Old Macdonald had a farm, oh yeah!

Have you ever tried to have a garden?
In my home state of Florida, I tried to have a vegetable garden each and every year. Each and every year, I was defeated by the really sandy and not-very-fertile-soil.

I had chickens too. I will never forget the rooster who tried to flog at me and got his very large rooster foot hung in my garden boots. I don't know who was more frightened, the rooster or me. It took us several very long minutes to finally get apart from each other. I was told by neighbors that our (me and the rooster) jumping about and each of us hollering was very amusing.

I did very well with my hens as they flourished under the gourmet chicken feed I provided to them. I did not kill them at all, but, in Osceola County, the foxes and owls and hawks had no qualms about dining on my poultry.

Also, I figured out how much each egg had cost...and decided that about $6.00 per egg was a good bit pricey.

When I moved to Georgia, I started the very first year trying to have a garden...with not very good results, once again because the soil did not wish to be fertile - no matter how hard I worked.

I had a few things start out so well, with amendments to the soil that I was encouraged. Alas, the rabbits came and ate everything in just one night.

Now, in northeast Georgia, about half an hour from the North Carolina border, I am just about ready to try again.

This time, I am going to have a successful garden, I think. The difference is, the soil does not matter! I ordered ten of those things they call "Grow Pots" and I have purchased ten bags of "Potting Mix" which has lots of the vermiculite all through it. This, I read in the instructions, is to allow the soil to "wick" the water from the reservoir so that the plants will just outdo themselves in growing and becoming lovely goodies to eat.

The reason for this all-out effort is that my doctors have said that I need to eat a lot of salads. To my notion, only doctors, lawyers and millionaires can afford LOTS of salads nowadays.

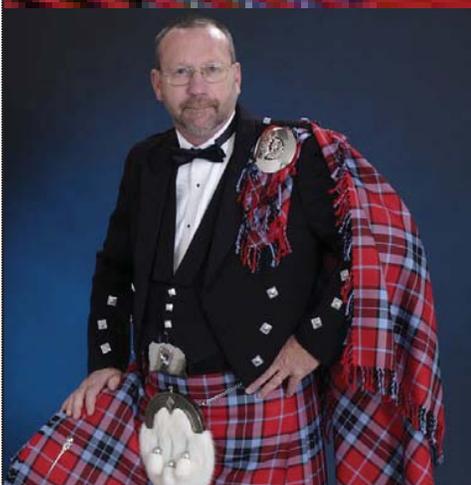

It was about this time that I saw a brochure about the Grow Pots...and thought to myself, Eureka! With this method of gardening there is no weeding, no fertilizing as that comes with the packages. According to the brochure, the only thing you have to do is jump out of the way of the giant tomato bushes!

I have planned each Grow Pot as they come with how many of what plants will fit in the container.

Tomatoes, strawberries, salad greens of many kinds including spinach.....and squash and broccoli and brussels sprouts are planned for this wonderful garden. Tom asked for carrots and eggplant. We're going to have some cantaloupes and all manner of yummie things.

lions of pounds worth of investment was needed.

The SYHA added that it has plans to open new sites elsewhere. The organisation also said interest in youth hostelling was at a high.

Keith Legge, SYHA chief executive, said the jewel in association's crown may have had its day. He said: "Carbisdale has been a great challenge for us financially in recent years.

"We have been very proud to have been running the castle since the last war. 1.5 million guests have stayed there and we are very proud of that record.

"However, maintaining a listed building of that status when it goes wrong presents some very serious challenges. I am afraid to say it won't open for the foreseeable future."

The castle, which overlooks the Kyle of Sutherland, was shut after suffering frost damage and £2m has already been spent on repairs.

Historic Scotland lists the castle and its entrance gates as category B, which means they are structures of regional importance.

The Dowager Duchess of Sutherland had Carbisdale Castle built between 1907 and 1917 following the death of her husband, George Granville William Sutherland-Leveson-Gower, the Third Duke of Sutherland.

Lady Mary was the duke's second wife and after he died she became embroiled in a legal dispute over his will with her step son, the fourth Duke of Sutherland. When the row was settled the duchess used her inheritance to have Carbisdale constructed.

According to geographical encyclopaedia, The Gazetteer of Scotland, the property became known as the Castle of Spite.

Its clock tower only has only three faces with none that could be seen by the new duke as he passed by in his private train on his way to Dunrobin Castle, his family's property in Sutherland. It is said that he would have the blinds of his

Celtic Music Schedule Announced for Rural Hill Scottish Festival & Loch Norman Highland Games coming right up

HUNTERSVILLE, NC: Rural Hill Scottish Festival and Loch Norman Highland Games have announced the musician lineup for its 20th Annual Festival Weekend April 20 - 21, 2013.

The weekend's festivities will include the traditional sounds of The Tannahill Weavers, the return of the Celtic rock group Rathkeltair, the hard-driving Carolina rock of Stirling Bridge, and traditional Celtic musicians Scooter Muse, Jil Chambless, and John Taylor.

Performances will be held throughout the Scottish Festival including the Saturday Night Concert at the Celtic Rock Stage beginning at 6:30 PM.

There will also be massed Pipe Band performances on Saturday and Sunday as well as individual pipers and drummers in sanctioned competition.

Complete schedules, event information and advance tickets are available online at www.ruralhillscottish-festivals.net

The Tannahill Weavers are one of Scotland's premier traditional bands. These versatile musicians have received worldwide accolades consistently over the years for their exuberant performances and outstanding recording efforts. They have that unique combination of traditional melodies, driving rhythmic accompaniment, and rich vocals that make their performances unforgettable.

As the Winnipeg Free Press noted, "The music may be old time Celtic, but the drive and enthusiasm are akin to straight ahead rock and roll."

carriage shut so he did not have to look at Carbisdale.

The castle was bought by a Scots-Norwegian family in 1933 and was used as a refuge for the Norwegian royal family during World War II.

The gazetteer adds that the castle is haunted by a female ghost called Betty.

Rathkeltair blends compelling and catchy original songs with tight, driving straight-ahead rock-n-roll, while never forgetting its Celtic roots. Highly regarded for its extraordinary energy, showmanship and professionalism, Rathkeltair enjoys a loyal and rapidly expanding community of friends and fans. Rathkeltair's name-sake is a famous historical site in County Down, Northern Ireland.

Stirling Bridge blends classic bagpipe sounds with hard-driving Carolina rock 'n' roll! These four seasoned, professional musicians bring the party with a good-time, foot-stompin' Celtic rock show.

Winner of countless banjo competitions throughout the southeast including the Tennessee Valley Championships 8 times, Scooter Muse has played with bluegrass legends, Clair Lynch, Vassar Clements and a host of others as well as handling first call banjo duties for the world famous Muscle Shoals, Alabama recording industry. He founded the Full Moon Ensemble, who achieved national recognition, toured the US and Canada as well as Scotland, and recorded 5 critically acclaimed CDs. After a successful 8 year run, the FME went their separate ways and Scooter was drafted as the guitar player for the longest running Celtic band in the south, Henri's Notions. The Notions have appeared with such great artists as Bob Dylan, Paddy O'Brien, Patrick Street, Brian McNeill and countless others.

Jil Chambless is without a doubt one of America's top Celtic music vocalists and musicians. A native of Montgomery, AL, Jil was first introduced to Celtic music in the 1980's when she met the Tuscaloosa, Alabama based band, Henri's Notions, and the rest is history. During her tenure, the Notions have completed four recording projects and performed nationally at concerts and festivals. Under the production magic of Scottish legend Brian McNeill (founder of the Battlefield Band, songwriter, multi-instrumentalist and producer) Jil has finished the recording of her first solo CD. Jil performs with Henri's Notions as well as a trio setting with Scottish singer Ed Miller and the Notion's Scooter Muse.

John Taylor is a fiddler and composer from Buckie in Scotland and a past winner of the Niel Gow award for Scottish fiddling. Taylor is well known in Scottish country dance circles having appeared in many parts of the world including the USA, Canada, New Zealand and various parts of the UK. He has recorded specific country dance music CDs with Andrew Imbrie and has often appeared with Texas-based folk singer, Ed Miller. In a review of their first collaboration, The Edinburgh Rambler, the Austin American-Statesman called Taylor "brilliant."

Fun for the entire family, the 20th Annual Rural Hill Scottish Festival and Loch Norman Highland Games offer a genealogy search, over 70 Scottish clans and their representatives, Scottish country dancing, an Ultra Trail 5K run, professional and amateur heavy athletics, long bow competition, battle axe competition, demonstrations, whiskey seminars, the "Kids' Zone" with children's activities, and Rural Hill's famous historic encampment. Complete information and tickets are available at www.ruralhillscottishfestivals.net.

Locating Ancestors on the Internet

The Internet is an excellent tool for genealogical research when used in conjunction with consulting original records, print sources, and employing proper research techniques. The benefits to genealogists are:

1. The ability to search the genealogical holdings of major repositories or libraries in areas where the ancestors resided.

2. The ability to search a repository's holdings online may facilitate planning for onsite research in anticipation of a visit to that repository.

3. The Internet usually contains significant information on local, state, national and/or ethnic historical/genealogical societies, and family associations throughout the U.S. and abroad.

4. Websites such as Ancestry, Heritage Quest, Cyndi's List, Family Search, Rootsweb, etc., offer access to message boards and other information-sharing sites where genealogists can network with other genealogists, share findings and photographs, and submit queries.

The dramatic increase in online resources has attracted many beginners to the field of genealogical research. Experienced genealogists have benefited because of new and improved research tools and faster communication.

Sites such as Ancestry.com and Ancestry Library Edition, Fold3, Heritage Quest, and Family Search, just to name a few, have enabled researchers to locate records in a timely manner. Researchers are also benefitting from an increased number of digitized images, thus making the information-gathering process more accurate and timely.

Many websites offer tutorials in the form of a Frequently Asked Questions section (FAQ).

These pages usually provide research tips and information on formulating search strategies.

While the Internet offers many opportunities for research, there are limitations and caveats. The Internet should not be considered the main option for genealogical research. Researchers will never locate every fact about their ancestors online. There is no one website or database containing all types of genealogical records. Many record types have never appeared on any online databases, and never will. Information found online carries no guarantee whatsoever that it is accurate, thoroughly researched or properly documented.

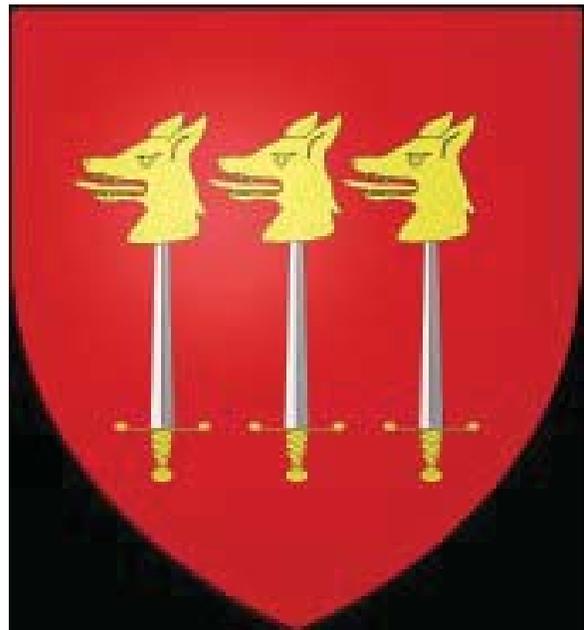

The Internet is not a new reason that researchers sometimes collect questionable or undocumented information. False pedigrees, family myths and research errors were a part of genealogy long before the Internet. The difference is that the undocumented information is easily located and duplicated online.

SUGGESTED GUIDE FOR GENEALOGY RESEARCH

Set a goal. Examples: Complete five generations. Trace to an immigrant ancestor. Publish a family history. Print up a large fan chart with family photographs included. Join a lineage group.

Work with one generation at a time, going backward, beginning with yourself. Document date and place of birth, marriage and death. Then seek what happened in between. Don't skip a generation. Keep a record of SOURCES used. Make use of charts, family group sheets or a computer program.

Work methodically:

Record what you know, including medical information.

2. Search home sources, that is Bibles, journals, biographies; birth, marriage, divorce and death records; newspaper clippings; school, citizenship, military, social security and employment records; insurance policies; wills; deeds; Baptismal certificates; personal correspondence and engraved jewelry and silverware. Tiny clues can come from unexpected sources!

3. Contact relatives. Make notes of the information you hope to learn from them beforehand. Suggest they tell about their youth and what they remember being told by their parents. Consider using a tape recorder or take careful notes. Write letters or email if direct contact is difficult. Express your appreciation and offer copies of your information. Their interest may be sparked by your enthusiasm!

4. Endeavor to stay organized so others can use your work and you proceed more efficiently. Try to keep a log of correspondence and telephone contacts..

5. Search courthouse records, probate, marriage, and land records. Other good sources include cemetery, church, newspaper, and military records.

6. Locate your family in every census record, both federal and state where they exist.

7. Search passenger lists, naturalization and passport records.

Join a genealogical society where you live and one in the area you are researching. Attend classes and seminars to increase your knowledge of research methods and materials.

Place queries on Rootsweb or other on-line sites and in journals, so others researching the same families will share their knowledge with you. Be wary of information with no source given!!

At some point stop, evaluate your goals, and finish at least a part of your project. This may include some or all of the following: your own personal history; family group sheets and lineage charts; narratives on various ancestors; copies of photographs with a brief write-up of each; maps with family locations or movements noted; family heirlooms photographed and written up and more.

PITFALLS!!

1. Don't believe all you see in print or on the internet. Verify!! Ask yourself if the age of each person seems appropriate for marriage, etc. Fraudulent pedigrees abound.

2. Realize that having the same surname does not mean you are related or if the spelling is different, it doesn't mean you are NOT related.

3. Always question your family lore and traditional stories. Many times they contain partial truths but may have been embellished over the years. Use as a starting point.

4. Don't spend lots of time and energy trying to connect to a famous person.

5. Be aware there was a calendar change in 1752.

6. Know the history of the area and the ethnic group you are researching.

7. Keep a sense of fun and remember that every family has a few "black sheep."

Scottish Independence Referendum

And then the biggy... Scottish independence: Referendum to be held on 18 September, 2014. This is where the people of Scotland get to vote to either become an independent nation and thus leave the UK or of course vote to reject and continue to be part of the UK.

During 2014 there is bound to be a huge debate leading up to the crucial vote.

The debate is running along party lines which is unfortunate. The SNP which currently has an overall majority in the devolved Government is of course in favour. The opposition parties such as Labour and the Lib Dems are against. So called facts on both sides make it difficult for ordinary citizens to get a clear understanding of the issues and one hopes that as we get closer to the decision date that things will become clearer.

One of the contentious issues revolves around the SNP making a very clear statement of their intention to retain membership of the EU if Scotland becomes independent. To some this simply swaps control from Westminster to that of Brussels and as Scotland exports more to the rUK (rest of the UK) than to the whole of Europe combined it brings into question why we would want independence just to give it away to Brussels.

Electric Scotland is also providing factual information on a variety of issues which you can read at <http://www.electricscotland.com/independence>

And so you can now see why 2014 is going to be an historic year for Scotland.

Scots Wha Hae!

With thanks to the
Tallahassee (FL) St. Andrews Society Newsletter

Do try to sound the “r”, although not with the exaggerated trill usu-ally given to it by so-called Scots comedians.

But, again this to my English readers: don’t even at-tempt to get the guttural sounds of “ach” and “loch”. You will only strangle yourselves. To say “ach!” correctly you need generations of Scots blood behind you and you must have been born with the peat-reek in your nostrils and the sight of the hills as the first thing ever you clapped your eyes on.

~ Ronald MacDonald Douglas (1889-1987)
Writer and Nationalist

Hard by, in the fields called the Leith Links, the citizens of Edinburgh divert themselves at a game called golf, in which they use a curious kind of bat, tipt with horn, and small elastic balls of leather, stuffed with feathers...

Of this diversion the Scots are so fond, that when the weather will permit, you may see a multitude of all ranks, from the senator of justice to the lowest tradesman, mingled together in their shirts, and following the balls with the utmost eagerness.

Touch his head, and he will bargain and argue with you to the last! Touch his heart, and he falls upon your breast.

~Andrew Carnegie

Assuredly we must cut our coat to suit our cloth – and the cloth is the tartan.

~Wendy Wood
(1892–1981), Scottish patriot and nationalist

Flowers of the Forest

Clan Sinclair is saddened to learn of the death of Lt.Col. Sean M. Judge, PhD, son of our member, ary (Sayrs) Conant.

He was born on September 28, 1971 in Methuen, Massachusetts and passed away on July 14, 2012 in Dublin, Ohio. Since the young age of six, Sean knew that he wanted to serve his country in the United States Air Force as a pilot, and that he wanted to study Military History.

He accomplished all this and so much more. After high school graduation in 1989, Sean received an appointment to the United States Air Force Academy. Subsequently, he was named a distinguished graduate of the Academy, receiving a Bachelor's Degree in Engineering in June, 1993.

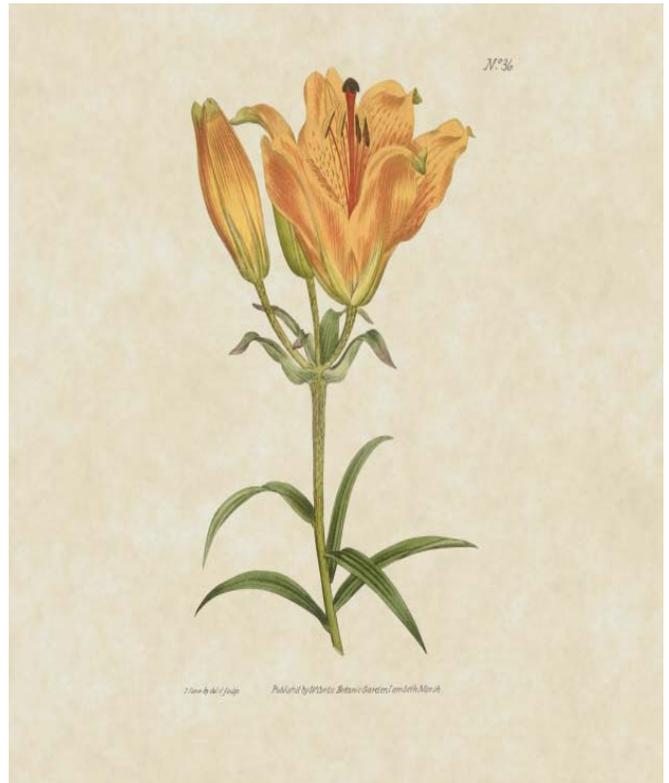

He entered pilot training in Columbus, Mississippi, receiving his Wings of Silver in 1994. He then went on to train as a C-130 pilot, and, over his career, obtained the status of Command Pilot, signifying he had accumulated more than 3000 flight hours.

During his distinguished career, he served in both the Bosnian conflict and Operation Enduring Freedom, as well as multiple international and domestic deployments. Sean was then chosen by his superiors to attend the United States Air Command and Staff College, where he obtained a Master's Degree in Military History 2007.

He again was selected by his leadership to attend the United States Air University School of Advanced Air and Space Studies, where he obtained a 2nd Master's Degree in a Master of Air Power Art and Science 2008. In 2007, he received the Dean's Research Award, and in 2008 he received the school's highest award for his work on "Who has the Puck? Strategic Initiative in Modern Conventional War."

Sean was then afforded the opportunity to attend Ohio State Congratulations to Joe Cash CMU Georgia Commissioner Joe Cash placed first in the 10k category for a "Tartan Trot" sponsored by the St. Luke Presbyterian Church of Dunwoody, GA. Pro-ceeds from this charitable event are used to support numerous charities including Habitat for Humanity International, the Thornwood Home for Children, and the Inter-faith Outreach Home. Way to go Joe! University in order to obtain his PhD in Military History, which he completed in July 2011. He was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal for outstanding service from 2008-2012.

It was during this period that Col. Judge's research in military strategy and tactics had direct impact on the operational and tactical performance of combat units supporting the battle space.

Sean is sadly missed by all of his family and friends, and the world has lost a brilliant and devoted man; a father, scholar, and a patriot who served his country with honor and dignity.

To digress some, in my days of haunting horse show venues, some of the competitions had both English and Western competitions.

In the Pleasure Class, there would be both English and Western riders competing.

Everyone would always grin and maybe even laugh out loud when the ring announcer would announce instructions to the entire class...and he would say, “Class, please Canta-loupe!! Thus combining the English “Canter” and the Western “Lope.”

Anyway, you have to have lots of sunshine for these Grow-Pots to work. Our house is completely surrounded by woods with our driveway and parking pad in front of the house.

There is a nice strip of all-day sunshine down the side of the house...and that is grass.

Last year, I did try for a tomato upside down planter...and grass grew where I could not trim it about a foot high. Don't want grass growing up between all the pots - and after thinking a lot about this, decided to put down a heavy tarpaulin over the grass and then put the Grow-Pots on the tarp. No weeds. No burned plants.

I wanted to put the pots on the blacktop parking pad, but thought how hot that would be in the summer...and if I did that, would have completely roasted veggies just off the plants!

My herbs are all coming up now. I did not realize that most of them came back after the winter...but they do. Those, I just incorporate into my green “ruffle” of ferns and plants that go all across the front of the house.

My “Master Plan” is to order ten more Grow-Pots this year and ten more next year.

I will be a for-sure farmer when I have 30 grow pots of wonderful fresh goodies.

I have deliberately left out the deer who live all around here. I'm sure they won't bother my plants. Hope not anyway.

A unique opportunity to buy Lickleyhead Castle

Sebastian and Candy Leslie of Warthill have put their Lickleyhead Castle up for sale. Some members of Clan Leslie were fortunate enough to stay at Lickleyhead during the Battle of Harlaw Commemoration and the dedication of the new Leslie's Cross.

Lickleyhead Castle is an L-plan tower house in Aberdeenshire, about a half-mile south-east of the village of Auchleven. Originally built about 1560, and later owned by John Forbes family that did some modernization in the 1600s. Eventually, it came into the possession of the Arbuthnot-Leslie family.

Today, the former Great Hall has been divided to form a drawing room with a huge fireplace and a wood-paneled dining room that will seat 14. The castle now has seven bedrooms, many with ensuite bathrooms which are located in the turrets.

The castle and approximately 30 acres of land are for sale at offers starting at 1,340,000 Pounds or approximately $2,133,000 US. The real estate agent is Knight Frank at www.knightfrank.com

Ellis Island Immigration Information helps

Bryan Mulcahy, Reference Librarian Ft. Myers-Lee County (FL) Library

Ellis Island immigration records contain information for over 22 million immigrants who arrived during the peak years of operation between 1892-1924. The Ellis Island Immigration Reception Center, located about a mile off the southwest tip of Manhattan, replaced the Castle Garden processing center that was located at the current site of Battery Park in lower-Manhattan.

By 1891, the federal government under the authority of the United States Bureau of Immigration transferred all functions to the new Ellis Island facility which served as a combination detention and deportation center. Political pressures had been rising in the mid to late 1880's to stem the flow of immigrants coming from southern and Eastern Europe. This was accomplished by making the entry process much more difficult for new arrivals. Those who could not pass the stiffer requirements were deported.

Ellis Island remained an immigrant receiving station until World War I, when the federal government began to enact new laws to tighten the immigration laws even more. Many of these new laws were in response to the climate that existed in Europe in the wake of World War I and its aftermath.

After the 1924 Immigration Act was passed and adopted into law, the number of immigrants passing through Ellis Island dropped dramatically.

The center was closed in November 1954.

In 1990, Ellis Island was reopened as a museum. Today, the American Family Immigration History Center is located in the Ellis Island Immigration Museum and on the Internet at <http://www.ellisland.org> This website offers on the Internet at <http://www.ellisland.org>. This website offers researchers an extensive database on the 22 million immigrants who entered the United States through Ellis Island between the years of 1892-1924. Information on each individual was written down in ships' passenger lists, known as manifests. These manifests were used to examine immigrants at the time of their arrival at the Ellis Island Immigration Center.

The passenger record archives will enable you to search for the following information:

1. Passenger records showing the passenger name, date of arrival, ship they arrived on, age given on arrival, and other miscellaneous details that the clerk may have noted.

2. Original copies of the ship manifest showing passenger names and other information that was given when they boarded the ship.

3. Ship information, often with a picture or sketch, giving the history and background of the ship.

4. The Community Archive is a growing collection of annotations to the passenger records, which may provide supplemental information on a passenger's background and life in the United States after their arrival with this information provided by sustaining members of the the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Foundation.
