands. It would appear that the stone is the superportal of a church belonging to an early period; and while it can hardly be regarded as of the time of Hungus, it may still be a very early representation of that monarch, the founder of the church, and his three sons who made a gift of one-tenth of that town to God and St Andrew. About 1165 King William the Lion gave the Church of Forteviot to his chaplain, Richard de Stirling; and eleven years later he decreed that the church with its chapels, etc., should pass to Cambuskenneth Abbey after the death of the said Richard, in excambion for the king's teinds, pleas, and profits of Stirling, and Stirlingshire and Callander. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham in 1241. In the reign of James III (1460-88), and probably before 1465, it was annexed to St Salvator's College, St Andrews, "for sustaining a prebendary to serve and sing in the Choir." By Bull of Pope Sixtus IV, 26th Feb. 1473-4 the church was made a mensal church of St Andrews; and by Act of Parliament of 1592, conform to a letter of James VI under the Privy Seal, it was annexed anew to St Salvator's for "the sustentation of the provest, maisteris, regentis, bursaris and foundit persons therein."—[*Acts of Scott. KINFAUNS

As a dependent of Scone Church, the Chapel of Kinfauns was confirmed to Scone Abbey by William, Bishop of St Andrews, 1202–38. The chapel was a church prior to 1560. At Seggieden, near the Castle, there was a St Augustine Hospital, the Master of which, Friar William, swore fealty to Edward I at Berwick on 28th Aug. 1296. There was also in the parish a chapel dedicated to St Ninian. On 27th Oct. 1419 Papal assent was given to a crave that, “since on Friday of every week a multitude of the faithful, on account of the devotion to St Ninian, flock to the Chapel of St V (Ninian), St Andrews Diocese, in the Parish of Kinfaunis—in order that the devotion of the people may be augmented, and the fabric and ornaments of the chapel be fittingly preserved, may the Pope grant relaxation of 7 years and as many quarantines to all Christ’s faithful visiting that Church and stretching out a helping hand to its fabric and ornaments on the feasts of the said St V and the above Fridays.” On 31st Jan. 1420–1 Papal Assent was given to a further crave that “since a multitude of the devout flock to the Chapel of St Ninian within the Parish of Kinfawyns in St Andrews Diocese, which is endowed with no possessions whereby it can be fittingly repaired in its edifices and ornaments, may therefore the Pope grant an indulgence of 4 years and as many quarantines to all Christ’s faithful stretching out helping hands to the fabric and ornaments, or visiting the Chapel in honour of St Ninian on the more important double feasts of the year and in their octaves.”—[*Cal. of Docs. METHVEN

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 25th Aug. 1247. It would appear that the saint was St Mernoc the Confessor, whose name appears in the dedication of the collegiate church. By letter sealed on 1st May 1433 Walter Stewart, Earl of Athole, Caithness, and Stratherne, and lord of Methven, founded at the parish church of which he was patron, the collegiate church in honour of God and Jesus Christ, the Blessed Virgin Mary, St Mernoc the Confessor, and All Saints. On 4th May of the same year confirmation of the erection of the church was given by Henry, Bishop of St Andrews. The collegiate church was for a provost, five perpetual chaplains, and four boys. Each chaplain was to have 14 merks annually of current money with a dwelling near the church, and each boy 5 merks annually from the tithes and fruits of the said church. For the provost there were the remainder of the tithes, together with the following lands, namely 8 merks worth of land to be chosen by him from the Earl's lands adjoining the Church of Salchope, Petterley, Pettrevy, Drumcarne, with common pasture and firing, and other appurtenances etc., and with 12 merks worth of lands of Campsie, situated within the Earl's laid demesne of Methven, the provost to bear all the burdens of the provostry, and to pay 12 merks annually to the vicar-pensioner of the church. The Chapel of Auldbar, subsequently united to Aber-lemno, also belonged to the provost, a chaplain being appointed to serve at the chapel. On 15th Oct. 1510 appears an annual rent of 14 merks from the lands of Easter Busbye and Wester Busbye to a chaplain singer in the church, but that may be included in the foregoing allowances to the five perpetual chaplains. A significant stipulation of the erection of the church was "that no Chaplain shall publicly keep a concubine, under pain of deposition by the Bishop after being thrice warned by the Provost." Culdeesland is traditionally said to have been the site of an early religious foundation.—[*Cal. Pap. Reg., PERTH

The Church of the Priory of the Charterhouse was dedicated to the Virgin Mary and St John the Baptist. The lands of Magdalene were among the possessions of the priory. The Church of the Blackfriars' Monastery was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. It was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 13th May 1240. There was in the church an Altar of St Andrew. The Church or Chapel of Our Lady of Loretto was founded by Sir Edward Gray, Rector of Lundie. To him and his successors, the Chaplains, James V on 28th Dec. 1528 granted a tenement of land with houses on the south side of Argyle-gait, and also a tenement of land on the north side. There were also in the church altars dedicated respectively to St Nicholas and St Catherine. The Chapel of the Holy Rood was situated at the Bridge of Tay. Additional altars in the Church of St John were St Mark, St Mary of Consolation; and the Visitation of our Lady, which belonged to the fleshers. The Altar of St Blaise was situated in the choir, and the Altar of St Fillan the Abbot on the "east side behind the High Altar." To the Monastery of the Blackfriars Robert III on 3rd Dec. 1405 granted the Chapel of St Laurance in the town of Perth for the souls of his father, and especially of Elizabeth Muir, his mother, who "rests in the Church of the Friars." On 2nd Feb. 1433-4 Archibald, Duke of Touraine, for the honour and praise of God, the Virgin Mary, and St John the Evangelist, and for the souls of himself, Euphame his wife, etc., granted to the Priory of Charterhouse certain lands in the Barony of Sprouston. The "Booth of St Sebastian the Martyr" in Perth occurs in 1534. The Chapel of the Holy Rood was "beyond" the bridge at Perth.—[*Reg. RHYND

Apparently in the early part of the 17th century the church was rebuilt on the old site in the south-east corner of the parish.
 The present church was erected in a more central situation in 1842. In 1214–38 the Cistercian Nunnery of Elcho at Orchardneuk was founded by David Lindsay of Glenesk and his mother, Aleonora de Limesay or Limassi, daugh. of Gerarde de L. It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.
 To the nunnery a charter of certain liberties was granted by David II; and a Papal Bull of 26th May 1418 confirmed the places of Elcho, Kynhard, Benyn, Standartlands, the places called the villages, with their rights, whole teinds, meadows, lands, knowes, pastures, fishings, woods, mills, possessions, and other places and goods wherever existing. Subsequently there occur fuller details of the possessions of the nunnery—the lands of Easter Binning, Wester Binning, Braidlaw, alias Middle Braidlaw, called the Nunlands, the lands of the vicarage and the patronage of the vicarage of the Parish Church of Binny, the lands of Braidlaw and Hunganside, alias Middle Binning, with the manor, with the church lands of Binny extending to 40 acres or thereby, in the County of Linlithgow; the lands of Wester Elcho, with the teind sheaves and great and small teinds, called lie Mains, the lands of Westerton of Elcho with the teinds, the lands of Cotis with lye outsettis called Cauldcottis, in the County of Perth; the lands called Standartlands or Standarts in Lothian (East); the lands of Kinniard with manor and dovecot, in Fife, granted by Madoch (Malise ?), Earl of Strathearn; the Church of Dun in Angus; and an annual rent of 8s. from land in the Castlegait, in Perth. In the 16th century misfortunes overtook the nunnery. Apparently about 1524-5 a Papal Bull granted the office of prioress to Dame Euphame Leslie on the resignation of Dame Elizabeth Swinton, who was stated to have been deprived because of excesses, but who herself affirmed that she had been compelled through fear to resign by Athol (John, third Earl) and the Bishop (Andrew Stewart) of Caithness, who at the head of 80 armed men had forced entrance into the Monastery and confined her in a chamber. For three or more years Dame Swinton, by various pleas against the monastery, uplifted the fruits and possessions "by force and arms," with the result that, to sustain and protect the monastery, cups and other precious things had to be sold and deposits contracted. By Robert Leslie of Innerpeffry, apparently the brother of Dame Eupham, help was rendered in various ways, including the redemption of the cups and the sustenance of the monastery, for two years; and in return for the money which he had thereby expended Dame Eupham granted him a charter of the lands of Kinnaird and the "feu-farm" of the same and also the fermes of the lands of Binning amounting respectively to 50 and 21 merks. Some years later financial stringency was again experienced; and on 22nd April 1540 the lands of Cotis were set in feu to Alexander Bruce of Fingask and his wife, Elizabeth Bruce, for the repair of the monastery and the regular houses, and for the relief of creditors. Further misfortune followed. In 1548 a party of the English garrison of Broughty Ferry Castle plundered and burned the monastery, thereby reducing the inmates to poverty and debt. From John Wemyss of Wemyss, who was appointed bailie of the monastery, help then and later was forthcoming towards relieving debts and charges, rebuilding the monastery, supplying food for prioress and nuns, and providing seed for tilling the mains and grange of Elcho. The debts brought the place near to being laid under "process of cursing," which would have arrested religious worship within its precincts. Unable to pay the debt of 400 merks thereby incurred to John Wemyss, the prioress and chapter granted to him in feu on 20th Aug. 1558 24 acres of the cottar lands in Elcho, and on 26th Sept. and 25th Oct. of the same year the mains and grange of Elcho. Subsequent to the Reformation the possessions of the monastery were constituted a lordship; and on 21st Sept. 1570 Mr Andrew Moncrieff, son of William Moncrieff of Moncrieff, was appointed commendator. On 6th Nov. of the same year he conveyed the fee to his son and heir, William, who seems to have predeceased his father; and on 20th Jan. 1601, following the death of Mr Andrew, the commendatorship was granted to Mr Alexander Moncrieff, min. of Abernethy. On 20th Feb. 1610 James VI suppressed the monastery and conveyed to David, Lord Scone, the Monastery and the Place of Elcho, and all the possessions save the nunlands, etc., in the County of Linlithgow, which had been granted in 1606 to Sir Thomas Hamilton of Monkland.—[*Acts Scott. ST MARTIN'S

To Holyrood Abbey William the Lion, 1165–1214, granted the church with all its just pertinents and with the land which in Scots (Gaelic) is called Abthane, and with the land which is called Petfrethin which lies on the west side of the church, as set forth in the charter of John, Bishop of Dunkeld, either John Scott, Bishop 1178–1203, or John of Leicester, Bishop 1200–1213. The Church of Cambusmichael was confirmed to Scone Abbey by William, Bishop of St Andrews 1202–38, being one of a group of churches described as granted to the abbey by Alexander I, Malcolm IV, William the Lion. Apparently from the Reformation the Churches of St Martin's (Megginch) and Cambusmichael were conjoined and served by one minister who preached in the Churches "per vices" every Sabbath. But there does not seem to have been any actual union, and each congregation kept apart from the other and attended worship only when it took place in their own church. Realising the unsatisfactory position, the Presbytery of Perth in 1644 resolved to take steps to have the churches disjoined, each to have a separate minister, and a competent stipend provided for Cambusmichael from Scone. It was further proposed to disjoin Friarton, Gardrum and Boghall from Scone and be attached to St Martin's, Balbeggie from Kinfauns and be attached to Scone, and Nether Colm from Scone and be attached to Cambusmichael. Efforts continued till at least 1650, but the proposed disjunction failed. The actual union of the parishes took place cir. 1690–3. The Church of St Martin was rebuilt in 1776, and again in 1842. The Church of Cambusmichael was situated in the churchyard beside the Tay, and, along with a chapel also in the churchyard, was described in 1794 as ruinous. The Abthane included in the Charter of William the Lion denotes that there had existed in the parish an early religious settlement governed by an abbot. Bauchland for Bacnall-land, that is "crozier-land" in the vicinity of the church, probably was so called because it belonged to this ancient monastery. The name was revived in "St Martin's Abbey," the designation of the Mansion House for a period in modern times.—[Holyrood Charters, 38; Chart. of Scone, 31; Hunter's Diocese of Dunkeld, i, 332–4; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 266–7.]

It is thought by Skene that Nectan, King of the Picts, who died in 732, founded at Scone a church dedicated to the Holy Trinity. Certainly there was at Scone a Culdee settlement which bore the foregoing dedication. It was a Muinnter, later known as a Celtic Abbacie—a church governed by an Ab who directed the affairs of the daughter churches. This church Alexander I re-formed in 1114–15, placing in it a colony of Canons Regular of the Augustinian Order, and adding to the original dedication of the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, St Michael, St John, St Laurence, and St Augustine. To the abbey thus established Robert I, on 7th April 1313, gave the Thanage of Abthane of Scone—the lands which had pertained to the Celtic Abbacie. The Church of Scone, along with its Chapels of Kinfauns, Crag, and Rait, was confirmed to Scone Abbey by Richard, Bishop of St Andrews 1163–77. In a confirmation charter of William, Bishop of St Andrews 1202–38, it is the first-named of a group of churches described as granted to the Abbey by Alexander I, Malcolm IV, William I. There were in the church altars dedicated to the Holy Trinity and to the Virgin Mary, the latter being situated on the north side of the church and called the "Quhyte-Ladye-Ile." It is said that the church was situated on the Chapel-hill near the Palace. However, there is uncertainty about the matter. In any case the Abbey Church seems to have been the Parish Church from the Reformation till 1624, when the abbey or what remained of it fell, and David, 1st Viscount Stormont, built a handsome church on the Mote Hill or Hill of Faith (Collis Credulitatis), 60 or 70 yards north of the old Abbey Church. In the latter part of the 18th century that church was in need of repairs, and, being otherwise inefficient, it was replaced by a new church built in 1784 in the village of Scone between the Palace and the Lodge Gate. All that was left of the old church was an aisle devoted to the purpose of a mausoleum of the Scone family. In 1804–5 the village was transplanted to New Scone, and with it was removed the church, taken down stone by stone and carefully rebuilt. In 1834 the village feuars increased the accommodation of the church by an abutment which lines north and south and gives the building the form of a T. Connected with the lands of Balquhorm or Balformach, situated on the west side of Scone, there was a chapel dedicated to St Marnoc, with chapel yard, croft called "Sanctmernok Croft," and dovecot. There were also at Scone the Croft of St James, Trinity Croft or Trinity-Land, a croft and garden called "Our-Lady-Petie-Land," St Katharine's Land, probably pertaining to the Altar of St Katharine in the Abbey Church, and land called Sanct Augustine's Land.—[Book of Scone, 1–2, 13–16, 31, 34–5, 41, 65–6, 97, 226, 229, 230, 231; *Reg. TIBBERMORE

In the church there were two altars founded on or about 4th Feb. 1532–3 by Sir James Cuthbertson—the Altar of St Cuthbert, of which he was chaplain, and the Altar of St James the Greater and St Ninian. There was in the churchyard a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and at Ruthven Castle an altar dedicated to St Peter, to each of which on 14th June 1509 Sir William Ruthven of Ruthven, Kt., fiar of the same, and Sir William Ruthven, Kt., life rent granted an annual rent of £10 from lands in the barony. At Huntingtower there was a chapel which, it may be presumed because of the proximity of a spring called St Conwall's Well, was dedicated to that saint. In the part of the parish north of the Almond there was a Chapel of St Serf, deserted, it is said, because a child of Lord Ruthven of Huntingtower, who had been baptised in it, was drowned in the Almond when the members of the family were returning home. Bishop George Brown of Dunkeld, 1485-1514, rebuilt and restored the chapel, appointed a vicar for it, and gave him a vicarage and glebe lands.—[Mackinlay's *Ancient Ch. AUCHTERARDER

In 1200 the Church of "Mackessog of Auchterarane" (Auchterarder) was granted to Inchaffray Abbey by Gilbert, Earl of Strathearn. The church was situated about half a mile east of what was said to have been a hunting-seat of Malcolm Canmore.
Its remains were designated "St Mungo's Chapel" in each Statistical Account. The present church was built in 1784, and in 1811 it was enlarged by "setting back" the front wall.—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, Strageith. In 1200 the church was granted to Inchaffray Abbey by Gilbert, Earl of Strathearn. The church was rebuilt in 1738, and the present church was built in 1850. The Church or Chapel of Tulli-bardine was built in 1446 by Sir David Murray of Tullibardine, for the purpose of a collegiate church. To what further extent

Sir David proceeded with his scheme is not clear. In any case, in furtherance of the declared purpose of William Murray of Tullibardine, son and successor of Sir David, to endow and infest certain chap-lainries in the "Chapel" of Tullibardine, James II, by charter of 31st Oct. 1455, transferred to the chapel and to the patronage of the said William, a chaplainry which had been founded in the Church of Muthill, with the lands of Kildeis as endowment, by the king's predecessors, Earls of Strathearn, which apparently had fallen into desuetude. There are subsequent references to chaplainries in the church or chapel, two in number, Kildais (Culdees) and Tullibardine. It may be that the full collegiate erection was not completed. The dedication is variously given as the Holy Trinity and the Blessed Saviour.—[Charters

COMRIE and TULLICHETLE

The present church was built in 1805.
 Under the name of the Church of St Serf of Tulliedene, the Church of Tullichetle was granted to Inchaffray Abbey by Gilbert, Earl of Strathearn, in 1219, confirmation being given in 1220 by Gilbert's son, Robert. Apparently in this parish were the lands of Barnseles, Barnachills, or Barnahillis (Church-hill), with the chapel and sacred bell of St Kessog, belonging to the lordship of Drummond.—[Inchaffray Charters, 32, 34, 41; Reg. Mag. Sig., iii, 1895, 2504.]

CRIEFF

Apparently in addition to the high altar there was in the church another altar dedicated to St Michael, called Pittenteane, the designation probably denoting the endowment of the altar. In May 1776 a petition was presented to the Presbytery of Auch-terarder by several heads of families in the parish, setting forth the inadequacy of the church and the rent condition of its walls, and craving that the heritors be compelled to provide a new church. Protracted litigation ensued as to the liability for the cost of the new church and the division of the area among the heritors. At last, in 1787, the church was built; but the allocation was not finally settled till 1828. In the previous year the church had required repairs. In 1882 the present church in Strathearn Terrace was erected, and the church of 1787 became a hall.—[*Macara's

GASK or FINDO-GASK

Alternative names of the church were Nesgasc and Gasknes. The saint was Findoca, described in the Martyrology of Aberdeen at 13th Oct. as "a virgin who has a Church in the diocese of Dunblane." The 13th Oct. is the day of "Findsech, a virgin from Sliabh Guaire in Gailenga," now part of Meath—Findseck, Findoc, Latin Findoca. In 1210–18 Seher or Seyr de Quincey, Earl of Winton, granted the church to the Hospital of St James and St John of Brackley in Northampton, for the souls of his father, Robert, his mother, Orable, his eldest son, Robert, his son,

William, and his wife, Margaret. At Whit-Sunday 1266 the master and brethren set the church ad firmam for five years to Robert, Bishop of Dunkeld, for an annual payment of 24 merks sterling, with provision that if the Bishop desired the church ad firmam for a further five years, the agreement would be renewed, and so on for successive periods of five years. The agreement appears to have been periodically renewed, for in 1358 the church was the patrimony of the Archdeanery of Dunblane, being termed "His (Archdean) Church of Nesgask." The church was rebuilt in 1800.—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, 53, 55–6, 124–5, 155–7; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 286–7.]

MADDERTY

The church was granted by Gilbert, Earl of Strathearn, to the Monastery of Inchaffray, which he founded in 1200. The parish was formed out of Earl Gilbert's new manor of Madderty, forfeited by Gillecome Marescall, who was slain 30th Sept. 1185. Madderty was the seat of an early Celtic monastery, the lands of which, called the Abthane of Madderty, were also bestowed by Earl Gilbert upon Inchaffray Monastery. At Williamston there was a chapel dedicated to St Anne, with lands called "Sanct-Annis-lands," and moor called "Sanct-Annis-Mos." The churches belonging to the Abbey of Inchaffray were—Aberuthven, Auchterarder, Madderty, Strageith, Kinkell, Wester Foulis, Dunning, Monzievaird, Kilbride (Dunblane), Trinity-Gask, Inishail, Strowan, Killin, Kilmorich, Balfron, Tullichetil and Cortachy, granted in 1257, but the grant may not have taken effect. To the abbey also belonged the Chapel of the Holy Trinity Teampul-na-Trianade, with the lands of Karynche (Carinish), in North Uist. Cells of the abbey were Abernethy Priory, and Strathfillan Priory, "Scarinch Priory, Isle of Lewis" has also been recorded as a cell of Inchaffray, but this may be due to confusion with Carinish in North Uist. In the first part of the 13th century the Abbot of Inchaffray was assigned a canonry, the precentorship, in Dunblane Cathedral.—[Reports Hist. MSS. Commis., iv, 515;

The church, in which there was a pulpit with the date 1617, was rebuilt in 1685, repaired shortly before 1795, and rebuilt in 1830–1. The Church of Innerpeffray, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was situated in a detached portion of the parish of Monzie, which by Decreet of the Court of Session in 1702 was transferred to the parish of Muthill. By charter of 3rd Feb. 1506–7, John, Lord of Drummond, for the souls of the King and Queen, of Elizabeth Lindsay, his wife, and of Margaret, his daughter, granted to four chaplains to celebrate at four altars in the church an annual rent of 40 merks from the lands of Innerpeffray and Dunfallis, with houses, manses, gardens, etc. Manifestly these chaplains were intended to constitute the prebendaries of the collegiate erection, which, it is stated, was carried out by the said John in 1508. The church is designated a collegiate church in a charter of 25th Oct. 1542; and on 3rd Jan. 1581–2 there occurs “William Lindsay, Provost and Chief or Perpetual Chaplain of the Church of the Virgin of Innerpeffray,” who at that date set in feu to James Drummond of Innerpeffray 6 acres of lands, 6 acres lying together in the lands of Logan beside the Gellie-burne, four gardens between Pethis-Manis and the Royal Way, and the lands of Kirkhill between Pethis-Manis and the Water of Erne. These are in the main “the Church lands, acres, houses and gardens of the Provostry of the Collegiate Church of Innerpeffray, with teinds of the same, viz., the lands of Burnesyde, lie Priestes aikers, 6 acres of land, other 6 acres, 4 gardens, lands of Kirkseyde (vel. Kirkhill) with teinds of the same,” in Monzie parish, occurring in a Retour of 1624. Several references also occur to the patronage of the Collegiate Church of Innerpeffray and Chaplainries of the same. In 1602–3 and at other dates reference is made to the “Church lands or glebe called lie Ibert of the Parish Church of Monzie.” Ibert is the Gaelic Iobairt, an offering or gift land to the Church.—[*Reg. MONZIEVAIRD and STROWAN

In 1219 the Church of Monzievaired was granted to Inchaffray Abbey by Gilbert, Earl of Strathearn. Alternate services were held in the Churches of Monzievaired and Strowan till 1804, when the present church was built in a central position for the united parish. The old Church of Monzievaired was situated in the old churchyard within the grounds of Ochertyre, and its site is now occupied by a mausoleum. In 1490, as a result of a feud between the Murrays and Drummonds, there was fought a battle in which the latter suffered a reverse. The former, with their wives and children, proceeded to Monzievaired Church to give thanks for their victory, and thither they were followed by the Drummonds, who had been reinforced by McRobbies and Campbells. Surrounding the church, the Drummonds and their allies set fire to the building, which had a roof of thatch; and the Murrays, with one exception, were either burned to death or slain when attempting to escape. Evidence of the deed was found in the discovery of the bones of the victims when the site was cleared for the foundations of the mausoleum. In 1556, and at other dates, reference is made to "the Glebe and Church Lands of the vicarage of Monywaired (between the Water of Turret, the Burn lie Kelak, and the lands of the Lord of Monywaired, called Ballintra), called lie Yburd." Yburd, Ibert, is the Gaelic Iobairt, and denotes an offering or gifts made to the Church. In 1282-3 Malise, son of Malise, Earl of Strathearn, granted to Inchaffray Abbey the Church of Struy (Strowan), with the ground on which the church was founded, and the portion of land with which the Church was dowered by him at its dedication. The ruins of the church are situated in the churchyard nearly opposite Strowan House. The saint here is evidently St Ronan, Abbot of Cann Garadh, Kingarth in Bute, who died in 737.—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, 32, 33, 104, 170-2; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 254, 309; Macara's Crieff, 88, 89, 116; *Reg. MUTHIL

The remains of the old church include the early Norman tower and portions of the rebuilding scheme carried out in or soon after 1425 by Dean Michael Ochiltree of Dunblane, afterwards Bishop of Dunblane. A sketch from the north-east by John Claude Nattes about 1799 shows that the nave and aisle had a roof of one span with no clerestory over the nave arcade. On the north side of the chancel is a tomb with two recumbent figures much defaced, which, according to a tablet placed there by their descendants, the Drummonds of Megginche, late of Lennoch in Strathearn, in 1880, are those of Ada, daughter of Henry, Seneschal of Strathearn, and of Sir Muriel Drummond, first knight of Con-craig, who died in 1362. There was also a Chapel of St Patrick at Strageath which lies in a north-easterly direction from Muthil. Near it is the farm of Dalpatrick. According to the Breviary of Aberdeen, St Fergus, with a few companions, settled for a time in Strathearn near Strogeth, now Strageath in Muthil, where he founded three churches and dedicated them to St Patrick. The Chapel of St Patrick at Struthill is described by Macfarlane in the first part of the 18th century as "ane old ruinous popish cheaple where superstitious people used to bind distracted persons upon a large stone in the middle of it, and it has been reported that they have been loos'd and restored to their right wits in the morning." The well near by was regarded as having curative properties; and people visiting it left "a penny, a clout, a pairte of the beastis hair, or any such trifle as ane offering to the Sanct." So seriously did the Presbytery of Auchterarder regard the superstitious practices that in 1650 it ordered the walls of the chapel to be thrown down. But portions at least remained till 1846, when they were removed and the burying-ground levelled, and the well drained into a trough. The foundation stone of the present church was laid on 14th March 1826, and the building was completed in August 1828.—[Macfarlane's Geog. Collections, i, 132, S.H.S.; Ross's *Eccles. TRINITY-GASK

The church was also designated Gask Christ or Gascrit, which might indicate an alternative dedication to the Saviour. In 1220–3 Gilbert, Earl of Strathearn, granted the church to the Abbey of Inchaffray. The church was rebuilt in 1770. At the farm of Cow or Coul Gask there was a chapel, the site of which, designated the Chapelhill, was trenched over in the early part of the 19th century.—[Charters of Inchaffray Abbey, 39.]

PRESBYTERY OF STIRLING

AIRTH

The church was granted to Holyrood Abbey by David I, apparently soon after 1128. The ruins of the medieval church stand in the churchyard near Airth Castle. On the south side of the nave is the Airth Aisle, called "Our-Ladeis-eyle of Airth," probably of the 15th century; and west of it is the Elphingston Aisle erected about 1600. There is also the Bruce Aisle of date 1414. The date of the tower is 1647. The present church was opened for worship on 20th Feb. 1820. The Lady Well is described in the 18th century as near the Abbeytown bridge. There was a chapel at Carnock in the barony of Plean.—[Charters of Holyrood, 7; *Reg. ALLOA

On 21st Oct. 1497 Alexander, Lord Erskine, granted an annual rent of 24 sh. from his land and croft in Alloa called Croft-Angrie, to a qualified chaplain to celebrate at the Altar of St Kentigern

"which is called 'the great and authentic Altar' in the Church of Alloa." The remains of the old church, which was repaired and enlarged in 1680, are situated in the churchyard. The present church was erected in 1819. The interior redecoration of the church, at a cost of £8,000, was completed in Sept. 1937.—[Reg. Mag. Sig., ii, 2377.]

The old church consists of bare walls, the roof and windows having been removed in 1916. More than three and a half centuries earlier it had suffered a somewhat similar fate at the hands of a French army, which, in 1560, had marched into Fife from Edinburgh by way of Stirling. Compelled to retreat on the same track, they found their passage blocked by the action of Kirkcaldy of Grange in breaking down the bridge across the Devon at Tullibody, and they had resort to removing the roof of the church and utilising the timbers to provide a substitute bridge.—[Beveridge's Between the Ochils and the Forth, 309.]

CLACKMANNAN

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 24th Aug. 1249. It belonged to Cambuskenneth Abbey, having been granted to the same by David I prior to 1153, along with 40 acres of land and the priest's toft in the town of Clackmannan. About 1160 the grant was confirmed by King David's son, Malcolm IV. The church was served by a parish chaplain from the Abbey. Alloa Church was a dependent chapel of Clackmannan—a position that was not without friction. In a dispute between Sir Thomas Erskine, Kt., of that ilk, and the Abbot of Cambuskenneth, regarding the services of Alloway (Alloa) Chapel, which,

Sir Thomas affirmed, should be performed by the Abbot as perpetual vicar of Clackmannan, a Decree Arbitral was pronounced on 4th April 1401 to the effect that the canon or priest serving at Clackmannan should serve in the chapel on the Lord's Day and festival days, in the manner hitherto, if the licence of the Bishop of St Andrews was procured by Sir Thomas and the inhabitants and others frequenting the chapel. Eight years later the matter in dispute was the repair of Clackmannan Church, to which the parishioners at Clackmannan declined to contribute on the ground that the inhabitants of the Lordship of Alloway were refusing so to do; and in a letter of 20th May 1409 Henry Wardlaw, Bishop of St Andrews, found that Alloway was bound to make contribution, instructed the parish chaplain of the Church of Clackmannan to warn the parishioners, and especially those in the Lordship of Alloway, to begin repairs in thirty days and carry them to completion, on pain of excommunication, and directed that, in the event of the recreants lying under excommunication for nine days, with hardened hearts, the Church of Clackmannan, and the chapels and oratories within the parish, should be placed under ecclesiastical interdict, and that no divine service should be performed or sacraments administered in the same excepting the absolution of the dying and the baptism of infants. There were in the church an altar dedicated to St Ninian and in the barony of Sauchie a chapel dedicated to St Blane.—[Chart. of Cambuskenneth, 29–30, 31–3; Lockhart's Ch. in Scot. in 13th Century, 63; Gaw's *Prot. DENNY

By Act of Parliament in 1641 the church, which "some fourtie years" earlier "had been dismembered from the parsonage of Falkirk with the consent of the patron and the parson" of that parish, was erected into a parish and was granted the privileges, liberties, emoluments, and endowments competent to a parish. Enclosed within the waters of Carron and Boyne, and situated four miles from Falkirk, the inhabitants of Denny could not possibly have the benefit of Divine Service at Falkirk, and for the space foresaid, forty years, they had been served "be thair owne pastores upon meanes within themselfis."—[*Acts Scott. DOLLAR

The church was dedicated to St Columba, and belonged to Inchcolm Abbey, being apparently a mensal church of the abbot. A scheme of restoration or rebuilding of the church by the abbot is said to have been in process in 1336, when valuable woodwork about to be used in the scheme was carried off by English raiders from ships in the Firth of Forth. According to the tale, the vessel containing the timber and the raiders sank in a storm in deep water off Inchcolm, the tempest being due to the intervention of St Columba. The church was rebuilt in 1775, and again in 1841.—Book of Pluscarden, 281, Scott. Historians; Scotichronicon, Goodall's Ed., xiii, cxxxvii; *Extracta Variis Chron. LARBERT and DUNIPACE

Larbert and Dunipace were described as chapels or chapel kirks on 11th July 1606, when the Chapel of Larbert was erected by Parliament into a separate parsonage. They were also described on 1st June 1621 as "formerlie united," but there does not appear to be any record of the actual date of union. On 4th Aug. 1621 there were before Parliament two warrants under the King's hand "concerning the appointing and determinating wche of the two Kirks of Larbert and Dunipace formerlie united should be the ordinarie place of publick divine service of the said two parishes." In the Parish of Dunipace there were a chapel dedicated to St Helen, the mother of Constantine the Great, situated near St Helen's Loch now extinct, and a chapel dedicated to St Alexander. To the latter, vestiges of which existed in 1723, there pertained lands called the Kirklands. A short distance from the chapel was St Alexander's Well, "famous in old times for several cures." In the neighbourhood there were also St Alexander's Hill, St Alexander's Cuthill, evidently a grove, a retreat in a wood, and the Cuthill Burn. As a dependent chapel of St Ninian's, Larbert was granted, probably about 1130, to Cambuskenneth Abbey by Robert, Bishop of St Andrews 1124–58.—[Acts Scott. Parl., iv, 346b, 407b; *Reg. DUNIPACE

As a dependent Chapel of St Ninian's, Dunipace was granted, probably about 1130, to Cambuskenneth Abbey by Robert, Bishop of St Andrews 1124-58. In 1163 Pope Alexander III confirmed to Dunfermline Abbey the Chapel of the Castle of Dunipace; and there was a similar confirmation in 1184 by Pope Crucius III. Subsequently there arose a dispute regarding the chapel between the Abbot and Convent of Dunfermline and the Abbot and Canons of Cambuskenneth, and on 24th Oct. 1215 there was confirmed an agreement between the parties, whereby the Abbot and Canons of Cambuskenneth gave up all right to the church in favour of the Abbot and Convent of Dunfermline. Subsequently, and before 21st Jan. 1426-7, Dunipace became a parish. The old church, situated near the "Hills of Dunipace," was replaced by the present church, opened on 29th June 1834. There was in the parish a Chapel of St Alchenter (Alexander), who is said to have been the son of a Scottish king. The well of the chapel also bore the saint's name, and was famous for reputed cures. At the close of the first quarter of the 18th century vestiges of the chapel still remained. In the latter part of the 13th century an uncle of Sir William Wallace served the cure of Dunipace. His house Sir William frequently made his home; and he was the author of the following lines, which the famous patriot oft repeated:

"Dio tibi verum, libertas est optima rerum, Nunquam servili sub nexu vivito fili."

("I will tell you the truth, of all things liberty's the best,

O never be, my son, with slavery opprest.")

In Torwood was Wallace's oak-tree, said to have been twelve feet in diameter, in the hollow trunk of which Sir William secreted himself after his defeat in the north.—[Chart. of Cambuskenneth, 43-4, 112, 114-16, 148, 149-57; Chart. of Dunfermline, 152, 157; Macfarlane's *Geograph. ST NINIAN'S

The church was also sometimes called the Parish Church of Kirketoun and the Parish Church of St Ninian of Kirketoun. Probably in or about 1130, the church with its Chapels of Dunipace and Larbert and its other chapels and oratories was granted to Cambuskenneth Abbey by Robert, Bishop of St Andrews 1124-58. Kirk O' Muir, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was situated at Dundaff. In 1458, and again in 1468, it is designated "the Chapel of St Mary of Garvald in Dundafmoor." On 8th Feb. 1458-9 King James II granted to the chaplain and his successors in the chapel 2 merks of the lands of Ernbeg "in which is situated the Cross of Kippen" in the Lordship of Menteith. At one time it was a charge apart from St Ninian's, and was termed "the Church of Dundaffmure." The Lord's Supper was served in it after the Reformation. Before the middle of last century all trace of the church had gone; but a small burial-ground remained. The patronage of the church was in the hands of the Grahames of Montrose. Among the possessions of the Chapel of the Virgin Mary of Skeoch (Bannockburn) was lie Cuthill, a grove, a special place of residence, a retreat among trees, possibly the abode of "the hermit of the Chapel of Bannockburn," to whom on 16th May 1496 James IV gave an offering of 4 sh. The same monarch gave alms to the priests of the chapel on 26th Aug. 1505, and to the chapel a Mass Book on 20th Jan. 1506–7. On 14th Aug. 1533 James V made a payment of £3 6s. 8d. to Sir James Inglis, chaplain, “that sings for the King’s soul at Bannockburn.”—[Chart. of Cambuskenneth, 43–4; *Reg. STIRLING

On 21st Jan. 1361–2 Sir Robert de Erskine, Kt., Chamberlain of Scotland, granted to Cambuskenneth Abbey the patronage of the Church of Kinnoull for the repair of the abbey, which had suffered “by reason of divers incursions of the English and others who have taken away gold and silver chalices, linen and woollen cloths, and Church ornaments, charters and instruments,” and through the bell tower being struck by lightning and burned, and the choir thereby also “greatly destroyed.” By charter of 10th March 1402–3 Robert III conveyed to the abbey the Hospital of St James at “the Caleyard of the Brig of Stirling.” Before 24th Jan. 1488 James IV founded a chaplainry at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the abbey for the singing of masses for the souls of his father, James III, and his mother, Queen Margaret. Other altars in the abbey were St Andrew, St John the Evangelist, St John the Baptist, St Laurence, St Nicholas, St Ninian, St Catharine, and All Saints. The Altar of St Ninian is described as “in the Parish Church of Cambuskenneth,” and therefore in all likelihood it was the parochial altar with the chaplain serving the parochial cure.—[Chart. of Cambuskenneth, 224–5, 297, 307; Reg. Great Seal, i, App. i, 151, App. ii, 1797; Reg. Sec. Seal, i, 2040; Lord High Treas. Accs., i, 102, ix, 449; Cal. Papal Regs., Petitions, i, 475, 539, Letters, iv, 234.]

WILLIAM STIRLING, pres. on death of James Kennedy; died before 9th Feb. 1622; his son, William, had sasine of annual rent from lands of Easter Feddels in Perthshire; there is apparent obscurity as to his actual residence here. On 17th Sept. 1622 there is a “narrative of the desolate congregation of Aberfule for want of a pastor, where never in no man’s memory living there was any resident minister to preach the Word of God and minister His Holy Sacraments, where-through the most part of the parishioners thereof remains in great blindness and ignorance,” and that William, Earl of Menteith, Lord Kilpunt and Kilbryde, had made contract on the foregoing date “obliging himself and his heirs for the weal of the souls of his tenants and vassals in the parish of Aberfoil to provide a competent stipend to the minister who shall serve the cure in the said parish in all time coming, and to make the Glebe and Manse ‘void and rid’ of the present possessors.” On the above narrative Adam Bellenden, Bishop of Dunblane, granted on the same date a Bond of Dissolution of the patronage of the Church of Aberfoyle from the Bishopric of Dunblane, and gave a Procuratory for resigning the same into the King’s hands in favour of the said Earl William.—[*Reports, Hist. CALLANDER

The church belonged to the Bishopric of Dunblane, from which it was dissolved by James VI on 8th July 1594, the patronage being then united to the barony of Callander. About 1773 the church was rebuilt in the centre of the town. It had a "pavilion roof," a spire over the pediment at the front, a bell which, provided by public subscription, was cast in Glasgow, and is said to have been heard at a distance of up to 12-14 miles. The present church was built in 1881-2. The circular mount, Tom-na-Chessaig, adjoined the churchyard, and the fair, Feill-na-Chessaig, was held on 21st March, 10th in the old style. The Church of Kilmachog is doubtless the "Church of St Maghot" in the Diocese of Dunblane, which occurs in 1275. The "Church of St Mathocus" (Mathoc), which appears in the same year and in the same diocese, seems to be another form of the name. The saint may be St Hog or St Chug, Kilmachog being Cill Mo-Shug, whose festival was on 26th Nov. The parish of Kilmachog appears to have been united to Callander after 16th June 1620. The church, in whole or in part, was in existence in 1723. On 15th Sept. 1572 Donald Dewar received a Crown Charter of the 40 penny lands of Garrindewar or Carnedewar in Strathgartney in the Seneschalship of Menteith, "which formerly were mortified for the ringing of a bell before corpses on thir way to interment in the parish of Kilmahog in papal times." At Little Leny, a short distance west of Callander, there was a chapel called Norie's Chapel, with a graveyard which was the burial-place of the Buchanans. Here also was a conical mount similar to the eminence at Callander Churchyard. At Anie on the east side of the road opposite the lower end of Loch Lubnaig there was a chapel with graveyard, dedicated to St Bridgit. Before 10th April 1615 the Commissioners united part of the parish of Leny to the parish of Port of Menteith, another part of the parish of Kincardine, and the remainder with the manse and glebe to the parish of Callander.—[*Reg. KILMACHOG

By Act of 17th Dec. 1669, Parliament transferred to Doune "a Fair anciently kept at the Kirk of Kilmahony (Kilmachog) on St Mahans' or Mahon's Day, 15th November." The actual transference had been effected between 1633 and 1639. St Mahan or Mahon may be regarded as indicating the patron saint of the church.—[Acts Scott. Parl., vii, 663]. (See Kilmadock)

KILMADOCK

The patron saint was Docus (Madoc), a shortened form of Cadog of Llancarvan, an eminent Welsh saint of the 6th century, one of the sons of Cannton, king of the Britons. The church was situated at the junction of the Annat Burn with the Teith. According to the Old Statistical Account it was transferred to Doune in 1756. That, however, is contested in the New Statistical Account, which further affirms that the church was taken down in 1744 and a new church built in Doune two years later. By Act of Parliament 17th Dec. 1669 there were transferred to Doune "the Fair anciently kept at the Kirk of Kilmaddock on St Mettan's Day, 31st January," and "the Fair anciently kept at the Kirk of Kilmahoug (Kilmahog) on St Mahan's or St Mahon's Day, 15th November." The Act was in reality the ratification of what had taken place in each case between 1633 and 1639. There was a Chapel of St Fillan inside Doune Castle; and near the Castle there was another chapel with the same dedication. The latter may have been identical with the chapel which existed at Newton a short distance from Doune. Other chapels were situated respectively at Annat, on the Annat Burn, Lanrick, Torry, Walton, and probably also at the Bridge of Teith. One of those chapels may have been identical with the Chapel of Cristis Well in the parish, of which on 5th Dec. 1519 Sir Dionysius Row was appointed chaplain in succession to late Sir John Done. The former was succeeded on 10th March 1536-7 by Robert Arnot. It may be noted that a short distance to the east of the Annat Burn is Loch Mahaick, Loch Mo-Thathaig, from Mo-Thatha, the form assumed in Scottish Gaelic by the Irish name Tua, "the silent one," whose day was 22nd December. But there is no definite proof of a connection between Tua and the Annat Chapel.—[Reg. Great Seal, viii, 1239; [Reg. Sec. Seal, i, 3056, ii, 2226; *Acts Scott. KINCARDINE IN MENTEITH

In or about 1199 King William the Lion granted to the Abbey of Cambuskenneth the Church of Kincardine with its chapels . . . and a toft with garden pertaining to the bell of St Lolan, and a toft with garden pertaining to the staff of St Lolan. In 1612 and again in 1675 the Holy Bell of St Lolan appears as a pertinent of the Barony of Kincardine. It is said that at Kincardine St Lolan was buried. Among the church lands were the Croft of St Lolan and the Croft of St Lawrence, but it may be that the latter is identical with the former, Lawrence being an error for Lolan.—[Chart of Cambuskenneth, 166–7; Retours, 128, xxxii, 184; *Reg. KIPPEN

About 1286 Walter (Stewart), Earl of Menteith, and Alexander, his son and heir, for the safety of their own souls and of the soul of Matilda, wife of Alexander, and for a selected burial place for them in the Abbey of Cambuskenneth, granted to the said abbey the Church of Kippen with the patronage of the same. By charter of 6th April 1496 James IV, patron of the church, in view of the fact that the church and its patronage had been out of the possession of the abbey for a long time, confirmed the Earl's donation, granting the church and its patronage and also its parsonage and vicarage after the demission or decease of Mr John Mayson, the rector. Meantime—and at what date does not appear—the church was also a Canonry and Prebend of Dunblane Cathedral, and was administered by the cathedral as such. Each party laid claim to the church; and ultimately there was made, on 13th March 1510, an agreement between James Chisholm, Bishop of Dunblane, and Andrew, Abbot of Cambuskenneth, whereby the vicarage of the church, with its fruits, rents, revenues, and £20 from the fruits, rents, and profits of the rectory, along with the manse of the prebend, constituted a canonry and prebend of Dunblane Cathedral, and the fruits of the rectory, subject to the payment of the said £20, were granted to the Abbey in pure alms. In terms of this agreement, on 21st July 1510 Andrew, Abbot of Cambuskenneth, was instituted in the said rectory with all its sundry rights, etc., by the delivery to him of the book, chalice, and other ornaments before the High Altar in the choir of the church. The successive canons and prebends were held bound either by themselves or by fit and sufficient chaplains to minister all services to the Church of Kippen. The early church was situated on the knoll, called Kirkhill, in a field near Kirkhill Cottage. On 12th Oct. 1489, James IV, returning to Stirling from the field of Gartalunane in the neighbourhood of Aberfoyle, where the rebel force led by the Earl of Lennox had been defeated, made an offering of an angel (23s.) in the church for the said victory.

By Act of 8th Feb. 1665 the Commissioners for the Plantation of Kirkis decerned the removal of the church to a site more commodious for the parish, the building being then described as ruinous. Difficulties developed, and the matter was deferred, probably till 1691, when a church was built. The latter was repaired in 1777, and now stands a ruin in the churchyard close to the village. The present church was built in 1827. It is embellished internally by the art of Sir D. Y. Cameron, R.A., R.S.A., etc.—[Cal. Papal Reg., Letters, vii, 252–3, viii, 438; *Reg. Sec. LECROPT

The saint is said to have been Moroc, Abbot of Dunkeld, and to have been buried here. An alternative form claimed as having been in use here is Maworrock, which, however, indicates Mo-Bharroc, the affectionate diminutive of Barrfind, son of Aed, who was a brother of Findbarr (St Barr). In terms of a letter of Richard (of Inverkeithing), Bishop of Dunkeld, of date 2nd Nov. 1260, the said Bishop and Chapter of Dunkeld ordained that the Church of Lecropt in which the Abbot and Convent of Cambuskenneth previously had no right, should on the granter's collation pertain to said abbot and convent, who were held bound to supply the church with a qualified

NORRIESTON

On 7th June 1649 the parishioners and ministers of Kilmadock and Kincardine, and the Moderator of the Presbytery of Dunblane, presented to Parliament a petition to the effect that "qr they have taken in thair considerasun of that part of the cuntrie whair they reseid the dangerous conditioun thair of by reasone of Ignorance and the want of the power of godlines among the most pairt of the Inhabitants, They conceive this great evill not only to aryse from poucitie of kirk among them and consequent penurie of the menis, but also from the inconvenient and dissordorlie situasun of these that are espeallie of the parishes of Kincardine and Kilmadock the boundis of thair residence that lye so promiscouslie in a dismembered and disjointed way as will be found strange to thais who shall perambulat the bounds and diligentlie consider of the same Whairfoir it coms to pase that many of the comouns are strangers not only to the preaching of the Word but discipline and uyr means tending to the promoving of personall and domesticall reformasun, being far distant from their awne parish kirk and not subject to the censor and ordor of that kirk to the which the place of yr residence is nearest Whence libertie Ignorance and profanitie is much cherished and puritie wt the promoving of reformasun much hindered and obstructed in these pairts. For remead of which evils they have resolved upon building a Church and the erectioun of a new parish, and are content and willing to build the same upon their own chairgis and to provyd a Manse and gleab yrto pro-vyding they may have a competent maintinance out of the teinds of the sd parish for him who shall be appointed to serve at the said kirk Thairfoir humble supplicating the Comissrs of the General Assembly That they wold be pleased to give thair concurrence for promoving of the said work and give thair best advyce to the Parliament for thair erectioun of the said kirk and provyding of the same wt ane competent stipend and that they wold show Him what may be the most compendious course for them to chuse Whereby this work may tak some speedie effect without any longer delay which they trust will be a service very acceptable to God and conducing much for the reformsun of these bounds As at mair lenth is conteinet in the said supplicsun Quhilk being recommendit by the saids Comissionars of the General Assemblee to the estaits of Parliament and thairefter being red and considerit be them

They have recomendit and seriouslie recommends the forsaid supplicsun and the desyre of the supplicants therein contentit to the Comissrs appointit for plantation of kirkis that some short and speidie course may be takine thairanent without delay.” In the following year the church was built, Mr Gabriel Norrie of Norrieston giving both the site of the church and the churchyard. But for the stipend no such provision was made as suggested by the petition. Later, however, we learn that the stipend was paid from a fund raised in part from contributions by the people of the district; and in part by collections made in five Synods under the authority of the General Assembly of 1730. The money thus provided, called the Norrieston Fund, was utilised for the purchase of land which was managed by the Presbytery of Dunblane, the net income being paid to the minister. There were also a glebe of six acres and a manse with garden built in 1774. At the closing period of the 18th century the stipend is stated—“£30 stg. and 40 bolls of meal or bear.” A new church was built in 1812; and it gave place in 1879 to the present church outside the churchyard. At first the minister was assistant to the minister of Kincardine, who had the power of nomination for the office. But in 1771, on a petition from the congregation, the General Assembly allowed the post, then vacant, to be filled by a majority of the examinable persons attached to the church. As early as 1853 steps were taken to secure the erection of the parish quoad sacra, but difficulties about the title to the properties caused delay.—[Acts Scott. Parl., vi, (2), 400.]

SYNOD OF FIFE

The Register of the Synod of Fife begins in 1610. The first volume is Diocesan, and the first entry is of date 7th Sept. 1610 on page 5, pages 1-4 being missing. This volume extends to 27th April 1636. The next volume begins 2nd April 1639, and extends to 9th April 1657. The third volume, like the first, is also Diocesan and extends from 14th Oct. 1662 to 6th Oct. 1687.

PRESBYTERY OF DUNFERMLINE

Comparison of dates shows that the church was granted to Inchcolm Abbey 1123-4—donor unknown. The south aisle was added in the early part of the 16th century; and there is on the north side a small transeptal 17th-century aisle. In 1796-8 a new church was built in Wester Aberdour; and the old church was left roofless. An effective scheme of restoration, rendered possible by the munificence of the Misses Lawrie of Starleyburn, was carried out in 1925-6; and services in the church were resumed in July of the latter year. On 13th April 1927 the Presbytery reaffirmed the status of the church as the church of the parish. The church in Wester Aberdour has been converted into a church hall. Sir Henry Ramsay was vicar of the parish 5th June 1551, when Letters of Legitimation were granted to his natural sons—John, Alexander, James. Dalgety and Beath were united with Aberdour 1611-43 (see Beath) and history in part repeated itself on 21st June 1940, when Aberdour and Dalgety were united along with St Colme's, Aberdour, the former U.F. Charge, under the name of Aberdour and Dalgety. Near Bowprrie, a short distance south of Aberdour, there was a chapel dedicated to St Martin, belonging to Inchcolm Abbey. On 22nd July 1474 the hospital in Easter Aberdour was founded by Sir John Scott, Canon of Inchcolm and Vicar of Aberdour, in honour of the Omnipotent God, His Most Blessed Mother, Mary, our Lady, ever-virgin, and the Blessed Martha, the hostess of our Lord Jesus Christ, for the support, maintenance and entertainment of poor pilgrims and wayfarers who visited St Fillan's Well in the village. The foundation was based upon a gift of 1 acre of land and a free manse for the vicar by James, Earl of Morton. On 22nd June 1474 Michael, Abbot of Inchcolm, had granted to the said Sir John Scott the cure of the hospital. An additional 3 acres of land were given by the Earl of Morton on 1st Sept. 1479. But, finding in 1486 that the scheme had not been completed, the Earl, with the place given over to him by Sir John Scott, added a further 4 acres, and by Charter of 16th Oct. 1486 placed the hospital under the charge of the Third Order of St Frances. This was confirmed by Bull of Pope Innocent VIII, 23rd June 1487, granting the hospital with its chapel, gardens, fields, rights, goods, and all pertinents, to Isobel and Jean Wight, Frances Henryson and Jean Dross, sisters of the Third Order of St Frances called de paenitentia, and to John Scott, Canon of Inchcolm and Vicar of Aberdour, Master and founder of "the Hospital of St Mary the Virgin." Authority was also given to the Bishop of Dunkeld to "altogether and utterly suppress and extinguish in the said Hospital the name and title of Hospital and all the rights of a Hospital"; the buildings were to be altered and enlarged with dormitory, refectory and cloister, after the pattern of other hospitals of the Order in France, etc.; and the sisters were to receive maidens and other women fleeing from the world, and to retain and instruct therein young maidens of honourable parentage, willing to be instructed in literature and good arts. The effort to make the dedication entirely to the Virgin was not successful; and the place continued to be called St Martha's Hospital of Aberdour. There was in the church an altar dedicated to St James, of which at the Reformation Henry Davidson was chaplain.—[Chart. of Inchcolm, 5, 8, 32, 251, S.H.S.; *Reg. SIR WALTER ROBESOUN (Robertson) or Downie; had a brother, John 1556 Robertson, in Aberdour, and may have been of the family of Robertson of Downie in the parish of Meigle, and possibly also belonged to the family with which was connected Walter Robertson, who, as heir of his brother, John Robertson alias McDonchie in Cousland, was infest in Oct. 1623 in $\frac{1}{4}$ lands of Hilhead of Fongarth; was designated Vicar of Aberdour on 24th July 1556, when he ministered and executed the office anent the handfasting between Robert Lawder, Yr. of the Bass, and Jean, daugh. of Patrick, Earl of Bothwell, and held office at and subsequent to the Reformation; at the Reformation he was also Chaplain of the Chapel of St Michael the Archangel in Hailes Castle, and also of the Chaplainry called the Provostry in the Church of Preston (East Linton); he was a confidant of James, Earl of Bothwell, and was one of those present with the Earl at Norham on 23rd March 1563, prior to the latter setting out for France after he had escaped from Edinburgh Castle and was shipwrecked on the coast of England; at Edinburgh on 30th Oct. 1563 Jeane Hepburn, Lady Wedderburn, acting on the Earl's instructions, gave to Sir Walter the custody of "Reversions and other evidents" belonging to the Earl; on 10th June 1561 he appears as one of the chaplains and choristers of the choir of Dunkeld Cathedral, where he had a house belonging to the Sub-dean, and on 6th Jan. 1562–3 as a notar at Dunkeld; he ceased to be vicar at Aberdour in 1570–1, and, according to one source, he died at that time; but probably he was identical with Sir Walter Robesoun, adm. reader at Logierait cir. 1572–3 by James, Bishop of Dunkeld, and with Walter Robesoun pres. to the vicarage of Logierait 19th Oct. 1580. Sir Walter Paterson, designated vicar 24th Oct. 1560, appears to be the same individual with an error in name.—[Reg. Great Seal, iv, 1529, v, 759, 1138, 1189, vi, 1227; *Reg. Sec. JOHN PATERSON, in executing a 1567 summons on 22nd Dec. 1560 he is described as min.—[Reg. Kirk Session of St Andrews, 54, S.H.S.]

JOHN PATERSON, his pres. to 1567 vicarage in 1573 was consequent upon the death of Peter Blackwood.—[Reg. Pres. to Benefices; Reg. Sec. Seal.]

ANDREW KIRK, his pres. to vicarage, 1587 20th May 1587, was consequent upon the death of Peter Blackwood.—[Reg. Pres. to Benefices.]

PATRICK CARMICHAEL, pres. to 1602 vicarage 17th Dec. 1606, vacant by the death of Sir Walter Downie or "Roberston."—[Reg. Sec. Seal, lxxv, 212.]

1611 WILLIAM PATON. (See Dalgety.)

JOHN WHITE, formerly of Coylton, Ballantrae, described as sometime min. at Aberdour 1695; died before 1705. Marr. Helen Cruickshank, who survived him.—[Deeds, Durie, 1706, No. 137.]

ALEXANDER MARSHALL, licen. by Presb. of Dunfermline; app. by Earl of Morton to serve here from Marts 1701 to Whitsunday 1702.—[Deeds, Mack., 1705, No. 885.]

ROBERT JOHNSTONE, D.D. (St Andrews, 23rd June 1935), colleague and successor, adm. 23rd Nov. 1940, died at Edinburgh 5th April 1944; his second daugh., Isobel Thorburn (not Mabel T.) (marr. 10th June 1939 John, son of late David Cunningham, Aberdour, and Mrs C., Cheadle, Cheshire); his second son, Robert Lawrence, licen. by Presb. of Dunfermline and Kinross 12th April 1938, assistant St George's Parish, Edinburgh, 1938–40; Chaplain to the Forces 1940; adm. min. of Clyne and Brora 1948; his elder son, Alistair Thorburn, Nigerian Forest Service, died at Edinburgh, 1st Feb. 1940.

The Chapel of Beath, subsequently annexed to Dalgety, was granted to Inchcolm Abbey before 1178, and probably in the period 1170–8. There was a well of St Margaret near Lassodie House. On 24th March 1546–7 Mr John Bannatyne was pres. to the chaplainry of the chapel in succession to the late Sir Alexander Guthrie. After the Reformation Beath continued to be attached to Dalgety till 17th Jan. 1611, when by an order of the Commissioners for Modification of Stipends, etc., approved by Crown Charter of 7th March 1618, the Church of Dalgety and Beath were united to Aberdour. Unsatisfactory results followed; and, consequent upon a resolution of the Synod of Fife of 9th April 1641 to refer the matter to Parliament, the Committee of Parliament in January 1643 disjoined the three parishes. (For Beath, see Dalgety and Aberdour up to 1643.)—[Cart. of Inchcolm, 2, S.H.S.; Cal. of Supplications Rel. to Scotland, 195, S.H.S.; Cal. of Papal Regs., vii, 144; Reg. Sec. Seal, iii, 2215; Reg. Great Seal, 7th March 1611; Minutes Synod of Fife; Ross' Aberdour and Inchcolm, 227–8.]

HARRY SMITH, as Robert Bruce, min. at Aberdour, maintained his right to the emoluments, including manses and glebes, of the three parishes, which were ratified to him by Parliament in 1646; neighbouring congregations contributed to Mr Smith's support; and in 1650 the sum of £1,200, contributed by the four Presbyteries of Fife—St Andrews £400, Cupar £250, Kirkcaldy £300, Dunfermline £250—was mortified to provide a stipend; had issue, John, born 4th June 1643.—[*Acts Scott. CULROSS

A narrative of 1420 bears that the monastery “unhappily in the not distant past has been burned by the English enemies of the said realm” (Scotland); and the Pope at Florence on 10th June 1420 gave effect to a crave “to grant to all Christ's faithful visiting the Monastery upon the first of July, the feast of the said confessor (St Serf), or giving pious alms for its restoration, an indulgence of six years and as many quarantines, as often as they do so.” Probably the depredation of the English occurred in their invasions 1384–5. By Act of Parliament 28th June 1633 there were ratified Crown Grants of the vicarage and small teinds of the benefice as the endowment of the Grammar School which existed within the Abbey “in all tyme bygane,” and “in whilk the youth of the burgh and land of Culross weis instructit in grammar and traint in virtue and letters in ye commoun weill of ye hail comunitie.” There was a chapel called the Bar Chapel, situated at what is called the Chapel Barn, close to the west Abbey lodge. The ground plan of St Mungo's Chapel was laid bare by excavations in 1926. By Charter of 20th June 1589 James

VI erected the Rectory and Vicarage of Culross, the emoluments of the Rector who was to reside continually at Culross being 200 merks from the readiest of the fruits of the church, with manse and glebe.—[Cal. of Supplications Rel. to Scotland, 208, S.H.S.; *Acts Scott. DALGETY

The church was granted to Inchcolm by William the Lion, 1170–8. At the west end of the old church are the burial vault and heritors' loft built by Alexander Seton, first Earl of Dunfermline. There is also a burial vault under the floor of the chancel, with a stone on the north wall, carrying a shield with the arms quarterly of Abernethy and Moultrie of Seafeld, and narrating that here lies William Abernethy of Dalgety, who died 1540. The chapel at Fordell, near which on the south side is the chapel well, was dedicated to St Thereot, Terott, Cereot. (See Beath for the union of the Churches of Dalgety and Beath with Aberdour in 1611.)—[Cal. of Supplications Rel. to Scotland, 195, S.H.S.; Cart. of Inchcolm, 103, S.H.S.; Stephen's Inverkeithing and Rosyth, 139.]

WILLIAM PATON, M.A.; on 21st 1598 March 1600 the Presbytery of Dunfermline appealed to the General Assembly anent a decision of the Synod of Fife at Cupar 6th March 1598 which found that the Presbytery had done wrong in planting the Kirk of Dalgety with hurt and prejudice to the Kirk of Aberdour, the latter being the most great and populous congregation and the haill stipend but a mean stipend, and therefore ordained the haill stipend to remain with the Kirk of Aberdour; the Assembly ordained Mr Paton, min. at Dalgety, to be min. at both and to have the haill stipend of both before division thereof for crop and year 1599 and so on.—[Booke of the Univ. Kirk, 961–2; G. R. Sas., 2 Ser., ix, 125.]

DUNFERMLINE

In the Abbey there were the following altars: Parish Kirk, the Outer Kirk, "Sanct Margaretis Kirk Wytr"; the High Altar, probably dedicated in the name of the Holy Rood; the Rood and Our Lady, sometimes described as "situat at the Hee Altar"; Our Lady, St Michael, and St Katherine; St Margaret; St Mary of Pity; St Nicholas; St Ninian; St Salvator; Holy Blood; Conventual Kirk, the Inner Kirk, the High Altar, dedicated to the Holy Trinity, and after 1250 to St Margaret also; Our Lady, in St Mary's Aisle or St Mary's Chapel; St Andrew; St Benedict; St Cuthbert; St John; St Katharine; St Katharine and St Margaret; St Laurence; St Mary Magdalene; St Mary of Pity; St Michael; St Peter; St Stephen; St Ursula; and Corpus Christi and the Relic Altar (Relic Almery), both probably also in the Conventual Kirk. The site of the residence of the Abbot is indicated in an action by David Fergusson, min., against the Commendator, for the provision of a manse, in which the Lords of Session on 29th Oct. 1574 pronounced a decret giving the min. "the house that pertained to the Abbot as manse," bounded "by the kirk at the east, the kirkyard at the north, the Abbey place and close yrof at the south, the commont entres to said Abbey at the west."—[Beveridge's Dunfermline Burgh Records, xxiv, ff.; Acts and Dec., lvi, 419.]

INVERKEITHING and ROSYTH

St Erat's Well, under the pavement on the east side of Heriot Street, near the church, indicates an earlier dedication than

St Peter. Other holy wells were the Lady Well in the hollow across which passes the railway embankment south of the Ferry Toll; St John's Well on the west side of Church Street, adjacent to the Temple Lands, a portion of which was designated St Germain's; St Mary's Well on the west side of Dhuloch; and the Priest's Well at North Dhuloch, still in use for farm supply. A fire in the burgh in 1420 had the effect of diminishing the rents of the Altars of the Holy Cross and the Virgin Mary, that they were incapable of sustaining the chaplains; and in response to a crave by the "baillies and community" of the burgh, who had founded and partly endowed the altars, the Pope on 26th Aug. 1420 granted "to all who, truly penitent and confessed, shall visit the aforesaid Altars in any year in the feasts of the Holy Cross and the Assumption and Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, and who stretch out helping hands to the augmentation and endowment of the chaplaincies, as often as they do so, three years and as many quarantines of indulgence to last in perpetuity or at least until the rents of the said Altars are raised to 20 merks sterling annually; granting faculty to the priests ministering at the Altars, to give a simple blessing, and imposing excommunication upon all who alienate the lands or steal the possessions of the Altars." In the burgh there are the Hospitium restored by the Town Council in 1935, and portions of foundations of other buildings of the Grey Friars' Friary, founded in the third quarter of the 14th century. The Chapel of Inverkeithing, of which there is now no trace, was granted to Dunfermline Abbey by Malcolm IV in 1159. At North Queensferry, disjoined from Dunfermline and attached to Inverkeithing quoad sacra about 1642, there are the ruins of the Chapel of St James the Apostle, which belonged to Roger de Moubray, Baron of Inverkeithing, and on his forfeiture in 1320 was granted to Dunfermline Abbey by Robert I. The Church of Rosyth was granted to Inchcolm about 1162-9—donor unknown. It is mentioned 1251-72, in conjunction with its annexed Chapel of Logie and the lands attached thereto.—[Stephen's Inverkeithing

TORRYBURN and CROMBIE

The Church of Torryburn was rebuilt in 1616. On 6th June 1647 it is recorded "that the Kirk was too little to contain the people of the parish," and that "hundreds were constrained to ly in the kirkyard in time of sermon about the doors and windows"; and the heritors, on a petition being presented to them, enlarged the building by the addition of an aisle. That building was replaced by the present church in 1800; and a chancel was added in 1928, when the interior of the church was also remodelled.

The land of Crombie was designated Abercromby; and under that name the Chapel of Crombie was granted to Dunfermline Abbey by Malcolm IV, 1153–63. Between 1203 and 1214 Malcolm, seventh Earl of Fife, granted to Dunfermline Abbey the Church of Abercromby, with the teinds of Quichts, i.e. land near Outh in the north part of Dunfermline parish, and others, for his own soul and the souls of his father and mother, and of all his predecessors and heirs. The church is described as the new Church of Abercromby in a Deed between William (II), Abbot of Dunfermline, and William, apparently William de Ramsay, Abbot of Culross, dated Paschal 1227, dealing with a dispute between the two abbeys, which was settled on the basis of Culross Abbey continuing to enjoy the teinds of fruits, trees, etc., in their own territory of Abercromby which had been included in Earl Malcolm's foundation charter of the "new Abbey" at Culross in 1217, and Dunfermline Abbey receiving from Culross an annual payment of 15 marks silver—a settlement confirmed by Pope Gregory IX in 1230. It may be assumed that the designation new Church is due to the church having taken the place of the chapel; and the church may have been built by Earl Malcolm himself. The remains of triple lancet-windows in the east gable of the ruined church, which stands on an eminence overlooking the shore of the Forth about a mile east of Torryburn, and constitutes the burial-place of the Colvilles of Ochiltree, are suggestive of 13th-century construction. By Charter of 20th June 1589 James VI erected the Rectory and Vicarage of Crombie, the emoluments of the rector, who was to reside continually at Crombie, being 100 merks from the readiest of the fruits of the church, with manse and glebe.—[Reg. of Dunfermline, 23–4, 83, 126–7, 168; Royal Commission on Ancient Monuments, etc., Fife, etc., 272; Douglas's Culross Abbey and 1668 sion is: "Mr Willm. Persone preacht and after sermone and prayer Mr James Aird was entred to ye exercise of his ministrie at ye sd. (Torrieburne) Kirk, and the byble was delyvered to him as the rule of his life and doctrine, and the kyes of the kirk doores as ane testimonie of his power under the King's majestie and my Lord Arch. to open the sd. doores for divine service and ye moderator and brethren gave him the right hand of fellowship." The date of his deposition was 4th Sept. 1689.—[Presbytery Records; Reg. Privy Council, 3 Ser., xiv, 472.]

ALAN LOGAN, he was chosen Pro-1695 fessor of Divinity in King's College, Aberdeen, on 28th April 1703; but the Presbytery refused transportation, and the Assembly adhered.—[King's College Officers and Graduates, 70–1.]

PRESBYTERY OF KINROSS

ARNGASK

It is said that the church was originally a chapel for the family of Balvaird. That may just mean that one of the line of that family was the founder of the church. In 1281 William, Bishop of St Andrews, confirmed to Cambuskenneth Abbey the gift of the patronage of the church made by Gilbert de Frisly, lord of Forgy, and also granted the fruits of the church, the grant being made effective in 1282 on the resignation of the rector, Radufus, Lord Symmersburn, who had been presented by the late Duncan, lord of Forgy. In 1282 John, Prior of St Andrews, also confirmed Gilbert de Frisly's gift of the patronage. By Charter of 1st Oct. 1527, Margaret Barclay, lady of Arngask, Sir Andrew Murray, her husband, and their son, David, founded a chaplainry in the church "for the praise, glory and honour of the indivisible Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and the most glorious virgin, and St Columba, abbot, patron of our Parish Church of the Parish of Arryngrosk." The charter also conveyed 2 acres of land on the south side of the graveyard, for a manse, garden, and buildings for the chaplain, then Sir William Melville. The present church was built in 1806, enlarged in 1821, and restored in 1879, and of the old church the writer of the Old Statistical Account says, "Part of the Church is Pre-Reformation, as there is a place in the wall for a font, and the statue of the foundress (Mrs Barclay?) has the beads used by Catholics hanging round the hands." The statue was removed to Balvaird Castle when the church was rebuilt in 1806.—[Chart. of Cambuskenneth, 3, 4, 5, 20, 34-5; Millar's Hist. of Fife, i, 268.]

BALLINGRY

In the 13th century the church was a dependent chapel of Auchterderran. The church was partly rebuilt and enlarged in 1831. On the north side there is the Malcolm burial aisle, containing a two-light window of Renaissance design, with mullions and transoms, and the date 1661. The keystone has a cherub's head, and the soffit a skull; and beneath the cherub's head is the inscription, "O Death, where is thy sting?" The belfry is of 17th-century type; and the bell has inscribed on the upper part, MALCOLME OF LOCHORE, with the initials I.H.C. in monogram below; while round the skirt there is in Latin: "Blessed are they who know the joyful sound of these Church bells of Ballingry." There was a chapel at Inchgall, Chapel Farm. The chapel at Lochore was dedicated to St Andrew. On the south side of Lochleven at the west end are the lands of Navitie and Navitie Hill with Dunmore "great fort." Navitie or Navity, Nevody in 1477, and Navaty in 1550—It is akin to the Gaulish word nemeton, sacred place, an institution, originally pagan, taken over by the Christian Church. It is the same as Neamhaidigh, Navity, at Cromarty. —[Sievwright's Kirk of Ballingry; Reg. Great Seal, 8th Dec. 1477, 5th Feb. 1550-1, iv, 3; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 246-9; Mackenzie's Scott. Place Names, 225.]

The old church, represented now merely by foundations, stood in the kirkyard on the north side of the road leading from Yetts of Muckhart to Milnathort, about half a mile east of the Old Fossoway Bridge over the Devon. Two acres of land with the patronage of the church were granted to Cupar (Angus) Abbey by Gilbert de Hay, Kt., lord of Errol, Constable of Scotland, confirmation charters being given by Malice, Earl of Strathearn, and by Robert I on 5th Oct. 1309. The modern church at Crook of Devon in the old parish of Tullibole was built in 1806.—[Reg. of Cupar Abbey, 11, 286–7.]

TULLIBOLE

The foundations of the church may be traced in the kirkyard situated outside the north-east corner of the policies of Tullibole Castle, about a mile east of Crook of Devon. The church belonged to Culross Abbey, appearing in the rentals of that abbey subsequent to the Reformation. “Church of Tulybothwyn” occurs in Earl Malcolm’s foundation Charter of Culross Abbey in 1217; and that has been regarded erroneously as signifying Tullibody, which, however, pertained to Cambuskenneth Abbey. It refers to Tullibole.—[Douglas’ Culross Abbey and Its Charters, 14, 6, reprinted from the Proceedings of Society of Antiquaries of Scot., xii, 5 Ser., 1925–6, 67, 94.]

KINROSS

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 27th June 1246; and on 14th Nov. 1315, along with the Chapel of Orwell, it was granted to Dunfermline Abbey by Robert I. In a ruined condition, it stands in the old churchyard on the east shore of Lochleven. Both church and churchyard passed through a strange experience when in Lent 1335 an English force under Sir John Stirling laid siege to Lochleven Castle. “They took up a position at Kinross in the sacred cemetery whereof they fortified a position and strengthened it by walling it in with sods of earth and surrounding it with a stockade; and thus, not having God before their eyes, sacrilegiously despising and making light of the judgment of God, they lay there as in a robber's cave, and laid waste the whole country round." In 1742 the church at the loch side was abandoned, and a new church was opened on a site which was then at the west side of the town, a steeple being added in 1751. But the town rapidly extended, and thereby "put the Church in the centre and opposite a big public house"; and accordingly the church was replaced by the existing church, which, built farther to the west, was opened on 11th March 1832. The steeple survived, and is now the tower of the Townhouse. There was a Chapel of St Ninian at and associated with the lands of Brunthill, Cavelstone, and Colden, on the west of Lochleven, and alongside the Great North Road about two miles south of Kinross. Included in those lands is the small farm of Goudierannet; and it may be regarded as certain that on it was the site of the chapel. The second part of the name is annaid, old Irish andoit, Annat, a patron saint's church, or a church containing the relics of the founder. Here, then, there is an instance of what prevails throughout the country, that wherever there is an annat, there are records or traces of an ancient chapel or cemetery, or both; there is also an instance of what is rare, the known association of a particular saint with the Annat. It may be, therefore, that St Ninian himself, about the details of whose work there is singularly little available knowledge, actually visited this district and founded the chapel.—[Cart. of Dunfermline, 229; Bk. of Pluscarden, 272–3; Reg. Great Seal, 12th Feb. 1639; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 170, 250–1; Mackenzie's Scott. Place Names, 226.]

The Chapel or Orwell was associated with the Church of Kinross when Robert I granted a Charter of both the church and the chapel to Dunfermline Abbey, 14th Nov. 1315. Orwell may have had the status of a parish before 7th April 1506, when Mr James Simson was “vicar of Kinross and Orwell,” and certainly at 25th Aug. 1551, when George, Commendator of Dunfermline, pres. Sir John Mowss to the vicaragepensionary of the two parishes. The old church stood at Bell’s Brae on the north shore of Lochleven in the kirkyard, where a mound seems to indicate foundations.
 A modern mausoleum occupies part of the eastern extremity of the site of the church.
 The existing church, situated on rising ground north-west of Milnathort, took the place of the old church in 1729.—[*Reg. of

PORTMOAK

The church was situated in the old burying ground at Portmoak farm near the south-east shore of Lochleven, and was associated with St Moan, called also Moach or Moak. Hence the name of the church and parish. It has also been called the Monastery of Lochleven and Portmoak, and as such is said to have been founded by Eogachman, King of the Picts, may be Eoghane, son of Fergus, and also by Rogasch, King of the Picts. Manifestly there is some confusion in those statements; but at least they may indicate that there was a Christian settlement of some kind at the place prior to the time when it became the church. About 1103 the church was bestowed the Culdee Priory of St Serf’s Island; but it does not appear that the grant included the church. The latter, however, may have been closely associated with St Serf’s Priory. In any case it was bestowed upon the Priory of St Andrews by Bishop Arnold or Ernald of St Andrews 1158–9; and it was dedicated or rededicated to St Stephen and St Moan by Bishop de Bernham of St Andrews on 23rd July 1243.
 The church was removed to the present site near Scotlandwell in 1659–61, and it was rebuilt a few years prior to 1839. A corner of the old church was still in existence at the close of the 18th century, but no portions now remain above ground. A few years ago the ancient baptismal font, considerably mutilated, was discovered by representatives of the Presb. of Dunfermline and Kinross in use as a feeding-trough at Portmoak farm; and at present it is in the custody of the Presb. at Cleish Church. The well adjacent to the old churchyard and now used by Portmoak farm may be the former Holy Well of the church. The name of St Moan was further perpetuated, up at least to the 18th century, by "a concavity like to a seat" on the hillside above Scotlandwell, "where the abbot for his recreation sometimes used to solace himself, the top of the adjoining rocks giving umbrage to the place." It was popularly called St Moucum's Seat, that is, St Moak's Seat. In the narrowest part of Glenvale between the Bishop Hill and the West Lomond there is situated "John Knox's Pulpit"—a large cavity in a sandstone rock which serves as a sounding-board. There the Reformer is said to have addressed the people. The glen is also sometimes called the Covenanter's Glen; and the "pulpit" may have been the rallying-place of conventicles.

The Hospital of the Red Friars was situated in the old churchyard at the south-east side of Scotlandwell. The church of the hospital was dedicated to St Mary the Virgin on 2nd Oct. 1244 by Bishop de Bernham, who about the same time gave the adjacent wood of Kelgad (Kilmagad) for the endowment of the church. There may have been an earlier settlement at or near the same site, for a confirmation charter of Hugo, Bishop of St Andrews cir. 1178, to the Priory of St Andrews, includes "the Hospital of St Thomas at the bridge of Portmoak," for the reception of the poor, the gift of Bishop Richard, 1163–77. Such an earlier settlement might in turn indicate something of fact in Sir James Balfour's statement about a hospital and chapel at Scotlandwell, founded by Madocus, Earl of Ernewell. At the close of the 18th century remains of a church and house were still to be seen; but all traces have now disappeared. Archibald Arnot, son of Walter A. of Arnot, was "minister" of the hospital 24th Jan. 1545–66, having been presented in succession to his brother, Robert, 8th Jan. 1542–3; and Andrew Arnot was "Minister" 24th March 1574–5.

The Celtic Priory on St Serf's island was given, according to the Register of the Priory of St Andrews, by King Brude (died 843), son of Dergard, with the isle to God and St Serf and the hermit Culdees dwelling and serving God there. But Andrew de Wynton, who was Prior there from 1395 and there may have written his The Orygynal Cronykil of Scotland, identifies the donor with Brude (died 706), son of Dirle. Apparently about 1146–8 Robert, Bishop of St Andrews, conveyed the priory to the Canons Regular of St Andrews; and about 1150 a Charter of David I repeated the gift with the stipulation that the Culdees were to be allowed to remain only on condition that they submitted to the rule of the canons. Remains of the priory include portions of a 12th-century church.—[Lockhart's Ch. of Scotland in the 13th Century, 56, 59; Cal. of Charters, i, 26, B; *Reg. PRESBYTERY OF KIRKCALDY

AUCHTERDERRAN

The church was granted, about 1059, to Serf's Priory, Lochleven, by Fothad II, Bishop of Alban, who is called Modach, son of Malmykel. He is said to have been the patron saint of the church, which was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 27th Sept. 1243. Of the church, which gave place to another in 1676, all that remains is part of the chancel, incorporated in a mausoleum in the churchyard. The existing church, adjacent to the churchyard, was built in 1700 and enlarged in 1891. Keir Chapel may denote the site of the chapel associated with the church at an early period. St Fothad's Mission Church was opened on 3rd April 1910. In the 13th century Ballingry Church was a dependent chapel of Auchterderran.—[*Reg. AUCHTERTOOL

The church is included among the possessions of Inchcölm Abbey in the Bull of Pope Alexander III in 1178. There are indications that the church has been altered or rebuilt several times, and carved stones exist that belong to the Norman period. An aisle that existed on the north side appears to have had a groined roof. On the lines of this aisle, a new aisle with Norman arcade was added in 1906. At Lochhead on the north border of the parish and formerly in Ballingry, there was a Chapel of St Fillan—hence Lumphinnans, not far distant.—[Cart. of Inchcolm, xx, S.H.S.; Stevenson's Parish of Auchtertool, xviii–xix, 99.]

BURNTISLAND

The church appears in a confirmation Charter of Richard, Bishop of St Andrews 1163–77, to Dunfermline Abbey, and in other similar deeds; in the Charter of Bishop David in 1240 it is narrated that the revenue of the church is so small that if a vicar were instituted there, virtually nothing would accrue to the monks, and therefore the bishop decreed that the church be served by fit and proper chaplains. The “New Kirk at Burntisland” was declared and ordained to be the parish church on 14th May 1594. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 19th May 1243.—

DYSART

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 26th March 1245, but what remains of the pre-Reformation structure indicates a scheme of rebuilding probably in the early part of the 16th century. There were in the church altars dedicated to St James, St John, and the Holy Trinity, and a cell dedicated to St Catharine. The Chapel of St Denis (Dionysius), situated in the south part of the town, and converted into a smithy long prior to 1836, when part of a wall was still in existence, was the Chapel of the Blackfriars' Friary. Mr Alexander Colville was parson 4th Sept.
1515.—[*Gleanings from the Records of

KENNOWAY

In connection with the festival of St Kenneth, 11th Oct., there are six lessons in the Breviary of Aberdeen where he is described as "St Kenneth the Abbot who in Kennoway in the Diocese of St Andrews is held as patron." On 14th Jan. 1552–3, James Hamilton, clerk of the Diocese of Glasgow, who had been presented to the perpetual vicarage by John, Archbishop of St Andrews, vac. by the death of David Ballingawe, was inducted, on the command of the Archbishop, by John Sinclair, Provost of the Collegiate Church of Roslin; and the curate of Kennoway, Sir Robert Bute, placed and conducted Alexander Gourlay, as procurator of James Hamilton, in possession of the vicarage, and by delivery of the missal book, cups, and ornaments of the high altar invested and instituted him. There was a chapel at Chapel Brae, near Kilmux House.—[Mackinlay's Church Dedications (non-script.), 63; Colville's Prot. Bk., 45, 52a.]

JOHN ROW, held the vicarage in 1564, and was still vicar in 1572.—1560 [Comps. Sub Coll. of Thirds, Fife, etc.; Reg. Abbrev. Charters of Church Lands, 11, 314.]

KINGHORN EASTER

The church was dedicated to All Saints before 1290. It was granted to Holyrood Abbey by King William the Lion between 1165 and 1177, Charters being given also by Richard, Bishop of St Andrews 1163–77, and others. Some time afterwards, apparently in the first part of the 13th century, at the instance of the parishioners, and as the church lay outside the town, the Abbot of Holyrood caused a new church to be built in the town, and to be consecrated by the Ordinary, and the parochial insignia to be taken there. This was apparently the church dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 17th May 1243, and of which there still survives a rectangular east portion, aisled on the south, at the east end of the present church on the Kirk Craig. Allusions to the fabric in the Kirk Session Records indicate that the building was cruciform in chape and possessed two aisles. The present church was built in 1774 and renovated in 1894. The site of the original church outside the town is not definitely known. But there are indications that it was at Tyrie or Grange some distance north of the burgh. There, not far from the manor of the barony, there was a church popularly called Eglismaree, but in its oldest and most frequent and probably correct form, Eglismalie, Malin, Maling, Malinus. It is mentioned in the Bull of Pope Alexander III to Inchcolm Abbey, 6th March 1178–9, which confirms to the Abbey “the half-ploughgate of land, lying beside the Church of St Malin, with the Chapel of the same”; and the statement is amplified in a Retour of 1642 and a Crown Charter of 1611–12, each of which deals with the former possessions of Inchcolm, and contains “the half-ploughgate of land, beside the Church of St Maleing, now called Inchkerie, with the Chapel of Buthadlach (or Buchadlach), now called Eglismalye.” It may be that the Chapel of Buthadlach, which, with the land of Inchkerie, belonged to Inchcolm Abbey, had the same dedication as the church. But in any case the church was distinct from the chapel; and it is most probable, if not absolutely certain, that here we have the original Church of Kinghorn. Additional support is given to the probability not only from the proximity of the church to the Manor of Grange, but also from the fact that in this neighbourhood were the vicar's lands, still called Vicarsgrange, from which was delimited the original post-Reformation glebe of the parish, later excambied for land near the burgh. Malie or Malee, the name of the saint who on the foregoing probability was displaced by the dedication "All Saints," almost certainly when the parish church was transferred to the burgh, may be identical with St Moling, otherwise St Malin, founder of Tighmoling, now St Mullens, in County Carlow, and Bishop of Ferns from 691 till his death in 697. Another view is that the saint is Maillie, Maillidh, a saint not mentioned in the Calendars. The churchyard of St Malin's Church, which has long since ceased to exist, is the reputed burial place both of Sir James Kirkcaldy of Grange, and of his son and successor, Sir William Kirkcaldy, whose body, eight years after his execution on 3rd Aug. 1573, was brought from its original place of interment in Edinburgh. Part of a gable of the church was still in existence in 1843. The Church of Kinghorn was served by a rector till 1418-19, up to which time the Abbey of Holyrood held only one-half of the teinds. At that date the whole of the teinds became the possession of the Abbey, who thereafter supplied the church with a vicar. At or near the burgh was a piece of land called the "Reud-Aiker," which may indicate that in the church there was an Altar of the Holy Rood. Within the burgh was situated St Leonard's Chapel, which after the Reformation was converted into the burgh Townhouse and jail, and in 1822 gave place to the present Townhouse. The chapel apparently was of great antiquity, and that, with its situation within the burgh, may be regarded as explaining the presence of the figure of St Leonard on the burgh seal. Situated also in the burgh was a hospital with chapel dedicated to St James, founded on 20th July 1478 by Robert Pierson, burgess of Kinghorn, the endowment being twelve particles of land at Kinghorn, and an annual rent of 10 merks, 5 of which were to be devoted to supplementing the necessities of the poor and sustaining readers, and 5 for a chaplain to celebrate three Masses. The name and site of the hospital are perpetuated in St James' Place. On the east side of Kinghorn Bay, above the Kirk Craig, are the lands of Abden. The name is a corruption of Abthanrie or Abbacie, which denotes lands that belonged to an abbey or monastery of the Columban Church, and had fallen to the Crown either through the monastery having become extinct or having fallen into the hands of lay abbots. Of the particular story of the lands and their monastery nothing is known. A place in the parish, designated St Ninian's Chapel, indicates that there had existed a chapel dedicated to that saint—probably identical with the chapel which was situated at Chapelflat, North Glassmount.—[Cal. of Papal Regs., Letters, i, 512, x, 711; Petitions, i, 137; Chart. of Holyrood, 37, 129, 193, 195; *Cal. of Supplic. DENE JOHN WILSON, vicar 8th Feb.

1559 1549, also Canon of Holyroodhouse; on a Sunday in Feb. 1559, within the parish Church of St Andrews, he renounced "the Pope, his authoritie, power, and jurisdiction, all maner of idolatrie, superstitions, and hypocrisie, and espetial the mass, veneration of Saints and purgatory" and accepted Christ as the only head, ruler and guide of the Church. He died before 18th July 1570.—[Reg. of Kirk Session of St Andrews, 11.]

JOHN BROWN, apparently the reader whom, as narrated by the bailies of 1562 Kinghorn in their complaint to the Privy Council in 1564, John Moultrie, laird of Seafield, had in the most cruel manner ejected furth of his house which he had "peccabillie broukit be a large space." ST BRYCE

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 21st March 1244–5. It was enlarged and repaired in 1643 and was rebuilt in 1807, only the tower, probably of the early part of the 16th century, being left. In 1554 it is designated the “College Kirk of Kirkcaldy,” indicating that the cure was then served by two or more clergy. Other altars in the church, besides that of St Katharine, were the Holy Blood (St Sanguin), the Holy Cross, and St Ninian, the patrons of the last being the bailies and community of the burgh. About 1127–30 the Shore of Kirkcaldy, including the church, which had been held by Constantine the King, was granted to Dunfermline Abbey. The “lands of St Brice” are mentioned in 1579.—[Cal. of Charters, ii, 6; Reg. of Dunfermline, 16, 383; Acts and Dec., viii, 569; Laing Charters, 977; Reg. Mag. Sig., iv, 2499; *Reg. Pres. LESLIE

The church is called Christ's Kirk-on-the-Green, which indicates dedication to our Lord. Leslie Green has been claimed to be the scene of the poem, "Christ's Kirk on the Green," ascribed to James VI. A controversy in 1239 regarding the patronage of the church, between the Bishop and Chapter of Dunkeld and Merleswain of Ardross, son of Waldene, was settled on the basis of the church becoming a prebend of Dunkeld, Merleswain being patron of the prebend—an arrangement that was not carried out. In 1263 Geolastica, daughter of the late Merleswain, and Richard her husband, gave the patronage to Inchcolm Abbey, in favour of which about the same time Alexander Comyn, Earl of Buchan, on his own behalf and that of Thomas Meldrum, gave up his claim to the patronage. That was followed by a confirmation charter of Richard, Bishop of Dunkeld, which gave the church to the Canons of Inchcolm for their proper use. There was within the churchyard a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, probably a chantry chapel. The church was rebuilt in 1820.—

Maeldum, Bishop of Alban, at St Andrews 1028–55, son of Bishop Gillandris, gave the church with all its land to God and St Serf and the Culdees of Lochleven; and Duncan, sixth Earl of Fife 1154–1203, gave the church to the Priory of St Andrews. The patron saint was St Drostan, and later, apparently when the church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 19th July 1243, St John the Baptist was joined with St Drostan. The 12th-century tower is attached to the modern church. The ruins of Kirkforthar Church stand on a tree-enclosed mound not far from Kirkforthar farm.—[Reg. Priory of St Andrews, 116, 348; *Reg. METHIL, METHKYLL, METHKAL

It was a pre-Reformation parish; and the church with the lands is mentioned in 1207. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham, 28th March 1245. The benefice belonged to the Priory of St Andrews. Situated at Methilmill, north of the town and near the river Leven, with the Kirklands in the vicinity, the pre-Reformation church existed till about 1738; but the parish was incorporated with Wemyss some time after 1561. SCOONIE

Tuthald, Bishop of Alban at St Andrews 1055–9, gave the church to St Serf and the Culdees of Lochleven; and Duncan, Earl of Fife 1154–1203, gave it to the Priory of St Andrews. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 30th May 1243. The patron saint, St Memma the Virgin, has been identified with St Modwena at Longforgan, and also, but unlikely, with St Memmie, whose memory is perpetuated at the village of Memmie in France. The church was situated in the old churchyard; and a portion of it is said to survive as the burial vault of the Durie family. A new church was built at Leven in 1775, which is the date on the weather-vane of the steeple. The present church, which is incorporated with the 18th-century steeple, was built in 1902–4.—[*Reg. WEMYSS

The church was dedicated to St Mary. If there was a dedication to St Cuthbert—and no evidence has been given in support of that view—it was an early dedication and was superseded some time prior to 1239–40, when John de Methill or de Wemyss, son of Michael de Wemyss, granted the “Church of St Mary of Wemyss” to the Hospital of the Holy Trinity of Soutra. This grant was confirmed in 1261 by Bishop Gamelin of St Andrews, the confirmation stipulating the provision for honourable sustenance for the vicar of Wemyss serving on behalf of the Soutra, and also for the payment of a pension due annually by the Church of Wemyss to Dysart Church. The church passed to Trinity College and Hospital, Edinburgh, in 1460–2, when Soutra was annexed to the latter by Mary of Gueldres, Queen of James II, confirmation being made by Bull of Pope Pius II, and Episcopal Charters; and after the Reformation it became the property of the provost, magistrates and community of Edinburgh, when by various Crown grants of 1563 and later years, ratified by Acts of Parliament of 1587 and 1592, there were conveyed to them Trinity College and its possessions. In 1528 it is recorded that Sir Patrick Jackson, Chaplain of the Chapel of St Mary at West Wemyss, "was 'biggand' the Church, and purposed to 'big' and continue." It may be assumed that the church at and subsequent to 1560 was the church as rebuilt in whole or in large part at that time. It appears to have consisted of a nave and choir. In 1659 transepts with lofts were added on the north and south sides; and these with the central portion of the old church became the nave, while the choir became the east transept, and the west portion of the old nave became the west transept, each of them being fitted with a loft. Before 1640 the east part of the choir with its pre-Reformation Gothic window had become the burial vault of the Wemyss family; and the vault is separated from the rest of the east transept by a wall erected probably when the vault was constructed. The old Gothic window in the west end of the old nave, now the west transept, was curtailed in height by the insertion of the corresponding loft. The existing galleries may have been constructed in 1792, when the church was "repaired and much improved." The belfry on the existing west gable bears the date 1693. In 1705 George, Earl of Cromarty, in memory of his wife, Margaret, Countess of Wemyss and Countess of Cromarty, mortified the annual sum of 100 merks Scots to the Church of East Wemyss for the provision of a catechist, the Wemyss family to be patron, and the Kirk Session the right of trial and appointment of the catechist. Through accumulations the annual revenue is now £137, which at present constitutes part salary of a probationer-assistant.—[Memo., Rev. WEST WEMYSS

In the gardens at Wemyss Castle, called the Chapel Gardens, there was a chapel, of which no trace now remains, dedicated to St Mary the Virgin. To it pertained a manse and salt-pan, with coals and dove-cot. It is on record in Feb. 1536 that upon the chapel and manse Sir Patrick Jackson, chaplain from 1515, had expended £1,000.—[Memo., Rev. PRESBYTERY OF CUPAR

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 5th Sept. 1242. The patron saint was St Adrian; but it would appear that there was a later dedication to the virgin, for the sasine of an annual rent of 27th June 1555 contains an obligation that a reversion be delivered upon "the High Altar of our Lady of Abdie." In 1661 an aisle was added on the north side of the church by Sir Robert Balfour of Denmylne. There were in the church Altars of St Ninian and St Lawrence. The church ceased to be used for worship on 11th Nov. 1827, the year in which the present church was built; and its roofless walls stand in the churchyard on the west shore of Loch Lindores. The Chapel of Dundemore occurs in 1198 in Pope Innocent III's confirmation of the foundation Charter of Lindores Abbey, 1178. There was another chapel at Lindores Castle, built by William de Brechin of Lindores, which had to render canonical obedience to the parish church. There were an Abbot's Well and a Monk's Well, and a Well of St Andrew at the foot of Lindores Bank.—[Chart. of Lindores, 68, S.H.S.; Laing's Lindores Abbey, 46, 69, 196, 433; Sir Alex. AUCHTERMUCHTY

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 31st March 1245. Lockhart's Church of Scotland in the 13th Century gives the dedication as Holy Trinity. That, however, seems to be an error. St Serf is generally regarded as the patron saint, and that finds support in the annual July observance of St Cyre's or St Sair's Day in the burgh. There was also in the parish a piece of land designated "Paitmyre de Sanct Serf." On 17th March 1350, Duncan, Earl of Fife, granted the Church to Lindores Abbey in fulfilment of a vow which he made when taken captive by the English at the Battle of Durham (Neville's Cross), 17th Oct. 1346. The existing church was built in 1780. There was near the burgh a spring called St Brydeswell—St Bridget.—[Lockhart's Church of Scotland in the 13th Century, 59; Laing's Lindores Abbey, 453; Turnbull's The Story of the Lomond Vale, 19; *Reg. BALMERINO

By indenture of 8th Feb. 1435–6 between Bishop Wardlaw of St Andrews and John de Haylis, Abbot of Balmerino Abbey, the latter was granted the privilege of having a baptismal font and administering the sacraments in the Chapel of St Ayle (Agilus ?), possibly for the benefit of the people at large. For some time subsequent to the Reformation, the chapel, designated "Sanct Talis Kirk," was used as the church of the parish; and in the second half of the 17th century the parish was called "Sanct Teal's parrochin." Possibly, therefore, the site of the chapel may have been in the present churchyard. The existing church was built in 1811.—[Reg. of the

CERES

On the south side of the old church, which is said to have been dedicated to St Cyr or Quiricus, there was an aisle that belonged to the Craighall family, containing an altar or chapel dedicated to St Ninian. "Ye prebendarie" called St Ninian's Altar is mentioned in 1620. In later days the revenues of the altar formed at least part of the emoluments of the parochial schoolmaster. There was also an Altar of St Mary the Virgin. The present church was built in 1806 on the site of the old church. In the vestibule there is the recumbent effigy of a knight, apparently of the 15th century.—[Gen. Reg. Sas., 5th April 1620; Walker's Pre-Reformation Churches, iii; James Anderson's *Prot. ROBERT BUCHANAN, on 21st March 1600 an appeal was brought before the General Assembly by James, Lord Lindsay of Byres, and others, parishioners of Ceres, against the Presbyteries of Cupar and St Andrews regarding the admission of Mr Robert Buchanan to the ministry of the Kirk of Ceres and his transportation from Forgan; on report the Assembly ordained Mr Buchanan to remain at the Kirk of Ceres, and gave power to James Melville and others to choose a discreet man, with consent of the parishioners of Ceres, "to be adjonit to Robert as minister and fellow helper," and to arrange a proportion of the stipend for said helper; the Assembly further recommended Mr William Simsone, Minister, Burntisland, as helper.—[Booke of the Universal Kirk, 960.]

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 30th July 1243. The patron saint was St Andrew. There was in the church an altar dedicated to St Laurence. On a tree-covered eminence north-west of the village there is the site of a chapel, maybe the Chapel of St Thomas, which existed in the parish; and in the vicinity is a passage across the stream, called Chapel-Ford.—

CREICH

By Bull of Benedict VI, 23rd April 1414, the church was annexed to Lindores Abbey, on account of the abbey buildings being ruined and the rents diminished by nearness of the wild (Silvestrium) Scots. The ruins of the old church stand in the churchyard, in an isolated part of the parish. A chapel or shrine was founded on the south side of the church by Mr Gilbert Strachen, Canon of Aberdeen and Moray, before 20th Dec. 1538, on which date his nephew, Mr James Strachan, Canon of Aberdeen and Moray, his testamentary executor, granted a charter of certain annual rents to the chaplains at the Altar of the Holy Trinity, the Blessed Virgin, and St Andrew, situated in the chapel. A few feet of the walls of the chapel may still be seen.
Associated with the church in the 12th century is a chapel, which may be the chapel that existed at Parbroath farm, and the foundations of which are said to have been dug up somewhat more than a century ago. The last service was held in the church on 8th Dec. 1832, at which date the present church in Luthrie village was ready for use.

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham, 8th Aug. 1243. The present church was built in 1793 and enlarged in 1835. On the foundation of the College and Collegiate Church of St Salvator, St Andrews, by Bishop Kennedy in 1451, the Church of Cults was granted to the same by the founder, and was assigned to the Provost.—[Theiner's Vet. Mon., 383–5,

JOHN BALFOUR, probably identical 1563 with John Balfour, reader at Kettle, 1573. (See Kettle.)

JOHN RUTHERFORD, M.A., second 1563 son of Andrew or Archibald Rutherford, canon of Jedburgh, and grandson of George Rutherford of Hunthill; his mother is said to have been a daugh. of Douglas Bonjedward; he was "professor of philosophy, divinity, and medicine in Conimbrica in Sorben and other places abroad," and "professor and rector of the Universities" of St Andrews, "graduat in all the saidis sciences"; was Principal of St Salvator's College before 25th June 1563, when he complained to the General Assembly that Mr John Balfour usurped the ministry at Cults, being unqualified to discharge the same, and seeing the kirk pertained to him as Principal, he offered himself to minister according to his talents; the Assembly ordained him to accept the same, which he did; he had also a son, William, "Skipper of his own ship at Leith," whose son, William Rutherford of Quarrelwood, was the father of Andrew, Lord Rutherford and Earl of Teviot.—

PATRICK PEAT, M.A., at the meeting 1595 of Synod at Dysart on 30th Sept.
1595 it was deemed expedient and ordained that Mr James Martine, Provost of St Salvator's College and min. of Cults, have a helper to reside at Cults for the better serving of the cure, because Mr Martine's ordinary function did not permit him to reside at Cults, and also because of the distance of St Andrews (where he resided) from Cults. An agreement was made between Mr Martine and the other masters of St Salvator's on the one side, and Mr Peat on the other, whereby Mr Peat should become assistant, on a proposal by Mr Martine to that effect. Mr Peat was adm. assistant by Cupar Presbytery with emoluments, the "minute" and small teinds of the parish, with occupancy of croft and yard, the use of the dovecot and house, and also an amount of victual teind.—[Laing Charters, 1303.]

CUPAR

FIRST CHARGE

The church was dedicated to St Christopher, and later, probably on 15th May 1233, when the Chronicle of Melrose records the dedication of the Church of St Mary of Cupar, the Virgin Mary took the place of St Christopher. Originally the church stood some distance north-west from the burgh, in the grounds of Springfield, now called Kinloss. But in the 15th century a transference took place. In 1415 it is recorded that in Cupar of Fife there was founded the new parish church which before was distant from the burgh on the north side. But considerable delay resulted; and not till 1431 is there any record of the work being carried on. In that year John Haldenstone, Prior of St Andrews, and the canons made protest that they should suffer no detriment in all time coming from the new parish church "which the burgesses in Cupar have rashly and contumaciously began to erect in that burgh without the consent of the said Prior and Canons, patrons of the Church." Clearly that protest determines the actual date of the erection of the church, towards which the prior apparently content with his protest, gave aid, "not because it was incumbent upon him, but as a favour." That church, situated in the Kirkgate, was for the most part rebuilt in 1785, the tower and certain other parts alone surviving. Altars in the church included St Andrew, founded on 12th June 1510 by John Fouty, burgess of Cupar, the endowments being annual rents from Cupar and elsewhere, St James the Apostle, and St Colme; and in addition to the High Altar, the Virgin Mary had an altar in an aisle or chapel. Subsequent to 1431 the Church of St Christopher, along with its site which was within the royalty, continued to be called "the old Church and Churchyard of the burgh of Cupar." It was served by a chaplain; and successive holders of the office on record, along with their dates of presentation, were—Sir John Lamb, 12th April 1498; Sir Walter Kersane, 2nd Dec. 1509; Sir Alexander Cowper, 3rd Dec. 1541; Sir John Lowklaw, 12th April 1542. On 17th Feb. 1532 Sir Walter Kersane granted to Sir John Spens of Maristoune (Mairstoun) a charter of "those my 4 acres of arable land called lie Maryfauld," lying in the "town" of Pettblathow (Pitblabo) which pertained to the "Church or Chapel of the Blessed Cristopher." In post-Reformation times the site of the church was included in the glebe, till by contract of excambion in the first part of the 19th century it passed to the proprietor of Springfield. The foundations of the church were dug up in 1759, and an elevation alone now indicates the site. At Kil-marrn in the north part of the parish was a chapel dedicated to St Ronan.—[Extracta en variis Cronicis Scocie, 1842, 217; Reg. Great Seal, 9th March 1505–6, 12th June and 11th Aug. 1510; Chronicle of Melrose, 143; *Cal. The church of Tarvit was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham, 3rd April 1245. It was situated with its burial-ground on a conical eminence on the east side of the river Eden, known as St Michael's Mount, and now traversed by the railway near the north end of Cupar Station. Originally the river constituted the boundary between Cupar and Tarvit; but the diversion of the river in this locality into a straight course early in the 19th century placed a small part of Tarvit on the west bank. On 10th Nov. 1546 Sir Robert Robertoun, Chaplain, was pres. to the parsonage of Tarvit, vacant by the forfeiture of Mr John Gray for his participation in the slaughter of Cardinal Beaton.—[Reg. Sec. Seal, iii, 1985; Lord High Treasurer's Accounts, ix, 30, 45.]

At the foot of the south side of Castlehill, later Schoolhill, was situated the Black Friars' Friary, founded by Malcolm, 7th Earl of Fife, early in the 13th century, and dedicated to St Catharine. By charter 4th Oct. 1519 of Friar John Anderson, Professor of Theology, Provincial Friar of the Black Friars, the settlement, described as bounded by the Eden, the east gate of the burgh, the Castlehill, and the tenement of the late Thomas Steill, was incorporated with the Black Friars of St Andrews. Included in the charter were 4 acres of arable land belonging to the settlement, called "Sanct Katherine's Hauch," lying opposite the settlement on the east side of the Eden, between the Eden on the north and west, the lands of Little Tarvit, called Hipplehill, on the east, and the way which leads from the bridge over the Eden to

Ballas and the Church of St Michael on the south. The Convent of the Blackfriars was founded by Duncan, Earl of Fife, who on 21st Nov. 1348 received from Pope Clement VI "faculty to found a Convent of Friars Preachers in his Castle of Cupar, and to build an oratory, offices, and other necessities." On the same date Papal Licence "was granted to the Vicar-General of Scotland of the Prior-Provincial of the Friars Preachers of the Province of England, to found a Home in Scotland for 12 Friars," and also "to receive the land called 'le Bayllyard' in the Castle of Cupar, given them by Duncan, Earl of Fife, and erect thereon an oratory with tower and bells and necessary offices."

By charter of 14th June 1572, James VI constituted "The Royal Foundation of the Ministry and Almshouse at Cupar," by which there were conveyed to the magistrates, councillors and community of the burgh, the friary and all property pertaining thereto in the burgh, for founding an almshouse for the poor, lame, deformed, and incapacitated, and orphans and other children without parental care, to be administered by the ministers and elders, and for the support of ministers and readers, and defraying other ecclesiastical charges. The almshouse, locally called almshouses, was situated near the church, and was administered by the Kirk Session till taken over by the Parish Council. It was demolished in the latter part of last century. In 1836 steps were taken by the Kirk Session to let or feu the yard of the almshouse for a burial ground; and it is now included in what is called St James' Churchyard. In 1796 considerable portions of the chapel of the friary, "built of cut free-stone," still survived.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Petitions, i, 144, Letters, iv, 304; Mackinley's Ancient Ch. Dedications (non-script.), 149; Reg. Great Seal, 23rd Jan. 1520, 14th June 1572; Laing Charters, 395, 495; Reg. Great Seal, 7th March 1600.]

DUNBOG

The existing church was built in 1803.
 There is included in the charter of King William the Lion to Arbroath Abbey the Chapel of Dunbog, maybe the precursor of the 17th-century ruined chapel in a wooded enclosure near Ayton farmhouse. The Preceptory or Priory of Eadvan was situated at Dunbog House. In 1603 there is mentioned the lands of Eadvan, with

FALKLAND

The church of the parish of Kilgour, afterwards Falkland, was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 26th July 1243. Early forms of the name are Kilgoueri, Kylogour, Kilgouririn, and Kylgoverin; and Prof.
 W. J. Watson suggests that the patron saint may be St Gabrien or Gobran, a bishop of the Britons, and a contemporary of St Columba, Kil(Cill)gour being the Church of Gabrien or Gobran. The church was situated 1–2 miles west of Falkland.
 About 1425–31 it was accidentally burned, and was rebuilt after 1431 by John Haldenstone, Prior of St Andrews, 1417–43. In the latter part of the 16th century a church, termed “the new Church of Falkland,” was built in the town. The old church survived in part at least till about 1825, when the foundations were dug up, the stones being used for drains, and a stone coffin utilised as a drinking-trough. The churchyard was ploughed up at the same time, and only the site now remains. Near by is the rock upon which the bell was swung. At a Diocesan Synod visitation of Falkland on 9th Aug. 1611 the “new Church,” a rectangular building, was “ordaint to be repaired, My Lord of Scone (David Murray of Gospetrie, afterwards Viscount of Stormont, 16th Aug. 1621) promesit to big ane isle at ye south side of ye kirk, and to help to contribute with ye toun for bigging ane isle to be biggit at ye north syd of ye kirk directly opposite to ye isle to be biggit by my Lord of Scon, be qlk maines ye kirk slabe ane cross kirk; the gentlemen of ye landward ordinit to big ye uyr half or third part of ye said north isle; qlk iles salbe biggit wtin ane yeir . . . ye north isle to have lofts.” On the carved oak front of the north aisle lofts were the Arms of Viscount Stormont. The date 1620 that was on the church may indicate additional work. In 1850 the church, which had been thoroughly repaired in 1772, was superseded by the present building, the gift of O. Tyndall-Bruce of Falkland, and his wife, Margaret, heir of her brother, John Bruce of Falkland. At the Chapel of the Virgin, situated “near the Palace and town” and called the “Lady Chapel of Birkensyde,” frequent offerings were made by James IV. In the Palace there was a Chapel of St Thomas which about 1530 gave place to the present Palace Chapel. The existence of an acre in the burghal area, called “Croft angrie or Crystiscroft,” indicates that there had been a dedication to our Lord.—[Copiali Prioratus Sancti Andree, 120; *Reg. ANDREW BROWN, D.D.; his wife, 1784 Anne, youngest daugh. of Thomas Gordon, Professor of Philosophy, King’s College, Aberdeen, was a noted collector of ballads, and is classified with Lord Hailes and other Scottish copyists who, from the fact that they “possessed some poetic taste and were to a certain extent experts in traditional beliefs and in ballad phraseology," contributed much to account for "the superior poetic excellence of many Scottish versions of traditional ballads to the English versions." In the Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, Sir Walter Scott makes acknowledgment of the very material assistance that he received from "2 MS. Books of Ballads" described by him as a "curious and valuable collection," and cited under the name of "Mrs Brown of Falkland, the ingenious lady to whose taste and memory the world is indebted for the preservation of the tales which they contain." As a girl, Mrs Brown heard "the songs and tales of chivalry" from an aunt who "spent the best part of her life amid flocks and herds" in upper Deeside, and there learned "from nurses and countrywomen" the songs which her tenacious memory retained. Enthralled by her aunt's recitals and equally tenacious in memory, Mrs Brown learned the songs by heart; and they ultimately were recorded in the MS. books to which reference has been made and which contained also "many beautiful legendary poems apparently the exclusive property of bards of Angus and Aberdeens." These books were in the keeping of Mrs Brown's father, who through a friend placed them at the disposal of Sir Walter. —[The Minstrelsy of the Scottish Border, i, Pref. xiv, xx, xxi; Intro. 170–1.]

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 7th Sept. 1242. It is mentioned along with its chapel in 1176. On Fliskmill Hill there still existed in 1838 a few stones, placed as arms of a chair and called

"Muggin's Seat," Muggin being a corruption for Magridin (Adrian), the reputed place of the meditations of the patron saint of the church and parish. The existing church was built in 1790.* On the upper floor of the south portion of Balmbreich Castle there was a chapel, probably of the 14th century, of which, in the living room into which it was converted about the end of the 15th century, various traces may still be seen—a large Gothic window in the east gable, upper parts of three sedilia in the south wall, the back of a piscina, and portions of two long Gothic windows. To the east of the castle is Chapel Hill, with foundations of a chapel still visible. There was still another chapel at Flisk Wood. Traces of the foundations of its walls and its enclosing wall may still be seen. It is probably identical with Glenduckie Chapel. —[*Reg. KETTLE

The Church of Lathrisk was dedicated to St Ethernasc (Athernasc) and re-dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 28th July 1243 to St John the Evangelist and St Ethernasc. Its site is near Lathrisk House. It was granted to the Priory of St Andrews before 1181, along with its lands and chapels, by Nesius, son of William, and Orabile his daugh.; and this was ratified by Roger de Quency, Earl of Wintone, who designates Nesius “our predecessor.” Roger de Quency also granted the patronage of the church to the Priory. The chapels given to the Priory along with the church were Katel or Catel (Kettle) and Fordin. The latter may have been the chapel which is reputed to have existed at a barrow in Forthar ground, where, it is also said, there was too a regular place of burial. The Chapel of Catel was dedicated to St Catallus, identified with St Cathcan, bishop of Rathderthaige, who is commemorated in the Martyrology of Donegal on 20th March.
There was also a chapel at Clatto. In 1238–51 John, Prior of St Andrews, with consent of David, Bishop of St Andrews, granted Duncan de Ramsay permission to have a chapel in his lands of Claytin (Clatto). The church was removed to Kettle in 1636 and rebuilt in 1834–5.—

KILMANY

It has been suggested that the church was dedicated to St Monan (Moinenn). St Eithne is regarded as probable by Dr Watson, Kilmarnock being Cill M'Eithne, "my Eithne's Church." In 1768 the church was rebuilt. On 10th Oct. 1547 Michael Balfour received Letter of Presentation to the parish clerkship, vacant by the death of his cousin, Patrick Balfour, and his brother, Mr David Balfour, slain at the Battle of Pinkie. On the foundation of the College and Collegiate Church of St Salvator, St Andrews, by James Kennedy, Bishop of St Andrews, in 1451, the Church of Kilmarnock was granted to the same by the founder.

WILLIAM RAMSAY, on 27th June 1564 1565 complaint was made by the Superintendent of Fife to the General Assembly "for want of a preacher" at Kilmarnock, "ane common kirk of St Salvator." The Assembly made remit to the Superintendent of Angus and Fife, etc., to consider the complaint and make a decision. Probably Ramsay's duties at St Salvator's College interfered with his pastoral work at Kilmarnock.—[*Booke of the 5th April 1948.

On 8th March 1247–8 Roger de Quincey granted to Lindores Abbey 200 cartloads of heather from Kyndeloch, and leave to dig as many peats in his peat moss, which is called Monegro, as they needed for their wants. He gave also a free road through the middle of the wood of Kyndeloch as far as the moor of Eden for heather, and through the middle of the moor itself as far as the peat moor called Monegrey for peats.
 Hence the original name of the place, Monks moss, or Monkston, which is still applied to some houses on the west side of Ladybank. The monks themselves used the designation "Our Lady Bog," in view of the name of the Virgin appearing in the dedication of Lindores Abbey; and that subsequently gave place to Lady Bog, which in turn, shortly before the railway station was opened, became Ladybank.—

MONIMAIL

Nothing remains of the old church except a small part of the east end, practically rebuilt as a burial enclosure. The existing church was built in 1796. All that survives of the Palace of the Bishops and Archbishops of St Andrews, ascribed to Cardinal Beaton, 1539–46, is Monimail Tower.
Adjacent to it is Cardan's Well. It is said that by means of the healing virtues of the well John Hamilton, Archbishop of St Andrews 1549–71, when residing at the Palace, was cured of a dangerous malady—phthisis, it has been conjectured by Jerome Cardan, the famous Italian physician. The name of the well has been suggested as indicating that the church was dedicated to St Cardan, an unknown saint. There was in the parish a chapel dedicated to St Leonard.—[Fraser's The Melvilles, i, xlviii

NEWBURGH

The Chapel of St Katherine was rebuilt 1508–13, and dedicated to St Duthac, Katherine, and Mary Magdalene. On 19th Aug. 1513 St John Malcumsone, chaplain at the Altar of St Dionysius in Lindores Abbey, made resignation of an annual rent of 5 sh. from the tenement in the burgh of Newburgh, belonging to Archibald Carno, burgess of Newburgh, for a chaplain to serve in the “new kirk” of the burgh; and Bailie Kawe, by laying a penny in the hand of the image of St Katherine “then present” at the tenement, “gave heritable possession to the said image in name of St Katherine, and seised and infet the said image.” Newburgh was erected into a parish on 1st Oct. 1622, and ratification was made by Act of Parliament 28th June 1633. The chapel, which served as the parish church, was taken down in 1832 to make room for the present church, then being erected. There was a well of the Nine Maidens, situated in the burgh common.—[Laing's Lindores Abbey, 202, 299, 511–12, 514, 187; *Acts Scott. THOMAS STUART, his father, Alexander S., who was of Loinmare-1785 stock, near Blair Athol, and was a cadet of the Stuarts of Urrard, lineal descendants of the "Wolf of Badenoch," for a time was a companion of Prince Charlie in his wanderings after Culloden, and often lulled the Prince to sleep by playing on a Jewish harp, besides on occasions making "crowdie" for him in the heel of an old shoe; at their parting the Prince gave Stuart a coat of brown satin with buttons of beautifully chased steel, which was retained by his descendants till it came to the maternal grandmother of Rev. Dr Stirton, Crathie, after whose death the nurse of her children thoughtlessly cut it up to make corsets for herself, only the buttons surviving; Stuart subsequently wandered in the wilds of Aberdeenshire, where in Glen-gairn he met other fugitives, Lawrence Oliphant of Gask and his son; with them he travelled to Birkhall, and then to Braedownie in Glen Clova, whence, with a letter or recommendation to Lady Gask from her husband, he passed to Gask, where he settled as a farmer; a cherished possession of Dr Stuart, now in possession of his descendant, Rev. Dr Stirton, was the gold watch and seal of his fiancée, Helen Euphame Clephane, the seal bearing the skeleton of a leaf and the motto in French: "I change not, though dying."—[Memo., Rev. STRATHMIGLO

An alternative name was Eglismartine. The church was a mensal church of Dunkeld. On 5th Nov. 1506 there is noted 53s. 2d. spent on the repair of the choir; and in 1513–14 a chalice, 63½ oz. in weight, was provided for the church at a cost of £7 8s. 2d., being 2s. 4d. per ounce. On 4th March 1508 the Bishop of Dunkeld assigned the fruits of the church to Sir William Scott of Balweary. Possibly that was in view of Sir William's project to convert Strathmiglo into a collegiate church, for the furtherance of which an agreement was made on 31st March 1527 between Sir William for himself and in name of most of the parishioners on the one hand, and, on the other, Henry Sibbald, parish clerk, whereby in return for a vidual pension, said Henry resigned the clerkship to Sir William and the parishioners, the profits of the office to be assigned to "the childer to sing divyne service in the kirk with the prebendar of the said College," Sibbald's son being one of the "childer." Already, by arrangement between Sir William and Henry, the former "hes devoted in past years the profits of the clerkship to certain young childer singers in said college." That seems to indicate that to some extent the plan was in operation; and tradition affirms that certain houses adjacent to the church, possibly those mentioned in 1605 and 1606 as situated on the north and west sides of the churchyard, constituted the residences of the clergy. The pedagogy, described on 31st May 1601 as "the old ruinous house lie auld schoolhous," stood on the north side of the churchyard. In charters of 5th March 1528–9 and 30th April 1548, and in a Retour of 20th Jan. 1579, the patronage of the Provostship and the Prebendaries of the College of Strathmiglo is included among the Balweary possessions. It would seem, however, that the project, probably owing to lack of endowments, was not carried to completion. The church, consisting of a nave and choir, stood in the churchyard; and the present church, built in 1787, is situated on the glebe at the east end of the town. St Mary's Chapel, which, with St Mary's Well and attached lands, was at the west end of Gateside, was in all likelihood built by the Abbot of Balmerino for the abbey's tenants and servants. There was a Friarmill in the parish.—[Rental of Dunkeld, 9, 198, 208, 239, S.H.S.; Acts of Lords of Council and Session in Public Affairs, 257; *Reg. PRESBYTERY OF ST ANDREWS

ABERCROMBIE or ST MONANS

The Church of Abercrombie was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 24th Oct. 1247 to St Mary and St Margaret. Its ruins stand in the grounds of Balcaskie.

The Church of St Monans was originally a chapel in the Parish of Kilconquhar, and is said to have been founded by Sir Alan Durward, probably about the middle part of the 13th century, though possibly an early place or earlier places of worship on the spot had enshrined the relics of St Monan; in or before 1362 it was founded anew by David II, and endowed by him in 1369; about 1473 it was given to the Dominican Friars, and in 1579 it was incorporated with the same Friars of St Andrews; it was burned by the English in 1544; by Act of the Presbytery of St Andrews July 1647, ratified by Act of Parliament June 6th 1649, St Monans was disjoined from Kilconquhar and attached to Abercrombie, St Monans to be the Kirk and Abercrombie to be the name of the parish. Near the church is St Monan's Cave, and about a mile eastward along the shore is a Spring called St Monan's Well. From 1477 to 1519 there was a small priory in existence, and it continued afterwards to be the residence of two friars but was suppressed in 1550. In 1319 William Lamber-ton, Bishop of St Andrews, granted the church to increase the lighting of the High Altar of the Cathedral.—[Transactions of Aberdeen Ecclesiological Society, 1897, 181, 185, 191, 192, 193, which see for full details; Fifeana, 224-5; *Acts Scott. ANSTRUTHER, EASTER

In 1592 steps were taken towards the planting of a church at East Anstruther. Nothing further resulted till 1639, when the General Assembly, with consent of the bailies and council, disjoined it from Kilrenny. That received effect by Act of Parliament in the same year; and by a further Act of Parliament in 1641 the erection of the separate parish was decreed. The steeple of the church, a Dutch model, was added in 1644. After the erection of the separate charge, a house in Pend Wynd became the manse; by transaction of 1713 it passed to Sir John Anstruther in exchange for Melville's house in 1590, which in 1637 had been acquired from James Melville's grandson, Ephraim, only son of Ephraim Melville, min. of Pittenweem. On the highest window, chiselled in stone, are the words "Watch Tower." There was a Chapel of St Ayle (Aylus, Agilus), designated in 1632 "the tenement called Sanct-cyldus Chapel in East Anstruther."—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 472, 596b; East Neuk of Fife, 361, 362–3, 377; Retours, xii, 61.]

ANSTRUTHER, WESTER

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 28th June 1243, St Nicholas being patron saint. In the Lord High Treasurer's Accounts is: "In Anstruther when the king came on land to the priests of Anstruther to say ane trentale of Masses of St Nicholas XXS," 3rd June 1503. The tower of the church, which has undergone considerable alterations, appears to belong to the 16th century.—[East Neuk of Fife, 343; Lord High Treasurer's Accs., ii, 261.]

BOARHILLS

Inchmurthac, on the banks of the Kenly, near the village, was a residence of the Bishops of St Andrews as early as the time of Bishop de Bernham, 1239–53. At the beginning of the 18th century there still remained ruins and the walls of a chapel. The dovecot there, now also in ruins, is said to have been built of stones from the Bishop's "palace." During a year's vacancy in the see after the death of Bishop Lamberton, the revenues were assigned to the Earl of Carrick, afterwards David II, and his countess, Johanna, daugh. of Edward II; and they are said to have resided for a time at Inchmurthac, where King David's second marriage—to Margaret, daugh. of Sir John Logie—took place.—[Sibbald's Hist. of Fife, 348; Fleming's Guide to St Andrews, 132.]

ROBERT HENRY MACKAY, died 1903 9th April 1935.

CAMERON

The Act of Parliament erecting the parish was passed 24th Feb. 1645, when the church was almost completed. That church was removed in a very ruinous condition and the present church built in 1808.—[Acts Scott. Parl., vi, (1), 332.]

CARNBEE

Under the designation Kellyn, the Church of Kellie in this parish was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 19th June 1243. It was granted to Dunfermline Abbey by Malcolm, 1153-65. Either it was suppressed at a later period, or it was the earlier name of what became Carnbee Church. The existing church was built in 1793.—[Reg. of Dunfermline, 24; Sibbald's Hist. of Fife, 207.]

JAMES RAY, died at Harrogate 12th 1883 June 1933; his son, James Forrest, died 15th May 1930.

CRAIL

The church is virtually the ancient collegiate edifice. It was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 21st June 1243, probably soon after the earlier nave was almost completely taken down and rebuilt with aisles and the present western tower. After various disputes it was confirmed to the burgh by Act of Parliament in 1633. There was a Chapel of St Maelruba, sometimes designated St Rufus, within the Castle of Crail; and there was also a priory dedicated to the same saint. A ruined gable with a Gothic window stood till 1801, when it was overthrown by the sea, leaving only foundations to mark the priory's site. Near by were the Prior's Croft and the Briery (Priory) Well.—[East Neuk of Fife, 414; Reg. Great Seal, 31st Aug. 1458, 21st June 1512; Acts Scott. Parl., v, 99.]

FERRYPORT-ON-CRAIG

The name was formerly Portincraig, Southferrie of Portincraig, and East Ferry of Portincraig. In the Act of Parliament of July 1606, erecting the parish, the church is described as "laitlie biggit." There was an aisle with burial vault underneath, added, it is said, by Sir John Buchanan of Scotsraig. The church was rebuilt in 1825. On the western face of the tower there is built in a lintel on which are two coats of arms, one that of Margaret Hartsyde, and the other that of her husband, Sir John

Buchanan. Manifestly the lintel had belonged to the doorway or a doorway of the former church; and it indicates that the aisle had been built by Sir John, who died before 8th Sept. 1641, and his wife, Margaret Hartsyde, who died June 1642. Also on the tower, below the lintel, are two panels, one with the arms of Sir John Buchanan and Margaret Hartsyde, impaled, and flanked by the date 1644, and the other with the arms of Sir Arthur Erskine of Scotsraig, fourth son of John, Earl of Mar, by his second wife, Marie Stewart, and his wife, Margaret Buchanan, one of the two daughts. and heiresses of Sir John B. and Margaret Hartsyde, impaled, and flanked by the date 164—. On the north gable of the church is a stone with date 1607, also taken from the former church, and probably indicating the year when that church was completed for worship. There was a chapel at Chapel-toun in the barony of Scotsraig, dedicated to St John.—[Reg. Sec. Seal, 6th Dec. 1606; Reg. Pres. Bene., 4th Nov. 1609; *Reg. FORGAN

The parish was also called St Fillan, and, once, Adhenachthen. About 1150 David I granted the church, with a full mensal toft, to the Priory of St Andrews. That was confirmed by charter of Malcolm IV, who added half a caracute of land, called Chingothe. In the concluding part of the 12th century Alan de Lascelles, patron of the church, son of Alan de Lascelles and Julian Somerville, in accordance with his own desire and that of Amable, his wife, granted to the priory, the mother church of his land of Adhenachthen, namely the Church of Forgun, along with the Chapel of Adhenachthen, and a caracute of land, both adjoining the church. Adhenachthen, is now Naughton. The patron saint was St Fillan, but St Andrew was substituted before 1154-9. The ruins of the old church are situated in the churchyard at Kirkton. Besides the Chapel of Adhenachthen, there was a Chapel of St Thomas at "Sea-Mylns of Innerdovart." Nine Wells in the east part of the parish may indicate that there was a chapel dedicated to the Nine Maidens.—[Reg. Priory of St Andrews, 51, 107–8, 187, 198–9, 205, 274; Reg. Great Seal, 26th March 1618, 31st July 1637; Reg. Pres. Bene., i, (4), 10.]

KEMBACK

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 6th Sept. 1244. Its ruins are situated in the churchyard a short distance south-west of the present church, which was opened for worship in May 1814. The lintelled entrance doorway near the west end of the south wall of the old church has the date 1582. On the foundation of the College and Collegiate Church of St Salvator, St Andrews, by Bishop Kennedy in 1451, the Church of Kemback was granted to the same by the founder.

KILCONQUHAR

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 12th July 1243. St Monan has been suggested as having been the patron saint, also St Concad, an obscure Irish saint, and likewise the Irish St Chonchobar, Conquhar or Connacher, pronounced Conneuchar. In 1499 Patrick Dunbar, lord of Kilconquhar, founded in the church an altar of “Our Ladie of Pitie” (Pity) for the souls of himself, Christian Home, his mother, Janet Dunbar, evidently his grandmother, and Isabella Dishington, his wife. By Act of Parliament, 1597, Kilconquhar was dissolved from North Berwick and made a separate rectory. Of the old church only a part of a nave arcade is now visible. The existing church was built in 1820–1. In a field at Rires stood the Chapel of “Our Lady of Rires,” or “the Chapel of Marie, Rires.” On 1st Sept. 1404 John Wemyss, Kt., Lord of Rires, endowed the chapel with various lands and annual rents from his barony of Leuchars and his lands of Rires, and extensive pasture privileges, for the souls of Robert III, Queen Annabella, etc. Rires is now part of Elie parish. There is a roofless Renaissance Chapel within the grounds of Balcarres House.—[Mackinlay’s Ancient Church Dedications (non-script.), 493; East Neuk of Fife, 118, 155, 162; Johnstone’s Place Names, 217; *Acts Scott. KILRENNY

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 26th June 1243. It has been suggested that the patron saint is St Ethernan, Ethernan, Ernan, uncle of St Columba, and St Ringan. St Ninian also finds favour. A third suggestion is St Irenaeus of Lyons. Land near the church bore the name Rinniehill, Irniehill; there is said to have been a St Irnie’s Well, and the church tower was called St Irny by the fishermen, who used it as a landmark. Further, a tradition exists or existed “that the devotees at Anstruther, who could not see the Church of Kilrenny till they travelled up the rising ground to what they called ‘the hill,’ when they pulled off their bonnets, fell on their knees, crossed themselves and prayed to St Irnie.” Prof. W. J. Watson, however, considers that St Irnie is fictitious, and that what we have to do with is irnaide, urnaidhe, middle Gaelic form of mod. G. urnuigh, meaning (1) Prayer; (2) Oratory; the name, therefore, would arise from the ancient oratory, and Irniehill would likely be designated of old Cnoc Irnaidhe, “the hill of prayer” or “the hill of the oratory,” mod. G. Cnoc na k-Urnuighe. All that remains of the old church is the tower, probably early 15th century, at the north-west angle of the present church, which was built 1806–8. The old church had a nave and two aisles. —[Watson’s Celtic Place Names, 519–20; East Neuk of Fife, 222.]

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 17th July 1243. It appears to have been rebuilt in the early part of the 17th century, for the chancel and the tower now existing belong to that period, and bear respectively the dates 1623 and 1628. A further rebuilding scheme was carried out in 1817, "and in 1826, there was taken into the new building an aisle belonging to the old, by which the spire is supported, bearing date 1623." That evidently refers to the chancel. The "Chaplainries of Strathairlie in the barony of Lundie" are mentioned, without any details, in 1600, and "Sanct Androc's landis" in Lundie in 1593. In the church was an altar, dedicated to St John the Baptist and St John the Evangelist, founded in Nov. 1510 by Sir John Lundin of Lundin in the new aisle built by him on to the church, the endowment including the Temple Lands of Balcormo, the Temple Lands on the south side of Lundin Orchard, and a Rig of Temple Lands in the Persflat of Lundin.—[Retours, ii, 34; Reg. Great Seal, iii, 78, 6th April 1593.]

ALEXANDER WOOD, M.A., second son of Sir Andrew Wood of Largo, 1550 of Naval fame, and his wife, Elizabeth Lundin; was vicar in 1550; dem. in 1576, and died in 1592; was also vicar-pensionary of North Berwick. Marr. Elizabeth Creighton, widow of William Dishington, friar of Ardross, who was killed at the Battle of Pinkie; his natural daugh., Alison, marr. The quarrel evidently concerned the lands of Grange, which Alexander Wood acquired from the nuns of North Berwick in 1560.—[East Neuk of Fife, 72, 183, 184, 215, 238, 259; *Reg. LEUCHARS

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 4th Sept. 1244. In modern times the site of the Chapel of St Bonoc was occupied by the parish school. There was a well of the same name. Our Lady Well was on the north-east side of the village. According to tradition there was a chapel on the east side of the road opposite Ardit House; and there were at East Dron a chapel and burying ground. Sir Thomas Wemyss was chaplain of the chaplainry of St Bonit (Bonoc) 3rd May 1586.—[Reg. Sec. Seal.]

NEWBURN

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 15th July 1243. It was rebuilt by James Beaton, Archbishop of St Andrews 1522–39, and its ruins stand at the south side of the road near Little Dumbarnie.
 The existing church was built in 1815. At Balchristie there was a Chapel of the Culdees belonging to Serf's Priory, Lochleven. The town of Balchristie was given to Serf's Priory by King Malcolm and Queen Margaret 1070–93. Old foundations dug up in the last decade of the 18th century by the proprietor of Balchristie near the west wall of his garden may have been those of the chapel. In the New Statistical Account Rev. Dr Laurie states that the ancient name of the parish was Drumaldry, and that Newburn was subsequently adopted; and in a bequest by John Wood of Orkie in 1659 for a free grammar school within the parish, and the maintenance of several poor scholars, the designation is "the parish of Drumalry alias Newburn." The name Newburn, however, is found applied to both the parish and the church in the 12th century and the 13th; and at subsequent dates up to the Reformation, and thereafter to the present time, whereas Drumaldry is applied to lands in "the parish of Newburn." In or shortly before the closing year of his reign (1153) David I granted the town of Nithbren with its appendages to Dunfermline Abbey. This was confirmed by Bull of Pope Alexander III on 5th June 1163, and Bull of Pope Lucius on 28th April 1182, each of which included not merely the town but also the Church of Nithbren. It would appear, therefore, that the church was built between the date of David I's charter and 1163, or it may have been in existence at an earlier period and have been granted to the Abbey by an unrecorded charter prior to 1163. It was rebuilt by James Beaton, Archbishop of St Andrews 1524–39.—

PITTENWEEM

Up to 1588 no church existed; but some kind of place of worship had been secured, for in 1588 William Scott of Abbotshall, in giving the community a grant of the west portion of the priory buildings, to provide a "decent, honest, and comely kirk," set forth that "the house which they have coft, ordered, and plenished at their great expense, and which presently serves them for a kirk, cannot conveniently be enlarged, having rather the form of a private house than of a kirk." The church, however, was ultimately built on the north side of the priory settlement, near the site of the Priory Church. The tower of 1588 still remains, but the rest of the church is virtually modern, having been completely restored. The Well of Mary Magdalene was near the churchyard, and that might indicate that to her the priory was dedicated. At the north-west corner of the priory buildings stood the Lady Chapel. Hence the names of Mary Gate and Lady Wynd.

By deed of gift of 30th June 1589, which bears that the church had lately been erected into a parish church, King James VI granted to Mr Nicol Dalgleish, min. of the church, and his successors in office certain quantities of victual and salt; and by signature under his hand (16th Aug. 1611) the same monarch "ratified and approved the erection of the said Kirk into ane parochie kirk and sua ratified in the preceding Parliament." But by the negligence of those entrusted with the management of the town's affairs the said Act of Erection was amissing, and "be the lyk slaknes of thes quha wer employit thairine" the said signature "was never prosecute nor exped." Accordingly by Act of 28th June 1633 Parliament anew erected and reconstituted the said church into a parish church, and dissolved from West Anstruther parish the Burgh of Pittenweem between Anstruther West on the east, the lands of St Monans and Abercromby on the west, and the lands of Balcaskie and Grangemuir on the north, except 80 acres of the feuars of Anstruther and Mylthouse be east of the march stones in the parish of West Anstruther. At the same time Parliament ratified a bond of security by Alexander, Lord Fenton, to the Bailies and Council of Pittenweem for 400 and 500 merks Scots respective out of the parsonage and vicarage of the Lordship of Pittenweem of date 6th June 1632, and also a contract of 12th July 1632 between the Bailies and Council of Pittenweem and the min., Rev. John Melville, by which they provided him and his successors in office a yearly duty of 120 merks Scots from the maills, customs, and common good of the Burgh.—[*Acts Scott. NICOL DALGLEISH, on his admission 1589 in 1589, by letters of provision issued by James VI, there was settled on him and his successors in office a yearly stipend out of the funds of the priory and the old assumption of the third thereof, in part money, in part victual, ultimately converted into a money payment of £300 Scots.—[East Neuk of Fife, 301; Reg. of Inhibitions, i, 18.]

ST ANDREWS

The following seven churches are said to have existed in St Andrews at an early date —St Regulus, St Aneglas the Deacon, St Michael the Archangel, St Mary the Virgin, St Damianus, St Brigid the Virgin, St Muren the Virgin.

The College of St Salvator and the Collegiate Church of St Salvator, one and the same foundation, was founded by James Kennedy, Bishop of St Andrews, confirmation being granted by Pope Nicholas V on 5th Feb. 1451–2. The foundation was for thirteen persons “after the number of Apostles,” the first of whom was to be the Provost and S.T.M., the second to be a Licentiate of Theology by examination, the third to be a completed Bachelor of Theology, four of the rest to be M.A. and priests, and the remaining six to be poor clerks. To the foundation were granted the Churches of Kilmany, Cults, Kemback and Dunino, all prebends. Cults was assigned to the Provost and Kemback to the Licentiate.
 By Bull of 4th April 1458 Pope Pius II confirmed the reformation of the statutes and foundation anew of the college and church by Bishop Kennedy; and on 4th Dec. 1460 the same Pope granted indulgence to all visiting and contributing for the completion of the buildings and ornaments of the church and its fortification, “that it may be safe from the attack of its enemies.” The foundation was then described as for thirteen masters, scholars studying theology, and certain chaplains. Other prebends included Balbithie and Pitmilly for one chaplain; “the parsonage called of old Chalmoure’s Chaplainry,” being the rectory of Kinnell Church; the vicarage of the Church of Cranston, and the lands of Balgonar, Saline, for two Chaplains, granted by the King as tutor of his brother, the Earl of Mar, on 28th April 1464, and confirmed by Crown Charter on the following day. Altars in the church were—St Mary, probably the Virgin; Holy Spirit; St Olave the Martyr; St Olave and St John the Baptist; St Catherine in St Catherine’s Aisle; St John; and St Michael, at which on 10th April 1528 Gavin Dunbar, Bishop of Aberdeen, in accordance with the last will and testament of Edward Stewart, Bishop of Orkney, founded in honour of the Holy Trinity, the Virgin Mary, St Michael, and All Saints, three perpetual chaplains for the souls of the said Bishop Edward and of John, Bishop of Orkney.

 On 28th Jan. 1475–6 James III confirmed a charter of John Thom, Rector of Inverarity, founding two chaplainries in the church in honour of the Holy Trinity and St John the Evangelist. In a Templar writ of 10th July 1547 mention is made of a chaplainry of St John and St Coill in St Salvator’s. Coill appears to be a mutilated form of the name of a saint. St Salvator’s was burned in 1546 by Norman Leslie and his accomplices.

There was a chapel dedicated to St Anne, with houses, enclosure, well and garden, situated in the North Street. The Chapel of “Sanct Gormos,” whose chaplain, Sir John Stephen, was summoned by the superintendents on 25th Oct. 1564 for ministering the Sacraments, and solemnising marriages in “Papisticall fashion,” may be the Chapel of St Cormac.

The Kirk-heugh may have been the site of the monastery founded by St Cainnech, a friend of St Columba, in the latter part of the 4th century; and of that monastery, it is said, Tuathalan, who died in 747, was Abbot. Skene's statement is that St Cainech appears to have founded a Reclis or monastery at a place in East Fife called Rig-Monadh or Royal Mount, which afterwards became celebrated as the site where the Church of St Andrews was built, and as giving to that church its Gaelic name of Kilrimont. Professor Watson regards Reclis as a "cell" or "oratory," and holds the view that the interpretation is that in Cell Rigmonaid, i.e. in the Church of St Andrews, there was an oratory or chapel named in honour of St Cainnach. The Blackfriars' monastery in South Street was founded by Bishop Wishart 1272-9. Permission to build the aisle, which still exists, was given by Archbishop James Beaton in 1529. The body of Cardinal Beaton, brought from the Bottle Dungeon in the Castle, was interred in the monastery. To the monastery there was annexed, apparently in the first half of the 16th century, a hospital for "brethren" or "brothers" (monks, friars, priests) afflicted with leprosy. Situated near St Andrews, on the shore of the East Sands, the hospital was in existence in the second half of the 12th century, and was dedicated to St Nicholas. Following the annexation, James V, on 22nd April 1540, granted to the monastery a confirmation charter of the endowments of the hospital—the right to have a wagon for fuel from the king's moss at Crail for the use of the house, granted by King William the Lion; two bovates of land in Polagwin, with pasture of 20 animals (cattle, sheep) and 6 horses, granted by Hugh Gifford about 1178; land of Putekin, granted before 1188 by Roger, Bishop-Elect of St Andrews; relief of rights and services due to the king in respect of a ploughgate of land which the hospital held, granted by Alexander II, 1214-49; a toft and croft in Lundin, which John Melville had held, an acre of land on the west side of Gamell hill, and common pasture for 40 sheep, 6 oxen, and 3 horses and a sow with six porklings, granted, probably about 1220, by Thomas de Lundin, grandson of Philip de Lundin, and probably son of Walter de Lundin who succeeded his father, Philip. The Convents of St Monance and

Cupar were also annexed to the monastery. In 1546 the church of the monastery was burned by Norman Leslie, Friar of Rothies, and his "accomplices," of whom the following are given as escheated in 1547—Mr Andrew Whitelaw, parson of Aberdour (Aberdeenshire), who died in the latter year; John Leslie; Mr Henry Balnavis of Halhill and his wife, Christina Scheves; James Kirkcaldy of Grange; John Kirkcaldy of Firthfield; Peter Carmichael of Balmedie; and John Carmichael, his brother. They had joined Leslie both in his deeds at the Castle, and also "in burning Sanct Salvatoris College, and the Blak and Gray Freris Kirkis," variations with regard to the kirkis being "burning and destruction of the Kirkis of the Gray and Blak Friaris," and the "destruction and douncasting of the Blak and Gray Friaris." According to Father Hay, the Greyfriars' monastery was founded by Bishop Kennedy of St Andrews in 1458; and on 21st Dec. 1479 James III confirmed to the friars the site of the place pertaining to them, and the ground and lands lying there, given by Bishop Kennedy and his successor, Bishop Graham. As already stated, the church of the monastery was burned in 1546. The well of the settlement is at No. 4 Greyfriars Gardens. It may be noted that on 29th March 1466 Pope Paul II gave a mandate to the official of St Andrews to the following effect: "The recent petition of the vicar and friars of the Order of Friars Minor of Scotland contained that the late Henry, Bishop of St Andrews, granted to them the place of Bertheon in the diocese of St Andrews, after which the said friars had a house with a Church and other necessary offices built in the said place, and have therein more than 40 years served the Most High. At their petition to the Pope to confirm the said grant, and to grant that they may receive the said house anew, and to absolve from excommunication those of them who received it without papal licence, and have inhabited it, etc., the Pope hereby orders the above official to absolve all those friars who received the said house, and also those who have inhabited it, as above, enjoining a salutary penance, etc.; dispense them on account of irregularity contracted, if any, and rehabilitate them, and, moreover, if they find that the said grant was lawful, to approve and confirm it and its consequences by papal authority. In the event of such approbation and confirmation the Pope grants to the said vicar and friars indult to receive the said house anew for their use (and) habitation." Obviously the mandate imparts fresh information about one of the Greyfriars' settlements in the Diocese of St Andrews; but the description of the locality of that settlement does not suffice for identification.

The Hospital of St Andrews for poor pilgrims was a Culdee institution, and, passing to the Bishopric, it was granted to the Priory of St Andrews by Bishop Robert in his foundation charter of the priory in 1144. The endowments of the hospital included a ploughgate of land in Chatalach or Cathelach, granted by Simon, son of Michael, and confirmed by Simon's son, Alan, and Kings Malcolm IV and William the Lion; lands of Kenlakin, one portion of what belonged to the Altars of St Andrews, and a half of the Bishop's cane (customs or rents paid in kind) of the Parish Church of the Holy Trinity, and a whole tenth of the Bishop's cane from Bladebolg, granted by David I; the right for the cattle of the hospital to have com-monty in the pasture of the prior and convent, granted by Malcolm IV; the lands of Petmulin which Malisius held, and land at Crail which was occupied by Radulf of Aluerbas, granted by Countess Ada, mother of Malcolm IV and William the Lion; and the lands of Upper and Lower Kinlochquay or Kinnochy. In 1158-9 the "New Hospital" is mentioned in a charter of Bishop Arnold; and in a confirmation charter of King William the Lion in 1165-70 both the hospital and the "New Hospital" occur. In the time of Bishop de Bernham, 1239-53, there appears the Hospital of St Leonard which with its dependent "grange of Kellakin" is also included among the possessions of the priory in a Bull granted to the priory in 1243-54 by Pope Innocent IV. There are indications that the "New Hospital" and St Leonard's Hospital were identical. In any case the Hospital of St Andrews came to be associated with St Leonard. As time passed, pilgrims ceased to frequent the hospital, which in consequence was converted into a residence for aged women. These, however, proved disappointing in that they displayed little or nothing of good fruits in life and conduct, and on 15th Feb. 1512-13 Prior John Hepburn and Archbishop Alexander Stewart joined the hospital and its lands, teinds, and annual rents to the Church of St Leonard, and converted the hospital and church, "newly built in a proper manner at the expense of the Church of St Andrews," into a college to be named "The College of the Poor Clerks of the Church of St Andrews"—St Leonard's College. In a charter of Simon, son of Simon of Kyner, in or before 1250, there is mentioned land at St Andrews called the "acre of the brothers of St Lazarus." That may indicate a house of that name at St Andrews; but there is no information on the matter.

In Theiner's Vetera Monumenta, the Register of the Priory of St Andrews, and Balfour's Collection of Charters, there are various writs which throw light upon the struggle between the provost and canons of St Mary's Church of the Kirkheugh and the Prior and Convent of St Andrews, which ended about the beginning of the 14th century in the subjugation of St Mary's to the contention of the prior and convent that in the direction and management of St Mary's they had the precedence and superiority. As Chapel Royal, St Mary's gave place to Restalrig before 1486-7, when in the Exchequer Rolls there occurs a payment for slates "for the King's Chapel near the Parish Church of Restalrig"; but the designation continued to be applied to St Mary's. On 2nd May 1501, when the Chapel Royal at Stirling was erected by James IV into a collegiate church, it was decreed that the Provostry of St Mary's be the deanery of the church, and that the provost as dean preside over the people in the church, and have the cure of the souls of the king and his household. But by a rescript of 3rd July 1504, Pope Julius II restricted the provost to his former function, and confirmed the office of Dean to the Bishop of Whithorn (Galloway). The prebends of St Mary's were—Church of Strabrok (Uphall); Church of Fetteresso; Church of Arbuthnot; Church of Dysart; Church of Ceres, attached to the Altar of St Ninian; Church of Benholme; Kinkell; Kingask; Dura; Idwie; Kinglassie (St Andrews); 10 merks of the lands of Kinaldie and Kernes; Lammalethin and Kyninnes (formerly Carnegour), described in cir. 1290 as Lethin and Kyninnis when William Comyn, provost, confirmed a charter of Adam de Malkirwistun, who was provost in 1250, granting the land to John, son of William of Lambere, the name Lambere evidently explaining the later designation Lammalethin; Kernes and Cameron. Lands acknowledged about the close of the 12th century by Gilbert, Prior of St Andrews, as belonging to St Mary's "without question" were—Kingask, Kinkell with Petsforgin, Petkennin, Lethem with Kininnis, Kermes with Camberum. Manifestly those lands, and probably most, if not all, of the other lands comprising the prebends, belonged to the church as the Culdee Monastery. By Act of Parliament of 1621 the provostry of the Kirkheugh, exclusive of the six churches, was annexed to the Archbishopric of St Andrews. It may be noted that the Provost of St Mary's had a seat in Parliament on 3rd Feb. 1489–90. The Chapel of St Peter was situated near the shore and the road leading to the Castle; and on the shore at Kinkell, east of St Andrews, there was a Chapel of St Ann, built, it is said, by Kellack, Bishop of St Andrews about 875.

At St Andrews there was an altar dedicated to St Eloy (Eligius, Eloi, Loye), apparently in the parish church. "Trinity bred" in the same church, at which James IV made an offering of 14 sh. in 1497, may denote that there was there a subsidiary altar dedicated to the Holy Trinity. At the west port there was a chapel dedicated to St Ninian, demolished before 3rd Oct. 1562. About 1178 the priory was designated the "Church of St Andrew the Apostle," and in 1202 it was called the "Church of the Blessed St Andrew.'"—[Lord High Treasurer's Accs., i, 332, 333; Nicol Thounis' Prot. Bk., No. 100; Cal. of Charters, i, 7, 16; Chronicle of Picts and Scots, 187; *Misc. ADAM HERIOT, the Christian Re-1559 formed Church and congregation of the City of St Andrews was in existence before 16th March 1559, with him as min. and twelve elders and eight deacons. On 2nd June 1565 he conveyed to Patrick Lermont of Dairsie, Kt., Provost of St Andrews, the tenement belonging to the vicarage with the teinds of fish and herring taken by hook and net by fishers within the parish for 10 merks Scots annually, on the ground "that by the change of religion the fruits and profits of all vicarages and of his own vicarage had been reduced within narrow, over-meagre bounds"; of him it is recorded that he was "greatly beloved of the citizens for his humane and courteous conversation, and of the poorer sort much lamented, to whom he was in his life very beneficent."—[Cal. of Charters, ix, 1993; Reg. Kirk Sess. of St Andrews, 2, 3 and n, 45, 47.]

THOMAS WOOD, reader, pres. to 1574 vicarage on death of Adam Heriot 24th March 1574–5, but John Winram, superintendent, refused to admit him and on 21st May 1575 was charged by the Privy Council to do so; was one of the Convent of Lindores, and joined the Reformers in 1562; the Scottish Psalter, still in MS., suggested by the Prior of St Andrews, afterwards Regent Moray, was carried through by Wood, the harmonising being the work of David Peebles, one of the canons of St Andrews; died probably in 1592.—[Reg. Pres. Bene.; Reg. of Deeds, Pt. 2, 415–17; Reg. Kirk Sess. of St Andrews, 727n, 40n, S.H.S.]

GEORGE BLACK was one of the 1579 deacons of St Andrews Reformed Church and congregation constituted before 16th March 1559–60 and continued to serve as such at least till 1584; he was reader before 31st May 1564, designated exhorter 27th Sept. 1580 and reader 14th March 1581, 11th April 1582, and 27th Feb. 1582–3; during the vacancy in the ministry 1581–4 he “ministered” the Sacraments and performed marriages.—[Reg. of St Andrews Kirk Session, 1–3, lxvii, 35, 45, 47, 75, 78, 197, 450, 473, 478, 488n, 500, 512.]

ROBERT PONT, it is doubtful if he 1581 was actually min. at St Andrews; the church was vacant on 7th June 1581; on 30th Oct. 1581 representatives were appointed to see the Earl of March, Commendator of Pittenweem, regarding provision of a stipend for Mr Robert Pont, “whom the Session thinks meet to be minister of this parish”; on 20th Dec. 1581 it was intimated that the Town Council was to meet next day to appoint a representative to take the Council’s letter to Edinburgh to Mr Robert Pont to be pastor, that they may know his attitude; a min. was mentioned, but not by name, on 14th March 1581–2. On 9th May 1582 representatives were again appointed to confer with the Earl of March “for gude ordour to be taken for Mr Robert Pont, minister, for his stipend, that he may be hastit to cum hame.” On 12th April 1582 he was a member of Edinburgh Presbytery. On 31st Oct. 1582 the charge was without a min., and in April 1583 he intimated to the Assembly that “he had proponit to sitt down in St Andrews, and had served on his own chairges a whole year, but had left through lack of provision of stipend,” and he prayed the kirk “not to lay the Charge upon him against his will”; apparently, therefore, he served at the most only part of a year at St Andrews, and was never actually settled as min. During the vacancy George Black, reader and exhorter, and Thomas Wood, reader, carried out such duties as were open to them, and teaching was overtaken by James and Andrew Melville, and Patrick Adamson, Archbishop of St Andrews. It was suggested that the Earl of March deliberately prolonged the vacancy that he might have the stipend for his own personal use.—[Reg. of St Andrews Kirk Session, lxvii, 453, 460, 461, 463, 473, 481, 488n; Booke of the Universal Kirk, 574, 620.]

 there is a copy of a letter by him to the Session, dated from the Rising Sun, Caledonia Bay, 2nd Feb. 1700. After personal references he recounts the "wicked society of monsters" he was thrust in among during the voyage, and how near he was brought to the gates of death by a long and severe fever which raged among them all the voyage, which few escaped, and whereby about 150 persons were cut off by death besides what had died since; their arrival on 30th Nov. 1699, and their sad disappointment in finding the colony deserted instead of the comfortable settlement that they had expected, nothing being left but a howling wilderness with all the circumstances of impassable woods and vast desolations never frequented by mankind, and dangers and difficulties: a land pleasant, fruitful, rich, if only they had the means to subdue it, and the skill to improve it; no shelter except the ships, or under trees, or little huts made by tree branches; no provisions except what had been brought from Scotland, and these now musty, rotten, old, salt, and near to exhaustion, which, if it occurred, would mean the break-up of the colony. However, in spite of the discouragements, difficulties, and apparent hopelessness of the situation, mindful of the promises that he had made at home, and in dependence upon God, he would stay on till it was seen what would become of the colony, and "some weak endeavours be made to lay the foundations of a Church"; he would return home with all expedition as soon as his "year was out," or sooner if the colony broke up because of the lack of provisions.—[St Andrews Reg.]

SYNOD OF ANGUS AND MEARNS

PRESBYTERY OF MEIGLE

AIRLIE

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 27th Aug. 1242. At Baikie there was a chapel dedicated to St John the Baptist. On 26th Feb. 1361–2 David II confirmed a charter by William Fenton of Baikie, granting the lands of Kinrosse (Lunross) to the chaplain celebrating in the chapel.

WILLIAM WILSON, D.D. (Glasgow, June 1926); adm. to united Charge 1890 2nd Feb. 1931; dem. 14th Oct. 1931; died at Coatbridge 4th Nov. 1936.

The church was erected a Prebend of Dunkeld by Bishop Thomas Lauder 1452–76. In 1727 the church was described as 49½ feet broad, 50 in length, “abstracting from the quire,” and “stands on two rows of pillars,” and at the close of the 18th century as “an old Gothic building.” On the north side of the churchyard there was a chapel dedicated to St Ninian, to which were attached the lands of Balwhyn. There was also a chapel at Inverqueich.—[Reg. Great Seal, i, 126; iii, 494; Macfarlane’s *Geograph. BENDOCYH

Originally the parish was made up of two portions, the Lowland and the Highland, or the East and West. The Lowland division was intersected by the river Erich in the north and the river Isla in the south, and the Highland division, separated from the Lowland by the parishes of Rattray and Blairgowrie, consisted of two portions, Persie and Cally, situated between the Arde and the Blackwater, and Drimmie, separated from Persie and Cally by a part of Blairgowrie. Probably that part of Blairgowrie may have been “the town of Persie (Parsyos)” of old, belonged to the Church of Blairgowrie, but by amicable arrangement between the Abbots of Scone and Cupar was transferred to Bendochy. Before 1st July 1429 the arrangement was amicably annulled, and “the town of Persie” reverted to Blairgowrie. The Highland division ultimately became part of the parish of Persie, and the portion of the Lowland division south of the Isla was erected into the parish of Coupur Angus. About 1214 the Church of Bendochy was confirmed to Dunfermline Abbey by Hugh de Sigillo, Bishop of Dunkeld. In a dispute regarding Bendochy between Abbeyes of Dunfermline and Cupar, Pope Honorius III decerned on 29th Oct. 1219 that the Church of Bendochy be held off Dunfermline Abbey by the Abbey of Cupar—reddendo 2½ silver merks per annum. The church was repaired in 1803 and again in 1842, when “the old grey slates” were removed and were replaced by “blue slates.” Inside there is a Sacrament House, defaced but still beautiful, having at the foot the arms and initials of William Turnbull, Abbot of Cupar cir. 1506–26. Other features are a pulpit of 17th-century panelling and a series of sepulchral monuments about the early part of that century. In the north part of the parish, beyond the Erich, there was a chapel dedicated to St Fincana or Findoce, belonging to Cupar Abbey. The saint is St Findeach the Virgin, whose day is 13th Oct., Findoce being the Latin form of Findeoch. The name survives locally in St Fink or St Phink, the designations of lands and a hill in that region. Dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the Chapel of Cally was situated at Monk’s Cally or Monkstown on the east side of Glen Arde, some distance above Bridge of Cally, and also belonged to Cupar Abbey. The churchyard attached to it was still in use in the first half of the 19th century.—[Reg. of Cupar Abbey, ii, 207; Reg. of Dunfermline, 76, 133–5; *Reg. COUPAR ANGUS

Coupar Angus is called Cupermaccultin in 1150–3, and Tybermackotus (Coupermaccouty) on 24th July 1382, when a Papal Bull confirmed the collation of John Wernock by the Bishop of St Andrews to the perpetual chaplainry of St Ninian there.

 As the parish of Bendochy was divided in the middle by the river Isla which constituted a danger in winter time so that the inhabitants of the parish on the south side of the Isla could not cross to the church without loss and danger of life, James, Lord Coupar, at the special desire of James VI and the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks, consented to build a new church within the precincts of the Abbey of Coupar, to be called the Church of Coupar, for service of the parishioners in the town of Coupar and on the south side of the Isla, and to dispone for a min. of the church a sufficient manse and glebe with stipend of 500 merks; and accordingly the King by charter of 24th Dec. 1618 erected the said new church into a separate parish, and dissolved the town of Cupar and the lands on the south side of the Isla from the old Church and Parish of Bendochy, and annexed the same to the said new church, with Lord Coupar as patron. The church was in great measure rebuilt in 1780, added to in 1831, and rebuilt in 1859.—[Reg.

Kettins was the seat of a Celtic monastery to which may have been attached the following six chapels situated respectively at—the village of Pettie, the site being marked on the O.S. one-inch map; South Costoun or Corstoun; Piteur; Mairyfaulds; Denhead; and the south side of Kettins village. In the majority of cases there were burial grounds. By charter of 1292–3 Hugh of Over, lord of Kettins, granted to Cupar Angus Abbey his well in his lands and Abthanager of Kettins, called Bradwell (St Bride's Well) with its aqueduct and servitude of water gauges; and in a Retour of 1658 there occur "the lands called the Abden of Kettins comprising lands in the west of the village of Kettins, Over Corstoun, Greenbarns, Mill of Kettins, and the Chapel of Kettins." The Atlas of Scotland 1832 gives a site on the north of Kettins village as "Greenburn Abbey in Ruins"; but its actual significance has not been ascertained. The Church of Kettins, dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 18th April 1249, was granted "of old"—so it is narrated in 1391–2—along with its fruits, to the Red Friars Monastery of Berwick, and was to remain annexed thereto so long as the Burgh and Castle of Berwick continued faithful to and at peace with the Scottish Crown, thus permitting the said monastery to be "fortified" with monks carrying out divine celebrations in peace according to use and wont. But in 1391–2 Robert III, on account of the English occupation of Berwick rendering the foregoing conditions impossible of fulfilment, granted the church with its fruits and offerings to the Red Friars' Hospital and House of Dundee, to amplify its alms, for his own soul, the soul of his Queen, Anabella, and the souls of his ancestors and successors. How long that grant continued operative is not clear. But, at any rate, on 3rd Feb. 1473 the church was annexed to the Red Friars of Peebles. In 1768 the church was rebuilt, or, as is narrated, was "heightened by stones from Cupar Angus Abbey." There was in the church an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary, founded by Alexander Rattray at Petcur, of which in 1533 Sir David Jak was chaplain. The bell bears the date 1519, and the inscription, mainly in Roman capitals, "Maria Troon es minen naem Meester Hans Popen Reider gaf mi." Maria Troon may refer to the Virgin Mary, the expression denoting one of her attributes as Queen of Heaven, "Mary of the Throne."—[*Reg. Mag. CORTACHY

On 12th Dec. 1257 Maliseus, Earl of Strathern, granted the Church to the Abbey of Inchaffray. On 20th Oct. 1429 the patronage of the church was bestowed upon Brechin Cathedral by Walter, Earl Palatine of Strathearn, Athol, and Caithness. By John, Bishop of Brechin, the patronage was appropriated to the Capitular Mensa, and this was confirmed by Bull of Pope Martin V 8th May 1430, £10 annually being reserved for a perpetual vicar to serve Cortachy. By another Bull, of 5th May 1430, the same Pope had confirmed a gift of £40 annually from the lands of Cortachy by the said Walter for two chaplains and six boys for perpetual celebrations of divine offices in the cathedral, a fourth chaplain to be provided by the Bishop.—[Charters of Inchaffray, 76; *Cal. DUNNICHEN

The Church of Dunnichen, in 1220 Dunnachtyn, seems to be identical with the Church of Strathechtyn which with its chapel was granted to Arbroath Abbey in

FORFAR

The Chapel of St Margaret belonged to Cupar Abbey. Situated apparently in or near the town of Forfar was the Chapel of St Biternan (Ethernan) in the Diocese of Brechin, in which David, Earl of Crawford, who died probably in Feb. 1403-4 and certainly before 7th July 1404, founded a chaplain in memory of his grandfather, Sir John Stirling, etc., with an endowment of 10 merks annually from the fermes of Forfar. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 23rd Aug. 1242.—

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 25th Aug. 1242. The old Celtic cross at Glamis Manse does not belong to the earliest period of Christian art in Scotland as stated in Vol. v, 289. Its ornamentation and general character prove it to be of the third period of Celtic Christian art, namely the ninth century. There are two other Celtic crosses in the parish of the same period—the Thornton stone on the Hunter's Hill and the Cossius stone on the north side of the parish. A portion of another Celtic cross was also found when the churchyard was being dug, and several other portions have been found beside the foundations of the present church—all of the third period of Celtic work and contemporary with the life of St Fergus, the founder of the Celtic community in Glamis. A good many years ago the cave associated with him disappeared because of the rock, which enclosed it, having fallen in. The well is still there and is near the church in the romantic Den of Glamis.

The Celtic cross slab at the manse is usually designated "King Malcolm's Gravestone" from the fact that King Malcolm II died at Glamis in A.D. 1034, but on the face of it the stone is of older date, and probably is the gravestone of St Fergus himself.

No remains of the medieval church are extant except the south transept, beneath which is the vault of the Strathmore family. It is a beautiful specimen of 15th-century Gothic and is in excellent preservation and contains the altar-shaped tomb of Patrick Lyon, first Lord Glamis, who died in 1459.

The endowment of the Altar of St Thomas in the aisle of St Thomas on the south side of the church by John, Third Lord Glamis, on 20th Oct. 1487 was an annual rent of 12 merks from Nelstoun, which failing, from the whole thanage of Glamis, and 1 acre on the west side of the orchard of Glamis, with toft, etc. On 26th Oct. 1492 Walter Ramsay of Denoune founded on the north side of the church an altar dedicated to the Holy Trinity, with an endowment of 10 merks annual rent from the lands of Denoune, in warrandice of 6 merks annual rent from the lands of Petpoynt in Forfar, and also of 4 merks annual rent from the lands of Bahaglis in Perth. To the same altar John, Lord Glamis, on 20th Oct. 1492 gave 2 acres of the barony of Glamis, with toft, fodder in the marshes on the north side of Doune Water, herbage for a horse, and pasture for two cows.—[*Reg. There was at Kirriemuir a Chapel of the Holyrood; and in the churchyard there was a chapel dedicated to St Colmoc, to which pertained crofts and buildings in the town. OATHLAW OR OLD FINHAVEN

The Church of Finhaven was frequently called the "Kirk of Aikenholt." In 1380, before going abroad, Sir Alexander Lindsay of Glenesk rebuilt the church and erected it into a Prebend of Brechin Cathedral.
 The prebendary had a stall in the choir, and was to say mass for Sir Alexander's safe return. The return, however, did not materialise, for he died in Canada in 1382. Probably in the early part of the 17th century and before 1618, which is the date on the bell, the church was removed to Oathlaw. The foundations of the old church, called the "Kirk of Aikenauld," occupy a site at the junction of the Esk and the Lemno, a little below the ruins of Finhaven Castle. A spring called "Nine Well," on the hill above the old church, may mean that the church was dedicated to the Nine Maidens. St Mary's Well at Oathlaw suggests that a pre-Reformation chapel with that dedication may have been there situated. There was in the parish a Chaplainry of St Leonard, apparently attached to Brechin Cathedral.—[Reg. of Brechin, i, 196–7, ii, 361; Land of the Lindsays, 132, 135, 161–2, 165–7; Lives of the Lindsays, i, 73.]

TANNADICE

The church, dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 11th Aug. 1242, was made a Mensal Church of St Andrews by Bull of Pope Sextus IV, 26th Feb. 1473. A cairn-crowned hill is called St Arnold's Seat, but formerly was known as St Eunan's Seit or St Eunan's Seat—forms of St Adamnan. In 1744 the min. designated it St Ernan's Seat, and stated that the church was St Ernan's.—[Macfarlane's Geograph. Colls., i, 286–7; S.H.S.; *The Apostolic Camera and Scott. DUNDEE ST MARY'S

There was a Chapel of St Mary Magdalene between Dundee and Broughty of which Sir Walter Brugh, who died 1582–3, Chaplain of St Ninian's in Dundee, was also chaplain. There was also a chapel dedicated to St Clement in which there was an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary and under the patronage of the provost and bailies.

Apparently in 1391 Sir James Lindsay of Crawford founded the Hospital and House of the Red Friars. He gave certain buildings at the foot of South Tay Street, and some annual rents, for the maintenance of the said Friars, weak old people, and diseased folk. Robert III granted confirmation by charter of 1391–2, and at the same time gave Kettins Church to the House. Within the "Great Lodging" of the Lindsays of Crawford, on the south side of the Parish Church, there was a chapel or oratory dedicated to St Michael. —[*Reg. INCHTURE

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 11th Aug. 1243. In 1165–72 King William the Lion granted the church, with its lands and the Chapel of Kinnaird, to the Priory of St Andrews, the grant being confirmed by Richard, Bishop of St Andrews, 1170–2. In 1372 Pope Gregory XI confirmed a charter of William Landel, Bishop of St Andrews, granting the Mensal Church of Inchture with the Chapel of Kinnaird for the fabric of the Cathedral, on the ground that the action of the sea had destroyed a large part of the rock on which the Cathedral was situated and threatened the greatest danger to the foundation and fabric of the same, and that the fruits, annual rents, and revenues devoted to the work of the fabric, through wars and the mischievousness of men, had become so small and so alienated that they did not suffice for the repair of the rock and the upkeep of the Cathedral. In the church there was an altar dedicated to St Katharine.—[Reg. Priory of St Andrews, xxxvi, xlv, 59, 138–9, 218–19.]

The Church of Rossinclerach (Rossie) was dedicated to St Laurence and St Coman by Bishop de Bernham of St Andrews 13th Aug. 1243. The church along with its pertinents was granted to the Priory of St Andrews by Matthew, Archdeacon of St Andrews—confirmation by Malcolm IV, 1153–65. The "Abbey" of Rossie indicates that there was an early Christian settlement here, with dependent churches or chapels.—[Reg. Priory of St

MAINS and STRATHMARTINE

Strathdighty. In 1201–7 the church was granted to Arbroath Abbey by Gillechrist, Earl of Anegus. In the church there was an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary. A dispute between Robert Graham of Fintry, heir of late Robert G. of Fintry, and Matilda Scrymgeour, widow of the said late Robert G., as to the altar was settled on 20th May 1490, when the arbiters in the dispute received the goods and ornaments of the altar in a chest before the altar from Sir Andrew Bachlane, chaplain, and the arbiters and said Matilda gave them to Robert Graham, who in turn gave them to the altar in honour of God, the Blessed Virgin, and St Joseph, vowing at the same time to found a perpetual chantry in their honour. The foundation took place on 7th June 1490.—[Reports Hist. MSS. Commis., ii, Graham of Fintry, 199; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 2130.]

MONIFIETH

The church was granted to Arbroath Abbey by Gillechrist, Earl of Angus (Leneges), cir. 1201–7. About 1230 Malcolm, Earl of Angus, granted to Nicolas, son of Bryce, priest of Kirriemuir, the whole land of the Abthan of Monifieth. Abthan denotes that there was here a Celtic community of clerics governed by an Ab or Head. At Eglismonichty there was a chapel dedicated to St Andrew. If the name contains that of St Nechtan (Monechtan), St Andrew may be a later dedication.—[Skene's Celtic Scotland, ii, 395; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 311; Cal. of Charters, i, 31; Reg. of Arbroath, vetus.]

PRESBYTERY OF BRECHIN

BRECHIN, KILMOIR and BUTTERGILL

Kilmoir and Buttergill were included in the charge of Brechin not later than 1574.

The Church of Kilmoir was situated on the north side of the South Esk, a short distance from the Cathedral and in the garden of Brechin Castle. Andrew Lauche (Leitch ?) was rector of Kilmoir cir. 1566-7.

The Church of Buttergill or Buthergill was a prebend of Brechin Cathedral. The church stood upon a knoll on the south side of the South Esk about 200 yards west of Brechin Bridge. The ruins of the church and the gravestones were removed about the close of the 18th century. At the site there was a spring which bore the name of "Inscen Well." Sir Robert Abercromby was parson of Buttergill, apparently at and certainly soon after the Reformation, and cir. 1566-7 John Leslie, son of John L. in Brechin, was granted "the benefice called the parsonage and vicarage of Buttergill," vacant or when vacant by the decease or demission of the said Sir Robert.

In the Cathedral there were also altars as follows: St Andrew, in the parish church; the Virgin Mary, at which on 18th Nov. 1360 Robert Erskine of Dun founded two chaplains; St John the Baptist; St James, at which there was a chaplainry of St Ann; All Saints, at which on 6th June 1541 Sir David Brown, vicar pensioner of Edzell, founded a chaplainry of the Name of Jesus. The bishopric was founded prior to 1153, and most probably in 1150. The abbot of the Celtic monastery appears to have become the Bishop; and the Culdees, at first conjoined with the Chapter, were ultimately, in 1248, superseded by it. The Vicarage of Brechin was a prebend of the Cathedral, the vicar, no doubt, having the parochial cure and serving at the parochial altar. On 31st Oct. 1429, Walter Palatine of Stratherne, Earl of Athole and Caithness, lord of Brechin, son of Robert II, founded a college of four priests and six boys to celebrate in the Cathedral, apparently as choristers, providing them with land and with houses which he built thereon. Ten upper chambers were built after his death, and completed by the Bishop; and three lower chambers were built by two chaplains. The round tower attached to the south-west angle of the Cathedral was built probably in the reign of Kenneth IV Macmael-Cholium 971-95. Apparently in 1267, William de Brechin, son of Sir Henry de Brechin, son (natural) of David, Earl of Huntingdon, founded the Maison Dieu with chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, the endowment being, in addition to the site, the Mill of Brechin, with three-tenths of the multures of Brechin, and the multures of other lands. Between the Bishop's Palace and the Castle of Brechin there was a House of the Trinity Friars founded in 1260, and at Woodside, near Brechin, there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. On 7th Nov. 1454, the "Provost of St Anscharies's of Brechin" is a mandatory of Pope Nicholas V; but there is no known religious foundation corresponding to that designation.

The chapel at Errot or Arrat was dedicated to St Mary Magdalene. By Bull of Pope Eugene in 1435 it was united to the Holy Rood Altar in Brechin Cathedral.—[Reg. Great Seal, ii, 494, 1358, iii, 757, 1345; Excheq. Rolls, xv, 146; *Reg. Sec. CRAIG INCHBRIOCH or INCHBRAYOCK and DUNNINALD

Craig. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 23rd Aug. 1243. By Bull of Pope Sixtus IV, 26th Feb. 1473, Inchbrioch was made a Mensal Church of St Andrews.

Dunninald. Dedicated to St Skioch or St Struy, thought by Reeves to be a corrupt form of St Echad, one of St Columba's disciples from Ireland. The church or chapel, no longer in existence, stood on a burying-ground which, called St Kae's, is romantically situated on the margin of the sea-cliffs, the rock being known locally also as Elephant Rock. On 17th Nov. 1470 Pope Paul II decreed that the Chapel of St Seaffron (St Skiach) be served by the Priory of Restennet and the sacraments dispensed to the inhabitants, the chapel with the lands of Donmacht (Dunninald) belonging to the Priory. The parish of Skeochy is mentioned 26th Jan. 1539–40, and called also parish of St Skeoch and Senetskay. The parish of Craig was formed by the union of St Skeoch parish and the parish of Inchbrayoch, i.e. the island of Brioc, in the South Esk near Montrose, where the old church was situated. The lands of Dunninald, which seem chiefly to have made up the parish of Skeoch, belonged with their harbour and fisheries to the Priory of Restennet.—[*Reg. FARNELL

There was in the church an altar dedicated to St Michael. Apparently not long before his death on 19th April 1598 Mr David Carnegie of Kinnaird obtained the consent of the Presbytery of Brechin and the General Assembly to a scheme whereby the lands of Kinnaird, Balnamone, Pentoskell, Over Dalgetie, Middle Drumms and Greendene, lying in the parish of Brechin, and the parish of Cuikston were united to constitute a distinct parish to be designated Kinnaird, with a church built by the said Mr David near Kinnaird Castle. Mr Carnegie's son and successor, Sir David, acting on his father's testament, carried the project to completion, and in 1604-6 secured the resignation of the following parties of their rights in favour of the Church of Kinnaird—Alexander, Bishop of Brechin, to the teind sheaves of Kinnaird, Balnamone, Pentoskell and Over Dalgetie; Robert Kinneir, vicar of Brechin, to the small teinds of the foregoing lands and the teinds of Middle Drumms and Greendene; and Mr John Wemyss, min. at the Church of Kinnaird, to the revenues of the prebend of the Sub-Dean of Brechin, and the rectory and vicarage of Cuikston; and by Charter of 16th April 1606 James VI mortified the foregoing to the Church of Kinnaird, along with the manse and glebe, the patronage passing to Sir David C. Ratification was made by Act of Parliament on 11th July of the same year; and the parish of Cuikston thus became part of the new parish of Kinnaird. The reasons for the project were that the people of the lands concerned in Brechin Parish were far distant from Brechin Church, that the Church of Cuikston was completely demolished, and in any case was not sufficient to accommodate the people, and that the revenues of the rectory and vicarage of Cuikston were an insufficient provision for a minister. In 1787 the parish of Kinnaird was suppressed, the larger part being attached to Farnell Parish, and the remainder, the north-west portion, being annexed to Brechin. The Church of Cuik-ston was situated about a mile north of the present Church of Farnell, near a mound called Rume's Cross, probably the site of a vanished cross, and by its name indicating, it has been conjectured, the patron saint of the parish. Of Kinnaird Church only the foundations remain. Near by is Pader or Pater Well.—[Acts Scott. Parl., vi,

MENMUIR

Menmuir Church was a prebend of Dunkeld, and as such was held in 1419 by Alan Stewart, natural son of Walter, Earl of Atholl and Caithness, natural son of Robert II. The present church was built in 1842, taking the place of a building erected in 1767. In the Forest of Kilgerrie there were a hermitage and chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The site was in a field near the farmhouse of Chapelton of Dunlappie; and the ruins existed till about the middle of the 19th century. In the vicinity was the Lady's Well; and there was also a graveyard. Hugh Cumynth (Cumming), the hermit in 1445, held the hermitage and chapel on a hereditary title; and on 18th May of that year James II, on the resignation of the said Hugh, granted a charter of the hermitage and chapel, with croft and the green and 3 acres of arable land pertaining to the same, to John Smyth, citizen of Brechin, the reddendo being the benefit of the prayers of the hermit and other rights and services rendered to the Crown according to use and wont before the said resignation. Hugh Cumming seems to have retained some interest, for on 29th Nov. 1454 he granted a Procuratory of Resignation in favour of David Creighton, who in accordance therewith made resignation in the hands of King James on 16th Feb. 1454-5, and the King granted to Alexander de Fowlertone, his special esquire, the whole right and claim of the said Hugh in the hermitage and chapel, croft and green. About six years later, on 8th Aug. 1461, John Smyth, who had received the Crown Charter of 1445, granted to William Sumyre of Balrowdy a feu-charter of "my" hermitage of St Mary of Kingerrie and all and whole the croft of arable land annexed and pertaining to it of old, in exchange for 1 merk annual rent from the tenement of Walter de Crag of Swanstoun in the town of Brechin, to be held off the said John and his heirs.—[Cal. of Supplications Rel. to Scot., 118, S.H.S.; Reg. of Brechin, ii, 382-3; Hist. of the Carnegies, i, Pref. xvii, ii, 72, 518-20, 541-2; Jervise's Land of the Lindsays, 248 and n.]

MONTROSE

The church was rebuilt in 1791, the old steeple being left till cir. 1842, when it was replaced by the present steeple designed by Gillespie Graham. There was in the church an altar dedicated to the Holy Trinity, founded by Elecco and Thomas Falconer, burgesses of Montrose on 12th July 1434. There was also an Altar of the Holy Rood founded by Thomas Bull, Canon of Aberdeen and Brechin and perpetual vicar of Montrose, on 18th Aug. 1432, and on 10th March 1432-3 its endowments were augmented by the annexation of the Chapel of St John. At the Altar of St Sebastian in the church Mr Walter Stratoun, parson of Dunnottar, founded a chaplainry on 19th Oct. 1502. There was also in the church an altar dedicated to the Saviour and His Precious Body and Blood, founded by David Stirling of Easter Brecky, and Sir John Gilbert, vicar of the Hospital of Montrose, son and heir of John Gilbert, burgess of Montrose. On 20th Jan. 1531-2 the said David Stirling granted for the support of a perpetual chantry-chaplain at the altar, who should be skilled in art, music, and grammar, and act as song-master of the burgh, an annual rent of 10 merks of the 10 pound lands of Easter Brecky. The said 10 merks had formerly been mortified by the said David Stirling's late father, Mr George Stirling of Easter Brecky, and his uncle, Patrick Stirling, to a perpetual chaplain at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the Church of Kinnell. The Hospital of Montrose, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was a house for lepers, and was situated apparently on a part of the Common Links, which bears or bore the name of St Mary, a short distance east of the Victoria Bridge. A Crown Charter of 1516 states that it was founded by the progenitors of James IV, and was endowed with the lands of Spittalchelis, Denside, etc. Long prior to the early part of the 16th century the house had passed out of use, the buildings had become ruinous, and the lands had been alienated and set to members of the nobility at a small feu, all because of the negligence of the masters. Before 18th Aug. 1512 Patrick Paniter, Abbot of Cambuskenneth and

Master of the Hospital, had embarked upon the project of applying the house to another purpose. He redeemed the hospital from the hands of secular persons, recovered the alienated lands, and at his own charges built a new settlement, church, manse, and other buildings, with lands for the place and gardens on each side of the Market Place of Montrose. Thereafter by Crown Charter of 14th Nov. 1516 and Act of Parliament he received power to change the constitution of the hospital and erect it de novo into a House of Blackfriars and also confirmation of his grant of the place to Friar John Adamson, the Blackfriars' Provincial. Among the conditions which Paniter attached to the grant were masses at the Altar of St Lawrence in the church of the place, a burial-place for himself, etc., on the north side of the choir of the church near the high altar, and the life rent of the front house built by him adjacent to the church. The original Settlement of the Blackfriars at Montrose was founded by Sir Alan Durward in 1230, and was situated adjacent to the hospital on the Common Links. A letter of James V cir. 1516 narrates that it "was destroyed by fire by the enemies of the Kingdom 200 years ago," and describes it as "to-day untended and neglected." Apparently therefore the transference of the Blackfriars to the new settlement was for them advantageous. But after a time it emerged that the friars found the variety of noises of the Market Place, and the crowds that there assembled, uncongenial to their divine celebrations and their private devotions; and on their petition they were transferred to the old abode by Crown Charter of 1524 and Act of Parliament of 1525. In accordance with a letter of Queen Mary and Darnley of 22nd Feb. 1559, which described the Blackfriars as "sturdy beggaris" who "under colour of almess and moyoin of courte for the tyme spulzet the poor" by intruding themselves and "takand the hail place and rentis thairof," the Lords of Secret Council appointed the Blackfriars' place with all lands, etc., to be distributed to the poor of Montrose, and ordered a hospital to be erected thereon for the entertainment of the poor as time and money permitted. By charter of 1st June 1570 James VI granted to the burgh the chapel, houses, revenues, etc., of the place for behoof of the poor, and included the same under the Royal Foundation of the hospital of the burgh of Montrose.—[Reg. Great Seal, ii, 3765, iii, 113, 138, 1725, iv, 1146, 1953; Acts Scott. Parl., ii, App., 389, 396; Epistles of Kings of Scotland, i, 290; *Reports Hist. MSS. STRACATHRO

The church pertained to the Precentor of Brechin. By letters of 20th March 1583–4 James VI united the vicarage, hitherto a “distinct benefice,” to the parsonage, making them one benefice for the future. The church was rebuilt in 1799, and thoroughly repaired in 1844–5. In the churchyard on 7th July 1296, three days prior to his surrender of his kingdom and his Royal Seal “enclosed in a little purse,” etc., to the Bishop of Durham on behalf of Edward I, at Brechin Castle, John Baliol, King of Scotland, at the hour of vespers, “renounced his league with France and confessed his sins against his liege lord the king (Edward I), desiring to be reconciled with him.”—[Reg. of Brechin, i, xviii, ii, 345–6; *Cal. of Docs. GUTHRIE

In 1189–99 the church was granted to Arbroath Abbey by William the Lion. It was erected into a collegiate church for a provost and three prebendaries by Sir David Guthrie of Guthrie, who had acquired the church from Arbroath Abbey—a Bull of Confirmation being granted by Pope Sixtus IV on 14th June 1479. By charter of 18th Sept. 1505 Sir Alexander Guthrie of Guthrie, Kt., with consent of his son and heir David, granted to the provost, Sir David Guthrie, and the pre-bendaries, Mr David Fotheringham, Sir David Lundy and Sir David Kyd, four manses erected at the charges of the collegiate church on pieces of land which the said late Sir David Guthrie had assigned to them and had intended to convey to them if it had pleased God to spare him; and by another charter of 30th Sept. 1505 the said Sir Alexander Guthrie, for the souls of the said David Guthrie and Janet, his wife, granted an annual rent of 10 lib. from the lands of Lowr in the barony of Kincardine, Forfar, to a canon to celebrate in the said collegiate church. Prebends of the church were Guthrie, Hilton and Langlands, and Lowr. The present church was erected in 1826. The Church of Crebyauch (Carbuddo, Kirkbuddo) is included in the Taxation of 1275. By charter of 2nd Sept. 1472 James III confirmed a charter of David, Earl of Crawford and Lord Lindsay, granting to his kinsman, Mr David Guthrie of Guthrie, 6 acres of land beside the Church of Kirkbuddo, the pasture of six cows, and the patronage of the said church, which later was attached as a rectory to the Collegiate Church of Guthrie. At and subsequent to the Reformation continued attached and united to Guthrie, and constituted the southern and detached part of the parish. Till about 1682 the people of Carbuddo had a chapel of their own in which the min. of Guthrie officiated each third or fourth Sunday. The churchyard is situated on a knoll, on the south side of which is the chapel well.

On 3rd April 1576 Alexander Guthrie disposed the provosty of the church to his son, Gabrielle, student, St Leonard's College, and the prebendary called Hilton and Longland to his son, Andrew.—[*Reg. ness of the times and the unsettledness of Church Government he had not got a formal presentation and collation, but seeing he hath discharged the ministry by preaching all the time, he craves for the stipend for 1661, 1662," which the Council granted; afterwards min. at Channelkirk.—[*Reg. LUNAN

In the Accounts of the General Collector of Thirds for 1573 there appears this entry: “To the relict of the late Walter Mylne according to the allowance of the old compts £6 8 4.” If the reference is to Walter Myln or Mill, priest of Lunan, who suffered martyrdom at St Andrews on 28th Aug. 1558, it would throw further light upon the extent to which he had parted company with the Roman Catholic Church.

There was at Panmure a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. By Bull of 27th Jan. 1484–5 Pope Julian granted permission to Sir Thomas Maule of Panmure to celebrate mass and other divine offices within the chapel, though as yet unconsecrated, and to have a portable altar, and that either by his own chaplains or other suitable priests secular or regular. There was also a chapel at Boath, to which Christian de Valoniis, Lady of Panmure, who succeeded her father, William de V., and died after 1254, granted the lands of Botmernoch or Bothmernoch, and also 2 merks annual rent from the lands of Brechys. By Christian de Valoniis' great-grandson, Walter de Maule of Panmure, who died in 1348, the chapel with its lands, annual rents, and all rights, was given to Brechin Cathedral. Included also in the gift were the lands of Cairncorty, and on 24th Aug. 1348 Adam, Bishop of Brechin, gave the chaplainry and its foresaid endowments for the sustenance of two perpetual chaplains founded by him anew in the cathedral. In augmentation of the chaplainry the Bishop also united thereto an annual rent of 20 sh. which the Abbot and Convent of Arbroath were held to pay to Brechin Cathedral at Pentecost in virtue of a composition lately made between the Bishop and Chapter and the said Abbot and Convent. The chaplains were to celebrate mass, one at the Altar of the Virgin Mary, and the other at the Altar of the Holy Rood in the cathedral, for the souls of the said Adam, his predecessors and successors as bishops, the canons, and Hugh, the Chancellor. It was further stipulated that the vicar of Panbride should say a Mass of the Virgin Mary each Saturday, and the vicar of Monikie a Mass of St Marnoc for all time. The latter part of the stipulation and the name of the lands, Bothmernoch, granted originally to the chapel, suggest that the chapel may have been dedicated to St Marnoch. There was another chapel at Boath, dedicated to St Laurence. It belonged to Arbroath Abbey. To William de Monteath, son of son of Sir Michael de M., William, Abbot of Arbroath 1276–88, became bound to support a chaplain at the said William's Chapel of St Laurence at Boath, the said William to bestow upon the abbey the lands of Konan-Mor-Capil. In the 17th century both the chaplainry and the chapel appear among the possessions of the Earls of Panmure.—[Reg. of Panmure, ii, 141–2, 171–2, 173,

ST VIGEANS

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 19th Aug. 1242 and by the Bishop of Dromore on 25th Aug. 1485. The Altar of St Sebastian was founded by John Brown in Letham in 1506. On 17th Feb. 1543–4 Alexander Ouchterlony, brother of Alexander O. of Kelle, was escheited “through being fugitive fra the law at the horne for non-finding of souirte to underlie the law for breiking and spulyeing Sanct Vegeanis kirk of Arbrotth and oure Lady Chapell of the same, and for other crimes.” In the Den of Seaton there was a chapel dedicated to St Ninian, founded by the Abbot and Convent of Arbroath, and consecrated on 24th Aug. 1485 by George de Brane, Bishop of Dromore. St Ninian's Croft marks its site; and near are St Ninian's Well and a cliff called St Ninian's Heuch. To the chaplainry of the chapel Sir John Tod, son and heir of Simon T., burgess of Arbroath, was presented by David, Abbot of Arbroath, on 22nd July 1492, the presentation to become effective on the death of the chaplain, Sir William Gybsoune.—[Reg. of Arbroath, niger, 174, 271; *Reg. BERVIE

At Inverbervie there was a friary of the Carmelites, situated at the place designated "Friars' Dubb." The friary held the Churches of Kingussie and Dunnottar. By Crown Charters of 15th Oct. 1570 and 1st Aug. 1587 Mr David Lindsay acquired the endowments of the friary—lands, salmon fishings and white fishings in the water of Bervie, fresh and salt, tofts, crofts, annual rents, mills, multures, money and victual fermes, customs, canis, and other profits, and the patronage of churches, benefices, chaplainries in the county of Kincardine or in any other part of the Kingdom. In the latter year, 1587, the grant was ratified by Parliament, which at the same time conveyed to the Burgh of Montrose for the hospital there the sum of 45 merks 5 sh. 4d., being the sum for which the endowments had previously been given to Mr David Lindsay.—[*Reg. DUNNOTTAR

On the Crag of Dunnottar, it is said, a chapel was founded early in the 5th century by St Ninian. To this view some support comes from the fact that on the top of an isolated neighbouring rock, called Dinna-cair, there were found in 1832 several stones incised with early Christian symbols, believed to have been in use prior to the 8th century, one of the stones having the fish, the symbol of Christ, and the triangle which signifies the Trinity. Dinna-cair may have been a "retreat" connected with the chapel on the crag. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham 15th May 1276. In any case certain it is that at a later period there was upon the rock St Ninian's Parish Church of Dunnottar, dedicated by William Wishart, Bishop of St Andrews, on 15th May 1276. Twenty years later, on 28th Aug. 1296, Wautier de Kerringtonne, parson of Dunnottar, swore fealty to Edward I. In the following year the rock, which was held by the English, was assaulted by Wallace. The attack was successful; and, the garrison having sought sanctuary in the sacred building, Wallace, according to Blind Harry, "Brynt up the kyrk, and all that was theirin." It is said that the church was rebuilt, and in turn was burned by Edward III. That, however, does not seem certain. On 30th March 1346 William, Earl of Sutherland, and his wife, Margaret Bruce, received from David II a charter of the Crag, with power to build a fortalice thereon. Probably the power was not exercised; but Sir William Keith, Great Marishal of Scotland, who acquired Dunnottar on 8th March 1392-3, by excambion with his son-in-law, Sir William Lindsay of Byres, built a "castle and fortalice" upon the rock. For that deed, regarded as an encroachment on sacred ground, Sir William was excommunicated by the Bishop of St Andrews. On appeal to the Holy See, Sir William, in virtue of a Bull of Pope Benedict XIII, on 14th June 1395, secured the withdrawal of the sentence, at the hands of the Bishop, on condition that he paid suitable compensation to the Church of Dunnottar for the use of the rock. In his appeal Sir William, besides justifying the tower as necessary for his own protection and for the security of his dependents and their goods, and as inferring no injury to the "new Church" or its rector, stated that when in time past during the wars that raged in the Kingdom of Scotland the Parish Church of Dunnottar with the churchyard, situated on a rock overlooking the sea, required to be rebuilt and put in order, the late John, lord of the barony of Dunnottar, with the consent and authority of the Bishop of St Andrews for the time, built and established another church with churchyard on the mainland of the parish church; and the rock was left empty and deserted. It would appear that the foresaid lord of the barony was John, Ninth Earl of Athol, who had right to Dunnottar through his mother, Ada, Countess of Athol, who married John of Strathbogie, Eighth Earl of Athol in right of his wife. The said Countess Ada in turn had right to Dunnottar through her mother, Ferneleith, Countess of Athol, who married David de Hastings, connected with the Mearns and holding the title Seventh Earl of Athol in right of his wife. The said Earl John was executed at London in 1306. Clearly, therefore, if he transferred the parish church from the rock, the church burned by Wallace was left a ruin. In any case, some time prior to the advent of Sir William Keith at Dunnottar, the church, on account of the disabilities of wars that frequently involved Dunnottar Crag because of its fortress value, was removed to the mainland, apparently to the site which the parish church still occupies; and the church on the rock became the chapel of the castle. The existing ruins of the chapel, on the south side of which is the churchyard, show portions of the 13th-century church burned by Wallace; but the work is in the main of the 16th century. For her own soul and the soul of her deceased husband, David de Hastings, Ferneleith, Countess of Athol, granted Dunnottar to Cupar-Angus Abbey. The grant was confirmed by her daughter, Countess Ada, but it does not appear that it actually took effect. In 1504 the annexation of the church to the Trinity Collegiate Church, Edinburgh, was confirmed by Pope Julius. One half of the parsonage and vicarage of the church was given to the Dean of the Collegiate Church, and the other half to the Sub-Dean. The church was rebuilt in 1782 on the site of the old church, of which only one part survives—the Marischal Aisle, the tomb of George, Earl Marischal, built in 1582. On 16th June 1903 the church was reopened for worship after a scheme of restoration had been carried out.—[Reg. Great Seal, i, App. i, 122; Transcripts from the Vatican, i, 356, *MS. Reg. FETTERESSO

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 25th May 1246. In the churchyard on the south boundary of the parish, about a mile from Stonehaven, stands the roofless church which was in use till 1813, when it gave place to the present church built at Stonehaven. Part of the ruin is an aisle built opposite the pulpit in 1720. In 1621 a petition by Thomas Burnet of Leyis, craving the erection of a new church in the parish "most ewest for the Instructioun of the Parochoneris of Fetteresso quha duell most remote from the present Kirk," was remitted by Parliament to the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks, etc. Nothing appears to have resulted. In 1649 the Presbytery of Aberdeen petitioned Parliament for the erection of a parish kirk with "glaib and manse and other accommodatioun" for the remoter parts of Fetteresso and Netherbanchi. "It is almost impossible to thame Especiallie in the winter tyme to repair to their owne paroche kirk for the worship of God and the educatioun of their souls. The way being deip and almost impossible." The number of communicants within the said bounds was given as "about 8 or 9 hundreth souls." The area in question was the north part of Fetteresso and the south part of Banchory-Devenick. In this case also there was no result. But about 1760 a small place of worship was built at Newhall in the north part of the parish. It was called the "Sod Kirk," doubtless because the roof was covered with turf which at a later period gave way to tiles. Efforts towards securing a better building, which were strongly supported by Mr Silver of Netherley, culminated in the erection of a house at Cookney, capable of accommodation for 400 people. The latter in turn gave place to the present Cookney Church. The Chapel of Cowie was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 22nd May 1276, "so that no prejudice may arise to the mother-church of Fetteresso." The chapel was under the joint invocation of St Mary the Virgin and St Nathalom. The Lady Well is in the neighbourhood.—[Acts Scott. Parl., iv, 607a, vi, (2), 343; Lockhart's Ch. in Scot. in 13th Century, 62, 63; Trans. Aberdeen Eccl. Society, 1897, 241.]

The present church was built in 1810–13 and enlarged 1876–8. The Chapel of Cowie, described in 1722 as situated near the ruins of the Castle of Cowie, was consecrated by Bishop Wishart of St Andrews on 22nd May 1276. The dedication was St Mary the Virgin and St Nathalan. In 1496–1504 James IV made various offerings in "Our Ladie Chapell of Cowie." On 28th Dec. 1502 the same monarch confirmed grants as follows: certain crofts, including "le Abbottiscroft" in the town of Cowie by late William Hay of Urie, an annual rent from lands near Cowie by the late Gilbert Hay of Urie, and a croft called the Temple Croft near the town of Cowie by late Alexander Strachan of Dillevard, for the support of a perpetual chaplain in the chapel. Mr Robert Hay was Chaplain of "the chaplainry of St Nathalan in the Chapel of Cowie" on 26th Nov. 1568. It is said that the chapel was demolished soon after the Reformation "by reason of superstitious resorting thereto." St Mary's Well, near the chapel, was also a place of superstitious resort, and in 1722 was "yet held in veneration by the country people." There was at Cowie a Fair of St Nathalan.—[*Reg. anew by Crown Charter of 27th Jan.
1531–2, with a Fair of St Catherine the Virgin, and a Fair of St Catherine of Siena, and by Crown Charter of 3rd March 1540–1 the towns of Kincardine, Cowie, and Durris were erected into free burghs with the following fairs—at Kincardine, a Fair of St Catherine the Virgin in winter, and a Fair of St Catherine of Siena in summer; at Cowie, a fair on the Feast of St Nach-

GLENBERVIE

By Papal Bull of 4th May 1422 the church, which was dedicated to St Michael, was erected a prebend of Brechin Cathedral in response to a petition by the Earl of Mar. There was at Drumlithie a chapel of which on 2nd June 1536 Sir James Auchleck was chaplain. The Well of St Carran at Drumlithie in all probability indicates the saint to whom the chapel was dedicated. Carran is Ciaran, apparently Ciaran of Cluain mac Nois, whose day was 9th Sept. and who died in 549. The endowment of the chapel was the lands of Drumlithie, which on 18th Dec. 1549 Sir James Reid, Presbyter-Perpetual Chaplain, with consent of Mr Robert Erskine, Dean of Aberdeen, patron of the chaplainry, set in feu to William Douglas, son and heir of the late Archibald Douglas of Glenbervie. William Douglas had granted a piece of land of his Templar Lands of Templehill beside the parish church of Glenbervie, for building a dwelling and a garden for the chaplain. At Dillavaired there was a chapel dedicated to St Mary the Virgin. There is said to have been a Chapel of St Conon at Drumlithie.—[Transcripts from the Vatican, 1421–59, 47, MS., *Reg. KINNEFF

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 5th Aug. 1242. St Arnty's Well gives the name of the saint, Adamnan, in another form. Between the church and the castle there is the remnant of a building called St Arnty's Kell, or St Arnold's Cell, denoting a religious building. St John's Chapel was near the Temple-lands, and in the vicinity is St John's Hill with a farm at the foot called Chapel of Barras. The chapel may have been connected with the Knights Templar and Knights of St John. Of the Church of Kingorny there is now no trace; but at the end of the 18th century there were the remains of a small chapel said to occupy the spot where in 1342 David II with his queen landed from France, and had High Mass performed for his safe return. Near the place is a spring called the Chapel Well.—[Retours, xi, 245; Acts Scott. Parl., v, 625; Mem. of Angus and Mearns, 438, 442; Lockhart's Ch. in Scot. in 13th Century, 48–9.]

MARYKIRK

There was an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary in the aisle of the Virgin built by John Strachan of Thornton and his son and heir, David, on the south side of the church. On 7th Oct. 1490 they granted 11 merks annual rent from the barony and mill of Thornton to Sir Thomas Smyth and his successors, chaplains at the altar. The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bern-ham on 9th Aug. 1242. The saint was the Virgin Mary. The church belonged to St Germain's hospital, Tranent, and, later, to King's College, Aberdeen University.
There was a chapel at Inglismaldi. The name occurs in earlier form as Eglismaldi, Ecclismaldi, Church of Maillie, Maillidh—a saint not mentioned in the calendar.—

ST CYRUS

The church was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham on 7th Aug. 1242. To the Priory of St Andrews, 1178–81, it was granted by William the Lion, along with the Chapel of St Regulus and half a ploughgate of land situated at the chapel, and also the land of the Abbey of Ecclesgrig according to its right and ancient measurements. The earlier name appears in various forms, Ecclegrig, Ecclesgrig, Egglisgrig, Egglis-girgh. St Curig is Cyrie, Cyricus, martyr in Antioch, commemorated as Girie by Oengus at 16th July. Ciricius or Girg is mentioned in the Pictish Chronicle, A.D. 776–885. The early church stood in the old churchyard below the Heughs of St Cyrus on the shore not far from the mouth of the North Esk. In 1632 a new church was built on an eminence above the Haughs, about three-quarters of a mile north of the early church; and it in turn gave place to a building erected 1785–7, and repaired and enlarged in 1835. Near St Cyrus Well was a piece of land called St Cyrus Ward. In Dec. 1243 Bishop de Bernham granted licence to Alexander de Strivelyn to have a chantry chapel at Laurenciston on condition that all obventions and oblations of the chapel should belong to the mother church of Ecclesgreig, and that the said Alexander and his heirs should pay annually, in token of subjection, a pound of wax, the value of which was to be fixed with reference to the value at the markets of Montrose. The dedication of the chapel was St Laurence the Archbishop. The Chapel of St Regulus with its attached land, called Eglisreul, was situated at Morphie. Of the “Abbey of Ecclesgrig,” already noted along with its land, nothing is known, except that it was “ancient” in 1178–81. Manifestly it was identical with “the Priory of Ecclesgrig,” which is mentioned in a mutilated writ of 1135. St Siras Hope, later St Cyrus Bay, preserved the name of the patron saint in a different form, as do also white and salmon fishings “at the arena called Sanct Schirras, Sanct Siras, and Sanct-Seirece Sands,” between the Prestis-rod-fute on the east, and the Machrie Burn on the west. Other fishings bore the name "Net of St Thomas" and also simply "St Thomas." The church with the lands of the abbey was granted to the Priory of St Andrews 1163-72 by Richard Bishop of St Andrews. Abbey indicates that here was a Celtic abbey or monastery.—[Reg. Priory of St Andrews, 27, 56-9, 85, 149-52, 166, 218, 229, 254, 256, 336, 337; *Reg. OLD MACHAR

The cathedral was dedicated to St Mary the Virgin and St Machar. The twofold designation was in use up to about the close of the 13th century, and thereafter the name of the Virgin was usually alone employed. In addition to the altars already noted there were the following: Altar of St Columba; Altar of St Anne; Altar of the Wounds of Christ and of St Devenic, founded in 1507 by Alexander Cabell, Prebendary of Banchory-Devenick; Altar of Our Lord; Altar of St Congan, the Abbot, and St Katharine, St Margaret (Antioch), St Martha, and St Barbara (Nicomedia), virgins, founded, apparently on 18th May 1491, by Alexander Vaux, Prebendary of Turriff; Altar of St Sebastian, St Stephen, and St Laurence, founded cir. 1500 by Andrew Liell, Treasurer of Aberdeen, as executor of the late Mr Alexander Lindsay, Rector of Belhelvie, son of Alexander L.; Altar of St Sebastian the Martyr, St Katharine of Egypt, and St Barbara, Virgin and Martyr, founded in the south aisle next the choir by Gavin Dunbar, Bishop of Aberdeen, who on 23rd Sept. 1531 granted an annual rent of £20 from certain lands for its endowment; Altar of St Ninian. On 20th July 1473 William de Camera of Balnacrag, as executor of late Mr Walter Ydyle, Canon of Aberdeen and Brechin and Prebendary of Deer, granted an annual rent of 20 sh. from lands at Kintore to the chaplains of the choir to celebrate a stated mass in the Chapel of St Ninian the Confessor; Altar of St Mauricius (Machar), evidently the altar already noted under the name Muireach, which, however, denotes not St Mauricius but St Muireadhach. Like St Machar, the Virgin Mary had also an altar, apart from the High Altar and situated in the choir. On 1st

March 1501–2 Mr Duncan Scherar, Prebendary of Clat and Canon of Aberdeen, son of William S., Burgess of Aberdeen, granted his newly built tenement lying in the university, to amplify, endow, and augment a chaplainry at the Altar of St Andrew, in honour of the Trinity, the Virgin Mary, St Andrew, St Moloc, and St Fotinus. Among the possessions confirmed to the bishopric by the Bull of Pope Adrian IV, 10th Aug. 1157, was the Church of St Machar, which became the seat of the bishopric. It may have been identical with the church which appears later as the Church of the Kirkton, a prebend of the cathedral and pertaining to the dean. When the new cathedral took the place of the church, the parochial work was carried on in the nave by a chaplain at an altar there. This work was divided when by the Statutes of 19th April 1256 it was decreed that the dean who was the rector of the church of the Kirkton have two parochial chaplains, one with a cleric in the Church of the Kirkton, performing parochial sacred ministrations outside or beyond the choir of the cathedral, and the other, also with a cleric, in the Chapel of Monycabok (St Columba's, New Machar), performing parochial sacred ministrations there. In 1182–99 a hospital dedicated to St Peter was founded by bishop; and on 23rd Feb. 1531–2 Bishop Gavin Dunbar founded a hospital for twelve poor men west of the cathedral outside the churchyard. In the Church of St Mary of the Nativity in King's College there were, besides the High Altar, the following: Altar of the Virgin Mary, situated in the nave; Altar of St Germanus; Altar of the Holy Cross in the rood loft; Altar of St Catherine the Virgin, built by the executors of Hector Boece, Principal of the University 1500–36; Altar of the Blessed Sacrament, founded by Alexander Galloway, Rector of Kinkell 1520–50, and several times Rector of the University. Saints in whose honour endowments were given for masses at altars in the church, by William Cumming of Inverallochy in 1506, and Mr Barnard Carngyll, Perpetual Vicar of Banff and Inverbryndie, in 1542, were the Virgin Mary, St John Baptist, St Andrew, St Ninian, St Ternan, St Ethernan, St Columba, St Mary Magdalene, St Brandon the confessor, St Anne, and St Thomas the Martyr. An inventory of the ornaments, vessels, furnishings, etc., of the church is given in Fasti Aberdonenses, 560ff. —[Reg. Epis. of Aberdeen, i, 5–7, 11, 39, 48, 199, 220, 304, 337, 347, 348, 352, 353, 387, ii, 39, 48, 147, 197–8, 198; Reg. Great Seal, ii, 2560, iii, 837, 1145, 2073, 3196; Reg. Sec.  Assembly 21st Nov. 1928.)

OUR LADY OF THE SNOW

The church was founded in virtue of a Bull of Pope Alexander VI to Bishop Elphinstone, 1st March 1497, and appears to have been completed in 1499, when the bishop united the church and university to the new university; the vicars of the church to be graduates, or at least, Bachelors of Law. The purpose of the foundation was that the church was to be the parish church of Old Aberdeen, so that the cathedral might be free for its own proper functions.
 It was dedicated to St Mary of the Snows, suggested, it is thought, by the dedication of the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore in Rome, alternatively known in Latin as Santa Maria ad Nives. Not long after the Reformation the cathedral became the parish church; and on 15th May 1583 King James VI united and annexed to the parish and parish kirk of St Machar, the "kirks of Snaw and Spittal (the latter attached to the Hospital of St Peter founded by Bishop Matthew Kinninmond, 1172–99), parsonage and vicarage of the same." The reasons for the union were that the Snow and Spittal churches "are situat within the midder of the parochin of St Machar, and all three are unit and annexit to the College and University, and the fruits of the said kirks of Snaw and Spittal are not able to sustaine ane minister, nether zit ar yair congregations of great boundis or oyrwyse populous but maist convenuallie may resort to ye ad Cathedral, the parochin kirk of Old Aberdeen." Orme states that one of the first acts of Dr Guild after he became Principal of the University in 1640 was to decree the destruction of the Snow Church, masons to "cast down the walls thereof, and to transport the stones to build the College Yard dykes and to employ the hewn work to the decayed chamber windows within the College." In 1661, however, the roofless walls continued intact, and ten years later portions of them still survived. All traces are now gone; and the site alone remains as a much-reduced burial ground behind the tenements of the main street of Old Aberdeen, and near the Powis Burn.—[Fraser's Hist. of Aberdeen, 80–100; Reg. Sec. Seal, xlix, 117; Orme's Description of the Chanonry, etc., 176.]

JOHN LESLIE, M.A., prebendary and 1561 parson 1561; reader 1563; was in office 15th July 1557.—[Comps. Gen. Coll. of Thirds; Reg. Great Seal, iv, 18th Dec. 1557.] (See Oyne.)

ALEXANDER CHEYNE, M.A., son of 1580 Laurence C., commissary of Aberdeen, and Margaret, daugh. of William Troup of that ilk, was prebendary and parson 15th March 1580–1. On 13th Oct. 1581 he conveyed to Mr George Barclay, burgess of Aberdeen, and Marjory Cheyne his wife, the "tenement, place and lugeing of the Snaw now ruinous"; Canon of King's College and Commissary of Aberdeen; died 1587. He marr. Katherine, daugh. of Patrick Bruce of Pitcullo, and had issue—John.—[Coll. Shires of Aberdeen and Banff, 304; Aberdeen Sas., ii, 206, 21st May 1620; *Reg. Mag. ST NICHOLAS or WEST

In addition to altars in the church already noted, there were; Altar of St Stephen, founded by Stephen Balrone, burgess, 10th March 1444-5; Altar of St Lawrence and St Ninian, founded in the choir in 1356 by William Leith of Bernys, who to provide the necessary space "augmented" the choir 16 feet to the south; Altar of St Mary the Virgin and St Joseph, founded before 1444; Altar of St Barbara; Altar of the Name of Jesus, described on 14th Aug. 1525 as "newly founded by John Artour, burgess"; Altar of Our Lady of Pity, in the crypt; Altar of St Mary the Virgin, St Barbara, and All Saints, founded by Alexander Gray, burgess, 2nd May 1509; Altar of St Mungo and St Tovine (? The new, mother of St Mungo, or Teunon, St Adamnan), permission for the foundation of which "in the triangle of thar east end of their Choir" was granted by the Town Council to William Leslie, Parson of Menmuir, on 9th Sept. 1502; erection may not actually have taken place. On 31st July 1464 William Scherar, burgess, and his wife, Isabella (Rutherford), in honour of the Trinity, the Virgin Mary, St Duthac, and St Bridget the Virgin, granted various lands and annual rents to amplify, endow, and augment a chaplainry at the Altar of St Duthac, "anciently founded in part by the Alderman, Bailies, and Community of Aberdeen." At the Altar of St Laurence there was a chaplainry of St Fergus. In 1425-38 Lady Elizabeth Gordon granted half of the lands of Cocklarachy in Drum-blade for the endowment of the Chaplainry of St Mary of Cocklarachy in the "Yle of Coçklarachie" which she built in the church, and where she and her husband, Sir Alexander Seton, were buried. Altars with dual dedications were: St Helen and St Margaret, St Thomas the Apostle and St George the Martyr, St Crispin and St Crispianus, St Duthac and St Bridget. The Altar of St Mary Magdalene was a prebend of the University Chapel. On 23rd June 1499 the vicarage of St Nicholas was united to the university by Bishop Elphinstone, and on 28th March it was granted by Bishop William Gordon for the provostry of St Nicholas.

On 2nd May 1504 Robert Blinseik, burgess of Aberdeen, endowed with part of his property on the west side of the Shiprow, the Chapel of St Ninian, then newly built on the Castle Hill, for the souls of James III and Margaret his queen and of James IV and Margaret his queen, for his own soul and the souls of Robert B. his father, Elizabeth Rutherford his mother, and Isabella Wood his wife. Mr Thomas Chamer was then master and chaplain of the chapel. But there was a chapel on the Castle Hill in 1264.—[Chart of St Nicholas, i, xxxiii, liv-lv, 17-21, 33, 106, 108, 115, 128, 131, 144, 241, ii, 19, 267, 341, 381; *Reg. BELHELVIE

In 1304–5 the Bishop of Aberdeen showed that one of his prebend churches, Belhelvie, possessed in King Alexander’s time a piece of land called “St Ternan’s Land,” between St Ternan’s Chapel and the sea on the north, which was leased to the Thane of Belhelvie by the parson of Lony, and after his death wrongfully attached to the thanage by the King’s servants, and taken by force from the church in time of war. The Lieutenant and Chamberlain of Exchequer were ordered to make enquiries and certify the King by next Parliament.—[Cal. of Docs. Rel. to Scotland, ii, 1727, 468.]

Mayota or Mazota is said to have been the chief of the nine maidens who came to Scotland with St Brigit and who was the daugh. of a St Dovenald who lived in the Den of Ogilvie in Angus. The saint, however, seems to be M'Aedoc or M'Aodhog, probably identical with M'Aedoc of Lismore. The present church was opened for worship 13th Nov. 1806.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 328.]

MARYCULTER

Included in a charter of King William the Lion to Kelso Abbey, confirming grants to the Abbey by his father, King David, and his brother, King Malcolm, is the Church of Culter. Later, between 1221 and 1236, there was established at Culter, on the south side of the Dee, a preceptory of the Knights Templar with a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Subsequently a dispute arose between the Abbot of Kelso and the Knights Templar as to the right of the latter to have a chapel within the parish of Culter. The matter was brought before Pope Urban IV, who remitted it to delegates, the Abbot of Jedburgh and the Abbot of Holyrood. The finding was in favour of the Knights Templar; and as an ultimate outcome of the subsequent settlement between them and the Abbot, the parish of Culter was divided into two parishes. The portion on the north side of the Dee, where the church was dedicated to St Peter, was designated Peterculter; and the portion on the south side, in which was situated the Templars' Chapel of the Virgin, was called Maryculter.—[Reg. of Kelso, i, 15, 23, 181–5; *Reg. NIGG

The church was granted to Arbroath Abbey by King William the Lion cir.
 1189–99, and in 1202–4 the church with its chapels was confirmed to the abbey by William Malvoisin, Bishop of St Andrews.
 It was dedicated by Bishop de Bernham of St Andrews 30th July 1242. Before 1829 the church was in a ruinous condition, and in that year the present church was built on the hill at Kincorth. The ruins of the church stand on the east side of the Bay of Nigg. The belfry is remarkable as being on the east end of the church, and on the die are the date 1704 and the initials of the min. of that time, Richard Maitland. There is a pennon vane of date 1763, and there is also a fleur-de-lis north point. St Fiachra's Well, named after the patron saint, which was near the church, disappeared through the action of sea erosion. In the vicinity were the kirklands and the manse. Nigg Bay also bore variations of the Saint's name—St Ficker's, Sandy Fittick's, San Fittich's, Sanct Moffatis-bay, Sanct Mus-sets-bay, Sanct Moffot's-bay. On 3rd July 1233 the whole land of Nigg was granted to Arbroath Abbey by Alexander III; and on 11th Dec. 1495 James IV, "for the singular devotion which he had for St Thomas and for St Fotinus, patron of the 'town' of Torry," erected the "town" into a free burgh of barony under the Abbot of Arbroath, with power to elect bailies, etc., have a market cross, a weekly market on Friday, and an annual fair on St Fotinus' Day (23rd Dec.) and four subsequent days. One purpose of the erection was the provision of entertainment and sustenance for foreigners and lieges requiring hospitality in the said "town," who, coming from beyond the mounth to the burgh of Aberdeen and other northern regions of the Kingdom, were unable to cross on account of the tempestuous river of Dee. The Abbot of Arbroath had at Torry a residence called Abbotshall, depicted on the map of Old Angus and Mearns from drawings by Pont and Gordon, cir. 1640, as situated near the south bank of the Dee opposite the inches, that is, west of the site of the Victoria Bridge. The gardens of the manor lie Abbotshall occur in a charter of 13th Nov. 1564; the house itself is apparently the "ruined building" described in 1581 as near the river Dee, and on the south side of the same, with garden between lie Raik and lie Midchingill, extending along the bank of the said river, and doubtless it was "the ruins of an edifice belonging to the Abbot which were dug up on the upper part of the Harbour" just prior to 1793, and at that time were still designated "Abbot's Walls." Near by was a burial ground, almost certainly the burial ground attached to the chapel designated on 28th Aug. 1475 as "the Chapel of the said Lord Abbot" (George, Abbot of Arbroath), the abbot's private chapel. The chapel was dedicated to St Fotinus. There was also at Torry a piece of land, described on 30th Sept. 1535 as "the Lordis Croftis," belonging to the grain barn of Torry, and situated a short distance above the Dee; and farther west, near the Dee below Kin-corth, is situated Abbotswell, called earlier Abbots Walls. The proximity of the Spittal Burn suggests that here there was an hospitium for travellers, belonging to the abbot. On the shore of the parish was lie Coif, commonly called Hailymanis Coif, a name due to a cave in this vicinity reputed as the abode of a hermit. Hence the modern designation of the district, Cove. To the abbey also belonged two ferry boats on the Dee, lie Netherferry-boit at Nether Torry opposite Fittie, and lie Uverferry-boit at Over Torry west of the bridge.—[Reg. of Arbroath, Nigrum, 173, 182, 292–5, 524–5, vetus, 3–8, 17, 74–5, 111; *Reg. PORTLETHEN

About 1635 Mr Robert Buchan, proprietor of the local estate, built here a Roman Catholic church or chapel. After a time it fell into disuse; and gradually it came to be used for Presbyterian worship.
 In 1725 it is narrated that “the present Minister (at Banchory-Devenick) preaches once in 15 days in the afternoon in summer, and once in 20 days in winter.” About 1744 a licentiate named Wilkie was appointed to preach on alternate Sundays here and in the “Sod Kirk” at Newhall in Fetteresso parish. After his death both churches were closed; and at Portlethen “any strolling preacher officiated.” But in 1785 the parish min. secured the appointment of a licentiate to conduct the services.

At the end of the 18th century a Mr Scorgie officiated. He was followed by Mr Pirie, who died in 1827; and the latter’s successor was Mr William Law.—[New Stat. Acc., PRESBYTERY OF KINCARDINE O'NEIL

ABOYNE

The present church seems to have been erected in 1842. It has a stone with the date 1761, which probably was the year of the erection of a central church on this site to take the place of the Church of Aboyne, which was situated at the Kirktown east of the village, and the Church of Glentanar, the ruins of which may still be seen farther west, and which, thatched with heather, was called "The Black Chapel on the Muir." "Muchrie's Well" is about 1½ miles north-west of Aboyne Church. Near it is a stone with a cross cut on it; and near to the cross there was a stone cut in hollow shape and called "Muchrie's Chair." It was broken up about the beginning of the 19th century. The saint seems to be not Malrubh but Mo-cridhe, Mo-chridoc, but it is impossible to identify which of the saints who bore that name is here concerned.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 331.]

BANCHORY TERNAN

Torannan (Ternan), one of the seven sons of Aengus, son of Aed of the 6th century, was a disciple of Palladius, and was called Abb Bencair, Abbot of Bennchar, being, it is said, the head of a Columban monastery here; and here he is reputed to have been buried. His bell, called the Ronnecht, was preserved here till the Reformation; and here too, tradition states his head was preserved. The "dewar"—hereditary keeper—of the bell, held in virtue of his office a piece of land called the "Deray Croft of Banquhori-terne." It has been suggested that a small square iron bell, discovered when the Deeside railway was under construction at this point, and subsequently lost sight of, may have been the Ronnecht. Kilduthie, situated in the parish, may suggest a dedication to St Duthac.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 280, 298, 300; Skene's Celtic Scot., ii, 30; MacKinlay's *Anc. Ch. BRAEMAR or KINDROCHET

In the Liber Cartarum Prioratus Sancti Andre there is a copy of a charter, cir. 1237-40, by which Duncan, Earl of Mar, gifts the Church of Kindrochet to the Priory of Monymusk, which was confirmed by Bull of Pope Innocent in 1200. The church is named Ecclesiam Sancti Andree de Kindrouch. The river Cluny is called by its ancient name "Alvan." The date is 1214-34. Later in 1228-39 there is confirmation of the gift "de ecclesia de Kindraich by Gilbert, Bishop of Aberdeen," and on 28th May 1245 the same church of St Andrew of Kindrochet was confirmed to the prior and convent of Monymusk by Pope Innocent IV.

According to the legend the church of Kindrochet was founded in the eighth century by King Angus and dedicated to St Andrew before that of St Andrew in Fife.

CRATHIE

In the 6th century St Colin, a British saint, settled in Crathie. He is commemorated by a pool in the Dee called Polhallock (Pol-Colin-oc) and by a fair which was formerly held at Clachantuin. At each of the places named he founded churches, but his name was afterwards confused with that of St Columba, the great apostle of the Scots. Some time later a follower of St Kentigern came to Crathie, called St Monire. There was a fair in Crathie on the day of his commemoration, 18th Dec., and a pool in the river Dee opposite the grounds of Balmoral Castle is still called Polmanaire, as he is said to have baptised his converts to Christianity in its waters.

In the time of Thomas, the last Earl of Mar of the Celtic line, the Abbey of Cambuskenneth possessed the church and teinds of Crathie. In the Cartulary of Cambuskenneth there is a confirmation dated 11th Jan. 1347 at Fetternear, granting in consideration of the poverty of the abbey, permission to the abbot to appropriate the fruits of the Church of Crathie to his own use and that of the convent and to serve the parish by a qualified chaplain, removable at their pleasure, reserving to the bishop and his successors the episcopal rights in the said church, which they had in the neighbouring churches.

GLENGAIRN

It appears that St Mungo was a later dedication. Professor Watson states that Cill Mo-Thatha was the old name of the church, and that there was held a fair called Feill Mo-Thatha. "Mo-Thatha is the form assumed in Scottish Gaelic of the Irish name Tua, 'the silent one,' for an earlier Toe." The old church was used for worship for the last time on 7th Dec. 1800. But already, and prior to 1794, there was "another place of worship at the upper bridge of Gairn," that is the old military bridge across the Gairn at Gairnshiel, about five miles up the Glen, constructed 1750–3; and in it and the church up to 1800, by appointment of the Royal Bounty Committee, through the aid of whose grant the work was carried on, a service was conducted each alternate Sunday. After 1800 the services appear to have taken place in the other "place of worship" which probably occupied the site of the present church opened early in 1804. Up to 1800 or thereby the missionary assisted the min. in the work of Glenmuick and Tullich, but thereafter his duty seems to have applied only to Glengairn.

The church originally belonged to the Augustinian Hospital of St Germain of the Order of Cross-Bearers with the Star of Bethlehem; and by charter of James IV, 22nd May 1497, it was granted to King's College, Aberdeen. There was a chapel with burying-ground at Dalfad, and a burying-ground at Rineatan (Renatton).—[Glenmuick Kirk Session Records—Memo., Rev. I. Mr MacGregor; he marr. Charlotte Farquharson, Old Meldrum; proc. of banns 2nd Nov. 1823.

DONALD CAMERON, ord. as missionary 21st March 1824; adm. to Laggan (q.v.) 1st Aug. 1832.

DONALD STEWART, born in Contin Parish in 1797, son of John S., catechist of Contin parish, and Catherine, daugh. of Thomas Stewart, catechist of Contin parish; acted as teacher in various schools both before and after his university course; educ. Aberdeen Univ., M.A. (March 1824); app. parish school-master at Crathie 1824; licen. in 1830, probably by Presb. of Kincardine O'Neil; ord. as missionary 1833; "came out" in 1843, and the congregation took the name of Cromar; retired in 1877 on account of ill health, and died in Aberdeen, July 1879, and interred at Old Machar. Marr. in 1839 Marie Louisa, only daugh. of Andrew Wilson, sea-captain, Aberdeen; she died in Spring of 1883, without issue.—[Memo., Miss A. A. (Parish united to Glenmuick May 1927.)

GLENMUICK

The church originally belonged to the Augustinian Hospital of St Germain of the Order of Cross-Bearers with the Star of Bethlehem; and by charter of James IV, 22nd May 1497, it was granted to King's College, Aberdeen. Near Monaltrie House there was a chapel dedicated to St Nathalan, the garden of the house occupying the ancient burying-ground of the chapel. The foundation stone of the first church at Ballater was laid in 1798; and the building, a plain structure with wooden spire, was opened for worship on 10th Dec. 1800. The last services in the three old churches all took place towards the close of that year, as follows: Glenmuick on 23rd Nov., Tullich on 30th Nov., and Glengairn on 7th Dec. Soon after, Glenmuick Church was destroyed by a fire which originated in the thatch of the roof. The foundation stone of the present church at Ballater was laid by Lord Huntly in 1873; and the first service in the church was held on Thursday, 25th June, 1874—the Fast Day preparatory to Communion.—[Fasti Aberdonenses, 11–14, Spalding Club; Deeside Guide Books; Fraser's The Old Deeside Road, 183, 190.] (See Tranent.)

Marr. 26th June 1923 Mary, daugh. of David and Annie Crocket.

The church was a canonry and prebend of Aberdeen, Hugh Kennedy being canon and prebendary in 1438.—[The Apostolic Camera and Scottish Benefices, 246.]

KINCARDINE O'NEIL

Kincardine O'Neil formed part of the patrimony of the Columban monastery at Banchory Ternan. On 31st Oct. 1330, Duncan, Earl of Fife, ratified the erection of the church into a Prebend of Aberdeen by Alexander, Bishop of Aberdeen. In 1733 the roof of the old church, which was of heath, was burned by a young man who was engaged shooting pigeons. It was renewed with slates, and re-slatted in 1799. There was a chapel at Boganchapel, Bog an t'seipeil, Chapel at the Bog. At "Drumcassie," evidently Drumlasie in the north part of the old parish, there was a famous village well to which, as narrated in the first half of the 18th century, crowds from Kincardine O'Neil resorted on the morning of the first Sunday of May. Lasie may denote Laisren, a saint who died in 639 and whose name, with the prefix Mo, elsewhere appears as Mo-Lasse and Mo-Laise; and it may be that the spring was attached to a chapel of that name. On 3rd March 1233–4, Alan Durward, justiciary of Scotland, gave to God and the Virgin Mary, and the Hospital of Kincardynonel "at the bridge which my father caused to be built across the Dee," apparently to the south of the old church towards the ferryboat station on the Dee, a davach of land called Suthcluthy and the Church of Kincardin in Mar. Alan Durward granted a second charter in 1250, which contained two davachs of land, one called Sudluyth, and the other called Kincardynonel, with two lands lying within the davach of Kincardynonel, to wit at Pathheloek and Garslogie, also the Church of Kyncardynonel with pertinents, and two acres in which is situated the Church of Lumphannan, with the right of patronage of the same church, with its Chapel of Forthery pertaining to the same church. Confirmation by Bull of Pope Innocent followed in 1359. At Kincardine O'Neil there was a Barthol-Fair (St Bartholomew), which is recorded in 1725 as beginning on the last Tuesday of August and extending for three days.—[*Reg. LOGIE-MAR and COLSTONE

The parish of Logie-Mar was termed, in the 12th and 13th centuries, Logyruthuen, Logy Ruthuen, Logyruthman, Logyrothuen, and the name survives now in Rothuen or Riven. Before 1200 the church, under the designation Ruchaven, was bestowed upon the Priory of Monymusk by Gilchrist, Earl of Mar (1182–1211). Whether the gift actually took effect is not clear. At all events, in 1239–41, Duncan, Earl of Mar, granted the church for the support of a chaplain to celebrate for the souls of his wife, etc., in the Cathedral of Aberdeen, where he desired to be buried.

The Church of Colstone is variously designated in the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th centuries, Colessen, Kilchodiscam, Kilchodistan, Codlessen, Codlessery, Coddylstane, Codlystanys, Codilstone, Colquholdstane. By charter at Kildrummy on 8th

Nov. 1402, Isabella de Douglas, Lady of Mar and Garioch, in her widowhood, granted the patronage and advowson of the church to Lindores Abbey, to be converted to the proper use of the abbey on the death or resignation of Simon, then rector, "if confirmation of the grant could be obtained." Evidently the Bishop of Aberdeen did not confirm the grant, and in 1424 the church was made a canonry and prebend of Aberdeen Cathedral, under lay patronage, by Henry de Lichton, Bishop of Aberdeen.

When the parishes were united in 1618, a new church was built in a central position. The church was rebuilt in 1780, and almost entirely rebuilt in 1876.—[*Reg. LUMPHANAN

The pre-Reformation font which had been absent from the church for more than a century, first at Pitmurchie and then at Stranduff, Kincardine O'Neil, and used as a watering trough, was restored to the church in Oct. 1933. The font, of roughly dressed stone, is more or less circular in form and measures approximately 36 inches across the outside, 24 inches inside, and is 18 inches deep. Underneath there is a cylindrical socket cut into the centre of the bottom with a raised ridge round, about three inches back from the outside edge of this socket. This was evidently for the purpose of securing the font on a pedestal, of which, however, no trace can be found. In 1250 the patronage of the church, with the Chapel of Forthary, was given by Alan Durward to the Hospital of St Mary founded by him at Kincardine O'Neil (q.v.). For a time after the Reformation, Lumphanan was a dependent of Kincardine O'Neil.—[Aberdeen Weekly Journal, 13th Oct. 1933.]

The church was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The present church was built in 1866. The old bell probably belongs to the beginning of the 16th or end of the 15th century, or even somewhat earlier. In 1866 it was removed from the belfry in the old church and hung in a beech-tree in the churchyard, whence it was taken down in 1895, and in the following year placed in the Session House for preservation.—[*Trans. TARLAND and MIGVIE

The Church of Tarland was granted by Morgrund, Earl of Mar, cir. 1165–71, to the Priory of St Andrews, with the stipulation that he and Agnes, his countess, wherever they may die in Scotland, be buried in St Andrews. The patron saint is Mo-Luoc of Lismore, who died in 592, and whose day is 25th June. The name is an affectionate form of Lugiad.

Before 1178 the Church of Migvie was granted to the Priory of St Andrews, by Morgrund, Earl of Mar, and Agnes, his countess, and cir. 1153–78 the said Countess Agnes made the same grant on her own account. The patron saint is St Finan "the Infirm," whose day is 16th March.—[Reg. Priory of St Andrews, xxxix, 246–7, 248–50; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 283, 290.]

AUCHINDOIR

A question between Andrew, Bishop of Moray, and Gilbert, Bishop of Aberdeen, regarding the diocesan rights over the church was temporarily settled in 1236 by each party agreeing to waive the matter in their lifetime. On the gift and at the request of Thomas, Earl of Mar, Bishop Alexander de Kynninmonth II, on 28th May 1361, united the Church of Dauchyndore (Auchindoir) to the prebendial Church of Invernoch-tie. On 25th March 1513 Bishop Elphinston, at the instance of Thomas Myrton, Archdeacon of Aberdeen and Rector of Auchindoir, and with consent of James V, erected the church into a prebend of Aberdeen Cathedral, the rector to provide a vicar for the cure of Auchindoir; and on 14th June 1531 Bishop Dunbar, with the consent of the said Thomas Myrton, incorporated the Prebend of Auchindoir with the Univ. of Aberdeen, making it a prebend and canonry of the college church, with Thomas Myrton as prebendary and canon. There was a Nine Maidens' Well.—[Reg. of Moray, 101; Reg. Epis. of Aberdeen, i, 89–90, 382; Fasti Aberdonensis, 74, 94; Place Names of West Aberdeenshire, 266.]

At Corriehoul there was near the Chapel of St Machar a well still known as Tobar Machar, or St Machar's Well. It was a place of pilgrimage. On 13th June 1613 the Kirk Session of Elgin decreed "that all merchants and others leave of to gang to the Well at Strathdon callit Michell (Machar ?) under pain of 10 merks each time."—[Records of Elgin, ii, 134.]

GLENBUCKET

Glenbucket was a chapel in Logie-Mar, but on 22nd April 1473 it was erected into a parish by Bishop Thomas Spens of Aberdeen, with consent of the Dean and Chapter of the Cathedral and of Sir Edward Makdowel, vicar of Logie-Mar. The deed of erection narrates the perils of storms and floods of waters that beset the inhabitants in travelling to and fro between Glenbucket and Logie through an uninhabitable tract of country and desert mountains, amid which in one day five or six people had perished when going to keep Easter at Logie Church. The Church of Glenbucket was to be served by a resident parochial chaplain, who was to have the church land of Chapelstone along with the great tithe both of Chapelstone and of the town of Balnaboth in Glenbucket and others, which belonged to Logie. He was also to have the altarages and other small emoluments, which also of old belonged to the vicar of Logie; with 20 sh. Scots yearly from the vicar of Logie in respect of his release from the cure of Glenbucket.—[Reg. Epis. of Aberdeen, i, 308–9.]

Owing to the fact that at one time the church was surrounded by a marsh, it was called "the Chapel of the Loch." Of the old church there remain only parts of the north and east walls and the Elphinstone burial-place which was the south aisle.
 After the Elphinstones left Kildrummy the tomb fell into a state of disrepair, but, as its inscription tells, it was "Restored by William, 15th Lord Elphinstone, 1862." There was also a chapel dedicated to St Moluag, now called Sammiluah's Chapel, near Battlehillock.

At Clova there was a Columban monastery. The church and monastery stood on rising ground on the left bank of the Burn of Littlemill, a tributary of the Mossat Burn. Foundations indicate a church 31 feet long and 15 feet wide. The monastery was annexed to the Monastery of Mortlach, and later to the See of Aberdeen. In 1266 Robert, Bishop of Aberdeen, gave the church, along with the Church of Dal-meath, for the maintenance of the lights and ornaments of the High Altar in the cathedral. On 18th Jan. 1362-3 Alexander Kinninmonth, Bishop of Aberdeen, united the Churches of Clova and Kildrummy, on account of the weakness of the fruits of the two benefices, and presented a fit vicar.—

LEOCHEL

The church was granted to the Priory of Monymusk by Gilchrist, Earl of Mar cir.
 1182–1211; he also granted $\frac{1}{2}$ davach of land comprising the site of the church, which was confirmed by Colin, Hostiarius of the King, for the souls of himself and Ada, his wife, and by Philip de Monte, and Anna, his wife, daugh. and heiress of Colin.
 Apparently about 1220 a dispute about the church between Duncan, son of Morgrund, Earl of Mar, and David (Donald ?), son of the Earl (i.e. of Morgrund), was settled, at the request of Alexander, by each surrendering his rights in the church in the King's hands in favour of the priory.

There was a chapel at Lenturk. Chapel Croft, a short distance south-east of Craigievar, and Chapel Yard on the farm

STRATHDON or INNERNOCHTIE

There was a chapel at Corriehoul, on the east bank of Allt Coire Tholl, at Corgarff, dedicated to St Machar. There was also a graveyard used for interments as late at least as the 18th century. A well near by still bears the saint's name. Another chapel in the Corgarff district was situated at Ord. Tomanchapil in the parish is “Chapel Knoll,” Tom an t-seipeil. A church that dated from 1757 was demolished in 1851, and the present edifice erected on the site.—[*McConnochie's

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH and LOGIE DURNO

In the concluding part of the 12th century the Church of Durnach (Logiedurno) was granted to Lindores Abbey by David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of William the Lion, who had founded the abbey on his return from the Holy Land in 1178. In 1599 a new church was built at the site of the Chapel of Garioch, from which the united parish subsequently took its name.
 In the charter of the Lordship of Lindores to Patrick Leslie, Lord Lindores, on 31st March 1600, the said Patrick is held bound to pay 100 merks stipend to "the minister of Logiedurno, now translated to Chapel of Garioch." Apparently some time elapsed before the new name was in general use, but on 3rd July 1637 there occurs "the parish of Logiedurno called Chapel of Garioch." The church of 1599 was repaired about 1744; and in 1813 it was replaced by the present church. The Church of Fetternear is said to have been granted to the See of Aberdeen by Malcolm IV on 21st Aug. 1164; and it was confirmed on 26th Nov. 1359 by Pope Adrian. The Chapel of Garioch, dedicated to the Virgin, was in existence in the first half of the 14th century. In the Exchequer Rolls of 1364 there appears the sum of £5 Scots expended for boards to repair the chapel. James IV visited the chapel on 23rd Oct. 1497, and in Sept. 1562 Queen Mary, on a visit to the district, was present in it at a celebration of Mass. In a charter of 1519 it was designated the Royal Chapel, which may indicate that it was founded by a Scottish sovereign. In the chapel there were six chaplainries, to each of which there were attached a manse and croft for the chaplain. They were Colliehill, Conglas (Knokinglass), Pitcaple, Pitgavny, Wardis (Wardhouse) and Wartle. Of the foundations of the chaplainries there are the following records: Between 1328 and 1342 Christian Bruce, lady of the Garioch, sister of Robert I and widow of Sir Andrew de Moray, founded a chaplainry in the chapel for the souls of Robert I, herself, her late husband, Sir Andrew de Moray, the endowment being a toft and a croft of 1 acre in the tenement of Drumdarnach, and an annual rent of 100 sh. sterling from the lands of Meikle Wartle. In 1384 Christian Bruce's granddaugh., Margaret Countess of Douglas, lady of Mar, daugh. of Donald, third Lord of the Isles, granted for the souls of herself, William, Earl of Douglas, her late husband, the late Thomas, Earl of Mar, and James, Earl of Douglas, her son, ten pounds from two parts of Pitgavny, and the whole town of Collishill with pertinents (except Westfield in Bourtie). Alexander Stewart, Earl of Mar, is said to have founded a chaplainry, possibly Conglas, for the souls of those slain at the Battle of Harlaw in 1411. In 1420 Isabel Mortimer, daugh. of Bernard M. of Craigievar, and widow of Sir Andrew Leslie of Balquhain, founded a chaplainry for the souls of her six sons slain at Harlaw, and of her husband killed at Braco by the Sheriff of Angus. On 28th Nov. 1474 James III confirmed a mortification of 12 merks annual rent from Balcomy, Fife, in the first instance, and Wardis and Quyltpat, Aberdeenshire, made by Alexander Leslie of Wardis, for the souls of himself and his wife Isabella. The Chaplainry of Pitcaple was founded before 24th Aug. 1511. On 14th April 1426 James I confirmed a grant by Sir Patrick de Ogilvie Kt. of Grandown, with consent of his father, Alexander de Ogilvie, Sheriff of Forfar, to a perpetual chaplain to celebrate for the soul of late Andrew de Leslie, Kt., of an annual rent of 10 merks from his lands of Strathalva, Banffshire, which failing, from the lands of Auchterhouse and Essy, Forfarshire. Sir Alexander Galloway, Chaplain of the Chaplainry of Colliehill, granted to the chaplainry 2 acres in the barony of Balquhain sold to him by William Leslie of B., for a manse for the chaplain of said chaplainry, who was to pay 5 sh. to the other five chaplains in the chapel, 12 pence each. This was confirmed by James IV on 24th Jan. 1505-6. The General Assembly on 29th Aug. 1639 and Parliament on 17th Nov. 1641 ratified the erection of the Hospital of Balhaggardy by Thomas Erskine of Pittoddrie, who gave as endowment the Chaplainries of Wartle, Colliehill, Pitgavny and Knokinglass, of which he was patron. "He had built a house of tua houses heighte at the Chapel of Garioch, with the intention to put some old poore and decrepit men therein for ther bettir accomodatione of ther service to God."—[*Reg.  the Abbot and Convent of Lindores to erect a chapel at Weredos (Wardhouse), he giving to the Church of St Drostan of Inchmabanin (Insch) and its rectors, that is Lindores Abbey, a toft and 2 acres of arable land adjoining the toft in his town of Ravengille between the great road and the moor towards Gillandreston, with the common easement of the same town, with common pasture for six “animals,” one horse, and forty sheep, and also pledging himself that the said Church of Inchmabanin would suffer no injury nor lose any of its rights by the existence of the said chapel.—[Chart of Lindores, 65.]

INVERURIE

The Church of Inverurie with the Chapel of Monkegie appears in the charter granted to Lindores Abbey by the abbey's founder, David, Earl of Huntingdon, brother of William the Lion. In Pope Celestine III's Bull of Lindores, 8th March 1195, the grant takes the form—the Church of Rothkel with its chapels of Inverurie and Munkegie, and the same occurs three years later in the Bull of Pope Innocent III. Rothkel and Munkegie appear in combination in the Register of the Episcopate of Aberdeen in a charter of King William the Lion, of date 1175–99. But Rothkel as applied to a parish passed out of use at an early stage.
 Apparently about the beginning of the second quarter of the 13th century Sir Simon of Garentuly (Gartly) received permission from the Abbot and Convent of Lindores to erect a private chapel at his manor of Crimond, within the enclosure of his court, where he and his family may hear Divine Service. The conditions were that he and his tenants holding of him should come, on the principal festivals, in the accustomed manner, to the mother Church of Inverurie; that Sir Simon and his heirs do fealty to said church, as likewise should the chaplains serving in the chapel; and that Sir Simon and his heirs should give annually to the said church 2 lb. of wax at the Feast of the Assumption of St Mary—

KINKELL

The Kirk of Kinkell was "of auld erected in ane benefice and parsonage quhairof" these "kirkis were proper parts and pendicles"—Dyce, Drumblade, Skene, Kintore, Kemnay, Kinellar. By Act of Parliament in 1649 those churches were separated from Kinkell, along with the right of patronage and the title to the teinds in each case, and each became an independent parish, each min. becoming titular and having right to the teinds, fruits, rents, and other emoluments. In 1663, after the establishment of Episcopacy, those churches, described along with Kinkell as the parsonage of the same, were annexed to the Deanery of St Andrews, and that was ratified by Act of Parliament in that year. After the Revolution Settlement each parish resumed its independent status.

Among its notable rectors in pre-Reformation times were Henry de Lichten, who in 1426 became Bishop of Aberdeen and erected the Cathedral of St Machar; Alexander Anderson, who became the last Roman Catholic Principal of King's College; and Alexander Galloway, one of the chapter of the cathedral, who erected the Church of Kinkell, of which the ruin is all that remains.—[Acts of Parl., vi, (2), 183, vii, 453.]

JOHN DAVIDSON, M.A., parson and, in 1563, Principal of Glasgow University.—[Comps. Gen. Coll. and Sub Coll. of Thirds, Aberdeen, etc.]

ALEXANDER ANDERSON, M.A., vicar; also at Methlick and Tyrie.—[Comps. Sub Coll. of Thirds, Aberdeen, etc.]

MONYMUSK

It is said that about 1080 a Culdee priory was founded here by Malcolm Canmore. Proceeding upon a military expedition against the people of Moray, he halted at Monymusk, and there he made a vow that, should the expedition prove successful, he would devote the village to St Andrew and at it found and endow a priory. He returned successful, having secured a bloodless victory through the intervention of priests; and the priory was duly established.

Before 1200 Gilchrist, Earl of Mar cir. 1182–1211, took steps to convert the settlement into an Augustinian priory. He built a cell in the Church of St Mary of Monymusk where the Culdees were, and conveyed to the same the Churches of Leochel, Ruchaven (Logy-Ruthven, Logie-Mar) and Invernochtié (Strathdon). He also granted the Church of Alford before 1207. Other churches belonging to the priory were Inverdrochit (Braemar), the gift of Duncan, Earl of Mar 1228–43, and Keig, confirmed by William, Bishop of St Andrews 1202–38. In 1211 the Abbots of Melrose and Dryburgh, and the Archdeacon of Glasgow, acting as Papal Delegates, confirmed an agreement between William, Bishop of St Andrews, and the Culdees of Monymusk, which provided that the Culdees have a prefatory, a dormitory, and an oratory without a cemetery, and the right of burial in the cemetery of the parish church, the rights of the Mother Church being reserved, and further that there be twelve Culdee canons, and the thirteenth, Bricius, be the master or prior, in conformity with the constitution of the Augustinian Priory of St Andrews. It may be that the oratory was situated outside the parish church. In the first part of the 16th century there occurs mention of the "Parish Church of St Mary of Monymusk," of the "Nave of the Church of the Monastery of Monymusk," of the "Cemetery of the Parish Church of Monymusk," and of the "Cemetery of the Monastery of Monymusk." In any case the parish church, in which there was an altar dedicated to St Michael, was made a Prebend of Aberdeen in 1445. Of the 12th-century church there survive in the present church the tower with Norman doorway, vaulted basement and Norman arch entering into the church, and the choir with Norman arch. In 1822 the church was enlarged by the addition of a north aisle. At the same time the roof was repaired, the church was equipped with seats, and the spire of the tower renewed. In 1890 the spire, then in a dangerous condition, was removed, and the existing Norman battlements were erected by Sir Arthur H. Grant. In the parish there were three chapels, one at Balvach near Ton Burn, another west of the site of the toll-house at Tillyfourie, and another, dedicated to St Finan, at Aber-smithock, near Braehead.—[*Reg. OYNE

There was a Chapel of St Ninian at Pitmedden.

JOHN LESLIE, D.D.; ind. to parsonage 1559 and vicarage 2nd July 1559; born 1526 or 29th Sept. 1527; said to be the son of Gavin L., fourth son of Alexander L. of Balquhane, but Buchanan calls him "priest's geitt" (spurious son of a priest), and Knox calls him "bastard," on the ground that his father, Gavin Leslie, parson of Kingussie and Commissary of Ross, was in priest's orders, and was not married to his reputed wife, Miss Butter, daugh. of the laird of Gormack. On 19th July 1538 a dispensation or legitimation under papal authority was granted by Alexander Sutherland, official of Moray, in favour of John Leslie, scholar in Moray, enabling him, notwithstanding defect of birth, to receive holy orders; Canon of Aberdeen and Ellon; prebendary of Aberdeen, vicar of Dyce; Professor of Canon Law at Univ. and King's College, Aberdeen; Abbot of Lindores 1564; Bishop of Ross in Jan. 1565 in succession to Henry Sinclair; Lord Ordinary of the College of Justice Jan. 1565; sent to France by the Catholic Party to offer Queen Mary their services, and to invite her back; accompanied her on her return, and afterwards rendered her service; died at Brussels 3rd May 1596; said to have had three daughs.—Janet (marr. Andrew Leslie of New Leslie); —, marr. Richard Irvine; —, marr. —. Cruickshank of Tillymorgan. In 1578 he published his De Origine Moribus et Rebus Gestis Scotorum.—[Records of the Leslies, iii, 401–2; Brunton and Haig's Senators of the College of Justice, 116; both of which see for full account.]

PREMNAY

Before 1198 David, Earl of Huntingdon, founder of Lindores Abbey, gave to that abbey the Church of Premnay. At the Reformation the church was united to the Church of Leslie; and the union continued till apparently soon after 29th April 1625.
The church was rebuilt in 1792 and repaired in 1828. There was a Chapel of St James at Auchleven and a Well of St Lawrence.—[Chart of Lindores, 3–5; *Place

WILLIAM DUNBAR, M.A.; after his 1691 deposition he lived in Peterhead, where, June 1719 to June 1720 and later, he conducted services in his own house at the time of public worship in the church, and performed other ministerial functions, particularly on 30th Sept. 1720, delivering a seditious discourse at the interment of Sir William Keith of Ludquharn in the choir of the church; later, after he became Bishop of Moray, he took part in the duties of the episcopal church at Peter-head, but not as pastor.—[Justiciary Recs.;

Countess of Errol, being “inhumanly treated, few or none in the parish durst avowedly and openly converss with him, the usual and necessary service due to the minister, yea, the necessary supports of human life were denied to him in the parish, so that he was obliged to provide himself from neighbouring parishes, and at last necessitated to leave the place.”—

ELLON

To God, the Virgin Mary, St Machar, and Matthew, Bishop of Aberdeen, the church with pertinents was granted by Malcolm IV on 21st Aug. 1164. Apparently in the early part of his reign Robert I gave the patronage of the church to Kinloss Abbey, the abbot and convent having to pay to a perpetual chaplain in St Mary's Cathedral, Aberdeen, 100 sh. yearly, find him an honest habit for his use in the choir, and have a house built for him. In 1320 Henry, Bishop of Aberdeen, made an appropriation of the church, the fruits of which, it is narrated, were by a former bishop divided into two portions, the rector taking the tithes of corn, and the vicar the tithes of lambs, wool, cheeses, and all oblations, funeral and other parochial dues.
Bishop Henry appropriated to the abbot and convent the rectory which had been and continued to be their patronage, together with the said tithes of corn, the appropriation to take effect upon the resignation or death of the rector. Upon the resignation of William Comyn of Buchan, the abbot and convent entered upon possession of the rectory and tithes, and, as stated in the Papal Confirmation of the appropriation, 29th July 1376, “have held them for 56 years." In 1328, consequent upon the resignation of Sir Robert de Peebles, vicar of the church, a concordat was made between Bishop Henry and the abbot and convent, in virtue of which the bishop apportioned the fruits of the vicarage thus—24 merks annually, through the hands of the abbot and convent, for a prebendary and canon created anew by the bishop in the Cathedral Church of Aberdeen, with a stall in the choir and inclusion in the chapter; 4 merks annually, out of the foregoing 24 merks, for a deacon to serve in the stall; 100 sh. salary for a chaplain in said cathedral church; and the cure of Ellon to be served by a vicar who shall continually reside there, and have a manse with garden. In or about 1532 the church was remodelled and embellished by Thomas Crystall, Abbot of Kinloss. He placed in the church an altar piece "which combined statuary with painting as in the Chapel of B.V.M. at Kinloss." and added several vestments. At the same time he built an abbot's palace, probably at the place called Abbotshall, near to which are the Abbot's Haugh and the Abbot's Well in the vicinity of Mains of Waterton. In the first quarter of the 18th century the church was described as being in the form of a cross, having a choir, nave, and transepts, one transept for the Cheynes of Esslemont, and the other for the Bannermans of Elsick, and then for the Forbeses of Waterton. The church passed out of use in 1777, and all that now remains is part of the chancel wall, divided into three compartments. The left compartment commemorates Alexander Annand of Auchterellon, who died 9th July 1601, and his wife, Margaret Fraser (daugh. of Alexander Fraser, 7th of Philorth, and widow of Alexander Cumyn of Inverallochy), who died Aug. 1602, and bears their arms; the centre compartment is now blank, save that it has the Annand arms with motto "Sperabo," the shield being flanked respectively by "DDA" and "obiit 1326"; and the right compartment is to the memory of Alexander Annand of Auchterellon, son of the foresaid Alexander A., and his wife, Margaret Cheyne, daugh. of the laird of Esslemont, the dates of deaths being blank, and likewise bears their arms. Built into the south wall there is a sculptured stone, indicating the site of the Waterton transept, and bearing the inscription, "Built by T. F. of W., son to W. F. of Tolqn., and J. R., dau. to Balmain, in 1637. Rebuilt by T. F. of W., and M. M. (Margaret Montgomery) in 1755." There was in the church an altar of the Holy Rood; and there were also two fairs, Rood Fair and Mary Mass Fair. Attached to the church were four scolocs or scologs, for whose support there was an endowment of land divided into four parts. It would appear that scolocs or scholars—convertible terms—were a lower ecclesiastical order with certain duties in the church assigned to them, and perhaps directly connected with training for the priesthood. Of their lands it is narrated that in 1265 Gamelin, Bishop of St Andrews, let in lease to Alexander, Earl of Buchan, and his two sons, his lands of Ellon, which the Scolocs of Ellon hold, for 2 merks yearly and certain dues with which the lands were burdened, with reversion to the bishop on the deaths of the said Earl and his two sons. Later, at an inquest held by Walter, Bishop of St Andrews, in 1387, it was declared by good men and true that the church lands in Ellon called the Scoloc lands were of the yearly value of £15 13s. 4d. stg., and were worth of old £20 stg., that from these lands there were to be found for the Parish Church of Ellon four clerks with copes and surplices, able to read and sing sufficiently; that a quarter or quarter part of Easter Ellon was bound to find a house for the scholars; that the quarter or $\frac{1}{4}$ part of Candellon (Candle-Ellon) was bound twice in every year to find 24 wax candles for the perch before the High Altar; and that a quarter or $\frac{1}{4}$ part of Ferley was bound to find a smithy for Ellon. The inquest further shows that the scolocs were hereditary owners admitted to their heritage by ordinary legal seisin; but they held off the bishop, and the practice was that the heir of a deceased scoloc should be entered in his heritage by the bailef of the lands without a letter of inquest from the overlord. It would appear, therefore, that in 1387 the lands had been diverted from their original purpose, being held by laymen, while the scoloc's office in the church was performed by substitutes for whom the scoloc lands had to make provision. There was a chapel at Chapelton at Esslemont; and the Chapel of Udney was also attached to the church. On 4th Oct. 1547 Francis Cheyne was appointed by the Bishop of Aberdeen to the office of Clerk of the Parish Church in succession to his late brother, Patrick Cheyne. The present church was built in 1777, repaired in 1828, and renovated and decorated in 1876 and again in 1907.—[*Reg. LOGIE BUCHAN

The present church was erected in 1787. Logyn-Talargy, the old name of the parish, contains the name of St Talorgan. In 1275 the church was designated Logyntalargy. The latter part of the name denotes St Talarican or Talorgan, who may have been the saint prior to St Andrew. In the second part of the 14th century the designation is Logie-in-Buchan, in the middle of the 16th century it is Logie, and in the early part of the 17th century it is Logye-upon-Ethensyde.—[*Theiner's Vet. SLAINS

By charter of 19th Aug. 1498 James IV granted the church to the Univ. of Aberdeen for the advancement of the Sciences, and building and repairing the university; and for the support of two chaplains in the college church. This was confirmed by Bishop Elphinstone on 7th Dec. 1498, and by Alexander, Earl of Buchan, on 12th Nov. 1499; and on 7th Dec. of the latter year the bishop united the church to the university. The Church was rebuilt in 1599; and the present church was built in 1806 and renovated in 1882. In the churchyard stands a portion of the old church—an aisle which formed the burial-place of the Earls of Errol from 1631 to 1758.—[Reg. Mag. Sig., ii, 2442; Fasti Aberdonenses, 26, 27, 28.]

TARVES

The Church of Tarves with the Chapel of Futhcul appears in the confirmation charter of John, Bishop of Aberdeen 1200–7, to Arbroath Abbey. The Chapel of Futhcul appears to be identical with the chapel that existed in what is now part of the parish of Barthol-Chapel (q.v.). The old church was described in 1730 as a choir with two aisles, one aisle of the Gordons of Haddo, and the other of the Forbeses of Tolquhon. The remains of the latter aisle is in the centre of the churchyard. On the tomb are the Forbes and Gordon arms, with the initials W. F. (William Forbes of Tolquhon) and E. G. (his wife, Elizabeth or Elspet Gordon, daugh. of George G. of Lesmoir), and the date 1589. Upon the scroll of the Forbes arms is the Tolquhon motto, “Salus per Christum”; and above the Gordon arms are the words “dochter to Lesmoir.”—[Reg. of Arbroath, vetus, 136; Thanage of Fermartyn, 370–3, 382.]

PRESBYTERY OF DEER

In "ye yle" of the church there was an altar dedicated to Our Lady of Pity. An inscription on the outside of the south wall of the present church, near the village, bears that it was erected in 1818 by John Dingwall Esq., of Brucklay, patron and principal heritor of the parish, and Charles Forbes Esq., of Auchmedden. What remained of the chapel at Chapel Den was removed in 1855, and the site ploughed up.—[Pratt's Buchan, 314; Reg. Sec. Sig., xxxv, 80.]

The present church was built in 1812. In the churchyard, the writer of the New Statistical Account tells us, part of a wall of the old church, in which was a "font stone," was still standing in 1845. Probably the "font stone" was the piscina. On the wall was the date 1576, possibly denoting that repairs were carried out then. In this parish was situated the Chapel of the Virgin in the now defunct Burgh of Ratray.

DEER, OLD

The Celtic Monastery of Deer may have been situated either where the old parish church now is, or perhaps at St Colm's Hillock, about a mile to the south and almost certainly not on the position of the later abbey, as the Cistercians usually sought out new sites for their foundations.
The surviving memorial of the monastery is the Book of Deer, whose vernacular entries furnish proof that the monastery maintained its identity until as late as the 12th century. Whether it was suppressed to make way for the Cistercian Abbey of Deer, founded in 1218 by William Cumyn, first Earl of Buchan, or had already de-cayed, is not clear. About seven years ago the abbey ruins situated on the left bank of the South Ugie, some distance west of the village of Old Deer, were acquired, with the adjacent grounds, by the Roman Catholic Church. The ruins have been put into a condition of preservation; and excavations have revealed many additional features of great interest. Until recently a fair, St Drostan's, was held in the parish in December. Sir William Grantully was vicar of Deer on 14th Dec. 1541, when his natural son, Mr James, received letters of legitimation.

There was a chapel at Knevin. The "Lady's Well" is situated in a hollow between Bruxie and Clachriach; and on the west side of the hill of Dens was "Anna's Well," possibly indicating St Anne, the reputed mother of the Virgin Mary.

The present Church was built in 1788, and in 1880–1 it was reseated and the tower was erected. In 1898 the church was internally remodelled. In or about 1403 Robert III granted to the Abbot and Convent of Deer all the Great Custom of the whole wool of their own sheep and of the teind of the Church of Deer, not exceeding 20 sacks, for perpetual celebrations annually and daily at the Altar of St Michael in the church of the abbey, for his own soul, the souls of Elizabeth Mure and Anabella (Drummond), late queen, and of the Duke of Rothesay, etc.—[*Reg. JOHN WARDLAW, M.A., son of John W., burgess of Edinburgh, was pres.

 1576 to the Prebendary of Deer 1st Feb. 1576–7 on death of Walter Chalmers; was still in office 29th Dec. 1612.—[Reg. Pres. Bene., i, (4), 55; Reg. of Deeds, Hay, 19th Dec. 1612.]

GEORGE KEITH, M.A.; his son, 1683 Alexander, M.A. (Marischall College, 1726), was dep. by the Presb. of Ellon from the office of schoolmaster at Cruden, but “continues to keep a school in the parish (Cruden), outhounds his scholars to injure and molest the legally established minister and his family,” beating his horse at pasture, destroying “the fruits of his yard,” throwing stones at the door of the manse, and making up “ryms”; though informed of the guilty persons, he refused to chastise them; and under pretence of Orders from “exauctorated Bishops,” he and Mr Cook, Chaplain to the Countess of Errol, took up a meeting-house in Cruden, where they preached, and also performed baptisms and marriages, in 1718–19 and Jan.–Feb. 1720. He marr. (cont. 19th Oct. 1726) Elizabeth, daugh. of John Irvine of Kingcausie.—[Justiciary Records, 1717–21.]

WILLIAM LIVINGSTONE, late episcopopal min., dep. by the Presb. of 1719 Deer, intruded here, preached and dispensed communion in a meeting-house near the church and discharged other functions of the ministry Dec. 1719 to Feb. 1721.—[Justiciary Records.]

FETTERANGUS

The confirmation charter of Adam de Crail, Bishop of Aberdeen 1207–28, to Arbroath Abbey includes the Church of Muirhugin (St Fergus) with the Chapel of Fetheranus (Fetterangus); probably, therefore, the chapel was included by implication in the grant of the Church of Inverugin to Arbroath by Radulf le Naym or Neym as confirmed by charter of King William the Lion 1165–1214. Fetterangus became a parish later; and after the Reformation it was under the charge of the min. of St Fergus, who gave supply every third Sabbath until 1618, when Fetterangus was united to Deer. On 6th Oct. 1589 George, Earl Marischal, and his son, William, received a Crown charter of the patronage of the parsonage and vicarage; and the church lands belonged to William Keith of Ludquharn to whom in 1607 his grandson, William, was served heir. The patron saint may have been St Angus, a disciple of St Columba, associated with Balquhidder, the name, on this basis, being Angus' fetter, a slope or terraced declivity, as here. The ruins of the church, 33 by 12 feet, stand near the north side of the churchyard, which is situated on a slight eminence in a field about a quarter of a mile south of the village. There was a local belief that before the death of an old inhabitant of the place an unseen bell was heard ringing in the churchyard. By decret of the Commission of Plat, which was dissolved in July 1618, the parish of Fetterangus was united to Deer; and the decret was put into execution by the Presb. of Deer on 12th Nov. 1618.—[Reg. of Arbroath, vetus, 6, 137; *Reg. NEW DEER

The church was erected in 1839, a short distance north of the site of the old church built in 1622 by the Earl Marischal and other proprietors, close to the site of a pre-existing chapel which belonged to the Abbey of Deer. The old church, to which an aisle was added in 1773, had a pointed, richly moulded west doorway.—[Pratt's Buchan, 1755–6.]

FRASERBURGH or PHILORTH

At Fingask, south-west of Fraserburgh, there is a place designated “the Colledge,” in Gaelic Achyseipal, “Field of the Chapel,” denoting that here in early Christian times there was a community of clerics whose ab or head directed the supply of daughter churches. Its site, now completely obliterated, is said to have been traceable in the early part of last century.
At Chapelton in the same quarter there was a chapel or cell, with a well, belonging to the Abbey of Deer. Portions of the walls of the chapel were still in existence about a century ago, and somewhat later the well was drained and filled up.

The Church of Philorth was situated in the old churchyard at Kirkton, on the links to the south of Fraserburgh. The church, built in Fraserburgh in 1571 by Sir Alexander Fraser of Philorth, the founder of the burgh, was cruciform. It was enlarged in 1628, and further repaired sixty years later.
The present church was built in 1802, renovated in 1873–4, and considerably reconstructed in 1898–9. There were of old chapels at Fingask and Chapelton.—

PETERHEAD

The ruins of the old church are situated in the churchyard on the links. They consist of the side walls of the chancel; the entire chancel arch, and a square tower in the centre of the west wall of the nave. The chancel is Norman; the remainder of later style. The old church was replaced by a building erected in the town in 1770; and the latter in turn was succeeded by the present church, which has this inscription:

“Founded, 25th May 1804: Opened, 14th August 1806.” At what is now known as Windmill Brae there was a settlement called Monksholm which may have been a chapel or cell connected with the Abbey of Deer. Excavations have revealed fragments of a wall or pavement and sculptured stones and many slates. Near this is the Abbot’s Well.—[Pratt’s Hist. of Buchan, 4 Ed., 82n.]

With the help of Rev. John Barclay, formerly min. at Edrom, and Rev. Alexander Hepburn, formerly min. at St Fergus, he opened an episcopal meeting-house in Peterhead 21st Sept. 1706, at what is now No. 3 Port Henry Lane (off the Longate); for said intrusion he was ordered by the Synod on 12th May 1708 to compare before the Presb., and as he appeared only by procuracy and not personally at the Presb. on 2nd Jan. 1709 he was declared contumacious by the Presb. and also discharged from exercising any part of the ministerial office either in Peterhead or in the bounds of the Presb.—said sentence to be intimated to him. Along with Rev. Alexander Hepburne he served the Church of Peterhead after the Pretender landed there on 2nd Dec. 1714, and kept possession several months, conducted episcopal services, prayed for King James, and read the Proclamation levying men for his service—for which he was dep. in 1716. He died apparently before Aug. 1721, when Mr Alexander Cumming was episcopal incumbent at Peterhead. Marr. PITSLIGO

The church was built about 1603 by Sir Alexander Forbes of Pitsligo, afterwards Lord Pitsligo. In the sands a little south of Pitsligo Castle there was a chapel believed to have been dedicated to the Nine Maidens. Near it was a spring of the same name. The priest's house is said to have stood near by at a spot called the Priest's Knowe. Tradition also tells of a burying-ground there. The walls of the old church, which had mingled features of Gothic and Renaissance work, are still standing. The lower part of the south or "Pitsligo" aisle was the burial-vault of the Pitsligo family, and it has now been enclosed, its oak door having a brass plate with an inscription recording the members of the family, including the founder of the church who died in 1636, interred in the vault. The present church was built in 1890, in Early English style of the 13th century, with a nave, three-sided apse, north transept, and a south aisle or transept, which is an exact reproduction of the Pitsligo aisle of the old church. In this aisle has been fitted the beautifully carved woodwork of the old aisle, regarded as one of the best extant examples of Jacobean Scottish woodwork, and probably executed under the guidance of Dutch woodcarvers. The aisle has also an alcovod roof with panels containing coats of arms carved in oak, and with elaborately carved pendants. These also belonged to the old church, as did also samples of old pew-panelling which, recovered from various quarters, have been fitted into the pulpit and otherwise distributed in the new church.—[Mackinley's Ancient Church Dedications in Scotland, i, 17; Pratt's Hist. of Buchan, 4 Ed., 288.]

DUNCAN FORBES, had issue—John, 1647 died unmarr.; Duncan in Ackenway; George, merchant, Aberdeen; Alexander, min. of Dyke; Margaret in Moy, died unmarr. 1703; Mary (marr. George Stewart, provost of Banff).

RATHEN

The patronage of the church was bestowed upon the Bishopric of Aberdeen by Robert I on 21st March 1328-9. It was the Church of Ruthven (Angus), not Rathen, that belonged to the Abbey of Arbroath.

On the east side of Mormond Hill there is a den called "Saint Eddran's Glack," said to have been the Hermitage of St Ethernan. Near the church there are two hillocks, one of which is called St Oyne's. There is also a spring of the same name. In 1723 the hillock and well were both known as St Owen's. That may indicate a dedication to St Owen. There was a Rood Well on the boundary of the parish with Lomay.—[Pratt's Buchan, 246*n*; Macfarlane's Geog. Colls., i, 56; Reg. of Priory of St Andrews, 373-4; Reg. Epis. Aberdeen, i, 47.]

The Wardlaw MS. states that Strichen was erected into a parish by Thomas Fraser of Knocky in 1599, and Mr. John Reid planted as min. By Act of 1633 Parliament ratified and approved Acts of the Diocesan Synod of 1st May 1622 and 19th April 1629 for the disjunction of lands from Rathen and Fraserburgh, and the erection of the same into the parish of Strichen, and for the "erection of ane new parochie kirk of Strichen." The present church was built in 1798-9. The existence of a Lady Well may mean that the chapel on the Chapelmuir, evidently the level ground near the railway station and the former site of fairs, was dedicated to the Virgin.—[Wardlaw MS., 191; Acts Scott. Parl., v, 153, x, 109; Pratt's Buchan, 197, Ed. 1901.]

JAMES WHYTE, had a Fraserburgh

PRESBYTERY OF TURRIFF

ALVAH

The church, with the church lands, was granted to Cupar Abbey by Marjory, Countess of Athol, widow of John, Earl of Athol, with consent of her son and heir, David of Strathbogie, in 1314. Confirmation was given in the same year by Henry le Chen, Bishop of Aberdeen, Cupar Abbey being bound to pay 6 merks stg. annually for a chaplain to celebrate in the Cathedral of Aberdeen.—[Reg. of Cupar Abbey, i, 3; Reg. Epis. of Aberdeen, i, 41.]

SIR GEORGE SCOTT, pres. by Donald, Abbot of Cupar, to vicarage 3rd 1556 Jan. 1556 in succession to Sir Gilbert Bard.—[Reg. of Cupar Abbey, ii, 126.]

AUCHTERLESS

The former church was built in 1780, and an aisle was added in 1832. The present church was erected in 1879; and subsequently the spire was added by the Blackford family in memory of J. P. Watson of Blackford and his wife and younger daugh. At Seggat were situated the Chapel and Well of the Virgin. Long after 1560 these continued to be objects of superstitious resort and practices; and in April 1649 the Synod of Aberdeen, finding that "the Chapel and the Chapel Well of Segget were not demolished, nor the well filled up according to ane former ordinance," ordained the Presb. of Turriff to visit the Kirk of Auchterless and "demolish the said Chapel, Altar, and well." But the well at least survived ecclesiastical attacks; and it is related in 1840 that within the memory of some of the oldest inhabitants, "money and other articles were deposited on Pash Sunday by those whose superstitious feelings led them to frequent the well in expectation of some benefit to be derived from drinking the water dedicated to the Holy Virgin."—[Pratt's Buchan, 389; The Thanage of Formartyn, 133.]

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, he intruded 1704 in the church in 1704 with a "Presentation" from Patrick Duff of Hatton, who seems to have ignored the abolition of patronage in 1690 and kept possession of the keys: the "Presentation" was unacceptable to the congregation, and was not recognised by the Presb.—a decision which was upheld by the Synod; he refused to surrender the keys to the Presbytery's representative, but was ultimately outed, and returned to Peterhead before 1708.—[Recs. of Presbytery of Turriff; Memo., Rev. Dr A. A. Duncan, July 1943 Bessie Macpherson Fraser.

FORGLEN

The present church was built in 1806.
 On a stone in the south wall of its immediate predecessor was this inscription—"This Church was re-edified by George Ogilvie, Master of Banff, 1692." To the Abbey of Arbroath William the Lion, 1165–1214, granted the custody of the Brachbennach (the consecrated banner of St Columba) and the lands of Forglen given to the Lord and St Columba for its maintenance, which land of Forglen had of old been granted for that purpose. The pre-Reformation church was situated where the rivulet falls into the Deveron, about half a mile west of the present church. For a time Forglen was conjoined with Alvah, but it became a separate parish early in the 17th century. Later the major part of the lands of Carnousie were detached from Marnoch and joined to Forglen.—[*Reg. of

FORGUE

The church, under the designation of the Church of Fornixdraut or Ferendracht (Frendraught), was granted to Arbroath Abbey by Sir William de Frendraught, Kt., without the consent of the bishop, the abbey to supply a perpetual chaplain for the cure of the parish. On 3rd Jan. 1257–8 the grant was confirmed by Bull of Pope Alexander IV, who by another Bull of the same date decreed that the church be applied by the abbot and convent for the purpose of hospitality, subject to a competent reservation for the perpetual chaplain. By still another Bull by the said Pope, on 8th Jan. 1257-8, the chaplaincy was erected into a perpetual vicarage with emoluments of 100 sh. annually, the whole altarage, manse, and teind sheaves of lands then under cultivation, the residue over and above the 100 sh. to pertain to the abbey. By Charter of John, Abbot of Arbroath, on 15th Aug. 1268, after the death of Duncan, last rector, it was set forth that the abbey was to appoint a chaplain to serve the parish, the altarage, church lands and manse to pertain to the chaplain, and the abbey to have the great tithes of the whole lands, and 8 merks annually of the lesser tithes of wool or lambs. After 1257-8 the parish was designated Forgue. By charter of 8th May 1535 James Creichton, Kt., of Frendraught granted to Sir William Cristison, perpetual chaplain, and his successors, at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the cell or chapel built by the said James in the church, an annual rent of 24 merks from the lands of Bogny in the barony of Frendraught. This was afterwards called the chaplaincy of the "Isle of Forgue." The present church was built in 1819. In the church, apparently in a transeptal aisle, there was an altar dedicated to the Virgin Mary, founded on 8th May 1535 by Sir James Creichton, Kt., of Fyndraucht (Frendraught), the endowment being 24 merks from the lands of Bogny in the barony of "Frendraucht." The first chaplain was Sir William Cristisoun.—[Theiner's Vet. Mon., 73, 74; Reg. of Arbroath, vetus, 188, 197-8, Niger, 212-13; Reg. Epis. of Aberdeen, i, 18-23; *Reg. FYVIE

The Tyronensian priory at Fyvie was founded by Sir Reginald Cheyne in or before 1285 in honour of the Lord Jesus Christ and the Blessed Virgin. In that year he granted a charter of the lands of Ardlogy and Lethendy to Arbroath Abbey and the monks of the abbey inhabiting the priory or cell (at Fyvie); and in the same year Sir Reginald's second son, Henry, Bishop of Aberdeen, united the vicarage of Fyvie to the priory, the cure to be served by a perpetual chaplain, who shall attend to the parish day and night as often as necessary and administer the sacraments to the parishioners.

The priory founded by Reginald de Chene seems to have been a reconstitution of a Celtic ecclesiastical establishment. To the priory, it is said, belonged the group of Pictish sculptured stones built into the east gable of the parish church, a fleur de lis in the manse wall, and several stones built into All Saints Church, Woodhead. On 21st Aug. 1459 Malcolm, Abbot of Arbroath, and the convent of the same, presented to the Pope a petition craving that the priory be united to and appropriated by the abbey. The priory, states the narrative, is not conventual, nor a dignity, nor a personatus, but it depends on Arbroath, and has been wont to be assigned to one of the monks, and its value does not exceed £18 stg., and the assignation to the monk is revokable at the abbot's pleasure. But a monk, Alexander Mason, of the said monastery, holds and detains possession by the help of King James (II). The Pope ordered the Abbot of Deer, the Prior of Restonnet, and Walter Yohl, canon of Aberdeen, to summon said Alexander and others concerned, and if the foregoing be found true, to unite and appropriate the priory to the monastery in perpetuity, so that when the said Alexander has for a just and reasonable cause been removed by the said Malcolm or the abbot for the time, and recalled to the convent, and got a monk's portion assigned to him, Malcolm and the convent may take possession. In 1865 a cross was erected on the site of the priory by Colonel and Mrs Gordon of Fyvie. It is said that there was at Follarule a Chapel of St Rule founded in 1376 by Adam Pyngle, burgess of Aberdeen. The first part of the statement may accord with fact; but what Adam Pyngle did found on 20th August 1376 was a chaplain for perpetual celebration at the new altar erected by Alexander Kinninmonth, Bishop of Aberdeen 1356-80, in the south corner of the Cathedral Church of Aberdeen, for the souls of himself, his wife, Marjorie Blackwater, the said Bishop of Kinninmonth, etc., the endowment being the lands of Folethrowle; and with consent of his said wife he gave the mill of Folethrowle with adjacent land and the water rights, and a piece of arable land in the lands of Foleth-blackwater, as an additional endowment lest at any time in the future the revenues and farmes of the lands of Folethrowle should prove inadequate for the sustenance of the chaplain. This was designated the chaplainry of Follarule; and according to the confirmation charter of Robert II on 11th Aug. 1381, the chaplainry was "to God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and All Saints." The manse, yard, and glebe of the chaplain were situated at Meikle-Folla; and it may be that it was vestiges of the manse, not of a chapel as stated, that were recorded as existing in 1724-5, and in part at the close of the 18th century in the "town-land" of Meikle-Folla, and that entirely disappeared in 1847 when the whole foundations were dug up in a field about 300-400 yards west of the Church and churchyard of Follarule. By charter of James VI, 10th Sept. 1574, the chaplainry was conveyed to King's College, Aberdeen. Somewhat earlier, on 10th July 1573, Mr Alexander Cheyne, parson of the Snow Church, Old Aberdeen, was presented to the chaplainry which was within the yearly rent of £30, and was vacant through the last chaplain, Mr. John Strathauchin, not having subscribed to the Articles of Religion, as an additional sustenance in "his office of teching the lawis" in King's College. It may be that Mr John Strathauchin was the successor of Sir William Silver, who was chaplain at least from 1528 to 1541, and as such was one of the vicars of the choir of the cathedral. On 19th July 1449 John Henrison, clerk, had been coll. and provided to the chaplainry, vacant by the death of William Liel.—[*Procs. GAMRIE

The Church of Gamrie, with the Chapel of Trub (Trup, Troup) appears in the confirmation charter granted by John, Bishop of Aberdeen 1200–7, to Arbroath Abbey.
 The church had been granted to the abbey by King William the Lion between 1189 and 1198. The Chapel of Troup had been situated on the lands of that name. In the north wall of the ruined old church are three holes which contained a corresponding number of skulls, traditionally said to have been those of three Danish chiefs who were slain in a battle in 1004 at the place afterwards called the "Bleedy Pots." The invaders, who were defeated, are said to have polluted the church. Hence the exhibition of the skulls, which were removed bit by bit by visitors to the place about the close of the first quarter of the 19th century.

 The present church, situated about a mile inland, was built in 1830.—[*Reg. of Ar-

KINEDWARD

The ruins of the old church are situated on the north bank of the King-Edward burn. A stone with the name and arms of Forbes in the west gable may indicate that the church was built soon after Lord Forbes entered into possession of the Castle in 1509. An addition was made to the east end, probably in 157–, the partly obliterated date which occupies a place at the top of one corner along with the initials R.K.—Robert Keith, Commendator of the Abbey of Deer, to which the Church belonged. The Craigstone aisle on the south side, which contains memorials of the Urquhart family, was built by John Urquhart of Craigfintray; and an archway erected by him for his private use carries the initials of himself and his third wife, Elizabeth Seton and the date 1621. Above the west doorway are the initials of Dr William Guild, min. 1608–13, indicating possibly that repairs were carried out during his incumbency.—[Pratt's Buchan, 346–7.]

TURRIFF

The present church was built in 1794, enlarged in 1830, and altered and improved in 1897. The ruins of the old church stand at the west end of Castle Street. The belfry bears the date 1635, the Hay Arms, the initials of William, Earl of Erroll, and the initials of the min. of that time, Thomas Mitchell. In 1861, when a portion of the south wall of the choir was being demolished to furnish material for the repair of the churchyard wall, a fresco painting of a mitred abbot was discovered on a splay of a window that had been built up. On each side of the head were stars painted red, and the words S. NINIAN in black. Unfortunately it was destroyed soon after the discovery; and a similar fresco on the opposite splay suffered destruction in the actual demolition. It is probable that there was a series of frescoes round the choir, the work, maybe, of Andrew Baerkum, who in 1538 was employed by the Abbot of Kinloss to adorn certain portions of that monastery. At the Haugh of the Laithers there was a chapel, said to have been dedicated to St Carnac, apparently identical with the Welsh St Caranog. There was a Celtic monastery, generally regarded as having been dedicated to St Congon, a follower of St Columba, and possibly founded by him. In 1272 Alexander Comyn, Earl of Buchan, founded a hospital for a master, six chaplains, and thirteen poor husbandmen, giving to it in 1273 his lands of Knockhill. In 1329 Robert I added a mass chaplainry for his brother, Sir Nigel Bruce, captured by the English at Kildrummy Castle, and “hanged and drawn” by order of Edward I, the endowment being the lands of Petty at Fyvie. By charter of 10th March 1511–12, James IV, for his special favour towards his domestic clerk, Mr Thomas Diksoun, prebendary of Turriff, within the Cathedral Church of Aberdeen, and for the edification and policy carried on at the Parish Church of Turriff for entertainment of the lieges, with the consent and desire of William, Earl of Erroll, patron of the church and prebend, erected the church lands, town and glebe of the said Church of Turriff into a free burgh of barony, with power to the inhabitants to sell and buy, and have the position of burgesses, and the power to elect bailies, etc., with the advice of the said Mr Thomas and his successors, and to have a market cross, a weekly market each Saturday, and two annual fairs, at the Feast of St Peter-in-Chains, and of St Congon, and power to the said Mr Thomas to lay out the said lands as burgh roods for the good of the inhabitants.

PRESBYTERY OF FORDYCE

There was a chapel near the Castle dedicated to the Holy Rood, and a chapel dedicated to St Thomas. There was also, near the town, a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. In 1324 it gave place to a house of the Carmelites, King Robert I, in that year, granting it and its ground to God, the Blessed Virgin Mary, and the brothers of Mount Carmel, for building there a church and other buildings of their order, and giving besides to the said brothers and their successors that davoch of land with its pertinents wont hitherto to belong to the said chapel, for supplying bread, wine, and wax for the more devout performance of the worship of God. St Catherine's Green and St Catherine's Street in the town seem to point to a dedication to that saint.—[Mackinlay's Anc. Ch. Dedications, script.), 166, 258, 366; (non-script.), 420.]

In a settlement between the Bishop of Moray and the Bishop of Aberdeen in 1236 there appears the Chapel of Inverculan which is petitioning for the status of a church. As a church it occurs in the Taxation of 1275, being valued along with Fordyce and Tulywhill (Ordiquhill) at 60 merks; and in 1498 the designation is the Parish Church of Cullen. In 1327 Robert I founded a chaplainry in the church for the soul of Queen Elizabeth, his second wife, who had died at Cullen in Nov. of that year, the endowment being £5 Scots from the Burgh Roods annually and 33 sh. 4 pence in augmentation, payable at the hands of the bailies and community of that burgh. The payment is mentioned in the Exchequer Rolls in 1327 and subsequent years; and the foundation was ratified by James III under the Great Seal on 6th March 1455, and by Queen Mary under the Privy Seal on 10th July 1543. On 10th Dec. 1536, John Duff of Muldovet founded the Chaplainry or Altar of St Anne. In the first quarter of the 15th century John Hay, lord of the Forest of Boyne and Tullibole, founded an altar, probably the Altar of St Mary Magdalene, for the soul of Alexander Sinclair, lord of Deskford, with an endowment of £5 Scots annual rent from his lands of Ordinhove. And in 1539 the aisle of St Ann on the south side of the church was built by the said John Hay's granddaugh., Elene or Helen, daugh. of David Hay and wife of Archibald Dick of Craighead. For the upkeep of the aisle and its ornaments she mortified a croft and tofts in the burgh. The particular dedication of the collegiate church was St Mary the Virgin; but the erection was for the honour and glory of the Trinity, the Virgin Mary, St Anne, St John the Baptist, St Andrew, St Mary Magdalene, and all the Saints of the Heavenly Host. It was founded by Alexander Ogilvy of that ilk, Mr Alexander Dick, Archdeacon of Glasgow, John Duff of Maldovat, the bailies and community of the burgh, and the parishioners of the Church of St Mary of Cullen, confirmation being given by William Stewart, Bishop of Aberdeen, on 23rd April 1543, and ratification by John Hamilton, Archbishop of St Andrews, as Papal Legate, in Feb. 1552. To the provostry were assigned the fruits of the vicarage of Rathven, with manse and garden and 2 acres of arable land on the south side of the church. Mr William Elphinstone, vicar of Rathven, was the first provost. To each prebend was allotted 20 merks in lands and money, with apartment and garden, the lands being crofts in the town. The prebends were—St Anne, to which pertained tofts and crofts and 35 bolls barley, being the endowment by Helen Hay and her son, Alexander Dick, Archdeacon of Glasgow, both already mentioned; Holy Cross; St Mary the Virgin, whose prebendary had the cure of souls of the parish of Cullen; St John the Baptist; St Andrew, the endowment of which included the revenue of the foundation made by Robert I for the soul of his queen, and given by Queen Mary in 1543 “in help and supplement of our College Kirk in the burgh of Cullen”; and St Mary Madgalene, to which belonged the endowment from the lands of Ordinhove granted by John Hay as already mentioned. There were also two singing boys. At the Reformation the prebendary of St Andrew's prebend was Sir George Hay, who in 1566–7 acted as Master of the Grammar School. On 2nd March 1582–3 and 2nd April 1583 the possessions of the prebends of St Mary Magdalene, Holy Cross, St Andrew, and St John the Baptist, were conveyed to Alexander Hay of Easter Kennet, Clerk Register, by the respective prebendaries, with consents. The Crown charter of Confirmation gives in detail the possessions of each prebend. After the Reformation Cullen was attached to Fordyce, of which on 26th March 1622 it is given as “a pendicle.” Apparently soon after it was disjoined from Fordyce. The church, described in 1724 as situated “about the middle of the town” (Old Cullen), stands at Old Cullen about a mile from the new town, in a recess of the walls of the grounds of Cullen House, St Anne's Aisle or Chapel being the south transept of the church. In the north wall, near the site of the High Altar, is the aumbry. The recess at the base is surmounted by the figures of two angels holding a monstrance—the utensil used for presenting the consecrated Host for the adoration of the people.—[*Reg. ENZIE

For the inauguration of mission work at Enzie, the Presb. of Strathbogie on 25th Aug. 1725, under the plea that "all kirks and chappels and places for uses" were "by law in the hands of the present Establishment," made choice of St Ninian's Chapel at Chapelford in the parish of Bellie, a house in good repair and "at a good distance from both Kirks of Bellie and Rathven." Almost at once trouble occurred, and on 27th Oct. 1725 the Synod of Moray concurred "with the Presbytery of Strathbogie for prosecuting the poppish rabblers, violence having been done to Mr Walter Morrison, preacher of the Gospel, and his hearers at St Ninian's Chapel in the Enzie. Information to be laid before the Commission of the General Assembly. The Moderator also to write to such officers of State as he shall think proper anent the said rabble." A year later, on 25th Oct. 1726, the Presb. was appointed by the Synod "to make further enquiry and get what evidence possibly they can for supporting their claim to that Chappel, and transmit the same to the advocate of the Church for his advice, and that application be made to the Duke of Gordon desiring that Chappel for publick worship as to the suppression of popery." Whatever was the immediate result of such action, it was later resolved to build a "meeting-house in the Enzie," and in 1729 the General Assembly appointed a voluntary collection through the nation for the building the same and for providing the preacher in a subsistence and necessary accommodation. The heritors concerned showed reluctance to grant a building site, apparently due to their impression that a "house for public worship would lead to the erection of a third parish with the consequent claim upon the heritors for a Manse, Glebe, and Stipend." Accordingly, on 22nd Oct. 1729, the Synod appointed a committee to wait on the Duke of Gordon and the Duchess, his mother, and assure them that the church had "no design for a new erection in the Enzie to the burthening of the heritors," and to crave ground for a "Meeting-house" and a manse. These buildings appear to have been erected in the following year, or soon after, on a site in the west part of the parish of Rathven. Of the church built in 1785 we are told that the cost was also met from a fund accruing from a collection made throughout the church. It was under the management of the Royal Bounty Committee; and the salary of the missionary was defrayed in part by the Royal Bounty, and in part by an endowment arising from lands left by a Mr Anderson, which were purchased by Alexander, Duke of Gordon, "the price being invested more advantageously in other property." There was a glebe of 8 acres and a "comfortable house" for the missionary. On the Braes of Enzie there was a chapel dedicated to St Ninian. The burying-ground is called St Ninian's and sometimes Chapelford.—[Presby. Recs., 25th Aug. 1725; Memo., Rev. WALTER MORRISON, on 25th Aug. 1725 he was app. by the Presb. of Strathbogie to repair to the Chapel of St Ninian at Enzie and to begin preaching, catechising, etc., till he was orderly withdrawn therefrom; he was described as "a preacher commissioned to this Presbytery and other places thereto adjacent upon the Royal Fund granted by H.M. FORDYCE

To Sir Alexander Symson and his successors, perpetual chaplains at the Altar of the Virgin Mary in the church, William Ogilvie of Stratherne, Kt., Royal Treasurer, gave two annual rents on 15th July 1516, for the souls of Alison Roull, his wife, etc. In 1275 the Churches of Cullen and Tuly-wheel (Ordiquhill) were dependts of Fordyce; and after the Reformation, and apparently till 1622, these two churches, along with Deskford, continued in the same position. There were fairs of Tal-lerian and of New Summariff, the latter suggesting that there was a dedication to St Macbrubha.—[Reg. Great Seal, iii, 95, 3157, viii, 302; *Reg. RATHVEN

On 12th May 1333 Thomas de Hay of Urchny, for his own soul, and for the soul of his wife, Janet, and the soul of the late Christian Cruickshank, founded a chaplainry at the Altar of our Lord in the church, the endowment being five merks Scots annually from his lands of Urchny in Nairn. At the farm of Farskane there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. On 19th June 1226 John Bysett, for the souls of William and Alexander, Kings of Scotland, and for the souls of his ancestors and successors, gave to God and the Church of St Peter of Rothven (Rathven) for the sustenance of seven lepers, the patronage of the Church of Kytalargy (Kiltarlity). The hospital so founded had a prior who was admitted a canon of the Cathedral of Moray, a chaplain, and a menial.

The church was rebuilt in 1794. The old church was then described as in part "as old as Edinburgh Castle," having "couples of oak that grew in the estate of Rannes," "a roof of different altitudes," and "of venerable appearance." A question between the Bishop of Moray and the Bishop of Aberdeen as to the diocesan rights over the Church of Farskane in this parish was temporarily settled in 1236 by each party agreeing to waive the matter in their lifetime. In 1275 the Churches of Rathven were valued at 22 merks. Situated on the seashore about a mile west of Cullen, the Church or Chapel of Farskane seems always to have been attached to Rathven. It was dedicated to the Virgin Mary.—[Reg. of Moray, 27–8, 101; Reg. of Aberdeen, i, 39, ii, 53; Jervise's Epitaphs, i, 12, 273.]

SYNOD OF MORAY

PRESBYTERY OF STRATHBOGIE

BELLIE

Situated in the churchyard about two miles from Fochabers, near the junction of the Spey with the Moray Firth, the church belonged to the Priory of Urquhart. It was dedicated to St Peter. In 1720, on a petition by the min., the Presb. took steps for the erection of a new church. Delay ensued; and on 1728, when the church was described as "largely ruinous," and too long and too narrow, the Presb. set aside the idea of a new church, and decreed the repair of the old building, which was to be reduced to 70 feet in length and increased 3 feet in breadth by setting back the rear wall, making the breadth 20 feet within the walls. Two years later the work was incomplete, and even in Nov. 1732 the building was without doors and was otherwise insufficient. Eventually, in 1733, the work was completed. Subsequently the Duke of Gordon agreed to erect a new church in Fochabers. Plans were prepared in 1787; but the church was not finished till 1797. In 1720 it was reported to the Presb. that the manse consisted of two rooms and was built "of a mudwall," was "theked with divots," and "like to fall." A new manse was secured at a cost of £900 Scots. On the burn of Tynet, about two miles south-east of the old church, there stood the Chapel of St Ninian. For a time after the Reformation it was used for worship alternately with the parish church. Later it became ruinous, and some years prior to the Revolution it was repaired by "priests and papists" and "enlarged to the bulk of many country churches in the Kingdom," and was used as a Roman Catholic place of worship both before and some time after 1688. In 1722-3 it was described as "well sclated and hath a large arch on every side by which they ('priests and papists') designed it in form of a Cross." It has attached to it a churchyard with "ruined dykes," which at that time was used as a "common burial-place." At Bellie there were also Fairs of St Catherine, St Mungo, and Holyrood.—[Macfarlane's Geog. Colls., i, 240-1; Jervise's Epitaphs, i, 12, 15; Cramond's Church of Bellie, 10, 12-14, 17-19.] (See Enzie.)

The chapel at the Bog of Gight, apparently in the vicinity of Gordon Castle, was founded by John Hay, Lord of Tullybethoyle, in or about 1374 and was dedicated to All Saints.—[Reg. Epis. Moray, 321.]

CAIRNEY

(formerly Botarie and Rivin)

Botarie occurs as Potarie in 1529 and Pottarie in 1611. On a visitation on 22nd May 1650 the Synod of Moray, finding that the people of the united parishes were "disaffected," so that "none of either the parishioners will come to the other parish kirk, but will be served per vices at their own respective kirks," much to the hindrance of the work, ordained the Presb. of Strathbogie to approach the Lords of Plantation of Kirks with a view to provision being made for each church being erected a separate charge. Eight years later, on 7th April 1568, the Synod disjoined the parishes, the min., Robert Jamieson, denuding himself of the Kirk of Riven; and on 3rd April 1660 it was intimated to the Synod that the Presb. had disjoined the two churches and declared the Church of Rivin vacant. Apparently nothing further was done, for on 7th Oct. 1686 the min., Alexander Rose, represented to the Synod that he served the two annexed Churches of Botarie and Ruthven, that the fabric of Ruthven Church was so ruinous that there was no conveniency to exercise doctrine or discipline, and that there was little expectation of the church being speedily repaired, and accordingly he craved the Synod to allow discipline at either church; his crave was granted.—

ALEXANDER ROSE, described as 1680 “Episcopal preacher at Ruthven and Botary,” he was summoned before the Presb. of Strathbogie “for his having a scandalous access to the late unnatural rebellion,” and was suspended and referred to the Synod, who, on 30th Oct.
 1716, dep. him from the ministry for having, on his own confession, “read the pretender’s proclamation calling up the subjects to his camp at Perth, and also a proclamation for a thanksgiving for the pretender’s safe arrival in Scotland.”

GRANGE

In the barony of Strathisla granted to Kinloss Abbey by William the Lion, the abbey built a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Abbot Thomas Crystall, who died 20th Dec. 1535, placed in the chapel a beautiful statue of the Virgin, on a pedestal. On the erection of the parish in 1618 the chapel became the parish church. The present church was built in 1795. The parish takes its name from the Grange of Kinloss Abbey, which was situated in Strathisla Barony. Ladyhill and Ladywell in the parish recall the Virgin dedication.—[Recs. of Kinloss, 36.]

MARNOCH, of old ABERCHIRDER

The old church is said to have been built in the middle of a Druid circle of standing stones. The Chapel of St Neminius the Confessor, situated near the Deveron, was founded about 1286-7 by Alexander, Thane of Aberchirder, for the soul of Alexander, King of Scotland, the soul of his father, and his own soul, the endowment given to the chaplain, Sir Cristinus, being four silver merks annually from the mill of Carnoussexth (Carnousie), and the whole haugh called Dolbrech, with all the buildings built or to be builded in the churchyard at the said chapel. St John's Chapel was situated at Chapelton, were are St John's Well and St John's Ford. On 26th Feb.

 1640 the min. reported to the Synod “that the Laird of Frendraucht had given to his Church two gryt cupps of silver worth nyne scoir libs, and that Sir Alexr. Lesly gave a silver bason, a Church bell, and a hand bell.”—[Reg. of Moray, 279-80; MacKinlay's Anc. Ch. Dedications (script.), 280.]

ROTHIEMAY

The first church was built by St Drostan in the haugh below Rothiemay Castle in the sixth century. In 1752 the Earl of Fife, who had acquired Rothiemay, pulled down the church because it interfered with his view from the castle, and utilised the stones in building, at the Midtown, a new church which was the predecessor of the existing church. What was left of the old church was grown over and the exact site became unknown. But recently the site was brought to light through the labours of Colonel Ian Forbes of Rothiemay Castle and one of his men, and the excavations had laid bare the foundations, altar stone and font.—[Dr Douglas Simpson, Trans. Banffshire Field Club.]

The Hospital of St Nicholas, for the sustenance of poor persons resorting thither, was founded in 1222–35 by Muriel de Pollok, daugh. of late Peter de P., the endowment being the lands of Innerorkall, and the mill of the same, with the water rights. She also gave the Church of Rothes. The lands of Aginvay were the gift of Walter de Moravia between 1222 and 1242; and on 7th Oct. 1232 Alexander II granted a charter of 4 merks annually from the farm of Mill of Invernairn for the sustenance of a chaplain and a clerk in the chapel of the hospital. Prior to 1530 the cadets of the house of Rothes took possession of the revenues of the hospital, which soon thereafter became ruinous; and shortly after 1829 its remains were cleared away to facilitate the construction of the approach to the suspension bridge then under erection.—[Reg. Epis. of Moray, 120–5.]

ELCHIES

The old church was situated at Easter Elchies, where the churchyard still exists, and appears to have been ruinous at or soon after the union with Knockando in 1625.
 Subsequently steps seem to have been taken to secure the rebuilding of Elchies Church, for on 10th Oct. 1671 the Synod recommended the Presb. of Aberlour to meet in Elchies parish and there, along with the heritors, "design a plot of ground most convenient for erecting a new Church which work was intended and concluded upon many years ago." The matter was again before the Synod on 9th April 1672, when that body, on the ground that the people of Elchies were a great distance from Knockando Church "and that few or anie of those people did frequent the ordnances at the said place," and that therefore there was need for a new church at Elchies, ratified and approved of the church being erected on a platt of ground called Cargill. Owing to difficulties in securing that site the Synod on 14th Oct.

 1673 ord. the min. at Knockando "to use all legal diligence against the heritors to build a new church in the plat of ground at Easter Elchies where it was of old." That church became ruinous about 1750.

GLENLIVET

Chapel Chriosd was situated at Nevie. It was called Neuechin Christ, Neuin Crist, "Christ's Sanctuary"; and the lands attached to the chapel were called the lands of Neuchin Christ or Neuchincrist, and belonged to the Bishopric of Moray. Nevi is from Nemeton, Nemed, "Holy," and signifies an institution, originally pagan, taken over by the Christian Church. On 28th Oct. 1714, following a representation by the Presb. of Aberlour that the country of Glenlivet was about eight miles distant from its parish church of Inveravon, that it abounded with papists, defections being made by “traffiquing priests,” and that the Synod should use its endeavours to have another ord. min. in Inveravon parish, the Synod recommended the Presb. to apply to the Commission for the Plantation of Kirks for the erection of Glenlivet into a separate parish; the matter was not pressed.—[Reg. of Moray, 12, 68; Watson’s Celtic Place Names, 246, 249.]

JAMES STEVENSON, on 13th April 1712 1713 the Synod prohibited the Presb. of Aberlour to ordain him as assistant in the parish of Inveravon, “considering it is ane highland paroch abound- ing with papists and popish priests traffiquing amongst them whose depen- dence is mainly upon these having the Irish language which language Mr Steven- son hath not.”

JOHN LESLIE, his son, John, succeeded 1663 to Findrassie; his daugh., Isobel, had a child by Thomas Crevey, min. of Newhills.

JAMES ALLAN, on 19th June 1705 he 1696 was charged by the Synod for absenting himself from meetings of Presb. and Synod, and for not having subscribed his renouncing the errors of Antonia Bourignon, and for not adhering to the Confession of Faith, and was suspended till next meeting of Synod. On 30th Oct. 1705 the Synod, on learning that the congregation at Rothes had boycotted the service at which his suspension was to be intimated, again suspended him till the next meeting. On 5th March 1706 the Synod cited him to the next ensuing

General Assembly, and on the General Assembly referring the process back to the Synod on 9th April 1706 the Synod on 29th May following dep. him "for his absence from the Presb. for his unjust reflections upon the Synod of Moray in reference to the errors of Bourignonism, in refusing to own the Confession of Faith as the Confession of his Faith," etc. His intimated appeal to the General Assembly produced no result in his favour, and on 25th Oct. 1709, when he craved to be restored to the exercise of the ministry, the Synod referred the case to the Committee for Overtures. On 27th Oct. following, the Synod records that "Mr James Allan gives no satisfaction to the Synod, and desists from prosecuting his address."

PRESBYTERY OF ABERNETHY

PATRICK GRANT, M.A.; apparently identical with Patrick Grant, son of 1585 John Grant of Freuchie, whom the said John provided with the "Living of Rothiemurchus" before 1584. In 1624 he offered to demit the Kirk of Kincardine as part provision for a min. at Rothiemurchus. But Kincardine seems to have remained under his charge, for he was held responsible by the Synod for building the church there 1625-7. He had issue, Janet.—[*Recs. ALEXANDER STEWART, pres. to 1569 parsonage on 9th July 1569 when a student at St Andrews Univ., on death of John Gray.—[Reg. Pres. Bene., i, 25.]

ADVIE

The church was probably dedicated to St Bridget. About one and a half miles north-east of Advie station are the ruins of the old church. Over the doorway are the initials W.G., A.G., and the date 1706. The initials are said to be those of the builder and his wife, inserted by the builder himself; and it is further affirmed that the Laird, irritated by the action of the builder, banned further procedure with the work. At Dalvey there are or were the remains of the ecclesiastical establishment of Devok, called the Chapel, and probably identical with the Church of Deveth which about 1213-21 Bricuis, Bishop of Moray, at the instance and on the petition of his uncle, Friskyn de Kerdal, patron of the church, granted and confirmed to the Church of the Holy Trinity of Spynie, for the fabric of the same. The grant was confirmed by Andrew, Bishop of Moray, to the Church of the Holy Trinity of Elgin, after it became the cathedral church in place of Spynie Church in 1224.—[Mackinlay's Anc. Ch. Dedications (non-script.), 130; Rev. Dr Reid's Grantown, 88-9, 1906 Ed.; McConnochie's Strathspey, 122; Reg. Epis. of Moray, 61-2, 65.]

The present church was built in 1809. At Congash there was a chapel with a burial-ground, probably prehistoric. In it are two remarkable sculptured stones, one of which bears an object of helmet shape. At Achnahannet, "field of the Annat," in the north part of the parish, there is the site of a little chapel in a field, enclosed by a "cashel." Down below near the town is Tobar an Domhnaich, "Sunday's Well."—[New Stat. Acc., xiv, 441; Cramond's

DUTHIL

In 1660 the church, which was fallen to the ground, was rebuilt by the Laird of Grant. The present church was built in 1826. At a meeting of the parishioners in the church on 13th Jan. 1537-8, Mr Andrew Grant was elected Clerk of the Parish in succession to the deceased William Grant. The Grants of Grant, afterwards Earls of Seafield, had a burial aisle here from 1586. The mausoleum adjoining the church was built in 1821 by Francis William, sixth Earl of Seafield, and a new mausoleum, a counterpart of the former, was erected to the east of the churchyard about 46 years later by the Dowager Countess of Seafield. In the churchyard is the grave of Ian Marnoch or Lom, the celebrated Jacobite poet.—[The Chiefs of Grant, iii, 268; McConnachie's Strathspey, 108; Shaw's Hist. of Province of Moray, i, 255; Reg. of Synod, 3rd April and 2nd Oct. 1660.]

WILLIAM WATSON, before the Synod 1623 in July 1646 "he confessed that James Grahame (Marquis of Montrose) was a night at his house"; and for compliance with the Marquis he was suspended by the Synod from 6th April to 5th Oct. 1647. On 2nd Oct. 1649 he was referred by the Synod for trial to the Presb. of Aberlour on a charge of contemptuous reception of the General Assembly's order to mins. to "speak boldlie against the Scots in England"; and three years later he was suspended for three months "for giving the communion to the people kneeling."—[Recs. Synod of Moray, July 1646, 6th April, 5th Oct. 1647, 2nd Oct. 1649, 7th April, 15th June 1652.]

JAMES WATSON, for various misdemeanours, including service with 1652 Montrose at Lesmoir, he had his licence suspended by the Synod in July 1646 till 5th Oct. 1647; and he was rebuked by the Synod on 2nd Oct. 1649 for going "through the country in Highland apparel"; he died before 3rd April 1660.

INSH

It would appear that Insh had a later dedication of St Mary. On 28th July 1294 William le Franseys was sued by Thomas the Clerk of Elgin, for being found in possession of 476 lamb skins which the plaintiff deposited in the Church of St Mary of Insh for security against robbers and which had been carried off. Franseys stated that he had bought them from some men unknown in Elgin "last Thursday." By leave of court parties compromised. Near the Great North Road, in a field below Dunachton House, there is an ancient burial-ground with ivy-covered remains of a chapel said to have been dedicated to St Drostan.—[Cal. of Docs. relating to Scotland, ii, 192; McConachie's Strathspey, 35.]

INVERALLAN

Portions of the walls of the old church in the churchyard near the Spey existed till about forty years ago, when they were removed in connection with churchyard alterations. Futach's (Fiacre's) Stone has an incised cross on each side, the east face of the stone being dressed. Built into the west wall of the churchyard is a symbol stone; the symbols are believed to be of Pictish origin influenced by association with the early Christian crosses, and of the 6th or 7th century. The old baptismal font, circular, rough-dressed, and with circular orifice, is near the entrance to the churchyard. St Futach's Well, in part filled with mud and growth of grass, is situated on the west side of the road along the Spey, a short distance from the churchyard. The first church, built in Grantown, bore the date 1801, the year of its erection. It gave place to the present church, the Seafield Memorial Church, erected on the same site and opened on 1st May 1886. It was the gift of Caroline Stuart, Countess of Seafield, in memory of her husband, John Charles, seventh Earl of Seafield, and of their son, Ian Charles, eighth Earl of Seafield. The pulpit was made from a piece of elaborate old carving brought from Castle Grant. In front of the Seafield gallery is a piece of carved woodwork found in 1874 when an old house was in process of demolition at the farm of Shillochan, Duthil. It consists of three rows of panels. The topmost row of eight panels has the arms of the following families; Cumming of Altyre; Gordon of Huntly; Rose of Kilravock; Calder of that ilk; Grant of Auchernach; Forbes of Auchintie; Leslie of Balquhain; Lumsden of Cushnie. Below is inscribed:

Mark the upright man, and behold the just,

For the end of that man is peace.

The middle row, also of eight panels, displays floral and figure designs, and below is:

The righteous cry, and the Lord heareth them,

And delivereth them out of all their troubles.

The lowest row, of seven panels, carries less ornate designs.—[Crammond's Grantown, 7-8; Inscrips. in Church; Memo, Mr. Wm. McGregor, Grantown.]

The church along with the Chapel of Benchory (near Newtonmore) was granted to the Bishopric of Moray by Gilbert de Kathera' (Strathern?), with confirmation by William the Lion 1203-11. The church was rebuilt in 1624 and 1792. The priory was founded by George, Earl of Huntly, cir. 1490. It belonged to the Order of the Carmelites. Croft-maluag, now Chapel-park, at Raitts, indicates that there was a chapel there dedicated to St Mo-Luoc of Lismore, who died 592, Mo-Luoc being an affectionate form of Lugiad, Lughaidh.—[Reg. of Moray, 14; Recs. of Synod of Moray, 13, 14th April 1624; *Reg. and reponed to his Charge, with warning of deposition in the event of further transgression; on 6th July 1646 was sharply rebuked by the Synod and referred to the Presb. of Aberlour for having "drunk much aquavity at the Presbytery Meeting"; and on 15th June 1652 he was ord. by the Synod to give his repentance in sackcloth a day in ilk ane of the Kirkis of Badenoch, viz. Kingussie, Laggan and Alves, for marrying and baptising, after his deposition in 1647 (but before his deposition was publicly intimated).

ROTHIEMURCHUS

The church was granted to the Cathedral Church of Moray by Andrew, Bishop of Moray, 1221–42, to provide lights for the cathedral. It was dedicated to St Duchaldus, who is said to have come from Iona after one of the Norse raids in the west, and for a time settled in the district. A marsh near the church was termed St Duchald's Pool; and St Duchald's Fair was held in the district up to the close of the 18th century. At Achnahatnich, about a mile from Coylum Bridge, there was a chapel with burying-ground, dedicated to St Eata, who may be Eate, one of the twelve English pupils of St Aidan and afterwards Abbot of Melrose and Lindesfarne, or the Irish Saint Ide.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 318; Mackinlay's Ancient Church Dedications (non-script.), 505; Reg. Epis. Moray, 70.]

PATRICK GRANT, in the will of John 1584 Grant of Freuchie, 23rd Nov. 1584, it is stated, "I have provided Patrick Grant, my son, to the Living of Rothiemurchus." Apparently he was identical with Patrick Grant, min. at Abernethy and Kincardine, and probably retained his interest in the Living of Rothiemurchus. That at least might serve to explain his consent in 1624 to help in furnishing provision for a min. at Rothiemurchus, and his further consent to the admission of Mr Henderson there.—[The Chiefs of Grant, iii, 292.] (See Andrew Henderson, following.)

ANDREW HENDERSON, in April 1625 1624 Mr Patrick Grant, min. at Abernethy and Kincardine, stated that he was "content to demitt the soume of ane hundreth merks money of the benefice of Kincarden with the gleib thiroff yeirly for the mantinance of Mr Andrew Hendersone at the Kirk of Rothiemurchus and consents to the present nominatione and plantatioun of the said Mr Andrew." To the Synod on 13th Oct. of the same year it was intimated that Mr William Watson, min. at Duthil, "is content of his own accord to demitt the Kirk of Rothiemurkis with the whole benefit thairoff, that ane minister may be planted thairoff," and that Mr Patrick Grant "willinglie condiscendit to dimitt the kirk off Kincardin togidter with ane hundreth merks out of the provision thairoff" for the same purpose; and the Synod ord. the Presb. upon those grounds to consider how the Kirks of Rothiemurchus and Kincardine may be served, "and see out for persons quha may undertake the charge." In Oct. 1625 Mr Grant was ord. by the Synod to put Mr Henderson in possession of the glebe of Kincardine and pay the 100 merks out of the stipend of Kincardine for 1625 and so forth; and on 27th April 1630 the Synod, while agreeing to the transportation of Mr Henderson to Balquhiddier, resolved that Mr Grant be "summoned for withdrawing the means of provision" from him. There appears to be no further reference to the matter.

BIRNIE

The church was the first seat of the Bishopric of Moray. In 1171-84 King William the Lion granted a charter in favour of the Church of the Holy Trinity of the Bishopric of Moray and Simon, Bishop of Moray. If Birnie Church was at that time the seat of the bishopric, then its dedication was the Holy Trinity. But the seat of the bishopric may then have been the Church of Spynie. At Pittendreich there was a hermitage or desertum, of which all trace has disappeared. The fragment of a sculptured stone belonging to it is in Elgin Museum. In 1731 the church was reported to the Presb. as ruinous "in gables, doors, windows," and "the roof like to fall," and steps were taken to have the building thoroughly repaired—the west gable to be rebuilt from the foundation, with a window 2 ft. × 6 ft., and a bell-house erected upon the same; the two side walls of the nave and choir with the two windows repaired from the foundation; the mid-gable and the easter gable also to be repaired, including pointing of "the old work." The date on the belfry, 1734, marks the completion of the work. In 1890 the church was repaired in a manner in keeping with its style.—[Reg. of Moray, 4; *Recs. BURGHEAD

The Chapel of St Æthan or Ethan was situated at Chapelyard. The name may be a corruption of Aidan, first Bishop of Lindisfarne, who died in 651, or of Eata, one of Aidan's "twelve boys of the English Nation," who was first abbot of the Monastery at Old Melrose, and successor of Aidan in the See of Lindisfarne, and died 683. On a representation to the effect that "Seceders" were trying to draw off from the church the inhabitants of Burghead, and had secured a granary in which their clergy were to officiate, the Presb. on 7th May 1821 appointed a committee to interview Mr W. Young of Burghead about securing a Church of Scotland man to officiate, and to use endeavours for a place of worship; and on 28th Nov. 1822 it was reported that Mr Young had expressed agreement with the proposal and that by individual subscriptions and collectors in various parishes a place of worship was now erected, a site having been granted by Mr Young. The sphere of the church was Burghead, Cumineston, and Hopeman. The church was enlarged in 1838 and repaired in 1858–9. On 29th Nov. 1899 a proposal for a new church was submitted to the Presb.

 Strong support was forthcoming; the foundation stone was laid on 31st March 1902, and the church was opened for worship on 30th Nov. of the same year. Since the Union of 1929 the former U.F. church became the place of worship, and the old parish church has served as the church hall.

DRAINIE

The Church of Kinedar was dedicated to St Gerardine, the name, it is said, being a form of St Gervadius, Bishop of Brechin, and was granted to the Priory of St Andrews by Simon, Bishop of Moray, 1171–84. For a time the church, which consisted of nave, choir, and transepts, served as the Cathedral Church of Moray, particularly in the early part of the 13th century. In 1207 it was described as “situated on a peninsula of the sea, to which none of the parishioners could approach without difficulty.” The cave of the patron saint, which has now disappeared, was situated on the shore at Stotfield, west of Lossiemouth.

The Church of Ogston, dedicated to St Peter, was situated in the churchyard near the South Lodge of Gordonstown.

On 5th April 1642 the Synod of Moray recommended to the Commissioners for the Plantation of Kirks that Ogston be disjoined from St Andrews and united to Kinedar; and in the same year it was recorded that Kinedar and Ogston “were united in law by the Presbytery.” To the Synod’s recommendation effect was given by the Commissioners on 28th July 1647, and ratification was made by Parliament on 10th June 1648, it being decreed that the parishioners of Ogston were to receive the Sacraments and burial at Kinedar. Before 15th Nov. 1649 the Church of Kinedar was a ruin, decayed “by the iniquitie of tyme,” and required to be rebuilt; and Sir Robert and Sir Ludovic Gordon petitioned the Presb. for a central church. Objection was made by the parishioners of Ogston, who refused to attend Kinedar Church but were willing to attend their own church, which was “commodious for them,” and also by the min., who wished Ogston to be disjoined from Kinedar. Further consideration was given to the proposal for a central church, and though on 29th May 1650 the Presb. disjoined Kinedar and Ogston, later it reversed its policy, passing an Act on 18th Dec. 1650, constituting the union of the two. On 31st Dec. of the same year the heritors of the two parishes agreed to modify a stipend for the united kirks, “. . . whilk offer the Presbytery accept, the Kirks to continue united for the tyme coming.” Meantime, on 2nd Sept. 1650, the Synod expressed approval of the policy of a central church, and on 2nd Jan. 1651 it designed a site for the same—“a piece of ground called the Broomfield lying upon the north of the House of Drenny upon the west of the Lummielochs.” It was also arranged that there be a churchyard on the south-east part of the said ground. On 3rd April 1653 it was reported to the Synod that no beginning had been made with the new church, and that the Church of Ogston was incapable of accommodating more than a third of the people. On 4th Oct. 1653 it was further reported that Sir Robert Gordon had undertaken the building of the new church; and eventually the work was begun on 2nd May 1654, and before 3rd Oct. of that year the walls were “advanced above the height of the doors.” In his will of 11th July 1654 Sir Robert Gordon said, “I do recommend the building of a share of the Church of Drenie to my wyfe; for seeing we have taken down the old Church of Kinnedar, it is reason that we help to build another”; but for many years little or nothing was done. A supplication to the Synod by the parishioners of Kinedar on 21st Oct. 1662 that “the old decayed edifice of the Kirk of Kinedar may be repaired” led to nothing; and on 1st April 1672 the min. laid a complaint before the Synod regarding the lack of a church, the building of the new church being “still delayed by the negligence and unwillingness of the heritors to be at expense in that so necessarie a work.” That may indicate that Ogston Church had become unfit for worship. In any case a few years later it had passed out of use, for a Kirk Session minute of 14th Jan. 1677 records that worship in Ogston Church was impossible "by reason it was open and unthacked, and worship was carried on sometimes in the dining-room at Gordonston, sometimes in the barn of Drainie, and sometimes in the Giral House at Kinedar. Eventually the Church was used for worship for the first time on 2nd April 1677. Even then it was but half-sclaited." Soon afterwards it was completed. The date on the belfry is 1675. Meantime, on 3rd Oct. 1665, the Synod had ratified the Union of Kinedar and Ogston; and on 2nd April 1667 a contract between the Bishop of Moray and others anent the Union was recorded in the Synod minutes. The foundations of Kinedar Church were still to be seen in the churchyard in 1760, but nothing now remains above ground. In the churchyard there is an old cross; and fragments of stones taken from the manse walls and now in Elgin Museum appear to be relics of the old church. A sculptured stone, found in the churchyard, is at the manse. East of the churchyard stood the Castle of Kinedar, which for many years was the residence of the Bishops of Moray. Attached to it was a chapel.

The foundations of the Castle as well as of the enclosure were visible in 1760. On the site of Ogston Church and with stones from the same, Dame Elizabeth Dunbar, widow of Sir Robert Gordon, third of Gordonston, built the Gordonston mausoleum in 1705 in memory of her husband. The churchyard contains an old cross.

On 1st Oct. 1794 the min., Mr Lewis Gordon, presented a petition to the Presb., representing that the church built 1654-77 was both incommodious and insufficient—the floor below the level of the ground outside causing difficulty of access and also water from the roof in bad weather to find its way into the area of the Church; the roof ruinous and decayed; the walls rent in various places; the church neither paved, ceiled, nor plastered, and so cold in winter as to affect the health of the people. Besides, the absence of a wall round the churchyard left the graves exposed to the attacks of dogs, swine and other animals.

Whatever was done produced no lasting effect; and on 4th July 1820 the Presb. adopted a resolution that a new church be built about a mile farther to the east. The site finally chosen on 28th Nov. 1822 was "on rising ground in a new plantation where 4 roads meet upon the north side of the road from Lossiemouth to Westfield"; and the plans ultimately agreed upon were by James Gillespie, after the style of Rufford Church, as abridged by George Alexander. On 26th Jan. 1825 it was reported that the new church was near completion; and on 17th Feb. following it was taken over from the contractors. The roofless walls of the old church still survive. In 1915 steps were taken by the Presb. and the Drainie Kirk Session towards getting the parish church transported to St Gerardine's Mission Church, Lossiemouth. Considerable negotiations followed; and eventually on 14th Dec. 1917 the Court of Session granted decree of transportation. By disposition of 26th and 29th March 1918 the trustees of St Gerardine's Church conveyed it to the heritors as the parish church. By agreement between parties the old church became the property of the valued rent heritors of Drainie; and in 1923 it was demolished.—[Recs. of Synod of Moray, 31st Dec. 1650, 3rd Oct. 1665, 1st April 1672; Recs. of Elgin Presby., 15th Nov. 1649, 13th April, 1st May, 29th May, 18th Dec., 31st Dec. 1650, 3rd Oct. 1654, 12th Nov. 1662, 4th June 1672, 17th Feb. 1825; Reg. of Moray, 59, 63; *Acts Scot. LOSSIEMOUTH (DRAINIE)

A chapel was built here in 1847–8, being described on 7th June of the latter year as “lately erected.” Toward “finishing it” the Home Mission Committee gave a grant of £112 on 11th Oct. of the same year. The site, on the west side of the town, was conveyed to the Kirk Session of Drainie free of all charge on 22nd June 1849 by Dr Richard Rose, min. of Drainie, and his sister, Elizabeth; and there was provision on the site both for the church and a school and other buildings. In 1877 a request was made that the Home Mission build a new church, but nothing further was done. On 4th Feb. 1885 the min. of Drainie submitted to the Presb. plans for a new church which, he proposed, should become the church of the parish. The matter was delayed, but eventually, on 17th Oct. 1894, the Presb. agreed to a church being built nearer the burgh, the existing church being deemed inadequate. A site was granted by Captain Dunbar of Pitgavenay; and on 16th Aug. 1899 the foundation stone of the building was laid by Sir Charles Dalrymple, Bart., M.P. On 22nd Jan. it was resolved to ask for the church, which was called St Gerardine’s, a Chapel-of-Ease Constitution, and this was granted by the General Assembly in May of that year. In 1917 St Gerardine’s became the parish church. From the time the chapel was opened in 1848 the min. conducted a service there each Sabbath in addition to the service in Drainie Church. On 18th Feb. 1857 a proposal was made to secure a probationer for the work, but without success. Later suggestions to the same effect led to the Presb. agreeing on 30th March 1870 that a probationer be appointed to undertake all competent work. In Sept. 1877 and March 1882 fruitless proposals were made to secure endowment with a view to Lossiemouth being erected into a parish.

It is said that to St Peter's Church of Duffus there fled for sanctuary the occupants of St Aethan's fane at Torridun (Burghead) when about the end of the 9th century the Norsemen, under Sigrud the Powerful, captured Torridun and desecrated the fane. Evidence of a later church is found in a charter of Richard, Bishop of Moray 1187-1203, conveying to William, son of Freskyn, certain lands, and the full teinds of said lands to God and to the Church of St Peter at Duffus, and to Andrew the parson and our clerk, "his" son (i.e. son of William), as is shown by the charter of "our" predecessor, Symon. That indicates the existence of a church in 1171-84, when Symon de Tonei, monk of Melrose, was Bishop of Moray. In it there was an altar, dedicated to St Catharine, which was in existence in 1214, and beside which was buried Hugh de Freskyn de Moravia, who died before 1226, and his son, Walter de Moravia, who died 1262-3. There was also in it a Chapel of St Laurence founded before 1248 by Walter de Moravia's second son, Freskyn de Moravia, who died in 1296 and was buried in the chapel. For the endowment of the chapel he gave of his lands of Duffus and of Dalvey in Strathspey. In addition to the High Altar of St Peter there may have been another altar in the church dedicated to that Apostle, for on 18th Sept. 1240 Walter de Moravia, son of Hugh de M., granted a croft and toft to the Chaplain of St Peter in the Church of St Peter at Duffus to celebrate for the souls of his father and mother, etc. The church seems to have undergone repairs in 1303, when John de Spalding, Canon of Moray, "hoste" of Edward I in Elgin, successfully petitioned that monarch "that he would give him 20 oaks in his forest of Laund Morgun (Longmorn), to build his Church of Duffus, whereof he is Canon." The fact that, as we shall see, the arms of Alexander Sutherland of Duffus, who died on 12th Oct. 1479, appear on the boss of the extant medieval porch and above the lancet window in the west wall of the burial vault which manifestly belongs to the same period as the porch, and on tablets in the main walls of the building, indicates that at least he carried out extensive work on the church and may have actually rebuilt it. For the next notice of the church we have to pass to 17th May 1672, when it was described as "ill accomodate for the public worship and stands in need of reparatioun and plenishing." At that time the "back" of the church and the roof were repaired; and the Presb. further ord. that "for the better hearing of the word" the kirk be divided between the two heritors according to their rents, Alexander, Lord Duffus, and Sir Ludovic Gordon, "who shall replenish their respective parts with convenient seites, desks, and lofts" for themselves and their tenants. A line was drawn down the middle of the church, and the space available for accommodation was, on the north side 21 ells from gable to gable, and, on the south side, 15 ells, made up of 6 ells from the east gable to the pulpit, and 9 ells from the pulpit to the "great door," plus "a little bounded at the syd of the steeple staire." That these measurements refer to the nave is evident from the fact that at the same time Lord Duffus received permission from the Presb. "to close up the passage betwixt the Kirk and the quire for the better accomodation of the Church and the forsaied reparation." In the autumn of 1717 the north wall of the church was "mended" with the addition of a buttress. A few years later, in or about 1720-1, there occurs a brief description of the building as then existing,—“a very pretty Church, well lighted; it has at the west end of it a stately steeple of four storie high, built be the Lord Duffus predecessors which is their burial place. It hes on the east end of the quire a very handsome monument built be Mr Archibald Dunbar of Tundertoune.” Further information about the tower may be gleaned from a Kirk Session Minute of 7th March 1641, recording a payment “to Alexander Anderson, mason, for ye upplifting of four stones that fell off ye platform of ye stipel and for ye biging of twa windows in ye stipel.” It can hardly be doubted that the church of 1720-1 was substantially the church of medieval times, consisting of a nave, choir, and west tower, with a south porch and a stair to the tower inside the church at the south-west corner. That the church was subsequently rebuilt is, as we shall see, certain; and probably the work was carried out in 1730–2. The question of repairs to the church was raised before the Presb. on 17th Jan. 1724; and on 5th July 1726 that body adopted a report which required the renewal of the roof and the provision of three buttresses for the “back wall” which was “insufficient and coming out over,” and in danger of collapse. Delay ensued; and though the Synod as well as the Presb. took action, on 22nd Oct. 1730 it was reported that, while Thunderton (Archibald Dunbar), the heritor concerned, had promised in April 1729 that “he was to order the reparation of the Church,” nothing had been done. To the matter no further reference is made; but on 13th June 1732 when the Presb. carried out a visitation of Duffus, it placed on record that the church was “in good repair”—a clear indication that some effective work had been done. On 24th Oct. 1780 it was reported to the Presb. that the church was “in a ruinous condition.” Of what was done there is no record; but the writer of the New Statistical Account (1845) states that the church was “thoroughly repaired” in 1782. He also refers to it as being “like most old Churches in Scotland constructed without the least regard to appearance, comfort, or commodious arrangement.” He would hardly thus have written of a church rebuilt in 1782, only 63 years previous to the publication of the Account. In any case what was actually done subsequent to 1720–1, and probably cir. 1729–30, may be learned from an examination of the church as it now exists in the old churchyard at Kirkton about 300 yards east of Duffus village. With the exception of the south porch and the adjacent part of the inner wall, and the lower part of the west gable, the nave was taken down and rebuilt, with the north and south walls upon the old foundations, and the east gable apparently upon the line of the old choir arch. Except the basement, which constituted the Sutherland burial-vault with entrance from the church, the tower was also taken down, and the west gable was carried up to terminate in a belfry, access to the bell rope being got by means of a ladder to the roof of the burial-vault. There were lofts on the north side and east end of the church, each with an outside stair, and a loft on the west end with access by the old stair of the tower, a small portion of which may still be seen. The east loft was also furnished with a fireplace. The medieval porch was left “covered with turf flat on the roof.” It has a vaulted roof, and two doorways, an outer and an inner. On the right side of the latter, inside the church, there is a piscina. On the floor of the church there are many tombstones and also fragments of heraldic stones, and also in the interior there is a recess in the east gable in which is the bust of a stone effigy. On the floor level near the east end of the north wall there are built into the wall what appear to be fragments of a medieval tomb. The existence of the arms of Alexander Sutherland of Duffus on the boss of the south porch, on the west wall of the burial-vault and on shields on the north and the south walls of the church, has already been noted. Near the east end of the north wall there are a stone with an incised sceptre and sword, and another stone bearing a figure seated on a sphere and blowing a trumpet, evidently a representation of Gabriel and the last trump. It may be presumed that the choir was taken down when the church was rebuilt. The foundations of the side walls, showing that the choir was of the same width as the nave, may be clearly traced, and the lower part of the east wall survives as the west wall of the Dunbar burial enclosure, built soon after 1711. Inside the choir space on the west side of the Dunbar enclosure there is another burial enclosure constructed presumably when the choir was removed. It contains various tombstones, including the marble slab of Alexander Sutherland of Duffus, who died in 1479, and Morilla Chisholm, his wife, both of whom presumably had been interred near the High Altar. Towards the close of 1867 complaints as to the condition and suitability of the 18th-century building led to negotiations between the Presb. and the heritors, which ended in the present church at the west end of the village being built in 1868–9, being completed in June of the latter year. The pulpit windows were filled in stained glass at the expense of parties respectively in Hopeman and in the Landward Part of the parish; and the cost of the rose window, also in stained glass, was defrayed by Lady Dunbar Brander. At a cost of £405 the spire was built by the min., Rev. Dr Brander, to be associated, at his express desire, with the names of Sir Archibald Dunbar, Bt. of Westfield, and Mary Lady Dunbar Brander of Northfield and Pitgaveny. In the early part of 1870 the materials of the old church were sold, and the building was left roofless. But under the care of the Office of Works its walls have been made secure against any deterioration. Probably also in 1870 a stable that was built on the north side of the west gable adjacent to “Lord Duffus Tomb,” and is mentioned in 1867, was removed. In the churchyard a short distance south of the porch there is a cross, probably of the 14th century. Among the vessels of the church there is a solid silver plate, shaped almost like a basin, which is 17½ in. in diameter and weighs 4 lb. avoirdupois. On the under rim is the inscription, “Deo et ecclesiae M. Joannes Guthrie Rector Duffus consec.,” and on the upper rim, “The Bread that I will give is my flesh which I will give for ye life of the word IOH* 6* 51.” Probably it may have been the gift of Mr Guthrie, min. 1631–41. It is said to have disappeared about the time of the termination of Mr Guthrie’s ministry. On the other hand, it has to be noted that a “silver bason,” sometimes designated a “large dish” of silver, occurs at regular intervals in inventories of Duffus church vessels in the Presb. minutes from 14th Nov. 1649 to at least 11th Sept. 1756. In any case the plate did disappear, and ultimately came into the possession of a London silversmith about 1860. From him it was acquired by a gentleman who presented it to St Patrick’s Church, Hove, for use as an alms-dish. There it came under the notice of Sir Edward Dunbar and Mr

Chalmers, min., who identified it as the property of Duffus Church. The result of a conference between Sir Edward and Mr Chalmers on the one hand, and the vicar and chief vestryman of St Patrick’s on the other, was that the plate was acquired for £250, and restored to Duffus Church in 1925. An inscription on the under rim tells of its removal in 1641, its reappearance in London in or about 1860, its transference to St Patrick’s, and its ultimate recovery in 1925. In 1871, at the expense of Rev. Dr Brander, two old silver salvers were converted into two filigreed patens somewhat resembling cake-baskets. At the east end of the village near the road is the Well of St Peter, which is kept in excellent condition. It provided water for the village prior to the introduction of the gravitation supply. In the field in front of Duffus House there is a well bearing the name of St Lawrence. In addition to the Chapel at Burghead (q.v.) there were in the parish at least two chapels. One was at the “College” of Roseisle, the designation “College” no doubt denoting an early community of clerics whose Ab or Head directed the supply of daughter churches. The other, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was founded by permission of Bricius, Bishop of Moray 1203–21, on the north side of Duffus Castle, by Hugh de Moravia, Lord of Duffus and Strathbrock, whose son, Andrew, was then parson of Duffus. To it were assigned the teinds of Aldetoun; and there was a manse, also on the north side of the Castle. On 13th Sept. 1542 Patrick Hepburne, Bishop of Moray, with consent of William Sutherland of Duffus, patron of the chapel, created it a Prebend and Canonry of Elgin Cathedral, called the Prebend of Unthank, with the manse at the Castle, a garden and croft, and a manse at the cathedral. By this erection Unthank became a parsonage. Hence, in all probability, arose the mistaken view that Unthank was originally a parish. About 1720–1 the Chapel of Unthank was described as “a very bonnie Chappell, the remnant of it is yet extant.”—[Reg. of Moray, Pref., xxxv–vi, 273, 401, 429, 481; *Cal. of Docs. ELGIN

The church, a prebend of Elgin Cathedral, was sometimes called the Prebend of 100 shillings, because included in the pre-bend there was 100 shillings of the altarage of the church. In or soon after 1187 King William the Lion, for the augmentation of the Bishopric of Moray, gave the church, along with the Chapel of St Andrew and the Chapel of Monbeen, to Bishop Richard and his successors, the gift to take effect after the decease of Richard de Prebend, his cleric, and of Walter, Cleric of Richard.
The church was burned by the Wolf of Badenoch in 1390. In it there were the following altars—the Virgin Mary, at which chaplainries were founded, on 20th Oct. 1363 by William de Soreys, burgess of Elgin, on 12th Nov. 1343 by William Pope, son of William Pope, burgess of Elgin, and in 1365 by Richard, son of John, burgess of Elgin; the Holy Rood, at which in 1286 a chaplainry was founded by Hugh Herok, burgess of Elgin; and St Duthac the Bishop, at which a chaplainry was founded on 9th May 1528 by Alexander Gaderer (Gatherer), Elgin, his son, Mr Thomas, being then the chaplain. In 1596 a new loft was built in the west end of the church; and in 1598 the choir, the upkeep of which had previously devolved upon the Bishops of Moray, was thoroughly repaired in “theck, ruff, wallis, windois glais, and pleneeshing,” the cost, 800 merks, being met by a stent imposed on the fruits of the Bishopric of Moray. About 1621 the choir, under the name of the Little Kirk, was constituted a separate place of worship by the closing of the chancel arch. Probably it was then that the Rood Loft, access to which was by a stair in the choir, was removed. Subsequently there occur in the Kirk Session minutes notices of services conducted by the mins. in the two churches, sometimes termed the old and the new. On 10th Nov. 1653, when the Presb. assembled for their meeting at the church, “the meeting was interrupted by ye Inglis Troupers also had a number of yr horsis in the Church which was the place of meeting.” The Presb. accordingly adjourned. On 2nd April 1661 there was submitted to the Synod of Moray a reference from the Presb. of Elgin “anent the building an edifice of a new Kirk at Elgin.” In respect of the absence of some heritors, the matter was delayed; and nothing more appears to have been done.

On Sunday, 22nd June 1679, the roof of the church collapsed, but the pillars and central arched tower remained. In the following year rebuilding was inaugurated; and the work was completed in 1682. The church was demolished in 1826, and was replaced by the present church, which was opened for worship in Oct. 1828. About 1605 the churchyard was removed, recourse being had to the churchyard at the cathedral.

The auxiliary Church of St Columba, built on a site between Moss Street and Duff Avenue, was opened for worship on 17th June 1906. It is a mixture of Norman and Gothic architecture, and consists of a nave with south aisle of four bays, a choir with transeptal chapel on the south side and an organ chamber on the north, and a chancel. The pulpit, of carved oak in the Renaissance style, was the pulpit placed in the parish church when it was rebuilt in 1684. When the present parish church was built, the pulpit was removed to Pluscarden Priory. When the priory was acquired from the Duke of Fife by the Marquis of Bute, the pulpit was reserved by the Duke, who subsequently returned it to the Church of Scotland. It differs in style from St Columba's Church, but was used by the architect, Dr MacGregor Chalmers, as the model for all the church's oak furnishings.

To the Chapel of St Andrew and the Chapel of Monbeen reference has already been made. It is not clear whether the former was the Chapel of St Andrew situated above Pluscarden Glen, or the chapel which afterwards became St Andrew's Parish Church. The chapel on the Castlehill, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was repaired and rebuilt in 1459-69. In it there was an altar dedicated to St John the Baptist, at which on 10th July 1351, Isabel Countess of Moray, founded a chaplainry for celebrations at stated times for the soul of Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray; and in the second quarter of the 15th century James Dunbar, Earl of Moray, granted certain annual rents and also provision for bread, wine, and wax to "the Chaplain of the King in the Chapel." Near the ordeal pot, a testing-place for women delinquents, the site of which, situated at the east end of Chanonry Road, is marked by a stone at the foot of the railway embankment, there was another chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, called the Chapel of Grene or Lady of Grene. There were also a Chapel of the Holy Trinity and a Chapel of St John.

In or about 1226 Andrew de Moravia, Bishop of Moray, founded on land "between the King's Way and the river Task" a maison-dieu with chapel, dedicated to St Mary and St John the Evangelist, for the reception of the poor, both "brothers and sisters," and the sustenance of the same. To the endowments given by the Bishop there were added by Alexander II on 27th Feb. 1234-5 the lands of Monbeen and Kellas. In 1390 the house was "destroyed and burned" by the Wolf of Badenoch. By Charters of 22nd March 1594-5, 10th Dec. 1599, and 29th Feb. 1620, James VI granted to the burgh of Elgin, for the support of the poor and of a music school with a music master, the hospital, the preceptory and the right of patronage of the same, the lands of Over and Nether Monbeen and the Haughs of Monbeen, the lands of Nether Cardellis, and Over and Nether Pettinseiris, which pertained to the hospital of old. The maison-dieu was replaced by the Bede Houses in 1626; and the latter were rebuilt in 1864. In 1770 the walls of the maison-dieu were blown down, but a remnant seems to have been in existence in 1860. The site was on the west side of Maison Dieu Road, and is in fact occupied by Anderson's Institution.

The friary of the Blackfriars was dedicated to St Andrew and was situated near the Lossie, north-west of the Castlehill. On 29th March 1285 Alexander III gave mandate to the Sheriff and Bailies of Elgin to pay from the fermes of the burgh certain quantities of victual to the friars; and on 21st Oct. 1313 Robert I granted to them 10 merks annually from the Thanage of Aberchirder. Of the Settlement, the name of which is perpetuated in Blackfriars' Haugh and Blackfriars' Road, some slight foundations were in existence in 1740.

Apparently in the third quarter of the 13th century William, Earl of Ross, who died in May 1274, gave to God, the Holy Trinity, and the Bishops of Moray, the lands of Cadboll in Ross, and a quarter of the lands of Pethkenny, for the life and sustenance of the Minorite (Grey) Friars, who for the time were dwelling in the house belonging to them near the Cathedral of Elgin, or shall dwell in it for the future, and, failing that, for the sustenance of chaplains in the cathedral church. Clearly, therefore, about the middle of the 13th century an unknown donor provided a house in Elgin for the Greyfriars; and it would also appear that in it they took up their abode. But the fact that Cadboll and Pithendie (Pethkenny) subsequently constituted a chaplainry in the cathedral shows that the Greyfriars did not fulfil the condition of permanent residence; and, therefore, nothing more was done towards the establishment of the house. Dunfermline House at the east end of the town is said to occupy the site of the Greyfriars' original abode. The second and complete foundation was made by John Innes, Sheriff of Moray, apparently some years prior to 1479. That year is the date of the Bull of Pope Sixtus IV confirming the foundation; and the Bull describes the monastery as "now founded and built." Associated with the founding of the house is the following story. Described as "a man seldom given to pious deeds," Sheriff Innes was also known by repute as a "raider of church possessions, an oppressor of the lieges, and a disturber of the peace." A band of Caterans raided Moray, and carried off much booty of cattle and corn. With a force of Moray men the Sheriff followed the reavers to the Pass of Abernethy, where a fight took place. The men of Moray were defeated; and they fled, leaving their leader, as they thought, dead on the field. Badly wounded, he turned to Heaven for help and vowed to amend his ways, restore his ill-gotten gains, and found a monastery for Franciscans if he were rescued from his plight. At that time his uterine brother, Francis, one of the friars of the Franciscan Monastery at Aberdeen, and noted for his piety and learning, was at Abernethy in the course of one of the periodical missions in the north which he and other Franciscan friars from Aberdeen carried out for the conversion of "the rude and barbarous people of the neighbourhood." Forewarned of the fight in his sleep, he set out for the pass, and found and rescued his wounded brother. Restored to health, the latter implemented his vow, including the founding of the monastery at Elgin. Subsequently, when he was free from business claims, he sometimes spent weeks at the monastery, observing its rules, rising even for the nocturnal vigils, and sharing the meagre diet of the cloisters. The first friars at Elgins, who came from Aberdeen, were twelve in number, with Francis Innes, the founder's brother, and Doctor of Both Laws of France, as the first guardian of the monastery. Among the twelve there were at least three of special note—Bernard Chisholm, whose work in converting cattle thieves earned for him the nickname of "associate of caterans"; Anthony Fraser, and Robert Stuart. In 1480 Alexander Sutherland of Quarrelwood granted the Friars the right to cut down in his woods what trees they required for repairs, etc., of their buildings. After the Reformation, the place was put to various uses; and ultimately, in 1891, it was acquired by the Sisters of the Convent of Sainte Marie of Mercy; and, thereafter, the church which had become ruinous, and the conventual buildings, of which the west wing survived, were restored through the generosity of the Marquis of Bute.

Annual rents pertaining "of old" to the "white Friars of Elgin" occur in a charter of 1581, but of such friars nothing further seems to be known, and the description may be a copyist's error. To the east of the maison-dieu there was a leper house, with about six acres of land attached, in the angle of the Tyock Burn and the Fochabers road. Near the cathedral there was a place or land belonging to the "Brethren of St Lazarus beside the Wall of Jerusalem." In 1360 Bishop John Pilmou granted and confirmed the land (or part thereof) extending to $3\frac{1}{2}$ roods, described as lying on the west side of the stone wall of the canonry between the two common ways, to four perpetual chaplains of the cathedral, to be divided proportionally for the building of manses for themselves and their successors. St Lazarus' Wynd indicates the site.

The Bishopric of Moray was in existence in the time of Alexander I (1107–24), Bishop Gregory (1115) being the first bishop mentioned. That for nearly a century the see had no fixed cathedral seat appears both from the narrative of Bishop Bricius (1203–21), contained in his petition to Pope Innocent III craving that the Church of Spynie be declared the cathedral, and also from the narrative in his writ of foundation of the canonry. He states that his predecessors, having no fixed place as cathedral, had from the point of view of convenience adapted the seat in one or the other of three churches—Birnie, Spynie and Kineddar, that most of them had held Spynie Church as the cathedral, and that in it they had been installed. It would appear, therefore, that Birnie Church had at first been regarded as the cathedral, and that it had given place to Spynie, which seemed to be much in favour. When the petition was addressed to the Pope, Kineddar Church was the seat. But, as the Bishop further narrates, Kineddar was held by consensus of opinion, clerical and lay, to be most unsuitable, situated as it was "on a peninsula of the sea to which none of the parishioners could approach without difficulty." And there were other considerations which induced the "Chapter and other prudent men" to favour Spynie, "the difficulty of places," "the roughness of ways," and "the change of times," and chiefly greater security against the works of evildoers, and better facilities for the bishop in the ministrations of his office alike in spiritual and temporal things. It was craved, therefore, that the Pope decern the Holy Trinity Church of Spynie to be the seat of the Bishop of Moray for the future. On 26th March 1207 the Pope acceded to the petition, and remitted to the Bishops of St Andrews and Brechin, and the Abbot of Lindores, to make inquiry and give effect to the crave, which was done. About sixteen years later steps were taken to secure the transference of the seat from Spynie. On 13th April 1224 Pope Honorius III narrates that "coming into our presence, our venerable brother, the Bishop of Moray, has often expounded to us and repeatedly poured into our ears" that the cathedral was in a position by no means safe from guerilla raids and was so solitary that provisions were difficult to obtain and the clerics had to go a long way to buy what was necessary, and consequently were hindered in no small degree in the performance of their devotions. For those reasons the Bishop "with much insistence of entreaties has craved that the seat be transferred to a place more suitable," the Holy Trinity Church beside Elgin. The personal character of the approach to the Pope has led to the inference that it was made by Bishop Bricius when he attended the Lateran Council at Rome in 1215. But, apart from the fact that Honorius did not become Pope till 1216, it will be observed that the Papal narrative speaks, not of the late bishop, but of the bishop alive at the time, and that in recording the consent of the King and the chapter to the change, it adds "as the said Bishop (i.e. the Bishop craving the change) asserts." Evidently, therefore, the bishop was Andrew de Moravia, who was app. in 1222 and consecrated in the following year, and must have visited Rome at the outset of his episcopate. On 13th April 1224 Pope Honorius made remit to the Bishop of Caithness, the Abbot of Kinloss, and the Dean of Ross, empowering them to make the change, if on the grounds of necessity and utility they saw fit; on 5th July of the same year Alexander II addressed a letter to these Papal mandatories, expressing his great desire that "there be effected the translation of the Episcopal Seat to that Place beside Elgin which we have given to the Bishop and Clergy of Moray for the building of that Church," and his further wish that it be done "in our time," and giving them mandate for, and asking them to take into consideration, the carrying out of the Papal remit; and on the 19th of the same month the Bishop of Caithness and the Dean of Ross met at Elgin, and on the grounds already stated, app. the said Church of the Holy Trinity beside Elgin to be the Cathedral of Moray and at the same time granted confirmation of the transfer in the church, with the Bishop of Moray presiding. Of the origin of the Holy Trinity Church then existing, nothing is really known. It may be inferred that Alexander II gave the site for the church with a view to the ultimate transference of the episcopal seat; and possibly the "church" at the time of the transference may have been the first portion of the cathedral. In any case the foundation stone of the cathedral was laid also on 19th July 1224, and the building was carried on by Bishop Andrew, and probably completed before his death in 1242. The cathedral was burned and mainly destroyed by the Wolf of Badenoch in 1390, and was rebuilt. On 14th Feb. 1567–8 the Priory Council ord. that the lead of the roof which “is for ane greit part be diverse personis thiftuously stowin and being taken away,” “be taken down and desponed upon for interteneing and sustentatioun men of weir and uther needful charges.” Of an opposite nature was the policy of the Privy Council on 8th July 1569, when beneficed men in the Diocese of Moray were charged to contribute for the repairing of the cathedral, “for mending the theking and reparating” the Church, “to the effect that the same may be a convenient place to conven the people for hering of the Word of God.” The proposal was not carried into effect. In the cathedral there were altars dedicated as follows—the Virgin Mary in the south aisle of the chancel; St Laurence; St Peter in the south aisle; St Paul in the south aisle; Holy Rood; St Katharine; St John; St James, called St James Chaplainry of Flens; St Columba; St Thomas the Martyr in the north aisle; St Martin; St Giles; St Anne; St Nicholas; St Andrew; St Ninian, called St Ninian’s Chaplainry of Flens; St Mary Magdalene; St Michael; St Duthac. On 16th May 1328 Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray, granted an annual rent of £23 6s. 8d. from the fermes of the Sheriffdom of Elgin to five Chaplains to celebrate for the souls of Robert I, his uncle, etc., in the “magnificent chapel” dedicated to St Thomas the Bishop and Martyr, which he had built in the churchyard on the south side of the cathedral. Described in 1456 as “in the cathedral,” and in 1502 as “within the same, the chapel” may have been incorporated in the main building some time after its foundation.—[*Reg. ALEXANDER WINCHESTER, had charge also of Pluscarden 1568.— 1566 [Comps. Sub Coll. of Thirds, Moray, etc.]

WILLIAM DOUGLAS was chaplain of the Altar of St Laurence in the cathedral, and one of the prebendaries. On 10th Sept. 1566 he was Clerk of Consistory, and on 12th Jan. 1578–9 he was app. clerk of the burgh for one year; in 1576 he was reader at Elgin and St Andrews, part of his duties being “to warne the parishioners to their examinations agane the Communion”; was still reader in 1607; he had a natural son, James, of whom a Kirk Session minute of 17th July 1594 records that he “has actit himself to be baneist gif evir he beis found at pastyme the tym of preaching or nit found ane common player.”—[Exts. from Recs. Kirk Sess. of Elgin, 8, 23, 344–7; Recs. of Elgin, i, 121–2, ii, 21, 47, 64.]

ROBERT LESLIE, reader in 1591, when it is narrated that “the minister and eldaris inhibits Robert Leslie, reader, that he nether marie nor bapteis without he haif the express commandment of the minister and eldaris”; on 15th July 1598 his attitude to baptism was again under review, when the Kirk Session commanded him to baptise the infant of John Innes, elder, notwithstanding the fact that said John was under sentence of excommunication for being "artt and part" in an act of murder; it would seem, therefore, that he was qualified to perform marriages and baptisms; still in office 11th March 1604, when there was brought against him the vague charge of having "raissit himself under the pulpit."—[Exts. from Recs. of Kirk Sess. of Elgin, 12; Recs. of Elgin, ii, 66, 122.]

GEORGE DOUGLAS, reader 24th 1616 Sept. 1616; evidently identical with George D., son of Archibald D., mason, Old Aberdeen, who was app. Master of the Song School and the Grammar School 9th Nov. 1600; had issue—Robert, bapt. 28th Feb. 1611; James, bapt. 22nd March 1612; Margaret, bapt. 15th Aug. 1613.—[Recs. of Elgin, ii, 398, 401.]

JOHN GUTHRIE, after his deposition, 1623 the Senior Charge remained vacant; later a supplication was pres. to Parliament by "the Minister and towne of Elgin, craving ane maintenance for two ministers and ane reider, they being now altogidder destitute"; and on 9th Sept. 1639 Parliament resolved that the supplication be recommended to His Majesty as proceeding from the General Assembly, but that there be no Act of Parliament regarding it.—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 595.]

DAVID MURRAY, reader 22nd May 1628 1628, when he ratified his promise of marriage to Janet Grant in the parish of Spynie, daugh. of the late Gregor G. in Gartinmore; also Master of the Music School.—[Recs. of Elgin, ii, 205.]

GILBERT ROSS, probably son of 1640 Oliver R., notar in Maybole, and Janet Graham. Marr. (2) Elizabeth, daugh. of Francis Napier, burgess of Edinburgh.—[Gen. Reg. Sas., liii, 64; Reg. of Inhibitions, i, 457, 9th March 1630; Edinburgh Burgess Roll, 4th July 1636.]

WILLIAM MURRAY, reader 12th 1641 Sept. 1641, held the vicarage and the vicar's lands; was also Master of the Music School; dem. office 2nd Aug. 1668.—[Recs. of Elgin, ii, 240, 405, 408.]

THOMAS INNES, reader 1667. Marr.
1667 Nicolas, probably daugh. of Thomas Craig, min. of Spynie, and had issue—Robert, bapt. 26th Nov. 1667.

ROBERT LANGLANDS, his son, 1696 George, apprenticed to Robert Elliot, surgeon, Edinburgh 13th July 1709.

ALEXANDER TOPP, his daugh., Margaret (marr. Thomas Blackie Park, Haddington); died 14th May 1934.

WILLIAM MOFFAT, died 17th Jan.
1894 1943; his widow, Frances Low, died 15th Oct. 1947.

JAMES MILLAR MOORHEAD
1916 MADILL, his wife, Margaret Helen Scott, died 14th Sept. 1928. Marr. (2) 4th Feb. 1931 Isabella Gordon, daugh. of Robert Stuart Christie, Manitoba.

SECOND CHARGE

ALEXANDER WINCHESTER, min., 1566 pres. to vicarage 26th Feb. 1567–8 on dem. of George Hepburn.—[Reg. Pres. Bene., i, 6.]

WILLIAM DOUGLAS, pres. to 1569 vicarage 24th March 1567–8 on assignation of George Hepburn, treasurer of Moray, and to vicarage 27th Nov. and 8th Dec. 1569, on resignation of Alexander Winchester.—[Reg. Pres. Bene., i, 7, 32.]

DAVID PHILP, on 14th Oct. 1622 the 1609 Kirk Session ord. that Mr David Philp "quhen he teitchis that he turn the glass quhen he goes to the pulpit, that the prayers, psalme, and preitching be all endit within the hour, under pain of 6/8."—[Recs. of Elgin, ii, 167.]

JOHN GORDON, he was dep. for (1) 1633 neglect of weekly sermon; (2) lack of discipline in Kirk Session; (3) often deserting his charge, particularly when "maid doctor at Aberdene," and, "as a man unsatled in his judgments," taking to the hills "in a gray playd and twewes," remaining there on one occasion for about eighteen days; (4) being scandalous, profane, and irreligious; (5) careless wandering in the country on the Sabbath days; (6) fighting in the High Street and open churchyard in Elgin with an Irish phisitiane, both of them wrestling "in dubbs and myres" until separated; (7) scandalous and unsound in doctrine; (8) cursing all that entered into the Covenant. On 4th April 1648 it was reported to the Synod that he encouraged malignants; and at the same meeting he confessed that he had exercised part of the ministerial function since his deposition. He was referred to the Commission, and on 3rd May of the same year the Synod recorded that the General Assembly had appointed the Presb. of Elgin to excommunicate him. It was further reported to the Synod on 2nd Sept. 1650 that he was frequenting the bounds of the Presb. of Aberlour and the "prime families theirin, abusing ministers with his tongue when he say them," and at "gentlemen's tables" blessing and giving thanks.—[Recs. of Synod of Moray, 30th April 1639.]

JOHN GORDON, fourth son of John G. of Craig; went to Portyone in 1633 Wales. Marr. Elizabeth, daugh. of Hon. Alexander Gordon of Strathaven; his second son, Alexander, died before 15th Dec. 1657; his daugh., Elizabeth (marr. George Gordon of Tewchines).

Macaulay, and has issue—Sheila Elizabeth Macaulay, born 11th Feb. 1926; Patricia Helen Gordon, born 4th Dec. 1930, died 24th Aug. 1946; Robert Graham, born 29th Dec. 1932, died 31st Jan. 1933; Ian Graham, born 4th April 1934; Kenneth Boath, born 10th Dec. 1938.

PLUSCARDINE

The Old Store which was situated a short distance east of the Lodge became on the erection of a Mission in the Glen, the place of worship known as the "Old Ha'." In 1821 Lord Fife fitted up the old parlour of the priory as a church and in 1843 he gave the use of it to the Free Church. Services continued to be held till about 1898, when the Marquess of Bute entered into possession.

In the Glen of Pluscarden there was a chapel dedicated to St Andrew and prior to 1230, the glen was called the Vale of St Andrew.

SPEYMOUTH, formerly DIPPLE

The church, commonly called the “Red Kirk,” was founded on 10th July 1732, near St Leonard’s Well at Stynie which mysteriously dried up many years ago. On 18th March 1746 Lord John Drummond of the Jacobite army came to the manse, which for a time became the rebels’ headquarters. The rebels retired on the approach of the Duke of Cumberland’s army and the Duke slept at the manse on the night of 12th April 1746.—[Session Record.]

A small house, called “The House of the Holy Ghost,” stood at the churchyard gate. Round it in the direction of the sun’s course the people carried the corpse at burial—a superstitious practice that was not abolished till the walls were razed to the ground.

By decret of 14th July 1731 the Commissioners for Plantation of Kirks decreed that the parishes of Dipple and Essil and the barony of Garmouth be united into one parish under the name of Speymouth. This was in accordance with a suggestion of the Synod of Moray on 22nd April 1730, the min. of Urquhart and the min. of Essil each having refused any relation to the people of Garmouth.—[Recs. Presby. of Elgin, 1st Feb. 1732; Recs. Synod of Moray, 22nd April 1730; Shaw’s Province of Moray, iii, 385.]

The Church of the Holy Trinity of Spynie was decerned the Cathedral of the Bishopric in 1207, and continued so till 1224. Whether that was the church that existed at and after the Reformation has not been determined. Upon the latter church repairs were carried out in 1708, especially in the case of the south wall and the west half of the roof; and attention was again given to the faulty state of the building in 1724, when it was estimated that the cost of necessary repairs would be £488 12s. Little appears to have been done; and on 4th Nov. 1731 it was reported to the Presb. that the church was ruinous, the east gable being rent and falling from the side walls, and the larger part of the roof insufficient. From this emerged the question as to whether the building should be repaired; and after full consideration the Presb. on 11th July 1732 agreed to the transportation of both church and manse “which are at present very inconveniently situate, the said Church lying in a distant corner of the parish very far from the body of the people and the best inhabited places of the parish”; transportation “would tend much to the good of souls in the parish.” Eventually agreement was made between the heritors and the min. for the building of a new church upon “a piece of barren moor at the Mains of Quarrywood,” which was also to be the site of the new manse. The min. was also “to get a piece of ground from Braco sufficient to be a yard.” It was further agreed that the new church was to be of the same dimensions as the old church, with the addition of an aisle 20 ft. square. Later it was found that to that stipulation there was close approximation. Whereas the old church, on measurement taken prior to its removal, was 66 ft. long, 21½ ft. broad, with walls 12 ft. high, the new church was 67 ft. long, 22 ft. broad, with walls 12 ft. high, besides the aisle on the north side 20 ft. square. The new church was founded on 10th March 1735, and on 13th April 1736 it was reported to the Presb. that it was “nearly finished.” The division of the church among the heritors was made on 4th May 1736, when it was further decreed that “for the accommodation of servants and strangers a Common Loft be built in the west end of the Church.” The east end was occupied by the Westfield Loft. On 28th Aug. 1739 the church was declared sufficient by the Presb. The belfry, built in 1723, and two windows, one of them arched, were removed from the old church and incorporated with the new; and on the south wall there is a dial with the date 1740 and the inscription, Ion Dugal fecit, the said John being a son of the contemporary min. It was in 1740 that the church was actually completed, though apparently it was used for worship prior to that date. Extensive repairs were begun in 1803 and completed on 3rd Dec. 1805—two windows, one on each side of the pulpit, were enlarged; a door in the aisle was built up, and a door in the east gable was opened up, with a window above the same; outside the latter door there was built a semicircular portico with north and south doors; the church was completely paved and reseated; there was provided a new pulpit, a precentor’s desk, and a baptistry “as in St Andrew’s Church”; the Westfield loft was repaired, and the common loft was renewed, a stair being furnished in the south-west corner. To a petition of the Presb. 10th Oct. 1734 that the church and manse be called New Spynie, effect was given by the Commissioners before 11th March 1735. The Palace or Castle of Spynie, the residence of the Bishops, was built by John Innes, Bishop 1407-14. Situated a few hundred yards south of Inchbroom House there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary, called the Chapel of the Island of Spynie, Our Lady Chapel of the Inch. Apparently it is this chapel to which reference occurs on 28th July 1296, when William le Franseys was sued by Thomas the Clerk of Elgin for being found in possession of 476 lamb-skins which the plaintiff had deposited in the "Church of St Mary of Inch for security against robbers."

At Kintrae farms there was situated the Church of Kintrae, called in a Charter of Bricuis de Douglas, Bishop of Moray 1203-22, "the old Church of Kyntra." For the purpose of augmenting the prebend of Spynie, founded by Bishop Bricuis, his predecessor, Andrew de Moravia, Bishop of Moray 1222-42, joined the Church of Kintrae to the Church of Spynie. All vestiges of the church and churchyard have disappeared, but the site may still be traced. In at least part of the period 1187-1203, Lambert, Chaplain of King William the Lion, was parson of Kintrae. There was a chapel at Inchbrock between Wester Kintrae and Westfield House.—[Reg. Epis. Moraviende, 39, 94, 273, 359; Mackintosh's Pilgrimages in Moray; Recs. of Presb. of Elgin, 29th July 1708, 10th Sept. 1724, 4th Nov. 1731, 11th July 1732, 1st Oct. 1734, 11th March 1735, 13th April 1736, 4th May 1736, 28th Aug. 1739, 21st April 1803, 8th Jan., 3rd Dec. 1805; *Cal. of Docs.  1674 Jean, bapt. 17th Aug. 1677 (marr.
 (1) George Chalmers of Linkwood, and (2) before 1707, William Cumyng of Craigmill); evidently identical with Bishop Falconer, resident at Slains cir. 1716–20, and exercised at least some of the functions of a bishop, assuming “a prelatical authority derived from the exauctorated prelates.”—[G. R. Horn, 8th Feb. 1707; Justiciary Records, 1717–21, May 1721.] (See Kearn, Alexander Law.)

ALEXANDER FORBES, was twice 1692 marr. and had issue by first marriage, Alexander and James, and by second, Robert, Jean, Lillias and Agnes.
 In Oct. 1706 he intimated his demission to the Synod, “he being habitually valetu-dinarie, being much brokn with gravel, gout, and several other distempers”; but on a letter from the parishioners objecting to the acceptance of the demission because of “the serious effects that would follow to the parish,” the Synod resolved to give him all help and encouragement, and, delaying consideration of the case till next Synod, app. supplies for Dyke for half a year.
 Later, steps seem to have been taken to secure full assistance for Mr Forbes, for on 2nd May 1707 Mr John Cumming, “now under a call to Dyke,” was rebuked by the Synod, who at the same time directed a letter to be sent to the Presb. of Fordoun, for having given “great offence by travelling upon the Lord’s Day from Breichen to Fettercairn before sermon and having come in about the end of the lectur and heard both sermons, by crossing the Kairn immediately after sermon,” and because “both ministers and people in the Presbytery of Fordoun were offended by this his practice when he did come north.”

FORRES

The foundation stone of the present church was laid by Lady Strathcona on 17th Aug. 1904, and the church was opened for worship on 4th March 1906.

In 1305 Adam le Chapelayn of Moraf (Moray) asked 6 merks for serving "a Chapel built in honour of St Laurence in the county of Forros (Forres), of the alms of King Alexander, for the soul of Margaret, late Queen of Scotland." He was to receive his "stipend" on exhibition of his charter.—[Cal. of Docs. Rel. to Scotland, iv, 375.]

Forres was the seat of the Archdeacon of Moray Cathedral. The church, along with the Archdeacon's manse, many other houses, and the burgh records and charters, were burned by the Wolf of Badenoch in May 1390. The present church, built in 1905, took the place of a church erected in 1777. The Chapel of St Leonard was situated at Chapelton, between Rafford and Forres; and the chapel at Logie was dedicated to St John. There was in the parish a chapel dedicated to St Duthac.—

KINLOSS

It appears that for some time prior to the middle of the 17th century worship of the Church of Scotland was conducted in the chapter house of the abbey. At that period various parts of the abbey fabric were removed to Inverness to provide material for the construction of a fort there by Cromwell; and it was then proposed that the stones of the chapter house should be utilised for the same purpose. Protest was made by the Presb. of Elgin with a view to saving the chapter house, especially in view of the fact that "it is agreed that there shall be a Church and a special Parish for Kinloss and the people thereof who are now almost without the means of the Gospel." In reply Alexander Brodie of Lethens, who had acquired Kinloss, stated that the abbey stones had been removed against his will, and also offered to build a church and manse with the money that he had received for the stones, and also to provide a sufficient glebe from the lands of Kinloss. Negotiations followed in 1650–3, and eventually on 20th July 1653 agreement was reached on the basis of the offer of Alexander Brodie, with this reservation by him, that the church should not be built in the precincts of the abbey. The place chosen for the church was “William Kere’s house, the kill yard, and remanent ground yrabout from the high gate to ye burne, and that the walls of the old Kill (Skene’s Kiln) be repaired and enlarged and made wider, and the middle wall removed to ye effect the kirk may be built yrupon.” A churchyard was provided on “the commontie north of the Abbey precincts”; and the glebe was designed in part from the lands called George Yard. The church was ready for worship before 1657; and on 6th May of that year the parish was erected by the Presb. of Elgin, confirmation by Parliament being forthcoming on 15th March 1661. The present church was built in 1765. At Laurenston, Burgie, there was a Fair of St Lawrence which was ultimately removed to Forres.

The Abbey was founded on 20th June 1151 (the Chronicle of Melrose, p. 74, gives the date 21st May 1150). To it belonged the Churches of Avoch and Ellon, and the Hospital of St John the Baptist, of Hebuiscden, in the parish of Loth. Abbot Thomas Crystall, who died 30th Dec. 1535, repaired the Chapel of St Jerome, and erected in it Altars of St Jerome, St Anne, and of the dead.—[Recs. of Presby. of Elgin, 27th Dec. 1649, 17th, 31st Jan. 1650, 3rd, 10th, 17th Feb., 2nd March, 8th, 20th July 1653; *Acts Scott. RAFFORD

Among the eight canonries erected by Bishop Bricius when he founded Elgin Cathedral (1208–15) was that of Cantor with a davoch of land and the Church of Alves and the Church of Rafford. On 12th May 1226 twelve new canonries were added, including a prebend from the Church of A—— for a succentor, the first being Lembertas. In addition to Rafford, the succentor had the Church of Ardclach.

In note on vi, 427, delete lines 5, 6 and 7.

When the parish of Kinloss was erected in 1657 from portions of Rafford, Alves and Forres, Rafford received the small parish of Altyre in compensation.

At the Reformation Alexander Dunbar the succentor had just been appointed Dean as well, both of which offices he retained for some thirty years when he pres. his second son Robert to the former, but his elder son Thomas to the latter. Then followed some crooked transactions in the teinds to the financial benefit of the family.

Eren, Erin or Eyrn seems to have been the old name of Auldearn. To Richard, Bishop of Moray 1187–1203, King William the Lion granted a confirmation charter of the Church of Eren with the Chapel of Rath and the Chapel of Moythus, and also of the Church of Eren with the Chapel of Innernarn (Nairn), the Chapel of Rathe and the Chapel of Morchus. The charter of Bricius, Bishop of Moray 1203–21, founding the canonry of Spynie, included the Church of Eryn with the Chapel of Innernarren. At Auldearn there was land called St Columba's acre.—[*Reg. Epis.

CAWDOR

The old church was situated at Barevan, for Barr Eibhinn, now contracted into B'reibhinn in Gaelic, as in "the Church of Breven," which occurs in 1665. In 1275 the name is "the Church of Ewen." The patron saint is Aibind, daugh. of Mane, of Cluain Draighech, and one of the holy maidens subject to Brigit. Her name means "delightful," and would now be Eibhinn or Aoibhinn. About 1619 the church gave place to a church erected in a more central position by Sir John Campbell of Cawdor. Attached to the residence of the Thanes of Cawdor was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary; and when the castle was built, there was included a chapel to which Sir Walter de Tarbett was inducted chaplain in 1467. An old bell, a relic of the chapel, is at Cawdor Castle. By Bull of 15th Dec. 1225 Pope Honorius III confirmed to Scone Abbey the Church of Evein (Cawdor), with its chapels. There is no further reference to the grant.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 271; Shaw's Moray, ii, 274, 277; Book of Scone, 67.]

INVERNESS

The church, along with $\frac{1}{2}$ caracute of land and chapels, was granted to Arbroath Abbey cir. 1189–99 by King William the Lion in honour of the Virgin Mary. There were in the church altars dedicated respectively to the Virgin Mary, apparently in addition to the High Altar, and to the Holy Rood, St John the Baptist, St Michael and St Catherine. In the Chapel of the Virgin Mary in Inverness David II on 26th Oct. 1359 founded a chaplain, the endowment being a piece of land de la Cras—11 acres beside the lands of the Virgin Mary Parish Church; and the same monarch confirmed to the chapel a donation by John Scott, burgess of Inverness. On 16th April 1435–6 Pope Eugenius IV granted relaxation of penance to penitents who on the Feast of St Ann visited and gave alms for the repair, etc., of the Church of Blackfriars, Inverness, “in which the body of Alexander, Earl of Mar and Garioch, was buried on said Feast, and which has been greatly deformed, especially on account of wars, and is going to ruin.”—[Reg. of Arbroath, 3–8, 24; Reg. Great Seal, i, App. ii, 1327, iv, 2518, 2760, v, 999; Reg. of Moray, 309–10; Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, viii, 681.]

KIRK HILL

The old name of the parish was Dulbachlach, Dulbatelach, Dulbachlack, cir. 1203. In 1210–12 an agreement was made between John Bisset of Lovat and Bricuis, Bishop of Moray, whereby the church at Dunbachlach was to be transported to Fingasch, to the place which is called Wardlaw, in the Gaelic, Balabrach, and after transportation to become a mensal church of Moray. The church at Dunbachlach is also said to have been dedicated to St Mauritius, in whose honour a fair was held annually at Dunbachlach on 11th November. This would point to St Mauritius being St Machar, whose day was 12th Nov. By Hugh, Lord Lovat, the fair was removed in Nov. 1641 to Beaully, where under the name of Fail Mhauri it was also held annually on 11th Nov. The church at Wardlaw was abandoned in 1790, when the present church was built on a site “removed 2 gunshots from Mary Hill.” On the site of the former church in the churchyard is the mausoleum of the Lord Lovats, which is itself supposed to be the chancel of the medieval church. When the Priory of Beaully was demolished, Lord Simon Fraser of Lovat transferred the large bell, Clag M’Mannachi, to Kirkhill, where it was erected on a wooden frame on a hill south-east of the church, called Tome Chluig, Bell Hill. As it was too big for an ordinary steeple, it was sent by Lord Hugh Fraser of Lovat to Holland, where it was recast by Michael Burgerhouse in 1634, and made in a dimension for the kirk steeple, in which it was hung in the following year. At the same time a large hand-bell was also made from the material.—[Reg. of Moray, 15–16; Wardlaw MS., Pref., xv, xvi, 61, 159, 265–6n, 275; Pollock’s Beaully and District, 25; Watson’s Celtic Place Names, 267.]

EDWIN JAMES BRECHIN, son of 1914 James Brodie B., bookbinder, Dundee; dem. 14th Oct. 1941; died at Monifieth 2nd June 1942.

CROMARTY

The Chapel of St Duthac was situated at Navitie, which was Church land high on the ridge of the South Souter. This is of interest when it is remembered that Nativity denotes an institution, originally pagan, taken over by the Christian Church. There was an old local belief that the final judgment is destined to take place on the Moor of Navitie. St Michael's Chapel was at the same place. The Chapel of St Regulus was founded and endowed by the inhabitants of the burgh. All three chapels were within the liberties of the burgh; and they were granted to the burgh by Crown Charter of 4th July 1593, ratified by Act of Parliament in 1641. There were two fairs, St Norman's Fair on 8th March, and St Regulus' Fair on 14th March.—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 538b; Reg. Great Seal, v, 2350; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 249.]

WALTER SCOTT, his widow, Mary 1876 Ann Brydon, died 11th May 1932. She was in Lucknow with her parents during the siege during the Indian Mutiny.

GORDON MOORE, trans. to Old 1917 Church, Wick, 28th Sept. 1932; trans. to Gask 12th May 1948. Addl. issue—Mary Elsie, born 4th May 1926.

FORTROSE

On 15th June 1572 James VI made to William, Lord Ruthven, a gift of the lead of the roof of the cathedral which, by the forfeiture of the bishop, was in the King's hands "throw being the said Cathedral kirk na paroch kirk bot ane monasterie to sustaine ydill bellies."—[Reg. Sec. Seal, xl, 106.]

WILLIAM HAY, reader 1575; was son 1569 of Robert Hay; was one of the vicars of the cathedral 2nd April 1559, and designated also chaplain of the cathedral; still in office as reader 2nd Oct. 1594.— [Reg. Great Seal, vi, 168, 563, 716, 738, 1992.] (See Killearnan.)

KILLEARNAN

In 1275 the parish is designated Edorador or Ederdover. The patron saint, Jurnan, seems to be Itarnan or Itharnan, who died among the Picts in 669, and is said to have been buried at Cairn Jurnein, the stone circles on the summit of Mull-Buie, in the parish, which are regarded as bearing his name. The church, which was "in the form of a cross," seems to have been partly rebuilt about 1690–5. It was thatched with heather, but about 1750 it was "raised in the walls, slated, and seated; but in opposition to the then minister's wishes, the Heritors continued its former Popish form."—[Theiner's Vet. Mon., 69; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 32.]

SIR JOHN SAIDSARF, perpetual vicar, 1559 2nd April 1559; died probably after 6th May 1583.—[Reg. Great Seal, vi, 563.]

JOHN MACKENZIE, described in 1717 as "late Meeting-House keeper at 1700 Killearnan"; helped the rebels at Urray Muir, Dec. 1715.—[Justiciary Recs.]

JOHN KENNEDY, his daugh., Margaret Jess (marr. Hugh Mackay, min.
1814 of Milton, Glasgow).

ANGUS JOHN NORMAN MAC-DONALD, D.D. (Glasgow, 18th 1890 June 1930); died 28th Nov. 1932; his widow, Elizabeth Hector, died 8th Dec.
1937; his sons—James William, died New York 17th Aug. 1932; Randal Aeneas Hector, died Los Angeles 29th Dec. 1935;

1568 1568, also vicar of Suddie (q.v.).

JOHN REID, pres. to vicarage 10th March 1568–9 on death of Sir David 1568 Brachane.—[Reg. Pres. Bene., i, 18.]

ANDREW CROMBIE, pres. to vicarage 28th May 1592 on death of John 1586 Reid.—[Reg. Sec. Sig., lxiii, 270.]

JOHN MACKENZIE, M.A.; it was reported to the Presb. on 25th Sept.
1695 1695 that he had intruded on the parish, and had been summoned to the diet on that day; he failed to appear, and accordingly the Presb. discharged him from preaching here, and appointed Mr William Stewart to preach in the church and intimate the sentence. On 8th April 1696 Mr Stewart reported that he went to Kilmuir Wester, finding no access to the kirk, preached in a barn, where but few came to hear him, as the intruder had obstructed the people; he intimated the Presbytery's prohibition, but the intruder still continued to preach; the Presb. resolved to apply to the Laird of Balnagowan as Sheriff-Principal of the Province to put the law against intruders into execution against the said John Mackenzie.—[Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, p. 10.]

HUGH CAMPBELL, eldest son of Alexander C. of Torrich.—[Elgin

RESOLIS, or KIRKMICHAEL

The Church of Kirkmichael was situated at the east end of the parish near the seashore. St Martin's farmhouse, on the road from Conon Bridge to Cromarty, marks the site of the old Church and Churchyard of Cullicudden, dedicated to St Martin of Tours. Locally the parish was called Sgire Mhartiunn, "the parish of Martin." The Church of Culycudin of "Cultudyn" occurs in a reckoning of teinds 24th May 1275. Before 10th March 1641 the church gave place to the church near the seashore, now a ruin, for on that date Parliament transferred to Inverness "the Fair callit Martimes fair qlke was holdine of old at St Mairtaines kirk in Ardnannoch now Lyand waist."—[Acts Scott. Parl., v, 540b,

ROSEMARKIE

Rosemarkie Church was dedicated to St Moluag and by Cuiritan the dedication was changed to St Peter. The site of Rosemarkie Church is still called Kilcurdy "Curitan's Church." On 15th June 1572 James VI made to William, Lord Ruthven, a gift of the lead of the roof of the Cathedral of Ross, in the King's hands, "throw being the said cathedral kirk na paroch kirk bot ane monasterie to sustene ydill bellies," and through forfeiture of the bishop.—

PRESBYTERY OF DINGWALL

ALNESS

The church was built in 1780. Near the head of Loch Moire, Mary's Loch, on its north-west side, there was a chapel with burying-ground, dedicated to the Virgin Mary. At the place there is a spring, Tobar Mhoire, "Mary's Well," with which healing virtues were formerly associated. At Culcraggie there was a chapel, mentioned in 1435-6. North of the farmhouse of Assynt, Novar, there is a small rectangular burying-ground called Cladh Churadain, "the graveyard of Cuiritan" (Boniface), indicating that at that place there may have been a chapel dedicated to that saint.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, viii, 532-3; Book of Ross, 50-1; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 315; Macfarlane's Geog. Colls., i, 212-13.]

CONTIN

Apparently about 1477 a force of the Macdonalds, led by Gillespick, brother-natural of John of Illa, invaded Ross, laid waste Kintail and Strathconon, burned Contin Church and the women and children and priest who had fled to the church for sanctuary. At the west end of Loch Garve is the farm of Killin, Cill Fhinn, "the Church of St Fion," the site, no doubt, of the old Church of Strathgarve, dedicated to St Fion. Loch Garve is still called Loch Maol-Fhinn, "Fionn's servant's loch." There is a Gaelic saying that this church was one of the oldest in Scotland—"Cill-Phinn's, Cill-Duinn's, Cill Donain, na tri cilltean is sine an Albainn," Killin, Kildun, Kildonan, the three oldest cells (chapels) in Scotland.—[Fraser's Earls of Cromarty, ii, 478; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 320; The Book of Ross, 68.]

DINGWALL

The church was united to the Priory of Urquhart before 1455. In the churchyard to the north of the church there is an enclosure called St Clement's Aisle, which in part is the remains of the old Church of St Clement. The former parish church was burned in 1733; and the present church was erected in 1801. In Dingwall there were chapel lands designated respectively St Catherine and St Mary; and there were also a Chaplainry of the Trinity and Chaplainry of St Michael "founded in the burgh." The Chapel of St Laurence was in the Castle. On 2nd Nov. 1547 Sir Andrew Dow was presented to the chaplainry in succession to the late Sir Alexander Roresoun.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, xi,

FODDERTY

The churchyard of Fodderty, containing the site of the old church, lies on the south side of the road to Dingwall. In 1807 the church was rebuilt on a site west of the churchyard, and it was enlarged in 1842. About 1901 steps were taken to secure the transportation of the parish church to the church which had been built at the west end of Strathpeffer, and on 7th March 1902 the Court granted authority to the trustees of Strathpeffer Church, if decree of transportation were granted, to convey the church to the heritors as the parish church; and on 4th July of the same year decree of transportation was obtained. By the heritors the old church was conveyed to the foresaid trustees in 1904 for use as a church. Later, that idea was abandoned, and the church was sold and was converted into a dwelling-house—a purpose which it still fulfils. The Chapel of Innis Ruairidh (Inchrory), dedicated to the Virgin Mary, was situated on the north side of the road opposite Fodderty churchyard. On 13th Feb. 1348–9 Adam de Urquhart granted to a chaplain in the chapel certain lands and annual rents with manse, etc. Adjacent to the site of the chapel is Croitán Teampuill, “Temple Croft,” probably a pagan dedication, where in 1830 stone coffins, urns, and relics of the Bronze Age were discovered. At the foot of the east shoulder of Knockfarrel lies the Well of St John the Baptist, indicating possibly that there had existed at that spot a chapel dedicated to that saint. The well was a place of pilgrimage for the sick and insane in search of cure. In the Strath of Peffery is Dabhach Mo-Luag, Dochmaluag, “My Luag’s davoch,” indicating St Moluag. The Church of Kinettas was situated in the churchyard of that name west of Strathpeffer.—[Recs. of Fodderty Heritors; Book of Ross, 37–8, 43; Scott’s Pictish Nation, 237; Watson’s Celtic Place Names, 293; The Earls of Cromarty, ii, 319–20].

KILTEARN and LEMLAIR

The Church of Kiltearn may have been dedicated to St Tighernach, who died in 506. The Church of Lemlair was situated in the old churchyard by the seaside near Waterloo, east of Dingwall. The churchyard is designated Cladh Mo-Bhrigh, the graveyard of Brigit, and that renders it doubtful whether St Mary superseded St Brigit as patron saint. In Lemlair Church, it is said, the Presbyterian doctrines during the Reformation were first taught in the north. The present parish church, on the right bank of the Skiach close to the shore, was built in 1790–1. A short distance from the old Churchyard of Lemlair in the direction of Dingwall, the railway passes through a deep cutting called Mountrich, which was the site of the Chapel of Kilchoan, Cill Chomhghain, the saint being Comgan, said to have been the brother of Kentigerna, of the 8th century, daugh. of Cellach Cualann of Leinster. The Chapel at Balconie was dedicated to St Monan, probably Moinenn, who was Bishop of Brendan's Monastery at Clonfert and died in 572.—[*Reg. Pres. LEMLAIR

The earlier saint is St Brig, Brigh. There were several saints of this name. Brig, daugh. of Amalgad, of Achad Aeda, and Brig, daugh. of Fergus, of Cell Brigi, were among the holy maidens who were subject to Brig. The name of the old churchyard of the church, by the seaside near Waterloo, is called Cladh Mo-Brigh.—[Watson's Celtic Place Names, 312.]

URQUHART

The old name of the parish of Urquhart, or Ferintosh, was Logiebride, a designation arising from a chapel at Conon, which was dedicated to St Bride. The church was rebuilt in 1795. At what is now called Logie-side on the banks of the Conon, about 300 yards north-west of Conon House, there is an old graveyard called St Bride or St Brigit, in which there was a chapel dedicated to that saint. Hence arises "Logiebride," associated of old with the designation of the parish. The teinds of "Urquhart and Logiebride" are mentioned in a letter of Pope Alexander IV to the Bishop of Ross on 9th Feb. 1256-7, and "the Church of Logiebride" occurs in a reckoning of teinds of 24th May 1575. Allt Brighde. "St Bride's Burn," is near Conon House.—[Theiner's Vet. Mon., 69, 112; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 275; The Book of Ross, 4.]

There was a chapel with graveyard at Conon House. The name of the church and parish was Inneraferyn, occurring also as Inverferan, Inveraferan, Inverasfran, Euraferayne, Euraferane, between 1256 and 1440. On 9th Feb. 1256 and 11th June 1257 the designation is the Succentory Church of Bron; and in 1257 it appears as Inverasfran and Lochbren Church. The designation Urray was in use not later than 3rd Feb. 1545-6. The Church was dedicated to St Madidus. The present church was built about 1780-1.—[Cal. Papal Regs., Letters, ix, 426, 445; *Reg. PRESBYTERY OF TAIN

CROICK

1828 ROBERT WILLIAMSON, in sustaining his presentation on 19th June 1828, the Presb. declared "that the Presbytery cannot, by so doing, be considered as in the least approving of the Act on which the presentation is founded"; and on 25th Sept. 1828 he was ord. and adm. to be min. of the Government Church of Croick, in the parish of Kincardine, as assistant to the parish min.—[Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 343.]

EDDERTON

On 17th March 1841 the Presb. declared the church totally unsuitable for worship and incapable of repair, and ord. a new church to be built, the site selected being on the moor of Corrieblair, south-west of the manse. The church was completed in Oct. 1842.

FEARN

At Hilton of Cadboll there was a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Beside it was a sculptured cross-slab that some time ago was removed to Invergordon Castle. After the collapse of the roof of the church on 10th Oct. 1742, the Presb. after giving full consideration to the condition of the buildings resolved on 23rd March 1743 not to repair the roofless church but to build in the cloister-yard a new church 75 ft. long and 20 ft. broad (inside measurements), with a slated roof. Delay ensued; but ultimately building proceeded in 1746, and on 12th Nov. of that year the Presb. met at Fearn, took over the new church, and declared it to be the church of the parish. The church had a short period of existence, for at a meeting on 12th Oct. 1771 the heritors, on the ground that the church was in a "ruinous condition," deliberated as to rebuilding it or repairing the old abbey, and ultimately approved of a plan by Captain Ross of Balnagown, one of the heritors, by which he undertook, if the heritors paid him £200 stg., to repair the abbey church, and have it sufficiently finished by 1st Nov. 1773. Again there was delay, but on 12th Oct. 1775 the church was ready for occupation. The total cost was £386 14s. 9½d.; and in addition Captain Ross met the cost of repairing the part of the fabric called the "Ross Aisle" at an outlay of £38 15s. The abbey church again became the parish church, and the "new church" was completely demolished. — [Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 165–73, 262–3, 276.]

KENNETH MACKENZIE, on 9th 1689 June 1697 he craved the Presb. that in regard his persuasion was now Presbyterian, the Presb. would be pleased to revise his processes, or refer him to the Superior Judicatories, or allow him themselves the exercise of his ministry. The Presb., while satisfied that he was reformed in principles and practices, recorded their inability to act as craved, because the Presb. which deposed him was an associate Presb. of brethren from Moray, Ross and Sutherland, of which there were none among them except Mr Denune, and besides, Mr Mackenzie in his process had appealed to the first lawful General Assembly. A further petition to be reponed was rejected by the Presb. 25th May 1698.—[Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 11–12, 18.]

LOGIE-EASTER

In 1763 the min. reported to the Presb. that the church "has for many years been in a most ruinous condition; that the timber of the roof was rotten, and the heather thatch did not hold out a drop of rain; the walls were out of plumb, and there was not a pane of glass in any of the windows." The Presb. resolved to take immediate steps to deal with the matter; and on 4th June 1764 John Ross of Balnagowan, one of the heritors, sent a letter to the Presb. containing an offer to provide a site for a new church on an eminence to the east of the manse on his lands of Logie, as the situation of the existing church was difficult of access. The matter was delayed in the hands of the heritors, some of whom, two years later, proposed that Logie-Easter be annexed to Fearn and Kilmuir-Easter. The proposal was rejected by the Presb. on 2nd April 1766; and early in the following year, on representation by the heritors, the Presb. approved of a site for the new church on an eminence east of the manse. In 1778, in connection with an excambion by which Captain John Ross of Balnagowan acquired the manse and glebe in return for an equivalent glebe at the place of Pitmaditty and a new manse built by him at the Chapel-Hill there, "an acre of ground in the Chapel-Hill was proposed to be set apart for a Church and Churchyard in case the Church shall be brought thither." On 13th April 1815 the Presb. acceded to a crave of the min. that a new church should be built at Chapel-Hill, and on 11th Feb. 1818 it agreed to a plan for a new church there at an estimated cost of £1076 stg., which the heritors, "after much deliberation and mature consideration," had resolved to build. The ruins of the first of the three churches just enumerated are situated in the old graveyard called Lagaidh, hence Logie, near Marybank farmhouse on the Balnagowan river; and the ruins of the second are also marked farther east on the O.S. Map.—[Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 247, 248, 254, 278–80, 330, 332; Book of Ross, 56.]

ROSSKEEN and NONEKILL

Originally there were two parishes; and in a reckoning of teinds of 24th May 1275 the Church of Nevoth (Newnakle, Nonakiln) and the Church of Rosskevene appear separately. At or soon after the Reformation the parish is called Rosskeen and Newnakle. At Newnakle, Nonakiln, Nao'na Cille for Neimhead na Cille, "the nemed of the Church," nemed being an old sacred place taken over by the church, there is a burying-ground with the ruins of the parish Church of Newnakle, which fell in 1714. Attached to the church there appears to have been a large area of land which constituted at one time a sacred pagan sanctuary, including Dalnavie, Dail Neimhidh, "the Dale of the Church land," Inchnavie, Innis Neimhidh, "the Haugh of the Church land," Cnoc Navie, Cnoc Neimhidh, "the Hill of the Church Land," and the estate of Newmore, Neo'Mhor "the big or large Nemed." Near Dal Neich, west of Cnoc Navie, there was a small chapel. At a Presb. visitation on 15th July 1719 the min. reported that he had two churches, Rosskeen and Nonekill, the latter ruinous, the former in fairly good condition, only the thatch stood in need of repair. In 1832 the present church at Rosskeen was built "on a piece of ground contiguous to and closely connected with the Churchyard," and occupied early in 1833. On 30th Sept. 1824 it was arranged that the glebe and churchyard grass at Nonekill be given in excambion for land contiguous to the glebe at Rosskeen. The Presb. agreed to the excambion on 1st Feb. 1859, and the matter was finally settled in March 1869. The church at Nonekill was dedicated to St Ninian, and near the churchyard are St Ninian's Well and St Ninian's Field.—[Theiner's Vet. Mon., 112; *Reg. Pres. TAIN

In addition to the Church of St Duthac, built in 1471, and made collegiate ten years later, there were the Chapel of St Duthac in the churchyard, and the Chapel of St Duthac. The latter chapel, reputed as marking the birthplace of St Duthac, stood on the sandy beach north of the town, where, it is said, the town itself was at first situated. This chapel appears to have been the original Church of St Duthac. It was a famous place of sanctuary. Thither in 1307 the Queen of Robert the Bruce and their daugh. fled for safety from Kil-drummy Castle, only to be seized by the Earl of Ross, who cared nought for religious scruples, and delivered by him to the English. Thither also, about 120 years later, came for security Mowat of Freswick and his followers, who had suffered defeat at the hands of his foe, McNiell of Creich, and his band. The latter were in close pursuit, and at the sanctuary slew Mowat and his men, and gave the chapel to the flames. It is uncertain when the chapel was restored; but, at any rate, James IV made various offerings to the church and each of the two chapels, including in Nov. 1501, 5s. "to the hermit of the Chapel of St Duthos." By command of the same monarch a silver relique of St Duthac was made in 1503-4 and sent from Edinburgh to Dunfermline and thence to Tain; on the same order on 3rd Aug. 1506 there was given "xxxii unce and iii quarters to be ane relique of Sanct Dutho"; and again on the king's command in 1511 there was delivered to "John Aitkin, goldsmith, to be ane relique to Sanct Dutho, ane of the auld silvir platis brokin, contenand xxxiii unce and quartair unce." In 1535 it is recorded that there was delivered to James V "ane relict of Sanct Dutho set in Silver weyand xxxvi unce iii grote wecht." Cosmo Innes described the Church of St Duthac as consisting of a chancel and nave, a ruinous chapel at the east send of the chancel, a south porch, a detached tower in the middle of the town, and a detached chapel a little south of the former chapel. The detached chapel was probably the chapel of St Duthac in the churchyard. The church ceased to be used for worship in 1815, when a new parish church was built. About 1790 the remains of a small chapel were still to be seen near Lochsline three miles from Tain. In modern times at least St Mary's Well was covered at high water.

On a petition from the min., the Presb. on 28th Nov. 1813 gave consideration to the question of a new church as distinct from enlarging the old church, which was "highly uncomfortable and by far too small to accommodate the parishioners." The old church had been repaired in 1788. There followed considerable negotiations with the heritors and magistrates, and eventually agreement was reached on the basis of a new church on a site at the east end of the town at a cost of £2849 9s. 6d.

inclusive of ground and enclosing the same. On 3rd Aug. 1814 the completed church was accepted by the Presb. At a meeting of Presb. on 31st Oct. 1838 the min. "spoke of getting the old Church repaired, with a view to having it erected into a preaching station in the first instance, and then in the hope of having it erected into a parish"; he further stated that "the heritors have all agreed to make said old Church over to the Kirk Session for said purpose, and that a draft of the Deed of Conveyance was being made out." The Presb. gave approval and made remit to the min. to carry out further procedure. The church was acquired by the Guildry Trust formed by a number of local gentlemen, and was restored in 1871 to constitute St Duthus (Duthac) Memorial Church. In the collegiate church there was a Chapel of the Dead.—[Lord High Treasurer's Accs., ii, 125, 265-8, iii, 81, 280, iv, 40, 533, vi, 248; Origines Parochiales Scotiae, 426 (q.v.), 416, for full account of the provostry; Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 317-23, 326-7, 371-2; *Reg. For various reasons the Presb. declined to entertain the protest.—[Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 32-3.]

The Chapel of St Finn Barr, Chapel Barr, was built, 1486–1516, by Thomas McCulloch, Abbot of Fearn. Until 1707 or later there was a vault, 30 feet long, said to have been built as a church by St Columba (Colman?). On the coast near the old Castle of Tarbat or Ballone there was a chapel known as Teampul Eraich, and near it was Tobair Mhuir Well (Mary's Well). The old church seems to have been rebuilt about 1628. A new church was erected in 1756.—[Origines Parochiales Scotiae, ii, (2), 439.]

KILDONAN

By Bull of Pope Honorius III, 15th Dec. 1225, the Church of Kildonan with its chapels and lands was confirmed to the Abbey of Scone. In 1332 the church was set in feu by the abbey to David Lytil and his brother, Robert, of Sutherland, who were held bound to build the church with stones and lime through 4 merks allocated, and to meet the ordinary burdens falling upon the church. When the church was made a prebend of Dornoch Cathedral, the Abbot of Scone was instituted a canon and ministered through a vicar-priest in the cathedral. At Naviedale there was a chapel with churchyard, dedicated to St Ninian. Naviedale is Neimhe dail, nemed, an old sacred place taken over by the church. There was here a sanctuary—a place that had the right of sanctuary or “girth.” The formation is Norse, the second part being Norse, dalr, a dale. The Norsemen found the place important, and named the dale after it. Near the churchyard are St Ninian's Well and St Ninian's Field. The Church of Helmsdale was restored and extended in 1896. St Donnan's Church, Kildonan, was restored 1918.—[Book of Scone, 67, 162; The Book of Sutherland, i, 35, iii, 3–5; Watson's Celtic Place Names, 250; Simpson's Celtic Church in Scotland, 56.]

CANISBAY

The Church of Canisbay, cruciform in shape, was repaired about 1790, and again thoroughly repaired in 1832–3. There was a chapel called the Kirk of Strubster, described in the early part of the 18th century as “rather an hermitage, being a small spot of green in the midst of a remote wide desert”; and reputed as the “place where Protestants assembled to worship before the Reformation, when they could not do it safely in places more public and accessible.” St Irchard’s Chapel was identical with “St Ardach’s Chappell,” a place of pilgrimage in post-Reformation times. The saint is Erchard, Yrchard, the saint of Kincardine O’Neil. On the island of Stroma there were two chapels, the Kirk of Stava or Stara, and the Kirk of Old Skoil.—[Macfarlane’s Geog. Colls., i, 156; Mackinlay’s Church Dedications (non-script.), 506; Watson’s Celtic Place Names, 320.]

GEORGE OSWALD, described as “a 1697 curate from Caithness,” he appeared before the Presb. of Tain on 25th Sept. 1695, and gave in a petition in writing acknowledging the evil of Prelacy and the Divine right of Presb., and therefore desiring to be received into the Presbyterian Communion, with liberty to exercise his licence to preach the Gospel which he had received some time previously under Prelacy. The Presb. after full consideration refused the prayer of the petition. He appears to have been a preaching deacon under Episcopacy; and the Presb. of Edinburgh in licensing him in 1697 no doubt acted under reference from the General Assembly.—[Macnaughton's Church Life in Ross and Sutherland, 8–9.]

WICK

The pre-Reformation church was situated at Mount-Hallie or Halie near the east end of the town. Its successor was built in the present churchyard before 1576, and was repaired in 1728 and 1752. A new church was erected in 1830. The Chapel of St Tears seems to have been dedicated to St Drostan; and later it was under the invocation of the Holy Innocents. In 1834 it is narrated that within the memory of persons living it was customary for people to visit the "Chapel of St Tears on Innocent's Day, and leave in it bread and cheese as an offering to the souls of the children slain by Herod." In the first half of the 18th century, and maybe later, people frequenting the chapel had their recreation and pastimes on the third day of Christmas.—

SLEAT

The first church is said to have been built by a priest called Crotach MacGhillie Gorm—the Hunch-backed son of the Blue Servitor—and a Canon of Beauly. In a battle in a neighbouring field in the 17th century between the Macleods and the MacIntyres the latter were defeated, and they sought refuge in the church. The victors locked the door and, setting fire to the church, burned both it and the MacIntyres. A second church was built by

Macdonald of Sleat in 1691, and it now stands a ruin beside the church which replaced it in 1876.—[Barnett's Autumns in Skye, 64–5.]

ST KILDA

ALEXANDER BUCHAN, he began 1710 his work at St Kilda in Aug. 1704, that, according to his own statement, being the date "when I first went to the island"; previous to his advent, the people there did not have "any to instruct them in the principles of the Christian Reformed Protestant Religion, nor any to teach them to read." He returned to this country in Aug. 1709, the reason being "for want of subsistence, there being no settled maintenance for one in his station in that place"; indeed, "he was not in a capacity to go back and continue there except some assurance be given that he will be taken care of." Here it was strongly felt that it would be a serious loss to St Kilda if his services were no longer available for the island; and accordingly efforts were made to induce him to return and resume the work. At the appointment of the Commission of the General Assembly he was ord. by the Presb. of Edinburgh on 15th March 1710. On the following day he pres. to the S.P.C.K. a petition which reveals something of the spirit that animated him. He points out that "the island is much upon my heart, and I have denied myself the ease and other worldly accommodations I might have had elsewhere, to serve the interests of the Gospel in that place"; now that he had been ord. a min. of the Gospel for the use of that island, "in obedience to the call of Providence, the orders of the Reverend Judicatories of the Church, and the Desire of the Honourable Societie, I resolve to return to Hirta and give myself up to His Service in the Gospel of His Sone, being persuaded the Societie will find themselves in dutie and honour obliged to take care that I and my family have a competent subsistence." He then gives expression to his concern about successors to himself in the work, for "my tyme cannot be long in the world, the fatigue and bareness of my diet has brought me low"; realising the difficulty of prevailing upon strangers to go to St Kilda, and anxious to have "some persons bred to succeed me in that place," he "had been at some pains to instruct Finlay McDonald and Murdo Campbell, two natives of that island whom I have been entertaining and learning since August 1704." He had brought them to this country and was keeping them at school for reading, writing and music at his own charges, and as he was about to return to St Kilda, he was anxious to secure the sum of 100 merks to maintain them for a year at the grammar school in Skye. "I thought it my duty for my exoneration to use all proper means to have the Gospel continued in that place after I am dead and gone, and it will ease my mind that I have left this before you." One further matter was set forth in a postscript—"I have procured some books, and charitable persons are giving me more, and I am resolved to leave a catalogue of them with your Secretar and preserve them in the island for the use of my successors." (The catalogue is recorded in the minutes of the Society.) On 30th March 1710 the S.P.C.K. app. him schoolmaster on the island, authorising and empowering him to "erect and keep up a school in the said island, and to teach the inhabitants thereof to read, especially the Holy Scriptures and other good and pious books, as also to teach writing, arithmetick, and such lyke Degrees of Knowledge, and to use such means for instructing the people in the Christian Reformed Protestant Religion as may be proper"; he was further instructed "to be careful of Finlay McDonald and Murdo Campbell and of their education in order to their being useful in the said island." Several promises of financial help were forthcoming, especially from members of the S.P.C.K., who engaged themselves to assist till the Society was in possession of funds for a regular grant. If not then, certainly later, an annual grant was made by the Committee for the Reformation of the Highlands. On 13th April 1710 he settled in the island for the second time. Success attended his labours; but his closing days were darkened by the ravages of smallpox some time between 15th Aug. 1727 and 13th May 1728. According to the report of Mr Daniel Macaulay, min. of Bracadale, who visited St Kilda in 1728, of the 21 families on the island 17 succumbed to the disease, leaving 26 orphans to be supported by the surviving four families. Of those whom Alexander Buchan had taught to read, only two were left. Among the survivors were three men and eight boys, who during the prevalence of the malady were marooned on a rock whence they had gone in Aug. 1727 to catch a loading of young solan geese, the chief food of the island. With his work outwardly ruined, it is small wonder that Alexander Buchan's apparently fragile health gave way. He died in Feb. 1729. His wife, Katherine Campbell, "a poor widow with diverse children," was resident in Edinburgh on 2nd April 1730 when the S.P.C.K. agreed to petition the Barons of Exchequer to have her put on His Majesty's Charity Roll. Two of his sons, George and Dougal, were boarded on 6th Aug. 1728 with Mr Dewar, Schoolmaster, Edinburgh, who recommended to the S.P.C.K. that Dougal be apprenticed to a wright in town. The Society were of the opinion that Dougal be bred to succeed his father in St Kilda.—[Recs. of S.P.C.K., ii, 38, 76, 408; iii, 52, 57-8, 59, 71, 186, 625.]

EVIE and RENDALL

The Church of Evie was dedicated to St Nicholas. Described as "a poor affair, annually thatched with straw," it was deserted in 1788. Chapels in the parish were St Peter's Kirk at Costa, and the Kirk of Norrisdale in Woodwick, the latter apparently being identical with the Virgin Chapel of Woodwick. The Church of Rendall was dedicated to the Virgin Mary; but St Laurence has also been suggested. It was last occupied in 1794, and its ruins are situated in the old churchyard near the shore. North-east of the Hall of Rendall there was a chapel dedicated to St Thomas; and there was also a chapel at Langskail.—[*Procs. Orkney An-

KIRKWALL

There were in the cathedral other altars with dedications as follows: Our Lady of Pity; the Holy Trinity; St Olaf; St Mary the Virgin in the aisle of St Magnus; St John the Evangelist; St Lawrence; St Catherine; St Duthac; the Holy Cross; St Ninian; St James; St Andrew; St Peter; St Salvator; and St Salvator and St Peter is also given as the dedication of one altar. In the parish church of St Ola there was an altar of Our Lady of Pity, founded in the early part of the 16th century by John Leith, burgess of Kirkwall. At Pickequoy near Kirkwall there was a chapel dedicated to St Duthac, which appears to have been erected by William, third Earl of Orkney.—[*Reg. ST MARY'S, SOUTH RONALDSHAY

According to tradition the church was built by one Gallus, who, being expelled from the country, went on board a ship to find asylum elsewhere. In a storm the ship was wrecked, and Gallus jumped upon the back of a sea-monster. In that perilous position he prayed to God and vowed to God that if he reached safety he would build a church in honour of the Virgin Mary. Carried to land by the monster, he fulfilled his vow; and the monster being changed into a stone of its own colour, he placed the stone in the church. Early in the 16th century there was in the church a stone of grey whin 6×4 feet, which bore the impress of two naked feet.—[Macfarlane's Geog. Colls., iii, 310.]

PRESBYTERY OF CAIRSTON

BIRSAY

The Church of Birsay, dedicated to Christ, was erected by Earl Thorfinn, cir. 1050. It was the church of the bishopric prior to the erection of Kirkwall Cathedral. Earl (St) Magnus, murdered in 1115, was interred in the church, as was also, Earl Thorfinn. Subsequently the relics of St Magnus were transferred to St Olaf's Church, Kirkwall, where they were kept till they found a resting-place in the cathedral. On the Brough of Birsay there was a church dedicated to St Peter erected in the 11th century. An earlier church there was dedicated to St Colme.—[The Orkneyinga Saga, Pref., xcv–vi, xcvi, 44, 67; Proc. Orkney Antiq. Soc., iii, 24–5.]

ROBERT MAITLAND SOUTER, dem.

ROUSAY and EGILSAY

The Church of Rousay was probably dedicated to the Virgin Mary. The Chapel of St Peter, called "Cobbie Rows Chapel," on the Island of Weira, probably of 12th and 13th century, may have been built by Bishop Bear in 1188–1223, son of Kolbein Hrugá.

The Church of Egilsay was probably built after the conversion of the Norsemen in 998. The upper chamber of the chancel was doubtless the priest's room, but traditionally it is said to have been used as a prison. That is said to account for its title, "the Grief House." But that designation may have been bestowed upon it because the body of Earl Magnus had been laid there after his assassination by the followers of his cousin Hakon at a conference called by the Bishop on the Isle of Egilsay for the purpose of composing the difference between the cousins. A proposal has been made to restore the church.—[Procs. Orkney Antiq. Soc., ii, 19; Orkneyinga Saga, xcvi, xcvi.]

DUNROSSNESS

In Pitcairn's Report of the Revenues of the Parochial Benefices of Shetland early in the 17th century there are enumerated under Dunrossness four churches, St Matthew, St Magnus, St Colme, and St Paul, corresponding to Dunrossness, Sandwick, Cunningsburgh, and Fair Isle. Each of the churches of Dunrossness and Fair Isle was designated the Cross Kirk. That might indicate that they were dedicated to the Holy Rood. It may be, however, that the designation arose from the cruciform shape of the buildings, and that, as indicated, the respective dedications were St Matthew and St Paul. Dunrossness Church was situated near the sea at Quendale till 1790, when a new church was built some distance away. Within the church there was a chaplainry called the Prebend or Chaplainry of the Cross Stouk, of which in 1578 David Sinclair was perpetual prebendary. "St Peter's Stowke" on the Fair Isle may indicate some ecclesiastical revenue or, more probably, a small building attached to the church with an altar dedicated to St Peter. From 1593 Sandwick was attached to Dunrossness.—[Procs. Soc. of Antiq. of Scot., xvi, 197, xviii, 295, 297, 298, 302; Mill's Diary of Shetland, 195; Reg. Great Seal, v, 1723.]

TINGWALL, ETC.

The Church of Whiteness was dedicated to St Ola, and was known as St Ola's Chair. The Church of Weisdale was dedicated to the Virgin Mary. Of old it was much frequented by people who held the belief that by making an offering at the shrine of Our Lady they would be delivered from any trouble under which they were labouring. Tradition tells that the inception of the church was due to two wealthy ladies, who, overtaken by a storm at sea, made a vow to Our Lady that if deliverance was vouchsafed to them they would in honour of her erect a church at the spot when they landed. Weisdale was the place of their deliverance; and at once they proceeded to fulfil their vow. Each morning, it is further stated, the masons engaged on the construction of the building found at the site as many stones as they required during the day. In Tingwall parish there was a chapel dedicated to St Giles with an endowment of lands in the town of Ousta extending to 24 merks of the land, with le skattis, Hoiswick, Cunnisburg, Quarfe, and Uterbuster, and also the island of lie Holm of Ousta.—[*Reg. SANDSTING and ARTHSTING

It is said that men saved from the wreck of the Spanish Armada in 1588, in gratitude for their preservation and for the kindness shown them here, built a church at Sand about a mile and a half from the holm, and dedicated it to the Virgin Mary. When the Reformation reached Sandsting about 1600, the church was used by the Protestants, and in 1760–70 it was allowed to become a ruin. In addition to the church at Sand in Sandsting there was a church at Twatt in Aithsting, and their place was taken by a central church in 1780.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND OVERSEAS

CONTINENT OF EUROPE

In times described in 1441 as "long gone by," traders of Scotland founded in the Church of the Carmelite Friars at Bruges an altar or chapel, to the honour of God, the Virgin Mary, and St Ninian, whose chaplain was to minister to traders and other Scottish people living in that town the Divine Offices and Church Sacraments. It may be that the foundation took place when Scottish trade with the Low Countries was very prosperous, in the period prior to the Wars of the Scottish Succession that followed the death of Alexander III. On a petition "of certain faithful of the realm of Scotland" the work was confirmed by Papal Bull of 26th March 1446-7, which decreed that the chaplain not only minister to Scots at Bruges but also "pass to other places distant not more than two or three days from the said town, there to minister to Scots." In March 1441 the General Council of Scotland at Perth ord. that for the support of the chaplain and the decoration of the chapel there be paid the passage freight of a bundle or package of whatsoever ship or goods loaded for parts of Flanders, Holland, and Zealand; and on 29th Aug. 1450, as the result of a complaint by the chaplain, Sir John Hyndeloch, that payment was either deficient or was withheld, the decree was confirmed by charter of James II. In 1470 the magistrates of Bruges, in granting privileges to Scottish merchants, agreed to give a sum of money for the repair of the chapel; and in 1489, when Andrew Russell was chaplain, the magistrates of Edinburgh expressed concern at the poverty of the chapel and the theft of its cups and other ornaments. But Edinburgh's concern also showed itself in a more practical way. On 22nd Jan. 1437-8 the Town Council ord.

that "quhat persouns frauchtis a schip outward sall give a sek ($\frac{1}{8}$) fraucht to Sanct Rynenes Ile in Bruges"; and on 18th July 1494 the Council further ord. that "frauchts of ships within the burgh take clerk or depute to make their charter party, and cause to be insert therein specially the sek fraucht of the schip above fyve lastis of guidis, and under that birth, of a half sek fraucht to thair Chaplaine of St Ninian's Altar in Bruges," the same to be paid to the present chaplain, Mr James Wawne. A somewhat similar levy was decreed by the Town Council on 18th July 1494, the chaplain being James Wawne. On 24th Sept. 1538 Sir William Thomson in Antwerp was pres. to the chaplainry by James V in succession to the late Mr Alexander Fotheringham. Apparently the work was discontinued at the Reformation. At Roscoff in Brittany there was a chapel, variously called the Chapel of Marie Stewart and the Chapel of St Ninian, which is said to have been erected by Mary Queen of Scots to commemorate her safe landing there on 15th Aug. 1548 after her voyage from Scotland. The chapel was destroyed at the Reformation. In the parish church at Roscoff there are, or were, a silver statue of the Virgin and an amber rosary reputed to have been gifts from the Scottish Queen to the chapel. At Elsinore there was a chapel dedicated to St Ninian, which may have been used by the Scots at that place. It is said that to the chapel belonged an altar-piece, now in the museum at Copenhagen.—[Reg. Great Seal, i, 392, 3787; Reg. Sec. Seal, ii, 2722; Acts Scott. Parl., ii, 57; *Cal. CAMPVERE

In the contract of 1541 between Scottish merchants and the town of Campvere, by which that town became the Scottish Staple Port, the privileges granted by Maximilian of Burgundy, Lord Beven of Campvere, etc., included the proviso that the said merchants shall have the choice and option of a suitable place in the Collegiate Church of Campvere, with a chaplain so as it shall please the Scottish nation, who shall be provided with a prebendary of canons upon the first vacancy in the said church. Right of burial in the said place or chapel was also granted to Scots dying at Campvere, without the usual payment exacted for burial in the church. The privilege was utilised up to the Reformation, when the chaplain was John Dawson, who had been in office in 1552 and received from the town of Campvere an annual payment of £3 Flemish. Probably at the Reformation the work lapsed. Subsequently steps for renewal were taken. By contract of 1578 the magistrates of Campvere, in order that Scottish people resident at Campvere "be not frustrated of the Word of God and exercitation of the religion as it is for the present used in Scotland," granted them "the quire of the Great Kirk" and a dwelling-house for the minister, with free excise of bear and wine for his household and family. At that time nothing further was done. On 3rd May 1586 the Convention of Burghs, on account of the great abuses by merchants and other Scotsmen in Campvere, "uncomely behaviour in civil life and outward manners" and "no regard for conscience and religion," condescended upon the erection of a church at Campvere without delay; and on 4th July and 3rd Nov. 1587 an agreement was made whereby Campvere undertook to erect a church, make provision for the min. as when the Staple was first established there, including a house. The choir of the Great Church was again granted for worship. Repeated efforts were made by the Convention to carry the project to completion; and eventually a min. was app in 1612. At that time the contract was renewed; and a further renewal took place in 1676. On 25th May 1686 the church was burned, and the Scottish congregation worshipped in the Scottish Poor-house in Winegaert Street till rebuilding was completed in 1699. In 1795 the staple was broken up and the church privilege was withdrawn. The Communion cups seem to have been committed to an elder of the church for the purpose of being given to Middelburgh Church. He died before giving effect to the plan; and his widow is said to have sold them. It may be noted that on 9th Aug. 1641 the General Assembly approved of a motion that "for the weal of this kirk," the Scots Kirk at Campvere should be joined to the Kirk of Scotland as a member thereof, and ord. that a letter be sent to Mr William Spang, min. at Campvere, and the Kirk Session thereof, willing them to send their min. and a ruling elder, instructed with a commission to the next General Assembly at St Andrews in July 1642, when they will be enrolled as commissioners from Campvere Church.—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, i, 211–12, etc., ii, 79–80, etc.; Yair's Acc. of Scotch Trade in Netherlands, 111–17, 162; *Scott. ALEXANDER MACDUFF, M.A.; on remit from the Convention of Burghs to certain burghs 15th July 1613, he was app. min. 20th Jan. 1614 with the consent of the King and the Archbishop of St Andrews, and entered on his ministry 1st March 1614; on 4th July 1616, in response to his petition to the effect that the collection of his stipend was unsatisfactory, the Convention of Burghs agreed that in lieu of the collection he be paid 800 gulden annually; his name appears on the four Communion cups presented to the church by the factor in 1620.—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, ii, 426, 439, iii, 8–9, 22–3.]

THOMAS EWING, son of Alexander Ewing, factor in Campvere. On 8th July 1614 the Convention of Burghs resolved to appoint a reader at Campvere, and on 13th July following issued injunctions to him as reader and officer; on 4th July 1616 he was still in office, and on 10th July he was adm. as factor for the nation at Campvere; on 8th July 1619 he continued as Collector of Stipend, one of his duties when he was app. reader.—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, ii, 464, 467, iii, 22, 30, 67, 83.]

GEORGE SYDSERFF, app. by the Convention of Burghs on 3rd Nov. 1625, John, Archbishop of St Andrews, agreeing to admit and receive him to the Kirk, and his appointment being ratified on 7th July 1626; he resigned 4th July 1628 on the ground that Campvere was prejudicial to his health.—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, iii, 209, 228, 252.]

JOHN FORRET, M.A.; app. 10th July 1628 by the Convention of Burghs with the consent of the Archbishop of St Andrews, to take up duty before 1st Nov. following; on 10th July 1629 he laid before the Convention of Burghs a complaint as to the estate of the church, and that Mr Patrick Drummond, conservator of the privileges of the nation in the Low Countries, encroached upon the government of the church contrary to the order of the Church of Scotland, and no conclusion by the Minister and Session did the said Mr Patrick put or suffer to be put into execution; the Convention agreed that the ministers and elders govern the Kirk and the discipline thereof conform to the daily order in the Kirk of Scotland, and debarred interference by the conservator, whose position, however, as ruling elder and civil magistrate was to be recognised in the Session. Forret died in office in Sept. 1629; the statement as to his demission in Oct. 1628 refers to his pastorate at Newburg.—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, iii, 272–4, 287–8, 295, 305–6.]

WILLIAM SPANG, M.A.; on 27th Jan. 1630 there was laid before the Convention of Burghs a letter from the Scottish people of Campvere, regretting the want of a pastor, and deploring their hard estate through the lack of the comfort of God's Word whereof they had been deprived ever since the death of Mr Forret, and the Convention app. William Spang, student of Divinity, who was taken bound to assume office not later than 1st July of the same year, and it was remitted to certain burghs to deal with the Archbishop of St Andrews to receive and admit him; on 1st Dec. 1652 it is recorded that the church was vacant by the desertion of Mr William Spang.—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, iii, 305, 307, 367.]

ROBERT BROWNE, or BROWN, was min. of Kirkbean; on 7th July 1654, when he was exercising the place of min. at Campvere, he was "entreated" by the Convention of Burghs “to remain until the Burghs’ further order.”—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, iii, 378.] (See Kirkbean.)

ROBERT FLEMING, in July 1691 he was invited by the Conservator and the church here to be min., but did not assume office; afterwards min. at Rotterdam and Founder’s Hall (q.v.).—[Recs. of Convention of Burghs, iv, 142.]

ALEXANDER WILSON, his widow, Sarah French, died 15th March 1793; his daugh., Sara Christina (marr. John Bower, min. of Maryculter).

HILL, NINIAN, born at Greenock 27th Nov. 1861, only son of James Fleming H. and Mary Jane Ramsay, daugh. of James Johnston Grieve, M.P. for Greenock; educ. at Hawtreys School, Slough, preparatory for Eton, but his education was interrupted by an accident and serious illness, which necessitated it being continued by private tutors. When his health was restored, he attended the Univ. of St Andrews and studied at Oxford, and in later life Divinity at Edinburgh. He became a shipowner in Greenock and took a prominent part in public affairs, being Dean of Guild and Treasurer of the Burgh and Director and Chairman of the Greenock Provident Bank. In 1901 he removed to Edinburgh and was General Secretary for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, during which time he reorganised its whole administration. He also took an active interest in Church affairs and became an elder in Murrayfield Church. At a meeting of the Presb. of Edinburgh on 12th Dec. 1917, the day that Allenby entered Jerusalem, he proposed that to celebrate the delivery of that city from seven centuries of Moslem rule, a church and hospice should be erected there to commemorate this, and he was app. by the General Assembly Hon. Secretary of the committee by whom this was carried out. He was licen. by the Presb. of Edinburgh 28th June 1922 and was ord. by them first chaplain of the Church of Jerusalem, and was also Honorary Min. of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh, for twenty-three years. He also became in 1919 Secretary to the Committee on Chaplains to H.M.

Forces. D.D. (Edinburgh, 1st July 1935); died at Edinburgh 10th April 1946. His ashes were interred in St Andrew's Church, Jerusalem, on 30th Nov. 1947, where a plaque to his memory was dedicated 4th Jan. 1948. He marr. 4th April 1935 Marguerite, youngest daugh. of Henry Richer and Marie Thérèse de Portemer. Addl. Publications—Edited first two Annals of the Church Service Society.
