This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world’s books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that’s often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book’s long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google’s system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google “watermark” you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can’t offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book’s appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google’s mission is to organize the world’s information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world’s books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

KING'S COLLEGE.

By SIR GEORGE REID, F.R.S.A.

Scottish Notes and Queries.
JULY, 1896.
A SHORT ACCOUNT OF SOME PARTICULARS THAT HAVE BEEN DONE OF LATE YEARS IN ABERDEEN.*  BY WALTER ROBERTSON, Bailie, 1685.

"HAVING given an account of the Constitution and Govern of Aberdeen in the former chap: it may seem expedient to set down some few things worthy of remark over and above the ordinary affairs in Council, that have been done this few years lately past, for the due commendation of these magistrates yet living, and the encouragement of these that are to succeed in the Government of this City. And for that end I will begin with the latest and so a little backward, as most obvious to the memory of beholders. If this were, or carefully had been set down, we might have had an excellent and perfect account of all that was worthily done by our predecessors.

"Formerly, I did observe the great burdens and debts this town was lying under, when this present Provost was first elected to this his charge. For our Common Treasury is mostly exhausted with Stipendiaries and other incidencies; and such have been our losses and givings out since the late troubles first began, upon public and particular accounts, that we were necessitate to take up the several sums of money which were mortified to our Bursers in Schools and Colledges, to the Poor and to the Hospitals, etc. which extended to vast sums, as the Counts of our several Office-bearers do evidence. Yea, our Cess and Excise hath come so short of the total that is set upon us, that at some years all that was or could be collected from the several Brewers came but about to the half of the sum. Whereby our Town's Treasurers were constrained to make up the Excise out of their own private estates, to prevent parties from coming to quarter upon the town. Whereby it came to pass within thir few years, that the town was found resting to one of our Treasurers at the balance of Compt. 22,000 lib.

"Upon which account it was like there should have been no way left to any person to be Magistrate or Treasurer, if some extraordinary course had not been taken; if we had not been resting the vast and great sums we are still lying under, to our Mortifications and Hospitals, it had been thus with us 30 years ago.

"This present Provost first saw a necessity to lay on great taxations of more than ordinary sums, to help to pay a part of such principal sums and annual-rents as were most pressing. This bred great grumblings and protestations among the inhabitants, and much hearing before..."
the Lords of Session. But to help this and to take away that ground, he prosecutes a project that had been long in agitation ever since the King's restauration, and had cost very considerable sums in prosecuting as may be seen in former compts, from the year 1660 to that time, but all without success, the cause of which needs not to be mentioned.

"But this Provost being much concerned and burdened in his mind to perceive that this Ruine was likely to fall under his hand, by power and moyen having got an Act of Council impowering him to do his uttermost, whereby to obtain any signature for the passing of the Seals for imposing an Excise for freeing the Town of its burden, he went with all diligence about it, till he brought it to a period as it stands this day. Which, though it also have raised a grumbling amongst the Brewers and others concerned at first, yet it may be evident that the inhabitants in after-times, yea, and all that have a due regard to the standing of the publick weal, will be found to acknowledge that he hath acquit himself as a worthy magistrate, and one that hath made conscience of his oath at his election on doing so much to set Aberdeen free from such pressing burdens.

"It is a hopeful and promising beginning that he and the Council have purchased the lands of Shedockley in the freedom-lands, and the lands of Gilkonstoun near the ports of the Town, by the money that is already come in, to be forthcoming for some of the mortifications to pay the rent of some sums so far.

"In his time also the Town has recovered the privilege of being Admiral Deputies betwixt the rivers of Dee and Ythan inclusive. In his time there is a comely and strong stone and lime windmill, newly built, at the south entry of the Town, which is and may be of eminent use to the Town.

"It's not to be omitted, the Town hath set up at every entry of the Town, seats of hewn stone, for the accommodation of old men and women going to horse, which is very useful, and a comely thing.

"In his time is a house and accommodations with a boat built for a Ferry man at the mouth of the river Dee, near our Blockhouse, whereby the inhabitants are greatly eased in not wanting or calling for a boat from Torrie as formerly they behoved to do.

"In his time even in this year, the Causey of the most beautiful Street in the Town called the Castle Gate, which is long and broad as any Mercat Place in the Kingdome, which was so hollow, that the dubs and rain stood in pools, not being repaired when the rest of the streets were of new causeyed about 50 years ago. It is now raised, and though at a considerable expense, is causeyng of new.

"These things I do not ascribe allenerly to the Provost, but to the whole Magistrates who may be equally instrumental in motioning and promoting good and commendable things with the allowance of the Council.

"In Provost Petrie's* time the Town's house, wherein the high and low Council houses, and the Head Court house were commendably repaired by him, enlarged, and rendered far more spacious than ever before. In his time the Seasin feasts were converted into money for the use of the magistrates, that when need requires they meet anent the affairs of the Town, they may call for any refreshment upon that account without any kind of grudge from the Inhabitants, they being free to make use of that money to any public use they please.

"In Provost Jeffrey's† time the shore was greatly lengthened and enlarged as it now stands. In his time the ordering of the Visitation of the Schools was set up. The ancient laws, or Leges Scholar, revised, altered, and reprinted, and a great Paper book for inserting the Visitations given in to be kept by the master, that they that gained the praemium, whether by making a theam, interpretation of Latin Authors, analysing or making of verse, etc. may be insert with the Scholar's own hand, the names of the Visitors, and the day and date being first set down.

"In George Cullen‡ his time, John being eldest Bailie, the Provost dying in his time, the Justice of Peace Court was set up by the Bailies with Constables: those out of every quarter of the Town for punishing and fining whore-mongers, and such as were drunkards, swearers, and Sabbath-breakers. And this was so diligently prosecuted by the magistrates, and by sending the Constable with the Town Sergeants or Officers through the Town every weekly market day, that before six moneths ended which closed that year, for the next election approached, one would not have heard the meanest oath in the streets on a mercat day, though there would have been several thousands of Countrey and Town's people on the streets."

— 779. Ramage, John: Constructor of Telescopes. This remarkable man was a native of Aberdeen, and was born some time in the fourth decade of this century. He gained considerable distinction as a constructor of telescopes.

— 780. Ramsay, Edward Bannerman Burnett (Rev.): Dean of Edinburgh and Prolific Author. Born in Aberdeen, 31st January, 1793, the second son of Sir Thomas, who was Sheriff of Kincardineshire, he graduated at St. John's College, Cambridge, and after taking orders in the Church of England and serving some time the curacy of Rodden, Somersetshire, he was transferred to Edinburgh, where he became incumbent of St. George's Episcopal Chapel. Thence he was transferred to St. Paul's Church, Carubbers' Close, and thereafter was appointed assistant minister of St. John's, becoming also, in 1846, Dean of Edinburgh. He was offered, but declined, the dignity of Bishop in New Brunswick, Glasgow and Edinburgh. Dean Ramsay published, among other volumes, Advent Sermons, 1850; Canon Law, 1861; Memoir of Chalmers, 1850; Genius and Works of Handel, 1862. His most popular work, however, is his well-known volume entitled Reminiscences of Scottish Life and Character, which has gone through a vast number of editions, and is still as popular as ever. Dean Ramsay was one of the finest specimens of a Scottish Episcopalian that this century has seen. He was not only an earnest and devoted minister, but a broad and cultured and gentlemanly scholar, whose shrewd appreciation of his country's humour made him one of the most popular Scotsmen of his generation. "Broad" enough for Dean Stanley's friendship, Ramsay was "High" enough to appreciate Bishop Wordsworth, and yet so evangelical that Chalmers found in him one of his most appreciative biographers. Dean Ramsay died in 1876. For notices see Memorials by Dr. Rogers, and Biography prefixed to Reminiscences, by Cosmo Innes, 1874. For list of works see Robertson's Handlist of Aberdeen Bibliography, and K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 73.

— 781. Ramsay, Gilbert, D.D.: Episcopal Divine and Benefactor of Marischal College. A native of Birse, where he was born in the seventh decade of the seventeenth century, he was educated at Marischal College. Having received orders in the Church of England, he became Rector of Christ Church, Barbadoes. Having amassed a competent fortune, he bequeathed considerable sums for educational and charitable purposes, both to his native parish and to the Senatus of Marischal College. He died prior to 21st February, 1727. For notice of the above benefactions see P. J. Anderson's Records of Marischal College and University; also S. N. & Q., x., 7, 83.

— 782. Ramsay, James, M.A., (Rev.): Philanthropist and Early Advocate of the Abolition of Slavery. Probably the first who ever systematically wrote against the slave trade. He was born on 25th July, 1735, at Fraserburgh, and educated there, where he was apprenticed to a local medical practitioner. He entered himself as a student at King's College, Aberdeen, in 1750, and five years later studied surgery and pharmacy under Dr. Macaulay. He obtained a surgeon's appointment in the Royal Navy, but in consequence of an accident he turned his thoughts to the Church, and was admitted to holy orders by the Bishop of London. He laboured for a time in the island of St. Christopher's, and afterwards in England, dying in London in 1789. Besides other works, he wrote an Essay on the Treatment and Cure of African Slaves in the British Colonies, 1785, which involved him in serious controversies. For his other writings see Robertson's Handlist of Local Bibliography, and K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 73.

— 783. Ramsay, John, M.A.: Journalist, Author and Poet. Born 18th September, 1799, in London, but brought, when an infant, to Aberdeen, to which his parents belonged, he was educated at the Grammar School and King's College—not Marischal, as Mr. Munro has stated in S. N. & Q., iv., 211—and graduated in 1817. Up till 1834 he acted as a teacher, but in that year he became editor of the Aberdeen Journal, a position he retained till 1848. In 1851 he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Mathematical Chair in his Alma Mater. Mr. Ramsay continued to contribute to the local press after 1848, though no longer the head of Aberdeen's oldest newspaper. His works, which were numerous and varied, are recorded in A. W. Robertson's Handlist of Local Bibliography and K. J.'s Notes in S. N. & Q., x., 73. He died in 1870, and a posthumous volume of selected writings, with a biography prefixed, was published in 1871, by Alexander Walker, LL.D., his literary executor.

— 784. Ranken, Arthur, D.D.: Dean of Aberdeen and Author. A native of New Pitsligo, the son of a carrier, born 1806, he graduated at Marischal College, 1826, became incumbent of Portsoy Episcopal Church, 1826, and St. Drostan's, Deer, 1835. A strong High Churchman, his Sketches of the History of the Church of Scotland reached a second edition in 1894. His other works are The Church of England in Scotland, 1853, and The Prayer Book: a Guide, 1885. He was Synod Clerk from 1835 to 1880, succeeded Dean Wilson as Dean of Aberdeen, 1880; D.D., 1884, and died 1885. Dr. Ranken was also a geologist and antiquary.
785. Rannie, John: Poet, Song Writer, Dramatist. An Aberdeenian, probably born in the sixth decade of the 18th century. When he first became known in London, he was butler to Mr. Allardyce of Allardice. He possessed a good literary gift, and published a volume of miscellaneous poems and another of pastorals, both of which reached a second edition. The first of these volumes was published in 1789 and the second in 1791. K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 71, says that Rannie is now best known by his pastorals, which he says may still be picked up on old bookstalls. In his own day, however, it was as a writer of popular songs that this author had any vogue. He wrote the well-known song of "The Post-Captain," and many others not so good. Many of these songs were set to music and published by John Ross of Aberdeen. A full list of these songs, which K. J. affirms have more musical than poetical merit, will be found in S. N. & Q., x., 154. Rannie's songs introduced him to the players, and he became a rhyming hack to the theatres. He published The Highland Lassie in 1803, and his Dramas appeared in 1806. He became dissipated, and died in distress, probably about 1810.

786. Rattray, Robert Gordon, M.D. (Prof.): Born in 1810, in Aberdeen, he studied there and in London, where he received the diploma of the Royal College of Surgeons about 1830. Some years after he was appointed Lecturer on Materia Medica in King's College, Aberdeen, of which College he was M.D., 1845. In 1849 he was appointed Medical Resident at the Infirmary, an office he held till 1882, when he retired. He died in 1885.

788. Read, Alexander (Reid), M.D. (Prof.): One of the earliest of Aberdeen's notable doctors, and a prolific author on medical subjects. He was either the third or fourth son of Rev. Robert Reid, and was probably born in Birse during the period of his father's incumbency of that parochial charge from 1576 to 1582. He was regarded in his day as a skilful anatomist, and was the first medical teacher who lectured on Physiology in the metropolis under the sanction of the Corporation of Barber Surgeons. His writings were standard medical works until the close of the seventeenth century. Dr. Reid was for years Physician to Charles I. K. J. gives a long list of his works in S. N. & Q., x., 73. From this list it appears that his first work, A Description of the Body of Man, appeared in 1616, while his more important works on Anatomy and Surgery were issued between 1634 and 1639. Speaking of his contemporary fame Professors Smith has written, "Inter medicos Londinenses sui temporis primus habitus, splendide vivit. Immensas congressit opes, et stupenda reliquit pietatis suae monumenta." He left many legacies, among the rest 4000 merks for a Grammar School in Banchory. He was a benefactor both to King's and Marischal Colleges. He died 1641. See P. J. Anderson's Records of Marischal College, 226-9, also Scott's Fasit, &c.

789. Reid, Archibald D.: Younger brother of Sir George Reid; a native of Aberdeen, born in the fifth decade of the present century. Though not so famous a painter as the present President of the Royal Scottish Academy, Mr. Reid has gained a good reputation as an artist, both in portrait and landscape. Mr. Reid excels in black and white work, and exhibits in the principal art galleries.

790. Reid, George (Sir), P.R.S.A., LL.D.: Distinguished Artist. Born on 31st October, 1841, in Aberdeen. After being trained as a lithographer, he studied art in the Royal Scottish Academy, Edinburgh, under Yvon in Paris, and under Mollinger in Utrecht. Elected A.R.S.A. in 1870, R.S.A., 1877, he succeeded Sir W. F. Douglas as P.R.S.A. in 1891. One of the best portrait painters of his generation, his works are remarkable for their truthfulness, vigorous handling, and thorough modelling. There is a virility of style about all Sir George's pictures that is very noticeable. Among his more important portraits are Lord President Inglis, H. Wellwood Maxwell of Munches, and John Mackenzie. He has also produced many rich, finely-painted flower pieces, as well as landscape of considerable excellence. His book illustrations prove him one of the most accomplished of living draughtsmen. For list, see K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 87, 102. The new President was knighted, 1891.

791. Reid, George, M.D.: Writer on Sanitation. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born in 1854, and where he was educated. Dr. Reid early turned his attention to sanitary questions, on which he is now a recognised authority. He settled at Stafford, in England, after taking his degree, and has been Health Officer for Staffordshire since 1890. For list of his writings see K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 87.

792. Reid, Hugh Gilzean, M.P. (Sir): Journalist and Author. Born in the parish of Cruden, 11th August, 1837, he began life as a farmer's boy, afterwards became a teacher, then studied for the ministry, and finally drifted into journalism. He started the Buchan Observer in January, 1863, acting as its editor, but in 1865 he disposed of his share in that newspaper to a young man, James Annand, who subsequently became a successful journalist, proceeding himself to England to conduct the Stockton and Middlesborough Gazette, which he had purchased. He proved a great success in England, and was the first President of the Royal Institute of Journalists. He is the chief proprietor of the North-Eastern Daily Gazette (Yorkshire), the Northern Daily Telegraph (Lancashire), and other newspapers. As President of the Reform Association, in the north of England, he took a leading part in organising and promoting Liberal movements. He was M.P. for Aston Manor, 1885-6, and was knighted in 1893. He is also a J.P. for Warwickshire, in which county his residence, Warley Hall, is situated. He has been a prolific author. Among his publications are the following:—Past and Present, or Social and Religious Life in the North: a Life of Rev. John Skinner; Middlesbrough and its Institutions; Housing the People; 'Tween Gloom and Mirth, &c., &c. For full list see K. J. in S. N. & Q., v. x., 87, and Robertson's Handlist of Local Bibliography. Sir Hugh began his journalistic life on the Edinburgh Evening News, on which he was engaged from 1859 to 1862. He is a deacon of a Baptist Church, and an earnést Christian worker.

793. Reid, James, M.D. (Sir): Physician to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, and Medical Writer. Born on 23rd October, 1849, he is a native of Ellon, and educated at Aberdeen. Dr. Reid, who is the author of several medical treatises and papers, was lately knighted by the Queen in recognition of his services as her physician in the north of Scotland.

795. Reid, Robert William, M.D. (Professor): Distinguished Anatomist and Medical Professor. A son of the manse of Auchindoir, where he was born, 14th May, 1851, young Reid was educated for the medical profession, at Aberdeen, Leipzig, and London. Dr. Reid first made his position as a teacher in St. Thomas's Hospital, London, where he lectured on Anatomy from 1873 till 1889. His writings on his own subject while there placed him in the front rank of scientists. In the year 1889, when Professor (now Sir John) Struthers retired from the Chair of Anatomy in Aberdeen University, Dr. Reid was selected from a large and distinguished list of candidates to fill the chair he now occupies. Since he settled in Aberdeen he has devoted much study to the science of Anthropology, and has founded an Anthropological Department in the University.

796. Reid, Samuel: Poet and Artist. Brother of Nos. 789 and 790. He was born at Aberdeen in 1854, and has published, in 1892, a volume of verse entitled Pansies and Folly Bells. Mr. Reid has done a good deal of work for book illustration.

797. Reid, William: Minor Poet. A native of Peterhead, where he was born in 1827. Mr. Reid, who has published The Lord of the Warlocks, 1864, and Auld Ronald and Other Rhymes, 1873, has a place in Edwards's Modern Scottish Poets.

798. Rettie, Thomas Leith: Minor Poet. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born in 1854, he has published several volumes of verse, among them Shadow on the Hearth, 1876; The Crown of Charity: an Ode, 1883; and Plays and Poems, 1884.

799. Robb, Alexander: Minor Poet and Local Politician. Born in 1781, in Aberdeen, he was bred a tailor, and ultimately became Deacon of the Tailors' Craft, and was long one of the leading merchant tailors of his native city. A great enthusiast in music, he was clerk of St. Andrew's Chapel, 1840-51. He was also addicted to verse, and published a volume of poetry, 1852. He was an active local politician. His death occurred in 1854.

800. Robb, Alexander, D.D.: Distinguished African Missionary. He is a native of Old Machar, born in the third decade of the present century. He studied at King's College, where he graduated in 1848, with distinction, having won the Simpson Greek Prize for the year. He studied at the U.P. Divinity Hall, and became missionary to Old Calabar. Here he did splendid work for a good many years, having, among other achievements, translated the whole of the Old Testament into Efik, a translation said to be very well done. Subsequently he proceeded to Jamaica to act as Theological Professor to the United Presbyterian Church there. He is now resident in Australia. He has written Life and Labours of Rev. William Jameson, 1862, and The Heathen World and the Duty of the Church, 1863.

A Correction.

770. It has been kindly pointed out to me that the date of Dr. J. B. Pratt's death is 20th March, 1869, and not as stated last month.

The Earl of Leven and Melville.—He was the "Celebrity at Home" in the World of May 25, 1898. The Earl, who is married to the daughter of the second Lord Portman, is the head of the banking house of Melville, Evans, & Co., and is a director of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, and was a director of the Bank of England. He has been a representative peer for Scotland since 1892, is a Lieutenant for the City of London, and a Deputy-Lieutenant for Nairnshire. He owns nearly nine thousand acres of land in Scotland, and is a thorough sportsman, being very fond of deer-stalking, grouse-driving, skating, curling, bowls, boating, and he also "bikes." Lord Leven is a man of wide and varied accomplishments. He is an expert in music and painting, and many excellent water-colours from his brush are to be seen on the walls of his beautiful residence at Roehampton, where he passes much of his time. Lord Leven is also very keen on politics, but does not deny that the commercial instinct which his business training has given him makes financial questions connected with them the most interesting to him.

LORD ROSEBERY AND LADY STAIR'S HOUSE IN EDINBURGH.—Lord Rosebery has done a patriotic thing in restoring the house in the Lawnmarket, Edinburgh, where Lady Stair (who had been previously married to Viscount Primrose, 1680-1706), lived till her death, in 1759. The house, which has been restored under the direction of Mr. G. S. Aitken, architect, stands in an alley in Lady Stair's Close, midway between the Lawnmarket and the Mound. It was built by Sir William Gray, of Pittendrum, and the initials of the original proprietor and his wife figure on a sculptured stone over the doorway along with a small coat armorial, the initials W. G. and G. S., the date 1622, and the motto, "Fear the Lord and depart from evil." This same legend has been repeated on one of the panels in the large hall inside, along with another over the main fireplace, "Blissis be God for all His gifts." A special feature are the richly-carved wooden mantelpieces, from which the paint and whitewash have been scraped. The arms of the family of Primrose, Stair, Rothschild, are in evidence, and an inscription tells of the restoration by Lord Rosebery in the Jubilee year of 1897. There are portraits of George Buchanan, John Knox, Sir Walter Scott, and Robert Adam, the architect. The printers and publishers are also memorialised. The names of Myllar, Nelson, Lekprevik, Creech, Constable, and Chambers, are specially in evidence. The bedrooms and kitchen have also been thoroughly restored, so that there is nothing to prevent the house from being a comfortable and commodious residence, save its position and rather sordid surroundings.

THE EARL OF DUNDONALD AS AN INVENTOR.—A striking case of inherited ingenuity is exhibited by the present Earl of Dundonald, commanding the 2nd Life Guards, the descendant of the great Admiral. He has invented a galloping gun-carriage, which is built of steel, its weight, inclusive of gun and ammunition, being less than 400 lbs., whereas that of the ordinary Maxim carriage is upwards of 9 cwt.s. As a result of the lessened weight only one horse is required, instead of two, while a single man can, if necessary, move the carriage for a considerable distance with very little fatigue. A notable feature of the invention is a rotary ammunition carrier, which has capacity for 1250 rounds, while all-round fire is possible without changing the position of the carriage. A light squadron cart has also been designed by Lord Dundonald as supplemental to his more important invention.
THE GORDONS IN POLAND.

Since the appearance of the note on this subject, based on the transcript which Mr. Finch, the British Envoy to Poland, sent to the Duke of Gordon in 1727, I have discovered a mass of new facts, by which I am able to reconstruct the story of the Gordon Family in Poland.

According to a manuscript genealogy of the Gordons, compiled by "R. M." about 1707, and formerly in the Skene library—which by the way has wandered into the fourpenny boxes of Holywell Street!—Lady Catherine Gordon and her twin brother, Lord Henry, were born in France, and were taken to Poland by Dr. William Davidson, an Aberdeen alumnus, who was physician first to Field-Marshall Lubomirski, and then to John Casimir, the King of Poland, who died in 1672. Davidson, who started life in Paris, was a follower of Paracelsus. He is biographed in the Book of Bon-Accord. Lady Catherine at anyrate became maid of honour, along with a daughter of "the Cardinal of Arquien," to Mary of Gonzala, the Mantuan princess, who had married Ladislas IV. of Poland by proxy in Paris in 1645. Among the retinue sent by the king to fetch his bride was John Andrew, Count Morsztyn (born 1620), a very clever but unsympathetic statesman and poet, who was Great Treasurer of Poland at the time. To this courtier the Queen married Lady Catherine in 1659. As I have pointed out elsewhere, three Catherine Gordons married aliens of dubious character—

Catherine, daughter of the 2nd Earl of Huntly, married Perkin Warbeck about 1495.

Catherine, daughter of the 2nd Marquis of Huntly, married Count Morsztyn, 1659.

Catherine Gordon of Gight married Captain John Byron, 1785.

It is worth noting that Lord Byron, the son of the last, is said to have had the subject of Mazeppa suggested to him by the Polish poet, Malczewski, a literary descendant of Count Morsztyn.

Count Morsztyn ultimately (1683) had to flee to France for the maladministration of public funds, having bought the barony of Chateau Villain in a department of Haute Marne. The Chateau Villain, which to-day is a tiny town of 1700 inhabitants, originally belonged to the Dukes of Vitry. On the extinction of that family, the estates were bought (with the public funds of Poland) by Count Morsztyn, who was afterwards known as the Comte de Chateau Villain. They were bought from his heirs by the Comte de Toulouse (1678-1738), the son of Louis XIV. They now belong, I think, to the Prince de Joinville.

Morsztyn died about 1700, while his wife was certainly alive in 1687. She is described as "ane active woman," who "had as much credit for the nobility of Poland as over her husband's mind," anent the election of the Prince of Conti to be King of Poland. Count and Countess Morsztyn had one son and two daughters:—

I. The Count of Chateau Villain, who was killed at siege of Namur in 1692. He had married a daughter of the Duke of Chevreuse, and had two daughters (Gordon MS., by R. M., 1707).

II. Louise Maria Morsztyn, married Casimir Louis Bielinski (who died in 1713), Great Marshal of the Crown of Poland. According to Finch, they had the following children—

1. A son was Palatine of Culm.
2. Another son was Cup Bearer of the Crown.
3. The eldest daughter married (1st) — ? (2nd) M. Buranval, Captain of the Swiss Guards.
4. The third married M. Lubinski, a Palatine.
5. The youngest married a Castelian Malagosi, but retired into a convent.
6. The second daughter, Maria Bielinski, married (1st) Count Boguslaw Ernest Denhoff, Grand Chamberlain of the Grand Duchy of Lithuania; and (2nd), in 1718, "after she had been separated from him by divorce," Prince George Ignatius Lubomirski (died 1753), of Rzeszow and Cudnow, Great Standard Bearer of Poland, and got the Crown Customs for life and £8000 a year from the King.

LUBOMIRSKI FAMILY.

The Lubomirskis have played an important part in the history of Poland. They came from Galicia, and were created Counts of the Holy Russian Empire in 1598, receiving their princely title in 1647 in the person of Stanislas Lubomirski, Palatine of Cracow. His son, George Sebastian (died 1667), was Grand Marshal of the Crown, and the latter's son, Stanislas Heracleivs (1640-1702), was a most distinguished statesman and man of letters. His book on the "Vanitate Consiliorum" is still remembered. His son, Jerome Augustin, died in 1706, founding the Rzeszow or main line of the family. I think (though I am not quite sure) that the Prince whom Mitle. Bielinski married was the son of this Jerome. At all events she bore Prince George two children—

Prince Jerome Theodor Lubomirski, who married a Malachowska, but died, without issue, in 1761.
Princess Maria Anna Lubomirksa, who married Adam Jordan, Castelan of Wisnicz.

Prince George, after the death of his wife (née Bielinski), married a lady of the Saxon Court, Jane von Stein, and had one son and two daughters. It is through this second marriage that the family has been carried on, by

Prince Theodore Jerome Lubomirski (died 1812), who, by Anna Dobrgamska, had Prince Adam Lubomirski (died 1874), who married a Princess Poninska, and had Prince Jerome Adam Lubomirski (d. 1895). He married the Countess Framoyska, and had Prince George Ignatius Lubomirski, now head of the house. He lives in Warsaw.

CSARTORYSKI FAMILY.

III. Count Morstyn’s second daughter, Isabella, married Prince Casimir Csartoryski, Chancellor of Lithuania. The Csartoryski are a very old family. Originally Grand Dukes of Lithuania, they became Princes of Csartoryski and Dukes of Kievan and of Zudow about the middle of the fifteenth century. By this marriage Prince Casimir had three sons and two daughters.

Prince Frederick Michael Csartoryski succeeded his father as Chancellor of Lithuania. He did his best to keep the country together. Finch says he “was married to a German lady bred in Poland, and a relation of the Wallenstein family.” It is interesting to remember that one of the great Wallenstein’s assassins in 1634 was Colonel John Gordon, who was descended from the Gicht family. Prince Frederick left three daughters, and died in 1775.

Prince Augustus Alexander Csartoryski also had a distinguished political career. Besides a son, Stanislaus, who died without issue, he had Prince Adam Casimir Csartoryski (1734-1823), married the Comtesse de Flemming, and had a son, Prince Adam Constantine, who founded the younger branch of the Csartoryski family, the line of Rokosow, the head of which is Prince Antoine, born in 1845. The main line was carried on by Prince Adam’s elder son, Prince Adam George Csartoryski (1770-1861). He was the most distinguished of his race, taking a leading part in the risings of 1794 (under Kosiuscko), and of 1830. He married the Princess Sapieha-Kodenksa, and had a son, Prince Ladislas Csartoryski (1828-1894), who had by his second wife, Princess Marguerite of Orleans (died 1893), daughter of Prince Louis, Duc de Nemour, two sons, Witold and Prince Adam Louis Csartoryski, born at Paris, where he resides, on Nov. 5, 1872.

Prince Theodor Csartoryski became Archbishop of Posen.

PONIATOWSKI FAMILY.

Princess Constance Csartoryski married the Comte Poniatsowski (1758-1762), a member of an old family, and had ten children, among whom were

Casimir Poniatsowski (1721-1800), Chamberlain to the Crown, who had

Stanislas Poniatsowski (1754-1833), a soldier, and a Privy Councillor of Poland, who had Joseph Poniatsowski (1816-73), once Minister of Tuscany in London: member of the French Senate, 1854: went to London in 1870, and supported himself by teaching music. He composed several operas, and a well known wedding march.

Joseph had a son,

Joseph, who took part in the rising of 1830, and died in 1855. He married the Marquise Montecatini, who died at Lucca last April, aged 90.

Andrew (1735-73), a Field-Marshall in the army of Austria. He had a son, Joseph (1762-1813), a distinguished soldier, who became one of Napoleon’s Generals in 1806, and a Marshal of France. He covered Napoleon’s retreat from Leipzig, and was drowned in the Elster when trying to escape from the Prussians. He has been immortalised by Béranger.

Michael Poniatsowski (1736-94), became Primate of Poland.

STANISLAS AUGUSTUS PONIATOWSKI, born at Wolczyn, Lithuania, 17 January, 1732, became King of Poland in 1763: resigned his crown in 1795: and died at St. Petersburg, unmarried, in 1798. He was the last King of Poland. A longish article about him appeared in the Aberdeen Free Press of May 3, 1898.

J. M. BULLOCH.
THE CROWNING OF THE SCOTS GIPSY KING AT YETHOLM.

The gipsies on the Scots border once more have a king, for on 30th May, Charles Faa Blyth was crowned amid great rejoicings at Yetholm. For several years King Charles has kept a lodging-house in Kirk Yetholm—the gipsy side of the water, where, with the assistance of his consort, he has furnished tramps on their way through the Border country with beds at fourpence and sixpence a night; but on Saturday (May 28) he retired from commercial life, as unbefitting his royal state, and took up his abode in what is known locally as the Palace—a small white-washed house, containing “a but and a ben,” and not very much of either. The Palace in earlier times was a thatched abode, but the advance of civilisation has put his new majesty under a slated roof, with a tiny grass plot and a railing before his door, to give distinction to his residence. His kingship, while even yet in perspective, had begun to bring him its reward.

The Rev. W. Carrick Miller, the parish minister, was the convener of the Coronation Committee, and the leading spirit in the promotion of the revelries.

Very soon after six o’clock on the morning of the coronation day, visitors began to drop in from surrounding districts, and before nine o’clock they came in thousands. They journeyed in all sorts of vehicles, from the donkey cart to the charabanc, but the favourite method of locomotion was the cycle. The Scottish Border towns were in a large measure responsible for the size of the gathering, but there was a very considerable representation from the other side as well, and all had come out with the avowed intention of making holiday. As twelve o’clock drew near the crowds made their way to the green in Kirk Yetholm, where the coronation was to take place, and where, with the view of making the affair a financial success, a barricading had been erected and money-takers stationed. A platform about a couple of feet high was placed against the whitewashed gable of the Old Border Inn, and some eight or ten arm-chairs, that seemed to have come straight from the ingle-nook of the “best room” in one or other of the old-fashioned houses overlooking the green, were ranged in a row thereon, with a little round table for centre piece, on which a faded cushion lay. To this platform came the Rev. Carrick Miller, dressed in his gown and bands, his trencher on head; and to it also came, to the great diversion of the gathering, a motley crowd of Yetholm lads in tinselled robes and theatrical trappings. A Glasgow costumier, accustomed presumably to supply the stage, furnished the dresses, and very much like circus performers the garishly-habited company looked in their rusty finery as they strutted about or squatted on the grass awaiting the commencement of proceedings. Interested in the ceremony, some of the neighbouring gentry appeared, among them Lady Stratheden and Campbell, the Hon. Mildred Campbell, some members of the Ker family, and Lord Douglas.

The ceremony began with the singing of the first two verses of the 100th Psalm, to which an accompaniment was furnished by the Coldstream Brass Band, after which the parish minister engaged in prayer. Then in a brief speech he addressed the gathering, announcing that the coronation ceremony had nothing of the nature of a speculation in it, and that any balance after expenses were paid was to go to King Charlie. After him came Baillie Gibson, Leith, who claims to have a strain of gipsy blood in his veins, and he glanced briefly at the gipsies’ connection with Scottish history and the share they had taken in the country’s battles. The band having played “Rule Britannia,” a couple of heralds in fancy costumes, remarkable for their inappropriateness, read the following proclamation:—

Oyey! Oyey! Oyey! It having been found that the royal and ancient people of Little Egypt are in trouble, and are becoming scattered from the royal villages of Yetholm from having no ruler to guide and direct their kingdom, they, with the help of the people of the old villages of Town and Kirk Yetholm, have declared for a king, lest they should become a forgotten race. Having considered the hereditary rights of Charles Faa Blyth, whose mother, Esther Faa Blyth, did hold sway for many years over this people, they have agreed that this same Charles Faa Blyth shall be crowned king of the Yetholm gipsies with all the honours due to a prince of royal gipsy blood. Challenge who dare!

At this point a surprise was sprung upon the gathering, numbering now some six or eight thousand. Mr. Miller, with an air of mystery, announced he had a letter to read as soon as the ironical cheering that followed the proclamation had ceased. It ran as follows:—

8 Salamander Street, Leith. Sir,—I humbly protest against the claimant, Charles Rutherford, to the estate and title of gipsy king. He has no right to claim the title. The lawful heir is David Blyth, Chirnside, my father, who wishes to put forward his claim. My grandfather was the former heir, but he objected to the title at that time and handed it over to the late queen, Esther Faa Blyth. My father, David Blyth, and his cousin of Tweedmouth have expressed their willingness to go to Yetholm and claim their right. Trusting you will kindly give this matter your best attention, and oblige.—Yours truly, WILLIAM BLYTH.

But there was no response to the Parish Minister's call that William should come forward, so after a pause the band struck up "Wha'll be King but Charlie," and amid an outburst of merriment the brass crown, studded with imitation rubies, amethysts, and cairngorms, was produced. "Let the Archbishop be summoned with all convenient speed!" exclaimed Mr. Miller, whereupon the village blacksmith in his leather apron, his sleeves buckled up to his elbows, strode into the enclosure. The prince and his amiable consort were driven to the scene of the coronation in a carriage drawn by six donkeys, tandem fashion. His Majesty, dressed in gaudy robes that have no doubt figured on the stage in some of Shakespeare's plays, his head covered with a soft tweed cap, stepped upon the platform, while his consort, attired in modern costume, with a brass crown upon her head, remained in the carriage. His Majesty stood upon a chair, and, waving his cap, exclaimed, "King I am, and King I intend to be!" Then the blacksmith made the following short speech in Romany:

As the hereditary archbishop of Yetholm, I hereby crown Charles Faa Blyth as king of the Yetholm gipsies, wherever they may be, and I summon all his loyal people to do him respect and homage. Long live King Charles.

The crown was then placed upon the old man's head, and his first royal message to his people was read by another veteran, in a fearful and wonderful uniform, believed to represent a mixture of a Lord Chancellor, a Lord Mayor, and a City Alderman. He looked very terrible, but it was only Mr. Watt, the grocer. The message he read was on the following terms:

I am commanded by His Majesty the King of the Yetholm gipsies to thank his loyal subjects for the honour conferred on him this day, and to say that it will be his earnest endeavour to rule his people wisely and well, and he trusts that his subjects in the royal villages of Town and Kirk Yetholm will live in peace and prosperity under his sway.

This concluded the ceremony, there was a frantic rush to shake hands with the horn-handed monarch, and several ladies who succeeded in getting a shake, were seen to kiss their fingers afterwards, "for luck," it was said. His Majesty was then got once more into the carriage, and a procession was formed, in which such characters as Henry VIII., Buffalo Bill, Robert Burns, Robin Hood, Tam O'Shanter, a mailed knight, a cowboy, and a Spanish bull-fighter appeared on horseback, and were followed through the two hamlets by a laughing crowd. His Majesty went back to his palace, where he held a sort of levee during the day. A dinner in a marquee on the haugh, and a programme of sports, brought the day's entertainment to a close.

A good account of the Yetholm Gipsies will be found in a thirty-two page pamphlet, entitled The Gypsies of the Border. Dedicated to Her Majesty, Esther Faa Blyth, the Gypsy Queen. By R. Murray, Hawick. Galashiel: T. F. Brodie, 1875.

The King traces his ancestry thus:

Wull Faa, I. (d. 1784),
King of the Border Gipsies, claimed descent from Johnnie Faa,
"Lord and Earl of Little Egypt" of James the Fifth's reign.

A daughter.

King, died 1861.

Esther (1796-1883).
Queen of the Gipsies. Had 12 children, among whom is

Charles Blyth Faa, II.
King of the Gipsies. Born 1838.
Crowned May 30, 1858. His father's name was Rutherford.

OUR SUPPLEMENT.—We give as a supplement this month a fine drawing by Sir George Reid, P.R.S.A., of the west gable of King's College Chapel and the Crown Tower.

BARONESS GRAY.—In the May number of the Woman at Home a portrait of the Baroness Gray, a peeress in her own right, appeared. She succeeded on the death of her uncle, the Earl of Moray, in 1895, her claim being upheld by the House of Lords in 1896.

AN ABERDEEN MEDICAL GRADUATE IN FICTION.—It is worth recording that Mrs. Coulson Kernahan's novel, "Trewinnot of Guy's," published by John Long, London, 1898, is based on the experiences of the late Arthur Culver James, who, though partially educated at Guy's, took his medical degree at Marischal College in 1874. He afterwards became an actor, under the name of Arthur Dacre, in 1878, married Miss Amy Roselle in 1884, and the two committed suicide at Sydney in November, 1895.

1823, 1824, 1825, 1826, private instruction resumed by Dr. Knight: students 9, 21, 9, 16. At a meeting on 9 Apr., 1827, of the joint Medical School of both Colleges, the committee agreed to recommend to both Universities the election of Dr. Knight as Lecturer on Botany in the Medical School, expressing their opinion, however, that the election should be made for only one year at a time, to prevent its interfering with the views of the Professors of Natural History, if they or either of them should think fit to undertake a regular course of lectures on the same subject. This was minuted against my wishes, at the request of two of the Old Aberdeen Professors, Paul and Forbes. In 1829 they had forgot it, and it was minuted again, with an understanding that nothing should be done; Dr. Alexander Murray* having made an attempt to get a private nomination from King's College, which failed. The attendance of students, almost entirely Medicals, was very small till 1828.* In 1832 it was announced that certificates of three months' courses of Natural History, and also of Botany, would be required from all candidates for the Medical Department of the Army."—Knight's MS.

Knight was succeeded at King's College by George Dickie (M.A., Mar. Coll. 1830; M.R.C.S., 1834; M.D., King's Coll., 1842; Professor of Natural History in Queen's College, Belfast, 1859, and first Professor of Botany in the University of Aberdeen, 1860†). In 1850 the Botanical lecturer was John Christie (M.D., King's Coll., 1858); in 1851 and 1852 Wyville Thomson (Lecturer at Marischal College, 1853; Professor of Natural History in Queen's College, Cork, 1853; of Geology in Queen's College, Belfast, 1854; and of Natural History in the University of Edinburgh, 1870); in 1853-60, John Crombie Brown (L.L.D., 1858).

At Marischal College, John Shier (M.A., 1831; L.L.D., 1845), who had acted as assistant to Professor Davidson (Civil and Natural History) since 1838, became Lecturer on Botany in 1840; but the appointment lapsed next year, when Davidson's successor, Macgillivray, expressed his willingness to take the Botany Class. He died in September, 1852, and the next Professor, James Nicol, preferring not to teach in summer, Wyville Thomson was transferred from King's College. In 1854 the lecturer was William Rhind; in 1855-60, Robert Beveridge (M.A., 1843; M.B., 1847).

P. J. ANDERSON.

*Dr. Knight demitted the Lectureship in 1840, when the joint Medical School came to an end. Attendance for the thirteen summers, 1827 to 1839: 91, 50, 23, 22, 17, 17, 22, 32, 28, 17, 22, 17, 11. Dr. Dickie, in the preface to his Botanist's Guide (Aberd., 1860) says: "My respected friend, the Rev. Mr. McMillan, more than 30 years ago studied the plants of Aberdeen, and conducted classes, which were attended by amateurs and students of the medical school. Mr. Morren, about the same period, also gave instruction in this department."

I find it mentioned in Gordon of Straloch's map of 1654 as "Ruffen K.," also what I take to be it in Collections on the Shires of Aberdeen and Banff, page 230, Spalding Club, as "Ruven, Mr. Robert Smyth exhortor" with a salary of "xxv lib. vj.s. viij d." On the belfry are the initials "M.R.I." Whose are they? Any information as to the history of this church, bell, &c., will be welcome.

1166. Admiral Van Tromp.—Was he of Scotch extraction?—In Gordon's History of Scots Affairs, III., 48, it is said that "Martin Harpseron Trumpe, the Admirall of Hollande, was the son of a Scotch father, one Harper born at Peterheade in Buchaine." This statement is contradicted in all the biographies of the great Dutchman that I have seen. His name, e.g., in Chambers's Encyclopaedia, is given "Martin Harpserizon Tromp," and he is said to have been born at Briel, in 1597, and to have gone to sea as a child with his father, a commander in the Dutch Navy. There is no hint that he had any Scotch connection. Whence then did the Scotch writer, who was parson of Rothiemay, and a contemporary of the Dutchman, get the idea to which he gives expression in the above quotation?

Is this one of the first of the many efforts that have since been made by the natives of the northern county to claim all the world's great men as having some connection with Aberdeen, if not themselves Aberdonian born?

Answers.

1135. Kinglassie Church Bell (XI., 175-6).—With merely a bare reading of the inscription, it is impossible to say whether the Kinglassie bell is Scotch or English. It is quite possibly Scotch, as a founder named Robert Hog was at work in Stirling at the date in question (1635). Unlike other Scotch founders, moreover, he seems to have imitated English work when casting his bells. Although a gift of three bells to a country church in Scotland at that time is rather unlikely, it is by no means impossible. Small towerless churches in Scotland were provided with unusually large and elaborate belfries, and these were occasionally arranged for more than one bell, as at Turriff in Aberdeenshire and Kinnell in Linlithgowshire, where two are provided for in each case. It would therefore not be at all surprising if Kinglassie of old had provision for three. But if Mr. Hutcheson could give an exact description of the bell, with its size, and an account of the ornaments (if any) and lettering, it would be possible to say more about it. Better still, if he could let me see a rubbing of the inscription, I might be able to tell who the founder was. By the way, I have no claim to the title "Rev."

F. C. Eeles.

1135. Kenmore Church Bell (XI., 176).—I am afraid I have failed to express clearly my meaning about the coin impressions on bells. The word "impression" is used with respect to the mould, and not to the bell. The coin is pressed into the soft mould and withdrawn, exactly as a seal is impressed on the heated sealing wax. The metal then runs into the impression, thus forming a counterfeit coin on the surface of the bell. The idea that coins are or can be let into bells is nothing but a myth, and like that other myth about silver improving the tone of bells, dies very hard. Not only is it quite impossible to attach a coin to the surface of a bell, but all doubt on the point has been repeatedly removed when cracked bells so decorated have been broken up for re-casting. In case after case of this kind the supposed coins have been broken through, and the metal of which they were composed shown to be the same as that of the bell, and this not only when the coins were "coppers," but also when they represented silver money. The times of ringing are interesting.

1144. A Gordon at Copenhagen (XI., 157).—The Gordon referred to by Augustus Foster (as quoted in the Two Duchies) was Sir Alexander, third son of George, Lord Haddo, and grandson of George, third Earl of Aberdeen. His mother was the sister of Sir David Baird, who gave him his real start in life as a soldier. Born in 1786, he was educated at Eton, and joined the 3rd Foot (now the Scots Guards) in 1803, rising to a lieutenant-colonelcy ten years later. He was aide-de-camp to Baird at the recapture of the Cape of Good Hope, 1806. He was at the capture of Copenhagen, 1807, and served throughout the Peninsular war, receiving ten medals, and a K.C.B. He was aide-de-camp to Wellington in Belgium, and had his thigh shattered at Waterloo. Sir Alexander is commemorated by an obelisk to the south-west of Haddo House:

Sacred to the memory of Lieutenant Colonel Sir Alexander Gordon, Knight Commander of the most honourable Order of the Bath, Aide-de-Camp to Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington, and also brother to George, 4th Earl of Aberdeen, who in the 40th year of his age terminated a short but glorious career on the 18th June, 1815, while executing the orders of his great Commandant at Waterloo. Disdaining gallantry and good conduct in the field, he was honoured with respected marks of approbation by the illustrious Hero, with whom he shared the dangers of every battle in Spain and Portugal, and France, and received the most flattering proofs of his confidence on many trying occasions. His zeal and activity in the service obtained the reward of ten medals and the honourable distinction of the Order of the Bath. He was justly lamented by the Duke of Wellington in his public despatch as an officer of high promise and a serious loss to the country; nor less worthy of record for his virtues of private life, his unaffected respect for religion, for high sense of honour, his scrupulous integrity, and the most amiable qualities, which secured the attachment of his friends, and the love of his own family. In testimony of feelings which no language can express, a disconsolate sister (the Hon. Alicia Gordon) and five surviving brothers have erected this simple memorial to the object of their tenderest affection.

1153. The Word Pocra (XI., 191).—This is a question I long ago put to myself, and, without any authority, the following is the conclusion I came to:—If "Civis" takes another look at Parson Gordon's map, to which he refers, he will see that "po' crick" burn [sic] flowing from "Fetty myre" joins a "water ditch running from the Packhouse towards futty." This joint stream would not doubt carry the name of Pow Creek, and, flowing into the harbour at a jetty, would give the name Pocra Pier—Powcreek Pier. Some may recollect, as I do, the pow creek burn running down Bannermill Street, as a sort of open sewer, and falling into the harbour at the old Lime basin, at the foot of Church Street—now filled up by the continuation of the quay wall from Regent to Waterloo Quays.

1155. A Strange Clause (XI., 191).—The clause is evidently aimed against smuggling of foreign wines and spirits. The tenants on a seaboard property would be conveniently situated for obtaining such commodities. The following extract from a resolution came to at a meeting of the Heritors of Berwickshire, held at Greenlaw, on June 5, 1744, illustrates the situation. "We, subscribers, heritors of the shire of Berwick, being deeply sensible of the melancholy circumstances of this country by the war for these several years with Spain, and the dangerous and expensive war which we are now engaged in with France, whereby the trade of this country will be much interrupted, and the taxes must be increased, and that a luxurious way of living has shamefully crept in upon all ranks of people, who, neglecting the good and wholesome produce of our country, are got into the habit of immediate use of French wines and spirits in Public houses, which are, in a great part, clandestinely imported and smuggled through the country in defraud of the revenue." The use of tea is similarly condemned. It then proceeds, "We resolve to promise that from and after the first day of July next, and during the present war with France, we will not drink French wines in any public house, and that we will not henceforth buy any more French wines for the use of nor use them in our families after the said day, excepting what we have at present in stock upon hand" [note the saving clearance clause]. "We will not drink in public houses or use in our private houses, Brandy or French Spirits, and we will moderate and discourage the drinking of tea in our several families and suffer, to our knowledge, none to be used in them which has not paid duty. That we will encourage and assist the officers of the revenue in preventing the clandestine importing of French wines and spirits and of tea, and smuggling and vending them through the country. That we will exhort our tenants, cottars and servants to their duty in the premises. And far from despising the character of informers against smugglers, as we will ourselves be ready to inform against them, we will esteem such as do so to be most faithful friends to their country. And, further make it an article in all leases which we may hereafter grant of our respective lands to our tenants, that their aiding in any way the clandestine importing or smuggling French wines or spirits or tea shall be ipse dixit a breach or forfeiture of their lease." In addition to the statutory penalties, "They shall pay forty shillings sterling to the poor of the parish for each time they shall be convicted or guilty thereof." It then goes on to say, "That they will encourage the brewing and retailing strong ale, the distilling and retailing of spirits made from our own malt or other grain," and discourage the contrary. Curiously enough, and yet of easy explanation, the farther east the country and nearer the sea coast, the fewer signatures to the resolution were got. Very few in Dunse signed. All the small heritors there, mostly feuers, refused to sign. None in the Ayton district signed. The clause in the lease, prohibiting the use of the foreign spirits referred to, would be framed on the obvious principle, that if the liquors were not drunk, they were not so likely to be smuggled.

Adam Lindsay Gordon (XI., 139).—A very good account of Adam Lindsay Gordon has just been written by Mr. Patchett Martin in a pamphlet, The Beginnings of our Australian Literature, published by Sotheran of London.
The Mowats of Balquhollay (XI., 191).

—Wishart, in the "Deeds of Montrose," ch. xi. (p. 111, Ed. 1893) says in his account of the battle of Alford: "In this battle Montrose lost not one common soldier, and of gentlemen only two, Culcholy and Milton, whose names and families I should be glad to mention, had they been known to me, as they died gallantly in battle, for King, country, liberty, and law." Spalding, in his account of the battle, "gives the names Mowat of Balquhollay and Ogilvy of Milton, and adds that they were buried in the church at Alford. "Investigation . . . by the Rev. James Gillan, parish minister, has hitherto failed to discover any trace of the burial places of these gentlemen. Balquhollay was a small property near Turriff." Deeds, ib. note 20. In a subsequent note to p. 295 quotation is made from Calder's "History of Caithness," p. 143, that "Magnus Mowat of Freswick, in Canisbay, is styled also of Bucholie, and has been identified with the 'Balwholly,' who fell at Alford. His daughter, Christina, was the first wife of Sir John Sinclair of Dunbeath. Latheron Churchyard contains curious monuments to the lady and her daughters." Further reference to the parish minister of Latheron might elicit an answer as to the parentage of Christian or Christina Mowat. H. F. M. S.

There was a Catherine Lauder, "Lady Balquhollay," resident about Dundee about 1700; then a widow, with at least one child. Probably the family had some local connection with Dundee, as well as with the far north Balquhollay. She was connected with the writer's family.

We desire to call special attention to this exceedingly quaint and tasteful reprint of the articles written by Mr. Rait for our pages. Mr. Rait aims at "examining" the theory which Mr. J. T. T. Brown has thrown amongst the scholars, but the verdict is wholly adverse to it. Our readers have now had the advantage of hearing both sides of the question.

SCOTTISH PARISHES IN 1750.

INVERNESS AND RAYNE.

On 17th May, 1749, the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland had under consideration an Overture from the Committee on Overtures "with relation to the Reasonableness and Necessity of an Augmentation of the Generality of the Ministers' Stipends." On the following day a Committee was appointed "to report what shall upon proper Inquiry appear to them, to the next General Assembly, in order to their making Application to Parliament for an Augmentation of Stipends or providing such other Remedy as to them shall seem meet." This Committee was instructed:—

"1mo To get an Account of the just Value of all the Stipends in Scotland, by how many Heritors they were paid, what Part of them in Money, what in Victual, together with the Extent of the Glebes.

"2do To enquire into the true Extent and State of the Tithes.

"3do To enquire into all other Funds that may be applied, either with or without Authority of Parliament, for augmenting of Stipends."

The Reports received by this Committee from the ministers throughout Scotland, and now preserved in manuscript in the Library of the General Assembly, supply much interesting information regarding the state of the different parishes at a date half a century prior to the appearance of Sir John Sinclair's Statistical Account. Those from the Parishes of Inverness and of Rayne are now for the firs time printed as samples.

ANSWERS by Mr. Alexander Fraser and Mr. Alexr. McBean Ministers at INVERNESS to the Queries proposed by the Committee of the late General Assembly appointed to prepare a Plan for the Augmentation of Ministers Stipends.

The Amount of our Stipends according to use and wont and as contained in Lists of Stipends handed down to us from our Predecessors in Office and their Collectors is as follows:—

Mr. Fraser's yearly Stipend in victual is 84 Bolls half meal half bear which according to the Conversion of this Country in the Sale of Lands vis: one hundred marks the chaler is . £350 0 0
The Teind Money and Vicarage payable to him amount to . 356 19 2

In all . . . £706 19 2

Mr. McBean's yearly Stipend in Victual as above is 84 Bolls which is . £350 0 0
The Teind Money and Vicarage payable to him amount to . 356 19 2

In all . . . £706 19 2

Our Victual is payable by 35 Heretors and some years by many more as the lands near the Tower go often from hand to hand—so that what was paid by one Heretor some years ago is now paid by ten, some of our victual is paid in one Firlot some in two some in three flrlos.

Our Teind money and vicarage is paid generally speaking by the Heritors, but some of them have laid it upon the tenants and is paid in very small Items. The Town Council added to the Stipend of their Three ministers, out of the Funds of two pennies upon the pint of Ale and Beer, £424 13s. 4d. Scots money to put their Stipends upon a par, and gave £200—to a Collector to uplift their Stipends but have paid none of those sums since Anno 1737 for which there is a Process in dependance before the Court of Session.

The Town and Territories were in use and wont to pay to Mr. Fraser and Mr. McBean £36 in lieu of small tythes but have stopt payment for some years past because we could not produce our Decret of Plat which came but lately to our knowledge and is now in the hands of Mr. Baillie one of the Agents of the Church which bears date Edinb’ 1665.

Mr. Fraser’s Glebe with the houses upon it is set at present to several persons at £112 6s. 8d. Mr.
McBean’s Glebe that has more houses built upon it is set to many persons at £200. We have no manses, only one hundred merks each of us from the town in lieu of a manse, which comes far short of the Rent of houses we have been obliged to pay which was some years Ten, some years nine and never under eight pounds sterling per annum. We have no grass, nor any allowance for it. Our Fuel between peats and coal, as both are very dear in this place, cost each of us yearly about Ten pounds sterling.

The extent of the Parish of Inverness and Bona from east to west is nine miles—the breadth of it for the most part 2 miles. The Town of Inverness the Presbytery seat is distant from the Kirk of Petty to the East 4 miles, from the Kirk of Daviot to the South 4 miles, from the Kirk of Kirkhill to the North-West 5 miles, and from the Kirk of Dores to the south-west 6 miles. It is distant from Forres one of the Synod Seats 20 miles and from Elgin the other seat 28 miles and from Edinburgh 100 miles.

As to the free Tythes we can give no account of them.

The reason why we did not make answers to the above Queries sooner is that we expected our Decret of Plat to compare it with our Lists of the use and wont of our Stipends.

This is subscribed by us at Inverness March 3d 1750 in presence of Gilles Ker and Alex’ McGregor Masters of Raining’s School there, witnesses to our Subscriptions.

[Signed] Alex Fraser.
Alex McBean.

II.

Answers to the Queries proposed by the Commitee of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland for preparing a Plan for the Augmentation of Ministers Stipends respecting the Parish of Rayne.

1. The Stipend pay’d to the Minister of Rayne is five hundred and thirty four pounds one shilling and four pennies Scots money. The same is pay’d partly in victual partly in money and partly by the small teinds, the ipsa corpora of which are in use of being uplifted by the minister. The quantity of victual pay’d is fourty bolls and ane half, whereof four bolls and three flrlos is malt or malt stuff and the rest meal at eight stone weight p’. Boll, and being valued at four pounds three shillings and four pennies Scots p’. Boll, which is the conversion of this country in the sale of lands, makes one hundred and thirty five pounds eight shillings and four pennies Scots. The money stipend amounts to the sum of two hundred and ninty eight pounds and thirteen shillings Scots ;
and the small teinds to one hundred pounds Scots.

Of the above stipend three pounds three shillings and four pennies Scots and one boll of meal is pay’d out of a part of the parish of Fyvie that lies contiguous to this parish and which was therefore put under the care of the ministers of Rayne and the third part of the stipend due out of them given off for serving the cure. The other two parts continue to be pay’d to the Ministers of Fyvie. The minister of Rayne draws out of these lands also the third part of vicarage teinds and which is included in the valuation of the small teinds of the Parish as above stated.

There is no Decreet for the Stipend, and so far as the present minister knows there never was any. In the year 1710 Mr. Walter Turing then minister of Rayne entered into a friendly condescendence and agreement with the heritors, the original copy of which is in the hands of the present minister, by which the stipend was settled as above, and the
mentioned. By the said agreement the communion element money is thirteen pounds six shillings and eight pennies Scots.

The glebe will sowe six bolls bear and oats and it set in tack would yield fourty pounds Scots, each bolls sowing being valued at six pounds thirteen shillings and four pennies Scots, the common rent of such ground in this place.

The minister has no grass belonging to him but the church yard and all the allowance he has for it in money is ten pounds fifteen shillings and two pennies Scots.

If ever there was any designation of moss it is long since the same has run out. The ministers have been in use for many years past to rent moss at the distance of a mile and one half. There is no doubt a designation may be had as there is plenty of moss and Kirklands in the parish.

The stipend by the above agreement is payable by the heritors themselves of whom there are just now seven in number and they do accordingly pay the money and victual or give precepts sometimes for the victual upon one or more of their tenements. The small teinds are drawn from upwards of two hundred different persons.

2. The Parish of Rayne cannot be said to be above two miles in Breadth and as much in length according to the ordinary way of computing miles in this country, no part of it being above a long mile from

Digitized by Google
the church, excepting three towns that will be a mile and one half or perhaps two miles some parts of them.

The whole number of inhabitants in the year 1741 old and young were found to be eleven hundred and sixty, and there are of examinable persons eight hundred and forty.

The parish church of Rayne is distant from that of Auchterless, which lies north of it, five miles: From Fyvie to the north east five miles. From Daviot to the East two miles and an half. From Chappel of Garioch to the south three miles—From Oyne to the south west two miles, and from Culsallmond to the north west two miles and an half, all which parishes border with this.

The Manse of Rayne is three miles distant from Chappel of Garioch the Presbytery seat—Sixteen from Aberdeen where the Synod meets and seventy seven from Edinburgh besides ferries.

3. The Tythes of the Parish of Rayne, including the annexed lands, may be reckoned worth two thousand two hundred merks a year, according to which valuation if there be subtracted therefrom the sum of four hundred and thirty four pounds one shilling and four pennies Scots which is all that is just now paid out of the Parsonage Teinds to the Minister as stipend, and twenty four pounds one shilling and eight pennies that is paid for communion elements and grass, There will remain of free tythes the sum of one thousand and eight pounds ten shillings and four pennies Scots yearly.

The tyth of the Parish, excepting the annexed lands of which nothing is known with regard to this particular, do all belong to the King as titular. One of the Heritors commonly gets a Tack of the whole Teinds of the Parish from the Exchequer for which he pays so much money and he grants subets to the rest of the Heritors and is refunded by them of the expense of procuring the lease according to the respective value of their Teinds. The last Tack was obtained in name of Sir —— Elphinston of Logie about eighteen or nineteen years agoe. It is commonly said the same is expired or near about doing so.

4. The whole parish, excepting the annexed lands and two other towns, held of the Bishop. The Bishop rents paid here amount to the sum of three hundred and forty pounds Scots, which it is said are appropriated to the University of Aberdeen.

In obedience to the orders of the Committee I Mr.
John Mair minister of Rayne have drawn up the above Answers to the Queries proposed by them contained upon this and the two preceding pages. All the particulars contained in the Answers to the first and second Queries are consistent with my knowledge and I assert them to be facts. The answers to the third and fourth are given upon the best information
I could have; and I do attest this my report by subscribing the same at Rayne this twenty eight day of July one thousand seven hundred and forty nine.
Before witnesses Mr. Alexander Gerard Preacher of the Gospel and Andrew Durno in Lentush.

Alex.—Gerard witness.

Andrew Durno witness.

Wee Alexander Walker in Kirkton of Rayne and James Leitch in Browsterboig Farmers Do hereby declare that we have compared the particulars in the within report respecting the stipend of Rayne with the written agreement twist Mr. Walter Turing late Minister of Rayne and the Heritors of that Parish and have found them exactly to correspond And we do further hereby declare that according to our best skill and knowledge the extent of the Glebe is justly stated and we do hereby attest the value put upon the Bolls sowing to be the rates at which such ground is let in this place. And we have subscribed this our declaration at Rayne this twenty eight day of July one thousand seven hundred and forty nine.

JAMES LEITCH.

The Committee reported to the General Assembly of 1750 "That ten Chalders of Vicual, or the Value of it in Money, according to the usual Conversion in the Sale of Lands, is no more than a moderate Provision for Ministers over Scotland"; but that "Of the 833 Benefices of the Church, 65 are under the present legal Minimum of 800 Merks or 44 8s. 10d.
Sterling" while of the rest

208 do not exceed £50
203 are from £50 to £60
213 £60 to £70
65 £70 to £80
29 £80 to £90
21 £90 to £100
5 £100 to £110
8 £110 to £120
16 are of £138 17s. 9d.

The total of these Benefices is reported to amount to £50,266 15s. 5d., and the Tithes
"not affected by Ministers' stipends" to nearly

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

801. Robb, Thomas (Rev.): Jesuit Divine. Rector of Scots College, Douai. I take this name from K. J. in S. N. & Q., x, 115-6. He is there described as born at Aberdeen in 1608, and as having been for more than 30 troublous years Superior of the Mission Church of Rome in his native country. He was afterwards promoted to be Rector of the Scots College, Douai, where he died in 1684. K. J. notices only one work of his, S. N. & Q., x., 116.

802. Robb, William: Local Historian, &c. Besides issuing The Heir of Glendornie, anonymously at Aberdeen in 1880, Mr. Robb has published an interesting Sketch of the History of Bon-Accord Free Church, Aberdeen, 1887, and Aberdeen: Its Traditions and History, 1893. See A. W. Robertson's Handlist of Local Bibliography and K. J. in S. N. & Q.

803. Robertson, Alexander: Artist in United States. The second of three brothers who all acquired fame as painters. He was born in the eighth decade of the eighteenth century, studied at Marischal College, 1786-1788, and early followed his elder brother, Archibald, to the United States, where both are said to have been very successful. See K. J. in S. N. and Q., x., 115-6.

805. Robertson, Alexander W., M.A.: Librarian of Aberdeen Public Library. Mr. Robertson, who is a native of Aberdeen, was born in 1847, and graduated at the Aberdeen University, 1866. He is a valued contributor to this periodical, and is at present engaged, in collaboration with Mr. James F. Kellas Johnstone ("K. J."), in compiling a Bibliography of the North-Eastern Counties of Scotland, for the New Spalding Club (see p. 26 of this number of S. N. and Q.). He has issued several catalogues of the Library, over which he so efficiently presides. He is brother of the late well-known Professor Croom Robertson, No. 809.

806. Robertson, Andrew: Scottish Scholar. For an interesting note on this author, who translated into Latin verse Sir David Lindsay's Dialogue between Experience and a Courtier, &c., The Dream and other Poems—from which version a second translation into Danish rhyme was made by James Matheson, Copenhagen, in 1591, see K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 114. There is an Andrew Robertson, a Scottish scholar of this period, two of whose works are catalogued in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh. They are as follows:—Carmen Lugubrum in Obiton Andreae Laurentii, fol., Hafniae, 1589, and Jacti Sexit et Annaeae Epithalamium. Item Salutatio ad Christianum Quantum, quarto, Hafniae, 1590. I suspect this is the Andrew Robertson referred to by K. J.; and, if so, Mr. P. J. Anderson is right in saying that it was not he but another, Robertson, who was Regent at King's in 1597.

807. Robertson, Andrew: Artist, Miniature Painter. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born on the 14th October, 1777, took the degree of M.A. at Marischal College in 1794, he is said to have been something of an infant prodigy, and to have earned over £1700 by the practice of his art in Aberdeen by the time he was 24 years old. In his boyhood he received help from Sir Henry Raeburn, of whom he draws a charming "pen and ink sketch" in his diary. He was also for a time a pupil of Alexander Nasmyth, the landscape painter. He came to London in 1801, and stepped at once to the front as the leading miniaturist of the day. He obtained a footing at Court, and was appointed miniature painter to the Duke of Sussex. His works, which are numerous, are very delicately painted, and are highly prized by collectors. He died in 1845. His Life, founded on his Diary and Letters, appeared in 1895, and is very instructive and entertaining.

808. Robertson, Archibald: Portrait Painter. A native of Monymusk, he was early brought to Aberdeen, where he and his brothers, Alexander and Andrew, were educated, all three being alumni of Marischal College. Archibald was the first to emigrate to the United States, where he settled more than a century ago, and became the father of the art of portraiture in America. His success brought out to the States his brother, Alexander, and the two talented Scots long filled a high social position, which their talents and culture well qualified them to adorn. Archibald's son, Anthony Lipenard Robertson, a lawyer of the highest rank, died in 1868 Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. I have not learned the date of Archibald Robertson's death. He published a Treatise on Drawing, at New York, 1796. A sketch of his life appeared in the Century Magazine for May, 1890. See S. N. & Q., iv., 55.

809. Robertson, George Croom, LL.D. (Prof.): Metaphysician, &c. Professor Robertson was born in Aberdeen, 10th March, 1842. Was educated at the University in his native city, where he graduated in 1861. He also had the honour to win the Ferguson Scholarship, open to all the Scottish Universities. He thereafter prosecuted his studies at Berlin, Göttingen, and Paris. After serving for a time as Assistant Professor of Greek in Aberdeen, he was appointed Professor of the Philosophy of Mind in University College, London, young though he was, obtaining the preference of the curators over no less illustrious a philosopher and scholar than Dr. James Martineau. He was co-editor for many years of the philosophical quarterly entitled Mind, and wrote extensively in various directions. His lectures and articles are too numerous for mention, but it may be noted that he wrote the Monograph on Hobbes for "Blackwood's Philosophical Classics." He died in 1892, and his Philosophical Remains appeared in 1894.

810. Robertson, James (Professor): Scottish Scholar. One of the numerous Scots who in the 17th century taught at the Universities on the Continent. He was born in Aberdeen towards the end of the 16th century, and was Professor at the University of Bourdeaux in the first half of the 17th.

811. Robertson, James, D.D.: Leader of Church of Scotland, and Founder of the Church Extension Scheme of that Church. A native of Ardlaw, Pittsigo, and born 2nd January, 1803. Through much self-denial at home he was educated for the ministry at Marischal College, where he took the degree of M.A. Before receiving license, he taught in Pittsigo and was Head Master of Gordon's Hospital, Aberdeen. Having been licensed by the Presbytery of Deer, he was presented to Ellon parish in 1832. He was a member of the Poor Law Commission, and a firm and powerful opponent of the Disruption principles of the party who subsequently formed the Free Church. He was censured by that party in the General Assembly, 1842, for holding communion with the deposed ministers of Strathbogie. He was made a D.D. by his University in 1843. He also succeeded Dr. Welsh in the chair of Church History and as Secretary of the Bible Board, 1843. He was for a good many years leader of the Moderate Party, and was chosen Moderator of the General Assembly in 1862. In 1846, Dr. Robertson entered upon his great scheme of Church Extension, and before his death he had obtained subscriptions amounting to half-a-million pounds, amounting upwards of 60 parishes. For a full list of his writings, see A. W. Robertson's Handlist, and K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 117. Delete, however, from K. J.'s list the volume entitled Old Truths and Modern Speculations, which is the production of a United Presbyterian Dr. Robertson. See Life, by Dr. Charteris.

812. Robertson, James Craigie (Rev.): Canon of Canterbury and Ecclesiastical Historian. Born in Aberdeen in 1813, he studied at Marischal College, 1824-1826, and afterwards graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, 1834. Having taken orders in the Church of England, he was vicar of Beckesbourne, near Canterbury, from 1846 to 1859, when he was appointed Canon of Canterbury. From 1864 to 1874 he was Professor of Ecclesiastical History, King's College, London. His historical works take high rank. His History of the Christian Church to the Reformation is a standard work. For a list of his publications, see A. W. Robertson's Handlist and K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 117. He died in July, 1882. See Herzog, Encyclopaedia.

813. Robertson, John, M.D.: Author of a Hebrew Grammar. He took his medical degree at King's College in 1730, and then settled and practised as a doctor in Aberdeen. He published in 1747 a very curious book, entitled The True and Ancient Manner of reading Hebrew without points, and the whole art of the Hebrew Versification deduced from it, both laid down in so plain a way as to be easily learned in a few days. See K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 117.

814. Robertson, John: Journalist. This London Reviewer was a native of Aberdeen, and second cousin of Dr. Joseph Robertson, No. 817. He was born in Aberdeen in 1811, and studied at Marischal College, 1838-1840. He was educated for the Congregational ministry, but never had a charge. He went to London, and became a friend of John Stuart Mill's, and conducted for some time the Westminster Review. There is a notice of him in Froude's Life of Carlyle, vol. iii.

815. Robertson, John Forbes: Poet and Art Critic. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born 30th January, 1822. He is best known by his excellent work, The Great Painters of Christendom (1878), which has gone into several editions. He also published in 1854 a continuation of The Aberdeenshire Limite. For a list of his writings on Art and other subjects, see K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 117, and A. W. Robertson's Handlist of Local Bibliography. His son, Mr. Johnston Forbes Robertson, has gained a great reputation in London as an actor.

816. Robertson, Joseph, LL.D.: Journalist, Antiquary, and Record Scholar. Judge one of the greatest charter students of his time. Born in Aberdeen on 17th May, 1810, he was educated at the Grammar School and Marischal College, 1822-1825. His literary bias displayed itself early, for, in conjunction with some other students, he started a magazine in his native city, which, however, had only a brief existence. He also contributed to the Aberdeen Observer. He afterwards published, under the title of the Book of Bon-Accord, a guide book to Aberdeen, which was full of antiquarian information. Robertson proceeded to Edinburgh in 1833, and was for some years engaged in miscellaneous literary work by Messrs. Oliver & Boyd. As a journalist he undertook the editorship of the Aberdeen Constitutional in 1839, and thereafter, in 1843, became editor of the Glasgow Herald and Constitutional, and passed thence to the editorial chair of the Edinburgh Courant in 1849. Here he proved himself a vigorous and learned writer on the Conservative side of politics. His forte, however, was more among black-letter tomes than among newspapers, and from 1853 till his death in 1866 he filled with the greatest efficiency the post of Curator of the Historical Department of the Register House. Few literary men toiled harder. His services to the Spalding, Bannatyne, and Maitland Clubs were invaluable. For a list of his many learned works and articles, see A. W. Robertson's Handlist, K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 117, and Dr. Irving's Book of Eminent Scotsmen.

817. Robertson, Joseph Gibb: Canadian Statesman. Son of the Congregational Minister of Stuartfield, Old Deer, where he was born on 1st January, 1820, he accompanied his father to Sherbrooke, Quebec province, in boyhood. He has been one of the most useful and public-spirited inhabitants of his adopted country. He has been President of the Quebec Central Railway Company, for 20 years Mayor of Sherbrooke, besides filling almost every local public office in the district where he resides. He was appointed a Member of the Executive Council in 1865, and was Provincial Treasurer of Quebec from that time till 1874. He was re-appointed, however, the same year, and held his Treasurership till his resignation in 1876. He was first returned to the Legislative Assembly in 1867, and has been re-elected for Sherbrooke at every General Election since. He has held the office of Provincial Treasurer in several successive Governments, besides those already specified, and is one of Canada’s most trusted public men. A brother of No. 820 and son of No. 811.

818. Robertson, J. T. Mackay: Theatre Manager. Born in Aberdeen about thirty years ago, or more, he began life in his native city as a lawyer’s clerk. During office hours he attended Minto’s class at the University. Then at the age of 18 he passed to London. After holding a position in connection with several exhibitions, his prospects improved, and at 24 years of age he became Manager of the Strand Theatre, the youngest man of his walk in London who had attained such a position. He has kept his position since.

819. Robertson, Margaret Murray: Novelist. Born in the Congregational Manse, Stuartsfield, Old Deer, in 1823, she emigrated with her father to Canada in 1832. Educated in Massachusetts, she gave herself to teaching in Sherbrooke Ladies’ Academy in Quebec. She has written many pleasing novels in a pious strain, some of which, as Christy Redfern’s Troubles, The Two Miss Dawsons, The Orphans of Glen Elder, and By a way that she knew not, have been very popular. She died in 1897. For list of writings, see K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 118, 139.

820. Robertson, Robert, M.D.: Medical Writer. This distinguished Aberdonian was a medical man of great ability, who spent the best part of his life in India. He received his M.D. from King’s College in 1779. A detailed list of his writings is given in S. N. & Q., x., 118.

821. Robertson, Robert Ross: Successful Merchant. A notable son of the Granite City, where he was born in 1813, Mr. Robertson proceeded early to London, where he gained fame and fortune by a successful commercial career. He died in 1887.

822. Robertson, William (Rev.): Congregational Divine and Author. Long the Congregational Minister at Stuartsfield, Old Deer. He has published The Brazen Serpent and other works. For notice of him, see S. N. & Q., x., 115 and 139. His daughter is a Canadian novelist.

823. Robertson, William, M.A. (Rev.): Minor Poet. Born at Gartly, near Huntly, in 1785, he graduated at King’s College in 1804. He became teacher at Clatt, but studied for the Church, and was ordained Minister of Carmylie in 1816. He died in 1836. He is known as the author of The Baron of Gartly, a ballad; and other songs. See Bards of Bon-Accord.

824. Robertson, William, D.D.: Leader of Dutch Reformed Church in South Africa. A native of Inverurie, where he was born in 1805. After studying for the ministry, he proceeded to South Africa, where he became Minister of Swellendam, and one of the most respected ministers of the Dutch Protestant Church. He graduated at King’s College in 1828, and is described by himself in the College Album as having come from Moray. I have also seen him claimed for Inverurie, and have inserted his name among Aberdonians, in the belief that the Inverurie birthplace is the true one. He received the title of D.D. from his Alma Mater in 1840, and died in 1879.

825. Roger, George, M.A. (Rev.): Original Secession Author. He was born in Aberdeen in 1810, and graduated at Marischal College there in 1827. Trained for the Original Secession Church, he was ordained to the pastorate of the Original Secession Church, Auchinleck. He acted as Clerk to the Presbytery, and is the author of several publications. He died in 1870.

826. Rose, Sir John, K.C.M.G.: Canadian Statesman. Born in Aberdeenshire in 1820. Educated at King’s College, but proceeded to Canada, where he was called to the Bar in 1840, and became Q.C. in 1849. He represented Montreal in the Canadian Parliament from 1859 to 1869. He has held many important posts, among others, was Finance Minister. He was also Commissioner for Britain in connection with settlement of claims arising out of the Oregon Treaty. He became K.C.M.G. in 1870, and died in 1886.

The Earl of Athol in Bucks.—David de Strabolge had a holding in Bucks. In the “History of Ardley, Bucknell, Caversfield and Stoke Lyne,” by the Rev. J. C. Bloomfield, M.A., Rural Dean of Bicester (1894), the Strabolge right to Caversfield is accounted for thus:

William de Valence, son of Hugh le Brun, Earl of Marche in Poicto, by Isabel, widow of King John, and mother of King Henry III., was created Earl of Pembroke
by his half-brother, Henry III.
Died 1296.

David de Strabolge, son and heir. Died 1375, leaving only two daughters his heirs.

At the Inquisition after the death of the Earl of Athol, it was found that he and Joan his wife died seized of half a knight’s fee in Caversfield, held by the Prior of Berchere and the heirs of William de Wymestre.
THE GORDONS IN POLAND.

LADY CATHERINE GORDON's appearance in Poland is only one point in the history of a very interesting connection which Scotland had long had with that hapless land. The subject affords a fascinating field of enquiry for some historian. Let me indicate one or two points.

To begin with, we find (according to Charles Gordon, the historian of the Gordons) that when the Archbishop of Canterbury absolved Lady Catherine's grandfather, the first Marquis of Huntly, from the dread ban of excommunication, pronounced against him by the Kirk of Scotland, among those who witnessed the ceremony in Lambeth Chapel in July, 1603, was "the prince Radziwill's son and another polish nobleman." Now, exactly a hundred years later, Prince Adam Constantin Czartorski, the descendant of Huntly's granddaughter, Lady Catherine Gordon, married a Princess of the house of Radziwill, and founded the younger, or Rokosow, branch of the Czartorski family. The Radziwills, who still flourish, were a very influential Polish family.

Several Gordons had doubtless figured in Poland as soldiers of fortune. The younger sons of old Scots families had no other choice. This is clearly shown by a letter of General Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries (the friend of Peter the Great), written in 1669 to Joseph Williamson, secretary to Lord Arlington, the Secretary of State, and quoted in the State Papers published by the Government. He writes while on a visit to this country:—

I am intending to return to Russia, though the pay there is a bare subsistence. But in Scotland soldiers of fortune can obtain no honourable employment for persons of quality. In England, aliens are scarcely employed, so that foreign service becomes a necessity.

Patrick Gordon entered the Swedish army in 1655 as a lad of twenty, under the guidance of Rittmaster Gorden, of the Troup family. During the next six years he was frequently captured in the great Protestant struggle which Gustavus was waging against Rome; but he did not resent being under Poland in the least, for he was a staunch Romanist himself. He was pretty constantly under Polish arms between January and July, 1656, and again from the end of 1658 to 1661, so that it is highly probable that he met Lady Catherine Gordon.

This much at least is certain—he came across the other famous Patrick Gordon, known as "Steelhand," at that time a captain in the Polish cavalry. I should very much like to know what branch of the Gordons "Steelhand" belonged to. In 1647 he was mixed up with the Gordons of Lesmoir, of Newton, of Haddo, and Gight, in supporting the Marquis of Huntly's cause against the Covenant. In April, 1650, he was excommunicated, while in October, 1651, he sought to be released from that ban. Three members of the Presbytery were told off to see him, and they reported that he showed some signs of repentance for his former "guiltiness and gross debordinges." Six years later we find him as a captain of Polish cavalry, meeting his namesake, Patrick of Auchleuchries. In 1659 he is rather concerned about the property of his kinsman, Lieutenant Adam Gordon (apparently also in the Polish army), who had been killed, and about the same time he is concerned in the raising of a new troop in the name of the Holy Roman Empire. He was living in 1667. Did he ever come back to Scotland, and had he any descendants?

To return to the younger Patrick, of Auchleuchries, we find that he first served in 1656 in the Dragoon regiment of Prince Constantin Lubomirski, the Starost of Sandets; while in 1659 he was quartermaster of the body guard of foot of Field Marshal George Sebastien Lubomirski, the Grand Marshal of the Crown, who died in 1667, much to Gordon's grief. Gordon went off in 1661 to Russia, where his life work lay, though in 1685 John Sobieski tried to tempt him back to Poland.

There is a certain irony in the fact that soon after the General had left Poland his friends in the North were called on by the Presbytery of Ellon (1664) to give alms to "tua young Polonian students who live in Aberdeen, and have much need of Christian charitie, and who left ther awin countrie, being trubled for ther profession of ye trew Protestant religion."

Lady Catherine had a kinsman in the Polish army nearer to her than Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries. This was Paul Menzies, who was her distant cousin, for he was the son of Sir Gilbert Menzies of Pitfoddes and Lady Ann Gordon, the daughter of John, 12th Earl of Sutherland, and Lady Jean Gordon (Bothwell's divorced wife).

Meanwhile there were Gordons galore in a very different stratum of Society—the great class of traders. The Scot had penetrated Poland at an early period. Skene, in his De Verborum Significatione, 1597, says:—

Ane Pedder is called ane mercodian or crerar, quha beirs ane pack or creame [booth] upon his bak quha are called beirares of the pudder be the Scottesman of the realme of Polonia, quhairst I saw an greate multitude in the town of Cracovia.
Anno Dom 1599.

Possibly Lady Catherine did not come across this type of her fellow-countrymen. Indeed, they seem to have had rather a bad time of it, and to have sunk low in the estimation of their adopted country, which was probably jealous of their success. I have already noted (May number) that many Polish Jews are called "Gordon"
—the transposed form of "Grodno," the town whence they come, but which they cannot pronounce. Until I got this explanation, I was inclined to believe that these Jewish Gordons may have been descendants of our Gentile Gordons. The idea was not so foolish as may appear at first sight, because (somewhere about 1617) Poland came to the conclusion (which is not unknown in Cockaigne of to-day) that Jews and Scotsmen were identical. Thus, the authorities ordained that every Scot resident in the country should pay "tua gooldings [guldings] yerlie for his head." This, as the exiled Scots complained to our Privy Council, was the same "slavise toill and impostion layd upon the Jews and quhairst with no utheris Christianis bot onlie the borne subjectis of this realme [ Scotland] wer burdenit." Some influential Scots at Court intervened, and the susceptibilities of their countrymen were appeased by the word
"head" being transformed into "poll." Half a century later Patrick Gordon found a similar prejudice existing in Russia, for he tells us that foreigners were "looked upoun by the best sort as scarcely Christians, and by the pleybeyans as meer pagans."

Among the Gordons who practised the gentle art of merchandise in Poland, the most notable was Patrick Gordon (Joseph Robertson calls him "of Braco"), who was the Scots consul in Poland, the only post of the kind on the continent, save the Conservatorie of Privileges in the Netherlands, of whom Andrew Halyburton, whose entertaining ledger has been published, is the best example. Gordon made himself quite famous in 1613 by running to earth a German (or Pole), called Stercovius, who had "tradoceit the subjectis of all estaites and degres within this kinndome [Scotland] by ane infamous libell and book divulgat and sett out be him to the ignominie and reprocthe of this hailt natiouin, especiall of his Majestis subjectis traffecqing in the East countreis." Stercovius was hanged, thus washing away by his "infamous deathe ony stayne or blatt, whilk his malicious libell might otherways haif importit to the perpetuall disgrace of this his Majesties natiouin." Gordon, however, afterwards got into trouble with the Privy Council. It was stated that he had done nothing to get the disabilities against the Scots removed. Furthermore, he was charged by one of his fellow Scots, Gilbert Wilson of Petercaw, with having practically blackmailed his fellow countrymen. The Council found that Patrick had "verie fer overseene himselfe," but, as he did not appear before them, the matter dropped.
James Gordon, merchant in Posen, is mentioned in connection with the charges made against Consul Gordon.

From the Birth Brieve granted by the Aberdeen authorities (Miscellany of the Spalding Club), I note the following Gordons:—

Patrick and John Gordon, merchants in Poland, 1646, were the sons of John Gordon, burgess of Aberdeen, who was the son of John Gordon of Birsemoir (killed at Darnaway), by Margaret, daughter of George Gordon, II. of Lesmoir.

Hew and John Gordon of Vangroba, who emigrated in 1636, were the sons of George Gordon of Bray in Scudarg, who was the son of James Gordon of Tillieangus, a cadet of the Gordons of Craig.

Alexander Gordon of Presenetz and his brother James of Culm, were the sons of Patrick Gordon of Harlaw, who was the son of Alexander Gordon of Kincraigie, who was the son of Patrick Gordon I. of Craig. The first pair were granted birth brieve in 1703.

William Gordon of Vangroba, who emigrated in 1637 at the age of 18, was the eldest son of John Gordon of Ardfork, who was the son of Alexander Gordon at the Bridge of Don. This William had a brother Robert (died in 1649), a merchant in Dantiz; and another, James, minister of Kinow.

William Gordon of "Poltskie," who emigrated in 1636 at the age of 17, was the son of James Gordon, who was the son of John Gordon of Corridoune by Katherine, daughter of John Gordon of Auchanachie.

Charles Gordon, who went to Dantiz in 1680, and was a merchant in Warsaw in 1697, was the son of Alexander Gordon, son of John of Tillieangus, son of William of Tillieangus, who married Mary, daughter of Alexander Gordon of Arradoul.

Robert Gordon, the founder of Gordon's College, made his money as a merchant in Dantiz at the end of the seventeenth century.

A Chalmers operated at Varso, 1670, and among other families I note Forbes, Maitland, Rait, Buchan, Innes and Clark, at various towns, notably Posen, Lishna, Crackow, and Lublin.
It would be interesting to know whether their descendants now flourish under the rule of the Czar. Among other members of Aberdeenshire families trading in Poland, I may note John SCOTTISH NOTES AND QUERIES.

CHEYNE (son of Pitfichie) at Pitercow, 1646; James Coutts (son of Robert Coutts of Auchtercoul and Jean Gordon of Craig) at Dantzig, 1646; Robert Farquhar of Posen (son of William Farquhar of Dillab), 1642; William Abercomby, son of Andrew, who was the grandson of Alexander Abercomby of Birkenbog, 1648; Robert Duguid (son of Robert of Ruthven, who was the son of Robert Duguid of Auchenhove and Majorie Gordon of Abergeldie), 1639. When the line of the Counts Leslie became extinct about 1858, part of their Gratz property was adjudged to the Balquhain Leslies as the descendants of Patrick, Count Leslie, whose daughter, Teresa, married Robert Duguid of Auchenhove about 1700. This Robert's son, John Duguid (Leslie), became 22nd laird of Balquhain.

I may add, in conclusion, that there is a great mass of literature in the British Museum on and by the Lubomirskis and the Czartoryskis, but, as it is mostly written in Polish, it remains a sealed book for me. I am indebted for much help in compiling these somewhat complicated descents to Prince Adam Czartoryski (who writes excellent English), to Prince George Lubomirski, who replied through "C. Robertson" (the Scot is still abroad apparently), and to Mr. W. R. Morfill, the Reader in Russian at Oxford University.

J. M. BULLOCK.

STATUES OF BYRON.—Apropos of the proposal to erect a statue of Lord Byron in Aberdeen, it may be noticed that the following statues exist:

A marble bust by Thorwaldsen, 1816. Now in the possession of Lady Dorchester.

A bronze statue by Belt, 1880, in Hamilton Gardens, Hyde Park.

A marble statue at Mesolonghi. This statue was raised at the expense of Mr. D. Schilizzi, a wealthy Greek merchant in London, after the celebration of the centenary of Byron's death, which was commemorated by a solemn service in the Greek Church at Bayswater. The statue is the work of the French sculptor, M. David d'Auger. (Illustrated in The Sketch, April 7, 1897.)

OLD HIGHLAND SUPERSTITION.—Garvamore, signifying "the great rough ford," was formerly the last stage on the road between Bridge of Laggan and Fort Augustus, when one crossed Corryarrie where the Spey rises at the height of 147 feet above the sea. A superstition relating to the spot is thus referred to by Mr. Alexander Macpherson in his Glimpses of Church and Social Life in the Highlands in Olden Times, (p. 357) — "In days long since gone by, the Macphersons of the house of Garva believed that their spirits would inhabit Tom-Mor, a hill in the immediate neighbourhood. On the entrance of every new inhabitant Tom-Mor was seen by persons at a certain distance in a state of illumination. It is related that it was seen on fire for the last time about the end of last century, and it was confidently asserted that some member of the house of Garva was passing from this into a better state of existence. But no deaths being heard of in the neighbourhood for some days, an opinion, beginning to decline, was on the eve of being consigned into oblivion, when, to the confusion of the sceptics, news arrived that the daughter of a gentleman of the house of Garva had expired at Glasgow in the very moment Tom-Mor had been seen in a blaze."

J. M. MACKINLAY, F.S.A. (Lond. & Scot.).

THE SCOTS FLEET.—It would be very interesting if somebody would write a history of the mercantile marine of Scotland before the Union. In the Ledger of Andrew Halyburton, Conservator of the Privileges of the Scots Nation in the Netherlands (1492-1503), will be found the following names of vessels: the "Ball," the "Andro Barton," the "Barbyll," the "Robert Barcar," the "Robert Barton," the "Bollykyn," the "Copyn Ryng of the Feir," the "Cowasch," the "Cristoffyr," the "Dalquhy Robart," the "Damskyn" [Denmark], the bark "Doglas," the "Gylbart Edmeston" (50 references), the "Egyll" (25 references), the "John Ervin," the "Flour," the "Gyllan," the "Juylan," the "Wyllykyn Lychtharnes" (19 references), the "Lyon," the "Ladye Marye," the "Nelbol" (22 references), the "Nycholl Ramsay," the "Spanzeart," the "Wylzem Todrik," the "Vardur," the "Vissyll," the "Lem Vyllzem," the "James Wod," the "Schir Ando Woid," the "Wyllykynnis," the "The Wyssyll" [Bruges]. Some of the ships that sailed from Aberdeen in 1617 with "woyll," etc., were the "Margaret," the "Bon-Accord," the "Grieffhound," the "Blessing," the "Star." Other ships were "The Gift of God" of Kirkcaldy, "The Good Fortune" of Kirkcaldy, "The Ness," "Grace of God" of Fisherraw, "Moyseye" of Leith, "Jonas" of Preston.

REPORT BY BIBLIOGRAPHY SUB-COMMITTEE TO EDITORIAL COMMITTEE.

(Vide S. N. & Q., VIII., 113, 128; X., 108.)

The Bibliography Sub-Committee, consisting of Colonel Johnston, Professor Trail, Mr. George Walker, and Mr. Bulloch, met twice (Colonel Johnston in the chair) in conference with the Editors, Mr. Robertson and Mr. Kellas Johnstone, and the Secretary, Mr. Anderson. After full discussion of the remit, and consideration of sundry suggestions made by Mr. J. P. Edmond, Haigh Hall, and the Rev. Stephen Ree, Boharm, it was agreed to recommend the adoption of the rules contained in the print submitted herewith.

23 April 1898.

W. JOHNSTON, C.

I. DISTRICT:—
The Counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine.

II. SCOPE:—
The term Books, as used below, to include:
(1) Separate publications of at least two pages printed on opposite sides of the paper.
(2) Contributions to Magazines, Transactions, etc.
(3) Maps, Topographical Prints, Music. Manuscripts may be noted in an Appendix. Broadsheets to be reserved for separate treatment.

III. BOOKS TO BE INCLUDED:—
Inclusion will depend on one or other of three considerations: (1) Subject, (2) Publisher, (3) Author.

(1) Subject.
A. To appear in Part 1 (see IV., infra):— Books whose subject explicitly relates to the district.
B. To appear only in Part 2:—
a. Books that contain important references to the district.
b. Books that treat of authors included under (3), infra.

(2) Publisher.
A. To appear in Part 1:—
a. Books having a local publisher, sole or first named.
b. Books having a local publisher, though not first named—provided they were printed locally.

(3) Author.
A. To appear in Part 1:—
Books by one domiciled within the district, if the books were issued during the period of domicile (e.g., Professor J. Clerk Maxwell, 1856-60).

B. To appear only in Part 2:—
a. Books by one born within or without the district, whose parents were domiciled within it at the time of birth.
b. Books by one educated within the district, either at school, or at one of the Aberdeen Universities (graduate or alumnus).
c. Books by one officially connected with the district, if the books were issued during the period of office (e.g., Col. W. H. Sykes, 1854-55 and 1857-72).

IV. ARRANGEMENT:—

Under year of publication. Entries of the several years to be arranged alphabetically by authors, and in the case of anonymous works by titles. Titles to be bibliographically accurate, though not necessarily full, except for rarities. All omissions to be indicated by three dots (...), and nothing to be omitted that bears on the inclusion of the book in the Bibliography, e.g., the name of a local publisher. Articles in periodicals to have number of pages and of plates noted, and, where title of article is misleading, an indication of its subject to be given.

When the book has not been seen by either of the editors, a dagger (†) to be prefixed, and the source from which the title is taken to be indicated where possible; where this cannot be given, a double dagger (‡) to be prefixed, and the editor responsible for the title to be noted (R. or J.).

The existence of a book in the Aberdeen Public Library or Aberdeen University Library to be noted (P.L. or U.L.); and when the book is of a high degree of rarity, the collections where it is known to be preserved to be named.

Part 2. Abbreviated alphabetical list.

Under name of author; or under title of anonymous work not already included in Part 1. Titles given here (except for rarities) to be as short as is consistent with the identification of the books; and to be preceded by a summary of the outstanding facts in the career of the author.

This part at once to serve as an Author Index to Part 1 (titles repeated to be marked with an asterisk*), and to include books not falling within the province of Part 1 (see III. (1) B, and III. (3) B, supra).

Part 3. Indexes.

a. Index of Publishers; with biographical notes.
b. Index of Printers; with biographical notes.

These two indexes will apply only to Part 1.
c. Index of Titles of anonymous books.
d. Index of Subjects.

These two indexes will apply to Part 1 and Part 2. References for Part 1 will be to page and number of title on page, thus: Murray lectures, 105 (3).

In connection with the Bibliography, the Committee and Editors have been much cheered by the very generous offer of Mr. J. P. Edmond to permit the incorporation of all the information of his Aberdeen Printers and Last Notes in the projected work. Besides this, Mr. Edmond is still further to aid the Editors by supplying them with descriptions of all Aberdeen books (before 1736) which he has traced since these works appeared. This virtually amounts to an assignation of copyright, and must greatly enhance the value of a most interesting and important work.

OUR ILLUSTRATION.

Saint Nicholas is the patron saint of Russia, hence the name of the Czar, the Emperor being the head of the National Church. In Germany he is considered the patron saint of girls; and in this country he takes scholars and sailors under his peculiar care. No wonder then that he has been adopted as the patron saint of Aberdeen from the earliest times, and that the Parish Church has borne his name from time immemorial.

We give as our illustration here what we believe is the earliest delineation of the structure. The print from which it is taken is a very old one, and if, as we think, it was one of the illustrations in a book of Topographical Antiquities, it may very probably represent a building in existence four or even five hundred years ago. That it represents the Parish Church of Aberdeen can hardly be doubted; it is so evidently the germ of the building which afterwards underwent so many alterations, and yet has all along preserved the initial design, the usual plan being to build from the centre in both directions. Dr. Cooper says (Cartularium, II., preface xix.), "when the old East Kirk (the Fifteenth Century Choir) was taken down in 1837, an observant antiquary, who was alive at the time, tells us that the foundations of the ancient chancel were disclosed. He describes these foundations as showing that this chancel had been aileless." It will be observed that in this view it is so, while all subsequent views up to 1837 represent the Choir (East Church) with aisles.

VALUATION OF KENMORE PARISH, PERTHSHIRE, 1630.—The following is the valuation, made in 1630 by the Sub-Commissioners of the Presbytery of Dunkeld, of the Rent, Stock and Teind of the several lands in the parish of Kenmore, as belonging then to the several heritors. The original spelling of the different possessions is here retained.

WHO OWNS DUNKELD CATHEDRAL?—The Presbytery of Dunkeld have for some time past been engaged in an effort to ascertain the exact position of the Cathedral, and its relation to the Church of Scotland, but, so far, their efforts have not been attended by much success. In their hunt after title-deeds they recently procured a copy of a Royal Warrant, dated 4th September, 1811, "granting to the Duke of Atholl £99 18s. for repairing the Cathedral Church of Dunkeld, and for granting the choir of the Cathedral to the Parish of Dunkeld to be used as a Parish Church." This warrant certainly did not clear up matters to any great extent, but the effect of it appeared to be that the choir of the Cathedral was vested for all time in the parish as a parish church, while the duties of maintenance seemed to be imposed on the Duke of Atholl. The Duke, it seems, on receiving the Royal Warrant of 1811, addressed a communication to the Treasury referring to the words in the warrant granting the choir of the Cathedral "to the parish of Dunkeld, to be used as a Parish Church in all time coming," and pointed out that "there is not now, nor ever was, any such parish as that of Dunkeld, nor yet any Parish Church." The result of this communication was that the Royal Warrant of 1811 was cancelled, and a subsequent warrant, dated 29th July, 1812, was issued, in which the following words occur:—"Do also authorise and empower you to make a grant of the choir of the said Cathedral to the said Duke and hisforesaid, to be used as a place of public worship in all time coming." The Queen's and Lord Treasurer's Remembrancer states that he has no reason to doubt that the terms of this second warrant were carried out in their entirety, for he has found another petition from the Duke of Atholl in 1819 praying for an additional grant from the Government, in which he states that "your memorialist received from the Barons of Exchequer in Scotland, by virtue of a grant from your lordships, a sum of, etc., etc.

THE FAMILY OF SAMPSON.—Admiral Sampson, who has been distinguishing himself, is said to have been born in the Ha'een of Forfar 64 years ago. His father, William Sampson, was a weaver, and his niece, Mrs. John Johnston, lives in Forfar still. Another member of the family of Sampson who has become famous is Mr. George Alexander [Sampson], the well-known actor. He comes from Stirling. Of course, the immortal one of the house is Dominie Sampson.

1168. MACMILLANS OF LOCH TAYSIDE.—In the fourth volume of Miscellania Scotia, 1820, there is embodied An inquiry into the Genealogy and present state of Ancient Scottish Surnames, by William Buchanan of Auchmar, in which the author, in treating of the Macmillans, says:—"The cause of the Macmillans losing the greatest part of their estate in Knapdale is reported to have been their joining the Lord Macdonald, their superior, in aiding James, Earl of Douglas, in that rebellion against King James II., in the year, 1455. Another of Methlan's [the supposed progenitor of the Macmillans] sons, being brother to Macmillan, first of Knap, went to Perthshire and settled in Lawers. This Macmillan had ten sons, whom Chalmers, then Laird of Lawers, offering by force to dispossess of these lands possessed by them, could not get the same effectuated till he obtained from King David II. letter of fire and sword against them, which orders, with the assistance of the Sheriff of that shire, he with the utmost difficulty put in execution, obliging most of them to abandon that country, and go to their friends in Argyllshire; whence some of these returning in process of time, obtained a part of their ancient possessions in Lawers, and were ancestors to the Macmillans (though much decayed) in Ardowanaig, and other parts of Kintail. This account is asserted by a briefe (of which I had a transcript) obtained some years ago by one Sergeant Macmillan, descended from the Macmillans of Galloway, in the grey dragoons, from one of the Kings of Arms in England. By this briefe it is further asserted that it was Methlan himself that settled in Lawers, and that some of his sons went first and settled in Argyllshire upon the said letter of fire and sword being put in execution against them by Chalmers, laird of Lawers." The above writer is the only one, so far as I am aware, who, with any degree of authority, gives the Macmillans a claim to a connection with Perthsire. Subsequent writers of clan histories, probably copying from the above, content themselves by saying the Macmillans anciently had possessions at Loch Tay, without quoting the source of their information. Local tradition preserves no trace of any such connection, and "the Macmillans in Ardowanaig" are unknown. Not a single tombstone in the ancient churchyard there bears the name. Can any of your readers refer me to some authentic source for information in this matter?

1169. WHERE WAS KING GRIMUS SLAIN?—Fordun, in his Chronica Gentis Scotorum, says that Grimus and Malcolm met at a "field named Auchenheard—a meet place for a battle," and Skene, in editing this work, remarks, in a note, that "Fordun states that this king whom he calls Gryme, was slain by Malcolm, son of Kenneth, at a place called Auchenheard. The Chronicle of St. Andrews has 'interfectus a filio Kinet in Moeghaudard.' The Chronicle of Elegiacum has 'quo truncatus erat, Bardorum campus habetur.' The place meant is Monzievaid in Stratherne, which literally means the 'moor of the Bards.'" The following dates, &c., are deduced from Skene's Celtic Scotland:—

A.D. 971-993, Kenneth [III.], son of Malcolm I., King of Alban.
995-997, Constantine, son of Cullean, do.
997-1005, Kenneth [IV.], Grimus, son of Dubh, do.
1005-1034, Malcolm [III.], son of Kenneth [III.], King of Scotia.

Burton in his History of Scotland differs as to dates. He says Kenneth III. "was succeeded by a Constantine, who, after governing for a few months, was killed by a rival claimant of the throne, Kenneth IV., surnamed Grim, who became King in 994, and was in turn slain in battle nine years afterwards by Malcolm II., who claimed and gained the kingship as a son of Kenneth III." The question which I wish to raise, however, is not one of when, but of where was King Grimus slain? and this has been prompted not so much by the place-name as given in Fordun's Chronicle, but by the passage cited in a MS. volume of "Collection by Robert Myne, chiefly in his own hand," 4to. (collected in the year 1681, with notes down to 1720), preserved in the Advocates' Library, wherein mention is made of Albanach Crinen, Thane of the Isles, Abthane of Dull, and Steward of Scotland, "whose valour gained ye victory at Auchnavaid in Glencairn. qr King Malcolm overcame and killed King Grimus ye usurper for reward of which service he got Beatrice the King's Dr. in marriage." The italics are mine; and from whatever source Myine may have derived his information, the particularisation of "Auchnavaid," as being "in Glencairn," leaves no doubt of the spot here spoken of being what is now known as Auchnacaud. Myine must have got the precise description, "in Glencairn," from somewhere. What could his authority have been?

1170. THE FAMILY OF MASON.—It may not be generally known the family of Mason (of the firm of Brand & Company, Mayfair), which prepares the well-known condiment, "Brand's A 1 Sauce," hail from the North. From manuscript notes on the family I learn that—

Charles Mason "came from Fochubus" [Fochabers], and for many years owned a livery stable at 191 Piccadilly. He married Charlotte Buckland, who came from Stoke, Berks. They had a son,

John Mason, who married in 1829 Anne Taylor (born at Marylebone Lane, 1812). They had four daughters and seven sons. The latter included—

John James Mason (of Brand & Co.), born at Windsor, 1833; died 2nd Dec., 1896, his will being proved in the following February at over £151,000.

He had

John Charles Mason.

James Sidney Mason.

William Mason, born at Windsor, 1835.

Henry Mason, born in London, 1840.

Frank Mason, born in London, 1842.

George Mason, born in London, 1844.

Frederick Mason, born in London, 1846.

There is a tradition in the family that one member at least was implicated in the "45." Now, the only Mason I know of who comes under that category is a whitefisher, John Mason (or Masson) of Footdee, who is referred to in Colonel Allardyce's "Historical Papers relating to the Jacobite Period, 1699-1750" (New Spalding Club). In one part of the book (page 612), he is spoken of as a member of Moir of Stoneywood's regiment. On April 21, 1746, this Mason and a fellow fisher, John Duncan, appeared before the Governors of Aberdeen, and "acknowledged that they enlisted themselves as Soldiers in the Rebellion with Crichton of Achnagoul, and that they accordingly marched with the Rebels from this place [Aberdeen] to Inverness, where they got Arms and served until Tuesday, the 15th current, that they deserted from the Rebels and came to their own houses on Saturday evening, where they remained until they were apprehended by the Guard, and Masson says that his father went yesterday's morning to the Minister of Fittie and Intimated his Surrendring himself prisoner in terms of his Royal Highness Declaration, and declared that they cannot write." This Mason appears to have turned King's evidence at the Jacobit trials in London (June-July, 1746). He appeared as a witness against Andrew Sprule, a volunteer in Lord Fyttsigo's horse. I think it highly unlikely that this whitefisher of Footdee had any connection with this Charles Mason who came from Fochabers. I would suggest that the latter was a servant in the Duke of Gordon's household, and got settled in the Piccadilly livery stable after one of the Duke's visits to town. Any reader give me information about this Charles? It may be noticed in passing that Mr. Thomas Mason, the librarian of St. Martin's Free Library, London, is an Aberdeen.

1171. THE TAIT FAMILY.—Can any reader tell me what part of Aberdeenshire Archbishop Tait's family came from? The Dean of Ripon, Dr. Freamond, in the most recent volume of the "Dictionary of National Biography," says that the Tait family "was in the seventeenth century settled in Aberdeenshire as bonnet lairds or yeomen." The Archbishop's grandfather went to Edinburgh in 1750.

1172. SIR DYCE DUCKWORTH'S ANCESTORS.—Sir Dyce Duckworth, M.D., born 1840, is the youngest son of Robinson Duckworth, of Liverpool, by Elizabeth Forbes, daughter of William Nicol, M.D., of Stonehaven, by Margaret Dyce. I once heard Sir Dyce say that his maternal ancestors came from the Garioch. Who was the father of Margaret Dyce, Mrs. Nicol?

B.

1173. THE ANCESTORS OF THE PRINCESS ALEXIS DOLGOROUKI, née MISS FLEETWOOD WILSON.—Was the grandfather of Miss Fleetwood Wilson a Portsoy man by birth, or did he only settle there? According to the "Banffshire Journal," Lieutenant [Thomas?] Wilson had been in the Royal Marines, and settled at Portsoy, where he had at least two sons and two daughters. Edward and his brother, Fleetwood Pellew Wilson, "when comparatively young men, went to Bahia, Brazil, where they engaged in large undertakings as shippers and coffee-planters with much success. For his services to the Brazilian Government, Mr. Edward Wilson received the honour of knighthood. Mr. Fleetwood Wilson (who died in 1898) was a Director of the Union Bank of London and of the old Oriental Bank, and was connected with other undertakings. The two brothers in the earlier portion of their lives resided from time to time in Portsoy and in Banff, having friends in both towns. After his retirement from business, Mr. Fleetwood Wilson lived chiefly in London, latterly at 30 Portman Square; but his attachment to this part of the country continued, and in summer he frequently came North, residing for some years at Knockando House, on Speyside, and he was at least one season at Eden, on Deveronside. The public clock in the church tower of Portsoy was the gift to the town of Mr. Fleetwood Wilson." He bought Wappensham Manor, near Towcaster, Northamptonshire, and had by his wife, Miss Panny Stodart, an only daughter, Fanny Fleetwood Wilson, who on July 13 married (first at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, and then at the Russian Church in Welbeck Street) Prince Alexis Dolgorouki of Michaelovka, South Russia, third son of the late Prince Dolgorouki, Secretary of State to Alexander II. One of Lieutenant Wilson’s daughters married Mr. Stronach, long factor on the Fife estates. Another married Rev. Peter Murray, minister of Portsoy.

1174. Whyte Melville. — Will any reader supply me with a pedigree of the novelist? J.

1175. The Market Cross of Aberdeen. — Does the care of “the Cross” which stands in the Castlegate of Aberdeen fall to any of the Committees of the Town Council? The structure, which is one of the most ancient and interesting in the city, seems to be neglected. It is badly in want of the proverbially prudent “stitch in time.” Mr. Gladstone deemed it a worthy national amenity when he restored the “Mercat Cross” of Edinburgh in gratitude for the honour done him by his constituency of Midlothian, of which the Cross is “the heart.” Surely it were well to preserve the ancient symbol of regal authority which adorns the market place of Aberdeen.

1176. The Adams Family. — I should be glad to know something of the descendants of Dr. Francis Adams of Banchory (1796-1861), author of Arundines Devae. His son, Andrew Leith Adams, married Bertha —— (who married secondly the Rev. S. de Courcy Laffan, headmaster of King Edward the Fifth’s School at Stratford-on-Avon, 1884-95, and, since the latter date, Public School of Cheltenham). Mrs. Laffan, who has been on the staff of All the Year Round since 1878, has written a great many novels, including Winstone, 1877; Cousin Gordon, 1882; and Geoffrey Sterling, 1883. Dr. Leith Adams (who is very briefly dealt with in the Dictionary of National Biography), after graduating as M.A. and M.B. at Marischal College, entered the army as surgeon in 1848. He was Professor of Zoology in the College of Science at Dublin from 1873 to 1878, and, from the latter date to the time of his death in 1882, in Queen’s College, Cork. He wrote—

Wandering of a Naturalist in India, 1867.
Notes of a Naturalist in the Nile Valley, 1870.
Field and Forest, Rambles, with notes and observations on the natural history of Eastern Canada, 1873.

He had at least one son, Francis William Lauderdale Adams, who spent part of his life in Queensland and various parts of Australia. He was a brilliant and industrious writer. His books, as given in the British Museum Catalogue, are:—

Lecturer, an Autobiography. London, 1885.
Australian Essays. Melbourne, 1886.
Songs of the Army of the Night. London, 1890.
The Mediterranean. London, 1892.
Australian Life (Tales). London, 1892.
The Australians; a Sketch. London, 1893.
Tiberius; a verse drama in five acts. London, 1894.

Mr. John Lane of the Bodley Head still has a volume of his to publish, called Essays in Modernity. Francis William Adams’s death (on September 4, 1893) is one of the most grim incidents in the history of modern literature. When in the last stages of phthisis he was taken down to Margate. On Monday (September 4) his wife was taking him out as usual in a bath chair, when he was seized with a violent fit of coughing and haemorrhage. With difficulty he was assisted to his lodgings, in Gordon Road, when he lost a great quantity of blood. “I’m choking; it is finished,” he said to his wife, as reported at the inquest on his body (September 6). She said she thought he meant the bleeding had stopped, and replied “Thank God!” — Adams, however, in a momentary recovery, rose from the bed and fetched a revolver. His wife said, “Not that.” The dying man replied, “If you love me, you’ll let me do it.” “And I let him do it,” Mrs. Adams told the coroner. “I should have considered myself a contemptible coward if I had prevented it, when things were as they were.” A medical witness gave evidence that in any case Adams would have died in a few minutes. Notwithstanding that the jury, in passing the usual silly verdict of “unsound mind,” expressed a regret that Mrs. Adams had not prevented the occurrence. Mrs. Adams, herself, has some literary ability, for she wrote an account of the Sultan’s harem a year or two ago to a popular monthly magazine.

1177. The Name Balmoral. — I have always thought that the name Balmoral is modern. In the Exchequer Rolls, however, under the date 1539, I find a reference to Gordon of “Balmorse.” How old is the name? X.

1157. Clochican (XI, 192).—This place, referred to on page 157, is described as being under the “Abbey of St. Mary, Parish of Deir.” J. Christie.

1160. "The Laird o' Cockpen" (XII, 14).—“H. A. C.” will probably find what he requires in Dr. Rogers’s Life of Baroness Nairne (1766-1845). Cromek (1810) gives the old form of the song, which is entitled simply “Cockpen.” From the Cockpen Baaar Book (1897), we find that Mark Carse and his spouse, Dame Marion Linton, proprietors of Barrondale House in the time of the Commonwealth, were the Laird and Lady of Cockpen referred to. After that family, came as proprietors the family of Cockburn and then Dalhouse. The song does not occur in Herd’s Collection of Scottish Songs (1776 and 1791). “The Laird o’ Cockpen” is supposed, says R. Chambers’s Scottish Songs (1829), “with the exception of the two last verses, which are supplementary, to be the composition of the accomplished author of Marriage.” Rogers’s Modern Scottish Minstrel (1855) states that Baroness Nairne wrote “The Laird of Cockpen” towards the close of last century, and that it was soon sung in every district. of the Kingdom. She published no lyrics prior to The Modern Minstrel (1821–24), which work included that song by her under an assumed name.

1162. JOHN TURNER OF KINMONT (XII., 14).—It may be of interest to your correspondent to know that in 1619 a commission under the Signet was given to the Sheriff of Aberdeen and his deputies and Sir Alexander Gordon of Cluny to apprehend and try Alexander Turner in Kynmuntie, who was put to the horn at the instance of Andrew Webster in Birsebeg and Alex'. Malcolm there, for not having appeared before the Justice in answer to the charge of having stolen an ox and a cow belonging to the said Andrew, and two oxen belonging to the said Alexander. In 1548 we meet with the "mill of Mylbrek in the barony of Kynmunt," and in 1648 Comaleg in the barony of Kinmundie, and in 1627 "Kinmundie near Kintore." The estate of the Menzies family is frequently called in old documents "Kinmundie near Aberdeen." The particular person your correspondent refers to will likely be found by him if he consults an old Almanac of the middle of last century in some of our larger libraries.

1163. PLACE NAME, "THE TENANDRY" (XII., 14).—The place name "Tenandry," or "The Tenandry," is or was by no means uncommon in Scotland, and even occurs in England. There is a q.s. parish named Tenandry in the presbytery of Dunkeld. Halliwell gives the uncertain definition, "Houses let to tenants?" and quotes from Ms. Lincoln A.:

His tenandrye was alle downe
The best innes in yeke townne.

In old Scottish charters the following entry frequently occurs, viz., that the grante hold the lands "in meram, puram et liberam regaliatam . . . cum tenandii, tenandriis et libere tenentium servitius." A reference to Skene, "De verborum significacione," and to Du Cange, shows that their remarks have been incorporated in the following explanation in Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary: "Tennandrie, tenantry. (1) tenants on an estate; (2) the possessions held by tenants." "Aduocatione and donatione of kirks, tenents, tenandriis, particularis, pendiculii, annexis, connexis et pertinentis thereof" (Acts, Ja. V., 1540). Du Cange gives the term occurring in the phrase "cum tenandriis et libere tenentibus" (Stat., Rob. III.) as tenandrius in the nom. I rather suppose, that it is tenandrid, as the word appears in a charter of William, Justice General of England, quoted by Skene (Verb. Sign.), where it signifies a village. Du Cange also thinks that tenanciers should be read instead of tenandrii from Fr. tenancier, tenens.

But he has himself given another L. B. term, which if far more nearly resembles. This is tenementarius; idem qui tenens, mancipes, feudatorius. Were not the word of Latin origin the termination might be viewed as having the same sense and as radically the same with rie, ry.

1165. PLACE NAME, "BANFF" (XII., 14).—Various derivations have been given of the word [Banff], the more common of which connect it with the word Boyn, which is stated to be apparently the Gaelic word buinne, a stream. Others suggest Bath, white ford. Rev. Allan Sinclair, Kenmore, remarks: "Banff is a contraction of Bean-naomh, the holy woman, and the burgh coat-of-arms, we believe, bears evidence to this." (Annals of Banff, i., 4.) The arms of the burgh in 1408 was a boar passant, and in Irish banbh means a sucking pig. Similarly, in the arms of the neighbouring burgh of Cullen at the present day appears a young dog, evidently a play on the word, as if from culleen, Gaelic for a whelp. Since 1472 at least the arms of Banff have been the holy woman, namely, the Virgin and Child.

W. Cramond.

I do not attempt to answer, "Delly" as to the origin and derivation of "Banff." My object in writing is to say that when in Florence some time ago I was greatly interested in a map executed on stone or slate upon a wall in the Palazzo Vecchio. I saw similar maps also at the Vatican. The date is 1562. America is shown to California. Our own part of the world interested me most, and turning to it I found North Aberdeenshire given as Bwanna, Peterhead as Bussa, Aberdeen as Aberdon, the Dee and Don as Dee and Dona; and, great Jupiter! as if it were a place of world-wide celebrity, I read the legend "Cove." Richmond is given, Mar is Maria, and Banff appears as "Ianf." What does "Delly" say to that?

1166. ADMIRAL VAN TROMP (XII., 14).—There can be little doubt the parson of Rothleamey was led astray, however the mistake occurred, regarding the nationality of Marten Harpeterszoon van Tromp, and no one looking at authentic portraits of him will claim him as the son of a Scotchman. The most recent writer, and one of the most reliable, on the subject — Mr. G. Grinnell Milne, London, says of van Tromp: "Born in 1597, at Brielle, in South Holland, the son of a sailor, he accompanied his father to sea at eight years of age." (Life of Lieut.-Admiral de Ruyter, p. 30.)

The Gordon Highlanders on the Stage.

—We have not heard the last of the Gordon Highlanders on the stage, although "Mr." Findlater, as George Bernard Shaw called him in the Daily Chronicle, was promptly stopped from appearing at the Alhambra, London, after the management had plastered the town with huge posters bearing the piper's name on a background of Gordon tartan in facsimile. On May 30th a "military domestic drama," in four acts, by Charles Rogers and William Boyne, was produced at the Borough Theatre, Stratford, London, entitled, "The Ladder of Life; or, Gordons to the Front." The play is a curious hash up, reminiscent fact and impossible fiction. The hero, David Gordon, son of General James Gordon, suffers from the animosity of his cousin, Fergus Gordon. Fergus, eager to prejudice the General against his son, makes it appear that a little boy, who is really the son of Fergus and a Russian girl (did the authors know of General Patrick Gordon?) is the child of Meg Merrilies (who, you remember, was a Gordon), David's sweetheart. The wicked Fergus also manages to conceal the General's will, so that David seems to be disinherited by his father. So he goes off to India with his regiment, and is present at the storming of Dargai. In the long run, of course, everything comes right. "The Gordon charge, headed by Piper Stuart of the Gordons," is, according to advertisement, "nightly cheered to the echo by packed houses." It is not generally known that one of the most successful purveyors of sensational melodrama, Mr. Frank A. Gordyn (who runs several companies, notably "On the Frontier," in the provinces with Hardie and Von Leer), is really a Gordon. He is a brother of Mr. Charles N. Gordon, the Postmaster of Chicago. Their father, Andrew Jackson Gordon, went to Peoria County, Illinois, in 1856. Andrew's father, Samuel, went west from Scotland, locating in North Carolina.

In view of the engagement of the young Duke of Manchester to Miss Joan Wilson, the seventeen year old daughter of the Tranby Croft family, it is interesting to recall the fact that his great-great-grandmother was Lady Susan Gordon, one of the five beautiful daughters of the fourth Duke of Gordon and Jane Maxwell.
Lady Susan was born on February 2, 1774, and marrried (on October 7, 1793) William, the fifth Duke of Manchester, who was her senior by two and a half years.

According to that faithful chronicler, Mr.
Mathias D'Amour, her mother's major domo, she was "one of the most vivacious and kind-hearted girls." He quotes as specimens of her good nature "a circumstance or two."

She said to me one day, "Mr. D'Amour, I am going into the country, and what do you think I am added she, "but I am going for the purpose of drinking ass's milk." "Well," I replied, "I believe asses have a great character for stupidity. I hope the milk will produce the happy medium." In a few weeks, when she returned, she did not forget to tell me "that she was sorry the ass's milk had made no change in her disposition accordant with my desire."

One day she rang [sic] the bell, and directed me to give orders for coffee. While I was myself waiting on her with the same, the Duchess said to her, "Susan, my dear, I am going to Tottenham Court Road; if you choose I will bring you some birds." As I was standing near the young lady, and her Grace was at a farther distance, I immediately, with my face from where the Duchess was sat, whispered,
"A monkey." Lady Susan took the word, and speaking aloud said, "A monkey, if you please, Mamma." "A Monkey!" echoed her Grace, "and what in the name of wonder would you do with a monkey?" This, of course, passed away as mere pleasantry; but in a very few days after, as Lady Susan was walking in the Park, she observed a boy with one of these identical animals huddled under his arms. She despatched her footman to ask its price. "Two guineas," was the reply; and he was ordered to take it to St. James's Square, and I was ordered to pay for it. Pug proved, like the rest of his family relations, a funny fellow; his domicile was the kitchen, where he amused the cooks and others amazingly. His end was tragical, for he happened to hang himself in a cord one morning before anybody was stirring. The cord was suspended from the upper part of the room, and he had been in the habit of running up and down it for amusement; so that, I believe, his case not feta de se, but purely accidental. It happened that in a few days after the above incident, the Spanish Ambassador gave an entertainment on [the] occasion of King George the Third's recovery from illness. His Excellency had provided a great number of valuable articles and trinkets, and thrown them together to form a kind of lottery, to be drawn for by a great number of his young guests. Lady Susan was one of the company.
A day or two after, as she was relating to the Duke and her Grace, after dinner, some of the circumstances of the entertainment, and particularly of the lottery, the Duchess desired to see her prize, which was an elegant pocket book. Taking it into her hands and turning one of the leaves, she found already entered in the young lady's handwriting an account of all her debts. She read all the items: such as "one shilling to William, to give to a poor man"; "so much to such a one, for so and so," until she came to the last line, when, turning towards me, she exclaimed, "Two guineas to Mr. D'Amour; how is this?" "Please, your Grace," I said, "it is for the monkey." "It is for the monkey," added Lady Susan at the same time. "Two guineas in debt for a monkey!" exclaimed the Duchess, "but the monkey is dead; well, Mr. D'Amour must take the skin." A hearty laugh went round the company. The Duke was highly pleased with his daughter's dexterity in bookkeeping, and, as a reward, handed her ten guineas to pay off all her debts.

A corroboration of Lady Susan is given by Arthur Young, the great agriculturist, whose autobiography has been edited by Miss Betham-Edwards (Smith, Elder & Co.). Young visited the Manchesters at Kimbolton in July, 1800, seven years after Lady Susan had been married. She had "four lovely children" then, her eldest son, afterwards the sixth Duke, being only a year old. Young goes into rhapsodies over her.

The duchess pleases me as much or more than any other woman I have met these many years. Her character in every worldly respect is most amiable. There is a native ease, simplicity and naïveté of character in her which delights me; and when I consider the life of the Duchess of Gordon, her mother, the great patroness of every dissipation, I am amazed at this secluded young duchess, who never goes to London, loves a retired life, and is quite contented on a fortune very moderate for the rank of her husband. She gave me her whole history, from going one summer for some weeks to drink goats when on the mountains many miles beyond Gordon Castle, and running up and down the hills barefooted, driving down the goats and milking them, and being delighted with the place and the life, though no human being within many miles except the family and an old woman of the solitary house. This was the case of all the girls. She never went to school, and laid in a fine stock of health, and with it a sweetness of temper and simplicity of character which, joined with an excellent understanding, contributed so much to form her as she is at present, calculated to be a blessing to her husband. She loves him, and behaves with a most exemplary and unexampled patience and mildness under his connection with Mrs. —. I like her greatly, and wish I could add that she was religious. She goes to church often, she says, and brings her four lovely children up to attend it; but I see no sense or feeling of real religion, which I spoke of repeatedly and earnestly recommended. . . . The spectacle in this age of seeing a very plain table, a plain unaffected way of living and everything about them modest and moderate in scale, very little company, and never at London, yet all cheerfulness and content, even under the above circumstance, speaks a good heart and an amiable temper, as much as such can be good with the Almighty coming in for so poor a share of its attentions. I do and will pray to God that He will give her His grace to change in this respect, and then she will be a pattern to her sex." In his Annals of Agriculture (18—) he wrote: "If a farming traveller comes to Kimbolton and forgets its mistress, may his sheep rot and crops blight! A young duchess, even in the country, loving it, and free from a wish for London—a character that, if I was to give my pen scope, it would run wild on such a subject."

The strange part of all this is that Lady Susan was not happy with the Duke, and separated from him. The Duke came to grief financially, and went out as Governor of Jamaica, acting from 1808 to 1827. I may note that there were a whole colony of Gordons in the island. One of them, George William Gordon, was hanged in 1865 for assisting some native rebels. But Lady Susan did not accompany His Grace. Miss Grant of Rothiemurcus, who ever had a sharp tongue, tells us (see The Memoirs of a Highland Lady, 1898,) that the Duchess had left him some years before "with one of her footmen." Her two sons were sent to Eton, and her six daughters were brought up by their grandmother, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester (née Dashwood), who died in 1832 in her ninety-second year. The eldest of the girls, Lady Jane Montagu, had almost lived with her maternal grandmother, the Duchess of Gordon, Lady Jane, and used to dance the Ghillie Callum and the Shean Trews at the impromptu balls that her grandmother used to get up at Kinrara. Miss Grant then goes on to say:

My father and mother were dotingly fond of her, for she was a fine natural creature, quite unspoiled. When our Duchess, as we always called her [Jane Maxwell], died, Lady Jane was not happy at home with her younger sisters, and their governess: she went to live with her aunt, the Duchess of Bedford, and was shortly announced to be on the point of marriage with the second of the Duke [of Bedford’s] three sons by his first wife—Lord William Russell. Next we heard, she was very ill, consumptive—dying—and that kind aunt took her to Nice, and attended her like a mother till she was laid in her grave [1815]. It was a grief to everyone that knew her, particularly those who had watched the fair show of her childhood.

It is worth while following out the destinies of Lady Susan’s children. Note the persistence of her own name down to the present time:

I. George (Montagu), 6th Duke of Manchester (1799-1852). His second wife, Harriet Dobbs, who afterwards married and biographed the late Sir Stevenson Blackwood (d. 1883), is still living. By his first wife he had three sons and a daughter (the Countess of Tankerville). The eldest son,

William (Montagu), 7th Duke of Manchester (1823-1890), married the Countess Louise, daughter of the Count von Alten of Hanover, and by her (who is now the Duchess of Devonshire) he had two sons (one of whom is a stockbroker in London) and two daughters (one of whom is Duchess of Hamilton and the other Countess of Gosford). The eldest son was

George (Montagu), 8th Duke of Manchester (1853-1892), who married Consuelo, daughter of Don Antonio Yzzaga del Valle of Cuba, and had, besides twin daughters, William (Montagu), the present and ninth Duke of Manchester.

II. Lord William Francis Montagu (1800-42). He had one son, killed at the battle of Alma, and two daughters, who married Commoners.

III. Lady Jane Montagu, died 1815.

IV. Lady Elisabeth Montagu, married Major-General Thomas Steele, and died 1857.

V. Lady Susan Montagu, a "most gentle creature" (1797-1870), married in 1816, "of her own free will," George, 8th Marquis of Tweeddale (died 1876), and had four sons and eight daughters, among whom were

1. Arthur (Hay), 9th Marquis of Tweeddale (1824-1878), who married three times (thirdly to Lady Jeune's sister, who has also been married three times), but left no issue.

2. William (Hay), the present Marquis of Tweeddale, who married Candida, the daughter of Vincenzo Bartolucci of Cattano, Italy, and Greenville Park, Kilkenny, by his first wife, Miss Clementina Dundas of Carron Hall, Stirling. They had three sons and two daughters (one of them is Lady Susan Hay, born 1879). The eldest son is William, Earl of Gifford, born 1884.

VI. Lady Georgiana Frederica Montagu, married Evan Baillie of Dochfour, and died in 1892, leaving two sons and three daughters. The eldest son,

Evan Peter Montagu Baillie (1824-74), had

James Evan Baillie, the present laird of Dochfour, born in 1859. He married the Hon. Nellie Bass, daughter of the late Lord Burton, whose pecque was limited to her. She has a son, George Evan Baillie, born 1894.

Victoria Susan Baillie, formerly maid of honour to the Queen, married Alaric Grant of Ballindarroch.

VII. Lady Caroline Montagu, married John Hales Calcott, and had three sons and three daughters, among whom were Sir Henry George Calcott (1836-96), Permanent Under Secretary to the Board of Trade.

Susan Charlotte Calcott married in 1858 the third Lord Radstock, and died in 1892, leaving three sons and four daughters. The eldest son is

The Hon. Granville George Walsgrave, born 1859.

VIII. Lady Emily Montagu, died in 1827.

Susan, Duchess of Manchester, died at Bedfont Lodge, Middlesex, on August 26, 1828, aged 54. Her remains were interred at Kimbolton, attended by her son, Viscount Mandeville, and her son-in-law, General (then Colonel) Steele. Her portrait, painted in pastel by Sir Thomas Lawrence, hangs in Kimbolton Castle. It has never been engraved. Her husband died at Rome in 1843. Wraxall says that his Grace's "figure was noble, his manners affable and corresponding with his high name, but his fortune bore no proportion to his dignity. Though a man of very dissipated habits, and unaccustomed to diplomatic business, he did not want talents."

J. M. BULLOCH.
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

827. Ross, William, LL.D.: Scholar and Teacher. Born at Newmill, Birsebeg, Birse, probably about 1721. He emigrated to the United States, after graduating at King's College, Aberdeen, in 1740. Having taken the part of the English Government during the American troubles, he was one of the loyalists who returned to England in 1775. He established and conducted with success a school at Cheswick, and in 1783 received the degree of LL.D. from his Alma Mater. He is known as the friend of Dr. Johnson, and the translator of Sallust. He seems to have died in 1787, when his library was sold. See P. J. Anderson's "King's College Officers and Graduates," and K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 135.

828. Ross, Alexander, D.D.: One of the most voluminous of authors, he has figured as Scholar, Divine, Philosopher, and Poet. He was born on 1st January, 1590, in the city of Aberdeen, and educated there in Marischal College for the ministry. He seems to have gone early to England, and was episcopally ordained there before being appointed one of His Majesty's Chaplains, and Master of Southampton Free School. Little is now known of Ross beyond the titles of his multifarious works, some of which, as K. J. says, are startling enough to excite the envy of a modern novelist. Of his works, "The Christiad" is said to be a clever work, and it, at least, has this claim to remembrance, that a century after its publication it was brought into prominence by John Lauder's foolish attempt to prove by its means that John Milton was a plagiarist in his great epic. Many of his books were popular, and widely circulated; but he is now remembered by the public, not by anything in them, but by the often-quoted couplet from Hid-bras, which speaks of the "ancient sage philosopher, who had read Alexander Ross over." For a full list of his writings, see Robertson's "Handlist," and K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 155. See also Chambers's "Scottish Biog.," and Bruce's "Eminent Men of Aberdeen; also Northern Notes and Queries" (1872), p. 174. He died in 1654, and bequeathed a portion of his fortune to Marischal College to found a bursary. See P. J. Anderson's "Records of Marischal College," i., 272-275.

830. Ross, Arthur: Archbishop of St. Andrews. This notable ecclesiastic was the son of the minister of Birse, and was born in 1628 or thereabouts, in Easter Clunie, Birse. Educated for the ministry, he was ordained at Kinairie in 1656. Translated to Old Deer, and thence to Glasgow, he became Bishop of Argyle in 1675, and was transferred to the See of Glasgow in 1679, and of St. Andrews, 1684. He died in 1704. See Keith's "Bishops, &c.

831. Ross, Thomas: Scholar, Poet, &c. A relative of No. 828, he studied at Cambridge, and graduated at Christ's Church in 1642. A brief notice of him is given in "The Nat. Dict. of Biog.," from which it appears that, besides other writings, he published in 1661 A Narrative of the Second Dutch War, in Verse.

832. Roy, George: Novelist and Business Man. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1821, he came to Glasgow a boy of 13. In partnership with his elder brother, James, he carried on for many years the business of wholesale provision merchant. In the prime of life Mr. Roy gave much time and energy to promoting the cause of total abstinence. As a speaker, few could approach Mr. Roy for humour, especially as expressed in the Doric; and as a writer he might justly be called the pioneer of the Kailyard School of Scottish novelists. His story of "Generalship" has had a lasting popularity, and bids fair to continue popular. He also wrote a number of shorter stories, such as "The Stairhead Battle," and "Seeking for a House," which, when told, especially by himself, were received with shouts of delight. He retired from business at a comparatively early age, and died early this year (1898).

833. Rust, James (Rev.), M.A.: This Aberdeen divine graduated at King's College in 1832, and was ordained at Slains in 1840. Robertson, in his "Handlist," attributes to him the following three volumes:—Duty and Privilege in the Present Time, 1861; The Scottish Black Rain Showers, 1864; and Druidism Exhumed, 1871.

834. Salmond, Stewart Dingwall Fordyce, D.D. (Principal): Free Church Theologian. Born at Aberdeen, 22nd June, 1838, he graduated at King's College, 1857, and, having studied for the ministry, was ordained to the charge of the Free Church, Barry, in 1865. He was elected Professor of Systematic Theology and New Testament Exegesis to Aberdeen Free Church College in 1876. A voluminous author, he has translated the works of several of the early fathers for the Anti-Nicene Library. He has also written commentaries on the Epistles of Peter and of Jude. He is the editor of the Bible Class Handbooks issued in connection with the Free Church, as well as of The Critical Review of Biblical and Philosophical Literature. His most important work is The Christian Doctrine of Immortality, 1895. For full list of his writings see K. J. in S. N. & Q., xi., 23, and Robertson's "Handlist." He succeeded Dr. Brown as Principal of the Free Church College, Aberdeen.

835. Sandilands, Robert: Quaker writers. Natives
836. Sandilands, Mary: Of Aberdeen, they took part, along with Alexander Keith and others, in the controversy that sprung up in the north of Scotland. in the 17th century over the tenets of the followers of George Fox. Robert, who was an Art Student of Marischal College, was one of the four who signed theattestation published in Quakerism Confirmed, 1677. In consequence of the persecution he suffered in his native city, he withdrew, with several others, toEngland, and became one of the ministers of the Society of Friends. Labouring chiefly in Bristol and the West. An intimate friend of George Keith, hefollowed that keen controversialist in seceding at last from the Quaker Society, and actively opposed the body. At this stage of his history he appears to havereturned to his native city, when he published, in 1700, Some Queries to the Monthly Meeting of the Quakers in Aberdeen. The title of his sister's work is given by K. J. in S. N. & Q., xi., 23. For list of the works of Robert Sandilands see the same vol., p. 23.

837. Sandilands, James, Sen.: Canonist in Sandilands, James, Jun.: King's College. The father became Canonist about 1621, and retired in favour of his son in 1634. This son graduated at King's in 1629, and was Regent the following year. He subsequently became Civilist in 1640, and held that office till 1661. See P. J. Anderson, Officers of King's Coll.

839. Scorgie, James (Prof.): Prof. of Mechanics and Applied Science, Poona College. Born in 1835, at Aberdeen, and left to his own resources at 12 years old, he, by dint of perseverance and energy, while serving his apprenticeship, gained a studentship from the Board of Trade, which enabled him to pursue his favourite studies of Natural Science and Mechanics, first at Marischal College, and afterwards at Kensington, and led ultimately to his seeking in India a sphere suited to his tastes and abilities. Mr. Scorgie arrived in Bombay in August, 1858, and found his first friends among the missionaries of the Free Church. His first appointment was in the railway works at Surat. Here he became acquainted with Dr. Theodore Cooke, who proved a lifelong friend, and ultimately his colleague in the College of Science at Poona. In 1862 Mr. Scorgie was induced to serve in the Free Church College at Bombay, where for three years he did admirable service as Superintendent of the School, and Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy in the College. Mr. Scorgie next entered the educational service of the Government, and remained in that connection till he retired, in 1890. He held successively the appointments of Head Master of the Akola School, Berar; Principal of the School of Industrial Arts in the native State of Jeyapore, and Professor of Mechanics and Applied Science in the College, Poona. In Berar, Jeyapore, and Poona he was of great assistance to the missionaries, with whom he lived in friendship, and liberally supported. He lived in Aberdeen after retiring, and died there in 1895. See Free Church Record, Nov., 1895.

840. Scorgie, John: Minor Poet. One of the innumerable song-writers noticed by Edwards in his Modern Scottish Poets, he was born in 1852, at the Hill of Balvack, Monymusk. Bred a stone-dresser, he has written and published much verse.

841. Scott, John: Journalist, &c. Born in Aberdeen in 1783, this enterprising Aberdonian acted for a time as editor of the London Magazine. He was killed in a duel, July, 1821. Before his appointment, in July, 1820, to the London Magazine, he had for some time been editor of the "Champion" newspaper. He was author of A Visit to Paris in 1814, which passed through four editions; also Paris Resisted in 1815; The House of Mourning, a Poem, 1817. He was the son of an Aberdeen merchant, and was educated at the Grammar School and Marischal College. He published other two works of continental travel, and was editor of other two papers, The Censor and The Statesman. His sister married Professor Balmer of the United Seccession Church.

842. Scott, Robert Eden (Prof.): Professor of Moral Philosophy and Author. Born in 1770 in Old Aberdeen, the grandson of Prof. Thomas Gordon, he graduated at King's College in 1785, and in 1788 was appointed Regent or colleague to his grandfather, but resigned his successorship in 1796, in which year he was appointed to fill the vacant Regency. In 1800 he became Professor of Moral Philosophy, a post he held till his death in 1811. He published the Elements of Rhetoric, 1802, and Elements of Intellectual Philosophy, 1805. See Nat. Dict. of Biol., and P. J. Anderson's Officers of King's College.

843. Scott, William: Minor Poet. Born in Old Deer in 1785, he was bred a tailor, but became a grocer. Having literary tastes, he wrote a good deal of verse, and in 1832 published a volume entitled Poems, chiefly in the Buchan Dialect. Thereafter he went to the United States, but subsequently returned to his native place, where he died at an advanced age, in 1861.

846. Scrogie, Alexander, D.D.: One of the four Aberdeen Doctors who resisted the Covenant. He was ordained at Skene in 1605, and translated to Drumoak, 1606, thence he was transferred to Old Machar, 1621. Had D.D. from King's College in 1627. He joined the other Aberdeen Doctors in opposing the Covenant, and gave further offence by giving the Communion on Christmas, 1638, after it had been forbidden by the preceding Assembly. He submitted to Presbytery in 1642, and died in 1659 in his 95th year. He has been described as "of singular parts for good literature, judgment and understanding." He contributed to the Replies and Duplicates against the Covenant, and published A Funeral Speech in commendation of Bishop Forbes.
847. Scrogie, Alexander A. M. (Rev.): Established Church Divine. Son of above, probably born in Aberdeen in the second decade of the 17th century, he graduated at King's in 1634, was Regent there in 1638, and ordained to the ministry at Forglen, 1642. Thence he was translated to Drumblade, 1647, and thence Old Machar, 1658. P. J. Anderson, in Officers of King's College, p. 186, says he was a D.D.; but this seems a mistake, unless from some other College than King's that he received his degree. He published Mirabilia Dei: a Sermon, 1660. He died 1682.

848. Scrogie, William (Rev.), Bishop of Argyle: Son of No. 844. Born probably in Aberdeen about the end of the second decade of the 17th century, he graduated at King's in 1638; and was ordained to the parish of Rathven before 1650. Called to the city of Aberdeen, but declined to go. He acted as Rector of King's College from 1663 to 1666, when he was appointed to the Bishopric of Argyle. He died in 1675.

849. Scroggie, John Mackie: Evangelist. Born at Old Deer in 1839, he was bred a blacksmith. While still an apprentice he became an earnest Christian. Beginning to speak at evangelistic meetings, he soon became known as an evangelist, especially in Birkenhead, where he went after his marriage. He was associated for a time with another evangelist, W. D. Dunn, and together they produced a powerful effect in some parts of Scotland. He was also for a time the evangelist employed by Lord Polwarth, and latterly he wrought in connection with the Free Church. He died several years ago.

850. Sedgewick, Robert, O.C.: Deputy of the Minister of Justice, Canada. Born at Aberdeen 10th May, 1848, he went to Nova Scotia with his parents, 1849. He graduated at Dalhousie College, 1867, and was called to the Bar in 1872, and practised in Nova Scotia till appointed to his present position. Besides occupying many other public positions, he is a Governor of Dalhousie College, and Lecturer in Equity in the Law School of that University; Q.C., 1880; and appointed to his present position, 1888.

BYRON'S BOYHOOD IN ABERDEEN.—This subject has been dealt with picturesquely by Dr. W. Garden Blaikie in Harper's Magazine. A more minute account of Byron as a schoolboy at the Grammar School appeared in The Sketch of June 22, from the pen of Mr. H. F. Morland Simpson. The pages of the school register for 1796 and 1798—the years Byron entered and left—are reproduced in facsimile.

THE GORDONS AT DARGAL.—One of the best summaries of the great saga appeared in a new magazine, called The Koh-i-noor (July, 1898, one shilling; Botolph Press, Middlesex Street, London, E.). It contained excellent photographic pictures of Dargal, which should be pronounced "Durguy."

THE PONIATOWSKI FAMILY.—Misled by a newspaper obituary, I made a mistake in the July number of this journal in stating that the Marquise Montecatini (who died last April at the age of 90) was the wife of Prince Joseph Poniatowski. She was really married to Prince Charles Poniatowski, the elder brother of Prince Joseph Poniatowski, the composer, whose son is now head of the house. Let me briefly restate the case:

Princess Constance Czartoryska, daughter of Count Morzstyn and Lady Catherine Gordon's daughter, Isabella (and great-grand-daughter of the second Marquis of Huntly), married Comte Poniatowski. Among their ten children, who included Stanislas Poniatowski (1732-1798), the last King of Poland, they had

Casimir Poniatowski (1721-1800), who had Prince Stanislas Poniatowski (1754-1833), who had Prince Charles Poniatowski, married the Marquise Montecatini (died April, 1898), but had no issue.

Prince Joseph Poniatowski (1816-1873), the music composer, who had Prince Stanislas Poniatowski (born 1835), who married the daughter of the Comte Le Hon, and succeeded his uncle in 1887. He lives in Paris, and has Prince Louis Leopold Marie Andre Poniatowski (born at Paris 24 Jan., 1864), married Elizabeth Helen Sperry (b. at Stockton, California, 1872).

My authority is the Almanach de Gotha, 1896 edition. It is curious to find the Poniatowski of the present generation marrying Americans. The Poniatowskis, I may add, were made Princes of Poland in 1764; they received the Florentine Princedom of Monte Rotundo in 1847; and they were recognised in Austria in 1850.

ANDREW HALLIDAY.—Since I dealt with the literary instincts of the Duffs in the May number of this journal, I have been favoured with this account of the pedigree of Andrew Halliday:—

Patrick Duff of Craigston (the third son of Alexander of Keithmore and the grandson of Adam in Clunybeg) was twice married. He had thirty-six children! By his second wife (an Urquhart) he had—

A daughter, who married an Irishman, Benjamin Duff, chief of the Duffs of McFinnecaul. They had a son, Benjamin, who had a son,

John, a Roman Catholic, who, to escape persecution in Ireland, went across to Scotland, and is said to have taken a farm in Dumfries-shire. He had a son, William, who turned Protestant, and married a Quakeress named Latimer. They had a son,

Rev. William, minister of Grange (died 1844), who had at least two sons, General Latimer Duff, U.S.A.

Andrew Halliday Duff (1833-77).

THE DAVIDSON FAMILY OF INCHMARLO AND THE INVENTION OF A FLYING MACHINE.

—Mr. George Louis Outram Davidson (born Sept. 11, 1858), youngest brother of the laird of Inchmarlo, has invented a flying machine, which he described at a meeting of the Aeronautical Society in London, June 24. He asserts that a machine made by man would fly, as do birds, if so constructed as to comply with the laws of nature with which birds complied. He does not suggest that the intermittent or reciprocal movements of birds' wings must be imitated, but he points out that no bird or flying creature has any motion reciprocal or other by which it attempts to screw itself horizontally through the air, as a fish screws itself through water with its tail. He submits that it is absolutely at variance with the laws of nature to employ as a substitute for the reciprocal action of birds' wings a screw propeller designed to push a structure horizontally through the air. That has been the general line of experiment during the last few years, but he is convinced that no more practical results would be attained by aerodromes driven through the air by propellers than are now attained by balloons. He is not the first experimenter to think of raising a structure in the air by rotary lifters or of designing a machine to glide forward through the air, but he believes he is the first to attempt to combine the two and to add an automatic method of retaining equilibrium. His machine has two sets of aero-cylinders. The rotary ones, inside the fixed ones, are forced through the air at an angle upwards by energy applied direct from the engines, thus giving a vertical lift, while the fixed ones afford support in gliding forward. By experiment he has been able to find a lifter of a satisfactory shape, such that it can lift, even when of so small a diameter as 4 ft., a weight greater than that of the structure required to contain it and the driving engines.

THE HALIBURTON FAMILY.—A correspondent writing to the Times in reference to the conferring of a peerage of the United Kingdom on Sir Arthur Haliburton says:—"This peerage revives a title which was in the Haliburton family for nearly 200 years. Sir Walter Haliburton, Lord High Treasurer of Scotland, 1439-49, who married a daughter of the Regent Albany, was created Lord Haliburton of Dirlton in 1440. The sixth Lord Haliburton left no sons, and as was common in Scotland in those days his lands and titles descended to his eldest daughter. She married Lord Ruthven, and carried the title and estates into that family. Their son was created Earl Gowrie in 1581, and in 1600 the Gowrie conspiracy ended in his titles and estates being forfeited with his life. The title of Lord Haliburton thus reverted to the Crown and has never been restored. Sir Walter Scott wrote A Memorial of the Haliburtons to prove that he, through his grandmother, a Haliburton, was the sole representative of an extinct family, and that he was, therefore, entitled to the burial place of the Haliburtons in Dryburgh Abbey, where his bones now rest. He was apparently unaware that a branch of the family had gone to America and still survived there. The family took the side of the Crown during the revolution, migrated to Nova Scotia, and were numbered amongst the ‘United Empire Loyalists’ who peopled that colony and other parts of Canada. The grandfather of Sir Arthur Haliburton became Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, and his father, the well-known 'Sam Slick' (who married Louisa Neville, daughter of Captain Laurence Neville of the 2nd Life Guards and 19th Light Dragoons), after holding the office of Judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia for many years, settled in this country, and in 1858 was returned M.P. for Launceston in the Tory interest, a seat having been provided for him there by the Duke (Algernon) of Northumberland in order that the views of the colonies might have an advocate in the Imperial Parliament."

In intimating the fact that there is no "Supplement" to this Number, we beg to say that we shall be glad to receive objects of antiquarian or historical interest, suitable for reproduction, from any of our friends.

ED.
NOTES ON THE HISTORY OF TRANSPORT IN SCOTLAND.

The history of transport in Scotland has yet to be written. The following notes give some idea of the various aspects of the subject:

WHEELS.—Many references to wheel-making will be found in the Lord High Treasurer's Accounts. Under date Aug. 20, 1496, we read of "irne" "to scho quhels that ar in Leith [i.e., put on tires], and of "irne grath [trappings]" to the quhels.

Item the secund of Julij giffin to mak quhels for the Kingis artailserye.

In Nov., 1562, the Privy Council commissioned

John Cheisholme, comptroller of the said artail-yearie, to pass . . . with ordinar wrychtis . . . to the gentilmen quhome to woldis, orchardis . . . dois appetene, that thair he may be sufferit to cut doun with discripon sic tymmer as salbe fund necessar . . . sic as elme, esche and aik for stokkis, quhels, aikstreis and lymmers.

The woods of Melrose and Ironside were the great places from which wood was got.

BARROWS.—Under date May 2, 1498, we read of "Holl barrowis" made by Willie Wricht in Dunbar. "Barrowmen" carried on a regular trade.

CARTS.—The following entries in the Lord High Treasurer's accounts give some idea of the progress of cart-making:

Item [1st Aug., 1487] for a carte to hafe thaim [the silver vessechalt and odir stuff] to Lythgow xij s. [This is the first mention of a cart in the Accounts.]

Item [3rd of July, 1496] to . . . sawaris for sawing burdis and sparris to the cart.

Item, that samyn day [4th July, 1496] . . . for xxiiiij short treis to be schethis to the cart. [Schethis were the projecting sides of a cart, also the cross-timber to which the bottom of a cart is nailed.]

Item [9th August, 1496] for a cart to cary lymmoursis [shafts] fra the Castel of Edinburgh to Leith xviiij d.

Item [12th August, 1496] to Dande Achinsone to fell axtreijs [axletrees] in the Forest and to get cart lymmoursis to bring hame quhels fra Melros. xjs. vjd.

Item the xvj day of August [1496] giffin for ij cartis to cary the pailzoun treis fra the Abbay to the Castel [etc.].

Item [9th Sept., 1496] for iij cartis to cary iij pailzounis [etc.].

Item [7th Sept., 1496] for fifty ij chenzeis to the lynnalis of the cartis. . . . ix s.

In 1514 we hear of carts for the "byggyn" of the blockhouse at Aberdeen. In 1522, the provost, the bailies, the trades had each to furnish carts for "the carting of the townis artalzery." (Extracts from Aberdeen "Council Register.") According to the Scots Acts of Parliament (under date 1456) the "gret baronis that are of ony mycht mak cartis of werre."

In 1624, Mr. Alexander Hamilton, brother to the secretary of the Earl of Melrose, obtained a patent of 21 years for a new cart invented by him, "wherein greater weight and burdens may with far less force be drawn, and conveniently carried, than hath been done with ony kind of cart hitherto known or heretofore used." (Privy Council Record; and Edin. Mag., Oct., 1817.)

In 1735 there were only two carts in Dumfries. (Douglas's Book of Galloway.)

In 1760, when the celebrated pedestrian, Barclay, succeeded to the estate of Ury, "there was neither cart nor wheel carriage of any kind, nor was there even a road." (Robertson's Survey of Kincardineshire.)

Up to 1745 the carrying trade south of Scotland had been conducted by Glenae farmers, "a wild turbulent race, who carried pugilism and parcels all over the country." The first cart that entered Galloway was "turned over, broken up, and made a bonfire of." (Douglas's Book of Galloway, 1882.)

HORSES.—"On Dec. 15, 1567, an Act of Parliament was passed to prevent horses being exported, for it was found that so many had lately been taken to Bordeaux and other places abroad, as to cause 'great skaith,' by raising the prices at home." (Chamber's Dom. Annals.)

In 1576 the Privy Council ordained that nobody should "tak upon hand, privatlie or opnlie, to carrie or transport furth of this realme ony manner of horsis in tyme cuming; and likewise that na skippars and maisteries of schipis, etc., transport 'to uther countries under the pane of confiscation of the horsis, schipis and remanent gudis movabill.'"

Our cart [or plough] horses [(for we vse them indifferentlie)] are commonlie so strong that five [or six] of them (at the most) will draw three thousand weight of the greatest tale with ease for a long isurneie. . . . Such are are kept as for burden, will care foure hundred weight commonlie, without anie hurt or hinderance. This furthermore is to be noted, that our princes and the nobilitie haue their cariage commonlie made by carts, wherby it commeth to passe, that when the queenes maistrie dooth remoue from anie one place to another there are usuallie 400 carewares "which amount to the summe of 2400 horses" appointed out of the countries adjoining whereby hir cariage is conuened safelie vnto the appointed place. Hereby also the ancient vse of somers and sumpter horses is in maner vttrelie relinquished. (Harrison.)
CARTERS. — The following, from the Lord High Treasurer’s Accounts, are instructive:—

Item the xiiij day of September [1496] thir cartaris vynderwritin felt on this wise, that is to saie I gaif to ilk man and to ilk hors xiiij days wage in his hand fra this day furth and to ilk man on the day xij d., and to ilk hors on the day xij d. [143 carters and 196 horses; summa ijvccc xxxvii li vjs.] Thir cartaris abone writin carut the gunny, clos cartis, gunstanes, pailzounis and othir geres.

Item, that samyn day [1st July, 1496] giffin to the cartaris to carry four dosane of estland burdis and xxx sparris frà Leith to the Castell of Edinburgh to mak the Kingis clos cartis ix s.

Item, that samyn day [the xv. day of August, 1497] giffin to ane cartar to turis the Kingis pailzoun to the raed of Atounie xxxix s.

On 17th February, 1655, the Glasgow Town Council had before them the “kaiters of this burgh, servinge about the water of Clyd,” for charging exorbitant rates for their services, especially for carting goods from the Clyde to the various parts of the city. It was enacted

That nae kaiter, vseen that tread for the present, or wha sall sse the samyne heirefter, sall presume or tak upon hand to tak any more pricys for their drauchtis nor is heirefter expressit. [Herein follows the rates of charges.] Those infringing this regulation would lie under the magistrates’ displeasure, and would be prohibited from leading a cart for all time—which fact would be intimated through the town by the “touk of drume.” (MacGeorge’s Glasgow.)

We Coillsearis, Cadgairis, and Carteris, in ane rout Be boddie Wolfe that grainge hes maid to steir
Our hors is reft, our selvs ar doung but dout
Quhair we did truillis we dar not now apper.
(The lamentatiò of the Còmunnis of Scotland, by Robert Sempill.)

Sir David Lindsay of the Mount chose to write for the people.

Whairfor to coillsears, carters and to cuiks.
To Jok and Tam my ryme salbe direckit
With cunning men bowbeit it wilbe lackit.

CAGERS. — Cadgers carried minerals.

Item to ane cager [In Dumburtane, Oct., 1494] to remane vpone the taking of this stuff [iron].
(Lord High Treasurer’s Accounts.)

In 1597 the Privy Council ordained that anybody interfering with or molesting carriers of lead should be severely punished. The carriers were ordered to wear a “ blason of lead,” bearing the royal arms and private mark of the lessee of the mines. Any interference with them was to be punished by death. This order was rendered necessary because “certane of the disordourit and brokin men of the bordouris hes of late violentlie reft and spyleit thair seruandis caryaris of the said leid of thair hors armour clothing and of thair hail carraige.”

Cadgers carried gold, silver, lead, tin and copper, especially lead ore. Slates were also conveyed by cadgers. Cadgers are now fishmongers.

PACK HORSE.—Corn, coal, lime, ironstone, salt, wool, etc., were all carried by pack-horse convos—sometimes 150 horses in a convoy. Mr. Smiles says by the time “salt was sold two or three counties off it had reached almost a fabulous price.”

Quite a common signboard was a string of pack-horses. In Larwood and Camden Hotten’s interesting History of Signboards it is remarked that these once familiar long trains of horses threaded their way, panniered, “slowly, though far from surely,” over miles of uninhabited tracts and moors and heath which lay between the small towns and straggling villages.

A sumpter horse was called a sowmir. (Michel’s Language of Scotland.)

The usual load for a panniered horse was 2 bolls of meal (256 lbs.), or its equivalent. (Warden’s Forfarshire.)

Sumpter men were called “laid men,” i.e., load men.

Item, to Robert Ker, that restit awand sen the raed of Norem to the cartaris and laid men of thair wagis. Ivij lib. vs.

Item, to Robert Ker to see . . . xij laid hors and sex men to the gere that was in Home sic like. (Lord High Treasurer’s Accounts.)

A horse-pack was “18 stone or 2 cwt. and a quarter.” (Smeaton.)

Scatcherd says that pack-horses ceased to travel only about 1794.

SEDAN CHAIRS.—Hugo Arnot, writing in 1779, says of Edinburgh that, while hackney coaches were small in number, chairs were numerous.

There are at present [1779] 188 hackney chairs in Edinburgh, besides about 50 private ones. The street-chairs are to be had on a minute’s warning, at all hours of the day or night. The fare is very reasonable; the chairmen are all Highlanders; and they carry the chairs so much better than the Irish chairmen of London, that an inhabitant of Edinburgh who visits the metropolis can hardly repress his laughter at seeing the awkward (sic) hobble of a street-chair in the city of London.

Carian or Carour was a sort of raft. It occurs in the Lord High Treasurer’s Accounts; and also the Privy Council Register, Vol. I., date 1565, in connection with “schippis, caiaris, or boittis.”
EXTRACTS FROM THE RECORDS OF THE KIRK SESSION OF ALYTH, 1637-1649.

[Extracted by W. Cramond, LL.D.]

The Minutes of the Kirk Session of Alyth are remarkable for their fullness and completeness during a period on which comparatively little light is shed by the generality of Kirk Session Records. The four oldest Registers of Alyth are in the custody of the Registrar-General, and embrace the following periods:—(I.) B. and M., 1623-1707; D., 1624-1651. (II.) B., 1712-1765; M., 1712-1754. (III.) CROMWELL'S SCOTCH CAMPAIGNS (1650-51).

Mr. William S. Douglas, M.A., has just written an elaborate book on this subject (pp. 308) for Mr. Elliot Stock. His contention is that no one has described all the essential moves in Cromwell's Scotch Campaigns of 1650-51. The battles of Dunbar and Worcester have not been neglected. But the events leading up to "Dunbar Drove," and still more those which followed in the next twelvemonth's campaigning, have to this day been left unrecorded. For the barest indication of the whole scope of Cromwell's strategy when he strove to circumvent the Scots in 1650, the modern reader had to wait for the publication, in 1895, of Dr. Gardiner's first volume of the History of the Commonwealth and Protectorate. That book still left a great deal to be said as to the details of Leslie's "cautious solid" plan of campaign; while as to the ill success which at first attended the English endeavour to dislodge the same General in the ensuing year, Dr. Gardiner is as silent as any and every previous writer on the subject. So "here begins new matter," which Carlyle, preoccupied with the spiritual significance and true inwardness of the epoch in question, has passed over in the Letters and Speeches; which Robert Chambers, in his handy enough little compendium of the History of the Rebellions in Scotland, 1638 to 1660, has also ignored; of which scarcely any of the romance-writers have made use.
THE BIRTHPLACE OF AIKMAN THE PAINTER.
—The parish of Cairnie in Aberdeenshire has often been given as the birthplace of the famous painter, William Aikman (1682-1731). The Encyclopaedia Britannica, Chambers's Encyclopaedia, and Chambers's Biographical Dictionary, all state that he was born at Cairnie, Aberdeenshire. Chalmers's General Biographical Dictionary (1812) says that he was the "son of William Aikman of Cairney, Esq."; Irving's Book of Eminent Scotsmen (1861) notes that Aikman was "born at Cairney." So Cates's Dictionary of General Biography (1885). Cassell's New Biog. Dict. (1873) cautiously puts it, "born at Cairney in Scotland." The correct statement, however, appears in the Dict. of Nat. Biog., where it is stated that he was born at Cairny, Forfarshire, and was the only son of Wm. Aikman, advocate, Sheriff of Forfarshire, and a man of eminence at the Scottish bar. There is another Cairnie near Edinburgh, which has also sometimes been mistaken as his birthplace, but the actual place was certainly in Forfarshire, for, from the Acts of the Scots Parliament, we find that "Aikman, the lord of Cairnie, was a Commissioner of Supply for Forfarshire in 1678," also that John Aikman of Cairny was a Commissioner for Forfarshire in 1690, and Mr. William Aikman of Carny in 1704. A full genealogy of the family of "Aikman of Cairnie in the County of Forfar" appears in Nisbet's Heraldic Plates, 1695-1704, published in 1892.

BUCHAN FIELD CLUB.—On the 17th of last month the Club, under the presidency of Mr. John Gray, B.Sc., Brixton, London, paid a visit to Esslemont Castle, the seat of Mr. Henry Wolrige-Gordon. In the course of their sojourn, Mr. Gray read portions of a paper by Mr. Moir, entitled, "Historical Notes on Ellon and Neighbourhood." Dealing with Esslemont, the author alleged that the lands can be indistinctly traced from the Malcolm Marshall who received the lands of Arnage from Robert the Bruce about 1310, and who probably obtained Esslemont about the same time. At least in 1377 William Maurescall, son of Malcolm, called a relative of Robert II., holds the lands of Esslemont and the greater Arnyche. It was probably the daughter, Janet Marshall, heiress of Esslemonte, who married Cheyne of Straloch, whence the Cheynes of Esslemont. The Cheynes were a wild lot. In 1475 Sir Henry was granted the king's peace for the murder of one Arthur Panton. In 1490, with 40 auxiliaries from Meldrum, Keig, and Monymusk, he ravaged the lands of Hay of Ardradon and the lands of Slains almost up to the walls of the castle in revenge for the firing of the "Corrie of Essellmonte." Some say the retaliation was the other way. Both parties, however, had to pay the piper. After the death of Sir Henry, John Cheyne and Gilbert Hay of Delgattie became friends and (1494) arranged a marriage between their children, John Cheyne and Marjorie Hay, to take place when John should reach his fourteenth year. Should he die before that, his brother Henry was to be constituted bridgroom. The marriage of John and Marjorie took place, but in 1507 Marjorie was a widow. On Henry's death a lawsuit arose about the succession, and, in 1516, the lands of Arnage and Esslemont were disjoined. In 1547, Sir Patrick Cheyne, who got Esslemont, in terms of his band of man-rent, was with the Earl of Erroll at the Battle of Pinkie, where he was taken prisoner, and afterwards exchanged for "aucht score of Inglis nobils." About 1630 the lands came into the possession of the Earl of Erroll. Early in the 18th century, John Gordon of Ellon purchased the estate, and in 1727 or 1728 sold it to Robert Gordon of Hallhead, the ancestor of the present proprietor. The lands seem to have had various owners between the Cheynes and the Hays. About 1607 William Keith of Ludquharn held the dominical lands. The Forbeses of Pitsligo held the estate before 1628. George Jameson, the famous painter, and his daughter, were owners till about 1653. Before leaving the castle, Mr. W. L. Taylor proposed a vote of thanks for the courteous hospitality extended to the Club by Mr. Wolrige-Gordon.

I178. A DESCENDANT OF BARCLAY OF UIRIE.—On July 15 Sir Francis Dillon Bell, K.C.M.G., a distinguished New Zealand Statesman, died at Wellington, N.Z. Born in 1822, he was the son of Edward Bell of Hornsey, who died in 1864. He came of a family "which, through Robert Barclay of Urie, the Quaker Apologist, claims descent from the blood royal of England" (see Mennell's Dictionary of Australasian Biography). Can anybody trace this precise connection?

I179. ANN FORSYTH OF ABERDEEN.—About the latter end of last century William Maxwell of Dundee married into the Airlie family by his union with Lady Ann Ogilvy of Coull—near Rathven, Coupar Angus. Their eldest son, Dr. John Maxwell (R.N.), Dundee, married "Ann Forsyth of Aberdeen." I am anxious to learn something of her antecedents, and to obtain proof as to her marriage with Dr. Maxwell, whose first wife she was. I may mention that their son, Patrick (my Father), born about 1809, died at Louisville, Kentucky. HELENA MAXWELL OR CADY.

1181. PRINCE MICHAEL BODO DONOVITCH BARCLAY DE TOLLY.—Can anybody trace the origin of this celebrated Russian officer, who, though born in Livonia (1741), came of a Scots stock. He entered the Russian army in 1769, and met Field-Marshal Keith in 1814. He died at Insterburg, 1818. The Czar Nicholas named a regiment of carabineers after him.

1182. CROOKED RIG PLoughING.—There exists at Greenlaw a survival of this bygone mode of ploughing. The rigs have an ogee or double curved form. One reason for this peculiarity is given, namely, that in old times, when ploughing was done with a gan of eight or more oxen, a long turn required to be taken at the "land’s end." I hardly think this is a satisfactory solution of the difficulty, and I should be glad to have other views.

1163. PLACE NAME, "THE TENANDY" (XII., 31).—I thank Mr. Cramond for his learned answer to my query. I am quite satisfied, however, that the meaning of the name "Tenandy," in this case, is that of a free hold, not the holding of a tenant paying rent. Modern readers are apt to be led astray by the sense now usually attached to the word "tenant," as if, in questions of land tenure, it had always that meaning. Tenant is from the Latin, teneo, to hold. Those who held grants of land from the king, or subject superior, and others who held lands as mere renteers, were alike tenants considered merely as holders. The nature of the tenancy, of course, was to be ascertained from the character of the holding. Judging from the radical part of the word, "tenandy" is evidently formed from tenande, the Scotch form of the word tenant, as seen in Scotch Acts of Parliament. An example is seen in an Act "anent feu ferme"—"The lord think speddfull that the King begine and gif exempill to the laif, and quhat prelate or barone that accord with his tenant apon setting of feu ferme of his awin lande in all or in part, our souverane lord sall ratify and apprief the said auededacion, sa that the gift the tenandy happens to be in worde in the Kinge hande, the said tenande sall remane with his feu ferme unremovyt, payande to the King siklike ferme endurande the warde as he dide to the lorde sa that it set to a competent avail without prejudice to the King." Acts of James II., March 6th, 1457. It is clear that the meaning of the word tenandyr in the above Act is that of a freehold. In 1475-6, in a dispute about the lands of Cranshaws (Berwickshire), it was decided that Lady Murray held the lands as a tenandyr under the Earl of March, and that they had belonged to her in "property and heritage." "Swinton of that ILK," p. 32. Dr. Skene, in his Celtic Scotland—"The Land and the People," in describing the conversion of old Celtic tenures into feudal forms, in the reign of Alexander I., says that the Thanage consisted of two parts—the demesne—the part kept in the Thane's own hands—and that part given off as freeholds (libera tenemates or "tenandries"). The place-names of tenandyr in the north of Scotland illustrates this description. The Tenandyr at Greenlaw was an independent property, as being from various documents. It is noted as being in the Earlom of Dunbar in 1489. Why the name "Tenandyr" was given to it may have been owing to its early possessor having had relations with the north of Scotland, and he may have had Celtic blood in his veins. As much may almost be concluded from the fact that a field near the site of the tenandyr mansion is still known as "Croftanfy" (croit fhainre), "the sloping croft." A place, also bearing that name, is mentioned in a local lawsuit in 1706. From the contiguity of the lands, there is highly probable grounds for concluding that both names referred to the same place, at different periods, or as altases. The prefixing of the definite article to "Tenandyr" may have been owing to the nature of the holding, as being the only one of its kind in the locality, as certainly no other bore the name. Or it may have been used as a euphonism common to a certain class of place-names.

1164. PLACE NAME, "BANFF" (XII., 14).—Extract from vol. vii., new edition, of Chalmers's Caledonia: "The Etymology of Banff is difficult. Ban in composition signifies high; Ban-er, Ban-og, Ban-gor, Ban-bury; Aff in the Cornish vocabulary signifies I or me; War-aff on me. Kinneff, on the shore of Kinardine, is a headland, and there is the Parish of Kinneff. Ef or eff or aff is not in Shaw's Word Book, nor in Llwyd's Irish English Vocabulary. In the Parish of Bervie, in Kincardineshire, there are East Banff, West Banff, and Banff Park."

1171. THE TAIT FAMILY (XII., 29).—Dr. Archibald Campbell Tait, Archbishop of Canterbury (1868-82), was descended from a Mr. Thomas Tait, Mason, Netherton, Longside, who died in 1770, and is interred in Longside Churchyard. The old bridge of Auchlee, on the road leading into Longside, is said to have been built by the Archbishop's grandfather. I believe a family bible is still preserved in Longside which undoubtedly establishes this pedigree of the late Primate.

1775. The Market Cross of Aberdeen (XI., 30).—In reply to the query by “S.” I may say that the Cross is being cared for, and its condition is not quite so bad as he imagines. Quite recently I had a series of photographs taken of the medallion portraits, and, with the exception of that of James IV., the other nine are in an excellent state of preservation. The reason why the fourth James’s portrait is so far gone appears to be that, as it directly faces the opening of Justice Street, the east wind has touched it rather severely. The Cross, as “S” says, is well worthy of being carefully preserved as one of the interesting landmarks of the city. Alex. M. Munro.

Scots Books of the Month.

“Old Nooks of Stirling.”—A work which is presently in press, and which, we believe, will commend itself heartily to everybody with antiquarian tastes, is “Old Nooks of Stirling” by Mr. James S. Fleming, F.S.A. (Scot.), whose “Old Lodgings of Stirling” and other works have met with such acceptance. Mr. Fleming has quite a passion for searching out all that is of interest regarding ancient buildings in and around this royal burgh, with a view to the preservation of authentic records concerning them, and in this work he brings together a great deal that is of moment—historical and otherwise—as to various buildings of note, amongst them the “Ancient Stables of the King’s Majesty,” “The Staffan’s” (Hangman’s) Lodging at the Tolbooth, to which is added an account of the ancient instruments of punishment; “Cowan’s Lodging” (“Queen Mary’s Palace” in St. Mary’s Wynd), &c. A good deal of attention has also been given to the “Holy Wells” of Stirling and neighbourhood, and, doubtless, the information he has elucidated concerning St. Ninian’s Well, the Butt Well, the Lady (or “Whisky”) Well, St. Thomas’ Well, and Christ’s Well, Cambusharron, besides others, will be received with more than usual pleasure. Added to this, Mr. Fleming has conferred an additional favour by the presentation of no fewer than thirty-six original illustrations, from his own pencil, which accompany the several articles, and as some of these sketches were made nearly fifty years ago, they present features which have been greatly changed by the hand of time. The book, which is a quarto of one hundred and twenty pages, will form an excellent permanent record of interesting places and objects, and, as the edition is limited, early application on the part of subscribers is desirable. General Gordon's Statue, Aberdeen.
Chinese Gordon who know nothing whatever about the family of Gordon.

The known facts are these:

David Gordon served at Prestonpans, 1745, under General Cope, was taken prisoner there, and released. He died at Halifax, Nova Scotia, 22nd Sept., 1752, as a captain of the 47th (Lascelle’s Regiment). He married Sarah ——, who was buried in a public vault at Marylebone Churchyard, and left a son, William Augustus Gordon (1739-1809). He served in the 40th, 72nd, and 11th Regiments, was present at Minorca, at the siege of Louisborough, 1758, the Plains of Abraham under Wolfe, 1759, and Moro Castle, Havana, 1762. He married in 1773 Anna Maria Clarke (who died 1796), and had four daughters (Augusta, Maria, Henrietta, Charlotte), and three sons, William, 95th (or Edmestone’s Regiment), Augustus, R.E., and

Henry William Gordon (1786-1865). He entered the Royal Artillery on 17th August, 1803, and served at the battle of Maida. He married Elizabeth Enderby, 1817, and had eleven children—six daughters (Elizabeth, Mary, Henrietta, Emily, Wilhelmina, and Helen, Mrs. Moffit, whose son is in the 2nd Batt. Essex Regiment) and five sons, namely, Henry William, Samuel Enderby, William Augustus, Frederick Walcott, and Charles George Gordon, the Martyr of Khartoum.

Now—who was David Gordon? David has not been a common name among the Gordons. Hence I venture, however, to make a suggestion as to his identity. According to a family legend, Sir David of Prestonpans fame had told his wife that in the case of his death she was to remember that his nearest relation was Gordon of Park.

I am strongly inclined to believe this statement for several reasons. In June, 1746, a number of Jacobite rebels, seized at Carlisle, were tried at Southwark. The report of the trial will be found in Historical Papers relating to the Jacobite Period, 1699-1750, edited by Colonel Allardyce for the New Spalding Club (vol. ii., pp. 339-480). Among the prisoners was Charles Gordon, "a young man [of 17] of well-affected family." I think he must have been a son of the laird of Terpersie, whose father, according to Captain Wimberley in the Gordons of Lesmoir (p. 111), was beheaded at Carlisle for taking part in the rebellion. The youth at anyrate pleaded that he had gone to a fair to sell cattle, and had been seized by the followers of Sir Adam Gordon of Glenbucket (a cadet of the Park Gordons), and made to serve with the rebels. The court held him guilty, but reprieved him on account of his youth. The great point is this. It was argued in his defence that his elder brother “went with Cope” (like David, the great-grandfather of Chinese Gordon). True, no such David is given by Wimberley. He notes, however, that—

Charles Gordon, 7th of Terpersie, executed at Carlisle, 1746, had
1. Charles, whose life was spared on condition of his going to the West Indies. He went to Jamaica.
2. Henry, captain in the Royal Marines.
3. “A son.”

But Wimberley is of opinion that “probably some of the male descendants” of the beheaded Terpersie “are still to be found.”

Now, it is a curious fact that the beheaded Terpersie’s aunt, Janet, had married David Gordon of Auchony, brother of 1st baronet of Park. Is it not possible that the beheaded Terpersie called one of his own sons, the one who “went with Cope,” and whose name is not given in Wimberley, after this David? The case would then stand thus:

17 Sir Adam Gordon of Park (d. 1699),
    (Descended from the Lesmoir Gordons.)

    Beheaded 1746.

    Took part in the ‘45. Took part in the ‘45. Ancestor of Chinese Gordon? Henry, Royal Attainted. Pardoned for his part in the Rebellion. Went to Jamaica. (Ancestor of the Gordons of Male line extinct 1804. Newtimber, Sussex?)

Note, firstly, the dominance of the fighting spirit in all these Gordons at a time when it had almost left the Huntly line; secondly, the appearance of the name Henry (which is not very common among the Gordons) in the Terpersies, and then in “Chinese” Gordon’s family. I think David Gordon, the great-grandfather, may have been silent about his family on account of his father’s execution and his brother’s banishment. Charles, who went to Jamaica, was born in 1729. If his elder brother, who went with Cope, was ten years older, that would have given him good time to become the father of William Augustus Gordon, who was born in 1739.

As to Charles, I think he may have been the ancestor of the Gordons of Newtimber Place, Sussex, who still flourish. On Oct. 21, 1802, Charles Gordon, son of Charles Gordon of Jamaica, matriculated at Christ Church, Oxford, at the age of 18. Foster, in his list of Oxford alumni, describes him as “probably of Newtimber Place.”

Our Supplement consists of an illustration of Chinese Gordon’s Statue in Aberdeen.

J. M. BULLOCH.
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

851. Seton, Alexander (Sir), Lord Pitmedden: Judge and Legal Author. Of the family of Pitmedden, Udny, he was born probably about 1637, and graduated at Marischal College, 1654. Devoting himself to the study of law, he passed Advocate in 1661, and was knighted by Charles II. in 1664. Appointed a Lord of Session in 1677, he assumed the title of Lord Pitmedden, and became a Lord of Justiciary in 1682. He represented the county of Aberdeen in the Scottish Parliament, and for his boldness and independence in opposing the measures of James VII., he was deprived by that monarch of his seat on the bench. At the Revolution his old position was offered him; but he declined it as inconsistent with the oaths he had previously taken. He published a Treatise on Mutilation and Dismemberment, 1699. He also edited Mackenzie’s Law of Scotland in Matters Criminal. Other two legal works are noticed by K. J. in S. N. & Q., xi., 56. He died in 1719. According to Wodrow, he possessed a vast and curious library.

852. Seton, Alexander: Quaker Missionary to Ireland. A native of Aberdeenshire, he was educated at King’s College, which he entered in 1672. He laboured among the Irish for nearly half-a-century, and died at Hillsborough, 1723, aged about 71. K. J. in S. N. & Q., xi., gives the title of one of his published writings.

853. Seton, Alexander (Colonel): Hero of the “Birkenhead.” This distinguished soldier, whose gallant action in saving the lives of the women and children on board the troopship “Birkenhead,” in the terrible disaster which happened to that ship off the Cape of Good Hope in 1852, is still remembered with pride as one of the noblest instances of the discipline and courage of British troops, was a scion of the family of Mounie, Old Meldrum, and was born 4th October, 1814. Having entered the army, he had reached the rank of Colonel of the 70th Foot, when the occasion came which gave him an opportunity of showing his firmness and heroism. The self-sacrificing fidelity to duty exhibited by the men and officers on board the “Birkenhead,” who all kept their places while the ship went down, after the women had been saved, will not soon be forgotten.

854. Seton, Charles, and Earl of Dunfermline: Born about the end of the 16th century, he took an active part in public affairs from 1622 till 1672. In 1639 he was twice sent from the Scottish Parliament to the King on missions of importance. In 1640 he was named a Commissioner to the treaty at Ripon, and in 1642 was King’s Commissioner to the General Assembly, St. Andrews. In 1649 he went abroad to Charles II., and accompanied him in his unsuccessful attempt to assert his rights in 1650. At the Restoration he was made a Privy Councillor, in 1669 an Extraordinary Lord of Session, and in 1671 Keeper of the Privy Seal. He died 1672. His family was connected with Fyvie.

855. Seton, James, 4th Earl of Dunfermline: Born sometime in the fourth decade of the 17th century, probably in Fyvie Castle, he served in early life under the Prince of Orange, but returned home on the accession of James II. It was in his time that the well-remembered event, the death of Tifiie’s Annie, is said to have taken place. This tragic story is commemorated by a stone figure of her lover, the trumpeter, placed on one of the turrets of the Castle, in the act of blowing his horn towards Tifiie. This nobleman, being of Jacobite principles, joined Dundee in 1689, and fought at Killiecrankie. Outlawed in 1690, he died at St. Germans in 1694.

856. Seton, J. L., Yr. of Pitmedden: This Aberg- donian country gentleman has taken a deep interest in military affairs, and has written several valuable and suggestive volumes treating on these matters. For list, see K. J. in S. N. & Q., xi., 56-7.

857. Seton, William (Sir), Bart., M.P.: Politician and Author. Of the family of Pitmedden, Udny, he was born about 1670. In his father’s lifetime he was M.P. for Aberdeenshire from 1702 to 1706. He was one of the Commissioners to treat of the Union, and afterwards one of the Commissioners of Equivalent. He published The Interest of Scotland considered in Three Essays—a volume which reached a third edition in 1733. He also wrote On ways for making the Nation a gainer through Foreign Commerce, 1705, and published a Speech in favour of Union with England. He died in 1744.

858. Shand, Alexander, R.A. (Colonel): Antiquary. Born 9th May, 1731, at Parkdargue, Forgue, Mr. Shand, after receiving a good education, entered the army and joined the Artillery. He was wounded at the battle of Brandywine River in 1777, and distinguished himself at the defence of Gibraltar, 1780-2. He died in 1803. On retiring from the army, he devoted himself to the study of Roman remains in Scotland. He published in 1788 An Account of a Roman Camp in Glenmuir.

860. Scot, Alexander: Scholar and Jurist. Said by K. J. (S. N. & Q., xi., 42) to be a native of Aberdeen and a graduate of King’s College. His name, however, does not appear in Anderson’s King’s College Officers and Graduates. He seems to have abandoned Scotland at the Reformation, and settled at Carpentras, Avignon, where he practised for many years as a consulting advocate and judge. From the title of one of his works (Apparatus Latinus), it appears that, on gaining the Continent, Scot studied for the priesthood. For, after describing himself as a graduate of Arts of Aberdeen, he continues, “Atque in Universitatis Turnonensi theologiae candidate.” He must, however, have forsaken the church for the bar, as he became a student of Law at the University of Bourges, where he became the favourite pupil and associate of Jacques Cujas, a great jurist, to whose place Scot succeeded in 1590. Though a perfect Encyclopaedia of legal knowledge, Scot is best remembered as a Grammarians, his Greek grammar, published 1593, having spread his name throughout Europe. As soon as it was published it was recognised as the Greek grammar of the period, and completely superseded the Institutes of Nicholas Clemenard, which was, till then, the established class-book, and it kept its position for a century. His greatest work, his annotated edition of the Commentaria of Cujas, is still referred to by French lawyers as an authority. For list of writings, see K. J. in S. N. & Q., x., 43. Scot, who was a loyal Roman Catholic, died at Carpentras in 1615.

861. Shand, Alexander Burns, LL.D., Lord Shand: Judge. A native of Aberdeen, and born in 1828, he was called to the bar in 1853. Appointed Advocate-Depute in 1860, he became Sheriff of Kincardineshire in 1862, and Sheriff of Haddington and Berwick in 1866. He was raised to the bench of the Court of Session in 1872, with the courtesy title of Lord Shand, and became one of the Lords Commissioners of Justiciary in 1887. Among other honours enjoyed by this notable Aberdonian, he received the title of LL.D. in 1873, and acted as Commissioner under the Endowed Schools (Scotland) Act, 1855-90. He retired from the bench in 1890, when he became a Privy Councillor, and a member of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. In 1892 he was raised to the Peerage as Baron Shand of Woodhouse, Dumfries, and in 1894 was chosen to be chairman of the Mining Conciliation Board.

862. Shand, W. A. C.: Minor Poet. A native of Aberdeen, and born in the fourth decade of this century, his name figures in several of the anthologies of the time.

863. Shaw, James: "The Aberdeen Laddie." A Successful Business Man. A native of Aberdeen, and born 27th August, 1836. Mr. Shaw proceeded early to England, where he acquired fortune as an ironmaster. Aspiring to Parliamentary honours, he twice contested his native city, as a Conservative candidate, in 1872 and 1874, but was unsuccessful on each occasion. He died in 1883.

864. Shepherd, James, M.A., M.D., D.D.: Indian Missionary. A native of Aberdeen, this equally wise and energetic son of Bon-Accord, now one of the most valued and successful of Indian Missionaries, proceeded to Rajputana as one of the medical missionaries of the U.P. Church, in 1873, and after assisting Mr. Bonnar in his work at Deoli, he was appointed to open a new station at Udaipur. Here he has spent the rest of his time in India since 1877, and has been instrumental in producing a deep and most favourable impression on behalf of the Gospel over the whole region of which Udaipur is the centre. In particular, he has gained a great influence over the wild hill tribes known as the Bhils. Dr. George Smith, of the Free Church, who recently visited India, has said of Dr. Shepherd's mission work: "No church or society in India can point to a mission of such deep-seated spiritual and civilising influence at once over the most bigoted Hindus and the wildest hill tribes. I know none in which the preaching, teaching, medical, and even industrial methods are so happily blended, and that in the chief centre of Hinduism in all India. From the Maharana, the king and chief priest of Hinduism, to the jungle-dweller who sends his children to be trained in the Bhil Home, Dr. Shepherd has gained an influence for Christ unique in the history of missions. Dr. Shepherd, who was ordained by the Presbyterian of Rajputana in 1880, has this year received the degree of D.D. from Aberdeen University.

865. Shepherd, Peter, M.D.: Surgeon-Major and Medical Writer. Son of a gamekeeper in the Craigievair district, and born in 1849, he studied for the medical profession at Marischal College, where he graduated in 1873. He entered the Army Medical Department. He was attached to the 90th Light Infantry, with whom he served several years in South Africa. He then was some years in India with the 5th Lancers, and finally went to Africa, where he was killed at the battle of Isandhlwana in the Zulu war in 1884. His Manual on the subject of First Aid to the Wounded has had a great vogue. A gold medal has been founded at Aberdeen University in his memory.

866. Shirreffs, Andrew: Poet, &c. Born in Aberdeen, 9th February, 1702, he graduated at Marischal College, 1783. Physically unsuited for a professional career, he became a bookseller in his native city. Among other enterprises he carried on the publication of the Caledonian Magazine for several years. He left for London in 179S, and, though his death-date is unknown, is believed to have died before 1807. He published, in 1790, a volume entitled Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. For more particulars see S. N. Q., v., 188; also, S. N. Q., i., 5.

867. Shirreffs, James, D.D.: Divine and Author. Brother of No. 866, and born in Aberdeen about 1751. Having graduated M.A. in 1770, he was appointed Under Master, Aberdeen Grammar School, 1771, but demitted in 1778. He became the minister of St. Nicholas Church, Aberdeen, in 1778, and D.D. King's College, 1795, and was chosen Moderator of General Assembly, 1807. He survived till 1830. Author of Life of Dr. Guild and Sermons. See Hew Scott's Fasts, &c.

868. Sibbald, Patrick, D.D.: Professor of Divinity, Marischal College. A native of Aberdeen, son of a brother of the Registrar of K forge, Laurencekirk, possibly of Dr. James Sibbald of St. Nicholas Church, he was born in 1640, and ordained as pastor of St. Nicholas Church in 1666. He was appointed Professor of Divinity to Marischal College, and had D.D. the same year, 1684. In 1685 he was translated to Greyfriars Church, Aberdeen. Of this charge he was deprived at the Revolution, having declined to take the oaths of fealty to William and Mary. He seems, however, to have retained his Professor's chair till his death, in 1697.

869. Sibbald, William: Royalist. A brief notice of the life of this Aberdonian royalist is given in the Dict. of National Biography. He seems to have been born in the second decade of the 17th century, as he graduated at King's College in 1639. Having attached himself to Montrose and the Royalist party, he was executed as a rebel in 1650.

870. Sievewright, James, D.D.: Free Church Divine and Author. A native of Cairnie, where he was born at Drumdelgy, Mr. Sievewright studied for the ministry of the Church of Scotland, and was for many years minister of the Parish of Markinch. He quit the Church of Scotland at the Disruption, and formed the Free Church of Markinch, of which he continued to be minister till his death, in 1852. A posthumous volume, entitled Memorials of a Ministry, was published in 1856.

871. Sievewright, John: Musician. Born in Turriff, he acted as presenter for some time in Fordoun and Oldmeldrum. He has published a collection of Church Tunes and Anthems, not noticed by A. W. Robertson. He died in 1846.

872. Sievewright, Norman (Rev.): Episcopalian Author. A native of Aberdeen, he was settled as English Episcopal clergyman in Brechin, about 1750. Mr. Sievewright was a learned man, fully impressed with the dignity of the English Episcopal Order, in contradistinction to the claims of the Scottish bishops. "He was," says his son, Mr. John Sievewright, "the champion of the Church of England, and of the Constitution settled at the Revolution of 1688, which brought on him the hatred of the disaffected party in the country." Mr. Norman Sievewright published several works on divinity and controversy, and left behind him five MSS., one on the Hebrew language, a subject on which he had formerly published. Also two musical pieces. He died in 1790. The Advocates' Library Catalogue notices one of his works, entitled Principles, Political and Religious, published 1767. See Black's History of Brechin, p. 179.

873. Simpson, Archibald: Architect. A native of Aberdeen, said (S. N. & Q., x, 99) to have been born in 1790, but I have seen another date given for that event, viz., 1788. He was educated at the Grammar School and Marischal College. He was apprenticed to a builder in Aberdeen, but afterwards studied his profession in London and Italy. He planned many of the public buildings of Aberdeen, as well as many of the mansion-houses in the vicinity, and his name is inscribed, as the architect of Marischal College, on the brass plate on the foundation stone, in 1837. He died in 1847. See Selected Writings of John Ramsay, M.A. (published 1871), page 161.

874. Simson, James: Minor Poet and Journalist. A native of Huntly, where he was born in 1858. He has obtained a place among the modern Scottish Poets in Mr. Edwards's volumes of Scottish Anthology.

876. Singer or Singers, William, D.D.: Established Church Divine and Author. Born at Murrial, Insh, in July, 1765, he studied for the ministry of the Church of Scotland, and became minister of Kirkpatrick Juxta. A man of energy and weight, he became one of the leaders of the Church in his own district. He received the honorary degree of D.D. in 1808, and was chosen to be Moderator of the General Assembly in 1820. He published, in 1808, A Statement of the Numbers, the Duties, the Families, and the Livings of the Clergy of Scotland, and in 1812, View of the Agriculture, State of the Property, and Improvements in the County of Dumfries. Neither of these volumes is contained in A. W. Robertson's Handlist.

Referring to the notice of Bishop Nicolson in the Aberdeenshire Notables series, a correspondent writes as follows:—

Having only recently seen the yearly volume of S. N. & Q., it is late in the day to explain a little matter which needed reconciling. It is simple. In Vol. XI., p. 149, in reference to Bishop Nicolson's grave, it is as if one said "in S. Nicholas," and another, "in Union Street Churchyard." The farm of Chapelford comes up almost to the wall of S. Ninian's. The churchyard itself passes in the Enzie under either name. The site of Bishop Nicolson's grave is the spot on which stood the altar of a church built in 1684, long since in ruins, which stood on the ruined "foundis" of an earlier church, also dedicated to S. Ninian. With him lie 25 priests. The managers are at present collecting donations to raise an Iona Cross over them. Their successive flocks sleep peacefully around them.

Quotations.—By far the best book of quotations I know is Hoyt & Ward's. To give an idea of its contents, let me quote the titlepage intact:—

MRS. LEE, WHO RAN AWAY WITH TWO ABOYNE GORDONS.—Since writing a sketch of this extraordinary lady for the Aberdeen Free Press (July 8, 1898), I have come across an ill-natured description of her in Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe’s Letters. Sharpe (by name and nature) was the cousin of the Gordons, and seems to have gone specially to Oxford to attend their trial (on March 5, 1804) for the abduction of Mrs. Lee. He hated the lady, and tried to prejudice her case (or, as he puts it, “insinuate the plot into the upper galleries”) by printing a ballad of six and twenty stanzas, entitled “Mrs. Lee’s Garland, showing how a poor lady was carried off against her own consent, to the tune of the ‘Babes in the Wood,’ or any other lamentable melody in fashion.” In speaking of the ballad, Sharpe says—“Thank Heaven, my endeavours were crowned with success. As the Gordons were my cousins, this act was meritorious, according to the necessity of Justice Shallow, particularly, as of two ills, Mrs. Lee was certainly by much the worst.” Sharpe, who stayed in the same lodgings as Mrs. Lee during the trial, had a very poor opinion of the lady and her looks (though he is contradicted on the latter point by everybody else). He was very much prejudiced when he wrote this letter—

She is to my mind exceeding ill-favoured, with a bad complexion and withered lips, that look as if her breath sunk: and she confessed such unheard of abominations as would make the most brazen-faced man—yea, Irishman—blush with consummate ease and assurance. She acknowledged herself a sceptick with regard to the Christian religion; that she wore amulets to protect her from love, etc., etc. The mob should have torn her to pieces had she ventured to show her nose after this: but she stole off by a back door to a common hack chaise, pursued by the urses of the rabble and the contempt of the whole kingdom—bating that poor thing Lygon, who affects to pity her, shakes his head with a languishing air whenever her name is mentioned, and vows that he could never have believed that Mrs. Lee wore an omelet.

That “poor thing Lygon” was the Hon. W. B. Lygon, who succeeded his father as second Earl Beauchamp in 1816. There seems to have been a rumour that Lygon afterwards became engaged to Mrs. Lee, but the marriage never took place, and he died unmarried in 1823. Sir Robert Dashwood, Bart., who is the son, not the grandson, of Miss Roberta Abercromby of the Birkenboog family (as I stated in the Free Press), tells me that the printing press which Mrs. Lee’s father, Lord le Despencer, set up for Benjamin Franklin at West Wycombe, is still preserved there. Lord le Despencer was the elder half-brother of Sir Robert Dashwood’s great-great-grandfather, the third baronet.

J. M. BULLOCH.
LORD FARQUHAR'S ORIGIN AND THE FAMILY OF FARQUHAR.

The rise of the Farquhar family is almost as remarkable as that of the Duke of Fife (whose best man, by the way, was Lord Farquhar). In the course of a century, two members of the family have been created baronets, and one has been raised to the peerage.

Sir Robert Farquhar, Kt. of Mounie, in the Garioch, was a cadet of the Farquhars of Gilmilnscroft, Mauchlin, Ayrshire, a property that is now held, as you will note, by one of his descendants. He was Provost of Aberdeen in 1644 and 1650, and was knighted by Charles II. on His Majesty's visit to Aberdeen in 1651. Indeed, he was one of the staunchest of Jacobites—in marked distinction to the ancestor of Farquhars of Drum-na-gesk, who was a loyal Brunswicker. The Farquhars, who are very rich to-day, started with money, for the Knight of Mounie is said to have been one of the richest merchants of his time. Indeed, during the Troubles, he lent the State £180,859 Scots. This debt was acknowledged by the State, "which agreed to make repayment by allowing Sir Robert the third of all the fines imposed on delinquents north of the Tay." He managed to oust Sir John Leslie from the estate of Wardes, and he got hold of the lands of Mounie without (according to Dr. Davidson) payment. Mounie had originally belonged to the Setons, who sold it in 1623 to the Tutor of Cromarty. Sir Robert's heirs were prosecuted in 1699 by Sir John Urquhart of Cromarty, and in 1701 the property of Alexander Farquhar of Mounie (who had six sons and two daughters) was sequestrated, and the Setons again came into possession. Sir Robert married Elizabeth Petrie, whom Mr. A. M. Munro supposes to have been a daughter of Provost Petrie of Portlethen. He died in 1666. I do not know what issue he had (can any reader say ?), but he left at least—

A son, who owned the estate of Lenturk. He in turn had a son,

John Farquhar of Lenturk, who married Frances? Forbes of the Newe family, and had a son, Rev. Robert Farquhar, who was minister first of Peterhead and then of Chapel of Garioch. He married Katherine Turing of the Foveran family, and had at least five sons. I do not know what became of them, but the fifth,

Sir Walter Farquhar (1738-1814), was created a baronet in 1796. Educated at King's College, he started life as a doctor in the army, but afterwards became a fashionable physician in London, his patients including the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV. (see the Dictionary of National Biography). He married in 1771 Ann, the widow of Dr. Alexander Harvie, and the daughter of Alexander Stephenson of Barbados (Burke says Thomas Stevenson). He had

A. Sir Thomas Harvie Farquhar, 2nd Bart. (1775-1836), who had

Sir Walter Rockcliffe Farquhar, 3rd Bart., born 1810, married Lady Mary Somerset, daughter of the 6th Duke of Beaufort, and has had five sons and five daughters. The eldest son, Henry Thomas Farquhar, born 1838, was the original Farquhar estate of Gilmilnscroft by Miss Jane Farquhar, the last of that line, who died in 1884. He married the Hon. Alice Brand, daughter of the 1st Viscount Hampden, and has two daughters and a son, Francis Douglas Farquhar, Lieut., Coldstream Guards, born 1874.

B. Sir Robert Townsend-Farquhar (1776-1830), was Governor of Mauritius (1812-23), and was created a baronet in 1821. He assumed the additional name of Townsend in 1824. He is dealt with in the Dictionary of National Biography. He had a son,

Sir Walter Minto Townsend-Farquhar (1809-66), who was in the Diplomatic service. He married Erica, daughter of the 7th Lord Reay, and was succeeded in turn by four of his sons,

3. Sir John Henry Townsend-Farquhar, 5th Bart. (1839-77). He was in the Bengal Cavalry, and was present at the siege of Lucknow.

4. Sir Robert Townsend-Farquhar (born 1841), 6th Bart., formerly in the Royal Artillery, retiring 1866. He was afterwards on the Stock Exchange and Lloyds. He has published two volumes of verse, has composed some music, and paints, having exhibited at the Royal Scottish Academy.

5. Sir Horace Brand Townsend-Farquhar (born 1844), was created a baronet in 1892, and was raised to the peerage as Baron Farquhar this year. He was trained in the East India merchant firm of Forbes, Forbes and Co., and afterwards became a partner in the Bank of the late Sir Samuel Scott, whose widow he married in 1884. He is M.P. for Marylebone, and member of the London County Council. He was best man at the Duke of Fife's wedding.

What relation, if any, to this family was another very wealthy Farquhar, namely John, who is described in the Dictionary of National Biography as having been a "millionaire." He was born in 1751 of humble parents in Bilbo, Cринond. He went out to India as a cadet in the Bombay establishment, but soon after his arrival was badly wounded, and became a free merchant in Bengal. He ultimately became sole contractor for gunpowder to the Indian Government. He came back to London in middle life with half-a-million of money, which Mr. Hoare, his banker, invested for him, and became a partner in the great agency house of Basset, Farquhar & Co., besides purchasing a share in Whitbread's brewery. Though he used to go about like a beggar, he purchased Fonthill from Beckford in 1822 for £330,000, and occasionally resided there till 1825, when he sold the estate. "Besides having a special knowledge of chemistry, he was an accomplished classical scholar, and also excelled in mathematics and mechanics. His religious beliefs were modified by his strong admiration of the moral system of the Brahmins. He wished to expend £100,000 for the foundation of a College in Aberdeen, with a reservation in regard to religion, but, on account of a difficulty about parliamentary sanction, the scheme was not carried out." He died in 1826. "His wealth amounted to about a million and a-half, and, as he had left no will, it was divided among his seven nephews and nieces." Who were they?

Again, who was the ancestor of John Farquhar, Dean of Guild of Aberdeen, 1769, who helped to found the firm of Alexander Hadden and Sons. Farquhar's son, James, was Deputy Register to the Court of Admiralty. He was Conservative M.P. for Aberdeen, 1807-1818, and of Portarlington from 1824 to his death in 1830. He died without issue.

ST. Fillans.—An article on the famous Perthshire village, written by Julia Cartwright, and illustrated by Mr. David Small, appeared in the September number of the Magazine of Art.

A PICTURE WITH A HISTORY THAT ONCE BELONGED TO THE DUKE OF FIFE'S FAMILY.

In the beginning of July a picture was offered for sale at Reading among the effects of the late Mr. Edward Snare, but was bought in. The picture has had a most curious history. Writing about it a correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says:—

It is said to be the portrait of Charles I., when Prince of Wales, painted by Velasquez when Charles visited Madrid in 1623, with the Duke of Buckingham, to espouse the Infanta. It is assumed that Charles had it done as a present to the Infanta, and, his visit not being successful, that he brought it back with him to England and gave it to his companion Buckingham, to whose town place, York House, Whitehall, they returned in October, 1623. York House was burnt down in 1697, and Fife House was erected on a portion of its site. In the catalogue of the Earl of Fife's collection of paintings in Fife House printed in 1798, there is this entry:—"Charles I., when Prince of Wales. Three-quarter. Painted at Madrid when his marriage with the Infanta was proposed. Velasquez. This picture belonged to the Duke of Buckingham." The then Earl (James) of Fife died in 1809, and his pictures were stored with John Marshall, of Gerrard Street, Soho. On some inexplicable grounds Marshall either disposed of the portrait or it was stolen from his possession; it passed into the hands of a dealer named Spackman, who disposed of it to Mr. Archer, of Oxford, who, in his turn gave it to his son-in-law, Benjamin Kent, who kept a school at Radley Hall, near Oxford. On October 28, 1845, the contents of Radley Hall were sold by auction, and Mr. Edward Snare bought the portrait for £8. For some time the portrait was exhibited in Bond Street, London, when it caused considerable sensation. It was then taken to Edinburgh, and whilst there the Earl of Fife's Trustees seized it on January 31, 1849, on the plea that "the picture had been stolen or surreptitiously abstracted by some party or parties during or subsequent to the month of February, 1809." After protracted legal proceedings the picture was directed by the Court to be returned to Mr. Snare, who immediately brought an action for trespass against the trustees, and obtained a verdict of £1000. Some experts have valued the picture at £5, and others considered £10,000 as a fair market value. Quite a literature has grown up around this portrait, Mr. Snare writing two substantial pamphlets in proof of its authenticity, citing a number of very remarkable facts in support of his theory.

COUNT JAMES LESLIE.—A portrait of James Leslie, Count of Neustadt, Gentleman of the Chamber, and Field Marshal, will be found in a folio album of engraved portraits, published in Rome, by John James Rubens, some time last century. Leslie's portrait was the work of Louis Gomier.
THE GLEN LYON BROOCH AND THE GARDEN FAMILY.

The famous Glen Lyon Brooch has been acquired by the British Museum, and a facsimile reproduction is to be placed in the National Museum of Antiquities at Edinburgh. The brooch is interesting both in itself, and on account of its associations with the family in which it was for centuries a treasured heirloom. It is of silver, and is circular in form, with a bar across the middle. To this bar two tongues are attached by which to fasten the brooch to the garment with which it is worn. One side is studded in a rude manner with coarse gems, while on the other side are inscribed the names of the three Magi, or legendary Kings of Cologne—Gaspar, Melchior, and Balthazar—with the word "Consommatum." The origin of the brooch is obscure, but it is believed to have been consecrated, and it was certainly worn as a kind of amulet or charm rather than as an ordinary ornament. The brooch, says the Edinburgh Evening Dispatch, owes its name to its having belonged to the "Lairds of Glen Lyon." The first of the Lairds was William Olifant, who received a grant from King Robert Bruce of the lands of Glen Lyon, till then Crown property. His immediate successors appear to have been content with the common Highland holding known as "right of the sword," till Iain Dubh nan lann (Black John of the Spears), who married the widow of the Knight of Lochow, was persuaded by his stepson to obtain a charter. There is a record of a grant having been made in 1638 by David II. to "John of Lorne" and his wife Janet. During the troublous times of Albany's Regency all the sons of Black John, with one exception, were slain. The solitary survivor succeeded his father, but was soon after killed while hunting, and the lands then passed to the Campbells, the first of whom to inherit Glen Lyon is supposed to have been the heir of Black John's stepson. His successor is famed in Celtic lore as Red Duncan of the Hospitality—a sobriquet which he owed to his profuse, and, indeed, extravagant hospitality, especially to minstrels. Red Duncan's son, Colin, who succeeded him in 1580, married a sister of the able and wily Sir Duncan Campbell of Glenorchy, the founder of the Breadalbane family. He lost his reason, and is known in the annals of the Campbells of Glen Lyon as "Mad Colin." There are many traditions regarding "Red Duncan" and "Mad Colin," some of them amusing, others tragic.

The decay of the family began with Robert Campbell, who was Laird at the time of the Restoration, and whose career of wild extravagance led to his having to cut down the magnificent forests of Glen Lyon, and to sell large portions of the lands. The most notable member of the family subsequent to that time was the Laird, who, as a leading actor in the bloody tragedy of Glencoe, gained an unpleasant notoriety and an unenviable place in Scottish history. The last of the direct line was Dr. David Campbell, who in 1784 succeeded his brother, the "Black Colonel," and who died in 1806 in his eighty-sixth year. He was succeeded by his grand-nephew, Francis Garden, son of Peter Garden, then of Dalgety, Aberdeen, and afterwards of Troup, Banffshire, who had married the heiress of Glen Lyon. The new Laird assumed the additional surname and arms of Campbell. In 1885, his great-grandson, Francis William Garden-Campbell of Troup and Glen Lyon, sold the lands of Glen Lyon to Sir Donald Currie, M.P.

It is worthy of notice in closing that the Gardens, like the Campbells, were an old historic family. A member of the family formed one of the embassy which in 1589 went to Denmark to conclude the marriage treaty between James VI. of Scotland and the Princess Anne; another Garden was a Major in the army which Charles I. sent to assist Gustavus Adolphus, and was in high favour at the Court of Queen Christina; and there were others who distinguished themselves in various ways.—Scotsman.

THE MAITLAND FAMILY.—An elaborate deduction, compiled by Mr. S. H. Rogers Harrison, the Windsor Herald, appeared in the second volume of Miscellania Genealogica et Heraldica, London, 1876.

LORD MACAULAY'S ANCESTORS.—An article on this subject by Mr. W. C. Mackenzie appeared in the August number of the Gentleman's Magazine. His deduction runs thus:

Donald Macaulay
(blind in one eye and known as "Cam").

"Fear Bhreinis" Macaulay.

Rev. Aulay Macaulay,
Minister of Harris for 50 years, died 1758.
He had six sons, including

Rev. John Macaulay

Zachary Macaulay.

The Gerard Family.—Father John Gerard, S.J., has come out with a new book on the Gunpowder Plot, being a facsimile of Thomas Winter’s Confession from the original at Hatfield. It is a folio, published by Harper & Brothers of London. Father Gerard first wrote What was the Gunpowder Plot? Dr. Rawson Gardiner then replied to it; and now Father Gerard replies. A pedigree of the Gerard family (who originally came from Aberdeen) was given in S. N. & Q., vol. x, page 61. Three of Father Gerard’s sisters are married to officers in the Russian army. Jane Emily, Madame de Laszowska (born 1849), and Dorothea, Madame Longard de Longarde (born 1855), have written many novels, the best known of which are Reata and Lady Baby.

The Brodie Family.—Mr. Timothy Holmes, F.R.C.S., has written a monograph on Sir Benjamin Brodie, 1st Bart., for Mr. Fisher Unwin’s “Masters of Medicine Series.” He gives this pedigree of the Brodies:

Alexander Brodie in Glassaugh, Banffshire, had—James, who went to Ireland.

Isabella, who married Alexander Duff, and went to Ireland.

Alexander, born at Glassaugh, 1701, who went to London before 1740, and married Margaret, daughter of Dr. Samuel Shaw, a Jacobite. He lived in Brewers Street, in the parish of St. James’s, Westminster, and died in 1772. He had two sons (the younger left England in 1769 for India in the ship “Lord Holland,” which was lost at sea,) and four daughters. The elder son,

Rev. Peter Bellinger Brodie (1742-1804), was vicar of Winterslow in Wilts, getting the preferment from Lord Holland. He married in 1775 Sarah, the daughter of Benjamin Collins of Melford, near Salisbury (who bought from Goldsmith for 20 guineas a third share of the Vicar of Wakefield). He had two daughters and four sons, the third being Benjamin Collins Brodie, created a baronet 1834. For his descendants see Burke’s Peerage, Elizabeth, married in 1778 Thomas Denman, M.D., and had Thomas, created Baron Denman 1834 (see Burke).

1183. Scot Abroad.—Can any of your readers inform me where the proverb “Scotus est, pipex in naso” is to be found, and also what is the exact wording of it? The proverb is supposed to describe the readiness of “the Scot abroad” to resent any slight or suspected slight on himself or his country. I think I have come across it in one of Scott’s novels, but cannot find the passage.

Answers.

1162. John Turner of Kinmonty (XII., 14).—The estate of Kinmonty lies in the parish of Birse, long possessed by a family named Turner, now represented by —Turner of Turnerhall, in the parish of Ellon. In Dr. Temple’s deduction of that family, in his Thanaige of Formartyn, I find towards the end of the 17th century that Kinmonty was owned by John Turner, a merchant in Dantzig, who, being a man of enterprise, had amassed a considerable fortune for that period. Never being married, Kinmonty passed to his heir-at-law, John, eldest son of Andrew Turner, his cousin-german. After leaving legacies of large amount for charitable and educational purposes, he devised as much of his fortune as would purchase an estate for Robert, the 4th youngest son of Andrew Turner, in accordance with which the trustees bought the estate of Rosshill, now Turnerhall, in 1693, and Tipperty in 1694. John was served heir to his second cousin in 1698. He was commonly called the Sergeant of Birse, from the character given of the family tradition. He was the exact prototype of Sergeant Bothwell in Old Mortality. This brother Robert of Turnerhall married on 16th January, 1693, and died 21st January, 1741. These dates would indicate that John Turner, whose remains rest in the land of the Leek, was a son of the Sergeant. The Kinmundies alluded to by Dr. Cramond is Kinmundy in Newmachar, once possessed by the Menzies, the other Kinmundy in Buchan is in possession of the Fergusons. No connection with Kinmonty.

1165. Place Name, “Banff” (XII., 14).—“C. C.” in Notes and Queries wrote several years ago:—“I do not subscribe to the theory of ‘Banath,’ white ford. The Gaelic as stated has the a or ath first and terminates with the descriptive name or feature. The Gaelic for Banff is Banife, Banife with an emphasis on the cf. I agree with ‘X. X.’ that the name is connected with the Boyne and the Royal Forest of the Boyne, always an important district—so very striking and beautiful a situation would not have escaped the descriptive mark of the Celts at the foot of the Boyne district and terminating at the sea with the very remarkable level flat on the banks of the river on which the noble Ache Duff House stands. Ach, Ache (Scotch haugh) is a level flat field at the foot of a river or water, as Badenach, &c. The ancient Thaneship of Glendowach was based on clean, Glenn, dhu or dawaine, black river, and ache such a flat field, or ache as I have briefly described, Glenn-dowach, Glendowach, comprehensive, descriptive and terse. From the same beautiful and natural objects the town at their termination would have been graphically and appropriately called Banife, modernized Ban. ‘Benet,’ a person of the Boyne, and ‘Hugo de Beniese,’ is Hough of Banff.”

1168. Macmillans of Loch Tayside (XII., 28).—The earlier genealogies of Buchanan of Auchmar are untrustworthy, but those within the period of authentic history may be reckoned fairly reliable. What he says of the Macmillans falls within that period. He is said to have died in 1747. His Ancient Scottish Surnames, reproduced in the Miscellanea Scotia, was first issued in 1723. Mr. Christie appears to doubt his statement regarding the Macmillans because no local tradition, nor trace of the “Macmillans in Ardounaim,” nor tombstone bearing the name, can now be discovered. I venture to submit that all such records may have disappeared in 175 years without necessitating the calling in question of Buchanan’s accuracy.

W. S.

1169. Where was King Grimus Slain? (XII., 28).—Taylor (History of Scotland, 1, 37) says—“At length the rival claimants (Malcolm and Kenneth the Grim) met in conflict at Monivaird, where the contest was decided by the death of Kenneth, A.D. 1003, after a reign of eight years. The scene of the battle is marked by a large barrow, called Carnchairinchin—the Cairn of Kenneth.” Other writers speak of this cairn, as Dr. Marshall (Historic Scenes in Perthshire) and others. May one not conclude that the existence of such a memorial, the tradition it embodies, together with the absence of any similar record in Glenuaich, furnish good ground for believing Monivaird to be the spot where Grimus was slain?

W. S.
1173. The Ancestry of the Princess Alexis Dolgorouki (née Miss Fleetwood Wilson) (XII., 29).—From a privately-printed account of this family, I learn the following facts:

John Bean, born about 1685, had property in the parish of Diskped (Deskford?), Banffshire, and also near Inverness. He married Janet, sister or cousin of Sir Ludovic Grant of Grant (her brother, Captain John Grant, being known as the Scotch Giant). They had

John Bean (1717-1787), married Barbara, daughter of Dr. William Lorimer, founder of bursaries at Aberdeen University. They had Alexander Bean (1736-1790), who had two sons and a daughter.

James Bean (b. 1737), Secretary to Governor Dawsonne Drake of Madras. He married, in 1768, Cornelia Barlow, of Accomb Hall, York, the Governor’s niece, and a direct descendant of the great admiral. They had two daughters, Jean Bean, married (1) Grey, shipowner, Portsoy, and (2) Cruickshank. By her first husband she had Barbara Grey, married John Wilson, shipowner, Banff (died 1859).

Jean Grey, married Alexander Wilson, a Lieutenant, R.N. Secretary to Admiral Lord Exmouth. He died in 1820. They had four daughters and three sons, among them Edward Pellew Wilson (born 1803), married Maria Constança da Silva Freire, of Bahia, and had issue.

Fleetwood Pellew Wilson, born June 3, 1809, at Portsoy. He married Frances, a daughter of Samuel Stoddart, by Elizabeth, widow of Charles Meynell. Mr. Wilson died on April 24, 1888; his wife died 1st September, 1857, aged 26. They had Frances Fleetwood Wilson, Princess Alexis Dolgorouki, tenant of Braemar Castle. In view of this it is a rather curious fact that one of her husband’s ancestors was implicated in a Jacobite plot (1716-1739) for a Russian invasion of Scotland. Two articles on the subject appeared in the Aberdeen Free Press of Sept. 3 and 14, 1898.

1174. Whyte Melville (XII., 30).—This author was the son of John Whyte Melville, Esq., of Benochoy and Strathkinness, who succeeded to the estate of his brother Robert in 1818. His mother was Lady Catherine Anne Sarah Osborne, youngest daughter of the fifth Duke of Leeds. A pedigree is given in Conolly’s Biographical Dictionary of Eminent Men of Fife.

1176. The Adams Family (XII., 30).—An account of Francis W. L. Adams, author of The Australians, will be found in the Bookman for May, 1893, but does not add anything biographically new to the details furnished by “X” in his query.

W. S.

1178. A Descendant of Barclay of Urie (XII., 46).—“England” is probably used in the sense of “Great Britain.” The mother of Barclay of Urie was the daughter of Sir Robert Gordon of Gordonstoun, second son of the Earl of Sutherland, and second cousin of James VI.

W. S.

1180. Rev. Alexander Shank (XII., 47).—This clergyman, the minister of St. Cyrus, is stated by Anderson (Scottish Nation) to have married Diana, daughter of Robert Scott of Duninald, and had issue three sons and two daughters. Is not the minister named in the query another person than he of St. Cyrus?

W. S.

1181. Prince Michael Bogdonovitch Barclay de Tolly (XII., 47).—See a brief notice of this celebrated General in Chambers’s Encyclopaedia, vol. i. (edition 1868). He is there said to be of the same family as that to which Barclay of Urie, the Quaker apologist, belonged. Anderson (Scottish Nation, vol. i.) asserts that he belonged to the Barclys of Towie, or Tolly, in Aberdeenshire, who were descended from the Berkeleys of Gloucester.

W. S.

Prince Michael Barclay de Tolly.—According to Prince Paul Dolgorouki’s Handbook of the Principal Families in Russia (which was translated for Ridgway of London in 1858 by F. Z.), the Prince was the son of Gottlieb Barclay de Tolly, burgomaster of Riga, who was descended from a “citizen family” in that town. The burgomaster had three sons, all of whom entered the Russian army, and “consequently on that ground were nobles.” The younger Michael was born in 1758. He distinguished himself in Finland (1808-9), and held the chief command in the Russian army that opposed Napoleon, 1812. The Czar Alexis made him a Count after the Battle of Leipsic; a Field Marshal at the entry of Paris; and a Prince in 1815. He died in 1818. “He was distinguished not only by his great military talents, but by his loyalty, and the stoical firmness of his character and his patriotism, which was displayed in all its brightness in the memorable year 1812.”

A Shetland Minister of the Eighteenth Century, being Passages in the Life of the Reverend John Mill, 1712-1805. Kirkwall: The Leonards. All rights reserved. [By Rev. John Willcock, B.D., Lerwick, 1897. 174 pp. Sm. 8vo.].

This is in every way a charming book. Its get-up is tastefully quaint, and the subject matter fresh and interesting. A diary of the Rev. John Mill, published by the Scottish History Society, is the base of the book, but an intelligent editor has known to glean in many directions for up-building materials. The result is the faithful portraiture, not only of Mr. Mill, with all his naïveté and fidelity to duty, but of a wicked and perverse generation among whom he was set, and against whom his righteous indignation was often roused. Mr. Willcock has added an excellent appendix, full of illustrative matter.

Of all the sumptuous issues of these annals the present excels them in research and skill, as well as in volume. The issue consists of two fasciculi. The first is occupied by Sir George King's descriptive matter, running to 342 pp. of letterpress, and of plates delineating the family of the Malaxideae; the second is wholly occupied by plates of the remaining species. The orchids are a widely-distributed family of 7500 species. A resolution was adopted, when the work was begun, that drawings would be made only from living plants, and, with very few exceptions, Mr. Pantling's beautiful drawings may be relied on as from fresh plants. The lithograph reproductions are all the work of natives trained in the Government Art Schools. The colourings have also been done by natives—who seem to possess the mimetic faculty—the sons of Nepalese coolies, who, until Mr. Pantling took them in hand, were unaccustomed to use "any implement more delicate than a hoe." We heartily congratulate Sir George King, the late Superintendent of the Calcutta Garden, not only on this last magnum opus, but on the so successful carrying through of all the important work of his responsible position, and rejoice in the well-earned honours of which he has been deemed worthy.

ABERDEEN, NOVEMBER, 1898.

ALEXANDER GORDON OF WARDHOUSE.

I recently dealt in the Free Press, Aberdeen, with the tragic end of this young man, who was executed at Brest, on November 24, 1769, for espionage. I based the report of the trial on a very clumsy anonymous article which appeared in Bentley's Miscellany of November and December, 1868. The writer evidently had examined the original documents dealing with the trial, for he said, "After a careful perusal of the narrative of Gordon's trial, and the accompanying extracts from official documents, the conclusion is forced on us." ... etc. Reference to Messrs. Bentley, the publishers of the Miscellany, elicits the fact that the authorship of the article cannot now be discovered. The Miscellany was then edited by Harrison Ainsworth, "and the record of the contents of these numbers would probably have been lost sight of after his death." A letter to the civil and military authorities of Brest has remained unanswered. Since I wrote the article I have been in communication with one of Gordon's kinsfolk, from whom I learn that the facts I related are so new to the Wardhouse family that she doubted their validity. My correspondent never heard of the victim's having written letters to his relatives, no such letters now being possessed by the family. She says:—"The history of Alexander Gordon's death which was current in the family was that he was seized at Brest, while sketching on the ramparts, on the suspicion of being a spy, and that he was executed. In the few scattered papers which I have seen there was no reference to any long imprisonment or trial. The other account was that the young man lost his life in a brawl in the town." I am well aware that there have been a great many statements of the case. The writer of the Miscellany article, however, declares that "nothing in the documents, now for the first time brought to light, gives any countenance to the rumours, so prevalent at the time, that Gordon had been sacrificed to a Court intrigue, or to private revenge arising out of a love affair." The final proof, however, of the truth of my statement of the case occurs in Walpole's Memoirs, in which reference is made to young Gordon, who "had been proved to be in the pay of our Ambassador, Lord Harcourt" (Vol. IV., page 114, 1894). Among the Wardhouse papers in the possession of Messrs. Wilson and Duffus, advocates in Aberdeen, the agents for the family, is a letter, dated 4th December, 1769, from Paris, and addressed to Messrs. Mansfield, Hunter & Co., Edinburgh, stating that, notwithstanding every effort that had been made to obtain his pardon, young Gordon had been executed at Brest. Gordon, his kinswoman assures me, was a Catholic, and not a Protestant, as the writer in Bentley's magazine declares.

His father, a staunch Jacobite, had fought at Culloden. His mother (née Margaret Frances Smith), as I surmised, was the great granddaughter of General Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries, whose daughter (Katherine Elizabeth Gordon's) first husband, John Rudolph Strasbourg, Baron of Rochelle, was accidentally killed in 1697. She married as her second husband Major-General Alexander Gordon of Auchintoul, and her daughter Elizabeth, by Strasbourg; married Patrick Smith of Braco and Methven, while living at Boulogne with her step-father, who had to make himself scarce on account of his Jacobite sympathies. Joseph Robertson, in his edition of Patrick Gordon's Diary, published by the old Spalding Club, makes no mention of Miss Strasbourg. The Brest victim's full name was Alexander Maria Gordon.

On the 3rd of the present month, Mr. S. R. W. Shaw, auctioneer, Aberdeen, is to sell the silver plate of Wardhouse, and some relics of Prince Charlie, belonging to the late Carlos Pedro Gordon, of Wardhouse and Kildrummy, who died recently. Among the relics were three waistcoats. According to a letter to the auctioneer, written by Messrs. Wilson & Duffus, one of the vests (a crimson one) was made by the Brest victim's mother.

During the temporary success which attended the rising of 1745, when Prince Charlie established himself with his Court in Holyrood Palace, the enthusiasm of his followers was so great that they, for a time, felt absolutely certain of the exiled family being very shortly restored to the throne of these kingdoms, and many of the wives of the gentlemen who had taken the field resorted to Holyrood. So assured were they of the success of the movement that they began to discuss the approaching coronation. It was then that Mrs. Gordon undertook to embroider a crimson silk vest, to be worn by Prince Charlie on the hoped-for occasion, and the other two [yellow] vests now offered for sale were given to her to form a pattern of the size, etc. They were both worn by the Prince during his stay at Holyrood. The crimson silk breast-pieces offered for sale are those embroidered at this time by this lady. They are not finished, because, before the embroidering had been completed, the tide of the Prince's success had so turned by the defeat at Culloden that the work was laid aside, and has remained in an unfinished state ever since.

In conclusion, it may be noticed that Mr. James Ogston of Norwood has recently purchased Kildrummy from the Gordons, who have held it for 167 years.

J. M. BULLOCH.

JAMES KEMP.—In Mr. P. J. Anderson's Records of Marischal College and University, II., p. 359, we find among the graduates of 1782-86, "Jacobus Kemp, f. Donaldi in Keithhall," whom the editor has failed to identify. This is Dr. James Kemp, the second Bishop of Maryland, in the United States. He was son of Donald and Isabel Kemp, in that parish. After a course at the Aberdeen Grammar School, he took his degree at Marischal in 1786, and devoted another winter to divinity and other studies. In the spring of 1787 he emigrated to Maryland, and shortly after, on forsaking Presbyterianism, he was ordained Deacon by Bishop Claggett of Maryland, on December 26th, 1789, and Priest on the following day. In the August of next year he became Rector of Great Choptank Parish, in Maryland, and was there upwards of 20 years. He was associate Rector of S. Paul's, Baltimore, Mel., when elected Suffragan Bishop for the aged Bishop Claggett, and consecrated Sept. 1st, 1814. He has the unique distinction of being the only Bishop Suffragan who has been appointed in the American Church. He received his D.D. from Columbia College, New York, in 1802, and was elected Provost of the University of Maryland in 1815. As suffragan, he was assigned jurisdiction over the eastern part of the diocese, which is now the diocese of Easton, and, on Bishop Claggett's demise, in 1816, he presided over the whole diocese of Maryland. He died on October 28th, 1827, at the age of 63, in consequence of a stage coach accident, as he was returning from taking part in the consecration of Bishop H. U. Onderdonk of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia. His portrait gives the impression of a strong Scotch face, with kindly humour, and his character fitted him for those difficult times. Both before and after his consecration, his aid was much appreciated by Bishop Claggett. His best memoir, and the source of all others, is in The Evergreen, III., pp. 1-3.

JAMES GAMMACK, LL.D.

West Hartford, Conn.

JOHN KEMP.—In Mr. P. J. Anderson's Records of Marischal College and University, Vol. II., p. 355, "Joannes Kempt [sic], f. Joannis in Coull," stands among the graduates of 1779-1783. In American memoirs, Professor Kemp is said to have been born at "Auchlossan, Scotland." Is there an Auchlossan in Coull? There is one, I think, in Lumpharan or Kincardine O'Neil.

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

877. Skene, Alexander: Roman Catholic Author. I have seen somewhere, but cannot recall my name, that a writer of this name, who took the Roman side in the religious controversy of the sixteenth century, belonged to the family of Wester Corse, and was a brother of Sir John Skene. This, however, must be a mistake, as the Alexander Skene who was brother of Sir John Skene does not appear to have written anything at all, and to have lived a considerable part of his life in Aberdeen, presumably as a Protestant. (See Dr. Skene’s Memorials of the Family of Skene.) There was, however, an Alexander Skene, Regent at King’s, 1580-81, who possibly afterwards have become a Catholic, and figured as a controversialist.

878. Skene, Alexander (of Newtyle): Bailie of Aberdeen and Author. This gentleman is well known to all local antiquaries as the author of Memorials for the Government of the Royal Burghs in Scotland, as well as of a Succinct Survey of the Famous City of Aberdeen. Both productions were published in one volume in 1689. Bailie Skene was the son of Robert Skene, of Aberdeen, and born in 1620. He became bailie in 1656. The learned bailie was an active member of the Kirk Session of Aberdeen, and a steady adherent of Rev. Andrew Cant. He is supposed to have become a Quaker in 1671, but to have left that body before the publication of his book. Dr. Skene informs us that Bailie Skene wrote two pamphlets on the Quaker side in the controversy that raged in Aberdeen in the 17th century. (See Memorials of the Family of Skene.)

879. Skene, or Skein, Alexi: The Boyar: Russian General. This noted soldier of fortune, who, from his name, was presumably a native of Aberdeen, was appointed Generalissimo of the Russian Army in the campaign which led to the capture of Azov in 1666. He was also present at the suppression of the revolt of the Streititzes by General Gordon, also an Aberdeen, in 1668.

880. Skene, Alexander John, M.A.: Son of Major Alexander Skene, Royal Veteran Battalion, younger son of Thomas Skene, in Blackdog (see Memorials of the Family of Skene, page 129). He was born in Aberdeen, 31st March, 1820, graduated M.A. at Aberdeen University in 1838, and in the following year went to Australia. On arrival he commenced practice as a surveyor. In 1834 he was appointed Surveyor to the Colony of Victoria, and in 1859 Surveyor-General, from which post he retired in 1886. He filled the offices of Commissioner of Crown Lands and Commissioner of Land Tax. Like many other of the officers who have held positions of trust and responsibility in the public service of Victoria, Mr. Skene served an apprenticeship in the early days of the colony which entailed constant hardships, and at times peril, for his survey work extended over some of the roughest of the then almost unexplored districts of Victoria. On occasions Mr. Skene was away from home on surveying expeditions for over a year at a stretch, incurring constantly not only the chance of molestation from hostile blacks, but the risks of the general lawlessness of the times. It was a hard novitiate, but an experience invaluable afterwards to the officer who was called upon to frame and influence the land legislation which really led to close settlement in Victoria. In many parts of the colony there are bush tracks and other topographical points that bear his name. Some of his most important work was done as head of the Department and chief adviser of the Government, when the late Mr. J. M. Grant introduced his Land Act, which brought about a revolution in the settlement of the land, and the far-reaching influence of which extends down to the present day. Mr. Skene had also an important share in the framing of what is known as the Duffy Act, and in later years he had much to do with making the land titles safe for the future. These efforts were made in the same spirit as marked his life, the simple, strong, and unselfish. (See Memorials of the Family of Skene.)

881. Skene, Andrew (Rev.): Church of Scotland Divine and Author. He studied at the Grammar School, Aberdeen, and was admitted to Marischal College as a student in 1744. In 1754 he was ordained minister of Keith parish, and was translated to Banff in 1762. Here Mr. Skene got a new church built in 1790. Possessed of considerable medical knowledge, he practised medicine gratuitously. He published A Catechism; also, An Address to the People on Infectious Fever. His death took place in 1792, at Bath, whither he had gone for his health.

882. Skene, Andrew (Hon.): Solicitor-General for Scotland. This excellent lawyer was born in Aberdeen, on 26th February, 1784, and was the son of Dr. George Skene. Educated at the Grammar School and Marischal College, he afterwards passed to the study of Law, in Edinburgh, where he was called to the bar in 1806. About the year 1815 his reputation at the bar was established, and he speedily obtained a very large amount of practice, and, before his death, was at the head of the Scottish bar. In 1834 he succeeded Lord Cockburn as Solicitor-General, but only held the appointment a few weeks. He died suddenly, in 1835. See Anderson's Scottish Nation (sub voce).

883. Skene, Charles, M.D. (Prof.): Distinguished Aberdeen Doctor. Son of Professor George Skene, and born in Aberdeen in 1777, he graduated M.A., 1795, and M.D., Edinburgh, 1799. Became Lecturer in 1802, and Professor of Medicine, Marischal College, 1823, a position he held till 1839, when he resigned. Died 1844. See P. J. Anderson's Records of Marischal College and University, II., 55.

884. Skene, Francis, LL.D. (Prof.): Born at Kinkell Manse, 1704, graduated at King's College, 1721, appointed Regent in Marischal College, 1734. When separate chairs were allocated to the Regents, in 1753, he became Professor of Civil and Natural History. Died 1775. Father of No. 886, and grandfather of No. 883. See S. N. & Q., x., 98.

885. Skene, Sir George, M.P.: Successful Merchant and Public Man. Born at Myline of Potterton, Bethelvie, in 1619, he emigrated to Poland, where he acquired a fortune as a merchant. Having returned home, he bought Wester Finray and Rubislaw. Taking an interest in the municipal affairs of Aberdeen, he acted as Provost of that city for nine years, from 1676 to 1685. He also acted as Member of Parliament for the city on three occasions, in 1678-1681 and 1685. He received knighthood in 1681, and died in 1707. See Skene's Memorials of Family of Skene.

887. Skene, George, M.D. (Prof.): Son of No. 884, and father of No. 882. Born at Aberdeen, 1741, and educated at Marischal College. At the age of 19 he was appointed Professor of Natural Philosophy, and, on the death of his father, in 1775, was transferred to the chair of Civil and Natural History, which he held till his growing medical practice forced him to resign. He died in 1803. See S. N. & Q., x., 98.

888. Skene, George, M.P.: Born at Skene, about 1749, he was educated for the bar, but entered the army, where he attained the rank of Captain, but afterwards sought Parliamentary honours, and represented his native county as a supporter of Mr. Fox, and an enthusiastic member of the Whig party. He died in 1825.

889. Skene (Skenn), Gilbert, M.D. (Prof.): Brother of 894. In 1536 he was made Professor of Medicine in King's College, Aberdeen. He was the first Professor of Medicine at King's College after the Reformation, and subsequently Physician to the King. He published a book on The Pest, 1568; also a posthumous work of his, entitled Tracts, was edited for the Bannatyne Club, 1860. See Aberdeen Doctors, and P. J. Anderson's King's Coll. Graduates. He died in 1599.

890. Skene, James, of Skene: Covenantant. Executed at Edinburgh, 1st December, 1680. He was the friend and correspondent of Donald Cargill. His Letters to Friends and Last Dying Testimony are printed in The Cloud of Witnesses, and are among the most interesting portions of that volume. He is given as the XV. Laird of Skene in P. J. Anderson's Family of Skene (S. N. & Q., ix., 36).

892. Skene, Sir James: Judge. Son of Sir John, No. 894. Born about 1580, he passed advocate in 1603, and succeeded his father as ordinary Lord of Session in 1612, and followed Thomas, Earl of Melrose, as Lord President, in 1626. He died in 1633.

893. Skene, James, of Rubislaw: Friend of Sir Walter Scott, who dedicated to him the fourth canto of Marmion, in lines of great beauty. He was born on 5th March, 1775, and spent several years of his youth in Saxony, where he acquired a thorough knowledge of the German language. He joined with Scott in organising a troop of Edinburgh Light Horse Volunteers. He visited France, where he kept an accurate and lively journal, and executed many coloured drawings, 1822. He furnished Scott with various suggestions for scenes in Ivanhoe, and supplied much of the material for Quentin Durward. His friendship with the great novelist lasted till Sir Walter's death. Mr. Skene was held in much esteem for his high character and cultivated tastes. He died in 1861.

894. Skene, John (Sir), of Curriehill: Judge and noted Lawyer. Born at Wester Corse, Coull, probably about 1549. He was educated at Aberdeen and St. Andrews, and, according to Anderson's Scottish Nation, was Regent of the latter University in 1564 and 1565. He also spent several years in Denmark, Norway and Sweden, which afterwards was of great use to him. Returning to Scotland, he gave himself to the study of law, and was called to the bar in 1575. He soon acquired distinction among his brethren of the law, and was employed on many important public matters (see Anderson's Scottish Nation for details). In 1589 he was appointed joint Lord Advocate with Sir David MacGill. In 1594 he was appointed Lord Clerk Register, and admitted ordinary Lord of Session. He is a prolific legal author. For list of his writings, see Anderson's Scottish Nation. He died in 1612, or, another authority says, 1617.
895. Skene, William: Australian Pioneer and Politician. Born 1st June, 1809, son of Thomas of Fife and Wester Hatton farms, Aberdeenshire (see Mem. of Family of Skene, 129). He settled in Victoria in 1840, where he proved a successful colonist, and became one of the largest pastoralists in that thriving colony. Having bought the Kanawala and Plains stations, near Hamilton, in the western district of Victoria, he altered the name of his new property to Skene. He took a deep interest in all that concerned the welfare of his adopted country, and specially of the Hamilton district, where he resided. He was one of the founders of the Presbyterian Church, and subsequently a trustee thereof. He was a member of the first “Road Board,” and one of the originators of the “Pastoral and Agricultural Society” (one of the oldest in the colony), the members of which conferred on him the honour of President. In 1870 he was returned, without opposition, by the electors of the Western Province, as a member of the Legislative Council of Victoria, which position he occupied until 1876, when failing health induced his retirement in favour of Sir Charles Sladen. He died in 1877. Thomas Skene, of Marnoo, Banyewu, Victoria, a frequent and valued contributor to this journal, is a son of the above gentleman.

896. Skene, ——— (Prof.), M.D.: Dean of Long Island Medical College. A native of Fyvie, where he was born in 1838.

897. Skinner, John (Rev.): Song Writer and Ecclesiastical Historian. Born at Balfour, Birse, 3rd October, 1721, the son of a schoolmaster, he was educated at Marischal College. For a short time a teacher at Kemnay and Monymusk, he became a student for the Episcopal ministry, and was ordained at Peterhead in 1742, having been appointed to a charge at Longside, where he officiated for 65 years. His songs have carried his fame wherever the Scottish language is known and read, especially the song of “Tullochgorum,” “The Crooked Horn,” and “John of Badenyon.” Mr. Skinner wrote an Ecclesiastical History of Scotland, published in 1788 (see Miscell. Works, with Memoir, by his son, 1809, and Songs and Poems, with Biography, by H. G. Reid, Peterhead, 1839). He died in 1807.

898. Skinner, John (Rev.): Bishop of Aberdeen. Son of 896, and born at Longside, 17th May, 1744, he was educated at Marischal College, and ordained in 1763. He ministered successively at Ellon and Udny, and was translated to Aberdeen, where he erected a church in Longacre, in 1775. He was chosen Bishop of Aberdeen in 1784, and named Primus in 1788. He died in 1816. Besides other writings, Bishop Skinner published Primitive Truth and A Layman’s Account of his Faith.

899. Skinner, William (Rev.): Bishop of Aberdeen. Son of No. 896. He was born in Aberdeen, 27th October, 1778, and graduated at Marischal College, 1798. He also studied at Wadham College, Oxford, was ordained deacon in 1802, priest in 1803; became assistant, and afterwards colleague and successor, to his father in St. Andrew’s Church, Aberdeen; was elected Bishop in 1816, Primus in 1841. He died in 1857.

900. Smith, Alexander, D.D.: Church of Scotland Divine and Author. Born at Peterculter about 1771, he graduated at Marischal College, 1790, and, after studying for the ministry, was ordained to the charge of Chapel of Garroch in 1800. He was a man of worth and of considerable literary ability, and had D.D. from his Alma Mater in 1814. He published a Translation of Michaelis’s Commentaries on the Laws of Moses, in 4 volumes, 1814. Another work, entitled The Philosophy of Morals, was published posthumously in 1835, and in Robertson’s Handlist is attributed to him. He died in 1817.

901. Smith, Alexander, C.B., and F.R.S.A. A native of Buchan, and brought up in Pitfour Gardens. He was apprenticed to the firm of Walker & Beattie, to learn the profession of a Civil Engineer. He is, however, best known as a topographical and antiquarian writer. He published, in 1875, A New History of Aberdeenshire, in two large volumes. It contains a vast mass of information, and is well written, but unfortunately, not very reliable. He has also written on Scourie as a Manure, 1872, and a History of New and Old Aberdeen, 1882. He died in 1884.

902. Smith, Annie Emisie: Noted Vocalist. Born in Aberdeen about 1860, and now married to Dr. Cran of Banchory.

904. Smith, George: Minor Poet. A native of Huntly, where he was born in 1770, he was bred a weaver. Being of a poetical turn, he wrote much verse, and published, in 1824, The Douglas Travestie, and other Poems and Songs. He died in 1860.

905. Smith, George (Rev.), M.A.: Church of Scotland Divine and Author. Born at Birse Manse, about 1801, he graduated at Marischal College in 1819, and was ordained successor to his father in 1824. He died in 1863. He published Difficulties about the Protest of the Free Church to Spiritual Independence, 1844. This work was enlarged under the title of Truth as Revealed, or Voluntary and Free Churchism Opposed to the Word of God, 1846; also, an Account of the Parish (New Stat. Acc.).

906. Smith, Harry, M.P.: Lawyer, &c. Born about 1827, in Aberdeen. Son of Alexander of Glenmillan, he graduated at Marischal College, and was called to the Scottish Bar in 1857. He was for a time Sheriff-Substitute for Renfrewshire, but resigned to contest West Renfrew in 1885. He was unsuccessful, but won the Falkirk Burghs in 1892, but lost his seat in 1895.

THE ORIGIN OF "CHINESE" GORDON.

CAPTAIN DOUGLAS WIMBERLEY, the author of the Gordons of Lesmoir, and other genealogies, writing from Inverness, says:—

Mr. Bulloch's suggestion relative to "Chinese" Gordon's being descended from Charles Gordon of Terpersie is, I think, ingenious, and not beyond probability; but it is not free from difficulty. According to the manuscript pedigree of the Terpersie Family, lent to us by a descendant through a daughter of the beheaded laird, the eldest of the sons of the latter was named "Charles," otherwise "James." Mr. Bulloch's theory, however, requires "Charles" (or "James") to have been ten years younger than the David who is supposed to have been the ancestor of "Chinese" Gordon. Further, the young Charles, of 17, who was reprieved, after being taken prisoner at Carlisle, and tried, was "a young man of well-affecte family." I fear that he was more likely to be described as of a rebel family, if a son of poor Terpersie, and I certainly do not think that, if he had an elder brother, he was likely to have been "with Cope." When looking through the Historical Papers Relating to the Jacobite Period (New Spald. Club), quite lately, I was puzzled as to who this young Charles Gordon could be. I rather think he was got hold of by "Old Glenbucket" (John Gordon), not Sir Adam, and probably somewhere near Tomin- ton, where "Old Glenbucket" was then living. Certainly, if Mr. Bulloch's theory is correct, the young Charles Gordon, who was reprieved in 1746 as "a young man of well-affecte family," had plenty of "rebel" relatives, viz., his father, Sir William of Park, George of Carnousie, who was Collector of Cess for the Earl of Mar in 1715 (see Annals of Banff, 114-116), and Carnousie's son. Carnousie's daughter, Lillias, was wife of Sir William Gordon, 6th baronet of Lesmoir, but had had no issue, and consequently my great-grandfather, Sir Alexander, became 7th baronet, on the death of his cousin.

My article was avowedly nothing more or less than a "suggestion," and I am well aware of the difficulties of proving it. On looking into Colonel Allardyce's Historical Papers Relating to the Jacobite Period again, I note that it is distinctly said that young Charles Gordon's father had "protested against the rebels, and was imprisoned for it." Furthermore, that he was bailiff of regalities to the Duke of Gordon; at least I take this sentence to mean that—"The father was imprisoned in November [1745] for a protestation against Glenbucket for meddling with the Duke of Gordon's men, he being his [the Duke's?] bailiff of regalities." Now, what was the name of the Duke's bailiff at this date? The lad was brought into Banff on bare horse and guarded. In view of the fact that old Terpersie was beheaded as a rebel, it certainly does seem strange that this youth should have been his son. On the other hand, the phrase, "well-affecte family," may mean that the youth came of a well-to-do family. Captain Wimberley takes the phrase to mean a family well disposed to the House of Hanover. In the List of Persons Concerned in the Rebellion, transmitted to the Commissioners of Excise by the several Supervisors in Scotland, in obedience to a General Letter of 7th May, 1746, which Lord Rosebery edited for the Scottish Text Society in 1890, I find that only four Charles Gordons are mentioned in Banffshire, namely, Charles of Binhall, Charles of Beldormie, Charles of Terpersie, and Charles, surgeon apprentice. Does Dr. Cramond know anything of this "surgeon apprentice?" Perhaps the youth was the last. There was a student of the name of Charles Gordon at Marischal College in 1719, 1725 and 1749. Charles of Aberfeldie was a student in 1739. At King's College there was a Charles ("Rossensis") in 1730, a Charles ("Aberdonensis") in 1735.

I have suggested that "Chinese" Gordon's admitted great-grandfather, David, may have been born in 1719, his eldest son, William Augustus, having been born in 1739. There were David Gordons at Marischal College in 1702, 1738 and 1768. A fourth, who afterwards became an advocate in Aberdeen, was there in 1705. The only David Gordon ever at King's College before the Union was one in 1641.

Captain Wimberley digresses in his communication on the Gordons of Park. That is a very intricate pedigree, which I hope to deal with in these pages at no distant date.

J. M. BULLOCH.

TWO BURIAL SUPERSTITIONS.—The present cemetery of this parish has not been long in use. When the first burial took place it was only with the greatest difficulty that the grave could be dug. Everyone shrank from the duty, as certain to be unlucky. A liberal bribe alone removed the fear of the first adventurous gravedigger.—The body of one who had been accidentally drowned at the Island of Muck was found after some time. A boatload of islanders put off to the scene, but only one of them could be induced to give help in drawing the body from the water. Neither threats nor promises were of any avail. It was only with the greatest difficulty that they could be got to enter the boat in which the recovered body lay. Once landed, however, all scruples disappeared, and each vied with his neighbour in the last burial rites. Rem vidi.

J. CALDER ROSS.

Kirkurd, Peebles-shire.
CHAPLAIN WILLIAM INNES OF THE DUTCH ARMY.

Some historian of the family of Innes may be interested in the Rev. William Innes, the chaplain of a Scots regiment in the pay of the Dutch, who played a conspicuous part in discrediting the story of a certain George Psalmazer. The career of Psalmazer is recalled by the City Press (London, September 24, 1898) in connection with the marvellous adventures of M. Louis de Rougemont, who has been entertaining the man in the street and bamboozling the geographers. Psalmazer, who died in Ironmonger Row, St. Luke's, London, on August 3, 1763, at the age of 84, wrote a Historical and Geographical Description of Formosa, 1704, while his Memoirs were published after his death.

That he received a good education at one or more of the Jesuit colleges is pretty clear, and that he was for some years wandering over the Continent is also more than probable. To assist him in getting along as a mendicant student he forged certificates which partially served his purpose; and then a new idea occurred to him. He recollected that he had heard his Jesuit tutors speak of the East Indies, China, Japan, &c., and “expatiate much in praise of those countries and the ingenuity of the inhabitants.” Why should he not personate a native of one of these distant parts? The scheme was a wild one, but it answered his purpose. He fixed upon Formosa as the supposed place of his birth, and trusted to his ingenuity to save him from detection.

The interest of his story commences with his enlistment as a soldier and his introduction at Sluys to the Rev. William Innes, the chaplain of a Scotch regiment in the pay of the Dutch. Innes suspected the imposture from the first, and took means to verify his suspicions. Psalmazer had invented a language for the Formosans, and Innes asked him to translate a passage from Cicero into the (pretended) Formosan language. This was readily done, but when the paper had been handed in, and Psalmazer was asked shortly afterwards to make another translation of the same passage he saw he had fallen into a trap. The second translation was made, and the deceit was manifest. Innes, however, pretended not to see it, but from that time there was a tacit understanding between the two. Psalmazer played into his hands by becoming a “convert” from heathenism, and was solemnly baptized, the chaplain, though fully conscious of the imposture, being apparently not the least confused by the impious ceremony. Psalmazer’s reward was an introduction to Compton, the Bishop of London, and the zeal of Innes was also recognized subsequently by promotion. Psalmazer landed at Harwich towards the end of the year 1703, and under the patronage of the Bishop he became the “talk of the town.” Prior to his arrival in England he adopted what he describes in his memoirs as “one of the most whimsical expedients that could come into a crazed brain,” that of living upon raw flesh, roots, and herbs, and declared that he should never be able to reconcile himself to the European methods of preparing food. The Bishop of London was much taken with the stranger, and for a time at least believed in him. He had not been long in London before he translated the Church Catechism into the Formosan language. The Bishop accepted the manuscript, “and rewarded it with his usual candour and generosity, and laid it up among his other curious manuscripts.”

A few months afterwards Innes persuaded Psalmazer to write a history of Formosa. This task he undertook without much hesitation, and resolved to give such a description of it “as should be wholly new and surprising.” The book is a curiosity with regard both to the text and the illustrations. It would have contained more crudities than it did but that “the person who Englished it from ‘Psalmazer’s’ Latin assisted him to correct many more and greater improbabilities which he had not time to discover.” Who was this person? Possibly it was De Foe, though the balance of probabilities is against the hypothesis. With the help of the Bishop of London, Psalmazer was sent to Oxford, and spent six months in Christ Church College, where the principal work he did was to prepare a second edition of his history, which appeared in 1705. The first edition, published in 1704, was sold out in a very short time. There is little more to be said about Psalmazer. He soon dropped out of public view. It became an open secret that his book was an imposture, and, though he was assisted by a small body of believers, he found it somewhat difficult to obtain a living. He did a little in the way of private tuition, became clerk to a regiment of dragoons, took to painting fans for a livelihood, and finally adopted literature as a profession. He was employed by Palmer, of Bartholomew Close, to write the “History of Printing,” which was published under Palmer’s name; and he also wrote some of the volumes of the once well-known “Universal History.” In his last years he was, we believe, mainly supported by friends.

I may note that a Rev. James Innes was chaplain to Sir James Wood’s regiment in Maastricht, and became minister of Banff, 1716-53. A capital account of Psalmazer, by Mr. Sidney Lee, is given in the Dictionary of National Biography.

FYVIE IN 1652.—Topographical students may be glad to know that there is an interesting description of Fyvie in 1652 in the Autobiography of Anne Lady Halkett, which was edited for the Camden Society, in 1875, by John Gough Nichols (pages 64-73). She was then visiting Charles Seton, 2nd Earl of Dunfermline.
THE FAMILY OF WOOD OF BONNYTON.

AMONG the many landed families who once helped to make the history of Aberdeenshire, but who have vanished as completely as if they had never been, are the Woods of Bonnyton, in the parish of Udny. The difficulty of tracing their history is increased by the fact that, like other families—notably the vanished Mowats of Balquholl—they had estates of the same name in two counties, and it is not always clear whether the same line of the family held both at the same time. Besides the Aberdeenshire Bonnyton, they had an estate called Bonnyton in Maryton, Forfarshire; and there were cadets settled at Craig and Balbegno. In the course of other investigations I have come across many traces of the family, and these I have pieced together, without pretending to make a complete genealogy of the family. Some of your readers may be able to fill in the blanks and correct mistakes, for the future historian of Aberdeenshire must really do something to reconstruct the history of these minor families.

According to Jervise, the Forfarshire Bonnyton originally belonged to the family of Tulloch. Walter Wood married Dorothy Tulloch, the heiress, and got the property. The family were strong Catholics, and figure constantly in the Covenanting struggle in Aberdeenshire, along with the Gordons of Gight. From various sources, which I shall indicate, I have tried to unravel their genealogy, and I shall be grateful for further elucidation of the matter from any reader.

Walter Wood married Dorothy Tulloch of Bonnyton, Maryton, Forfarshire, and thus got the estate for his family, which may have originally come from the north (Jervise's Epitaphs).

Wood of Bonnyton had at least three sons (Great Seal), as follows:

- James Wood of Inchbreck.
- David Wood of Craig.

William Wood of Bonnyton. He married first Margaret Ogilvie, eldest daughter of the 2nd Lord Ogilvie of Airlie (Jervise), and secondly Katherine Scott. He was dead by 1546. He had
- Andrew, a natural son, legitimated in 1542.
- Patrick, a natural son, legitimated in 1542.
- Joneta.
- Agnes.
- Elizabeth, married R. Cullace of Balnamane.
- Isabel, was unmarried in 1527.

James Wood of Bonnyton, married Lady Elizabeth Ruthven, daughter of Lord Ruthven (Jervise). They had
- Matthew, natural son, legitimated in 1579.
- Alexander.

Elizabeth, married George Barclay of Mathers.

Patrick Wood of Bonnyton, (alive 1601), married Nicola Wardlaw. They had
- Isobel, married George Gordon, the 6th laird of Gight. She was married before 1597, and was excommunicated for her "Papistrie."
- Lillias, who was married.
- Margaret, who was married.
- John.
- David.

James, apparently the eldest son, was, on 27th April, 1601, executed at Edinburgh for breaking into his father's house and stealing some family documents. "He died," says Calderwood, "an obstinate Papist, ever looking for pardon till his last gaspe. He pretended he suffered for the Roman Catholic religion, but it was no point of his ditty." He married Barbara Gray (probably a daughter of the laird of Schivas—Mair's Presbytery Records of Elgin). She was excommunicated.

David (the second son) had a squabble with his brother, Harry, over his father's property. He was alive in 1608.

Sir Harry Wood of Bonnyton, the youngest son, was M.P. for Forfarshire (1628-33). In July, 1624, he was seized one Sunday morning in the church of St. Vigean's, by his brother-in-law, Gordon of Gight, and ten followers, "all bodin in fear of wear." Rushing through the church, and "overtradeing women and bairnis who wer sitting upon thair kneyis at the prayer," the intruders carried off Sir Harry to his "awe house of Lethern, quickly they surpysed and tooke, and locked the yettis thairoff," driving out his wife and children. They then made him sign away "gritt sowmes of money," for Gight was in a bankrupt condition, and let their horses eat up his "best infeld aitits." Gight was fined for this by the Privy Council, and forbidden to wear arms. Sir Harry Wood married Anna Cockburn. They had

Patrick Wood of Bonnyton, married Anne, daughter of John Carnegie of Ethie (circa 1635) and succeeded to the estate in 1642 (Great Seal).
Jean Wood was described in 1642 (Great Seal) as the future spouse of Alexander Cumming, yr. of Culter. This fact supplies a hiatus in Mr. J. A. Henderson’s notes on the Cumming family in his Annals of Lower Deeside.

Here my connected genealogy stops. Among the other Woods I have encountered are the following:—

David Wood is described as Tutor of Bonnyton, 1646 (Acts of Parliament).

Sir John Wood of Bonnyton, who married Lady Mary Ogilvy, daughter of the 2nd Earl of Airlie (by his Countess, who is the heroine of the familiar ballad, “The Bonnie Hoose o’ Airlie”), was either the son or the grandson of Sir Harry. He was created a baronet in 1661, and was appointed (see Acts of Parliament) a Commissioner of Supply for the years 1667, ’78, ’85, ’89, and ’90.

Sir James Wood of Bonnyton, who was a Commissioner of Supply in the years 1702 and 1704, may have been Sir John’s son. In October, 1716, James Innes, “minister to Sir James Wood’s regiment in Maastricht,” was appointed minister of Banff, holding the pulpit till 1753. (See Dr. Cramond’s Annals of Banff, Vol. II., 79.)

Besides these I know of the following:—

Magdalen Wood of Bonnyton, married George Leslie, 6th of Kincraigie, and became the mother of the 7th laird of Kincraigie. (Leslie’s Leslies.)

Agnes or Mary Wood of Bonnyton, married (about 1539) John Leslie, son of John Leslie, 8th of Balquhain, and had Marjory Leslie, who married Alexander Bisset.

Janet Leslie, who married Patrick Leslie of Kincraigie. (Leslie’s Leslies.)

Alexander Wood (of Bonnyton?) married Janet Leslie, daughter of James Leslie, 2nd of Little Folla, who was born in 1630. (Leslie’s Leslies.)

Janet Wood (of Bonnyton?) married John Leslie of Keithney. They had Knockinglews (Braco) in 1612. (Leslie’s Leslies.)

Jane Wood (of Bonnyton?) married (1) James Leslie of Peterston, (2) John Leslie of Balcairn, and (3) Baron Torrey. By her second husband she was the mother of the famous George Leslie (Father Archangel). The fact, however, that she is said to have been a Protestant, may discount my suggestion that she was one of the Bonnyton family.

I may note that, in the beginning of the 16th century, John Leslie of Balquhain got a 19 years’ lease of the town of Bonnyton from William Gordon, Bishop of Aberdeen. (Reg: Episc. Aberdon.)

Elspet Wood of Bonnyton married (before 1641) James Elphinstone of Glack, and became the grandmother of Sir James Elphinstone, 1st Bart. (Davidson’s Garioch.)

A Captain Wood (merchant service) is described as having had great influence over Leslie, the 6th laird of Findrassie. He took Leslie for a voyage in the Mediterranean, in 1739, and afterwards had him in his house at Banff (1739-41). This is referred to by Colonel Leslie in his History of the Leslies, 1869.

Alexander Wood of Colpny (son of James Wood of Bonnyton, and uncle of Sir Harry?) was a cadet of the Bonnytons, I think. (See Great Seal.) He had a son, Alexander Wood of Colpny.

LOCH TAYSIDE MILL MILLS, 1796.—Subjoined is a list shewing the emoluments of the millers on the Breadalbane Estate, around Loch Tayside, including Aberfeldy, in 1796. Four of the mills are still worked, namely, Lawers (a modern building on a new site not far from the old mill, which is now in ruins), Aberfeldy, Acharn and Ardeonaig. The present meal mill at Killin is not the one here referred to, it being at the time on the property of Macnab of Macnab.

Malcolm Campbell, Killin, gets 6½ bolls of oatmeal and a large croft.

Alexander Campbell, Finlarig, gets a heaped lippie of meal and a lippie of grain out of every boll, or 16 pecks shilled.

Malcolm Campbell, Morenish, a lippie of meal; obliged to make a pair of cart wheels when wanted, at 5/- each pair, and their ploughs at 1/6 each.

Widow McDiarmid, mill of Carwhin, a lippie of grain and a lippie of meal out of every boll.

John Macloch, Crannich, a lippie of grain and a lippie of meal out of every boll shilling.

Robert Graham, Lawers, 5 bolls of oatmeal and 3 pounds of wages.

Malcolm McGregor, Fernan, a lippie of meal.

Hugh Cameron, Aberfeldy, a lippie of meal run from mill eye.

Widow Walker, Acharn, a lippie of meal.

Andrew Walker, Ardeonaig, a lippie of meal.

Archibald McLaren, Mill of Cloichstran, a lippie of meal.

The lippies of meal are heaped from the mill eye, and the lippies of grain straked.

The miller gets a mutton ham yearly from every tenant, which they call Christmas dues or Bonnag.

Upon these terms the miller is obliged to buy milestones, and keep in proper repair all the machinery work upon his own proper charges.

The tenants carry home the milestones.

THE DUMBARTON CRANNOG.—A most interesting discovery was last month made in the Clyde by Mr. W. A. Donnelly, artist. This was the existence of a Crannog, lying about 1800 yards to the east of Dumbarton Castle, on the northern shore of the river. In relation to the shore the Crannog is situated 50 yards from low water mark. The discovery is pronounced to be of the first importance, and under the auspices of the Helensburgh Naturalists' and Antiquarian Society the Crannog is being excavated, measured, examined and delineated. The refuse mound is found to be particularly rich in its yield of objects of use with Neolithic man. These are chiefly stone and bone implements of warfare, from the tiniest arrowhead to the most formidable dagger, along with stones suitable for many domestic and other purposes. The bones of a great variety of animals are among the debris. Amongst the treasure trove is a great war canoe, 30 feet long, dug out of a single oak tree. The final results of the investigations will be looked forward to with great interest.
Cromdale Presbytery Records.—At a meeting of Presbytery, held at Cromdale on 31st August, 1703, the following cases came before the Presbytery. The subject is not a desirous one to dwell upon, but facts like the following are useful for comparison, and to give one a true idea of the morality of this part of the Highlands at that time. Over twenty men and women compeared at that meeting to answer charges, some of them rather serious, and it is questionable if there ever was such a meeting, or if a blacker record exists, even as was the case here, after a lengthened vacancy in a parish. The district is reported on unfavourably by the Registrar-General to the present day.

(1) Lachlan Bain, in Milntoun of Kincairn, alleged guilty of adultery, incest and murder. Compeared not.

(2) Marjorie Cummine, alleged partner of (1). Compeared not. Application to be made to the Duke of Gordon, upon whose lands they dwell, and to Borian McIntosh, his bailiff, to cause them compears.

(3) Compeared Donald Riach, in Gartmoir, alleged guilty of incest. He denies. Case remitted to the Session of Abernethy.

(4) Compeared Robert Taylor, in Conochyle in Abernethy, guilty of adultery with Jonat Stewart. The latter compears not.

(5) Compeared Thomas Geddes, delated guilty of adultery with Jonat Grant in Glenlivet. He denies. Jonat Grant compears not.

(6) Compeared Patrick Grant, guilty of adultery with Jonat McWilliam “More,” she being married and he a single person. They confess.

(7) Compeared Gregory McGreggor, confessed himself guilty of a quadrilapse with Murriach Catenach, and of a single fornication with Jonat Stuart, now dead.

(8) James McNucoll, alias Mukall, guilty of antenuptial fornication with Isobell McHames, alias Stuart. The Presbytery dealt with him to consider the hazard he was in by continuing Popish.

(9) Margaret Gadley, guilty of a septilapse. Compears not.

(10) Anna Grant, in Ellon, in Abernethy, compeared and confessed herself guilty of a single fornication with John Grant in Rathmoire in Abernethy, also guilty of a triilapse with William Fraser in Abernethy, also of a quintilapse with William Fraser in Cromdell.

(11) Compeared James Grant, tailor in Abernethy, and Jonat Grant, guilty of fornication.

(12) John Grant, at Grant-town, in Cromdell, guilty of a quadrilapse. Compeared not.

(13) Compeared Grissail Shaw, guilty of relapse in adultery with James Grant, alias Roy, in Glenlivet, and guilty of adultery with Donald Grant, in Cromdell.

(14) Compeared Christian McWilliam Og, and accuses Donald Cameron, married, as father of her child. He denies.

(15) Compeared Isobell McAdam, confessing herself guilty with three several men, viz., Robert Grant, alias Bane, in Dalilfour, &c. The men all compears and confess guilt, but object as regards time. “She deny'd guilt with any but them three.”

(16) Compeared Anna Cummine, in the parish of Inverallan, and confessed herself guilty (1) with Alexander Roy Mcgregor, now dead; (2) with John Stuart, alias Breck, dead also; (3) she fell twice with the said Stuart; (4) with William Ross. The last confesses.

(17) Compeared William Fraser and Anna Grant in the parish of Cromdell, guilty of a trilapse.

Scots in Paris, 1792-3.—In the October number of the English Historical Review, Mr. J. G. Alder contributed a very interesting paper on “The British Colony in Paris, 1792-3.” Special reference is made to a James Milne, or Mylne, “an English mechanic, who, prior to the Revolution, had introduced spinning and carding machines, and had received a pension of 300 francs.” He died at Paris in 1804, his sons continuing the business. Was he one of the master mason Mylnes? There was also a Dr. William Maxwell, “who may have been the William Maxwell of Carriden, Linlithgowshire, born in 1766.” John Oswald, the son of an Edinburgh coffee-house keeper (he is noticed in the Dictionary of National Biography), had an extraordinary career. Then there was a Mr. Rose, “possibly Jacques Auguste Rose of Scottish extraction.” He was one of the ushers to the National Assembly and the Convention, had Robespierre in his charge on 9th Thermidor, and intrepidly carried a summons to the rebellious commune. He was more probably, however, the Rose who with Prince, Hodge, and Melling obtained on 13th May, 1793, an order from the General Security Committee to grant them passports. A James Rose was scheduled in the Irish Banishment Act of 1798. On Sunday, 18th November, 1792, fifty-two British subjects, including these Scots, assembled at White’s Hotel, or the Hotel d’Angleterre, 8 Passage des Petits-Pères, to celebrate the victories of the French army. The address they drew up will be found in the Review.
AN INCIDENT IN THE MUTINY AT THE NORE.—In S. N. & Q. for August, 1888, was inserted a query, from the writer, asking for information as to the descendants of Ann Bisset (the second of the three daughters of James Bisset, factor to Lord Banff, at Inchdrewer Castle, in the beginning of the last century), who married a Mr. Gammack, in Buchan. No reply was elicited, but the following story has since been related by a relative—Mrs. Powell, Nant-y-velin, Crichieth, a daughter of Lieutenant George Mackay, formerly of the 3rd Buffs, and long resident in Banff—concerning a member of the Gammack family, but whether a son of the above marriage or not is uncertain:

One of the Gammacks, a youngster, was a middy in the navy at the time the mutiny at the Nore broke out. How he came to be associated with Richard Parker, seeing that he was not then on the same ship, does not transpire, but he had evinced a warm attachment to the ringleader of the mutiny. When Vice-Admiral Buckner's flag was struck on board the “Sandwich,” and the red flag hoisted at the fore, young Gammack left his ship and joined Parker, but the latter, not wishing the boy to get into trouble, had him conveyed back to his ship, and this was repeated on two or three occasions, until the youngster desisted.

This incident shews a more favourable trait in Parker's character than would generally be attributed to him. What became of young Gammack is not known.

In the Dictionary of National Biography an account of Parker's career is given, from which it appears that “about 1791 he married the daughter of a respectable farmer in Braemar, Aberdeen; that he ran through her money, and, having got into debt, was a prisoner in the county gaol of Perth. In 1797 he obtained his release and the bounty by volunteering for the navy, and was sent up to the Nore, as what was then called a quota man. He was put on board the ‘Sandwich,’ the flagship at the Nore, as a supernumerary ‘able seaman,’ on 31st March, 1807.”

10 May. Mutinous spirit shewed itself—Parker chosen President.
23 May. Red flag hoisted.
13 June. Parker surrendered.
23-26 June. Tried by Court Martial.
30 June. Hanged on board the “Sandwich”—Thirty years of age.

Is anything further known about Parker's wife?

RELICS OF PRINCE CHARLIE.—An interesting little collection of relics of Prince Charlie, including three beautiful waistcoats, is to be sold in Aberdeen on November 3rd, when the silver plate belonging to the late Don Carlos Pedro Gordon of Wardhouse comes to the hammer. The waistcoats were worked by Mr. Gordon's great-grandmother, the daughter of Count Strasbourg, who was killed by the explosion of some of the fireworks which Peter the Great loved. Mrs. Gordon was a violent Jacobite, and during the residence of Prince Charlie at Holyrood, in 1745, she made these vests. Two of them are yellow silk; the other is crimson, richly embroidered with gold. Among the other relics are two gold rings, with miniatures of Charles I. and Charles II. They were given by the old Chevalier to Mrs. Gordon's stepfather, the famous Jacobite, Alexander Gordon, who spent his youth in the Russian Army, and wrote a life of Peter the Great. There is also a letter written by Prince Charlie. There is no doubt about the genuineness of the relics, which were once lent to the Queen, who has a fine collection of Jacobite mementoes.

THE HEIRS OF JOHN FARQUHAR, THE MILLIONAIRE, OF FONTHILL ABBEY.—Dr. Temple points out, in reference to the inquiry about the seven heirs (nephews and nieces) of Farquhar, that one niece, Mary, daughter of William Mortimer, of Aberdeen, married James Lumsden of Auchry and Bethelnie, and died in 1858, leaving four sons. Another of the nieces Margaret, married an Aitken of Auchintoul, and had at least one daughter, who married a Mr. Auld.

THE JOPP FAMILY.—One does not usually go to a “wine list” for genealogical information, but the beautifully printed list just issued by “William & Keith Jopp, wine and spirit merchants to Her Majesty the Queen, 13 Market Street, Aberdeen,” will be found to contain an excellent summary of the history of the Jopp and Allardyce families (from the pen of Mr. William Carnie?).

MRS. LEE WHO RAN AWAY WITH TWO ABOYNE GORDONS.—There is a capital character sketch of Mrs. Lee's father, the notorious Lord le Despencer in Walpole's Memoirs. He is said to have travelled in Russia, accoutred like Charles XII., to captivate the Czarina, Queries.

1188. Jo. Chrystie, maker of Highland pistols.—"A less-known maker is Jo. Chrystie. A brace of his pistols are in the collection of Sir J. Noel Paton, R.S.A. They have ram's horn butts, and are of such extraordinary beauty of design, delicacy of workmanship, and perfection of condition, that Sir Noel says of them in his 'Private Catalogue' (so often quoted in the pages of this work), 'I have nowhere seen pistols more, or, indeed, so beautiful as these.'"—Dr. Joseph Anderson's Introduction to Drummond's Ancient Scottish Weapons, 1881. When and where did he flourish? J. C.

1189. Sir John Christie of Annfield, knight, 1627.—Information regarding the above is desired. J. C.

1190. Sir Frank Lockwood's Aberdeenshire descent.—It is noted in Mr. Augustine Birrell's biographical sketch of Sir Frank Lockwood (Smith, Elder & Co., 1898) that his maternal grandfather, a Mr. Mitchell, schoolmaster, of Market Harborough, was "an Aberdeenshire man." He afterwards removed to Leicester, where he died, in 1859. "He was a man of considerable learning. He read his Bible in the original tongues, and knew also Arabic, Syriac, etc." Sir Frank's mother's maiden name was Jane Haines Mitchell. She was educated at Miss Franklin's school, Coventry, and George Eliot was one of her schoolfellows there. Miss Mitchell married, in November, 1842, Charles Day Lockwood, and had seven children, as follows:—

Lucy Ellen, born 1843, married J. M. Atkinson.
Charles James (1845-1873).
Sir Frank (1846-1897) married Julia Rosetta Schwabe.
Alice Mary (1849-54).
Madeleine (1851-54).
Alfred (1853), married Ada Elizabeth Tempesley.
Agnes Mary, born 1856, married Harold Jackson.

1191. Our Lady of Snows.—In his History of the Reformation in Aberdeen, pp. 6-7, Dr. Joseph Robertson thus speaks of the Snow Kirk in the Old Town:—"... the parish church of Old Aberdeen, called the 'Snow Kirk,' from its dedication to Maria de Nives or ex nivibus, so called from a superstition not more blasphemous than indecent. Not only myself, but others better informed, have been puzzled to know upon what basis our learned antiquary founded this doubly strong condemnation. Let me translate the lection for August 5th, as it stands in the Roman Breviary: -- 'In the pontificate of Liberius, John, a Roman patrician, and his wife, of like noble birth, having no issue to whom they might bequeath their worldly goods, vowed the succession to the most holy Virgin Mother of God, beseeching her by the most constant prayers to signify in what particular way they should so dispose of their possessions as to win her favour. To these petitions and vows, made with a good conscience, the Blessed Virgin Mary condescended to vouchsafe a reply, attested by a miracle. Accordingly, on the nones of August, when the greatest heat is wont to prevail in the city of Rome, snow covered by night a part of the Esquiline hill. And on the same night the Mother of God informed separately John and his wife in their sleep that upon the site which they should see covered with snow they should build a church, to be dedicated to Mary the Virgin, for in this way she wished to be constituted their heir. When John referred the matter to Pope Liberius he learned that a like vision had revealed to his Holiness in sleep the same disposition of the property. Whereupon the Pope, with the united prayers of priests and people, proceeded to the hill covered with snow, and there designated the place of the church, which was built at the charges of John and his wife, and was afterwards restored by Xystus the Third. At first the church was called by different names: 'the Basilica of Liberius,' 'Holy Mary of the Manger'; but inasmuch as many churches had been dedicated in the city to the Blessed Virgin, to give pre-eminence to one distinguished by so novel a miracle it was called 'St. Mary the Greater,' and this day [August 5th] is solemnly kept in memory of the miraculous fall of snow." Now, whatever view we may take of the credibility of what are called since Paley 'ecclesiastical miracles,' I fail to see in the above narrative 'a superstition not more blasphemous than indecent,' and shall be glad to learn from any of your correspondents if there is any other tradition which Robertson may have had in his mind when condemning the dedication of the peaceful "God's acre" still left as a resting place in the shades of the Aulton. J. M. Danson.

F. S. Matt., 1898.

1192. Lola Montez, countess of Lansfeldt, and captain Craigie.—What are the known facts about this strange woman? Her maiden name was Marie Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert, and she was born at Limerick in 1818. Her father was a colonel in the 44th Foot, and died of cholera in India, in 1825. His widow married a Captain Craigie, "... to some of whose relatives at Montrose the little girl was sent over for education." The girl married a Captain Thomas James, in 1837, and was divorced in 1842. She then became a dancer. In 1847, Ludwig, King of Bavaria, made her Baronne de Rosenthal and Comtesse of Lansfeldt. She died in beggary in New York. Who was Captain Craigie, and are there any references in Montrose literature to the lady? B.

1193. Aberdeen university theses, 1626-1701.—In the Catalogue of David Laing's books, sold by Sotheby on 5th April, 1880 (Pt. II., No. 222), appears a group of Theses of University and King's College, Aberdeen, including those for the years 1626, 1627, 1634, 1635, 1636, 1638, 1643, 1680, 1688. As no other copies of these are known to exist, I should be glad to discover their present whereabouts. The auctioneer's records do not supply information enabling one to trace the purchaser. In Constable's Catalogue of a Collection of Tracts, 1847, p. 181, the King’s College Theses for 1691 and 1693 are included; and our own MS. Records refer to those for 1683, 1684, 1694, 1697, 1700 and 1701. I have seen none of these.

1194. BALLAD WANTED.—Could any of your readers help me to find out anything about a ballad, the only lines of which I know are somewhat scattered:

"The bow that did him a turn by Nith Shall do the same by Derwent."

"Ah! Nith, thou gentle river,
When a bairn I ran along thy banks,
Like an arrow from a quiver,
And the tongue that calls thee a gentle name
Shall be dear to Geordie Gordon."

"The outlaw smiled, ’twas a soldier’s smile,
The Gordons, blyth and ready,
Ne’er stooped the plumes of their bannets bright,
Save to a winsome lady."

The story is as follows:—An outlaw is in one of the midland forests, doing some poaching. He is surprised by two keepers, who, after some altercation, threaten to give him short shrift. The outlaw replies that, if that is to be the case, he will use the bow that did him a turn by Nith. The name of Nith brings up happy memories to one of the keepers, and he makes some sentimental remarks on it (i.e., this keeper seems to be Geordie Gordon). The outlaw, taking advantage of this softened mood, says:

"The outlaw smiled, ’twas a soldier’s smile,
The Gordons, blyth and ready,
Ne’er stooped the plumes of their bannets bright,
Save to a winsome lady."

This pleases Geordie Gordon so much that it is finally arranged that the outlaw shall be given the good law of the border, that is, he must kill a stag, obtain a certain start, and then save himself as best he can from his pursuers. The outlaw accepts the terms, kills a stag “fit for a king’s larder,” and makes off as hard as he can, closely pursued by the keepers. They are on him as he reaches Haddon, and from its battlements his lady-love encourages him. The keepers raise their eyes to look at her, and in the momentary advantage thus gained the outlaw crosses the drawbridge, and is in safety.

1195. ALEXANDER RAMSY IRVINE OF SAVOCH.

—in Services of Heirs I find the following entries:

“Mary Irvine [Ramsay], wife of Alexander Ramsay Irvine of Sappock [Savoch?], heir to her father, Alexander Irvine of Sappock, 10th November, 1748;”

and also “Sir Alexander Ramsay Irvine of Balmain, Bart., heir to his uncle, Sir Alexander Ramsay of Balmain, Bart., 1754.” Was it the Ramsay Irvine of Sappock who became Baronet of Balmain?

A. C. CAMERON, LL.D.

1196. SIR ALEXANDER RAMSY IRVINE OF BALMAIN.—Sir Alexander Ramsay Irvine of Balmain, died in 1806, and left that estate to his nephew, Sheriff Alexander Burnett (father of Dean Ramsay), who took the name of Ramsay, and was created a Bart. of the United Kingdom. A Captain Thomas Ramsay succeeded to the original title Nova Scotia Baronet. What relation was he to Sir Alexander Ramsay Irvine? In 1807 he was served heir to his grandfather, Andrew Ramsay of Abbotshall. Was the latter a descendant of the Rev. Andrew Ramsay, the Latin poet, son of David Ramsay, 3rd lord of Balmain (1590-1625), who retired to Abbotshall, and died there in 1659? Any replies to the above will much oblige.

1195. PLACE NAME, “BANFF” (XII, 14, 31).—Kindly allow a word from me in the controversy on the origin of the name “Banff” which has followed “Delly’s” query. The origin of the name seems buried beyond even the reach of Dr. Cramong’s tradition. With four suggested origins we have none definite, and still await an ex cathedra explanation. This “dungeon of learning,” like another dungeon not unknown to fame, seems to be filled with “no light, but rather darkness visible.” The Rev. James Smith alludes to the well-known map in the Palazzo Vecchio at Florence, which I have often seen and inspected. What he supposes to be an initial “F” is probably due to the cracked state of the map, along which a seam—to which he does not refer—runs from top to bottom. As for the final single “F,” I may refer him to Antiquities of the Shires of Aberdeen and Banff, published by the Old Spalding Club. On pages 110 seq., he will find various spellings of the name. The most ancient Latin form is Bamha, and there is also found the adjective Bamuis. In a charter granted by William the Lion, mention is made de ecclesius Innerbondyn et Banfi, while in another, dated 1291, the form is Banf; and in one of 1178 Hugo de Benenf is mentioned. In a saisine of 1479 Ban occurs, but, on the whole, Benef is the commonest form. The single “F” persists till 1493, when in a deed of presentation to the Parish Church, the spelling is Banff, so that the map in question, which, if I remember rightly, embodies the first discoveries of Columbus, merely gives the usual spelling of the fifteenth century—the single “F.” Ogilvie, in 1724, describes the county of Banff, though in speaking of Lord Banf and his castle he uses the single “F.” Gordon of Straloch’s well-known map, date 1654, uses the forms Ban and Banfia, the former, of course, having been the original spelling of the maligned map of the Palazzo Vecchio.

The Chronicle of the Family of Innes of Edingight.
By Colonel Thomas Innes of Learney. Aberdeen: Privately printed by Taylor & Henderson, 1898. [8vo, i-viii: i-40].

This beautifully produced book is so interesting that we propose to deal with the gist of it on a future occasion. Meantime it may be noticed that while the title-page bears the words printed above the very handsome cover is entitled, The Chronicle of the Family of Innes of Edingight [arms] and Balneven. When will somebody give us a bibliography of North of Scotland genealogy? That we venture to think, is of far greater value than half the bibliographies that are published. An excellent book of this kind has been done for American families. It gives references to all sources of family history, as well as to separate monographs.

This compilation forms another contribution to the history of volunteering in general and of the Gordon Highlanders (with whom the rifle volunteers in the territorial district have been linked). The nucleus of the pamphlet was originally published in 1892 as a supplement to a local book. It is frankly a compilation, and falls short even then, for Major Davidson decorates his title-page with the curious remark—"The compiler is not responsible for omissions of names and errors of dates, &c." Surely it would have been easy to have given the names of all the entrants in the companies on their first formation, for the War Office must possess such a list. The sooner a history of the north country volunteers is undertaken the better. The 1st V.B.G.H. have issued one curious piece of history in the shape of Ye Nobell Cheesemonger, "an ancient ballad by Geoffrey Chaw Sir, jun.: illustrated by Hans Whole-Being ye younger." The first edition of this clever satire, the subject of which was William Stevenson, captain in the 1st Aberdeen Rifle Volunteers, consisted of one copy in pen and ink, June, 1860 (now in the possession of the present writer). Of the second edition only twelve copies were lithographed, one of them at least in colours, 1861. The artist was Sir George Reid, then a private in the corps, and the letterpress was contributed by James Cooper, colour-sergeant. Colonel Innes of Learney has given us a history of the 3rd Gordon Highlanders. Who is to deal with the regular Gordons themselves (1st and 2nd battalions) and with the volunteer battalions?

ABERDEEN, DECEMBER, 1898.

THE CAMPBELLS OF MURTHLY.

The north side of Strathay, from opposite Aberfeldy to near Ballinluig has, to the present day, preserved a feature, in the sub-division of the district into numerous residential estates, which has prevailed since the days of the first bonnet lairds. None of the powerful families in the neighbourhood, the Stewarts of Atholl and of Grantully, the Menzieses of Weem, and the Campbells of Glenorchy, have ever been able to make encroachments. Not so with the south side of the Strath, which has long been partitioned among three of these families, and now possesses but one residential mansion—Grantully Castle. Although the sub-division of the land here, doubtless from the northern exposure, never equalled that on the north side of the Strath, still there were a few small properties, which have long since lost their individuality as independent estates. One such is that of Murthly, which is situated about a mile and a half to the east of Aberfeldy, and must not be confused with the Murthly which lies to the south of Dunkeld. Nothing is locally known of the family of Campbells, who at one time owned this property. Their existence is quite forgotten, and the accompanying supplement is given in the hope of eliciting further information concerning them.

The descent from Sir Colin Campbell to Archibald Campbell of Murthly, as given in the supplement, is deduced from Burke.

I. John Campbell of Murthly appears as witness to several charters of dates prior to 1569. The existence of his two sons, both named John, although not mentioned by Burke, is made apparent by a Band of Manrent, “by Johne Campbell lawful [son] of the deceased Johne Campbell of Murthlie, presently dwelling in Thomyntugill to Duncan Campbell of Glenurquhay and his heirs giving them his Calp. James Campbell apponient of Lawers, Johne Campbell brother of the said Johne Campbell in Turberichs in Glenguyoch, John Henryson, and Gavine Hamilton, notary publict, servants to the said Duncane Campbell, witnesses. At Balloch, 20 January, 1585.” Black Book of Taymouth.

II. Archibald Campbell also possessed the five pound-land of Dunfallandy, which he sold to Sir Duncan Campbell, 7th of Glenorchy, for 4,000 merks. His name appears as witness to a Band at Balloch, 20 April, 1587.

III. James Campbell, of Murthly, is cautioner “for Colin Campbell of Lundy, to pay to Ludovick, Duke of Lennox, and Johne, Earl of Mar, collectors of the taxation of 100,000 merks, 50 merks for the tax of his lands of Teling, Lundy, and Poligavie, in case he ought to do the same.” Perth, 12 July, 1666. Reg. Privy Coun,
IV. Is there any doubt of "Mirthlie" being Murthly? If not, was this John Campbell the same as the John who was in Tomintoul, or the John who was in Turrerich in 1585? The space of time from the date of III. to the entry of V. seems short.

VII. John Campbell, on entry, paid 11 l. and 3s. 4d. in augmentation. Was it he, or his son Robert, who married Mary, youngest daughter of Sir Thomas Stewart of Grantully (knighted by Charles I.) by his wife Grizel, daughter of Sir Alexander Menzies of Weem?

Murthly, prior to the alteration of parish boundaries in 1891, formed a detached portion of the parish of Weem, and was anciently described as a "five pund land, of old extent, in the lordship of Coupar." In 1642 the mansion-house and mill were both standing. By 1772, the estate had passed into the hands of the Breadalbane family. In 1794 the Earl of Moray was superior, drawing a feu-duty of 18/7½.

As at present tenanted, in one holding, the boundary on the east side, which now forms the march between the estates of Breadalbane and Grantully, is not the true one of the lands of Murthly, for, in 1843, the second Marquess of Breadalbane excambled that portion of the Hill of Murthly called Lutter Lundie, forming part of the lands of Murthly belonging to him, extending to 133 acres Scots, and worth £20 yearly, for those portions of the lands of Cuitulich belonging to Sir William Drummond Stewart of Grantully, Bart., and consisting of 7 ac. 924 dec. Scots arable land, and 19 ac. 291 dec. Scots pasture. The arable land was valued at £1 11/- per Scots acre yearly. The pasture land was valued at 8/- per Scots acre yearly.

The right of fishing in the Tay opposite the land excambled by Sir William was also conveyed to the Marquess. According to the current story, the sole reason for the excambion lay in Sir William's desire to be monarch of all he surveyed from the door of his shooting lodge at Loch Kennard.

J. CHRISTIE.

ADMIRAL THOMAS GORDON.—On a recent occasion I sketched, in the Free Press, Aberdeen, the career of Admiral Thomas Gordon, who entered Peter the Great's service in 1716. I have recently come across, among Lord Polwarth's manuscripts (as inventoried by the Historical Manuscripts Commission), a reference to a "Captain Gordon" who, I take it, was none other than the future Admiral. His career in the Scots Navy was rendered famous by his protecting the North Sea from privateers. In April, 1704, the first Earl of Seafield advised Lord Cromartie that "Captain Gordon has cleared the coast of sea privateers, having chased three of them." (Sir William Fraser's Earls of Cromartie.) In 1705 he captured two Ostend privateers (see Stirling Drummond-Home-Murray papers, Historical MSS. Commission Report). Thus he seems to have been the Captain Gordon referred to (in the Polwarth Papers) by M. Van Vrijbarge, Dutch Ambassador at the English Court, who, on January 4th, 1705, wrote to Queen Anne on behalf of his Government, requesting the release of the vessel named the Catherine, belonging to James Meyers, merchant at Rotterdam. It was returning from the Canaries laden with wine, and, though furnished with a passport of "L.L. HH. PP," was seized towards the end of August last by Captain Gordon and taken to Scotland. The Ambassador will not repeat all the reasons urged on behalf of the owners, but "he cannot refrain from pointing out that the procedure of Her Majesty's subjects in Scotland seemed very rude, to pretend to maintain free trade with both the enemies and the allies of Her Majesty, and yet to seize this ship under safe conduct." He therefore requests the release of the Catherine. In 1732 Lord Marischal (according to the Elphinstone Papers, noted by the Historical Manuscripts Commission,) sent Gordon four lbs. of "excellent snuff from Leghorn." I now think that Admiral Gordon's father may have been Thomas Gordon, Sheriff-Clerk of Aberdeen, who certainly had a son George alive in 1684 (see Gill's House of Moir and Byres).

EPITAPH TO JOHN CONQUEROR, Bailie, of Perth, Greyfriars Churchyard, 1653:—

O'er death a conqueror here lies whose soul
Freed from this dust triumphs above the pole;
One less than twelve children by one wife
He had, of whom to everlasting life
Twice ten he sent before him, and behind
He left but three to propagate his kind;
He ran ten lustres out when rigid fate
Robbed him of life and Perth of a Magistrate.
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

907. Smith, C. Michie, M.A. (Prof.): Savant. Younger brother of Professor Robertson Smith. Born at F.C. Manse, Keig. After a distinguished career at Aberdeen University, he received an appointment in one of the Indian Universities, which I believe he still holds.

908. Smith, Henry Bain: Sculptor. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born in 1857, he was bred a stonemason, but having a gift for art, and having attended the art classes at the Mechanics’ Institution, he devoted himself with some success to the sculptor’s profession. His Burns statue, Aberdeen, is a very fine work. He has also produced busts of Dr. Bain, Thomas Carlyle, &c., &c. He died in 1893.

909. Smith, James (Rev.): Principal of Edinburgh University. He graduated at Marischal College in 1688, after which, having studied for the ministry, he was successively minister of the parishes of Morham, Crandorn, and New North Church, Edinburgh. Thence he was translated to be Professor of Divinity in the University, in 1734, an office he only held a few months, as, in 1733, he was appointed Principal of Edinburgh University. Principal Smith died in 1736. Two of his sermons have been published. He was twice Moderator of the General Assembly. See P. J. Anderson’s Records of Marischal College, II., 265., and Hew Scott’s Fasti.

910. Smith, James (Rev.): Early Scottish Independent Divine. This pioneer of Congregational Church Principles was born in 1678, and educated at Aberdeen for the ministry, probably at King’s. At all events, as James Smith, who is described as Tarviensis in the College Album, graduated there in 1728. It is, therefore, probable that this was the youth who was subsequently ordained at Newburn, in 1735. In consequence of having adopted the views of church government held by the Independents, Mr. Smith demitted his charge in 1768. He had previously, in 1756, published a volume explaining his principles, entitled A Compendious Account of the Form and Order of the Church of God, &c. Along with the Rev. Robert Ferrier, a neighbour minister who had adopted the same views, Mr. Smith opened a meeting-house for public worship at Balchrythe, in 1768. He died in 1775, and is spoken of as “a very holy man.”

911. Smith, John, M.A., M.D., LL.D. (Prof.), Hon.: Educationalist. A native of Peterculter, where he was born in 1818, he was the son of the village smith, and rose to distinction by his own energy. He entered Marischal College in 1839, and graduated with honours in 1843, taking his M.D. the following year. He then took a voyage to Australia for his health, and, on his return, was appointed assistant to Dr. Clark, Professor of Chemistry in Marischal College. He was also Fordyce Lecturer. About 1850 he was chosen Professor of Chemistry, Sydney University, New South Wales. His ability was soon recognised, and he was placed by the Government at the head of the educational establishments of the Colony, and when that office was abolished, he was elevated to a seat in the Legislative Assembly. He was always an earnest supporter of those movements tending to the progress of the Colony. His Alma Mater conferred on him the degree of LL.D. in 1876. He died in 1885.

912. Smith, Lewis: Publisher. Born at Aberdeen in 1803. In 1831 he started The Aberdeen Magazine, the contributors including men who became afterwards so celebrated as Dr. Joseph Robertson, Dr. J. B. Pratt, Dr. Ogilvie, and John Hill Burton. Among Mr. Smith’s publications were Robertson’s Book of Bon-Accord, Jamie Fleeman, Pratt’s Buchan, Ransay’s Life and Literary Remains, and a number of descriptive and historical guide books, including a well-known and characteristic Down the Guide, ostensibly from the pen of James Brown, coach-driver. Mr. Smith died in 1877.

913. Smith, Patrick, Dr.: Australian Public Man. He is referred to as a native of Rhynie, who has come to eminence by Robert Harvie Smith in his interesting volume, An Aberdeen Village Propaganda.

914. Smith, Robert, M.A.: Minor Poet. This local bard, who has the unique distinction of having turned the Shorter Catechism into verse, was a student of Marischal College, where he graduated in 1683. (See P. J. Anderson’s Records of Marischal College, Vol. II.). He spent most of his life in Forfarshire, as a parish schoolmaster, first in Glenshee and then in Glamis. He wrote and published verses on diverse themes at irregular intervals between 1689 and 1729. Some of these have been republished, notably Poems of Controversy between Episcopacy and Presbytery; also Several Poems and Merry Songs on other Subjects, 1714, reprinted 1853. Mr. Smith also published The Assembly’s Shorter Catechism in Metre, for the use of Young Ones, 1729, reprinted 1872. Another poem, still remembered, was written on The Building of the Schoolhouse, Glenshee. His son, also a Robert Smith, was schoolmaster of Kenmure, Perthshire. He too wrote verses, some of which were published in Nicoll’s Rural Muse, 1753. See Nat. Dict. of Biography.

915. Smith, Robert Harvie, M.A. (Rev.): Congregational Minister and Author. A native of Rhynie, he was born in the third decade of this century, and graduated at King’s College, 1852. He has since joined the Congregational ministry, and been minister successively of Dundee and Duncanstone. He will be locally remembered by his Aberdeen Village Propaganda, 1880, a most interesting and suggestive sketch of social life in the rural parts of Aberdeen in 1840-50.

916. Smith, Walter Chalmers, D.D., LL.D.: Free Church Divine and Poet. Born at Aberdeen, on 5th December, 1824, he entered Marischal College in 1837, and duly graduated in 1841. He studied for the ministry of the Free Church, and was ordained in London in 1850. Thence he was called to Orwell, Kinross-shire, 1853; thence to Roxburgh Church, Edinburgh, 1858; thence to Tron Church, Glasgow, 1862; thence to Free High Church, Edinburgh, 1876. Dr. Smith was chosen Moderator of the Free Church in 1893. He had previously received the degree of D.D. from Glasgow in 1868, and that of LL.D. from Edinburgh in 1876. He has written a good many volumes of vigorous verse, among which may be named The Bishop’s Walk, Obrig Grange, Borderland Hall, Hilda among the Broken Gods, Raban, or Life Splinters; North Country Folk, Killanstan, A Heretic and other Poems, Hymns of Christ. He has also published The Sermon on the Mount, and other theological writings. Dr. Smith is recognised as one of the great men of his denomination by all the churches in Scotland, and his poems have won him the esteem of the literary world in America, as well as at home.

917. Smith, William, D.D.: Episcopal Divine; Founder of Pennsylvania University, U.S.A. A native of Aberdeen-shire, born 7th September, 1727, on the banks of the Don, a few miles from Aberdeen. Dr. Smith was educated at King’s College, Aberdeen, in which he matriculated, 1743-4. In January, 1750, he was sent up to London as a Commissioner on behalf of the Scottish Schoolmasters, and, while there, probably spent some time as a clerk with the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel. He emigrated to America in 1751, as a sort of Episcopal missionary. He spent the first few years of his life in America in New York and Philadelphia, and devoted himself largely to the establishment of a system of collegiate and academical education. Aided by Dr. Franklin and other influential men, the College and Academy of Philadelphia—since erected into the University of Philadelphia—was founded, and Dr. Smith was chosen its first provost. This position he held for 25 years, during which period he received his doctorate from no fewer than three Universities; first King’s College, Aberdeen; second, Oxford University; and third, Dublin University. Many particulars concerning the life and voluminous writings of this remarkable Aberdeen scholar will be found in S. N. & Q., i., 137; vii., 76, 141-2; and x., 106-7. He died in 1803.

918. Smith, William: Musician and Poet. Born in the Manse, Chapel of Garioch, in 1803, he was educated at Aberdeen, in which city he settled as a tea merchant. He was a man of scholarly and artistic tastes, and an amateur musical composer. He edited and published The People’s Tune Book, 1844. He died in 1878.

920. Smith, William E.: United States Politician. A native of Huntly, where he was born in 1824, he early emigrated to America, where, in course of time, he became the Governor of the State of Wisconsin. He was at once a noted and powerful politician, and an eminent Christian. He died in 1883.

921. Smith, William Firth, D.D.: Free Church Divine. Father of Dr. Robertson Smith. Born at Old Machar, he graduated at King’s College in 1839, having gained the Hutton Prize. He studied for the ministry of the Free Church, and became the minister of Keig Free Church, where he was ordained in 1845. He published The Unity of the Christian Church in 1868. He received the degree of D.D. from his Alma Mater.

922. Smith, William Robertson, D.D., LL.D.: Theologian and Orientalist. Born at Keig Free Church Manse, 8th November, 1846. Son of 921. He received all his early training at home, and yet, on entering the University, he proved an exceptionally brilliant student, graduating with unusual distinction in 1865. He afterwards studied theology at the Free College, Edinburgh, at Bonn, and at Göttingen. While in Edinburgh he was also assistant to the Professor of Physics in the University there. At the close of his student course he was chosen Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Exegesis in the Free College, Aberdeen, his suggestive inaugural address being “What History teaches us to seek in the Bible.” Soon after his appointment certain articles from his pen in the new edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica caused him to be accused of dangerous and heretical teaching. The special gravamen of the charge was that, by adopting the results of the Higher Criticism in regard to the authorship of the Pentateuch and other Scriptural books, he was overthrowing the authority of the Bible as the rule of faith. The result was a violent controversy, a prosecution for heresy, a long process, which, after many vicissitudes, in the course of which Professor Smith displayed remarkable dialectical skill, ended, in 1880, in his acquittal, by a majority of 7, in a house of 600 members. Nevertheless, as a consequence of another article on Hebrew Language and Literature, which appeared in June, 1880, Mr. Smith was removed from his chair, by a considerable majority, at the Assembly of 1881. Thereupon Mr. Smith settled in Edinburgh, and was associated with Professor Baynes as editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, whom he succeeded shortly as editor in chief, owing to Professor Baynes’s death. In the beginning of 1883 he was chosen Professor of Arabic in Cambridge University, and was also elected to a Fellowship in Christ College. In 1886 he became University Librarian, and in 1889 Adams Professor of Arabic, Cambridge. His writings, which were numerous and important, are given in the Nat. Dict. Biog., and other works of reference. He died in 1894.

923. Souttar, A. Robinson, M.P.: Radical Politician. A native of Aberdeen, and born in 1848, Mr. Souttar was educated at Aberdeen Gymnasium. He learned the profession of a civil engineer, and seems to have succeeded well in it, as he retired at a comparatively early age, and returned home from India, where he had been engaged professionally. He then studied as a non-collegiate student at Oxford, where he took his B.A. degree in 1888, and the B.C.L. degree in 1891. He unsuccessfully contested the representation of the city of Oxford in 1892, but won Dumfries-shire for the Liberal party in 1895. He is a man of deep religious spirit, and was president of the Oxford Y.M.C.A.

924. Souttar, William Marns: Indian Civilian. This elder brother of No. 923 was also born in Aberdeen, and in 1862 passed 57th on the list of candidates for the Indian Civil Service. In that connection he rose, before his death, to be Chairman of the Corporation of Calcutta. On his death, in 1883, in commemoration of his valuable services to the community, his statue was erected in one of the public streets of Calcutta.

925. Spalding, John: Diarist, and Town Clerk of Aberdeen. He was the author of a work of local history that has been several times republished, under the title of Troubles and Memorable Transactions in Scotland, 1624-45. Not much is known about the worthy Commissary Clerk, whose contemporary jottings have proved so serviceable as a record of local history. His name, however, will be perennally associated with two successive Book Clubs, which have been instrumental in issuing an unusual number of works of a valuable archæological or local historical character. Floruit 1624-45.

926. Spalding, William, M.A. (Prof.): Author. Born, 1808, in Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1827, and, after spending several years in the office of a W.S. in Edinburgh, he was called to the bar there in 1833. He held the Chair of Rhetoric in Edinburgh University from 1840 to 1845, and was thence transferred to the Logic and Rhetoric Chair, St. Andrews, 1845. One of the contributors to the Edinburgh Review, under Napier, he was also author of an elaborate work on Italy and the Italian Islands. At St. Andrews he pursued his literary labours, and wrote his excellent History of English Literature. He has written a valuable work on Logic, which appeared first in the Encyclopaedia Britannica. He was an all-round scholar, having taught the Greek class in Marischal College when he had just completed his curriculum there as a student. He was also distinguished in Mathematics, and won the silver pen in 1824. He was fond of science, and a good botanist. He died in 1859.

927. Spence, Alexander, D.D.: Free Church Divine and Author. Born in Glenbucket Manse, 1804, he was educated at Marischal College, where he graduated in 1822. After studying for the ministry, he was, in 1837, ordained as colleague to Dr. Thomson, of St. Clement's, Aberdeen. He, however, came out at the Disruption, in 1843, and was pastor of Free St. Clement's till his death, in 1890. For list of his writings see Scott's Fasti and Robertson's Handlist of Biography.

929. Spencer, Alexander, M.A. (Rev.): Free Church Divine and Author. Born in Aberdeen, about 1793, he entered Marischal College in 1805, and graduated in 1809. He studied for the church, and received license in 1817. For a time he was a teacher in Forthom. He joined the Free Church at the Disruption, and was ordained minister of Cornhill Free Church, Ork相hill, in 1844. He published, in 1840, an Introduction to Religion, and was also author of a Geographical Abriand other writings. See Robertson's Handlist. He died in 1874.

930. Steel, John (Sir): Sculptor. Born at Aberdeen, in 1804, he commenced the study of art in Edinburgh, where his parents went to reside. He made a colossal model of Alexander and Bucephalus, in 1833, but was brought into notice by his sitting statue of Sir Walter Scott, in grey Carrara marble, placed within the Scott Monument. Among other important works executed by Sir John are the large figure of the Queen in her robes, with orb and sceptre, placed over the portico of the Royal Institution, Edinburgh; the Wellington equestrian statue in front of the Register House, Edinburgh; statues of Lord Melville, Lord Jeffrey, Lord Justice-General Boyle; also the Marquis of Dalhousie and James Wilson, both erected in Calcutta; Allan Ramsay, and Dr. Chalmers; a second Scott for Central Park, New York; Burns, also for New York; a monument to the 93rd Highlanders in Glasgow Cathedral; and the Scottish National Memorial to the Prince Consort, Edinburgh, on the occasion of uncovering which, by Her Majesty, Sir John was knighted. He died in 1888.

931. Stephen, James: Ancestor of the famed family of Stephen in England. A graphic sketch of this remarkable man appeared in a recent number of the Quarterly Review. Mr. Stephen, who was the son of a small farmer on the Aberdeenshire seaboard, was born in 1733. He was a man of marked character, some features of which have reappeared in his descendants. Physically he was an extremely powerful man, being 6 feet 3 inches high, and muscular to boot. It is said that, having once been attacked by two footpads, he knocked the two would-be robbers' heads together till they cried for mercy. He seems to have pushed south to England, to begin a business career, but, proving unfortunate, found himself in the King's Bench Prison, as a debtor, in 1769. Discovering that imprisonment for debt was contrary to Magna Charta, he obtained a writ of habeas corpus, and argued his case before Lord Mansfield. That distinguished judge was impressed by the manliness and energy of the prisoner, and,
THE ABERDEEN UNIVERSITY CLUB, LONDON.

DR. JAMES GALLOWAY, the Secretary of this Club, has recently compiled an album dealing with the history of the Club. The first published document of the Club was as follows:

DEAR SIR,

It has been suggested that an Aberdeen University Club (based on the footing of the Edinburgh Club, which has now almost reached its majority) ought to be organised by past Aberdeen University men resident in London, the principal aim of such a Club being to maintain and further the social friendships which have been or ought to be formed by men educated at one and the same University.

The suggestion having been heartily adopted wherever mentioned, it is proposed to hold a preliminary meeting, representative of professional and commercial men, to discuss the formation of such a Club without delay, so that at least twice a year Members of the Aberdeen University may have an opportunity of meeting each other.

It is considered advisable in the first instance to call together by circular Members of the University, and we have been requested to ask you to attend a Meeting to be held at the Inns of Court Hotel, Holborn, W.E., on Wednesday the 23rd instant, at 5.30 p.m. It is proposed that all Matriculated Students shall be eligible for Membership, and that an annual subscription of 5/- be required to defray the expenses which must necessarily be incurred in intimating to Members the dates of the Meetings, the price of the dining tickets, which is not to exceed 7/6 (exclusive of wine).

All details in regard to the constitution of the Club are left for discussion and adoption at the preliminary meeting, and if you are favourable to the proposal, be good enough to sign and return the enclosed card.

We are,

Faithfully yours,

R. W. BURNET, Hon. Sec.
R. M. ROUTLEDGE.

At the meeting called for January 23, 1884, forty-four alumni as follows assembled under the chairmanship of Sir Andrew Clark:

James Anderson, M.A., M.D., of the London Hospital, died 1893; John Ford Anderson, M.D., 1863; John Avery, Shrewsbury; R. S. Fancourt Barnes, M.B., 1875; Alexander Bower, M.A., 1882; David Bower, Bedford, M.B., 1875; R. W. Burnet (for long the secretary of the Club), M.B., 1876;

THE WOODS OF BONNYTON.—In addition to the notes on this family which have appeared in these columns, I may note that that in Rowe's journal, extracts from which have appeared in S. N. & Q., Captain Alexander Wood, "of the house of Bonnyton," is said to have died in May, 1666, "of good age." It is just possible that he was the son of James Wood of Bonnyton, who married Lady Elizabeth Ruthven, and whose natural son, Matthew, was legitimated in 1579.

INNES OF BALNACRAIG.—An article, signed “G. E. B.,” dealing with the search of Balnacraig for the Jacobite laird, James Innes, appeared in Chamber's Journal for October 29.

THE CHRISTIES OF STIRLING.—The Stirling Journal has been publishing a history of banking in Stirling. In its issue of 28th October the Journal gave some account of the Christie family, founders of the Stirling bank.

THE GORDON-CZARTORYSKI DESCENT.—Among the Marchmont Papers, now belonging to Lord Polwarth, the Historical Manuscripts Commission make mention of Isabella Morsztyn, Princess Casimir Czartoryski, and granddaughter of the second Marquis of Huntly. On 21st August, 1687, her mother had had a birth breve from the Scots Privy Council. In 1700, Isabella petitioned for another. The Polwarth document narrates the terms of a pettion by “Isabella, Countess of Morstein, married to Casimeir Prince of Czartouriskie, Duke of Clevan, of the family of Jagelton in Poland, shewing that Andrew, Earle of Morstein, great thesaurer of Poland, the petitioner's father, was married to Lady Catharine Gordon, daughter to George, Marques of Huntly, and of his wyfe, Lady Anna Campbell, sister-germane to the Marques of Argyll; and whereas one of the petitioners sones and she are to obtain a birth breve as to their descent in Poland, but the petitioners motheris genealogie being only proper to be obtained under the Great Seall of Scotland, which is easily found of these two noble families of Huntley and Argyll.” The Lords of Council direct (on March 6, 1700) the Chancellor, etc., to prepare a birth breve in favour of the lady, in terms of a former birth breve of 21st August, 1687, and recommend the Great Seal to be appended, and blazons of arms to be furnished by the heralds, “to the end the nobility of the said Isabella, Countes of Morstein, may appear in foraign countreys wher she is placed.”

(A) “Some Short Answers to the Instructions given by the Commissioners appointed for visiting the Universities, &c. . . . anent the present state of the Marischal College of New Aberdeen,” 1690.

1. Imprimis, as to the first query, If any of the masters be erroneous &c., — They teach for the most part Cartes his Philosophy, which is known by them that understand it rightly, to lead to many Popish principles, and particularly they maintain free will (which is an Arminian principle), and the way they endeavour to prove it is by the light of nature and of conscience, and the many ways God uses towards men in Scripture, such as exhortations, commands, and prohibitions, which same argument Arminians adduce.

2dly. As to the 2d viz., If any of the masters be scandalous. They ordinarily frequent taverns, and some of them say they will own it; and in privat conferrence their ordinary word is “faith and conscience;” and tho there were no more, it’s scandal enough their taking blasphemous and contradictory oaths such as the Test, and their owning it. And another scandal is, when Popery was at its height, Mr. Litster did not cause the students which were gradual swear to the Protestant religion, although it be the law and custom of the Colledge.

3dly. As to the thrid, If any of the masters be negligent, &c. The Principall [Paterson] some tymes will not visit the privat schools 6 times in a year, and not only is it some tymes so, but it’s his ordinary custom: The professor of mathematicks [Liddel] is almost alse negligent, for all that he dictates the whole year may be contained in three sheets of paper and less. The regents [Peacock, Litster, A. Moir, J. Moir] have three conveinencums in the day, of 8 to 9 in the morning, except on preaching days from 11 to 12 in the forenoon, and from 5 to 6 at night. This is for the first 3 classes, the fourth class keeps but two, but for the most part a quarter of each of these hours will be past e’r they come in, and then the houre is shortened as the masters or schoolars please, so that sometimes they will not be half an houre in the schools at once. There is [no] discipline exerced for immoralities and non attendance, except some times they are caused pay 3 turners for an houres absence, or then a slight whip on the hand, at which they will laugh, but even that is but seldom; and theft, whoredome, curseing, lying, Sabbath breaking, &c., can be proven to have past without punishment. The hepdomodars [S. N. & Q., xi., 95] have a fashion of praying morning and evening in the publick schoole. It's only a set forme they use for the most part, and the absents from the prayers are not punished, tho sometimes there will not be 6 present. The hepdomodare ordinarily does not take care to see that such as ly in the Colledge (for it's but few that ly in it, tho all shd be) be in their chambers at bed time, neither does he raise them in the morning ordinarily, tho this be his duty. They have a forme of a sacred lesson on Saturdays morning, but it's but seldom that either masters or scholars attends, and when they do attend, instead of explaining the lesson and making the scholars give an account of it, they only cause them read it ordinarily. The books they teach are, the Confession of Faith for the first year, the Whole Duty of Man for the 2d (which is known to be an Arminian book), Vendelune for the 3d, and Grotius De Veritate Religionis Christianae, for the 4th. There is little or no care taken whither the scholars keep the kirk or not; sometimes make a fashion of examining their notes, but no benefit can be gained by their examination, and even that is but seldom; but if any out of conscience withdraw from the publick church, they will notice such, except they be Papists.

4thly. As to their sufficiency. The two masters are known not to be sufficient, having entered by money and moyen, without publick examination, but this cannot be known by theirdictats for they have none, but only teaches the dictats of others.

5ly. As to their carriage since the late happy Revolution, they have not yet prayed for King William and Queen Mary, but only ambiguously for King and Queen and Queen Dowager. And at the last graduation, Mr. James Moir being preces, he suffered one that was graduat to abuse Presbyterians in his oration. This was even since Presbytir was established, at quhich time the most of them that were graduat had very nonsensical and bairnly expressions in English at every end of a sentence almost, in their orations (if they deserve that name), the like whereof was never heard in a philosophie schoole, and some on profane subjects. They have no dictats concerning the constitution of the government by King and parliament, but they have a little treatise concerning Government (as they title it), which may be looked to, where they maintaine that it is unlawfull in any case to resist the supreme magistracy, and consequently the resisting the late King James in their sense is unlawfull.

6thly. As to their observinge their lawes, shall be answered particularly upon sight of the said lawes, but generally they are not observed. They exact 30. sh. for chamber-mall from all, tho' few have chambers, and how that is managed is not known, except it may be they sometimes help some faults in the Colledge, or take a glass of wyne with it. They likewise exact 4. lib. for the Liberyary, and 12. sh. to the septer from those that are graduat and yet the Liberyary is little increased these several years, and it's useless to the scholars. The principall takes up the rent of it, but none hes waited on it to give out books except this last year.

7ly. As for the professor of divinity [Sibbald], the theologues must be tried, but it's said he puts not an end to any controversie he begins, and all he dictats the whole year might be written in two weeks.

8ly. As to their subscribing the Confession of Faith, &c., they must answer themselves; but some of them say to whom they please, that they will become all things to all men. Persons that can witness, are James Gordon, sone to Thomas Gordon, uncle to Lesmore, David Brodies sone, Mr. James Brodie, brother to Lethen, Robert Burnet, student in New Aberdeen, David Ramsay. Thomas Gorden and Thomas Forrest will informe of others."

(B) Petition by the Commission of the Kirk to the Privy Council, March, 1691.

They had been appointed by the General Assembly of the Church to meet at Aberdeen on 11 March instant, for visiting the kirkis within the bounds, whither they went, expecting to be assisted by the magistrates and countenanced by the people. But being disappointed in this, they represent their case to the Council.

"Being, therefore, come to Aberdeen... upon the fourth day of March, we thought it our part to acquaint the magistrates and demand a convenient place for our meeting, and with all to require them that by virtue of their office they should be careful to prevent any disorder and to keep and secure the peace of the town, which they readily promised; yet thereafter the provost when desired declined to give us the use of any church or session house, the most proper for our meeting, so that we were necessitit to be content with any place that he should appoint; whereupon he named the town council house within the tolbooth, assuring us that we might sit there with all security and without any manner of disturbance. But tho we were resolved for that time only to have met and adjourned, yet we had not sitten halfe an hour when we found the house surrounded with a great confluence of the baser sort of the people, consisting of tradesmen, students of the universities, and a rable of other persons who were come with hostile armes and axes, hammers, and other instruments of that kind, and had filled the stairs, and offered by violence to break up the doors, which certainly they had done if we had not fortified within for our own preservation. And in the mean time their cries and threatenings without were to drag us out of the house and stone us out of the town, which they accompanied with throwing of stones at the windowes in such a violent and desperat manner as we had great reason to apprehend our lives to have been in danger, and that we could hardly haue escaped, had not Baillie More and Baillie Robertson, younger, two of the present baillies, who all along behaved civily toward us, convinced some well affected persons for our help, who with great hazard from stones, whereby severalls were hurt and, amongst others, one Thomas Anderson, a toum officer, mortally wounded, conveyed us out by a back entrie secretly and unseen to our houses.”

(C) “Acompt off the Associates that occasioned the rable at Aberdeen, the 11 March 1691.”

“Principal Paterson did call severall off the trads upon the Sabath day befors, betuixt sermons, and promised them money, desiring them when the Presbiteriens cam to toum to with-stand them, and offered them money to drink, with other comers to assist them to make an aitile, and was very instrumentall in bringing a number to the church yard to stop there entrie to the church. Baillie Burnet was on of the greatest rileaders off all the rest; he went thorow the toune with ane sheit off paper causing evry person to subscribe it (the nature off it was that ther ministers was good men and they wold not suffer them to be put out) and as he went thorow the toune induced the trads to rise in ane rable, and when the comite was but going thorow the church yard he cam to the Cross and cryed, ‘Yon men are gone to take our church; com all and let us stop them,’ and cam with ane great number to the church yard; and when the Comite was in the Councell house he went thorow the streit inciting every person to com to the Councell hous dore and brake it up and raise the melting, and skop wery many oprobrious words off them. Old Baillie Robertson was ane great actor in causing subscribe the paper. Andrew Logie, writer, was ane great actor in the rable and induced many others to com to the church yard with him. Mr. George Lidell went to the Old Toune and caused the Old Toune coligeners [students] to com over heir which was the great occasion of the rable. Baillie David Aidie was ane great joiner to induce the rable. John Sandillands, provest, who might have suprest the rable was instrumentall in occasioning it, and when there was ane good guard at the dore to keep it, he took som of there guns off them himself, and caused the rable take the rest and beat them away, and when the baillies had put in two off the rable in prison he wold not suffer them to stay, but caused take them out. There is severall others concerned which may appear at greater lenth.”

A POLISH “MARQUIS OF HUNTLY.”

I am indebted to a South of Scotland laird for a curious story, the insertion of which in a letter to the Scotsman has brought me several interesting replies by letter. In these pages I have referred several times to the branch of the Gordons who settled in Poland in the shape of the descendants of Lady Catherine Gordon (daughter of the second Marquis of Huntly, and the wife of Andrew Count Morsztyn). “Many years ago,” a man calling himself the “Marquis de Huntly Gordon,” accompanied by a Count Lubomirski, came to my informant, who lives near Edinburgh, bringing an introduction from Russia. This is the story:

The “Marquis” said he belonged to the Huntly family, and that Lord Huntly had recognized him as a relation, and had seen his papers, etc. He claimed to be descended from a member of the Huntly family, and the King of Poland of that day gave this person the same rank as his family enjoyed in Scotland, but for some reason the “Gordon” was added after the “Huntly.” He did not lay claim to the Huntly estates, but he wanted to claim Aytoun Castle, Berwickshire, then held by Alexander Mitchell Innes, but since sold. This Mr. Mitchell Innes inherited from a distant relation, a Miss Mitchell of Stow. In some way this “Marquis de Huntly Gordon” claimed to be a nearer relation, and said he ought to have inherited Aytoun Castle. My informant of course told him he could not assist him, as Mr. Mitchell Innes was a personal friend of his. The “Marquis,” however, remained some time with his friend in Edinburgh, consulting various lawyers, but evidently they did not think he had a sufficiently good claim, as, finally, after some months, he went back to Poland.

There is at least one mistake in the story. As the last King of Poland died in 1798, it is unlikely that the “Marquis” himself could have been ennobled by him; but it is possible that His Majesty may have conferred some honour on the “Marquis’s” ancestors, for, as I have already shown, the King, Stanislas Poniatowski (1732-1798), was the great-grandson of the second Marquis of Huntly, whose second grand-daughter married Prince George Ignatius Lubomirski. The male line of the latter, however, died out in 1761, the present Prince being descended from a second marriage.

The greatest doubt exists among my correspondents as to the exact date of the Pole’s appearance. His landlady, Miss Agnes Baxter, Edinburgh, says it was “the year the Queen unveiled the statue of the Prince Consort in Charlotte Square,” that is to say, 18—. Lord Huntly thinks he met him in London in 1872. He claimed to hold the title of the Marquis de Huntly Gordon under a foreign patent, and seems further to have claimed descent from Lord Henry Gordon (the twin of Lady Catherine Gordon, Countess Morsztyn), who, I had believed, was a bachelor. Another correspondent tells me that the “Marquis” and Count Lubomirski were in Aberdeen “about 1880.” The object of their visit was represented by them to be to establish the claims of a person or persons in Poland who were, as they alleged, the nearest heirs of Miss Innes of Stow—that is to what is known as “the Stow succession,” about which there were various lawsuits in Edinburgh some forty years ago. In none of them did the claimants succeed in setting aside the “service” as heir of Mr. Mitchell-Innes of Stow, etc., to that lady, obtained by him about sixty years ago. The Marquis and his friend said they had bought up the rights of the Polish claimants to the succession. They produced some most remarkable evidence from Registers in Warsaw and elsewhere, showing that a certain Innes, who was a Royal Merchant in Warsaw about the beginning of the 18th century, was the son of “Gilbert Innes and Jean Craven in Rora, St. Fergus,” who were progenitors of Miss Innes, and that this Gilbert Innes had paid poll tax in Warsaw as a resident there on the occasion of this son’s marriage. There were extracts also seeming to show other remarkable co-incidences with the facts in the Stow case. But the proofs of the Polish claimants were incomplete, and I understood their claim was never brought into Court. They had consulted a lawyer and counsel in Edinburgh, who, for the reason stated, did not predict success. Still another correspondent tells me an extraordinary story about a valuable necklace that the “Marquis” had in his possession, and on a “curse” involved in it. Can any of your readers add to these statements?

J. M. BULLOCH.

James Rose Innes.—This note from the Illustrated London News of October 29, based on first-hand information, is worth reprinting:—James Rose Innes, the Cape politician, is not, as is generally supposed, a member of the well-known legal family of Rose-Innes. The Rose-Inneses of Blachriee and Netherdale represent, as the double-barrelled name shows, two of the oldest families in Aberdeenshire. A generation ago they had in their employment at Netherdale a trusty gardener called Andrew Innes. To Andrew was born a son, at the christening of whom “one of the laird’s folk” stood sponsor, the child being called, in consequence, James Rose Innes. This is he who has risen into eminence at the Cape. But he has not the hyphen in his name, though it is sometimes given him by the London press. The three Rose-Inneses of Blachriee are well-known London lawyers, the youngest of whom, a rising barrister and a County Councillor, married a daughter of Mr. Bowen-Rowlands, Q.C., formerly M.P. for Cardiganshire.

A FORGOTTEN FAMILY.

THE MOWATS OF BALQUHOLLY.

The Mowats of Balquholly, like the Woods of Bonnyton, to whom I have already referred in these pages, are one of those families who have quite disappeared from the history of Aberdeenshire. Having played a part in the history of the shire, they have been lost sight of by the genealogists, apparently for no other reason than that they sold their ancestral estates (now swallowed up in the lands of the Duffs of Hatton). Yet the Mowats were of great antiquity; and, as they freely intermarried with the other landed families of Aberdeenshire, they are certainly worth remembering. In pursuing a totally different line of research, I have come across them so frequently that I venture to set down some account of the family, which pretends to be no more than a mosaic of the very unsatisfactory accounts of the family contained in several books, notably Ronald Sinclair’s St. Clairs of the Isles (transcribed for me by Mr. Thomas Sinclair), Calder’s History of Caithness, Henderson’s Caithness Family History, and Francis Grant’s County Families of the Zetland Islands, extracts from the last of which have been transcribed for me by Dr. Temple of Forgue. In addition to this I have fallen back on the Register of the Great Seal and of the Privy Council of Scotland, and I am indebted for some facts (on his own family) to Mr. James Ryder Mowatt of the Reform Club, cousin of Sir Francis Mowatt, the Permanent Secretary of the Treasury.

The origin of the family is dealt with by Mr. Ronald Sinclair, whose work is so inaccessible that I venture to give his account verbatim, as courteously transcribed for me by Mr. Thomas Sinclair:—

The Norman form of this name was Monhault, invariably Latinized into Monte Alto, the High Mount. Like the Sinclairs, before reaching Scotland and Orcadia, they passed through England, and were Welsh lord marchers. Sir William of Montalto obtained from King William the Lion (1165-1214) the lordship of Ferne in Forfarshire, of which county Eustace de Montalto was Sheriff in 1263, while in 1214 Richard de Montalto, Justiciary of Scotland, witnesses a confirmation of Alexander II. Contemporary with Richard is Robert de Montalto, to a charter by whom Lawrence de Montalto is a witness. Bernard de Mohane [Mowat?] was one of the Scotch nobles who were parties to the treaty with Wales about 1259, and later on he witnessed the grant of Roslin of 1280. In 1281 Sir Bernard Mowat, knight, was one of the Norwegian embassy, and was drowned on the return voyage. Nisbet notices a Michael de Monte Alto of 1252 in connection with the perambulation of Cleish in Fifeshire. William de Monte Alto in 1275 witnessed an agreement between Archibald, Bishop of Caithness, and William, Earl of Sutherland. In 1289 William de Mowat subscribes to the Scottish letter of Brigham, and he seems to be the William de Monte Alto, knight, who submitted to Edward I. in 1296. Mowat is the earliest Scotch surname associated with the islands of Orkney and Shetland in history. Patrick Mowat in 1312, a Scot, was seized by the Orcadians, and held to ransom. King Robert Bruce (1306-30) granted a charter of Freswick in Caithness to a Mowat of the principal family of Bucholly in Aberdeen. In 1377 Richard de Montealto, Chancellor of the Church of Brechin, received grants of the baronies of Ferne and Kinblachmond, Kinfrasht. [See Jervise's Memorials of Angus and Mearns, and his Lands of the Lindsay.] The Duke of Albany, between 1406 and 1413, confirmed a wadset of Freswick and Aukengill, granted by William Mowat of Luscraggy to his son John, who was in 1419 killed in the Chapel of Tain.

The Mowats, according to tradition, came from Monte Alto (hence their name) in Italy. They seem to have come to Scotland at a very early period, for the original Italian and the Scots branch interchanged courtesies in the way of intermarriage so far back as (according to tradition) 750 A.D., while the original stock were noted by Charlemagne in 804. One branch of the family settled in Wales, and were in possession of Hawarden Castle and estate in 1260.

According to Dr. Temple of Forgue, Patrick de Monte Alto was made Forester of Kilan and Fermartyne, in the reign of Robert the Bruce. The importance of the family may be gauged from the fact that they had estates in Caithness as well as in Aberdeen, and that they also had lands in Shetland. Indeed, any inquiry into their history is complicated by the fact that they had two estates of Balquholl— one in Aberdeen and one in Caithness, near Freswick, where they were settled as early as 1406, and it is not clear whether the same laird held both at the same time, or whether the estates were held by different branches of the family. Under their respective dates, I give such references to the Mowats in writing for other material:

1401. John Mowat, son and heir of William Mowat, sometime Dominus de Fowlis Mowat, granted a tack of all his lands of Fowlis Mowat in the Earldom of Mar to George Leslie, 1st of Rothes. (Colonel Leslie's History of the Leslie, 1861.)

1429. Janet Mowat, daughter of the "Baron of Balquholl" married Alexander Leslie, 1st laird of Leslie, and had a son, William Leslie (born 1430), and also George Leslie, 2nd laird of Leslie (born 1432), who succeeded his father in 1470, and died before 1513 (Ibid.).

Let me now indicate some other landmarks in the history of the family a century later:

James Mowatt of Balquholl (according to Hay's Sinclair's of Roslyn) married "Lucy Gordon, daughter of the laird of Gight." They had a daughter—

Margaret Mowat. She bore two illegitimate children to the Hon. William Sinclair of Mey, second son of George, 4th Earl of Caithness. Mr. Thomas Sinclair points out that "for a laird's daughter to be a light-o'-love was a curious chance, though not unknown to Scotch olden life. It was probably because she and the Hon. William were of too near kin, a powerful factor in Roman Catholic times." The two sons, who were legitimatised on June 20, 1607, were—

Patrick Sinclair, who died a bachelor. He left his means and a very small estate (Ulster), by a mutual will, dated 10th February, 1603, to his brother, Rev. John Sinclair, "pedagogue to William Sinclair, Lord Berriedale." He was the ancestor of Sir John Sinclair, the compiler of the Statistical Account of Scotland, who was made a baronet in 1786, and who was the grandfather of the present baronet, and of the Archbishop of London.

Mr. John Henderson, in his Caithness Family History (1884), is of opinion that this James Mowat had, besides Margaret, a son Patrick, who succeeded to the estate of Balquholl, and Mr. Thomas Sinclair is inclined to this belief. According to Mr. Francis Grant's County Families of the Zetland Islands, this Patrick (with whom he starts his deduction) was a witness to a charter by George Meldrum of Fyvie to Alexander Ogilvy of Kilbirny, on July 6, 1532. He married Margaret Cheyne, daughter of Patrick Cheyne of Esslemont, and he and his wife were confirmed in the lands of Darraugh, in the barony of Balquholl, Aberdeen, on February 21, 1545. Mr. Roland Sinclair notes that in 1545 Alexander Mowat witnesses a charter of Sir Hugh Halcro [a clerical "Sir"], and the same year Patrick Mowat of Balquholl attests the erection of the cathedral chapter in Orkney, while in 1548 the latter contracted with Malcolm Halcro of Halcro, Orkney, for the marriage of his son to Halcro's daughter. Patrick Mowat's son, Patrick Mowat of Balquholl and Freswick, married Christian, daughter of Walter Ogilvy of Boyne. He and his wife had a charter from his father of Meikle Colp and others, in the Barony of Balquholl, on October 9, 1559. He was served heir to his father in 1665. Henderson says, "he is no doubt the Patrick Mowat of Balquholly mentioned in the Spalding Papers in 1585." Grant and Henderson agree in saying that he had a daughter, Isabella Mowat, who married William Bruce of Standstil, and died in 1601, and two sons, Magnus and James, who succeeded him in turn. These were Magnus Mowat of Freiswell, who obtained a charter from his father in 1602. I think this must have been the Magnus who was raided by William Gordon, the fifth laird of Gight, in June, 1601, as referred to at length in the Privy Council Register. Gight, in order to oblige Gordon of Brigend, visited Balquholly with a band of twenty armed men, and "raid aborth and trambit down the cornes," which Mowat had sown. Next day (June 6) Gight returned to the assault with 300 men, and in the following month carried off one of the Balquholly tenants to his keep. As late as 1610 the Privy Council was engaged investigating this affair. A Patrick Gordon, one of Gight's servants, was charged with having killed Mowat's servant, Robert Catto. Certain it is that it was this Magnus (described as "apparent of Balquholly") who was attacked at the fortalice of Freiswell in July, 1603, by Alexander Copland of Udnoch, and in 1607 he petitioned against Copland and four others for taking his peats. He married Isabella Cheyne, daughter of William Cheyne of Arnage (Great Seal), and widow of John Kennedy of Kermuck, Aberdeenshire. They had at least two daughters, Elizabeth and Christian, the latter of whom married Sir John Sinclair of Dunbeath. Mowat died in 1634, and appointed Sinclair as his executor. He left 2000 marks (says Henderson) to Thomas, son of James Mowat of Ardo, and he directed Roger Mowat, advocate, to give letters to his brother.

James Mowat of Freiswell, who, according to Grant, had a son, Patrick Mowat of Balquholly, who was killed at the battle of Alford. Calder (as quoted in these columns recently) is certainly wrong in saying that it was Magnus Mowat, the father of Lady Sinclair, who fell at the battle of Alford, seeing that he died twelve years before it was fought.

Patrick Mowat's estates were forfeited, and a new branch of the family stepped into his shoes, for I do not doubt that the Roger Mowat who bought the forfeiture was a relative of the dead laird. What the relation really was I cannot say, but Roger is described in 1600 as "servitor" to Thomas Craig, advocate—several Mowats were connected with the law—and he was laird of Dumbreck, in the parish of Echt. He was Sheriff-Depute of Orkney and Shetland; the Mowats (according to Mr. T. Sinclair were sheriffs hereditary of Cromarty), and, in view of the fact that he bought the Balquholly forfeiture, I think it most unlikely that he was the Mowat who, according to Henderson, "joined Montrose." He had a brother, George Mowat, "of Reidloch," who was charged in 1620 (see Privy Council Register) with annoying Gilbert Menzies of Pitoddels, and who seems (in 1608, according to the Great Seal, to have had a son, John. Roger Mowat had a son, Sir George Mowat, who is described in 1653 as "of Balquholly." I think this must be the Sir George Mowat of Ingleston who was created a baronet of Nova Scotia on June 2, 1664, with remainder to the heirs male of his body. According to Row's Journal, printed in this journal some years ago, Sir George Mowat "of Mowatstown, alias Ingleshtoun, alias Rottenraw in West Lothian," died in September, 1666. Mr. Roland Sinclair notes that this Sir George was succeeded by "Sir Roger as second baronet, to whom his brother, Sir William, was served heir in February, 1683. Nisbet, about 1700, refers to Sir Alexander Mowat of Ingleston, baronet, descended of Balquholly, as then having as arms, argent, a lion rampant, sable, armed, gules, within a border of the second, with crest an oaktree growing out of a rock proper. The motto Monte Alto." I cannot say how this branch came to lose Balquholly, which seems to have come back to the main line, for the son of Patrick who was killed at Alford was in possession of the estates. He was, according to Grant:

Magnus Mowat of Balquholly, born in 1630. He was a Commissioner of Valuation in 1662, a J.P. for Aberdeenshire, Orkney and Shetland, in 1663. He sold Freiswell in 1661 to William Sinclair of Rattar (whose descendants afterwards became Earls of Caithness). He married, in 1651, Jean, daughter of Alexander Sinclair of Latheron, and had, besides three daughters—Jane, Elizabeth, and Helen—a son, William Mowat of Balquholly, was a Commissioner of Supply for Shetland in 1651. This was probably the laird who was quarrelling with Forbes of Corse in 1682 (see Fountainhall). He died before May 22, 1710, when he was succeeded by his uncle, George Mowat of Hamnvoe, who went to Shetland in 1657, and was a Commissioner of Supply in 1678. He married Margaret, daughter of James Mowat, of Ollaberry (Grant) and had a son, Hector Mowat of Hardaback, in Papa Stour (Grant).

SCOTTISH NOTES AND QUERIES. [DECEMBER, 1898.

James Mowat of Stenhouse, a Commissioner of Supply, 1704, served heir to his brother Hector, on July 2, 1711; and married Elizabeth Mackenzie, and had George Mowat, who had George Mowat, R.N., registered arms in 1811.

James Mowat, Major, Royal Engineers (Grant).

Patrick Mowat had Peter, James and three other sons.

Patrick Mowat of Balquhullo (the eldest son of George Mowat of Hamnavoe) was a Commissioner of Supply for Zetland in 1736. He sold the lands of Papa Stour (which he had inherited through his mother) in 1716. Grant thinks he was twice married; first to Marjorie, daughter of Andrew Bruce of Muness, and second to Barbara Cheyne. Besides a daughter, Margaret, he had a son,

John Mowat, the last of Balquhullo, who sold the lands to Alexander Duff of Hatton, in 1727 (Dr. Temple says 1719; Mr. Mowat says 1723). He died in 1736, leaving, by his wife, Agnes daughter and heiress of Reith of Reithfield, Tarves,

John Mowat of Reithfield, who died in 1788, leaving, by his wife, Margaret Chalmers, three daughters, Marjorie (who married George Mowat), Isabella, and Cecilia, and a son, James Mowat.

Here Grant's deduction ends, and I am quite unable to add to it, beyond repeating the statement made recently in these columns by Mr. Campbell Blair, Buxton, that a "Lady Balquhullo" (née Catherine Lauder) was living in Dundee about 1700. She was then a widow, with at least one child, William, who was under sixteen in 1696 (according to Andrew Jervise). Jervise also notes that "the last of the race, a woman," is "said to have married a brother of Erskine of Pittodrie."

Queries.

1198. Latin Motto.—Can any of your readers give me the translation of the following motto from the title-page of a book published in 1652—"Efficiens et finis sunt sibi invicem causae." The words may be a very simple statement of an obvious truth, but I confess inability to understand them. Whence are they derived?

A. B.

1199. Clanmolinespick.—In one of Sir Thomas Urquhart's works he speaks of two Irish clans—Clanmolinespick and Clanswic. Can any of your readers give me any information about these? or are they mere inventions of Sir Thomas?

1200. The Society of Ancient Scots.—Could you give any information as to "The Society of Ancient Scots," re-established A.D. 1770, who publish Lives of Scottish Poets, in six small volumes, published in 1821-22, and printed for T. Boys, Ludgate Hill, and sold, among others, by A. Brown and Co., G. Clark, A. Watson, and D. Wylie, Aberdeen. The articles are initiated, and, from their tone, written by clergymen, in some part at least. No doubt you will understand and know all about it, as it seems to be a work of merit of which we had not heard till a copy turned up in the New Market the other day.

1201. What is a Gordeen Breed of Horse?—Nathaniel Harley, writing to his brother Edward in January, 1720 (see Portland Papers, Historical MSS. Commission), says—"I send [you] a grey horse. It is a Gordeen breed, of which there is few now remaining . . . He is of great spirit, but no great speed. He would soon learn anything in the 'manage.' I may add about this particular horse an extraordinary statement. Harley bought him of a Rey of the Gordeens, when the horse was only two and a half years old. He says:—"You will observe a reddish stain on one of his shoulders, which is now much worn out, but, when I bought him, was as red as blood. I will give you the account the owner of him gave me without assuming it to be true. The owner, he told me, of the mare that brought this colt was a robber on the road, and, being much wounded, he leant over his mare's neck, and his blood ran down her shoulder; and she being then with foal of this colt, he had this mark on his shoulder."

1202. American-Aberdeen Graduates.—Can Dr. Gammack, in continuation of his interesting notes in last month's S. N. & Q. on James Kemp and John Kemp, give any biographical and bibliographical details of the undermentioned graduates at once of Aberdeen and of three of the older American Universities?

Harvard (1636—).

1. John Glover; B.A., Harv., 1650; M.D., King's Coll., 1654. It is somewhat remarkable that the first medical graduate of Aberdeen should have been holder of an American degree.

2. Samuel Mather; B.A., Harv., 1723; D.D., Marischal Coll., 1702; M.A., Glasgow, 1731. So in the Harvard Quinquennial of 1895, but I do not find the name in the Roll of Graduates of Glasgow, 1898. Mr. W. James Addison, the compiler of the Roll, writes to me:—"As you will observe, Benjamin Mather was created M.A. in 1731. Have the Harvard folks not been confusing the two in some way?"

3. Mather Byles; B.A., Harv., 1725; D.D., King's Coll., 1765.

4. Samuel Langdon; B.A., Harv., 1740; D.D., Marischal Coll., 1762.
1204. AMERICAN UNIVERSITY CATALOGUES.—Can Dr. Gammack say whether Triennial or Quinquennial Catalogues of graduates, similar to those issued from Harvard, Yale, and Columbia, are published by the other pre-Revolution Colleges of the United States, viz., William and Mary, Va., 1693; Princeton, N.J., 1746; Pennsylvania, Penn., 1753; Brown, R.I., 1765; Rutgers, N.J., 1766; Dartmouth, N.H., 1769? (S. N. & Q., vii., 72.) If such do appear, are any Aberdeen names to be found therein?

P. J. ANDERSON.

1205. THE WORD "CLYACK."—Have you any information as to the root and application of the word "Clyack." Is it the finish of the cutting or the finish of the ingathering? A. M.

[This query, asked in V., 94, was answered in V., 112, by W. R. B. W., as follows:—"This word, which he spells Cliack, Dr. Murray in the New English Dictionary as "possibly adopted from Gaelic cliathach, 'battle,' because of the contest or struggle to have the last out."] 1206. GOLD MINE AT LETTERS, BALQUHIDDER.—Can anyone say where, and with what result, was the gold mine worked on the farm of Letters, near Lochearnhead, which forms part of the Breadalbane estate? No reference to it is to be met with in any work treating of mining in Scotland, so far as I am aware.

J. CHRISTIE.

1207. ENSIGN JAMES MENZIES "OUT" IN THE '45.—Among the garrison which was left at Carlisle by Prince Charlie, and which surrendered to the Duke of Cumberland on December 30, 1745, was Ensign James Menzies, St. German's, France, of Colonel Roy Stuart's regiment. Who was he? J. CHRISTIE.

1208. CYPHER.—The following "Cypherical Distich" I have come across in an old volume: can any of your readers unravel it for me?

1. Jumping Judas, who is represented in knee breeches, top boots, and cocked hat, executing a war dance.
2. Turkey Willie, who stands in Broad Street, facing Marischal College, and who carries under his left arm the bird which gives him his name.
3. Willie Godman, whose trade mark is a humble crutch.
4. Buttery Willie Collie, carrying a stout staff and smoking a very small clay pipe. His chief characteristic is a blue and white striped cap of a smuggler's pattern.

As your Journal and Brown's Book stall seem to be well posted in all that concerns my native town, I hope to hear through your columns some interesting information as to the above gentlemen.

A LONDON ABERDONIAN.

1209. A GORDON EPIGRAM.—Will any reader send a metrical rendering of these lines, which were written in 1617 by James Forbes of Corsindae to Arthur, Lord Forbes, and are mentioned in the Historical MSS. Commission Report on Lord Forbes' papers (II., 194):—

Gordoni Herculeos jacant se sequare labores
Captant ambo suam de sue gloriam
Sus fera at ista fuit haecce domestica: Multum
Illie vorax hominum, stercoris haecce vorax.
Ergo quam sue sus diutus tam distat manis,

1210. Roger Williams. — Can any of your readers give me the name and publisher of the best and latest account of the life of Mr. Roger Williams of Providence in New England? A. B.

1211. Sir Alexander Irwin of Drum. — In an old controversial pamphlet I have come across the following: “The irrational prooceedings of the Presbytery of Aberdeen, against Sir Alexander Irwin (Irvine?) of Drum, together with his just appeal from their tyrannical jurisdiction to Colonel Overton, the then only competent judge that was there.” The date of the pamphlet is 1652. Can any of your readers furnish me with information that explains the above allusion? A. B.

ABERDEEN, JANUARY, 1899.

Scriptorum Aberdonensium Incunabula. iv.
(S. N. & Q., X., 1, 17, 33.)

In the early decades of the sixteenth century three local writers of distinction were at work in Aberdeen. Bishop William Elphinstone, the founder of University and King's College, to whom we owe the introduction into Scotland of the art of printing, compiled and edited the famous "Breviarium Aberdonense, 2 vols. Edin. 1510." Of this most remarkable production of Scotland's first printer only four copies exist, and none of them perfect. The Aberdeen University Library possesses an imperfect copy of Vol. I., the Advocates' and University of Edinburgh each possess incomplete copies of both volumes, and the best set of the four reposits in the Strathmore Library at Glamis. It was reprinted by a London bookseller in 1850, part of the impression being acquired for the Bannatyne and the Maitland Clubs, and issued with a preface by Dr. David Laing. No other work of Bishop Elphinstone is known to have been printed, but he left in MS. "Lives of the Scottish Saints," now unknown, and three volumes of collections on civil law, still preserved in Aberdeen University Library.

Hector Boece, first principal of the King's College, wrote "Murthlacensium et Aberdonensium Episcoporum Vitae. Paris, 1522," a work which is most notable for its account of his eminent patron, and its notes on the opening of the University which he founded. It is a very scarce book indeed. The University Library copy is imperfect and in bad condition. It has been reprinted (60 copies) for the Bannatyne Club in 1825, and more recently by the New Spalding Club (525 copies) in 1894. The latter volume was edited by Dr. James Moir, and its value is materially increased by his English translation and copious notes. A metrical translation by Al. Garden of Aberdeen, dated 1619, was published by the Hunterian Club in 1878, and partly reprinted in the Appendix to Dr. Moir's translation.

Boece also wrote the well-known "Scotorum Historiae a prima gentis origine, Paris, 1526," of which there are three copies in the Aberdeen University Library. John Ferrerius, a Piedmontese monk of more than ordinary literary ability, who resided for some years at the Abbey of Kinloss in Moray, republished the work, with a continuation written by himself, at Paris in 1574. His edition is now very rare, but the University Library possesses a copy of it also.

In 1530-32, John Bellenden, Archdeacon of Moray, by command of King James V., translated Boece's "Hystory and Croniklis" into "our vulgar and common language." This translation has been frequently printed, and the first edition, perfect copies of which are very rare, has the merit of being one of the finest examples of early Scottish printing. The printer was Thomas Davidson, a native of Aberdeen, and it was issued undated from his press at Edinburgh about 1540. There is an incomplete copy in the University Library. At the Hamilton Sale in 1884 a fine example on vellum sold for £800. A metrical translation of the work, made about the middle of the sixteenth century, by William Stewart, was published under the late Mr. Turnbull's editorship, in 3 vols., Lond. 1858.

Although they belong to the "Incunabula," the "Aberdeen Breviary" and the works of Boece require no minute description here. But the writings of John Vaus are less known. He was Professor of Humanity in the King's College from about 1510 to 1538. Dr. Joseph Robertson in the "Collections," and Dr. Cosmo Innes in his "Fasti Aberdonenses," have briefly related so much of the story of his life as his own books unfold, and quite lately it was flatteringly retold by M. L. Delisle, chief director of the Bibliothèque Nationale, in the proceedings of the "Bibliothèque de l'Ecole des chartes," Vol. 57, pp. 205-216, Paris, 1896."*

John Vaus belonged to a family whose members had held prominent positions, both civil and ecclesiastical, in Aberdeen during two centuries before his day. The date of his birth is unknown (probably 1480-90). He was educated at Aberdeen and at the University of Paris, where he graduated, and where, during some of the early years of the sixteenth century, he studied philosophy under George Lockhart of Ayr, an accomplished member of the group of learned Scotsmen who owned John Major as their leader. So at least we deduce from the title of one of his poetical effusions. For John Vaus wrote very neat Latin verses, as the examples appended to Boece's "Episcoporum Vitae" sufficiently testify.

So far as we have been able to trace, his first appearance in print was in 1514, when the valedictory lines to which we have just alluded occur in the earliest known edition of a philosophical treatise, written and published by George Lockhart for the use of his students. This little quarto, although several times reprinted, is very rare. The copy which we have examined is in the Advocates' Library at Edinburgh, and, as we are not aware that it has been fully described before, we give the following bibliographical collation of it, including the full contribution of John Vaus:

If this really be, as we suppose, the first edition of Lockhart's work, it does not absolutely fix the date of the verses by John Vaus. For Lockhart had been lecturing in the University of Paris for some years before its publication, and the treatise, verses included, may have passed in MS. from hand to hand among his pupils and been copied repeatedly, as was undoubtedly the practice among students of the period. Printed books were then excessively dear, while Scottish students have never been excessively rich. The verses are included in precisely the same way in reprints, issued long after it is certain that Vaus the student had become Vaus the professor. But the statement of Thomas Ruddiman, in his list of Scottish Grammarians,* that John Vaus was “primum literarum humaniorum in Academia Regia Aberdonensi professor,” has unhappily been misconstrued by some subsequent writers into an assertion that he was one of the original coadjutors of Boece, and conducted the Latin class from the opening of the University.† But his Parisian verse proves that this was impossible.

When Hector Boece arrived in Aberdeen from Paris in the last year of the fifteenth century to enter upon his duties as first principal of the University, he did not find the class rooms empty. It is very obvious from the account given in his life of the founder that the college was already well established, and that several of the clergy of the cathedral lectured to the students. Canons James Ogilvie and David Guthrie discoursed on divinity and canon law, and two of the prebends, Thomas Strachan and Alexander Vaus, and the dean, James Brown, also appear to have given assistance. Boece, indeed, expressly says that Alexander Vaus was the first who had charge of the Latin class in connection with the University. In all probability this had been his share of the scholastic work before the arrival of Boece, but he was not destined long to continue it, for he died before 31st July, 1501 (Reg. Episcop. Aberd., i., 348). He was titular rector of Turriff, and prebendary of Turriff in the Cathedral of St. Machar, and his name is of frequent occurrence in the local records of the last half of the fifteenth century.

The voluntary position vacated by the death of Alexander Vaus was in all probability assumed by some other clergyman. The words in which Boece introduces the name of John Vaus imply that there had been more than one Latin teacher before him. The Chair of Humanity was not founded until 1505, and its endowment may not have been completed for some years after the date of the deed. The meaning of Thomas Ruddiman's description is simply that John Vaus was the first Humanist under this foundation, which may be quite correct. Approximately the date of appointment would be about 1510, but it will be impossible to fix it with certainty until the accounts (1494-1530) of the German Nation (mostly Scots) of the University of Paris, which have fortunately been preserved in the library of the Sorbonne, are published, as is intended. Then we shall know not only the date when John Vaus left his college at Paris to teach Latin at Aberdeen, but also the date of the commencement of his Parisian studies, and of his graduation, and many similarly interesting particulars concerning his local contemporaries there.

LAMONT FAMILY.—In the Genealogical Magazine for December there appeared a reprint of a Missive Letter by the Laird of Lamont to Bourdon of Feddal about their Genealogical Descent; the Principal is in the Lion's Office, dated 4th of November, 1699.

BYRON'S MOTHER—AN INCIDENT.—So much is being written at present about Byron and the Gordons of Gight that the following may be deemed worthy of reproduction. It occurred in an article, titled “Odds and Ends. By a Man of the World,” in the Pall Mall Gazette, 7th May, 1894:—'A memorable incident, but by whom related I cannot remember. One night, as Mrs. Siddons was playing 'Isabella,' and had uttered those words by which she used to pierce all hearts, words spoken on discovering her first husband, in whose absence she had remarried—'Oh, my Biron, my Biron'—a young Aberdeenshire heiress, Miss Gordon of Gight, sent forth a scream, as wild as that of poor Isabel, and taking up the words in a frenzy, was carried out, still repeating them. Next year this impressionable lady was wooed and won by a Byron—the Hon. John of that ilk—by whom she became the mother of one more famous than the rest—Lord Byron, the 'lord of himself, that heritage of woe.'”
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

932. Stephen, Forbes: Minor Poet. A native of Strichen, he published, in 1781, a volume of verse, entitled Rural Amusements, or A New Miscellany of Epistles, Poems, and Songs. When this volume was published its author was a paper maker at Cultor.

933. Stephen, Oscar Leslie: Successful Business Man. A native of Aberdeen, and born in 1819, he seems to have gone south in early life, as he was for many years partner in the firm of Samuel Allsopp & Son, brewers, Burton-on-Trent. He subsequently was largely interested in railways, and a director of the London and North-Western, as well as chairman of the North London Railway Co. In 1885 he unsuccessfully contested the Crewe division of Cheshire, as a Conservative. He died in 1898. His son, Alexander Condie Stephen, entered the Diplomatic Service, and was knighted in 1894. See S. N. & Q., xi., 198.

934. Stewart, David (Sir), LL.D.: Lord Provost of Aberdeen. Born in 1835, in Old Macher, son of the late John Stewart of Banchory, he graduated at King’s in 1855, and is now at the head of the comb manufactury founded by his father, which is believed to be the largest business of the kind in the world. He was chosen Lord Provost of Aberdeen in 1889, and, yielding to the pressure of the Council, continued in office till 1895. His Provostship was marked by the opening of the Free Library, the large extension of the municipal boundaries, and the initiation of the University Buildings Extension Scheme, to the funds of which he contributed largely. At the inauguration of the Mitchell Hall he was one of those who received the degree of LL.D. His portrait, subscribed for by the public, has been painted by Orchardson. At the general election of 1895 he contested South Aberdeen as a Liberal Unionist, but was unsuccessful. In recognition of his services to the community he was knighted in 1896.

935. Stewart, John: Minor Poet. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1835. He was also a musician.

936. Stewart, J. F.: Journalist. Born in 1845, in Braemar, he became a journalist, and was for some time editor of the Dundee Advertiser. He died in 1891.

937. Still, Peter: Minor Poet. A native of Longside, where he was born, 1st January, 1814, he became a day labourer, but had the misfortune to lose his sight for more than six months. On recovering the power of vision, he was laid aside with other infirmities. Having, however, exercised his rhyming gifts, he published, as a means of supporting himself, a few poems in 1839. Again, in 1844, he published The Cotter’s Sunday, and other Poems. He died in 1848.

938. Still, Peter (Jun.): Minor Poet. He was son of No. 937, and was born in 1835, at Blackhills, Cruden, where his father was temporarily engaged in farm service. He was sent to farm service when only 12 years old, but, on the recommendation of Principal Jack of King's College, he was appointed by the late Earl of Seafield to a bursary admitting him to Fordyce Academy. Here he remained three years, and then proceeded to King's College. After a short period of study for the ministry, symptoms of weak health setting in, he resolved to give himself to teaching, and in 1861 was appointed Rector of Peterhead Academy. His health, however, proved unequal for the strain, and he resigned his charge, and, after a few years of painful sufferings, died in 1869. He published a volume entitled Lays and Lyrics, in 1859.

939. Stirling, James (Sir, Hon.), M.A., LL.D: Judge of the High Court of Justice, England. Born in Aberdeen, in 1836, the son of the Rev. James Stirling, one of the U.P. ministers of the city, he graduated at King's College in 1855. He also won the Simpson Greek Prize. Proceeding to Cambridge, he took the position of Senior Wrangler when he graduated there in 1860. Having elected to study for the bar, he was called at Lincoln's Inn in 1862. Here he acquired a high reputation, and was Junior Equity Counsel to the Treasury, 1881-6, in which year he was appointed a Judge of the Chancery Division.

940. Strachan, John, A.M. (Rev.): Principal of Edinburgh University. A native of Aberdeenshire, born about 1635, he graduated at King's College in 1655. He was ordained to the pastoral charge of Tarves in 1662, and translated to the Tron Church, Edinburgh, holding also the Professorship of Divinity, in 1683. He subsequently was promoted to the Principalship, and died in 1699. See Scott's Fasti and P. J. Anderson's King's College Graduates.

941. Strachan, John, D.D., LL.D. (Rev.): Bishop of Toronto. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born in 1774, he graduated at King's College in 1797. Having acted for some time as schoolmaster in Dunino and Kettle, Fifeshire, he proceeded to Canada in 1799. There he took orders in the Episcopal Church in 1803, and was ordained to the mission charge of Cornwall, where he remained nine years. He then removed to Toronto, in 1812, where, by his influence as a member of the Provincial Government, he obtained a grant of land and Royal Charter for an Episcopal University—a labour that had to be undertaken a second time in connection with the Clergy Reserves and other ecclesiastical disputes. He was created Bishop of Toronto in 1839, and died in 1867.

942. Strachan, John (Rev.): Rector of the Scots College, Rome. He was the son of the minister of Logie-Durno, and belonged to the Kincardineshire family of that name. He is said to have been one of the best scholars ever turned out by Aberdeen University, where he probably graduated in 1649. In 1651 he was appointed Regent, but was opposed by the Courts, who accused him of Popish sentiments. For a full account of the controversy between him and the Covenanting party, see P. J. Anderson's King's Coll. Graduates, page 56. As the result of this dispute Strachan went abroad, where he studied medicine, and finally became a Roman Catholic. He was subsequently appointed Rector of the Scots College, Rome, in which position he was at his death.

944. Strachan, Robert (Sir): Royalist Leader. A native of Aberdeen, this gallant soldier, who was born in the second decade of the 17th century, distinguished himself as a supporter of the Royalist party in the Civil War. He was uncle to No. 942. For notice see Spalding's Troubles and The Scotsman's Library, p. 211.

945. Strachan, George Cumine (Sir): Colonial Administrator and Statesman. Several parishes contend for the honour of this distinguished man's birth. He is said by one authority to have been born in Rathen schoolhouse; by another to have been a native of Fraserburgh; while in P. J. Anderson's List of the Alumni of Marischal College, where he graduated in 1856, he is said to have been born in Alva, the son of the master of Gordon's Hospital. But, whatever may have been his natal spot, he was born in the year 1838, and, after finishing his College career, entered the Royal Artillery in 1857. He was A.D.C. to Mr. Gladstone and Sir Henry Storcks in 1858, when they acted as Lord High Commissioners in connection with the restoration of the Ionian Islands to Greece, as well as to the successive Governors of Malta from 1859 to 1867. He was then made Chief Secretary to the Government of Malta, from which he was transferred to be Colonial Secretary at Bahamas, 1868. He then was promoted to be Acting Governor of the Islands, 1871-3, after which he became Administrator of the Government of Lagos, 1873-4, then Governor of Gold Coast Colony, 1874-6; Governor-in-Chief of the Windward Islands, 1876-80; temporary Governor of Cape of Good Hope and High Commissioner, 1880; Governor of Tasmania, 1880-86. He died in 1887. He was created K.C.M.G. in 1880.

946. Strathbrock, Robert (Rev.): Bishop of Caithness. This Roman Catholic dignitary was born in Aberdeen in the 14th century, and, having entered the Church, became Bishop of Caithness, which office he held till his death, in 1444.

947. Stuart, Charles Shepherd (Sir), K.C.B.: Major-General. A native of Strathdon, where he was born in 1804, he entered the military service of the East Indian Co. in 1819, became Lieut.-Colonel, 3rd Bombay Native Infantry, 1851, and Colonel in the Indian Army, 1855. He commanded the Malwa-field force in 1857, and subsequently a brigade of the Central India field force, with both of which he distinguished himself highly, and eventually took part in the general action before Gwalior. He was made K.C.B. for his services in 1859, and was appointed Brigadier Commandant of the Bombay Garrison, 1859, and Major-General, 1863.

948. Stuart, Henry, M.A. (Rev.): Divine and Author of the Church of Scotland. Born in Birse, the son of a farmer, he graduated at Marischal College in 1820, and was licensed in 1824. It was not, however, till 1836 that he was ordained minister of Oathlaw parish. He published a treatise or pamphlet, Agricultural Labourers as they were, are, and should be in their Social Condition, 1853. He died about 1879.

949. Stewart, James, M.A. (Prof.): Scholar. A native of Aberdeen, where his father was a merchant, he graduated at Marischal in 1834, with distinction. He had been first bursar out of 65 competitors, and won the Rector's prize in 1831. He subsequently became Professor of Classics in the Catholic University, Ireland.

950. Stuart or Stewart, John, M.A. (Prof.). A native of Aberdeen, and son of Robert Stuart, Provost, he was born in 1708, graduated at Marischal College, 1726, and was appointed to the mathematical chair in his Alma Mater the following year. He translated Newton's Tracts on the Quadrature of Curves and Analysis by Series. He died in 1766. See S. N. & Q., ii., 184, and P. J. Anderson's Records of Marischal Coll., ii., 54.

951. Stuart, John, LL.D.: Record Scholar and Antiquary. Born at Forgue, in November, 1813, he entered Marischal College in 1828. After receiving a liberal education, he was admitted a member of the Society of Advocates, Aberdeen. Having given himself to antiquarian pursuits, he was nominated an official Searcher of Records in the Register House, Edinburgh, 1853, and in 1873 became Principal Keeper of the Register of Deeds there. In conjunction with the late Joseph Robertson, Dr. Stuart originated the Spalding Club, for the purpose of collecting and printing the historical MSS. connected with the north of Scotland, and acted as secretary from its commencement, in 1839, till its dissolution in 1870. During that period he edited for the Club 12 vols. quarto of original records and chronicles, besides the Celtic copy of the Gospels, known as the Book of Deer, in one volume, and The Sculptured Stones of Scotland, in two vols. folio. Dr. Stuart was Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries, Scotland, from 1854, and, besides minor papers on the proceedings of the Society, he edited for the members two vols. of Charters, viz., The Records of the Priory of the Isle of May, and Records of the Monastery of Kinloss. In 1869 Dr. Stuart was requested by the Historical Manuscript Commissioners to inspect and report to them on Scotch Collections of Records, and his reports appeared annually in the Blue Books issued by the Commission. In his examination of the papers at Dunrobin, Dr. Stuart brought to light the dispensation for the marriage of the Earl of Bothwell... with Lady Jane Gordon, which disappeared in 1567, and was generally supposed to have been destroyed. The honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred on Dr. Stuart by the University of Aberdeen in 1866. He died in 1877.

952. Sutherland, James, D.D.: Free Church Divine. Son of an Aberdeen barber, he entered at Marischal College in 1837, graduated in 1841, and was ordained to the pastorate of the Free Church of Turriff in 1845. He received the honorary degree of D.D. There is a George Sutherland, M.A., F.S.A., who may be a brother of the above, who has published Outlines of Archaeology, and is a local antiquary. I have, however, seen the birthplace of this author claimed for the parish of Udny.

953. Sutherland, Thomas (Sir), M.P.: Chairman of P. and O. Company, and successful Business Man. Born in Aberdeen, in 1834, he was educated at the Grammar School and University, of which he is an honorary LL.D. He has succeeded wonderfully in commercial life, and is chairman, not only of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, but also of the London Board of Directors of the Suez Canal Company. He resided in China for some years, and was a member of the Legislative Council of Hong-Kong, and one of the founders of the Hong-Kong and Shanghai Banking Corporation. He is a Deputy Lieutenant of London, a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour, and has represented Greenock since 1884.

955. Taylor, James, LL.D.: Mathematician. Born in New Deer, he graduated at Marischal College in 1782, having been the Gray Mathematical Bursar in 1781. He received the honorary degree of LL.D. in 1808.

956. Taylor, William Lawrence: Antiquary, &c. Mr. Taylor, who is a bookseller at Peterhead, is a native of the parish of King-Edward, born in 1829. He commenced business in Peterhead in 1851, and has been a frequent contributor to periodical and newspaper literature. He is one of the most valued helpers of this journal, and contributed to its pages a Bibliography of Peterhead Periodical Literature. Mr. Taylor is a lover of books, and has formed a carefully selected library, one feature of which is a collection of over 400 different psalters and versions of the Psalms, from 1546 to 1896, and he has repeatedly contributed to the literature of the subject. He was elected a member of the Bibliographical Society of Edinburgh in 1890, and is chairman at present of the Buchan Field Club, to which he has contributed some excellent papers.

958. Temple, William (Rev.): Antiquary and Author. A native of Udny, where he was born in 1827, he graduated at King's College in 1848, and has been successively Episcopal minister in Cumineston and Forgue. In his Thangen of Fomartyn he has produced a work of the most painstaking and elaborate description, which is a perfect mine of information on the family history and other antiquities of the district described.

959. Testor, William Hay Leith: Minor Poet. Better known by the cognomen of "La Teste," was born in February, 1849, at Balnacacht, a cottage near Halmoral. The poet claimed to be of French origin, his family having emigrated to Scotland with Queen Mary. The poet's father is said to have been an intellectual man, and a good poet, and is alleged to have had few equal in the country as an architect and artisan and rhymery. A double portion of the poetic spirit of his ancestors descended, however, on young William Hay Leith, who has produced a vast quantity of verse, none of it of any great value. He, however, contrived, or at least attempted, to live by his poetry, and proved as successful in that enterprise as many better poets have done. He began life as a page-boy in the service of Lady Abergeldie, but, being of a roving disposition, he moved about in his early years a good deal, and was engaged as servant, both abroad, and in London, and elsewhere in England. Returning to Scotland, he settled in Elgin as lessee of the New Market Inn, but, failing in this enterprise, became waiter in the Gordon Arms Hotel. Leaving this occupation, he entered the Elgin Coach Works. He was not, however, a steady workman, and endeavoured, by vending his works, to eke out a precariously livelihood. In his later years he was an inmate of the Poorhouse, where he died in 1892.

JAMES ROSE INNES (XII., 91).—The note quoted from the Illustrated London News of October 29 appears to confuse James Rose Innes, the Cape politician of the present day, with his grandfather, James Rose Innes, Superintendent of Education at the Cape half-a-century ago. The latter entered King's College in 1814 as "James Innes, Banfiennis"; and did not graduate at the usual time, but had the degree of M.A. conferred in 1822 (when he styles himself James Rose Innes), and of LL.D. in 1840. Who his father was supposed to be does not appear from the King's College Records; but "Jacobus Rose Innes, filius demortui Jacobi de Netherdale," graduated M.A. at Marischal College in 1819.

P. J. ANDERSON.
A FORGOTTEN FAMILY.

I have come across some other Mowats (now Mowatts), the ancestors of the present Permanent Secretary of the Treasury, my information being based on facts supplied by Mr. James Ryder Mowatt, as follows:

James Mowatt was "connected with Captain Peter Mowat," the son or grandson of James Mowat of Stenhouse, to whom I have referred. Beyond Mr. Ryder Mowatt's statement, I have failed to identify him. According to the same authority, he married four times. His eldest son by the fourth wife, Agnes Stewart, was—

Francis Mowatt, born at Nether Banchory, on November 16, 1719—the house has long since been destroyed. He entered the 34th Regiment, and was badly wounded by a grape shot at Fontenoy, 1745, at which his friend, the future Marquis of Townshend, was present. For many years he was captain and adjutant of the West Battalion Norfolk Militia. He married Margaret Ryder, a descendant of the Dutch Admiral de Ruyter. He died at Cheshunt. He had—

James Ryder Mowatt, born at St. Helena, 1755, where his father was stationed. He was one of the Pages of Honour to Lord Townshend, when the latter was Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, 1767-72, and as such accompanied the funeral cortège of Lady Townshend (née Lady Charlotte Compton) to Raynham, Norfolk, from Leixlip Castle, Kildare, September, 1770. He afterwards served in the 28th Regiment. He had travelled a great deal. He married Jane Fulton of Fittenweem, and had at least three sons—

James Ryder Mowatt (born at Eastbourne, 10th September, 1799, died 1877), was some time secretary to the Great Northern Railway. He had an only child—

James Ryder Mowatt, born 3rd September, 1844, who has two sons—

Ryder Mowatt, an undergraduate at King's College, Cambridge.

Osmund Mowatt.

Francis Mowatt, married Sarah Sophia, daughter of Captain G. Barnes, H.E.I.C. Marine. They had a son—

Sir Francis Mowatt, born 1837. He was educated at Winchester and St. John's College, Oxford. He has been a civil servant all his life, and has been Permanent Secretary to the Treasury since 1894. He married, in 1864, Lucy Sophia (who died 1896), daughter of Andreas Frerichs, of Thristone Hall, Cheltenham, and widow of Count Stenbock, Kolk, Estonia. He was knighted in 1893.

Harold Mowatt went over to Paris in his ardour over the Revolution. He was one of fifty-two British subjects who met in White's Hotel, Paris, November 18, 1792, and drew up an address (published in the English Historical Review, October, 1898), congratulating the Revolutionists. His letters from Paris are now in the possession of his great nephew, Mr. James Ryder Mowatt. He was ultimately flung into prison as a suspect, and his life was saved only by the devotion of his jailer's daughter, whom he afterwards married. In the Paris archives will still be found the original warrants by which he was arrested and transferred from prison to prison.

Captain Harvey Mowatt, "who bombarded Falmouth, America, and is buried at Christchurch, Hants," was, according to Mr. Ryder Mowatt, a cousin or half-brother of the James Mowat who was born at Nether Banchory in 1719.

Sir Oliver Mowat, the Canadian statesman, claims (in Burke's Colonial Gentry) to be a descendant of the Mowats of Balquholly. He is the eldest son of the late John Mowat, J.P., of Canisby, 1816, who settled at Kingston, Canada, in 1816. Sir Oliver was born in 1820, and was called to the bar of Upper Canada in 1841, becoming a Q.C. in 1856. He has filled a number of important Government posts. He was Postmaster-General of Ontario in 1863-4, Vice-Chancellor of Upper Canada, 1864-72, and Premier of Ontario and Attorney-General, 1872-90. He was made K.C.M.G. in 1892. He married Jane Ewart, Toronto, and has living—

Frederick Mowat, Sheriff of Toronto. Born 1851.

Arthur Mowat; married; and has a son and two daughters living.

And three daughters.

Besides the Mowats I have noticed, I know of the following:—

1571. Charles Mowat of Knockintiber (or Busbie), Lanark, bequeathed his estate to his nephew, James Mowat, son of (quondam) James. Charles had three sons. The second was William, the third Alexander (Great Seal).

1573. Magnus Mowat of Cowie was the husband of Elizabeth Hay (Great Seal), 1599. John Mowat is described as son of the late "Maunis Mowat, in Cowie" (Privy Council Register).

1595. Barbara Mowat (probably of the Balquhollie family) was the wife of Thomas Leask, son of William Leask of Leask (Great Seal).
1558. Barbara Mowat married William Lindsay, and died May 3, 1558, while her husband died in 1579. She had a son, William Mowat, who erected a stone to her in Turriff Churchyard (see Jervis's Epitaphs).

1650. Barbara Mowat married Andrew Oswald, advocate, circa 1650. (Skene's Skene Family.)

1608. Gaspard Mowat was the occupier of "Cremondgorth," in the parish of Crimond (Great Seal).

THE SHETLAND MOWATS.

Perhaps the Balquh Hollie family was connected with the Shetland Mowats, who figured so conspicuously in connection with the prosecution of Ninian Niven, Sheriff-Clerk Depute of Shetland, 1624. An elaborate account of this case will be found in the most recent volume of the Privy Council Register, while Mr. Gilbert Goudie went into it (in 1890-1) for the Society of Antiquaries, when he was followed up (1892-3) by Mr. Spence. The pedigree, as given in connection with the case of Niven, is as follows:—

Andrew Mowat of Hugoland, Shetland, married three times—(1) Karen Gyntelburn; (2) Ursula Tulloch, daughter of William Tulloch of Papa; and (3) Frau Elspet Tronesdochter, sister of Anna Trunte, the Norwegian wife of the Earl of Bothwell (Queen Mary's husband), and daughter of Admiral Trunte. By these marriages he had several children, among them a daughter (who became the mother of Ninian Niven), and also

John Mowat of Hugoland, who had a son,

Andrew Mowat of Skea.

James Mowat of Ur.

Gilbert Mowat, a Shetland parson.

Cecil Mowat (by the third wife), a distinguished admiral, who had large estates in Norway, and died in 1661.

Mr. Roland Sinclair notes that:—

In the provostary rental of 1584 Magnus in Hoxa, Magnus in Stowis, and Ingram Mowat in Meersettir are named. Patrick Mowat of Swinzies [Caithness?] in 1638 married Elizabeth Leask, and was succeeded by Alexander of Swinzies, who married Jean, daughter of Hugh Halcro of Halcro. In the churchyard of Flotta is a tombstone with the inscription, "Here is the burial place of the ancient names of the Mowats, in Ferrr William Mowat and Marjory D [Dame?] Sutherland and his grandmother." These Mowats were a branch of the noble Mowats of Hoy [the island exactly opposite to Caithness], the baronetcy of which family has been allowed to drop.

THE MOWATS OF ARDO AND LOGIE.

I have already shown that Magnus Mowat of Freswick, who died in 1634, left a legacy of 2000 merks to Thomas Mowat of Ardo. This Thomas was the son of James Mowat of Ardo who is described (I have forgot my authority) as having been the son of Magnus Mowat of Balquhollie, by his wife Isobel Hay, one of the Hays of Enzie. Where this Magnus comes in I am quite unable to say, though, as I have noticed, Magnus Mowat of Cowie married an Elizabeth Hay. On the other hand, the fact that the laird of Balquhollie, who died in 1634, left a legacy to "Ardo," suggests a relationship between the families. James Mowat of Ardo, at anyrate, lies in St. Nicholas Churchyard, Aberdeen, under an instructive inscription, which was given in these pages some years ago by Mr. A. M. Munro. He was an advocate in Aberdeen, and is described as "a man of mark, both in private and in public life." He had two sons, Thomas Mowat, married Janet Ogilvie. He sold Ardo in 1639 to Menzies of Pitoldells, after his family had held it for twenty years.

James Mowat was a merchant in Gottenburg.

On the same tombstone is recorded the death of James Mowat of Logie, who was probably the son of Thomas Mowat of Ardo. He died on May 5, 1662, being described on the stone as "second of the ancient family of Mowat, but second to few or none in piety and every virtue." He married Margaret Mowat, "sprung from the same family," who caused the monument "erected by her ancestors" in St. Nicholas "to be restored and for ever preserved by means of a legacy to the city" [Aberdeen]. One of his descendants was George Mowat, merchant in Aberdeen, who was a baillie in Aberdeen, and figures frequently (on the side of law and order) in Colonel Allardice's Jacobite Papers. He married Marjory Burnet of Elrick, and had George Mowat, died in New York, unmarried, 1796.

Marjory Mowat, married Rev. Alexander Peter, Dundee.

Margaret Mowat, married, April, 1787, John Stuart of Inchbreck, Professor of Greek in Marischal College, who died August 27, 1827. She died Jan. 2, 1821, and is described on the stone in St. Nicholas Churchyard as "the last of the family of Mowats of Ardo and Logie." This stone also marks the resting-place of her grandson, John, son of Alexander Stuart of Laithers.

MOWATS IN ABERDEEN.

Mowat has been a fairly common name in Aberdeen. Among others I may note:—

William Mowat of Colpnay, Provost of Aberdeen, 1754-5, was probably the son of William Mowat. He married Jane, daughter of Principal John Osborne, and had three sons, William, John, and Andrew. (See Munro's Proovests of Aberdeen, pp. 336-7.)
James Mowat, merchant in Aberdeen, died 8th June, 1823, and is buried in St. Nicholas Church, Aberdeen. He married Jane Bruce (who died in 1847, aged 72), and had four sons, including George, who died 1831, aged 35.

Jane Mitchell Mowat, who married George More (died 1823), son of Provost George More of Raeden, was the daughter of a James Mowat, manufacturer, Aberdeen, possibly the Jane I have just mentioned.

James Mowat, "a discreet gentleman," who, as a tutor to young noblemen, had "attended sundrie in France, Germanie, and Italie," died at Aberdeen, May 5, 1662 (Row's Journal, as printed in S. N. & Q., Sept., 1893).

John Mowat, Bellfounder, Old Aberdeen, was admitted to the Hammermen in 1717. There have been articles dealing with him in S. N. & Q., Vol. I., pp. 29, 107, 198, and Vol. II., pp. 58, 71.

Andrew Mowat was collector to the Aberdeen Kirk Session, 1608-9.

The Mowats of Abereldie were the subject of an unanswered query in these pages, in August, 1893.

STRAY MOWATS.

The following stray notes may interest genealogists:

James Mowat was Lord Cawdor's Edinburgh "doer," i.e., man of business, in 1604-23. (See Cawdor Papers, Spalding Club.)

Magnus Mowat wrote Ruthven's Revenge, published in Edinburgh, 1682.

Walter Mowat circa 1598, is mentioned in Skene's Skene Family.

Marie Mowat, Banff, was wounded in 1647 by Margaret Talyouer, wife of Walter Lovell, 1647 (Cramond's Banff).

Anne Mowat agreed to remove herself from Banff "for all the days of her life," Sept., 1739. She had been "lately incarcerated for being in the knowledge of putting in irons to the prisoners in the Tolbooth for helping them to make their escape. (See Cramond's Banff.)

Gilbert Mowat was a Town Councillor of Banff, 1624. In 1627 a Gilbert Mowat "was convicted in ane blood wntlaw of fiftie pundis, he having drawn a durt and strak John Guidbrand in the leg." In 1633 there is mention of Gilbert Mowat, a sheriff's officer (Cramond's Banff).

Charles Mowat, who lived somewhere between Brechin and Cowie, was the host of the Scots King in 1589 (Calderwood's History of the Kirk).

Grant's book describes the Mowats of Garth, now represented by the Rev. William Mowat Cameron of Garth (B.A., Oxon), while Henderson notes that branches of the Mowats possessed Brabsterye early in the sixteenth, and Swinzie in the seventeenth, century. The lands were sold in 1679 to Sinclair of Banoch. The name Mowat still lingers in Aberdeenhire. Mr. A. M. Mowat, as noted in Brown's Bookstall, August, 1898, was once on the staff of the Peterhead Sentinel, and died in the service of the Newcastle Daily Chronicle, in 1869. But the Mowats, as a landed Aberdeenshire family, have disappeared.

THE BUCHANANS OF CATTER.—In the Genealogical Magazine of December, Mr. Walter M. Graham Easton concluded his deduction of the Buchanans of Catter.

ABERDEEN NATURAL HISTORY AND ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY.—We gladly give publicity to the following circular, recently issued by Professor Trail, who will be pleased to receive the names of intending members:

MARISCAL COLLEGE, ABERDEEN.

DEAR SIR,

The Aberdeen Natural History and Antiquarian Society ventures to ask your interest in the aims of the Society and your assistance in their promotion. The copy of the Rules which is inclosed indicates fully what these aims are and how it is proposed to carry them into effect. The Society exists to promote a fuller and more intelligent interest in Natural Science (including the history of man) in the North of Scotland; and this it will endeavour to accomplish by the thorough study of the Natural History and Archaeology of the District, by encouraging the teaching of Nature-knowledge in schools, and by assisting in every way practicable in supplying one of the most prominent wants of Aberdeen—a Museum of Natural History and Archaeology such as ought to have existed ere this in a city of the importance of Aberdeen.

The Society does not in any way trench on the places filled and work done by other Societies. It has done good work in the past. Owing to the deaths of office-bearers it has not met for some time; and the need for its existence has been very fully shown during this period. There is much work for the Society to do, and it is felt that the co-operation of all who are favourable to its objects is much to be desired.

It is therefore hoped that you will kindly consent to allow yourself to be proposed at the first meeting of the Winter Session as a Member of the Society and will authorise me to intimate your consent at that meeting.

Believe me,

Yours faithfully,

JAMES W. H. TRAIL.
CHURCH CONSECRATIONS.

In February, 1883, I had the pleasure of presenting in an extended form in The Scottish Guardian the Episcopal Acts of Bishop David de Bernham of St. Andrews. It afterwards gave me much pleasant correspondence in connection with the fuller information thereby elicited, and in 1885 the Rev. Chr. Wordsworth thought my work worthy of receiving a place in the Introduction to his edition of The Pontifical Offices used by David de Bernham, Bishop of St. Andrews. But information as to localities identified has still been coming in, and it may not be out of place to give in simplest form the latest conclusions regarding the dates and places of consecration.

FINNAN HADDOKS.—An article on the fishing villages of the north-east coast, and more particular about the Finnan Haddock, appeared in the December number of the English Illustrated Magazine. It was written and illustrated by “Barrington Macgregor,” which is the pseudonym of the Rev. A. B. Orr.

THE FAMILIES OF BURNETT, CHALMERS, FARQUHARSON, FORBES, FRASER, AND GREGORY.—The December number of the Genealogical Magazine contained the first instalment of a series of Grants which were to be recorded in the Great and Privy Seal Records for 1676-81. They are contained in a manuscript volume, which was the Minute Book of a Keeper of the Record of “Signatures passed under the King’s Hand,” and which was picked up in an auction room by the writer, Mr. Charles S. Romanes. The Grants recorded in the manuscript are of a very varied character, and consist of Confirmations of Grants of Land; Gifts of the Escheats of Estates forfeited to the Crown, or otherwise under the Crown’s control; Gifts of Pensions, and of Tutoriy and Curatory; Letters of Legitimation; Remissions for Slaughter and other Crimes; and various other Crown Grants. The recipients are persons in all stations in life, and resident in all parts of the kingdom. And thus a great amount of valuable genealogical matter is brought under review in very small compass, so that the little volume, when published, will throw some light upon the histories of many families. Among the extracts printed are the following:—

Past in Exchequer, Feb. 4, 1676—

Escheat and livery of William Chalmers of Balncraig to Thomas Farquharson of Colstoune upon his own horning. Composition 20 merks.

Escheat and livery of Alexander Burnett (designed Alexander) merchant burgess of Aberdene, to Mr. Blaikwood, merchant burgess of Edinbrough. It is also sought be Thomas Thomson, son to unquhill David Thomson, merchant burgess of Edinburgh, upon his owne horning. Thomas Thom- sone prelifer. Composition 20 merks.

Past in Exchequer, February 21-3, 1678—

Gift of pension to the children of the deceast Mr. James Gregorie, Professor of the Mathematics in the College of Edinburgh.

Infeftment to Alexander, Lord Forbes of Pitsligo, of the lands of Aberdoure and teinds thairof, and others; holdend of his Majestie blensch, upon the resignations of the said Alexander, Lord Pitsligo, and the Lord and Master of Saltoun, their resignations.

PROSPECTUS OF "THE BANFFSHIRE ANTIQUARIAN," PROJECTED IN 1876, BUT NEVER PUBLISHED.

A QUARTERLY PERIODICAL,

TO BE EDITED BY ALEXANDER JACK, M.A. [now minister of Towie].

THE Banffshire Antiquarian will be a publication containing original researches on all matters connected with the antiquities of the county.

In antiquarian interest it may be affirmed that Banffshire will bear favourable comparison with almost any other county in Scotland. The literature already published relating to its antiquities is most extensive, but not being accessible to the general reader, is entirely unknown, except to those that make a special study of such subjects. It is with the intention and hope of throwing clearer light on these imperfectly-known topics, and of awakening fresh interest in the venerable records of past events, that the projectors of this periodical have determined to issue it. It is proposed that the periodical will contain the following special features:

I. The statistical accounts of each parish in the county that have appeared from time to time will be inserted, compared and commented on, and attention will be drawn to any references contained therein that have a bearing and importance wider than the county. Information will be added up to the present day, thereby giving these accounts a permanent interest.

II. Original articles will regularly appear, having for their subject the history of ancient and modern castles, mansion-houses, and the more important of the county families. These articles will be written on the basis of authentic documents, published and unpublished, and will do ample justice to the legendary lore which clusters around old ruined walls.

III. The story of the lives of eminent men and women born in the county, or who have lived in it, will be fully told, and, as these men have generally risen from a humble sphere of life, their lives will be exhibited as an example to the youth of the present day. The works of Banffshire literary men will be reviewed, and extracts connected with the general scope of the periodical will be reproduced.

will be given of eminent clergymen of all denominations, of men who have attained rank by merit, and of eccentric characters.

IV. Arrangements have been made for popular sketches of the different districts of the county with regard to their physical features, the past and present manners and customs of their inhabitants, illustrated by extracts from the works of old writers.

V. The history of Banffshire will be presented in the light of modern research, and, while popular tradition will not be neglected, fabulous tales will be disregarded or refuted, and the true history of the county will be pointed out—what it is and where it is to be found.

VI. Interesting accounts will be given of objects and articles of Banffshire antiquities seen in museums, of Druid circles, sculptured stones, Pict and Danish remains, and of wells reputed to have the power of healing. A column will be devoted to explanation of the more remarkable inscriptions and symbolical representations so frequently graven on tombstones in churchyards of the county.

VII. The student of natural science will have his knowledge increased by articles on the geology, geography, botany, and natural history of the county. The papers on these subjects, though strictly scientific, will also be written in an easy and intelligible style.

VIII. The different races of Banffshire inhabitants will be considered in a series of papers, in which it is proposed to examine minutely their origin, settlement, and gradual modification into their present state. The peculiarities of their dialects will be explained, all difficult etymological questions discussed, and the origin and meaning of local proverbs, phrases, and words illustrated by examples.

IX. The industries, manufactures, and fishings of the county will be fully described with reference to their rise and progress, their present condition and prospects; and accurate statistics of the various employments will be furnished.

X. A wide field of research is opened up in accounting for the present advanced state of agriculture in the county, and this most interesting subject, with all the varied collateral topics, will receive ample justice in the pages of the periodical.

XI. Besides all these systematic accounts, the more remarkable occurrences in Banffshire during the past 100 years will be reproduced. The general reading public will have served up again to their intellectual appetites accounts of elections, public meetings, speeches, rejoicings, trials, and any events likely to be re-read with interest.

XII. A quarterly epitome of Banffshire news will contain only the events that are of more than a passing importance.

The Antiquarian will include among its contributors some of the foremost writers of Antiquarian literature in the north-east of Scotland.

Correspondence will be printed if it communicates or refers to new facts of antiquarian importance, and a corner will be reserved for poetry having a similar reference.

No. 1 will appear on April 1st, 1876, and will contain:

1. Introductory Words by the Editor.
2. Statistical Accounts of the Parish of Gamrie, 1798 and 1840.
3. The Castle of Banff.
4. Life of Arch. Sharpe.
5. Sketch of the Brays.
7. A day in Banff Museum.
8. Topog. Acct. of Banff.
9. The Dialect of Banff. A.

THE CHARLES GORDONS.

The following notes will tend towards the unraveling of the Gordian knot, into which the Charles Gordons seem to have got. (See pp. 50 and 70, XII.) Mr. J. M. Bulloch, in referring to Lord Rosebery's List of Rebels, notes to notice that the laird of Terpersie's name appears therein as James Gordon, senior of Terpersie. Charles Gordon, younger of Terpersie, also appears, and it was Charles who was executed at Carlisle. If he had had a son who was reprieved or pardoned, there would thus have been three generations implicated, a by no means impossible, but rather an improbable, circumstance. I have not seen Captain Wimberley's Gordons of Lesmoir, and can only infer what appears therein from Mr. Bulloch's deductions.

Now, the Charles Gordons, whose trials I have come across, are:

I. Charles Gordon, taken prisoner at Carlisle, tried at Southwark, found guilty, condemned, and finally reprieved or pardoned.

II. Charles Gordon of Dalpersey, conveyed prisoner from Scotland for trial at Carlisle. Pled guilty, condemned, and executed.

III. Charles Gordon, tried at York. Pled guilty, condemned, and executed.

I. This Charles Gordon was not Terpersie's son. He is described as having belonged to Aberdeenshire, and his father was "a Bailie of Regality, under the Duke of Gordon, and well effected." (Scots Magazine.) There cannot be the shadow of a doubt as to Captain Wimberley's interpretation of "well-affected" being the correct one, and that the expression did not refer to the social position of the family. Charles Gordon was a lieutenant in Lord Ogilvy's regiment, and was one of the 18 Scots officers who surrendered to the Duke of Cumberland at Carlisle on 30th December, 1745. Of these 18, seven belonged to Aberdeenshire, and four to Banffshire, among those from the former county being another Gordon, James, of Colonel Grant's regiment. These prisoners were arraigned at St. Margaret's Hill, Southwark, on 25th and 26th June, 1746, when the Grand Jury found a true bill against Charles Gordon. On the 23rd October he was found guilty, but recommended to mercy on account of his youth. On the 15th November, Lord Chief Justice Lee passed sentence of death on twenty-two prisoners, including Charles Gordon, but of these only five were executed on Kennington Common on the 28th of the month, and he was not of the number.

II. There can be no doubt about Dalpersey being the same place as Terpersie. The one prefix is just more descriptive than the other, Dal = haugh-land, Tir = land. Charles Gordon was conveyed, along with other prisoners from Scotland, to Carlisle in August, 1746, where the Grand Jury sat from the 12th to the 26th. When brought to trial he pled guilty, and, on 24th September, was sentenced to death. He was executed on the Gallows Hill, at Harraby, on 16th November, the day the Jacobite army had entered the town the year before.

III. The trials at York lasted from the 2nd to the 7th October. I have found no reference as to who this Charles was. He pled guilty when brought to trial, and was executed on 1st November, 1746.

Mr. Bulloch authoritatively says that Charles, the first in the above list, had an elder brother who went with Cope. If it can be proved that this brother was David, who was taken prisoner at Prestonpans, we at once have "Chinese" Gordon's great-great-grandfather in the Duke of Gordon's Bailie of Regality. No difficulty should be experienced in ascertaining who this Bailie was, for the Regality Court Books will doubtless be extant.

1203. FOUR ABERDEEN CELEBRITIES (XII., 95).
—Jumpin' Judas, Turkey Willie, and Willie Godsmans are described in Aberdeen and Its Folk, a book (published in 1868) dealing with Aberdeen about 1820-50, written by "A Son of Bon-Accord in North America"—in reality, Mr. James Riddel, a solicitor in Canada, elder brother of the late Mr. Peter Riddel, Harbour Treasurer, and the late Mr. Thomas Riddel, actuary of the Savings Bank. "By some means or another," says this book, "Jumpin' Judas at one time became possessed of a cast-off suit of livery, including a cocked hat, and in this gorgeous array he had his portrait taken by some local artist, of which coloured prints were published, and found a ready sale, Judas being a general favourite in the town. He was depicted in his most characteristic attitude, while singing 'Maggie Lauder,' hopping on one leg, the other being deftly employed in executing the 'shuffle and cut' of the Highland fling, the right arm held up, and his hand grasping the little stick ready to be twirled." Turkey Willie was an itinerant dealer in poultry—mostly turkeys. "He drove hard bargains, and, if he could, he would have exacted unconscionable prices for his poultry; but the careful and economical housewives of Aberdeen seldom allowed themselves to be over-reached by him." Willie Godsmans held a badge from the civic authorities entitled him to exercise the rights and privileges of a licensed mendicant. These two are also described in William Buchanan's Glimpses of Olden Days in Aberdeen
(Aberdeen, 1870). The story of "Butter Willie Collie" is told (?by Mr. John Malcolm Bulloch) in There are two versions of the story. According to the one more generally accepted, "William Collie edited by David Herd, the antiquary. I should be very much obliged to any of your readers who could verify this. I have not access to any other biographical dictionary than Chambers'. Perhaps in some fuller account of him than it contains it may be said that among other literary work he edited the above volume.

1214. MYSTERIOUS IRON BOX.—There lies in the Record Hall, Aberdeen, in charge of the Sheriff Clerk, a mysterious iron box, about two feet in length and one in breadth, and closed with iron rivets, having the following inscription engraved on a brass plate, rivetted on to the lid, viz. — "This box, containning MSS. of the deceased Alexander Bannerman of Elsick Baronet, has been deposited in custody of the Sheriff Clerk of Aberdeenshire, to be preserved by him and his successors in office unopened till the year 1900, and then, and not till then, to be delivered to the head of the Bannerman family, agreeable to Interlocutor of the 27th May, 1842, pronounced by the Sheriff of Aberdeenshire in the cause Sir Alexander Bannerman's Trustees against Sir Alexander Bannerman." Can any one give information about these manuscripts; what was their nature; why thus sealed up with iron; and what was the nature of the "cause
Sir Alexander Bannerman's Trustees against Sir
Alexander Bannerman?"

ALEX. ESMILE SMITH.
was a gentleman who kept a tavern in Old Aberdeen. He had had charge of King's College Buttery—formerly in the days of long ago, when the student resided within the College buildings, a commissariat department had to be located there also, in the shape of a Buttery. He then became a respectable British publican in the Old Town, and, after the manner of the time, retained his nickname, Buttery." His portrait, taken from an old print, was given in Alma Mater.

R. A.

In reply to your enquiry, I beg to say that I have a perfect recollection of 1, 2, and 3, and possibly I knew "Buttery," although I cannot recall more than the name. I have a good copy of No. 1, and a photo of No. 2, and I recollect Willie Godsmans as forcibly as any of the three. They all flourished from 1825 onwards, Turkey Willie being the survivor. Godsmans used to call, as a beggar, at my mother's house in 1825-6, and was served, as usual, with a handful of oatmeal, for which he always had an open bag slung over one shoulder. He was a big-boned man—of swarthy complexion—and had a peculiar falsetto sort of voice; and, being an only son amongst six sisters, my frolicsome habits were so far disapproved of, and I was threatened with being handed over to Willie, who pretended, when he called on one occasion, to carry me off. I was then but a boy of five or six, but the impression thus left of the man and his appearance is strongly left on my mind. I think Willie must have died about 1826-7, as I never saw him after. J. Judas was alive up to 1830-1, as far as I can say. Turkey Willie was a very quiet subject, and as soon as he disposed of one turkey, which he always carried under his left arm, he was no time in re-appearing with another. He did not, so far as I know, beg money, or anything else. J. Judas put round the hat, as he always commanded a crowd. There were no police in those days, the town being protected by two town sergeants. When I was a lad of 10 and upwards I used to join in what were called stone fights on the links. I was often engaged in them, on the Footdee side against the Port or "Boul" Road boys. Our pranks in that way became so serious for ourselves, as well as those visiting the links, that on one occasion the six town sergeants appeared to stop the fight. Both sides at once went in and gave chase, and we drove all the six over the Broadhill and off the ground, so that they came no more to molest us.

1205. The word "clyack" (XII., 95).—This word is defined in the New English Dictionary thus:—"The last handful of corn cut at harvest on any farm, called in the south of Scotland the 'maidie,' and in Northumberland the 'kem baby.'" Dr. Gordon, in the Book of the Chronicles of Keith, 58, has the following reference:—"The clack sheaf was brought home drest as a maiden, put over the door during the night, and then given to the best cow to cause her to give more butter. In getting clack a scramble was made to get the last handful of corn to cut."

1202. John Witherspoon, D.D. (XII., 95).—Chambers, in his Eminent Scotsmen, says of this famous Scottish divine that he received a diploma from one of the Scottish Universities in 1764, but does not name the University.

1209. A Gordon Epigram (XII., 95).—An eminent Latinist furnishes the following prose translation of this epigram, but the task of reducing it to the condition of measured language still remains for the rhythmic expert:—"The Gordons boast that they equal the labours of Hercules. Both make the subject of their boast a sow; that sow was a wild one, but this was a domestic one. The former was greatly voracious of men, the latter of dung. Therefore, as far as sow differs from sow, so differs the empty glory of the Gordons—from the glory of Hercules." X.

1210. Roger Williams (XII., 96).—There is a Life of Roger Williams, by H. M. Dexter, published in Boston, 1876. The letters of this early champion of Toleration were edited by J. Russell Bartlett, Providence, 1882.
Elphinstone Dalrymple who tried his hand at the first deduction. This will be found in a volume he compiled, known as the “Balbithan MS.”, several copies of which are in existence. It was on this MS. that Dr. Temple based his chapter on Gight in the Thanage of Fermartyn (pp. 72-8). Basing himself in turn on Dr. Temple’s book, the Rev. Dr. Garden Blaikie, writing (anonymously) in the Scotsman, of September 24, 1896, dealt with “Lord Byron’s Scottish Blood,” supplementing the deduction in the Thanage of Fermartyn by some letters written by Mrs. Byron. These were taken from the supplement to the Parish Magazine of Fyvie, which Dr. Milne compiled in April, 1886. The latest contribution to the subject appeared in the Aberdeen Free Press of November 11, 18 and 25, 1898, under the title of “The Tragic Adventures of Byron’s Ancestors, the Gordons of Gight,” and it was supplemented in the same journal on December 2, 1898, by an article on “A Tragedy of the Austrian Empire,” these articles being written by me.

In the present series of articles I propose to deal more formally and genealogically with the Gight family, I have made many corrections on and additions to the “Balbithan MS.” and the Thanage of Fermartyn, and yet, though I have spent nearly two years on the subject, I am conscious of many omissions. These, I trust, will be set right by readers of Scottish Notes and Queries.

The strange story of the Gight Gordons covers a period of nearly three centuries, from 1498, when Sir William Gordon got the estates from his brother, to 1787, when Catherine Gordon (Mrs. Byron), the last of her line, had to sell them. The drama was played by thirteen different lairds, representing eleven generations, as follows:—

2nd Earl of Huntly = Princess Annabella Stuart.

I. William Gordon = Miss Ogilvie of Boyne.
1st laird of Gight.

IV. John Gordon = Miss Gordon of Lesmore. succeeded his brother and then his nephew.
II. and III.

V. William Gordon = Miss Ochterlony of Kelly.

VI. George Gordon = Miss Wood of Bonnyton.

VII. George Gordon = Miss Ogilvy of Airlie.

VIII. George Gordon = Miss Keith of Ludquharne.

IX. George Gordon = Miss Urquhart of Meldrum.
  X. Mary Gordon = Mr. Davidson of Newton.

XI. A. D. Gordon = Miss Duff of Craigston.

XII. George Gordon = Miss Innes of Edingight.

XIII. Catherine Gordon = John Byron.

George Gordon
LORD BYRON.
1788-1824.

It will be noted that there were really twelve Gordons among Byron's immediate two and twenty ancestors, the female side being drawn from families—the Ogilvys, Ochterlony's, Keiths, Woods, Urquharts, Duiffs, and Inneses—who were all closely intermarried and connected with the Gordons. Let me now proceed to the lairds of Gight.

I. SIR WILLIAM GORDON OF GIGHT
(Killed 1513).

This “familiaris armiger,” the founder of the Gight Gordons, was the third son of George, 2nd Earl of Huntly (died 1500), by his second wife, Princess Annabella Stuart, daughter of James I. of Scotland. She had been married to Lewis, Count of Geneva, son of Lewis, Duke of Savoy, but the marriage was dissolved owing to the intrigues of the French King. She married Huntly in 1459, and was divorced from him under papal law, in 1471. Huntly got possession of the lands of Schivas (or Gight) in 1467, from the two daughters of Sir Robert Maitland, and gave the estate to his second son Adam, who married Elizabeth, Countess of Sutherland, and who founded the Gordon line of the Sutherland family. Adam exchanged Gight for Aboyne, with his brother William, in 1498. William was killed at Flodden, September, 1513. By his wife, Janeta Ogilvie (alive in 1511), daughter of the laird of Boyne, he had

1. William Gordon, who succeeded him (as II.), father of George (III.).

2. John Gordon, who also succeeded (as IV.).

This is a mysterious person, over whom the genealogists have become very mixed. Dr. Temple, quoting from the “Babithan MS.,” calls him James, who married a Cheyne of Staloch, and succeeded to Gight as third laird. Dr. Temple makes him also the father of George, the fourth laird. The Great Seal, however, shows that George was the third laird, and the son of William the second. Again, there is a puzzle reference to the laird of Cairnbannoch in a note in Cosmo Innes's edition of the Familia of Innes (Spalding Club, 1864). There is little doubt, however, that Cairnbannoch was the grandson of the Colonel John Gordon, the Governor of Eger, who saved Austria from Gustavus Adolphus, by conniving at the assassination of Wallenstein (1634). According to the Innes note*

Cairnbannoch had a son,

John Gordon, a lieutenant, who was killed at the "battle of Flanders." He married Margaret Caldwell (Familia of Innes), and had

* "This Col. John Gordon was near Cousin german once removed with John Innes of Leuchars, whos mother was Marjorie Gordon, dochter to William Gordon of Gight, who was cousin german with the said Colonell Gordon. This Colonell Gordon's father was ane John Gordon sone to John Gordon of Kadenbanno, brother to ane Gilbert Gordon off Ardnamych, who was father to William Gordon who fell in to be laird of Gight after the slaughter of Sir George. . . . . . .

This Colonell Gordon's father and William Gordon of Gight unquhill John G. Innes's grandfather war brother barnis. Colonell Gordon's guidesy Gordon of Kadenbanno and William Gordon of Gight (his father) was John Gordon of Ardnamych Kadenbanno and Ardnamych were twae brothers cudent near cousins other brothers or brothers sons off the laird of Gight." This strange jumble, which contradicts itself, may be reduced to this shape—and there is no doubt about the right-hand column. I should greatly like to see the original manuscript from which Cosmo Innes printed this statement. Does any reader know where it is?

Sir William Gordon, 1st of Gight.
Colonel John Gordon, who, as Governor of Eger, saved the Empire by having Wallenstein (who was to have surrendered the town to Gustavus Adolphus) assassinated, 25th February, 1634. For this he was created a Marquis of the Empire, though he was a Protestant, while Walter Leslie, of the Balquhain family, one of his co-conspirators, was created Count of Neustadt. He visited Leuchars in 1644, but "the intesent trouble of Scotland diverted him" from buying an estate in Scotland. He died at Danzig, and was buried at Delft, Sir John Hurry, the famous Covenanting General, being at the funeral (Familie of Innes). He was never married, his property being inherited by his half-sister, Anna Weache, who married Alexander Petrie (son of Mr. Petrie, minister at Rotterdam), whom Gordon left as his executor. There was some squabble about the property, in which Leuchars was involved. Gordon is said to have killed a young man who was "half brother to his sister called Weache." I described the Colonel fully in the Free Press of December 2, 1895.

On the Lieutenant's death, Margaret Cadwell, his widow, married as her second husband John Nairn, and had Juda Nairn, who married a merchant at St. Andrews, called Gripar (he fell at the battle of Kilsyth "contra Montrose").

Margaret Cadwell married thirdly Lieutenant Weache, and had Anna Weache, who married Alexander Petrie, the executor of Colonel Gordon (as above).

Cairnbannoch (according to Dr. Temple) had another son,

William Gordon, who "perished in the Bogie."

4. Barbara Gordon, daughter of the first laird, married William Hay of Lorny (Fraser's Grants of Grant), and secondly, in 1541, John Grant, the first laird of Ballindalloch (who was a widower at the time), and who was killed (September, 1559) in a quarrel with the Grants of Carron. My authority for this issue is Sir William Fraser's book on the Grants. They had

2. George Grant in Inverernan; died before 1612.

3. Patrick Grant.

4. John Grant in Foyness, tutor of Ballindalloch (who had a son Patrick).

1. Patrick Grant of Ballindalloch, born before his parents' marriage, but legitimised October 22, 1542. He had five sons and three daughters, and was succeeded by his eldest son,

Patrick Grant of Ballindalloch, who had

John Grant of Ballindalloch (died 1679), who had

John Grant of Ballindalloch (died before 1690). He had

John Roy Grant of Ballindalloch; married Anne Leslie of Balquhain. Under him the estates became very much encumbered, and were taken possession of by his creditors, who sold them in 1727 to Colonel William Grant (of the regiment that is now the Black Watch), younger son of James Grant of Rothiemurcus, who thus became the founder of the present family of Grant of Ballindalloch. John Roy Grant had a son,

Captain John Grant, who entered the Dutch service in 1708. He died before 1733. He had

Patrick Leslie Grant, who, though no longer holding the Ballindalloch property, became a laird by succeeding his cousin, Count Ernest Leslie, as Protestant heir (he 'verted from Catholicism) to the lands of Balquhain, of which he was the twentieth laird. He died unmarried, and was succeeded by his sister, Eliza Grant's husband, Patrick Leslie Duguid of Auchenvoe. They had no issue. Duguid married a second time, and had a son John, the 22nd laird of Balquhain, the ancestor of the present laird (Leslie's Family of Leslie).

5. Catherine Gordon. I think the "Catherine Gordon of Gight," who married James Innes of Ruthmakenzie, as noted in the Family of Innes, was a daughter of the 1st laird, and may have been named after his half-sister, Lady Catherine Gordon, who married Perkin Warbeck. James Innes was the son of Robert Innes of Cromy, who was the second son of Alexander Innes of that Ilk (died 1491), armour-bearer to James III., to Janet Gordon, daughter of the first Earl of Huntly. This Ruthmakenzie, who was his wife's cousin german, fell at Pinkie, 1547, and his son, Alexander Innes of Cromy was brutally murdered in Aberdeen, 1580. Innes of Invermarkie had quarrelled with Cromy, and tracked him to Aberdeen. Simulating a fit, and crying "Murder! Murder! A Gordon! a Gordon!" outside Cromy's lodging at night, Invermarkie induced his enemy to come out, and then shot him dead, while his followers decorated the dead man's body with their dirks. Cromy's son, a young boy, escaped by the back door, afterwards finding shelter with his father's second cousin, Alexander Innes of Cults, known as "Crag-in-Peril" on account of this affair. "Crag-in-Peril," as we shall see, married a daughter of the 5th laird of Gight. (See the Family of Innes.)

II. William Gordon of Gight
(Died 1546).

According to the Register of the Great Seal, the first laird was succeeded by his son, William, who had his charter confirmed in December, 1513. Dr. Temple calls the 2nd laird George, and says he married Elizabeth Gordon, daughter of Robert Gordon of Fetterletter, son of James Gordon, 1st of Haddo. The lands of Fetterletter ultimately fell to the Gights. The Earl of Morton possesses a letter, dated 1597, from "Dame Elizabeth Gordon, Lady of Gight" (see Historical MSS. Commission). Dr. Temple says George died without issue. It is certain, however, that William (whose career is very obscure) had a son George, and I am inclined to think that Dame Elizabeth Gordon was really the wife of William and the mother of the next laird.

George Gordon, who succeeded him (as III.).

A Bon-Accord Byron Epigram.—The following epigram appeared in the London Globe of December 8, 1898:

If Aberdeen, for conscience sake,
Poor Byron's tardy statue spurns,
How it must blush when asked to take
A rousin' nicht wi' Robbie Burns!

The Family of Leask.—You have dealt with the forgotten families of Wood of Bonnyton and Mowat of Balquhbolly. Another family that was erstwhile of some importance in the same district was the Leasks of that Ilk. As early as 1360 you will find a mention of a Leask of Leask (a property which now belongs to the laird of Pitlurg). In Stodart's Scottish Arms a reference is made to the laird of 1360, who had a charter from David II., and to an Alexander, who sold the estate about 1696, and who registered in 1672 a crest—a crescent, with the motto, "Virtute Cresco." James Leisk was minister of Cushnie in 1614, while Alexander Leask was minister of Cruden in 1669, and of Turriff in 1678. There were Leasks in Tarves at the beginning of this century. One of these was William Leask, farmer at Gateside, on the Haddo estate, whose great-grandsons are Dr. James Leask of Bombay, and Mr. W. Keith Leask. He died before 1823. His first cousin was William Leask of Skilmaffie, who died in 1823. There are also Leasks in Orkney. The Leasks and the Mowats both had estates in Aberdeenshire, and in Orkney and Shetland.

Professor Thomas Forbes.

"Dr. Thomas Forbes was Professor of Medicine in the University of Pisa in Italy." Account of the Learned Men and Writers in Aberdeen in Maidment's Catalogues of Scottish Writers, p. 115.

I have received the following reply to a query regarding Professor Forbes, addressed to the Librarian of the University of Pisa:

"R. Bibliotheca Universitaria, Pisa,
Mar. xxvii., 98.

Sir and Colleague,

Dr. Thomas Forbes native of Aberdeen has been Professor of Medicine in our University on the xvii. century. In the 1658 taught philosophy for a short time.

"I transcribe what wrote the illustrious Angelo Fabroni in Hist. Acad. Pisanæ (Vol. III., 610: Pisus, 1795):—

"'Et quamquam maximi habiti fuerint honores medicis quibusdam, qui ex Britannia ad nos venerunt, deque eorum ingenii magnitudine suspicari licet, nil tamen egisse videtur, ut medicina illam salubritatem Hippocratis observationis, quasi sanitatem recuperaret. Ex illorum numero fuit quidam Thomas Forbesius Scotus, qui postquam, ut diximus, philosophiae scholar exeret, tenuit et illam medicinam per triennium: nam an. 1662 ad suos redire concupivit.'

"'Nothing remain of his works in our Library. I have not informed if have been others Scotchs professors in Pisa at that time.

"'I have the honneur to be
Your obedient servant
Felice Tribolati, Knight
Librarian, University, Pisa."

Was this Thomas Forbes the son of Bishop William Forbes, who, with his brother, Patrick, entered Marischal College as Cargill bursars in 1640? If so, where did he obtain his Doctor's degree?

P. J. Anderson.

Byron's Father and the Marchioness of Carmarthen.—Those who wish to follow the intrigue of Captain Byron and the Marchioness of Carmarthen may be referred to a curious work, called Trials for Adultery (London, 1779, Vol. II., pp. 1-75), wherein the divorce proceedings are reported. The pair are also treated, and their portraits are given, in the Town and County Magazine of January, 1779.
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

960. Thom, Alexander: Printer in Ireland. The son of No. 962, born in Aberdeen, 1801, he accompanied his father to Ireland in 1813, and settled in Dublin, where he became concerned in many important printing contracts with Government. Mr. Thom was widely known as the compiler and publisher of the famous Dublin Almanac and Directory. Referring to this book, and to Mr. Thom’s relation to it, the late Prime Minister, Mr. Gladstone, described that gentleman “as a credit to the nation.” He died in 1879.

961. Thom, George, LL.D.: Successful Teacher. A native of Forgue, where he was born in 1842, Mr. Thom graduated at Aberdeen University in 1863, but continued his studies, principally in science subjects, during two succeeding sessions. In 1865-6 he acted as assistant Professor to the class of Natural Philosophy in Aberdeen University, and proceeded in 1867 to India, to act as Principal to Doveton College, Madras. During his residence in that city he became Fellow of the University of Madras, and had the honour of delivering the address to the graduates of the University at the close of one of the sessions. Mr. Thom, after a few years’ successful work in the East, found it necessary, for the sake of his health, to seek a better climate. He accordingly returned home, and was shortly thereafter, in the year 1878, appointed Rector of Dollar Institution. This position he has since held with much credit to himself, having steered the Secondary School, over whose fortunes he presides, with much skill through the critical period in that institution’s history which followed the passing of the Endowed Schools Act. Mr. Thom has published a small, but helpful, manual on Elementary Physiology. He also takes a deep interest in antiquarian and scientific studies. He has received some years ago the honorary degree of LL.D. from his Alma Mater.

962. Thom, Walter: Journalist and Local Historian. This gentleman, who was father of No. 960, is favourably known to local antiquarians as the author of a History of Aberdeen, published in 1811. He is also author of a book on Pedestrianism, published in 1813. He proceeded to Dublin in that year, where he died in 1824.

963. Thom, William (Rev.): One of the Founders of the New Connexion Methodist Church. This worthy son of Bon-Accord was born in that city in 1751, and became in early life a Methodist, and finally a Methodist preacher under John Wesley. After Wesley’s death, however, belonging to the more liberalisation section of the Methodist ministry, he joined Alexander Kilham in his demand for a formal severance of the Methodist Societies from the Church of England, as well as for an adequate representation of the laity at the Annual Conference. As a result of the vehement controversy which these demands occasioned among the Wesleyan communities and clergy, both Kilham, who was the leader of the movement, and his more active associates, were suspended from the Wesleyan ministry. As a necessary fruit of this action Kilham and three other ministers, whom William Thom was perhaps the most important, withdrew from the parent Methodist Society, and on August 9th, 1797, formed at Leeds a new denomination of Methodists, to which they gave the title of The Methodist New Connexion. Five thousand secessionists from the original Societies at once associated themselves with the new body. The Church thus originated has gone on ever since increasing its hold on English society, especially in the North of England. In its last year’s report of the church work, presented to the Conference, we are informed that it can now boast of possessing no fewer than the respectable number of 575 chapels, 206 ministers, 1203 local preachers, and 33,840 members, while its Sabbath scholars number 84,369. Mr. Thom died in 1811.

964. Thom, William: Poet. Born at Aberdeen in 1799, of parents so poor that he received little or no education, and scarcely food. At the age of 14 he was apprenticed to the trade of handloom weaving, in which occupation he so well and dexterously improved his education. Married, and with a family of four children, Thom, about 1837, was thrown out of employment owing to some commercial disaster of the times, and had to set out to tramp the country looking for work, one of his children dying on the journey. Thom’s first effort as a song-writer was made at this time, when he composed verses for his flute, and, by offering copies at the houses on the road, obtained the means of proceeding to his destination. Thom subsequently forwarded verses to the Aberdeen Herald, which, attracting much attention, led to the publication of a volume of his verse. In 1842 Thom was invited to London, where he was much made of in society by Lady Blessington and other “leaders,” and a fashionable dinner given in his honour; but after returning to Inverurie he fell into distress. His collected poems were issued in a small volume in 1841, entitled Rhymes and Recollections of a Handloom Weaver. The little volume contained verses of great melody and sweetness of sentiment, combined with much taste; but it was far from obtaining the success its merits entitled it to. After his death, in 1848, a subscription, amounting to about £250, was raised for his destitute family. Mr. Thom was unfortunately, like many other of Scotland’s gifted sons, a victim to strong drink.

965. Thomson, Alexander, of Banchory: Free Church Leader and Author. He was born 21st June, 1798, son of Andrew of Banchory, and educated at Aberdeen and Edinburgh. He passed advocate, and was called to the Scottish Bar in 1820. He was much respected in the North of Scotland as one of the most cultured and public-spirited of the gentry of the north. He took a deep interest in the Disruption movement, and joined the Free Church in 1843. Among his numerous publications may be mentioned Facts from Rome, 1834; Social Evils: Their Causes
966. Thomson, Alexander, D.D. (Prof.): Congregational Divine. Born in Aberdeen, 1815, he entered Marischal College in 1829, and graduated with distinction, 1833. Six years' work as a tutor followed. Then determining to enter the Christian ministry, Mr. Thomson underwent a three years' course of theological training at Spring Hill College. His first pastorate, beginning in 1842, was in Glasgow, and there, from 1848 till 1855, in addition to his ministerial duties, he acted as Professor of Biblical Literature in the Glasgow Theological Academy. Translated to Manchester in 1855, he became minister of Rusholme Congregational Church, and soon became a power in Cottonopolis. His earnest and scholarly discourses were generally admired, and his congregation rapidly increased. In 1875 Mr. Thomson became Professor of Hebrew and Old Testament Criticism in the Congregational College, Manchester. He was also chosen Chairman of the Congregational Union that same year, and added still further to his reputation by his addresses from the Chair, the firm and genial way in which he conducted the proceedings of the Union. He received the degree of D.D. from his Alma Mater in 1877, and died a few years ago, much esteemed and regretted.

967. Thomson, George (Sir), K.C.B.: Distinguished Army Surgeon. A native of Aberdeen, son of a shoemaker, and born 1843, he entered Marischal College, 1858, took his M.B. degree at Aberdeen University, 1864, and in the following year entered the Indian Medical Service. He became Surgeon-Major, 1877, Brigade Surgeon, 1889, Surgeon-Colonel, 1893. Served during the Afghan War, 1878-79, with Chitral Relief Force, 1895, and with the Malakand Field Force and Tirah Expedition, 1897. He received his C.B., 1896, and K.C.B., 1898.

969. Torry, Patrick or Peter, D.D. (Bishop): Born 27th December, 1763, at Garneston, Waulkmill, King-Edward, he was educated at Marischal College, and in due course entered the ministry of the Scottish Episcopal Church, where he was long minister and bishop. He was consecrated to the See of Dunkeld in 1808, and died 1852. One or two of his sermons and other writings have been published.

970. Torry, Thomas Gordon Anderson (Rev.): Poet. Born in Peterhead, 1805, and educated at Aberdeen and Edinburgh, Mr. Anderson Torry was successively minister of the Scottish Episcopal Church at Portobello, Edinburgh, and Dundee from 1827 till his death, in 1856. He is the author of The Arabi Maid and other songs.

971. Trail, Samuel, LL.D., D.D. (Prof.): Church of Scotland Divine. A native of Udny, but in Anderson's King's College Graduates he is given as a native of Aberdeen. Born in 1805, he graduated in 1825. He became minister of Arbuthnott in 1841, was translated to Harry and Birsay, 1847. His Alma Mater made him successively LL.D. in 1847, and D.D. in 1852, and finally appointed him Professor of Theology, 1867. He was also Moderator of the General Assembly in 1874, and died in 1887. He published An Examination of the Pentateuch, 1863, and other writings. Dr. Trail's son, Professor James Trail of the Botany Chair, Aberdeen University, deserves notice here, as, though born in Orkney, his family connection with Udny, and his training and lifework, render him thoroughly Aberdonian. Prof. Trail has a European reputation in his own branch of science. His career is sketched in Who's Who and also in Men of the Time. It may, however, be added that he became F.R.S. in 1893, and that he has published various valuable monographs on his own subject—Vide, Men of the Time, &c.

972. Turner, George (Sir): Distinguished General. Born at Menie, Belhelvie, 22nd March, 1780, he served with great distinction in the British Army, and attained the rank of General there. He died in 1864.

974. Turrell, Gavin: Antiquary and Author. Born in Aberdeen, at the beginning of the century, he matriculated at Marischal College in 1818, and graduated 1822. Subsequently a clerk in the Union Bank, Aberdeen, he published a volume of Antiquarian Gleanings in 1859, which reached a second edition in 1871.

975. Tyler, Alexander, M.A. (Rev.): Poet and Author. Said by Dr. Hew Scott to be a native of Buchan, and to have graduated at King's College in 1664, though Mr. Anderson gives his name in his Graduates of King's College as Alexander Tailerus, Aberdonensis. He was ordained at Kinnetles in 1670, and, though alive in 1685, seems to have died before 1688. He was author of the following quaint productions:—Memoirs of the Life and Actions of John, King of Poland, done in verse, 1685, 4to; also, Signal Dangers and Deliverances by Land and Sea; Comprehending a Short Account of the Raising of the Siege of Vienna, Together with a Description of a Violent Tempest (when going to Edinburgh, 26th November, 1681, with Claverhouse and many of his brethren for the purpose of taking an oath required by the Test Act) between Burntisland and Leith, in a Boat called 'The Blessing,' in two small poems, reprinted 1685 (4to).

976. Tyrie, James (Prof.): Jesuit Author. Born 1543, at the Mill of Dunblane, Inch. After studying at the University of Louvain, he visited Rome, and joined the Society of Jesus. He was appointed Professor of Philosophy and Theology in the Jesuit College of Clermont, Paris. Tyrie, in 1590, became Provincial of the Jesuits in France. He wrote under the name of George Thomson, De Antiquitate Ecclesiae Scotiae. John Knox replied to this work, to which Tyrie replied in a pamphlet (1573), which is reckoned rare and valuable. Tyrie died at Rome in 1597.

977. Udny, John, M.P.: The Udny family, one of the oldest in Aberdeenshire, was strongly Royalist in the 17th century. This representative of the family entered Marischal College in 1678, was the tenth winner of the archery medal, and served as M.P. for his native county.

978. Udny, Robert, F.R.S., F.S.A.: Art Collector. This distinguished son of the family whose name he bears was born about 1740, and became a successful West India merchant. He twice made the tour of Italy, and collected many pictures by the best masters of the Italian schools, with the design of forming a school of painting in connection with the Royal Academy. Mr. Udny was a Fellow of the Royal Society, and also of the Society of Antiquaries. He died in London in 1802, but was buried in the Udny family vault.

979. Udny, Richard (Sir), K.C.S.I.: Indian Administrator. This notable Aberdonian was educated at Aberdeen University, and entered the Bombay Civil Service in 1809. He has been engaged on various important matters, and in 1891 was appointed Commissioner of the Peshawar Division, Punjab. He also acted as Afghan Boundary Delimitation Commissioner, 1894-5. He was made C.S.I. in 1894, and K.C.S.I. in 1897.

980. Urquhart, Adam, of Meldrum, M.D.: Covenantant. This gentleman was one of the few Aberdonians who suffered for attachment to the Covenant. He died in 1684.

982. Urquhart, Miss: Poetess. Hugh Miller, in his Scenes and Legends of the North of Scotland, p. 259, mentions this lady as an excellent poetess, who flourished about 1834.

983. Urquhart, Patrick, M.D. (Prof.): Born 1641; at Meldrum, Fingask, he was appointed to the Chair of Medicine, King's College, by Patrick, Bishop of Aberdeen, in 1672, and died 1725, having been 54 years Physician in the King's College, Old Aberdeen. He is spoken of as "a man of learning and parts."

984. Wales, James: Artist. Several varying accounts of the career of this Aberdonian artist are to be met with in S. N. 2 Oct. II., 162:3; III., 12, 30, 78, 175; IV., 135, 200. A critical review of them all seems to lead to the conclusion that he was a native of Peterhead, born probably in 1748, but not educated at Marischal or King's College (as the published lists of Marischal undergraduates do not contain his name, nor does he appear in the list of the King's College graduates). The probability is that he was mainly self-taught, though he is reported to have derived some advantage from lessons in his art given by Francis Peacock, an artist then painting in Aberdeen. After practising for a time in the northern city, Mr. Wales left for London, where he is said to have greatly improved in his art. At London he painted landscapes in the manner of Poussin, and attained great eminence in portrait. In the hope of bettering his circumstances, Mr. Wales sailed for India, where he gained a good position, and might have attained fortune if his life had been spared. He died, however, in 1795, and was buried in the Cathedral, Bombay, where his tomb may still be seen. Besides portraits, Mr. Wales in India designed the picture of the Maharatta Durbar, which was afterwards completed by Thomas Daniell, R.A., and engraved. He also designed the most of the drawings in Daniell's Oriental Scenery.

Errata and Addenda:

952. Sutherland, George, M.A., F.S.A., I am informed by Dr. William Temple, is a native of Udny, and an Episcopalian by hereditary descent, and is now, or was lately, connected with Portsoy. He is therefore no relation to Dr. James Sutherland, late of Turiff.

954. Swan, John M.: Artist. Mr. Anderson (of the Free Press) points out that, in Who's Who, Mr. Swan is said to have been born in Old Brentford, and to have studied at the Worcester School of Art. My authority for claiming him as an Aberdonian was a paragraph in a northern paper, which said he was born in Aberdeen and studied in Paris. But I have no doubt the reference in Who's Who is correct, and my authority was misleading.

958. Temple, William (Rev.): Antiquary. I omitted noticing that Mr. Temple received the degree of D.D. in 1895, from Aberdeen.

REV. JOHN MILL OF DUNROSSNESS.—From The Diary of the Rev. John Mill (1740-1803), published by the Scottish History Society in 1889, it appears he was schoolmaster of Cullen for seven years, and that by a will made in 1753 (but afterwards cancelled) he intended to bequeath £20 Stg. to the poor of Cullen. The following are the only entries referring to Mr. Mill in the Kirk Session Records of Cullen. While he held the office of schoolmaster he was also session clerk:

"1732, June 26. Lodged in the hands of Mr. John Mill present session clerk £7 16s. 8d. presently given by Mr. Hacket."

"1736, Aug. 2. Mr. Mill the treasurer's accounts cleared."

"1739, Oct. 29. The treasurer cleared accounts and nothing remains in his hands. Attested by James Lawtie, moderator." [Mr. Mill probably resigned as schoolmaster and session clerk at that time. He was licensed by the presbytery of Fordyce a fortnight afterwards.]

"1739, Dec. 2. Mr. John Milne (late schoolmaster), probationer, preached Psalm xix. 11. Collected £1 7s."

"1740, Mar. 16. Preached Mr. John Milne prob. forenoon Text Rom. vi. 1, 2. Afternoon Gen. xvii. 1. Collected £1 9s. 8d."

Of the Minutes during Mr. Mill's clerkship, only from 20th June, 1731, to 28th Dec., 1736, appear to be in his handwriting. The same handwriting appears from 1737 to 1755, and it is evidently that of Mr. John Cook, schoolmaster and session clerk, who succeeded Mr. Mill in 1739, and who entered in the Register the Minutes of Mr. Mill's three last years. One would not have expected that the writer of the Diary would have let his Minutes run three years in arrear, but such was not uncommon, for example, his predecessor, Mr. Hacket, has this entry: "1732, April 2. To the schoolmaster for extraordinary service in filling up the register the most of Ogilvie's time £6 Sc." Mr. Hacket had four years' entries to make (1727-1731). Mr. Mill's entries in the session book are bald and rigidly official, never recalling the piquant and gossiping writer of the Diary.

THE MOWAT FAMILY.—In the register of Edinburgh births the following entry will be found under date Sept. 20, 1655:—

Mr. John Cockburn, Advocate, Isobel Mowet, a son named John, Witnesses Sir John Cockburn of Ormiston; Sir George Mowet of Baggrofe; David Wood, Tutor of Bonitoun; John Hamilton, apothecary; George Leslie, merchant; Joseph Mowet, Mr. George Mowet, Advocate.

I don't quite know who "Mr. John Cockburn" was; Sir John Cockburn married in 1643, and had a son John, but this could scarcely be the husband of Isobel Mowet, as, apart from his age, he is said to have died without issue in 1671, when his brother Adam succeeded to Ormiston. From David Wood, Tutor of Bonitoun's, appearing as a witness one might think there was some connection between John Cockburn, advocate, and Anna Cockburn, wife of Sir Harry Wood (S. N. & c. Q.; Nov.; p. 73). Adam Cockburn, who succeeded to Ormiston, became Lord Justice Clerk, and was father-in-law to Mrs. Alison Cockburn, authoress of "The Flowers of the Forest." William Mowat was Canon of Moray in 1476, and also in 1505, while John Cameron, who got part of the lands of Strathdon in 1357, was married to Ellen de Montalto or Mowat. Both the last references are from Fraser's Grants of Grant. H. A. C.

ALEXANDER GORDON OF WARDHOUSE.—Alexander Gordon of Wardhouse, who was executed at Brest in 1769, is said (by me in the Aberdeen Free Press of August 26, 1898) to have fled the country for having been implicated in a street brawl in Cork. I have just come across a more definite statement of the case in the Calendar of Home Office Papers. A proclamation was issued in Council at Dublin, on Nov. 21, 1767, offering a reward for the apprehension of Lieutenant Alexander Gordon and Surgeon John Maude Traverse of the 49th Regiment, and Clotworthy Thompson, of the 69th Regiment (both stationed in Cork), who, on Nov. 8, at about five o'clock in the morning, riotously entered the house of Peter Ashenhurst, a publican of Cork, with swords drawn, and murdered one Patrick Connor. According to Bentley's Miscellany (Nov. 1868), the victim was a butcher. Gordon escaped to the island of Rhé. Curiously enough another Ensign Gordon lost his life there in 1627, when the Duke of Buckingham (who had left Portsmouth with 80 ships on June 27) attacked the island. An account of this expedition occurs in the Skrine Papers (Historical MSS. Commission).

J. M. BULLOCH.
In the year 1522 there was no printer in Scotland, for the art had not prospered in Edinburgh. Its light expired immediately after the production of the Aberdeen Breviary, in 1510, and, although there is some rather hazy evidence of a faint glimmering about the year 1520, we may safely assert that it was lost to Scotland for nearly thirty years. No attempt had been made to introduce it at Aberdeen, and a whole century was to elapse before the Englishman, Edward Raban, after endeavouring in vain to earn a living by its exercise in Edinburgh and St. Andrews, began his useful and prosperous career as "laird of letters" under the patronage of the two Universities and of the municipal authorities.

And thus it happened that late in the year 1521, or very early in 1522, Professor John Vaus, Humanist at King's College, Aberdeen, bearing three precious manuscripts, undertook the dangerous voyage to Dieppe, over a boisterous sea, infested by unfriendly English vessels. Some of his fellow-passengers lost part of their baggage in a severe storm, but all arrived safely in France. The Professor was heartily welcomed by his old compatriots in Paris, and was introduced to Jodocus Badius, the founder of the Ascensian press, one of the most eminent printers of the age.

To Badius he now committed the care of the manuscripts of Principal Boece's "Murthlacenium et Aberdoniensium Episcoporum Vitae," and of his own "Rudimenta," and "Commentary on the first part of the Doctrinals of Alexander de Villedeius." The least interesting of these to the French printer was doubtless the Rudimenta, for, although a man of great learning, he had to confess total ignorance of the Scottish language. But to us to-day it is the most interesting of the three, for not only is it the first book in Scottish printed at Paris, but it represents the earliest effort made by a teacher in Scotland to instruct his students in the elements of the Latin tongue by the aid of their own vernacular. Moreover, it is the earliest of the Grammars which gave name and fame to the University of Aberdeen, as its author is the earliest of her famous Grammarians, for Vaus, Scot, Ruddiman, Melvin, and Bain are names of her sons which mark distinct and important epochs in her literary history.

We are able to note four editions of the work, two of which, printed in the lifetime of its author, we shall now describe.

Note.—On the flyleaf Dr. Laing has written, "Several leaves wanting, but I am not aware of any perfect copy, unless the copy in King's College, Aberdeen."

The above description, from the "Catalogue of the First Portion of the Library of David Laing, LL.D.," sold at Sotheby's, 1st December, 1879, and ten following days, is all we are able to give of the first edition of the Rudimenta. The volume formed lot No. 3699, and was sold at the eleventh day's sale. It has obviously been bound up with the Commentary on the Doctrinals under a single title, which is quite different from the title-page of the separate issue of the latter work. We are anxious to procure a collation of this copy, and should be glad to discover its present owner. Although the catalogue does not state so, it is quite certain the book was printed at the Ascensian press. Dr. Laing's note indicates that he was not aware that the earliest copy at King's College is of the second edition.

The second edition is the earliest to which we have had access, and is preserved in the University Library at Aberdeen. It is bound in one volume with the 1522 edition of the Commentary on the Doctrinals, the third edition of the Rudimenta, and a tract by J. Ferrerius. The following is a short collation, with a specimen of the Scottish text, which is both a vernacular and educational curiosity:

THE ADVENTURES OF CAPTAIN WILLIAM GORDON AND THE DUTCH.

A GORDON whose pedigree I cannot trace, but whose adventures were of the most exciting kind, was the William Gordon who commanded the East India Company’s ship the Hound in the East India trade. In the Calendar of State Documents relating to the East Indies and China, his story is told in a rather confused way. He first appears in the year 1618. In the May of that year we hear of his being ill to point of death at Jacatra. Indeed, “in the judgment of man he is past recovery, and has made his will.” As a matter of fact he did not die, but lived to fight another day.

His great adventure occurred on July 17, 1619. The Hound and the Sampson (which had on board Captain Jourdain, President of the English factories of the East India Company,) were attacked by four Dutch vessels in Patani Roads. England was then fighting a hard battle against Holland in the East. Writing on March 10, 1620, to the East India Company, Richard Cocks, the chief of the English factory at Nagasaki, says “this was the third year since any ship had come from England or Bantam.” The Dutch had by sound of trumpet in the harbour of Ferando proclaimed open war against England, both by sea and land, with fire and sword, to take our ships and goods and destroy our persons to the uttermost of their power as their mortal enemies. All this came to pass through the Spaniards sinking the Holland Admiral’s ship at the Manillos, burning two others and committing other outrages. Gordon was “a valiant proper feller as ever put forth on ship, notwithstanding his misfortune after five glasses fight.” The result of the fight in the Patani Roads was that Jourdain, while talking with Henry Johnson, the Dutch commander, was shot through the heart with a musket shot. Adam Boulton, a merchant, and ten others in the English ships were killed. George Muschamp, the chief justice at Amboyna, had his right leg shot, so that it had to be amputated, and thirty men were wounded. The Hound was set on fire by a Portuguese called Domingo, and was captured along with the Sampson by the Dutch, though some years later it seems to have returned to the Company. The value of the two vessels was estimated at £15,000.

Gordon, the master of the Hound, was captured along with Michael Payne, the carpenter of the Sampson. The victors turned the crew ashore naked, while they made the officers work for them. Somehow or other Gordon and Payne escaped, and in September, 1619, got to the English house at Ferando, which was attacked by the Dutch, who were wrathful at losing such useful prisoners. Gordon's wife, who was alive in November, 1621, was named Joan.

From this point Gordon drops out of the records. It seems to me just possible that he may have been the William Gordon, who was a skipper in the Russian trade from Aberdeen in 1631, for the East India Company had divers dealings with Muscovy. Joseph Robertson suggests that this William may have been the father of Thomas Gordon, the Admiral-Governor of Kronstadt, who was implicated in the Jacobite attempt (1716-30) to invoke Russia's help.

As to the Admiral, who died at Kronstadt on March 19, 1741, I may note a picturesque reference which occurs in Mr. Fitzroy Bell's book on Murray of Broughton, edited for the Scottish History Society. James Edgar, writing to Murray under date June 7, 1741, says:—

"The king [the old Pretender] had lately a letter from Muscovy from Sir Harrie Stirling [the Admiral's son-in-law] with an account of Admiral Gordon's death. His Majesty regrets the honnest admiral very much. He would have you—if you find no inconvenient in it—tell so much to Sir Harry."

1218. TAIT. CLERK. CHIVAS.—The great-grandfather of Archibald Campbell Tait, Archbishop of Canterbury, was Thomas Tait of Buthlaw, born in 1691, died in 1770. He married Grizel Chivas, and was himself the son of William Tait, variously called of Braeside and of Longside, Aberdeenshire, and of Ludquharn. William Tait was born in 1668, and died in 1725. His wife was Agnes Clerk, born in 1669, died in 1739. Can anybody tell me anything about the fathers and mothers and forebears of William Tait, Agnes Clerk, or Grizel Chivas, or the dates of the marriages of the two last-named?

1220. DID JAMESONE PAINT THE PORTRAIT OF SIR ROBERT GORDON OF GORDONSTOWN?—I ask this question because of a passage which occurs in a letter from Charles Kirkpatrick Sharpe, written to the Duke of Sutherland in 1844, and printed in Sharpe's Letters, published by the Blackwoods in 1888. Sharpe tells his Grace that his next neighbour, "Mr. Gordon," of Drummond Place, Edinburgh, "hath the picture of Sir Robert Gordon, the historian [1580-1656], his wife, her father and mother, and several more of a newer class. Sir Robert seems to have been done by Jamesone, but hath been re-touched; his wife, in a widow's hood and peak, is not ill painted; her father [John Gordon], the Dean [of Salisbury], is very well done, with an inscription, which I could not make out, being failed in sight; nor could good Mr. Gordon help me. The portrait is on board, and hangs high. The dean's wife, charming!—a true old French face, with a jewel fixed upon her flat ruff. I fell in love with her directly, and when the summer comes I shall beseech Mr. Gordon to allow me to make a sketch of her." The Dictionary of National Biography makes no mention of these portraits, although it is noted that an engraved portrait of Sir Robert exists. His mother-in-law was Genevieve Pétou, daughter of the sieur of Maule, and "first president" of the parlement of Brittany. Where are Mr. Gordon's pictures now? Mr. Bulloch does not mention them in his book on Jamesone. X.

1221. ST. CUTHBERT'S CROFT AT MURTLE.—Whence did this piece of ground derive its name? The church of the parish was dedicated to St. Peter. Was there an altar in it connected with the cultus of St. Cuthbert? The lands of Murtle belonged in Pre-Reformation times to the See of Aberdeen, and one may, perhaps, have to look to St. Machar's Cathedral to find the origin of the name. I have, however, failed to find any trace of the existence of an altar to St. Cuthbert in that Cathedral. St. Cuthbert's Croft at Murthill is mentioned in a sixteenth century Charter. (Vide Registrum Magni Sigilli Scotiae, Vol. 1546-80, page 529.)

1227. A FINTRUM RING.—It is recorded in a Presbytery record that the Supervisor to the York Buildings Company at Garmouth, in 1733, offered a woman a Fintrum ring instead of a gold ring. What is a Fintrum ring? Jameson has "Fintrum speldin = a small, dried haddock."

1230. AMERICAN-ABERDEEN GRADUATES (XII., 94).—In respect to Dr. George Milne, I can only suggest that he is to be identified with the person of that name mentioned in the Gentleman's Magazine for October, 1822, p. 381. [Died, September 25, George Milne, M.D., Physician to the Birmingham Hospital.] Dr. Witherspoon's degree was probably conferred at St. Andrews, and I will note the correction for our future editions.

Centenary Memorials of the First Congregational Church in Aberdeen. Founded in George Street, 1798, and transferred to Belmont Street, 1865.
Written by John Bulloch. With 16 Illustrations.
Crown 8vo. pp. xvi. and 176.

This is not a book intended to set the Dee on fire, or to create a sensation in the world of letters. It is the result of a duty confided to the author, responsible and sometimes delicate, as he admits; yet right well has he discharged the duty, and the narrative creates an interest extending much beyond the Congregationalist communion. For the origin of the body or denomination brings us back at once to the apostolic times, when the Apostles were, in the most severe missionary, and it is to be regretted that the term missionary, by which the members were first known, had not been retained, instead of the term Congregational—which every member of a particular church is; or the controversial term Independent—as distinguished from Presbyterian, or Prelate—which no Christian member of a church ought to be, for are we not all one in Christ? The book is a century memorial, and in a considerably changing world that means a felt want at the time; it means also permanence and much usefulness, or it would have collapsed ere now. There was need for the “missionaries.” The State Church was so sunk in the “dead sea of modernism” that Sir Henry Moncrieff, when Moderator of the General Assembly, 1785, declared that, but for the seceders, Evangelical Christianity would have become extinct in Scotland. And yet there was need for the “missionaries,” because even the seceders at the time had become hide-bound by old traditions, and, with conscientiousness, stood out for old use and wont rights and privileges which their fathers had enjoyed and had transmitted to their children, and which they were loth to part with; had become gagged by State churchy, worldly trammels, forbidding any member to “usurp the rights of the clergy,” by addressing a mixed assembly, using hymns of human composition, or teaching in a Sabbath School; the only excuse for this narrowness being that it was in the last century, in times of ignorance. The book is a valuable addition to the history of Aberdeen, and contains notices of upwards of two hundred citizens, many of whom were notable in their day and generation. The church they planted was no hothouse plant, nursed and coddled into leaf and flower by rich men or popular favour. It was seed sown by the wayside by the brothers Haldane, and the story of how the good seed fell into the hearts and fructified in the lives of the nine original members, and spread afterwards as far as Africa and China, has been charmingly told by Mr. Bulloch.

ABERDEEN, MARCH, 1899.

THE MACNAYRES, THE CARDNEYS, AND THE STEWARTS, LAIRDS OF FOSS.

The lands of Foss, in Perthshire, were included in the extensive Abhanage of Dull, which appears to have embraced the greater part of the parishes of Dull and Fortingall, and there a chapel was erected at a very remote period. In the grant of the church of Dull and its dependencies—with the exception of the chapel of Brau in Glenlyon—to the Priory of St. Andrews, by Richard, Bishop of Dunkeld, which was confirmed by Hugh, Bishop of the same, early in the 13th century, the chapel of Fossach was mentioned. When the lands of the Abbey of Dull came to be secularised, the earliest name found in connection with Foss is Christian Hair (Nair?), who got a charter of the lands of Wester Fosseachs from Robert I. (1306-29). Hugo de Bercley de Kyppok had Easter Fossache prior to October 24th, 1370, on which date David II., by charter at Perth, confirmed these lands to Donald Macnayre. As far back as the reign of David I. (1124-53), the Macnabs, or at all events some of their number, were known as McNab Eyre or Oighre, the son and heir of the abbot, hence their descendants are found under variously spelt names, such as McGynnayr, McGenayr, McNayr, and Macnayre, doubtless the forerunners of the present-day McNair; and down to the time of the Reformation the name is met with as being borne by ecclesiastics in the district, thereby shewing their hereditary leaning to the Church. This particular line of Macnayres would seem to have ended in an heiress, who became the wife of William Cardney, the progenitor of another line of lairds of Foss. She was Rinald McGynnayr. The Chronicle of Fortingall records that she and her husband both died on the same day, October 8th, 1452—her death taking place at Inshewan—and were both buried at Dunkeld.

The Cardneys, a family now unknown and forgotten, were at one time extensive landowners in Perthshire, and, on another occasion, those of that Ilk, and of the other branches, may be dealt with.

Duncan Cardney succeeded William Cardney in Foss, and on October 20th, 1484, he and his son, Andrew, figured in a case before the Lords Auditors of Causes and Complaints:

The Lords decree and deliver that Duncane Cardeny of the Foss shall content and pay to Sir William Rothven of that Ilk, Knight, the sum of xlvi. xiiij s. iiiij d. for the quhilk the said Duncane and Andro Cardene, his son, are bound and obliged conjunctly and severally to the said Sir William and Isabel Levingston, his spouse, by the obligation shewn and produced before the Lords, and ordain that letters be written to distress the said Duncane, his lands and goods, for the said sum, and it is to be remembered that he was summoned lawfully to this action and compeared not.
By February 11th, 1492, Duncan was dead, and Andrew Cardney was laird of Foss. On that date the latter's name appears in connection with a case which Alexander Cunningham, of Polmaise, had previously entered against him, William, Lord Ruthven, Sheriff of Perth, Laurence Mercer of Meiklour, Sir Robert Abercromby of that Ilk—who had the lands of Murthly, near Dunkeld—and some other persons unnamed. I think Andrew must have been the last laird of Foss of his name.

The history of the Stewarts, who came to possess Foss, is not to be found in any work treating of the name or of the Highlands, and the information furnished by Burke, under "Stewart Menzies of Cheshill and Foss" (sic, for Foss belongs to Sir Robert Menzies, Bart.), is scant. The undernoted shows the line of the five generations there given:

| John Stewart of Foss, m. Sussannah, dau. of Thomas Flemnyng of Moness. By her he had 4 sons and 4 daurs. |
| John Stewart of Foss (2nd son), m. Jane, daughter of Gilbert Stewart of Fincastle, and by her had (with other issue who pre-deceased him) |
| Joseph Stewart of Foss, b. Feb. 28, 1768, m. Feb. 4, 1800, Elizabeth, dau. and heiress of Alexander Menzies of Cheshill, by Eleanor Hamilton, his wife, dau. of James Menzies of Cudaries. (She died Dec. 6, 1813, and he died Feb. 11, 1835.) They had one son and six daurs. |

| John Stewart-Menzies of Cheshill and Foss, b. Mar. 25, 1804, m. Nov. 28, 1860, Hon. Catherine Thurlow Fraser, sister of the late Lord Saltoun, and youngest dau. of the Hon. Wm. Fraser of Saltoun. He died April 25, 1867, and was succeeded by his second and only surviving son, |

| William James Breadalbane Stewart-Menzies, the present laird of Cheshill, and representative of the Stewarts of Foss. |

In addition, the following may be noted:

Neil Stewart of Foss, who must have been born about 1500, had a daughter, Janet, who became the wife of Donald Robertson, 8th, and the mother of Robert Robertson, 9th, of Struan. The third son of the last named, Duncan Mor, 1st of Drumachine, married Dorothy, daughter of another Neil Stewart of Foss, who may have been either the son or the grandson of the above Neil, and, in course of time, their great-grandson, Duncan Robertson, became 13th of Struan on the death, in 1745, of Alexander Robertson, the poet and soldier laird, only, however, to be dispossessed through the exclusion of his name in the Act of Indemnity.

On March 3rd, 1671, John Stewart of Foss was served heir to John Stewart of Foss, his father, and the former might equally well have been the grandfather, or the father, of the first laird given by Burke, calculating from the first date, namely, 1768, which appears in his list. Which was he? But it is rather strange, and not in accordance with the usual custom in Highland families, to find the Christian name, Neil, not perpetuated by anyone of the last six generations at least, and this suggests the question, did the line of Neils belong to another family? It should be noted that Neil Roy was the name of Stewart of Fothergill, who died in 1554. Had he any connection with Foss, or how did his first wife, Christine, daughter of the first Earl of Atholl, happen to die there, May 30th, 1538?

John Stewart of Foss (which laird?) was "out" in the '15, along with his neighbour, John Stewart of Kynachan, on the Jacobite side, but he saw neither Preston nor Sheriffmuir. How this happened will here be shewn. It will be remembered that Mar set up the standard in Perthshire, at Kirkmichael, on September 9th, 1715, and, proceeding by Moulin, Logierait, and Dunkeld, on his way to Perth, was joined at these places by large numbers of the Perthshire lairds and their followers. Resolving to send a body of men across the Firth of Forth to the south to join their friends, who were mustering in the south-west of Scotland, and in Nthumberland, he placed Brigadier MacIntosh of Borlum in command of the detachment, which included six regiments, the Earl of Strathmore's—the only unkitled regiment—the Earl of Mar's, Logie Drummond's, Lord Nairn's, Lord Charles Murray's, and MacIntosh's. Stewart of Foss was one of the officers, but I am not sure whether he was in Lord Nairn's or Lord Charles Murray's regiment, more probably in the former, as the officers in it, when taken at Preston, were fewer. Of the 2500 men, under MacIntosh's command, who assembled on the north side of the Firth on Wednesday, October 11th, about 1500 only got across during that and the following night. Many were forced back to the Fife side, and the greater portion of Strathmore's regiment was driven into the Isle of May, before they could return, by the boats sent out from three men-of-war, aided by three Custom House smacks, which were in wait to prevent the passage if possible, the wind being unfavourable for the larger vessels to come up in time. Owing to the breaking of an oar one boat was captured, containing about 40 men from Atholl, and the officers in it were John Stewart of Foss, John Stewart, younger of Glenbuckie, and Patrick Robertson of Dungarthle. Mar, writing to General Forster from Perth on October 21st, says:—"There were but two of all the boats taken," but contemporary historians agree that there was but one. The prisoners were taken to Leith, where the rank and file were warded from when MacIntosh, after collecting his scattered forces, and taking a look at Edinburgh, entered the town, but the officers were conveyed to Edinburgh Castle, which held out against the Jacobites. From there they were taken to Blackness Castle, where they were confined, along with some who came to be taken at Sherifmuir, till the affair was ended. When the trials of the prisoners, who had been confined in Scotland, took place at Carlisle, the Castle of Stirling yielded 20; Edinburgh Castle, 22; Edinburgh Tolbooth, 12; Canongate, 9; Blackness Castle, 13; and Winton House, 11. On December 13th, 1716, the Grand Jury found true Bills of High Treason against John Stewart of Foss, John Stewart, younger of Glenbuckie, and Patrick Robertson of Dungarthle, and the Court allowed them seven days to prepare for their trial. On December 20th Patrick Robertson pleaded guilty, and was condemned to death, but was eventually pardoned, and "there remain'd of all the Prisoners from Scotland, that they had Evidence against, only Four to be try'd, viz., Brigadier Campbell of Ormondell, Mr. Tulloch, Stewart of Foss, Stewart of Glenbuckie; of whom the two Stewarts gave such accounts of themselves, and the Court received such Satisfaction in that Account, that the Solicitor General thought fit to acquaint the Court that it would be for his Majesty's Service, to allow a writ of Noli Prosequi to be enter'd in their Behalf; which was ordered accordingly, without, however, mentioning anything in Publick, of the Reasons which procured them so much Favour." (A Faithful Register of the late Rebellion, London, 1718.) What is the explanation of this extraordinary proceeding? The Jury, it may be mentioned, brought in Tulloch Not Guilty, and Campbell having pled Not Guilty, at the "Time for his Trial, the officers were sent to his Chamber to fetch him to the Bar; when they came into his Room, they found nothing there but his Hat and Perrwig; the Brigadier had, it seems, found Means to escape out of the Castle."

The only clue afforded to me that a Stewart of Foss was "out" also in the '45, is contained in the catalogue of the Exhibition of Relics of the Royal House of Stuart, held at the New Gallery in Regent Street in 1889, wherein there is catalogued as being on exhibition a "Silver Medal of James III. and Queen Clementina, given [by whom the catalogue does not say] to John Stuart [sic.] of Foss, Culloden. Lent by Stewart Menzie, Esq." Now, while the List of Rebels, edited by Lord Rosebery for the Scottish History Society, may be far from being complete in general, the list of the Perthshire Highland lairds who were "out" may be taken as being accurate. So, while there are found representatives of the families of Ballechin, Bohallie, Findynate, Garth, Killiechassie, Kynachan, and Shierglass, there is no mention of Foss.

In a History of the Society of Writers to Her Majesty's Signet, 1890, which contains a list of the members of the Society from 1594 onwards, appears the name of Alexander James Stewart, admitted W.S. "10th March, 1842, apprentice to John Bowie — son of Joseph Stewart Menzie of Foss, Perthshire — Born 13th November, 1820. Died 8th March, 1873, unmarried." This work, however, does not discriminate between legitimate and natural children. It may be observed, in passing, that Alexander Menzie of Chesthill, admitted W.S. June 25th, 1770, was Principal Clerk of Session from December 10th, 1778, till his death on June 9th, 1804.

None of the Stewarts of Foss, nor the Menziees of Chesthill, have matriculated for the bearing of coat armour.

I should be obliged by information as to the connecting links of the Foss family, with dates, as well as regarding the collateral branches.

Horse Racing in Aberdeen.—Some years ago I remember the late Mr. Edward Young (of Wyllie's) showing me a large folio volume in manuscript dealing with horse racing in Aberdeen at the end of last century. I do not know what has become of it. Meantime, this item from Mr. Egerton Castle's book, The Jerningham Letters (1780-1843), is of interest. The "tall, good" Henry Jerningham, Lord Stafford, 1802-1847, wrote his grandmother, the Hon. Lady Jerningham, in 1823, from Traquair House:—"He says he has unexpectedly passed three months in Scotland, and that he cannot say too much in praise of his brother-in-law [Thomas, 14th Lord Lovat], and of pleasantness of the neighbourhood. The Aberdeen Races assembled them, and Mrs. Fraser [which?] was hailed a beautiful bride."
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

985. Walker, Alexander, L.L.D.: Antiquary and Author. One of the most notable of the present generation of Aberdeen's public men, Dr. Walker was born in that city on 3rd April, 1825. During the whole of his life a devoted lover of his native town, he has served her faithfully. In 1873 Mr. Walker was elected Dean of the Guildry, in which capacity he represented the Brethren in the Town Council from that year till 1880. Of scholarly tastes and habits, Dr. Walker, in the intervals of business, has given his attention to many literary and antiquarian subjects, and has published a long series of interesting lectures and books and pamphlets. A complete list of these numerous writings, from the year 1872 onward, will be found in Robertson's Handbook of Bibliography. Perhaps Dr. Walker's most characteristic volume is his monograph in defence of Mary, Queen of Scots, by an Elder of the Church of Scotland. In recognition of his abilities and scholarship, the University of Aberdeen a few years ago conferred on the ex-Dean of Guild the honorary degree of LL.D.

986. Walker, George (Baillie): Literary Bookseller and Author. Born in Huntly in 1821. Long the head of the business concern known as Brown's Aberdeen Bookstall—a bibliopolic emporium which has more than a local celebrity—Mr. Walker, who followed enterprising publishers and merchants like Provost Brown and Mr. Frost, worthy maintained the character for culture, energy, and integrity which he had earned by his predecessors at the "Bookstall." A genial and cultured gentleman, as well as an enterprising man of business, Mr. Walker has employed the season of retirement from public life, which he has for some time enjoyed, in issuing various books and articles dealing with Aberdeen life in the early years of the present century. Among these, and perhaps the most notable, may be mentioned Craigdian and Its Ministers, 1885, and a later volume, Aberdeen_Awa, published two years ago. Mr. Walker, who has for many years been a musical enthusiast, has also produced, in collaboration with the late Mr. James Valentine, a Text Book of Vocal Music, which has gone into a second edition. For some time Mr. Walker served his native city as a Town Councillor, and was promoted to the bailiwick before retiring from public life.

987. Walker, Isabel: Centenarian. As illustrating the vitality of the Aberdeen race, the case of this wonderful old lad deserves record. She is said to have been 24 years of age in 1687, when she was married at Rayne, a record of which event still exists, and she died in 1774, aged 112. For notice of this centenarian, and her portrait by James Wales, see S. N. & Q., ii, 122 and 162.

988. Walker, James, D.D.: Bishop of Edinburgh and Author. A native of Fraserburgh, where he was born on 24th January, 1770, he entered Marischal College in 1785, graduating in 1789. He subsequently proceeded to St. John's College, Cambridge, where he also graduated in 1796, and by this College, in 1826, he was further honoured with the degree of D.D. Having devoted himself to the Church, he settled in Edinburgh in 1793, and in 1807 became incumbent of St. Peter's Episcopal Church there. At this time he also acted as sub-editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. At an earlier period in his life he was appointed tutor to Sir John Hope, and accompanied that young gentleman to the Continent, spending the year 1801-2 in Italy and Weimar. Besides a volume of sermons, published in 1829, Dr. Walker gave to the Church a number of occasional sermons, pamphlets, letters, charges, etc., all evincing sound theological learning, wide general culture, solid sense, and sober, earnest piety. In recognition of his high attainments he was appointed the first Pantonian Professor of Theology to his own Church. He was also chosen successively Dean and Bishop of the Diocese of Edinburgh, having been consecrated Bishop of the said See in 1830, a post he held till his death, in 1858. He was much admired and trusted in the denomination with which he was connected, and was even spoken of as the chief "deus et tutamen" of the Scottish Episcopal Zion.

989. Walker, James: Minor Poet. A native of Glenmuick or Coull, he was born in 1801, and died in 1865. For a notice of this poet, see William Walker's The Bard's of Bon-Accord.

990. Walker, James: Musical enthusiast. One of the chief agents in the revival of music in Aberdeen. He was born in that city in 1830, and, after a successful business career, died in January, 1895. At his death he left his large library, including an excellent Ruskin collection, to the Aberdeen Public Free Library. He published one brochure on his favourite subject, entitled Just Intonation in Song. Mr. Walker was brother of No. 985.

991. Walker, James Dingwall: Minor Poet and Journalist. Born in the fourth decade of this century, in Aberdeen, and educated at the Grammar School there, after a short commercial career, he devoted himself to journalistic life. He was for some time on the staff of the Scottish News, and passed thence into the employment of Messrs. Blackie and Co. His special forte was Scottish literature. Among other works he assisted his brother William in compiling the excellent monthly magazine on Aberdeen poets, entitled The Bards of Bon-Accord. He died in 1891, and in 1893 a posthumous volume from his pen appeared under the title of Scottish Antiquities.

992. Walker, William, M.A., L.L.D. (Rev.): Dean of Aberdeen and Author. Born at Greenhill Farm, Inveramsay, Chapel of Garioch, 3rd November, 1817, this cultured and pious divine graduated at King's College in 1840. Ordained to the pastoral charge of the Episcopal congregation of Monymusk, in 1842, he has continued to occupy the same sphere of labour till the present day, though, in addition to holding the incumbency of Monymusk, he is now also Dean of Aberdeen. Dr. Walker is well and favourably known to the religious public by his interesting Lives of Some of the Older Scottish Bishops. He has written most admirable biographies of Skinner of Linshart, and also of Bishops Jolly, Gleig, and John Skinner. He has also published a theological work, entitled Moses and Deuteronomy, and another on The Kings of Israel. His Alma Mater conferred on him the degree of LL.D. in 1885. Dr. Walker belongs to the old school of Episcopal divines, and is one of the most cultured and attractive personalities among them.

993. Walker, William, M.D.: Deputy Surgeon-General. A native of Aberdeen, born in the fourth decade of the present century, he studied at Marischal College, graduating in 1853. He also took his medical degree, and in the same year gained the first place out of 55 candidates who were successful in the competition for admission to the Indian Medical Service. Proceeding to India, he served all through the Mutiny, and gained distinction in the service. He reached the rank of Deputy Surgeon-General before his retirement, in 1888, and, in 1890, was nominated Honorary Physician to the Queen. His Alma Mater conferred the degree of LL.D. on him in 1885. He published a work on The Epidemic of Typhus in the North-West Province of India, which was published in 1861.

994. Walker, William: Historian of the Aberdeen Poets. Brother of 991, he was born in 1841, in Aberdeen, and is a successful business man. Mr. Walker, however, is chiefly known, and will long be honourably remembered, by his able and excellent monograph on Aberdeen poets, which was published in 1887, under the title of The Bards of Bon-Accord. Mr. Walker is of scholarly and cultured habits, and a man of fine taste.

995. Wallis, James (Rev.), L.R.C.S., Edinr. : Author. A native of Gartly, he entered Marischal College in 1844. Having studied for the ministry of the Church of Scotland, he was ordained, in 1849, to the pastoral charge of the congregation of Woodside, Aberdeen. This position he held till 1854. On retiring from the ministry in Aberdeen, he preached a farewell discourse, which was published. He was subsequently for some time in Demerara, and took the medical degree of L.R.C.S. in 1863. Thereafter he emigrated to New Zealand. He is described as an author, but I have not seen the titles of any of his works.

996. Watson, Alexander: Song Writer. This gentleman, who is still remembered as the author of the popular song, “The Kail Brose of Auld Scotland,” was born in Aberdeen in 1744, and died in 1831. He was a merchant tailor in his native town, and was at one time Deacon of the Incorporated Trades of the northern metropolis. The song was written in 1781, and was meant by its author to be a set-off to the song about “The Roast Beef of Old England,” which at that time was having some vogue in the North, through the presence of some English regiments in the city of Aberdeen. For an account of the song and its author, see Whistle Binkie, i., 246; also S. N. & Q., v., 171-188; vii., 40; and viii., 143.

997. Watson, James: Journalist and Publisher. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born in 1664. He settled in Edinburgh, and started The Scots Courant in 1705. He was very successful as a publisher, and died in 1722. See S. N. & Q., v., 56.

998. Watson, John Forbes, M.D., LL.D.: Medical Author. Born at Strathdon, he graduated M.A. at King’s College, 1847. He studied medicine, and entered the East India Company’s service. Here he was for a time Professor of Anatomy, and gained some distinction. He also published a work, in 1858, on The Development of the Resources of India. For notice of this writer, see Aberdeen Doctors, 298.

999. Watson, Robert A., D.D.: U.P. Divine and Author; also Minor Poet. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born in 1845. He was educated at the University of his native town, and afterwards studied for the ministry in the U.P. Theological Hall. He has been for many years one of the leading ministers of Dundee, and is author of several theological works, among which are, Gospels of Yesterday, 1888, which has reached a second edition, and a Commentary on Judges and Ruth, 1889. His wife is the lady who, under the nom de plume of “Deas Cromarty,” has gained distinction by her character sketches of Scottish divines, in the British Weekly. Further works from Mr. Watson’s pen are, The Book of Job, 1892; Numbers, 1894; and In the Apostolic Age, 1894; and a Biography of George Gilfillan of Dundee. Mr. Watson received the honorary degree of D.D. from his Alma Mater in 1891. He also figures in Edwards’s Modern Scottish Poets as one of the Aberdeen bards.

1000. Watson, John: Minor Poet. Born at Longside, Aberdeenshire, he was trained to railway work, and has been a clerk there. He published Lills and Lyrics in 1881. He is named and criticised in Modern Scottish Poets, edited by Edwards of Brechin.

1001. Watt, George, M.D.: For notice of this eccentric and benevolent medical man, see Aberdeen Doctors, p. 186. He was a native of Aberdeenshire, born in 1762.

1002. Watt, George, M.D. (Principal): Indian Administrator, Botanist, and Professor. Born in Oldmeldrum, 1851, he was educated at Aberdeen and Glasgow Universities, and graduated 1871-2. He acted for a time as assistant to Professor Dickie, Aberdeen, and in 1873 became Professor of Botany in Calcutta. In the same year he was elected F.L.S., and chosen a member of the Asiatic Society, Bengal. In 1874 he became Professor of Botany and Chemistry, Hooghly College, and in 1880 was nominated Principal of Kishnagar College. In 1881 he served as Naturalist to the Burma Manipur Expedition, and in 1883-4 was the officer in charge of the Central Office, Calcutta International Exhibition, and as such he catalogued and arranged the Commercial and Economic Collections. His catalogue, in seven vols., is an original treatise on the natural resources of India rather than a catalogue. In 1884 he was attached to the Revenue and Agricultural Department of the Government, and was sent over in 1886 to the Colonial and Indian Exhibition, London, in charge of the Commercial Imperial Court. Dr. Watt is author of several works, and has written many papers in the journals of the Linnaean and other societies. He has written a Dictionary of the Economic Products of India, in seven volumes.

1004. Watt, Mrs. M. R.: Minor Poet. Mother of 1002. She was born in 1819, at Old Meldrum, and figures in Modern Scottish Poets, Vol. I. For notice see that volume.

1004. Watt, Thomas: Teacher of Mathematics, Greenock, and grandfather of James Watt, the improver of the steam engine. He was born about the middle of the 17th century, and established in Greenock as a teacher of Mathematics, where he acquired some local reputation for scientific or engineering ability. He also taught Surveying and Navigation. He entered Marischal College in 1668, and is said to have been the son of a farmer who was killed in the wars of Montrose.

1005. Watt, John, D.D.: Established Church Divine and Ecclesiastical Leader. Born in Kintore, in the fifth decade of the present century, he graduated at Aberdeen University in 1862. He also gained the Ferguson Scholarship in both Classics and Mathematics. Ordained in 1867, he has for many years been the minister of Andersonton Parish Church, Glasgow. His Alma Mater has conferred on him the degree of D.D.

1006. Webster, George: Minor Poet. A native of Stuartfield, Old Deer, he was born on 30th August, 1846. Mr. Webster has obtained a place among the modern Scottish poets dealt with in the numerous volumes of Mr. Edwards of Brechin.

1007. Webster, John, LL.D., M.P.: Lord Provost and Public Man. Born in Aberdeen in 1819, he was educated at the University of his native town, and became an advocate there. Entering the public life of the town, he was Lord Provost from 1856 to 1859. He was chosen a member of the University Court, Aberdeen, and acted for years as the rector’s assessor. He was also an LL.D. of the University, a J.P., and Deputy-Lieutenant of Aberdeenshire. He was chosen in 1880 to represent his native city, and held the position of Liberal representative till the election of 1885. He died in 1891.

1008. White, John Forbes, LL.D.: Author and Art Critic. A native of Aberdeen, he entered Marischal College in 1844, graduating with honours in 1848. He was also first bursar. A successful merchant in Aberdeen and Dundee, he received the honorary title of LL.D. from Aberdeen University in 1886, and was a member of the University Court from 1880 to 1888. He published, in 1877, a treatise on How can Art be Best Introduced into Houses?

1009. Williamson, Peter: Adventurer and Author. Born 1729, at Hirnley, in Aboyne parish, kidnapped on Aberdeen quay, and carried to America and sold to a planter there. After many adventures he returned to Scotland in 1758, having previously, at York, published the story of his life. Tried for slander, he proved his veracity, and obtained 500 damages. Settling in Edinburgh, he became a bookseller, and published various pamphlets of his own. Conducting for a short time, in 1776, a journal called the Scott Spy. Williamson established the first penny post in Edinburgh. He also published a Directory. He died in 1799. See Kay’s Edinburgh Portraits.

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.—The writer of “Notable Men and Women of Aberdeenshire” has on several occasions pointed out what he considers to be discrepancies between his own information as to the birthplaces of persons included in his list, and that supplied by my Officers and Graduates of King’s College. See, for example, under Samuel Trail and Alexander Tyler in the February number. Permit me to point out that the discrepancies are imaginary. As explicitly stated in my book (pp. xi., 287), the earlier College Records of matriculation give merely the County of birth. It was not until Session 1832-33 that the Parish came to be entered.

P. J. ANDERSON.

ADMIRAL THOMAS GORDON.—In the December number of this journal I noticed Gordon’s capture, in July, 1704, of the Catherine, a vessel belonging to James Meyers of Rotterdam, M. Van Vrijbarge, the Dutch Ambassador at St. James’s, demanding the release of the vessel. According to the Treasury Papers, a litigation regarding it went on for ten years, for on June 10, 1714, Sir Nathaniel Lloyd was still corresponding with the Lord High Treasurer about the vessel. Another curious light is thrown on the Admiral by the Treasury Papers. He was a smuggler. The Commissioners of Customs reported (June 24, 1705-6) that Thomas Forrest, who had been “impress’d and carried on board the Chatham smack near St. Katherine Stairs,” had declared that Gordon (who was then commanding the Royal Mary of the Scots navy) had at several times at night put a store of brandy, wine, etc., at a place called Sally-port, close by Tinmouth Castle, which were landed by Colonel Henry Villers, governor of the castle, and brought to the castle by the latter’s own coach horses and servants.

J. M. BULLOCK.
THE SCOTS IN SWEDEN.

In that great book which some patriotic young Scot must yet write to supplement Hill Burton's Scot Abroad, an interesting chapter will deal with the Scots in Sweden. Two valuable contributions to this subject have already been made—one is the list of Scottish officers in the service of Gustavus Adolphus, which Maidment reprinted, with annotations, in the Spottiswoode Miscellany (Vol. II., 384). The other, which is less known, is a pamphlet issued from the Finnish Society's Press at Helsingfor in 1884, entitled, A Brief Sketch of the Scottish Families in Sweden and Finland; by Otto Donner, Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology in the University of Helsingfor. Professor Donner was present at the Tercentenary of Edinburgh University, and when he went home he wrote this pamphlet (of 47 pages) which bears on its outside cover the senseless title of Tercentenary of the University of Edinburgh.

The first Scot mentioned in the history of Finland was Henning Tait, who accompanied Birger Jarl, the founder of Stockholm, in the latter's military expedition to Finland, in 1250. Among the Scots bearing distinctively Scotch country names, mentioned by Professor Donner, are:

- Andreas Keith, Baron of Dingdenwell, who entered the Swedish army in 1569.
- Enald or Erland Forbes, descended from William Forbes of that Ilk, and Christina Gordon of Huntly (Huntly?); went to Finland from Mecklenburg, and married Catherine, daughter of Admiral Bjornram. They had
  - Arvid Forbes (born 1598), served with Gustavus, was created a Baron by the name of "Forbus" in 1602: died 1665.
  - Matthias Forbes, also in the Swedish army: died 1640: had
  - Ernest Forbes, also in the army: died 1677.
- Henrik Forbes, of the Thainston family, fell at the battle of Kerkholm, 1605. He had
- James Forbes, born at Aberdeen, 1580: raised a regiment. He was naturalised as a Swedish nobleman, and died at Lund in 1656. Among his descendants was
  - James Henrik Forbes, ensign in a Finnish regiment, died 1721: Alexander Magnus Forbes, lieutenant-colonel, died 1804. He had a son, Otto Magnus, major in the army, died 1831; and another son, Oriel Didic Forbes, born 1778; captain in the Finnish regiment of Chasseurs, died 1828. Both the latter served in the Finnish war of 1808. This race is now extinct.
- Captain Forbes, of the Thainston family, went from Dantzig to Finland, and became the progenitor of an extensive race of priests in Northern Finland during the 17th and 18th centuries, which still exists. A member of the family, Henrik Forbes, was burgomaster of Ullabor.
- William Barclay, "descended from Walter, baronet of Touei, born 1605, at Laggot, in Scotland, entered the Swedish service, and became Major-General, 1665." He died in 1678. His sons became judges. The family is now extinct.
- Thomas Fraser went to Sweden as an ensign in General James Spens's regiment. His descendants were distinguished soldiers in the Dutch army.
- Alexander Hay was a colonel in 1641. His descendants appear in the Swedish army down to 1790.
- George Irvine, Baron of Tulloch, died as a major, 1744.
- Frans Johnston, colonel, was in 1649-56 chief of the West Wiborg Regiment, in Finland. Patrick Ogilvie, born 1606. Had several descendants in the army. Family now extinct.
- John Spalding became a merchant, and was afterwards deputy burgomaster in Gottenburg. His son John was ennobled in 1678. The family has died out.
- Peter Udny, son of William Udny of Tillery, served as a corporal in the company of Nobles, in Ingermanland. He was naturalised as a Swede in 1647.
- John Urguhart was a lieutenant-colonel, and was naturalised in 1648.

HON. JAMES ROSE INNES OF CAPE TOWN.—
Mr. Anderson is quite right. The Hon. James Rose Innes of Cape Town is the son of James Rose Innes, C.M.G., for many years the Under Secretary for Native Affairs at the Cape, and grandson of Dr. James Rose Innes, M.A., L.L.D., the first Superintendent General of Education at the Cape. The last-mentioned was the son of William Innes, a valuer, near the Boat of Inverkeithny, on the Netherdale side of the Deveron, and was born there about 1799. He went out to the Cape about 80 years ago. His son, James, was born at the village of Uitenhage, Cape Colony. He has been Civil Commissioner and Resident Magistrate in several important towns, including Uitenhage and King William's Town. He also acted as Administrator of Griqualand, and, later, became Under Secretary for Native Affairs.
TOMBSTONE IN KENMORE CHURCH-YARD.

In the churchyard of Kenmore there lay, tilted lengthwise against the wall on the western side, a long stone slab, neglected and weather-beaten, and, being thickly clad with a close-grown lichen, every trace of inscription, if any existed, was completely hidden. Enquiries, however, elicited the information that it was believed to have belonged to the grave of a young bride, named Walker, who was drowned on the morn of her wedding, and was interred at the old parish churchyard at Inchadney, and that it had been removed from there to Kenmore at the time when the former spot was desecrated and added to the policies of Taymouth Castle, in the middle of last century. With the aid of the beadle, and a bottle of spirit of salt, the surface of the stone was carefully cleaned, and, notwithstanding the effects of the elements on its soft schistose nature, the following broken inscription was, at length, revealed:

ERE LYS TII C
LAWFUL DAUGHTER
WHO LIVED IN KINYAR IE AND DIED BRIDE TO BENIAMIN N
THE 6TH

JUNG MEN & MAIDS
HINK WEL ON THIS
E NOT LIFTED HIGH
E ASHES OF A VIRGIN
R BELO
TO ME DO TH LAY

A fault extending from the foot of the stone to the left-hand side accounted for the unsymmetrical lettering in the last two lines. The date was, unfortunately, indecipherable, but what was left of the inscription shewed that the tradition was borne out, so far. Kinyarie, or Kingharrie, i.e., the end of the garden, it may be mentioned, was situated opposite the Isle of Loch Tay, and is now embraced in Taymouth Castle gardens. The name, long since obsolete, was, however, not derived from these, but from the garden which had belonged to the priory in the island.

The story preserved in connection with the incident, is that the bride and her maids were crossing the Tay by the ferry at Kenmore—in which case the ceremony had, doubtless, been arranged to take place at the church there, and not at Inchadney, which would not have entailed any crossing, at all events on the bride's part—when, somehow, the boat was upset, and all went under. A shout arose from the banks, "Dive for the woman with the red shawl!" the bride having on an outer garment of that description. A swimmer dived and brought to the surface, not the bride, but one of her maids. How many perished, in addition to the bride, the story does not relate. I have heard that there is preserved, by someone in the district, a bible which was in the possession of one of the party, and which was recovered.

I am inclined to think that this tombstone is unique. Can another instance be cited of a bridegroom thus commemorating the death of his bride elect?

J. CHRISTIE.

BYRON'S AFFECTION FOR HIS MOTHER.—
This note, which occurs in Roger's Table Talk, is of peculiar interest at the present moment:—
"A lady, resident in Aberdeen, told me that she used to sit, in a pew of St. Paul's Chapel in that town, next to Mrs. Byron's: and that one morning she observed the poet (then seven or eight years old) amusing himself by disturbing his mother's devotions: he every now and again gently pricked with a pin the large round arms of Mrs. Byron, which were covered with white kid gloves. Professor Stuart of the Marischal College, Aberdeen, mentioned to me the following proof of Lord Byron's fondness for his mother. Georgy, and some other little boys, were one day allowed, much to their delight, to assist at a gathering of apples in the Professor's garden, and were rewarded for their labours with some of the fruit. Georgy, having received his portion of apples, immediately disappeared, and, on his return after barely an hour's absence, to the query where he had been, he replied that he had been 'carrying some apples to his poor, dear mother.'"
BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ABERDEEN PUBLICATIONS, 1897.

Of works by Aberdeen authors, and works relating to Aberdeen and the North of Scotland, published outside Aberdeen, the following are the principal:

Among educational works published during the year were the following:

Among more general (and less exclusively Aberdeen) works may be included:

the Duchess of Teck—was published by command of the Queen, the publishers being the Messrs. Blackwood.—A work on "The Making of Abbotsford and Incidents in Scottish History," by the Hon. Mrs. Maxwell Scott of Abbotsford (Adam and Charles Black, London), contained an article on "Barbour's Legends of the Saints," reprinted from the Dublin Review. This article re-told in prose the legend of St. Machar given metrically in Barbour's "Legends of the Saints," printed in a volume brought out by Herr C. Horstmann at Heilbronn in 1881, and quoted from in Mr. Walker's "Bards of Bon-Accord."—Mention may be made of a volume published in Paris—"L'Ecosse," by Marie Anne de Boet,—which contains descriptions of Braemar and Ballater.—"The New Testament and Its Writers," by Rev. Dr. M'Clymont, one of the volumes of the Guild Library, was translated into Welsh by Rev. D. E. Jenkins, Portmadoc. A translation of Part I. of Principal Grant's "Religions of the World"—another of the Guild series—was published at Paris and Geneva, the translator being Rev. Clement de Faye, formerly of Aberdeen, now one of the Lecturers in the Oratoire, Geneva.—Among books of local interest that "turned up" during the year was one from Montreal, "The Howes o' Buchan, and Far Awa," a volume of poems.

The principal topographical works (relating to the north) of the year were:

"Guide to Grantown and District," by W. Cramond, LL.D., Cullen (John Leng & Co., Dundee); and "Edzell Castle: Past and Present," by James G. Low (William Jolly, Montrose). Dr. Cramond also published a little work on "The Church of Keith" (reprinted from the Banffshire Herald, and published by John Mitchell, Keith). Mr. A. I. McConnochie contributed an article, "Round About Balmoral," to the Windsor Magazine, December, 1896; and an article on "Balmoral" (by Robert Anderson) appeared in the series on "The Queen's Homes" in the English Illustrated Magazine, July, 1897. The Cairngorm Club Journal for July contained accounts of the celebration of the Queen's Diamond Jubilee on the summits of Ben Muich Dhu, Cairngorm, and Lochnagar. Messrs. W. and A. K. Johnston issued a map (sheet 16 of the new three-mile-to-the-inch Map of Scotland), embracing most of Aberdeenshire, all Kincardine, and much of Banff. With the Cairngorm Club Journal for January was issued the first section of a map of "The Horizon from Ben Muich Dhu," prepared by Mr. Alexander Copland.

Professor Ramsay, Aberdeen, contributed articles on "The Childhood of Horace" and "The Meeting of Horace and Virgil" to Macmillan's Magazine for October and November. Mr. John Adams, of the Free Church Training College, furnished a paper on "The Relation of the School Studies to Morar Training," to the Year Book of the National Herbart Society for 1897, published at the University of Chicago. Herr Hein, Aberdeen, wrote two articles on "The Scottish Educational System" to a German quarterly—The Magazine of Foreign Education.

A number of "The Grammar School Magazine" was issued in March. The first (and only) number of "College Chimes," a University magazine, edited by J. S. Purdy, appeared in March—a production of 20 pages, without any notification of publisher or printer. Northern Life, a "comic" weekly, begun in 1896, ended with the issue for 30th March, being No. 13 of Vol. II. (the company promoting it went into liquidation). Several numbers of "Parsi菲尔," described as "A Magazine for lovers of Music, Art, and Literature," and edited by Friedrich Eckmann, appeared during the year. "Wee Willie Winkie," the children's magazine, edited by Lady Marjorie Gordon, aided by her mother, the Countess of Aberdeen, came to an end in September, when a special "Souvenir Number" was issued. The Aberdeen Catholic Herald was enlarged in the end of March, being extended to 20 pages, containing 120 columns. A leaflet, issued on behalf of the sufferers by the loss of the steamer "State of Georgia," contained a short poem on the disaster by George Hay Wilson. A musical drama, "Mains Again," by Mr. Gavin Greig, Whitehill, New Deer, was produced at New Deer on 18th May—it was a kind of sequel to "Mains's Wool," produced in 1894.

From the purely biographical point of view, mention must not be omitted of the suspension of this journal (Scottish Notes and Queries) in July, and its resumption in September, under circumstances fully explained in the respective issues for these two months. Along with its re-publication was resumed the publication, by Messrs. A. Brown & Company, Booksellers, of "Brown's Book-Stall," No. 37 appearing in September (No. 36 was published in December, 1894). HUNTLING, ABERDEENSHIRE.—An interesting and ancient coin has just been placed in the Museum of the Brander Library here. It is a large and well-preserved specimen, and comes from the banks of the Nile. It was minted two and twenty centuries ago, so it was already a very old coin at the time when Joseph and Mary, his wife, went down into Egypt. The Royal image is clear and well defined; but the inscription in Greek letters, "Pelemaioy Basisioe," is only faintly traceable. King Ptolemy I., to whom the coin is ascribed, gained Egypt within two years of the death of Alexander the Great. The coin is about the size of the copper twopenny of George III., which may also be seen at the library. The Egyptian coin appears to have been formed by cementing the two faces to a third disc of metal, which forms the core.

MRS. LEE AND THE GORDONS.

In the Free Press of July 8, 1898, I dealt at some length with the “surprising adventures of two Aboyne Gordons,” who eloped with Mrs. Lee, the natural daughter of Lord Le Despencer, by a Mrs. Barry. I have just come across some interesting references to Mrs. Barry, for in the Town and County Magazine of 1774 the whole story of his lordship’s entanglement with her and portraits of the pair are given. Mrs. Barry, it appears, was the “lady friend” of a Ludgate Hill mercer, and Despencer engaged her attentions, after a great deal of trouble, through the offices of the widow of one of his tenants, a Mrs. B——. So little is known about his lordship, that I venture to quote the Town and County Magazine, which is not very accessible nowadays. The passage forms, at the same time, an excellent refutation to those good, but ill-informed, people, who chatter about the “degradation” of modern journalism:—

His lordship, as a professed admirer of the fair sex, has constantly ingratiated himself with all the celebrated demi-reps and filles de joie upon the bon ton. There was an early intimacy formed between him and the celebrated Con. Philips, and there is reason to believe he was, through her, for a time the chief support of the renowned Tartuffe, who afterwards married a duchess, but who at that time was Constantia’s gentleman pensioner. When Lucy Cowper came into vogue, and drove to Ranelagh in a chariot with Charlotte Hayes, he thought it incumbent on him as a bel-esprit to be in the circle of Lucy’s acquaintance, and occasionally to quote her bon mots and repartees. No sooner had Kitty Fisher established her reputation as the most polite and elevated woman of pleasure, than his lordship paid his respects to her, and was soon enrolled in the list of her ardent admirers. Lady Ech——n, then Miss R——h, did not escape his observation; and a certain knight of the Bath, deceased, has frequently dined at his lordship’s expense without knowing it. Notwithstanding these fashionable alliances, his lordship found far more substantial bliss in rustic simplicity, and the widow of one of his tenants proved a very useful matron to him, in the negotiation of his amorous business. Mrs. B. exerted all her abilities in promoting his lordship’s pleasures.

Another curious light is thrown on his lordship in a collection of bogus epitaphs, which you will find in the Abbey of Kilkhampton [that is, Westminster Abbey], or Monumental Records for the year 1880, the sixth edition of which appeared in London, 1780. “In a private chapel belonging to the family, consecrated to Saint Francis,” this inscription is said to occur:—

To the merry memory of [Francis] [Ashwood] Lord [Le D[espencer], the most careless and perhaps the most facetious libertine of his age. He was never known to have corrected one error, or to have been reclaimed from one vice he had once determined to indulge. His residence in town and country was a rendezvous for the choicest geniuses of the reign he lived in. Having no religion of his own, he never enquired into the principles of others: and, being unable to hit on any moral system thoroughly adapted to his taste, he considered the manners of every man, whether [Willis], Lord [Sandwich, or P——l Wh——d, as unexceptional. His notions were peculiar to himself, and originated from a species of good humour highly commendable, though it had not obtained, universally, with the less eccentrical part of mankind. He built abbeys, consecrated churches, and dug caverns, for the sake of mirth and good fellowship: and having lived to see his dearest schemes completed, departed this life on the 17th of Jan., 178—, in strong convulsions, occasioned (as his domestics report) by the agitations of his life on hearing that Lord Sandwich proposed taking the veil, and passing the remainder of his days (by express command of his Holiness) in a Roman Catholic nunnery.

As to the notorious elopement of Mrs. Lee with the Gordons, in 1804, I have just come across a curious reference in the Jermingham Letters, edited for Bentley (1896) by Mr. Egerton Castle. Writing to Lady Bedingfield, Mr. Edward Jermingham, her uncle (Vol. 1., pp. 233-4), says (the letter is undated):—

Mrs. Lee inhabits the house just opposite Sir William’s [i.e., his brother, Jermingham, in Bolton Row, Piccadilly]. She appears sometimes at the window. George [his nephew] expected to take a good view of her yesterday in case she was to quit her house to attend the examination in Bond Street. It is an odd adventure, and how it will terminate is not yet foreseen. The maid at Bolton Row says Mrs. Lee screamed in the most vehement manner when the Gordons carried her off. Nothing else is Talked about but this perplexed unaccountable story. Buonaparte will be jealous of Mrs. Lee. I dined in a French set yesterday, and their observations upon this romance of the day were entertaining. The dinner was at Mr. Coleman’s: it was intended as a little fête in honour of Monsr. Bourbon’s daughter, who not long ago married a French gentleman [M. le Comte de Chaumont-Quilty], but the bride and bridegroom were not well, and of the ten virgins we had only two, the Duchess de Pierre and Cary Verron, whose lamps are not very bright. . . . .

The tense of the conversation took its course from Mrs. Lee, and, as it flowed, it imbibed a tincture from every person’s remarks till it sparkled with wit and gayety.

THE DUNBAR FAMILY.

I HAVE recently come across a batch of old manuscripts dealing with this family, and hereewith present the gist of them:—

John Dunbar, bailie in Cullen, was married to Jane Ord. They had a son, William Dunbar of Nether Buckie, born July 17, 1720. He was named after William Gordon of Farkeane, William Dunbar of Dykends, William Ord in Cullen, and William Robertson, schoolmaster. The witnesses to the baptism were William Thomson, William Ord in Craighead, Elspet Ord, Ann Dunbar, Ann [Keith ?], and William Dunbar, brother to the child's father, John Dunbar. William Dunbar married Margaret Gordon (who died April 30, 1785) on Dec. 18, 1756. He was alive in 1806. They had Margaret, born 27th Sept., 1757; mar. Alex. Forsyth, merchant, Huntly, who died before 1806.

Jean, born 6th Oct., 1758; died before 1806.

John, born 24th Aug., 1759.

Jean, born 3rd Sept., 1761. On 20th April, 1782, she contracted to marry Rev. George Donaldson, minister of Kennethmont, her father giving her a dowry of £200. They had a daughter, Margaret Donaldson, married in 1814 to John Masson, writer, Edinburgh.

Jane Donaldson, married Alexander Burgess, "late of Demerara, now residing in Rathven, 1816."

William, born 12th Sept., 1762.

Janet, born 16th Dec., 1764. She married on Dec. 23, 1793, Rev. Abercromby Gordon, minister of Banff, and died 28th May, 1824.

Elispet, born 10th Nov., 1765.

James, born 2nd Jan., 1768.

Archibald, born 24th July, 1771. He was a W.S., Edinburgh.

"CHINESE" GORDON'S ORIGIN.—I thank Mr. Christie for his interesting note on the mysterious origin of "Chinese" Gordon. Meanwhile, let me note that James Gordon of Terpersie, who went to Jamaica, is described by Lord Adam Gordon (in a list of people he met in a trip through America: printed in the Genealogist, Vol. 14) to have been a mahogany cutter there in 1764.

KING'S COLLEGE TOWER.—This tower was evidently modelled on St. Nicholas lantern steeple at Newcastle. A description of the latter structure, and an excellent picture of it, are given in Mr. John Strachan's new book, Northumbrian Masonry (pp. 26-8, 44).

THE MOWAT FAMILY.—In the "old Scottish Manuscript," quoted in the Genealogical Magazine of February, these items occur under date 1676:—

Takin out. Bastardie of unquhill William Douglas, tailyeour at London, to Elizabeth Mowatt, his relict, under the King's hand.

Composition 10 merks.

Takin out. Presentacione to the said Elizabeth Mowat to the lands of Chanrahill, and also ane yeerele annaul rent of 180 merks out of the lands called Haughs of Ashogill, both holdin of Mr. William Clark, Doctor of Medicine.

Composition 10 merks.

SCOTS FREE MASONRY.—A good deal about the Scot as a Freemason will be found in a book called Northumbrian Masonry, and the Development of the Craft in England, which Mr. John Strachan, Q.C., Grand Registrar of England, has just published through Brother George Kennery of Great Queen Street, London. In his second and third chapters he deals with Northumbrian and Border Castles. The first reference to a lodge in Scotland occurs at Aberdeen in 1483. Mr. Strachan's description of the introduction of masonry to Newcastle (during the Scots' occupation of it in 1641) is very interesting.

THE FAMILIES OF GRANT, KEITH, AND GORDON.—Quot ing again from an "old Scottish manuscript," as transcribed in the January number of the Genealogical Magazine, we find the following:—

Confirmation of ane Charter granted be ye decest James Grant of Freuchie of the toune and lands of Easter and Wester Muldaries to Capitaine James Rosse of Muldaries, to be held in feu of the said decest James Grant, together with the Charter and other rights made of the said lands and uthers forimner to the said James Grant and his predecessors and authors, be ye Earle of Rothes and others, thair superiors.

Composition 40 merks.

Gift of ane yearlie pension of 200 l., sterling, to Charles, Earle of Aboyne, the first terms payment is at Witsunday, 1676, under the King's hand.

Warrant for a new gift of the office of Knight-Marshal of Scotland to Sir John Keith, and John Keith, his second lawfull sone, with ane yearlie pensione of 400 l. sterling, the first terms payment at Witsunday, 1676.

THE GORDON HIGHLANDERS.—During 1898 two melodramas, written round the Gordon Highlanders, were produced, namely:—

The Ladder of Life; or, Gordons to the Front.

Our British Empire; or, the Gordon Highlanders.

In the latter, Piper Findlater is one of the characters. A new game, played with five Gordon Highlanders (in lead) and a piper and four Indian soldiers (dedicated to Piper Findlater), was issued at Christmas.

1220. FISHERS ON THE NORTH-EAST COAST.—There is the man with reddish curly hair, and freckled face, and the man with swarthy complexion, and long, black, lanky hair, hanging straight down. A Norse origin will be ascribed to the fair man, but what of the dark man? Is he descended from the Lapps and Finns, the Dhu-galls, or black strangers, who accompanied the Danes?

1221. "THE STANG OF THE TRUMP."—This phrase, which is often used in referring to one who is the most important member of a connection, I have always understood to be in allusion to the steel tongue of the Jew's harp. Jamieson, in his Scottish Dictionary, under "Stang," does not give this explanation, and I have not found it elsewhere. Any light?

1222. A LOST GENEALOGY OF THE GORDONS.—I shall be greatly indebted to any reader who can tell me what has become of a manuscript, "Genealogie of the Familie of Gordon, Collected by R. M., Anno Dom. 1707," which was in the Skene Library when Joseph Robertson edited the Diary of Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries for the old Spalding Club in 1859 (see note on page 32). The Duke of Fife tells me that it is not now in the Skene Library, nor was it sold among the books from that collection dispersed the other year at Sotheby's. Where is it?

1223. "WEATHER GA."—The fine weather of Sunday, 12th February, was characterised by a friend of mine as "A Weather Ga." Can any readers of S. N. & Q. inform me what is the derivation of the Ga? Is it a Scottishism of the word Gap?

1224. DR. WM. HAMILTON OF CALCUTTA.—I venture to ask your help in tracing out the early history of Dr. Hamilton, a well-known figure in the early history of Calcutta, who went with an embassy to Delhi in the years 1715-1717, cured the Emperor Farrukhsiyar of an obitute complaint, and procured great privileges for the English in consequence. The accompanying printed extract from a paper I read on the subject before the Asiatic Society of Bengal, some months ago, will show what sources of information I have consulted, and how much I had ascertained. If you could in any way help me to proceed further, you would confer a great obligation not only upon me, but on all Dr. Hamilton's countrymen out here, who, I am sure, take much interest in this distinguished Scotchman.

C. R. Wilson,
Prof. of Philosophy,
Presidency Col., Calcutta.

[For the personal history of Dr. Hamilton, Prof. Wilson has consulted the minister of Bothwell and the living representatives of the Hamilton family; the Register House authorities, Edinburgh; the Lyon Office of the College of Arms; the Royal Colleges of Physicians and of Surgeons of Scotland; and the Universities of St. Andrews, Edinburgh, and Glasgow. Besides this, the archives of the India Office have been searched. The following facts have been gleaned therefrom, viz.:—That Hamilton was a cadet of the noble family of the Hamiltons of Dalzell, and was the second son of John Hamilton of Boggs, in Bothwell parish, Lanarkshire. The whole of his early history is a blank. The earliest authentic information of him is held to be on 12th Nov., 1709, when he signed a receipt for £7 for his services as surgeon of the frigate Sherborne. Once settled in India, Dr. Hamilton's career and services are easily traced. It is more particularly of his early history and educational career that information—

1. The date and place of his birth; 2. The place or places where he spent his boyhood; 3. Where he was educated; and 4. How he became connected with the Sherborne.]

1225. CUMMING.—Sir John Cumming, a Colonel in H.E.I.C.S., died at St. Helena 26th August, 1786, on returning to England, "having lately commanded an army in Oude." Can any one say from which family of Cumming he was descended? Besides a daughter, Caroline, married (1792) to James Dewar of Vogrie, he had a son, who became Sir Henry Cumming, and died 1857, and a grandson, Admiral Sir Arthur Cumming, G.C.B., who died 1893. Sir John is said to have been the last Knight Banneret.

* A facsimile of this signature is given in the print, but it is perfectly obvious that it reads not W., but J. Hamilton!
4. Rev. Samuel Langdon, D.D., was born in Boston, Mass., 24th Jan., 1733, and graduated at Harvard in 1740. He was present at the capture of Louisburg in 1744, and pastor of the Congregational North Church, Portsmouth, 1747 to 1774, when he became President of Harvard. On account of his political and religious views, he was made conspicuous to the British party, he had to resign the presidency in 1780. Next year he became pastor at Hampton Falls, N.H., and took a prominent place in all the popular movements. He was a learned scholar and theologian, and received the degree of D.D. from Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1760 (Rec. Mar. Coll., ii., 84). He died at Hampton Falls, Nov. 29, 1785. His published writings were the Summary of Christian Faith and Practice (1768); Observations on the Revelations (1791); Remarks on the Leading Sentiments of Dr. Hopkin's System of Doctrines (1792); and Sermons (Drake, *Dict. 6. Sir John Wentworth, Bart., L.L.D., Governor of New Hampshire, and afterwards of Nova Scotia, was son of Mark Hunking Wentworth, councillor of New Hampshire, and born in Portsmouth, N.H., August 9, 1737. He took his degree of B.A. at Harvard, 1755, and that of M.A. in 1758. Through the influence of the Marquis of Rockingham, he was appointed governor of New Hampshire serving from 1770 to 1775, and being at the same time surveyor-general of the king's woods in New America. In 1773 he had to leave for England on account of his loyalty. In 1792 he became governor of Nova Scotia, and returned to the post of surveyor of the king's woods. It was during his term of office that the Duke of Kent resided in Nova Scotia, and it probably was through this royal influence that he was created a Baronet in 1795. He received the degree of L.L.D. from Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1764 (Rec. Mar. Coll., iii., 97; King's Coll. Grad., 113, 114). D.C.L., Oxford, 1765, and L.L.D. from Dartmouth in 1773. He died at Halifax, N.S., April 8, 1820, and at his son's death the baronetcy became extinct (Appleton, Cyclop. Am. Biog., vi., 341, with a portrait; Drake, Am. Biog.; Cent. Cyclop., 1055; Eaton, Ch. Nova. Scot., 267, 296-301; Gen. Cat., Dartmouth College, 144).

7. Rev. William Walter, D.D., born Oct. 7, 1727, was eldest son of Rev. Nathaniel Walter, pastor of the Second Church, Marblehead, Mass., and graduated at Harvard, B.A. in 1756, and M.A. in 1759. In 1764 he went to England, and was ordained by the Bishop of London, along with Abraham Jarvis, second Bishop of Pennsylvania. On his return to Boston, Mass., he was installed rector of Trinity Church, but in 1776 he had to resign his charge, and went with Gen. Howe and many others to Halifax, N.S. He became rector at Shelburne, and afterwards was chaplain to a British regiment in New York, but in 1791 he returned to Massachusetts, and was rector of Christ Church, Boston, where he ministered until his death, Dec. 5, 1800. He was "a remarkably handsome man, tall and well proportioned. When in the street he always wore a long blue cloth cloak over his cassock and gown: a full-bottomed wig, dressed and powdered: a three-cornered hat: knee-breaches of fine black cloth, with black silk hose: and square-quatersed shoes, with silver buckles. His countenance was always serene: his temper always cheerful." (Quoted in Eaton, Ch. Nova. Scot., 181-2.) He received the degree of D.D. from King's College, Aberdeen, in 1784 (King's Coll. Grad., 103; Appleton, Cyclop. Am. Biog., vi., 341; Drake, Dict. Am. Biog., 902; Eaton, Ch. Nova. Scot., 139 seq., 182 seq.; Digest of S. P. C. R., 113, 864).

Sir John Cope and the Rebellion of 1745. By the late General Sir Robert Cadell, K.C.B. William Blackwood and Sons, Edinburgh, 1898. [Sm. 4to. 12 + 282. Price 10/6.]

This goodly volume is a consequence of an article in Blackwood's Magazine in 1804, entitled "Side Lights on the Battles of Preston and Falkirk," which General Cadell conceived to do scant justice to Sir John Cope. He thereupon resolved to undertake what is confessedly a vindication of that unhappy General, who has suffered criticism at most hands. For this General Cadell was pre-eminently qualified, not only by his military training and knowledge, his intimate acquaintance of the locality, but also by his possession of the judicial faculty. The author, unfortunately, did not live to finish the work he had compiled with such loving care, and his brother has had to complete and set it through the press. The principal grounds on which it is attempted to reverse the general opinion as to Cope's incapacity are that, from first to last, he was not really furnished with men and means sufficient for the occasion. Although he early saw the gravity of the situation, he could not induce the Government to realize the danger in time. When he finally marched north it was with an ill-equipped and under-officed force, and an inadequate commissariat to meet a foe that gathered in strength as they marched. Cope's determination not to try conclusions with the Highlanders at Dalwhinnie seems only an act of well-advised prudence. For the rebels, however, it was both a military gain and a moral advantage. They pressed on to the capital, with premonitions of success. The treason of the Provost... in yielding Edinburgh without a blow was another contributory factor to Sir John’s defeat, but it was one for which he could in no way be held responsible. It completely demoralized those volunteers who would have been an invaluable aid to Sir John when he finally reached Leith with his little army. As nearly as can be reckoned, when the battle was set, the rebels outnumbered the royalists by two to one. The nature of the action is well known. Cope’s personal part in it has been minimized, but the undoubted testimony is that he was all but ubiquitous in the field, but the wild onslaught of the Highlanders, if not irresistible, overcame all opposition, and countervailed all Sir John’s efforts. The tale is told with great moderation of statement, and, read dispassionately, must go far to modify the verdict passed on the Royalist commander, who was more sinned against than sinning. The book is handsomely got up, and is accompanied by two excellent maps.

The Good Regent: a Chronicle Play. By Prof. Sir T. Grainger Stewart, M.D., LL.D. Blackwood. 6/-.

SIR THOMAS has a thesis to maintain in this play. He desires to break a lance with Andrew Lang, who would class the Regent Moray with “Twelve Bad Men”; with Sir John Skelton, whose doubt as to Moray’s character leans in the same direction; and with Froude, who believed in the Regent’s honesty, but yet discovered flaws. Sir Thomas’s thesis is that Moray was a patriot of the truest type; was faithful to his sister, in spite of much to destroy his loyalty, until he was convinced that further support of her would endanger the State; that all his “trockings” with the English were inspired by the same fervent patriotism; that he was a Protestant by conviction, and not from a regard to the spoils of the Church; and that in his private character Moray was a humble Christian, with a high sense of duty, and an intensely devotional nature. The action of the play extends from 1552 to January, 1570, and includes five acts of 34 scenes in all. The locale flits between France and various places in Scotland, and the dramatis personae number 43. The blank verse in which the play is written has some fine lines in it, but is not immaculate in forma. One or two “funny” scenes are introduced which are not funny, and, besides, are incongruous. If something was needed to relieve the sobriety of the bulk of the play, Scotch of the present day was hardly the proper medium. Several characters stand out vividly. Queen Mary is made no better than she is called; Darnley is exposed in all his weakness; Lethington is shown as ambitious and unscrupulous; Bothwell appears as the abandoned scoundrel, and Moray wins admiration by his nobility and determination. Whether the Moray of The Good Regent is the Moray of history is another matter. Decision on that point depends on one’s historical bias and acuteness for psychological phenomena. At any rate Sir Thomas’s book is pleasant reading, and again proves that the author has a fine literary taste.

J. Calder Ross.

Dr. Cramond has, in his newly-issued Municipal Life in Elgin in the 16th Century, added another to the goodly cairn he has raised of books illustrative of the life led by our ancestors in by-gone times. In real historic interest these selections are in no way behind those he has culled before. They are modestly got up, and at prices charged are certainly not “put past the power of poor men’s purses to purchase them.”

(Killed 1578).

ALTHOUGH very little is known of this laird, his descendants are among the few Gordons of Gight who can be traced down to the present day, when they are represented by the Earl of Home, the Earl of Cork, the Earl of Jersey, the Duke of Northumberland, the Marquis of Bristol, and many other noble families. George Gordon was the son of the second laird, and succeeded his father in 1546. In 1547 he appeared, with some other lairds, on behalf of Lord Gray, who brought a dispute with Lord Ruthven before the Privy Council. In October, 1562, he, along with the lairds of Haddo, Abereldie, and Lesmoir (all Gordons) were ordered to keep within the burgh of Edinburgh, and "remain within the same and four miles thereabout till freed by the Queen's Majesty." He seems to have been the Gordon who, in March, 1564, was charged (with eighteen other men) with the "crewale invasicion" of William Con of Auchry. He took a leading part in the great Gordon-Forbes feud, conducted under the direction of Adam Gordon of Auchindown (the notorious Edom o' Gordon), son of the 4th Earl of Huntly. In the famous ballad of the burning of the Forbes stronghold at Towie (1571), the imprisoned lady is made to express a preference for Gight. Although she declines to come down to Edom, she declares:

But gi'e me Cluny, Craig, or Gight,
Or gi'e me young Lesmoir,
And I'll gi'e owre my bonny hoose
To ony o' the four.

In the beginning of 1574, according to Sir Robert Gordon of Gordonstown's history, Gight went across to France with Edom o' Gordon and six other gentlemen, and was entertained by Charles IX. They were followed by Arthur Forbes, son of Lord Forbes, who attempted to assassinate Auchindown. The French king sent out his guards, who, with the aid of the Gordons, killed Forbes. Auchindown recovered (dying in 1580). Gight had to pay the penalty of the act, for late in 1578, or early in 1579, he fought a duel with Alexander Forbes, the younger of Towie, as the result of "sum contentious words" which "happenit to fall out" between the two "in presens of his Kingis Majestie." The duel took place on the shore of Dundee, and both the combatants fell. The Privy Council attempted to stop the feud in 1579, but it was still going merrily on as late as 1587, when the Council again intervened. In 1576 Gight had been warded at Linlithgow as bail for his cousin, William, afterwards fifth laird, who had murdered Thomas Fraser of Strichen, and whom he sheltered.
This laird seems to have been an intimate friend of the ennobled Gordons. In 1548 he witnessed the contract of marriage between John, Master of Forbes, and Lord Huntly's daughter. In 1568, when he is described as "knycht," he is also a witness, appearing with George Gordon, "appearand" of Gight. As he was succeeded by his uncle John, it would seem as if he had had a son George who died before him. I must note also that George Gordon, designed "of Schives" (the old name of Gight), was one of the witnesses, in March, 1530, to the marriage contract between Lord Huntly and Lady Elizabeth Keith (Spalding Club Miscellany). But, as the previous laird did not die till 1546, I do not understand why George should have been described "of Schives" sixteen years before, except that (as the edition of the Privy Council Register plainly indicates) the names of these Gight Gordons were frequently mis-transcribed. Again, Cullen in his quaint Diary notes that Elspet Gordon, "Lady Schives," "deparrit" in Aberdeen in 1587. Here, again, I am at sea, for the second laird's widow was Elizabeth, and was alive in 1593.

Gight married Agnes Beaton (she was alive in 1597), natural daughter of Cardinal David Beaton (murdered 1546), and Mariota Ogilvy, described in the Great Seal as Lady of Melgem, and in G. E. C.'s Peerage as sister of Lord Ogilvy. Mrs. Gordon had a whole sister, Margaret Beaton, who married the 13th Earl of Crawford. Mrs. Gordon (before 1585) married Sir Patrick Gordon of Auchindown, Sheriff-Depute of Aberdeenshire (killed at the battle of Glenlivat, 1594), the brother of Edom o' Gordon (her first husband's old friend), and of the fifth Earl of Huntly. There was no issue by this marriage. In 1597 Mrs. (who had become Lady) Gordon, complained to the Privy Council that in December, 1595, John Mulwart and Callum McCandrache had stolen "from her at night furth of her lands at Inach, 66 wedders." Thus the Gights and the Huntlys were once more brought together. Gight left only one child, a daughter, Elizabeth, and it is from her that so many noblemen of to-day are descended. These descents are so curious that I venture to work out a few of them. This daughter, Elizabeth Gordon was under the guardianship of her step-father, Patrick Gordon of Auchindown, (Great Seal) until she married Sir George Home, High Treasurer of Scotland. He was created Baron Hume of Berwick in 1604, and advanced to the Earlom of Dunbar in 1605. He attended King James VI. into England, and was made K.G. in 1608. He died suddenly at Whitehall, on January 29, 1612. Some say he was poisoned, which ought just to have been Miss Gordon's luck, for her father and her step-father had been killed and her maternal grandfather murdered. Lord Dunbar left no male issue, and his earldom became dormant. His barony seems to have vested in his two daughters and co-heirs, Anne and Elizabeth. These were as under:—

The Earls of Home.

Lady Anne Home married Sir James Home of Coldingknows, and had

James Home, who succeeded to the Earldom of Home as third Earl in 1633. He married Lady Jane Douglas, daughter of Lord Morton, grand-daughter of the fifth Earl Marischal, and was succeeded by his three sons in turn. It is a curious coincidence that three of his cousins should have succeeded each other as Earls of Suffolk (see below).

Alexander (Home), 4th Earl of Home (d. 1674).

Charles (Home), 6th Earl of Home (d. Aug., 1706). He had

Alexander (Home), 7th Earl of Home (d. 1727). He had

William (Home), 8th Earl of Home (d. 1761).

Alexander (Home), 9th Earl of Home (d. 1786). He had

Alexander (Home), 10th Earl of Home (d. 1841). He had

Casparick (Home), 11th Earl of Home (d. 1881). He had

Charles (Home), 12th and present Earl of Home. Born 1834.

The Earls of Suffolk.

Lady Elizabeth Home, a second grand-daughter of the third Laird of Gight, married, in 1612, Theophilus Howard, 2nd Earl of Suffolk (died 1640). She died in 1633, at the Tower in Greenwich Park, of which her husband (who died in 1640) was keeper. She had four sons and five daughters. Her immediate male issue became extinct in 1745, on the death of the 10th Earl of Suffolk (when the next Earl succeeded, as descending from her husband's brother, the second son of the 1st Earl). Before going into the Suffolks in the male line, I may refer to Lady Elizabeth's daughters, still represented.

Elizabeth married the 4th Earl of Northumberland, and became the grandmother of Lady Elizabeth Percy, who was married three times before she was sixteen, and who was dealt with at some length by the present writer in the English Illustrated Magazine of March, 1898. The Earldom of Northumberland became extinct (1670) in Lady Elizabeth's father, the 5th Earl. Her son, Algernon Seymour, by her third husband (the Duke of Somerset), was created Earl of Northumberland in 1749. The latter's daughter married Sir Hugh Smithson, who was succeeded to the Earldom, in 1750, and was created Duke of Northumberland in 1766. This Smithsonised Percy was the ancestor of the present Duke.

Margaret married the 1st Earl of Orrery, who is represented to-day by the Earl of Cork.

Frances married Sir Edward Villiers, and became the mother of the 1st Earl of Jersey, and the ancestor of the present Earl.

In order to place clearly the descent of Lady Elizabeth Home's sons (who succeeded each other), I re-arrange them thus:

George (Howard), 4th Earl of Suffolk (1625-1691), succeeded his brother, the 3rd Earl (see below).

Henry (Howard), 5th Earl of Suffolk (1627-1709), had

Henry (Howard), 6th Earl of Suffolk (1670-1718), had

Charles (Howard), 7th Earl of Suffolk (1693-1722). He was succeeded by his uncle, Edward (Howard), 8th Earl of Suffolk (1671-1731), who was succeeded by his brother, Charles (Howard), 9th Earl of Suffolk (1675-1735). He had Henry (Howard), 10th Earl of Suffolk (1706-1745), who exhausted Lady Elizabeth Home's male issue. I now return to the eldest son.

The Barons Howard de Walden.

James (Howard), 3rd Earl of Suffolk (1620-1689), died without male issue, his Earldom going to his brother (as above), and his barony of Howard de Walden falling into abeyance between his daughters.

Lady Essex Howard married the 1st Baron Griffin, but her male issue became extinct in 1799, when her right to the Barony of Howard de Walden went to the issue of her sister,

Lady Elizabeth Howard (1656-1681), married Sir Thomas Felton, Bart., and had

Elizabeth Felton, married, in 1695, John (Hervey), 1st Earl of Bristol, and had

Lord Hervey, died before his father, and had and Earl of Bristol (1721-1775).

3rd Earl of Bristol (1724-1779).

Frederick Augustus (Hervey), 4th Earl of Bristol and Bishop of Derry, whose daughter Elizabeth married, as his second wife, the 5th Duke of Devonshire (see Vere Foster's Two Duchesses). He had

Elizabeth Hervey, married Charles Ellis, who was created Baron Seaford in 1826, and by him had

Charles Augustus (Ellis), 2nd Baron Seaford, who got the Barony of Howard de Walden on petition, 1806. He had Frederick (Ellis), the 7th and present Baron Howard de Walden.

Frederick William (Hervey), the second son of the Bishop, was created Marquis of Bristol in 1826. He died in 1859, having had

Frederick (Hervey), 2nd Marquis of Bristol (1800-1864). He had

JOHN GORDON, THE FOURTH LAIRD OF GIGHT

The Gight family had been so unlucky in the matter of male issue that the estates reverted, in the person of the fourth laird, to a son of the first, for the third laird, who left an only daughter, was succeeded by his uncle, John Gordon, who had held the lands of Ardmachar. He married Margaret, daughter of James Gordon II. of Lesmoir, by Margaret, daughter of James Ogilvy of Deskford. He seems to have been a quiet sort of man, probably because, being a younger son, he did not think it incumbent on him to do more than cultivate his small holding of Ardmachar. But he seems to have taken part in the great Keith feud which the Gordons waged, for, according to the Diary of George Clark, schoolmaster of Deer, quoted in Gordon's Scots Affairs, the lairds of Lesmoir and Gight, and Captain (John?) Gordon, the latter's son, slew John Keith of Cryallie. The Keith feud, as I shall show later, was going on merrily as late as 1597, when the Town Council of Aberdeen intervened. He died before 1593, in which year his widow granted (January 7) a letter of reversion of the lands of Kirkhill, containing the sum of 3000 merks, in favour of John Leslie, 10th of Balquhain (see Leslie's History of the Leslie Family). Calderwood says that "Gicht" was killed at the battle of Glenlivat (October, 1594). But this Gicht was neither the fourth nor the fifth laird. Patrick Grant of Rothiemurcus was caution (in March, 1593) for Ardmachar's widow not to help the Catholic earls. The fourth laird had four sons, and possibly seven daughters, as follows:—

William Gordon succeeded, as fifth laird of Gicht.

John Gordon was admitted a Burgess of Guild of Aberdeen, September 17, 1582. He is remembered by reason of his share in the murder of the Bonny Earl of Moray, at Donibristle, in Fife-shire, 7th February, 1592. The Earl of Huntly and his brother-in-law were commissioned to arrest the Earl of Bothwell, who escaped to Bute. One of his partisans, the Earl of Moray, took refuge at Donibristle. There he was besieged by Huntly and a party of forty Gordons, including William and John Gordon. Huntly sent the latter to summon Moray from the castle, Gordon was fired on and mortally wounded. Huntly then fired the castle, and Moray fled with with Patrick Dunbar, Sheriff of Moray. The pair were pursued and murdered among the rocks by William Gordon and the laird of Cluny. Calderwood declares that John ("Captain") Gordon was left for dead on the field. "His hat, his purse, his gold, his weapons were taken by one of his own company: his shanks were pulled off. He was taken into the Earle of Moray's mother [the Baroness Doune, née Lady Margaret Campbell, daughter of the 4th Earl of Argyll], and was cherished with meat and drink and clothing. A rare example! She brought him over with her sonne's corps to seek justice." Gordon protested that he was brought "ignorantly" into the business: "but confessed the Lord had brought him to his shamefull end for his menie other great offences." Wounded as he was, he was executed at Edinburgh (12th February), five days after the murder. Lord Moray's mother, according to Calderwood, "caused draw her sonne's picture as he was demaimed, and presented it to the King in a fynel cloath with lamentations and earnest suite for justice." She supported her case by exhibiting the three bullets that were found "in the bowelling of the bodie." One of these she presented to the King, another to someone else (not named). She kept the third to preserve her sense of revenge. "Captain" Gordon's widow, Marjorie Auchenleck, afterwards married Robert Burnet, parson of Oyne, who figures in Barclay's protocol, 1601, as having a large claim on the Gicht estates on behalf of his wife (Davidson's Garioch). I do not know whether the Captain had any issue.

3. Alexander Gordon was killed in the wars in Holland. (Dr. Temple.)
4. George Gordon was killed by the Master of Menteith. (Dr. Temple.) I cannot verify this.
6. Catherine Gordon married John Keith of Clachriach (Great Seal), who was murdered, December 2, 1589, at the Justice Port, Aberdeen, by her brother William. This led to a feud between the Gordons and the Keiths. She was probably the mother of William Keith (brother of George Keith of Clachriach), who (with her nephew, John Gordon of Ardlogie) waged a deadly war on Lesak of that Ilk, 1616.
7. Elspet Gordon married Arthur Garden of Banchory, who was the son of George Garden and Isobel Keith, daughter of John Keith, laird of Troup (brother of the 5th Earl Marischal). According to the "Birth Briefes," published in the Spalding Club Miscellany, they had

Alexander Garden of Banchory, who married Janet Strachan, and had George Garden, captain in the German Army.

I think he was the Rittmaster who initiated General Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries into the ways of foreign service. The mother of the Rev. Dr. William Garden Blaikie was descended from this family. A Major Gordon, "laid of Trup," son to the laird of Nether Banchory, died May, 1662. (See Rowe's Journal in S. N. & Q.)

8. Isobell Gordon married (1) — Hay; (2) Alexander Fraser of the Philorth Family (Dr. Temple).
9. — Gordon married Patrick (?) Sinclair of Auchanachie (Dr. Temple). John Sinclair, brother to the laird of Auchanachie, took part in the attack made by the Gichts on the Hays of Burnthill in 1616 (to be referred to), and Patrick Sinclair of Auchanachie took part in the 6th laird of Gicht's attack on his mother-in-law, Lady Saltoun, in 1618.
10. — Gordon married — Gordon, brother of the laird of Haddo (Dr. Temple).
11. Jean Gordon married George Gordon of Crichie (Dr. Temple).

Harlaw as a Surname.—This entry occurs in the Scots Magazine:—
At Peterhead, on June 14, 1795, John Harlaw, Esq., late of the Island of Montserrat, to Mrs. Annand of Haddo.
NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

1010. Wilson, Alexander (Sir): Successful Business Man. Born at Fyvie, on 2nd May, 1843, entered on business life early, and spent the years 1865-91 in India. He was long a member of the well-known firm, Jardine, Skinner & Co., Calcutta. During his residence abroad he was President of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, and President of the Bank of Bengal. He was also for a time a member of the Legislative Council of India, and, in 1877, was Sheriff of Calcutta. On returning to England, he became a member of the London County Council in 1895, and is now chairman of the Mercantile Bank of India. He was knighted in 1887.

1011. Wilson, Alexander Stephen, C.E.: Poet and Author. A native of Rayne parish, where he was born in 1826, at Mains of Loanhead, he early showed literary aptitude, and, at 18 years of age, edited The Rural Echo. He also wrote for the Aberdeen Herald, and was engaged for years on railway engineering. Besides writing a good deal of verse, he published various philosophical and scientific works, a full list of which is given in Robertson's Handlist of Aberdeen Bibliography. Among the most noteworthy of these are probably a dissertation on "The Unity of Matter," a volume entitled A Creed of To-morrow, and a succession of botanical works, named respectively The Botany of Three Historical Records, 1878; A Contribution to Agricultural Botany, 1879; and A Bushel of Corn, 1883. He also published Songs and Poems, 1884; The Lyric of a Hopeless Love, 1888; and Words Waving Music, 1890. He died in 1893.

1012. Wilson, Charles Edward, LL.D.: Inspector of Schools. A native of Old Machar, he graduated at King's College in 1836. He acted for many years as one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Scottish Schools.

1013. Wilson, David (Rev.), M.A.: Dean of Aberdeen. A native of Fyvie, where his father was a farmer, he graduated at Marischal College in 1822, and, having studied for the ministry of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, he became incumbent of the Episcopal Chapel in his native parish in 1826. He became Dean of Aberdeen, and held that appointment at his death. He was father of No. 1010 and No. 1014.

1014. Wilson, David, C.M.G.: Governor of British Honduras. He early entered the service of the Colonial Government of Trinidad, where he acted as Stipendiary Magistrate from 1870 to 1878. He was then promoted to be Commissioner of the Northern Province, a position he held from 1878 to 1897, when he was appointed Governor of British Honduras, and was made C.M.G. He is the son of 1013, and brother of No. 1010.

1015. Wilson, Robert: Local Historian. He entered Marischal College in 1814, and graduated there in 1818. In 1822 he issued his Historical Account of Aberdeen.

1016. Wilson, William (Rev.), M.A.: Free Church Divine and Author. He was born in Aberdeen about 1831, graduated at King's College in 1849, and was ordained minister of the Free Church, Monkton, in 1855. Thence he was transferred to Musselburgh, where he died in 1875. He was a good scholar and preacher, and acted for a time as Clerk of the Dalkeith Free Presbytery. He also translated the works of Clement for Clark's Anti Nicene Fathers, and was the author of a Commentary on the Second Epistle of Peter, and of a volume of sermons.

1017. Winchester, Charles: Lawyer and Author. Said to have been born in Echt, 1781, he lived almost the century, dying in 1880. He published, in 1869, a volume entitled Reform and the Irish Church, and, in 1875, The White Lady of Berlin Castle.

1018. Winchester, James Webster, M.D., LL.D.: Medical Man and Author. Born in Aberdeen in 1815, he graduated at Marischal College in 1831. Having entered the medical service of the Indian Government, he became Deputy Inspector of Hospitals there before retiring. He settled in Edinburgh after leaving India, and became a prominent citizen, having served for a long time as Secretary of the National Constitutional Association. He died in 1887. He published, in 1835, A Memoir on the River Saphrates, and in the same year he published, at Aberdeen, a treatise on The Practicability of Advancing an Army from Europe into Asia.

1019. Wood, William B.: Canadian Politician. Born in Aberdeenshire, in 1848, he early accompanied his parents to Canada, where he received his education. He is a large manufacturer and grain merchant. After serving four years on the Municipal Councils of the Township of So. Dumfries and the County of Brant, he was elected to the Legislative Council of Ontario for North Brant, as a Liberal, in 1886, and has retained his seat.

1020. Woodford, Edward, LL.D.: Inspector of Schools and Author. Born in Aberdeenshire, he graduated at King's College in 1824. Having entered the teaching profession, he served for some time as Rector of Jedburgh Academy, during which period his Alma Mater honoured him with the degree of LL.D. in 1843. He was afterwards for some time one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools. He published, in 1830, an Elementary Latin Grammar, and, in 1848, an Epitome of Cesar's Commentaries. He also issued, in 1867, a work entitled The Answers in the Shorter Catechism Adapted.

1022. Young, Alexander (Rev.): Bishop of Edinburgh and also of Ross. Born in Aberdeen, about 1629, he entered as a student in Marischal College in 1647. Having studied for the ministry, he was successively pastor of the congregations of Dalmeny, Crumond, and St. Andrews. Thereafter he was chosen Bishop of Edinburgh in 1671, and translated to Ross in 1679. He died in 1685.
ADDENDA.

1023. Anderson, George, M.A., D.D. (Prof.): Divine. A native of Aberdeenshire, he was born in 1635, and graduated at King's College in 1655. Having studied for the Church, he was ordained minister of the Parish of Methlick in 1663. Scrupling at the test of 1681, he forfeited his benefice; but, getting his doubts removed, he was allowed to return to his benefice in 1682, and was translated to Tarves in 1683. Having been received into communion with the Presbyterian Church, in 1694, by a committee of the General Assembly, he was, in 1704, appointed Professor of Divinity in King's College, when he was also made D.D. His inaugural thesis, De Efficacia Mortis Christi, has been published, as also a volume entitled Propositiones Nonnullae Theologiae, 1704. He died in 1710.

1024. Anderson, David, D.D.: Professor of Divinity. He entered Marischal College in 1689, was ordained to the pastoral charge of Fovera in 1699, and succeeded the preceding divine as Professor of Divinity at King's College in 1710. His inaugural discourse was published in 1711, on the subject, De Peccato Originali. He was at the same time made D.D. He died in 1733.

1025. Anderson, William: Writer on Music. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1817, bred a wood-turner, but became a clothier. He early gave his attention to music, and was the favourite pupil of James Davie. He became precentor of the South Parish Church in 1835, but joined the Free Church in 1843, and was precentor in the Free South Church till 1871. He was also a valued office-bearer and treasurer of the Sustentation Fund. He took an active share in Aberdeen Choral Union, and was President in 1866. He published Remarks on Congregational Psalmody, 1855. He died in 1875, and in 1876 appeared a posthumous volume, entitled Preceptors and Musical Profession.

1027. Baird, Andrew Wilson, R.E., Colonel, F.R.S., F.R.G.S.: Savant. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1843, he was educated at Marischal College, and then at Addiscombe. He proceeded to India in 1864, where he distinguished himself in various ways, but specially in the great trigonometrical survey of that country. He has also been Master of the Mint, Calcutta. His published writings, in the Transactions of Learned Societies and elsewhere, are many. See Men of the Time.

1028. Bentley, James, A.M. (Prof.): Orientalist. Born in Aberdeen, 24th November, 1771 (the grand-nephew of the great Richard Bentley), he was educated at the Grammar School and Marischal College, where he graduated in 1791. He became Professor of Oriental Languages, King's College, in 1798. This post he held for 48 years, till his death, in 1846. He was a venerable and saintly man, and a diligent teacher.

1029. Barker, Thomas, M.A. (Prof.): Mathematician. Born in Old Aberdeen, he graduated at King's College in 1856, taking the Simpson Mathematical and Hutton Greek Prizes. Proceeding to Cambridge, he became Senior Wrangler in 1852, and subsequently was appointed Professor in Owen's College, Manchester.

1030. Birnie, John Black Leslie: Lawyer and Author. Sheriff-Substitute of Lanarkshire. Born at Johnstone,Rubislaw, near Aberdeen, in 1833, he entered Marischal College in 1848, passed advocate in Edinburgh, 1858. He has written several legal works, and was for some time Sheriff-Substitute of Lanarkshire. He died in 1895.

1031. Birnie, Moses: Poet and Author. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1785. Poetry, the science of Agriculture, and Theology were his hobbies, and he has published works in all three departments. He died in 1866. Among his writings are—A Series of Experiments in Agriculture, 1859; Poems, consisting of Epistles, &c., 1834; The Sleep of Sin, 1845; St. Paul at Athens, 1852; Time and the Things of Time.

1032. Bitsett, John (Rev.): Presbyterian Divine and Author. Born at New Deer, 29th August, 1692, he entered Marischal College in 1706; studied for the Church, and was ordained at Newmachar, 1717, but translated to Aberdeen in 1728. He was a popular preacher, but a man of many controversies, especially opposed, however, to the system of patronage, and to Popery and Prelacy. His writings are numerous. For a list see A. W. Robertson's Bibliography of Aberdeen. He died in 1765. Extracts from his Diary have been published, and are interesting.

CORRECTION.—No. 992. Rev. William Walker was born at Gunhill, not Greenhill.

GLAENCE—A REMARKABLE MEETING. — It may be worth noting that, on 26th January, 1681, a band of manrent was executed at Balloch, now Taymouth Castle, between Archibald McDonel of Keppoch and John Campbell, Earl of Caithness, afterwards first Earl of Breadalbane. It is given in pp. 261-2 of the Black Book of Taymouth, without any comment. Two of the three witnesses to the document were Robert Campbell of Glenlyon and Alexander Macdonell of Glencoe. With the presence of Sir John Dalrymple, the chief dramatis personae of 1692 would have been complete. It is questionable if the three ever met under one roof before or after. If Glencoe could only have foreseen how his host and fellow-guest were to turn out!

MACNAUGHTONS AND AYSONS IN ATHOLL AND BREADALBANE.

The Scannachies of the Macnaughtons tell us that the chiefs of the clan ancienly held possessions in Strath Tay, and were Thanes of Loch Tay before migrating westward to Dunclavar. This appears to be founded more on tradition than on any reliable documentary evidence, but the fact remains that to the present day the name is common throughout Atholl and Breadalbane. There were numerous septs of the clan, each bearing a bun sloine, or root-surname, for the sake of distinction, and some are still identified in that way in the vernacular of the country. Balmaunoughton is a place-name on Loch Tayside, and with it, or the neighbourhood, members of the clan have been associated for over 400 years. One branch was called Macvicars, believed to be descended from the Macnaughtons, vicars of Inchadney, in pre-reformation days. The Maccrakens formed another, and there were until recently Macnaughtons who, save in writing, were not known otherwise than as Mackays. From the fifteenth to the seventeenth centuries there are met with as landowners in Atholl, and elsewhere within the county, families bearing the name of Ayson, a name which has run out, unless it appears in a modernised form as Easson, which is to be found, although not to any great extent, in the county; and as Ayson appears to be but a lowland rendering of Mackay, the question has struck me, looking to the traditional landowning story of the Macnaughtons, were these Aysons, alias Mackays, alias Macnaughtons?

I have casually come across the following references:

Robert Ayson of Fornocht had a son and heir called William Ayson, who, on 12th May, 1472, got from John, Earl of Atholl, and Lord of Balveny, a charter of half of the lands of Stix and others; but the former, at all events, he did not long hold, for in 1504 Atholl granted Stix to John, Lord Duncan.

In 1478 a Robert Ayson also had Tullymet, and his name appears in an undefended action on the 12th March of that year, raised against him, before the Lords Auditors of Causes and Complaints, by Marion Carruthers, widow of John Menzies of Weem, for her terce of the annual rent of Tullymet, amounting to £3 6s. 8d. He was ordered to pay this amount, as well as ten shillings each to the witnesses, who included Robert Macnar and Alexander Gibbonson. By the reign of James VI. Tullymet had passed to the Steuarts of Kinnaird. It was held for a time during the last and present centuries by a family of the name of Dick, of whom Dr. William Dick and Major-General Sir R. H. Dick were distinguished members.

In 1483 William Ayson of Pettenney sued Duncan Toscheoch for the wrongful occupation, and withholding from him, of the lands of Pettenney.

On 14th January, 1637, Robert Ayson was served heir to his father, James Ayson, in the lands of Arthurstone, in the lordship of Coupar, entry, £13 6s. 9d.

PRICE OF CORN AT THE BEGINNING OF THE CENTURY.—An interesting memorial of the dear years in corn exists at Blythbridge, in the parish of Newlands, Peeblesshire. On the wall of the mill at Knocknowes (as the hamlet was originally called) are carved the words:

Price of meal this year per peck 2s. 6d.

For purposes of comparison the following extract from Chambers’ History of Peebles-shire is noteworthy:

1800, Jan. 4.—The Council (of Peebles), having under consideration the scarcity and dearth of meal, which is most distressing to poor persons and labourers, invite farmers to bring their meal to market, and a subscription is opened to purchase and distribute it at a moderate price—Burgh Records. Such is the only notice we have of the “dear year,” when oatmeal was sold at half-a-crown a peck. It was during this season of scarcity that a mob, in which a masculine heroine, named May Ingram, figured as leader, proceeded to Edston, and, in defiance of the farmer, Mr. Robert Symington, carried off a cart-load to Peebles. The magistrates, procuring the assistance of the Volunteers, captured the meal from the mob, and, storing it in the market-house, sold it under some arrangement to pay the proprietor. (p. 271).

It will be noted that the 1817 price equalled that of the “dear year.”

THE MOWATS OF BALQUHOLLY.—I have come across a reference to the Mowats in the Scots Magazine. John Mowat sold Balquholly to Alexander Duff of Hatton in 1719 or 1723, and died in 1736. He had married Agnes, daughter of James Keith of Keithfield. She died at Aberdeen on July 17, 1783 (according to the Scots Magazine), which adds:—“This lady’s father was the male representative of the Marischal family, but, dying without male issue the representation goes to a remote line.”

SCOTTISH AND AMERICAN EPISCOPANCY.—

A ceremony interesting to both these branches of the Episcopal Church took place at Aberdeen on the 16th ult. This was the unveiling, by the Marquis of Lothian, in the presence of a distinguished company, a mural tablet in the south wall of Marischal College, commemorative of the consecration of Bishop Seabury in 1784, which took place in the house then occupied by Bishop Skinner in Longacre, near the spot where the tablet is set up. The circumstances of the consecration may be briefly stated. Prior to the American War of Independence, the English prelates, considering the position of the Americans to be simply that of colonists, had steadily refused to consecrate any Bishops for the English Church there. At the peace in 1783 the American Episcopaliens, finding themselves destitute of Bishops, delegated Dr. Samuel Seabury of Connecticut to proceed to England in order to obtain the necessary consecration. This was still refused, but for the new reason, that Dr. Seabury declined to take the oath of allegiance to the Sovereign of Great Britain. Recourse was then had to the Scottish Episcopal Church, who on the whole sympathized with Dr. Seabury's attitude to the reigning dynasty. Negotiations being opened with Bishop Kilgour of Aberdeen, and his colleague Bishop Skinner, the interesting ceremony which gave apostolic succession to America took place in Aberdeen, in the presence of other two Scottish Bishops. At the centenary of the event, interesting commemorations of it took place, and out of these the conviction has grown that a permanent memorial should be erected, and this has now been done at the charges of the American churches, largely promoted by the friendly exertions of Dr. James Gammack. The tablet is inscribed as follows:—

ABERDEEN AND THE REBELLION, 1745.

The following extracts are taken from The St. James's Evening Post [No. 5646], in the University Library: Thursday, March 27, to Saturday, March 29, 1746:—

Letter from Aberdeen, March 10.

I had wrote to you often since October last, but the Rebels being in Possession of this Country, any Letter that gave Account of our Situation would not have come to your Hand.

The Army here under the Duke of Cumberland consists of 14 Regiments of Foot, two of Dragoons, the Duke of Kingston's Regiment of Horse, and about 1500 Campbells, who are at Old Meldrum, in all about 12,000. Bligh's Regiment of Foot are shipp'd at Leith, to come hither, but are stopp'd by contrary Winds.

The Rebel Army is given out from 8 to 9000, of which 6000 are Highlanders, the Body at Inverness; a great Party have entrench'd themselves on the North Side of the Spey, to dispute the Passage of that River. They have some Cannon: Among 1000 of them are on this Side the Spey Bamborough, and the North Part of Aberdeenshire, taking the Meale of these Countries, sending it over the Spey, laying up Magazines at Forres: They are in Possession of the Country to Inverness.

Lord Loudon, with his Army, has retreated to Sutherland; he is from 2500 to 3000 strong, and, by the latest Accounts, in good Heart, it scarce being in the Rebels Power to come at him, there being three Firths between him and Inverness, and no Boats on any of them, but what Lord Loudon has on the North Side of Dornoch Firth; and to go round by the Heads of these Firths is almost impracticable for an Army, especially as there are Passes in Sutherland, which 100 Men could defend against 1000; but the Rebels Designs at present are not against Lord Loudon.

The Army here is in fine Order, high Spirits, commanded by a brave and capable young General, who has the Hearts of the whole Soldierly, and they long much to be up with the Rebels. 'Tis thought they will begin their March in two or three Days, if the Severity of the Weather don't prevent it: At present it's very cold, with much Snow on the Ground, and a North East Wind. The Troops are all well lodg'd, no Want of Provisions nor Fear of it, but of Provender; tho' even that, I hope, will hold out longer than there is Occasion. I am of Opinion, the Army could not be better quartered any where than they are here, and 'tis a great Happiness they are so, considering the Severity of the Weather.

The Duke honour'd our Ladies with a Ball, was extremely well pleased, and staid till two in the Morning. The Whigs here both love and admire him, and with good Reason.

We make not the smallest Doubt of the Duke's Success against the Rebels, and all the well-affected earnestly wish they may stay and fight, and not retreat on the Approach of our Army: They cannot go further North: in the Highlands they cannot subsist; nor can they get South, all the Passes of the Tay being guarded, and the Hessians at Perth; so that there must soon be an End put to this cursed Rebellion, which has done so much Harm to Great Britain, and to the true Interest of all Europe.

Upon the Flight of the Rebel Army from Stirling, a great Body of them coming thro' Aberdeen, I thought it my Duty to go to Perth, and gave the Duke an Account of their State and Numbers in this Neighbourhood: I was obliged to travel most of the Way on Foot, in very bad Weather, and take a Compass in passing the Grampian Hills, where I was frequently mid-thigh in Snow; and when I came down to the Low Country to the Mid-leg in Mire: When I left Aberdeen, all the Roads about Town, and 12 Miles to the Southward, were guarded by Rebel Hussars, but I escaped them.

The Rebels while here forced from the Town 1800l. Sterling, and from the Shire about 7000l. took Arms, Horses, and Things of that kind, but did no other gross Things.

An Extract of a Letter from an Officer at Aberdeen, dated March 17.

Four Regiments of Foot, commanded by General Bland, march'd last Week to Old Meldrum, a little Town, twelve Miles from hence; and this Morning four Pieces of Cannon, and some Tunbrils, etc. march'd in the Rear of four other Regiments, commanded by Brigadier Mordaunt. Last Night eight Transports, laden with Forage of all Kinds, arriv'd here, which I believe will hasten our Departure from hence. Blyth's Regiment is not yet arriv'd from Edinburgh, but is expected every Hour.

I suppose you have heard the Rebels have taken Fort George and Fort Augustus, the latter with the Loss of four Men only. Yesterday Morning, by his Royal Highness's Order, a Sergeant of the Train, and four Bombardiers and Gunners, who were at Fontenoy, were sent to Glasgow, and from thence were to be transported to Fort William, for the better Defence of that Place, should the Rebels make any Attempt upon it. The Duke order'd a Guinea to each Man.

By Letters receiv'd on Wednesday from Aberdeen we learn, that General Bland, with 5000 Men, was gone forwards to Inverness, in order to drive the Rebels from thence, or to give them Battle: The same Letters say, that they had received Advice from Blair of Athol, that the main Body of the Rebels seems to be leaving Inverness and coming that Way for Want of Subsistence, upon which Orders had been dispatched to the Prince of Hesse to collect all his Forces together at Perth, with all Speed, in order to oppose them, should they endeavour to come again so low as Perth, Stirling, or Glasgow.
Thursday Night it was reported, that an Express was arriv'd from Scotland with an Account, that the Rebels were again coming Southward, and had taken the Castle of Blair of Athol, and made 500 Men Prisoners.

We hear that his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, is somewhat indisposed at Aberdeen.

Buchan Field Club.—Under the presidency of Mr. W. L. Taylor, the club met on the 13th ult., when Mr. James Spence read a section of a paper on “Folk-lore Days and Seasons.” Dealing first with the borrowing days, he repeated the explanation he had made nearly 20 years ago that “borrowing” did not mean in this sense lending but sheltering, protecting, or defending, and that the borrowing days were the days in the olden times when people, owing to a relapse which took place in the weather during the end of March or beginning of April, thought it necessary to drive their cattle under shelter. In regard to April 1st, or Fool’s Day, he said that no one had yet given a reasonable account of its origin and history, but as its observance was so widely spread it might be argued it was of a very high antiquity. Notwithstanding its remote origin, it was dying, being now left in the hands of children, who carried out their devices for the deception of each other and sometimes of their elders by the invention of any number of white lies, the morality of which he was afraid could not be justified. After dealing with some saws relating to April 18th, there being, he thought, no particular reason for this day being selected, he went on to speak of some of the sayings relating to May. The chilling, killing easterly winds of this month were to be dreaded by both animal and plant life, and our observant forefathers had by “the gab of May” put their mark upon it. “Three dips in the May flood,” used by the fishermen in regard to hadocks, “May chickens are ill to rear,” and most of the other rhymes, he thought, were merely popular fallacies. The May-Day observance of washing the face with May dew, by which freckles and fern-tickles were supposed to be removed, was the only existing one of the old observances of this day. St. Swithin’s Day had been proved by accurate meteorological observation to be simply a popular fallacy. Lammas (Loafmas) was a relic of pagan times, having been one of the great festivals of the year. The day and its ceremonial in part were adopted by the Christian Church, and still held its place in the calendar. The feast of ingathering was a moveable one, dependent upon the season. In Buchan it was known as the “meal and ale,” and in Moray as “Winter.” The beauty of this feast was that it was for men as well as master, and served to keep up a kindly bond between the two classes, but, unfortunately, during late years it was getting looser and looser. He also spoke of the subordinate festivity known as “Clyack” and “Kemping,” a competition among shearers which took place in his boyhood days; also the ceremonials and pranks which attended the celebration of Halloween, the festivities at Martinmas, etc.

The Inneses and the Pitts.—In a recent issue I traced out the connection between the Pitts and the Inneses, “Diamond” Pitt, the founder of the house, having married Miss Jane Innes of Reidhall. From an old letter which I have just seen, I learn that her grand-daughter, Lord Chatham’s sister, secured a pension of £100 a year to Sir J. Innes of Coxton. “Mr. Morison of Rosieburn,” the writer remarks, “says he saw Miss Pit [sic] at Rome, and was acquainted with her. She acknowledged to him her descent from Miss Innes. Reidhall, where Mr. Pit was born, is a small house built of red mud on the west side of the Spey, a little beyond the Boat of Bog, on the north side of the road leading to Elgin. It is now built of stone, and passes under the appellation of Reid-hause. This Governor Pitt’s wife was probably aunt or cousin-german to Mrs. Ord of Findochty, who was sister to Sir Alexander Innes of Coxton.” Which of the Pitts was born on Speyside I cannot say. The Governor had three sons—Robert, the father of the first Earl of Chatham; Thomas, who was created Lord Londonderry; and John, a soldier of some distinction.

Byron’s “Degeneracy.”—Dr. James G. Kiernan, “Fellow of the Chicago Academy of Medicine,” is writing in the Alienist and Neurologist “A Study of Byron and Sir Walter Scott.” These articles are being reprinted in the Humanitarian, of London. In the March issue of the latter, several references were made to Byron’s school days in Aberdeen.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF ABERDEEN PUBLICATIONS, 1897.—A mistake, it seems, was made in attributing “A Poem on Queen Victoria’s Diamond Jubilee,” included in the 1897 Bibliography (XII., 123), to Thomas P. Nicoll: its author and the author of the poems quoted on its title-page is J. H. Horne. I apologise to both poets.

DISPUTED SCOTS EARLDOMS.

THE EARLDOM OF BUCHAN.

Within the last twelve months several peerages have been assailed, notably the Barony of Lovat and the Earldom of Caithness, both of which have been dealt with in these pages. The latest title in trouble is the ancient Earldom of Buchan. When the late Earl died (at the age of eighty-four) he was succeeded by his eldest son, Shiple Gordon Stuart Erskine, Lord Cardross, by his wife, Agnes Graham Smith (daughter of James Smith of Craigend, Stirling), who died 1875. It is now alleged that the Earl's marriage with Miss Smith was not valid. It is asserted that seven years earlier—in 1842—the late Earl was married in Scotland, according to Scots law, before witnesses; that two certificates were signed by all parties and witnessed according to law; that these certificates or declarations are in safe keeping; that one child, a boy, was born of this marriage, and is now living, and practising in the city of London as a solicitor; that the late Earl deserted his wife and child almost immediately after the marriage; and that this first and legal wife of the late Earl lived until 1888. It is, moreover, asserted that before contracting the alleged bigamous marriage with Agnes Graham Smith, in 1849, the late Earl submitted, in 1845, a case for the opinion of Scotch counsel as to the legality of his prior Scotch marriage, as he wished to marry again; and that the opinion given to him was that the marriage was a valid one, and the issue legitimate. There is another claimant, a mysterious person in Chili. He has been in Chili 32 years, is married to a Chili woman (and has four daughters), and is a plate layer. It is suggested that the Chili claimant is a myth, and was invented by the late Earl by way of raising obstacles in the path of the City solicitor claimant. Further, it is declared that the late Earl attempted to raise money out of the claims he knew would be made at his death, and offered to buy one of the declarations of the Scotch marriage if he were paid a few thousands down for doing so—an offer which was indignantly declined. A letter written to this effect by the late Earl is declared to be in existence. Shortly before his death his late lamented lordship appeared in a London police court on a charge of assault.

THE EARLDOM OF FINDLATER.

Mr. Clifton-Browne, a provincial actor, claims the Earldom of Findlater, through his ancestor, Rev. William Browne, Professor of Divinity at St. Andrews, who married Janet Ogilvy, daughter of Rev. George Ogilvy, and great-grand-daughter of Lord Findlater. He also claims the baronetcy of Browne.

THE EARLDOM OF MENTEITH.

This title, so frequently disputed, is again in evidence. Quite recently the wife of Mr. H. H. Graham, of Kansas City, gave birth to a son, who is heir to his uncle, the claimant to the Scottish Earldom. There is every probability of the whole question being re-opened, and the claim being vigorously prosecuted. Mr. H. H. Graham is an energetic business man of Kansas, and his elder brother, Mr. George Graham, the claimant to the Earldom, resides at Toronto, Canada.

THE LANDS OF COBAIRDY.—Under date July 7, 1676, reference is made to the lands of Cobairdy in the Record of Documents under the Great and Privy Seals of Scotland, which is being printed in the Genealogical Magazine.

Composition 130 merks.

THE WOODS OF BONNYTON.—Under date July 7, 1676, occurs a reference to the Woods of Bonnyton in the Record of Documents under the Great and Privy Seals of Scotland, which is now being reprinted in the Genealogical Magazine.

Infeftment to Sir John Wood of Carnegie, taken out, the lands of Kinblantshmont, the lands of Fullartoune & others; holds of his Majestie ward, and changed to tax ward, for payment of 300 lib. for the ward, as much for the releif, and 400 lib. for the marriage, under the King's hand, upon his own resignacione. Composition 100 lib.

THE DELECTABLE MERSE.—A local saying makes the Merse the Mecca of ambitious ploughmen. It runs:—

"For a hen's gerris (grass)

RESOLUTIONS OF THE HERITORS OF THE COUNTY OF BANFF FOR DISCOURAGING SMUGGLING, &c.

JUNE, 1744.

Att Cullen House the 19th day of June 1744 years. At a general meeting of the Heritors of the Shire of Banff convened in order to deliberate upon the excessive consumption of French wine, Brandy and Tea and the damages arising to the country therefrom, the Right Hon. the Earl of Findlater and Seafield chosen Preses.

We the Heritors of the Shire of Banff taking under our consideration the melancholy circumstances to which the country is reduced, and in particular the too just complaint of the want of specie to circulate in ordinary commerce, And having a just and sincere concern for the welfare of our native country and being sensible of the pernicious consequences of the smuggling and running trade so notoriously practised in many parts of this Island in open defiance of the Laws and highly prejudicial to both the tradeing and the Landed Interests of the nation, And being convinced that it is not only our duty but greatly our interest to discourage that destructive commerce by which our country is so greatly drained of money and impoverished and by our influence and example to promote and encourage to the utmost of our power every branch of our own manufactures and likeways to confine ourselves as much as possible to the use of such things as are the growth and produce of Great Britain, DO unanimously resolve and promise that from and after 1st July next and during the war with France at least we will not use any French wines or spirits in our Familys excepting what we have at present in stock upon hand, That we will neither drink French wines or French spirits in any publick Houses and will discourage the use thereof to the outmost of our power, And that we will only countenance and encourage those Publick Houses who shall brew and retail strong ale and beer and spirits made from our own malt or other grain, That we will moderate and discourage the use of Tea in our familys, and that what we may allow of shall be only such as is brought home by the British East India Company, That we will encourage and assist the Officers of the Revenue in preventing the Clandestine importation of French wines and spirits and of Tea and in suppressing the smuggling and vendeing them in the country and in bringing to punishment all persons guilty thereof by putting the laws to due execution against them, and in regard we are sensible that the destructive practice of smuggling could not have been carried to so great a height unless many of the country people themselves had been so infatuated as to be aiding and assisting in this destestable practice equally pernicious to Landlord and Tenant, We do, therefore, resolve that we will from this time forward put all our Tannants, cottars, fishers and servants under the most effectual restraints we can think of for preventing such practices and that over and above the penalties by Law of such transgressions they shall pay £20 Sc. to the poor of the parish for each time they shall be convicted as guilty thereof or greater or lesser fines as their circumstances can allow and in respect many persons within our several estates may be guilty of such practices and assisting thereto without our knowledge we do hereby recommend to all ministers and Kirk Sessions and all officers of his Majesty's customs and excise to inform us of such delinquents, And we hereby promise on such information given to punish them as above, And we order these our resolutions to be intimated at all the parish Churches within the County between this and the second Sunday of July next by the Precenters reading the same from the Latrons immediately after divine service that none may pretend ignorance. Signed in presence and by appointment.

Queries.

1227. The Mercer Family.—Who were the ancestors of John Mercer, sometime parson at Methlick, but later of Slains, dying about 1637, while officiating there? Through what line does he connect with the Mercers of Aldie and Meikleour? Where was he buried? He was father of Robert, parson at Ellon, and later in Ireland; William, poet and soldier; and John. How many more children were there? and what were their names? Robert was married and had children. William is said to have been married five times. John was probably the Deacon Convener of the Guild in Aberdeen a number of times from 1612 to 1630. What were the names of their children? One Thomas Mercer, sometime Dean of Guild of Aberdeen, who in his later years underwent persecution for his adherence to the Quakers, died about 1697, and, although he had desired interment in the Friends burial ground, “in the head of galloget,” his relations buried him in the session house of the new church [St. Nicholas?] opposite the mid pillar, where his father, grandfather, and great-grandfather were interred. The stone over the grave bore date, I understand, as early as 1598. The letters cut in the stone were filled with lead. Is it possible to learn what inscriptions were on this stone? I desire to learn the names of his ancestors and of his children. His father’s name was Thomas. Among his children were John, Joseph, and James, and probably Agnes and Jane. The son James died 1702, leaving a son and two daughters—what were their names? Who was Lawrence Mercer, merchant, and factor of Marischal College in London in 1660? Was he from Aberdeenshire? If so, who can help me to place him? Did he marry in 1665, at Kintore, Beatrix Strachan? Wanted, also, genealogical information of William Mercer, the correspondent of Warren Hastings. Of John Mercer, author of Chronicles of Perth. Also the descendants of William Mercer, ancestor of Potterhill, who married Helen Drummond.

1228. Shaw’s “Mental Progress of the Devil.”—Could anyone inform me where the prose version of the “Mental Progress of the Devil,” by the late James Shaw, Tynron, appeared about the end of 1894? His verses on the same subject were incorporated in Service’s Novel of Noventia in “Good Words,” but the later prose version, which is lost, is wanted for his Literary Reminiscences, which are about to be published by Oliver & Boyd.

1229. The Armorial Bearings of the Burgh of Aberdeen.—Laing, in his Scottish Seals, gives a beautiful engraving of the Seal of the Burgh of Aberdeen, dated 1430, with two lions as supporters. Can any of your readers inform me how it is that the lions have been supplanted by two leopards as at present?

1230. JAMES CRUICKSHANKS, SECRETARY TO PRINCE PAUL OF WURTEMBERG.—A friend of mine recently bought (for £5) a great bundle of letters in Paris, mostly written by Scotsmen during the eighteenth century and the beginning of the present one. One correspondent, J. G. Robertson, writing from Ratisbon in 1816, says: "The secretary of Prince Paul of Wurtemberg is one James Cruickshanks from Aberdein. Mr. Charles Gordon commissioned me to find him out on account of his mother and sister being in the greatest distress." Who was Cruickshanks?

1231. THE RIGHT HON. EDWARD ELILICE, M.P.—Is it not the case that the Right Honble. Edward Ellice, M.P., a well-known politician of 50 years ago, was of Scotch extraction? and possibly of Aberdeenshire? Is anything known of his ancestry?

1097. CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH (XI., 48).—The statement in the "Aberdeen Almanack" for 1791 that Wm. Robertson was the minister of a Congregational Church in Aberdeen is obviously set aside by an obituary notice in the "Aberdeen Journal", where the death is mentioned of the "spouse of Mr. Wm. Robertson, minister of the Berean congregation." This was in 23rd March, 1790. From the same source I may quote other two references to the Bereans. Under date 25th January, 1790, it is somewhat jocularly stated that "The sect called Bereans, who have been but a few years established in this place, and never could establish a footing, is now at an end. Their preacher, one Drummond, not being able to earn a livelihood, has wisely walked off to the south country to try whether he cannot be more profitably employed at his old trade of an upholsterer." A fortnight later the following paragraph confesses to the prematurity of the above. "The Bereans, which were supposed to be extinct in this place, seem, however, willing to keep their ground. Mr. Donaldson from Dundee preach[ed] yesterday [14th Feb'y, 1790] in their meeting in Long Acre, and is again to preach here next Sunday." Unless there were two congregations of the Bereans in the town, which is very unlikely, it is not yet quite clear how Mr. Robertson was their pastor in 1789, and also, according to the Almanack, in 1791, with two other pastors in between.

1198. LATIN MOTTO (XII., 94).—"Efficiens et finis sunt sibi invicem cause." The term efficiens is here a noun, used in the philosophic sense of a "producing cause," as distinguished from ultimate cause or origin. The motto, therefore, may be rendered, "the producer and the end aimed at are in turn causes to themselves." The meaning is obscure, apart from any context or hint as to the application of the motto, its reference to the title and contents of the book, for instance. I suggest, doubtfully, that it means no more than that things in general are both cause and effect. I fail to identify it as a classical quotation. The terms used are common in the philosophical writings of Cicero.

1202. AMERICAN-ABERDEEN GRADUATES (XII., 94, 127).—We continue from last month the rest of the notes compiled by Dr. James Gammack, West Hartford, Conn.:

11. WILLIAM PAINE, M.D., physician at Worcester, Mass., son of Timothy Paine, and graduate of Harvard, 1768, was proscribed as a loyalist in 1778, and in 1782 became surgeon-general of the forces in Rhode Island and New York. He died at Worcester, Mass., April 19, 1833. He is probably the "doctor" of M.D. from Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1775 (Rec. Mar. Coll., ii, 127), as the date suits, and there is no competitor for the identification (Appleton, Cyc. Am. Biol., iv, 682).

13. REV. JOSEPH BELLAMY, D.D., born in Cheshire, Conn., Feb. 20, 1719, and graduated at Yale in 1735, was licensed in 1737 for preaching by the New Haven Congregational Association. He was ordained pastor of Bethel, Conn., in 1740, where he continued till his death in 1790. He was noted as a preacher, especially during the revival excitement of 1742, and in his parish he established a Divinity School, where the most eminent ministers in the connection were trained. He received the degree of D.D. from Marischal College, Aberdeen, in 1768 (Rec. Mar. Coll., i, 84), and was a most voluminous writer—"True Religion Delineated" (1750); "Theron, Paulinus and Asaphio" (1753); "A Letter to Scripturista" (1760); "The Nature and Glory of the Gospel" (1763); "The Law our Schoolmaster" (1766); "The Half-way Covenant" (1770); "Four Dialogues between a Minister and his Parishioner" (1769). His entire works were published in a collected form, New York, 1811, and again with a Memoir, 1850 (Dexter, Yale, 523-9 et al.; Drake, Dict. Am. Biol.; Jackson, Conc. Dict., 94; Appleton, Cyc. Am. Biol., L, 228; Cent. Cyc., 14).

14. REV. JOHN O'CALY, D.D., was born in New York in 1729, and graduated at Yale in 1750 along with Samuel Seabury, first Bishop of Connecticut. Next year, in connection with the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts, he set to his great work among the Indians, mostly the Mohawk and Oneidas, and acted also as chaplain to the British forces in their expeditions against Canada. In 1764 he returned to New York, and became assistant minister in Trinity Church. He died in New York Nov. 26, 1774. From Columbia (then King's) College, New York, he received the degree of D.D. in 1770, as he had already obtained the same degree from Marischal College, Aberdeen, in the preceding year (Rec. Mar. Coll., ii, 85). He appears to have left no writings (Drake, Dict. Am. Biol., 669; Appleton, Cyc. Am. Biol., iv, 563; Digest S. P. Cr., 858, 857, et al.).

15. GEORGE MILNE is lost sight of.

16. REV. JOHN WITHERSPOON, D.D., was son of the parish minister of Yester, Haddingtshire, and born there Feb. 5, 1729. He graduated at Edinburgh in 1742, and was ordained in 1745 to be minister of Reath, from which he went to Paisley in 1747. He is said to have received the degree of D.D. from Aberdeen in 1764, but no record is extant. In 1768 he became President of Princeton College, New Jersey, and continued till...

his death, Sept. 15, 1794, energetic and fairly successful in its interests. He was a leader among the Presbyterians in New England, and also devoted to the cause of American Independence. As one of the representatives from New Jersey signed the Declaration of Independence in 1776, and was one of the first members of Congress. His influence was strongly felt in the moulding of the Constitution, and his memory is perpetuated by the colossal statue erected to his honour in 1876 in the Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, Pa. His principal writings are:—Ecclesiastical Characteristics, or the Arcana of Church Policy: being an humble Attempt to shew up the Mystery of Moderation (1752); A Serious Apology for the Characteristics ( ); Essay on the Connection between the Doctrine of Justification by the Imputed Righteousness of Christ and Hatiness of Life (1856); Serious Enquiry into the Nature and Effect of the Stage (1757). (Appleton, Cyclo. Am. Biog., vi., 584, with a portrait; Drake, Dict. Am. Biog., 1000; Nat. Cyclo. Am. Biog., v., 406; Thompson, Presbyterians, 46 seq.)

17. REV. GEORGE PANTON, native of America, and educated at Marishal College, Aberdeen, taking his degree in 1763 (Rec. Mar. Coll., ii., 331), and receiving in 1774 an honorary degree of M.A. at King's (Columbia) College, New York. He was probably ordained in 1773, and acted as missionary at Trenton and Maidenhead, New Jersey, 1774-6; was missionary at Philadelphia (Yorkers), New York, 1777-1783, and as a loyalist sought refuge in Nova Scotia, where he was missionary in Shelburne and Yarmouth, 1783-6. In 1786 he returned to England, and died there (Eaton, Church in Nova Scotia, 107, 130, 156, 177; Digest of S. P. C. K., 116, 854, 856, 863).

18. JAMES HARDIE, son of John Hardie in Aberdeen, was born about 1750, and took two sessions at Marishal College, New York, 1779-80 (Rec. Mar. Coll., ii., 353), but at the suggestion of Prof. James Beattie, the poet, he emigrated to America, where he became a tutor in Columbia College, New York, 1787-90. He was undoubtedly clever, but he fell into habits of idleness, and died of cholera in New York in 1812. His published works were:—Cordelier, Colloquia (1809); Epitaphial Guide (1817); Freeman's Monitor (1818); Account of Malignant frem in New York (1799 and 1806); Virtus Illustris Urbis Romanae (1818); Dictionary of the Wonders of Art and Nature, especially in America (1819); Account of the Yellow Fever in New York (1808); Description of the City of New York (1808); and Biographical Dictionary (1850). (Appleton, Cyclo. Am. Biog., iii., 78; Drake, Dict. Am. Biog., 466).

19. JOHN KEMP, best known as Professor Kemp in Columbia College, New York, was son of John Kemp in Cowl, and born April 10, 1763. He graduated at Marishal College, Aberdeen, 1783, and received the degree of LL.D. from King's College, 1787 (Rec. Mar. Coll., ii., 335; King's Coll. Grad., 112). He emigrated first to Virginia, and then in 1785 went to New York, where he was appointed teacher, later Professor of Mathematics in Columbia College. From that chair he was transferred in 1795 to that of Geography, History, and Chronology. He had much influence in America, and died in New York City, Nov. 15, 1812 (Drake, Dict. Am. Biog., 504; Appleton, Cyclo. Am. Biog., iii., 511; Nat. Cyclo. Am. Biog., vi., 322; Tiffany, Ep. Ch., 433, 472; O'Connell, Hist. Ep. Ch., 886-7).

1223. "WEATHER GA" (XII., 141).—The word is applied to a perpendicular fissure in the face of a piece of moss from which peats are dug. It is a break on the continuity of the solid moss, caused by the original vegetation not being completely converted into a solid state. The fissure may be no wider than the cleft made by a spade, and it is usually full of water, seeping down from the surface through the looser texture of the imperfectly solidified moss. It is more of the nature of a seam interruption than of a gap or opening. This explains the application of the word to a certain phase of the weather. A "weather ga," or a break of a continuity of bad weather, by the interjection of a good day in a course of such weather. The roots of the words "ga" and "gap" may have some affinity, inasmuch as both imply a break of continuity, but the application of the words is different.

William Gordon, the Fifth Laird of Gight
(Died 1605).

William Gordon, the fifth laird of Gight, son of John, the fourth laird, by Margaret Gordon of the Lesmoir family, seemed to have been impelled by the double dose of Gordon blood in his veins to outdo his predecessors in a spirit of rebellion. The check which the advent of the Kirk implied lashed him into a fury of revolt, which was accentuated in the conduct of his seven stalwart sons, and several of his grandsons, including the seventh laird of Gight, and his cousin, Nathaniel Gordon of Ardlogie, whom the Kirk at last beheaded (1646). Before he succeeded to Gight in 1592, he had made himself a terror. Let me summarise his career:

N.D. According to Colonel Leslie in the History of the Leslies, he killed William Leslie (son of William Leslie, first of Warthill), who had married a daughter of Gordon of Auchindoir. Gordon was really quarrelling with Troup of Begshall, and Leslie seems to have interfered. At any rate he was killed more by accident than design. In September, 1592, William Troup of Begshall was caution that Alexander Gordon, Comalyn’s, should not annoy Gordon of Newton (Privy Council Register).

Dec. 24, 1576. He murdered his sister’s stepfather-in-law, Fraser of Strichen, at the Bridge of Deer. 1582. Made a free Burgess of the City of Aberdeen.

Dec. 2, 1587. He murdered his sister’s husband, John Keith of Clachriach. In this year the Gordon-Keith feud had been very acute. Sir George Ogilvy of Dunlugas had been caution to the extent of £2000 that William Gordon should not harm John Keith of Troup (brother of the fifth Earl Marischal) and his tenants at Cairnbannoch: while Gordon of Cairnbannoch was caution to the extent of £1000 that young Gight should rebuild the houses which he had destroyed on the Keith portion of Cairnbannoch (Privy Council Register). On Nov. 28 the lairds of Lesmoir and Gight and Captain (John?) Gordon (the brother of William), who was beheaded for his share in the Donnibristle affair (1592), killed John Keith of Cryallie (Diary of George Clark, quoted in the preface to Gordon’s Scots Affairs). For the murder of Clachriach, young Gight had to flee, and he was harboured at Linlithgow by Huntly, who declined to surrender him to the King. The Keith feud was going on merrily as late as 1597, when (on April 29) the Magistrates of Aberdeen thought it necessary to dispatch the Bishop of the Diocese and his man, as an ambassador to Gight and Inverugie, so as to secure “peice betuix the lairds of Gycht and [Keith of] Benholme.” But his lordship’s mission was a failure, for in 1600 we find Gight resetting two horses that had been stolen by Alexander Keith from Alexander Hogg, tenant of Ballyedrie, one... of Lady Marischal's farms at Dunnottar, and a mare of Lady Marischal's. Gight harboured Keith, who escaped from Dunnottar. When Hogg went to Gight to claim his property, he was hounded off the premises, and badly wounded for his trouble (Privy Council Register).

April 10, 1589. He was commanded as a rebel to surrender his castle.

Dec., 1590. He had to find caution for the preservation of good order on his estate.

Feb. 7, 1592. He took part in the Dornibristle affair (for which his brother John was executed).

Oct. 3, 1594. He was present at the battle of Glenlivat.

April, 1595. He was excommunicated (Calderwood).

June, 1601. Having tired of his feud with the Keiths and the Kirk, Gight turned his attention to the Mowats and the Hays. On June 5 he raided Balquhollie, the property of Magnus Mowat, who had offended Gordon of Brigend. On June 6 he brought 300 men to Balquhollie, and later in the month he repeated the attack, one of Mowat's servants being killed. The Privy Council was dealing with this matter as late as 1610. Gight had a supreme contempt for the Council, for when they sent down a King's messenger, Alexander Chalmer (in Sept., 1601), to serve a summons on Gight, that worthy boiled the documents (or, rather, copies of them) in a "dische of bru," and, under fear of death, made the messenger "sup" them. He tore the originals to atoms.

July, 1601. He helped his sons (George, William and Adam) in an attack on the town of Turriff, which had sheltered Ralph Ainslie, one of Lord Erroll's servants. The Gordons bombarded the house of William Duffus at midnight, drove the man "sark allane" into the open, and then put nine bullets into "dyvers partis of his body." In October, Huyton was requested to arrest Gight "quick or deid." But the laird escaped across the Border, and in November we find him plotting with Sir John Carey, governor of Berwick, to get England to help Huyton. In December, Cecil declined to come to terms, much to the dismay of Carey, who seems to have been immensely impressed with Gight's power (Border Papers).

May, 1605. Gight died, and was even then a trouble, for he was buried with Papist honours, much to the disgust of the Reformers.

Gordon married Isobell Ochterlony, daughter of (William?) Ochterlony, of Kelly. She died in May, 1604, and was buried with Papist honours. John Melville, a painter in Aberdeen, was summoned by the Presbytery (May 13) for painting a crucifix, which was carried at her funeral. She bore Gight seven sons and seven daughters. All the boys followed in the footsteps of their sire, one of the daughters even, was charged with a brutal assault on a man, and the grandchildren of the laird (the sons of his sons and of his daughters alike) became notorious, as I shall show. Gight's issue was:—

THE SEVEN SONS.

I. George Gordon, who succeeded as sixth laird of Gight.

II. John Gordon of Ardlogie was a redoubtable warrior. In 1601 he took a leading part in the Turriff Raid, to which I have referred. But his chief contribution to the history of his house was his connection with a dare-devil gang of marauders, called the "Societe and Companie of Boys," or "Knights of the Mortar" (who are fully described in the Privy Council Register). They went about the country as champions of Rome, but their real object was plunder, for they were described in the Register (1609) as a band of "debescheit lymmaris," who "most unlawfullie and seditiously bound themselves in ane fellowship with aithis, vows and protestationis of mutuall defence and persure." They committed "open and avowed reifis and heirschippes and uthers enormitics in all paitsis quhair thay may be masteris and commandery." On July 13, 1607, Ardlogie (supported by Alexander Copland of Udoch, Patrick Con of Auchry and his son, and Robert Udny of Tilliecolthie) raided the lands of Magnus Mowat of Balquhollie, their neighbour. On July 29, Mowat returned the compliment by taking away the peats of Auchry, and of Mrs. Patrick Copland of Udoch, widow (possibly the mother of the aforesaid Alexander, who in 1603 had been charged with assaulting Magnus Mowat, apparent of Balquhollie, at the fortalice of Frewick, Caithness). In 1616 he waged war on William Leask of Kelly, whose daughter seems to have married his brother Adam. In 1618 he helped his brother, Alexander, to raid the lands of Sir William Keith of Balmure. In 1634 he helped the Huntly Gordons to avenge themselves on Frendraught for the burning of Viscount Aboyne, robbing Alexander Innes, minister of Rothiemay, of his ryding hors (Spalding). He was denounced as a rebel, and ordered (in 1635) to be arrested. He seems to have escaped to Germany, for it is apparently he who is referred to in a letter from Andrew Leslie to Father John Seton (dated March 26, 1639), and quoted in the Domestic Series of State Papers:—"I have tasted of your Germany ... Colonell Gordon [of Wallenstein fame?] is not yet a Catholic. He has had a cousin [Ardlogie would have been his cousin]..."
german) by him, who is lately dead, called John Gordon of Ardlogie, his brother's son [this is nonsense in any case], who married the Provost of Melrose's daughter." As all the old records of Melrose as a burgh—it was reconstituted in 1594—are extinct, I cannot verify this reference to the Provost. Ardlogie had at least four sons:—

1. Adam Gordon took part in the attack made by the sixth laird of Gight, his uncle, on Sir Harry Wood of Bonnyton (when he is described as "appearand" of Gight) in 1624 (to which I shall refer). In 1625 he was admitted to the Scots Men at Arms in France by Huntly, who was captain in the corps, and who made his first muster at Leith July, 1625. Adam Gordon, who had Patrick Gordon of Boghead (his uncle?) as one of his cautioners, promised that he should "dewlie observe and keip the hault mustoris dewlie preparit with ane man and tua horse, armit in all peices with ane case of pistolls at sic place and tyme as the said capitaine [Huntly] should appoint" (Spalding Club Miscellany, iv.). Adam Gordon of Ardlogie (possibly this one) was at Konigsberg in 1659, for Patrick Gordon of Auchleuchries, the friend of Peter the Great, sent letters home to Scotland by him. (See Patrick Gordon's Diary.)

2. John Gordon of Ardlogie is described by Spalding as "second son," and in 1644 as "goodman of Ardlogie." He joined in the attack (1634) on the laird of Frendraught, who had burned up Lord Aboyne in 1630, and was denounced as a rebel. He went to Berwick in June, and returned in November, 1640. In the latter month, while drinking at Fyvie, he shot Sergeant Forsyth, of Lieut. Fotheringham's musketeers, dead. The Gordons got clear away, and Fotheringham was afterwards (Jan. 16, 1641) drummed out of the army in public, the degradation taking place at the Cross of Aberdeen, when the hangman broke the sword of the Lieutenant, who was then "convoiit out of the toune, throw Futeis port, to seik his fortoun" (Spalding). He was alive in January, 1647 (Acts of Parliament), when he "received assurances without acting." On June 27, 1655, a John Gordon got a pass to go to Poland or Sweden (Calendar of State Papers). I think that this John Gordon of Ardlogie must have been the one who married Isobel Innes, one of the three daughters of Herome Innes, minister of Fyvie, and son of the first laird of Edingight. The genealogy at this point is very puzzling, for this Isobel may have been John's mother, not his wife, though the dates seem to indicate the latter supposition. At anyrate John Gordon of Ardlogie and Isobel Innes had a daughter, Elizabeth Gordon, who married her distant kinsman, John Innes of Edingight (probably about 1659), and (possibly) had three sons and a daughter. One of these sons, John, sixth of Edingight, was the father of Alexander Innes of Roseburn, and the grandfather of Katherine Innes, Mrs. Byron's mother (Col. Innes's Chronicles of the Family of Innes of Edingight).

3. Nathaniel Gordon, the daring Royalist, was either the second or the third son of old Ardlogie. He was the only member of the Gight family that ever met his death on the scaffold (Jany. 20, 1646). I described his career at considerable length in the Aberdeen Free Press of March 25, 1899. He married Grisel Seton (who may have been a member of the Udny or Shethin families of that name). I do not know whether he left any issue. In 1695, Nathaniel Gordon of Old Noth was one of the two commissioners appointed to draw up the list of pollable persons in Rhynie. Curiously enough, he begins with Ardlogie.

4. George Gordon helped his father in 1634 to steal the horse of Alexander Innes, the minister of Rothiemay, who was deposed in 1647, when he was succeeded by James Gordon, the well-known parson of Rothiemay. He is dealt with at great length in Gordon's Scots Affairs.

III. William Gordon took part in a raid on Turriff (July, 1601), and was put to the horn. He disappears from all records after this date. Dr. Temple says he was "killed in Turriff."

IV. Patrick Gordon held the farm of Boghead, on the Gight estate; in 1695 its poll tax was set down at £9 14s. In 1601 he murdered Robert Catto, servvant of Mowat of Balquhollie (Privy Council Register). He was implicated with his brother Adam in the assault made on Fraser of Stoneywood and Fraser of Durris in Aberdeen, 1609. In June, 1612, he, his brother Adam, and Francis Hay (who shot the latter dead in 1615), attacked Alexander Bannerman of Waterton and two of his servants to the "effusion of their blood in grie quantite." In 1615 he helped to capture and try his brother's murderer, Francis Hay, and in 1616 he was engaged in the attack on the Hays of Burnthill. In 1616 he and his brothers John, Alexander and Robert annoyed William Leask of that Ilk for eighteen months. In 1617 he was asked to leave the country; but in 1623 we find him accused of committing a brutal assault on George Thomson, W.S., on the highway near Dundee, the lawyer having poinced a horse belonging to Patrick Ochterlony of Barhead (probably a kinsman of Gordon's mother, née Isobel Ochterlony). He was dead by August, 1635, at which date his son (whose Christian name is not given) was denounced as a rebel for joining in attacks made on Frendraught to avenge the death of Lord Aboyne (Privy Council Register).

V. Adam Gordon fought a friendly sword duel with his comrade, Francis Hay of Logierie (son of George Hay of Anuletan, cousin-german to the Earl of Erroll). Hay was defeated, and in a picture shot Gordon dead (Dec. 15, 1615). Three days later Hay was captured in the house of William Hay of Logierie by George (the Laird of Gight) and John and Alexander, the brothers of Adam. He was carried by them to their “awe ne judgeing,” the Bonnie Wife’s Inn, in the Gallowgate of Aberdeen, and tried before a packed jury by a clansman, John Gordon of Clubbogoul, Sheriff of Aberdeen. Being denied counsel, he was found guilty, his fate being settled very summarily early next morning, Sunday (Dec. 21, 1615). They took him “doun the close of their judgeing out at a back yet,” and carry him to a hoill, betuix tua mottis, not a rig length or tua fra the said dure, quhair thay crowned their tragedie with so butcherly mangling the poor gentleman with several straikis upon his schederleis, hind head and necke, as the lyke hes nevir or seldome bene sene or hard” (Privy Council Register). To give an effective curtain to the “tragedie,” the Laird of Gight and his son-in-law, the Hon. William Hay, committed a violent assault on the father and the three brothers of poor young Logierie at Burnthill. One of the sons was shot “with an lang hagbute throw the thie, sua that he wes in gret hazard and perell of his lyff,” while he also received a brutal blow on the “oppin of the head with a swerd.” A second son was “stoggit on the head with a raper”: while the third got “tua deidlle strykas, ane on the head and one upon the left hand, sua that he is mutillat of his fingers.”

The Crown dallied with the case against the Gordons until Sept. 8, 1617, when the trial was stopped, and Huntly and Erroll (the chiefs of the two families) “choppit hands with one another and promeist to burie all formair greffis, displeasours and unkyndness standing amangus thame.” Adam Gordon had got into a trouble with a woman, for on December 6, 1608, he promised the Presbytery of Ellon (Mair’s Records) to marry Isobell, daughter of William Leask of that Ilk. Whether the marriage ever took place I cannot say, but he declared that he was willing “to satisfie for entycing” her out of her father’s house, to pay five merks, and make repentance in the Kirk of Ellon. His brother, the Laird, broke a sword across the head of the Laird of Leask in 1615. In 1616 Leask complained to the Privy Council that he had been annoyed by John, Patrick, Alexander and Robert Gordon of Gight and William Keith (probably their nephew) for eighteen months.

VI. Alexander Gordon “in Burnegraynes” (so described to the Privy Council) took part in the murder of Francis Hay. In March, 1618, he, his brother John of Ardlogie, and his nephew, William Gordon of Saphak, raided the lands of Sir William Keith of Balmure, and of John Merser, minister of Methlick. During the next month he attacked John Hedderwick of Boddam “at the place of Fortric,” and “schote tua bollitou thro his richt thie.” He had been denounced as a rebel in 1616 for annoying Leask of that Ilk.

VII. Robert Gordon took part in the Hay and Leask affairs. In 1617 he was requested to leave the country. He was one of a band of raiders who, in 1634, entered the lands of “Lady Frendraught,” “spying and laying of the same waist, and hanging one of her tenants at Strathbogie.” The Aberdeen Town Council was ordered (Dec., 1634) to arrest him, but declined the task. In July, 1636, the Privy Council issued a proclamation for his arrest in connection with this affair.

MIDMAR CASTLE.—A picture of the sun-dial at Midmar Castle, photographed by Miss E. C. Vansittart of Rome, appeared in the April number of the Antiquary.

THE LESLIE FAMILY OF BALNAGEITH.—Eleanor Leslie, by J. M. Stone, published by the Art and Book Company of London, and Leamington, 1898, is a curious essay in Roman Catholic biography. Eleanor Leslie (née Atlee, born 1800), married in 1823 Archibald, the son of Rev. William Leslie, minister of St. Andrews, Lhanbryde, and Laird of Balnageith (who died 1839). Mrs. Leslie ultimately became a Roman Catholic, and died in St. Margaret’s Convent, 8th April, 1892. The volume contains two charming miniatures of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie by Robertson, and full-page reproductions of Mrs. Leslie’s sketches, taken in 1825, of the Tolbooth, Elgin, Urquhart Castle, and other places in the north. Mrs. Leslie’s diary of her tour in the north in 1825 is printed verbatim, and is full of interest to Elgin people.
SCOTTISH NOTES AND QUERIES.

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

1033. Bisset, William Sinclair Smith (Sir): Colonel and Government Director of Indian Railways. The son of the Bourtie parish minister, born 1843; he graduated at Marischal College in 1866, then entered the Royal Engineers in 1863, where he became Captain in 1877, Major in 1881, Lieutenant-Colonel in 1890, and Colonel in 1895. He served through the Afghan war, 1878-80, was Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, and is now Government Director of Indian Railways. He was made C.I.E. in 1888, and K.C.I.E. in 1897.

1034. Blackrie, Alexander: Medical Writer. Born at Aberdeen in 1702, he entered Marischal College, and graduated in 1722. Having gone south, he practised as surgeon apothecary at Bromley, Kent. He is known as author of a work combating the views of Dr. Chinnock regarding the best method of removing certain internal disorders. He died in 1772.

1035. Blaikie, James: Provost and Public Man. Born in 1786, in Aberdeen, he was a successful and much trusted business and public man. He served his native town for many years, and was one of her many energetic Provosts. In token of the public recognition of his services, his statue, by Sir John Steell, has been placed in the Town Hall. He died in 1836. A remarkable story is told regarding the appearance of a spectral illusion, representing him to Mrs. Keith of St. Cyrus, in the manse there, at the hour of his death. The father of Prof. W. Garden Blaikie, D.D.

1036. Blaikie, Thomas (Sir): Provost and Public Man. Brother of the preceding. He studied at Marischal College in 1815, but devoted himself to business, and was long the managing partner in the firm of John Blaikie & Sons, the leading brassfounders in the north. Entering the Council of his native town, he acted as Provost from 1839 to 1846, and again from 1853-1855. He was knighted in 1856, in connection with his own and his brother’s public services.

1037. Bothwell, George Black: Bailie and Author. Born at Aberdeen, he was a student at Marischal College, 1820-2. He is author of a pamphlet: Provost Hadden and his Friend called to Account, 1832; and a Letter to the Working Classes of Aberdeen, 1859. He was for some time in the Town Council, and served as a Bailie.

1038. Brand, Alexander, M.A.: Accountant and Author. Born in Peterhead, he graduated at Marischal College in 1830. He was for a good many years in the service of the Hudson Bay Company, and, on his return, became an accountant in Aberdeen, and published New Decimal Coinage, 1854.

1039. Brebner or Bremner, Robert: Traveller and Author. Born in Forgue, he entered Marischal College as a student in 1803, but did not graduate. He travelled in Russia and Denmark, and has published a narrative of his journeys in both countries. In 1839 appeared Travels in Russia, 2 vols.; in 1840, Excursions in Denmark, 2 vols. He also published, in 1835, What has Christianity done for Mankind?

1040. Burnett, Andrew, D.D.: Divine and Author. Son of a burgess of Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1676, and in 1686 was ordained to St. Nicholas Parish, Aberdeen. He was, however, deposed from the ministry in 1695 for not taking the oath to their Majesties. On his taking the oath at an after period, the Trades of Aberdeen petitioned for his restoration, proposing, if they refused, to enter him by force. Trouble seemed brewing, which was averted by the interference of the Lord Justice-Clerk and the Lord-Advocate. He was deposed from the ministry for praying for the Pretender during the rebellion of 1715. He published The Spiritual Anatomy of Man, 1693, and had the degree of D.D.

1041. Cadenhead, James (Prof.) : Scholar and Author. A learned physician, who spent most of his life abroad. He studied at Marischal College, which he entered in 1635. He seems to have gone to Italy afterwards, and studied at the University of Padua, where, and at Vicenza, he taught logic, &c. From 1661 till his death, in 1679, he was one of the Professors of Logic at Padua. He was author of Astraeae Venetae Plautus, &c., 1661, and Pallis Fronola, &c., 1662. See S. N. & Q., ix., 35.

1043. Cameron, James, D.D.: Australian Divine and Presbyterian Leader. Born in Tarland, in 1826, he graduated at King’s in 1846, and studied for the ministry at the New College, Edinburgh, and in Germany. He proceeded to Australia in 1853, where he became a prominent ecclesiastic, and was the leader of the Presbyterian Union that was accomplished there. In 1875 he was Moderator of the General Assembly of the Australian Presbyterian Church, and in 1885 received the degree of D.D.

1044. Chalmers, John Gray: Journalist and Benefactor of Aberdeen University. Born at Old Aberdeen in 1818, he graduated at Marischal College in 1836. He was connected through life with the Aberdeen Journal. He was the founder of the Chair of English Literature in the University, 1893. Besides other private bequests, he left considerable sums to public objects. He died in 1890. See S. N. & Q., x., 169.

1045. Chynge, Patrick (Rev.): Episcopal Divine and Author. A native of Turriff, he graduated at Marischal College in 1814. He entered the ministry of the Scottish Episcopal Church in 1816, and was incumbent of St. John’s Episcopal Church, Aberdeen, for many years. A long list of his many publications... is given by Mr. Robertson in his Handlist of Bibliography. He died about 1869 or 1870.

1046. Chisholm, Alexander (Rev.): Missionary to Polynesia. A native of Haughsfarm, Turriff, he entered Marischal College in 1828, but subsequently studied for the missionary service of the London Missionary Society, by whom he was sent to the South Sea Islands. He is said to have been an author.

1047. Christie, James (Rev.): Episcopal Divine and Author. Born at Monquhitter, he graduated at Marischal College in 1833. Having entered the Scottish Episcopal Church, he was ordained to the charge of the Church in Turriff in 1836. Here he remained till his death, about eight years ago. A full list of his numerous publications is given by Mr. Robertson in his Handlist of Bibliography.

1048. Christie, John, D.D. (Prof.): Established Church Divine and Author. Born at Kildrummy, he graduated at King's College in 1842. He was ordained to the pastorate of Kildrummy parish in 1849, translated to Kilrennie, and in 1877 was nominated Professor of Divinity and Church History to Aberdeen University. He died in 1889.

1049. Cobban, Alexander, A.M. (Rev.): Free Church Divine and Author. Born at Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1836, and studied for the Church. He was ordained minister of the Free Church, Rathen, 1843, and continued there till his death, about 1882. In 1875 he published a volume entitled The Church Christ's Body.

1050. Connan, Charles W., L.L.D.: Teacher and Author. Born at Woodside, he graduated at King's College in 1834. Long head of a school in Liverpool, he was author of an English Grammar. His younger brother, John, became a Judge in Bombay.

1051. Corbet, Adam, D.D.: Established Church Divine and Author. Born at Bieldside, Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1816, was ordained to Drumoak parish in 1826, and had D.D. from the University of Aberdeen in 1864. He published The Christian's Triumph, 1855, and wrote the “Account of the Parish” in the New Stat. Account. He died about 1880.

1052. Cow, Alexander: Surgeon and Author. Born at Peterhead. A student in Marischal College, 1808-9, he became a surgeon in Ellon and Lonmay, and was author of a Flora Aberdeenensis.

1053. Cowie, John, A.M.: Teacher and Author. Born at Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1812, became schoolmaster in Old Aberdeen, and was author of A Catechism of Music.

1055. Cruikshank, George, A.M. (Rev.): Minister of Church of Scotland and Author. Born at Old Deer, in 1773, he graduated at Marischal College in 1791. Having chosen the ministry as his profession, he was ordained at Logie-Buchan in 1817, and died there in 1850. Besides A Sermon on the Historical Evidence of the Fulfilment of Our Saviour's Promise to be with His Church to the End of the World, 1823, he published the accounts of Old Deer and of Logie-Buchan in New Stat. Acc. of Scotland, &c.

1056. Daniel, Robert MacKenzie: Novelist. Born in Peterhead, about 1815, he studied for one year at Marischal College, in 1829. He spent a time in a lawyer's office in his native town, but afterwards devoted himself to literature. The account of his early years, given by Mr. Anderson in the Scottish Nation, differs very much from that given by Mr. Taylor of Peterhead in S. N. & Q., v., 142. There is no doubt, however, that he was in London in 1836, and that, after a period of stress and struggle, he became editor of the Court Journal, which he conducted for two years. His first novel, The Scottish Heiress, appeared in 1843. He published several novels subsequently, which had a fair amount of success. His wife also was a prolific authoress. In his latter days he edited the Jervis Herald. Having been overtaken by a mental malady, he was removed to Bethlehem Hospital, where he died in 1847. See Scottish Nation and S. N. & Q., v., 110, 142, and 157.

1057. Davidson, Patrick, L.L.D. (Prof.): Professor of Law, Aberdeen University. Son of Duncan Davidson, advocate, Aberdeen, he studied at Marischal College, and received the honorary degree of A.M. in 1834. He became advocate in Aberdeen in 1831, and was appointed Civilist in King's College in 1833, and, at the union of the two Universities, in 1860, became Professor of Law in Aberdeen University. He had the degree of L.L.D. in 1849 from King's College.

1058. Duncan, Alexander, D.D.: Divine and Author. Son of Alexander Duncan, weaver burgess, he graduated at Marischal in 1729. Having studied for the ministry, he was minister successively of the parishes of Traquair and Smallholm, after which he became Vicar of Bolam, Northumberland. He was also for a time chaplain to the “Venerable” and the “Kent,” while these vessels were the flagship's of his relative, Admiral Lord Duncan. He was author of The Devout Communicant's Assistant: or the Nature and End of the Lord's Supper Explained, 1777, which reached a second edition in 1792. He also published a History of the Revolution in 1688, and its happy effects, particularly to the Kingdom and Church of Scotland, 1790, and Miscellaneous Essays, 1799. See Records of Marischal College, vol. ii., and Biographical Dictionary of Living Authors.

1059. Dickie, George, M.D. (Prof.): Professor of Botany, &c. He was born in Aberdeen, and graduated M.A. in Marischal College, 1830. He took his M.D. in King's College, 1845. He was successively Professor of Botany in Belfast and in Aberdeen University. He is favourably known by his Flora Aberdonensis, 1838, as well as by a work on The Forest Trees of Aberdeenshire, 1843, and The Botanist’s Guide to Aberdeen, 1860.

1061. Ferguson, William, L.L.D., of Kinnmundy, Free Church Leader, Author, &c. Born in the parish of Deeside, he studied at Marischal College from 1838 to 1840. One of the most respected of Aberdeenshire county gentlemen, he is a Deputy-Lieutenant of the County, and is Chairman of the Great North of Scotland Railway. He received the honorary degree of LL.D. from his alma mater in 1895. He is one of the leaders of the movement in Scotland that seeks to promote the higher spiritual life, along the lines of what is called Keswick teaching, and is often a speaker at Christian conventions. He has published Addresses to the Christian Conference at Perth, 1871, and The Great North of Scotland Railway: a Guide, 1881. His son, James, who is also an author, has recently been made Sheriff of Argylshire.

1063. Gammack, James, M.A., L.L.D. (Rev.): Episcopal Clergyman and Author. Born in Turriff, April 23, 1837, and educated at the Parish School and Grammar School, Aberdeen, he entered Marischal College on the Scott Bursary (Episcop.) in 1853, and graduated in 1857. After two years’ theological study at Trinity College, Glenalmond, he was ordained deacon and priest by Bishop Suther, and was incumbent of Tillymoggan, 1861-5. After a sojourn at Pitlochrie and Brechin, he was incumbent at Drumlithie, 1866-83, when he removed to Aberdeen for nearly six years. While at Drumlithie, he translated St. Adamnan’s Life of St. Columba, under the supervision of Bishop Forbes of Brechin, and revised the Bishop’s translation of The Lives of St. Ninian and St. Kentigern (“The Historians of Scotland” V. and VI., 1874). For Smith & Cheetham’s Dictionary of Christian Antiquity, II., 1880, he contributed articles on “Celtic Christian Subjects;” but in Smith and Wace’s Dictionary of Christian Biography, Sects, and Doctrines, 1-IV., 1877-87, he was called upon for a larger share. Commencing with Bishop Forbes, and continuing after his death (1875), he had charge of providing the biographies of the early Scottish, Irish, and Welsh ecclesiastics and authors. Ultimately there was added the meeting whatever the needs of the edition required on miscellaneous lists. Meanwhile, after the death of Andrew Jervise, District

Examiner of Registers, Brechin (1878), he was called to edit a second edition of Mr. Jervise’s History and Traditions of the Land of the Lindsay in Angus and Mearns, 1882, and Memorials of Angus and the Mearns, 2 vols., 1885. He read a paper to the Diocesan Club, Aberdeen, upon “The Hagiology and Parochial Dedications of Scotland” (Edin., 1882), and its complement, “Hagiology and the Fine Arts” (1884); wrote an “Itinerary of a Bishop of St. Andrews in the Thirteenth Century” (Scottish Guardian, 1883), and contributed articles to be read before the Society of Antiquaries, Scotland. In 1887 the University of Aberdeen conferred on him the degree of LL.D. In 1889 he went to Canada, and in 1892 to Connecticut, where he became Rector of St. Peter’s, Plymouth, and then of St. James’s, West Hartford. At the suggestion of Dr. Wace, Dr. Gammack was called upon to see the later volumes of the Nicene and Post Nicene Fathers (Christ. Lit. Co., New York) through the press, and prepared the Indexes, &c. He married, in 1862, the eldest daughter of Rev. J. Wilson, M.A., Premnay, and has one son a physician, two clergymen, and two in business. S. N. & Q. has shown the fertility of his pen from the outset. In Canada he was Chaplain of the local camp of the Sons of Scotland, and Grand Chaplain of the Order. He is now Chaplain of the Patron of Husbandry, West Hartford, and Chaplain of the Wyllis Lodge of Free Masons. He is also Royal Arch Mason, Hartford.

CHAIR FORMERLY USED IN ST. MACHAR CATHEDRAL.

Our illustration is a chair which was purchased some years ago at a public sale in Old Aberdeen; and, along with five others, was removed from a private pew in the Cathedral.

Perhaps some one of your numerous correspondents can kindly tell me the name of the flower, also the name of the family who wore it as their badge. The initials, which are nearly obliterated, would appear to have been M. M. The same badge is to be found on one of the old panels in St. Mary’s Chapel (East Church), where there are two stars as part of the family arms, and may apply to one of the name of Murray, who might have adopted a new badge if on any special service.

An Inverness Burgess Ticket of 1673—
It is very unusual to find a burgess oath inserted in the body of a burgess ticket. However, the following oath occurs on an Inverness Burgh parchment ticket, of date 1673:—cujus tenor vulgare sequitur et est talis:—“I sall avow and profess the religion presentie teachit and profest within this Kingdome. I sall be leal and faithfull to the Kings majestie. I sall be leal and true to the burg of Innerne. Never skaith the ware, their profite for the comonwealth forsee. I sall obey the magistrates of this burg in their lawfull comands to what state soever I come and sall mantaine and assist them in the administration of justice in the execution of their office. I sall vote no person to be magistrats of this brugh bot burgeses and actual indwellers within the same. I sall give leal and true counsell to my knowledge when it is askit. I sall faithfully conceal the counsell of this brugh and sall warne them of their skaith and hinder it to my power. I sall governe no unfrieman's guids under colour of my own. I sall scott, lott, watch, wade and ward with the inhabitanits therof in all their lawfull adoes according to my power. No lordship purchase in contrair the liberties of this brugh and sall not take the monopolie in my power in their prejudice. So help me God!” The rest of the document, like the beginning, is in Latin, after the usual style, thus: “cum potestate utendi et exercendi omnibus libertatibus, et privilegiis infra dictum burgum,” &c.

W. CRAMOND.
THE ELOPEMENT OF LORD WILLIAM GORDON.

Many months ago I asked the question in these columns—Who was Lord William Gordon, who was noted by the Gentleman's Magazine to have walked to Rome in 1770. No reply was given. But since that time I have been able to piece Lord William's story together. He was the son of the 3rd Duke of Gordon, and the brother of Lord George, the Rioter. A longish article on him by me appeared in the Aberdeen Free Press of February 1, dealing specially with his romantic elopement with Lady Sarah Bunbury (née Lennox) in 1769. Since that article appeared I have discovered this letter in the Town and County Magazine of 1770. I need hardly point out that the letter is a skit, but it serves to show the extraordinary lengths to which personal journalism (criticised by Lord Chief Justice Russell as a latter-day product), was allowed to go during last century:—

A LETTER from Lady Sarah Bunbury, to Sir Charles Bunbury.

 Much injured Sir!

DARE I address these lines to you, after the conduct I have pursued, replete with the blackest ingratitude? The amiable lover, the kind friend, the tender, the too indulgent husband, was required by a woman, who cannot even plead ignorance for her excuse, and though the choice of her own inclinations, with infidelities forgiven and repeated, till broad shame stared you in the face, and made you most justly abandon her.

But guilty as I have been, more strongly seduced by vanity and fashion, than a natural propensity to vice, I have not lost the power of reflexion; nor are those sentiments you have often applauded so entirely erased from my breast, as not to make me look back with horror at my past conduct.

Our passions gone, and reason in her throne,
Amaz'd we view the mischief we have done.
After a storm, when the winds are laid,
The calm sea wonders at the wrecks it made.

If the most sincere contrition, united to a just notion of your many virtues, most excellent man! if an immutable resolution of never more deviating from the most rigid paths of honour! if an utter abhorrence of my seducers, (see vol. I. p. 169) can form any mitigation of my guilt, can palliate the offences I have given you, let me, I intreat you, lay claim to some small share of your friendship, though I should ever be precluded from your love.

As a prelude to my reformation, be assured that all the regard and partiality I entertained for Lord William Gordon are contrasted by horror and detestation. The indignities he has offered my person, and the repeated ill-usage I have received from him, would be a sufficient apology for my present sentiments concerning him, did not the least dawn of reason, and a moment's reflexion, point out the infamy of the connexion. Let me cherish, tenderly cherish, the stings of remorse, that now prey upon me almost to despair; for this life has now no consolatory hope in store for a wretch like me, unless I should obtain your forgiveness—but how vain the thought!

Pardon, Sir Charles, the presumption of this letter, and if you have any pity to confer, bestow it on your once loved, and now most miserable

Sarah Bunbury.

Near Goodwood,
Sussex, Aug. 17 [1770].

I may add that the Town and County Magazine devoted a lot of attention to the Gordons. Lord William's uncle, George, 3rd Earl of Aberdeen, was pilloried in 1771 (with his portrait) as "Lord Skinflint," for his relations with Miss Hanson (his countess). In 1786 Lord William's brother, Lord George, the Rioter, was served up under the title, "The Memoirs of Lord Crop and the Meretricious Fair." From The Fashionable Cypriad of 1798, I learn that Lord William used to frequent the Richmond Theatre—known as the "Little Go"—with the Duke of Queensberry (who left him a handsome legacy) and "other amorous cavaliers." In the Free Press I hinted that Lord William's marriage with Miss Irvine-Shepherd was objected to by the Chancellor. This I find corroborated bluntly by the Scots Magazine thus:

I have also discovered that Lord William was Receiver-General for the Duchy of Cornwall, and M.P. for Horsham from 1792 to 1796.

THE FARQUHAR FAMILY.—An interesting appendage to the notes on the genealogy of this family, which appeared in S. N. & Q. last year, will be found in the article on Lord Farquhar, which formed the subject of Celebrities at Home (No. 1536) in the World of April 5, 1899.

KNIGHT-ERSKINES OF PITTODRIE.—In the April number of the Genealogical Magazine the descent of Mr. Henry William Knight-Erskine of Pittodrie from Alfred the Great was traced. His mother, Mary Anne Moir, eldest daughter and co-heir of George Moir of Denmore, could also trace her descent from Alfred.
THE STEWARTS OF KYNACHAN.

On 18th October, 1380, Robert II. granted to his son, Alexander Stewart, the "wolfe of Badenoch," a charter of the lands of Tempar, Lassintullich, Tullochrosk, Kynachan, Garth, Bolfrocks, and a third part of Lychnoch, under a brench duty of a silver penny. James Stewart, one of the five natural sons of the latter, married Janet Menzie, daughter and heiress of Alexander Menzie of Fothergill, and from this marriage descended the houses of Fothergill, Garth, Bonskeid, Wester Cluny, Killiechassie. (there were Steuarts of Killiechassie before, but they were cadets of Ballechin, descended from Sir John Stewart of Stix, natural son of James I.), Blackhill, Cloichfildich, and Derculich. From Wester Cluny descend the Poyntz Stewarts of Chesfield, and from Derculich descend the Stewart-Robertsons of Edradyne, who are really Stewarts. Were the Stewarts of Kynachan also descended from the "wolfe of Badenoch"?

John Stewart of Kynachan, who was "out" in the '15, was a prominent member of this family. In a list of communications to the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, which appears in Archæologia Scotica, Vol. IV., Appen. II., is—"1840, Feb. 24, Narrative of Incidents connected with John Stewart of Kynachan, by James Robertson, Esq., W.S.," but I do not know the nature of the contents.

Joining Mar's army, he was in the detachment under Brigadier McIntosh, which was detailed to cross the Firth of Forth, and effect a junction with the Jacobites in the south. More fortunate than his neighbour, Stewart of Foss (see p. 130), he got safely across the Firth, and entered the citadel of Leith, along with McIntosh's diminished command, on Friday, 13th October. The next day the Duke of Argyll marched down to Leith, but, having an inadequate force and no cannon, he could only view the position, and hold a parole. He called on the garrison to surrender, under various threats. Whatever Stewart of Kynachan's rank was, he was the spokesman on the occasion, for he told the Duke, "That as to surrendering they laughed at it; and as to bringing Cannon and assaulting them, they were ready for him; that they would neither take nor give any Quarter with him, and if he thought he was able to Force them, he might Try his hand." (Annals of King George, 1717.)

It would appear as if Scott had not known who Kynachan really was, for in relating this incident in Tales of a Grandfather, he says, "A Highland gentleman, named Kinakin, answered immediately from the ramparts." Mar, writing to Lord Kenmure from the camp at Perth, on 21st Oct., and referring to McIntosh and the chief officers under his command, whom he hoped had by that time joined him, says, "I must not forget Kinakin, who, I hear, spoke so resolutely to the Duke of Argyle from the Citadel." Kynachan followed the fortunes and misfortunes of his Jacobite friends until the disastrous 13th Nov. found him a prisoner at Preston. On 20th January, 1840, the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland was presented by Mr. Alexander Stewart with "the Irons with which John Stewart of Kynochan, in Perthshire, was loaded in Preston Gaol, after the turn-out in 1715." There is a slight inaccuracy in this description, for none of the prisoners appear to have been confined in Preston Gaol, if there was such a place. The Scots officers, who surrendered, numbered 224, and the rank and file 864, in addition to whom 18 gentlemen were taken at Lancaster. "For the better preventing escapes they were order'd to several Places of confinement; The Lords were secured in the most commodious Houses or Inns. The Scotch Officers and Gentry, divided into three Parties, were set under Guard at the Sign of the Mitre, the White-Bull, and the Wind-Mill. The Highlanders and the common Men were put into the Church, where they continued about a Month, the Town's People being obliged to find them Water and Bread; whilst they took what care of themselves they could, upripping all the Linings from the Seats or Pews, and making thereof Breeches and Hose to defend themselves from the Extremity of the Weather." (Patten's History.) Some were sent to Wigan, and afterwards to Lancaster, Liverpool, and Chester prisons, to await their trials. The leading officers, numbering about 100, were sent first to Wigan, and then to London, where they were made to undergo an ignominious entry to the city. I have been unable to identify Kynachan among the officers, not knowing his rank, for there were several Stewarts bearing the same Christian name, and he is only referred to once by his territorial title, and that in connection with the incident at Leith, but I am inclined to think that he was Lieutenant-Colonel of Lord Nairn's regiment, as the others were either captains or subalterns, none of whom would be likely to have been delegated to reply to Argyll. They were committed to the Tower, the Marshalsea, Newgate and the Fleet. Lieut.-Colonel Stewart was arraigned at the Court of Exchequer on 31st May, 1716, and pled guilty to the indictment. Whether this was Kynachan or not, I am unable to find any other likely trace of him at the time, and should be glad if anyone can throw light on the matter. I am aware of the two John Stewarts, each described as "gent.," who were tried at Liverpool on 30th January and 2nd February. One thing is certain, that the lands of Kynachan were forfeited, and an abstract of survey taken by the Surveyor and his Deputy, upon the oaths of the several tenants, by order for the Commissioners for the Annexed Estates, in 1718, shows the rent and yearly value of the estate:—

Charter of Aberfeldy-beg, Borlick, &c., by John Stewart of Grantully in favour of —— Stewart of Kynachan, 1713.

Disposition John Stewart of Kynachan to David Stewart, 1724.

Disposition David Stewart to Sir Robert Menzies, 1724.

Ratification John Stewart to Sir Robert Menzies, 1724.

I shall be obliged if some one will explain this.

Stewart of Kynachan was also "out" in the '45. Was it he who was in the '15? In Lord Rosebery's List of Rebels, he is described as having held the rank of Major, commanding his own tenants, and, after Culloden, as lurking among the hills. When Cumberland arrived at Perth on 6th February, he sent Lieut.-Colonel Sir Andrew Agnew with 500 foot and 120 of the Argyllshire Militia to Blair Castle, and Lieut.-Colonel Leighton with 500 of the 27th Regiment to Castle Menzies. In addition to these, a body of the Argyllshire men, under Colonel John Campbell, was sent out and posted at various other places in Atholl, among them being Kynachan House. These outposts, numbering in all about thirty, were surprised early in the morning of the 17th March by well organised parties of Highlanders, who had marched, under Lord George Murray, the previous day from Ruthven, and divided when they came to Dalnaspidal, where the plan of attack was explained.

He promised "a reward of one guinea to every man who should surprise a centinel at his post"; but "at the house of Kinnoch the centinel was upon his guard, discharged his piece at the approach of the enemy, and alarmed his friends, who, firing from the windows, defended themselves till the party broke into the house, and, killing one man, made the rest prisoners." (The Works of John Home, Esq.) Bun-Rannoch, Blairfettie, Lude, Faskally, and other posts likewise fell into their hands, after which commenced the unsuccessful seventeen-days' siege of Blair Castle.

What became of Stewart of Kynachan? The estate has now for a long time formed a detached portion of the Breadalbane property.

THE DELECTABLE MERSE (XII., 156).—Your correspondent, Mr. J. Calder Ross, has slightly misquoted the Berwickshire proverb:—

"For a hen's gress (grass)
They 'Ill fit to the Merse"— and has thereby missed its special import. The following extracts from a somewhat rare little volume, "The Popular Rhymes, Sayings, and Proverbs of the County of Berwick," by the late George Hindman, Surgeon, Chirnside, and published in 1856, makes this sufficiently plain:—"The men of Berwickshire still partake of the habits and character of their freebooting forefathers, so far as vivacity and energy of action are concerned; to which may be added their propensity to change of place, and change of service. The Lothian hinds often live with a farmer throughout his lease of nineteen years, and if he takes a new lease they still remain on the farm. If a new farmer takes the farm, he will often retain the hinds who were hired to his predecessor. In any case, taking an average view of the periods of service in Lothian, they are long compared with the periods served by hinds in Berwickshire. A period of one, two, or three years is seldom exceeded there—the hind changing or fittin' most commonly at the end of one, two, or three years." "In relation to the frequent removals of the Merse hinds, we have this saying:—

'For a hen's gers
They 'Ill fit the Merse.'

That is, they will fit for a matter of very small importance. . . . Formerly, every hind was allowed to keep a few hens; and some of them may have actually removed for the sake of the hens' keep." pp. 31, 32.

FARMING IN SCOTLAND IN THE DAYS OF OUR GRANDFathers.

FROM the Annual Report for 1837 of the Wisconsin Farmers' Institute, now before us, the following address is taken. The subject is of great interest, and the lecturer is well known as a native of Buchan, educated at Aberdeen Grammar School, and a graduate of our University—the Hon. John Johnston, President of the Board of Regents, Wisconsin University, Milwaukee, Illinois:—

A FARMER BY BIRTH.

I am not unaware of the fact that some of our very practical farmers are quite sceptical as to the propriety of having this grand series of Farmers' Institutes closed by the speakers of the evening. They have a natural suspicion that we can tell them but little which will be of any use to them in the barn, the hen-house, the orchard, or the field, and they may be right. Still, there is one thing of which my associates and I may boast, and which cannot be gainsaid, and that is that each one of us was raised on a farm; and I feel sure that if a boy has had his home on a farm for the first nineteen years of his life, he must be very unlike the gentlemen who are to follow me if he cannot say something about farmers and farming which shall be worth hearing. He may have taught school or attended the university, yet if on his return home during vacation he had to "buckle down" to work in the barn or the harvest field, impressions were made upon him mentally and physically which he will not forget while memory endures. I had the good fortune to be born on a farm in Buchan, the central portion of the county of Aberdeen, Scotland. I hold in my hand the receipts for rent of the farm from 1759 to 1832. The first receipt runs to my great-grandfather, John Johnston, and I regret that no sum of money is mentioned. It reads—"Received full and 'compleat' payment for the crops of 1756, 1757, and 1758," from which I suspect that the rent was not paid so promptly as it might have been; still, it is satisfactory to know that at last it was "full and compleat." The receipts run to my great-grandfather till 1782, when my grandfather, William Johnston, appears as tenant, and he occupied the farm till 1832, being a term of forty years, when my father took it. My grandfather, however, continued hale and hearty till I was a large boy, and I had many conversations with him about farming when he was young. In this country there are but few instances where we can compare the condition of a farm at the present moment with its condition one hundred years ago, yet, from what I have been told, I can picture the appearance of that farm one hundred years ago and compare it with what it is to-day. The changes have been most remarkable, and I believe I am correct in saying that by far the greatest of them have taken place within my recollection.

OLD METHODS.

The farms in our neighbourhood in my grandfather's time were divided into the "intown" and the "outfields." The former was about a third of the farm around the houses. All the manure was placed upon it, and it, of course, was the richest land, but that is not saying much, for the manure amounted to but little. They would always plough the land in the same direction, and in time the ridges became like small hills with valleys between them. There was no such thing as rotation of crops, and turnips, clover, and potatoes were unknown. Oats, peas, and barley were the chief crops; and after the "intown" had been cropped for years and would not produce more than about twice the seed, part of it was given a rest—that is, was not ploughed. Thereupon, it produced a bountiful crop of wild grasses, thistles, "skellocles," sorrel, rushes, and tansies. If this was the treatment of the "intown" you can imagine how the "outfields" looked. I remember that our "outfields" on the hill were largely covered with heather, and on the low and wet ground with rushes, for drains were not thought of. I need hardly say that the use of artificial manure was wholly unknown, although they did treat the soil once in a while to a little taste of lime. You can well imagine there were many years of great scarcity and even famine. The year 1782, when my grandfather took the farm, was a year of famine. The rents paid were merely nominal, but, small as they were, they could never have been paid from the land. It is interesting to know that almost all the money the farmers received came from the knitting of stockings. Instead of women working in the fields, the men worked in the house; and the old men and boys spent their evenings, and in many instances their days also, in winter, spinning and knitting. The stockings were sold to the merchants in Aberdeen, who sent them to London, Holland, and Hamburg.

A traveller through Scotland at the beginning of the present century records it as a noteworthy fact that not a single woman was to be seen at field labour in the county of Aberdeen.

OLD-TIME IMPLEMENTS.

You will be curious to know what sort of implements they used. Well, the Scottish plough in Aberdeen-shire in the days of our grandparents was probably not so good as that used by the children of Israel in the land of Canaan three thousand years ago—certainly it was not so good as that described by Pliny as used by the Romans in his day. It was a large and coarse implement, all made of wood except the colter and the sock, and the whole was so primitive that an expert wright could make three ploughs in one day at a cost not to exceed forty cents each. It was drawn by from eight to twelve oxen. Besides the man who held the plough there was the "gaudman," who walked alongside carrying a long stick with a sharp point for pricking the lazy oxen, and his shouts were so loud and emphatic that compared to them the "geeing," and "hawing" of to-day would appear tame and uninteresting. I remember there lay around our barn for years, part of a great iron chain, which NOTES ON THE ISLE OF MUCK.

("Set as an emerald in the casing sea.")

I.—ITS NAME.

Muck is green, and that gives it distinction in a region where the prevailing summer tints are blue, grey and purple. Dean Munro, who saw the island in 1549, speaks of its verdure and fertility. Martin, whose volume on the Hebrides was the guide book of Dr. Johnson on his memorable Highland Tour, says it was "fruitful in corn and grass." George Buchanan, in the sixteenth century, declares that "for its size it was "abundant in the necessaries of life"; and Robert Buchanan, in the nineteenth century, that "it is green and fertile, an oasis in the waste." William Black loved to speak of "green Ulva." Muck has a better claim to the adjective—at least historically.

The name "Muck" has no savoury associations either in English or in Gaelic—the word means "pig." "Buchanan," says Boswell, in his Tour with Johnson, "calls it Insula Porcorum," and everyone who speaks of Muck follows Boswell with a strange persistency, although Buchanan's name for it is Porcaria. "It is so called from its form," continues Boswell; but, like his hero, Boswell was short-sighted when nature required to be seen: and so we are not astonished to find little resemblance to a pig either in the general aspect of the island or in its map. It is more likely that it received its name from being a well-known haunt of the wild boar. The natives maintain that Muck is only a contraction of the Gaelic name for a whale—"the sea-pig"—numbers of which are sometimes seen in the neighbourhood. Be that as it may, the men of Muck had a special name for their island when at sea—one authority says it was Tirr Chrainne, which he interprets "Sow's Island." It was a general belief over the Western Isles that it was particularly unlucky to use the name of the home-island when at sea: and the islesmen adopted the harmless device of a nickname, so that the deluded "fiends of the nether deep" could ascertain neither their origin nor their destination.

When proprietors were by courtesy named after their possessions, it was embarrassing for the owner of the island to be addressed simply as Muck. Dr. Johnson met the Laird of Muck at Dunvegan in 1773, and he testifies to the Islesman's abhorrence of his territorial title. "An appellation," says the Doctor in his sounding English, "which he thinks too coarse for his island, he would like still less for himself." The Laird contended that the name of his pro-

Buchan Field Club.—A meeting of the Club was held on 22nd ult. at Peterhead, the Rev. Dr. Stewart presiding. The Rev. W. Serle of Musselburgh read a paper on the Migration of Birds, with special reference to Peterhead. He maintained that many popular errors on the subject were being dissipated by the closer investigation it was now receiving. Incidentally, the lecturer mentioned that the list of Buchan Birds now amounted to 189. Mr. Serle was cordially thanked for his interesting paper.

Clyack.—If this word has not been too much in evidence, I should like to call attention to a short paragraph in this month's Leisure Hour, by J. H. Spettigue, on the ancient harvest custom of "calling the neck" (which has been described by Baring-Gould also) in Cornwall. The neck is the last sheaf cut. It is hoisted, decorated, and the cry is raised, "A neck, a neck, I've got 'un." "What have ye? a neck, &c." Could it be possible that Clyack is a corruption of Calling the neck? A. M.
The Gerard Family.—An interesting account is given in Eleanor Leslie (a biography by J. M. Stone, London, 1898) of how the Gerards of Rochsoles became Catholics. From the pedigree of this family (given in S. N. & Q., Vol. X., p. 61), it may be remembered that Colonel Gerard of Rochsoles was the grandson of the Rev. Alexander Gerard, professor of divinity in King’s College, Aberdeen. The Colonel married (in 1839) Euphemia, the daughter and co-heir of Sir John Robinson, and had, besides other issue, the Rev. John Gerard, S.J. (author of two books on the Gunpowder Plot), and two daughters, Jane and Dorothea (Madam Laszowski and Madam Longard de Longarde), the well-known novelists. Father Gerard contributes an account of his father’s conversion (pp. 153-8) to Eleanor Leslie. He says his father and mother at the time of their marriage were Scotch Episcopalian. In 1844 they were in Rome. In 1847 Colonel Gerard paid a visit to the West Indies, and during his absence his wife began “seriously” to study the Catholic claims. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Gerard went to Ireland, and met several priests. On returning to Scotland she was visited by Mrs. Montieith of Carstairs, who had “unquestionably” much to do with Mrs. Gerard’s vêrting. By the time Colonel Gerard returned his wife had “practically made up her mind to go over.” Mrs. Gerard was baptised at St. Margaret’s Convent, Edinburgh, and soon after (Dec., 1848) her husband and three sons joined her. Colonel Gerard “was a remarkably good artist; his sketches, which now cover the walls of Rochsoles, are delightful.” Mrs. Gerard could also sketch.

I wish you had given order with your warrant that my head had been struck off, or I hanged. Then I had been at rest, but now I am murdered in person. I am sure his Majesty does no such cruelty to any, much less to one who has done what I have in his service, and which is well known to His Majesty, having been certified by his Council in Scotland.” Did Innes belong to the Leuchars family?

of National Biography does not deal with his origin. An interesting article on Keith appeared in the Daily Telegraph, London, on March 28, 1899. J. M. B.

1234. "Tales of the Wise Men of Gotham." —At the present time I am gathering bibliographical and other notes relative to the well-known "Tales of the Wise Men of Gotham." I have seen it mentioned that copies of these tales—in the usual chap-book form—have been printed in Scotland and Ireland; though, as yet, I have no notices of existing copies. If you, or any of your readers, can inform me of copies printed at Edinburgh or elsewhere in Scotland (or even in Ireland), I shall be pleased to acknowledge same. I may also say that I should be glad to be brought into correspondence with owners of copies. Are any copies to be seen in the great Scottish libraries?

The new volume of the "County Histories of Scotland."
But much more has been done by S. N. & Q. than the printed page can reveal. Persons of literary and allied leanings have been brought into courteous touch with one another, correspondences have been set up, and intimacies and friendships of a lasting kind have been formed—the motive being in all cases the same, a strong desire to be of service by widening our circle of knowledge. It is not possible to pass from the work accomplished without a hearty acknowledgment to all who helped us in times past. We shall start a new volume with a lighter heart than we began the first, supported by many promises of substantial help from influential friends.

With next issue it is proposed to begin a New Series of S. N. & Q. In this we follow in the footsteps of our great English contemporary and prototype, and for the same reason, which was:—"That they who now wish to subscribe . . . may have the opportunity of doing so, without on the one hand having an incomplete work, or, on the other, incurring the expense of purchasing the back volumes." The New Series will mark no particular change in our policy, aims or methods, although we shall continue so to modify these, when the occasion seems to serve, for the better fulfilment of our main purpose.

One other point falls to be mentioned. The necessity has been urged of a General Index to the whole of the twelve volumes now published. As this task will obviously involve considerable labour and cost, it cannot be undertaken without a backing of subscribers desirous of possessing such an easy method of reference to the varied contents of the work. Order forms are issued herewith, and an early and encouraging return of these will prompt a speedy compilation of a General Index, which subscribers may bind up with Volume XII.

THE SEVEN DAUGHTERS OF THE WILLIAM GORDON, THE FIFTH LAIRD OF GIGHT.

The career of the fifth laird of Gight reminds one of a fairy story, which tells of some wicked ogre, with “Seven Sons and Seven Daughters.” I have dealt with the Seven Sons, who followed in their father’s footsteps so dutifully. The story of their Seven Sisters is scarcely less interesting, for the madcap strain in the family came out either in them or in their children. The fifth laird’s daughters were:

VIII. Janet (?) Gordon. Dr. Temple says that one of the fifth laird’s daughters “married Leith of Harthill.” Dr. Davidson, in his Earldom of the Gartoch, notes that John Leith, second of Harthill, married as his second wife a Janet Gordon, whom I take to be Gight’s daughter. Dr. Davidson further adds that Leith had by his first wife (Beatrice Fraser) a son John, third of Harthill, the notorious rebel who broke out of the Tolbooth of Aberdeen, July, 1640: and that it was his son Patrick who was executed as a rebel in Edinburgh, Oct. 26, 1647 (at the age of 25). Now Spalding (Vol. II., 392) speaks of this Patrick as the “cousin” of Nathaniel Gordon. Hence I am inclined to believe that — Gordon of Gight married John, the third, not the second, laird of Harthill, as Dr. Davidson says. In any case, Spalding reference makes it clear that Patrick Leith was descended from a Gight Gordon (whereas Dr. Davidson’s statements makes no relationship at all). She was either the mother or the grandmother of “young Harthill,” who was hand-in-glove with Nathaniel Gordon, notably in the raid on the Aberdeen merchants at St. James’s fair, Elgin, July 24, 1644, and at the capture of two of Forbes of Craigievar’s troopers at Inverurie on Sunday, Feb. 23, 1645. In one instance young Leith would have been the second, and, in the other, the whole, cousin of Nathaniel Gordon.

IX. Christian Gordon made a good match by marrying Sir Adam Gordon of Park. According to a manuscript genealogy of the Park family, drawn up by James Mitchell, factor of Pitfour, in 1815, Sir Adam was the second of the seven sons of John Gordon of Cairnburrow, who died 1622, and who—among many big purchases in land, amounting to £206,666 (Scots)—had bought Rothiemay and Turtery for his eldest son, William (killed 1630), and the estate of Park (at a cost of £34,000 Scots) for his second son, Adam, who entered into possession, 1617. By Christian Gordon (his first wife) he had two sons and a daughter. As the Park genealogy (which the late Mr. Charles Elphinstone-Dalrymple investigated) is very elaborate, I shall content myself with tracing it out only in regard to the Duff connection, because it is the first landed family with whom we can connect the Duke of Fife. The eldest son of Sir Adam was—

Sir John Gordon of Park, who married Margaret, daughter of Sir James Sibbald of Kankellor, in 1631, and had—

Sir John Gordon, created a baronet in 1680. The baronetcy became extinct in 1804.

Sir George Gordon of Edinglassie, sheriff of Banff. He had a daughter—

Jean Gordon, married William Duff of Dipple (grandson of the much disputed Adam Duff in Clunybeag), and became the mother of the first Earl Fife, and ancestor of the Duke of Fife.

X. — Gordon (according to Dr. Temple) married (1) Alexander Gordon of Tulloch, and (2) Thomas Gordon of Pittendreich. The latter statement is confirmed by the old manuscript genealogy of the Gordons, quoted by Dr. John Stuart in his preface to Britaine’s Distemper, which notes that Thomas Gordon of Pittendreich married “the laird of Geyth’s daur, Gordon, and has succession.” Thomas was the fourth son of Sir Thomas Gordon of Cluny (by Elizabeth Douglas, daughter of the Earl of Angus), and brother of Sir Alexander Gordon of Cluny and of Patrick Gordon of Ruthven, who wrote Britaine’s Distemper. Pittendreich was implicated in the feud with Frendraught, 1634, and in an attack in Aberdeen March 26, 1644 (Spalding). It may be noted that Nathaniel Gordon (her nephew) declared at the time of his death (Jan. 20, 1640) that 500 merks were due to him by Janet Gordon, widow of William Gordon of Tulloch, who was alive in August, 1638 (Great Seal). Captain Gordon of Tulloch raised some soldiers for France, and went there in March, 1642 (Spalding). The fact that Sir Thomas Gordon of Cluny was caution to the Privy Council for the sixth laird of Gight in connection with the murder of Francis Hay in 1617, strengthens the supposition that the Gight and Cluny family were connected as indicated in this Pittendreich marriage. In 1674, Thomas Gordon of Pittendreich was given as the lifeferter of Tulloch, the then laird of which was then a minor (Records of the Meeting of the Exerci of Alford). I imagine that this daughter of the house of Gight was the mother of—

made a series of violent attacks on Magnus Mowat in 1601. So far, however, from that invalidating the statement that one of his daughters "married Mowat of Balquholl," it would, if anything, strengthen it.

XIII. Elspet (or Elizabeth) Gordon was a sister worthy of her brothers' exploits. She married in 1600 James Cheyne of Pennan, a James Cheyne (possibly of Esslemont) being charged by the Ellon Presbytery (Feb. 11, 1600) with having performed the ceremony, he "having no function in the ministrie" (Mair's "Presbytery of Ellon). Cheyne belonged to a very lawless family. In June, 1617, he assaulted one of Gordon of Buckie's tenants at Cairnhill, and threatened him with his life unless he left Esslemont, or paid "in name of blede maill" a number of fowls and a sum of money yearly. In May, 1618, Cheyne and his wife (who had left Pennan) carried on an extraordinary war on John Petrie in Esslemont. They broke into his house, and took away the "haille meite, drinke, miell, beiff, and muttoun." When Petrie objected, Cheyne threatened to kill him, and from November, 1618, to February, 1619, they persisted in looting his house. Mrs. Cheyne was ultimately charged before the Privy Council with "consaueing ane heich offence agains" Petrie. One day, "in the hicht of hir distemperit passiouen and unrewlie humour," Mrs. Cheyne "pat violent hand" on Petrie, "and schamefullie and unhonnestlie [the adjective is a quaint seventeenth-century criticism of woman as a pugilist] strak and dang him with her hands [nails?] and feit on sindrie partis of his body and left him for deit." The Crown could not prove the case, but Mrs. Cheyne, I take it, was quite capable of the assault.

XIV. Marjorie Gordon seems to have been the Marjorie Gordon who was excommunicated in 1603 (Mair's "Ellon). She married her cousin german, Alexander Innes of Cults, known as "Crag-in-Peril" (I may note in parenthesis that her husband's grand-niece, Jane Innes, who died in 1727, married Thomas Pitt, the ancestor of Lord Chatham, and William Pitt, whose ancestry I traced in this journal of June, 1898). Marjorie had a strain of the family blood, for there was "sum intrigue" between her aunt Innes, the marriage coming off "abruptly," though she was really "contracted with the Laird of Tolly Barclay." (Familie of Innes.) They had seven children.

1. John Innes of Leuchars was his mother's son. In 1612 he and several other boys, including two Gordons (of course), were arraigned before the Aberdeen Town Council for a series of riots in the Grammar, Song, and Writing Schools.
of the city. On December 1 they took possession of the Song School, "lang before the supertitious tyne of Yeuill, against the laudibill actis and statutes maid thairanent obofior, nochwithstanding that soueretie wes found be thame that thay sould not tuck the schullies at that time nor na uther tyne of the year; and that thay sould observe gude ordour and discipline within the saidis schullies." They were also charged with carrying guns and with "schouting thairwith aswell on the nicht as on the day." Their "gret deids of oppression and rytottis" included their forcible entry of the citizens' houses, and "bracking up thair duiris and windowis and maisterfullie tacking of thair fouillis, pultrie, breid, and vivaris." They also looted the country carts, which brought "fewall and vivaris cumeing to this burgh and mercat thairof." The ringleaders were imprisoned in the Tolbooth. This John Innes began life in the French army with his distant kinsman, Colonel Gordon (of Wallenstein notoriety). He married Marjorie Geddes, daughter of James Geddes of Auchenseat, and had eighteen children, including John Innes, who married Elizabeth Gordon, daughter of Sir George Gordon of Edinglassie, the latter being his father's first cousin. His wife's sister married William Duff of Dipple (as I have shown).

2. Alexander Innes entered the English service, and was attached successively to Buckingham, Stafford, and the King. He was once employed on a state mission to Holland. (Familie of Innes).

3. James Innes was also in the English (royalist) service, and was made a prisoner by the Parliamentary army, at Windsor, 1643.

4. Patrick Innes was employed by the Earls of Argyll and Huntly.

5. George Innes had a pair of colours in Lord Spynie's regiment, raised for service with Gustavus Adolphus, 1621.

6. Robert Innes was also worthy of his mother's son. In 1621 (Privy Council Register) his uncle, the laird of Gight, had to appear on his behalf, as cautioner that the boy should not disturb Marion Strachan, relict of John Innes of Leucharis (probably his aunt). He entered the French army, and afterwards served with the English Royalists (Familie of Innes).

With such a family of sons and daughters, it is not surprising that Gight's dependants had something of his temper in them. Thus in 1622 George Gordon, one of his tenants at Lethenty, went forth to do battle on his own account with two brothers, named Ferguson, at Newburgh. Undeterred by the fact that the day was the Sabbath, he struck one of them with "his faldit neiff upoun the face and head, and thereby damneist and feld him deid to the ground," and then "verrie barbarously cuttit off his right lug." Not satisfied with this barbarism, he pursued the other brother with a drawn sword, and "cutt ane grite piece of his harne pane."

Forbes of Pitnacalder.—Our correspondent, "F.," sends us the following inscription, copied from the tombstone over the remains of the Rev. John Forbes, author of the Pitnacalder version of the Psalms. The stone—a large, flat one, raised on four pillars—is near to what was, until recently, the entrance door at the east end of the church of Deer, but which, on the inside of the edifice having been altered in consequence of a new organ being put therein, has been built up. Some Latin phrases with which the inscription concludes are so much obliterated that they are not decipherable:—

Dedicated by Mrs. Marg't. Hay, his widow, to the memory of John Forbes of Pitnacalder, M.A., Minister of Deer, who died Au. 1769, in the 81st year of his age and the 52nd of his ministry.

With a manly figure he possessed the literature of the Scholar, the eloquence of the Preacher, the accomplishment of the Gentleman.

As a Pastor
his character was distinguished by piety, virtue, and entire devotion to the Cause of Christ.

Beloved by his relatives, respected by his acquaintances, venerated by the body of the people, his life was useful and his end was peace.

NOTABLE MEN AND WOMEN OF ABERDEENSHIRE.

1064. Glenie, John Stuart, M.A.: Barrister, Journalist, and Author. Son of Alexander, of Maybank, Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1849, studied for the English Bar at the Middle Temple, and has been a voluminous author and busy journalist. For a list of his multifarious works see A. W. Robertson's "Handlist of Bibliography." He is an authority on all matters bearing on the Arthurian legend, and has written several books dealing with that subject.

1065. Hunter, Robert, M.A., LL.D. (Rev.): Missionary, Lexicographer, and Author. A native of Aberdeen, where he was born about 1821, he graduated at Marischal College in 1841, after a very distinguished career at that University. Having studied for the ministry of the Free Church, he gave himself to the Foreign Mission field, and was for some time missionary at Nagpore. Having been compelled, for the sake of his health, to return to this country, he settled in London, and devoted himself to literary pursuits. His name is, however, specially associated with the "Encyclopedic Dictionary," in 7 vols., 4to., which he edited, and which appeared between 1879 and 1889. He died a few years ago. His degree of LL.D. was given him by Aberdeen University in 1883.

1066. Hutchison, John Cruickshank: Minor Poet. Born in Aberdeen, in 1847, he entered the counting-house of Messrs. Alex. Pirie & Sons, Stoneywood Works, when he was only 16 years of age. Of literary tendencies, and having a poetic gift, he early courted the Muse. Possessed also of considerable talent as an elocutionist, he was among the first who, in 1864, introduced penny readings into the north of Scotland. In 1877 he published "Village Voices, or Warbles from the Sprays of Stoneywood," which was well received and rapidly sold. In 1878 he published, in the Chandos Classics, "Fugitive Poetry, 1800-1878," a valuable collection of anonymous verse, which secured the applause of the critics.

1070. Jamieson, Robert, M.D.: Medical Author. Born in Aberdeen, son of a goldsmith, he graduated at Marischal College in 1838, took his M.D. at Edinburgh in 1839, became a lecturer on Mental Diseases at Marischal College Medical School in 1845, and was afterwards appointed Physician to the Royal Lunatic Asylum, Aberdeen. He has published "A Lecture on the Medical Jurisprudence of Insanity," 1850; "Mind and Body: A Discourse," 1858; "Phrenical Action of the Cerebrum," 1858; and "Recent Increase of Mental Disease," 1875.

1071. Jamieson, Thomas, Fr., LL.D.: Author. Brother of No. 1070, he graduated at Marischal College in 1847, and acted as Fordeye Lecturer in Aberdeen University, 1862-74. He has written extensively on Agriculture, &c., and is LL.D. of Aberdeen, 1884. He has published: On the General Principles of Reclaiming Land, 1855; On the Pleistocene Deposits of Aberdeen and Aberdeenshire, 1858; On the Outliers of Lias, Aberdeenshire, 1859; List of Abundance in Aberdeen, Banff, and Kincardine; Structure of the S.W. Highlands, 1866; Crag Strata beneath the Boulder Clay, 1860; Ice-Worn Rocks of Scotland, 1863; Parallel Roads of Glen Roy, 1863; History of Last Geological Change in Scotland, 1865; Remains of the Stone Period in Buchan, 1868.

1072. Jamieson, Andrew (Prof.): Scientific Author. This noted son of Bon-Accord is one of our highest authorities on Electrical and Mechanical Science, and it is said that some of his treatises on these subjects have been translated into several languages.

1073. Johnston, George, D.D.: Divine of Presbyterian Church of England. A native of Aberdeenshire, and educated there, he was ordained to Trinity Church, Liverpool, in 1857. Distinguished as a critical reviewer and author, he has published "The Unpardonable Sin," 1858; "The Root and Fruit of Romanism and Ritualism," 1872; and "Scottish Church History." He has long acted as Clerk to the Liverpool Presbytery.

1074. Keith, Sir John, 1st Earl of Kintore: 3rd son of the 6th Earl Marischal. For his alleged share in preserving the Regalia of Scotland during the Commonwealth, he was, in 1660, appointed Knight Marischal of Scotland, an office made hereditary in his family. He was also made a Peer, under the title of Earl of Kintore, in 1677, and in December, 1684, was appointed Treasurer Depute. He supported the Union with England, and died in 1714.
1075. Keith, George, 5th Earl Marischal: Founder of Marischal College (born 1553, died 1623). This nobleman was educated at King's College, and subsequently at several continental universities, and of Geneva, where he came under the influence of Theodore Bora. He also visited the chief European Courts. On returning home, he was implicated in various turbulent proceedings, including the Raid of Ruthven, but vindicated his innocence. He was entrusted by James VI. with the task of negotiating the King's marriage with Anne of Denmark, and in 1609 was Royal Commissioner to the Scottish Parliament. A cultivated and public-spirited man, his founding of Marischal College is a standing proof of his enlightened views on the subject of education. He died in 1623.

1076. Keith, William, D.D. (Prof.): Divine. Brother of George Keith of Linturk, Leochel-Cushnie, he graduated at Marischal College in 1643, was ordained minister of Kinnellar, translated to Montkeggie, in 1650, and thence to Udny, 1653, on being appointed Professor of Divinity, Edinburgh University. He demitted his charge, 1663, and got the incumbency of St. Cuthbert's shortly after. He had the degree of D.D.

1077. Kemp, James, D.D.: Bishop of Maryland, U.S.A. Born, 1764, in Keith-hall, he graduated at Marischal College in 1786, and devoted another winter to Divinity and other studies. In 1787 he emigrated to Maryland, and soon became a clergyman in the Episcopal Church there. From 1790 to 1810, he was Rector of Great Choptank parish in Maryland. He was associate Rector of St. Paul's, Baltimore, when he was elected Suffragan Bishop for the aged Bishop Clogget, in 1814. On the death of Bishop Clogget, in 1816, he took the whole charge of the diocese of Maryland. He died in 1827. For notice see S. N. & Q., xii., 66.

1078. Kemp[1], John, I.L.D. (Prof.). Stated in the Marischal Graduation Records to be a native of Coull, though Dr. Gammack says that in American Memoirs he is said to have been born at Auchsossan, Scotland. Dr. Gammack asks whether there is an Auchsossan in Coull. In a list of the farms, villages, and estates of Coull given in "Slater's Directory," there is no mention of an Auchsossan in that parish. There is, however, notice of an estate of the name in Lumphanan, which has now become the property of Farquharson of Finzean; and, from Smith's Abercrombyshire, it appears that there was once an Auchsossan Loch in Lumphanan, which has now been drained. Probably, as Coull and Lumphanan are adjoining parishes, there may have been a migration at some time of the family from the one parish to the other. Dr. Kemp, who seems to have emigrated to America after graduation, became Professor of Mathematics at Columbia University, in 1786, and had the degree of L.L.D. from King's College, Aberdeen, 1787. He held his professional chair till 1812. See S. N. & Q., xii., 66 and 95.

1079. Knight, William, LL.D. (Prof.): A native of Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1802. He taught the Semi class, 1810-11, and conducted extra-mural classes in Botany and Chemistry, 1811-16, and acted as Professor of Natural Philosophy, Belfast, 1816-22. He succeeded Copland as Professor of Natural Philosophy, Marischal College, by arrangement, 1822. He resumed the teaching of Botany in 1823, and in 1827 was appointed lecturer on that subject by the joint medical school. He has published: Heads of a Course of Lectures, 1811; Outlines of Botany, 1813 and 1828; Facts towards a New Theory of the Earth, 1818; The First Day in Heaven, 1820; and "Marischal College," in New Stat. Account, 1845. He died in 1844.

1080. Leask, William, D.D. Said, in Marischal College Records, to have been the son of a farmer in Slains parish, but, in a contemporary sketch of his life, published after his death, he is said to have been born at Kirkwall, Orkney, on 4th March, 1812. If the William Leask, of Marischal College, who signs himself, in 1834, in the College Album, the son of a Slains farmer, is the Dr. Leask who became a Congregational minister in London and a voluminous author, then there must have been some mistake about his birthplace in the notice published after his death. In that notice he is said to have been dismissed from his situation in Edinburgh for advocating the disestablishment of the Church. From Edinburgh he went to Liverpool, where he was engaged as a home missionary. Thence he removed to Dover, where he became minister of the Congregational Church. Esher Street, Kennington, was his next charge, which he held for some years. Ware, in Herts, and finally Maberly Chapel, Kingsland, were his subsequent pastorates. In addition to the long list of publications noticed by K. J. in S. N. & Q., ix., 55, Dr. Leask issued: Struggles for Life, which is to some extent an autobiography of his early difficulties, though fictitious names and dates are introduced; The Shepherd of Grove Hall, Our Era, The Hall of Vision. While at Kennington, Dr. Leask became connected with The Christian Examiner and The Universe, and afterwards edited The Christian Weekly News, one of the earliest religious newspapers. He also took a prominent part in the theological controversies in which Dr. Campbell, of the British Banner, was engaged. He was, moreover, for twenty-one years the editor of The Rainbow, a monthly magazine, which was mainly devoted to the cause of the Conditional Immortality Association. He died, aged 73, in 1885.

1081. Leslie, James, M.D.: Principal of Marischal College. Bajan, 1636. He took the degree of M.D. "After his travels in France and the Low Countries he came home to Aberdeen, and was called to be physician to the toune be the Counsell thereof," Author of O'Λητην Τετρων Αμαλλάνθα, Aberd., 1661. See Family of Leslie, III., 409.

1082. Leslie, William: Provost of Aberdeen. A native of New Deer, where he was born in 1802, he came in early life to Aberdeen, where he attached himself to the Congregational Church, under the pastorate of Rev. Alexander Thomson. From the first Mr. Leslie took an active interest in church affairs, and was an active Sabbath School teacher. It is remarkable that, though Mr. Leslie was all his life immersed in important commercial enterprises, much engaged in public affairs and civic concerns, his interest in church matters never abated, nor did he ever get out of touch with the simple faith of his early years. Mr. Leslie was chosen Lord Provost of Aberdeen in 1869, and, among other public functions connected with that position, he had the honour of conferring the freedom of the city on Mr. Gladstone. He died in 1879.

1083. Liddell, Duncan, M.A.: Professor of Mathematics, Marischal College. A nephew of the founder of the chair, he graduated in 1834. He was appointed to the Chair of Mathematics in 1861, which he held till 1887, when he was succeeded by his son, George. "He taught Geometry, Navigation, Gun- nery for several years in London, and died in Aberdeen, very aged." Mr. Robertson, in his Handlist of Bibliography, notes a book entitled A Vindication of Duncan Liddell and his Son.

1084. Liddell, George (Prof.). Son of 1083, he was tertian of Marischal College in 1833; Liddell Tutor, 1855-87, and succeeded his father as Professor of Mathematics in 1867. He was deprived of his chair by the University Commission in 1716.

1085. Lippe, Robert, LL.D. (Rev.): Author, &c. A native of Kennethmont, he studied at Marischal College as tertian and magistrand, 1852-3. He afterwards became the schoolmaster of Forgue, and finally the chaplain of the Royal Infirmary, Aberdeen. He secured the honorary degree of LL.D. in 1895 from Aberdeen University. He has edited Selections from Wodrow's Biography, "Collections for the New Spalding Club."

1086. Litster, Alexander: Regent and Professor of Philosophy. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1652, he entered Marischal College in 1667, and was appointed to teach Philosophy in Marischal College, 1682. This chair he demitted in 1693. He died in 1699. See S. N. & q., ii., 22.

1088. Longmuir, John, LL.D. (Rev.): Scholar, Poet, Lexicographer. This notable divine is stated in the Marischal College Album to be the son of a sailor in Aberdeen. In a biographical notice, published at the time of his death, he is, however, stated to have been born near Stonehaven, in the Mearns, 13th November, 1803. He graduated at Marischal College in 1825, and was ordained to the pastoral charge of the Mariners' Church, Aberdeen, 1840. Having joined the Free Church in 1843, he established and presided over the Free Mariners' Church till his death, in 1883. A very voluminous author in prose and verse. For a list of his many publications, see Robertson's Handlist of Bibliography, and K. J. in S. N. & Q., ix., 74. His name will be long associated with his excellent edition of Jameson's Scottish Dictionary, in 5 vols., published 1879-87.

1089. Milne, Robert, D.D.: Divine of Church of Scotland and Author. Born in Drumoak, he graduated at Marischal College in 1831. Having studied for the Church, he has been successively minister of Towie and West Church, Perth. His list of works, all of a practical religious character, is given in Robertson's Handlist of Bibliography. He was made a Doctor of Divinity by Aberdeen University in 1885.

1090. Murray, Alexander, M.D.: Lecturer on Clinical Medicine and Author. Born in Rathen, and graduated at Marischal College in 1816, he studied Medicine, and had M.D. from Edinburgh in 1828. He was lecturer on Clinical Medicine in Marischal, 1837. He published his Northern Flora in 1836, and is author of some other works.

1091. Reid, John Grant: Journalist and Author. This versatile writer, who is the chief contributor to Aberdeen's only art periodical, Brown's Bookstall, and whose monthly descriptions of the leading black and white artists of the present day form a most attractive feature of that periodical, is still a young man, but has already acquired a high reputation among his fellow-journalists for the vigour and flexibility of his English style. He has issued a half-decade volume, containing a collection of his incursions in the journal referred to, under the title of At the Sign of the Brush and Pen.

1092. Rettie, Middleton, LL.D.: Advocate and Law Reporter. Born in Aberdeen, he graduated at Marischal College in 1847, and was called to the Scottish Bar in 1855. He has for many years been the chief reporter of the cases decided at the Court of Session, and the volumes published by him and his fellow-reporter are of the highest value to all legal practitioners. He received the degree of LL.D. from Aberdeen University in 1894.

1093. Rettie, Robert: Inventor and Author. A native of Aberdeen, he entered Marischal College in 1818, but did not prosecute his studies to graduation. He is chiefly known by his invention of a system of safety signals for ships at sea. He has also written on the subject. The titles of four of his volumes are given by K. J. in S. N. & q., x., 103. He has devised a system of signals for railways as well as for ships, and was Librarian to the Faculty of Procurators, Glasgow.

1094. Reith, George, D.D.: Free Church Divine and Author. Born in Aberdeen, about 1842, he graduated at Marischal College. Having studied for the Free Church, he has long been a prominent minister in that communion. He is the author of a work entitled The Gospel according to St. John, published in 1889, and had his D.D. from Aberdeen University in 1892.
1095. Rose or Ross, Alexander: Bishop of Edinburgh, &c. Born about 1646, in Monymusk, he graduated at Marischal College in 1665, but studied divinity at Glasgow University. He was ordained to the ministry of the Church of Scotland in Perth, but was translated to Glasgow to act as Professor of Divinity. He is also said to have been Principal of St. Mary's College, St. Andrews, in 1686, but was translated the same year to the See of Moray, thence he was transferred to Edinburgh in 1687. He survived all the Bishops who were superseded at the Revolution, and died in 1720.

1096. Sellar, James A. (Rev.): Canon of Edinburgh Cathedral and Author. A native of Peterhead, he graduated at King's College in 1847. Having studied for the Episcopal Church, he was ordained to the ministry of that Church in Perth in 1851, and thence was translated to Edinburgh, where, for some time before his death, he served as Canon of the Cathedral and Clerk to the Synod. He died in 1890. He published, in 1869, Church Doctrine and Practice.

1097. Strachan, Robert Douglas: Artist. Born in 1875, in Aberdeen, he was educated at Gordon's College, and, after a short spell of work in a granite merchant's establishment, he joined the Free Press as a lithographic artist, and came under the genial influence of Dr. Alexander, the Editor, who encouraged him to prosecute his studies as an artist. After a year at the Life School of the R.S.A., Edinburgh, young Strachan went to Manchester, where he did black and white work for various papers. His strong point, however, is decoration, and some of his work of this kind has received the commendation of Mr. Walter Crane, the greatest of all decorative artists. Having returned to Aberdeen, he has been employed to decorate the Belmont Street Hall, belonging to the Trades Council, a task which he has performed with the highest credit. He is one of the most promising of Aberdeen's young artists.

1098. Wedderburn, Alexander, M.A. (Rev.): Author. Brother of No. 1099, he was born in Aberdeen about the end of the 16th century, and graduated at Marischal College. He is author of a work entitled Raddi Augustiniani, 1652.

1099. Wedderburn, David: Latin Poet, Scholar, and Grammarian. Born in Aberdeen, in the summer of 1590, he was educated there, and, after serving as Regent, became Rector of the Grammar School in his native city. His Latin Grammar had a great vogue in its day. For a list of his many writings on Grammar, and his poetic productions, see Robertson's Handlist of Bibliography. See also Memoir in Collection for Aberdeen and Banff (Spald. Club Series). He died in 1646.

1100. MacGillivray, Pitlendrigh, A.R.S.A.: Sculptor. This artist, who is one of the foremost of Scottish sculptors of the present day, is an Aberdonian by birth. He has produced many works of high merit, among them the statue of Robert Burns, erected a few years ago in Irvine.

1101. Mitchell, John: Artist. A native of Aberdeen, born in 1838, on Donside, not far from Woodside, he came of an artistic family, and early developed the hereditary gift of his family. He studied art for some time in London, under Professor Legros. Most of his life, however, has been spent in Aberdeen, where his water-colour landscapes are highly esteemed. Her Majesty the Queen, who is no mean art critic, is one of his patrons. He is also a musician of high talent. For fuller notice, see Brown's Bookstall, April, 1899.

ALIASES IN BREADALBANE.

It would be a difficult matter at the present day to ascertain to what clans belonged the gentlemen figuring under the names of, for instance, Nicol Our M'Ane V'Patrik Moir, James Makfinlay Makenny V'Eane Moir, John Dow M'Onoquhy V'Onile V'Ean, or John M'Conche Roy W'Ane W'Allen, albeit their pedigrees may be given to the third and fourth generations. But the bun-sloine, or root-surname (bun = origin, root, stock; sloine = surname), borne by some families, when given, readily affords the means of identifying the bearers. A hunting ground for such is to be found in the Kenmore Kirk Session Records, from which most of the following names have been taken, but it must be understood that, in speaking of these, the line of demarcation is drawn at the confines of Breadalbane, at all events with some:—

The McComies were Andersons.
" McNasters " Campbells.
" McKinis " Frasers.
" McCails " McDonalds.
" McKeochs " Do.
" McMihs " Do.
" McLoantaig " McDougalls.
" Fletchers " McGregors.
" Crears " McIntoshes, or Tosch-achs (of Monzievaird).
" Koinachs " McKenzie's.
" McNairs " McNabs.
" Mclnvains " Do.
" McCrackens " McNaughtons.
" McKay " Do.
" McVicars " Do.
" McNairds " Tinclairs.
" McCombichs " Stewarts (of Appin).

The above aliases were used by branches of the respective clans or families named, and by no others so far as I have been able to discover, and several of them are still in use in ordinary conversation, but not in writing.

It is somewhat singular to find that, by the substitution of the letter T for the initial S in Sinclair, an English rendering of the bun-sloine is, at once, euphoniously given. But the Sinclairs in Breadalbane may contend that their progenitors were not exclusively tinklers or tinkers, but workers in other metals as well, and of a higher order than that nomadic race. I do not think, however, that these Sinclairs were an importation from the north after Glenorchy's raid into Caithness. The McComies are not Thomsons, but Andersons, and how this came about it is difficult to know. I have heard the suggestion put forth that McComie might mean son of the Company, in allusion to Cromwell's soldiers who were in the district for a time, certainly not to the Independent Companies of the Black Watch, for the bun-sloine is found prior to their origin.

Of other families, still represented in the district, there are the Haggarts, who were known as McIntaggarts, some of the Dewars as McIndeoers, the Fishers as McNeskers, and the McTavish was McCawishes or McCaws—(are the Crieff and Perth Caws, McTavishes?)—a name sometimes found interchangeable with Campbell, perhaps through the house of Glenorchy having taken the McTavish under its wing by bands of manrent. It is interesting to note the number of local families having their origin in the Church. The McNabs are sons of the abbot, the Dewars are descendants of the custodiers of the holy relics of St. Fillan, the McIntaggarts or Haggarts are sons of the priest, and lastly there are, or rather were, for I think they are all gone, the McNaughton McVicars. There must have been a great many aliases for the Campbells, but I have come upon only one or two. The first of the Ardeonaig Campbells, of the original house, for there were several Campbell lairds of Ardeonaig of different branches, was the founder of the clan Tearlach or Charlessons, whose chief was recognised, in 1795, in the person of Sir James Campbell of Inverneill, now represented by Duncan Campbell of Inverneill and Ross. But there were other Charlessons before their days. The Clarks were, of course, Clerichs, but belonged to different clans. They were numerous both in Kenmore and Killin parishes. I have been told the Ardchyle pews in Killin church were, at one time, nearly all taken up by Clarks and Christies. The latter had no bun-sloine, and the presence of this Danish element in Glenlochart is curious. They appeared in the middle of the fifteenth century as Cristins, and afterwards as Cristesouns, lairds of Ledcharry. The former mode of spelling the name is now unknown in this country, although it may be noted that Christin is the proper surname of the Christies of Glynderbourne, who are, however, of Swiss extraction. One of the Christies, through the caprice of a Lady of Glenorchy, changed his name to Ferguson, and became the progenitor of a line of that name. The connection of the two families is to be seen in Killin churchyard, where they are buried side by side.
Of other aliases found—

Some McCalumans were Dows.
" McLavies " Frasers.
" McAllisters " Kennedys.
" Melgurries " Livingstones.
" McChruins " McArthurs.
" McCurichs " McIntyres.
" McLoinevys " Do.
" McIlloichs " McPhersons.

It would be erroneous to say that all the McAllisters, for instance, were Kennedys, but it might be quite correct to say that all the Kennedys were McAllisters, but this, assuredly, does not apply to some of the others.

Among those unidentified are—McLervreds, McGlasrichs, McIchoans, McIlontris, McVolkins, Melguines, and McIlhuaishe.

Such as McLean alias McFarlane, Murray alias Comrie, &c., it is useless to deal with, towards precise elucidation, nor need the many aliases of the McGregor, after their proscription, be given, for their name is legion, but Douglas, in his Baronage, mentions the following, among others, as being of the clan Gregor—MacKerras, Machoites, Mackillies, Macchriuts, or harper's sons, Macghiallis, and Macaulays.

Dr. R. C. Maclagan, in his Clan of the Bell of St. Fillan, gives an exhaustive list of septs of the McDougalls, as drawn up by Hugh McDougall, ground officer at Taymouth, at the commencement of this century.

THE LATE J. W. SCOTT.

The removal by death of Mr. J. W. Scott deserves more than a merely passing reference. Had circumstances been more propitious, he would have made a mark in the literary world. But he was struck down in his prime. Never physically strong, for the past three years he has been practically an invalid. Occasional trips to the coast and to the south of England perhaps prolonged his life, but, after a brave struggle, he succumbed on Sunday, April 23. He was buried at Brighton.

Although claiming immediate descent from the Border Scotts, James William Scott was born in England. His father, the late George Scott, F.S.A. Scot., was curator of the Brighton Museum, Library and Art Gallery, as well as honorary curator of the local museum at Bury St. Edmonds, Suffolk. Mr. Scott was born at the latter place about 40 years ago. His father died while he was a mere child, and, along with his only sister, he was removed to Edinburgh to the care of some relatives. He was educated in Edinburgh, and, after leaving school, was employed for a time in the publishing and distributing house of Menzies & Co. In 1888 he was invited to take editorial charge of Pen and Pencil, a Glasgow weekly miscellany, and of Art and Literature, a monthly magazine devoted, as the title suggests, to the discussion of art and books, which was then to be started. Art and Literature stopped publication after two years, although it was well conducted and admirably illustrated. From that time Mr. Scott remained unconnected with any paper or firm, but continued to do much literary work. Articles from his pen appeared anonymously in several journals, and he was not an infrequent contributor to the Glasgow daily press. Readers of S. N. and Q., to which he was among the earliest contributors (his signature appears for the first time in No. 3, August, 1887), do not require to be reminded of the excellent work he could do. His "Bibliography of Edinburgh Periodical Literature," unhappily unfinished, gives some indication of his talent; and it is perhaps not unduly revealing the secrets of our editor to say that some of his contributions, which are not of least value, appeared under noms-de-plume—"Amo," the motto of his clan; "Michael Merlin," a play on his own name, &c.

Personally, Mr. Scott was of a gentle, genial character; and of a timid, retiring disposition. At one time he gave promise of being a brilliant elocutionist, but the public platform was too great a trial for him. He was a wide reader and an acute critic; his taste for literary and antiquarian pursuits was largely inherited from his father. In his work he spared no pains, and was laborious in details. He had a style all his own, abrupt, perhaps, but always clear and effective. His love for Scotland was absorbing: within a year of his death the writer strongly advised him to seek some warmer climate, but he resolutely refused even to consider the idea of leaving Scotland. There is room to think that his patriotism hastened his end. True in friendship, clear in mind, eager in all that concerned things literary, he has at least left a certain monument of himself behind him.

J. CALDER ROSS.
FARMING IN SCOTLAND IN THE DAYS OF OUR GRANDFATHERS.

SOCIAL ENJOYMENTS.

Notwithstanding the poor condition of agriculture, the rural population was as great a hundred years ago as it is to-day. The inhabitants of Scotland are two and a half times as numerous as they were in 1800, but the increase has all been in the cities. The population of Glasgow was then 77,000, while now it is 700,000; the population of Edinburgh was then 80,000, now it is 300,000; the population of Aberdeen was then 26,000, now it is 130,000. The farming districts were as populous then as now, and with such a lack of roads and conveyances, with no newspaper, and with a postal service which charged thirty-five cents to carry a letter from London to Aberdeen, it would be interesting, if time permitted, to inquire how the people occupied themselves, and what were their social enjoyments. Of course, in Scotland they always had the school and the kirk, together with marriages, christenings, and funerals, but their social gatherings were confined to narrow neighbourhoods. My grandfather often boasted that he had brought his bride home riding behind him on horseback, after the fashion of young Lochinvar. Indeed, that was in the days when a young man could treat his sweetheart to a ride in those days. They seldom came together in large gatherings, that when they did so, they never failed to make those gatherings very festive. Even funerals were no exception, and Sydney Smith to the contrary notwithstanding, there was often a vein of the best humour to be found in their most solemn occasions. In case of sickness it was hard to reach a doctor, and so every neighbourhood had its "wise woman" who could administer home-made medicines. The minister's and the laird's wives generally took the lead in this, and their gardens had many medicinal herbs. One laird's wife was in the habit of collecting medicinal herbs for the use of the sick upon her husband's estate, being asked if she was not afraid of poisoning some of the poor people, as the herbs might be poisonous, replied, "There is nae fear o' that, for I aye try them on the laird first."

FOOD AND RAIMENT.

The usual food was mostly oatmeal made up in different ways—porridge, sowens, and brose; there were also kail or greens, and their favourite drink was home-brewed ale. Tea was beginning to be used, but many denounced it as both extravagant and effeminate. Claret was more common than whisky, for whisky was not the ancient drink of the Scots. I have been told that the servants near the rivers Dee and Don stipulated that they should not be compelled to eat salmon oftener than three times a week. That was before the days of railways, and I need hardly say that they are not surfeited with salmon now. The news of the outside world had to reach the household of the Buchan farmer by the pack-merchant or the beggar, and I could tell many stories about these characters, for not a few of them continued to come around even in my school days. The clothing of the people was plain and simple as their food. They hated all pretentious display, but were remarkable for their genuine hospitality, and above all they prized education. It mattered not how poor the home, how hard the hand of living, the children must be taught to read and write. They were very independent in their feelings; sycophancy could never flourish in such a soil. Burns expressed it well when he wrote:—

"What tho' on homely fare we dine,
Wear brown-gray and a' that?
Gie fools their silks and knaves their wine,
A man's a man for a' that."

READING MATTER.

The weekly newspaper figures among my earliest memories. Some half a dozen farmers subscribed for a copy, each keeping it two days. By the time the last one read it, it was twelve days old, but the information was just as new to him as if it had been an extra edition got out to contradict "the extra" which had just been published an hour before. From what I have said it will be seen that the life of the farmer in north-eastern Scotland was very primitive in the days of our grandparents, and that agriculture was in a most barbarous and depressed condition. There were no roads, no drains, no fences, no rotation of crops, no wheeled vehicles, no clover, turnips, nor potatoes, while the cattle and horses were most miserable creatures. Is this to be wondered at when we consider that that land of rocks and bens, and hills and glens, lies under the North Star between the shores of Norway and Labrador, and that it is only half the size of the State of Michigan, and that only one quarter of its soil is fit for cultivation, and much of it is so poor and rocky that the farmers of Wisconsin would not consider it fit to be ploughed?

THE CHANGES TIME HAS MADE.

On the farm I have mentioned, the heather hill has been trenched, and the quaking bog has been drained, and both smile with the finest crops, the fields are all fenced, and there is hardly a weed to be seen, while the most scientific rotation of crops and the free use of commercial fertilisers keep the soil in excellent fettle. From this farm of 150 acres, 70 head of fat cattle were shipped last year, averaging in price 90 dollars per head. Not only the turnips produced on the farm, but a large quantity of artificial food, such as cotton cake and oil cake, contributed to this result. The county of Aberdeen is to-day unsurpassed in the breeding and unrivalled in the feeding of cattle, and 40,000 fat cattle are annually sent to the London market. The roads throughout the country, instead of being mere paths, are nearly as substantial as the boulevards in Chicago; and the farmers, instead of knitting stockings in the winter evenings, ride to roup and markets and political meetings in their gigs, and never put a hand to spade or plough. The mean, scraggy, ill-fed, diminutive black cattle have given place to the shorthorn or the mammoth polled Aberdeen and Angus, while the little shetlies have been displaced by the noble Clydesdales. Twenty-five years ago there were no more prosperous men than the Buchan farmers, but the importation of foreign beef in recent years has affected them very adversely, and it may be that they may by and by have to do some hard work themselves.

EDUCATION AND CO-OPERATION.

It may be asked—How has such remarkable advancement been brought about during so short a time? I answer, by some such work as is being done to-day in Wisconsin, viz., the organisation of farmers' clubs for the discussion of farming questions, the holding of fairs in every neighbourhood where prizes are given for the best live stock, roots, and grain, the encouragement given by the landlords, especially in regard to draining, the use of fertilisers, and the rotation of crops, and the practice of making leases for nineteen years instead of yearly, as is the case in England; but, over and above all these the most influential factor in the advancement of agriculture in Scotland, I think may be mentioned the rapid dawning upon the minds of the farmers of the fact that scientific farming is the only farming which pays. As early as 1723 there was organised "The Society of Improvers in the Knowledge of Agriculture in Scotland," and in 1730 was instituted a local society which called itself "A Small Society of Farmers in Buchan." They published an essay, whose preface sounds very strange to-day, for they disclaim anything purely experimental or speculative, and express the design of confining themselves to such practices as they have learned from tradition. The Highland and Agricultural Society, which was organised in 1783, gave, and still continues to give, the greatest encouragement to the advancement of agriculture. Its annual show is the great event of the year in agricultural circles, and it has so encouraged local shows that not only every county, but almost every parish, has its annual exhibit of live stock, roots, and grain. During recent years the Scottish farmer has been well supplied with agricultural periodicals, where everything pertaining to the farm is discussed in the most progressive and intelligent spirit. I should say that the Buchan farmer to-day is ahead of the Wisconsin farmer in almost everything except in dairying. Wisconsin is away ahead in that branch of farming. I believe that Wisconsin is behind in the drainage of land, and certainly very much behind in the matter of roads.

1101. "Professor of Signs" (XI., 64, 78).—This legend is as old as the hills; older by centuries than the days of Bishop Elphinston. It was all very well for Mr. Neil N. McLean to introduce it in his half real, half imaginative, reminiscences of college life, but we trust "R. S. R." is not contemplating a chapter on Geordie the butcher and the barley bannock for a new edition of his "Universities of Aberdeen." The first man to give the tale a Scottish habitation was John MacDiarmid, best known as MacDiarmid of Dumfries. He was educated at Edinburgh, and no doubt thought it was poking good fun at ancient Bon-Accord to father it upon a long forgotten generation of Aberdeen professors. Dr. Joseph Robertson at all events tracked it home to him, and gives his reference as "MacDiarmid’s Scrap Book, Vol. i., pp. 335-337, Edin., 1834." But the Scrap Book was first published in 1820, and it is to the first edition we must go for the date of origin. Back from 1820 goes Robertson, and curiously enough finds the story where one might least expect it, in an old law book ("Elements of the Civil Law," by John Taylor, L.L.D., Lond., 1786), where it is quoted as a curious little history from "Rob. Marant, Spec. Aureum, page 19." But Taylor quotes it as he found it, the locality being Rome, and the ambassador a Greek, and notes that Marant borrowed the legend from Franciscus Accursius (1182-1260), an eminent Florentine jurist, whose work, "Glossa Ordinaria," was long a standard authority. Robertson had not been able to put his finger on Rob. Marant. No more can we, for he is not even mentioned in any of the numerous biographical collections upon our shelves. But Robertson’s own account of the matter, to which we are indebted for the whole material of this note, occupies more than half-a-dozen pages of his anonymously published "Delicia Literaria, Lond., 1840." This work should find a place in the library of every Aberdeenian who can secure a copy. It was re-issued at Edinburgh in 1843 with a different titlepage, "Library of Anecdote and Wit: a new Volume of Table Talk." It is only a small book, but it teems with items of local interest, and is by far the best collection of literary ana ever made by a Scotsman.

1834. "The Wise Men of Gotham" (XII., 176).—Mr. Stapleton of Nottingham asks for information. Copies can be had in Glasgow, where several editions were published during the fifties. He will also find a copy in Vol. I. of John Cheap, the Chapman’s Library, published in Glasgow, 1877. Dr. Brewer says the Tales are supposed to have been compiled in the reign of Henry VIII., by Andrew Borde, M.D. The legend is, that King John on his way to Lynn Regis intended to pass through Gotham in Nottinghamshire, with his army, and sent heralds to prepare his way. The men of Gotham were resolved, if possible, to prevent this expense and depredation, so they resolved to play the fool. Some raked the moon out of the pond, some made a ring to hedge in a bird, some did equally foolish things, and the heralds told the King that the Gothamites were utter fools, and advised the King to go another way. So the King and his heralds were befuddled, and the men of Gotham saved their bacon. "Wise as the men of Gotham" grew into a proverb to indicate a fool. In Ray’s Proverbs, 1678, "As wise as a man of Gotham," and adds, "Men in all ages have made themselves merry with singing out some place and fixing the staple of stupidity therein. These places thus slighted and scoffed at, afforded as witty and wise persons as the world produced. As for Gotham, it doth breed as wise people as any which causlessly laugh at their simplicity. Sure I am Mr. William de Gotham, fifth Master of Michael House in Cambridge, 1336, and twice Chancellor of the University, was as grave a governor as that age did afford." Fraser, in his work on Chap Books, after classifying many Chap Books to English and Scottish origin, says, "The Wise Men of Gotham "belongs in a literary point of view to no particular "nationality, but claims descent from many different "sources."

Literature.

A History of the Border Counties ( Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles). By Sir George Douglas, Bar., M.A., Cambridge. William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London. 1899. [482 pp. 7½ net.] One of the special difficulties that lay in the way in writing this goodly volume was the fact that the materials partook so largely of the monochrome, stirrn und drang. Yet has the task been well done. For centuries it was the normal condition of the Border, or Buffer, Counties, marching with their restless and ruthless neighbours, who were forever hanging their banners on their outward walls. In Sir George Douglas’ hands the story of ever-recurring forays, attacks, surprises—promptly met by bloody reprisals and revenges—is not so gruesome as it might have been in some hands; but every sensitive reader from the hinterland of Scotland must feel in the perusal how indebted they have been to these trusty Borderers who stood in the breach so often against our “auld enemies.” In the very early history of the Borders, and, indeed, throughout the book, the author’s researches have often qualified him to take to task other historians who were tempted to generalize too rapidly. But although Sir George is conservatively historical, he is at the same time wide awake to the risk of the modern historian in "doubting too much." This is reassuring, and we lay down the book with a conviction that it is reliable, and the author a safe guide, both as to his facts and opinions. He is happy in his diagnosis of the character of the men of the Border, and rightly attributes their comparative reluctance to take rank with other districts in commercial and literary pursuits, to their antecedent training. When at last piping times came, the Borderers were fain rather to follow in foreign fields their inherited instinct for warfare. Space forbids enlarging on the subject. Border minstrelsy naturally occupies a place in the volume, though not a large one, for, as the author remarks, it is already "within the reach of everyone." On the whole, the book is a worthy addition to a worthy series, and we cannot imagine its displacement as a standard on the subject for many a long year. An excellent bibliography is given of the district, and three maps accompany the volume.
