BELTANE 2006

Welcome to the Clan Gregor newsletter. Inside you'll find information, pictures, and anecdotes, detailing the recent happenings in the Clan Gregor. We certainly hope you enjoy what you see. More so, we hope you will wander through and visit the pages following this one that list the septs and aliases recognized by the Clan Gregor. If you find your family name among these, joining the Gregor clan may be a move you wish to consider.

The newsletter contained here is only part of the entire publication, released especially for preview purposes. The entire newsletter is just one of the benefits of becoming a Gregor Clan member, the others being fun, fun, and fun!

A membership form follows the septs and aliases page.

Again, we certainly hope you do enjoy your visit and most definitely hope you will join the Gregor clan!

Thank you,

Carl Basile

BELTANE

Also known as May Eve, May Day, and Walpurgis Night, happens at the beginning of May. It celebrates the height of Spring and the flowering of life. The Goddess manifests as the May Queen and Flora. The God emerges as the May King and Jack in the Green. The danced Maypole represents Their unity, with the pole itself being the God and the ribbons that encompass it, the Goddess. Colors are the Rainbow spectrum. Beltane is a festival of flowers, fertility, sensuality, and delight.

Prepare a May basket by filling it with flowers and goodwill and then give it to someone in need of healing and caring, such as a shut-in or elderly friend. Form a wreath of freshly picked flowers, wear it in your hair, and feel yourself radiating joy and beauty. Dress in bright colors. Dance the Maypole and feel yourself balancing the Divine Female and Male within. On May Eve, bless your garden in the old way by making love with your lover in it. Make a wish as you jump a bonfire or candle flame for good luck. Welcome in the May at dawn with singing and dancing.

The Clan Gregor Society instituted in 1822 is one of the oldest clan societies. Today the Society is a growing organization with membership throughout the world. Its most active objectives are to extend the links of kinship and friendship between MacGregors wherever they may be and to provide a focal point for all members of the Clan and, indeed, any interested visitors who wish to learn more of our past. The Society promotes and encourages research into Clan Gregor and the publication or information pertaining to its history, tradition, and genealogy. The Society extends, a warm welcome to persons bearing names included in list A and to those with maternal descent from an eligible person. Persons bearing names or descent from names in Lists B and C who can show evidence of descent or a family tradition or MacGregor connection are also eligible for membership. Names in list D are properly the domain of other Clan and Family societies, however we would welcome enquiries from persons bearing these names who can show their descent from a MacGregor who adopted the name as an alias.

NAMES AND SEPTS OF CLAN GREGOR

As recognized by the Clan Gregor Society, August 1999

Many variant spellings exist and are recognized. M', Mc and Mac are considered interchangeable.

From the Desk of the Chapter President:

Dear Kith and Kin, Well, supposedly we have moved into Spring, but I don't know that you could recognise it by the weather, which has been rather "Scottish", at least up here in northern California. According to a report I heard recently, the snowpack, and other water storage is up approx 30% above normal, so hopefully we won't have a water shortage this summer. If you southern members are nice to us, we might even share some of it with you! It certainly seems to have been raining almost continuously these past few weeks, and not only interfering with the weekends and other recreational activities (the important things), but also mine and other people's vocations (and presumably in some cases, vacations!). The first "Gathering" I was able to attend this year was the Calaveras Celtic Festival at Angels Camp, held on the weekend of March 11th & 12th. Although by no stretch of the imagination is it predominantly Scottish; there are Scots there, and some tents, kilts, Scottish wares, and collectibles and souvenirs to be discovered and acquired, and some of the same food as found at Scottish Games and Gatherings, along with some other interesting ethnic eatables that appear to have not the remotest connection with "Celtic"! However, the same can be said of some of the outfits and costumes that are displayed there, all of which makes it very entertaining for those of us that enjoy "people-watching", and it is the first event of the year at this end of the state for us to get out to. There were however, several things that were somewhat Scottish-flavored, one of which was the "Highland" weather that weekend. We had been watching the weather forecast during the previous week, trying to decide whether it would be better to go on Saturday or Sunday, and eventually settled on the former, as the chance of precipitation was only 40% compared with 60% for latter. On the drive over there from my home in Weimar; west on Hwy 80 to Auburn, then south on Highway 49 to Placerville and on towards Jackson, there was plenty of fallen snow on the sides of the roads, but not on them, and in the fields and trees, and we were enjoying it's beauty, especially on the occasions when the sun was out. But then it got progressively darker, and then started to snow on us, quite heavily, and sticking to the roadway sufficiently to make it prudent to slow down. Fortunately it wasn't so heavy or long enough in duration to prevent our progress; I was driving and I thought it was fun, although Patricia said if she had been driving she would have turned around and gone home! However, it had stopped before we got to Angels Camp, and we were lucky that we had no more precipitation for the rest of the day, although there was plenty of snow on the ground at the venue, and where it had, or was melting, the ground was rather soggy and muddy, and some unfortunate displayers or vendors who had put up tents outside the night before had suffered from the downfall. It was interesting though to see the familiar usually-green surroundings clothed in snow, along with of course the nearby hills, and I found it easy to imagine being in the Highlands somewhere. The other thing reminiscent of the Scottish Games and Gatherings was the presence of several of the entertainment groups that we have previously seen at those; Wicked Tinkers, Tempest, and Black Irish, whose rollicking performances certainly got the blood flowing and compensated for the outside conditions. As expected, attendance was certainly down at the start of the event, and we heard of quite a lot of people, both participants and spectators, who couldn't get there because of snow on the roads, but the sun came out some and the crowds had improved later in the day. We stayed until almost sundown, and then on the journey home took a wrong turn and an unintended thirty-minute detour in the dark on the way back to Jackson, where we had dinner at the Dennys where a number of us Gregors had eaten breakfast the morning after last year's Volcano event (again with the same waitress we had at that breakfast, and dinner at the Italian restaurant the night before!) We got to my home about 10.30pm, at which stage the sky was relatively clear, with the moon out. We were rather surprised the next morning to wake up and find we had had some more Highland weather; 5" of snow during the night, and it was still going, and continued in varying degrees of heaviness through till mid-afternoon. And, we have been having quite a lot of snow and rain up here ever since. However, we were lucky with the weather at the next games we attended; in Bakersfield on Saturday April 2nd. It was predicted that it would rain that day, but instead it rained during the night before while we were asleep and didn't notice, and it stayed dry during the event. We drove down there on the Friday, actually choosing to travel on the infamous Highway 99 to provide things-to-look-at compared with the boring but faster Hwy 5. After checking into the hotel about mid-afternoon, we went exploring and checked out the Games venue. It seemed fairly small at the time, and we expected that the event would be also, but we were pleasantly surprised the next day to find how many clan tents and vendors they had crammed into the space, along with Wicked Tinkers and other entertainers. Unfortunately I didn't get as much time as I would have hoped to peruse all of the above, as part of the reason we had travelled down there was to hold the obligatory twice-yearly Council Meeting, which we did at the tent. We almost didn't, as several Council members who had indicated they would be there didn't make it, and we almost didn't have a quorum. However, we did eventually manage to discuss and decide on a number of items of Clan business, despite the as-usual-very-loud Wicked Tinkers performing about 25 yards away! Amongst other items, both Jeff Sykes (he and his brother Chris are our Northern Tent Co-Ordinators), and his father, Ed Sykes, were appointed to Council pending ratification at the next AGM. Ed also accepted the position of Secretary which had been vacant for some months. (Now that there are three members of the Sykes family on the Council, we are expecting a "takeover" at any moment!) As well as the bare minimum number of 5 Council Members present, we had quite a few other Clan members and family and friends in attendance, some having just driven down for the day, and others of us who were staying one or more nights. About 10 of us assembled ourselves at a local buffet restaurant for dinner later in the evening, and had an enjoyable time together. Our next Council Meeting, and AGM, are scheduled for during the Fresno Games on September 16th. The next Games and Gathering we are expecting to attend is the 2-day event at Woodland on 29th & 30th April, and a number of our Members have already indicated they were going to be there. This is a fairly large Gathering in a pleasant well-spread-out area, with lots of trees (in the hopes we have sunshine!), and no apparent restriction on space; lots of vendors and food purveyors, British car display, Scottish animals, piping, dancing, and, of course, the field competitions, etc. As a 2-day event it provides a great opportunity for our Members and friends and family to get together on at least one of the days, and we always have an enjoyable time here. We will probably try and arrange (as usual), somewhere to have dinner together on the Saturday night for those interested. This event is kind-of the first of the local Scottish ones for us here in the north end of the state, then it's "open season" from there on! I certainly hope to see as many of my brothers and sisters as possible during this year; renewing old acquaintances, and making new ones. Don't forget to plan for the events as listed in the newsletter, and remember to invite family, friends, and potential Clan Members to share our heritage and kinship with us. Remember, "Macgregors despite them shall flourish forever".

Regards to you all.
Ard Choille Macgregor.....

Feuds and Funerals

by Edward Moore

Much has been written about the long-standing feud and strife between the Clan Gregor and Clan Campbell. However, what is lesser known is the amount of intermarriages that have occurred between the two. Even Rob Roy's mother was a Campbell as was his grandmother. The following bit of history concerns, this prolific woman.

Jean Campbell was the daughter of Sir Robert Campbell of Glenorchy, a sister of the tenth Laird of Glenorchy and the aunt of Grey John Campbell of Breadalbane. She made marriage and childbirth her profession, having three husbands and sixteen children.

When very young, she married Archibald Campbell, the heir of Glenlyon, and was left a widow with two sons, Robert and Colin, and two daughters, Mary and Margaret (Rob Roy's mother), when about twenty-five years old. After the death of Archibald in 1640, she married Patrick Roy MacGregor, of Roro, 13th chief of the Clan Gregor. She bore him two sons and two daughters. He was a vigorous and mettlesome gentleman (by report), but no match for her, and when he went the way of his predecessor, she married Duncan Mor Stewart, the Third Laird of Appin by whom understandably perhaps, she had children also.

The much married lady lived long, and the heavy settlements made upon her by her first husband and his father, along with the spend-thrift habits of her son, Robert, ruined sadly the, till then, fairly flourishing Campbells of Glenlyon. Jean Campbell, on the death of her third husband, returned to Chesthill.

Her son, Robert Campbell, of Glenlyon had to live modestly but at least he spared his mother the indignity of a quiet funeral. He gave her a memorable send-off. When Jean Campbell died, the Stewarts of Appin, the MacGregors of Roro, and the Campbells of Glenlyon held a wake that was remembered in Breadalbane for two hundred years. As a preliminary to draw a crowd, there were full-scale Highland games.

The days between the death of the valiant old woman and her internment were filled with riotous drinking, feasting and games, as was the custom. All three clans competed against each other in foot racing, wrestling, fencing, throwing the stone and hammer and tossing the caber. The Campbells outmatched their opponents, until a MacGregor of Roro threw a stone between the fork of a high tree and could not be beaten. Believing that a Glenlyon Campbell should be the first at his mother's funeral as it had been in her marriage bed, Capt. Robert Campbell sent for one of his herdsman. This shepherd, a giant of a man, was a Robert MacArthur who lived fifteen miles up the glen.

After walking the fifteen miles, the shepherd was there by daybreak and as the dawn came creeping over the sky he practiced and re-practiced the tricky throw. Before the MacGregors were out of their beds he was satisfied. Later that morning, without removing his cumbersome belted plaid or bonnet he threw the stone between the same tree-fork and yards far beyond the MacGregor's mark. The delighted Robert Campbell broached more whisky and there was a double measure for everyone, to celebrate that mighty throw, and afterwards, the fun was so fast and furious that they had no time to bury her ladyship that day. So they left her burial till the following morning after another twenty-four hours of games and drinking.

This was the same Sir Robert Campbell who would gain infamy as the "Butcher of Glenlyon" and be associated with the massacre of the MacDonalds at Glencoe.
