INTRODUCTION

The present volume is the third and last of those which deal with the fortunes of the Scots Brigade in Holland. In the first two were printed the papers preserved in the Government archives of the Netherlands, and there was prefixed to each period or section into which the long history of two hundred years naturally divided itself a narrative of the fighting career with which the papers were connected.

The present volume is of a supplementary character, for the history was already complete in the two previous volumes. It was originally intended to consist of the Rotterdam Papers, which were books kept in each regiment by the chaplain, in which births and marriages were recorded, a careful account kept of the money collected and expended on charitable or similar objects, and containing in one case a very complete list of attendances at Communion services, and in another a short but interesting series of minutes of a kirk-session constituted in one of the regiments, which seems to have come to an untimely end in an unequal conflict of a characteristically Scottish type between the ecclesiastical and the civil—or rather the military—power.

Owing to the courtesy of Mr. John Scott, C.B., of Halkhill, who has kindly permitted the Scottish History Society to print an interesting manuscript in his possession, it has been possible to accompany the dry details of the Rotterdam Papers with a curious, quaint, and graphic narrative of the whole period of the campaigns of Marlborough, written apparently more or less as a journal from time to time though in a metrical form, by a private soldier in one of the additional regiments which were added to the Brigade during the War of the Spanish Succession.

Owing also to the good offices of Lord Reay and M. Hoynck van Papendrecht of Arnhem, it has been possible to supply coloured illustrations showing the uniform of each of the regiments\(^1\) between the years 1775 and 1780.

THE ROTTERDAM PAPERS

The following account of these papers is given in a note in Steven’s History of the Scots Church at Rotterdam:—

\(^{1}\) In 1784, a short time after this fine body of men [the Brigade] was disbanded, Count Bentinck caused the baptismal and marriage registers to be entrusted to the care of the Kirk-Session of the National Scottish Church in Rotterdam. Having agreed to take charge of these documents so interesting to Scotesmen, the Session caused public intimation to be made in the principal Dutch newspapers as to the place of their deposit. In December 1811, however, when all consistories in Holland were obliged to surrender to the respective municipalities every such record in their custody, those belonging to the Scottish Brigade were also given up upon a receipt from the Lord Mayor. The earliest of these registers is dated 1708. Before, and even long after that period, it was no unusual thing for the members of the regiment to employ the native clergy at their various stations to celebrate marriage and administer baptism. Whether the chaplains of the Brigade kept regular public registers of christenings, etc., prior to the beginning of last century I have not been able to ascertain. It seems probable that they did not.

\(^{1}\) The four folio volumes now preserved in the Stadt House of Rotterdam are labelled as follows:—

\(^{1}\) 1. “A general register of children’s names baptized by Rev. Mr. Donald Bayne, Mr. Robert Douglas, and Mr. Alexr. Macaulay, formerly keep’d in separate bookes: by order of Major-General MacKay, transcribed [at Breda, April 1769] into one which may serve as an authentic register for the future, with papers relative to the same." This volume commences Dec. 17th, 1708, and ends Augt. 18th, 1782.

2. "Register of Marriages done by Mr. Charles Campbell, minister in Genl. Colyear's regt.," afterwards commanded by Genl. Dundas. This marriage record begins August 1718, and terminates March 18th, 1783. The same volume includes the births and baptisms from Dec. 30th, 1711, to Feb. 5th, 1783.

3. "Reg. of marriages in Genl. Stuart's regt., commencing June 16th, 1767, and ending January 30th, 1780." This volume likewise contains the baptisms from Jan. 21st, 1771, to May 31st, 1781.

4. "Register of marriages performed by the Rev. Mr. Donald Bayne, chaplain to the right hon. Major-Gen. Murray's regt." It commences 6th March 1709, and ends 8th August 1778. This volume contains an exact list of the communicants belonging to the regiment who partook of the Lord's Supper from 1714 to 1779.'

There is little to be said in the way of introduction to these papers. They speak for themselves, and contain illustrations from the inside of some features in the life of the regiments whose services have been presented in the preceding volumes. The marriage registers indicate how friendly were the relations between the Scottish soldiers and the native population, especially in the barrier towns, where they were so largely quartered during the period covered, and all the registers illustrate how in the later years the rank and file ceased to be Scottish and became to a great extent foreign. But it is interesting to note that the oldest regiment of all, the Mackay regiment, seems to have preserved its Scottish character most successfully to the end; while, throughout, the one in which the largest proportion of foreign names is found was the second, as to which, when it was commanded by Lauder, the Duke of Marlborough had protested against the giving of commissions to foreigners, and declared the desire of the Queen 'to preserve the regiments entire in the Scottish nation.' The bandsmen seem not infrequently to have been foreigners. Another interesting fact is the extent to which the characteristic names of the Northern Highlands occur throughout the century, indicating how strong was the impress left by General Mackay on his own regiment, and how though his near kinsmen had settled in Holland, the connection must have been kept up with Ross and Sutherland. The names of Mackay, MacKenzie, MacLeod, Sutherland, Gun, Ross, Munro, Urquhart, Fraser, Polson, Mathieson are all found, some of them with great frequency; and they are accompanied by many other distinctive, though not so hyper-borean, clan and north-country names, such as Macdonald, MacLean, Cameron, Macrae, Grant, Gordon, Forbes, Cumming, and Stewart. But Highlanders and Mackays were not confined to one regiment, and in all, throughout the eighteenth century, a large proportion of recruits must have been drawn from beyond the Highland line.

The officers whose names are found in the registers seem to have been drawn pretty much alike from the Highlands and the Lowlands. Entries occur relating to the following families:

| Alexander. | Forbes. | MacLeod. |
| Bruce. | Halkett. | Pringle. |
| Cameron (of Lochiel). | Hume. | Ross. |
| Campbell. | Irons. | Scott. |
| Colquhoun. | Lamy (of Dunkenny). | Stuart or Stewart. |
| Cuninghame. | Lindsay. | Thomson. |
|           | Mackay. | Watson. |
|           |         | Young. |

The Registers of course do not include all the names of families furnishing officers to the Brigade.

The Edict 1 of the States-General prefixed to the Marriage

Register of Stuart's Regiment shows, in characteristically Dutch phrases, the views of the Government upon the subject of mixed marriages, and 'the mother being sponsor to train up the child in the Protestant religion' indicates that recruits were obtained from among other than Protestant foreigners. Generally the witnesses to baptisms were non-commissioned officers or comrades in the ranks, but the officers of the company probably frequently acted as such, and in one or two cases non-commissioned officers are found witnessing the baptism of an officer's child, while in the case of the child of Sergeant Archibald Lauder in 1776, the entry is 'Testes the congregation of the Regimental Church.' The entries of attendances at the Communion, although very carefully made, do not quite bear out the classification of 'the colonel's lady, the captain's wife, and the subaltern's poor thing,' but the description of brides as 'a w. gentlewoman,' 'a w. woman,' indicate that in Holland, as elsewhere, there was present the peril of the fascinating relict. The communion-rolls now and then show the presence of a casual visitor, such as 'Henry Auld, a Scotsman of Col. Volkerhoven's regiment,' 'Mr. Angus Beaton, preacher of the gospel,' and pensioners resident in the place. So occasionally ordinances were dispensed, probably when a company was on detachment, by 'the French minister' (possibly of the Walloon or Gallo-Belgian church), or 'the Hollands minister' of the town, and in one or two instances in camp, 'by the Hollans minister in Oranie-Nassau first batallion.'

The ministers of the three regiments successively were,

Mr. Robert Douglas (1759-1764).

It will be noted that some of these reverend gentlemen kept their registers more carefully and chronologically than others, and that there are several cases of marriages or births in one regiment being entered in the register of another. How far this may be due to contemporary circumstances, or to confusion after the papers passed out of the original hands, it is impossible to conjecture.

The most characteristic episode of all is the short but troubled story of the session in Colonel Gordon's regiment (formerly Colyear's), which gives in brief the typical Scottish conflict between ecclesiasticism and secular authority. It reads like a premonitory dream of later Scottish history, with the parts reversed to some extent, for the reformer of psalmody was the stickler for the ecclesiastical claim, and it was the military powers which stood out, not for human hymns, but for the retention of the reading of the line, and the traditions of the regimental precentor. The minutes¹ tell us how Captain Cuninghame, coming recently from Scotland, tried to reform the singing, how the colonel objected, how the session tried to resist, on the highest grounds of ecclesiastical principle, and received a significant threat, how maintaining their claim they gave in as to the psalmody, how one member after another judiciously resigned, and the colonel sent the adjutant to say he had stopped the minister's pay, how the matter was referred to the Duke of

Brunswick, and the obnoxious minute admitting the troublesome captain was scratched out by order of the highest military authority, and there were no more minutes, if, indeed, any session at all.

The Account Books contain a few items of picturesque interest, and are interesting as a whole as indicating the life and liberality of the Scottish regiments. While the other papers have been printed in full, it has been thought better only to give selections from the accounts, which consist of much the same entries year after year, but it has been thought right to give a fair sample of the ordinary material, and to include in it any unusual entries. The extracts printed represent about one-third of the whole.

The money administered was generally collected 'at the church,' or 'at the parade.' But there were also collections 'during the Sacrament,' 'at a sermon before the holy Sacrament,' and 'at the annual biddagt' or Dutch fast day. There were also sums secured on festive occasions, 'as by Corporal Thomas Cock at his marriage,' 'at David Henderson's marriage,' 'at a soldier's marriage,' and 'at Lieut. Greenhill's marriage.' But there were other sources recorded, as, 'given for the poor by Lieut. Greenhill,' and 'by my servant at her death left to the poor,' 'money given by the Archduke put into the poor's fund of this battalion.' This last probably indicates a visit of a member of the Imperial House to one of the barrier towns in the Austrian Netherlands, and 'the Surinam money' records payments in respect of the men who had volunteered for the expedition to Surinam, of which Stedman, a Scots Brigade officer, wrote the history.

The items of expenditure consist mainly of grants to pensioners' widows, and on behalf of the children, and confirm the statement made in a Government minute that

Scottish regiments having their own almoner they ought to take care of their own poor.' That they did so to a great extent at least is proved by such entries as 'to an officer's widow by orders,' 'maintenance of a child of the 1st battalion,' 'interring of Geldwie's wife,' and 'turf bought by Dr. Anderson for the use of the poor.' That the education of the children was cared for in the regiments is evidenced by such entries as 'coals for the school,' 'a stove for the school,' 'a kagel (i.e. stove) in the school,' 'one dozen of catechisms for the use of the school;' and 'for paper, pens, and ink for three children in Col. Buchanan's company.' Entries also occur 'for precenting,' 'for communion elements,' 'for a bason.' But that the goodwill of the Scots was not limited to their own countrymen, or the requirements of their own simple church service, is shown by grants entered in such terms as 'to Froliger the prussian,' 'to a gentlewoman whose tongue was cut out by ye Turks,' 'an Englishwoman pillg'd by the French,' 'a Protestant minister,' 'a person in distress, at C. Robertson's desire,' 'a Hessian ruined by the French,' and 'a persecuted Protestant minister.'

These papers throw an interesting light on the interior economy of the Brigade, and fill in side-lights upon the aspects of it which have been discovered from the National Archives. They show that for generations many a well-doing Scotsman—as well, probably, as not a few handed over at the bar of the Justiciary Court for whom foreign service offered another chance and the opportunity of beginning a better life—found a home and a career under the colours of the Old Brigade. Its services have already been recorded from the time when it manned the ramparts of Haarlem down to the hour when, by a strange freak of fate, the last stricken field of the 94th Regiment, its heir and successor in the British army, was found in the treacherous massacre of Bronker's Spruit, where South African Dutchmen cruelly and dishonourably shot down the representatives of 'the Bulwark of the Republic.' The proud description of its senior regiment by the colonel as far back as 1618 as 'the first and oldest regiment of foreign nationality in these Netherlands,'¹ has been emphasised before, but it still remains to quote the most striking testimony to the valour of the Scots and the value of their services to the cause of Batavian independence from the mouth of a great enemy, from whom such recognition was no mean praise. Mendoza, the distinguished cavalry leader, diplomatist, and historian, writing from Paris on 15th October 1586 to the Prince of Parma, observed: 'Your Excellency is aware that in a thousand instances the Scots in the service of the rebels have given you more trouble than any other foreign troops.'

THE REMEMBRANCE:

OR THE PROGRESS OF LORD PORTMORE'S REGIMENT

Owing, as has been said, to the kindness of Mr. John Scott, C.B., of Halkshill, to whom the original manuscript belongs, the Society has been enabled to add to the extracts from the Dutch Archives and the Rotterdam Papers this most interesting narrative, embracing practically the whole period of the campaigns of Marlborough, written at the time by a private soldier of the Scots Brigade, serving in one of the three additional regiments then employed by the States-General.

The manuscript was probably originally in the possession of the Loudon family, but was afterwards in the Auchinleck Library, and it bears on the fly-leaf the following note, in the autograph of Lord Auchinleck (James Boswell):

'An account of the war in Flanders from 1701 to 1709 inclusive, and more particularly of the Regiment which was Lord Portmore's in 1701, and came thereafter to be the

Lo. Dalrymples (who was afterwards John, E. of Stair) then Collonel Borthwick's, and then Coll. Hepburns.'

'All wrote by John Scot, a common soldiour in said Regiment all these years. It appears from his dedication to Major John Campbell that he was enlisted at New Milns in Airshire.

'The book is wrote in homely Rhyme, But shows the poor soldiour has had attention and genius too.'

Lord Auchinleck's note does not fully describe the contents of the manuscript. The date (May 1709) of the dedication to Major Campbell, who died of the effect of wounds received at Malplaquet, after promotion to the command of Lord Tullibardine's regiment, indicates clearly that the latter part was written subsequently. One addition deals with the campaign of 1709 and the bloody battle of Malplaquet (or Longueville), and is followed by 'the continuation of the progress of the war in the year 1710,' including the sieges of Douay, Béthune, St. Venant, and Aire, and 'the progress of Brigadier Douglass' regiment, with a short relation of the actions of the armies of the Allies in Flanders in the year 1711.' It breaks off somewhat suddenly when the regiment was in garrison at Damme, but the siege of Bouchain was over, and all the real fighting of the long war was done. The manuscript ends at the bottom of a page, and it would rather seem as if the concluding pages had been torn out and lost.

From his dedication it appears that the writer was a tenant on the Loudon estates in Ayrshire, and was enlisted by Captain John Campbell, a brother of the Earl of Loudon, when forming a new company added to the establishment when the regiment (that originally raised for King James at Musselburgh by Wauchope) was taken into the service of the States-General. The contents of the narrative justify Lord Auchinleck's observation that 'the poor soldier had attention and genius too,' for they show an intelligent knowledge of the war, and a considerable faculty of observation. His description of Bois-le-Duc, for example, is clear and interesting; and his observations on the religion and manners of the people in the Low Countries are such as in that age were not likely to be made by any private soldier other than a Scot fairly well educated and brought up on thoroughly Protestant principles. The narrative itself must be referred to for many episodes of interest, and for its full illustration of war as seen from the ranks by a brave but plain man, ready to do his duty, but never losing sight of a return to 'his father's bit of heritage.' He is not ashamed to say that 'our regiment was beat and soundly defeat,' but it seems to have been always ready to come on again, and to have faced without flinching losses which would send the military critics of the modern press into hysterics. Unfortunately, the regiment being in the Dutch service, and guarding the frontiers of the Low Countries during the momentous campaign of 1704, we have no account from him of the great march up the Rhine, of the storm of Schellenberg, and of the battle of giants at Blenheim; but he saw Ramillies, Oudenarde, and Malplaquet, and his simple tale brings vividly home the slaughter of that last stricken field. It enables us to realise more vividly the expenditure of life and labour, and the exhibition of courage and endurance of privation involved in the sieges of Keyserswaert, Tournay, Lille, and many other towns defended with gallantry, and obstinacy and all the resources of the engineering science of the age. It is impossible, without unduly expanding the limits of this volume, to summarise or direct attention to all that is of interest in the 'Remembrance,' which is added more or less as an addendum or appendix to the papers on the Scots Brigade, into the dry bones of which it breathes the life of actual combat and daily experience. But one or two points may be noted, on which it merits special attention, or affords illustration of matters referred to in previous volumes, or of Scottish traits and characteristics. Several companies of the regiment were captured at Tongres in 1703 by 'the grand army of France,' after a brave defence; and Scot records how the chivalrous Duke of Berwick obtained good treatment for the Scottish prisoners, telling them 'you are my countrymen all,' and complimenting them on having held out so long against the force brought against them. They were taken to Amiens, and as some of them had their wives and children with them, the women were able to buy comforts for the men in the town. After twenty-two weeks' captivity they were exchanged. That provision for the spiritual needs of the Scottish soldiers was not wanting nor unappreciated is shown by Scot's references to their good chaplain, Mr. Anderson, and his sermons, and his recording that after Ramillies the regiment was supplied with catechisms, sent from Rotterdam to Flanders by Colonel Borthwick's lady. Though he gives no full description of the uniform, it is possible to gather its appearance from various allusions. The regiment wore scarlet coats faced with yellow, and in the spring of 1704 they were supplied at Bois-le-Duc with 'new guns, new swords, new belts, new bags, a bayonet, patrontash and belt.' In accordance with old Scottish custom, the appointments bore witness from time to time to the family arms of the commanding officer. Thus, in 1705 they got new fusilier caps, on the front of which were the rock crest, the 'Firme' motto, and the lion supporters of the house of Stair, while the grenadiers also had a grenade and gun in red and blue. In 1709 it is recorded that Colonel Hepburn 'had got a new coat of arms, the which did make a great show.'

'And Gratus Essto it is the motto
Of these valiant Scotsmen and true.'
The grenadiers’ caps then bore the knot of union, the sheaf of arms and lion of the Dutch arms,

‘A hand with a shable, a horse at the amble,’

guns, and grenades, and shables of steel, and the letters I. and H. for the colonel’s name. When Brigadier Douglas succeeded to the command,

‘All his drums with his coat of arms
   He caused for to make new.
   And on the new drums was pictured fair
   The bloody heart and the crown,
   Which Douglas obtained for his coat of arms
   With very great fame and renown
   When Robert the Bruce in Scotland was king
   And had won all Scotland free.’

The ‘poor soldiour’ diverges into a repetition of the famous story of how the good Sir James took King Robert’s heart to the Holy Land and fell among the Saracens of Spain, and tells with the pride of a true Scot how

‘Still the Douglasses come of that race,
   Doth carry the heart to this hour,
   Now Brigadier Douglas paints on his drums
   The bloody heart under the crown,
   And weapons of war with the points standing out,
   About a broad circle all round.’

The siege of Lille in 1708 is narrated at great length, and an instructive summary given of the losses in the sieges of 1710, while the story of strained relations between the colonel, Brigadier Douglas, and his lieut.-colonel and major, ending in a personal encounter, in which the former was seriously wounded, probably affords the explanation of the lieut.-colonel’s retirement after the slow-moving processes of Dutch administration had time to work, and his transfer of service to the colours of the Austrian Netherlands. The narrative contains many points of interest as to the personnel and the spirit of the officers, recognising as it does now and then a liberal allowance of beer on a particular occasion by a popular officer,—as to the arrangements for the sick and wounded, and as to the general provision for the troops, and the hardships they had at times to encounter. It forms a unique picture of war seen from the ranks in the days of the Grand Alliance, and presents vividly from another point of view than the official documents the work and services of the Scots Brigade.

The thanks of the Editor are due to Mr. John Scott of Halkshill, Mr. T. G. Law, Secretary of the Society, Mr. W. B. Blaikie, and others for suggestions in reference to the marginal notes giving the equivalents of words or expressions occurring in the Remembrance; to the authorities of St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh, for permission to photograph and copy the flags of the Brigade; and specially to Lord Reay and M. Hoynck van Papendrecht, in connection with the illustrations of uniforms. The Index has been the work of Mr. Mill, Signet Library.

Major-General Mackay, in consequence of a representation which has been made to him, that the Baptism Register of the Regiment has been kept in separate books by the Revd Mr. Donald Bayne, Mr. Robert Douglas, and Mr. Alexander Macaulay, orders it to be transcribed into one, which may serve as an authentic Register for the future; and he orders the commanding officers of the first and of the second Battalions, and the chaplain of the Regiment for the time being to examine and attest the copy.

Such as had not their children baptized by the chaplain of the Regiment are desired to procure extracts from the Baptism Registers of the churches where their children were baptized, and the Major-General orders regular references to be made to these Registers, and every page of the Regimental Register to be signed by the chaplain of the Regiment for the future.

B. MARRIAGE REGISTER

EDICT

The States-General of the United Netherlands: To all who shall see this or hear it read, Greeting!

Be it known: inasmuch as we, to our regret, are informed that in the district belonging to the Union it is gradually becoming more and more common for marriages to take place between persons of the Reformed and those of the Roman Catholic religion; from which not only many quarrels and dissensions arise between such consorts, their children and households, but whereby also it comes to pass that some, if not all, of the children born of such marriages, are brought up in the Roman Catholic religion, yes, that even such Reformed consorts, by the troublesome persistence and the annoyances of their Roman Catholic husbands or wives and their party, are induced and influenced, to the scandal of the public, to leave the true Reformed religion, and betake themselves to the Romish errors:

Therefore we—desiring to prevent our good countrymen from being seduced to enter into such matrimonial alliances by their youth, inconsiderate passions, and without taking into consideration the lamentable and pernicious consequences of such alliances, and on the other hand, being desirous of giving to those who may already have an intention in that direction, or are involved in any promises or engagements of marriage of that nature, the time and opportunity to listen to good counsels and to decide not to adhere to those intentions or engagements—after obtaining the advice of the Council of State of the United Netherlands, have resolved to decree and enact, as hereby we do decree and enact:—Firstly, that to no persons of the true Reformed or Protestant religion, or who incline to it and have been educated in it, whether belonging to the military or not, of what rank soever they may be, shall any banns be granted for marriage with persons of the Roman Catholic religion, until the men have fully attained the age of twenty-five years, and the women that of twenty years; which ages shall have to be proved by presentation of extracts from the Register of Baptisms to those who must register the banns of marriage; and it shall make no difference whether the said persons have been married before or not; on penalty of the registration of such persons, if contrary to this article, and the marriages following thereon, being considered null and void; and the children, born from such marriages, illegitimate; nor can they ever be legitimatised. Secondly, that all engagements of marriage between the persons aforesaid, whatever their age may be, and whether these engagements have been, or are about to be, entered into verbally or in writing, shall be absolutely worthless and ineffectual, and that, accordingly, it shall be permitted to all the said persons, on either side, at all times, not only before registering the proclamations of marriage, but even after these proclamations have been read, to cancel and depart from the said engagements; nor shall it be permitted to any judge to administer justice to those described above, much less to constrain any one to execute such promises of marriage. Thirdly, that the proclamations of marriage of the aforesaid persons, who are more than twenty-five and twenty years old, respectively, instead of being made from week to week, according to our Marriage Law, shall be made every six weeks [lit. from six weeks to six weeks], the penalty being the same, both in respect of the aforesaid Proclamations and of a marriage taking place thereafter, as has been fixed in the foregoing first article.

And inasmuch as we have been informed that our good intention could be eluded by such Reformed or Protestants as, in order to marry Roman Catholics, might have themselves so far seduced as to go over to the Romish faith before registering the banns of marriage, in order thus not to be subject to what has been decreed above, we order and command further that to no persons, whatever be their age or rank, who have confessed the true Reformed or Protestant religion or, having been favourable to it or brought up in it, shall have left it and gone over to the Romish religion, and thereafter should desire to enter into matrimony with persons of the last-named religion, shall any banns of marriage with Roman Catholics be granted, except after the end of a year from the time they left the Reformed or Protestant religion and made confession of the Romish faith, whereof they shall have to produce proper and sufficient evidence to those by whom the banns are registered; the penalty being also the same as is mentioned in the foregoing first article; and that, furthermore, with reference to such persons all that shall be done which is decreed in the foregoing articles, as if they had not left the Reformed or Protestant religion at all.

And inasmuch as, furthermore, it might happen, to the frustration of our wholesome intentions, that even the Roman Catholics should go so far as outwardly to leave their own religion and go over to the Reformed or Protestant, in order to be able to marry a person of the latter religion, without being subject to the enactments of this Edict, but with the intention of returning to the Romish faith after the marriage has taken place; therefore it is, lastly, our will that, in order to prevent this in the case of persons who have gone over from the Roman Catholic to the Reformed or Protestant religion and desire to marry some one of the said religion (and vice versa), all that has been decreed above regarding Reformed or Protestants going over to the Romish religion, shall obtain in this case also.

And all Magistrates, Commissioners for Marriage-Affairs, Church-Sessions, and Ministers, by whom banns are registered and marriage is solemnised, are respectively commanded carefully to see to it and take measures that this our Edict be observed properly and exactly in all its parts, on penalty of forfeiting one hundred silver ducatons\(^1\) by every one of them, who, contrary to the above decrees, shall have registered the banns or solemnized the marriages. A third part [of the sum] to go to the officer who shall have made the accusation, the second third-part to the informer, and the remaining third to be devoted to the benefit of the poor of the place where the contravention shall have taken place.

And all this [shall take effect] without repeal of what is decreed in our Marriage-Law generally, in so far as it does not contradict this present Edict, and especially in the fourth article of the said Marriage Law against the betrothal, marriage and remarriage, by those belonging to the Romish clergy, as well as in our Resolutions of March 3rd, 1738, and May 11th, 1639, regarding the marrying of Reformed Military and Civil officers with Roman Catholic wives, which article we desire to continue in full force and to be fully observed.

And in order that no one may pretend to be ignorant of this, we order and command that this Edict shall be published and posted up everywhere in the District belonging to the Union, as is proper and customary, for we have found it to the advantage of the country, and in the best interests of our good countrymen, to do so.

Thus done and decreed at the Hague, under the seal of the State, the 'Paraphure' [initials and flourish = Fr. paraphe] of the gentleman presiding, and the signature of our Secretary, on June 3rd, 1750. Initialed (d'Ablaing van Giesenber), subject to the ordinance of the above High Mightinesses, the States-General, Signed (H. Fagel), on the 'Spaticum' being impressed the Seal of Their High Mightinesses on a red wafer, covered with a paper square.

C. MINUTES OF SESSION AND EXTRACTS FROM ACCOUNTS.¹

Last Lord's day being the 21 July 1761.

Namur, July 27, 1761.

This day the session being met and constituted by prayer, the minister proposed that a treasurer should be chosen, upon which they unanimously agreed, that as the money belonging to the poor was already in his hand he should continue to disburse the same as the session shall judge proper. The whole of the money that was in the minister's custody, and what was given to him by Colonel Gordon amounts to £77:6 st., out of which 2 sh. was ordered to be given to Alex. McKay of Major McLeod's company, and 2 sh. to Daniel Ross of Capt. Anderson's company.

Then the session unanimously chuse for their Clerk George Allan, schoolmaster of the 2nd Battalion of Colonel Gordon's Regiment. The meeting ended with prayer.

Alex Pitcarne, Min.²

At Nymegen the 5th of August 1764.

This day the session met after sermon in the church. The following members, viz., the Revd Mr. Alexr Pitcarne, the moderator, Captain Mongo Graham, elder, and Lieut. George Boddon, deacon, being present. And after prayer, the minister represented to the session that Captain James Cuningham was an elder of the church of Scotland, and having laid the Extract of his ordination before them, proposed that the said Captain Cuningham should be received as member of the session, which was unanimously agreed to, and he was admitted accordingly. The [sic] likewise choose John Paul, schoolmaster of the first Battalion of Colonel Gordon's Regiment to their session clerk. The meeting closed with prayer.

Alexr Pitcarne, Minr.

Nymegen, 16 November 1764.

The above scraped out by virtue of a Resolution from his Highness the Duke of Brunslyk, bearing date the 10th of November 1764.

Rob. Buchanan.

At Nymegen, 16 September 1764.

This day the session mets [sic], and being constitute by prayer. Sederunt: the Rd Mr. Alexr Pitcarne, Moderator; Major
Alexander, Captain Cuninghame, captain Graham, elders; Lieut. George Boddon and Lieut. William Martin, deacons. The minutes being read and signed by the moderator, Major Alexander read to the court part of a letter written by Colonel Gordon to Major Buchanan, in words to this purpose: 'As to the making supernumerary elders, and the introducing the new way of singing into our church, I desire that you will order the minister, elders, and deacons to your house, and order them in my name to undoo those things immediately.' The session having considered the affair, appointed the moderator to write a letter to Colonel Gordon; which was done accordingly, the tenour where as follows:

Sir,—That part of your letter to Major Buchanan relating to church affairs having been read in the session, it was unanimously agreed that I should write you the following answer: that they think all their proceedings in a sessional way have been regular; that Captain Cuninghame being an elder of the established church of Scotland, and desiring to be received into our session, upon producing an extract of his ordination, we could not refuse to admit him without good and sufficient reasons for so doing; and that we cannot now deprive him of his seat in the session, unless a libel were given in against him relevant to infer deposition, and fully provin. That the new way of singing the Psalms hath been earnestly recommended these many years past by the General Assembly, and is now practised by the greatest part of the congregation in Scotland, and indeed in all Protestant churches. We did not imagine that you would have dissaproved of our proceedings, and hope that upon this representation, after seriously considering the matter, you will see no reason to doo so; and it will give us great pleasure to be informed that you are satisfied with our conduct, tho' as a session we conceived that we are only accountable to a superior Church Court.—I am, with all due respect, sir, your most obedient, most humble servant, (Sic subscribitur), Alexr Pitcarne.

Nymegen, Septr 17th, 1764.

The session ended with prayer.

Alex. Pitcarne, Minr.

1 Probably 'whereof,' although the transcriber has corrected 'of' with 'as.'
At Nymegen, the 1st day of October 1764.

This day the session mete and being constituted by prayer, Sederunt: the Rv'd Mr. Alexander Pitcarne, moderator; Captain Graham and Captain Cuningham, elders; Lieut. George Boddon and Lieut. William Martin, deacons.

The minister reported to the session that he had asked from Major Buchanan a copy of that part of Colonel Gordon's letter mentioned in the minutes of the session of the 16th of September last, that it might be inserted in the colonel's own words in our minutes, and that he refused to give it.

Major Buchanan having on the 28th day of September called to his house the minister, elders, and deacons (all excepting Captain Cuningham, who has debarring comming), and there read to them part of another letter from Colonel Gordon, respecting his former order, with a declaration in case of disobedience 'that he knew what to doo,' and also insinuating that the minister's letter, by order of the Session, was vilipending him as colonel of the Regiment, Major Buchanan being required by the minister to give him a copy of this order to lay before the session, he also refused to give it.

The minister having asked the opinion of the members, and it having come to Captain Cuningham's turn to speak, and he gave his opinion and desired it might be inserted in the minutes, which was agreed to by the session.

Captain Cuningham's opinion was in the following words:

Moderator, the question we now debate on, and of which you ask our opinions, appears to me to be shortly this: Are you, sir, a minister of the Church of Scotland or not? Was you not ordained a minister of that church, when you came to be settled as chaplain to this Regiment, and for that very purpose? Did not you then come under the ordinary obligations, that all the ministers of that church doo, to act in your spirituall and ministerial function according to the established rules of that church? and are you not subjected by your ordination engagements to the laws and authority of that church? If so, and so I believe it is, Is not your session for me exactly according to the rules of that church? and are not all the members here present, elders and deacons, acting as such, in consequence of 1 (Sic) was, or has been?

2 Possibly 'preferred.'
the ordination received from you as minister of that established church? This I suppose all here present must allow to be true. If, then, you are a minister and all here are deacons and elders by ordination in the usual forms of the church of Scotland, and by no other power, can you, sir, as minister of that church, pretend to infringe any of its prerogatives or go directly contrary to its established fundamental rules, by taking law from any civil power in religious matters? Or can we as a session be answerable to God Almighty, to our own consciences, and to the church our superior in doing so? So long as you are a minister of the church of Scotland, your session court must be according to the form of that church, and so long as you have such a session, I shall continue a member of it and no longer; but no power but the General Assembly can hinder me from being a member of any regular established cession where I happen to reside. I did not wish to be a member of your session, sir, out of wantonness or lovelty, or out of any view, but for the service of God and of religion. It is an office of too serious and weighty a nature to be jested with, however lightly some people may esteem it, and however their neglect and upon 1 contempt of religion and the service of God plainly show their contempt of every thing that is serious and sacred. Sorry I am to see the little sense of religion that there is in this Regiment, and the bad example sett by too many officers to the poor men under their command. It was with a sincere view to attempt some kind of reformation and ammendment in this particular that I wished to be of your session, whose business it is, I think, to represent in the strongest manner to every one in the Regiment, high and low, the dreadfull consequences that inevitably must follow such upon neglect and contempt of religious worship; and whatever others doo, I am determined thro' God's assistance to doo every thing in my power to cultivate in the minds of all I am concerned with a serious sense of religion and of their duty to God, to their neighbour and themselves. Let the profligate, the unthinking, the giddy conceited witlings think of me as they please, I shall not regard their censures, be their stations what it will.

1 Probably 'open.'
As to what our gentlemen in power call the new singing (altho' it is very old) it is no sesional affair; you, sir, as Minister are master to doo in that as you please. The General Assembly of the church of Scotland have these nine years past recommended it in the strongest manner, as it is practised by every Protestant church in the world, and the express words are, 'that prayer to God Almighty and singing his praises are most essential parts of Divine worship, and it being found by long experiences that reading out the line by the precentor greatly spoils both the melody and sens of the Psalms and takes of the attention of the congregation to mind the precentor more than their praising God, the General Assembly doo most seriously recommend to all ministers of the church of Scotland to introduce the singing without giving out the line; and the excellent church musick published by their desire.'

This being the case, sir, I dare give it as my opinion and desire, that in place of giving it up, you should use your endeavours to promote it and bring it to perfection, and glad I am to see that essential part of worship now so decently executed in our church, which hath encouraged me to commision a good many Psalm books from Scotland, to supply our officers and souldiers with who may send to you. Lieut. Colonel Gordon, sir, take any steps he pleases, we can justify our conduct, and will be heard as well as him. And remember for your encouragement, sir, that the Prince[s] of Orange have ever been remarkable for a sincere attachement to religion and virtue, and no man in the world shows a higher regard to religion and religious worship, even does the Duke of Brunswick, which is a distinguishing part of that great man's amiable character; and let all military men who contemn religion and religious worship, only read the history and lives of the Princes of Orange, of the great Gustavus Adolphus and of Marishal Turenne, as they must be ashamed of their conduct; if they do not trouble for their sin and folly before God Almighty; and the brave Gustavus Adolphus was not ashamed to say publickly, 'that a souldier ought to make war and fighting his amusement, but religion and the service of God his business'; and no soldier need be ashamed to follow that glorious pattern.

After reasoning upon the whole matter, the Session came to the following resolution, that with respect to the first part of the colonel's demand, viz., the turning Captain Cuningham out of the Session, they find it impossible for them to comply with it, he being regularly ordained in Scotland and admitted here; and as to the second, that of the new singing it never having been enacted by the Session as a standing form, but only attempted as a trial in consequence of a repeated recommendation from the General Assembly, and the now tho' common practice in Scotland, yet they for the sake of peace agree for the time to lay it aside.

The session further agree and resolve that the minister shall acquaint Major Buchanan with this their opinion and resolution, and desire and empower the minister to give to Major Buchanan or to Colonel Gordon an extract of the minutes of this sederunt if required.

The meeting closed with prayer.

Alex* Pitcarne, Min'.

At Nymegen the 2d of October 1764.

The session being met and constitute by prayer, Sederunt, the Rev'd Mr. Alex' Pitcarne, moderator; Captain Graham, Captain Cuningham*, elders; Lieut. Boddon and Lieut. Martin, deacons. The minister reported to the session, that he spoke with Major Alexander on his being absent from the meeting yesterday. The Major told him that he was not to meet any more with the cession. Being thereupon asked by the minister if he meant to demit from being an elder, he answered yes, and that he would cause it be intimated to the cession at the meeting they were to have after noon. Accordingly a message was brought to the session, by the adjutant of the 2d Battalion, acquainting them, that he was sent by the Major to tell them in his name that he was to attend the session no more and desired to have his demission from the office of elder. The session having considered his demand, have agreed to it.

Captain Graham having represented to the session that for many reasons he finds it inconvenient for him any longer to exercise the office of elder, and begs to be excused from it, and asks his dimission, which demand being considered by the Session the agreed to it. The meeting closed with prayer.

Alex Pitcarne, Moderator.

Nymegen, the 15 November 1764. The Session being met and constituted by prayer, Sederent, the Rev'd Mr. Alex.
Pitcarne, minister, Captain Cuningham, elder, Lieutenants
G. Bodden and Wm Martin, deacons. The minister represented to the Session, that since their last meeting, he with the other members of the Session (Captain Cuningham excepted) were called upon by Maj' Buchanan to his house, and he there told them that Colonel Gordon ordered them to deliver up the Session Register or Book to the Major; and also acquainted
the minister that Colonel Gordon had ordered the six hundred guilders of his pay yearly to be stopt in the solicitor's hands, which £600 by the resolution and reglement of their High Mightinesses, of date the 9th July 1687, is ordered to be paid out of the retention money of each Scots Regiment to the chaplains of said Regiments. To which demand the minister made answer, 'That he was sorry it was not in his power to give up the Session Books but by an order of the Session.'

The minister further represented to the Session, that this day he is informed by a message from Major Buchanan, that he the Major has received an order from His Serene Highness the Duke of Brunswic, by which the Session are ordered to deliver up the Session Book or Register to the Major. Upon which representation the Session unanimously agree that his Serene Highness's order shall be obeyed, and hereby empower the minister to deliver the Session Book upon that order.
And the Session having afterward deliberated upon their whole proceedings, they have and do hereby do [sic] unanimously agree for their own vindication to lay before His Serene Highness the Duke of Brunswic an exact narrative of the whole, and hereby empower the minister in name of the Session to make up and present said narrative to His Serene Highness, so soon as his health and convenience will permit him; and to that purpose an exact copy is taken in presence of the Session of all the minutes of said Session, since its first institution, the 27th July 1761.
The Minister thereafter laid before the Session the accompts of the Poor's money received and debursed by him, which were examined and approved.

The Sederent closed by Prayer.

ALEX*n PITCARNE, Moderator.

Nymegen, the 16th of November. This day Captain Cuningham demitted his office of elder in this congregation, and Mr. Boddon demitted his officio of deacon, as also did Mr. Martin. This is attested by ALEX*n PITCARNE, minister.

Januv 14th, 1765. This day the minister at the desire of the field officers and captains delivered to Adjutant Pringle seventy gilders of the poor's money.

THE DEDICATORIE

To the Right Noble worthy and Honorable, Major John Campbell, Major of Cornall Heyburns Regiment lying at present in the Citydalle of Liel: May, 1709.

May it please your honor:

I have now finished the ensuing progress of war, which your honor will upon review find to be a true account of the present war in Braban, Lukeland and Flanders, and a brief and true account of the progress, marching, and quartering of the Regiment wherof your honor is now the Major: with a description of all the towns where we have lyen in garissoun. And that from the year 1701, beginning at the day and moneth of their coming out of Scotland, and so continuing on: to this present time. And as true account of the War, time and place. When and where it was acted, and that part that I have not seen with my eyes: I have taken the truest and best information I could get: which I have compiled in a dialogue of meeter: in the best form or shape, I, in my mean capacaty, can condescende upon, which I cherfully present to your honors wive, and to your judicious centiments I view humbly submit my self:

Among the manifold writteings, that we have transsmited to us by our predecessors, both of humane and divine: all themost and the best have always been dedicate to some person of honor, so I, in this strange place of the world, absent from my own native Kingdom of Scotland, most now flee under the wings of your honors most judicious inspection and tuitione, to shelter my self: when I may be atacqued, for spoileing a ryme. Considering that the line, of your most Noble predecessors, now of a long bypassed time, have been active in promotting of pietie, and all kind of learning and verteous education, I canot wee enumerat how many scholiars have been brought out in the colledge, and keepit and brought up in the housse, such as cheplans, and others, who have been keeped and brought out by the most noble and honorable Earle of Loudoun, your father, and for anything that I know they continue yet on any poor scoliars and others, that may be brought out under the name, if not keeped and maintained under the present noble Earle of Loudoun, your brother: And seing your honor is advanced to a considerable posst in the armie, as to be Major of this regiment, and brought me and others out of our native countrey, in that and other years since, and since I am and always have been, keeped in your honors own companie, I most of necessatie comite, to your custodie and judgement, this my dialogue of war, your honors answer for the whole ryme.

This shall be your rememberer of the actions of armies in times and places bypasst, and likewayes, what changes and alterations have been in this regiment, both of Cornells and the inferior Oficers, and likewayes, what progress our armie made in this cuntrey, and an acount of al the touns our armies have sidged, and the touns where this regiment have garissounded, so if your honor be pleassed, now in the throng and crowd of your affaires, to take an idle hour now and then, to divert your melancholy thoughts by reading of my harmless and insignificant ryme, I have prefixed the contents of the whole historie, where and in what page ye can finde the acount of the battels or sidges or the memorable passages of the whole story. I hope Sir that you canot blame me for spoiling any divine thing, it is bot a progress of war, and I have compiled it in meeter to the intent it may not be altogither void of either ryme or reason; if I have given any wrong title to any general person or field Oficer it is through misinformation or ignorance or elsse it is the comon report that passeth throue the armie. I have not designedly or intentionatly wronged any mans name or reputation, but have compiled the whole historie in a true ryme.

Versses or ryme are like ladies faces good or bad, acording as they are fancied or entertained, and certainly it may weel be a shame to make bad versses, it can be no sin, naither is it a shame for me in this my first essaye, unless ye can get a sojor that have made more or better versse of one and the same subject with a sojors pay. I hope your honor knous wery weel that I have al along done my dutie in your honors own company, and your honor never aloued me anything to buy my paper pen or inck, bot I have for my own recreation, begun and caried on the ryme, from the time of my first coming to this regiment, to this day and time. My intention is to make men laugh and no to wex them. I pretend no to retorick or oratrie, naither have I much, and as litle I can learn as I am circumstanced in this place of the world. I have given al along the historie the same names both to places and things that the volgar do, and have made my ryme in a very plain dress, bot if your honor be pleased to let it be seen in some other place of the world, it will be some better. Sure in every place preachers have somthing for preaching, Lauious have somthing for pleading, Phessicians have something for curing: It is true indeed some mens preaching, pleading and curing, deserves money a great deal better than my ryme. Bot it is as true, some of al thes deserves it a great deal worsse. If my ryme do no good, it can do no hurt, to the souls bodies or estates of [any]

I hope your honor wil nou at last be pleased to call to your rememberance, the condition ye made with me your sojor, when I first listed in your honors company, which was as I can remember about the first day of May 1701: in the duelling houesse of George Loudoun, Bailey in Newmiles. I was to serve in your own company, and your honor did oblidge yourself to take me back again and to put me in a capasatie to do my own bussines in that place, and for listing money ye promist to take me home with a suite of new cloathes on my back. And with what I had or might have for my servise in the war, I promised not to run off with the firstt mounting, and I took your word of honor for the performance, this was a legal condition before famous witneses who yet might be called, bot for the probation I refer myself to your honors own book in which I was listed: and I will be bold yet to ask, whoes word of honor was it I took, was it not Captan John Campbells, whom I knew to be the second son of the diseast James Earl of Loudoun, and who was very young made the Laird of Shankston, and who had raised a company of men, and been a Captan for some years, in Cornal Douglass regiment, in Scotland, and who was then listed a Captan in this regiment, and who hes now been some years Major, whom I have now served eight years: I request you Sir, either be like yourself or nothing: either fulfil it, or steal out from the armie:

To the Noble worthy and Honorable Cornal Hepburn.

Most Noble Cornall:

I hope your honor by reading the forgoing page, may now be aquanted with my coming to this regiment, and by reading the folouing hisstorie, I hop ye may be aquanted with my service in it. I have been a sojor, in the Majors company, now eight years compleat, and notwithstanding of the condition I made with the Major, at my entrie, I do not yet pretende to take anything from it, bot what your honor shal be pleaseed to aloue me. I knou your honor hath had now of a long time, the comand of the regiment. Ye have been Major Lieutenant Cornal and Cornal throu the whole historie. I am now wearing old and not very able to march and to do the deutie of a sojor, and if your honor shal be pleaseed to send me to Scotland, I expect ye may have a younger and abler man to be a sojor in your regiment, and serve in the Majors companie. I have nothing to take along bot this book of ryme, which I have been at some pains to make. I do not knou if it may help my bread. However, since I have made it in your regiment and under your honors most renouned conduct, so I comite it to your inspection and the managment of the whole premisses to your most judicious determination.

To the right Worthy and Honorable James Campbell, youngest son to the Noble Earle of Loudoun. And now Lieutenant Cornal to the regiment of Dragowns, Comanded by the Noble Earlle of Stairs.

May it pleasse your honor:

As I canot enumerat how many degrees my predecessors have alwayes been beloue your honors predecessors, beeter then by reckening how far I am to be reckened beloue your honor, I am yet a degree beloue the youngest Corporal in your brothers companie. However, I hop your honor will be pleaseed to acknowledge that I was born in that same countrey or place of the worlde with your honor, and that your honor was present in the time and place, when I was listed a sojor in your brothers companie, and indeed it was the best caveat and by this time hes proven the truest, that your honor told me which was this, that I would buy the new cloathes dear enough before your brother wold let me get of with them: I am continued a sojor in his company throu al this war, and have made al this ryme, which I humbly present to your honor, I hop as your honor offered to be cation for your brothers performance of his condition to me, so I request your honor nou at lenth to see to it. I hop ye have not yet forgot since your honor with your atendants came in to me when I was threshing my own beir in my own barn, and your honor was pleased to take my flail in your hand and in good sporte to help me. I shal not multiply arguments my fathers bit of heritage is too much to looss for any thing I have heir.

I request you Sir to be pleased to take my pen in hand and to help me. I have been makeing a progress of war in ryme, and it is so general I knou not weel to whom to dedicate it. It is the acount of the actions of our armie and the patronage of the book canot be ascribed to any one man in the armie, bot I designe it shal be dedicate in the name of our Scotish Nobles, his highness the Duke of Argile to whom many books have been dedicate, and who is a general person in our armie might have the patronage of this history of war, or the noble Earle of Stair who took at first the place to be the Cornal of this regiment and is now by degres to places of honor and preferment still advancing, if not a general person already it might come forth in his name, or in name of the General Murray, who has been a very great man and a mickle sojor throu al my historie, bot I humbly beg and requeste most noble Lieutenant Cornal James Campbell, be pleased to subscrive this my progress of war, togither with Cornal Hepburn and your brother, with whom I have made it and to whom I dedicate it, let it wear al your honors cognisance and I hope to see it put upon the file of long lasting rememberance who am al your honors, most obediant souldier: John Scot in Major John Campbells company in Cornall Hepburns regiment.
THE REMEMBRANCE

CHAP. I

The progress of the Regiment called Portmores in the year of God 1701, with a short description of a city called the Buss.

Our Scotch nobels did ordaine
   By vote of parlament
They pleased to make it and enact it
   That we Portmores regiment
With severals more along to go
   And serve the Stats of Holland
The space of five years in case of War
   Then they might call us home
Twelve companies in our regiment
   Was ordained to be than
And every company to be
   Five and fifty men strang
Al Hollands dewes they did alowe us
   So made a conjunct band
Al was acorded by our Lords
   And sealed with their hand.
So into the year of our Lord
   One thousand seven hundred and ane
Upon the twentieth day of March
   Our regiment from Musselbrouge came
And into Leith they came that night
   And ther they did embarque
And on Leith rade that night abade
   And fareweel of Scotland did take
Two new companies was ordained now
   To be into that regiment
And two new Captains and some subtenants
   In haste a recruiting were sent
Captain Ogilvie¹ got one company
   And Captan John Campbel² another

² See vol. ii. p. 28. Colonel of Tullibardine's regiment after Malplaquet, but dead by March 28th, 1710. John Campbell of Shankston, second son of James, second Earl of Loudoun. His younger brother, Sir James Campbell of Lawers, K.B., also served in the regiment, became lieut.-colonel of the Scots Greys,
Each man for himself to make up the pelf
They got ther comisions togerther
Captain Ogilvie with his wife lived now into Fife
And he leavied al his men there
And our Captain John he came posting home
Into the shire of Aire
At Newmilles and Machline he did begine
His purpose al to fulfill
And with very good wil he perofert the lads
A pint of Scots alle and a gille
And some bits of silver he slipet in to them
And then drew them in with his pauss
Some for need toke on for to get bread
And some came for the good cause
Til in short time he had listed then
The number of twentie and two
Who willingly toke on al sojours of fortune
And so made al ready to go:
On the tenth day of May we took jurney
And came straight to Edinburgh toun
Two gallons of alle ther his honor gart fill
His good health we drank it al round.
Then to Leith Tollboth they took us forsothe
And keeped us ther dayes four
Til they had made ready and brought to shoar
That old coal shipe brought us ouer
With hearts right good we came ashipboard
And rowed on a lig of that watter
The John of Borostouness our ship was called I guess
And ther she lay at an anchor
Upon this rade ten dayes we bade
I wot we thought them right long
Then we bouned to saill God send us a gaill
Adue Scotland was our song.
Streight by the Bass they stired the course
And compased al Northumber land
There the wind grew loud and the sea very proud
To learn to pray we began
Through Doger Banks and Earmoth Roads
We passed al throu warilie
Yet several dayes we were tosed in thes waves
Ore that we our pillet did se
It was the fourteenth of Aprile in the Holland stile
The regiment arived at Rotterdam
And it was the tuelth of June at four afternoon
When we arived at the same distinguishing himself as such at Malplaquet, and colonel, 1717. Received the Order of the Bath for services at Dettingen, and was mortally wounded at Fontenoy in 1745. Sir James's son succeeded as fifth Earl of Loudon.

Then from our old ship we behoved to flite
   And aboarde in a balender we came
And up the river Maze they cunningly drau us
   And we came to the Buss of Brabant
 Ther free of al harms we got Holand arms
Our cloaths we now made al clean
And whenever they please they do us exercise
   Right frequently on the Briel green
Our measures they took and then made our coats
And our linens they likeways aloue us
A shoulder knot on our shoulder they put
And al our mounting it new was
And as we walk round we spy al the toun
   Which lieth both pleasant and fair
And four several streets at the cross do al meet
To Glassgow we shlal it compare
This toun is right strong and canot be won
The water sorounds it about
The fossie is deep which may it weel keep
The wall is strong and stout
And at the west end the same to defend
   Two forts are made comely to see
The one is caled the fort Isabell
   And the other Sanct Anthonie
Of the fort Isabel I shall you tell
   Its largest and bigest in forme :
And the Sant Anthonie is as strong as can be
   And lieth betwixt that and the toun
And at the east end is a citydale framed
   As strong as any can be
The toun it can comand if they should gainstand
   Or make any muttinie
If the Popish creu should sedition renewe
   The Briel wil comand them to peace
The judges I trow be al Protestant now
   And Popish herasie it most cease
Besides althes forts this toun hath four ports
   With drau bridges over each ane
Without the Flighter port ther stands the tuo forts
   No enomie ther dare come in
To the Intimare port as ye do resorte
   A batterie stands at each side
And sixteen pice of canon to go of at a randon
   No enomie ther dare invade
The Oater port is secure I'le tel you wherfor
   It stands by the boam and the Briel
Where twentie four brasen guns above 120 ponders
   That place al about it keeps weel
At Sant Johns port I heard of a sport
   In old time al popish they were
And the father of King William did besidge them
But this toun they were loath to give over
Sant John image of Silver he could them deliver
The kyes they gave him to keep
They bare him to the port band the kyes on his neck
Losst the toun when he fell asleep
That image of Sant John they did rely upon
More then the Maker of us al
For idols dead who chuse to plead
In due time God makes fall
So Spanish don: was rooted out then
With ther rich imagerie
And the Sant Johns kirk is a curious work
As ever a man did see
Bot of ther Briel take yet a feell
It contains twentie four pice of canon
And for a night it can loadge right
The number of three thousand men
In five guard houses and such conveniences
They got coal and candle free
And ther ordinar guard for that place prepared
It stand hard by the entrie
With six guns togither at every corner
With a curious ramper indeed
And in at the boam the ships comes rowing
With every thing that they need.
And on the Briel green they drau up ther men
Eight regiments ther can have room
In shade of the trees that are covered with leaves
And groweth the whole place round
Now from the Briel green let us walk in
And to the State house let us come
Where ther counsel do sit and al heads of wit
Each man comes to his own room
Ther Moses doth stand the table in his hand
Al writen round about
The Law of the Lord they keep in record
Was given on Sinaies Mount
Above the port of it four men on horseback sit
Which seems a strange engine
As the cloak do reel they wheel
Togither at one time
They goe about in wonderful sorte
As ever yet was seen
And as the cloak leaves of to chope
They come to ther post again
The Market Place is large and broade
Even where the market stands
Three regiments can draw up at once
Besides their merchant stans
Windmilles they have about the town
In several places round
Which at one time four sorts of grain
Each one of them doth grind
The flour and the buquetie and the rie
And habergrot thes four grains
Al with on wheel about they reel
Windmilles with four gang of stanes
And with a deal of easse turns about as they please
Sets the saills about to the wind
A pair of broad sails she hath cross in her tail
She goes with a great deal of dinn
They have a bark mill and grinds therintill
Ther barks for barking of lather
They gather ther rugs to the paper mills them drags
And therof make plentie of paper
To define ther oyl mile it surpasseth my skile
The works are so many therwithin.
The great bolts of timber draw al up togethier
And then comes doun with great dinn
By knocking and beating and several men working
They make ther oyl for to burn
And for to give them light in time of the night
In lamps the whole streets round
And every night at ten ther clapermen
Goes throu the streets and he cryes
Beware of your fire and carssel light
Til the morning its time for to rise
They have an hospital where they put in al
The poor of the town that fals sick
The sojors that go ther they pay for ther share
Aught and twentie stivers by the week
Al that die therin they get a coffen
Wherin they are to be laid
With very little sorow bears them out on a barou
And they are buried in the hospital yeard
They have a place caleed Bedlam where they put mad men
And such as falls in distraction
Where they are keeped safe for doing mischief
Or any unorderly action
At Bedlam hall they have pictured on the wall
Thes people and ther deeds so distracted
As the cutting of themselves with lances and knives
And al the mischiefs they have acted

1 The cross bar at the end of the beam by which the mill was hauled round to face the wind.
In the moneth October it was I remember
   We marched tuo ligs out of toun
To the village Midelroy a water runs thereby
   Where we were reviewed by the King
Our Soveragyn King William did there come
   And there he did us review
As our ranks passed by he did us weel espie
   To him now we shal bid adieu
Near to this same place we saw a horse race
   Major Heybron and the Captan Campbell
Captan Campbels little mare wan that wagour
   And Major Heybons horsee wan the mall
Our Christemas feast we held in the Buss
   And we drank genever and beir
And every day the time to pass away
   Some kind of game we did hear.

CHAP. II

The progress of Portmores regiment, and the sidge of Keyezeruerd and a short progress of the Hollands armie in the year 1702.

Now came our rout and we marched out
   On Januarie the second day
Right early we rose and away we did go
   Four ligs we marched a way
And the nixt day we marched three ligs of way
   And we came to the Grave that night
And then from the Grave four ligs we drave
   To Kranbergh the way we took right
Then we came to Cleave that little city brave
   Which lies near the watter side
By companies in a houasse they quartered us
   And ther for a night we did bide
And then from Cleave no greatjourney we have
   Bot the way was both deep and ill
And over the river Rinne we got boating
   And we entered Imerick untill
When we to Imerick came we got quarters than
   And lay ther in garissoune
This town is now slighted but it hes been keept
   It lieth pleasantlie on the Rinne
And for ther religion we canot weel judge on
   Ther is of al sorts you can chusse
So Ile be boldest for to chusse the oldest
   Ther is ther a synagogue of Jewes

1 See vol. ii. pp. 15 and 28.
And into that toun a horsse race was run
Great wageours was laid ther upon
Captan Campbells sorhie cam ameling in before
And Major Brodies (Suintons) horsse fel behinde
About five weeks time in this toun we lay than
Til orders came to us to march
The seventh of Febervar away we did go
And we came to a toun called Reess
Ther we did lie and they ussed us kindly
Thes folk was both kind and discreet
And ther ye may se ther cross a thorn tree
It stands in the midle of the street
Its woven as a hedge with very prettie ledges
And yearly it is cowed very soune
And a deal of people therunder can shelter
And defend themselves from the rain
The Roman Catholicks they have the big church
And a great many alters ther within
And al ther reformaids reformed in Luthers days
And stil they continue Lutheran
Upon the Fastens even as it was the custom
They chused ther judges for that year
And by many vottes they chused them Protestants
And then drank a great deal of beir
Ther a post came riding and brought in the tidings
Of the death of William ther King
Which tidings so bad made thes people so sad
That they made a woofull lamenting
The twentie sixt of March we marched from Reess
And before the tuelth hour at noon
We came through a toun was fortified strong
On the walls lay a great many canon.
The toun is called Vessele in Clieveland
Ther is many strong works made about it
The King of Prusshea is ther the supream
And in haste they marched us through it
And beyonde that toun was a water runing doun
And we passed on a bridge of boats
And marched to Steepleberge the way was large
Al night their they quartered us
And the nixt day: before we marched away
We behoved to pay for our loodging
Into Dunslagen the nixt day we came
Payed for what we caled without grudging

1 See vol. ii. pp. 31 and 33. Both these officers belonged to Lord Strathnaver’s Regiment. The expression ‘came ameling in before’ is a good equivalent to the modern ‘won in a canter.’
2 See vol. ii. p. 22.
3 Ibid.
The next day we came to a river called Haille
A little from Dussbergh town
Where we did rest us and got orders to dress us
And our clean gravats to put on
We marched into Dussbergh and ther we quartered
In this old town pretie lang
It stands pleasantlie in the middle of the country
The walls are high but not strong
The inhabitants ther most part Protestants are
They have the big church in keeping
And every Friday the truth for to say
Al the bells of this church they do ring
Once ther was a lady who lived therby
Of riches she had great plentie
She had no heirs to inherit al her geirs
Very much to the poor she did give
The bells al for joy rings still on that day
On Friday it was that she died:
And every day stands on a steeple high
A karle that a horn blows loud
A village stands near by very pleasantlie
It is called the Bouers I'm informed
They let none go ther in the night to harbour
Bot such as they say are reformed
In the moneth Apriel the orders came us till
And we marched out in good ordere
And we came to Keyezerswerd and ther we camped
That night we did it beleagure
No war was proclaimed but now they begin it
The canons did shot from the toun
And regiments did gather who were coming ther
And so the sidge was set down
Next day afternoon a comand we did warn
To make ready for breaking of ground
A comand of granadires and likeways of Swizers
For a cover they were sent down
We made batteries and no man yet loosed
And a trench before that toun
And this we continued from that very minute
And the night that we first brake ground
In raising of batteries and planting of canon
And trenching before this toun
And every day our canons did so play
The echoe right far gave a sound
Three regiments about every day we did mount
Kepped our trenches both day and night
We kepeed the trenches and held in the Frenches
Who fired al the long night
On the fourteenth night of May the French did saillie
   Out in the dark hour of the night
And many a Hanover that night they ran over
   A regiment they destroyed near quitte
They thought the nixt night the same to effect
   Bot our sentries them veel perceived
My Lord Stranavers men¹ and al our trench then
   That night they better behaved.
Fell briskly to work and beat the French back
   And a great deal of men they did losse
Whoso fel by the way unburied they lay
   Hardly any durst fetch in their cloathes
On the aughten night of May they made a great fray
   Seven hundred French sailed out
Came out in a furie al drucken with brandie
   Great slaughter they made them about
The night was dark they made a cruel work
   And many a man was slain
Of two regiments Stranavers and Wilkes
   That night they lossed many men
And by the break of day the cruel French they Sailed out again in a routte
They waited not to fire but ran as in ire
   And lape over our trench in a doupe
Our men was al scattered carying of the wounded
   Which proved then much to ther losse
The French being mad inclined to shed blood
   And armed with cruel stogaes:
About our batterie they came hastilie
   And fired ther shots right thick
Our men did railie some did backwards flee
   And some from our camp did come up
Our Major Heyburn the picket had then
   With fourtie of our good men
In the middle of the night we came to the fight
   And weel we thought now to stand
The press was so strong and so great a confusion
   Backwards we behoved now to flee
Bot in a short time we railed again
   And fired right manfulie
Our Lieutenant Cornal of his own good will
   Another picket brought out
And al our regiment in good file and rank
   Was a coming into this same boute
Then a comand of our horsse did brisklie advance
   And came on the French sudenlie

And with their broad swords and not many words
They soon made the French for to flee
And what they loossed ther I cannot declare
Bot they durst never saillie again
Bot ther toun keepeped still ther intention was ill
They fired out boams and canon
A sentinel who ran and the French did informe
This night al this mischief was done
From the French again he ran to the Bus of Braban
And ther like a thief he did hang
Our armie then the sidge did confirme
Bot this toun we could not yet take
With great canon ball we beat down ther wall
And a long wide breach we did make:
And many a boam we throu in upon them
And many a shoure of granades
Which among them did break with many a crack
Some brake among there stockades
This toun was right strong and the sidge lasted long
Every day some slaughtered were
The French with a boat stole fresh men into it
Every night when they could win their
On the ninth night of June our orders came
Two regiments behoved to ataque
The one was our owne and the Nassau Waloun
Was ordered to storme their out work
And five hundreded granadires to be our frontires
And workmen comanded for work
All unto good array we made us al ready
After midday they drou us in to it
One regiment of Swizers and some Brandiburgers
Was likewayes comanded to storme
And at five afternoon to the storm trench we came
And their in platouns we did forme
Three canons did us warn and then we vent on
Our word it was God us beware
A litel straw in our hatts for a sign we got
Our officers marchd us before
A mine they did springe as we were going one
The which did a litel confuse us
And in the meen time so thick fireing
They poured on us from al quarters
To ther pilisods we advance in spight of al France
And I trust the Lord wil suport us
Some in the mine with the ground fel in
A cruel like work it now was
For all they could do ther strength we came to Beat them from it in great ire
Many of them were slain and few could get in
   In the fosse they lap from our fire
They run al about bot no way could get out
   Ther strength they could not now keep
The Brandiburges fired upon them in ire
   In ther shoes they made them to sleep
This ataque was strong and lasted right long
   And many on that night was slain
We al bravely behaved and God hath us saved
   For which we give thanks to His Name
Thes teribele mines and cruel engines
   Made many a man for to groan
Some brunt in the feet and some in the hands
   And some in the aire was blown
About ten acloak at night the French issed out
   And fired ther last mine
Which near our batterie it reached wonderously
   Made a wide hallow near to the same.
This was the fourth mine the French had nou sprung
   This last was the worst of the four
Great heaps of people it throu al togither
   So that some was never seen more
Many barels of powder bloun al up togither
   It cast such a stink in the aire
As stinking Sodom with fire and brimston
   No better we can this compare
Right like an earthquake it made the ground shake
   Which made many men for to fall
The wickedest tragadie this seems for to be
   That is in our progress all
Our Levtenant Cornal Sir James Coliquer1
   Was killed at our first going one
And Major Hebron in the head got a wound
   Munroe bare him away home
Officers and cadies and many of our lads
   On that night was wounded and slain
Of the five hundered granadires that vent on before us
   Bot few were left to goe home
Yet we got up a trench in spite of the French
   And their al the night we did stand
And defended our selves from many perilles
   Our guns they grew hot in our hands
And al the long night they fired right thick
   And many was wounded and killed
From the counterscarfs round the fireing came
   The ground with dead men was filled

1 Sir James Colyear. See vol. ii. p. 28.
New regiments came in for to relieve our men
It was now the dawning of the day
Our number was few the truth to tel you
When Wattie Clerk brought us away.
Many French being slain and ther out works tane
Brandiburghs no quarter them gave
Thes French proved bold the toun yet to holde
Where many were brought to ther grave
About ten hours the nixt day they beat a parlie
And got time to bury the slain
About two hours time ther was no firing
Bot anew they began it again
Now two three days more this sidge did endure
Our trench was just under ther wall
We made a boam batterie as soon as could be
And anew to that work we did fall
Charged morters with stons to beat out ther brains
Right sadly they were now mischeived
Many wounded and hurt and forced cry out
No way they could now be relieved
On June the fourteenth day they beat a parley
And ther governour out he did come
And was conveyed safe to our governour himself
And ther he surendered the toun
The Prince Van Nassau gave them leave to goe
With ther men and six pice of canon
With Collers flying and drums beating
Two morters and six covered wagons
Pox fal this Prince for favoring thes French
Heel get the divell to his thank
What came of him I canot now define
Bot he never came more to our camp
On the eighteen of June our whole armie than Did fire the victorie gladly
With canons and morters and al our smal guns
And with a hosea past it al by
Bot to reckon the coast right many was loost
Which ther had goten ther death
Two valiant Captans in our regiment then was
Was wounded and after lost breath
Six of our Subeltenants stout and courageous
Was killed on this fatal pice ground
Our officers al was wounded with ball
Bot two or three came of sound
A hundered of our best men on that night was slain
Two hundered and fiftie was wounded

1 A lieutenant. See vol. ii. p. 33.
And eight or nine serjants left ther lives in pledge
   Our victory with vallor was crouned
This sidge being over on an way or other
   Our regiment was now very weak
And of the other two who were engadged also
   Of ther losse no acount I can make
This sidge lasted long with many a throng
   And many a cruel designes
And many good men in the aire was bloun
   And burnt with thes pouder mines
Ful nine thousand men the French ther did send
Who camped above the toun
The French to relieve and them freshmen give
In a boat the Rinn they came doun
Two thousand lay within when this sidge did begine
   Most pairet was wounded and slain
And they who releived were sadly mischieved
   Bot few was left to go home
O cursed Keyezersuerd ay cruel be thy weird
   Thou art now demolished and dung doun
That strong castel they called invincibelle
   With pouder in the aire it was bloun
Three hundered men was set a working
   To undermine this castel
And in a days time they fired a mine
   And a corner of it doun fell
Then for work again they comanded moe men
   For to undermine al the rest
To bloue it al doun it was ther designe
   For the time to come it was best
Al thes strong walls was made now to fall
   Thou shalt never be fortified again
Thou shalt now be a village made fit for tillage
   Thy churches brunt to remaine
Near the first of this sidge it was I aledge
   When the great church was brunt all
And that great stipell came doun with a ratell
   And thes musick bells al did fall
I canot rehearse nor yet put in verses
   What hapened the time of this sidge
At the west side of the toun we had sidged long
   To remove they did us oblide
Our batteries and trenches and al our wood works
   The French they brunt them up all:
At the Brandiburghs side a trench soon was made
   And the sidge was continued withall
And beneath Keyezersuerd where the water is broad
   The French had a litele scone
And the King of Prushaes brother and his Brandiburgers
Repelled them from it perforce
About the midel of the day in a boat marched they
And fired the shots in good speed
And in an hours time with thick firing
They were masters of it indeed
Prince Newburgh himself gave a free hospitall
And meat and drink was alowed
To Diseldorpe toun al the wounded was tane
Therein to be keept and cured
On June the Threteth day we marched away
And camped by Dussburgh at night
Hard by that toun we set our tents doun
And marched by the morning light
That day we came far and camped by Veassell
Six ligs this day we did march
Four ligs the nixt day we marched away
And on a plain field did pitch
And from thence we removed for so it behoved
And at night we camped by Reess
The nixt day to Emerick and marched by it
A long lig as our folk sayes
Away from thence and the river did cross
On a bridge was weel made of boats
And with our armie this night joyned we
Not far from Newmego it now was.
We camped right near to our English armie
And lay their three or four dayes
We were bot a few yet we passed a revieue
And thys Generalls gave us the praisse
Men in such a station and for our acomadation
They allowed us a route to the Buss
A boat was provided and so we came to it
The tuelth day of Jully it now was
When we came to the Buss we got quarters
And then took a sound can of beir
They gave us new hatts to set on our tops
And we lay ther the rest of this year
The French now had Flanders and all the Lukelander
And much of the Spainish Guilderlane
And many a toun on the Maze and the Rinn
They had now under comande
Keyezersuerd they had lost at which they were crost
And vowed to take a revenge
Upon the Hollander and the futie Engelitire
Over al the broad countrey they range
And with a huge host and a teribel boast
Our armie they forced to retire
And towards Newmego was a coming also
Which toun was now in great fear
At such an alaram the toun did al arme
And to stand for their own saffetie
The burgers al drew canon to the wall
To defend themselves for a wie
The French cavalrie was draving right nigh
Their armour shined right clear then
So many a woman cryed yonder them coming
And many a man did fear them
Our Scottish Royall posted by the wall
With them they thought to disputte
With ther firelocks ther hands on the coks
They gave them a noble sallute
Canons did play and bullets did flee
The French began to retire than
And al our armie gave a shout and a cry
This toun it had no more fear than
The French drew back let ther courage slack
And warilie they did retire their
Our armie did perseue al noble men and true
Al ready to fall on their rire their
Our camp set down to cover this toun
And their for some weeks did lie still
Our armie did gather a deal better togethier
And marched to Pirre with good will
The French drew of from that day forth
And by degrees did retire
Our brave and valliant Englishmen
Right off drave up their rire
From Pirre some pairties were sent forth
Al with the Prince of Heesse
The which took in fair Stockum toun
Which did the French opresse
From Pirre a sidge they did detash
Their valour for to show
And in three weeks or four at most
They conquered brave Finello.
From Pirre another pairtie past
Their valour for to show
Took Stevenswerd and Roariemount
As they stode in a rowe
And every toun from Mastrick doun
Our armie now hath won
We took in al both great and small
And we made the French to run
Beyound Mastrick we marched up
Our collors to display
Tongres

A strong command to Tongvere vent
And chased the French away
Then towards Luke we marched up
In noble rank and file
Upon that ground our tents set down
Thinking to stay a while
We had not stayed above three days
Or four upon that ground
Til their governour sent his message
To render up the town
Providing he had leave goe free
Marching with all his men
With flying collors and beating drums
Which thing could not be done
Our noble Captan General
This thing he did deny
Ther Castel strong he thought to winn
Tho many a man should die
Our canon ball beat down their wall
And made great sloops their rein
With boams and grenades we sent our tokens
Which made great noisse and dine
A comand of granadires we did now detashe
To atacque upon the Castell
With courage undaunted they manfully acted
The dispute was fierce and fell
Upon the breach they marched up
Al valiant hearts of gold
And with their hands did throu grenades
Which made the French blood cold
Now toun and Castel both we won
And al that countrey round
And the trophies of our victories
Over al the earth shal sound
Of our brave Captan Generalls
And al our noble peires
At every toun their praise we sound
With Cowehornes granadires ¹
And Reinburgh too was sidged now
By many a valiant man
And with strong work and many atacque
We conquered the same.

¹ 'Cohorn's Grenadiers,' a piece which fired six grenades at once, and was therefore called by the soldiers, 'Cohorn's Grenadiers.' It was the forerunner of the modern machine gun. The French had a piece with three barrels, which fired three balls at once, called meurtriers or orgues. See infra, pp. 348 and 365.
CHAP. III

The progress of the Lord Dalrimpells regiment with a short progress of the Hollands armie in the year 1703.

Now of the seven hundred and three
My purpose is for to declare
In the Buss al this winter we laye
And right weel for camp did prepare
My Lord Dalrimpele¹ was now made Cornall
In place of the Lord Portmore
Major Heyburn was made Lieutenant Cornal
Captain Hameltoun² was made Major
Three new Captans³ which had goten companies
After Keyezersuerd was al past
And a deal of Subeltenants had now goten places
In the room of thes we had lost
And in this winter time they brought from England
A number of very good men
And from Scotland our Oficers sent them
Above a hundered and ten
Our Cloathes were made new with stockins and shoes
And for everys mans head a new hatt
Al things being ready we wold taken them gladly
But the divel a stick we now gat
April the fourteenth day we marched away
The Hollands train for to guard
We marched out at the Intimare port
And at Roy that night we camped
Then unto Beok the way being deep
Our journey was four ligs lang
And on the Bouers we got quarters
By companies we lay in a barn
The nixt day to Dussoch they brought us
And we lay in barnes likeways
The nixt day Millen we marched on
And our train lay hard by us
The nixt day to Gratum four ligs long
And the nixt day to Mechell came we
Our journey was lang near Mastrick we came
And ther the train we did leave
Into Mastrick toun the train marched in
And that night we came to Sechem

And on the Bouers we got good quarters
   And was two ligs from Tonguere then
To the toun of Tonguer when we came their
   It was Apriel the twentie and one
And their we lay still our quarters untill
   Til the ninth day of May was come
This open village with a right bad presage
   Hath a ston wall it about
Its neither thick nor strong and wanting canon
   In danger it canot hold out
It hath been told that in times of old
   It was a toun of great fame
Til a Roman emperour did it conquer
   And destroyed great pairt of the same
Tonguer stands now betwixt M astrick and Luke
   And M astrick is now very strong
With plentie of mines al noble engines
   And abundance of al sorts of canon
It hath many forts and good counterscarfes
   And likeways its fournished weel
With amonition and arms to keep it from harms
   Its the strongest that Holland can build
Bot as for Tonguere it is Ile declare
   A place both barent and poor
Their Monks and Friers and al their grand peires
   Goes beging from door to door
Al is Popish in it and the country about it
   And so they still do remaine
They have a great church ful of images
   And three great alters theirin
And every day that we in it did lie
   We got some kind of alarme
Some French came about and we issshed out
   Bot stilte it proved in vain
One night at even two hundered of our men
   Was comanded to a village their besides
Over dike over sike the way was right deep
   And our good John Clause was our guide
We curst him we bant him some woued to hang him
   Bot he from us stole awaye
And al that night lang it blatered on of rain
   And home we came against day
This time past away til the aught day of May
   And then we passed a rewieu
A State for Holland and the General Whitenburgh
   And without the toun they us dreu
Two regiments of horsse did muster before us
   And as we marched into the toun
Our names they called on man after man
And exactly our number get doun
And late at even our spy he came in
The French was a coming upon sight
With a strong comand we ramforced our guards
And stayed til the morning was light
Our General gave comand none might it gainstande
Al us foot folk to stay in the toun
Bot in a short space it was a sad case
For the French they did us suroune
That morning earlie was very mistie
Made many a man for to fear
They could nothing se til the French armie
Come on apace and drew near
Our horsse marched out for a litle scoute
Their carabines they did discharge
And then in great fear was forced to retire
They durst not stay to engadge
Thes horse and dragouns rode back throu the toun
As fast as ere they could gallope
Our General took coach he feared as much to Mastrock right fast he did wallope
The French armie was Thousands sixtie
That morning as they did apeare
And ther cavalrie advanced briskelie
Their coming made cowards to fear
About this old toun they set ther tents doun
Without any noisse or dinn
And hastilie got up a batterie
They thought the prisse was now win
Two regiments within did take the alarme
Drawing up at the Market place
Then round on the wall we were posted al
Within a very short space
The Brigadire Elss comanded in chief
With our Lieutenant Cornal
And with noble hearts they played ther pairs
By conduct and worthie counsell
With two russtie canon we fired anone
As fast as ever we could drive
We did them discharge with noble courage
Til one of our canon did rive
With courage stout we held it out
For four and twentie hours
And the French hoast for al their boast
We called them sones of whores
The French canon ball beat doun our walls
And made a breach theirlein
And all that day they did so play
  Untill the evening came
A message then to toun they send
  To se what we would doe
Ther messenger vent back again
  That night we would not bowe
And all that night their fires bright
  Shined us strait before
In the morning earlie we beat a parlie
  And then our toun gave over
In the morning they fired one canon
  Which drave throu a kirk of the toun
The parlie being beat al was now silent
  And we made a capitellation
All prisoners of War we were made their
  Since no better it might be
Our arms to lay doun at our enimies will
  No room was left us to flee
Now Mastrick port was open set
  And the French did enter the toun
And we were brought in from our plattons
  And all our arms threw doun
The Noble Duke Berwick\(^1\) he ther did comand
  To us he proved right kinde
Ye are my countrie men said he
  No man shal do you wronge
He did marvel how we durst rebelle
  Against their grand armie
Lay doun our arms on so good conditions
  And receive no injurie
Oh and alace right sad was our case
  We were now al prisoners tane
Our hearts was sair our purse was bair
  And far we were from hame
Two regiments of men in Tonguer was tane
  By the French grand armie
They might not stripe us nor yet molest us
  So in to that kirk passed we
Laid doun our bones upon thes hard stones
  And their our case did regret
The French men then by toming our guns
  Did fire this victorie great
Many Dutch men with the French now took one
  And all for the love of ther monie

\(^1\) Natural son of the Duke of York (King James II.) by Arabella Churchill, sister of the Duke of Marlborough.
And a very few of our Scots men took one
To procure their own libertie
So three days time in this kirk we lay than
After this woefull mischance
So our enomies will we behoved to fulfill
And so we must travell to France
As we vent away they did us wee lye
By fours togethier with a tow
And so we did march like hounds in a liche
And four and four in a rowe
On the tuelth day of May the first half vent away
And the last half on the thretenth
And through their grand armie along we did go
The which was a great deal of lenth
The great Duke Berwick gave out in comande
To the officers of our guards
Kindlie to usse us and not to abuse us
As they would expect rewarde
And if any man should be so mad
As to doe a prisoner harme
Send him to me I will said he
See for to punish him
So to Sant Leu that day we drawe
And was prisoned in a high loaft
And for a nights time in it we lay then
Bot our bed was not very soaft
And on the nixt day without any delaye
We came to the toun of Loven
And in a big stabe they prisoned us
A place for horsse and not men
From that to Brisseses the nixt day they took us
And without that toun did meet
Their hoie boyes and toyes expressing their joys
We captives was pined with sore feet
Great multitudes their upon us did gaze
And a strong prison we got
Above a port head we lay and got bread
Two nights we were in that spot
And then bedeen we came to Anguine
By runing al the way
The Spainards wilde was now our guards
To Atte we came nixt day
From Atte to Turney was our nixt jurney
And was prisoned beside the cantine
Where they brew beir al dayes of the year
And their we lay a long time
In a brave cass of arms with other conveniences
Our bread and water at hand
A brave broad crosse for to recreate us
And our monies came to us from Holland
Fourten days time theirein we have lien
And then it behoved us to go
Far up into France they now comande us
Our Lieutenant Cornall was woe
With them he took leave and to them did give
Three pistols of gold for to drink
Thes companies nine who marched that time
Got a good refreshment we think
From Turney to Wirsey they marched that day
And the nixt day marched to Dowey
Which is a strong toun and fortified round
And some of our countrey men 1 did see
Then on the morow they marched on Til they to Arras came
They bought our beir and we did carire
Drank our Cornalls health every man
We drank al merilie and thanked him heartilie
And a prosperous time let him have
Who was so kinde and noble in minde
For the three pistolls that he gave
There we did stay and rested a day
Provission enough came to sell
Tobaco and sallt and what we did want
We provided their pretie weell
Now eight ligs long we marched to Darlang
Our guards did wearie and tire
They way was large put them in a rage
And the sun it scorched like fire
From Darlang to Amens we marched at anes
This march was likewayes right long
Upon that ramparte when we came their
The people was gathered throng
Both the old and the young they gazed us one
Til we to our prison came
And to an old house they have brought us
Bot within al could not get room
Some pairt lay without til they built hutes
To preserve themselves from the rain
Some wives had and bairns ready to take harm
And they builded thes hutes for them
The burgers they were oblidge to guard us
And the women they gave libertie
Who vent to the toun and did bring in
Such things as they pleased to buy

1 Probably students of the Scots Roman Catholic College there.
Three companies of our men were sent to Lann
Where they had great plentie of wine
So that if ye think it ye may go and drink it
For three pence or four pence the cane
So now into France as we lay perchance
Very orderly we got our bread
Tobaco and salt in al thes pairts
Are the dearest things that we need
Our Officers all at Turney lay still
And some who their did fall sick
And al the hospitals they gave freely to all
And carefully did us keep
Two and twentie weeks we were prisoners ther
Befor that we were relieved
Then cartells being made and al things agreed
Prisoners of confinement were cessed
By a trepell cartell with advice and counsell
It was mutualie made and agreed on
Prisoners to send back unto ther own folk
And the ransome was man for man
The second of October no longer we hover
We came from Amens to Darelang
From Darelang to Arras the nixt day we passe
And the nixt day to Dowey we came
From Dowey to Wirsey and from Wirsey to Turney
And for three dayes we lay there
Our regiment did gather at Turney togethier
And al things for the voyage made clear
Then from Turney to Atte we marched at last
And the nixt day we came to Anguine
A garden is their both pleasant and fair
The like is rare to be seen
The Duchess of Anguine a Leady of fame
She allowed us four barrels of beir
Which we drank in our hatts and so gave her thanks
The which was a noble carire
From Anguine to Brissels we quicklie do passe
And their a day we did rest
And then we came to the town of Loven
And we lay in their counsell house
From Loven to Sant Leu the nixt day we drew
And lay in that old prison loaft
And yet a dayes time they more do us pine
For thrist their smal beir we coft
Then from Sant Leu the nixt day we drew
And came to the village Bathlone
There we were set free at our own libertie
We at night to Tonguere came home
Both merie and glad good fortune we had
We were now releaved from thrall
Our noble Generall gave eleven pistolls
And he highly comended us all
Our Lieutenant Cornall was likewayes noble
He gave us three pistols more
We bought barels of beir and we drank without fear
Till some began for to roare
Then on the nixt morning with litele adorning
We came to the toun of Mastricke
And for three days time in guards we lay then
And bought barels of beir to drinke
We drank al good healths and we wished great wealth
To al our comanders and peires
We meet with some frinds who did entertain us
With a briefe acount of the weires.
And of this campine that we were from home
We altogither did consulte
Of the sidges brullies and tullies that armies
Did make with the hapie resulte
In the spring of this year as sumer dreu near
A sidge our armie set doun
To a city Bonn that stands on the Rinn
The which is a very strong toun
The Duke of Mallbery with a pretie armie
Was sidgeing this city so brave
With trenching and storming and strong canonading
Perforce this city most have
The French within were of noble engine
And many a saillie did make
That for a long time our armie so fine
This toun they could not yet take
In the begening of May the French did array
And their grand armie came doun
And took Tonguere and encamped their
And over Luke land got room
Our armie from Holland was now a coming
And by the walls of Mastrick set doun
They made a strong trench to hold of the French
And planted it weel with canon
The French hoast made a terible boast
Shortlie after Tonguer was tane
Upon a certan day they made an essay
To take Mastrick al alone
In batell aray they marched that day
At Mastrick they came within sight
Our trench was astire as the French did apeare
They behowed to defend as they might
DEFEAT AT ECKEREN

From Sanct Peters berge our canon played at large

The French now behoued to wheell

The trench and toun did fire canon

And so defended them weel

The French gave a charge bot durst not engadge

Perforce they behoved to retire

Our armie al about for joy gave a shoute

Our danger is passed no fear

Our armie at Bone continued stil on

Til at length they conquered the toun

And when it was won they put our men in

And then our armie came doun

Marching as fast as they had been in haste

Til at Mastrick our armie they joyn

The French at Tonguer did tary no longer

Bot mount brave lads and be gone

Our grand armie took courage on hie

And to the plain field is gone

With Mallbrough bold and Overquerke old

Thes noble conductors of fame

A flying armie in Zieland had we

Was gathered at Bargenopeshome

Fourten full regiments on comand their sent

At Hullst over the line are they gone

And in a strong order upon the French border

Made many a noble atacque

And they came to Aiker to an old castel there

Within five ligs of Antwerpe

The French grand armie for their saftie

Drew in within their oune line

And for this purpose a comand did chusse

And marched them in short time

The French General the great Buffelar

Upon the van he did ride

With noble cavalrie and bold granadires

He marched doun in great pride

And with them their Swizers guarding field pices

And so they marcht al along

Both night and day for haste marched they

Till in a gray morning fell one

Soon in a morning this fight did begine

And many a man their was slain

The French was beat back with many a crack

Bot presentlie raillied again

Our smal armie no help they had near

Bot they drew up in a church yeard

And brisklie did fire as men in great ire

Bot the French took al our out guards
The French cavalrie charged them so brisklie
   And their kanons upon us did play
Our Scots regiment their played their pairts
   And with the first engaged that day
Three times that day the French dree away
   Bot still with fresh men were releaved
They came so thick down and made so great roon
   That many a man was mischieved
And some of our folk they for prisoners took
   And carefully did them keep
In ditches and stanks at rires and at flanks
Many plunged in water right deep
And in the twelth as it dree towards night
From our armie three regiments came down
Who came with good speed to help us in need
   And towards the French are they bound
And with weel charged guns beat of these whoresones
   Who fled away in great fear.
With courage reueued our men them persued
   And brisklie drave up their rire.
This fight of Aiker was a cruell masquer
   Of so few men as was their
No flying armie in that year had we
   To our grand armie let us repair
Who in good array marched to Sant Troye
   And camped ther a long time
Behinde Sant Leu the French armie drew
   And lay secure in their line.
Then unto Howie marched our armie
   And their a sidge did set doun
We batteries made both high and broad
   And planted them weel with canon
And many a ball shot at that castell
   And made a breach in that wall
They thought to take Howie in spite of old Lewie
   By force of powder and ball
Our noble Cornall my Lord Dalrimple
   This time was with the armie
His regiment being tan he had not them seen
   At which he was grieved truelie
To make some redress he now up did pass
   To ataque upon the Picarde
With him vollentires like good granadires
   In a morning surprisssed that guarde.
This journey they took clam up a high rock
   Set his foot upon a mans shoulder
And so they wan in without noise or dine
   And thes French did quicklie surendere
To Mallbrough in haste the news is now past
That Dallrimple had taken a fort
With him came enew to se this news true
    And they heartilie laught at the sport
The works of Fort Joseph had now got a scuffe damage
    By boams granades and great ball
Them for to storme a comand being sent
    They behoved to surender it all
The valiant Tronie the castel held he
Til at length he did come in their will
Both castel and toun their arms laid doun
    And Tronie he gave in his bill
To our Generall great Mallbrough himself
    Who was pleased the same to acpte
The valiant Tronie to our service came he
    And the French for ever he left
He was wise and true the countrie he knewe
    Again he was governour of Howie
A new regiment in haste he did mounte
    In our armie they passed up truelie
Five regiments of French was tan prisoners
    That was al good granadires
To our garissons in Holland they were sent doun
    Til they for us were releaved
Some Hollands regiments in Howie was left
    And the forts anew they repair
Tronie this year a new fort cased built
    The name of it is called Fort Sarr
A guarde house in the midle of this sconse
    He caused to reare up anone
He made counterscarfs and made batteries
    And planted them weel with canon
Tronie rulled Howie and al that contrie
    And made them to come at his call
And in our armie advanced was he
    To be a Major Generall
Al the month of October our armie lay at Tonguer
    And the houesse quarters was there
The burgers of Tonguer did build their hie steeple
    And mounted it high in the aire
Al being agreed al prisoners now relieved
    And brought to their oune places home
This year we sum up and our camp did break up
    And marched to their oune garissones

1 Baron de Trognee. From the Marlborough Despatches he appears to have been in the service of the allies before, and to have directed the siege of Huy.
In Mastrick toun our regiment was than
   And they provided for us boates
And fiftie pice of arms to keep us from harms
   And we came out at the Buss port
In three old open boats they now put us
   And so brought us doun the water
The weather was cold and our coats very old
   For cold our teeth did al chater
Three days and three nights we were in this case
   Before that we could win out
And at the Grave they set us
   And we marched since upon foot
We came to a village two ligs from the Buss
   And their they quartered us
The folk was discret gave us meat and drink
   And a company lay in a housse
We came to the Buss and stayed three dayes
   And our old friends we did see
We were nou perchance come back out of France
   And heartielie weellcom were we
To Gertrudenberg we behoved now to march
   For our regiment it was their
Our Major Hameltoun what riden and what run
   Was come from the sidge of Tonguere
A Captan we had who with his guard fled
   And escaped from the French band
And al our officers this year who brought over
   Al our recruites from Scotland
In Katrineburgh a regiments dutie they did
   And so we behoved to march their
And in a long village we got a nights quarters
   And they made us right weel to fare
To Katrineburgh we marched in a rutte
   And our officers came us to meet
With weelcom from France with a hapie chance
   So reverantlie they us greet
In some two aired boats they took us in to it
   Til we came within that barire
We got ballads on the burgers to get us quarters
   And now we had no more fear
Our mounting being ready we got it out shortlie
   Each man a shirt and gravate
With stockins and shoes and al our new cloathes
   And for every mans head a new hatt
And al our aires they ordered to give us
   And so we were merie and glade
Each man got five Guilders which was his aires
   And some what more we wold have hade
Then came a route from the Hagee was sent out
To march to Bargenopeshome
Bot our Lievetenant Cornal the Lord keep his honor
He got a delay of the same
Our noble Cornall the Lord Dalrimple
Came their his regiment to see
What old men and new we were men anewe
Fiftie five was in each companie
And for to weet our throats we sold our old coats
We got a penie and we dranke
Bot when we have the guarde the new coat must be spared
Our officers plaid us that prank
Ful ten weeks time this toun we lay in
I wot we thought it not long
We mounted our guards like brave sojor lads
And we took us a drink and a song
And with the burgers sometimes we confere
Who told in Dutch very proper
That this pretie toun belonged to King William
And heir he was made a couper
With an ax and an ech and an appron on his breast
They made him to drive on a girth
And with the burgers he held a feast their
With aboundsnce of al kinds of mirth
They ordered then a chain throu a stone
Set it up for a sign did they
As long as this chain throu the ston do remaine
They will not have a market day
They have bonie brassen guns planted on the walls
None better have ever been seen
The shipes and the boats with the hay and oats
Comes in for the horsses beeden
And al the trading it comes in by shiping
And al kinds of merchandise
Al kinds of grain they heir do bring in
And aboundsnce of butter and chiese
And round this toun the water does come
Which is both deep and clear
In boats and with nets and great fish hocks
They catch fish al dayes of the year
A strong rampar wall about the toun all
And aboundsnce of counterscarfes good
The rampare within is pleasant and sound
And the mercet place is right broad
With a row of trees al covered with leaves
Which grous by the side of the street
So this little toun is a very compact thing
And these people are very discreet
Their magassine arms they took in from us
Before that we marched away
And our sleep guilt two stivers a week
They pleasantlie did us paye.

CHAP. IV

The progress of the Lord Dalrimples regiment with the Hollands armie in the year 1704.

The third of Janvare seven hundred and four
From Katrinbegh we marched awae
Three bonie short ligs the way pretie good
Til we came to the town of Bredae
And for our quarters they put us in guards
And aloued us fire and strae
And the next day in Breda we did stay
And some arms they aloued us withae
The next morning we marched right soon
The straight way to Bargenopeshom
And we wan [there] and got our quarters
Before that the sun vent doun
Our meat and our drink is heir pretie cheap
Bot we buye our fire right dear
Five pence for our quarters we weekly do pay
And we drink bot the stiver beir
Into this same toun each man got a croun
For our redemption monie
With magazine arms we mounted our guards
And we took a drink hartesomlie
Five regiments of men lay in Bargenopeshom
And a regiment of yellow dragouns
Many of them deserted and some was hanged
That regiment was native Wallounes
The great Count Noyell who was a Felt Mershal
Had a lodging in Bargenopeshome
The Prince of Holstenbeg there had comand
Who was likewayes a general person.
This Bargenopeshom is a pretie big toun
Al Zieland most pay to them rents
Five or six Popish kirks I supose be in it
And one for the Protestants
Ful seven year and more they have been repar ing
Thes works of Bargenopeshom
The works and forts they have made it about
Hath coast them many a pound
Three noble forts at the northeast nock
Is made for defence of this town
The name of a Sanct take this for no taunt
They give to thes forts each one
Within thes draubridges we keept our guards
And well pilisoded are they
And good counterscarfs they have in thes forts
And we keept them night and day
And at the west side the water so broad
Doth come like a raging sea
Both ships and boats and al water works
They have in great plentie
And the water sconse is a very strong fort
And aboundance of canon is heir
And a strong guard every day they send to it
To keep thes shipes at the peire
Out at the Buss port as ye do resortte
The works are strong on that side
The walls of the toun with good ston and lime
Are builded with splendor and pride
That Liney side is both large and broad
And two good guardhouses their
With good feel was and three rows of pilisods
These out works are made fair
With rows of stockades on the top of thes wals
The outworks are mounted right strong
Within it is mined with noble engine
This work has been working right long
Ten regiments of men this Liney within
Can al do their exercise
In or out from the toun they can come soon
And exercise ther with easse
The counterscarfs and works is tedious to reherse
That is on this side of the toun
With noble engine with good ston and lime
This work is built square and sound
Out of al the garissoun of Bargenopeshom
Five hundred men was detashed
For to keep Fort Duel that filthy drout holle
Al year we were with it fashed
Sixtie men of a regiment to Fort Duel was sent
And relieved at a fortnights end
And in big boats up the river they took us
And so our money we spend
Four regiments of men in Fort Duel was than
Besides our own garissoune
For the French rogues from the woods and the bogs
   Was come to this Iland doun
And near to Fort Duel two sconses the[y] held
   To keept garissoun in them two
The one fort is called the Liliekies houck
   And the other is called Lile
The Liliekies house it stands in a nock
   And the French a guarde keept ther
And the village Lilo it hath a brave showe
   A kirk and a steeple most fair
And a man of war lay on the watter
   She belonged to the Hollands peire
Some boats her beside right boldly do bide
   Bot the French boats durst not come near
And al our fort Dulle is three ligis length
   A lig and a half it is wide
And an old dike doth compase it round
   To keep it from watter and tide
Their is old Dulle and new Dulle and some dorps more
   Right worthie to put in our versse
The ditches and stanks that runs throu the land
   To many are heir to rehearse
And a bouers house hath a stank it about
   Wherein the water does so float
That ye canot get in albeit ye would fain
   Except he would send you his boat
And on our Dulle nock the French did ataque
   In time of the froast and the snow
And when the thew came it was so deep than
   The starkest was xext to win throw
Six thousand of our men in Fort Dulle lay long,
   To keep our fort from the French.
By it the French bide with courage and pride,
   And their they made a strong trench.
Our men fel to work to hold the French off,
   And strongly they wrought in the ground.
Til they made a sconse and called it a fort,
   It was fournocked and round.
Two hundred men a day on guard munted we,
   And we had their a strong batterie.
And several good guns was planted theiron,
   And we fired them very brisklie.
And their we had morters for throuing of boams,
   And likewayes Cowhorns granadires.
And one priming fired six of them,
   Which held the French at uneasse.
In the morning earlie the canons did play,
   And their boams they throw in the night.
Some brack in the water some brack in the aire,
   Some sank in the ground out of sight.
Al this winter and spring each day fireing,
   And throwing of granades very hott.
The French did asaiel for to take Fort Dulle,
   Bot the divel a inch of it they gott.
For half a years time this strong fireing,
   At Fort Dull was several men slain.
The French keeped their ground bot durst not come in
   For al their pover and engine.
Apriel the twentieth one our rout being come
   Our magasine arms we gave in
And from Bargenopeshom away we did come,
   And marched by the touch of the drum
And five ligs of way we marcht that day,
   And at night we lay in a dorpe.
In barns on straw by companies we lay,
   To our tents we were not come up.
Apriel the twentieth two we came through Breda,
   And came on our way to the Buss.
We loadged on boers some beir they alawe us,
   And each companie lay in a housse.
Apriel the twentieth three we took our journey,
   That night we came to the Buss.
And into the Briel they took us for bield,
   And fire and straw alued us.
And the nixt day in the Buss we did lie,
   And we were provided for our camp.
New guns new swords new belts new bags,
   A baginet patrontash and belt,
Our tents and tent poles our pins and our males,
   In the Buss they did them al make.
Nixt morning earlie we marched away,
   And our bagage al on our back
On the twentieth fift of April we marched right weel
   And we came on near to the Grave.
And stil with the train they brought us along,
   That march was six ligs and a half.
Two ligs of way on the twentieth six of May
   We marched near to the Maze side
There we set tents doun and guarded the train
   And their a wholle day we did bide.
With boats and boards we bridged the Maze,
   The nixt morning marched the train
On the twentieth eight day ful six ligs of way,
   We marched ere we pitched again,
On the twentieth ninth day five ligs of way
   And our train did still with us go.
To the toun of Finelo at night we dide go,
   And their we got fire and straw.
And on the thretieth day to Roariemount came we,
   And rested their for a day.
A barell of beir to each company,
   Our Officers did for us paye.
On the second of May we marched away,
   And marched ful seven ligs long.
And on the bovers we got quarters,
   And barnfulls of straw to ly one.
On the thrid day of May to Mastrick came we,
   And to camp they marched our train.
And in Mastrick toun our regiment wan in,
   Got an old housse to keep us from rain.
And on the fourth day to camp marched we,
   Which was now a lig out of toun.
And with our armie that day joyned we,
   And al our tents we set doun.
From Bargenopeshom since that we did come,
   Which was the twentie one of Apriel.
And on the fourth of May we joyned the armie,
   Which was fourtie ligs and a mille.
Into Mastrick camp our Cornall came up,
   And reviewed us in a morning soon.
He bade us believe it and he would causse give it,
   To each man a pair of new shoon.
He comanded indeed as we stod in need,
   Our Captans for us should them buye.
We got them that year, and so did them wear,
   And we thanked him heartilie.
Into this month of May the noble Mallberie,
   At Masstrick convened an armie.
Of English and Daines Hanovers and Sweeds,
   And marcht them to Germanie.
From Mastrick camp a comand was sent out,
   And with them a deal of workmen.
And several dayes at Tonguere they laye,
   And the ports they did undermine.
The ports of Tonguere they bleu up with power,
   And back to our camp came again.
They call it a village and no more it is,
   And so it is like to remaime.
On the third day of June we marched anone,
   And before the tuelth hour at noone
The French armie we bravely did see,
   In haisste their tents they took doun.
From Mastrick camp six ligs we marcht off,
   And at night our tents we pitche.
And al that afternoon as we marcht alonge,
Againts us marchd the Frenche.
On the fourth of June we marched stil on,
And dreue on touards the line.
In noble rank and file we marched a while,
To prosecute our designe.
Our Captan Campbell he began for to call,
Out our granadires in al haiste.
For Tops Dragounes as bold as lyeones,
Within the French line was passt.
So al our granadires marcht up from our reires
With the Lieutenants Tassie and Scott.
With noble designe to take in the line,
Bot yet in their way was a motte.
The French cavalrie and granadires too,
Was come to the passe of the line.
And our cavalrie and our granadires too,
Dreue up in the field before them
And al our armie with courage on hie,
Came within a lig of the line.
About twelve acloak their was droping shots,
And one of our troupers was slain.
An hour or two we rested al there,
And our generall gave a comande,
To every regiment in good file and rank,
To wheele upon that same land.
So in good file and rank we came a lig back,
And then we pitched our camp.
The nixt day we resst us nothing did molesst us,
And the line we did not atacque.
The sixth day of June we marched againe,
And came to the ston wind mille.
There we pitched tents and foradged our horsse,
And three dayes time did lie stille,
The ninth of June we marched againe,
And came to the hunting housse.
A lig from Tonguere and we camped there,
Til the fiveth day of the month.
On the fiveth day of June we marched again,
And our camp by Hasselt was set.
There we ressted a day without any fraye,
Bot our camp ground was very weet.
On the seventeenth day three ligs marched we,
And campd at a village called Berge.
And at Berge camp our bread it grew scant,
And I wot our monie not large.
The twentie fifth of June we marched again,
And campd at Mull and at Baal.
Mull was our right houff and Baal was our left,
    And there we camped a whille.
In our front the French lay so upon a day,
    With our foradgers they had a boute.
And throu our armie it came with a cry,
    And al our pickets turned out.
Our picket marched out to a village on our froant,
    And returned that same very night.
Our horsse and dragouns took sixtie prisioners,
    And the rest was put to the flight.
To our provoes guarde was these prisioners had,
    And lay till they were releaved.
Some who had disserted was in our camp hanged,
    Disserters was sadly misscheuved.
At Overkirks quarters it happened on casse,
    A fellow was tane with a mare.
For it doomed to die and accordinglie he,
    Was execute as ye shall hear.
In the front of our armie they set up a tree,
    Under it made a trench in the ground.
And at the trench nook they draue in a stoupe,
    And the mare fast to it was bounde.
A very strong fire was burning hard bye,
    And the provoes they drewe near.
They strangeled and shot and in the fire put
    The bougerer and his gay mare.
From Mull and Baal camp a comand was detashed,
    A hundered men and some moe.
And the nixt morning another comande,
    From our armie forth they did go.
A thrid comand affter them fast marched,
    And a regiment from Masstrick came.
And from the toun of Luke came many men out,
    And above Tonguere did al joyne.
Ful five thoussand men togither now joyne,
    Al fit for our noble designe.
Major Generall Tronie he did us comande,
    And he dreue us on to the line.
And al our granadires was now on their march,
    We were looking to se them appear.
They did come to Hassel and got a sad tassel,
    And was stooped with watter most clear.
These Flamish bovers them damned sons of whores
    They loussed some clousses of watter.
Which overspreade the land made our granadires stand,
    That day they could win no further.
And we at the line for hunger like to tine,
    Lay the space of a long summers day.
The French cavalrie and their granadires too,
    Very bussie a coming were they.
Two men on one horsse they came to the passe,
    And dreue them to an ambushe.
Ay waiting the time when we wold go one,
    They were al ready at a pushe.
And in the evening as the sun vent doun,
    We were brought off in good order.
We came a lig back and lay at a stanck,
    A lig and a half from that border.
The comande from our armie marched to Howeye,
    And the rest to their garissoune.
And our granadires lay one night at Hassel,
    Then back to the camp made them boun.
On the ninth day of July then al our armie,
    Came marching from Mull and Balle.
And on that day seven ligs marched they,
    And camped at night by Hassel.
There they ressted a day and the eleventh of July,
    Our armie came to Sant Troye.
And there they did rest because it was besst,
    And marched on the fourtenth day.
On the fourtenth day they marched from Sant Troy,
    A lig above the ston winde mille.
Near to the same ground the French lay then
    A few dayes there we lay stille.
Our armie dreue out into the same camp,
    And fired a brave victorie.
And with many hossaes we flang up our hats,
    For our armie in Germanie.
On the seventen of Jully we fired it bravely,
    For a field battel was won.
Our General Mallerie and our English armie,
    Had made the French for to rune.
On the eighten of Jully again marched we,
    And camped two ligs above Howie.
The woods so wide and to the Maze side,
    Our camp lay al in a bowie.
Major Generall Tronie took out a pairtie,
    And took them within the French line.
They lay in the trenches belonged to the Frenches
    Al night untill the morninge.
Earlie in the morning the Frenches came doun,
    Tronie he behoved to flee.
The French persevered but he had a rire guarde,
    And saffelie he wan to Sant Troye.

1 The assault on the Schellenberg.
Our armies granadires at even was prepared,
    Bot they were countermanded againe.
In the morning earlie then al our armie,
    Doun tents and marched amaine.
With courage on hie that day marched we,
    Till of that place we got sight.
And al these trenches was filled with Frenches,
    So we came back againe night.
Then they gather boats and bridged the Maze,
    And a trench was amaking likeways.
The Generall Murray 1 was left on comande,
    And regiments for to keep that pass.
They made up the trench and held off the French,
    And boldlie there did abide.
The armie marched away these regiments did stay,
    And camped by the Maze side.
The twentieth of Jully marched our armie,
    And crossed the Maze very soon.
And throu the thick woods our passage was cutt,
    And we camped al night by a burne.
Tuentye regiments from this was detashed,
    To go to the sidge of Namuire.
The morrou at ten acloak our regiment marcht,
    To it: where we camped secure.
We were put to work and a trench did make,
    And in haiste they brought up our train.
We made batteries as soon as could be,
    And planted our guns on them.
The French armie the camped right nie,
    On the other side of the toun.
And on the rock heads they batteries hade,
    And fired many a canone.
Two or three dayes we wrought on this wisse,
    And al night was bussie at work.
And in to the toun fleue many a boame,
    Out over these walls so starke.
The French batteries on our trenches plaide,
    And some of our men there was slain,
And every night on our trenches did mounte,
    The number of four thousand men.
No resst we got there, the truth to declare,
    Bot night and day was at work.
Boambarding that toun which took fire within,
    And the air was filled with smoak.
Some priessts they did say came to our armie,
    To plead in behalfe of the toun.

1 See vol. ii. p. 20.
The Generall himsell he can it best tell,
    What was the contrabution.
Our workmen one night was comanded on sight,
    For to bring off al our train.
They brought it off right ore the day was light,
    And then yoacked horsse into them.
Our regiments in trenches in spite of the Frenches,
    Came off as they were comande.
With beating of drums and collors flourishing,
    And the French was firing right harde.
Upon the second night after we came to it,
    A comand of granadires was detashet.
And al their comanders and under Officers,
    And away to Dineant they have marcht,
And when they came to it the French fleed out,
    And haisted them over the Maze.
And our granadires to Dineant wan in,
    And took up the French quarters.
And over the water at an old ston cassele,
    The French there fired bold.
With some pateraras they plaid very brisk,
    And boldly keeped that holde.
A comande of our men over the water wane,
    In a boat they wan throu withall.
And the forelorn hope so bravely marcht up,
    And advanced in on the castelle.
A regiment of Spainiards in that castel was,
    At the first they fired boldlie.
And seeing again that they were al tane,
    In haiste they behoved to flee.
From that bit casstel they were beat all,
    Our men was brought back to the toun
And of tome barrels togither tyed fasst,
    A bridge ore the Maze was made soon.
Our armie and traine marched from Namuire,
    And pitched their camp on a plain.
South easst from Namuire three ligs they fure,
    And there a while did remaine.
That day that we marcht four regiments detasht,
    With the Major Generall Tronie.
Two ligs we did march and then we did pitche,
    At a castel and cloisster right bonie.
In the haloue of a burne our camp was set doun,
    And taried there dayes foure.
The castel of old to Tronie belonged,
    There the French slew his predecessore.
From that to Dineant on comande we went,
    Al we four regiments with speed.
Tronies and Carries Dalrumpells and Ranks,¹
With courage and conduct indeed.
And over the Maze two regiments did pitche,
And two on east side of the town.
To ramforce the guards of these two regiments,
Each night our picket vent doun.
Over that barell bridge our picket was led,
Right late in an evening tide.
And ay as we steped these barells they jouked,
Bot fast together they bide.
Then they got boats and made a bridge for us,
And then some better we goe.
Two or three dayes wrought on this wisse
And defended ourselves from our foe.
The castel of Dinant is lying now slighted,
The old broken rock now dung doun.
The French man himsele distroyed this castell,
Its a ruineous like thing in a town.
Our regiments and pairties and the granadires,
Past very weel up at Dineant.
And our troupers pass out ful fiveten ligs,
And from that contrabution was sent.
Then in a morning soon our orders did come,
To march and keep a strong rire.
Then from Dineant we marched right stark,
And the French began to appear.
Near to our armie that day marched we,
And camped there for a night.
On the morrou earlie marched our armie,
And we followed at our flight.
On the thrid of August our armie marcht this,
And came back over the Maze.
So upon our old ground that before we lay on,
Our tents was pitched in rawes.
On the nixt morning two ligs we marcht doun,
And camped not far from the line.
And out from Leidge a comand came to us,
And brought out with them a train.
On the eleventh of August we marched doun yet,
Til within a lig of Sant Troye.
To us there again new tideings did come,
Of another brave victoreye.
A great field fight ² which was at Donaverte,
Where our armies victorious were.

¹ Baron de Trognée's regiment, M. Caris's regiment, Dalrymple's regiment of the Scots Brigade, and probably Ranke's, a Danish or German regiment.
² i.e. the battle of Blenheim.
We fired victorie with many a crye,
   And thrue up our hatts in the aire.
Then from that back we marched to Hanesse,
   On the eight of September it was.
Ful four ligs of way and there we did lie,
   Til the seventh day of the nixt month.
Our Scots Officers they made their coursses,
   And many their horsses did run.
So several dayes was spent with these playes
   And the foremost behouved to win.
On the seventh of October we marched over,
   And set down our camp at Barchloe.
The night being weet and the night very clat
   With speed we provided for strae.
Then wood we did fetch and made up our kiells,
   And lay there for a long time.
Six regiments were detashed to go to a sidge,
   Some to the camp came for them.
The twentie ninth of October we marched out heire,
   And came to the Sant Peters berge.
Upon the same hill we camped yet still,
   And the ground was now cold and hard.
The froast and the snow upon us did bloe,
   Our tents were old and al rente.
With amonition coals we warmed our soales,
   At our quarter guard they were burnt.
Al this long campine no ground we did wine,
   And as litle we did tine.
Our Hollands armie was bot thousands fiftie,
   And we bravely marcht on the line.
The toun of Straesberg was now besidged,
   The latter end of this campine.
This toun being strong it held out right long,
   And defended with noble engine.
Our armie in fields behove to bide,
   Untill this sidge it was over.
The French this time lay on their oon line,
   Each armie did wait on an other.
At the sidge of Straesberg it woefullie happened,
   Our walliant Tronie was slayn.
By a conon ball brave Tronie did fall,
   His courage no liveing could stain.
In the bed of honour he lyes at this hour,
   Who was walliant in his time.
And in our armie with courage on hie,
   Atacqued offt: on the French line.
Ye bourgers of Howie lament for your Tronie,
   Your Governour in al striffe.
And al our armie lament for Tronie,
   At Straesberg hes loossed his liffe.
And at this same toun right many was slain,
   And many a miane there was sprung.
Mosst like to Keyezersuerd it may be compaired,
   For burning and killing of men.
This toun was tan in and then very soon,
   Our men repaired the same.
Our camp did break up and we marched off,
   Right fasst to our garissounes.
The Duke of Mallberie with our English armie,
   Was this year in Dutchlan hie.
And with the Emperour he gained honour,
   And wan a brave victorie.
The Emperour gave him a title honorable,
   Made him prince of the Holy Empire.
With fame and renoune Mallberie weel croun,
   Till all the wholle worlde expire.
They had two field feights Houghstrote and Donavert,
   The Bavarians was put to the flight.
With fire and sword our armie perseued,
   And many mens doom it was dight.
In the month of October our armie came down,
   To Holland to their garissounes.
The moneth of November it was I remember,
   When our clyne armie marcht ine
The twentie one of November our regiment togheter,
   And al our armie marcht offe.
To the toun of Howie that year marched we,
   Got quarters on night at Fineffe.
In that long village we got good quarters,
   On the maroue to Howie we came.
About Sant Germans port our quarters we got,
   And lay there in open loane.
Our bedding and fire the bourgers gave there,
   Al winter we lay pretie thronge.
Theres an old timber bridge over the river broad,
   It stands on five pillars of stone.
And to the toun some times we walk in,
   And in to the market crosse.
And a pleassant weel of very good water,
   Springing up at four or five quarters.

1 The soldier seems to have misplaced the names of the two actions in Germany. The first was Schellenberg, near Donauwerth, and the second Blenheim or Hochstadt.
The progress of the Lord Dalrmples regiment, with the Hollands armie, in the year 1705.

Five regiments togither lay in Howie al winter,
    Til the outseting of our armie.
We keeped the forts and al the toun ports,
    And some times marcht on pairtie.
In the spring of the year as sumer dreu near,
    The French made strong at Namuire.
They made a new fort a very strong worke,
    Where our armie had trenched before.
With brave counterscarffs and abundance of guns,
    They call it now Sant Peters worke.
It is made so strong and with noble engine,
    That Sanct Paull it dar not ataque.
At the toun of Namuire they gathered great pouer,
    And a deal of forces brought there.
And some of them sware the boambarding of Namuire,
    Howeye should repent it ful saire.
Our regiments pretent come to us in Lent,
    To camp we behoved to goe.
In the toun of Howie rewieued were we,
    And the rest of the regiments also.
And with half mounting they maide for us then,
    For every man a pie coatt.
Red faced with yellow for to make a show,
    Bot divell a bit lineing they got.
On the tuelth day of May we marched from Howie,
    And lay one night into Leidge.
From Luke to our camp then we marched up,
    And we camped on Sant Peters berge.
Our English armie camped bye Fissie,
    Close by the Maze water side.
Bettwizt the Maze and Jarr we camped fair,
    Upon the plain field did bide.
A bit of a trench was made about us,
    On it was planted smal guns.
And from Masstrick came out bread and flesh,
    And abundance of beire in tunns.
To Masstrick toun our Officers came,
    With our recruits from Scotland.
A hundered men to our regiment then came,
    And got caps was made in England.
Our coats on our backs our caps on our tops,
That day we passt a reuieue.

My Lord Dallrimple\(^1\) that day came us till,
In number we were men eeneue.
On the front of our caps two ramping lyons,
Standing by a rock to your thought.
The FIRM motto you may read also,
With diversse collours was wrought.
A granade and gun the granadires signe,
Weel wrought with both reed and blew.
These fizanire caps we got on our tops,
Like walliant Scotmen and true.

On the front of the camp they dreu us al up,
Our Officers stod to their posts.
And al our Generalls came rideing alongs,
Weel mounted upon their fine horsse.

Over the Maze water a bridge was made clear,
And they wan al over by noon.
The Generall Mallberie with the English armie,
From Foussie marcht in good order.
And up the countrie they marched dayelie,
And joyned with the Emperoure.
Our litlee armie yet still we did lie,
And presentlie were set to work.

Upon our left hand a strong trench we made,
To gurade our selves in our camp.
And every day we wrought bussielie,
And a very strong trench did make.
Full ten foot wide and fourtie foot deepe,
And a litlee compass we take.

We made batteries for guns and then laid them on,
So it was a right strong countescarffe.
And al the corners weel planted with guns,
So we thought to hold the French offe.

The Maze water we froanted theretill,
And the Jarr was now in our rire.
And Masstrick toun lay on our left hand,
So they dreu our armie in there.
All this moneth of May entrenched they laye,
And all the long moneth of June.
For meat and drink we need not want,
Enough came out of the toun.
And up the Maze watter from Holland came stor,

\(^1\) See Douglas's Peerage of Scotland, vol. ii. p. 535, Earl of Stair. Arms:
Of comodaties for our moneye.
The butter and chisse the good speck and grisse,
And enough of genever and brandie.
The suttrigs tobace and what we did laike,
Came to us in great plentie.
And drye forage they gave to our horsse,
In this camp for our securatie.
And over the Maze water we did make a bridge,
At the end of our bridge a trench.
And al our train horsse grased over the Maze,
On them a strong guarde for the French.
Our English armie was now in Germanie,
And in May the French did set out.
Come over their line with trumpets sounding,
And al their splendor and pompe.
And over Luke land marched their train bande,
And on the twenty sixth day of Maye.
The French hoast with brage and boast,
Laid sidge to our old town of Howie.
Four regiments of men in Howie lay then,
The Governour called Crumstrum.
After the death of Tronie they had Labadie,
And Crumstrum he releaved him.
The valliant Crumstrum gathered al in,
Provisions that was in the toun.
The brandie and beir to the castel they beare,
And the magassines filled with provission.
The French batteries in haiste they do make,
And fired on that castell.
And many a boam they threu in upon them,
And a strong sidge laid to their taill.
Our valliant Crumstrum did boldly defende,
And al his men he did poste.
And from the castell our canon plaide sneell,
Fireing upon the French hoast.
The valiant French did strongly entrenche,
And hold them in on each side.
Two regiments of men in Fort Joseph lay then,
And perforce they behoved to abide.
And into fort Sare was a regiment and mair,
Who kepted it night and day.
And al the French camp lay them round about,
Ready to ataque them were they.
This sidge was strong and lassted right long,
Till al these forts was dung doun.

1 Crönstrom. See vol. ii. p. 224.
And of the casstel a great pairt fell,
    And the walls made flat with the grune.
On the thretenth of July the French took it in,
    And al the forts of that place.
That day Crumstrum and al his men,
    Behoved to come in their grace.
All prissoners of war they were made there,
    And sent to the toun Walenshine.
These four regiments in prisson lay long,
    The whole lenth of the campine.
The French of Howie took possesson anewe,
    And there they mounted the guard.
To keep the castel with men in arms fell,
    And a few to keep the Picarde.
The French from Howie came marching away,
    And pitched their camp about Luke.
And in Luke toun the French wan in soon,
    Bot yet the castel held out.
On each side of the Maze the French lay in raus,
    And from thence the squadrons came doun,
And some of our train horsse as they lay at grasse,
    Was tane by the French dragouns.
In a morning earlie it happened to be,
    A guard of ours they surprissed.
And in a thick misst ore our armie wisste,
    They took some horsse and the guard.
And their grand leagure lay doun towards Tonguere,
    And Tonguere was one of their houffes.
With good Tonguere beir their heads put a stire,
    No danger they dreaded from us.
To Malbrough in haiste the tideings is passt,
    As they lay in the Emperours hoast.
How we lay entrenched sorround by the French,
    How dear this war might us coast.
Then Malbrough in haiste with his armie marcht,
    So came doun the countrie with speed.
Two hundered ligs over waters on bridges,
    To help us in time of our need.
And on the lasst of June within sight they came,
    Which made us al merie indeed.
The French armie their coming did see,
    And dreue af their armie with speed.
The English armie they rested a daye,
    And camped at the Maze side.
On the second of July earlie marched they,
    In our trench no longer we bide.
Straught towards the line we marched that time,
    Five ligs ore we pitched our camp.
Three ligs the nixt day before we did staye
   Not far from the line we encampe.
Then of good horsse we were eightie squadrons,
   And a hundered betallions of foot.
Our armies nou joyned togither in one,
   Ready their foes for to hitte.
Our Hollands armie was thousands fiftie,
   We campe on the left of the line.
And twelve regiments was shortlie detached
   To sidge Howie once againe.
On the eighth of July our Hollands armie,
   Two ligs to Howie did march.
On north side of the toun we set our camp doun,
   And lay to cover our sidge.
And over the Maze we did make a bridge,
   A littele belowe the toun.
And on either side our sidgers did bide,
   And it was sidged al round.
It was aledged that the French had engadged,
   To cut our bridge in the night.
Our picket turned out and marched to it,
   To keep it til the morning greu light.
And several days we wrought on this ways,
   Before that we wan the casstel.
And they from within did bravely defende,
   And at us shot many a ball.
And our batteries was worthy to praisse,
   The fired with a great skille.
The casstel wall was made now to fall,
   And made flat above the lime kell
And the Picarde was sidged now hard,
   Til about twelve hours of the day.
A pairtie of our men upon it came doun,
   And the French began to array.
And some of them fired and some of them fled,
   And doun to the casstel they ran.
Our men them perseued as fasst as they could,
   And the Picarde we now wan.
On the hie batterie our canon played brissklie,
   And their guns were dismounted all.
One of them got a stroak that made it to roack,
   And she came doun over the wall.
The nixt day at noon our canons were playing,
   And their senterie that stood on the wall
Diserted his posst whatever it coast,
   Coming doun the rock gun and all.
The Governour heard tell thus hou it befelle,
   Surrendered the casstel right soon.
A parlie was beat and al was silleth,
And so we wan Howie againe.
The threten of Jully it was we wan Howie,
With the casstel and the Picarde
And al the French there was made prissoners,
And sent away with a guarde.
Our men was put in to keep this old toun,
And the casstel they began to mend,
Workmen fel to work and mounted it up,
And wan some money to spend.
At the sidge of Howie the French cavalrie,
Came out on our English armie
And in a dark night they came to their right,
Which raissed the hue and the crye
Our Scottish dragouls lyeing on the right wing,
Very haistielic ran to their arms.
The French cavalrie on the front of the armie,
Put al the wholle hoast in allarme.
And back to their line the French fleed againe,
And wan out of sight very soon.
A pairtie very strong perseued after them,
And bot litele harme was done.
Our Hollands armie countermarched from Howie,
On the seventeen of Jully it was.
And al our bagage to the right did march,
And again by the rire it did pass.
Our regiment on comand marched with the train,
That day to the English we joyne.
With the big armie our Holland train laye,
And we ressted there all afternoon.
And on the evening our orders did come,
To take doun tents and to march.
Of pouder and ball we were provided all,
And expecting to meet with the French.
So al our armie they marched brisklie,
And the night it was pretie darke.
In the morning earlie our General Mallberie,
A guarde of the French he did take.
A lig above Sant Leu at the village Landoe,
Fourscore French horsse he did take.
And secured them no kind of warning,
They could to their armie nou make.
The water of Hesspe was bridged in haiste,
And our cavallrie over did passe.
And now the French line boys we have gotten tan,
And a joyfull tideings it was.
On the aughten of Jully in the morning earlie,
Our armie did take the French line,
And all our regiment with valiant hearts,
    Came marching on with the train.
And all our armie came on and drew nigh,
    More bridges o'er the water was made.
Which made a great throng bot ere it was longe,
    We railed on the other side.
Brave Generall Overkerke our horse he drew up,
    In squadrons upon that hill side
And the French cavallrie came on and drew nigh,
    In battell array they did ride.
And about ten a cloack these gallants did yocke,
    And fired their carabines all.
And without more words they pulled out swords,
    Riding close as a brassen wall.
At the first going on our Scotish dragouns,
    Ramcountered the Householde of France.
Sharp swords over crouns which made many wounds,
    Our squadrons did brisskle advance.
Till two or three squadrons rode quite throu the French
    And defended themselves pretie weel.
And on the other side was wounds deep and wide,
    Till the French began for to reell.
Some were killed some cutt some set upon foot,
    The French they behoved to flee.
Our squadrons of horse persued the chasse,
    And made their foes for to die.
The French foot and train was nou coming doun,
    Bot in haste they turned and fled.
And left their canon standing on the ground,
    Back again they both ran and reed.
And by twelve a cloack our armie wan upe,
    Right strong they stood in a rowe,
And al our train was coming this time,
    As fast as horse could them drawe.
Four regiments of foot from our armie detashed,
    Was come throu the water of Hespé.
They came to a village where the French kepte guarde,
    And they brunt the village in haste.
It was a great fray the French wan away,
    And fled up towards Namuir.
And all our armie with courage on hie,
    Persued two ligs and some more.
Fiveten great guns that the French brought on,
    Our armie them did all catche.
And eight of them had three barrells in one,
    Al made for keeping the passe.
Many French was slain and many was tane,
    Our prisoners of war to be.

1 See supra, p. 332.
And many French horsse was catcht in the place,
   Bot the great pairt away did flee.

Then to Tarliemount our armie marcht up,
   The French had left them their room.
Thereabout for a night our tents we pitch
   And lay about that old toun.

From Tarlimount to Loven our armie marcht on,
   On Jully the ninetenth day.
And the French armie they gathered a wie,
   And boldly again did array.

At Loven they bide by the watter side,
   And kept that pass of the watter.
And from our right hand the paities vent doun,
   At the pass they had a wie blatter.

The French made a trench and kepted the pass,
   And boldlie there did abide.
So at Loven both the armis lay then,
   Full nine days long they did abide.

Til the threeteth of Jully then did our armie,
   A stronge comande did detashe.

Major Generall Slaniburgh he got the comande,
   That night for to take a passe.
And on the evening al our armie right soon,
   Took doun tents and marched away
A lig above Loven we marched that time,
   To take that pass we essaye.
And by the break of day our canons did playe,
   And a bridge on this watter was made.
Some regiments of frontires and granadieres,
   In haiste over the water they gede.
And al our armie now in battel arraye,
   Was readie now just to fall one.
And on the other side the French had a guarde,
   Bot they quicklie fled from it anone.
Now the French armie came on and dreu nigh,
   And a very sure pace they do keep,
And for our frontires and these granadieres,
   On that side was wading right deep.
And upon our right the English had bridged,
   And fired canon right thick.

Our Generall Mallberie this engadgement did see
   And he said this work will not work.
For al our brave horsse can get no passage,
   The marash in that place is so deep.
Our bridgeing was smal could do nothing at all,
   The foot nothing could them keep.
A counssel of war in haiste he called there,
   Which was by a stroak of a drum.
Then al chieff comanders and head officers,
In haiste into him did come.
Gentlemen did he say it pleasseth not me,
   To many men we may loosse.
I think it amiss in such a place as this,
   No passage is heir for our horsse.
So call our men back and let us drau off,
   So in haiste they were called back.
The French canon was now bringing doun,
   And they fired with many a crack.
The rire of our armie marched foremost away,
   And slouly we marcht in platoues
Til our armie got off with very littele looss,
   And brought of al our great guns.
And then our coper boats in haiste we took off,
   As soon as our men was come in.
The French canon they fired briske than,
   On our rire they made a great din.
Then al our armie came marching away,
   And left the French at the pass.
And all our men displeassed was than,
   And cursed that fogie marashe.
And the Generall Slaniburgh he got an ill word,
   Some said he was now to blame.
For he in that work had proved to slack,
   Which brought a disgrace to his name.¹
From this pass of Loven we marched slou on,
   And our camp coller men they were sent.
Above to a place where the water runs in grains,
   And the howff it was called Busswite.
There we pitched camp the watter on our front,
   And lay there a forthnight and more.
The harvest dreu near we gathered our beir,
   And the French lay straught as before,
We lay in this place til the fifteen of August,
Then we marched with the morning light.
We marched three ligs and then we did pitch,
And camped only for a night.
On the sixteen day we marched earlie,
And came to the place called Genape.
We set our guards for fear of the French,
And there a nights time we did camp.
On the seventeenth day we marched earlie,
And came to the village Brandileue.
Our pickets in haste was now called out,
And took with them pouder and ball.
To the pass of Waterloo in haste they did go,
Nassau Audenburg comanded them all.
Fiftie men of each regiment this time was sent,
And brisklie out they did march.
Til they came to a hedge at the mouth of the pass,
Which was well lined with the French.
The French in ire upon them did fire,
And our men they fired againe.
With firing thick the hedge was brunt,
And several men there is slain.
The French fled awaye no longer they staye,
As fasst as ere they could rune.
Our men they perseued and charged and fired,
And so the passe we have won.
Some French lay dead some wounded did bleed,
And some for fear fled away.
Our picket there so bravelie behaved,
We gained the praisse that day.
On the morou earlie then al our armie,
We marched away to the right.
The pass of Waterloo we did not go throu,
Although we had gained it at night.
Brave Nassau Audenburg wan honor with sword,
And our Scots men he did comende.
And two pistols to drink his good health,
To our regiment he did sende.
On this ninetien day from Brandileu marched we,
Throu a water at a paper mill.
Throu a pass of the wood we marched right hott,
And the French before us were still.
Now all our armie for batel made ready,
And in haste we formed in platones.
Above Loven we were at this time,
And the French was bringing down guns,
We have them weel seen a water us betuen,
And they lined the hedges ful weel.
Within a lig of way we were the same day,
And we made all ready for a reel.
The bushes was long mad the French ground strong,
And in haiste they began to entreneche.
So we stod in arms ready to engadge,
Within a short lig of the French.
And when the evening came we got a comande,
To pitch our tents on that ground.
So we pitched our tents and al our quarter guards,
And lay til the moroue after noon.
On the twentie day of August from this we marcht,
About twelve hours of the day.
From the French we came off by wheeling about,
And our banners al did displaye.
And throu another pass back againe we march,
To Walshwaver we came right.
About two ligs of way that afternoon came we,
And pitched our camp at night.
At Walshwaver three dayes we lay stille,
Then we marcht near to Gebleue.
On the twentie thrid of August our camp was pitcht,
At a place I never weel knowe.
On the twentie sixth day we marched again,
Two ligs and then we did pitche.
At a place called Brewie and there we did lie,
On the twentie ninth of August we march.
On this twentie ninth day then al our armie,
Got a very long march as I trow.
Regiments on comand that day was detashed,
To go to the sidge of Sant Lew.
And al our armie marched on haistilie,
To cover the sidge they did camp.
Lieutenant Generall Didime the sidge did comande,
And al things made ready for work.
Between Sant Leu and Sant Troy the sidgers did lie,
And about to the side of a loch.
On the twentie one day of August then we,
Camped that none could get fourth.
With both foot and horsse we besidged it close,
And a train unto us did come.
Our troupers on horsse did take doun fassines,
We foot fell to and brake grounde.
The French in this toun was very few men,
And many of them was falen sick.
Bot aboundance of canon they had now within
And a very great strength they did keep.
The works of that toun they could not be won,
   By our armie for a long space.
The counterscarfs and works is tedious to rehearse
   And the foussies sorounding that place
And a strong citydaill they might it keep weel
   With their amonition and canon.
The Governour perchance was gone unto France
   And another was left in his room
The French now within made very little dinn
   Sometimes a canon they fire
And some of their ball on the ground did fall
   And some of them sunk in the mire
Now in a short space our men got a trench
   And with men our trenches we keep
And al the night time we were busie working
   And the toun they durst not weel sleep
Some dropping shots they fired out on us
   And some of our workmen was slain.
We now ran our trench near hand the toun ports
   And our cover fired on them
We made up batteries for morters and guns
   Our canons was likewayes tane doun
We planted our guns and morters for boams
   And their mussels was al to the toun.
They might weel have shot if they had been fired
   Bot the toun prevented this fray
The Governour came out to our General
   On September it was the fifth day
Speak what ye think bot they took a drinke,
   And heartesomely held a carire
And assigned that toun to the Stats of Holland
   And so made an end of that weir
Our comands were sent in for to take the toun
   And boldly they entered the port
And al these draubridges to them was laid doun
   And they marched into the fort
Eighten pice of canon was found their within
   And magazines pretie weel filled
In Mallboroughs name this place was now tan
   And al that belonged their untill
Of good wine and beir enough was found heir
   And magassines filled with bread
Our armie now got it intending to keep it
   And a very strong place its indeed
A regiment of Spaineards was taken prissoners
   And some with us took pairtie
And the Governour with us was secure
   Again to the French vent not he
After this time we fell a working
   Al the French line we dang doun
Al above Sant Leu to the ground we threw
   And made it both plain and sound.
On the sixteenth of September it was I remember
   We marched away from Sant Leue
Our regiment this time marched with the train
   Three ligs that night we marched now
At a place called Carres al night we did rest
   And the nixt day we marched by Diest
Our grand armie came now from Sant Leu
   And beneath that toun they have pitched
On the morou earlie marched our armie
   And came to a place called Arescote
That day pretie soon we came to our ground
   Within the line we pitched camp
On the ninetenth of September we pitched there
   And presentlie we fell to work
Of every regiment in haste they comande
   And promised to pay them for it
Twentie four men of each regiment was called
   The first on comand their to be
And was set to the line and did it undermine
   And we wrought it doun manfullie
A scilling a day to each man they pay
   For the working doun of the line
So we wrought on and dang doun the line
   And camped their eight days time
Then from Arescot our armie marched off
   And we marched to Heirindall
And on a bare hathe our tents we did pitch
   Our water was not good at all
And still on our front the French did encampe
   And many a pairtie sent out
And severalls of our men the French did gefang
Al our wholle camp round about
For a long month time this ground we lay on
   And many of our men did fall sick
The wather was cold and our tents groun old
   And we gathered sticks for to ricke
On the twentie ninth of October we marched off
   And our Hollands armie had the rire
And the French cavalrie came on and dreue nigh
   And put us a littele in a stire
General Overkirke on foot he did lighte
   Our Major Generall Muraye also
Comanding to march on for the French was acomane
   So our rire right quicklie did go
A water their ran by this litle toun
Our armie had it bridged weell
So over we past our rire marching fast
And then about we did wheell
Dreu up in battel rank by the side of the stank
And their right boldlie we bide.
The French armie was coming us nigh
As fast as they could weel ride
Some droping shots they fired on us
As the rire of our armie came up
And we now again fired upon them
At last our bridges we took up.
Brunt them in a fire near by a big mire
The French they could not win over
Then in to that toun they rode very soon
And presentlie catcht what was their
Our armie marched of and pitched our camp
Within two ligs and some less
The French armie they came presentlie
And at Herindalle pitched I guesse
Thes French cavalrie with courage on hie
They rode back again into Diest
Where some of our men was left on comand
No warning they got in the least
Til the French came on this very weak toun
Which could not a moment hold out
Our yellow dragouns was now in this toun
And so were al tane without doubt
Some comands of foot and some men that was sick
Togither were al prisoners tane
This litle misluck or eville conduct
Was the worst of al our campine
Now two days march our armie did pass
And set to the sidge of Sanefleet
My Lord Orknaye\(^1\) this sidge did comande
And our train took to it compleat
Al our armie this time lay a cover to them
And it was now right late of the year
Betwixt that and Antwerpe lay now the French camp
And so we were still in a stire.
And every night then our picket stod in arms
While the grand round came about
In contempt of our foes our flags of defience
Was planted far out on our front
Our sidgers at Sanefleet the sidge held compleat
And shortlie they made up a trench

\(^1\) See vol. ii. pp. 11 and 15.
And batteries they made both long and bread
  For to undoe the poor French
Platounes of great guns we loused at anes
  From morning til that it was night
With great canon ball we beat doun thes walls
  And the smoake it ascended on heighte
Three or four days time with strong fireing
  That made the earth for to shake
They beat doun that fort and al that ston work
  And bridges of lather thought to make
The water about Sanefleet was both brod and deep
  No way they could yet get in
Bot by a contrivance of a lather bridge
  Its far sooner said then its done
The French within without noisse or dine
  They yealded this fort now anone
Al prisoners of war they were seised theire
  And the fort was razed to the ground
It was a resset for such as deserte
  And it spoiled the countrey also
For the French partisanes caught al they can
  And wrought the countrey much wo.
It was now dung doun and made flat with the ground
  And its razed now quite awaye
And in short time our armie marched than
  Three ligs we marched that day
And the nixt day right earlie marched we
  And came to a place called Turnhoud
Our tents being old and the wather very cold
  And their two dayes we abode
On the thrid day we marched awaye
  And came to a place called Peire
Our bread we did want our money greu scant
  Four nights right cold we were heir
Our camp now brok up and we marched off
  To our garissons with good speed
To Howie garissoun our regiment was boun
  On the fifth day we got our bread
For Lidge and Howie togither march we
  And Albemall did comande
A lig beloue Hassel from Pire we marched all
  And camped on the bair land
Up towards Barchloe the nixt day we go
  And their our camp did set doun

1 The employment of animals’ skins inflated with air in lieu of ordinary pontoons was a French system, adopted when it was found impossible to transport the common kind into position.
And beside Hassel some regiments camp there
   For a cover into this old toun
They behoved to abide til it was fortified
   The space of five or six weeks
Then to Hassel lay regiments ten or twelue
   And al that place safelie keeps
Betwixt Hassel and Barchloe we camped nights two
   And then we marched again
Betwixt Tonguer and Luke the nixt night we camp
   Luke gairissoun nixt morning marcht in
And that night at even al Howie gairissoune
   Was in the long village right throng
And the nixt day to Howie marcht we
   And took us a drink and a song
The ninetenth of November it was I remember
   When we came to our gairissoune
And we got our ballats upon Howie burgers
   Our quarters was in the main toun
Our quarters was free and good fires have we
   And al winter we lay their
Our caps was tan in to our Officers room
   For a skilling the pice and no mair
And with our old hats, the streets we did passe
   In the best fashon that we can
The brigadire Capolle the comand he had wholle
   For Crumstrum was not yet come.

CHAP. VI.

The progress of Cornall Borthwicks regiment to the battel of Ramellie which after fals to be the progress of Cornall John Heyburns regiment with the Hollands armie in the year 1706.

This winter lay we in the toun of Howie
   And keeped guards on the ports
In the castel and picards we likewayes keept guarde
   Bot the French had demolished the forts.
Crumstrum did now come his regiment with him
   Into France they had prissoners been
Bot being releaved and of confinement eassed
   They got al out new mountinge,
Our regiments Cornal my Lord Dalrimple,
   To prefferment changed his place
And Cornal Borthwick¹ in his room he put
   Who was our Cornal a very short space

¹ See vol. ii. pp. 23 and 33. Lord Dalrymple, now Earl of Stair, exchanged with Colonel Borthwick, who had succeeded Major-General James Ferguson in command of the Cameronian Regiment. Lord Stair's discharge to Samuel Ferguson's heirs is among the Kinmundy papers.
In the spring of this year as sumer dreu near
Cornall Borthwick came up to Howie
And with good intent took out the regiment
And rewieued us al very truelie
And with Cornal Borthwick came a good honest man
The regiments minister for to be
And Mr. George Andersoun 1 he hath to his name
Whiles on Sunday he preaches a wie
The burgers of Howie had gathered up money
This toun again to repaire
Both massons and men was set a working
Five hundered by day and some mair
Fort Joseph and Sairr they both do repaire
And strong casamades they did make
Both Sunday and week day the workmen wrought ay
And a pretie good wage they did take.
Slote windews they made about thes casamades
For smal guns for to shot out
Three slots in each one al of hewen ston
The whole casamade al about
The whole work then, vent very fast one,
Til that the sumer did come
Then our camp set out we behowed to leave it
And let al that working alone
The castel of Howie was now mounted bravely
And strongly built for defence
And many a canon they had now theiron
Before that we came from thence
And before the castell they placed right snell
A batterie of sixteen guns
On the strong rock the batterie was built
To defend al futur envassions
Our regiment this time got half mounting
And harn for to lyn our coats
Our old pie coats they turned them to us
And again we got out our caps
The States of Holland to Howie did come
And rewieued al regiments was their
They rewieued al the works and fortifications
And alowed al the coast very faire
On the tenth day of May our regiment took waye
And left our old toun of Howie
And at Sant Gills the first night we camp
A lig out of Luke we did lie.
And the nixt day we joyned our armie
Who camped by the toun of Tonguere

1 See vol. ii. pp. 95, 112, 157, 170, 173.
And with Tonguere beir, our heads put astire
   For nine or ten days we lay their
Our Generall Mallberie with the English armie
   Did joyn us upon the same ground
We behowed now to march to meet with the French
   Else they to us would have come
On the twentieth day of May marched our armie
   That day was abundance of rain
And at the hunting house our camp we pitch
   No way we could bring up our train
On the twentieth second day againe marched we
   And came to the stone wind mill
And the sconce at Sant Leu shot canon anewe
   For the French the countrey did fill
On the twentie thrid day of this month of May
   In the year seven hundred and six
When the Duke of Bovaire Villieroy and Declare
   Did draw up their hoast of the French
In the morning earlie al the French armie
   Did march in a very good order
They thought awenged to be on our English armie
   Who before had taken their border
At the village Ramelie al the French armie
   They took up that ground very strong
In battel araye their stil they did stay
   Their standarts on front stod alone
We English and Dutch was now on our march
   And we rested by a wind mille
Where our camp collor men they came back againe
   And tideings of the French brought us till
Then al our armie did bravely arraye
   And with good will we marcht one
Our foot in four lines our horsse on our wings
   Over the old line we were anone
Our horsse and dragouns marcht up in squadrouns
   Our foot in bregades now did joyn
Now if we shal se the French make a plea
   Weel pay them of the same coyn
A part of our train came now up amaine
   And quickly began for to play
And when our great guns this battel began
   It was twelve hours of the day
Our second canon ball a standart made fall
   And dang doun some of our foes
The French canon now played anewe
   Bot we got no damage of those
Our General Malberie this time was bussie
   In ordering of this battell
And Overquerke old with courage right bold
The horsse comanded himselle
The Duke of Argille¹ in time of battell
Came galoping fast throu our hoast
He was our brigadire without dread or fear
He spaired no travell nor coast:
The Housold of France their fame to advance
On the right hand of their armie
The best of our horsse set for the purpose
Ramcountered them manfullie
And when they did yock so thick was the shot
The echoe redounded throu the aire
This thick fireing that was them betwene
Lasted half an hour and some mair
Two times our horsse was put to the worsse
Which Mallberie weel did see
To Overquerke he spake who could it not help
Your horsse had need of supplie
Four regiments of foot in haste was called up
And set on the left of our horsse
This was the thrid time the horsse was engadging
And the French was put to the worsse
The French coming doun ready to fall on
Our foot shot at them with ball
The which did them grieve and sadly mischieve
Many horse and men their did fall
Mallberies steed this time was shot dead
And another brought to him anone
And a French ball did kill a Cornall
Holding stirope til that he lap on ²
The French horsse was beat and sadly defeat
And fled away in great fear
Our horsse and dragounes al into squadrouns
Persewed now close on their rire.
On our right hand for battel did stand
Our gallant horsse and dragouns
The marash was bad no pasage they had
And could not well win at the louns
Our Scotish dragounes got throu al at anes
To show their vallour withall
The French cavalrie did so multiplie
Right like to have taken them all

¹ See vol. ii. pp. 5 n., 6-9, etc.
² While [Marlborough] was remounting, a cannon-ball struck off the head of Colonel Bingfield, his equerry, who held the stirrup. He, however, succeeded in escaping, and regained his own lines in safety, though severely bruised. His danger redoubled the energy of his troops, and in full gallop they returned with new spirit to the charge.—Coxe's Memoirs of Marlborough, ch. xlv.
Til some more of our horse this bog did drose
   And relieved them in good speed
The French was grieved and sadly mischieved
   Many wounded and strongly did bleed
The center of our armie was now very busie
   And it was a very strong stoure
A hot battel and many men fell
   It lasted I think a long hour
Our bregade got comand to the left march on
   And the French fired now thick indeed
Some was wounded and hurt as we marched up
   And some were shot instantlie dead
And with good hearts and our screwed baginets
   We advanced on a deal of rie
And al our bregade they proved pretie lads
   And the French they proved bot kie
Like cowardlie tikes standing behind dikes
   They fired thick for a wie
To the lenth of a pike we came to the dike
   And then a brisk fire gave we:
Our bregade in platouns did fire their guns
   Then advanced close to the hedge
The French saw no grace to look in our face
   Bot few durst stay to engadge
From hedge to hedge, we beat of the dogs,
   And we fought it couragiouslie
Within a short time, front line and rire line
   Of the French began for to flee
About seven bregades of our pretie lads
   Beat of the French grand armie
Our second and thrid line, was never brought on
   Bot stod and the battel did see
Some of the French horsse, who were beat on the left
   Stod still behind their rire line
They stil did stay, til their foot wan away
   And our horsse was coming on them
A regiment of French was caled Picardies
   Whom our Scots Fizanires, had beat out
From the center of our armie could not win away
   They were forced throu hedges therabout
Cornal Borthwick did call, to his regiment all
   Gentle men to the right hand about
And in our coming back, we losst Captan Clerk ¹
   Who before had proved right stout
The French Picardies, their guns did discharge
   And ran back again throu the hedge
Our Cornall Borthwick his regiment took back
   Thinking with them to engadge

¹ This proves the fact conjectured in vol. ii. p. 33.
Into the same yards our guns we discharge
   Upon these bold Picardies
Who in a desperat sort shot many a shot
   And away to an other place flees
Their our Captan Denune, in his body got a wound,
   Which mortal proved to be
Upon a mans back he was borne off
   And two days after did die
Some French sones of whores thought to take our collers
   Our regiment to put to disgrace
Our Captan Campbel for granadires did call
   Who fired just in their face
Now Cornal Borthwick before his regiments
   Was marching doun the hie way
He was a strong man, with a sword in his hand
   He valliant proved that day
Til a cowardlie tike set a gun throu the dike
   And shot our Cornall throu the head
And in a minutes time, our Cornall fell doun
   And on the ground he lay dead.
Our Cornal Heybrun had now the comande
   And he led on the regiment
At the French armie was now fled away
   We for a persute was now bent
When this battel began the French had the wind
   And to us it came now about
So the French losst the day, and fast fled awaye
   That armie was put to the rout.
At this fight of Ramelie, did many men die,
   Though it lasted bot a short space,
And many a man lay dead on the ground
   As we marcht back throu the place
Six men we now left and along they have brought
   The corps of Borthwick and Clerk
And in a wagon, along they were draun
   No time now for buring wark
The galant French horsse, stod yet in squadrons
   To let their foot win awaye
Our horsse and dragounes advanced in squadrons
   And the French vent of in aray
The Duke of Bovarie, rode of in dispaire
   Cursing this woefull mischance
For al this voyage he got litele wage
   When he vent back into France
And the Vilieroy, to flee was right coy
   Bot yet he might not weel bide
He with the cavalrie, away now did flee
   As fast as they could weel ride

1 At one time adjutant. See vol. ii. p. 34 n.
The Lord Declar was wounded right sore
    Perforce of the field he must flee
He rode to Brisels toun and their he lay doun
    And within three dayes he did die
And his testment, to the King of France sent
    Which he told before he did die
That Generalls without heads his armie on leads,
    The which makes a hartless armie.
On this field of battel, of the French host fell
    Six thousand, seven hundred, and sixtie.
And five thousand men were prisoners tane
    Who had not feet for to flee
And sixtie five stan of their collors was tane
    Eleven standarts that wanted collors
And fiftie four piece of canon was left on the ground
    And the number of six ketel drums
And of wounded men they had four thousand
    Three hundred and twentie eight
Far moe broke away and ran throu the countrey
    Then al that was slain at the fight
Their books and beides, Roman Catholicks creeds
    That day they threu al to the divell
Their books of religion, was al throun doun
    And they cursed their sucesse so eville
Of our Hollands armie, in battel did die
    Three thousand seventie and seven
And of wounded men we had six thousand
    Nintie five on that night at even.
Al of brave cavalrie that was slain at Ramelie
    Upon the Lords day at noon
Who valiantlie did die like noble cavalrie
    Before that the battel was won
Three Cornals of horsse their lives did losse
    And three was wounded also
And four of their Majors was killed likewayes
    Ten Captans six Lieutenants so.
Four Cornets eight serjants left life in pledge
    And wounded was many moe
Three Lieutenant Cornals and twentie four Captans
    And twentie seven Lieutenants also
And twentie eight Cornets and eighten Serjants
    Al of our horsse and dragounes.
In field of battel was wounded they tell
    To their praisse in war it redounds
And of our foot bregades was slain of pretie lads
    A thousand seven hundred sixtie eight
And of our wounded men in field we left then
    Two thousand eighttie nine on this night
Three Cornalls of foot was killed dead at it
   And one Lieutenant Cornall
Two Majors and nine Captans of foot
   And ten Lieutenants in all
And ten Ensignes was killed likewayes
   And thretie Serjants also
And of Officers wounded upon the same field
   Their number it will be far moe.
First Cornalls three was wounded that day
   And three Lieutenant Cornalls
And four of our Majors and fourtie three Captans
   And three and fiftie Lieutenants
And fourtie eight Ensignes was wounded this time
   And Sixtie and seven Serjants
Of our wounded men this number was tane
   And Officers of such like ranks
From the fight of Ramelie, the Frenches did flee
   And our armie perseued in good order
And at the watter of Hespe the Frenches left
   Two canon and heaps of their powder
Their swords and guns and their amonitions
   The Frenches left on the field
And towards Loven right fast are they run
   And their they got a short bield
Our noble General from this field of battel
   Sent out a comande of our horsse
Which took the French bagage, and al their train wagons
   Ore they the watter could crosse
Bot when it grew late our armie did hault
   And we lay al night on our arms
To the watter of Hespe our rire was come closse
   And we marcht in the morning betimes
With our horsse and foot we stil them perseued
   And that day ore it was noon
We came to Buswite and pitched our camp
   And our tents into us did come
And a strong guard was heir on comand
   Sent away with the French that was tan
And another comand with our oun wounded
   Marcht away on the nixt morning
To Mastrick toun the French was sent doun
   And put into prison most strong
And to the toun of Luke they took our wounded
   And hospitals now was al throng:
The French armie, from Loven did flee
   And vent away in a fray
They wanted amonition to hold out the toun
   And no courage they had for to stay
The town of Loven to our General did send
Their keyes and the keeping of their town
All that was his will they promist to fulfill
And to it our armie marcht doun
And with our coper boats they made for us bridges
That our armie might pass in three lines
The twentyfifth of May we marcht in good arraye
And Loven they set up our signes
The Spanish speybae we entred now withae
And pitched our camp on that night
And above Loven, our camps was set doun
And the country was al in a fright
News of our victorie ran throu the country
And towns they durst not gainstand
Mallberies name with honour and fame
Was blazed abroad throu that land
And above Loven our Cornall Heyburn
Caused make a grave in our front
And for the funerall was made ready all
Fiftie men with guns for to shot
And in the evening he caussed bury then
Cornall Borthwick and Captain Clerk
Both the one and the other, laid in the bed of honor
And so ends now our Ramelie work.
A comand of men was sent into Loven
Detached throu al our armie
For to keep this town we made provission
And that college so seemlie to see
The town of Loven it is pretie long
With a ston wall round about
And they have a college both comely and large
And a great many students in it
On the twenty-sixth of May from Loven marched we Towards Brissels town we aproache
The French that day from it fled awaye
And the bourgers set open their ports
The bonie town of Brissels which is a wealthy place
They made welcome our armie
And towns great and smal came to our Generall
Chused him their ruler to be
And at Volea our lines now we drawe
And our housse quarters was there
And our officers to the fair town of Brissels
Right frequently made their repaire
Next morning earlie ore we marched away
Orders throu our armie now came
And in Mallberies name with his titles of fame
Al along in our front they procleam
Since it hath pleased God, in his providence good
To grant us the victorie
And King Charles the thrid he is now procleamed
The right King of Spain for to be
This Spanish speybae it belongeth now all
To his Catholick Majestie
Therefor at large we do now discharge
Al spoiling of this countrie
To prevent millroding or stealing or robing
Under the pain of your death
If this countrey ye wrong ye are for to hang
And afterward reckon your skailth
And now afterhind the bouers did come in
With enough of provission to sell
The price of meat and drink was agreed on I think
And for every thing money we tell
A deal of proclamations came throu after this
Of the prices of bread and of heir
And for sixpence halfpenie each skilling get we
And that is full seven pence heir
On the twentie seventh of May we marched awaye
And crossed beneath Brussels toun
Crossed Brussels cannal with our armie all
And at Granberg our camps we set doun
And there our armie long time did not tarie
The next day we marched to Hossie
And then from that we marched towards Gante
And fired our victorie
The right of our camp lay now towards Gante
And their we lay two three days
And for our Ramelie we fired victorie
And proclamed it with many hussaes.
The great toun of Gante, was afrighted therat
And rendered themselves very soon
And with our armie, they acorde and agree,
In Bridgees the like they have done.
That strong place Dam they have done the same
With the English they acorde and agree
And King Charles the thrid they al have proclamed
And themselves his servants to be
The noble Orkneye, rode from our armie
And with him good horssmen anewe
To the city Auntwerpe, that old antient work
And made them likeways to bowe
And in three dayes time, they came back again
And joyned with our armie.
The French at Audenare, a litele camp had
Bot shortlie awaye they did flee.
The toun of Audenare did likewayes surender
As soon as the French fleed awaye
A comand of our men, was now put therein
In it al this sumer they laye
And a little camp, we had hard by it
As soon as Doremont was sidged
That castel strong held out very long
At last to yeild was oblidged
At this sumer time Doremont was a sidging
At it lay pairt of our armie
And with canons and morters fired right brisk
And they fired again biterlie
This Doremont castel we do hear tell
Is strongest in al the countrie
With water al about theirs no wining to it
Yet we conquered it with our armie
The wather proved dry and we wrought bussilie
Al the later end of the campine
And fresh comands with weapons in hands
Made our foes to yeald it throu time
Away from Gaunt we marched in rank
And marched four ligs as they say
We came near Deensie, and ther camped we
Our train throu Gaunt came that day
The Duke of Argille, was our brigadire still
And ordered yet in our bregade
And with the General he passed up weel
And many Officers he preferred
Our Major Hamelton he got his comission
Our Lieutenant Cornal to be
And for Captan Campbell, he brought out another
And our regiments Major is he
And three new Captans in Heybrons regiment
Was placed after Ramelie
The which is caled, the Captan Cathcarte ¹
Lytester :¹ and young Ogilvie ¹
And Cornal Heybron gave to Tassie ² comision
His Captan Lieutenant to be
And Lieutenant Heliburton ³ he got the comande
Of the Captan Mouats ⁴ companie
Our old antients was made new Lieutenants
Most paire throu al our armie
And several cadies got antients comisions
And al was advanced a degree.

Bot the poor sojor lads, in several bregades
That engaged on the field Ramelie
And threu doun their wallats, with stockings and linens
Some again them never did see
And when the French host they had put to the worse
And chased them of several wayes
And had them perseued, with courage reneued
In marching nine or ten dayes
Some was left behind our walats to bring
And foloued us far behinde
Some wallats was losst whatever they cost
And no redress we did find
The toun of Namuir it was now secure
After the fight of Ramelie
A French governour was sent to Namuire
And the whole comand ther took he
The Spainish governour he losed the pouere
And from the castel was put
And moe fresh men they have put theirin
This castel strong to hold out
To the field Ramelie, came the French cavalrie
Three dayes after the bettale
And twelve pice of canon they did their gefang
And al they could find in the field
Some of our wounded men they took in with them
Unto the strong toun of Namuire.
Where good churgions, their wounds did pance
And great pains took for their cure
Bot our armie had losse of many fine horsse
Was lost in that batel so hott
Which made our trowper men, on foot walk along
Before new horsse could be got.
The number of the horse which our armie did losse
Was nine hundered and nintie killed
And three hundered and fiftie was wounded
And the horse hospitals they filled.
And from Deensie camp, our armie marched off
To a place called Wentergrim
And among thick hedges our tents we pitch
And lay their a fortnights time
The news came their of victorie mair
Prince Eugine and the Duke of Savoye
Had made the French armie from Turain to flee
To which was a valliant ploye
The French huge host, with terible boast
Lay sideging this toun of Turain
And with strong work, and a great many folk
They thought this toun for to gain
This city Turain is the chiepest toun
That is in al Savoyes land
The Prince Eugine he with a pretie armie
Beat them French away from the same.
He raised the sidge and them did oblige
To flee out of the countrie
And six weeks time he perseued after them
And wan a great victorie
Three Provences of land he wan back again
Into the great Duke of Savoye
And the toun Turain was set at freedom
Nothing can them now anoye
The Curff Van Hanover comanded horsse their
Which releaved al Millanie
This tideings right soon to our armie came doun
And we fired for it victorie
At Wentergrim, our armie was lieing
When thes tedings came to our armie
Within a moneths time it was after hinde
The fight we had at Ramelie.
Heir our Major Campbell gave his company all
To each man a felt matt of beir
And every feltmet cost nine pence suert guilt
And we drank it although it was dear
Bot the fin a drop since his honor doeth alone us
And his good health we never nou drink
We canot weel for shame beg drink every time
For he riches and wretches we think
And from this place our army did detashe
Away for the sidge of Hostend
Nixt morning we march and at Russelay we pitch
And lay their a cover to them
The General Overkirke comanded the sidgers
That sidge Hostend upon land
And al our armie lay now at Russelay
To keep them from the French band
And likewayes by sea we had a nawie
Of our English and Dutch men of war
Who by apointement, came quickely about
Before the French ships was aware
Upon Hostend reed some French ships abade
To keep the mouth of that water
And when our fleet was come theirabout
The canons began for to blater
By sea and by land we sidged Hostend
And the French ships their was tane
And one noble shipe and very well mounted
Which they called the old Queen of Spain
These ships and men was al prissoners tane
Upon the reed of Hostend
Then upon the toun they fired canone
And gave it a cruell gobende
Our sidgers by land, was bussie sidgeing
And trenching on the land side
And strong bateries before it they raise
Weel planted with canon, that tide
Our fleet upon sea, fired so briskely
The toun they were likely to burn
Bot to prevent that losse a mesenger went fourth
And they made the capitolation.
The toun of Hostend was not able to defende
Our armie by land and by sea
The ships on the harbor toun and al togither
Was conquered by our armie
And when it was won our men was put in
To keep this toun of Hostend
And the French ships our men got to manage
And the toun we began for to mend
And at Russelay our armie stil lay
Until the same was al done
And from Russelay marched our armie
On the fourth day of July right soon
So our armie all did cros that canalle
Beloue the toun of Courtrige
Then we pitcht camp, in good file and rank
And our hous was in Erelbege
From Courtrige and Erelbege, the French was fleed
And left that old open toun
A comand of our men to Courtrige marcht in
And tents on that wall set down
And al our sick was put into Courtrige
And our armie was lying near by
Then to Pong the Pire we marched but fear
On the tenth of this moneth of July
The passe of Pong the Pire, we did strongly secure
And our camp ran their al alonge
And a strong comand we there detashed
To go to the siege of Minone.
This little wie toun it was very strong
And aboundance of canon they had
And every day ther canons did play
And morters they fired like mad
The old French king for his own designe
Had made this toun very strong
And men and provission, enough was within
And this sidge it lasted right long.
And for noble works half moons and counterscarfes
   And foussies about this wie toun
And for draubridges and double barires
   None stronger this countrey al round
So threetie regiments, from our armie was sent
   To sidge this toun of Minone
Who did break ground and fell a trenching
   And so the work it vent one
And many a night, the French saillied out
   And many a man was slain
And many a time with strong fireing
   The French was beat back againe
Till our batteries was made both long and broad
   And our canons was planted also
And morters for boams and throing of stones
   We had al set in a rowe
And several nights great pairties of French
   Came doun our sidge for to raise
And some were slain and some were tane
   Some fled off several wayes
Now al our armie advanced a wie
   About half of an English mile
And to cover Minone moe regiments was sent
   And they marched in rank and file
This sidge of Minone continued still one
   And when our batteries did lousse
And our great guns, fired in platounes,
   Such work I think was no mousse
For threten days time this strong fireing
   Continued at this sidge of Minone
Which beat doun that wall and made it to fall
   For spairance I think it got none
This time our armie removed a wie
   And we marched a lig to the right
Our camp towards Minone, ran now al along,
   To defende our sidge in the night
To make an ataque upon their out works
   The Duke of Argille took in hand.
To lead on our granadieres which post dangerous
   He was pleased to take for comand.
To the port of that toun he marched before them
   In the heat of a strong ataque
Where many a man, was wounded and slain
   And many was forced to draw back
The French sprang mines and cruell engines
   Made many a man for to die
Right like to Keyezersuerd, it may be compaired
   Yet it lasted bot a wie.
The French fled in, as our men marched one
And so left al their out works
Our granadires in file, with the Duke of Argille
Advanced up close to the ports.
Few days after that a parley was beat
And the toun it was to surender.
And to march away, upon the nixt day
Their governour that noble defender
His men in arms with their screwed baginets
Six canons two morters also
With flourishing collours and beating of drums
And so away they did go
And some covered wagons they took too alongs
And marched out in good order
And went back to France their fame to advance
And they losst a strong toun on their bordour
Our armie of Minone did take nou possession
And repaired the toun in al haste.
And regiments of men the same to defende
And a new Governour was placed
And many hurt men, was wound at Minone,
And brought doun to Coutrigge all
And many sick men from the camp came in
And put heir in an hospitall
And from Coutrig to Gaunt they did them transport
As our armie marched awaye
And al our armie their about did lie
Ful nine long weeks and a day.
Of times on the front our armie foraged
And near to the walls of Turneye
Strong comands of our men the foradgers defende
Some times they were put in a fray
On the twelth of September our armie altogither
Marched off from Pong the Pire
Our General gave comand which was needful indeed
To march and to keep a strong rire
And over the Skeel, marched our armie all
Two ligs: then we pitched our camp
And thretie regiments from that was detached
To march to the sidge of Atte
And we Heybrons regiment to that sidge was sent
So we marched out from our camp
On the fiftenth of the month al them regiments
And our train that night it dreu off
On the morou earlie we marched awaye
And at night our camp we set doun

1 The bayonet was originally screwed to the muzzle of the musket.
And rested a day, and the sidge ordered they
And the thrid day we did it soroune
And round about Atte we pitched our camp
Without any noisse or dine
And our big armie did lie for a covere
And so this sidge did begine
The twentie day of this month a comand vent forth
To break ground late on that even
And every regiment had orders to make
The number of nine hundered fassines
And some of our men, to Atte was sent doun
When that it grew dark in the night
And of sheep and cattel they catched all
And againe came off at the flight
The French within, did hear a great dine
And fast to the walls they did croude
To save that toun, togither they came
That allarme it was very loude
A comand of our men and a cover with them
Broke ground on the other side
And themselves did entrench before it was light
Full busie they wrought that tide
Soon the nixt morning the French hath them seen
And they fired now canon anone
Both day and night we stile did entrenche
And this sidge went on very fast
We made batteryes, for canons and morters
Which was both long and large
And our great batterie for guns one and thretie
And for that work we got wage
The best of our train we planted theiron
Twentie one guns we had on another
And twelve and ten al good canone
They were al made ready toghither
On the twentie fifte of September, they began to fire
And so continued still one
With great canon ball to beat doun that wall
Which wall proved to be strong.
The French within, did briskely defende
And fired their canon right bold
And al their collors on the wall did florishe
And that toun they manfullie hold
The General Overkirke had comand of our work
And the sidgeing of this strong toun
And three foot regiments was still in the trenches
And releaved by the whole armie round
And on that night our regiment was in trenches
We fired a brave victorie
All round about that toun we fired than
   For a victorie was won at sea
And the nixt day in the trenches we lay
   And our Officers bought us the brandie
We keeped the trenches and held in the Frenches
   And beat them back when they saillie
Right near to that toun our trenches did run
   And in upon their out works
And through their piliesods, we wrought several roads
   And their set our gabiones
The French this time was bussie fireing
   No rest they got night nor day
This was hot work and a dangerous poste
   Many of our good men they did slay
And one outsconce we took now perforce
   And the French to the toun did flee
And out from the toun they fired againe
   And held it out right manfullie
On the first of October, near the evening border,
   On the wall a parlie they beat
And our Generall, he came at their call
   With that Governour for to treat
Who offert to surender the toun altogether,
   Providing they had leave for to go
With collours florishing and drums abeating
   This our Generall refused to do
Now in a short space six of our great boams
   And several great shoures of granades
Fired in on the toun which made a great dine
   And destroyed many of the French lads
Our Generall did comand six regiments of ours
   To make al ready for a storme
And to come to the trenches nixt day afternoone
   Which we were al willing to performe
About ten acloak we were ready to march
   Bot the French did surender the toun
A comande of our men to Atte marched in
   And the French their arms threu doun
The second of October, they did it surender,
   Al prisoners of war they were made
And on the nixt day they were sent awaye
   Without any longer abade

1 The reference is probably to the capture of Alicant held for the French. After the place had been hotly bombarded by a division of ships under Sir George Byng, it was stormed on July 28th, on one side by the troops, and on the other by the seamen of the fleet. The citadel held out until August 24th.
Our armie of Atte now possesion they got
And this toun they began to repaire
A deal of workmen thes walls for to mend
And the work was al payt very fear.
Awaye from Atte we removed a bite
Til on the thereten of October
Our armie then marcht and with them we joyned
And to Camerie we marched togither
On Camerone plain we camped that time
And set out guards on our front
The French about Monse did us mickle donse
They in pairties were still coming out
A pairtie of the French did atacque on our front
On our smal out guard in the night
Our smal guard of men, was al prisoners tane
And far moe was put in a fright
And at our armie it was raissed the cry
The picket the picket the picket
And al our armie got up haistilie
From many a sundry wicket
And when it was day and the alarme awaye
Our pickets was al turned in
And a strong comande and some partizans
Marcht out on the morou at even
And marcht towards Monse upon a litel sconse
And their an alarme did make
The French fired canon and smal shot at them
And their heels they behoved to take
An officer and some men that night was slain
And the rest came marching home
The French about Monse they heared al this
And got now a fearful alarme.
On the twentie sixt day marched our armie
We marched of from Camerie plain
And we had now prepaired a strong rire guard
And a comand along with our train
And on our coper boats the water we cross
And so came marching along
The French armie now acoming we see
That day they could do us no wrong
Half way to Anguine our armie did come
And their we pitched our camp
And lay on that ground for a fortuntes time
And then our camp did break up
The General Muray was made governour of Cutrie
And that toun they did now repaire
And sixten regiments to Coutrig was sent
To cover the workmen was theire
The Duke of Argille was preffered this year
A Major Generall to be
With honor and fame atending his name
He rules in the English armie
The Lord John Haye \(^1\) this year he did die
And left our old Scottish dragouns
And our Cornall Heybron his coach brought home
Which coast him above twentie crouns
The Lord Dalrimple that place came till
And the Scottish dragouns he comands
And Sir James Campbell \(^2\) their Lieutenant Cornall
His honor in prefferment now stands
Before our armie marcht, thies detachments
Marcht of in a morning right soon
And now our train was called back again
Our armie lay stil two dayes time
On the sixt of November our camp brake up
And marcht the countrey now doun
And at Sant Quentine Linox that night we pitcht
The nixt night beloue Brissels town
Our badgeage in our gate that night cast us late
Many regiments wan not to the ground
Bot in a cold night we lay without tents
The nixt day that camp was set doun
Two or three days, we lay in that place,
Our camp ran along the water side
Our Major John Campbell and some Officers moe
For Scotland they went of that tide
And from Brissels town we came marching doun
And we were yet a pretie armie
And to garison touns they daily marcht in
And so we grew less a degree
That night we came on and throu Loven town
And I wot we marched right latte
And in Loven park our camp was now set
And for supper it was very blatte
And the nixt morning we came marching one
And camped beside Tarliemount
And the nixt day we marched on brisklie
And at Sant Troye our camp we set.
And at Sant Troye we rested a daye
And then we broke off pretie soon

To the town of Finelo we were now to goe
This year for our garissoune
And at Dindick we camped at night
A lig from the town of Hassel
To a village called Harse the next day we march
And camped beside an old castel
And the next day we marched earlie
And came down to the Maze water
And beneath Mazick we marched a lig
To Highoue: where they did us later
Beside that village, our tents we pitch
And lay in a cold froastie night
Before it was day we brunt al our strae
And marched when it grew light
To a village called Rugline that night we came
And got quarters on these bouers
And on the next morning we marched againe
From Finello we were now four houres
To the town of Finello marcht in regiments two
And likewayes two squadrons of horses
And with a flying bridge they took us into it
Aud so the Maze water we crosse
It was the eighteen day of the moneth of November
When our regiment marched into Finello
And that same very night although it was latte
We releaved al their guards also
A regiment marched out which had a long route
They were for to march to Bridgees
Which was a long way in such a short day
Over waters over heaths over ridges
Our regiment got quarters on Finelo burgers
And bedding we had therein free
And amonition coals to warm our soles
Was aloued us for moneths three
On al that town ports we mounted our guards
And a main guard we had also
And over the Maze water they have a big sconce
Which belongs to this town of Finello
Amonition and canon they have in the same
For to defende their wie town
A very pretie work, it is round about
And within is a great deal of roome
A sconce Governour, and likewayes a Major
Stayes in it al dayes of the year
And in it they keep, a great deal of sheep
And sutlers their to sell beir
To the town of Finelo the come and they go
They have of the town good rents
And the Governour is an old popish bouer,
    The Major for the Protestants
And al the toun do plead for religion
    The poppish have ruled ther long
And the Protestants had bot a wie church
    Bot lately they are groun strong.
The popish made bond, for they were comande,
    Against such a day, of the moneth of May,
Nixt to come without any hover
And the sconce Governour, was to loss that pouer,
    And the Major advanced to that place
The noble States of Holland do chieffie comande
    This Finelo did belong, to the Spainish Guilderland,
And the French had it in posession
Til our Holands armie with courage on high
    Did win it and keeps the sucession.
The King of Prushea that Protestant true
    Bot the States of Holland both powerful and strong
Bot the States of Holland both powerful and strong
    Bot the States of Holland both powerful and strong

CHAP. VII

The progress of the Cornall Heyburns regiment, with the Holland
Armie in the year 1707.

A Dutch brigadire and a wantont caviliere
    Comanded in the toun of Finelo
Venlo
And in the winter time he stayed not at home
    Bot awaye from it he did go
Our Cornal Heybroun comanded that toun
    And the keyes had in keeping indeed shut
And when the ports was sticked he lay and sleept
    And the keeyes al hard by his head
And Sightermans regiment, from Finelo they marcht
    Right soon in the spring of the year
Cornal Heyburns regiment the toun did keep
    No rogues the toun durst come near
And six companies did mount on the guards
    And six companies did exercise
And we were ay fain when it blatered on a rain
    For we sat in the house at our easse
And al our new mounting was busie a makeing
    Our breche our coats and our vest
And stockings and hatts in Finelo we got
  We behoved to buy al the rest
First a General came and reviewed us al
  Nixt the States of Holland did come
And fiftie men we mounted on them
  And releaved with collors and drum
And two three dayes ther stayed the States
  And reviewed and mustered us all
And gave us a rout to the camp to march out
  Bot we stayed yet a week withall
To Finelo toun when we first came in
  They aloued us a good preaching housse
On Sundayes afternoon Mr. George Andersoun
  He alwayes preached to us
And after Ramelie we had a fast day
  And preaching throu al our armie
And with thanksgiveing and prayer condigne
  To God : who made our foes flee :
Al true Protestants, to God they gave thanks
  For our noble and great victorie
And prayed likewayes for our armies sucese
  And our General the great Mallberie
And to our regiment was given catechissemes
  After the fight of Ramelie
From the city Rotterdam, to Flanders they came Sent from Cornall Borthwicks leady
Our regiment took march from the toun of Finelo
  On the seventeen day of Apriell
And over with the bridge we were al convoyed
  And we marcht with good rank and file
Ther on that green it might weel be seen
  No man was druen that day
To win some tuns of beir, our Cornal promist there
  We came al then so sober away
Four ligs we did march and came to a dorpe
  Called Neert : and quartered al night
And on the bouers we got good quarters
  And marched nixt morning on sight
Ful three ligs of way we came to Strimproye
  And rested their for a day
The twentie day of the month we again did march
  At a dorp called Noveen we lay
We marched again Apriell the twentie ane
  And at night to a dorpe we did come
Which was called Soundoun : where we got room
  And bear to our supper got some.
On the twente second day we marched earlie
  And came to a village called Speelbeik
Where we rested a day without any fray
And our diet we needed not seek
On the twenty-fourth day we marched early
And marched five ligs of way
And came to a dorpe and when we were quartered
The bouers were all fled away
On the twenty-fifth day, two ligs marched we
And came near to the town of Loven
In villages near theirby, that night we did lie,
And the next day we marched again
On the twenty-sixth day, through Loven marched we
And three ligs farther we came
And came to Cranum, where we did cantyne
And lay thereabout a long time
And at Wesbecck our Cornall was quartered
And there we kept a guard
A bit of that kirk for it was aloued,
And our arms lay in that kirk yeard
And from Cranum we were removed then
Our troupers to that village did come
In villages theirabout, a while we quartered
And all night we lay in a barn
And by companies we lay in these barns
All day with the bouers we cantyne
The bread and the beer was not very dear
The bouers for our money was kind.
A deal of our armie, therabout did lie
Betuen Brissels and the town of Loven
For both foot and horse was lying in dorps
And so a whilles time we did spend
And about Brissels wood we had many guards
And through on the other side
We had a wie sconce, to hold of the French
A strong guard at it did bide
In midle of that wood we had a strong guard
At a Capescines cloyster was their
And still through that wood in partys we went
And dayely we did so repaire
And above the door head of that cloyster indeed
It was witten upon a fine ston
In good Latine this sentance divine
Which ye may thus read now anone
For the Lord shall comforte Zion
Comforte al her waste places shal He
And like to Eden with pleasent planting
He shall make her wilderness be
And her deserts and solitary partys
Like the guarden of the Lord shal be
Their joy and gladness our tongues shal expresse
Thanksgiving and voice of melodie
And al these gardens and pleasant orchards
Wherein they walk and make motion
Is filled with images of the holy fathers
To minde them of their devotion
And at every corner, they have our Saviour
Hanging cruysied on the Cross
And in the Capell they have Peter and Paul
Mary and the Babe beside those
Whom I shal not name nor yet spend my time
Very long: in this garden so fair
In thes pleasant walks and comodious rests
With floures and herbs very rare
To us in cantyne, our Oficers did come
With our recruits from Scotland
And al their mounting was given to them
And every thing ready to hand
Near a hundered men to our regiment then came
And we were al merie and glad
We were caled to arms and they among us
And the Articleles of War was read
And our Cornal, to Brissels did send
And bought us six tuns of beer
And twelve companies got half a tun a pice
We drink we dance we carire
On the fiftenth of May now al our armie
Did march: and pitched our camp
Not far from Brissels toun our camp was set down
Our houf was called Inerlocke
Our armie there did gather togither
And four or five dayes we did lie
Then our armie all marched to Noterdam Hall
On the twentie first of the moneth of May.
And Noterdam hall was Overkirks quarters
And in Halbeck lay Mallberie
And our regiment to Halbeck was sent
And there for a cover lay we
And the thrid day that we there did lie
It hapened on that forenoon
That Cardugals cock, like a druken sot
That village most pait did burn.
For the first house did burn in a glose
And the second kendeled ful soon
And a brave kirk that stod hard by it
Did burn til it was al done.
So four good houses was brunt al to ashes
Yet Mallberies quarters was saffe
And regiments all about did take down tents
That fire with the wind so drave
On the twenty-sixth of May marched our armie
And our regiment did march with the train
And up to Swinie we advanced that day
And several of the French was slain
When the first of our armie advanced to Swinie
They meet with some of the French horse
And above threetie men, was prisoners tane
And the rest fled back toward Monse
And our regiment was comandt to the left
On the left of the horse we did stand
A regiment of a bregade on the wing camped
Our regiment got it first for comand.
The French armie did march away shortlie
And towards Luke land are they gone
And our armie turned back from Swinie
And in haste we marched back again
On the twenty-eight of May early Marcht we
And camped at Noterdame hall
On the twenty-ninth day by Brissels Marcht we
And at Diggum now camp we all
And at Diggum camp, a day we did rest
And then we Marcht to Loven
The threetie first night of May at Loven camp we
And made ready for Marching again
Our Major Campbell this night he did call
For brandie to his own companie
And Duncan MacKnab with a budiel ons back
Fetcht it from the right of our armie
The first of June we Marched right soon
Like two armies we Marched that day
And over Loven water we wan altogether
And advanced then in battel araye
At Melder and Hogar was our hous quarters
And in Melder did Malberie lie
And in Hogar did Overkirke quartere
It was near the left of our armie
The Prince Eugine he with the Emperours armie
Did advance on the city Talloun
And with great engine and an armie right fine
Laid sidge into that strong toun.
And still our armie did hear of the neus
And long we lay still in one place.
The Duke of Wandum the French did comand,
And they lay in the same casse.
For a cover to Namuire they lay at Geblewe,
And keeped their ground very weel.
And at Melder and Hogare our armie lay then
   And for foradge right offt out did reell.
In that countrie round good foradge was found
   On our right on our left on our rire.
And our armies hoesaes was still dealing blows
   And ready to catch a French mare.
The French on our front they passed weel up,
   And caught some of our horsse.
Bot never a battell there was al that year,
   Bot the armies camped most closse.

Til the neus came againe from the Prince Eugine
   Who lay at the sidge of Talloun.
That on a certain day the French with an armie
   Came to raise the sidge of the toun
And the Emperours armie did beat them away,
   And a cruell slaughter was made
Bot the Prince Eugine at the sidge did lie still
   And our armie at Hogar yet bade.
And in Hogare on a day calm and clear,
   A housse in a fire was set.
Was the Stats quarters it burnt al in ashes
   Bot the rest no harm did get.
At Mallberies quarters an allarme was likewayes,
   And some conspirassie found out.
Which made the Generall for horsmen to call,
   Which guarded the housse round about.

Then news came againe from the Prince Eugine,
   Who was beat from the sidge of Talloun.
That countrie did gather with the French togither,
   And beat them away from the toun.
So he was oblidge for to leave the sidge,
   And draw off his armie from that.
The toun was so strong and with many canon,
   And a great relieffe it then gat
Its called a seaport toun rich in every thing,
   And the strength of all the countrie.
The French canon doth cast in that toun,
   Off the Kingdom of France its the keye.
On the tenth of August our ordours came fast
   From Melder and Hogare to march.
So at three afternoon we took our tents doun,
   And our armie marched from thence.
All towards the right our armie did march,
   And they came throu a very strong passe.
Beneath Walshwaver al night we marcht over,
   The French armie got the same sausse
In midle of the night the French upon sight,
   Took doun their tents in all haiste.
And marched away all in a great fraye,
   The divell they thought had them chaste.
Then to Genape our armie marcht up,
   And camped in a circle round.
The nixt day at noon we marched againe
   And towards Novell we were bound.
The twelvth of the month at Novell we campt,
   And the French was there in the passe.
And our granadires that night was called out,
   And al to expelle them from thence.
Our granadires the nixt day cleared the way,
   And the French from the passe did flee.
And all our armie for battell was ready,
   Yet still at Novell taried we.
On the other side of that wood so wide,
   This time was the French armie.
The passe us betwen our armie cleared soon,
   The French away still did flee.
On the fourten of August our armie did march
   And the French away they were fleed.
It rained al that day and we had a deep way
   And to Swinie our lines they were led.
And at Swinie our armie did lie,
   Till the last day of August was come.
And on Cameron plain the French armie then
   Did encampe on abundance of roome.
All doun towards Atte then lay the French camp,
   And the toun al the time was closed up
Our armie from Swinie was still making way
   Till the passage to Atte it was cutt.
The French this time was still in alarme,
   And their picket turned out in al haste
For comands of our men was bussie working,
   Throu these hedges some passages traiste.
And al our bagage got comand for to march,
   Back to Cassey to Notterdam the hall.
So they marched away August the thretie day,
   No bagage stayed with us at all.
August thretie one our armie marcht on,
   And towards Atte we advance.
The French armie took doun tents haistilie,
   And away they did march towards France.
Our armie at Atte now pitched their camp,
   And lay till the third of September.
There the Generall Malberie with his cavalrie,
   Wieued all the French hoast I remember,
On the third of September we marched away,
   And left Atte at full libertie.
Our armies designe was thought to be then,
To secure our old toun Coutrie.
And at Gruniar we had our houss quarters,
And camped there only one night.
Then towards Audinare the nixt day we fare,
Throu thick woods our passage was dight.
The French partyes was hid among trees,
And caught straglers that day.
And our houss quarters was at Audenare,
And our bagage came another way.

And our houss quarters was at Audenare,
And our bagage came another way.

Our armies designe was thought to be then,
To secure our old toun Coutrie.
And at Gruniar we had our houss quarters,
And camped there only one night.
Then towards Audinare the nixt day we fare,
Throu thick woods our passage was dight.
The French partyes was hid among trees,
And caught straglers that day.
And our houss quarters was at Audenare,
And our bagage came another way.

And our houss quarters was at Audenare,
And our bagage came another way.

Then towards Audinare the nixt day we fare,
Throu thick woods our passage was dight.
The French partyes was hid among trees,
And caught straglers that day.
And our houss quarters was at Audenare,
And our bagage came another way.

Our armies designe was thought to be then,
To secure our old toun Coutrie.
To keep these frontires for fear of the French,
Til all the campine it was over.
The Generall Murray was Governour in Coutrie,
And keep that toun in good ordoure.
Ten regiments of foot he took into it
It lay then on the French bordoure.
Some squadrons of horsse in Coutrige lay closse
And mounted the guard in Minone,
And two days time on guard at Minone,
They were til winter was gone
And at Erelebege was also a guarde,
Keep in that village all year.
And in a little scosse made for the purpose,
We lay all night without fear.
A comand was sent down to Ceeseefellgaunt,
From thence to bring up a traine.
Amonition and canon in boats was brought up,
And a deal of handlangers with them.
And round Coutrige toun was batteries of canon,
Weel planted round on the wall.
And all their magassines was pretie weel filled,
With al kinds of powder and ball.
And round all the toun they fell a working,
And making of forts in the ground.
And these Ingenires did hire our sojors.
And all the workmen could be found.
So some of our men was still a working,
And others did mount on the guards.
We lay in barroks and pretie chambers,
Bot they alloued to us no yeards
Bot magassine beds with strae and cloathes,
Our barroks was fournished weell.
With banks and planks and tables likeways,
By order to us they dealle.
Our coalls for to burn from Neucassell came,
And candle was alloued allso.
One bread a week we behoved to take,
The Generall did order it so.

[CHAP. VIII.]

A brief acount of the War in the year One thousand
Seven Hundered and Eight.

Now of the seven hundered and eight,
My purposse is for to relate.
The Pope and French King did plot and combine
All Protestants for to defeatte.
And for that designe they plot and combine
A popish King to enthrone.
In the Isle Britan to make an invassion,
They have condeshended upon.
King James the third their own true blood,
A sword they put in his hand.
With Frenchmen aneu and Irish men true,
That hosst he got to comande
The shiping right good they did him provide,
And with him good Generalls three.
Then that Navie of French men of war,
At Dunkirk made ready for sea.
The Prince of Wales\(^1\) to conquer these Isles,
Set out with courage most stout.
And all his Navie to guard him at sea,
Till England they compast about
The Churchmen in France their joy to advance,
Was nou in devotion most fervant.
With humble masses and double adresses,
Processions for the purpose subservant.
Both late and soon their mussick bells rang,
And clergie men racked to church.
To make intercession for the holy profession,
Which they thought was promorted by such.
The Britans union they thought was broken,
Their own Native King called home.
And the French Navie was saffe over sea,
And the King was set on his throne.
And throu Flanders it was the tideings,
That the French: Scotland did invade.
And twelve regiments marched from Flanders,
Without any longer abade.
And at Hostend right soon they got shiping,
And saffely past throu the sea.
And at Neucassel they lay at an anchor,
Al ready to give them suplie.
The French Navie ran to the North sea,
And near the Coast of Scotland.
The Dutch and English fleet persued after that,
And instantlie came on that bande.
It came to passe not far from the Basse,
A sea feight hapened to be.
Near the Coast of Scotland the Frenches did stand
Til at length they were forced to flee.
With cruel like pride and many a broad side,
The battel was managed a while,
And the Dutch fleet stod very weel by it,
And the battel was fought without guile.

\(^1\) James, the Chevalier de St. George, or 'the Old Pretender.'
Til the French Navie was broken on sea,
And scatered from thence abroad.
And on that uncouth coast was cruelly tost,
Coming off in many a roade.
What ships were sunke and what were burnt,
I shal not now tel to you.
Bot Captan Gordoun that day got tane,
A French ship and her whole crewe.\(^1\)
The Scotish men was now gathering,
To defend themselves on the land.
Some of the French was tane prissoners,
And delivered saffe to their hand.
The Prince of Wailles with broken sailles,
Came stealing back to France.
And at Dunkirk came saffe to land,
After that sudene mischance.
Up that countrie right fast passed he,
And the nixt day vent to the messe.
With the French armie to camp vent he
In hopes of some better sucesse.
These tideing then to Flanders came,
That the French was beat on the sea.
The third of Apriele our garissones all
Fired for the great victorie
In Coutridge toun al the garissoune,
Did keep the Queens birth day.
And our General had a noble caball,
And the musickes sweetlie did play.
And at the State housse that old antient place,
Two lantrons was made to give light.
With hunders of candels burning into those,
Which was a great shew on that night.
Each several torch of these sumptous lantrons,
Of diverse colours was dyeed.
And in al the windous was burning candels,
Throu the Market place as we hyeed.
In the spring of the year as summer dreu near,
Our forces was brought back againe.
Twelve English regiments for England that vent,
To Flanders they came now amaine.
In the moneth of May reviewed were we,
Al that lay in that garissoune.

\(^1\) See Clowes's The Royal Navy: A History, vol. ii. p. 517. The vessel taken was the Salisbury, formerly a British ship, and she was captured by the Leopard, Captain Thomas Gordon. Three other vessels foundered at sea or were wrecked, but the Salisbury was the only capture, Byng stopping his pursuit at Buchan-ness.
And several dayes we mustered likewayes,
And marched that Market Place round
From every regiment we sent detachments,
To keep al their garisoun toums.
So al the regiments made ready for camp
And for marching out we were bounse.
On the twentieth of May we marched away,
Towards Audenar we walked alonge.
The garissoune of Minone to us they did joyne,
By the walls we camped right throng,
The General Muraye had comande over all,
Twentie one regiments on that night.
Nixt morning earlie we marched awaye,
To Gramunge the way we took right.
Beside Gramunge our camp was set doun,
And there we rested a day.
In a very strong place between two waters,
We camped in a noble araye.
Then from Gramonge we marched along,
Til we came near to our armie.
Who at Noterdam hall was now camped all,
On their right that night camped we.
On the twentieth seventh day of this moneth of May,
We marched and joyned our armie.
So at Noterdam hall we were camped all,
And the French was then coming nie.
At the village Swinie al the French armie,
Was then camped in good order.
The Duke de Wandum with an armie right strong
There lay and keepe that border.
Then from Noterdam hall our armie marched all,
And advanced to the front half a lig,
So at Sentinal our housse they did calle,
In two lines we camped a rig.
Bot Overquerks quarters lay still at Hall,
At Hallbeck lay the left of our camp.
And so we lay al in battel araye,
Our horssemen of courage most ramp,
A hundered and eightsie good squadrons of horsse,
In camp we had pitched I troue.
With a hundered and fiftie betalions of foot,
With courage and conduct most true,
And the French hoast with great brag and boast,
Was camped now on our froant.
The Duke Wandum he, had as great an armie,
Of courage and vallour not blunt.
There for battel we were ready all,
And stronglie did guarde for surprise.
Stil waiting upon the French armies motion,
    Bot we were deceived with our spies.
On the first day of June four regiments of men,
    On comande was sent to our traine.
And there we lay a pairt of that day,
    And at night we came home againe.
And the nixt morning al out for foradageing,
    Our horsses was sent on comande.
Bot the French armie was marching brisklie,
    From our spies no warning we fande.
So now againe our horses was called home,
    And our armie got orders to march.
Three shots of canon our armie did warn,
    Tho our spies seemed false in their search.
The second of June our armie at noon,
    Took down our tents in al haste,
And then we marched down towards Brissels toun,
    As the divel the hindmost had chaste.
Our camp collour men our camp pitched then,
    Besides Enerleeck on that night.
Bot before our armie came, they had got comande,
    And they marched from that at the flight.
So all that night long, our armie marcht one,
    And we were both wearie and weet.
And on the thrid of June that Sabbath morning,
    Our camps towards Loven was set.
In the cloister Catenburgh our General did loadge,
    Not far from the toun of Loven.
And towards Diggum our campe ran alonge,
    In the passe lay guards of our men.
The French armie with courage on hie,
    Did camp on the other side.
Between Walshwaver and the village Novelle,
    Boldly now that hoast did bide.
The passe of Loven they could not get then,
    For al the haiste they could make,
The front of both armies near come to the passe,
    So the passe they could not then take.
Both armies did lie now at full libertie,
    And foradged the countrie about.
On either side right boldly they bide,
    Like courageous armies and stout.
Our Protestant armie comanded were they,
    For to keep the sixth day of June.
With fasting and prayer and service devine,
    Each Protestant regiment had sermon.
This day was set apairt by our Generals comand,
    And a publick order gave he.
To keep the sixth of June, for service devine,
And sermon throu al our armie.
Our ministers text it was thus,
For all this assembly shal knowe,
That not with sword nor by spear,
The Lord our saffetie doth showe,
For the battel is the Lord and he will,
Deliever you to your hand.
This with confidence David he asertes,
Golliahs hoast could not stand.
Al the moneth of June we lay on that ground,
Our armie their foradge they got.
Doun towards Mechline and that countrie round,
And about the village Arescot.
In Catenberge camp to our armie came up,
Good Protestant Princes anewe.
The Prince of Hanoverre to our armie came their,
And al our hoast did rewieu.
On the twentie day of June, he came our front along,
And al our armie did see.
Like a comely young man elected and chosen,
The King of Britane to be.
Before this time to the front we were tane,
And rewieued by the Duke Mallberie.
And al his court that was him about,
Who came to rewieu our armie.
The French armie by Walshwaver did lie,
And foradged doun towards Namuire.
And that strong passe at Walshwaver that was,
They lay and keept secure.
On the second of July then al our armie,
From foradgeing was called home.
Bot yet that day we marched not awaye,
And the French they were not yet gone.
On the fifth day of July that morning earlie,
We marched al off from Loven.
And the French armie was marching busiely,
Before that our spies did it keen.
At the village Hallbeck the French made bridges,
And there they crose the cannall.
And towards Anguine they marched beeden,
That passe they secured withall.
About Brissels toun our armie marcht round,
And some camped by the wall,
And at Enerleecck our camp it was set,
Bot before we came to it all.
The French cavalrie with courage on hie,
Advanced near to our camp.
Then for battel we made ready all,
   To meet thes horssemen most ramp.
At this alarme we stod al to arms,
   Til our armie at length did come.
And at our right hand our General did stand,
    With horssemen to keep the grune.
Both horsse and foot was sent on comande,
    That night they marched to the right.
Near the half of our armie again was made ready,
   For battel by the morning greu light.
The French armie they marched haistilie,
    Doun to the great city of Gaunt.
And they were tan in and made weelcome,
   And gave our armie the taunt.
Fifteen thousand men they left them behinde,
    The which did beguile our armie,
In battel array in a passe they did stay,
    When our armie advanced they flee.
And al that night in arms most bright,
    Most pairt of our armie did stand.
In the morning we advanced and cleared the passe,
    And litele resistance we fande.
The Duke of Wandums mulles with their cariages,
    Our armie did catch on their rire.
Bot the French hoast over the watter was crosst,
    And at Gaunt they did quicklie apeare.
On the sixth day of July it was that our armie,
    Came back to their tents for a while.
And then afternoon we marched againe,
    Tho the French gave us a beguile.
That night at Asst we pitched our camp,
    Our right it ran towards Hulst.
And the French armie took Gaunt haistilie,
    For that sidge was quicklie discust.
The bourgers of that toun called the French in,
    And welcomed them to good chear.
And our Governoure gave the castel soon over,
    And marched away in great fear.
The French hoast throu Gaunt now began for to ran,
    And replenisht that toun of the new.
It is a big toun bot not very strong,
    The bourgers to us was not true.
And al about Hulse the French held the passe,
    There our armie could not ataque.
The water us betwen made the grund so strong,
    Wandume of his project can crack.
Til the ninth of July then al our armie,
    From Asst we marched away.
And all that day long our armie marched one,
By Angine a while we did stay
We lay on our arms two or three hours,
And all night we marched again.

And by Nottingham Hall our train marched all
At Anguine that night lay our train.
On the tenth of July we marched busily,
Our train with our armie came one.

We came to Gramunge then our camp set down
Our march had been very long.
On the eleventh day we marched earlie,
Towards the town of Audenare.

On the tenth day of July
Sent out a command of grenadiers.

Bot towards Ate they were turned back,
By a few of our armies forires.

On the eleventh of July that morning earlie,
The French took march in a haste.
Up that water towards Audenare,
Where the front of our armie them facete.
The Duke de Wandum saw our armie come,
And this speech he made to his courte.
That English armie is all coming ye see,
The divell has brought them about.
The Prince of Wailles with the Duk de Burgundi
And the whole French court drew near.
At the village called Lee the purpose to stay
As our English squadrons did appear.
Over the hill of Audenar and on to the water,
And in haste took the bridges four.
The front of our armie both foot and cavalrie,
Came marching one and got over.
The battle began, before it was noon,
And the canons began for to play.
And all our armie was marching quickly,
And came one to the battle that day.
The French armie was marching busily,
By the villages called Ram and Lee.
And there they did stand with wapons in hand
To fight for their king and country.
Then our armies front both horse men and foot
Were engag’d in battle that day.

---

1 The Chevalier (see note, p. 404) lately returned from his abortive attempt in Scotland.
The word was sent back to march up quick
So we came on in battel araye.

As the French armie marcht by the village Lee,
A lig beyonde Audenare.

Comands of our armie came up haistilie,
And so their marching did mare.

The left of our armie marcht foremost,
As soon as our bridges were laid.

With some pice of canon and several comands,
Some canon of both armies plaid.

Our armie and train was coming amaine,
And crossed the watter good speed.

Brave General Cardugen brake throu the French line,
And nobelie acted indeede.

The platouns of smal shot in battel so hot,
Which gave a sound in the skie.

At meting of squadrons with swords over crowns,
Til our grand armies they dreu niey.

Near tuelue at noon the shot did begine
When the froant began to engadge.

And at four afternoon the armies meeting,
Some forced were to change badge.

Til the French armie was beat back againe,
And forced for to retire.

With rich horsse pranceing in batele advanceing,
Gave them a close charge in the rire.

The French was beat back with many a cracke,
Ore the rire of our armie wan up.

Til nine acloak at night lasted the great fight,
The French their horses did whipe.

Our Hollands train was brought up amaine,
And planted close on our rire.

By that it was night we wanted day light,
And our enomies they did retire.

They dreu then away and likeways that day,
The night it began for to rain.

The French left the ground and paart of their canon,
Many of both sides were slain.

Bot yet in that spote few persons of notte,
Were slain in our Hollands armie.

A Major General we lossed there withall,
And brigadires about two or three.

And seven thoussand men we had wounded and slain,
Al into that batel so hot.

Major General Lauder he was wounded there,
And a noble victorie we got.

1 See vol. ii. p. 17.
Our Prince of Hanover with courage and valour,
Advanced on to this battel.
Upon a good steed weel mounted indeed,
Bot thus the casse it befelle.
There came a French ball that made his horse fall,
His highness to ground was brought.
The elected King of the Kingdoms of Britane,
Was killed as many men thought.
Al his other horse with gromes and pages,
Was sent away off the field.
His highness did take a half pike in hand,
His foes were made for to yeald.
No Prince nor Peire we losst in that weire,
Therefore we need not relent.
In al our armie that time had not we,
The losse of a whole regiment.
The Prince Eugine in our armie was then,
And ordered on the right hand.
The Prince Oranje in our Hollands armie,
That day he had the comand.
The Duke Mallberie Captan General was he,
And comander of our armie.
As a bold Chiftan that battel he wane,
And highly renouned was he.
The Duke of Wandum the French Chiftan,
Had a strong guard him about.
Of their Jande arms to keep them from harme,
In a castel that was pretie stout.
The Dolphine son of France his fame to advance,
Proved in this battel right bold.
The Duke of Bargunie and heir of their croun,
Was weel keeped in that hold.
The Prince of Wailles caled King of the English,
Right valiant proved that day.
And when the French folk from him was beat back,
Againe he did them araye.
Three several times he comanded these lines,
With him again to advance.
And to prove stout into the same boute,
For honor of the thing caled France.
And their Irishmen he railed again,
In battel with him to perseue.
He promised to bring their report to the King,
Both valiant noble and true.
So late at night they al took the flight,
And backwards again did retire.
And many a gun was shot after them,
And many shot dead in their rire.
In hedges and ditches they lay like dead tikes,
As the dark night began to draw near.
For fear of alarmes we stood in our arms,
Until the day light did appear.
Next morning early the right of our army,
Advanced on their foes manfully.
With eight pieces of cannon from our English train,
Who soon made the French to flee.
From the passe of a wood where the French stood,
And fired out bitterlie.
An Officer of our Royal, both valiant and loyal,
And a few men with him did die.
The right of our army advanced briskly,
And some cannon on that day did play.
The French fled away all towards Denssie,
Not long that day they durst stay.
Our army alone was called back again
And further they did not persevere
A new Ramelie we wan victorie,
On the eleventh day of July anew.
At Audenar battle of the French host fell,
The number of ten thousand men.
And five hundred was then prisoners.
And more then weel I do keen.
Hundreds of Officers was tane prisoners,
And great many of the Household of France,
And many Generals was tane prisoners,
And gentlemen fell in that chance.
Our Hollands army on the eleventh of July,
At Audenar pitched our camp.
And our wounded men to the hospitals then,
After that battle so ramp.
At Audenar we lay in camp there,
Til the fourteenth day of July.
Then sixteen regiments from our army detached,
And marched before our army.
July the sixteenth our army marched then,
And left the French in our rire.
We came to Ellshine and set our camp down,
And a comand at Pong of the Fire.
July the sixteenth our army marched one,
And marched by the town of Minone.
And at Wervicq our camp we did pitch,
Our front in the line past anone.
Our regiments and horses before us that marched,
Was camped within the French line.
The French that time was fled from their line,
And we took the possession of it since.
The nixt day againe comands of our men,
   Was sent to ding doun that line.
So we wrought it doun al smooth with the ground,
   And burnt al the guardhousses syne.
So several days we wrought on that way,
   In working doun of that line.
Al doun towards Epper the line was slighted,
   The defence of the cuntrey they tine.
July the twentie one our armie marcht in,
   A lig within the French line.
To the village Cumine, our camp lay then,
   Bot our houss at Verwick lay still sine.
The ninetenth of July was set apairt wholie,
   For thanksgiving and devotion.
To God most hie thanksgiving to paye,
   From him doth flou the promotion.
So on the forenoon we had a sermon,
   With prayer to God most hie.
And on the afternoon, our smal guns and canon,
   Did fire for our victorie.
At Verwick and Cumine our armie lay then,
   Within and without the French line.
Our armie had won now al the French line,
   Bot Bridges and Gent we did tine.
After the battel right thus it befelle,
   To Bridges the French marcht doun.
And with a great hoast and terrible boast,
   They conquered that old toun.
And at Bellum their camp it lay then,
   They made that ground very stout.
In Bridgees and Gent the Frenches did raunt,
   And al that cuntrey about.
Our armie this time did take the French line,
   And conquered al Picardie.
And contrabution was raissed this time,
   Throu most pairt of that countrie.
The French in Flanders they turned comanders,
   And contrabution did raisse.
Our armie towards France this time did advance,
   So serued them in the same ways.
On the twentie fifth day of the moneth of July,
   A comand from our armie marcht out.
Up throu Picardie and al about Doveye,
   And al the whole countrie about.
Our litle armie did take Labassie,
   And began to repaire it anewe.
The English and Hollands they did it conquess,
   And the French them durst not perseue.
Fiftie squadrons of the best of our horsse,
    And twelve betalions of foot,
Conquered Labasie and al that countrey,
    And made their foes to submitte.
Some of our granadiers on comande there was,
    With worthy men of renoune.
And the chief General who ruled them al
    Was worthy Lord George Hameltoun.
And the Count Tilie ruled our cavalrie
    And kepted them in good order.
Who wrought worthilie in al that countrey,
    These conquerers on the French border.
That litel armie came to us againe,
    On the thrid day of August at noon,
And an other armie cam again the same day,
    Both gatherers of the contrabution.
The twenty seventh day of the month July,
    The last armie had marcht out,
Fourtie squadrons of our armies fine horsse,
    And fourten betalions of foot.
The thrid of August they returned al back,
    And joyned them to our armie.
A new comand at even marcht out,
    And away from the armie marcht we.
The Prince Eugine he did us comande,
    So late at night marcht we.
Full Fiftie squadrons and fiveten betalions,
    A pretie litele armie to see.
That night we passt on by the toun of Minone,
    And haulted there for a night.
We lay on our arms for fear of alarms,
    And we marched wicn the morning light.
Straught by Ellshine we marcht alonge,
    A lig beloue Pong the Pire.
There our Hosaes spyed some French horsse,
    Who from that pass did retiere.
We bridged the water and then marcht over,
    A lig beloue Pong the Pire.
And then at night we pitched our tents,
    Weel guarded on both front and rire.
And the nixt day we marched awaye,
    Five or six ligs before night.
And near to Atte we pitched our camp,
    Bot the Germans marched on sight.
The German armie at Atte now did lie,
    For more than a fourtenight before.
Under these walls to shelter themselves,
    And spend upon their own store.
The German armie was thousands fiftie,
   Of horsse and foot that lay there.
And the Prince Eugine he did them comande,
   And every thing did prepare,
And from our armie for his better suplie,
   He brought out a strong comande.
So to his own armie nou joyned were we,
   And so made up a train bande.
For to guarde our train that was a comeing,
   This armie was now ready boun.
And towards Swinie from Atte marched we,
   At Swinie our camp was set doun.
Ten regiments Hanovers was lying at Brissels,
   And bringing up of our train.
So al our great guns and amonition wagons,
   At Swinie came to us amaine.
The Prince Hanovers men they marcht back again,
   To Brissels for to keep that pass.
Prince Eugine then took charge of the train,
   And a very big train it was.
Hunders of guns al four and twentie ponders,
   And many big morters also.
And thousands of wagons with boams and ball,
   Stil in four lines they did go.
Prince Eugines armie was thousands seventie,
   At Swine when we did lay.
Between our two lines they drew up the train,
   And we marcht on the nixt day.
Our armie and train on the nixt morning,
   Came marching on in good order.
The French armie now at Gent did lie,
   Bot durst not atacque on our border.
Then hard by Atte our train was drawn up,
   And stod there in noble array.
And east from Atte along we encampe,
   And we rested there for a day.
And then from Atte the nixt day we marched,
   The streight way to Pong the Pire.
Our horsse al round did trivisse the ground,
   And guarded us weel in the rire.
And al that night long our train was marching,
   And our front did lie at the Skeell
Al round about our guards was set out,
   And the French durst not with us melle.
The eleventh of August our coper boats marcht,
   Earlie by the break of the day.
And our pountouns that morning right soon,
   Four bridges for us did lay.
Then al our armie marcht over that day,
   And camped just at Ellshine.
Bot the French hoast for al their boast,
   That time they durst not be seen.
On the eleventh day from Mallbroughs armie,
   A strong comand was sent out.
The Prince of Oranjie their Chiftan to be,
   Nine regiments that seemed to be stout.
In rank and file they dreu towards Liele,
   And as they came within sight.
At Merket Cloister the French guard there,
   They forced for to take flight.
Our comand did take the Bride of Merket,
   And the French fled into the toun.
Our comands did lie one night and one day,
   And the nixt day we did it surroun.
On the tuelth day Prince Eugins armie,
   Took the pass at Pong of the Pire.
Some French cavalrie from it they did flee,
   And we perseued on their rire.
Prince Eugins armie marched towards Turney,
   And the French on them did come out.
And lay in a hedge as our armie did passe,
   Our front with them had a boute.
As our Hossaes marched throu the passe,
   They fired on them manfullie,
Ore our armie could come up to the same ground,
   Some of our Hossaes they made die.
Bot in a short time our horssemen came,
   And our armie in noble array.
The French with might that day took fleight,
   To Turney they fleed the hie way.
Our armie did wheel the way towards Liele,
   And Turney we left it behinde.
In midele way we camped that day,
   And foradge enough we did finde.
On the thretenth day in noble array,
   We aproached to the toun of Liele.
The French had got in aboundance of men,
   To keep that toun very weil.
The Prince Eugins armie and the Prince of Oranjies,
   That day they did it souroune.
And late at night our camp was pitcht,
   And the sidge of Liel was set doun.
Within a lig of that toun we camped al round,
   And our train by Minone did come.
We had now beleagured that toun large and wide,
   And their canon was shoting Lamdume.
From Prince Eugins armie comands were sent out,
To lie in the passes at Doveye.
And Mallbroughs armie at Ellshine did lie,
And covered our sidge very truelye.
From Malbroughs armie were sent for suplie,
Both amonition and men.
Fiveten full regiments reconed of the best,
And Oranjie to be their Chifftan.
So about Liel toun the sidge was set doun,
By Prince Eugine and his armie.
And of the grand armie the Prince of Oranjie,
And with him a pretie armie.
About seven ligs long our camp circled round,
In sidging of that strong toun.
Our strong German horsses lay stil in the passes,
Till al the sidge was set doun.
At Labassie some regiments did lie,
And there did keep the countrie.
To cover our sidge they then did begine,
That same place to fortifie.
And of the bouers in Brabant and Flanders,
Ten thoussand did now conveene.
At Prince Eugines quarters as they musstered,
Great floaks of bouers to be seen,
Al ready for work they gathered in flocks,
Throu the countrie of Picardie.
And near to Dunkirk they came there for work,
Being sent out for a levie.
Our armie al round gathered contrabution,
And the countrie they did so compell.
For to furnish men and them for to send,
And so the casse it befelle.
So the first work that our armie did make,
Was our lines of interlocatione.
And with engine they wrought at this line,
Al round for our own preservation.
We made a strong trench to hold of the French,
On the out side of our armie.
And pretie litele forts in several pairts,
Al our armie they did fortifie.
With strong barires on passes and wayes,
And guards on every entrie.
Comands of our men was dayelie working,
And strongly we did fortifie.
Cornal Heypburns regiment our first ground was set,
Upon the east side of that toun.
And four or five days we lay in that place,
And then they fitched our groune.
By Merket Cloister our camp was set there,
   Beyond the Bride of Merket.
Then several regiments their camp did fitch,
   And so the sidge was close set.
Our regiments comand with which we began,
   Our fatigue was to meet our train.
In the morning earlie from Merket marcht we,
   And at night we came back again.
So from Minone our train it did come,
   And ammunition good store.
And beside Merket our train it was set,
   And the Daines did camp it before.
And on their front the workmen did work,
   And made a trench wide and deep,
For fortification betwixt them and the toun,
   And al our great train for to keep.
The Duke de Buffelar the French Generall,
   Comanded in the toun of Liele.
He sent his men out the toun al about,
   And foradged themselves pretie weel.
And some villages they brunt into ashes,
   And hewed doun al the green trees.
And al this time they were bussie working,
   And the divell come pay them their fees.
Lieutenant General Lee, that Irish rogue he,
   Nixt Buffelar he had the comand.
With Brigadires and Cornalls and under Officers,
   Weel resolved their post for to stand.
With one and twentie regiments of men,
   And four good squadrons of horsse,
The toun of Liel they thought to keep wel,
   And banish their foes off perforce.
On the twenty third of the Moneth of August,
   In that morning pretie earlie.
The French came out al in a great routt,
   And made a shew very fairlie.
Towards our train they came in their marching,
   In battel rank and arraye.
Their drums beating and collours flying,
   They put all our hoast in a fraye.
The Generall Sparr with the Prince of Oranjie,
   In haiste gave out a comande.
To six regiments lyeing nixt to Merket,
   Before the train for to stand.
So then in haiste our regiments they marcht,
   And dreu al into our train.
The Daines and some Dutch and Cornal Hebrons,
   That day we advanced on the plain.
Comands of our horsse did likewayes advance,
    And stode close by a hedge side.
Upon their foes ready to enclosse,
    They boldly there did abide.
The French canon ball did shot from the wall,
    And made some slaughter that day.
We regiments of foot where we were comanded,
    On plain field behoved to staye,
The French canon played brisklie still on,
    As fast as they could discharge.
Our horse and foot did bravely stand to it,
    Al ready on field to engadge.
The French dreu away but longer delaye,
    And dreu in againe to the toun.
Our regiments did stay in battel array,
    And on that ground did sit doun.
The Prince of Oranjie his Hienesse then he,
    With advisse of our chief Engenires.
Of three regiments he detashed of each,
    A hundred of good granadires.
Down to the windmille above the cappell,
    And there to stay on comande.
From our three regiments these granadires vent.
    And by that windmille did stand.
And in that place they stayed a long space,
    The wallour of two or three hours.
Til our Generalls and al our Engenires,
    The ground al round about scoures.
Into their vest coats they ran al alongs,
    And revieued the ground very weel.
And concluded soon there for to break ground,
    And make a trench before Leil.
And then our granadires had comand to retire,
    And march away from that place.
And several comands from these villages,
    Retired within a short space.
And as our granadires began to retire,
    The canon did shot from the wall.
Severals of our men was wounded that time,
    And some killed dead there withall.
And new comands to that place was sent doun,
    And lay in them dorps round about.
Ten regiments with arms at night was warned,
    For a cover if the French did come out.
And full sixtie men of every betalione,
    That night was comanded for work.
And in the evening as the dark night came,
    We brake ground hard as the corke.
Above the cappell to work we felle,
    And in haiste did make a strong trench.
And doun to the side of the water it gede,
    We wrought it in spite of the French.
On the other side a trench then was made,
    That ran doun towards the citydaille.
Then about midenight the French fired thick,
    Tho little it did them a vaille.
For al that night with courage on height,
    We wrought in despight of the French.
And in the morning about the day dauing,
    Ten regiments marcht in our trench.
The French having seen what work was done,
    Both horsse and foot they came out.
And at the cappell the horssmen stod still.
    And fired boldly round about.
So al that day right fast fired they,
    Their canon did shot from the wall,
Our men in the trench did hold in the French,
    No further they durst come at all.
Our armie had comand when the sidge it began,
    Each regiment to make fassines.
And dailie then we were making them,
    With pickets malles and gabines.
Both day and night our workmen did work,
    In carying in thes fassines.
And great batteries we were making likewayes,
    And carying in our gabines.
This sidge was strong our trenches right throng,
    At night when they were releaved.
The French fired thick when that it greu dark,
    Our workmen was hurt and mischieved.
Yet every day we wrought bussilie,
    In making up of our trench.
And every night some ground we brake,
    And wrought ay near to the French.
A grand batterie a making were we,
    Which held guns fourtie and three.
And every gun ful twentie four pound,
    Of a ball: they might let it flee.
Another batterie there likewayes made we,
    A litele beloue the same place.
And one and twentie guns was planted thereon,
    Within a very short space.
Above the cappell where first we asaille,
    A litele batterie there was made.
And five canon was planted thereon,
    And on the capell they first plaide.
We continued on, at this sideging so strong,
   In working our trench near the town.
Three thousand workmen day and night working,
   From once the sidege was set doun.
Our foes within were of noble engine,
   And managed their out works weell.
And their Governour in many a stoure,
   He proved as true as the steell.
And at al atacques upon their out works,
   His men did boldly defende.
And the Governour stil for their sucore,
   A fresh releafe did them send.
Within and without both valiant and stout,
   For doughtie deeds they were keend.
The famous sidege of Liel it was named weel,
   And shall to the worlds end.
What need I tel more of cruel blood gore,
   Was sheed before the same town.
For many a man left their lives in paune,
   In thses beds of honor laid doun.
A very cruel work and many an ataque
   Was made in sideging of Liele.
For every day some wounded or slain,
   The effects of the war did feele.
The French within did boldly defende,
   And threu up squibs in the air
And al for to warn the Duke de Wandum,
   Who to them could not repaire.
And al thes dayes they sent forth spies,
   To fetch releafe in their need.
And keeped their forts thes strong out works,
   And they were now besidged indeed.
From Magdalen port we trenched al about,
   The which was fortified weel.
On that side of the toon to the citydaille doun,
   The strongest forts about Liele.
There ground we brake and many an ataque,
   We made with courage most stout.
Where many good men was wounded or slain,
   In many a bold bloody boute.
The sidege of Leile I mean for to reele,
   In order as it was wrought.
Where valiant men in battel was slain,
   The wounded to hospitals brought.
At the Cloister Merket the wounded was drest,
   And many men died there anone.
And those who were better in hops to recovere,
   Were sent away to Minone.
Upon the twentie fourth of the moneth August,
   As it dreu on towards night,
Three hundered granadires from our armie,
    Got orders to march upon sight.
Eleven of our regiment and likewayes an antient,
    Were sent upon this comand.
And as they marcht doun they got al granades,
    And a keendeled match in their hand.
Al in to the trench in haiste they did march,
    And advanced doun to the capell.
Which was a strong fort keeped by the French,
    So began that battel so fell.
Fiftie French granadires defensed the place,
    So a cruel ramcounter was there.
Al noble granadires did throu out granades,
    And fought like mad men in despaire.
That fort was strong and hard to be wan,
    Al in it they proved right stout.
The piliesods was won do al that they can,
    And the foussie that was them about.
Thes French did defend til most pait was slain,
    In a cellar some of them did fle.
For to save their lives they got quarters,
    And our general did them see.
To prison straught a few men was sent,
    Which our granadires did let live.
And very litle thank our granadires got,
    Tho they them quarters did give.
The capell was tan and our men wan in,
    That night it was very dark.
And many men slain before it was tane,
    Because the place was so stark.
In that night mirk about that old kirk,
    Many of our men there was slain.
And many wounded who there did ataque,
    Before that place they could gain.
Then we trenchted in haiste about the same place,
    So our trench ran by the capell.
The French about they fired thick out,
    And many a man they did fell.
On the twentie sixth day the French did saillie,
    Before the sun it was set.
And on that capell they thought to assaille,
    Tis a regiment of Swize with them met.
Our regiments in trenches alarte with the Frenches,
    Stod ready al on commande.
So at the capell a few men fell,
    Not long the Frenches did stand.
Bot fled in haiste as they were defeate,
    And ran al in to their toun.
And with that capell they durst no more melle,
    Our trench was run from it doun.
On the twenty seventh day our great batterie,
    Was loussed upon that strong toun.
Canon ball half a lig did flee over ridges,
    That strong toun wall to ding doun.
They French that day their morters had ready,
    And fired out boams enewe.
In the aire unseen they came out flying,
    When they brake in pieces they fleu.
Our great batterie played very brisklie,
    To make a breach in the wall.
And every day with strong firing,
    They made some pairt of it fall.
On the twenty ninth day our armie arraye,
    Three hundered granadires again night.
And six regiments that had the picket,
    Got orders to march upon sight.
All doun to our trenches against the Frenches,
    Their purposses to fullfile.
To make an ataque upon a strong work,
    The French had at a wind mille.
About the wind mill it was fortified weel,
    With a strong foulisie about.
And rows of piliesods about the milsides,
    Weel keeped with granadires stout.
Bot near to that fort our men had entrenched,
    Before that we were to ataque.
And al that long night we lay in the trench,
    No noisse we were ordered to make.
And our granadires with granads and match,
    Lay on a plain field al the night.
A German Generall had the comand all,
    His conduct was nothing like right.
For in the morning about the day breaking,
    Our granadires did advance.
And with noble courage discharged their arms,
    Then made their granads to dance.
The French granadires fired their foulisies,
    So a bold ramcounter was there,
Both in and out the granads did mount,
    Which wounded many ful saire.
The French from the wall fired a drake ball,
    Which wounded seven of our men.
A cruel massacre was at the ramcounter,
    To smal purpose that I keen.
In desperate sort our men took the fort,
    The Officers were al slain.
The French did flee out of it a wie,
    Bot fresh men took it again.
To hot a post it was in that fort,
    Being open upon the toun side,
The day greu light the ball fleu thick,
    Our men in it could not bide.
The wounded and hurt away being put,
    And the rest was weet and wearie.
Both in and out that foussie so deep,
    They wade al above the knee,
Our regiment that night being the picket,
    In time of this woeful ataque.
We advanced on in the trench al alonge,
    Til the General comanded us back.
In our old place again we stay an hours time,
    And our men came out of that fort.
The wind mill again the Frenches got tane,
    Our possesion of it was bot short.
Our regiment then got leave to come home,
    At night we march to the trenches,
Beneath the capell our post we came til,
    On the ground was won of the Frenches.
Bot yet the wind mill the French keep stil,
    And the Germans did work it about.
The French in ire of it made a fire,
    Which brunt the night all throughout.
They brunt al doun even flat to the ground,
    Al housses that was thereabout.
From al the reedouts the Frenches was beat,
    Where they had proved right stout.
On that side of the water thereafter in order,
    The Germans mounted alwayes.
And manfulie wrought and trenched therabout
    Tho many was slain on thes dayes.
From Magdalen port the French sailed out,
    The time that our trenches releaved,
Our regiment amain was called back again,
    And the boams us sadly mischieved.
The French came out al into a route,
    Two hundered and some moe.
Our trenches alarte was in every pait,
    To defend themselves from their foe.
The French on our trench our trench on the French,
    Fired bitterlie for a wie.
Bot ere our regiment was come to our ground,
    The French began for to flee.
And into the toun right fast they did run,
Tho some lay dead on the plain.

One regiment in our trench did beat of the French,
By the voyage nothing they gain.

Of that sortie a smal skaith had we,
We were dismisst very soon.

The Prince Oranjie the trench ruled bravely,
Til that short battel was done.

With orderly mounting and night and day working,
A right hard deutie had we.

To help our bread we got in our need
Our share of the work monie.

King Davids\(^1\) justice then they did,
In our armie displaye.

Who to battel vent got an equale pairt,
With them by the stuff that stay.

A equal pairt was for every regiment,
That was in our sideging armie.

Our Officers took for the wounded and hurt,
And some who shortlie did die.

The creple and blind they made us maintain,
So taught us Divinatie.

Some absent from work got an equal pairt.
When they distribute our monie.

So we wrought on in trenching right throng,
And making of strong batteries.

And every day the French fired aye,
The smal ball as thick as pisse.

On the side of the water the Germans post,
We were making a strong baterie.

So day and night stil in the French sight,
We wrought: where draik ball did fie.

Many wounded and hurt ore that we got up,
And finisht our English baterie.

And beneath the capell in great perill,
We made bateries two or three.

The French this time was bussily working,
And making of their batteries.

And our canon ball over the toun wall,
Fleu in like big Hollands chiesse.

From the grand armie came for the suplie,
Five hundered good granadieres.

And detashed men with them came along,
Strong comands of good fizanires.

The seventh of September it was I remember,
This suplie al to us was brought.

And at one afternoon in the trench they went in,
A strong comand as men thought.

\(^1\) See 1 Sam. xxx. 21-25. The warrior king referred to in a recent despatch from South Africa, re services on lines of communication.
Then our batteries was brisklie playing,
   And the trenches was filled throng,
The comand of the armie was ordered shortly,
   And many workmen to go on.
So in the twelth light as it dreu towards night,
   All was silent for a while.
Our men in the trenches and also the Frenches,
   Was standing in rank and file.
By a warning gun our granadires then,
   Did advance on the French piliesods.
The French mean time was waiting for them,
   And boldlie stood in the roads.
This ataque began late in the evening,
   Upon the French works al about.
Both sides of the water atacqued togethier,
   And the defence proved most stout.
As our men marched on upon the plain ground,
   The distance was fiftie pace wide,
The French mean time was bussie fireing,
   The ramcounter was awefull to bide.
With thick fireing and granads throing,
   The fire did glance and give light.
Many wounded and slain in a very short time,
   Dead men in heaps lay that night.
The ataque was strong and lasted right long,
   The French works could not be tane.
Our men got the worsse and by open foresse,
   That night was repulssed againe.
And in our own trenches to advance on the French,
   We were comanded once more.
Til after midnight continued the feight,
   And many was bathed in blood gore.
Many good granadires and bold Officeires,
   Was killed that night ful cold.
So our comanded men was repulssed againe,
   And the French then waxed more bold.
Our men the third time was comanded again,
   To advance anewe on the French.
And yet perfores we were put to the worsse,
   And beat back again to the trench
All the times was a constant fireing,
   No slackness in it was found.
Five hundred good men on that night was slain,
   Bot gained not a foot breadth of ground.
From Heypburgs regiment to that ataque went,
   A Captain and a Lieutenand.
And our granadires was joyned to the English,
   And our Captain did them comand.
He valiantlie marcht on before his platoun,
   And courageouslie did them guide.
Bot the third time as he was marching one,
   He was instantlie shot in the side.
Having received a wound he fel to the ground,
   And the wound proved mortal to be.
And in a short time he was caried in,
   And in the trench he did die.
Being dead and gone he was caried home,
   And laid in his tent then was he.
At our quarter guard after he was buried,
   So ended Francis Ogillvie.¹
The Lieutenant Mackenen in the leg got a wound,
   With the Captain he was brought home.
And many a man was wounded that time,
   Whom I have no leassure to name.
By the Generals comand our armie did stand,
   Under arms til after midnight.
The Duke of Argille our regiment came till,
   And we were dismissed on sight.
And then moe men was sent on comand,
   The wounded for to help hame.
To relate dieing men who died in dressing,
   It were a lamentable theme.
Bot such as were slain upon the plain ground,
   No man to them durst come near.
The French al the night fired so thick,
   None out of the trench durst stire.
So with these atacques and bloody exploites,
   Many granadires being slain.
By ordour then the first on comand,
   The granadires cap they took then.
And on to that weir past for a granadire,
   To ramforsse our trench in the night.
And to cover workmen each night aworking,
   And came off as the day it greu bright.
Some regiments on picket were sent to the trenches,
   Some nights to be the ramforsse.
Then day and night many men for comand,
   Still wrought come better or worsse.
And every day our canons did play,
   Til ammunition grew scant.
Before the toun was like to be tane,
   They thought we pouder should want,
And so from Holland to bring ammunition,
   The grand armie they did send.

¹ At Lille. Not, therefore, 'probably at Oudenarde,' as was suggested in vol. ii. p. 40, n.
Fourten foot regiments and also some squadrons,
Was sent the same to defend.
Brave General Cardugen the horse did comand,
And General Webb at the foot.
So doun the countrie they marched brisklie,
And ordered as they thought fit.
The French armie who wanted not spyes,
To informe them of that comand.
They did then consult to make an assault,
So strong none could it gainstand.
The Count de Lamote his orders then got,
With fiveten thousand of men.
And at Flaxindale they thought to assaille,
And canons they had nine or ten.
And so it fel out to be a strong boute,
Upon a strong pass in the way.
The French canon did take up the ground,
And their men al in battel array.
Our comand throu the pass began to advance,
With courage conduct and skille.
The French bregads stronglie canonaded,
And some of our men they did kill.
Our regiments that day advanced in array,
And brisklie cleared the pass.
The Royal Scots marching in the frount,
They dear enough payed for the sausse.
Our horsse and foot with many a shot,
Forssed the French to retire.
With their canon they dreu of anone,
And our men perseued in the rire.
At a village near by the Frenches did stay,
Expecting that night a supplie.
Thretie thousand men to them was a coming,
And a Chifftain the Duke of Bourgundie.
For to suport the Count de Lamotte,
Bourgunje did come the same night.
Bot our amonition so quicklie marcht on,
Of it they never got sight.
So our amonition weel guarded along,
Came saffelie to us at length.
And the French hoast their travell al loost,
And dreu back to their own strength.
And we at the sidge this time was obliged,
To strengthen our grand armie.
Elleven regiments of foot on day marcht out,
And taried dayes two or three.
Cornal Hebrons regiment to the trenches was sent,
Two dayes without a relieffe.

1 The action generally called the Battle of Wynendal.
The French threu boams thick amongst us,
      Which did right mickle mischiefe.
For with one boam we had two men slain,
      In the trench by our great batterie.
We releaved at night and in the twelght,
      We wan home bot did not weel see,
At the sidge we did lie and besides our deutie,
      The trench we behoved to ramforssel.
Til our amonition up to us did come,
      Guarded with both foot and horsse.
The time of this sidge our armies in fields,
      They lived at mickle unrest.
The French armie the toun to supplie,
      Or releave as they could do best.
And Mallbroughs armie was labouring dayelie,
      The sidgers for to defende.
To every ataque that we sidgers did make,
      A fresh suplie he did send.
Lessines
Our grand armie at Ellshine did lie,
      When Eugine advanced to Liele.
Mallberies armie lay there for a cover,
      Defending the sidge very weel.
Vendôme
The Duke de Wandum his host dreu alonge,
      And led them out towards Monss.
And in good array their banners displayed,
      Besides that weel fortified sconsse.
Malbroughs armie on wing being ready,
      Their mottion for to attende.
Pont l'Espierre
Beneath Pong the Pire they crossed the water,
      Marching several dayes upon end.
And near to Atte one night they did camp,
      And the nixt day marched againe.
The Duke de Wandum to Liele could not win,
      Although he would fain never so.
The thretie of August the French great host,
      From Monsse began to advance.
To releave Buffelar was nou in despaire,
      Mallberie prevented that chance.
With courage on hie came our grand armie,
      Within two ligs of Liele toun,
Between Liele and Turney they came noblie,
      And there the camp was set doun.
The French hoast was nou on their march,
      Approaching fast towards Liele.
Bot Mallberies armie encamped already,
      Did cover the sidge pretie weel.
Then both the armies camped on the fields,
      Within three ligs of Liele toun.
Malbroughs armie they wrought bussielie,
    Entrenching about them al roune.
So both the armies camped on the field,
    Confronted against one another.
And in battell aray drev out several dayes,
    Bot to feight they were in a suither.
The thretie of August they there did encampe,
    Untill the seventeen of September.
Then both on one day they marched awaye,
    And left us at the sidge I remember.
Bot while they lay there the sooth to declare,
    I purpose with a good intent.
Two English regiments on comand at a village,
    By Mallberies orders were sent.
On the front of our armie that village did lie,
    And two regiments lay there on comand,
From the French armie a brisk cavalrie,
    Advanced on throu the land.
And then in great ire they bitterlie fire,
    And the place sourrounded about.
Our English regiments camped in that place,
    Did feight with courage most stout.
So for a long time the thick fireing,
    Continued on every side.
The French horsse right thick did advance,
    And bold in battell did bide.
Til many a man was wounded and slain,
    Before these French did retire.
Our English regiments had there a great loose,
    And the rest stood in a great fear.
The eleventh of September the French hoast there,
    Advanced al in battell array.
And with their canon they fired anone,
    Our armie to put in a fray.
Our grand armie in trenches were they,
    Al made ready for a battell.
Still expecting then the French should have come,
    And so fallen on to pell mell.
Elleven regiments did march from our sidge,
    To strengthen our grand armie.
And with Albemalle ready for battell,
    Thoussands of brisk cavallrie.
Our horsse from the sidge al ready to march,
    And joyn them to our armie,
The French mean time with strong canonading,
    Their ball in the aire made flie,
And on the tuelth day the canon did play,
    From morning till it was night.
Two long dayes then tho it proved in vain,
    Canonading all the day light.
The two armies standing to their arms,
    Bot did not joyn in battell.
The French armie at last did retire,
    Hou far I canot weel tell.
The sidgers and train returned againe,
    Our armie lay still on their ground.
The toun of Leile was ringing their bells,
    Bot no reliefe yet they found.
For two dayes time our regiment lay then,
    A reserve for our trenches to be.
The tuelth of September before it was noon,
    The besieged did saillie a wie.
The thick fireing in our trenches began,
    And continued for a short space.
By forse again the French was beat in,
    And nothing did gain by the race.
Our regiment that day before the train lay,
    With other two for the reserve.
In time of that saillie we quicklie did raillie,
    And marched our oun to preserve.
And in our marching countermanded againe,
    So we wheeled and lay til the night.
To ramforce our trench at night we did march,
    And came of with the nixt day light,
So we continued our deutie right hard,
    In sidging of that strong toun.
With night and day working at sapeing and mining,
    Our trench was now worn doun.
With canons fireing evening and morning,
    The wall was pretie weel breacht.
One row of piliesods which was the French roads,
    The trench alongest it was streacht.
Then about the raveling that hie basstin,
    We were bussie entrenching each day.
And every day than new batteries amaking,
    For canons upon them to play,
We mounted new batteries to play on the basstins,
    And also entrenched with gabinis.
To fagot the foussie preparing were we,
    Binding stons in mids of fassines.
And every day we caried them in,
    And laid them doun into heaps.
A dollour in hand was promist each man,
    To lay a bridge in the deepths,
To free bolgers on sight for some hours of a night,
    To lay a bridge throu a foussie.
So some was wounded in wining that wage,
   And some at bridgeing did die.
In several nights than with dangerous working,
   We bridged a foussie right weell.
And to make a breach on the ravelling,
   Our canon each day they did recell.
We got a supplie from our grand armie,
   On the twentie first of September.
A comande of granadires and some fizanires,
   That morning did come I remember.
And all that day in our trench they lay,
   And atacqued in the twelight.
At three shot of canon they had the warning
   The atacque it began upon sight.
These granadires did clim up to the raveling,
   On hands and feet they did go.
And some from the wal did back again fall,
   Yet they atacqued it so.
The battel was hot by the desperat shot,
   Was poured out from the basstine
And with cruel work that night we did take,
   A corner of that ravelling.
A number of men we had wounded and slain,
   And dunk back in the foussie.
The desperat fireing lasted a long time,
   And the French a wie bit did flee.
Bot in the bassting that night they remaine,
   On a side of that ravelling.
And al the night long ful fast fireing,
   Was these men of arms so keen.
Bot our workmen was set aworking,
   On a corner of that bassting.
And made loadgements within a short space,
   In time of that cruel blasting.
The besidgers that night two times was repulsed,
   Before these loadgements was made.
With constant fireing and desperat like working,
   On that raveling they abade.
Til the twentie third day then without delay,
   That night was another atacque.
Then our granadires with hand granads,
   Out over the raveling brake.
And by open force did beat out the French,
   From the mide pairt of the basstine.
Such desperat shot and baths right hot,
   In worlde was not to be seen.
A little bit ground by force we did win,
   And loadgements made in it soon.
Bot the French did bide with courage that tide,
   On a quarter of that half moon.
On either side the Frenches did bide,
   And fired in desperat sort.
And many a man was wounded and slain,
   In working upon the same fort.
On the twenty ninth day our granadires they
   Was massters of this half moon.
And from that corner the French keep there,
   They stormed them very soon.
Nixt St. Andrews port that bastin we got,
   And many a man we had slain.
Three several atacques and much cruel work,
   Before that fort we did gain.
Besides these atacques and cruel smal shot,
   The canon still brisklie did play.
And many a boam was every day throun,
   Til the slain unburied they lay.
For a long months time the French was throuing,
   Carcashes like illshapen clews.
These illeshapen boams throun by their morters,
   Like stinking boardels from stews.
These illshapen carcashes to kendle our trenches,
   They long time made a great fire.
Comands of our men with scups ran along,
   To quench it threu dirt and mire.
The pick and tar it had a vile sar,
   While al the carcash did burn.
And store of granads did break al in blads,
   In each carcash was a curn.¹
The goads of iron which did them invirone,
   Was crocked and crossed about.
The fire did burn and about she did turn,
   The sparks fleu as she came out.
The boams in Liele was scant I trow weell,
   When such caraashes was made.
Some russtie rough smith fel trow weell,
   And made them four nocked and broad.
Bot at our boam baterie al the time of the sidge,
   We had good boams enewe.
In times of atacques the French threu boams,
   Our boamanires every day threu.
The French had batteries upon their bastins,
   Which fired a great many stones.
The stones came flieing no man them seeing,
   Til they had broken their bones.
Our bateries threu boams upon their bastines,
   One day still after another.

¹ 'A curn,'—Scottish for several, or, in another Scotticism, 'a good few,'— e.g., 'the Buchan Multiplication Table,'—'ane's nane, twa's some, three's a puckle, fowr's a curn,' etc.
For four dayes time was a constant fireing,
Of Musskie and her Granmother.¹

From the twentie second day to the twentie seventh day,
Our boams was throun in great number.
To dismount their bateries stood on the basstins,
And to do them a deal of more cumber.
Besides al the work and cruel atacques,
We had who lay at the sidge.
The great armies had many falsiefies,
The French Buffelar to oblidge.

Did send for suplie three thousand cavalrie,
With amonition for the toun.
Who for Holanders past by our out guards,
These horssemen was coming doun.
Til a smal officer was standing by there,
And saw pouder them behinde.
He gave a loud cry al Frenches are they,
What the divell nou are ye all blind.
Our horsse all about gathered in a doupe,
And boldlie upon them did fire.
Til a thousand of them did flee back againe,
And some lay dead in the mire.
And some of their knapsacks did quicklie dispatche,
And burnt upon their horsse backs.
And two thousand horsse our line did crosse,
So quick that none could them take.
Then in Leile ports entred the French horsse,
And along the streets did al prance.
The sojors did cry like thunder in skie,
O vi wellie Roy de France.
This cry for joy continued a wie,
In midle of the same night.
For amunition was come to the toun,
Two thousand horssemen most wight.

September twentie eight in mids of the night,
This suplie they wan into Liele.
And on horsse backs they had in knapsacks,
Pouder to furnish it weell.
They received in weight of pouder that night,
Eighten hundered and six pound.
They thought with pouder the toun to recovere,
But the contraire after they found.
The nixt day then our armie did blame,
A Jermain Major Generall.
He had been false, divell break his halse,
Some bid, divell take him all.
He had the comand of all the horsse guards,
That night the Frenches wan in.

¹ The musket and large cannon. The Scots Highlanders called the cannon 'the musket's mother.'
Although he had sold his trust for French gold,
   He was sent away without din.
Seven or eight regiments of English and Dutch,
   That day got orders to march.
At one afternoon we took our tents doun,
   And came to the place upon search.
Along the line as we were amarching,
   In mids of the Jerman armie,
We pitched no tents bot lay on our arms,
   And got ordours all ready to be.
Then two regiments lay in the same place,
   Where the French before had come in.
Without any stire all night we lay there,
   And the nixt day all the forenoon.
And then we came back and pitched our camp,
   In a place just east from the toun.
Near to the same place where first we did pitch,
   That time the sidge was set doun.
And every day that there we did lie,
   Our workmen came to the trenches.
It was a hard sidge they did us oblige,
   To win it all with hard pinches.
And still Liele cat \(^1\) before the breach sat,
   Which many a man did fear.
For at her taill they durst not assaille,
   On her top they durst not apeare.
So our Generalls their counsells did call,
   What way that thing should be done.
For five thousand men might be hurt or slain,
   Bot the cat could not be tane soon.
The Generall Mallberie he made this replie,
   Since cats see best in the night,
We will nou assaye with her for to play,
   In the forenoon with the day light.
A hundered men that night fell a bridgeing,
   Betwen the ravelling and the cat.
A hundered crouns to them was payt doun,
   Bot thretie was killed thereat.
On the third of October our regiment togither,
   To mount the trenches took way.
And three hundered men from the grand armie came,
   And at Marqueet they stood in arraye.
When al the regiments for mounting the trenches,
   Came and drew up in their place.
The three hundered men they made ready then,
   And marched in a short space.

\(^1\) The cat (see New Eng. Dict. and Ducange s.v. cattus), Fl. katte or storm-katte, represents an external bastion for protection of a gateway or breach. It was no doubt manned by a powerful garrison at night and less by day. Hence Marlborough's joke.
A serjant of the Royal and ten granadires,
    That day did march in the front.
An Officers comission was promist the serjant,
    And to win it he semed not blunt.
And Captain Macaye he next passed by,
    Comanding all the granadires.
And several Officers passed by after him,
    And platones of good fizanires.
Along the trench in haiste they did march,
    Without any noisse or dine.
And all the trenches for the reliefe,
    In regiments was marching in.
The French strong cat was nothing alarte,
    Til that our men did win in.
The serjant and granadires who was the forires,
    In that hie basstine did clim.
The French sentinal who stood on the corner,
    Our serjant he did him dispatche.
The granadires did clim in fast after him,
    And so the cat they did catch.
That serjant of the Royall he passed up weell,
    And stroake at a French Officer.
And in the arm he gave him a wound,
    And worthy he was to prefFere.
And that Officer he took prissoner,
    And brought him to the Generall.
Himself with a shot was wounded in the back,
    Which seemed not deadly at all.
The Captain Macaye he passed up brisklie,
    With the granadires at his back.
And on the hie basstin they nimble clime,
    The smal guns began for to crake.
The French out of ordour they were altogither,
    When our granadires came them upon.
And expelled them thence in a very short space,
    And the neus to Leile ran anone.
Their cat was tane by our brave Englishmen,
    Which was the defence of their toun.
Some cryed Morbleue it could not be true,
    And some for fear fell a swoune.
Six hundered men the first on comande,
    All ready in the Market place.
Their Chieff Officer was dineing with Buffelar,
    And they were surprissed in the casse.
They did expect no atacque before night,
    And was ordering for the defence.
Bot on that forenoon a comand of our men,
    By force expelled them thence.

1 Of Murray's Regiment. See vol. ii. p. 21, and note.
Their armed men rushed to the wall,
And fired out from the toun.
Our men on the bastine no cover had then,
Some suedenlie dead was dung doun.
Our Captain Macaye was wounded badlie,
And no way could be got off.
The thick firing lasted a long time,
And booms were thrown aloof.
About two afternoon one boom thrown in,
Did fire a great magassine.
Where earth and stons mens bodies and bones,
In the aire to flee might be seen.
The earth did quake two milles round about,
When that magassine blew in the aire.
The French in the trench beyound the grand breach,
Did end their lives in dissapire.
Two hundered granads did flee al in blads,
And three tuns of powder did bloe.
And threetie sojurs did suffer deaths shours,
Suedenlie in the aire all did goe.
Buffelar did protest the toun it was loost,
For al the defence they could make.
That fatal day Morbleue they did cry,
Euginea the toun he shall take.
Our comand of men al that day alonge,
Upon the hie bastine did stay.
Dead or alive wounded or yet wholle,
No man of them wan awaye.
A Dutch brigadire was wounded that day,
And Cornall Hebron called in his place.
Both day and night he ordered in it,
To accompany the Generalls grace.
Eiftie men of each regiment that was in the trenches
Was called the first on comande.
And the Generall ordered Major Campbell,
Upon the hie bastine to stand.
And with these men he had on comande,
He keepe the cat\footnote{See note, p. 436.} all the night.
The wounded men and the first comande,
Came off with the evening light.
The Captain Macaye alive brought away,
Bot his wounds proved mortal to be.
Tho the best doctours was employed for his cure,
Yet within few dayes he did die.
Several Officers more was wounded ful sore,
And stille on the bastine did lie.
These bold granadires at night was releaved,
And home wards again did them hie.
Our Cornell and Major by Generals ordores,
Upon that hie basstine did stay.
And al the regiments lay in the lou trenches,
Til they were releaved nixt day.
And day and night then a deal of workmen,
Did work on the hie basstines,
To make loadgements and a fortified trench,
With pickets and double fassines.
I canot endite nor yet put in write,
The working was there about.
The cruel atacques and many night works,
And slaughter of men very stout.
And constantlie on both day and night then,
We wrought in dangerous places.
And many brave men at working was slain,
And many men got bloodie faces.
On the fifth of October a comand by order,
Upon the French did atacque.
And in that evening on the hie basstine,
To storme they proved not slack.
And in with a boat they thought to escape,
No longer they could make debaite.
Since off the hie basstins with cruel atacquing,
The Frenches at last they were beat.
And in their boat was the Officer shot,
And several of their men slain.
Before the grand breach saileing there alongs,
The boat was broken amaine.
The French a long time by night was working,
And throuing out wood on the breaches.
Til the long big trees in heaps lay alongs,
In the sloops of the wall it streaches.
Our canons did play al the sixth and seventh day,
In order to make a new breach.
And threu a water port the great canon shot,
Was directed the wall for to reach.
Upon the eight day our comands did array,
Another storme for to make.
On the low piliesods by Magdallen port,
That strong place from them to take.
The French in crouds in these piliesods,
A noble defence they did make.
And al the evening the desperate fireing,
The earth al about it made quake.
The boams flieing there both out and in,
And the smoake it filled the aire.
And a terible mine the Frenches did spring,
And a cruel like slaughter was there.
And twise by forse our men was repulsed,
    And lost there three hundered men,
The French in heaps lay dead in the depths,
    Whose number I do not weel keen.
The French from the toun came out there bedeen,
    And crowded in these piliesods.
This Magdalen port to it they resorte,
    And strongly keeped these roads.
Our men fel to then with saping and mining,
    And wrought in to them in roads.
And bit and bit after this we did get,
    A pairt of these low piliesods.
Bot stil Leile toun did boldly defende,
    Til provision began to grow scant.
Then Buffelar caused slay fiftie horsse in a day,
    And told them they should not want.
And caused distribute them in the garissoune,
    For to suplie them in need.
Te Lavian de cheval ¹ they parboile and boyle,
    And made a soupe to their bread.
The sidgeing strong continued stil one,
    With many a bold essaye.
With constant working saping and trenching,
    And mineing both night and day.
Upon the threeten we atacqued again,
    In storming of a half moon.
And at that ataque was a cruel work,
    And a very great slaughter was done.
And from that place our men was repulsed,
    And beat back from the half moon.
And on the fiftenth we stormed againe,
    And masters were of it soon.
In the low piliesods beneath the grand breach,
    A constant battel was keept.
Our men and the French was stil within reach,
    And some in their shoes stil sleept.
From the low piliesods before the grand breach,
    The French at lenth was beat out.
Bot at Magdaleen port that fortified spote,
    They keepte with courage most stout.
To our granadires for several atacques,
    Was payt five seilings each man.
The several died yet they who surviued,
    Whiles of beir was taking a cane.
And free vollgers got money likewayes,
    These dangerous works to make good.

¹ La viande de cheval. There was chevril before Ladysmith.
The dead mens wage to them who survive,
   Was payt and the price of their blood.
The French stil on was fireing cannon,
   Upon a strong water sluice.
To let the water come in to our trench,
   They thought in breaking the close.
On the fourteenth day and on the fiftenth,
   Our men was working bussie.
And three great saps before the grand breach,
   Was wrought into the foussie.
Then at a great ape we several days wrought,
   The water for to let away.
And when it was done and the water let in,
   From the grand foussie it made way.
On the eighteen day our canons did play,
   Upon the port Sant Andrew.
And an infinite number of firie granads,
   Within their byaes we thrue.
On the nintenth day we wrought bussilie,
   And raisse a trench very hie.
To defend our folk from the great gun shot,
   And shot of the French musquetrie.
The twentie day at noon the Frenches begane,
   To throu out fagots and fire.
To kendle the wood lay on the grand breach,
   Fire balls they threu out in ire.
The wood on the breach the fire did catch,
   A strong burning did begine.
All day and all night it burned ful bright,
   And they rejoysed withine.
A melodious noisse with trumpets and hoe boys,
   The French had within the breach.
The brim burning flame it did them defende,
   No danger then could them reach.
The twentie first day our great guns they,
   Began at eleven of the cloake.
And continued on in constant fireing,
   And al the breach it did smoake.
And our granadires fired on the breach,
   Right off to hold the French doun.
At night the free volgers was laying a bridge,
   Ore the great foussie nixt to the town.
Throu three galleries they handed fassines,
   And some the bridges did laye.
So throu the foussie into the grand breach,
   They made a plain patent way.
One bridge was made both patent and bread,
   And another was half way throu.
On the twentie second day for a capitelation,
The bold Buffelar he did boue.
At four afternoon as our workmen went in,
A parlie did beat on the breach.
A flag was set up ore our shot it left off,
A parlie called for by a speach.
A General cam out and stayed in our trench,
Some of ours went in to the toun.
And that same very night they began for to make,
A long and sure capitelation.
The Duke de Buffelar gave up the toun there,
In name of the Duke de Bargunie.
The City Leile he surrendered all,
To the Prince Eugine of Savoyie.
The Emperours General and Chief comander,
And the Viseroye of al Flanders.
To the armies of the Alies who wan it by conquess,
With advise of al noble comanders.
The Duk de Buffelar he obtained there,
For three days time to provide.
Then the French horse with bag and bagage,
Away from Liele were to ride.
These horsse who came in with the amonition,
By night in time of the sidge.
From thence to Dowey were to march away,
Their conditions so did oblige.
Their sick and hurt men had six weeks time,
Provided them to stay in toun.
Then al equipages with bag and bagage,
Were to go off al safte and soune.
And noble men of France were to pass hence,
Convoyed to the nixt garisoun.
Equipages and servants and every thing else,
Was to be convoyed off soune.
The burgers of Leile they provided weell,
For the liberties of their toun.
Their stor masters and al Officers,
No way was to be put doun.
So every man that belonged to the toun,
In his office was to continue,
Each in his oun post was to officiat,
The uplifters of the Revenue.
The Duke de Buffelar the toums governour,
With al the men that he had,
Was to pass without faile to the citydaill,
There to bid sidging tho bad.
His post in the toun he was to lay doun,
Within a very short space.
Whereof a long time he had the possesion,
So the Duke of Buffeler his grace.
Tho he had destroyed and sadly aroyed,
Both Magdalen and Andrew.
And al the suburbs and large bouver houses,
Caused burn and to the ground throu.
No skaith nor damage might be laid to his charge,
His condicions was made very sure.
Three days more time was the capitelation,
After they to the citydale furie.
On the twenty thrid day our Generals they,
Both made and sealed that band.
And al felt merchals and chief officers,
They sealed the same with their hand.
And al the whole time of the capitelation,
We orderly marcht to our trench.
And al the workmen had no ocapation,
Bot converse and look to the French.
About the same time of this capitelation,
The French a sidge did set doun.
To a place called Lochfine doun towards Ostend,
A strong sconse in a smal toun.
And in a short time they conquered Lochfine,
And some was wounded and slain.
A Major General and five hundered men,
In it were al prisoners tane.
Bot at the sidge of Liel was killed a deal,
Of men: of every degree.
About eighteen thousand was reckened the slain,
Which belonged to our armie.
And likeways in Liel was killed a deal,
Of French who keeped the toun.
About twentie two regiments in Liel was once
When first the sidge was set doun.
Al killed or disabled and in the war died,
Bot the number of six thousand men.
Who now alieve were when the bold Bufelar,
The citydaille took to defende.
The twentie fifth of October we got orders,
Sixten regiments to march in the toun.
And that day afternoon we marched al in,
By beating our drums gave a soune.
At Magdalen port in order we enter,
Then marcht to the market place.
There every regiment in order was set,
And in arms stood a long space.
And towards night they have us dismisst
When we had stood long in the weet.
Some wood for to burn into us they bring,
    In corners of that foule street.
That same day togeth'er marcht away,
    The French horsse al in a routte.
Buffelar and the foot to the citydalle flite,
    To keep that sconse very stout.
Three hundered of our men in prisson in toun,
    That day they were al set free.
To their several regiments away they did pass,
    To places where they might be.
On the twentie sixt day the Prince Eugine he,
    Vent to Sant Pauls Coledge kirk.
And the O Te Deum he sweetlie did sing,
    And a Pater Nos: in the mirk.
Our regiment did stay so posted were they,
    In arms at the port de Labae,
And throu the splenade from Sant Andrew,
    Our ingenires lines caussed drae.
The Munsie de Maye was now put away,
    Who had been our chief engenire.
Some said he was causse he was blamed for loose,
    Of many was slain in our weire.
At sidge of the toun he planted the guns,
    And breached the wall to soon.
So from the grand breach offt fired the French,
    Killed many men ore it was done.
So young Cowhorns ¹ they did now suborne,
    And chused him for head Ingenire.
With magick and logick in many a project,
    He ordered each point of our weire.
When fiftie engenires was killed this year,
    Whom the sidge did waste and destroy.
Bot at the citydaille no man we had of vaille,
    Bot Cowhorne whom they pleased to employe.
Comands of men was set a working,
    And trenched along on the wall.
Betwen the end of the street and the out port,
    Earnestlie to work they did fall.
The French this time was bussie working,
    And mounting their hie batterie.
Men of many nation at fortification,
    Ful bussilie working we see.
A strong out work the Frenches did make,
    Weel planted with new pilieosods,
And without port Debare our people aworking,
    Made trenches there by the roads.
On both sides the men wrought day and night then
    And did make no mollestation.

¹ Son of the famous Dutch engineer, who in 1708 was an old man.
Til the twentie ninth day at four afternoon,
Then was ended the capitelation.
The men was working the h Orsses feeding,
Al out on the citydaille ground.
And in the sunshine Buffelar walked then,
With him his hauke and his hunde.
He walked about and had a fine courte,
The dayes of that capitelation.
And some gentle men wan the citydaille in,
To pass time for recreation.
Some noblemen then with Buffelar did dine,
And at the chaff they did play.
And five large muton he got from the toun,
Al good for a super were they.
On the twentie ninth day then Buffelar did cry,
Now gentle men al have a caire.
For without doute the time is now out,
Therfore for war you prepaire.
Three warning guns discharged at anes,
And fired al without ball.
And then after them the canons ramdum,
D id play upon our toun wall.
The folk in toun for fear fel aswoune,
When canons again they hard play.
From port Debae they flited awae,
No longer there they durst stay.
Great pa irt of that toun was in a confusion,
And many they quacked for fear.
And curssed Buffelar the toun destroyer,
No peace he wil make this year.
Great pa irt of our toun it is now dung doun,
Betwixt Magdalen and Andrew.
And now port Debare it will pay for all,
This sideging sore we may rewe.
The Prince Holstenbeg by order was made,
The head Governour nou in Leile.
And General Coliour made under governour,
And so provided were weele.
Al round the toun our armie was lyeing,
As they were al the time of the sidege.
To the citydaille sidege they sent men in arms,
For their orders so did oblige.
The sidgers al round again new begane,
Their workmen for to put out.
And the strong citydaille we did then asaill,
And trenched the splenade about.
At the port Debare we did then prepaire,
And mounted a large batterie.
And then thereon we planted canone,
    And dressed them up orderlie.
Then several batteries al about we did raisse,
    And canon and morters brought on.
From Liele Market place in a very short space,
    For our train that time stod thereon.
We were dayelie working and batteries making,
    And trenching throu the splenade.
And many a man for working they came,
    From many a sunderie brigade.
Nine or ten regiments did come in likewayes,
    And lay in some barocks in Liele.
They came for suplie from our big armie,
    And so they did very weele.
Each regiment of them mounted double men,
    With arms and workmen got wage.
Both they and we wrought on constantlie,
    Which put our foes in a rage.
They fired canon upon our workmen,
    And some time some in the toun.
To preserve them we fel aworking,
    And blinds on the street set doun.
And with musquet ball they fired withall,
    Right desperatlie day and night.
Some of our workmen was wounded and slain,
    Who constantlie wrought in their sight.
Throu from port Debar our trenches did run,
    About by the hie may polle.
The French from within did fire right keen,
    From many a sundery wie holle.
By mineing and saping we wrought on them,
    And holled al their out piliesods
We wrought our mines and then sprang them,
    And throu their works made roads.
And every day then the French was throuing,
    And casting out fierie granades.
Which in our trench brak with many a crak,
    And fleu about al in blades.
In order to this some of our granadires,
    Was comanded to throu upon them.
Granades and match was brought to our trench,
    And al for to pay them home.
So several dayes we wrought in this ways,
    Til we wan al their out piliesods.
In spight of the French we advanced our trench,
    And wrought ay nearer our roads.
And throu the splenade a working we had,
    A foussie to take off the water.
As the foussie was made al throu the splenade,
   Their guns still at us did blater.
The outer foussie was dried thereby,
   And a folding bridge we got one.
Our men wan over without any hovere,
   On the other side trenched anone.
Bot when our workmen to the trench was got in,
   The French did desperatlie fire.
So that many good men was wounded and slain,
   And many was plunged in the mire.
The French came out offtimes with a spoute,
   Our workmen for to destroy.
Our granadires soon beat them off againe,
   With stroaks which did them anoye,
When our workmen had wrought the night time,
   And set gabins al in order.
The valiant French came out on them,
   To beat them off from their border.
With many a saillie and valiant raillie,
   Far moe then heir I can number.
The French pulled doun and took away in,
   Our gabines to make us cumber.
Stil our granadires fired on their nosse,
   And stil beat them in again.
Some at the gabines got stoped out eyes,
   And wounds which did them a pain.
Many wounded and hurt with desperat shot,
   Was at this work every night.
And many a gabines our workmen set up,
   The French puled doun upon sight.
Twentie stivers or a croun the French got then,
   For each gabine they took ine.
Our men and them about the gabines,
   Was like to stop other ston blind.
Likewayes our workmen for seting gabines,
   Had exterordinar wage.
Which was payed to them after the working,
   By the engenire or his page.
Our ordinar work monie was payt orderlie,
   Each regiment got their own pairt.
Which was destruite the armie throughout,
   So passed off in many an airt.
Al with detashed men this sidge it vent on,
   And stil we wrought nearer and nearer.
And in Liele toun al kinds of provision,
   To us grew dearer and dearer.
So we wrought on in saping and trenching,
   Ay nearer to the citydaille.
The French saillied out in many a route,
    Bot nothing it could them availle.
And stil the French men continued on,
    In fireing out canon ball.

The port Debare was sloaped right sair,
    And lumps of it stil did fall.
One boam was throun one carcash anone,
    And both at the port Debair.

A litle guard housse they brunt in a bliesse,
    And a smal building did mar.
The French canon still fired upon,
    The bridge where our workmen did passe,
And then by night that place was releaved,
    By day they might pay for the sasse.
The ston scilder housses on the citydail^corners,
    The French stil fired there from.
The men in our trenches was wounded and slain,
    And never one knew weel by whom.

Then our constabels workmen and handlangers,
    Did mount up a litle batterie.
And two or three guns was planted thereon,
    Who fired as sneel as could be.
So two or three dayes we fired with these,
    And thes litle ston houses dang doun.
Except thes wie housses that stood on the corners,
    Al the citydaile was keeped sounde.
Tho several batteries was mounted besides,
    Oposite to the citydaille wall.
And al the canon set with the platforme,
    Magassines made for powder and ball.
Tho by degrees al our batteries,
    Was wrought near the citydaille.
And heaps of stones and likewayes boams,
    Was gathered in for an asaile.
And tho we wrought in without noisse or dinn,
    With our scupes pickaxes and hows,
And al things ready the walls for to breach,
    Yet our batteries did never lousse.
And Buffelar within made likewayes provision,
    Of engines to set in the breach.
And double swans fethers\textsuperscript{1} to run upon wheels,
    When a storm upon them did reach.
And al the planting he had cutted doun,
    And gather togither in heaps.
With heaps of trees in magazine doors,
    And the wel of water he keeps.
Of many good horsse they cuted the throats,
    Of horsse flesh they had no scant.

\textsuperscript{1} Swan's feathers, or, a machine covered by overlapping timber, like feathers, and placed on wheels, which the men pushed before them when making or resisting an attack.
For supe to their bread they boiled it indeed,
Their allowance they never did want.
With bread and beir and other good cheire,
Their sojors was provided weel.
Some pork and pisse some buter and chisse,
And several sorts of good meal.
A can of wine to every six men,
Was destribute at the least.
And enough of brandie Buffeler gave largelie,
To such as he pleased to feast.
A guard of granadires Buffeler he provided,
In casse of a muttenie.
So in and out they stayed him about,
To them the brandie gave he.
The boams he brake and pouder did take,
And leasurely did it wasste.
So the amonition ful fourtie days time,
Buffeler he made it to laste.
Buffeler did provide and to them he coyned,
The copper in place of monie.
And that motto he put on it also,
For defence of King and countrie.
Their workmens wage was payed right large,
And he promised to them also.
Good monie in France to them to advance,
When home again they should go.
Our armies ingenire Cowhorn was heire,
And he wrought in with noble engine.
On an evening late from our trench he went,
To wieue the French works that time.
And four granadires he took to alongs,
And the cart of the place in his hand.
Tho the fire was thick and the night very mirk,
No manner of hurt then they fand.
The four granadires was in a great fear,
When near on the French they did come.
Our engenire and his men al safely came in,
Bot sloaps in his cart there was some.
He told the granadires they needed not fear,
So they marched to the foussies brink.
Our noble engenire gave them a pisstole,
And bad them his good health to drink.
He pleassed to hire a valliant sojor,
Nixt night to come naked man,
To drau out a clousse in the foussie mouth,
End to imitate the white swan.\footnote{Evidently a swan used to frequent the place, and the unclothed soldier was mistaken for it.}
So in the French sight he did come by night,
And drewe that clousse in the water,
The French thought harm to hurt the swan,
That thereabout ussed to swater.
While we were stil working and constantlie sidging,
And dayelie working in mines,
Ingenire Cowhorn he still did ordaine,
Al works with noble engines.
And Buffelar stout the castile held out,
Til their armie was beat in the field.
The French beat from Brisels and Audenar field,
Before that Buffelar did yeald.
The French grand armie they marched away,
From Liele the seventeen of October.
And Malberies armie marched the same day,
With manlie courage and sober.
So both the armies marched several dayes,
Although they marched not far,
The French at Pong the Pire passed in this weire,
And camped about Audenar.
And in on that toun some boams they threu,
And some housses they did burn.
Bot stayed not to sidge as many aledge,
Bot away from it they did turn.
Then to Brissels toun they marched anone,
And there set down a strong sidge.
Where General Muraye with thretie thoussand,
Did keep that toun and oblidge.
Al burgers in toun he ordered that time
To keep themselves al within.
With men in arms these fortifications,
He keeped and made no much dinn.
The French right soon beleagured that toun,
And likewayes began for to trench,
General Muraye then did so bravely defende,
Of it they wan not an inch.
Upon an out sconce the French did advance,
And made a cruel ataque.
Which was to their coast three hundered they loost,
And at last from it was back.
The French grand armie their cover did lie,
Betwixt Audenar and Grammunge.
The sidge of Brissels did dayelie encreasse,
Some of the wall doun was dung.
Now Malberies armie was lying at Russelay,
And keeped the country right weel.
And sometimes to us they sent a suplie,
In the time of our sidgeing at Leil,
In the moneth November the General Cardugen,
    For foradging vent on comande.
It was reported that the toun of Jepere,
    Sent out a very strong bande.
Our armie this time was stil foradging,
    In al that countrey about.
And the garisoune of Jeper in a bulke togethier,
    From their old toun saillied out.
So some officers and some of our horsse,
    One day they happened to take.
Between them and their toun the General Cardugen
    In haiste his progresse did make.
Few men in the toun they had in the time,
    Altho the toun it was strong.
Had it been besidged as it was aledged,
    It could not hold out very long.
In thes suburbs and out villages,
    Our cavalrie lay for some dayes.
Al about Jeper so floateth the water,
    No horsse passage in thes wayes.
No designe of sidgeing the Jeper was fearing,
    As afterwards ye may hear.
In noble araye our horsse rode awaye,
    And left it for al that year.
Malberies armie they lay stil at Russelay,
    Til they were ordered to march.
And beside Denssie on night they did lie,
    And for a whiles fire did search.
The nixt morning they marcht againe,
    As fast as they might weel drie.
The Prince Eugine was marching this time,
    From Liele with a little armie.
Malberies armie marcht on constantlie,
    Til they were beneath Audenar.
And with coper boats that water they bridge,
    The French mussicks for to mar.
Our armie that time soon in a morning,
    Passt over that water with speed.
In spight of al France that day they advance,
    And made their foes for to bleed.
Our English horsse did noblie prance,
    And brake in on the French line.
The French cryed railie in a ferie fery,
    The field that day they did tine.
And into great fear they began to retire,
    And fleed off in a good order.
And their granadires possted on their reires,
    Til they wan quitte from that border.
Bot many a time they turned againe,
   And fired from behind a hedge.
From hedge to hedge perforce they were beat,
   Some left their arms in pledge.
Three shot of canon soon in the morning,
   Put the French hoast to the run.
And al the day long with feighting and fleing,
   Ore night there was enough spun.
Our horsse and dragouns made many sore crowns,
   When they wan to with broad swords.
The French granadiers in retiring did fire,
   Great slaughter made in few words.
At the same very play that same very day,
   Thousands of men there was slain.
Our armie perseued with courage reueued,
   Til to hault at lenth they were fain.
The French armie ran and over a water wan,
   Towards Atte ore that they did blinde,
There on a plain field again they raillied,
   And cuted the bridge them behinde.
That same very time the Prince Eugine,
   Advanced on to Pong of the Pire.
Where some Irish regiments who keeped that passe,
   Fleed off as he did appeare.
The German cavalrie advanced brisklie,
   And stronglie did them perseue.
So many of them was prisoners tane,
   And killed and wounded not fewe.
The sidge of Brissels was raissed likewayes,
   The French fled off in great fear.
General Muraye soon came out of the toun,
   And perseued them closse in the reire.
A pait of their train that day it was tane,
   As they fled off from the toun.
Both colours and drums was left them behinde,
   And abundance of arms throun doun.
The fight of Audenar may weel be compaired,
   And their fleeing from Gramunge.
To the batel Ramelie where the Frenches did flee,
   From Ramelie doun to Gedunge.
Between Gramung and Atte the French did hallt,
   And in a body they hovered.
And by the mids they cut a ston bridge,
   That our armie could not get over.
And from Brissels they fled off likewayes,
   Til they wan in behinde Monsse.
Betwixt Mons and Atte Sant Gillim doth stand,
   The which is a very strong sconssse.
Two ligs from Mons that fortified sconssse,
   In a strong place of the countrie.
That very sconss is the defence of Monss,
   And lets in al their suplie.
From Fort Sant Gillim the Frenches out came,
   For to asiste their armie.
Our garissoune of Atte advertised of that,
   Marcht in that sconss for to se.
A French serjant and a very few men,
   Our Dutches did there gefange.
The toun of Monss had now loost their sconss,
   The keepers they vowed to hange.
The French armie advertised presentlie,
   And so came marching from Monss.
And with an hoast of both foot and horsse,
   They laid sidge to that same sconss.
Ful four hundered men was then within,
   Who proved both valiant and stout.
Had they amition and enough of provission,
   That sconse they might have held out.
Our valiant Officer and his men there,
   Right nobelie made their defence.
And fired canon their foes stile upon,
   Was worthie of a recompence.
For four dayes time this sconss they defende,
   With manlie courage and skille,
And the French hoast for brag nor for boast,
   That strenth they could not come tille.
Til they within grew scant of provission,
   And nothing they could get ine.
The French armie about them did lye,
   They might fasst til they grew bline.
When four dayes time was both come and gone,
   No kinde of releaf they can see.
They wanted bread in time of their need,
   Their friends them could not suplie.
A parlie they beat and began for to treat,
   And so the fort did surender.
Al honorable terms and al good conditions,
   They grant to our noble defender.
So from that sconss they were tan to Monss,
   And keept in open confine.
They did bot stay for two or three dayes,
   Til they were releaved againe.
The moneth November was al passed over,
   And the French beat off from the field.
The citydaill of Leile Buffelar he held still,
   Four dayes before he did yeald.
The Prince Eugene was now come againe,
   And al his brisk cavalrie.
And al the foot to Leile was come back,
   Bot stille yet at sidging were we.
Now in December the cold and hunger,
   Began to bite at our sidge.
Buffelar the citydaile he thought no to yeald,
   Til needcessatie did them oblige.
A deal of men in the citydaile dyeing,
   Provissions now was near spent.
The cold and the froast the earth it congealed,
   The night was now in its lent.
Buffelar might be wearing scant of provission.
   And might be fearing a storme.
We had our trenches wrought pretie near in,
   Stil thinking the same to performe.
Several tideings of victorious wars,
   Came to us from Germanie.
The Duke of Savoy with the Emperours army,
   Had made the French armie to flee.
Three provences of land retaken again,
   And the French hoast put to the route.
The fifth of December it was I remember,
   When the regiments at Leile turned out.
And al our camp round lying at sidging,
   And al the comands in our trenches.
Al very gladly we fired victorie,
   And cryed futie al ye Frenches.
One batterie with ball we had charged weel,
   When we fired the victorie.
And at the saillie port our ball then was shot,
   Some did in the citydaillé flee,
On the seventh day in the morning earlie,
   Buffelar caussed beat his apelle.
And had libertie for to march away,
   With al his men and himsell.
And al their arms and every thing elsse,
   Which they pleassed for to take.
His bagage in ships he was to take off,
   This capitelation they make.
And four dayes time for to provide ine,
   And then they were to march out.
And leave the citydaill entirely and whole,
   Which is Leiles casstel most stout.
What bread they had left our sojors it bought,
   And some other kinds of provission.
So on their day they marched away.
   Each one into their divission.
Some old some young some creeple some lame,
Until the nixt day did stay.
Buffelar and the men had arms carying,
In order they marched away.
Nine regiments of our men in arms did stand,
And the French marched them by.
A Corporal of a company was standing therby,
Ordered for deserters to spy.
Buffelar he rode off on a boroued horsse,
And with him a brave company.
Of nobels in toun which did him convoye,
With a deal of their French courtessie.
Ful three hundered men was slain now and then,
Which belonged al to our armie.
At the citydaill sidge which lassted I aledge,
Off dayes just one and fourtie.
The French marched off with men then alieve,
And left their filth them behinde.
Our regiments marched in al the citydaill round,
A deal dead unburied they finde.
Five hundered good horsse they eat in that place,
Some pait was fat and some lean.
And a hundered guildens was payed afterwards,
Their slaughter housse to make clean.
Our regiments progress I had near forgot,
Til memory againe me oblige.
We lay near port Defever in some barocks there,
At the time of the citydaill sidge.
On beds of strae we throng enough laye,
When we were free of comand.
And al our tents with a quarter guard,
A long time in camp did stand.
Besides our sidgeing and constant working,
Comands vent to Hermitire.
And at the Red Bridge we mounted on guards,
And other places not near.
Al throu to Labassie right off foradged we,
And got some pait of good haye.
And day and night we guarded our horsse,
And marched with them al the way.
It was in winter about the mids of November,
When our tents in camp was tan doun.
And al our horsse and gran bagage,
Was al brought into the toun.
When our regiment al passt to the citydaille,
To lie in garissoune there perchance.
Then the French hurt men in wagons was tan,
And they marcht of into France.
On the threeten day Prince Eugins armie,
    Marched from about the toun.
And on the east side that night they did bide,
    Left regiments to keep garissoune.
The fourten day in the morning earlie,
    The armie marched from Leile.
The train in shipes they took it alongs,
    So doun the countrey they reel.
Trou hedges over ridges til they wan to Bridges,
    For the French was there in that toun.
Bot our greatest armie with a quick semblie,
    The sidge of Gaunt did set doun.
The Count de Lamotte governour was in Gaunt,
    And thretie thoussand French men.
Great store of victual was provided withall,
    Whereon a long time they might feen.
Arms and amonition enough they had in,
    And a large wide toun for to keep.
Bot Cessielgaunt the water did stoop,
    That about Gaunt it stod deep.
The out works at Leile was mounting right weel,
    And the grand breach abuilding was now.
Three Officers and a hundered men in arms,
    Day and night stood at it I trow.
The French haistilie came to Labassie,
    In that countrey about the carire.
And al our out guards to Leile was brought in,
    From that red bridge and Hermitire.
Cornal Heypburn then sent out a comande,
    With the regiments horsse to Holland.
The recruiting Officers with them vent alongs,
    In their voyage for Scotland.
And the twentie thrid day from Leil marched we,
    Til we came to the sidge of Gaunt.
Tho the wather was fair the field was bot bare,
    And our provissions bot scant.
And at the armie our Officers they,
    Vent off to the toun Cessielgaunt.
Where they were expecting for to get shiping,
    And every thing they might want.
And from Gaunt toun the French canone,
    Was fireing on our armie.
Our armie than was bussilie working,
    At this sidge which lassted a wie.
Four great batteries our armie did raise,
    Oposite to four ports of the toun.
Our armie all at their Generalls call,
    Ready thes walls to beat doun.
The twentie thrid day it was that our armie,
   At Gaunt did break the first grund.
And continued on in trenching and working,
   Til the French to peace they were bound.
The twentie eight day it was that our armie,
   Upon the French made a storme.
And detashed granadires upon their out works,
   Boldly did the action performe.
Ful fiveten regiments the governour sent,
   For to defend these out works.
Arms or amonition they then wanted none,
   Nor spaid pickaxes nor forks.
Bot in a short space so happened the casse,
   The Frenches there was defeate.
Some threu doun their arms and catched no harms,
   Bot yealded their fortune to fatte.
And Mallberies pass they obtained likeways,
   And so vent doun the countrie.
Some droues for Antwerp and others to Brissels,
   Went off and let the war be.
A great counterscarfe and al their outworks,
   That night our armie did take.
On the thretie day in the morning earlie,
   A capitellation they make.
The Count de Lamotte he gave Gaunt up,
   And the touns Bridges and Lochfine.
Al saffe and sound to their own garissounes,
   They were to march al their line.
These garissons al on the second of Januare,
   Al with their arms marcht out.
And as they marcht some of them deserted,
   And turned to the right hand about.
Our armies then within a short time,
   Marched into their garisses syne.
With countinance sore Ie wind up the storie
   Of this long and bloodie campine.

[CHAP. IX]

The progress of Cornal Heyburns regiment, with the most remarkable actions of the Armie of the Allies in Flanders in the Year 1709.

Now of the seven hundered and nine,
   The progress I do begine.
We lay into Leile and bought the dear meall,
   And we made the gruell bot thine.
And aye the longer we lay in this toun,
    Our victuals grew dearer and dearer.
By this we may see our owen destanie,
    Our deaths draues nearer and nearer.
When back from Holland was come the comand,
    And threeen days marching got done.
Our weekly pay we got willinglie,
    Bot the divell a doyt for our shone.
The States came indeed and highted our bread,
    They made it full fivepence a bread.
For thripence halfpenie now fivepence pay we,
    And we eat it al up in our need.
Four stivers a week as many men speak,
    They alloued of gratuitie.
Bot when it is payed I canot tell you,
    And I wot not who can tell me.
When with black banes we are filling our wames,
    With mickle black cair and sorow.
It is the question that many are asking,
    Wherewith wil we dine on the morowe.
By just calculation of prophets divine,
    The worlde is now wearing old.
The azur skies we see with our eyes,
    Produces much hunger and cold.
When to the toun we go for provission,
    And round al the merket place.
The signs of hunger with dismal coloure,
    Is painted in many mens face.
The hunger and cold nipeth very sore,
    And likewayes the dearth of the meall,
Which makes us to cry in cursing the day,
    That ever we came into Leille.
Since I of war have writen so far,
    With al its willfull projects.
I beg your pardon although I set doun,
    Some part of its woeful effects.
As the dearth of meal in the toun of Leile,
    Which every day we do see.
The great desolation and cruel wasstation,
    Of wind milles once standing hie.
Al round the toun are brunt and broke doun,
    The housses of these villages.
So sadly anoyed and pairtly destroyed,
    Are the bouers of these tillages.
And pairt of this toun by war throun doun,
    And al the provissions made scant.
The sojors in flocks running through the street,
    To buy bread in their great want.
And about the toun great store of dead men,
   In several places were found.
And hungrie dogs for lack of their food,
   Found eating the dead in the ground.
The Prince Helstenbege an order he made,
   All masterless dogs to destroye.
For eating the dead and dogs runing wood,
   It might the people annoye.
Likewayes the destruction and cruel wasstation,
   That armies did make in the fields.
Al sorts of grain destroyed by them,
   And al fruits that the earth yealds.
In marching and camping and rough foradgeing,
   And bringing in things that they need.
And that millroding and housses doungrouging,
   Ocassioneth the dearth of our bread.
The cruell sidegings of fortified touns,
   Causseing armies togither lay long.
Within and without and al their about,
   The price of provisions runs wrong.
Of batels and blood there cometh no good,
   Theirfore we have reason to fear.
That the Judgement of God for sheeding of blood,
   On this generation draus near.
I heartiely wish that God would send peace,
   Although that I should be contente.
In my oune countrie to go theire and die,
   Or live on a sober rent.
Yet in my progress I will me redress,
   And again my Musse I 'le implore.
To assiste my pen in making of ryme,
   The naked trouth to adore.
In the moneth Januare into the same year,
   One thousand seven hundered and nine.
On the fourth or fifth day it was I heard say,
   When our armie endt the campine.
Then al our armie were detashed quicklie,
   And marched in to garissoune.
Twentie regiments of foot by order were sent,
   To lye then into Leile toun.
Seventen regiments to keep the toun guards,
   And three for the citydalle strong.
A severe storme came presentlie on,
   The nights grew cold and right long.
The froast and snow right biter did blow,
   The earth was congealled togither.
The storm did increasse still worse and worse,
   The streets of Leile they grew slider.
All the garissoune late on an evening,
By order was turned out.
And a alarme post each regiment then got,
Planting on the walls all about.
Then al the canon fired one after one,
And then the smal guns begane.
Three times al round the walls of the toun,
And the citydaille fired to thane.
And with a hussae we ended it all,
Called it a brave victorie.
Our sucess in weir in the bypasst year,
By the prospering of our armie.
And in the Merket place a great show there was,
Of fire works that was there.
About big trees burning in a bleasse,
And squibs which flew in the aire.
A very great croud then crying alloude,
With aclamationes of joye.
The King of Spain they called Soveraigne,
And Prince Eugine the Wiseroye.
And then a comand from Leile was detashed,
Thretie men of every regiment.
And in good arraye they marched awaye,
And likewayes from Minnou was sent.
A deal of detashments from several pairs,
That time was sent on comande.
Between Dainssie and Courtrie a fortnight they laye,
In villages their throu the land.
Amonition in ships long lay their abouts,
The detashments did weel keep.
They mounted strong guards alwayes on the ships,
When the snow was lyeing right deep.
To Wallkine castell was transported all,
That amonition they had.
And Coutrie garissoune a guard put theirin,
In time of this storme so bad.
All other detashments from Hive did march,
In haiste to their oon garissoune.
Al the winter time no shipeing did come,
To us who lay in Leile toun.
Til the cruel storme its course did performe,
And ended the moneth of Januarie.
The nipeing cold a long time did hould,
None severer ever could bie.
Some blautening of thoue and melting of snow,
Was in the moneth Febervar.
Then with reueued force it congealled a cours
Its effects was stil grouing wore.
Bot March was come ore the storm was done,
   And the wind did blou and the rain.
The froast and the snou did then go awae,
   The water did flou up amaine.
In the lou countrie the water rose hie,
   And brake out over the land.
Which did great skaith to men and beast baith,
   Drouning villages doun in Holland.
Then both far and near the victual grew dear,
   And dearer yet seemed to be.
The comities for peace meet in many a place,
   Bot pairted and could not agree.
The Brigadire Huffel was sconsse Governour,
   Comanding three regiments haille,
Huffels and Bavers and Cornall Hebrons,
   Lyeing in the citydaille.
A pretie litle spark and proud piec of work,
   The fort Major walked about.
A perfect pleasure he took every hour,
   To see the guards turning out.
Our regiments then at our first coming in,
   Did gather some wood for to burn.
Bot afterward who was catched with wood,
   Got the gantelate for the same turn.
In the citydaille we keept guards weell,
   In time of this storme so bad.
And a litle guarde we had then detashed,
   And sent out to the splenade.
Without the out works of that noble sconsse,
   For to keep guard day and night.
Without any housse or shelter for us,
   The sun and moon for our light.
Within a short time we got a guard then,
   In a barock belonged to the toun.
And throu the splenade our senteries stood,
   Without the citydaille roune.
Then we got a guard out in a wie sconsse,
   Fort Lewis I think it was called.
There with a boat we wan in and out,
   And keept guard in that halde.
A prettie litle thing a four nocked basstine,
   And a guard housse stands in the midle.
To it in a boat we passt and repasst,
   For mussick some plaid on a fidele,
With water round the fort is environed,
   The foussies do keep it right weel.
The ships pases by with wood frequentlie,
   And other things bringing to Leile.

running the gauntlet, a military punishment

hold, i.e., foot
This little sconsse is an advanced post,
And belongs to the citydaille fair.
And in the spring they fell aworking,
That little sconsse to repaire.
And in the citydaill through all the winter,
The timber men wrought every day.
In putting in window in all the barocks,
And setting of things in arraye.
And making bedsteds and tables and banks,
And such things as was aloued.
Til the citydaille was furnished weell,
And a deal of timber they heued.
In the citydaille the French wrought weell,
And a deal of great timber did cutt.
And in the winter time by constant working,
That timber to use it was put.
In sentrie boxes and other necessares,
A constant working was their.
And round Liel toun was fortificacion,
And for a new sidge they prepar.
Our regiment stil lay in the citydaille,
Al this cold winter and springe.
In the moneth March with the bovers wagons,
Amonition to Leile they did bringe.
A deal of comands stil with them did marche,
For to keep them in the way.
Betwixt Minnon and the toun of Leile,
They were marching every day.
Tho deep was the way yet day after day,
They filled al Leile magassines.
With powder and ball to provide us all,
Bot dear we bought the black banes.
Amonition meall they brought up a deale,
And other good victuals also.
Amonition bread came alwayes in need,
Al things in Leile was dear tho.
To keep that toun they made provision,
It was now fortified weel.
They provided both for peace and for ware,
By counsell and conduct in Leile.
And men with recruiting was stil a coming,
From many a sundrie countrie.
Most part of the regiments that lay in that quarters,
Was recruited as soon as could be.
In the moneth Apriell in good rank and file,
Our regiment a comand they sent.
To bring up our mounting was coming from Holland,
And so they did meet it at Gaunt.
When our mounting up to us was come,
The tayelours was put to warke.
To make our mounting by constant working,
Each thing was made ready for camp.
A deal of shiping to Leile was still coming,
With meal with oats and with hay.
Of every regiment comands they were sent,
To be their guard in the way.
Most pairt of the men were reserved at home,
In the citydaille got comande.
And were marched all into the toun wall,
And al day they behoved to stand.
Two hundered men of each regiment then,
Being sent to be the convoye.
Cutrigie and Minone comands sent alonage,
And thro' foes them durst not annoyee.
In the moneth of May right frequentlye,
The shipes was a coming alonage.
And strong comands them dayely atendes,
Marching all the way very throng.
Some pairt of troupers and Jerman Hossaes,
Was now sent up into Leile.
And out on comand about al the toun land,
They rode scouring the coast weell.
Great rumor of groats was going likewayes,
Some expecting to get them right soon.
Some Officers then some money did lend,
To sojors for to buy shoon.
Some said Leile would pay very weell,
The groats for our service monie.
Some said Cornall Hebron in that would not faille,
To pay us the same pleasantlie.
Some said the money was received already,
Which we belived as our creed.
Bot then missbeliefe stole in like a thief,
And sware the groats was al dead.
Then some fell aswoun for fear of their shoon,
Being terified for the nixt day.
And some Officers without any orders,
They stopte a pairt of their paye.
So continueing in constant stooping,
And swearing the groats was nou dead,
The victuals being dear both heir and elsewhere,
The sojors at heart now do bleed.
And when our Major\(^1\) came by in honour,
Rideing with a new scarlet coat.
Sojors in a croud cryed out alloud,
Minde sir the groats that we got.

\(^{1}\) Major Campbell.
A deal of shoon he caussed buy soon,
To the men of his oune companie.
And when the groats for the regiment was got,
All payed they behoved to be.
In the moneth of May on the fourten daye,
Our regiment did pass a reviewe.
Without port Magdallen we were musstered then,
And all our mounting on newe.
Upon the fiveten then a great comande,
Was sent out for a convoye.
Two hundered men vent of every regiment,
To meet the ships with the haye.
We marcht from Leile toun on that afternoon,
And at night we past the Red Bridge,
Al night while day we lay on the way,
And then we marcht half a lig.
To Warlietongue a pretie little toun,
And there a while we did staye.
Til al the ships to that was come upe,
Weell loaded with oats and with haye.
And strong convoyes of both foot and horsse,
With them they had al alonge.
Above the Red Bridge ore they past that clousse,
The shipes was their very thronge.
And a litle boat and four men in it,
A great shipe did it overune.
And two Swize sojors and one of the skipers,
That day was drowned in a linn.
On the sixten day of this moneth of May,
The ships dreu up towards Leile.
Convoyed al the way without any fraye,
And they passed another clousse weel
At eleven acloak at night we had orders right,
For to march al sloulie hame.
Our Cornall Hebron he led on the vane,
And the rest foloued at their time.
On the eighteen day of this moneth of May,
Our regiment again was reviewed.
Our new mounting was al got on then,
And our granadires caps renewed.
Our Cornall had got a new coat of arms,
The which did make a great shewe.
And Gratus Essto it is the mottoe,
Off these valliant Scotsmen and true.
White black red and green the chieff collours seven,
With all their inferiour mixtures.
On these caps may be seen by discerning eyen,
Weell wrought into the same pictures.
Off the knot of Union made by the Britans,
That sign on our caps ye may see,
And a sheaf of aroues the Hollanders arms,
And a lyon as fierce as can be.
A hand with a shable a horsse at the amelle,
   Arc curiouslie wrought and weell.
And guns and granads in several pairts stands,
   And the pictures of shabels of steell.
And on the farrat of each granadires cap,
   Arc leters for the Cornalls name.
An I and an H wrought throu other twisse,
   John Hebron for to expreme.
On this coat of arms both vallour and courage,
   Displayes in a noble forme.
Off' valiant actions the honour redounds,
   To them the same who performe.
And in Liel toun they had amonition,
   And their magassines were filled weell,
Bot indeed the victuall at a dear rate did sell,
   And the poor great hunger did feell.
To the bakers chops they gathered in floaks,
   In seeking their bread for tou buye.
At the doors open of the corn magassine,
   There was a great tumult and cry.
The rable in toun they conveened sometimes,
   And a mutinous noisse they did make.
They gather togither in seeking for victuall,
   By forsse some pairt they did take.
Then our Governour gave out an ordour,
   For a picket stil ready to be.
To keep the magassines he firmly designes,
   When the rable did break loose a wie.
So al this year the victuall held dear,
   And no otherways it could be.
Such vasst multitudes for hunger in crouds,
   Great pitie it was them to see.
A popelous place in a very sad casse,
   Gathering togither in the streets.
And seeking for bread in times of their need,
   Murmuring for want of their meats.
A large wide toun and much people therein,
   Many thousand of poor families,
The victual being dear they falling in fear,
   Wanting bread for their suplies.
And a deal of negotion they made of devotion,
   And oft did keep holy day.
At meetings and feasts was cloathed these priests,
   Like mountibanks for a stage play.
The priests in pulpits did persuade and teach,
   And admonished their ignorant crewe.
To honor all Sancts and hate Protestants,
   And they made them believe it for true.
That we had cloven feet like the eviell sprite,
   And worse then devils in graine.
And discharged catholicks on their greatest perrills,
   From our companie for to refraine.
They sadlie do grumble and their prayers mumble,
   And highlie their masses do singe.
Til God in his judgements rightious,
   Such trash in heell shal flinge.
On the thritieth day of this moneth of May,
   A solemnisation they made.
And to three Sancts to doe sacrifice,
   Upon an alter right broad.
To adore these Sancts al the inhabitants,
   Were gathered out to the streets.
And in the Market place with al tokens of grace,
   These priests and friers did all meet.
And al their Capieschines Archbishops and Deans,
   About the alter did crowde.
On the alter they ascended and their worship extended,
   With imprecations most loude.
Before that alter they bowed down there,
   Stille craving these Sancts intercession.
And with green branches al round these places,
   In time of this holy procession.
And carrying a thing most like a coffene,
   And a Crusiefixe going before.
And then the portrages of al these three Sancts,
   Which they in procession adore.
And so that coursse they walked about,
   To the place where they were to stand.
And in the daytime and with the sunshine,
   Burning candels they held in their hand.
And al the tradesmen in rank folouing.
   Each trade had a sunderie picture.
Which they bare along to make intercessione,
   For al the trade without mixture.
And with the portrature of a mortal creature,
   Who they say was chieff of the trade.
After devote confession along in procession,
   From street to street they were lede.
With devotion true they made a great shew,
   In the best array that could be.
Who did them meet walking on the streets,
   Bare headed kneeled on the knee.
And many dayes with songs of his praisse,
   They past on with their procession.
And their great ones rideing on good horsse,
   But they lighted in time of confession.
On the second of June being Saboth morning,
   Their poor came thro\text{ al} the toun.
And four nocked balads in Latine printed,
   Wherein was this sentance profoune.
First three several Sancts of great worthinesses,
   The ballade by name did expreme.
We suplicate yow to pray for us now,
   And at the hour of our death Amen.
These poor proselites were ready to catche,
   Al that unto them was given.
And the sick people had recompence triple,
   Sancts prayers to bring them to Heaven.
So with processions and devote confessions,
   These Sancts long time they adore.
Whose meritorious works of supererogations,
   Might support them at their dead sore.
And very frequentlie a pait of the clergie,
   In procession did serve in their turne.
And with cross signs of sanguine collores,
   Their garb doth show them to marne.
At their worship in kirks and devotion in mirks,
   Which frequentlie they did usse.
And with burning lights in gold candelesticks,
   The light of the day they abusse.
Their devotion excells in ringing of bells,
   Al for the expelling of evills.
Yearly from Rome they fetch a new tone,
   For cleanging the aire of the divells.
So for the promotion of the holy devotion,
   The bells in musick do sound.
By day and by night with torches most bright,
   At worshipe in kirks of the toun.
In cloissters and kirks the priest closely sits,
   And releaveth other by touers.
At divine worship they stay in the church,
   The space of fourtie eight hours.
These clergie men enough have to spend,
   And lives on the fat of the earth.
And at the masses and solemn addresses,
   They excell in musseicall mirth.
Of that religion reckened in the toun,
   Are a hundered thoussand famelies.
Of gold and monie a vass quantatie,
   Maintaineth that clergie in fies.
Great store of victual is brought in withall,
And put in the cloissters to keep.
No maner of war the cloissters do scare,
They eat they drink and they sleep.
When rich people dies great pairt of their geires,
Falls in to be the church rent.
Tho the poor in streets goes beging in fleets,
After al their geirs they have spent.
The rich after death for venial faults,
Are condemned to the place purgatorie.
And in few years by monks priessts and friers,
They are transported to glory.
Off the popish religion in heell their falls none,
Bot some poor and moyenless fiends.
For the masses they sing and prayers condigne,
Releaveth the soulls of their friends.
By allms deeds pater nosters and creeds,
And works of supererogation.
The counting of beads and repeating of creeds,
And the holy Sancts invocation.
As Peter and Paull to rescue their soull,
And bring them from purgatorie.
Their goods after them pays for the whole crime,
Their friends need be no more sorie.
Off Roman Catholicks in cloissters and kirks,
Off their worship and their faire.
And of the multitudes and popelous crouds,
To masse making dayely repaire.
I shal let alone from it I le be gone,
And return to my progress of war.
I have transsgresed in what I expressed,
In things that my method do mar.
The French Protestants in Leile had a church,
And joyned in their worship divine.
A hundered famelies upon the Sabath dayes,
Some of them in an equipage fine.
And some regiments who were protestants,
Had sermon upon the Lords day.
Beside the main guard that kirk was prepaired,
For regiments in toun that did stay.
Our regiments minister al along the winter,
In Holland his time he did spend.
And about the Beltan he came up again,
To instruct us our lives for to mend.
Some Saboth dayes in the moneth of May,
In Leil citydaille he did preach.
His text he did chusse in the first of the Romans,
As Paull the Apostel did teach.
How the Roman warriours became victorious,
   And gained to themselves the Impire.
In every countrie they wan victorie,
   And ambitiouslie did aspire.
To many dieties they worship divisse,
   And gave tolleration to all.
The kinds of religion that was in each kingdom,
   So to idolatrie they did fall.
Professing themselves for to be wisse,
   Fools in effect they became.
To stir up devotion by the seeing motione,
   Images they made for a sham.
And the Glory of the incorruptible God,
   Proffainely changed have they.
And images made like coruptible man,
   Whom God formed of the clay.
They made images like four footed beasts,
   And like the fouls of the aire.
And creeping things and fishes with finns,
   To the Infinite God they compaire.
Then to uncleanness God did give them up,
   And to the lussts of their own hearts.
And so disshonoring their own bodies,
   Among themselves in some pairs.
And changed the trouth of the true God,
   Into a falsshode or lie.
And worshiped and served the creature,
   More than the Creator most hie.
And for the same cause God did give them up,
   Into their affections most vile.
For even their women the natural usse change,
   To usses contraire natures fille.
And also the men leaving usse of the women,
   Into their vile lussts did burne.
Men with men by unseemly working,
   To foul sodomie they did turne.
So in themselves receiving recompence,
   Of their error as it was meet.
God did them blinde to a reprobat minde,
   He did bind them over compleat.
And as they liked not to retain the true God
   Into their knowledge and will.
By their own device things not conveniant,
   He permited them to fullfille.
With all unrightiousness fornication wickedness,
   And covetousnesse they were filled.
Malitious envy deceit murther debaite,
   Whisperers with malignity filled.
Backbiters God haters dispiteful proud boasters,
   Inventers of eville things.
And to their parents as inobediants,
   All wickedness in them so reigns.
Without understanding and natural affecion,
   And most vile covenant breakers.
And implacable in their courses most ille,
   Unmerciefull and dutie neglecters.
And also knowing Gods judgements condigne,
   The acters of death was worthie.
Yet did the same and took pleasure in them,
   Who comited such things as ye see.
And tho the Romans was brave conquerours,
   Yet from one thing to another.
Still on by degrees they did apostatize,
   Til idolatrie became mother.
From every religion that was in each region,
   They apostatized to none.
In making imagerie worshipeing deiaties,
   With absurdaties many an one.
Tho now the church of Rome be called crisstain,
   And adorers of al the good Sancts.
And the papal throne and their clergie each one,
   Off holiness make their vaunts.
Yet Gods holy word they do it forbide,
   As unlawfull for people to know.
And their own tradition which we call superstition,
   To the vollgar people they show.
Altho they do confess Christ come in the flesh,
   And all the Apostells whole creed.
Yet with cheating tricks and Sancts reliques,
   Their works say false tongue they lieded.
They grant Christs Passion, Death and Resurection,
   And how he was pierced with a sword.
Many a portrature they make of our Saviour,
   Which is contraire to his word.
By makeing imagrie to increase idolatrie,
   And worshipeing of God by them.
Upon the Saboth Days with feasts and with plays,
   Gods day and name they profane.
The city of Leil observes very weell,
   All the statutes of the church of Rome.
In fasting the Lent many holy dayes spent,
   So God shal rewarde them at doom.
When the imitants of all holy Sancts,
   And such as pretend holy liffe.
Before Gods Tribunal shal be assembled all,
   God word shal then end al striffe.
When rich and poor and all most appear,
Before his tribunal seat.
The Pops triple crow shall then be cast down,
And AntiChrist's kingdom defeated.
All kings of the earth most then be brought forth,
When Christ in the clouds shall descend.
With voice of archangel and the triumph of God,
Then just men works shall be known.
Matters of religion doth little concern,
Men in a military life.
To clergymen who do better keen,
We leave to debate the strife.
A deal of new ballads past through the streets always,
Selling busily every day.
The wife and the man went through and them sang,
All French songs gallant and gay.
And frequentlie there was a stage play,
And a doctor all winter was there.
And men for play he kept alwaye,
And crowds to that did repair.
His skil and arte in many a pairte,
He set out with eloquent tongue.
To gather monie he used some play,
And made men's purses grow clunge.
Great crowds of people he gathered together,
In the little Market place.
Some approved of his cure and others forbore,
But he stayed there for a long space.
A great deal of people in the town of Leile,
In two market places convene.
Throu the Royal Exchange some people do range,
That stands in the middle between.
All sorts of ware is to be sold there,
The merchant stands round about,
All glistening gear for ready silver,
Two ports to go in and out.
In the Royal Exchange are all sorts of things,
All glistening goods for to sell.
All French histories and ballads and toys,
But the prices I shall not now tell.
All gold most glisters and likeways the silver,
But all is not gold that glisters.
For brasse and tinn they make so to shine,
Dazzling folks eyes in their mistresses.
All silks and decking ornaments for women,
There is to sell in good store.
All kinds of kanes, knives, jewells and ringes,
All usseful things and much more.
Its builded about with buildings most stout,
   And strong ston pillars within.
The merchants stands dry tho never so rainie,
   And a brave pavement to walk on.
Great confluence of people resorteth theretille,
   And a dayelie market they keep.
The ports firm and sure there goods to secure,
   In the night when people do sleep.
In the midde of Leile the Exchange stands weell,
   Between the two market places.
Its fournocked within and a compact thinge,
   And the wares doth shine in the casses.
And al that toun compactlie doth stand,
   In it is many a street.
Both broad and long and the induellers throng,
   In the market places they meett.
To the toun of Leile we must bid fareweell,
   And for the camp now prepaire.
All the regiments did get up recruites,
   And tents and waggons al clare.
Cornal Hebrons regiment the time we got spent,
   And lay still in the citydaille.
From the threeten of December to June twentie four,
   And our victuals was dear al the while.
In the spring of this year in March and Apriell,
   Cornal Hebrons regiment togither.
We did exercise on the rampar walls,
   Frequentlie as they did consider.
Stil two regiments mounted on the guards,
   And the third they did exercisse.
A regiment was ay exercissed each day,
   Or twice on the day as they please.
So with exercisseeing and other dissipline,
   And guards and comands that we had.
The victuals was dear and the fields very baire,
   The state of affaires looked sad.
Although the circumstance of many a place
   Might oblige the peires to make peace.
Yet pride and ambition envious superstition,
   Permites not the war for to ceace.
King Philip in Spain this year did obtaine
   Victorie in the day of battell.¹
So he with pride in Spain thinks to bide,
   With peace he will not yet mele.
Tho al Chrissendom was concerned theirin,
   And the war it did hurt into all.
The Ambassadours being posted by towers,
   To free the countries from thrall.

¹ Probably a reference to the actions of La Gudiña, 7th May 1709.—Stanhope’s War of Succession (1832), p. 282.
The several countries were desirous of peace,
And the comities several times set.
To conclude and agree and please every parrtie,
They painted at last: as they meet.
Then both far and near prepared for war,
With al the haiste that they could.
In the moneth of June begane the campine,
No peace our armie then would.
The French armie came to Labassie,
And began to work up a line.
For to save themselves in time of batell,
And so they began the campine.
The first week of June the Stats of Frizeland,
Our garissoune again did rewieue.
Our orders to march at a minutes warning,
To be ready: for what might ensue.
Prince Eugines armie dreu up the countrie,
At Ellshine they did encampe.
And the Duke Mallberie with the bigest armie,
Off foot and horsse men most rampe.
A hundered and sixtie thousand in two armyes,
Conveened to the field of campine.
And by degrees they dreu up to Leile,
To conquere the touns that remaine.
Yet unconquered still tho belonging untill,
The rights of the croun of Spain.
Tho now al Flanders the Spanish loulands,
From the French are reduced again.
To the obediance of the present King Charles,
Who is now the right King of Spain.
All Flanders being wone to the Emperour son,
And the French beat al away hame.
Bot yet Namuire the French keepeth sure,
And both Mons and Charlieroye.
To surender themselves seemeth coye.
Till war or peace againe them reduce,
From under the French King againe.
To whom they have been now long in subjection,
By right they belong al to Spain.
The Emperours son who is now King of Spaine,
With armyes that do with him stand.
In many years war advanced so far,
In conquering al the lowland.
And from Jermanie was came an armie,
To Prince Eugine now Visseroye.
And our Confederat armie rulled by Mallberie,
Ready their foes to destroye.
Our armies in arraye their banners displaye,
   And advanced one towards Leile.
In the moneth of June on the morning right soon,
   On the twentieth third day I trow weell.
All Leile garissoune on that afternoon,
   Marcht out and joyned the armie.
And the Prince Eugine pitcht on the right hand,
   With his Jermane cavalric.
Some French in a passe on the right of the camp,
   Right boldlie fired that day.
Bot the Jerman host coming up very closse,
   And beat them from it awaye.
Both our armies weell camped above Leile,
   On the twentieth day of June.
Our regiment this time were very few men,
   We got orders to march to Minone,
On the twentieth fourth day but longer delaye,
   Our regiment came marching from Leile.
And some English regiments by order was sent,
   To keep that garissoune weell.
Our regiment then came marching to Minone,
   And there we had orders to staye
Till our recruits came and we were moe men,
   There in garissoune then we laye.
And mounted the guards and marcht on comands,
   Convoyeing bread for our armie.
In marching alongs guarding the waggons,
   And other things for their suplie.
And meeting the shipes up the water that comes,
   From Coutrige alonge to Minone.
Such dayelie repaire made our dutie right saire,
   Till a whille of the summer was gone.
Our grand armie on the twentieth seventh day,
   Marcht off on the morning right soon.
Away from Leile in order they reille,
   With martial and muscial tone.
The French in their line lay cloose at the time,
   On plain field they durst not advance.
Our armies circling they trivissed the ground,
   Al round on the borders of France.
Our armies cavallrie with marching brisklie,
   And the infantrie in order allso.
Till round Turneye they marched in arraye,
   And therein sorounded their foe.
On each side of that toun our camps set doun,
   And regiments detached for sidge.
The French in Turney was oblidged to staye,
   So the fate of war did oblige.
Our armie for sure they did them secure,
All the passes of the countrie.
That the French host they could not nor durst,
To Turneye send any supplie.
Yet them to help they vainlie atempe,
Several times in batell most keene.
Bot our armie keept al the countrie,
From Leile til near Walenshine.
Our armies round besidged that toun,
And a close sidge to it did laye.
Our armie soon did gather provission,
Needful for the sidge of Turneye.
The later end of June this sidge was set down,
To the strong and big city Turneye.
And a strong train was convoyed alonge,
And brought there without delaye.
Our armie then fell to and brake ground,
And trenched al round that big toun.
And great batteries in haste they did raise,
That strong city walls to beat down.
And for a long time in constant working,
In making great store of fassines.
And near the toun walls they wrought by degrees,
With pickets, maells, and gabines.
Four chief bateries which our armie did make,
By our Generals names they did call.
And all at once was made ready those,
And loused al on the toun wall.
All the moneth of July brisklie batered they,
And made four breaches right wide.
The French from withine fireing upon them,
Who in their trenches did bide.
At the first setting down of the sidge of the toun,
Right many deserters did rune.
Away from our armie they fled to Turneye,
As tho a priesse they had woone.
And deserters like those now turned our foes,
Proved valiant in their defence.
It was reported then that six hundred men,
Fled from our armie to thence.
It was whispered about by private reporter,
That the French did saillie by night.
Upon our workmen on the glasseye working,
All armless wanting daylight.
And with baginets stabed them to the hearts,
And destroyed near five hundred men.
This eville conduct was but a misslucke,
No stranger ought it to keen.
Our armies shame our Generals blame,
The like before was not seen.
To send out workmen no cover with them,
On their foes so cruel and keen.
Our armie about both valiant and stout,
Let no releafe to the toun.
The bold Buffelar he could not win their,
Tho it should have gained him a crowne.
The French armie lay behinde Labasse,
On plain field they durst not appear.
Bot frequentlie they made a falsifie,
To march by front or by rire.
Bot stile on their ground at night they were found,
And the line still before their noses.
Their horses and foot each day did deserte,
Right off they was a deal seen of thosse.
Who complained indeed that they had dear bread,
And wanted a deal of their paye.
And the whole armie in great povertie,
To fight they durst not assaye.
The French armie sent out a pairtie,
In the time of the siege of Turneye.
And the toun of Jeper they sent out another,
Near ten thousand men then made theye.
That fleing armie came down instantlie,
Out over the land they did reelle.
And came to a village that lyes on the water,
Midway twixt Minone and Leile.
A regiment of our men was lying therein,
And the Frenches did them suroune.
Our men manfulie made resistance a wey,
And held out that little tonye.
Bot Varlatongue was not very strong,
Long time it could not keep out.
That thin ston wall could bot little availle,
And the French so strong theirabout.
Our regiment of men that day they were tane,
In the village called Varlatongue.
And the French in haiste they marched from it,
And to it our armie sent some.
And by constant working and bold fireing,
Our armie they sidged Turneye.
And all these outworks they ataque at once,
And the pilisods then took theye.
The Jermans did ataque on a strong counterscarfe,
And the French did boldlie defende.
And before it was got the Jermans they losst,
The number of five hundere men.
On the twenty eight day of the moneth July,
The French caussed beat the shemade.
And by capitelation surrendered the toun,
With al the rights that it hade.
Some regiments marcht in for to keep the toun,
According to capitelation.
And the French Governour with al his whole pouer,
To the citydaille past for vexation.
The toun of Turneye was redussed plainely,
To obedience of the Spanish King.
The armies of the Allies were victorious,
And prosperous in every thing.
The old ragged cross the Germans collours,
Flourished in the toun of Turneye.
And the Floure of Deluce with the blood red cross,
Was subdued and banished awaye.
When the capitelation was ended and done,
And our men posseste of the toun.
Into the citydaille the French passed all,
And the citydaille sidge was set down.
All new regiments our armie detashed,
And sent to the citydaille sidge.
By martial deeds their foes for to yeald,
Perforce they would them oblige.
Then all our armie removed presantlie,
And advanced on to the French line,
And the housse quarters of our great armie,
At Orssie was setled that time.
The right of our armie lay doun towards Dowie,
And the lefft near to Santimaesse.
Near five ligs of lenth from the right to the lefft,
Along the line our camps drausse.
Our horsse and dragouns did brisklie advance,
Into the Fortt Santiemaesse
A veell fortified place a very great passe,
And the French away from it draws.
This little citie is not far from Condie,
And the French the fort they have losste.
Our armie the same did take in possesion,
And before it encamped our hosste.
The citydaille of Turneye defended brisklie,
Throu the moneth of August most clear.
The strongest citydaille it is without faille,
That's in Flanders both far or near.
Both strong and stout al mineed about,
The walls are both thick and hie.
Amonition and canon enough is therein,
The sidgers it canot come nie.
The great gun shot played both in and out,
    Right constantlie both night and day.
The sidgers still working in trenching and mineing,
    With many a valiant assaye.
And several times in making of mines,
    They did the sidgers much hurte.
A deal of ingenires and many mineanires,
    With pouder they said was bloun up.
Cornall Hebrons regiment the time they spent,
    In the garissoune of Minone.
From the tewnty fourte day of the moneth of June,
    Til the eighhte of August was come.
The third pairt of Minone is al lyeing doun,
    Since our armie did it besidge.
And Jeper port it stands alwayes shutte,
    Their conditions so did oblige.
And one magassine they did not opene
    Since the Frenches yealded that toun.
From Jeper port to the market place,
    The housses is al lyeing doun.
Bot the high church it standeth in state,
    And a sentrie stands on the tope.
To see al pairties as they come alongse,
    Either doun that water or up.
The Roman Catholicks stil in the hie church,
    Their masses they sing every daye.
In a little cappel that stands it beside,
    The Protestants they preach and they praye.
So every Lords day when we in it laye,
    We had sermon in the cappell.
Bot nou from devotion we most walk alonge,
    Our progress of war for to tell.
The toun of Minone was then pretie strong,
    With repairing from our armie.
Eighten thousand bread was their dayelie made,
    And taken of for their supplie.
A deal of magassines we had in keeping,
    Of victual of wood and of haye.
And at three ports the bouers in floaks,
    Comes in on the market daye.
To martial deeds we most now procede.
    And be ready to march at demande.
Our recruitinge Officers then sent up letters,
    From Holland when they came to land.
A comande was sent to the city of Gaunte,
    To bring the recruits saffe alonge.
On the tewnty third day of the moneth Julye,
    They were brought into Minone.
Above a hundered and thretie of men very likelie,
That time came to our regiment.
Our Cornal and Major did them al musster,
   And then for the camp we were bent.
Our Cornal presentlie sent to the armie,
That his regiment it was full.
And with moyen of Generalls ediecanes,
   The regiment to camp he did pull.
The Cornal to Leile he past for a while,
   And the regiment in Minon did stay.
And the recruits made in companies,
   Exercised on the wall twice a day.
Without Bridges port our Major us took,
   And the regiment did exercisse.
By tuck of drum and three words of comande,
   We exercissed there at our easse.
Our Cornal with joy was presentlie ready,
   Having fulfilled his intent.
On the eighteen of August it was that we marcht,
   Weell mounted and in good order.
With old men and new the regiment full now,
   So we marched of from that border.
That night we did camp beside a village,
   Within half a lig of Leile toun.
On the morow earlie we marched away,
   And so for the camp we were boun.
We entred our camp near by the right hand,
   And marched throu Eugines armie.
On the front of the English along we marcht,
   On the left of the Hollands camp we.
On the twentie day our regiment they,
   In the camp we were al reviewed.
All the front line being draun up syne,
   And our post in the armie reneued.
The Generals and their court alongs on the front,
   Came rideing upon their fine horsse.
A deal of pretie men with galant mounting,
   Out over these fields did cross.
And al the rire line upon the twentie one,
   Was reviewed on the front of their line.
And al Officers in these dayes of reviewing,
   Was drest in their mounting most fine.
Our camp dutie vent on brisklie,
   Til the moneth of August was done.
The citydaill of Turney was sidginge brisklie,
   Some said it would not yeald soon.
Both night and day the canons did playe,
And made a hidious noisse.
And they within did boldlie defende,
Like valliant men and choisse.
At that citydaille no force could prevaile,
Bot our miners dayelie did mine.
Til underneath the ground they were working in,
With mickle slight and engine.
Our canon ball did beat doun their wall,
And al the housses dang doun.
On every side the sidgers did bide,
And had strong guards in the toun.
The citydaille of Turney both pleasant and bonie,
Was laid all in reuineous heaps.
Bot the cassamads so strongly was made,
The men it saffe enough keeps.
Til the moneth of August was very near done,
Then they began for to treate.
And by degrees made a capitelation,
No longer they could wee! stane be it.
Comands of granadires from our armie detasht,
In order upon them to storme.
To Turney citydaille they came without faille,
Valliant exploits to performe.
On the second of September the Frenches togither,
They marched al off with their arms.
So leaving Turney they marched to Condie,
Without any further alarmes.
Our armie at Orsie a cover did lie,
Til the moneth September was come,
And the French from Turney they marche,
With flying collours and drum.
On our armies front strong guards we had out,
In passes of the strong wood.
At four dayes time they releaved them,
With counsel and conduct most good.
Our armie that time was dayelie foradging,
And grassing out on our front.
The French mean time defending their line,
With wapens that were not blunt.
A grand foradgeing our armie had then,
Seven or eight ligs in the rire.
On the twentie sixth day of August most clear,
These comands marcht with a carire.
And on that night a while they did resst,
Two leags it was beneath Lille.
And the nixt morning twixt Leil and Minone,
We foradged their very weell.
The way being long and the foradgers throng,
   Al night we were by the way.
Both horsse and men sore travelled then,
   Came home upon the third day.
The citydaill of Turney surendered already,
   And the moneth September begune.
Our armie al over with one thing and other,
   Bot short whille rest they had sune.
The Prince of Heess on comand was detasht,
   Upon the third day of that month.
With twentie squadrons of good Jerman horsse,
   At his comand marching forth.
And a hundered men of every batalion,
   Which had not been at Turneye.
Which made the number of four thousand men,
   In detashments were sent awaye.
At six acloak at night they marched on sight,
   To ataque the Sant Gullian sconsse.
For to clear the way and make it ready,
   For our armies sidging of Monsse.
This Prince passed on by the scurt of Mortaigne,
   To occupie the lines of Giverie.
Lieutenant General Ross was likeways detasht,
   With thretie squadrons of cavalrie.
Ten squadrons of the right and ten of the lefft,
   And ten of Prince Eugines armie.
And at the same time he marched with them,
   And past by the village Orsie.
And on the fourth day before break of day,
   From Orsie marcht our armie.
The pass of Mortaigne and Anthonie then,
   They passt oposite to Turneye.
Our armie that day marching very earlie,
   And passing the scourt of Mortaigne,
Bot our rire guard that river not crossed,
   Till earlie the nixt morning.
Our sidging armie they rested at Turney,
   To observe the enomies motion.
Our great armie moving throu the countrie,
   Observing a great deal of caution.
Upon the fifth day yet al our armie,
   Did prosecute forth their march.
My Lord Mallberies standart that night it was pitcht,
   At Erbizoel upon search.
Prince Eugines quarters that night was
   At a place they call Balieoile.
And six squadrons that was the rire guard,
   Nixt morning came with much to Ille.
The body of our armie a moveing was dayelie,
   And on the sixth day very soon
We marcht by the leftt and came to a heath,
   By Monsse before it was noon.
The Prince of Hesse that morning timeousse,
   Did take the lines of Giverie.
He entered not in bot lay at the line,
   Bot our armie dreu on and came nie.
The French at the line had a regiment of men,
   Who fleed to the City of Monsse.
So about noon our whole armie came,
   Enomies then did them no donsse.
Seven or eight thousand of detashed men,
   To keep passes of that line.
Which the Prince of Hesse had taken I guesse,
   By two houres of that morning.
He entred not in bot marched his men,
   Into the hights of Framiere.
The toun of Monss, was nou bloacked up,
   And our armie come to it right near.
The Duke Mallberie with the right of our armie,
   Took his quarters then at Haverie.
The leftt of our armie at Hermigenes,
   Fronting towards our enomie.
The Count Tillie that night passed he,
   Near the toun of Sant Gullian
The Prince Euginne rested his armie,
   That night on Sant Denies Hayne.
On the seventh day in the morning earlie,
   About the place called Troville
There several overtures was made of our lines,
   Which was to make them suit weelle.
In expectation our armie was then,
   To rest themselves for a day.
With constant marching and sore travelling
   Al sadly fatigued were they.
Bot after midday as our Generalls they,
   Were set at the table to dine.
They received a repporte in a haistie sorte,
   That the French advanced their line.
To ataque our armie in plaice where they lay,
   And do them a great deal of donsse.
Our General gave comande right instantlie than,
   To ramforssse the blocks about Monsse.
And al the armie to march instantlie.
   And these orders past quicklie about.
And presentlie we were al made ready,
   And the armie al turned out
Cornal Hebrons regiment camping on the left,
Marched first over the line.
And all the army in that action bussie
Marched out in a very short time.
Out over the water and towards Chiurera,
Our tents in camp yet did stand.
Bot that night bagage and tents al in haste,
Was brought up by special command.
Without any alarme we lay on our arms,
And rested all the long night.
Not far from the town we lay on the plain,
Bot the French host came not in sight
Some horse on our van advanced to Quiveran,
And some deserters did catch.
Who told that Buffelar in camp was arriv'd,
And orders had for to dispatch.
And give batel in person himselfe,
By comand of the King of France.
And all his army in batel surelie,
Their honours all to advance.
Earlie the eight day marched our army,
By the Haine of Sant Gullian.
Then we pitched camp our front oposite,
To the enemies at Quiveran.
In batel araye two hours rested we,
Upon the heights and the plain.
Waiting for to see if the enemies moved,
Whose front to the wood has come than,
About the miday our Hosaers quickly,
Encountred with a pairtie.
Behind the wood of Sart as they were advanced,
Four hundred of the enemy.
Our Hosaers assisted by our front guards,
Did take prisoners there perforce.
A Lieutenant General and some Officers,
And the number of twenty French horse.
And thretie sojors was tane prisoners,
And several deserters came in.
Major General Grovestin being sent on command,
Near the enemies camp did begin.
Perilously encountred at back of the wood,
Just near by the French armie.
About a hundred dragouns who boldly withstood
Til their Captan in batel did die.
Their Captan Comidante being slain in the spot,
And fiftie men prisoners tane.
And several dragouns received deaths wounds,
And the rest did flee off amaine.

1 Near St. Ghislain is Pont à Haine.
Kievrechain or Quivrain, and Querre-

chelin are on a tributary of the Haine.
And on the ninth day the French host in araye,
   Came up to the height of Tasseneire.
And to Longeveille right fast they reelle,
   And throu the woods did apeare.
Prince Eugine of Savoye with the Duk Malberie,
   And Munje Gosline Staits depute.
Being resolved that day the French hoste to see,
   And al the fields thereabout.
The Prince de Navair to be their cover,
   By eight acloake was detashte.
With many squadrons of our armies horsse,
   And out to the height they marcht.
Their hieness did see al the French armie,
   In plain movement coming one.
And their cavalrie acoming they see,
   Throu the wood advancing anone.
In two little woods the cavalrie enters,
   Their infantrie likewayes came one.
On the right and the lefft of thses little woods,
   They posted themselves then anone.
Their hienesse presentlie ordered the armie,
   In haiste to go to their arms.
And to march out all in batel ranke,
   Without any further allarms.
Our foradgers soon that day was called in,
   And to arms ran al our armie.
And by eleven acloak our armie marcht out,
   With trumpets sounding on hie.
Our armies right hand was posted at Sart,
   And the lefft just at Bleron.
So out from our camps in strong batel ranks,
   Our confederat armie marcht one.
The Munje Villars and the Duk of Buffelar,
   Comanded the armies of France.
In woods and vilages the ground they did chusse,
   Where our armie could not advance.
Our armie right soon planted their canone,
   And fired to a good effect.
And in the same maner the French armie there
   The time they did not neglect.
The canonading that day did begine,
   And the armies confrunted did stand.
And ready for batel the armies was all,
   Waiting for the word of comand.
The great action was the canonading,
   Which continued al afternoon.
Our lines dreu back and on arms did rest,
   When fulie set was the sun
The Holands brigade posted on the left,
   Was drawin in to the wood side.
Lying on their arms the woods for to watch,
   And so al night we did bide.
And our Generals with the Staits deputie,
   Al night togither they resst.
Stil waiting to see what the French armie
   Of war would make manifest.
Upon the tenth day the French bussilie,
   Entrenched themselves more and more.
Working in their shirts til triple entrenchments,
   They made their armies before.
A baterie good they made in the wood,
   And stronglie did fortifie.
And al that day right brisklie did play,
   The canon of either armie.
And Monjor Den Honst from Turney arived,
   And in short time after did come.
Monjor Randwick the Stats deputie,
   Of incouragement it was some.
Lieutenant General Didime that day did march,
   And troupes with him on comande
From the blocks of Monss he did lead them out,
   And atacqued with sword in hand.
On the Sant Gullian that litle wie toun,
   He took it but longer abade.
And two hundered men in that garrissoun,
   Prissoners of war they were made.
My Lord Allbimale from Turney arived,
   With a paertie of moe Generalls
From Turney citydaille the sidgers all
   Conjoyned with our armies were all.
The Comtde de Lottum that same day did come,
   And the Baron of Seulenergh to
With their detachments of horse and foot
   Our armie weel gathered was now.
The French armie was ramforced that day,
   With horsse foot and dragounes.
A hundered thousand men they were augmented,
   From several garissoune tounes.
Comanded in Chief by the Monje Villare,
   And the Duke of Buffelar also.
The Marishal Buffelar qualatie voluntar,
   Before the Kings Houshold would go.
This Chiftan bold the Kings Housholde,
   Took wiselie to lead and guide.
And the Monje Villar with noble men there,
   In time of battel to bide.
Was never an armie in any countrie,
   Was better posted then they.
Standing in a wood with artillerie good,
   By villages strong did stay.
With strong fortresses and triple entrenchments.
   Foussies half-moons and redouts.
Everything to render the post unatackable,
   Chiftains ussed in strong bouts.
On the eleventh day on the morning earlie,
   Al was ready for the batell.
And both the armies for the enterprisse,
   And so the casse it befelle.
Our General did post in the wood of Sart,
   The armie that came from Turneye.
At our armies right hand and the enomies left,
   And for a reserve they did staye.
The Prince Eugine and the Duk Malberie,
   Came rideing in the intervaille.
On the front of our armie and the enomies,
   Who fired great canon baille.
And several sojors was slain passing through,
   In presence of their Generalls.
Their Highnesses either without fear or danger,
   Past ordering al the batells.
Several times then two several mornings,
   We had prayers throu al the armie.
For aide and counsel for strength in batel,
   For our sucesse and victorie.
And then the signal for beginning batell,
   About eight acloak of the day.
Was the discharge of our artailerie,
   Our armie advanced in array.
At the same time by general comande,
   At three several pairts we ataque.
And then the smal shot in batel so hot,
   Began with many crick crake.
It were impossible to rehearse or to tell,
   The violence of that fire.
At the encountering in batel most keen,
   Of these armies meeting in ire.
Our armies ataqueing and valerous acting,
   And the defence of our foes.
Who entrenched stood in a desperate moode,
   And in bloody batell enclosse.
The French made defence and strong ressistance,
   By force of povder and ball.
Of our regiments that first did ataque,
   Many wounded and slain did fall.
The situation of the Frenche armies,
For their own defence it was good
The boued trees made strong like barires,
In several sides of a wood
Between Monsse and Momebuisse that ground they chuse,
And entrenched themselves very strong.
With blocks of trees before their nesse,
And they stood in it right long.
In trench after trench there railed the French,
And a trench to which they retire.
These triple retrenchments and blocks of trees,
Coast our Hollands armie right deare.
Our regiments was beat and sadly defeate,
They retired and railed again.
And many an ataque in the batel brake,
And railed anew on the plaine.
This strong batel and cruel assaille,
Did last for five or six hours.
And thousands of men lay dead on the plaine,
By balls stile flying in shoures.
The forwardness of our Generalls,
Of the two Comanders in Chieffe.
It far doth excelle the truth for to telle,
The comone reporte or beleaffe.
The constant presence of our Generals,
Encouraged so our armie.
That on the plain field we railed again,
In sight of our enomie.
Our enomies thought our host was defeat,
And perforce we behoved to flee
And thrue the little wood in batell persued,
By our foes we were cruelie.
The French in ire did cruelie fire,
And over the trench did advance.
In hot batel where many men fell,
Bot gained nothing by the chance.
In range of batel with many an assaille,
We encountered our enomies.
In their treple trenches we forced the Frenches,
Tho many lay dead among trees.
That cruel batel firm constant assaille,
Increased still on by degrees.
More famous deeds in bloody war weeds,
No mortal could se with their eyes
When our enomies did se with their eyes,
And our armies valour perceive.
And firm resolution to a bloody effusion,
How brisklie we did behave
Our armies defence Generals experience,
   In resisting of our foes.
The constant firing and strong encountering,
   And advancing just on to their noses.
The Prince Eugine in batell was seen,
   With his sword drawn in hand.
At the head of the Hollands infantrie,
   On foot his hieness did stand.
And on all sides we did them ataque,
   And they in trenches did stand.
The French infantrie behaved bravely,
   In batell with sword in their hand.
Several batalions of our foot did advance,
   And three squadrons of the Daines horse,
In cruel ramcountering ore they could gaine,
   A second passage of that boesse.
In this cruel assult the way being cut,
   Then entered our cavalrie.
And a cruel batel in that place befalle,
   As any man ever did see.
The best of our horse being put in disorder,
   By these the Houshold of France.
Which the Duke Malberie did presentlie see,
   And comanded new troups to advance.
And to good effect they made this assult,
   And charged them home sickerlie.
The French Houshold in disorder was put,
   And retired to their infantrie.
Our armie this time having gained of them,
   A second wood in the batelle.
They fled away thence with great diligence,
   And so the casse it befelle.
In disorder and fear the French did retire,
   And left their bagage behinde.
Some pices of canon and their amonition,
   Upon the ground we did finde.
Our armie al throu the field of batell,
   Did range with courage renewed.
The Jandarms of France being put to the worse,
   And our armie brisklie perseued.
Where one of the French in order vent off,
   Then two vent of in confusion.
The French armies right hand in trenches did stand,
   Til the batell was near a conclusion
The French armie ran to the village Quiveran,
   And a strong rire guard did bide.
And brave squadrons posted for the purpose
   At a water was their beside.
Our armie detasht and quicklie they marcht,
Eighten squadrons of our horsse.
To disperse the batel ore our enomies all,
In haiste the river did crosse,
That great Monjour the Duke of Buffelar,
In persone their he did stand.
Besides that river til his armie wan over,
He stod with the sword in his hand.
The enomies did post behind a wie boess,
And our dragouns did advance.
The Cornal de Lippe and a cornet of horsse,
Was prisoners taken by chance.
Being to far advanced and so were enhaunced,
As our armie was draweing near.
Our eighteen squadrons did range throu the plain,
And their foes vent of in a fear.
Tho long the French stood at lenght they fleed,
In three columnes they retire.
And in a minutes time they made bridging,
Over that river in their rire.
The French they ran to the vilage Quiveran,
Crost the river in great fraye.
Where their rire guards and many squadrons,
With the Duke of Buffelar did stay,
Our noble squadrons as bold as lyones,
Ranged throu the field of batelle,
And with volt face perseued the chasse,
Their foes before them fast felle.
At the village Quiveran in batel did stand,
A bregade of French infantrie.
Our horsse vent up at a great gallope,
And charged them instantlie.
So forcing them to make a bridge soon,
And passe the river in haiste.
And many a man was wounded and slain,
Some in the water was chaste.
In a cruel throng and total confusion,
In the river was wounded not few.
Our armie turned again at the vilage Quiveran,
And no farther did perseue.
The French right and left and center at last,
In thriee bodies they did flee.
Our armie ranged throu the field of batell,
Perseueing the great victorie.
Being filled with joy having gained the day,
And made their foes for to flee.
Which made the jurney seem most glorious,
And compleated al the victorie.
The Prince Eugine in the head got a wound,
When first the action began.
Yet his hieness did stand sword draun in hand,
Til he this great batel wan.
Sometimes on the front of the infantrie,
In batel he took the comand.
Sometimes on the head of the cavalrie,
His hieness was pleased to stand.
To prevent the disorder of the one and the other,
That day with conduct and skille.
While the Duke Malberie new troupes did raillie
Which marvelous things did fulfille.
AI broken troupes he caused draw up.
And keept them for a reserve.
Ay waiting til they did gain victorie,
In order he did them preserve.
By the sage presence and wise governance,
Of these General persons two.
In this glorious jurney we got victorie,
And so overcame our proud foe.
In Prince Eugines presence both men and horsse
That day was slain and dung dead.
By the enomies baterie oft passed he,
Out throue the armie with speed,
The Prince Euginae with Officers moe,
And Generalls in the battell.
To the admiration of al people then,
Did marvelous things for to tell.
All the passages of several atacques,
Was marvelous for to see.
The gratest battell on this day befell,
That ever in world could be.
We have to regret by certain report,
The great loss in our armie,
Off brave Generalls and Officers ellse,
Who there in battell did die.
On that day was slain the Count Oxenstern,
Tatau Pendergrasse and Liloe.
Lantahlem and the Baron of Hauben,
And severall Generalls moe.
In battell was wounded the Count of Harack,
Wakerbert Weeb Fagell and Spare.
May and Lauder1 My Lord Montandere,
And Lord Lumlie in the War.
Prince Nassau Woodburgh was also wounded,
Monje Robright wounded allso.

1 Previously wounded at Steinkirk and Ramillies and elsewhere. See vol. ii. pp. 17 and 80.
Meeterall and Delsupex into the same place,
   And many brave Officers moe.
The French armies loss of both men and horsse,
   Was thought to be greater by far.
The Houshold of France was sadly defeat,
   And losst many in that war.
Their best infantrie destroyed mightilie,
   And losst into that battell.
Besides a great number was tane prissoners,
   All to their loss it befeell.
The Marquess Ambignie they lost certanlie,
   And the Prince Lambece perchance.
Both grand children to the Prince Armagne,
   The greatest Esquire in France.
And several pices of their canons,
   That day was left on the field.
And many a standart and many collours,
   To our armie in battell they yeald.
Monje Chemeralt in battel was killed,
   Palavicin Lieutenant Generall.
The Marquess de Latrec the Cavalier de Croy,
   And many not named at all.
The Felt Mershall Monje de Villar,
   Was sadly wound on the knee.
The Marques de Coaquin and Signaleytoo.
   Got broken legs by the plie.
Monje Pugeon and Albergottie,
   Was wounded dangerouslie.
At Malplake on that battell day,
   Did many a brave man die.
Many Generals and chief Officers,
   Comanding the French infantrie.
A cruel slaughter as ever befelle,
   Was the battel of Malplakie.
About Longveille along al the field,
   Both men and horsse did ly dead.
In numbers great which caused regret,
   To after beholders indeed.
The cruell slaughter the product of war,
   The death and dessolation.
Off brave Generals and chief Officers,
   May be for a lamentation.
Some brave Scotish men in batel was slain,
   Both of mean and of noble degree.
And brave English men under the comand,
   Of the great Duke of Malberie.
Off France and Spain the Dons many ones,
   And the seigniour of Jermanie.

1 An Italian officer in the French service.
The Dutch and Swize and Irish and Daines,
   Was slaughtered most cruellie.
A great deal of land covered with dead men
   Which was great pitie to see.
In hedges and ditches the dead lay in heaps,
   At a wood side many did die.
The trees of the wood was guilded with blood,
   Hospitales with wounded was filled.
Since the war began such a number of men,
   In one day was never killed.
Four regiments of foot camping on the left,
   Under Brigadire Dowglass comand.
Upon the left of al the Dutch horsse,
   In camp we were then to stand.
Cornall Hebrons regiment and my Lord Tilibairnes,
   All Scotsmen noble and true.
And Meterals Swize and Pallands Dutch,
   Upon their foes to perseue.
When the armie all marcht out to battell,
   In noble rank and arraye.
Then our bregade marched on the left,
   And all our collours displaye.
When al our lines for batel did forme,
   And toward their foes did advance.
And the French armie for batel readie,
   For defence of the Kingdom of France.
Then our bregade advanced to the wood,
   And marched along the wood side.
To keep the passes from suden charasses,
   Our orders was there to bide.
The two armies confronnted did stand,
   That night and all the nixt day.
We lay on our arms ay waiting on orders,
   And the canon brisklie did play.
The French was working and bussie entrienching,
   And fortiefication did make.
Our armie to wrack if we did ataque,
   For defence that method they take.
We were made ready on the batell day,
   And then our picket calt out
The bregades picket marcht up throu the wood
   With manly courage and stout.
After the signall given for the battell,
   Our lines began to drau near.
Both horsse and foot the armie throughout
   In ordour began for to stear.
Our Cornall and Major in a very good order,
   Dreu us on along the wood side.
And our enomies was hiveing like bees,
Stronglie entrenched did bide
Then came an edicane on horsseback rideing,
To our Major ordours gave he
That the regiment on sight should close to the right
And advance on our enomie.
Our Cornall and Major and the regiment after,
Did presentlie break throu a hedge.
We formed platouns advanceing at anes,
And in a strong batell engadge.
And so did advance on the enomies trench,
With shouting for the battell.
The French from their trench fired so thick,
That many men droped and fell.
Many wounded and slain in a very short time,
Our men in great number did fall,
Til our regiment was beat and sadlie defeate,
Many knockt doun with the French ball.
Our brigads picket advanced throu the wood,
And on their foes did ataque.
On the right hand of the French armie,
In battell they proved not slack.
With shot and baginets on the French trench,
They advanced with courage most bold.
And from their first trench stood some of the French
No longer could they it hold.
But the rest of the trenches filled with Frenches,
Beset our picket right sair.
Our mens amunition in short time was done,
And no releafe they got there.
Some pairt of our picket in batel there died,
Being slain by the enomie.
And in despaire hardlie beeset there,
The rest was forced to flee.
In this batell hot was the cruelest shot
That ever in world was seen.
And our enomies in great multieplies,
Crouded in batell most keen.
Our regiments right hand was not able to stand
So many was slain and dung doun.
And many wounded men away being tane
None brought to fill up their room.
Our regiments left hand did by the wood stand
Bot had not the half of the loss.
Up to the French trench then did they advance,
On their foes who was standing closse.
And as our regiment inclined to the left,
In number we were very few.
Which our foes did behold and waxed more bold,
  Out over their trench did persue
In broken araye our regiment gave way,
  And pice and pice did retire.
The French cruelie at that they wannie,
  They martired doun on our rire.
Our lieutenant Cornal 1 was wounded right sair,
  And was not able to flee.
The French presentlie they did him overhie,
  And as soon as they came him nie.
His gold purse and watch he quicklie pulled out,
  And they from him did it take.
He beged of them in the French own tongue,
  To give him quarters for godsake.
So into the wood they quicklie him hurled,
  He thinking to get some remeade.
So for an officer he began for to call,
  Instantlie they stobed him dead.
Our Cornall Hebron in battel was slain,
  And Lieutenant Cornall Hamiltoun.
And Major Campbell 2 in frount of batell,
  Received a grivious wounde
Out throu the head our Cornall was shot,
  And without longer delaye.
Men gathered about and then took him up,
  And carried his corps away.
The Major by a shot got his arm broke,
  Right near to his shoulder bone.
And from the batell he got of himselff
  And a man waiting him upon.
Lieutenant Ronalds and Seatoun and antient Henderson
  Was al killed dead in the place.
And Captan Tassie 3 McFerlin and Heartı,
  Died all within a short space.
The Captains Ogilvie 4 McQueen 5 and Kenadie, 6
  Was wounded in the battell.
And antient Crauford was griviouslie hurt,
  And doun to the ground he fell.
And was caried away in great jeopardie,
  And tane to the hosspitall.

1 John Hamilton.
2 Campbell, though promoted to the command of Tullibardine's regiment, died in a few months. His name has thus been omitted from the list in vol. i. p. xxxv, probably owing to his having died before final confirmation by the States.
His leg and thigh bone being broken in twain,
    He died shortlie after all.
And Captan Hoom\(^1\) received a wound,
    And Lieutenant Campbell also.
Lieutenant Pinkertoun and antient McLaude,
    Wounded from the battell did go.
And many a man we had wounded then,
    And others did take them awaye.
And bot very few men in our regiment was than
    Along by our collours to stay.
As we did retire in disordour and fear,
    Our collours was like to be tane.
Yet by several men they were caried one
    And wan saffe out to the plain.
My Lord Tilibairne was then advanceing,
    And his regiment at his back.
Upon our left hand by generall comande
    They ordered were to atacque.
In this cruel battell right thus it befell,
    Ful many was instantlie slain.
And so being beat and sadlie defeate,
    They retired al out to the plain.
The Marquess Tiliebairn\(^2\) in batel was slain
    And the Lieutenant Cornall Swintoun\(^3\)
And Captan Graime\(^4\) was killed that time,
    And a Captan called James Broun.\(^5\)
A deal of their officers killed likewayes,
    And both their standarts was tane.
Having lost their collours along the wood side,
    They were forssed to retire to the plain.
So all the bregade in batel engadged,
    And was al beat off to the plain.
The field officers and chief onleaders,
    Al in the batell was slain.
Upon the nixt ground at our regiments right hand
    The Hollands bleu guards did advance.
The French batterie upon them did play
    Which did them a cruel mischance.
Till heaps of men lay dead on the plain,
    Which was great pitie to see.
A strong half moon the Frenches stood in,
    Where many a man did die . .
Within the half moon the Frenches did stand,
    Till many of them was slain.

\(^3\) Vol. ii. p. 22.  \(^4\) Vol. ii. p. 31.
\(^5\) Vol. ii. p. 22.
And tho the bleu guards very many had losst,
    They atacqued again and again.
Al the Holland foot did sadlie pay for it,
    And many in batel did die.
This fourtie year so great loss in weir,
    Was not in their infantrie.
Our Scotish regiments serving in the English
    Were engadged in batel also.
Lieutenant Cornall Crankstoun\(^1\) in batell was slain
    And many brave officers moe.
Our Scotish Dragouns upon the right wing,
    Stood of our British armie.
So they in batell boldlie did assaile,
    At the battell of Malleplackie.
Many of our horsse in paittance perforce
    No passage they had to advance.
Under the canon ball they behoved to stand,
    And sadlie was grived at the chance.
Some expected ordour in the batell hour,
    That Dragouns would atacque upon foot.
Bot the Scots Dragouns al in their squadrons,
    On horsse back was ordered to sit.
The Earle of Staire in person was there,
    Comanding the Scotish Dragounes.
And Sir James Campbell\(^2\) their Lieutenant Cornall
    Did ordour them in squadrouns.
The Scots Dragouns when in batel engadged,
    In bravery they did excelle.
When the houshold of France on them did advance
    And joyned in bloody batell.
A French officer in that ramcounter,
    Meet Cornall Campbell indeed
Then with fair play and without delaye,
    The Cornall stroke of his head.
The Houshold of France was good men and horsse
    And near broke the Scotish Dragouns.
A cruel ramcounter on that day was seen,
    In batell between the squadrons
The general Mallborie to that had an eye,
    And sent suplie very soon.
More squadrons of horsse he caused advance,
    And noble actions was done.
Til the French was beat and sadlie defeat,
    And forced in batell to flee.
The Jandarms of France they had a great loss,
    At the batell of Malleplackie.

\(^1\) See vol. ii. p. 21.
\(^2\) Brother of Major Campbell, and one of the officers to whom this book is dedicated.
The French right hand entrinched did stand,
    Their horsse drew up in their rire.
T'il at the last that all the French host,
    In disordour was forc'd to retire.
We the broken regiments on our armies left,
    Did stand in good fille and ranck.
Our Granadires march we boldly did beat,
    And still the wood side we did flank.
Our regiments comander was Captan Litester,¹
    And Lieutenant Maclaude also.
And Lieutenant Scot and two antient Hebrons
    Unwounded we had no moe.
And antient McQueen and Donald McQueen,
    Who had our collours in hand.
And about a hundered men I think we were,
    Round about our Collours to stand.
And Brigadire Dowglass² was wounded like ways,
    In field he could not then bide.
Bot being dreest away in all haisste
    He from the battell did ride.
Major Generall Hamiltoun³ took the comand,
    Of that near broken brigade.
And his edicane on horsback he came,
    He seemed a dark colloured lad.
In the Generals name he did us commande,
    On the enomie to atacque.
And for the honor of our native countrie
    A new assaut we must make.
And Hebrons regiment was formost to march
    Along doun by the wood side.
Our officers slain we were bot feu men,
    About our standarts to bide.
Then pice and pice we began to advance,
    Which our enomie well did see.
And began to fire up on us in ire,
    And the ball among us did flie.
Several of our men was hurt there againe,
    And the rest a litele did fear.
Our neighbours the Swize made for us place,
    So did a litele retire.
Closse by the wood side in order we bade,
    On the left wing of the armie.
The Granadires march we several times beat,
    Which our enomies well did see.
Lieutenant Haliburton was yet safè and sound,
    With us again did advance.

Bot antient Denune had got a smal wound,
And was passed from us thence
Our Sarjant Major he took mickle caire,
To plant sentries in the wood.
And so it befell that with a French ball,
He was shot throu the bacood.
The French armie from their left did flee,
And went off in a great route.
Which al our armie then bravely did see,
And for joy we gave a great shoutte.
The German armie before wrought bussie,
And cuted a pass throu the wood.
So first they wan throu yet enough had to doe,
With the French their put to make good.
Til our English armie did act nobelie,
And a pasage got made and wan throu.
The jandarms of France being put to the worsse
And in batell was killed not few.
The French armie then partlie did flee,
And to the right made their repaire.
Some of our armie then shouted for joy,
Some throu their hatts in the aire.
Major General Hamelton on horsseback came doun,
And an officer of the traine.
They wieued the ground and presentlie than,
They brought two canon amain.
And in al haiste these horsse they loussed,
And the constables with all speed
Fired the canon with a lam lam dum,
This helped us weel in our need.
The canon again we fitched amain,
And dreu them to a fit place.
And three several times we discharged them,
Ore: our enomies did take the race.
Lieutenant McLaude in order right good,
With our regiment he did advance.
And at the wood nock right near to the French,
We waited a litele perchance.
The French armie they kendeled strae,
And raissed up a great smick:
And presentlie they haissted awaye,
And we saw not for the rike.
Our regiment then marcht to the right hand,
And as the bregade took their place.
With joyful hearts out over thes trenches,
We advanced in a short space.
Then al the French hoast away they were fleed,
And our armie advanced on their ground.
In field of batell where long they did duelle,
    Than none bot dead men was found.
The left of our armie al night did lie,
    Beyound the field of batell.
Not far from the right of our enemies trench,
    Where that cruel slaughter befelle.
Of this batell and hou it befelle,
    It far surpasseth my airte.
When I have writen al that I can,
    I omite the hundered pairte.
That night at even with wagons anone,
    We convoyed our wounded awaye.
Into the villages in great multitudes,
    Our hurt and wounded they laye.
The corps of our Cornal and Lieutenant Cornall,
    In a wagon was brought to that place.
And the nixt morning at their burying,
    Was many a woefull alace.
Their graves was made on the front of the regiment,
    And they were interred in clay.
In bed of honour they lay at this houre,
    Both killed they were in a day.
Our armies tents that night was brought up,
    And the camp was pitched indeed.
The wounded and hurt away they were pute,
    And we buried a pairt of the dead.
Captain Patersoune \(^1\) being Faggells edicane,
    Our regiment over he led.
Over the ground where the French armie stood,
    But the French armie they were fleed.
Three wagons also he did us procure,
    To cary our wounded awaye.
And al the night long they were drauing them,
    And the morning of the nixt day.
On the tuelth day at noon the orders came,
    Al the armie to march back againe.
And so we did march back to our old ground,
    And the French came to bury the slain.
A comande came alonge by permissione,
    Some chieff officers to begraffe.
But they nor we then did not tarie,
    To bury the dead by the halffe.
The bovers was burieing long afterhinde,
    And puting the dead in the ground.
For al the countrie was oblided surelie,
    To bury al dead could be found.

\(^1\) See vol. ii. p. 40 note.
Our Regiments valats was throun in heaps,
   Before the battell begane.
Our Cornal did ordour for to leave them there,
   And win and wear them who can.
After the batell a comande was sent theire,
   And keepe the bagage al night.
And with our bae horsse it was al got upe,
   Nixt morning with the day light.
Our armie at Havrie again they did lie,
   The vallour of nine or ten dayes.
The most of our work was keeping the hurte,
   And transporting them several wayes.
It was pitie to see our Hollands armie,
   Their number it was so thine.
And very few tents set up in a regiment,
   And few men to lie thereine.
The armies of our allies they had a great loss,
   Twentie thousand eightie and two.
And the French armie they lost as some saye,
   Eighten thousand and some moe.
Bot no just account could ever be got,
   And the lists could never agree.
For wounded men was dailie dieing,
   Which was great pitie to see.
As the wounded men was still removeing,
   And caried from place to place.
With excessive pains of their broken bones,
   They scriched and cryed alace.
The Generall Faggel aloued a village,
   For al our wounded and hurt
And still some men was there on comande,
   With arms to be for their scurt.
When our regiments wounded togither was gathered
   And in waggons brought to that place.
The housses and yeards with hurt men was filled,
   And they were in a sad casse.
Tilibairens corps was taken to Brissels,
   And buried into the same toun.
In bed of honour and martall grandour,
   Like a noble man of renoune.
They had a designe for his body transporting,
   To his own native Nation.
And to bury him by his predecessours
   According to his hie station
Bot his bloody wounds so badly perfumes
   His body they could not weel keep
So they buried him with fame and renoune,
   And friends al for him did weep
Our Major was then with the wounded men,
   And dress'd by the Doctors there
His cruel pain and dangerous wound,
   Tormented his honour right sair
It was thought fit him for to transporte,
   To the noble Earl of Stair
Where his dear brother and also his doctor,
   Might of his body take cair
Twelve men on command was presentlie called,
   On the threten day of September.
So we carried him alongs al the line,
   On that afternoon I remember.
With the Earl of Stair when that he lay there,
   By the generals advice and consent.
Cornalls comission they for him procure,
   Off the Lord Tilibairns regiment.
The Brigadire Douglass obtained likewayes,
   The grant of Hebrons regiment.
That regiment to him it was aloued then,
   His preferent for to augment.
Bot al their comissions was held in suspense
   Till Staits and Counsells did hear.
And in our old ordor we continued ever,
   Til it was far in the year.
Al the broken regiments that was in the camp,
   Was ordered al to garissouns.
And new regiments was ordered for camp,
   To march from several touns.
On the sixten day that broken armie,
   From the camp came marching awaye
And by Saint Denies that night we camp,
   And marched againe the nixt day.
Throu the pass we came in the morning soon
   Then marched along al the heath
And in the evening our camp was set down,
   About a long lig from Atthe
And the nixt day we marched on aye,
   And camped at the village Luze.
A quarter of a loaf for every mans usse,
   From Atthe was brought up to uss.
The nixt day soon we marched againe,
   And camped at night by Turneye.
Then we marched weel and came into Leille,
   Of that moneth the twentieth day.
The broken regiments being marched from camp,
   All into the garissoune touns.
And new regiments were marched to camp,
   For to make up all their roomes.
The wounded and hurt awaye being put,
   And sent into hospitaells all.
To Brissels Antewerpe and Loven,
   These tounes were filled full all.
The truth for to say some died by the way,
   And others were keept and cured.
And some with pains of their broken bones,
   A cruell torments endured.
Cornal Hebron's regiment and the Lord Tillibairns,
   This time was sent into Leille
And at Port Mories they sent us to barocks,
   And there we lay pretie weel.
We mounted parades and all the toun guards,
   Untill the campine it was done.
Two men of each companie was sent into Coutrie,
   Of each companie lay in the toun
And at the red bridge we keep a guarde,
   And releaved it once in a week.
And our officers took men on comande,
   Their oune comissions to seek.
Some to Coutrie went and some to the camp,
   And some to the Hagge they did ride.
To seek out comissions some better than others,
   A long time there they did bide.
On the Ninetenth of September our armie together,
   Removed and advanced to the toun.
And with double lines and warlike engines,
   A close sidge then was set down.
A noble train was brought up amaine,
   And the siders bussilie wrought.
In breaking of ground before that strong toun,
   And their foradge was very far sought.
Our great armie foradged far and nie,
   Weel guarded al round about.
And the French armie they durst not come nie,
   To ataque our armie so stout.
This toun of Monss besidged was close,
   And the siders al round it did lie.
With works and engines and martial designs,
   The water at Monss for to drie.
The water about Monss in great quantaties,
   Overfloues by the city near round.
That men of weire they can not win near,
   Bot in a danger to droune.
That city strong was hard to be wonne,
   And wee well fortified roune about.
Aboundance of canon and amonition,
   They had for to keep it out.
No maner of work the sidgers could get,
   Bot at two ports of the toun.
And very strong forts without thes ports,
   And the water it doth them soroune.
This city stout hath hills round about,
   And fortifications right strong.
The sidgers without right bussilie wrought,
   The sidge endured right long.
And four bateries the sidgers did raiisse,
   On a hill upon the east side
Which fired constantlie upon the city,
   On the walls none was able to bide.
And day and night these sidgers they wrought,
   Ay nearer and nearer thes ports.
And made al ready with dexteratie,
   For a storm upon the two forts.
Then on a strong fort without the toun port
   They made an ataque on a night.
Where many was slain and into the toun,
   The Frenche was forced take flight.
This sidge most strong continued one,
   And the sidgers wrought bussielie.
And in a nights time by constant working,
   They raiassed a strong baterie.
And then the canon they planted thereon,
   In that fort not far from the toun.
And then the horn works was nixt to the port
   Our canons was batering doun
The Frenche the toun did boldlie defende,
   And fired canon illk day
And likeways smal shot did fire al night,
   Many slain on ground they did lay.
From the ninetenth of the moneth September,
   Til the twenty one day of October.
This toun it held out with courage most stout,
   And then they did give it over.
The twenty one day it was I heard say,
   The Frenches did beat the shemade.\(^1\)
And by capitulation did give up the toun,
   And marched off in a bregade.
The general capitelation condecended upon,
   At surendering the city of Monsse.
To their hie puissances the estates Generals,
   Off the unitted Provinces.
In the first article by consent mutualle,
   It was made for the conservation.
Of religion Catholick, Roman Aposstolick,
   And their most saffe preservation.

\(^1\) See p. 477.
The free exercisse of al the offices,
    Of them in ecclesiall station.
The they changed Governours by martial overtures,
    Yet the Clergie had free tolleration.
In the second article to the hie Allies will,
    The city was now to surender.
Bot eight dayes time they demanded then,
    For securatie of the defender.
And then to surender if they were not releaved
    By the armyes of the two crouns.
Bot this was denied and after agreed,
    And brought within the said bounds.
From eight acloak in the morning October twentie one,
    Untill the twentie third day.
Even at the same time al kind of French men,
    Was to march without further delaye.
In the third articele aggreed thereintill,
    It was a cessation of arms.
The French in the toun and our armie al round,
    Was to do to other no harms.
And strong barires with locks bars and keyes,
    Stood weel clossed them between.
As the Allies came in without noisse or dine,
    No kind of disorder was seen.
The Monje Due de Croy Governour and Bailley,
    Off al that Provence lay roune.
The Marquess Gremaldi Lieutenent Generall
    And comander of the toun.
Don Antonie Gremaldi 1 Lieutenent Generall,
    And the second comedant.
And the noble Prince Francis de Nassau,
    A great Marisshal of the camp.
Dom Pedro de Zuigna 2 another Marisshal of camp,
    And al their whole Brigadires.
Both of their infantrie and their cavalrie,
    With al Officers and gran peires.
And al the sojours cavillers and dragouns,
    Of the troupes of these two crouns.
And who was there belonged to Bavaire,
    From camps or from garissounes.
And al the Officers and the aide Majors,
    And the Stait Major of the touns.
And al the kinds of Officers and sojors,
    Of the artaillerie of the two crouns.
And al ingenires that belonged to Bavaire,
    And al Officers of the King.
And Monje the Compt de Bergiock General,
    Ministers of War in that Winge.

1 The Marquis Grimaldi had a nephew with him in Mons.—Marlborough Despatches, vol. iv. p. 630.
2 M. Zuniga, 'a Lieut.-General to the French king.'
And al comissoners in dispensing their wars,
    And threasurers to their troupes all.
Doctours of Medicines Churirgons Potichares,
    And Directours of their hospitall,
And al sorts of persons that there was employed,
    In the service of the two crouns.
Without exception of any persone,
    Named or not named in the boundes.
Al at Nimi port they were to pass out,
    By ten acloke in the forenoon.
Al troupes of France to march to Mumbuisse,
    And so were ordered soon.
The Spanish troupes and those of Bavaries,
    They were to march to Namuire.
And four dayes time was allowed on them,
    And a saffe convoye and a sure.
Al their equiepages bag and bagage,
    Their arms amonition and all.
Their drums beating and collours flourishing
    And in every mans mouth a ball.
And ten pice of canon al of twentie ponders,
    And four good morters also.
Al double cartoves and their cariages,
    Along with them were to go.
The Compte de Bergeick and Monje de Brockeen,
    Were to stay still in the toun.
To order the affaires of the toun of Monsse,
    And of the countrey all rounde.
This capitelation was al agreed then,
    In articles twenty and two.
How the French Officers and their equipages,
    How and when they were to go.
And horsses with them for drauing their train,
    And al things out of the toun.
And their wounded men they left al behinde,
    Untill they were saffe and soune.
And days and times allowed on them,
    Til they were recovered and weell.
And our Generals and Chief comanders,
    The capitelation did seall.
October the twentie sealed Eugine of Savoye,
    And the Prince and Duc Mallberie.
And Monje Randwick and Monje de Hoosse,
    And Gossline the Staits deputie.
The French Generals then subscribed the same,
    Monje Vegelin of Claerbergen.
And the Marquess called Seva Grimaldi,
    These al have sealed the same.
The Duc of Arsscot in Monss he was put,
That touns Governour for to be.
And regiments with him the same to defende,
Comanded from our armie.
The Duc Albiemalle hath the comand all,
And is Governour in Turneye.
Both Turney and Monss the Frenches hath losst,
And are banisshed from them awaye.
Our armie then having planted the toun,
And began to repaire the same.
In the King name Charles of Spaine,
The city Monss in obedience came.
Shortlie afFter this our armie they marcht,
And camped on Cameron plaine.
Al in good array several dayes they did stay,
And then did closse the campine.
When the moneth October was al passed over,
Then our armie al did dismisse.
Near the month later end closed the campine,
The fields being bare of al blisse.
So being detasht our armie all marcht,
From camp into garissouns.
And marched each day the readiest way,
Unto many several touns,
Two stately touns Turney and Monsse,
This year our armie did wine.
And a field batel called Longaveille,
The French was beat of the grund.
At Longaveille into that battell,
Our Hollands armie did tine.
Eight thoussand good men in batell slain,
Nine hundered ninety and nine.
The English and Jermans eight thoussand did losse,
And likeways of good cavalrie.
Two thoussand were losst killed in the place,
In al nineten thoussand did die.
Yet our armie victorious did afterwards flourish,
As the best informed do tell.
Ful thretie thoussand they increased stronger,
Then when they engadged in batell.
The French armie they losst very many,
And many were prissoners tane.
And many Officers and their onleaders,
Who in print are expressed by name.
Throughout al this weir year after year,
The French were forssed to flee.
And pice and pice our armies advanced,
And conquered al the countrie.
This years campine let us clesse with the time,
In October the nine and twentie.
Our armie then marcht to garissounes,
With trumpets sounding on hie.
Two regiments of men to Leile did come ine,
On the thretty day of October.
And two regiments away they did march,
With manly conduct and sober.
The Prince of Holsstine to Leile he did come,
At the upbreaking of the campine.
With his equipages and al his lackies,
In al their mounting most fine.
A new loadging for him was abuilding,
And their his hieness did stay.
Near the port Defever with ston and timber,
This lodging was builded right gay.
The second of November two regiments togither,
Came marching into Leile toun.
Threeten or fourten regiments we were then,
Ordoreed to keep garissoun.
Two Scots regiments Hebrons and Tilibairnes,
In Leile behaved to bide stille.
To do our deutie without any suplie,
And al their comands to fulfille.
The Prince gave comande to these regiments than,
To do deutie with the resst.
Bot one night in bed some companies had,
So the weakest was sadly opresst.
The orders did come to each garissoun toun,
To fire a brave victorie.
For our arms prosspering throu al the campine,
And the sucesse of our armie.
So in Leile toun al the garissoun,
In arms marched to the wall.
And al the canon three times fired round,
And likewayes we mussquatires all.
November fiveten right late in the even,
Was Captan Monjes reinforcement
Drums covered with black before the corps beat,
To the kirk of the wie citydaille.
Sixtie granadires comanded with arms,
Marcht before the corps to the grave.
Three times we did fire at the funerall,
And like brave lads did behave.
Captan Litster was our regiments comander,
Under our Major Campbell.

1 See vol. ii. p. 40.
Who was our Cornall or chief comander,
    No man could perfectlie tell.
Then Captan Cathcart did come up from Gaint,
    And a Lieutenant Dundasse.
And that comand to the regiment came back,
    Who in Holland garissoues was.
Full two campines the Lieutenant Dundasse,
    With his comand was awaye.
And Captan Cathcart and another comande,
    At Gaunt and Cess they did staye.
Then al these comands from garissoun toues,
    Was sent back to their regiment.
And some wounded men with them came along,
    Our companies for to augment.
The Captan Cathcart as chief comidante,
    The regiment he did rewieve.
The twentieth fifth day of the moneth November,
    Our companies to the wall dreue.
And in companies we stood in a hedge,
    And was rewieved on the wall.
And an exact lisst of absent and present,
    And the names and number of all.
Some new serjants on companies placed,
    And ordered to their dutie.
And likewayes account of al vacant posts,
    That was in each companie.
Al changed arms in times of batells,
    Was ordered to be tane ine.
For half a doller a pice to the right owners,
    Where they their own arms did finde.
When long the Officers had waited for possts,
    And comissions had layn in suspence.
And many cadies had dazelled their eyes,
    In waiting for a recompence.
The Brigadire Douglass was established,
    The Cornal of Hebrons regiment.
And nixt unto him was Captan Gibsone,1
    For Lieutenant Cornall was sent.
MacQuen2 by his touer cleamed to be Major,
    And so al doun by degrees.
Home ;3 Guterie :4 and Hebron5 to Captans did wine,
    And assigned to their companies.
And Lieutenant Halliburton6 was also preffered,
    The youngest Captan to be.

1 See vol. ii. p. 47.
2 Vol. ii. p. 35.
3 Vol. ii. p. 47.
4 Ibid.
5 Vol. ii. p. 43.
6 Vol. ii. p. 49.
And to go to Scotland for the recruiting,
   With Officers of each degree.
Lieutenant McClaude¹ was also preferred,
   A Captan Lieutenant to be.
And Brigadire Douglass gave him the charge,
   To oversee his own companie.
And several cadies received commissions,
   And on the first day of December.
From the city of Leile they took journey all,
   Al these cadies I remember.
And the most of them was sent a recruiting,
   For Brigadire Douglass regiment.
Al new Officers that received commissions,
   To Scotland they were to be sent.
And several of them disappointed was then,
   And got no commissions at all.
A new Officer and some for serjants,
   The Brigadire sent up withall.
And likewise a letter which ordered all,
   The three youngest serjants to prison.
Except that they would take a corporals paye,
   And the serjants halbert fling doun.
Til a counsel of war one after another,
   Restored them all to their places.
Without a fault they could them not break,
   The Law did favour their casses.
Major John Campbell was established Cornall,
   Of the Lord Tillibairens regiment.
After the battell from the Generall,
   His comission unto him was sent.
In the Earle of Stairs quarters he lay several dayes,
   Till the sidge of Monss was set doun.
Then in his own cheese he was taken thence,
   And caried into Brissels town.
Cornal Hebrons coach and also two horsse,
   Was keept in his custodie.
A loading in Brissels was for him prepared,
   And the weekly rent payed he.
And Doctor Kennadie still with him did stay,
   Labouring his wound for to cure.
And ussed all means in applying medicines,
   So long as his life did endure.
His pages and servants and several friends,
   Day and night did wait him upon.
Many Scots Officers was paying him vissits,
   Till al his lifetime was gone.

Unto the regiment wherein he long served,
   He had the greatest desire.
To his own country men a love he bare stille,
   Till all his days did expire.
Bot the Stait Generalls in several counsells,
   Gave him Tillibairns regiment.
And Brigadire Douglass of Hebrons maid choisie,
   By the General Murrayes consent.
Tho they in camp received commissions,
   Shortlie after the batelle.
And before the Stait it was ratified,
   As the best informed do tell.
Tho Cornal Campbell had friends at counsell,
   There dayelie for him to plead.
Yet at the Hagle in several counsells,
   This procese on they did lead.
With generals decreets then al pairties,
   Might be contented right weel.
And both the regiments behoved to submite,
   Al winter to lye in Leile.
Bot Cornal Campbell being wounded so ille,
   And very weak of bodie.
And from the bed was not able to risse,
   And death approched him nie.
Tho stille Officers of both the regiments,
   Sent letters unto him by possists.
And all his doctours and onewaiters,
   Spent large enough on his cossts.
Being used to travell he did take the gravell,
   Which grived him very sore.
And the gravell ston increased still one,
   His pain increased still more.
No passage of urine he got a long time,
   By lay in sad agonie.
His wound did not heal bot putrayed still,
   Untill the day he did die.
His arm broken so near his body,
   It could not be taken away.
Bot plaister after plaister aplied theretill,
   And he by degrees did decaye.
It was no marvell for of his gravell,
   Remidie there could be got none.
Tho some said ever that he would recover,
   Til al his lifetime was gone.
Ful earnestlie to God prayed he,
   For to forgive al his sin.
His cruel rash swearing he could not forbear,
   Was then a griffe unto him.
He lay a long time in trouble extreame,
   On death he offten did thinke.
Al earthy things was useless to him,
   Bot some litle cordial drink.
The day and hour apointed are sure,
   When every man he must die,
None can gainstand when he comands,
   Nor change Gods blessed decree.
Upon the last night of the moneth November,
   Cornall John Campbell did die.
And al his friends did sadly lament,
   Who did it hear of or see.
Shortlie after this along with the posst,
   A letter was sent up to Leile.
Which gave at length the acount of his death,
   Our Officers then knew it weele.
All his country men who weel did him keen,
   Lamented right sadly indeed.
Especialie them who long time with him,
   Had served and goten their bread.
A letter was sent away in all haiste,
   His brother James to informe.
Who at Roterdam was found at the time,
   Having busines for to performe.
For grieffe of heart for sorow and smart
   The noble man was confussed.
For his dear brother who he loved weell,
   For al the means could be ussed.
He was then dead no other remeade,
   To death submitt al we must.
For in short time death shal bring doun,
   And equal al with the dust.
As men do come in Gods oun time,
   To the world both naked and bare,
So in like maner must they return,
   As Divine Scripture declare.
Death makes separation of every relation,
   None together in world can stay.
Nothing we brought in the world with us,
   And nothing we cary away.
It is vain for us mortal men,
   To freet repine or to murne.
Since God at first made man of the dust,
   And to dust shal he return.
Since Adam first did sin commit,
   There hath died many a man.
The strong nor wise can not gainstand,
   With al the art they can.
Comanders of our armies all,
Within short time must die.
No strength of hand can death gainstand,
The swiftest canot flee.
Therfore let us with patience,
To God submit our casse.
And chierfulie let’s live or die,
In Gods apointed place.
Desireing God of his free grace,
To bring us to his Glore.
Where we shal happie be and blisst,
And live for evermore.
All worldly prefferments shal ceasse,
Within a few years space.
For death doth come on every man,
In Gods own time and place.
Lieutenant Cornal Campbell sent a leter,
And the charge of the funerall.
To my Lord Cumberland his own sister son,
He entirely comited it all.
This Scots nobleman my Lord Bocarus son,
He was then in Brissels toun.
And for the death of his dear Uncle,
The tears they came trinceling doun.
He was a Captan in the Royall regiment,
A pretie young man and a tall.
And unto him it did then belonge,
All the charge of that funerall.
Cornall John Campbell they did enbouelle,
And took his entrails all out.
And al his friends gathered in the room,
In weeping made a great shout.
The gravell stons was found out then,
Had been the causse of his death.
In number four all increased more,
Till they had stopt his breath.
A little coffen was provided soon,
Wherein his entraells were put.
The Doctors work that work dexterous,
In stiching his bellie was cut.
His burying place then provided was,
In a cloisster of the Capieshines.
And for burieall at good rates they sell,
And with it augmenteth their means.
A shirecloth good for him they have made,
And wraped about his bodie.
A brave coffen they put him therein,
Al daintiely graithed was he.

1 Lord Cumberland’s mother was a daughter of the second Earl of Roxburghe.
Douglas’s Peerage, vol. i. p. 171.
On the second day of the moneth December,
   About six acloak of the night.
Was the buriall of Cornall John Campbell,
   And the torches shined ful bright.
His corps in coach along they did march,
   The streets to the buring place.
Seven hired coaches al filled with friends,
   Al marching with a slou pace.
Four Minzie brothers vent at the coach doors,
   With burning flamboes in hand.
And sixtie granadires with burning flamboes,
   Al in order vent by comand.
And every granadire that flamboes did bear,
   Had aloued upon him a croun.
So Cornall Campbell got his burieall,
   Like a noble man of renoun.
For hired coaches and everything elsse,
   Was aloued payment at large.
A thousand pound as I am informed,
   Defrayed not his funeral charge.
Into Brissels toun among the noble clan
   Stands the corps of Cornall Campbell,
Who lived in honour and died at his hour,
   And had a sumptious burieall.
His servants and horses and whole equiepage,
   And al his goods and his geir,
Was al to be keept for his brothers usse,
   Although he was not then near.
For the horses and men he shortlie did send,
   Who vent to him to the Haege.
And many things that they left behinde,
   Which availed him never a feige.
In Brissels toun of the wounded men,
   In the Hospitaell Magdallen.
In that one Hospitaell there died in all,
   In number fifteen hundred men.
And many a man died shortlie than,
   Al buried in other places.
In hospital yeards they were buried,
   And laid altogither in casses.
And those that did mend away they were sent,
   Al to their several regiments.
And a deal of lameiters for in villagers,
   Which fell al in to these rents.
Lieutenant Campbel did weel recovere,
   And came up to the regiment.
And al the men that were able to march,
   Along with him they were sent.
From Brissels toun they came marching along,
    And came saffe up into Leile.
Into the regiment of Brigadire Douglass,
    And augmented the same very weel.
The Brigadire Douglass lay long in his wounds,
    Weel keeped by his ladie.
In Coutrige toun in his own loading,
    So he came not his regiment to see.
Lieutenant Cornal Gibson to Leile he did come,
    For to comand the regiment.
And at his entrie right largelie gave he,
    Monies he aloued to be spent.
Four pistols of gold to the drums of the regiment,
    He gave at his first entrie.
And likewayes gold to drink his good health,
    He gave to his own companie.
And Major McQueen to Leile he did come,
    And Captan Hoome at his hand,
And Captan Hoome having now fullie goten,
    That companie for to comand.
Which once did belong to Major Campbell,
    Tho they ware then very weak.
And very few men in the company then,
    When he possession did take.
When he came to the toun he ordered soon,
    Al the men of his own companie.
For a days time to be free of the guarde,
    Until he did them all see.
A pistole of gold to drink his good health,
    He bestoued on the companie.
And another day we were free of the guarde,
    And we drank it off merielie.
Then Major McQueen and Captan Robert Hoome,
    To Scotland behoved to go.
So they again did take journey then,
    And from Leile they pairted us fro.
And Captan Guterie brought up his leadie,
    And stayed with his companie.
And some litle monie to drink his good health,
    He gave them at his entrie.
And so the regiment of Brigadire Douglass,
    Was then established weell.
And al the year the victual was dear,
    We behoved to tarie at Leile.
The Lieutenant Cornal having ordered then,
    The regiment for to rewieve.
And six companies to mount al the guards,
    Which to the regiment was due.
So on the eighten of the moneth December,
   The six oldest companies.
In order all drew out to the wall,
   And the Lieutenant Cornal them sees.
The six youngest companies monted the guards,
   And the eldest they were rewieved.
Bot on the nineten before the rewieuing,
   The comands again was renewed.
The Prince and Governour by martial pouer,
Sent out of the garissoune.
A hundered and twentie of every regiment,
   That was lieing in the toun.
Lieutenant Cornal Gibson went on the comand,
   And Officers of each degree.
December nineten late in the evening,
   In the best order that might be.
The nixt night at even they came back again,
   And ships did come up with haye.
And al the men came marching along,
   And guarded them by the way.
So we in Leile continued on stille,
   And tho our victuals was dear.
Of al sort of grain enough was therein,
   And so we ended the year.

[CHAP. X]

The continuation of the progress of War in the Year 1710.

O weekly musse I do the implore,
   To assist and sucour my pen.
In this progress of war extending so far,
   As the year seven hundered and ten,
Into Leile toun we keept garissoune,
   And mounted still on the guards.
And cets of hoiboyes before us they playe,
   In our mounting of the perads.
The toun being strong in fortification,
   And al the works very stout.
And the windmills the victual that grinds,
   In great numbers the city about.
From Douglass regiment away then was sent,
   Al the cripled and the lame men.
And to the Holanders to be in villagers,
   Al that were unable were send.
And al in a ship from Liel they did slipe,
   On the fourteenth of Febrervare.
From every regiment very many was sent,
    Which was wounded in the war.
Our governour he made an ordour,
    All the garissoune for to rewieu.
Two three regiments a day al in good araye,
    At Magdalen port out he dreue.
So on the ninth day of the month Febervar,
    On the afternoon of the day.
The Prince Holstenbege began to rewieu,
    Three regiments al in good array.
And on the tenth eleventh and tuelth,
    And on the threetenth also.
He continued on in regiments rewieuing,
    Ten in rank before him did go.
And muster rolls of every regiment,
    Was written and shoun to him.
And an exact acount of absent and present,
    Al Officers galant and trime.
Did pass rewieu and gave their word true,
    What number of men they had there.
And what Officers they had then absent,
    The trouth they were to declare.
On the sixtenth day did passe, in rewieu,
    Three regiments with good intent.
The Brigadires and Brodies¹ two Scotish regiments,
    And likewayes a Spanish regiment.
And Lieutenant Cornal Gibson then had the comand,
    Of the Brigadire Douglass regiment.
In head of the regiment he passed rewieu,
    And the number of men was keent.
On the seventeenth day rewieued were they,
    The regiments in the citydaille,
In the month Febervar on the city wall,
    Was rewieued that garissoun hail.
Some of our wounded men from Antwerp did come,
    Being then recovered right weell.
Under cure they had been al the winter time,
    Since the battell at Longaveille.
Upon the fourth day of the moneth of March,
    Which was the fasstens even day.
The Brigadire Douglass to Leile he did come,
    With equiepage gallant and gaye.
A brave loadging was provided for him,
    And a sentrie set at the door.

The regiments collours was tane to his loadging,
And twelve serjants marcht them before.
The Prince and Governour and Officers more,
Vent out on comand the same day.
And three thoussand men of the garisoune,
To meet the skipes with the hay.
The nixt night at even they came back again,
And the skipes they came up to Leile.
Weel loaden with hay they arived saffelie,
To furnish the garissoune weell.
Upon the seventh day of the moneth of March,
From several garissoun touns.
A strong comand from Liele they were sent,
Weill ordered al in platounes.
A comand from Turney that day marched by,
And Leile comand followed one.
A comand from Gaunt did likeways come up,
And from Coutridge and Minone.
Comands of men then did al convene,
And gathered to Varlatongue.
About that wie toun to make fortifiecation,
These strong comands did al come.
Men with provissous from garissoun tounes,
At Varlaetongue did convene.
And began eagerlie that toun to fortifie,
And fell to work there beedene.
And night and day they wrought constantly,
And there cast up a strong trench.
About Varlaetongue a defence they got soon,
To secure themselves from the French.
These good ingenires and workmen in thousands,
Day and night did work bussilie.
And a deal of canon they had to with them,
And constables the best that could be.
A deal of piliesods and other necessars.
Was sent to it out of Leile.
So at Varlaetongne the work it vent one,
Till it was fortified weell.
At Varlaetongue when first they brake ground,
The French cavalrie did apeare.
And our Dutch horsse on them did advance,
And forssed them to retire.
Likeways Veruick and Cumine was both fortifieing,
And these works vent orderlie on.
At these little touns standing al by the water,
Betwixt big Liele and litle Minone.
All touns in Flanders did send detashments
These smal touns to fortifie.
And for a long time they continued on:
   In guarding of the countrie.
   The sojors by touers did work and entrinche,
      Great numbers did work every day.
   And for their working it was aloued them,
      Illk day eight pence and their pay.
   And so their bread was given them indeed,
      And so that work it vent one.
   A deal of marchie tenters from several touns,
      Came their to sell their provisoune.
March the threeten day twelve skipes with hay
   Came up the water to Leile.
Comands of men with them came alonge,
   From toun to toun very weell.
Six and thretie skipes filled with amonition haye,
   Was put into Liele magassine.
For the armies horsse and camp foradge,
   Untill the fields did grow green.
The Brigadire Douglass was then into Leile,
   And ordered then his regiment.
Their acoutraments he caused make new,
   And al things belonged to a tent.
On the eighteen day of the month of March,
   He caused them to pitch their camp.
Without Magdalen port and himself he came out,
   And among the tents he did lamppe.
And there the drumers he caused them beat,
   A new march and a taptue
And to continue the same for to beat,
      By ordours he did them aloue.
Al his drumers that could not weell beat,
   He had ordered to put awaye.
And caused take men and make drumers of them,
   Who weel before him did play.
A set of good drums he provided soon,
   To pleasse his own fantassie.
Bot in the regiment bot few men was yet,
   In Leile to do the deutie.
The regiments barocks he having al seen,
   And caussed them to get anone.
Their little ambries for holding their bread,
   And strae for the beds they ly one.
Their pouder flasks was then al ready,
   And bags for holding their ball.
And al their hatchets tent polls and pins,
   They were then provided in all.
And orders given to make ready soon
   That regiment for the campine.
Readie at a call they were to be all,
With arms in order most fine.
The Brigadire being wounded right sair,
Is now not able to go.
In a little carrosse he comes and he goes,
In the streets of Liele to and froe.
He is most peremptor in all his orders,
With the regiment he doth comande.
Right badlie he haults along as he walks,
With a crock headed staff in his hand.
He did comande another Officere,
Our barocks again to rewieu.e.
And to the drumers he did give comande,
Again to change the taptue.
And with swords at their sides to walk on the street,
And handsome and neat in their cloaths.
And every day they were learning to playe,
A deal of new beatings for shows.
And at Varnatongue the work it went on,
Right orderlie and right weel.
And frequentlie the skipes with the haye,
Was a coming up unto Leile.
On the twentieth day of the moneth of March
The detachments marched from Leile.
To Warlaetongue and releaved their men,
Right orderlie and right weel.
The garissoune of Turney on the twentieth day,
Some of their men did releave.
And a pairt of them continued their still,
And at Warnaetongue they did live.
Untill the third day of the moneth of Apriell,
Then al the detachments was there.
Together was releaved and five regiments,
To that place made their repaire.
Then full regiments into it did lye,
And guarded it very weel.
And al necessars for fortification,
Was brought to them out of Leile.
About Warnaetongue was constant working,
And strong barires there was made.
And a deal of our works half moons and counterscarfs,
Was a making both large and broade.
At Berwick and Cumin and at Kenavae,
Lay strong comands of our men.
Along by the water twixt Minon and Leile,
Al thes passages to defende.
The French of Jeper have long been keeper,
In that old toun very stout.
The foussies of water so weel filled are,
    Al that strong toun round about.
Our Hollands regiments they had al detasht,
    Men to lie in the garissoune touns.
And from Leile and Turney marched were they,
    And at Gaunt they conveened these platouns,
So doun to Holland these men they were sent,
    To keep their garissoun touns.
And al the regiments ordering for the camp,
    In each place throughout al their bounds.
The Brigadire Douglass al by the companies,
    His regiment he did rewieue.
And al his drums with his Coat of Arms,
    He caussed for to make newe.
And on the new drums was pictured fair,
    The bloody heart and the croun.
Which Douglass obtained for his Coat of Arms,
    With very great fame and renoune.
When Robert the Bruce in Scotland was King,
    And had won Scotland all free.
And on the great field of Bannochburne,
    Had made al his enomies flee.
There thretie thousand of gallant Scotsmen,
    Obtained a great victorie.
Over three hundred thousand outlandish men,
    From battel was forssed to flee.
Then Englishmen was banished al home,
    And the cruell wars then did ceasse.
And King Robert did reign over all Scotland,
    And after long war he got peace.
Sir James Douglass a Chiftan most bold,
    Was stout and true to the King.
In Bruces war he had a great share,
    With martiall vallour on winge.
He was original and first principalle,
    Of that most ilussterous name.
And so of him are descended and come,
    The Douglasses of great fame.
Our Scots Chronicles doth shew forth in versse,
    So many Douglasses have been.
Off one surname al good of one thing,
    Was never in Scotland seen.
King Robert the Bruce died at Cardrosse,
    Off his reign the twentie fourte year.
And buried he was at the toun of Drumfermling,
    As the Chroniclees doth bear.
Shortlie after this Sir James the Douglasse,
    Was chosen as Chifftan most bold.
To pass with the heart of King Robert,
   Enclosed in a casse of gold.
To Jerusalem there to bury the same,
   Conforme to the Kings own direction.
Beside the Sepulchere of our Savioure,
   Within the Temple for protection.
Because he had awouched and also awoved,
   To have passt with an armie of men.
Against the Turks and the Sarasines,
   In defence of the faith Christian.
If so had been that he had not been hindered,
   Or detained by the war at home.
And now at last prevented by death,
   Elsse that voyage he had gone.
Sir James Douglass wilinglie he did passe,
   Acompanied with noble men
Expressed by name Sir William Sinclare,
   And likewayes Sir Robert Logane.
With many other valliant and noble,
   Passing on in their companie.
With reverance and great solemnatie,
   The Kings heart they did burie.
With sweet spices it was enbalmeed,
   And pretious ointements also.
The heart of the King in the casse of gold,
   To the place apointed did go.
Within the Temple at Jerussalem,
   That Kings heart they did place.¹
Beside the Sepulcher of our Blessed Lord,
   Weel closed in the golden casse.
Sir James Douglass did noble exploites,
   With valliant and noble men.
Against the Turks and the Sarassines,
   Many victories they did obtaine.
And great honour he purchased sure,
   To al the whole christian name.
With great aplause for worthie exploites,
   And very much grandor and fame.
By boisterous wind in his returning,
   He was driven in into Spain.
With the King of Aragon against the Sarassines,
   He engadged in war there againe.
At last an ambushment against him was laid,
   By the Sarassines his enomies.
And the valiant Douglass and his valiant men,
   Al togither in battell there dies.
Thus ended Douglass one of the worthieste,
   And noblest Knights in his dayes.

¹ The soldier was not aware that the 'Good Sir James' fell in Spain when on his way to the Holy Land, and the heart was brought back and laid in Melrose Abbey.
Most highlie renouned and in vallour crowed,
    And chronicled to his praisse.
That againest the Turks and the Sarassines,
    Threeten times he wan victorie.
And seven and fiftie times against the English,
    In battel a victor was he.
And at Danskine even in our own time,
    There was a gate called Douglass port.
Nou reedified again and called Hochindore:
    As the Chronicles doth reporte.
The same Douglass got the bloody heart,
    And set in his Coat Armour.
And still the Douglasses come of that race,
    Doth cary the heart to this hour.
Nou Brigadire Douglass paints on his drums,
    The bloody heart under the crow.
And weapons of war with the points standing out,
    About a broad circle al round.
Our pouder flasks slipes and ball bags,
    We got all out handsomelie.
And on the tuelth of the moneth Apriell,
    Rewieued and musstered were we.
The Stats of Holland to Leile being come,
    Al the garissoune for to rewieu.
And five regiments by day made ready,
    At Magdalen port out we dreue.
On the eleventh day of Apriell in the toun of Leile,
    The Staites began to rewieu.
Five regiments by day mustere did they,
    And muster rolls certan and true.
So Leile garissoun al musstered was then,
    On the eleventh and tuelth of Apriel.
And the Officers called the names of the sojors,
    Who were marching in a file.
After that rewieu and mussters was over,
    Brigadire Douglass did ordaine.
That his regiment in arms exercisseeing,
    Before him again should be seen.
So on the fourteenth of the moneth Apriell,
    The whole regiment marched out.
At Magdalen port and in companies,
    We were exercised there about.
The Brigadire Douglass did come out in coach,
    Right handsome and neat in his weed.
And Lieutenant Cornal Gibson came out after him,
    Weell mounted on a good steed.
The Brigadire did begin in the exercisseeing,
    The motions of war for to teach.
He caussd the regiment to forme batalion.
   And afterwards gave them a speech.
The rire half files to the right about,
   He caussd them march to the rire.
And the granadires to post on the flanks,
   He handsomelie did them leave.
Like a four nocked basstin the regiment stood then,
   And in order right handsome to see.
And in good araye faceing every way,
   So in that quadrangle stood we.
The Officers and the drums he caussd come in,
   In mids of the regiment to stand
And al the regiment to face the inwards,
   With a word he did them comand.
The Brigadire began a fair speech,
   In the midle of al the regiment.
I hope gentlemen in the Staits service,
   With us ye are al content.
And to you Officers I say in the first place,
   Let us live in amatie.
After al this avertion backwardness and contention,
   I wish that we now could agree,
And you shal al see I shal cairful be,
   Al along such methods to take.
As may contrabute for our living in union,
   And no needless contention let 's make.
Then to the sojors he directed his speech,
   Gentlemen I am weell content.
That I should be chosen to be the comander,
   Off such a brave noble regiment.
And to be the Cornal of you that have been,
   Such brave noble and valiant men.
The meanest of your suits I am willing to hear,
   Your legal complaints let me ken.
I shal do justice to you that are meanest,
   As the laws of the place shal aloue.
To be true to your collours is the principal thing,
   That can be expected of you.
If ye should deserte to another pairont,
   Or serve in the Hollands armie
Ye shal not have reason to say ye are better,
   Than ye still had stayed with me.
The regiments he caussd outwards to face,
   In platounes he did them divide,
And caused them al to make ready and fire,
   And the officers them for to guide.
And al the platounes three times fired round,
   And then he gave them comande.
To make ready to gither and give a good fire,
    Upon the ground where we did stand.
We fired the volie and gave a hosae,
    Then the Lieutenant Cornal did say.
Into the Brigadire was standing him near,
    And the regiment al weel in arraye.
Sin such a hosae and behaviour brave,
    What doth it deserve do you thinke.
Then the Brigadire to him did answer,
    They shal surelie have something to drink.
To that they agree and then presentlie,
    He causseth the regiment retire.
At tuck of a drum in disorder they ran,
    And formed again in the rire.
The whole batilion he marcht back againe,
    And dreu them up very soon.
He ordered them to wheell by divissione,
    And acordinglie it was done.
Which caussed the rire to stand on the front,
    Of which he discoursed some space.
So by the left hand he weeled us again,
    And brought every man to his own place.
When of exerciseing we were wearieing,
    He dismissed the regiment right weel.
And told the Officers that then he had orders,
    That the regiment should lie still in Leile.
Shortlie after this the Brigadire Douglass,
    For six weeks got a forelooffe.
So on the nineten of the moneth Apriell,
    Away from Liele he marcht off.
And thretie men with him on comande,
    The regiments half mounting to bring,
And Captn Cathcart was their Comedant,
    Weel ordered for the same thing.
At Cessfiele Gaunt the mounting they meet,
    And conducted the same very weell.
Right regularlie they journied aye,
    Til they brought it up into Lielle.
Six companies of Douglass regiment,
    At port Moris did lie still.
And six companies to the citydaill vent,
    And keeped the guards thereuntill.
The armie this time was then encamping,
    And advancing up the countrie.
Both horsese and foot was all gathered out,
    In the best order they could be.
The Armies of the Allies in an aweful wisse,
    Their banners al did displaye.
CAPTURE OF MORTAGNE

From every garissoun they were then marching,
   In good ordour and arraye.
Tho many comitties for concluding of peace,
   Had sitten in many a toun.
And Ambassadours had ridden by towers,
   The Cruell war to bring doun,
The prepossales of peace was printed and published,
   And sold through the toun of Liele.
In thretie six Articeles condescended upon
   And the most pait pleasshed were weelle.
Yet earlie this year in ordour of weire,
   Our armie drew to the field,
Right valliantly and with courage on hie,
   With weapons themselves for to shield.
Apriell the threeten with courage most keen,
   From the garissoune of Turneye.
A strong comand from it was detashed,
   Upon their foes to make essaye.
So they that night with conduct most right,
   Did ataque upon their proud foes.
The Casstell Mortanie they did it assaillie,
   And sudenlie they did it enclosse.
They took that Casstell yet thus it befelle,
   The nixt day on the forenoon.
The French againe upon them did storme,
   And a cruell ataque was begune.
Til they within were all prissoners tane,
   And sent to Dowie to keep.
The French granadieres within that casstell,
   In saffetie did not long sleep.
The third night again a comand of our men,
   Marched from the toun of Turneye,
A strong comand did come up from Gaunt,
   In noble rank and arraye.
And six pice of canon they had to with them,
   In a boat up the water they creepe.
And in the night time they atacqued againe,
   On the French in time of their sleep.
And they that storme did boldlie performe,
   Like noble men in the weires.
And in short time they have prissoners tan,
   Two hundered French granadieres.
The Casstell Mortanie thus taken have they,
   And then without longer delaye.
The French prissoners they sent to be keept,
   All into the toun of Turneye.
The Casstell Mortanie and passe of the countrie,
   Was then secured right weell.
The Armies of the Allies was dayelie advanceing,
    Til they came betwixt Turney and Leile.
Upon the eighteen of the moneth Apriell,
    The garissoun of Leile marched out,
And joynd the armie twixt Liele and Turney,
    Camping on fields thereabout.
Then Dowglass regiment and Cornal Woods,
    Was then detained in Leile.
And likewayes Jetchingaes Cressoes and Floors,
    To defend the city right weell.
These Scottish regiments being few for camp,
    In the city behoved to stay.
And al the magassines we got for to keep,
    And many a shipe full of haye.
So continueing on our dutie right throng,
    From day to day in the toun,
Bread and foradging to our armie was sent,
    Comands we got up and doun.
To Leile and Turney came aboundance of hay,
    And necessares for the armie.
And every day they were fetching the hay,
    And things for the armies supplie.
Then Cornall Wood 1 did come up to Leile,
    His businese for to perseue.
Into his own regiment then he did come,
    Being made a Cornall off newe.
And Captan McLaude 2 in Douglass regiment,
    Was preffered a Captan to be.
To Leile he did come about the same time,
    His own companie for to see.
A large tun of beir he on them bestoued,
    And with them drank and made merie.
A pretie young man in clothing right fine,
    And so far advanced was he.
And in England he had made his recruiting,
    Before his comission he got
And Lieutenant Hellieburton was gone to Scotland,
    No advancement yet fell to his lot.
Captan Robert Hoome recruited in England,
    And his recruits he had sent.
His own companie they did weell suplie,
    And others in Dowglass regimen.
Above twentie men to the regiment they came,
    Near the midele of the moneth of March.

2 Vol. ii. p. 47.
Then Captan Robert Hoome he past to Scotland,
For more recruits for to search.
And in short time he came back againe,
And several young Officers moe.
And of good men they brought from Scotland,
The number of seventie and two.
Upon the twentie day of the moneth Apriel,
If I do calculate right.
The Armies of the Allies did then take ther march,
Upon that same very night.
And before five acloak on the nixt morning,
They advanced on to the French line,
Apriele the twentie one they drew them al in,
Al the armie in order most fine.
The French comands at the line durst not stand,
Bot fled all from it awaye.
Eugine and Mallberie with their noble armie,
Valiantlie did their banners displaye.
The Duke Mallberie with brave cavalrie,
Took the line in the morning right soon.
And the infantrie marched on all the day,
In the line their camp was set down.
A little armie lay still at Turneye,
To keep the toun and countrie.
And comands to all passes our armie detasht,
In the best ordour that could be.
From Lielle and Turney they fetcht oats and hay,
For foradging to the armie.
And every day they were gathering up,
All the plain fields near Labassie.
Foradging and bread for our armies need,
Was convoyed from Liele and Turneye.
And regiments anewe was still passing throu,
And the armie encreassed each day.
Some States came again to the toun of Leile,
On Apriell the twentie fourth day.
Two Scots regiments and one of the Dutch,
In good ordour and arraye.
Was rewieued and mustered before the Staites,
And continued to lie in Lielle.
And night and day on guards we laye,
And keeped the magassines weelle.
Many shipfulls of hay at the harbour then lay,
Right throng by the water port.
Horsse from the armie for fetching of hay,
Dayellie to Liele did resorte.
The shipes was emptieing and many men working,
And making up stacks of the haye.
In five or six places they made magassines,
   And the armie still fetching away.
The regiments in toun hard deutie had then,
   Which made them to irke and to tire.
With standing sentrie by night and by day,
   For fear of the hay taking fire.
The Armies of the Allies continued their march,
   And surrounded the toun of Dowie
Full fiftie regiments they did then detashe,
   For to be the sidgeing armie.
Dowie was right strong and a great magassine,
   And fortified all about.
And two and twentie regiments into it was put,
   Off valliant Frenches and stout.
A Lieutenant Cornal was apointed withall,
   To be Governour of the toun.
Hees called an Irishman Albergotti by name,
   With others of fame and renoun.
Their magassines ful of al kind of provission,
   And amonition good store.
The toun of Dowie was fortified stronglie,
   And canon planted it before.
The armies of the Allies advanced with courage,
   And trivissed all the ground.
They two or three dayes about it did march
   And no resistance they found.
All round the toun the sidgers set doun,
   Like valliant men and right strong,
And the French within began to defend,
   The sidge seemed to last long.
The grand armie advanced from Doweye,
   A lig and a halff or thereby.
And pitched their camp the sidgers to cover,
   Upon these fiellds fair and dry.
To keep of the French they made a strong trench,
   Al along the front of the armie.
Likewayes in the rire left room to retire,
   If beaten in battell they be.
The armies train was brought up amaine,
   The armie for to defende.
And every thing in ordour was put
   Which was proper for the end.
The sidgers began to aproach to the toun
   Bot before they wan to it near.
The French did raille and on them saillie,
   And was forssed again to retire.
The French held a casstel a lig without Dowey,
   Bot the same they were forssed to yeald.

1 He was not Irish but Italian.
A hundered therein was all prissoners tane,
    And some was slain in the bield.
Near the later end of the moneth of Apriell
    Our armie that castell did take.
And al the French that into it that was,
    Prissoners of war they did make.
On the first day of the moneth of May,
    Thesse prissoners was brought into Leile.
And was al put in the gavalehouse,
    And there was keept right weell.
The sidgers brake ground before Dowie toun,
    And themselves did stronglie entrinche.
The toun for to take provission they make,
    And they wrought for it every inche.
The French in the toun was likewayes right strong,
    And ordered for the defence.
To gain their honour in the martiall houre,
    Expecting a large recompence
And Monje Villare the French Generall,
    Having gathered up his armie.
To raisse the side by force or arte,
    He with his hosst did drau nie.
The French armie foot and cavallrie,
    Being al draun out to the field
With their Generalls and head Officers,
    The Kingdom of France for to shielld.
The French armie with courage on hie,
    Thinking their purpose to gain.
No atempt they could make for raissing the side,
    For why it was labour in vain.
The sidgers still was bussielic working,
    And strong batteries they make.
A noble train unto them was tane,
    No amonition they lake.
And when the bateries they had al readie,
    Upon the fourten day of May.
The guns and mortters in order right good,
    Began right brisklie to play.
And still the toun did boldlie defende,
    In fireing guns great and small.
And many a man was wounded and slain,
    By force of powder and ball.
The sideging then vent orderlie one,
    And a cruel slaughter was there.
The two armies confronted did lye,
    For battell they did them prepaire.
The besidged in toun much bolder was then,
    And on the nineten day of May.
They made a sortie came out instantlie,
   Many dead in the triches they lay.
On that same night was a cruell fight,
   And many was wounded and slain.
Three regiments of men in the trenches then,
   A very great loss did sustaine.
The French that night out over the trenches,
   Advanced and did not delaye.
Our regiments was beat and sadlie defeate,
   The French right many did slaye.
Untill that fresh men upon them did come,
   And beat them back to the toun.
And many of them was wounded and slain,
   In their going back did fall doun.
May the twentieth one they saillied againe,
   And so made another sortie.
The sidgers did beat them and sadlie defeat them,
   And forced them for to flee.
The regiments in trenches that night was alart,
   And fired on them right cesse.
The besidged then fled back to the toun,
   That night they had a great losse.
So many a saillie and many a raillie,
   Was at the sidge of Dowie.
And every day then some men there was slain,
   And the armie still did them suplie.
Some Clergie men from within Doweye toun,
   Did come out to our armie.
The Universatie within Dowey toun,
   Is the bigest in all the countrie.
When the sidgers batteries were ready made,
   The English cloister came out.
And got libertie from the Duke Mallberie
   To pass he gave them a routte. On 3rd May 1710 the duke wrote to M. Huffel, Governor of Lille, that he had given a passport ‘au Père Paston du Collège Anglais à Douai’ to retire to Lille with fifty-nine students of his college.
To priessts ladyes and no moe.
The French Officers prisoners into Leile,
   Did walk at their full libertie.
A deal of their clergie was then in the toun,
   And a great plot happened to be.
Upon the eighten of the moneth of May,
   Near the mid hour of the night,
A fellow was runing to the hay magassine,
As fast as he could weell or might.
Then in a fire he fleu sudenlie,
Before that he wan to the hay.
The sentries soon did him apprehende,
And the toun it rose in a fraye.
The waterport guard was al alarmed,
And likewayes great pairt of the toun.
A picket of men was made ready soon,
And to that place marched doun
And on the streets they stood with their arms,
Al night til the morning grew light.
And patrulied throu the streets theireabout,
And catched moe traitors on sight.
So other sixten on that night was tane,
And put in prisson most strong.
Upon suspition of this plot makeing,
The ports stood closee very long.
Till the toun was searched and ploters discovered,
And a bakers house was sought throu.
Where that powder train had been amaking,
Back doors in it was not few.
The fellow the train did bring from the same,
And was runing along to the hay.
When his pockets took fire his cloaths altogether,
Was brunt: and so rose the fraye.
Our armie did lie at the sideging of Dowie,
And foradged from Turney and Leile.
All the moneth of May with amonition hay,
They were provided right weell.
At Dowey toun right many was slain,
And the sidege it lasted right long.
The French did raillie and often saillie,
And in their asaults proved strong.
On the twentie third day of the moneth of May,
The besidged in their dispaire.
Three times that night they saillied out,
And a very great slaughter was there.
Tho many was slain yet still back againe,
The French was beat to the toun.
The French armie aproached right nie,
With splendant fame and renoune.
The Armies of the Allies advanced likewayes,
Upon the twentie fourth day of May.
So both the armies ready for battell,
Severall dayes on arms they laye.
And al the regiments from al the outposts,
To the armie was called in.
And all the front guards on other advanced,
   As they to feight would begin.
So severall days they wrought on this wise,
   Bot at that time it befelle.
That the two armies lay within half a lig,
   And never joyned in battell.
The French detashed and boldlie atemped,
   To take a clouse at Bavie.
Our guard therein the same did defend,
   Til our armie sent a suplie.
Strong comands of men from the armie came,
   And kepted the clousses right weell.
Till shipfulls of bread did pass up in need,
   To the sidgers it came up from Leile.
The sidge of that toun continued one,
   Throughout al the moneth of May,
A constant working trenching and mineing,
   Was at it by night and by day.
In the moneth of June it continued one,
   With guns fireing great and small.
And al along full many a man,
   Was killed or hurt with the ball.
Some made reports that the Kingdom of France,
   Was then opressed right sore.
And that the armie behoved to detashe,
   Away from Dowie therefore.
The Duke of Savoy and the Jerman armie,
   In the French countrie did advance.
The Duke of Muscovie and all the musquiviters,¹
   Was for the invading of France.
Bot the French from Dowey marcht not far away
   Bot lay til the sidge it was done.
A quag of a bog before them they had,
   And the toun surendered not soon.
These Scotish regiments Dowglasses and Woods,
   Was al this time into Leile.
Beside our comands and all our outguards,
   We keept the magasines weell.
On the twentie fourth day of the moneth of May,
   The recruits to these regiments did come.
And was devided throu both the regiments,
   Each companie of them got some.
And Captan Hoom to Liele then did come,
   To stay with his own companie.
On the twentie ninth day of the moneth of May,
   In arms he did them all see.
The Lieutenant Cornall the regiment rewieued,
   Two companies still on a day.

¹ The Russians had at one stage of the war an army on the Rhine.
Of new men and old he did take the list,
    Standing in rank and arraye.
So Captan Hoom gave his companie then,
    Of good promissive monie.
To drink his good health that same very night,
    In scillings twentie and three.
So al togither we drank his good health,
    And spent it right merielie.
And when it was done they began for to joyne,
    And drank on their own monie.
All the armie throu the moneth of May,
    Was dayelie fetching the hay.
The side of Dovie went on orderlie,
    And the armies confrunted they lay.
The both the armies some days stood in arms,
    Right like to joyne in batelle.
And the front guards on other did charge,
    Yet thus the casse it befelle.
On the thretie day of the moneth of May,
    The armies both did retire.
And all the out posts from the armie detasht,
    And guards on frount and on rire.
And from the armie did come orderlie,
    Comands in time of much need.
To guard the clousses betwixt Liel and Dowie,
    And convoyeing up ships with the bread.
It was said then the French was a coming,
    The clouss at Bavie for to take.
A garde from Liel did keep it right weell,
    Till the armie a releife did make.
The posts on the water they did weell secure,
    Between Liele and the side of Dowie.
The ships with bread free passage then had,
    And things for the armies suplie.
The side ven on in the moneth of June,
    And many a man ther was slain.
And many men hurt and to hospitals put,
    Who would never be able again.
The armie then foradged on the fieldds,
    And coued the same very bare.
Nothing on the ground near the camp could be found,
    Bot destroyed with the armie repaire.
The first day of June that Sunday foornoon,
    The magassine burner in Leile.
Between two fires was tosted and roasted
    Till the paines of death he did feell.
By sentance condigne into the prisson,
    He for his wicked offence.
Between two fires to death he was burnt,
So received a just recompence.
They oyl and water upon him did cast,
His torment for to augmente.
Till by degrees he wasted and died,
No man for him did relent.
He caried a train for a wicked designe,
The hay magassine for to burn.
So with great fire his liife did expire,
And no man for him did murn.
The rest were freed tho largelie they payed,
Their monie made the recompence.
Makers of the plot they were never got,
Only one died for his offence.
The water port guard they got a rewarde,
Because they passed up weell.
And keepeed the hay by night and by day,
And catched the ploters in Leile.
Some pistols of gold at this time was told,
And destribute to the men.
Who was on the guard when the plot was found out
Who's names and number they keen.
The Officers was aloued two pistolls,
And the sojors three scillings a man,
And the two sentries that catched the ploter,
Each of them a pistoll got than.
Two regiments of men from our armie detacht,
Came marching in into Leile.
On the eight day of the moneth of June,
Al night they loadged in it weell.
To Warnatongue upon some designe,
They marched on the nixt day.
And four hundred men that same afternoon,
In the town of Leile did array.
We marched out at Magdallen port,
In the afternoon of the day.
Late in the evening at Warnaetongue,
We came in rank and array.
They marched us out thorou Warnaetongue,
The night it sadlie did rain.
The way greu bad elatie and cloged,
Of which we were nothing faine
Both wat and wearie sadlie daubled were we,
And in the morning right soon.
We did aproache near to Jeper port,
Upon the tenth day of June.
It was whisspered then by many a man
That the town of Jeper was sold.
And every man who did enter therein,
   Would receive a pisstol of gold.
The day being broke and about two acloak,
   We came to the outer barire,
And the horssmen to enter began,
   Bot the toun was all in a stire.
The plot discovered and the city alarte,
   A sentrie fired his gun.
And then the smal shot did fire ripe rape,
   And the canon fired lamdume.
And when the canon fired from the toun,
   The day was grouing right light.
The town al ready with alarme and cry,
   Our men retired on sight.
Some horsse and men was prisoners tane,
   Who entered in the barire.
The Generall Shankloe; he seeing it so,
   Gave comand again to retire.
The Hollanders there dreu off from Jeper,
   And a dissapointment they got.
The toun of Jeper in arms was all,
   And so discovered the plot.
In five severall wayes al the detachments,
   Marcht of to their garissoues.
To Coutrig and Minon Cumine and Leile,
   They marched off in platoues.
We drank the beir and so did retire,
   And left Jeper in a fraye.
The bouers complained for loose of some goods,
   Who the Generall redressed that day.
The regiments and horsse retired right closse,
   And came back to Warnaetongue.
The garissoun of Leile in order right weell,
   That day to their quarters did come.
The regiments lay still at Warnaetongue,
   The space of nine or ten dayes.
And back thorou Leile they returned againe,
   Then passt to the armie likewayes.
To Dowglass regiment and also to Woods,
   Some few recruites moe did come.
On the fourten of June with Captan Hebron,
   And corporals and cadies came some.
On June the nineten and the twentie and two,
   Was great processions in Leile.
And all the trades with drums and collours,
   Along the streets they did reille.
And all their signs caried were allongs,
   A priest on every trades rire.
And on the Lords day they past in arraye,
   And sumptiouslie they carire.
And all the divines in order most fine,
   With temples embroidered weell.
With Arks Crusifixes and antient aspects,
   They caried up and doun Leile.
And adorned horses drawing in waggons,
   Some whores like virgins most clear.
And pictures of Sancts and holy virgins,
   These waggons allongs did them bear.
The twenty fourth day likewayes keept they,
   With all kind of fervent devotion.
St. John the Baptists day it was they did say,
   They spent it in holy negotion.
Bot to the Millitarie now let us away,
   Divines we must let allone.
The sidgeing of Dowie continued still,
   Throughout all the moneth of June.
With much hard work and big canon shot,
   Till many a man was shot dead.
The toun held out with courage most stout,
   As long as lasted their bread.
To the twentie fifth of the moneth of June,
   The sidgeing continued so long.
These who were besidged being wearied,
   In the toun although it was strong,
The sidgers allso with travell and woe,
   Was wearied and toylled right sore.
And many slain many wounded and hurt,
   The space of nine weeks and more.
On the twentie fifth day they beat the parleye,
   And the capitelation was made.
For four dayes time the French in the toun,
   And then without longer abade.
On the twentie ninth day they marched away,
   French men all in arms did go.
With twelve covered waggons and six pice of canon,
   And two morters withe them allso.
The sconsse of Dowey that same very day,
   Marcht off in order right fine.
Officers and men and two pice of canon,
   All saffelie conducted they were syne.
All chief Officers and their equiepages,
   Saffelie conducted did go.
Some to Arrase away they did pass,
   And some to Cambrae allso.
Our armie then having got Dowey toun,
   Out and in to it they repaire.
The wall of the town was all broken down,
And a cruel was station was there.
The Hollanders then did take the possession,
Of all magazines that was there.
And a deal of canon was found in the town,
And they again did prepare.
The town of Dowie for to fortify,
And build up the breach of the wall,
For masons and bovers for working by turrets,
And so to work they did fall.
A deal of the regiments who had been the siders,
Were sent in to garisons
And many regiments from several towns,
Was brought to camp in their rooms
Brigadier Dowglass to his regiment did come,
Who was then lying in Leille.
On the thirtieth day of the month of June,
He was then mended right well.
And all the regiment he called to arms,
Upon the third day of July,
And mustered them both new men and old,
And likewise then ordered he.
A deal of lame men for invillageing,
Who was expecting that rent.
Into Leile town they were to remain,
And all the rest of the regiment,
To be ready to march he did them advertise,
As soon as the orders did come.
Which was the next day without any delay
Some glad was and sorrow was some.
The Brigadier Douglass in his regiment,
Did ordour as he thought best.
Quartermaster Denune ¹ degraded was then,
Which displeased some of the rest.
Tho the quartermaster and the agiante,
Was both provided in horses.
It happened then that throng the campine,
Their backs they never did cross.
The Brigadier called for the two horses,
And as soon as he did them see.
He ordered his groome that same very time,
These horses to take in custodie.
The quartermasters he did then bestow,
On Archbald McDonald ² his man.

¹ See vol. ii. p. 511. Gilbert Roull appointed Adjutant v. Wm. Denune July 8th, 1710. It would appear from the text that Denune had been acting also as quartermaster.
² See vol. ii. p. 48.
And David Simsone who was the scoomaster,
   To officiate in it bégane.
And Gillbert Rulle was made Agietente,
   In place of Lieutenant McClaude.
Till his comisian out for him did come,
   Of monies he gained a saude.
The Brigadire and the Lieutenant Cornall,
   Did meet in Liele Market place.
And as they confered of the regiments affaires,
   They discorded in a short space.
They passed some words about drauing of swords,
   Their contention not easieli ceaste.
And the Brigadire by his martial pouer,
   Put the Cornall in arieste.
The regiment then on the nixt morning,
   Made readie to march out of Liele.
The regiment then before it was noon,
   Of that toun took their fairweelle.
The Brigadire led out the regiment,
   Our course to camp we did stear,
And Cornall Gibson armless in his coach,
   He marched clos in our rire.
On the fifth of July from Liele marched we,
   Three regiments in good arraye.
Creesoes and Woods and Douglass regiments,
   From garisson marched that day.
And other regiments were sent from the camp,
   To keep the brave toun of Liele.
And on the 6 day of the moneth of Jullie,
   We joyned our armie right weell.
And al these regiments joyned their bregades,
   And camped with the armie.
Who were lieing then in order most fine,
   A guard to the toun of Dowie.
Our armie had then regiments in the toun,
   And abundance of powder and ball.
And great canon they also drew one,
   And planted al on the wall.
Our armie had made a trench on their front,
   All the time of the sidge of the toun.
Comands of men were set a working,
   And al that trench they threw doun.
When the armie then had throun doun the line,
   And made it plain with the ground.
They made ready to march out towards Arras,
   And the French to defend it were bound.

\footnote{1 See p. 537, n. 1.}
The Armies of the Allies did take their march,
On the tenth of the moneth July.
The French at Arras they kepted that passe,
Till our armie marched them by.
When that our armie on the tenth of July,
Did march on towards Arras.
And the French armie who did them weel see,
They drew themselves into the pass.
Six hundered men did stay on comande,
On the rire of al our armie.
And cuted a way to let throu the water,
For defence of the city Dowie.
So the right of the armie lay towards Arras,
And there they rested a day.
And the left of the armie near to the old trench,
And al in order they lay.
On the tuelth of July that morning earlie,
Our armie they marched againe.
Bot the pass of Arras they did not atacque,
That time it could not be tane.
The French armie with courage on hie,
Sent double guards to the pass.
And hanged the man who had there a duelling,
And naught bot suspition it was.
Our armies Hoasaes in time of this march,
Rode in throue the French countrie,
And caught for prize five hundered bullocks,
Was al coming to their armie
A very great prize they caught that time,
And brought in to the armie.
In good array marcht al our armie.
Which the French at Arras did see.
The Bregads of our horsse marcht on very clocse,
And the armie in battell arraye.
And the French armie at Arras surelie,
And al the toun was in fraye
Commands of our horsse stood out on the front,
Till al our armie marcht by.
To pass the water between the armies,
None of the armies did try.
Our Keyzar armie¹ that same very day,
Marcht on and came to Bethune.
And al our armie marcht on orderlie,
Til by ordour our camp was set doun.
And several dayes we camped in that place,
And foradged on front and on rire.
The French our foradgers chast several times,
Bot our camp they durst not come near.

On the fourten of the moneth of Jullie,
By general ordours of new.
The armes front line in order most fine,
On the front they passt a rewieve.
And al the rire line upon the fivet'en,
Was rewieved on front of their line.
And al the Generals and their attendants,
Rode by in equipage fine.
With arms presented the lines did salute,
As the Generals passed along.
The drums al beat the general march
For hermonie and for song.
Regiments was detasht that same afternoon,
And ordered tents to take doun.
And to march a way that same very day,
And lay on the sidg of Bethune
The Keyzar regiments detasht for the sidg,
Planted on far side of the toun.
On the other side the Hollanders bade,
And so the sidg was set doun.
Then Douglass regiment continued to camp,
And lay stil with the armie.
To the sidg of Bethune they were not sent doun,
Til the twentieth day of Julie.
And al this time both marching and camping,
Cornall Gibsone was in arresste.
Several counsels of war was in the armie then,
Before the contention it ceast.
Then Generalls did meet in Courtmerchalls,
These discords for to agree.
And mickle consulting to apease the discord,
By the fitest methods could be
An English Officer to the regiment came there,
And without longer delay.
And for disertion he catched Simson,
And prissoner took him away.
On the nineten of the moneth Jullie,
On the afternoon of the day.
Then orders did come to Cornal Gibson,
That he without longer delay.
Should march the regiment al in file and rank,
And joyn with the sidging armie.
Which was lieing then at the city Bethune,
From arresst it did set him free.
In the morning earlie of the twentieth day,
The regiment tents pulled doun.
And in good array they marched away
And joyned the sidg of Bethune.
And Brigadire Douglass by ordours likewayes,
   To the sidge came marching that day.
Some canons and morters with him al along,
   To the regiment he came on the way.
Some more regiments was marching likewayes,
   And joyned the sidge of Bethune.
And several dayes they gathered in foradge,
   To al the camps lieing round.
And General Faggell he had the comand,
   Of al the sidding armie.
All the English and Holanders at the same sidge,
   All at his will rulled he.
The Keyzar regiments that were at the sidge,
   Their camps they had al set doun.
Great flushes of water filed the field,
   Between them and the sidge of Bethune.
On the twentie third day of the moneth Jullie,
   The ordours came before night.
For comands of men for breaking of ground,
   Al ready to march upon sight.
That night at even the ground was broken,
   With no loss of men at all.
Untill the day light the Frenches had sight,
   Then they sent out canon ball.
And in the morning three regiments marcht,
   The trenches for to keep weell.
And many workmen was busie working,
   And the Frenches therof had feell.
So they from the toun fired the canon,
   When our workmen did releave.
A French cannon ball made six men to fall,
   At which our armie did grieve.
And the nixt day they mended that way,
   And made a trench al alonge.
To defend the workmen as they marched in,
   To the sidge which lasted right long.
That same forenoon the French from the toun,
   Did saillie out in a routte.
Both horsse and foot from the toun ished out,
   With manly courage and stout.
Out over the trenches russhed the Frenches,
   And made our men to retire.
And al our workmen then took a running,
   In the trenches was a great stire.
The French three times advanced and retired,
   Til many was wounded and slain.
And fresh regiments was brought to the sidge,
   And the French was beat in again.
The sidge of Bethune continued on,
    And trenching both day and night.
And the Ingenires for the enterprize,
    They ussed both cuning and slight.
A deal of workmen was constantlie working,
    In making a deep foussie.
To cary the water away from Bethune,
    A dayelie work and bussie.
A lig from the toun that work was begun,
    And ingeniouslie they did try.
Til they brought the water away from the toun,
    And the big flush it ran dry.
Tho the Holanders began the first trench,
    And also batteries did make.
Yet the Keyzars did make the great breach,
    Which was the toun for to take.
On the twenty eight of the moneth Jullie,
    The French did make a saillie.
Our men in the trench beat them in again,
    The lairme lasted bot a wie.
The French grand armie advanced brisklie,
    And dreu doun towards Bethune.
The Confederat armie in defence of the sidge
    To closs order they dreu doun.
The sidgeing armie advertised were they,
    And regiments on picket did lie.
Ready for to march when they got ordours,
    So several dayes passed by.
The sidge of Bethune was still caried on,
    With valour and worth courage.
The French in the toun did boldly defende,
    None beter was seen in our age.
The Hollands regiments first brake the ground,
    And then their batteries did make.
Bot that side of the toun was fortified strong
    The toun they could not there take.
For many a mine with noble engine,
    The French had made on that side.
The Hollands armie was trenching daylie,
    And sapping themselves for to hide.
The Brigadire Douglass in time of the sidge,
    Was reckened a chief Ingenire.
For contriuing of mines and cuting of trenches,
    And al the engines of the weire.
In sapping and mining some of our workmen,
    One of the French mines did find out.
The pipe of the mine with noble engine,
    For safetie they quicklie took out
And above a hundere of barels of powder,
   Was taken out of that ground.
It was a great mine and cruel engine,
   By work and engine it was found.
Bot many a mine on that side of the toun,
   And the strong outworks thereabout.
The counterscarfes and al the half moons,
   Most invincible were and most stout.
And al the long day the canon did play,
   And the smal shot fired al night.
The toun of Bethune it could not be win,
   By any cuning or slight.
When the Hollands bateries began for to lousse,
   They fired in towards the toun
And great canon ball did flee at the wall
   Some pairt of it to ding doun.
As soon as the armie by constant working,
   Had gotten the foussie made deepe,
And the water in it began for to run,
   And by degrees it did creepe.
Away from the toun by degrees it did run,
   Doun throu the countrie along.
Til the loch did dry on that side of Bethune,
   Which had stood there very long.
The Keyezer regiments in haiste for to work,
   And made a trench very soon.
They made a baterie both large hie and broad,
   And as soon as it was done.
Both night and day the workmen wrought aye,
   Till the canon was set thereupon.
On the loch ground they planted canon,
   After the water was gone.
All time after then the city Bethune,
   Was batered on every side.
With great canon ball to beat doun the wall,
   The Frenches also in pride.
Did fire canon still out of the toun,
   And threu their boams also.
So many men at working was slain,
   And wounded was many moe.
The wounded and hurt was to hospitales put,
   And dressed and keeped right weell.
From the camp hospital they did them transporte,
   All into the city of Leile.
There to be keeped till that they were cured,
   The English and Hollands hurt men.
From the sidge of Bethun they sent them in,
   And some died and never did mend.
By general appointment it was ordered,
The French out works to ataque,
The granadires for that was detasht,
And so they proved not slack.
The Hollands and English boldly did advance,
Near by the mids of the night.
Without makeing dinn so the Frenches within,
Of them they might not get sight.
Til the English granadires and bold Holanders,
In the French piliesods did advance.
Some sleeping some wakeing they were at the time,
Unwarned they were of the chance.
The ataque did begin with thick fireing,
And brim batell for a wie.
Where some were killed and others were hurt,
And the French behaved to flee.
Our men did stand and made good the ground,
And the French fired out of the toun.
Before that our men themselves got secured,
With ball some was knocked doun.
Yet the first night our men did ataque,
Upon the French piliesods.
They gained the ground and did it maintain,
And beat the French to the roads.
At the same time of that same very night,
The Keyezerlicke did ataque.
With smal gun shot in battell most hot,
The granadires proved not slack.
In thrording granads they boldly advance,
And beat the Frenches all in.
A counterscarfe that night they did take,
Spilling blood they thought it no sin.
On that counterscarfe they youcked to work,
And planted a great baterie.
And in short time at the city Bethune,
The canon ball they made flye.
From that same place they made the grand breach
For the takeing in of the toun.
Al the moneth August with it was discusst,
In battering of the wall doun.
On the other side of the city Bethune,
The out works was very strong.
Tho the Holland bateries had played many dayes,
Yet the toun held out very long.
The Hollands regiments again did detashe,
Granadires for another ataque.
They loossed their pain no ground they did gain,
For al the asult they did make.
Some dayes after then they atacqued again,
   But could not beat the French out.
The works was so strong and the Frenches within,
   Most valliant proved and stout.
The French many times did spring up mines,
   When the Hollanders did atacque.
And all their engines to the full they extend,
   The sideging armie to wracke.
When comanded men for the foussie bridgeing,
   Did march the work to begin.
Of twentie men the most pairt was slain,
   The foremost that ever vent in.
The rest stood aback and let the work slack,
   That purpose they could not there gain.
The French their shot so thick poured out,
   That very many was slain.
Our batteries each day so brisklie did play
   Batering both the sides of the toun
Tho the wall was hie and also right strong,
   Yet a pairt of it was dung doun.
And many a boam was in the toun throun,
   Which break with many a crack.
And some of the shelves fleu high in the aire,
   And others did flee away back.
And many a man was wounded by them,
   Who about in trenches did bide.
Within the toun was such a confusion,
   Themselves they could not weell hide.
The canon and morters fired every day,
   And the smal shot al the long night.
The French the toun did boldlie defende,
   With all their cuning and slight.
On a certain day in time of the sidge,
   In Brigadire Douglass regiment,
The Brigadire being then in the rire,
   In Captan John Hebron his tent
And with the Officers he did there confere,
   Then instantlie at a word.
The Captan Cathcarte on the Brigadire,
   In anger did drau out a sword.
The rest about they did him prevente
   And a noise did rise in the rire.
And Brigadire Douglass in a short space,
   On horsse back he did retire.
Lieutenant Cornal Campbell from the Scotish dragouns,
   Did come to the Brigadire.
Requesting of him for the Earle of Staire,
   That he the suit would forbear.

VOL. III. 2 M
No other answer he granted him there
    Bot he would not do such a thing.
Bot Captan Cathecart before a Court Mershall
    He promised for to bring.
Then Captan Cathcart being put in ariste,
    In his tent keeped was he.
While Brigadire Douglass with his complaint,
    Did pass to the grand armie.
A Court Mershall was held about the contest,
    Douglass complained of wrong.
And several sojors for the probation,
    With him he had taken along.
Hou their hienesses that matter did myesse,
    It is not weell knoune to me.
Bot Captan Cathecart short time after that,
    From ariste he was set free.
Captan Cathcart from the regiment he past,
    And he in another bregade.
The sidge of Bethune it continued on,
    Til August the twentie eight day.
And many men at Bethune was slaine,
    Many wounded and caried away.
Til the Keyezerlicks they got a great breach
    And bridged the foussie withall.
And everything proper for the usse,
    Was ready to storme the wall.
The French bateries most pairt was dismounted,
    No more defence they could make.
And the Keyezers armie before the gran breach,
    All ready the toun for to take.
On the twentie ninth night of the moneth August,
    And the afternoon of the day.
The Governour of the toun of Bethune,
    With advice and counsel did say.
This toun tho stout we canot keep out,
    Therefore they beat the apelle.
And the flag was set out on the Keyezer side,
    And Generall Faggell heard telle.
To the French he did come in a very short time,
    Being filed with anger and pride.
To see the treatie begun in the toun,
    And no flag set on his side
As he said then he ought to have been,
    Acknowledged for his own pairt.
As soon as any Keyezerlicks Generall,
    That ever came frae the airt
For the Queen of England he stood on command,
    And the Staits General there he was.
And never a flag set up on his side,
That thing he would not let pass.
He comanded then to fire cannon,
And to bring in all the train.
And so al round fire them on the toun,
So they fired again and again.
The toun was then expecting no harme,
In the time of treatie for peace.
The great canon ball destroyed young and old,
Before they got ordores to ceasse.
Then a flag was set up on the Holanders side,
And Faggel the same did see.
A Captan he sent on horrosseback rideing,
To aquant the Duke Mallberie.
Some persons chosen rode into the toun,
And the capitulation was made.
On the threetie day the French marched away,
And then without longer abade.
Regiments on comand marcht in to Bethune,
And began the toun to repaire.
It being tane for King Charles of Spain,
His subjects themselves they declare.
Al round the toun they threu trenches doun,
And workmen to work they began.
To build al the breaches of the walls of Bethune,
With all expedition they can.
The sidgeing armie got orders to march,
And joynt them with the armie.
After two three days they did take their march,
And marched dayes two or three.
Regiments was detasht in time of the march,
And sent to seidge Sevenae.
And generall persons them to comande,
All from the armie they draue.
The armies of the Allies did brisklie advance,
And compassed the toun of Aire.
And a sidgeing armie was detasht orderlie,
About it they made their repaire.
Our armie then their housse they have tane,
At the village called Leilaire.
And everything for sidgeing these touns,
By ordour they did prepaire.
A battering train to them was to come,
And amonition theretille.
Fourtie good shipes on their voyage from Gaunt,
Bot their sucess proved bot ill.
Upon the seventen of the moneth September,
As these ships up the water did come,
The French from Jeper on them did advance,
   To sink these ships to the grune.
Five thousand men the Frenches was than,
   Who fell upon the convoye.
Five hundered men had the ships in guarding,
   Til the Frenches did them destroye.
Al the English was there was in sad dispair
   No quarters they would to them give.
Some of the Holanders they stript and took,
   And granted them for to live.
Al ships with powder was instantlie burnt,
   And the other ships they were sunk.
Between Dainssie and Coutrie it happended to be,
   Where the convoye meet a misluck.
No ships nor boats on the water could pass,
   For the broken ships there lay.
Til many men by ardent working,
   Removed them out of the way.
And regiments of men from the armie came,
   And guarded the workers was there.
Til amonition provision and al needful things,
   To the armie made their repaire.
And guards of men from the armie came,
   And posted along al the way.
Bettwixt the armie and the toun of Leile,
   In the villages did they stay.
Tho the French partisanes with litle pairties,
   Frequentlie about Lermietire
 Came out of the bushes and seized the passers,
   And stript and did them much dire.
Til comands of our men did catch some of them,
   And chased some others away.
Then the way was free that to the armie,
   They safe did pass every day.
The sidgeing then vent orderlie on,
   At Sevenae and at Aire.
Both ships and waggons with al nessesares,
   To the armie made their repaire.
From Sevenae some water to draue,
   Workmen right bussielie wrought.
Some pairt of it to a good effect,
   Within short time it was brought.
As soon as trenches about it was made,
   And bateries made up also.
The canon ball fleu over the wall,
   And did the Frenches much wo.
After the bateries in order was set,
   They fired in a short space.
So in the toun some persons was slain,
   Walking in the market place.
In that village then was six hundered men,
   Of valliant Frenches and stout.
And several times upon the besidgers,
   They valliantlie saillied out.
Where several men about it was slain,
   And others was wounded also.
The French from Sevenae would have gone awae,
   Bot however they paarted not so.
The besidgers without with vallour most stout,
   Held them in on every side.
That from Sevenae they could not get awae,
   Still in distress they must abide.
Major Generall Hamelton had the comande,
   Of that litle sideging armie.
And everything proper for the end
   With good conduct ruled he.
And Captan Hom of Douglass regiment,
   Did act as his edicane.
In comanding of men at trenches makeing,
   The hie aplausse there he wan.
There Lieutenant Campbel of Douglass regiment.
   On horsse back was rideing about.
And the French on the wall perceived it weell.
   And canon ball they sent out.
So throu the head his horsse was shot dead,
   Then on foot he behoved to go.
Tho he loost a horsse his body was saffe
   And it very well happened so.
In Sevenae their great magassine,
   By chance did let in the rain.
And that litle village tho weell fortified,
   The sidgers behoved to gain.
Above twentie dayes as my Author says,
   Was the sideging of Sevenae.
Til that the sidgers wan in to the village,
   And the Frenches was put awae.
To the sidege of Aire nou let us repaire,
   Which was both cruell and long.
For valliant men they did it defende,
   And the fortifications was strong.
The sideging armie with courage on hie,
   Wrought nearer and nearer the toun.
And great bateries against it did raisse,
   The strong wall for to ding doun.
The French canonires like brave Ingenires,
   Did the sidgers sadly annoye.
And with cannon shot they dexterouslie wrought,
   The entrinched men to destroy.
Lieutenant Hebron of Douglass regiment,
   Vent to the sidgeing of Aire.
To see a friend was there in the trenches,
   To him as he did repaire.
A canon ball was shot from the wall,
   That both his legs took away.
Seven legs of Officers that ball took off,
   Altogether buried were they.
Tho all the men was alive at the time,
   Long livers of them was none.
None did recover nor live long after,
Bot antient MacDugall alone.
Whose wound was dressed some times in the camp,
   And then he was brought into Leile.
Where he did mend and got a tree leg,
   And on it walketh right weell.
So every day there at the side of Aire,
   The cannon did fire most snell.
And the execution of their cannon shot
   Was miraculous for to tell
Likewayes the small shot in batell most hot,
   Every night at the sidgeing of Aire.
That many a man was wounded by them,
   And a very great slaughter was there.
And several nights with very dark lights,
   The French saillied out of the toun.
And came stealing on upon the workmen,
   And many was slain and dung doun.
On a certain night all the Frenches they saillied,
   And came running out at the flight.
Generall Coliours regiment was in the trenches,
   And had ordours that very night.
With arms in hand their foes to withstand,
   In casse they did make a sortie.
And for to advance alongs a bit bridge,
   With all the speed that could be.
And before midnight the French did come out,
   And on the trench did ataque.
And Coliours men advanced on them,
   And a bold encounter did make.
Along the small bridge bravely they advance,
   And formed their ranks on the plain.
The shot past between most cruel and keen,
   And many was wounded and slain.
There Coliours regiment brisklie behaved,
   And stood and keeped the ground.
And another regiment near by the same part,
A cruel encounter they found.
So that same night at that cruel fight,
Very many was wounded and slain.
And the French was beat and sadly defeat,
And forssed to run in againe.
And many a saillie and bloodie detalze,
There was at the sidging of Aire.
For discouragement to that dangerous work,
The wather it never was fair.
The night being long and frequentlie rain,
And the ground marashie and weet.
Made the trenches al ful of water to stand,
And workmen no working they gat.
The workmen working about a trench nock,
A foussie of water brake in.
Which made to swim fassines and gabines,
And stood in the trench like a lin.
What water what rain beneath and above,
Workmen in a pudelle wrought aye.
And such a long time they had to work in,
Most sadlie fatigued were they.
Beside the hurt men wounded at sidging,
Sickness came to the armie.
And many a man fel sick that season,
And some of sickness did die.
Many bouers and wives then ended their lives,
Who lived the armie about.
In al the villages the most part was sick,
And died thereafter no doubt.
Death and desolation and cruel wasstation,
There was at the sidging of Aire.
The toun was strong and the defence long,
The atacqueing both cruel and saire.
And many atacques upon the out works,
And many men there was slain.
And many nights wakeing and cruel hard working,
Before the out works was tane.
The water was weet and the way very clat,
Al round with the armies repaire.
The foradge grew scant al the armie throughout,
And the ground was barren and bare.
A very great train our armie had then,
Who fired in on the toun.
There many a housse was driven to rubish,
And the great kirk battered doun.

1 Guerre de detail, attack in detail.
About the midele that kirk was cut through,
   Bot the stipelle stood on the end.
Five hundred thousand as many men said
   Was litle the kirk for to mend.
Much rich Imagerie Crusiefixes and Alters,
   Within the great kirk of Aire.
Was broken to pices and dung al in rubish,
   Tho priests lamented it saire.
For great canon ball and boams not small,
   Was dayelie shot into the toun.
And many houses dung al in to rubish,
   As the walls was in battering doun.
The Armies of the Allies had three batteries,
   Which battered still on the wall.
And three great breaches was all made at anes
   And the out works taken were all.
And the great foussie was bridged at length,
   And everything ready to storme.
And all the time the French did defende,
   And dexterouslie did it performe.
The French canonires of engine dexterous,
   Had canon still on the wall.
And dayelie did fire upon the besidgers,
   And did execution not small.
When the bridge was a laying in to the gran breach
   Quite thorou the foussie most deep.
A French canon ball killed seven or eight men,
   Yet the toun they could no more keep.
Upon the eight day of the moneth November,
   The French a parlie did beat.
The capitulation was made in the toun,
   And after this maner they treate.
That for the space of nine moneths time,
   Nine weeks nine dayes theruntill.
The toun of Aire the French should forbear,
   With any designe that was ill.
Unless that their armie a battel did win
   And were massters of the field.
Or elsse that peace about the same place,
   Were made and all reconceilled.
The eleventh of November the French alltogether,
   Did march from the toun of Aire.
And six Holland regiments from the armie detasht
   Was planted in garissoun there.
And the Generall Prince Nassau Audenbergh,
   Was made Governour of the toun.
And of StVenant he got the comande,
   And all the villages roune.
After the French from StVenae marcht,
   And our armie entered therein.
Thereabout all the way of thick mirie clay,
   Was wrought in morter most thin.
Two regiments of foot was in StVenae put,
   The time of the sideging of Aire.
And al the armie camping on the fields,
   And to and fro made repaire.
Cressoes regiment and Brigadire Douglasses
   Did lie within StVenae.
The way out and in so clatie was then
   Mens legs in dirt they did thrave.
The constant sideging thorou all the campine,
   Did weaken all the armie.
The killed and wounded at every side,
   In number recken shall we.
The first of the campine nou let us define,
   Which was the sidege of Dowie.
Full fourtie two regiments was at the side,
   As by the list we do see.
On the fourth day of May the sidege did begine,
   And valliant actions were done.
That atacque did last with mickle hard work,
   Till the twentie fifth day of June.
Of twentie regiments camped on the right,
   In time of the sideging of Dowie.
Under the comand of Prince Anhall Desaus,
   The numbers of killed may be
One Lieutenant Cornall of them was killed,
   And two was wounded also.
Two Majors killed and one wounded,
   And elleven Captains killed moe
And twentie and three of Captains wounded,
   And sixten Subletenants was slain.
And sixtie and nine Subletenants was wounded,
   Fourtie two serjants killed then.
And a hundered and fiveten serjants was wounded.
   As by the list we do see.
Off comon sojors the killed and wounded,
   In number thus it may be.
Off comon sojors of thes twentie regiments,
   Was nine hundered and twentie six slain.
And two thousand six hundered thretie and five,
   Was badlie wounded of them.
Thus al the killed togither listed,
   Of each ordore and degree.
Was nine hundered nintie and eight,
   As by the list we do see.
The wounded was two thousand eight hundred
    And fourtie and five we see.
Three thousand eight hundred fourtie and three,
    The full acount it must be.
And the twentie two regiments posted on the left,
    In time of the sidge of Dowie
Was comande by his hieness the Prince of Orange,
    General for the Hollands armie.
One Lieutenant Cornal of them was killed,
    And one was wounded also.
One Major killed three Majors wounded,
    And nine Captains killed loe.
And twentie seven Captains was wounded likewayes,
    Sixten Subletenants was slain.
And sixtie and two Subletenants was wounded,
    Fiftie six serjants killed then.
A hundered thretie four of serjants wounded,
    As by the list ye may see.
Nine hundered and eightie 4 sojors killed
    That upon action did die
Two thousand six hundered and fiftie one
    Of sojors was wounded most sore.
Of twentie two regiments on the left hand
    The list doth recken no more.
Off every degree altogither the killed
    Was a thousand sixtie and seven.
Two thousand eight hundered and seventie eight
    The wounded doth recken most even
The killed and wounded togither all reckened
    Of the Prince Oraignies armie
Was three thousand nine hundered and fourtie five
    Reckened of every degree
Of the Hollands artillerie at sidging of Dowie,
    The list into us doth show.
The Officers boambardires canonires charpentires,
    All numbered up in a rowe.
One Cornall of them received a wound,
    And a Lieutenant Cornall also.
Two Captaines wounded two Officers killed,
    And six Officers wounded moe.
Four masters of batteries at it was killed,
    And four boambardires al so.
Threeten boambardires was wounded likewayes,
    And two masters of batteries moe.
Fifteen canonires was killed likewayes,
    Thretie two was wounded most sore.
Three masters of batteries was killed else,
    And one charpentire killed more.
And three charpentires was wounded likewayes,
   One master of batteries slain.
Twentie four handlangers was killed allso,
   And thretie six wounded of them.
A hundered and fiftie toghter al reckened

\(^1\) Scots Brigade (old). \(^2\) Scots Brigade (new). \(^3\) The Royal Scots.
After our armie had made the conquerst,
   Of StVenae and of Aire.
Dowey and Bethune being fortified strong,
   To break up camp they prepare.
Upon the sixteenth of the moneth November,
   The armie marched from Aire.
And on the eighteenth towards Leile they did come,
   And camped one night there.
The Armie then detasht right soon,
   And brake up camp there at Leile.
And marched away all doun the countrey,
   Both horse and foot they did reelle.
Then Douglass regiment got orders to march,
   From StVenae into Aire.
On the seventeenth day it was I heard say,
   When Douglass regiment marcht there.
About the walls of the toun of Aire,
   In tents for a while they did lay.
When the nights was long and the wather was cold,
   And sometimes not very dry.
A comand was sent then from the regiment,
   That day that they left StVenae.
In order right weel they came into Leile,
   To bringe their bagage awae.
And Major McQueen in Scotland had been,
   And was returned right weell.
And sixtie recruiites he had brought alongs,
   And they were lieing in Leile.
Some hurt and sick men in Leile was then,
   That belonged to the regiment.
And some of them vent up with the bagage,
   Some for the invillage was sent.
Major McQueen to Leile he did come,
   On the first of the moneth November,
And arms and cloaths got for the recruiites,
   And all was weell I remember.
On the fourth of that moneth the Major rewieved,
   Al the hurt men was in Leile.
He ordered lameiters for the invillage,
   And al that could never be weell.
Such as were thought able afterwards for travell,
   To the regiment was to repaire.
A ship was provided from the toun of Leile,
   To cary the bagage to Aire.
With the regiments bagage and wives and bairns,
   The ship was loadened right weell.
On the twentie first day of the moneth November,
   They took their voyage from Liele.
The comande and recruits on foot they did march,
Guarding the ship al along,
With bagage and wives and sick men and bairns,
The ship was crowded right throng.
Then Brigadire Douglass was at Lagoerge,
There on comande he did stay.
And rewieued the recruits when they did come by,
And the ship on water there lay.
On the twentie sixth of the moneth November,
The ship arived at Aire.
And was unloadened that same very day,
And the men to the regiment joyned there.
The regiment then for nine dayes time,
Had layen on the wall about Aire.
And there the workmen was bussie working,
That toun again to repaire.
To barroks then all the men was brought in,
And old housses broken doun.
A ruineous place it was for a space,
For the most pairt of the toun.
The sojors barroks was broke in the tops,
And the beding it was most scant.
All kinds of provission was pretie dear,
Bot fire we did not want.
And many workmen was constantlie then,
Working on the walls of Aire.
Within and without the builders they wrought,
Thes ruines for to repaire.
And many sojors got workmens wage,
For dayelie work on the wall.
And without the toun the workers was working,
Repaireing the outworks all,
Great pairt of the wall being broken doun,
And many a housse in the toun.
And the big kirk was ruineous like,
And much fine work broken doun.
The fine carved work within the big church,
Was laid in a ruineous heap,
The clergie they procured the senteries,
All thes fine things for to keep.
Within that church was still men working,
And takeing the rubish away.
That winter the stiple fell all doun togither,
And not one man it did slay.
Most pairt of the guard was batered likewayes,
And all the ports of the toun.
From Arras port to the port Noterdam,
Was al the housses dung doun.

vol. III.
The builders did work throu all the whole week,
   And builded these housses againe.
And on the Sabbath day they wrought bussielie,
   And very great wages did gaine.
Besides the main guard and al the toun ports,
   That releaved once in the day.
A comand to Leil Aire and keept guard there,
   And a week all at it they lay.
A deal of provission and much amunition,
   Was dayelie acoming to Aire.
The breaches of the wall rebuilded was all,
   All for the defence they preparie.
A pretente did come to Douglass regiment,
   To march back to StVenae.
And on the twentieth fourth of the moneth December,
   From Aire we did come awae.
The badgage and sick was put into skipes,
   And the regiment marched on land.
From Aire to StVenae transported was all,
   And the Major then had the comand.
So Douglass regiment from Aire was sent back,
   In StVenae for to lie.
At both the ports the way in and out,
   This time it never did drye.
The clatie teugh clay and very bad way,
   Was all round about StVenae.
A barrok and a half for each companie,
   With acomadations bot smae.
In the village StVenae for the regiment all,
   Was gotten out beding right soon.
And there we did stay and mounted the guards
   And so that year it was done.

[CHAP. XI.]

The progress of Brigadire Douglass regiment with a short relation of the actions of the Armies of the Allies in Flanders in the Year 1711.

Douglas regiment lay at StVenae,
   The first day of the New Year.
And Captain Home was pleased that time,
   To alloue his companie beir.
So late at even he made them convene,
   And gave them abundance of beir.
He and his Lieutenant did companie with them,
   And held a noble carire.
He caussed fill drink to all that were present,
And sat himself at the table.
Till above eightie cans came at his demands,
And all drank what they were able.
And for two men absent on guards or comande,
A six pence for each he did give.
To drink his good health in times afterwards,
And a joyfull liffe for to live.
A storme of froast began and increased,
And sharp and cold was the air.
With mounting of guards and breaking of ice,
Sojours was fatigued right sair.
All round the village the foussies did frize,
And men were sent on comande.
Both day and night the ice for to break,
With great big trees in their hand.
And a deal of men with sickness lay then,
In Janvaire moneth most cold.
In Douglass regiment was many men sick,
And weak was both young and old.
And some men died and others recovered,
And the storme it vanished away.
A comande we had then lay at Lagorge,
And guarded the ships with the hay.
The hay was transported away from Lagorge,
And tane to the city Bethune.
Yet several comands we had in that time,
And fatigued both up and doun.
In convoying the ships with all the provissions,
For the maintaining of Aire.
In time of the storm the water was frozen,
And shiping could not win there.
And when the storme away it was gone,
The water it swelled up hie.
The boats for some time they could not get up,
Til after it assuaged a wie.
A great many ships with hay and provissions,
Was convoyed from Liele unto Aire.
And great comands alongs with them marcht,
Til they safelie aried all there.
Ships with all provission free passage got then,
From Liele to the town of Aire.
By land and water in all time after,
The passengers made their repaire.
And amunition hay transporting was aye,
Unto Dowie and to Bethune,
And alaways comands alongs then did march,
Convoying the ships up and doun.
In the moneth Febervar, the fifth of the same,
In StVenae and at Aire.
And throu al Flanders they got orders,
With all the guns they had there.
To fire victorie and make solemnatie,
For the good sucesse of the war.
King Charles of Spain the last campine,
Had vanquished his enimies far.
The twentie fourth of August by passt last,
Was a great batell in Spain.
And King Phillips Armie was beat utterlie
And lossed much of their train.
And another batell likewayes there befelle,
And King Charles Armie did gain.
And King Phillips was beat and sadlie defeate,
And lossed much of their train.
And on the twentieoth of the moneth Janvaer,
A battell was also in Spain.
Where King Charles Armie at sideing did lie,
And was beat from it againe.
Six or seven regiments of the best of the English,
Was there al prisioners tane.
And for that thing their chieff commanders,
Was all broke and degraded amaine,
The Emperours Generall gained much honor,
Tho he lossed the battell that day,
He burnt his own train and marched off then,
And thousands were slain by the way.
On the fifth of Febervare by publick ordours,
Our armie in garissouns all.
Did fire victorie in every city,
And canons did play from the wall.
And great fireworks in each Market place,
And squibs flieing up in the aire.
For the victories of the Allies armies,
We rejoyned then like ever maire.
Lieutenant Cornall Gibsone to the regiment did come
When they lay at StVenae.
He rewieved all the barroks and sick men in beds,
In the time of the froast and the snae.
From that he past to the toun of Aire,
The Governour for to see.
Prince Nassu Audenbergh did him entertaine,
According to his degree.
Tuelve granadires did guard him alongs,
From StVenae unto Aire.
And returned again that same very day,
Bot the Cornell remained there.
Till that a routt came possting about,
   From Aire into StVenae.
That Douglass regiment with all their bagage,
   Were to march from it awae.
Two ships was hired to cary the bagage,
   And on the nixt morning soon
All was to be ready for marching earlie,
   And acordinglie it was done.
Captain Hoom was the regiments comidante
   For a long time in StVenae.
And several times he rewiueued the regiment,
   After Major McQueen vent awae.
Granadires for his guard each day then he had,
   And the collours in his quarters was ay.
He passed up well in provideing for ships,
   To cary the bagage awaye.
Upon the seventh day of the moneth of March,
   The regiment al weel in array.
From StVenae they did take their march,
   And clatie and deep was the way.
Over ditches and rigs near seven or eight ligs,
   They marched on to Hermitire.
Except a few men in ships that were then,
   Al night their coursse they did stire.
The regiment then upon the nixt day,
   Did march to the toun of Leile.
The ships with the bagage came afterwards,
   And arived there very weelle.
The regiment then at Leile did remaine,
   And did their beding receive.
And mounted their guards in time after that
   By order along with the leave.
The Lieutenant Cornall obtained the favoure,
   For the first week there at Leile.
That no outguards the regiment should mount
   Til their shoes were all mended weell.
To Warnaetongue and to Hermitire,
   The guards was sent out of Leile.
And releaved againe at a fortnights time,
   And all was ordered weell.
A train was convoyed from Leile to Doueye,
   In March on the seventen day.
The which consissted of twelve battering guns,
   And amonition in waggons that lay.
From Douglass regiment a comand was sent,
   Their mounting up for to bring.
From Liele they marched March the fiveten,
   Being ordered for the same thing.
At Cessfiell Gaunt the mounting they meet,
   And convoyed it saffelie and weell.
On the twentie third of the moneth of March,
   They returned with it to Liele.
The Brigadire Douglass to Liele then he came,
   And gave the mounting out soon.
And ordered it for to be made for to the regiment,
   As soon as it could be weell done.
And Douglass caps for all the regiment,
   Was brought up at the same time.
They were not given out till the mounting was made,
   And they shall not be put in the ryme.
A deall of tayelours was set to work then,
   The regiments cloaths to make soon.
For in a fortnight and litele more time,
   That whole work was to be done.
The general perssons in Flanders gave ordours,
   In preparations for the campine.
And al the regiments sent out detashments,
   Weell mounted in order most fine
So the detashments came from East Flanders,
   Out of each garissoone toun.
And up the countrie they marched each day,
   And still on Turneye was bounne.
A hundered men of every regiment,
   From touns in the lou countrie.
Came marching up in order right good,
   Til on March the twentie and three.
That night near Liele they lay right weell,
   And others they lay at Turneye.
And then they advanced on to Ourssie,
   And in big guards there they laye.
The whole detashments of the lou garissones,
   In villages near to the line.
And keep strong guards from that time forth,
   Till the outsetting of the campine.
And all the garissoumes that were in West Flanders,
   Got orders after this time,
Three men of each companie were to be ready,
   With arms and mounting all fine.
And without faill one the fifth of Apriell,
   At Gaunt they were to conveene.
And each detashment was there to have orders,
   As afterwards it was seen.
Liele and Douie StVenae and Aire,
   And al garissoumes near to the line.
Got orders to send their detachments to Gaunt,
   And so they detashed them sine.
The third of April the garisounes all,
Their detachments sent them away
And unto Coutrage they marched that night,
And there that night they did stay.
The fourth of April they marched to Dainssie,
And the fifth they marched to Gaunt,
And every detachment got some orders there,
To towns where they were to haunt.
So all the detachments that came from frontiers,
Were sent all down this country.
To keep the garisounes on the Hollands borders,
In the fittest way that might be.
The detachments of Douglasses Woods and others,
Was ordered then unto Dame.
And in good good array on April the sixth day,
Away from Gaunt they all came.
We came marching on and loadged at Bellum,
And the next day to Ullam we came.
And on the eight day of the moneth of April,
We came all in into Dame.
And there we lay on old rotten strae,
Till the twentieth day of April.
Then Faglans regiment from Dame marched out,
Towards Bruges in rank and in file.
And we detachments mounted on the guards,
And did all the dutie in Dame.
They put us to barraks and gave us all beds,
And so we were ordered than.
All the winter and spring was great preparation,
For maintaining the war into Spain.
King Philip's armie great part of the countrie,
They had reduced back again.
The Duke Argille being made Generall,
From England to Flanders did come.
And after he was sent for Portugall,
And with him Officers some.
And several regiments was afterwards sent,
To maintain the war against Spaine.
Except Barsalonie that very big city,
The rest was all to regaine.
And several regiments of English and Dutch,
Was put to the sea we did hear.
And in ship did lie courseing on the sea,
Throu the great part of the year.
The armies in Flanders drew out to the fields,
Within the month of April.
And above Dowey they pitched their camps,
And there they lay a long while.
And the French armie at Arras did lie,
    And there defended their line,
Within three ligs of way both the armies they lay,
    Confronted for a long time.
Then Douglass regiment with the armie did camp,
    In their ordore and arraye.
Their Officers with recruits from Scotland,
    Came up in the moneth of May.
And Brigadire Douglass did meet his recruits,
    At the toun that's called Coutreye.
And marched them weil the straught way to Liele,
    Upon the twentie third day of May.
An esscourt with him he took then along,
    Bot before he came near to Liele,
He sent back his esscurt and then marched up,
    Expecting all would be weell.
Then sudenlie he happended to see,
    Two men advanceing him till.
The which was his Lieutenat Cornall and Major,
    Altho their intentions were ill.
Lieutenat Cornall Gibson and Major McQueen,
    Came rideing along the hie way.
And on the Brigadire Gibson he advanced,
    And instantlie without delaye.
The Lieutenat Cornall with a cocked pisstol,
    On the Brigadire he came than.
And near to his breast he did it present,
    Saying sir you are a dead man.
The Brigadires left arme with that shot was broken,
    So that he could make no defence.
Bot his horsse presentlie did cary him away,
    And before he was got from thence.
He looking back in that dangerous place,
    And there he declared he did see.
Major McQueen towards him advancing,
    To shot him throu the bodie.
What did him prevent that he did not him shot,
    As in that time it befelle.
His horsse with him fell then in a ditch,
    As the spectators did tell.
The Brigadire then to Liele he wan in,
    Right badlie wounded that day.
The Lieutenat Cornall then made his escape,
    And rode from that place away.¹

¹ See vol. ii. p. 47, where Gibson is noted as retired from 5th July 1712, and pensioned in 1715.
The Brigadire Douglass being in Liele,
    He caussed write his declaration,
Off his Tragedie hou it happened to be,
    It was the formal naration.
The witnesses in it was inserte,
    By name they were thus set doun.
Lieutenant McKinnen and antient Monje
    And the minister Mr. Andersoun.
All in Douglass regiment personalie present,
    And inserte in his declaration.
He expecting than himself a dyeing man,
    Of the cause he gave a naration.
Which was printed and put in the Gazite,
    And sold thro all the countrie.
An ague he took and trembled and shook,
    Bot yet he did not then die.
And also the news came then posting through,
    Off the death of the Emperor.
And King Charles his son shortlie after then,
    Was fullie enstalled in the pover.
In this sumer thus it did befallie,
    To all the countries great losse.
That the noble Prince of Oranzie did droun,
    As he at the ferrie did crosse.
At a place called Muirdike he vent in a boate,
    To cross at that ferrie withall.
Between Dorte and Bredae it was said to be,
    Where that misluck did befallie.
That Noble Prince with all his attendants,
    And others of fame and renoune.
In a fair sumer day when they dreaded no danger,
    All the companie happened to droun.
A big chariot being put in the boat,
    The day was fair and right clear.
The boatmen was weell ussed in the way,
    And no maner of danger they fear.
Til arose a high wind called the hoariecan
    And soon overturned al the boat.
Near the midle of the Firthe they perished all
    And no rescue ever they got.
Save one skipers son who could very weel swime
    His life that day he did keep.
Bot the Prince of Oranzie and all the rest then,
    Of that companie died in the deep.
O disemal fatte we have causse to regreat,
    For that noble Prince of renoune.
About his affaires he past at that place,
    And unluciellie happened to droune.
Ye States of Holland have causse to lament,
For him the chief of our clan.
Who was good and kinde and noble in minde,
And a pretie handsome young man.
Ye Souldiours all Ye both great and small,
That ever came in the countrie.
Lament for him who in a short time,
Was chossen your chieftan to be.
Stout and vallaint he was in each pairt,
Rulleing among us the armie.
With a blast of His winde he perished soon,
And loost in the waters was he.
That unhappie sea still curssed may be,
Which drowned much of the land.
And large monie was given to the doukers,
Before his dead body they fande.
In the watters ground before he was found,
Cold dead a long time he lay.
And constantlie they were seeking for him,
With woe and sorow each day.
His noble lady gave wages to doukers
To bring his body to land.
And many a one for him was lamenting,
Who lay buried in the sand.
At length he was found and honorablie buried,
According to his degree.
And great lamentation was made for that losse,
In al pairts of the countrie.
The Noble Stare on his breast that he weare,
Was given his leady to keep.
She with many moe in sorow and woe,
A long time afther did weep.
Many of the touns he had in possesion,
In this his lifftime so short.
Did then fall into the Prusshea King,
As the best informed reporte.
Bot Frizeland all to whom it may fall,
It was not presentlie knoun.
Bot a better Prince in it shall not reign,
While seed on the earth is soun.
Though men on earth take great delight,
In this our Millietary sport.
Yet setainlie Princes they must die,
And their time on earth is bot short,
For youth and age must both engage,
And feight the battell death.
All must resigne in Gods oun time,
To him their boroued breath.
Since time posteth on and quicklie gone,
And men to death they are bound.
For in short time no man nou living,
Shal in this worlde be found
And by passed time we cannot regaine,
And time to come we see not.
None but present time we have to work in,
And each man comes to his lot.
Tho it's certain that all maner of men,
Must pay this debt that they owe.
Yet the hour and day the maner and way,
No man doth certainlie knowe.
Tho some may foresee and divine prophessie
To us manifesteth in plain.
That Christ at the last with a trumpet blast,
Shall raise all the dead up again.
And Job did know and divinelie did show,
That Christ shall stand on the earth.
With pover to raise all the dead from their graves,
And all that are drowned in the Firth.
And tho the worms his skin did destroy,
And then his corps all corrood
Yet in his flesh to his great joy
He trusted to see God.
Whom his eyes should behold and not another,
Tho his reins were consumed within
Tho death be the lot of all living men,
And the just punishment of their sin.
Yet blessed are the dead who die in the Lord,
For they shall live evermore.
Christ by his death did purchase their liffe
And blessed be his name therefore.
Bot now of the war we may not yet mar,
The progress of the same year.
For every mans actions must have such constructions,
As their morall actions will bear.
All we the detachments keeping garissounes,
Continued throu the campine.
And the armie in Flanders camped on the fields,
And performed actions most fine.
Likewayes the garissounes had many comands,
Convoyeing ships up and doun.
Which to the armie passed frequentlie,
With all the sorts of provission
Comands from Osstende from Sluice and from Dam,
At Brudges did all conveene.
Upon the tenth night of the moneth of June,
   They lurked and was not seen.
Til the nixt morning in order right fine,
   They marched the way towards Gaunt.
A ship full of powder passed up the water,
   To suplie the armie when scant.
So all that day we did it convoye,
   And brought it to Gaunt at night.
Another comande from Gaunt did us meet,
   Bot no enomie came in our sight.
Near nine hundered men was on that comande,
   When we came to Gaunt toun.
To the burgers guard the ship was convoyed,
   And the sojors charge of it laid doun.
And on the nixt day without longer delaye,
   The comands al back again came.
The nixt day at Muirkirk we took a fine drink,
   And then returned to Dam.
The detashments in Dam throu all the campine,
   Did keep the guards of the toun.
And each hour of the night we had it in ordours,
   To patrullie all the walls roune.
The Generall called Veglin de Claerberghen,
   Having the comand of the toun.
Bot with his regiment he marched to camp,
   And another did come in the room.
That Governour then was called Trokmorten,
   Who comanded the toun of Dam,
And when the armie marcht out to the fields,
   To officiat in it he came.
And very hard dutie to sojors gave he,
   There in that little vie toun.
By ordering the rounds and the patrullies,
   Each night about the walls roune.
Capitan Harie Bannet \(^1\) was made comidant,
   To all the detashments was there,
And a sentrie each day before his door stood,
   And who with him might compare.
The Scots fizanires in Gaunt was this year,
   And lay and keept that toun.
And they in Gaunt did get a pretent,
   To Brudges for to come doun.
They were stout and strong in many a throng,
   In camps in former years.

\(^1\) See vol. ii. pp. 31, 47, and 49.
Nou in garissoun and from toun to toun,
They drag the poor fizanires.
To Brudges they came on the twentie of June,
And mounted all the guards there.
They had but few men throu all the campine,
And they vent for to recruite mair.
Both Officers and serjants they sent for recruites,
To Scotland and England also.
On the twentie seventh day of the moneth of June,
They began that voyage to go.
And thorou Dam all their Officers came,
And their comand marched by.
And from their aquantance they took their fairweells,
And I wot they pairted not dry.
Our Scots Officers some dayes vent to Brudges,
And they them largelie did treat.
And their Officers some dayes came to Dam,
So they very often did meet.
And brandie and wine they drank every time,
And caroused ay when they came.
Ay when they did meet they did other treat,
Both at Brudges and in Dam.
Captain Harie Bannet to Brudges he vent,
And drank there all the long day.
And came home at even near druken with wine,
And the rest in Brudges did stay.
And that same very night before the day light,
A sickness sore did him seize.
And severall dayes in Dam he lay sick,
And nothing on earth could him easse.
The Phessicians in Brudges for their own easse,
Did ordour that he should remove.
Where they had time to wait him upon,
And do all for his behove.
To Brudges toun he was taken then,
And lay there dayes two or three.
No man on earth his liffe could preserve,
For then he behoved to die.
Captain Harie Bannet died in Brudges,
In the same moneth Jullie.
By some Scots Officers and other aquantance,
Right honorablie buried was he.
The Scots fizanires did after get ordours,
To march back again into Gaunt.
On the second night of the moneth August,
No longer there they might hault.
Bot in al haiste they back again marcht,
   And lay and keept that toun.
The French in pairties and little armies,
   Throu Flanders was coming doun.
So each garissoun toun got ordours soon,
   And prepared themselves to defende.
And generall persons sent expresse ordours,
   In every place to be kende.
So in every pairt al men was alarte,
   Waiting the events of the war.
The Armies of the Allies out over the line,
   Was nou advanced right far.
And beyond Cambray advanced were they,
   And valliant deeds there was seen.
They in good ordour upon the French bordour,
   And laid doune sidge to Busshine.
Great things in negotion by Millitary motion
   Was to be performed this year.
And each garissoune alarmed was then
   So al was in a great stire.
Besides Military motion a fervant devotion,
   Was performed in every toun.
And many kirn masses and solemn adresses,
   And things caried in procession.
So every toun had their solemn set time,
   For the keeping of their kirn masses,
Each touns kirn masse for nine or ten dayes,
   Continued with the adresses.
The kirn masse in Dam solemnlie began,
   In Jullie the twentieth day.
And continued to the twentieth and eight,
   And then it vanished away.
The twentieth of Jullie that Sabath solemnne,
   That great kirn masse it began.
The countrey people then floacked toghiter,
   To that convention in Dam.
Earlie in the morning the bovers they began,
   To walk round about al the toun.
For holy pennance in a penitent dresse,
   Devotlie they vent it all rounne.
Some carrying a shield some carrying a dog,
   The men all bare headed did go.
The women and youngsters counting their beads,
   With countinances full of woe.
In boats over the water they past and repast,
   And every time payed the fare.
The bridges was tane up and boats was in usse,
   All the time the kirm masse was there.
At eleven acloake the clergie came out,
   And all of the holy profession
And al streets of the toun they walckt anone,
   And caried about in procession.
Several antient pictures on standarts hanging,
   Was caried still them before.
The picture of our Lord hanging on the Cross,
   The multitude al did adore.
And in a great biere both long broad and wide,
   The crepeled and lame did sit.
And the great crusiefixe stood up in the midest,
   And strong men for to bear it.
And five or six women possest with the divell,
   They took to'with them along.
Each one of these women was led by two men,
   In the multitude crouding most throng.
Some said that these women in the cloister has been,
   Long time keeped very weell.
And divells out of them spake many a time,
   And made the spectators to reell.
Whiles barking like dogs whilles maueing like cats,
   Resembling the divell and worsse.
And in the procession they were taken about,
   For to see Christ on his Crosse.
And holy masses dayelie in the churches,
   Was made for these women opresst.
In expectation the divell out of them,
   Should afterward be dispossest.
By carying the lame and crepled alonge,
   And the picture nailed on the crosse.
And an antient portrage hanging on a standart,
   Caryed by a man on a horsse.
And a great multitude of both young and old,
   All folk of the holy profession.
And a great number of idle spectators,
   For to behold the procession.
On that Saboth day devotlie passt they,
   Throu al the wayes about Dam.
And every day while the kirm masse did last,
   The people vent and they came.
And dayelie patrullied about the toun,
   And devot pennance they did.
After the procession some made their confession,
   Of many sins they had hid.
By devout masses and frequent processions,
   No future danger they fear.
From purgatorie they may be set free
   And hell they will not come near.
By allms deeds in penitent wees,
   At Heavens gattes they will knock
Petter with his keyes he will not refusse,
   To open and let in the follk.
All time of the kirm masse the burgers of Brudges,
   Both late and earlie they came.
Some in their coaches some in pleasure boats,
   They passt and repasst to Dam.
Along all the way the violls did play,
   With many a musicall tune.
And meat and drink in plentie was solld,
   Till all the kirm masse was done.
The merchant stans stood on Dam streets,
   The space of eight or nine dayes.
The people daylie vent out and in,
   With dances carolls and playes.
We soldiours then that lay into Dam,
   Had bot few night in our bed.
We had double sentries on the barires,
   And mounted moe men on the guard.
When the kirm masse was done with fewer men,
   We mounted the guard each day.
So many fell sick they behoved after that,
   To take the main guarde away.
Till afterward some plot was discovered,
   About the toun of Osstende,
And every toun got orders right soon,
   From perille themselves to defende.
This news to Dam most privatlie came,
   And the Governour ordered soon.
That no sojors should go out of that toun,
   Till that allarme was done.
A Captain Lieutenant of Flores regiment,
   Was then Captan Comidant.
He viewed al the batteries and the walls round,
   Both towards Osstende and Gaunt
And then at night a strong out guard,
   And a picket to lie on the street.
With patrullieing round about the toun,
   Canonires for the batteries compleat.
So the divell was adoe and mickle mair to,
   About the keeping of Dam.
The sojors then had not one night in bed,
   Bot never no enomie came.
The French was disappointed their plots all disjoynted,
And into their own garissounes.
They were forssed to go since it happened so,
The news was sent to the touns.
Then to their old ordour in mounting the guards,
Each garissoun then was redussed.
It was eight nights time before that in Dam,
That allarme it effects had produssed
The detachments in Dam then began to grow thin,
Some disserted and many fell sick.
And bot few men to mount on the guards,
That old city Dam for to keep.

RULES

1. The object of the Society is the discovery and printing, under selected editorship, of unpublished documents illustrative of the civil, religious, and social history of Scotland. The Society will also undertake, in exceptional cases, to issue translations of printed works of a similar nature, which have not hitherto been accessible in English.

2. The number of Members of the Society shall be limited to 400.

3. The affairs of the Society shall be managed by a Council, consisting of a Chairman, Treasurer, Secretary, and twelve elected Members, five to make a quorum. Three of the twelve elected Members shall retire annually by ballot, but they shall be eligible for re-election.

4. The Annual Subscription to the Society shall be One Guinea. The publications of the Society shall not be delivered to any Member whose Subscription is in arrear, and no Member shall be permitted to receive more than one copy of the Society’s publications.

5. The Society will undertake the issue of its own publications, i.e. without the intervention of a publisher or any other paid agent.

6. The Society will issue yearly two octavo volumes of about 320 pages each.

7. An Annual General Meeting of the Society shall be held at the end of October, or at an approximate date to be determined by the Council.

8. Two stated Meetings of the Council shall be held each year, one on the last Tuesday of May, the other on the Tuesday preceding the day upon which the Annual General Meeting shall be held. The Secretary, on the request of three Members of the Council, shall call a special meeting of the Council.

9. Editors shall receive 20 copies of each volume they edit for the Society.

10. The owners of Manuscripts published by the Society will also be presented with a certain number of copies.

11. The Annual Balance-Sheet, Rules, and List of Members shall be printed.

12. No alteration shall be made in these Rules except at a General Meeting of the Society. A fortnight’s notice of any alteration to be proposed shall be given to the Members of the Council.
