INDIA-RUBBER HORSE-SHOE PADS.

Frog Pad.

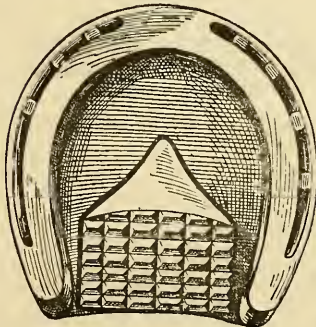

Double Bar Pad.

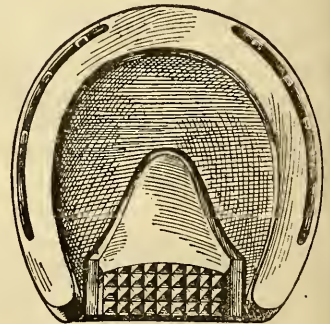

our already extensive connection. We supply these pads all over England and Scotland, and also in America and the Colonies.

THE excellent benefits derived from the use of these pads are well known to Veterinary Surgeons, Farriers, and Horse-Shoers. Not only do they prevent slipping, but are an effectual cure for corns and diseased feet. These pads are made under our own supervision, possessing, therefore, two genuine qualities,—best materials and first-class workmanship. We have no doubt that our new prices shall greatly increase

We shall have pleasure in sending our revised price list, which is beautifully illustrated, to any Veterinary Surgeon or Horse Shoer enclosing their business card with application.

Square Corrugated Pad.

Single Bar Pad.

We are also manufacturers, on an extensive scale, of all other India-rubber goods, Waterproof Coats being our leading speciality. All our garments are appreciated for their inodorous and thoroughly waterproof qualities. Patterns with prices, &c.

ABERDEEN, city on the River Dee. The county town of Aberdeenshire, a Royal and Parliamentary burgh, a University town, a seat of Justice, and Sheriff Courts, and a head port. It is one of the finest cities in Great Britain, and, being built of granite, is aptly called "The Granite City." The public buildings are numerous, and include the Municipal and County Buildings (1869), cost £60,000; Lunatic Asylum (1819), £20,000; Infirmary (1840), £17,000; Marischal College (1841), £21,500; Grammar School (1863), £15,000; Post Office (1876),

£16,000; the New Market (1882), £23,000, the most handsome building of its kind in Scotland; many attractive ecclesiastical buildings; and several new and capacious schools. The public parks are the Victoria Park, the Union Terrace Gardens (with a colossal statue to the memory of Wallace), and the Duthie Park. It has a head post office, with all departments and several sub-offices. It has railway communication with all parts. The Churches are Es., F., U.P., Cong., E.U., Bap., Ep., R.C., &c. The harbour has recently undergone great and costly improvements, and is now most commodious. A considerable import and export trade is being carried on, and coasting steamers sail regularly to Buckie, Cromarty, Dundee, Leith (for Edinburgh), Hull, Invergordon, Inverness, Kirkwall, Lerwick, Liverpool, London, Newcastle, Oban, Stromness, Stornoway, Thurso, Wick, &c. It is one of the principal fishing ports on the east coast. Pop. 121,623, inhabited houses 26,360

ABERDEEN (OLD), a police burgh, an old city on the Don. The seat of a University, and formerly an Episcopal See. This curious old city, divested of its University, its Cathedral, and its historical associations, may be considered a straggling suburb of its opulent and powerful neighbour. P. O. with M. O. and T. depts. under Aberdeen. Pop. 1951, inhabited houses 451

ABERDEENSHIRE, a large maritime county, bounded on the north and east by Banff and the North Sea, on the west by Banff and Inverness, and on the south by Perth, Forfar, and Kincardine. It contains the districts of Mar, Garioch, Strathbegie, Formartine, and Buchan. The county is for the most part hilly, and in some parts even mountainous; its principal heights are Ben Muich-Dhui, 4296 feet; Cairnton, 4241; Cairngorm, 4084; Benabour, 3924; and Lochnagar, 3786. It is famous for its granite, which is very durable and much used for building purposes. A large portion of the county is under wood: in the most fertile parts wheat, oats, and turnips are grown, and large numbers of sheep and cattle are fed and reared for the principal English markets. The county is watered by the Dee, the Don, the Ythan, and the Deveron. It has important fisheries, and is the seat of the Queen's High-

CAITHNESS-SHIRE, the most northern county of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Pentland Firth, east by the Moray Firth and the German Ocean, and south and west by Fife and the Mearns. Its general aspect is level and bare, a large portion being moorland and treeless. The northern sea-coast is bold and rocky, with Dunnet Head and Duncansby Head, on the west side of which is John o' Groat's House. The coast and river fisheries employ a great proportion of the inhabitants, and are the principal branch of trade. Cattle-rearing is pursued to a considerable extent, and agriculture has been much improved of late. The climate is damp and chilly. Among the minerals found are limestone, shale, sandstone, and lead ore. Caithness-shire returns one member to Parliament. Area. 455,799 acres. Pop. 38,054

- CLYDE, one of the largest rivers of Scotland, rising in the south part of Lanarkshire, and forming an arm of the sea, called the Firth of Clyde, near the castle of Dumbarton. It becomes navigable at the city of Glasgow. The first boat in Europe successfully propelled by steam was launched on this river in 1812; and since then the river's shipping and ship-building have both grown enormously. Near Larark the river descends from 560 to 200 feet, forming the celebrated Falls of Clyde, above which flows a beautiful trout stream, passing through a fertile valley amid lovely scenery. The waters become more sluggish and polluted as it nears Glasgow, and large sums of money have been spent in improving and deepening the channel from Glasgow to Dumbarton, with great success. Along the ancient sea-margin of the river is an almost continuous line of watering-places, much frequented during the summer months

EDINBURGH, metropolis of Scotland, seat of the college of justice, or court of session, which is the supreme court of Scotland; of the judiciary exchequer, and other courts; a university city, royal and parliamentary burgh, the county town of Edinburghshire, and the place of the annual meeting of general assemblies of both the Church of Scotland and the Free Church, and of the Synod of the United Presbyterian Church; a city of great antiquity, was for many centuries seat of royal administration and the meeting place of parliament. It figured so long and prominent in national events that its history is much connected with the general history of Scotland. Of late years it has undergone costly improvements and progressive extensions, so vast that it would be out of place in these limits to enter into detail. It measures—exclusive of important suburbs—about two miles from east to west, and about 2½ miles from north to south. The public buildings are numerous and attractive, many of them magnificent edifices. Among those of most interest are:—Holyrood Palace; the Castle; Parliament House; the University; the New University Buildings, including the McEwan Hall (1897), gifted by Wm. McEwan, M.P. (citizen); New North Bridge (1897); Usher Town Hall (in progress, 1898), gifted by the late Andrew Usher (citizen); Museum of Science and Art; Antiquarian Museum; Phrenological Museum;

Heriot's Hospital, completed 1650 at a cost of £30,000; Royal Exchange (1761) £31,000; Bank of Scotland (1806) £75,000; County Buildings (1817) £15,000; Register House (1820) £80,000, since added to; High School (1827) £30,000; Edinburgh Academy (1824) £20,000; Royal College of Surgeons (1833) £20,000; the Orphan Hospital (1833) £16,000; Royal Institution (1836) £40,000; Corn Exchange (1849) £20,000; Donaldson's Hospital (1851) £100,000; British Linen Co.'s Bank (1852) £30,000; Stewart's Hospital (1853) £50,000; Art Galleries (1858) £40,000; General Post Office (1866) £120,000; Sheriff Court Buildings (1868) £44,000; Fettes' College (1870) £150,000; Maternity Hospital (1878) £10,000; the New Royal Infirmary (1879) £380,000; National Portrait Gallery (1880) gifted to the city by John Ritchie Findlay, proprietor of the "Scotsman." Free Library (1890) £50,860 (the gift of Mr A. Carnegie), contains 70,000 vols.; has 45,000 readers in lending department. Its chief industries are printing, publishing, and brewing. It has a Royal Lunatic Asylum, Blind Asylum, Deaf and Dumb Institution, &c., Botanic Gardens and Arboretum, several public parks and squares adorned by many monuments, of which the most conspicuous is Sir Walter Scott's, completed in 1844 at a cost of £15,050. The university has obtained at least as high a medical reputation as any in Europe, while the other educational establishments are justly celebrated. It will compare favourably with any city in Great Britain for the number and importance of its benevolent and charitable establishments, and valuable endowments for the maintenance and instruction of the young. It has a variety of scientific and literary institutions. The religious and missionary societies are most prominent. The ecclesiastical buildings are both numerous and handsome, several of which are highly interesting. The Churches are—Established, Free, United Presbyterian, Episcopal, Baptist, Congregational, Evangelical Union, Wesleyan, Roman Catholic, Original Secession, Primitive Methodist, Catholic Apostolic, Society of Friends, Unitarian, and a Jewish Synagogue. It has railway communication to all parts, and two handsome stations. Its seaports are Leith and Granton. Pop. 201,201, inhabited houses 51,075. The parishes are Canongate, acres 678, pop. 8580; City, acres 603, pop. 54,890; St Cuthbert's, acres 6628, Pop. 192,609. Population, including

FORFARSHIRE, or ANGUS, a county, bounded north by the counties of Aberdeen and Kincardine, east by the German Ocean, south by the Firth of Tay, and west by the county of Perth. The general aspect of the county is mountainous and irregular; it is traversed by the Grampians, which rise to the height of 3000 feet, and also by the Sidlaw Hills. Among the numerous valleys intersected through the county the most noted is Strathmore, which extends beyond the county, and is celebrated for its beauty and fertility. The rivers are the North and South Esk, the Isla, and several smaller streams. All the ordinary crops are grown; it has also important fisheries, large quantities of salmon being sent to London. The minerals include limestone, porphyry, jasper, many varieties of pebbles, and cairngorms. A number of vessels are also engaged in the whale fisheries. Forfarshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 568,750 acres. Pop. 280,053

FORTH, a river which rises in the north side of Ben Lomond, and gradually expands into an estuary called the Firth of Forth, which extends for many miles. It is about 35 to 40 miles wide at its mouth from Fifeness on the north to St Abb's Head on the south shore. It contains a number of small islands, among which are Inchkeith, Isle of May, both having lighthouses, Inchgarvie, Inchcolm, and the Bass Rock. The Forth possesses many good harbours, and St Margaret's Hope, above Queensferry, is one of the safest roadsteads in the kingdom. The river is 180 miles long, including the celebrated "links or windings." The Forth is crossed at Queensferry by the famous railway bridge, which consists of two main spans of 1700 feet each, and two of 675' its total length, inclusive of piers, being over a mile and a half. It was built at a cost of £3,000,000; the engineers were Sir John Fowler and Sir Benjamin Baker.

GLASGOW, the commercial and manufacturing capital of Scotland, and, in aggregate importance, the second city in the empire. Situate on the Clyde, and 47½ miles by rail from Edinburgh. Is the political capital of Lanarkshire, a royal and parliamentary burgh, a university city, seat of judiciary and sheriff courts, and a head port. Originated from the cathedral founded about A.D. 560; was made a royal burgh in 1180; and was but a small burgh of limited extent in 1550. Its great and continued prosperity—entirely the result of enterprise and skill in manufacturers and commerce—only dates from last century. Its present vast predominance testifies to the vitality and energy of its citizens. In the fifty years between 1831 and 1881 it considerably more than trebled its population, and now, including suburbs, measures 5 miles by 4½, and is of such magnitude that space will not admit here of even a meagre description. The public buildings are both numerous and handsome, and include many very interesting and noble structures. The Cathedral, the University, the Merchants' House, the General Post Office, and the Royal Exchange, may be mentioned. The Municipal buildings recently erected cost about £500,000, including £165,000 paid for the site. The charitable institutions are many, the most important being the Royal Infirmary, Western Infirmary, Fever Hospitals, Small-pox Hospital, Maternity Hospital, Asylum for the Blind, Deaf and Dumb Institute, Lunatic Asylum, &c. It has various scientific and literary institutions, including a museum and two public libraries, also a Royal Botanic Garden, several public parks and many monuments—no fewer than 11 standing in George Square. The Churches are Established, Free, United Presbyterian, Episcopal, Baptist, Evangelical Union, Congregational, Wesleyan,

Roman Catholic, Catholic Apostolic, Methodist, Christadelphian, Original Secession, Unitarian, Plymouth Brethren, Society of Friends, Christian Brethren, and a Jewish Synagogue.—The harbour shared in the prosperity of the city, and by extensions from time to time, necessitated by increasing trade, acquired its present greatness at a cost of over £11,000,000. In 1801 the quayside of the harbour was only 382 yards in length, the water area 4 acres; the revenue from the harbour and river £3400. In 1898 the length of the quayside was eight miles, the water area 205½ acres, and the revenue £410,034. For about 2½ miles from Glasgow Bridge the river presents the appearance of an immense dock, and is deep enough for the largest sea-going ships. The harbour possesses all the appliances of a first-class port, and is connected with the whole railway system of the kingdom. The export, import, and coasting trades are enormous. For sailings of steamers see list of Shipping Offices. Pop. of parliamentary burgh 564,968, inhabited houses 117,537. Pop. of city and suburbs 792,728, inhabited houses 162,064. The parishes are: Barony 309,812, City 176, 824, Govan 280,275

HEBRIDES, THE, as now understood, includes all the Western Islands from the Mull of Kintyre to Cape Wrath, consisting of a series of groups of islands and rocky islets extending 205 miles—from the Butt of Lewis to the Mull of Oba, in Islay—along the weird, wild, and romantic coast of the West Highlands. The distance of the various islands from the mainland varies from less than ¼ a mile at Kyle Rhea, south-east of Skye, to over 100 miles to Inne St Kilda, and from 1½ miles at Gigha to 21 at the south of Islay. The entire number of these islands and islets exceeds 500, but only about 180 are of any value. Of these, 101 were inhabited in 1871, and had a population of 81,591. Lewis and Harris, Skye, Mull, Islay, Jura, and North and South Uists are the principal islands. These are very much diversified as regards scenery—that of Skye and other islands of the Inner Hebrides being the grandest scenery perhaps in Scotland; the scenery of Lewis and other islands of the Outer Hebrides is less picturesque, but a peculiar feature of these is the immense number of fresh water lochs scattered everywhere, and yielding some of the best salmon and trout fishing in Scotland. Most of the islands are extensively intersected by inlets and arms of the sea, affording safe and sheltered anchorages. The Lords of the Isles and the Insular Chiefs of the various turbulent clans have left numerous monuments of their ambition and their rule, in the form of towers and castles; and the remains of the religious establishments testify to the Christian zeal and piety of former generations.

INVERNESS, the county town of Inverness-shire, a royal and parliamentary burgh, seat of judiciary and sheriff courts, a great tourists' centre, and a head port; has been long designated the capital of the Highlands. It stands on the river Ness, is one of the most attractive towns in Scotland, and in respect of its local situation and the magnificence of its surrounding scenery is unsurpassed. It has a head P. O. with all depts., and a commodious R. S., several imposing public buildings, elegant churches, a handsome Episcopalian Cathedral, an academy, a public library and reading room, an infirmary, a lunatic asylum, and a number of miscellaneous institutions. The Churches are Es., F., U.P., Ep., Wes., and R. C. Coasting steamers sail regularly to Aberdeen, Cromarty, Fort-William, Glasgow, Invergordon, Leith, Liverpool, &c. Pop. 19,214, inhabited houses 4293.—Inverness par. Acres 23,600. Pop. 23,895

INVERNESS-SHIRE is the largest county in Scotland, stretching from sea to sea; it is bounded on the north by Ross-shire and part of the Moray Firth, east by the counties of Nairn, Moray, and Aberdeen, and south by those of Perth and Argyle, and west by the Atlantic Ocean. A small district between the counties of Banff and Moray, is annexed, and several of the Hebrides—Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Raasay, Bigg, St Kilda, and others. The mainland portion is divided into two almost equal parts by the Great Glen and the Caledonian Canal, the northern extremity of this glen opens by the river Ness into the Moray Firth, and flowing in a south-westerly direction encloses Lochs Ness, Oich, Lochy, and Eil, whence it extends into the Atlantic Ocean by Loch Linnhe. In the northern part is Strath Glass, with its tributaries running into the Firth of Beaulv. The county is noted for its unsurpassed romantic scenery; its glens and mountains. It contains Ben Nevis, the highest mountain in Britain, which attains a height of 4406 feet, and several other ranges which present some of the finest mountain scenery in the world. It is well watered, the principal rivers being the Ness, the Lochy, the Beaulv, and the Spey. The Caledonian Canal connects the east and west seas from Loch Eil on the west to the Moray Firth on the east coast. The west coast is indented by numerous salt-water lochs. There are extensive grouse moors and deer forests, game being very plentiful; the rivers abound with salmon, and in the lochs the char is found in great perfection. Only a small portion of the land is cultivated, the greater part being moor and heathy ground; black sheep are reared in large numbers, also cattle. Oats are the principal crop; and wheat is also grown in the neighbourhood of the Moray Firth. Limestone is found in large quantities. Inverness-shire

LANARKSHIRE, or CLYDESDALE, a county, bounded on the north and north-west by the counties of Renfrew, Dumbarton, and Stirling, north-east by the counties of Linlithgow and Edinburgh, east by Peebleshire, south by Dumfriesshire, and south-west by Ayrshire. The county is divided into three wards. The Southern or Upper Ward comprises nearly two-thirds of the whole county, and consists for the most part of hills and moors; the hills in some parts rising to a considerable height; farther down the Clyde the scenery is very picturesque. In the Middle Ward the surface is flatter and the soil more fertile. The principal river is the Clyde with its numerous tributaries. It has three canals, the Forth and Clyde Canal, the Monkland Canal, and the Ardrossan Canal. The county is famous for its orchards, also fruits and vegetables, which are grown for the Glasgow market. Lanarkshire contains the chief coal-fields in Scotland, which are very extensive. It is also noted for the rearing of cattle and dairy farming. Among the numerous minerals found are freestone, limestone, ironstone, granite, and coal. The coal stretches through this county in one solid mass for

STIRLINGSHIRE, a county, bounded north by the counties of Perth and Clackmannan, on the east by the Firth of Forth and Linlithgowshire, and on the south and west by the counties of Lanark and Dumbarton. The county is diversified by mountains, hills, plains, woods, and plantations. A broad plain stretches from the water of Avon towards the north-west, and is terminated by the Grampian Hills and Ben Lomond. It is intersected by the Forth, and includes the vales of Stirling and Falkirk, which produce excellent crops. The central and southern districts are partly mountainous, and partly level and fertile, the former being, for the most part, occupied by the Campsie Hills. The principal rivers are the Forth, the Carron, the Bannockburn, the Endrick, the Blane, and the Kelvin. Loch

- Lomond is on the west borders of the county, and a navigable canal, which connects the Firth of Forth with the Clyde is partly in Stirlingshire. All the common crops are grown, and large numbers of cattle are fed and reared for the Falkirk cattle fairs. Coal is found in great abundance, also ironstone, freestone, limestone, silver, copper, cobalt, and lead. Stirlingshire is the scene of many important historical events, of which many traces still remain. Stirlingshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 295,875 acres. Pop. 119,124

SUNART, LOCH, an inlet of the sea, lying between Ardnamurchan on the north and Morven and the Isle of Mull on the south. It is 22 miles long with an average breadth of 2 miles. It contains several small islands

SUTHERLANDSHIRE, a county, extending across the whole breadth of Scotland, from the North Sea to the Atlantic Ocean. It is bounded on the west by the Minch, north by the Northern Ocean, east by the county of Caithness, south-east by the Dornoch Firth, and south by the Oickel and several smaller streams, which separates it from the county of Ross and Cromarty. The surface of the county is rugged and mountainous, except on the south-east shore. The eastern district, near the German Ocean, consists of a strip of level land which runs along the coast side; the middle or central district, resembles the other parts of the Highlands of Scotland, it contains the valleys of the rivers of Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet, and Oickel, with their tributary streams issuing from the neighbouring mountains. The shores bordering the Atlantic are wild, rocky, and mountainous. The Assynt Mountains are huge and barren, but the glens between afford excellent pasture for sheep. On the coasts of the numerous bays many tracts of land have been brought under cultivation, but the climate, from the constant rain and mists, is unfavourable to the growth of crops. The principal rivers are the Oickel, which enters the Firth of Dornoch, and is navigable for about 12 miles from its mouth, the Water of Fleet, the Water of Brora, the Water of Helmsdale, the Water of Haldhale, the Water of Strath, the Naver, the Waters of Kenloch, Hope, Dionaed, and Eribol. There are also lakes, the chief being Loch Assynt, Loch Elphin, Loch Leigheal, Loch More, and Loch Shin, the last of which stretches 20 miles north-west to south-east, is about one mile broad and abounds with salmon and trout. There are extensive deer forests, and abundance of all kinds of game. The Duke of Sutherland is the largest landowner. The minerals include rock crystals, pebbles, and garnets. Sutherlandshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 1,207,138 acres. Pop. 21,047

TAY, the largest and most beautiful of Scottish rivers, it rises on the borders of Argyleshire, and passes through Loch Dochart and Loch Tay; after being increased by various tributary streams it passes by Perth. A little below this town it turns to the east, and after receiving the waters of the Earn, and passing through the Carse of Gowrie, it attains a width of nearly 3 miles. The breadth of the river, however, narrows to 2 miles at Dundee, where it is spanned by the railway bridge, about 8 miles below it enters the German Ocean. It has a course of about 100 miles, and is unrivalled for its valuable salmon fisheries

- WIGTOWNSHIRE, a county, bounded on the east by Kirkcubrightshire, south and west by the Irish Sea, and north by Ayrshire. The county is irregular and deeply indented by Loch Ryan and Luce Bay, which forms the Rhins of Galloway (q.v.) The richest lands lie near the coast and on the banks of the rivers. The rising grounds in the east through the parish of Wigtown and the lower parts of Penningham are for the most part fit for tillage. The peninsula, called the Rhins, is also good arable land. The hills in this part of the county rise to a considerable height, and act as a barrier against the westerly winds. The north districts called the Moors are bleak and hilly; they occupy nearly one-half of the county, and contain only a few patches of arable land. The principal rivers are the Cree, the Bladenock, the Tarff, the Luce, and others. The climate is mild and humid. The chief crops are oats and barley, also wheat, potatoes, and turnips. Slate and marble are found. Wigtownshire returns one member to Parliament. Area, 327,906 acres Pop. 35,856 ready extensive connection. We supply these pads all over England and Scotland, and in America and the Colonies.

THE excellent benefits derived from the use of these pads are well known to Veterinary Surgeons, Farriers, and Horse-Shoers. Not only do they prevent slipping, but are an effectual cure for corns and diseased feet. These pads are made under our own supervision, possessing, therefore, two genuine qualities,—best materials and first-class workmanship. We have no doubt that our new prices shall greatly increase

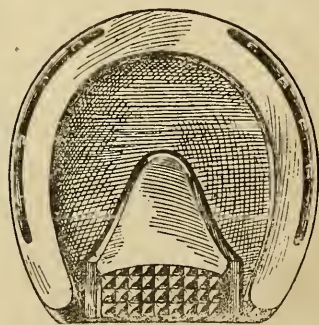

Double Bar Pad.

Square Corrugated Pad.

We shall have pleasure in sending our revised price list, which is beautifully illustrated, to any Veterinary Surgeon or Horse Shoer enclosing their business card with application.

We are also manufacturers, on an extensive scale, of all other India-rubber goods, Waterproof Coats being our leading speciality. All our garments are appreciated for their inodorous and thoroughly waterproof qualities. Patterns with prices, &c.
