

GLOSSARY.

[THE purpose of a Glossary being simply to facilitate intelligent reading, it has not been sought either to trace the words explained below to their etymological sources, or to give all the meanings that may be attached to some of them.

The dialect of Aberdeenshire is so peculiar that many of its words will hardly be intelligible even to the inhabitant of the southern and western districts of Scotland. It is, however, tolerably consistent in its peculiarities; and, therefore, while the Glossary presents the meanings, a remark or two may be allowed with the view of enabling the reader to arrive at the pronunciation of the words.

In certain present participles, and participial nouns, the only difference between them and the same words in English is the dropping of the terminal g; thus, workin' for working; and therefore it has not been thought necessary to cumber the Glossary by the insertion of such words. In many of the words the digraph ch has been substituted for gh in the spelling, in order to indicate the guttural sound; thus, nicht for night. Wh is changed into f, to express the actual pronunciation; thus, wha (who), fa; whip, fup.

Oo in the south of Scotland has the sound of the French u; as, in shoon, moon, spoon, but, by the time he has crossed the Dee, the philologist will find the oo changed into ee, sounded precisely as in the name of that beautiful river, and thus we get sheen, meen, speen. There are, however, various exceptions to this rule; look, for example, becomes leuk, not leek; and book, beuk, not beek. Th gets changed into d; as fuder for father; breeder for brother, and so on. The change of wh into f, and of th into d, both find illustration in one word, fudder (sometimes futher), whether.

Diminutives, in which Aberdeenshire Scotch is peculiarly rich, are generally formed by adding ie to the noun, as lass, lassie; dog, doggie. Ock, supposed by some to represent the Gaelic og, young, is not, however, uncommon, as lass, lassock. And, frequently, as indicating a still greater degree of diminution, both are employed, thus: lass, lassock, lassockie. But, not satisfied with this, the natives carry the diminution yet farther, by two or three degrees. And so we have a bit lassockie, a wee bit lassockie; and lastly, a little wee bit lassockie, in the fifth degree of comparison. Examples of such kindly diminution occur in the lines—

There was a wee bit wifockie, an' she gaed to the fair,
She gat a wee bit drappockie that bred her muckle care.

D, t, and l' at the end of words are often dropped: thus, respect becomes respeck; wind, win'; and wall, wa'. The omission of final d after l is uniform, and distinguishes the dialect from classical Scottish. Thus auld, bauld, fauld, (pl. fauls), for auld, bauld, fauld; English old, etc. V is also frequently omitted wherever it occurs: thus have becomes hae, and harvest, hairst.

In the spelling of certain words y or e has been introduced to indicate, as near as might be, the veritable pronunciation; as gyaun, neuk, leuk. G and k are always pronounced before n, as in German, thus gnash, gnap, knife.

The greater part of the words will be found in Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary, though by no means the whole. It has not been thought necessary to adhere to Jamieson's spelling, the author taking it upon him to believe that neither in Jamieson nor elsewhere is authoritative or perfectly satisfactory guidance to be got in determining the correct orthography of the Aberdeenshire dialect. In the circumstances, while taking care to make his characters speak with idiomatical accuracy in the text, he has endeavoured there and in the Glossary to present their speech to the eye with as little departure from relative Saxon or other forms as might be, and yet with such regard to phonetic considerations as seemed likely to give a measure of guidance in pronunciation.]
