CONVENTION OF THE ROYAL BURGHES OF SCOTLAND,

1677-1711.

P R E F A C E.

THE publication of the Records of the Convention of Burghs is continued in this volume from 3d July 1677 to 14th April 1711, a period of nearly thirty-four years.

Among the subjects which occupied the attention of the Convention during that period, the communication of freedom of trade to burghs of regality and barony held a prominent place. Previous to the passing of the Act 1672, c. 5, royal and free burghs had immemorially enjoyed the exclusive privilege of trade, and its communication to other burghs was complained of, not only as an interference with vested interests, but also as unfair in itself, inasmuch as royal and free burghs were bound to contribute to public taxation to which burghs of regality and barony were not subject. Through the persistent action of the Convention the privileges of the royal and free burghs were, to a large extent, restored by the passing of the Act 1690, c. 15 ; and in the same year the Convention empowered a committee to adopt such means as might best secure the putting of the latter act into execution, and also to appoint visitations of the whole royal burghs, with a view to ascertain authoritatively the condition, trade, and common good of each. Negotiations were thereupon opened with the burghs of regality and barony, and each was invited to appoint a representative to meet with the committee of the Convention on a specified day, and endeavour to effect an amicable arrangement. The provosts of Ayr and Dumbarton were appointed to visit the burghs north of the Forth, the provost of Perth and one of the bailies of Aberdeen the burghs south of the

Forth, and the four visitors the burgh of Edinburgh. Instructions for their guidance were forthwith prepared and delivered to the visitors, but the indisposition of one of them prevented the visitation from being proceeded with at the time originally fixed. On 9th July 1691, however, the Convention appointed the commissioners for Ayr and Dumbarton to visit the burghs north of the Forth, and the commissioners for Dundee and Aberdeen the burghs south of the Forth, and furnished them with revised instructions. The object of this visitation was declared to have reference to the adjustment of the tax-roll, according to which the quota and proportion of burdens falling upon the several royal burghs should be allocated, and the only burghs excepted from it were Kirkwall, Wick, Inveraray, and Rothesay,¹ “because of the difficulty of access to these places.” The report of the visitors was submitted to the Convention at its meeting in Dundee on 14th July 1692, when it was appointed to be sealed with the public seal of that burgh, and deposited with the clerk, to be forthcoming for the use of the royal burghs whenever called for. Subsequently, on 6th July 1698, the Convention having considered whether it would not be for the interest of the royal burghs that a true stated account of their whole common good should be recorded in the burgh register, to the end that no dilapidation might be made of any part thereof in prejudice of the burghs, appointed in lieu thereof, that the reports of the visitation in 1692 should be recorded in a particular register for that effect. The reports were accordingly recorded in terms of this order, and as they contain much interesting information as to the state of most of the royal burghs at the time of the visitation, they are printed in full in Appendix No. II.

The negotiations between the royal burghs and the burghs of regality and barony are described at length in the Minutes of Convention, in various Acts of Parliament,—especially the Acts 1693, c. 51; 1698, c. 38; and 1698, c. 39,—and in the report of the Royal Commission constituted under the act last referred to, as the same is printed in the Appendix to the tenth volume of the Record Edition of the Acts of the Parliaments of Scotland. The relief obtained by the royal burghs ultimately from the burghs of regality and barony in return for their being permitted to participate in the privilege of trade, proved exceedingly small. The Commissioners on Municipal Corporations in Scotland state, in their General Report in 1835, that it had been gradually diminishing, and that it did not much exceed, at the date of their report, a fortieth part of the tax-roll of the burghs.

Next in importance to the subjects above referred to, if we may judge from the space which they occupy in the Minutes of the Convention, are the settlement of the staple port at Campvere, the appointments of the several conservators and factors, and the detailed instructions given to them from time to time. Besides these, frequent references occur to the commercial relations between Scotland and other countries at different times.

While so much of the records of the Convention is occupied, as is most natural, with the decay of the royal burghs, and their struggles with the burghs of regality and barony for the maintenance of the exclusive privileges of trade, it is curious to find so few indications of the national troubles during the reigns of Charles II. and James VII., or of the interference of the Crown with the liberties of the burghs during these reigns, or of the momentous issues of the Revolution of 1688. The Convention, indeed, offered its courtesies to James when he came to Scotland, in 1679, as Duke of York and Commissioner to the Parliament; it tendered him its loyal congratulations in 1685 when he succeeded to the throne on the death of his brother, "in whom," says the address adopted on the occasion, "the latest addressers will alwayes find new vertues to admire, a monarch whom great pouer could not make arbitrarie nor great parts uneasie;" and it despatched Magnus Prince, then the Lord Provost of Edinburgh, to court in 1688, to express "the great joy and gladness" the Convention had for the "unspeakable and ritch blissing of the birth of a young and hopfull Prince," who was afterwards to be known as "The Pretended Prince of Wales," or more shortly, as "The Pretender." The records of the Convention, which met in November 1688, refer to King James' gracious sentiments to the burghs, and the minutes of the next Convention, in July 1689, refer to William and Mary as king and queen; but not a word occurs to indicate the political changes which had taken place during the interval. So far as these records show, the Convention seems to have accommodated itself as much as possible to the political conditions under which it met from time to time. It cultivated the friendly services of those in authority by frequent pecuniary grants, and its main object appears to have been to promote as best it might the material interests of the burghs themselves, without much regard to anything which did not directly affect these interests. Its first address to King William, on 14th August 1689, no doubt alludes to the "religious and civil concerns" of the burghs, but it does so in a connection which indicates that the redress of the grievance as to the communication of trade to burghs of regality and barony was its inspiring motive—"Whereas," it says, "wee being amongst the first zealous asserters and ouners of your Majesties authority in this kingdom, and does firmly resolve for ourselves and in name of all that we doe represent to mantaine the samen for the futur with our lyves and fortunes, judging our happiness both as to our religious and civill concerns to be inseperable from your Majesties welfar and interest, and therefor are incouradged to represent to your Majestie the speciall grivance following lying on our trade."

On 8th July 1696 the Convention resolved, notwithstanding the dissent of several burghs, to become partners to the amount of £3000 in the African and Indian Trade Company,—the Commissioner for Lochmaben, William Menzies, offering that if the dissentient burghs should, previous to 1st August thereafter, intimate to him that they were unwilling to pay their proportions of the amount so subscribed, he would undertake to do so on their transferring their particular shares to him. •

The Convention does not seem to have offered a congratulatory address to Queen Anne on her succession to the throne; but at their meeting on 17th October 1702, they adopted certain articles, which they ordered to be submitted to the Commissioners appointed by her Majesty to treat as to a union between England and Scotland. They also appointed a committee to keep up correspondence with the royal commissioners, "and to give them advyce from tyme to tyme as to what may be for the good of the church and kingdom, and particularly of the trade thereof." At the same time a recommendation was made to the next Convention to consider the necessary charges and expenses of the royal commissioners, "in caice these gentlemen be not aliunde considered be the government aither befor or after the said convention." Subsequently, on 8th July 1706, the Lord Provost of Edinburgh was empowered to convene the convention, "in case the great concern of ane union with England comes to be laid befor and considered by the parliament, that the burrows may advise what is fitt to be represented to the parliament as most tending to the advancement of trade, the benefite and priviledges of the burrowes, as well to ease them of the unsupportable burden they lye under." And on 5th November in the same year the Convention adopted an address to parliament against the articles of union then under consideration. The act ratifying and approving the union was passed by the Scottish Parliament on 16th January, and by the English Parliament on 6th March, 1707, and on 10th July thereafter the Convention appointed a Committee to take such steps as they might consider "conducive to the advancement, encouragement and security of the trade of this northern part of Great Britain." Subsequently the Convention held a special meeting on 26th November, and adopted various overtures, which were submitted to parliament. A similar course was followed at various meetings of the Convention in after years.

This volume, it will be observed, has been edited in the same way as the last one. The sederunt of each convention, particular or general, has been given in full. The more important acts are also printed verbatim, while as regards formal and less important minutes, the object of the editor has been to economise space by giving a simple abstract of each act in smaller type.

In the preface to the immediately preceding volume, it was explained that the records of the Convention for the period between 1631 and 1649 have unfortunately disappeared, but that subsequently to the completion of the printing of that volume, an abstract of the more important acts of the Convention from 1552 till 1700 had been discovered. This abstract, it was stated, was prepared by order of the Convention, and was submitted to it in July 1700 ; and it was added that so much as was required to maintain the continuity of the record would be printed in the present volume. In fulfilment of that promise, the Abstract of the Acts of Convention between 1631 and 1649 is now given as Appendix No. I.

Considerable progress has been made in the preparation of the MS. for another volume, which, if completed, would probably bring down the publication to a period subsequent to the rebellion in 1745. It remains for the Convention to decide whether they will complete the work which they have carried thus far.

10. Appointed a particular convention to be held "vpon advertisement from the provost of the said burgh upon whatsoever emergent business may concerne the burrows."

Inverness.

11. Ratified and approved the decreet arbitral of the commissioners sent to Inverness for composing the differences between the magistrates, council, and inhabitants of that burgh.

12. The convention statuts and ordanis the conservators dewes to be as followis, viz. :—

EDINBURGH.
5 July 1677.
Conservators
dewes.

Here follows table containing the same dues as in the 15th act of the particular convention held in October 1676. The sacks to contain as follows :— plaiding and fingrahms, 1200 double ells, and ilk 100 to contain 120 double elns ; kerseyes and galloway whytt, 600 double elns ; stockings for men and women, 120 dozen ; wooll and linning yairne, 600 weight ; goatt and buck skins, 600 skins at 6 score the hundred ; heart hyds, 20 daiker ; salmond, ten barrell ; herrings, butter, pork, beiff or tallow, 12 barrels ; fethers, 1200 weight ; boot hose, 60 duzon.

13. The convention considdering that it tends greatly to the pre- judice and defraud of the staple that Dutchmen and other strangers should buy staple comodities within the kingdome and transporte them to any pairt within the sevinteen provinces and not to carie them to the staple porte at Campheer, wherby not only strangers, bot also Scottsmen as being imployed and under the cullor of strangers, may transporte staple comodities to other places within the sevinteen provinces then to the staple porte, to the prejudice of Scotts merchands who keeps the staple porte, and to ouerthrow of the said staple itself, therefor the convention statuts and ordanis that whensoever any Dutchmen or other strangers or any having comission from them shall happen to buy any staple goods that they shall be oblidged to carie the same to the staple porte in case they transporte the same to any place within the sevinteen provinces ; and recomends to Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Dundie, Linlithgow to mak ane adress to the lords of the secreit counccill for approbation of this act if neid beis.

Staple port.

14. The convention, for the better regulation of factors in thair duetie at Campheer, ordanis that they shall be oblidged if they employ any broker to sell the merchands goods that they shall pay the broker fie out of their factor fee ; item, that the factors are oblidged according to old use and wont to rebate only fyve per cent for reddie money for plaiding, and for skinns tuo and a half, and this abatement being given the factor is to give the merchand reddie money ; item, it shall be free to the merchant to take his plaiding and fingrain that hes lyne besyde the factor ane yeire and sex weeks, as lykways salmond and other goods that hes lyne besyde the factor according to the appoynted tyme, and thereafter to transporte them to any place where he pleases, and that without payment of factor fee ; item, that no factor shall at any tyme herefter be a member of the conservators court.

Staple port,
articles of agreement.

15. The convention haveing considered and compaired the differences betuixt the agreement with the toun of Campheer anent the staple approven by his Majestic and signed be the provest of Edinburgh be ordour of the burrows and that agreement of the toun of Campheer subscrivit be the magistratts, they find that they are allmost one and the same vpon the matter excepting the particulars following which the conservator by thir presentis undertakes to procure ane oblidgment from the magistratts of Campheer for that effect betuixt and the (blank) day of (blank),— viz., that the toun of Campheer shall oblidge themselves to discharge that pairt of the agreement which makes lead, lead ur and salt to be staple comodities, and that they shall declaire that if any shipp shall aryve within their road being loadned partlie with staple comodities and other merchandice that it shall be leisum to the merchand to breck bulk and land what comodities he pleases and goe away with the remainder to any pairt without the sevinteen provinces free from payment of any duetie whatsomevir; and the convention declairs that aftir the conservator hes procured the toun of Campheers oblidgment for the saids tuo particulars that they are fullie satisfied with the said agreement subscrivit be the magistratts of Campheer, and conforme to the articles of the said agreement the convention declares that the staple port as it is now settled at Campheer does not only extend to the sevin provinces bot to the hail sevinteen provinces of the Netherlands conforme to antient custom and to the kings patent in favors of the present conservator, and appoynts the comissioners of this convention that they intimate so much to thair hail respective burghs that they prettend no ignorance.

Campheer,
imposts.

16. The convention recomends to the conservator that no new impost be put upon goods by the toun of Campheer, and particularly that the late impost of tuell stivers upon the barrell of soap payed by Scotts merchants who bought not the same at the toun of Campheer be discharged.

Letter to Cam-pheer.

17. The convention ordains their generall clerk, with advice of the lord provest of Edinburgh, to draw ane letter to be direct to the toun of Campheer in ansuer to theirs direct to the convention of burrows.

Supplication, merchands,
conservator.

18. Anent the supplication given in to the present convention be Robert Turnble, George Clerk, and other merchands, for themselves and others merchands trafficqueing in the united provinces in the Low Cuntries, complaining that Henry Wilkie, now present conservator, hes charged them with lettres of horning for transporting thair comodities by the staple porte at Campheer, and sieing there is nether conservator nor his deput, nether factors for receaveing of their comodities and for advancing them money for doing their lawfull affairs, neither ane master of the conserjarie hous for their reception at bed and dyett, that thairfor the present convention wold dischaarge the said conservator for doing any furdur diligence against [them] untill these and other defects be redressed. The present convention taking the same to considderation they hereby dischaarge the conservator to putt the said horning to furdur execution for byganes, without prejudice to the said conservator to putt the charges of horning that he hes given against all persons that reseedes not within free royall burghs to execution with all rigour both for byganes and in tyme coming.

Complents,
conservator.

26. The convention takeing to their considderation the information given in be Andrew Skeen, factor at Campheer, against Henrie Wilkie, present conservator, quherby it is represented that the said conservator had medled with the money belonging to the Scotts poore at Campheer by inignoring some of the samen in his creditors hands for money borrowed, and the said Andrew Skeen hes subscrivit the said information and given his oath thairvpon, and the convention having called befor them the said conservator he gave in a declaration written with his own hand beiring the maner and way of his medleing with the bands dew to the said poore and absolutly vpon most sever asseverations denyed that he had impignorat any of the saids bands, and to evidence the falsnes and injustnes of that alledgiance, he be thir presentis engadges and oblidges himself to caus deliver these bands to George Mossman, merchand, burges of Edinburgh, for the present in Holland, or in his absence to Thomas Cuningham, merchand in Campheer, and for that effect he shall writte be the first post to Mr Snype, minister at Campheer, who hes the custodie of some of the bands, and to Arnot Cuningham, merchand there, to whom he intrusted the rest of the bands, and to order them to deliver up the haille poores bands as afoirsaid; and in case it shall hereftir evidently appeare that the representatioun made be the said Andrew Skeen against the conservator in the particular foirsaid is grundles and calumnious the convention then declairs that they will inflict such censure against the said Andrew Skeen as the merite of the case requyres; and further seeing the said Harie Wilkie, conservator, is oblidged by acts of parliament to ansuer to any complents exhibited against him befor the burrowis under the paine of tinsell of his office, therefor he be thir presentis oblidges himself to caus deliver the forsaid bands as afoirsaid and to returne ane certificat that the saids bands are delivered betuixt and the fyfteen day of August next, under the certification that he shall demitt his office as conservator in his Majesties hands.

deput.

27. The convention cousiddering that it tends much to the unsettling of the staple porte at Campheer be the not residence of the conservator or his deputie there and hes given bot too just grund to the merchants not to keep the staple port, therefor to take off the said pretence it is the opinion of the convention that the conservator presently appoynt ane depute to officiat in his absence, and hes recomended to him to poores bands.

5. The present convention takeing to their serious considderation the letters sent to them, and to the lord provost of Edinburgh and agent, from Henrie Wilkie, conservator, together with the inclosed paper concerning the present state of the money belonging to the Scotts poore at Campheer, they find the samen no wayes satisfactorie and that he had failled in performance of his oblidgment to the last generall convention for returning back the said poores bands, and that he aught and should demitt his office in his Majesties hands conforme to the said oblidgment, but in respect the convention are willing to trye all faire wayes both for preserving of the said conservators credit and lykewayes for secureing the said poore as to these bands impignorat in Arnot Cunighams hands, they ordaine that letters be presently written and dispatched to Arnot

Cuningham, to the minister and kirk session of the Scotts congregation at Campheer, and to the said Henry Wilkie, expostulating with them the case of the said poore and to show them that in case the poores bands be restored in integrum as they wer before the said impignoration and the said Henrie Wilkie his medleing with them, the convention will then ordaine the payment of the tuo hundred pund sterling which they are owing to the said conservatour conforme to ane act of burrows past in the last generall convention ; and ordained their clerk to draw wp the saids letters, which accordingly wes done and red in their audience and approven, and to evidence to posteritie thair caire for the Scotts poore at Campheer they have ordained the samen letters to be insert in their generall register, whereof the tenor followis :—

Stoddert, commissioner for Lanark, and declared that he haveing produced his comission from the said burgh to the comitte of the convention of estats, who had remitted him to the convention of burrows for tryell of his qualifications as a comissioner, conforme to the acts of burrowis, he craved that in respect his comission did beare him to be a merchand residenter within the burgh bearing portable charges and who can loss and gaine in the concerns of burrows, that therefor he might be admitted and declared qualified, wherinto it wes answered that suppose he had the qualifications forsaid yet he being a comissar clerk could not be admitted in respect by a particular statute of the burrows excluding and debarring clerks from being comissioners, wherinto it was replied that the said act of burrows wes only taxative and extended allanerly to clerks of royall burrows and not to sherriff or comissar clerks as is cleare by the said statute, which debate being considdered by the convention they fand that the said act of burrows did not reatch to exclude the said Thomas Stoddart and therefor admitted him to be comissioner for the said burgh to this present convention. Thereftir there being severall debates risin anent the justnes and equitie of the said act, whey the samen should not extend alsweell to the sherriff and comissar clerks as to the clerks of the royall burrows, and that there is greater reasone for admitting of the clerks of royall burrows to be comissioners than other clerks in respect it is presumed that they will more zealously espouse and own the interest of the burgh they represent, being their comon servant under their jurisdiction and lyable to the chek of their magistratts, then shirriff or comissar clerks who are independent to the burghs that they represent and are not under any of the saids relations, the convention not having tyme to consider the said matter they wave the considderation thair of to the next generall convention.

revells.

6. The convention being fullie informed that the master of the revells hes extended his gift from his Majestie farder then he is warranted thairby, and of the many charges of horning given to the inhabitants of burghs that keeps tabills and cairds in their houses for gentlemen's recreation, for preventing wherof they appoynt their agent to use some legall course for suspending the said master of the revells or raiseing action of reduction and declarator against his gift and of the bands he hes extorted from the leidges without any onerous caus.

Act allowing
merks.

7. The convention having considered a petition of Selkirk referring to the fine imposed upon the burgh for electing Sir Patrick Murray commissioner to parliament, he not being qualified, and "being sensible that the said burgh was singular, many of the other royall burrows having been in the said delict," and "seeing the said burgh is in a verrie mean and low condition and wold be altogither rowined if some remeid be not provyded," allowed them the sum of a thousand merks Scots, to be paid by the burghs proportionally.

Exemptions.

8. Exempted the burghs of Nairn and Dingwall from sending commissioners to conventions for three years.

Agent to concurre with Wigtoun.

9. The burgh of Wigtoun having represented "that the heretors of the shire of Wigtoun had in effect taken away their weeklie mercats by their keeping mercats within their respective bounds and jurisdictions, and that they had pactioned amongst themselves and resolved utterly to destroy the said burgh, and in order thereunto had intended action of reduction of their priviledges which they have upon their expenses defended all the last winter session," the convention agreed to concur with the burgh in defending the reduction.

Printed acts of parliament.

10. The convention in ansuer to the petition given in be George Drummond of Blair, late factour in Edinburgh, and John Drummond and George Wedderburne, merchands there, craveing that the burrows wold appoynt their agent to take from them the whole acts of parliament lately printed be them of ane extraordinar letter and weel bound in folio, which they are content to sell at ane easie rate, being tuentie-four pundis Scotts for each book, the convention recomends to the whole royall burrows that wants the whole acts of parliament that they may take them from the petitioners for the use of their burgh.

Lanerk.

11. The convention haveing considdered the desires given in be the burgh of Lanerk craveing the royall burrows to assist them in maintaining of their priviledges which are encroatched upon by severall villages near to the said burgh by selling of merchand goods in prejudice of them, EDINBURGH.

4 July 1684.
therefor they appoynt the agent to assist and concurre with them against these that encroatches upon the said burghs priviledges upon their own expenses.

12. The convention having considered the petition given in be the Collection towards rebuilding Kelso.
toun of Kelso, and the recomendation of his Majesties privie counsell given in therewith recommending them to the universall charitie of the whole kingdom for ane voluntar contribution for a help and supplie of their sad and desolute condition, occasioned by the late accident of fyre, the convention does earnestly recommend to the whole burghis that hes not alredie made their collection for the said toun of Kelso that they speedily make the said contribution in the samen maner as the burgh of Edinburgh collected the same, which wes by impouering their elders and deacons to goe from familie to familie to receive the said contribution.

13. The convention taking into consideration the different attempts which Comission, Aikman anent downgetting of 50 solze on the tun.
had been made for the removal of the impost of 50 solze per tun paid on Scots ships and vessels trading to France, "and they being resolved to be at a finall poynt in the said matter and not any farder to putt themselves to the truble to have the said particular a yearly heid of the missive, they find it expedient to send presently ane express to France to negotiate that affaire and to doe all possible and utmost diligence to sie if the same can be made effectual and vpon what condition and terms," therefore they appointed Mr William Aikman, advocate, "to goe both to the court of England and France and to negotiate the same and to take such prudent measures in the conduct and carieing on of such ane important affaire as he shall think fitt upon these places."

14. The convention renewed and revived all former acts of convention Uniformity of measures.
ordaining all royal burghs to conform their measures to the standard of Linlith-gow (to be supplied at forty merks the set), and ordained application to be made to the privy council to put the act of parliament as to uniformity of measures into execution in burghs of barony and regality and other places outwith royal burghs.

convention of burrowis to ansuer for the saids bands, which being considered be the convention they impouer the conservator to caus cite him to compeare here in Scotland before the convention of burrows at such tyme as he in prudence shall think fitt ; and farder, gave ane accompt of his diligence in persewing some theiffs to death who had stollen some goods out of the waire houses in Campheer belonging to Scotts factors ; as also that he had protested against the toun of Campheer for detaining 200 lib. Fleems and the factor books belonging to the deciest Thomas Cunighame, and which money aught to have been remitted to the creditors of the said Thomas Cunigham here in Scotland conforme to the severall former acts of burrows.

Comission for setleing staple port.

16. The conservator represented to the convention, both verballie and by severall papers under the factors hands at Campheer which wer red in their audience, bearing the many inconveniences and great prejudice the royall burrows susteans by haveing their staple setled there, inregaird that Campheer is now become a place where Scotts goods gives less rates then at other places, and the cuntrie about is nowayes propper for buying of goods to transporte to this kingdom, which are the tuo main designes and ends for setleing of the staple, and that the toun of Campheer had broken many of the articles of the staple contract which they were oblidge to performe. The convention haveing taken the forsaid representation, with the forsaid papers, to their considderation, they by thir presentis impouers and commissions the said conservator, in case the toun of Campheer make not amends for their breatch of the said contract, to treat with any other cities in Holland, especiallie Rotterdam, and to try what better conditions they will offer in case of the removell of the staple from Campheer, provydeing alwayes that before he make any settlement els where that he acquaint the royall burrows with what the toun of Campheer hes to say in their defence and with the conditions that shall happen to be offered be Rotterdam or any other city in Holland ; as lykewayes, provyding that if any alteration hereafter shall happen to be made of the staple porte to any other place than Campheer that the samen be done without any charges to the royall burrows.

Protestation,
Dundie and Aberdeen.

17. The comissioners for Dundie and Aberdeen protested against the said comission for thir reasons :—becaus, first, there is no mention of any alteration of the staple port in any article of the missive, and it not being a head of the missive, cannot at present fall under the consideration of the convention; secondly, that it does not appear that Campheer has made any breach in their part of the staple contract, and that it being ratified by his Majesty it cannot be considered by the convention until previous address be made to his Majesty thereanent; thirdly, that the removing of the staple port from Campheer at this time may irritate the magistrats there to seize upon Scotts goods lying there, whereof Aberdeen has at the present to the value of eight thousand pounds sterling, as likewise Dundie has goods there to a considerable value, which reasons are at length contained in their protest.

18. The convention having taken to consideration the article of the missive anent the many inconveniences the whole kingdom, especially the royal burrows and particularly the city of Edinburgh, lies under for want of the summer session, which hinders the circulation of trade and causes a deadness of traffick through all the corners of the nation during the most and best part of the year, and having likewise read and considered a paper drawn up by advice of lawyers containing most just, true, and excellent reasons for the return thereof, the convention declares they are well satisfied therewith and wisheth heartily that such remedies, inoffensive, decent and legal address may be made to authority as may be most effectually to restore the same, and empowers the lord provost of Edinburgh and the commissioners thereof, with such other of the commissioners of the royal burghs as can be conveniently had, to represent so much to his Majesties ministers of state at the first opportunity, and that this whole affair be managed by their lordships advice.

Act anent
restoring of summer session.

19. The convention, in respect the conservator, is willing to pass from the ten stivers upon the last of cornes which he pretends is due to him, they for his farther encouragement "and for defraying of the charges which he most necessarily be at in maintaining the dignity and character of ane conservator," empowered him to exact a stiver and a half on each can of wine and half a stiver on each can of beer sold in the consergerie house. They also granted to him £150 sterling in full of all his bypast claims against the burghs.

Act, conser-

20. The convention taking to consideration that albeit the privileges, liberties, and freedoms of the estate of the royal burrows is clearly asserted by known and determined laws already enacted, so that there remains nothing but to put the same laws to execution, yett of

7. The address to his Majestie and the address to his high commissioner were publictly red and approven of by the hail convention and did subscribe the samen and appointed them to be recorded in their generall register, whereof the tenor followes :—To the Kings Most Excellent Majestie, the humble address of the royall burrows of your Majesties antient kingdom of Scotland. Your Majesties royall predecessors considering that the royall burrows of this kingdom did in a verie immediat and speciall manner depend upon the croun, and haveing by experience fund how firmly they had adheared to them in all parliaments and upon all other occasions, they were therefor graciouslie pleased amongst many other great priviledges to allow them to meett apairt and by themselves as a third state of parliament, and in these their conventions to make speciall applications to them, and now wee your Majesties most duetifull and loyall subjects, being by this singular priviledge conveyened at this tyme, have thought it our duetie to express in this our first convention the deep sense wee have of the great loss which wee, as all your Majesties other subjects, have sustained by the death of our late and most gracious Sovereigne, in whom the latest adressers will alwayes find new vertues to admire a monarch whom great pouer could not make arbitrarie nor great pairs uneasie ; yett this our heavie affliction does not lessen the extra-ordinarie joy wee have upon your sacred Majesties happie succession to the crown of your royall ancestors, to which wee acknowledge your Majestie hes right by the unalterable lawes of this your antient kingdom, and that yee hold the same immediatelie from God Almighty alone ; and as in the last parliament wee did most unanimously and heartily assert your Majesties right to the succession, so we shall in this parliament and in the whole course of our lives defend your Majesties royall right and prerogatives with such zeale as may prove that wee think ourselves thereto oblidge as good Christians alsweell as faithfull subjects, and that not only all treasonable but even factious and seditious courses are no less impious then unlawfull ; and as none of your Majesties subjects have shared more in your bountie or are more oblidge to depend upon the royall authority then the royall burrows are, so wee doe assure your Majestie that we will in a more speciall maner be examplarie to others in their loyaltie, and especiallie in this parliament from which your Majestie may expect intire satisfaction and we full securitie, to the promoteing whereof wee have just occasion to hope that it will not a litle contribute that your Majestie hes chosen the Duke of Queensberrie to represent your sacred Majesties person, wee haveing for severall years bypast observed with great satisfaction how loyallie and justly he hes manadged those great employments with which he hes been formerly entrusted and to whose intercession wee doe with all submission recommend this duetifull and humble address.

Followes the tenor of the address to his Majesties high commissioner :
 —To his Grace his Majesties high commissioner. The royall burrowes now conveyed by his Majesties speciall authoritie humblie represent that wee being by a speciall priviledge allowed to meett as a third state of parliament are verrie glad to have the extraordinarie occasion of signifie-ing how highlie satisfied wee are that his sacred Majestie hes trusted the manadgment of the great affairs of this his ancient kingdom in the ensueing parliament to your grace who hes evidenced upon all occasions so much loyaltie to the monarchie, so much kyndnes to your native cuntrie, and so much prudence and conduct in the concerns of both ; and that both may the better prosper in your graces hands wee doe hereby assure yow that wee will contribute our utmost endeavour to make all

9. The convention haveing receaved ane letter frome his sacreed Majestie in favors of the conservator of the Scotts priviledges in the Netherlands, which being red the convention thought fitt the same be recorded in their books, whereof the tenour followes :—Sic superscribitur : JAMES R. Trustie and weellbeloved weegreetyowweell. Whereas we are well informed of the mean and inconsiderable allowance which the conservator hes at present in the Low Cuntries, alsweell as of the great expenss he is at in collecting the same out of the severall shippes that arrive from Scotland, being oblidged to keep and pey a deputie in each province for that effect, and whereas the royall burrows of that our antient kingdom (about whose affairs the conservator is mainly employed) have evir before the late unhappie rebellion provyded a sufficient mantinance for his prediccursors suteable to the honor and weight of that painfull employment, wee have now thought fitt earnestlie to recommend his condition to your serious considderation so as yow may take off all these small dues which formerly were payed to the conservator either out of shippes or goods comeing from Scotland into the Netherlands, and in lew therof grante unto him such ane yeirlie certaine sallarie and allowance as may affoord him a comfortable subsistance suteable to the great truble, pains, and expenses in that employment wherein he hath hitherto behaved himself with so much loyaltie, diligence, and integritie as deserves our recommendation and your kyndnes in his concerns. In the meanwhile if, in considderation of your granting him ane yeirly allowance and sallarie as aforsaid, yow shall think fitt to continue the dues that were formerly payed to the conservator out of shipps and goods tradeing from that our kingdom into the Netherlands, wee doe hereby authorize yow so to doe according to law and former custome and to apply the same to the publick use and benefitt of our royall burrows in such manner as to yow shall seem most fitt and reasonable. So, not doubting the good effect of this our royall recommendation, wee bid yow farewell. Given at our court at Whitthall the 18th day of Aprile 1685, and of our reign the first year. By his Majesties command. Sic subscribitur: MORRAY. Aftir the reading wherof the convention thought fitt to recommend, lykeas they hereby recommend, to the committie appoynted to considder upon the whole matters offered to the considderation of the convention to considder his Majesties letter and upon a draught of a returne thereto and to report to the convention at their next meeting.

our dewtie. Wee have bein considdering the matters of trade, and for the present shall only represent to your lordship that the royall borrowes of this kingdome, whoe haue euer been the manadgers and cariers on of the trade of the samen and for which they are charged with a very great share of publick taxes, have of late suffered and does still suffer unspecable prejudice and loss by having ther priuiledges communicat by ane act of parliament in anno j^m vj^c sevinty two yeirs to the burghs of barronie and regality, whoe being free of any pairt of the said taxes are able and will infalliblie in tyme ingros the wholl trade to themselues, to our utter ruine; for remeid wherof we haue transmitted to your lordship a scroll of ane act in which we pretend not to be restored to all the priuiledges wherof wee wer formerly possessed bot only to some necessarie ones, being willing to communicat many others to which we had right to the burghs of barronie and regality as your lordship will perceave by comparing the act of parliament therwith. Wee doe further intreat your Lordships assistance to represent unto his Majestie the great prejudice the royall borrowes sustaines by the contentious humours of some of ther inhabitants concerning ther magistrats and other burgesses befor his Majesties councell, wher the debaite proves long and expenssive, sometyme to the ruin of the burgh and great discouradgement of magistracie, wheras formerly the royall borrowes wpon ther comon expenss ordored some of ther number to repair to the burgh wher the debaite wes, with power to them to settle all differences relaiting to ther trade and government, and these hes been inviolablie observed since the first constitution of the royall borrowes, untill the year j^m vj^c and sevinty seven, and as to this wee doe with all humility hope that his Majestie will be graciously pleased to give some instructions to his commissioner or take such other course as his Majestie in his royall wisdom shall think fitt for preventing the lyke in tyme coming. These things wee doe with all humility represent to his Majestie, and we earnestlie beg of your lordship that ye will be pleased to consider the necessity of them is very great, and that without them it will be very hard if not impossible to preserve the trade of this nation from such ane exceissive decay as shall for want of ability render us utterly incapable to performe these services that wee see zealouslie affect; bot what ever way it shall pleas his Majestie to dispose of us and our concerns wee intreat your lordship to assure his Majestie that wee will to the last extremitie preserve a deep sense of our dewty and interest, according to our power give evidence that wee are his faithfull and loyall subjects, and that wee are sensible it is both our dewty in this approaching session of parliament and all other occasions to concurr in euerie thing that may tend to his Majesties satisfaction and to the advancement of his Majesties honor, interest, and greatnes. Wee expect your lordships tymous assistance in these our just desyres soe as the obtaining of them may not be prevented by the shortnes of this session; and we shall euer acknowledge ourselves to be, right honorable, your lordships most humble servants. matter of trade, and having alsoe caused read the viscount of Melfort, secretary of state, his letter direct to the royall burrowes, recorded amongst the acts made the last particular convention, and their answer made thereto, and the drawght of the act of parliament sent therewith to the lord secretary of state, and his return to the said letter direct to this present convention, they appoynted the said return from the secretary to be recorded, wherof the tenor followes : Whythall, 22 Apryle 1686. Right Honorable. I receaved your letter of the 15th Aprill and haue made no delay in obtaining his Majesties gracious answer to the humble demands therein mentioned. As to the first wherof, his Majesty commands me to assure yow that he has fullie instructed his comissioner in the affaire so as yow who on the account of trade and priviledge pay the sixth pairt of the cess of the kingdome may haue the benefit of that trade ye pay for, and his Majesty doubts not but the parliament will advise him justly in the matter and for your interest. As for your desires concerning the judging of differences amongst yourselues, his Majesty being so late acquainted with it can give no determinate answer till he has advised it below which his Majesty will doe with all speed and give yow the best answer his service will allow in the affaire. The King is not only proceeding in the matter of a free trade with England, but has instructed his commissionar in many things tending to your advantage which in dew tyme his grace will communicat to yow. For my own pairt, as I find in his Majesty a royall and generous inclination to restore your soe much decayed trade, and to doe all that may make the kingdome in generall, and most especially yow his royall borroughs, live in peace, prosperitie, and plenty, soe I shall not be wanting to doe all on my pairt to promove a work his Majesty is soe much concerned in and by which yow will receave soe great advantadge, not doubting but as yow have alwayes had your intire dependance on the croune when the concerne wes les minded, you will on all occasions, especially in this enshewing session of parliament, show the zealous duty ye have for the best of kings and most generous of benefactors. The early and full promises contained in yours to me leaves in me no doubt of your dutefullnes, and I doe humblie assure yow that soe long as yow are soe to him I shall never fail to be, right honowrable, your most humble servant, sic subscribitur, MELFORT.

6. Sir William Patersone, clerk to his Majesties privie councill, produced the letter direct to his Majesties privie councill relative to his Majesties letter direct to the royall borrowes as to imprisonment of any persons within any of the royall borrowes, tolbooths, or prison houses, and in relation to passes for ships, whervpon the saids lords of his Majesties privie councill had made ane act appoynting the said letter to be intimat to the judge and officers of the admirality and recorded in ther book ; which letter being publictly red the conventione appoynts the same should be recorded in the register of the royall borrowes, wherof the tenor followes. Sic superscribitur: JAMES, R. Right trusty and right welbeloved cousin and counsellor, right trusty and right welbeloved counsellours, right trusty and intirely beloved cousins and counsellours, right trusty and right welbeloved cousins and counsellours, right trusty and welbeloved cousins and counsellours, right trusty and welbeloved counsellours, and trusty and welbeloved counsellors, wee greet yow well. Forasmuch as wee are informed that the judges, clerks, and other officers of our admirality courts, doe under pretence of the late act of parliament ordaining that our admirall and his deputs have the sole right of granting passes and safe conducts to all ships, boats, or other seafaring vessells quhatsoever, are in use to impose upon masters, skippers, and others concerned in the said ships, boats and seafaring vessels, the necessity in all caices of taking the said passes and safe conducts which ought to be left free to ther own choise, and doeth otherwise prove to them ane unnecessary charge and great incumbrance ; and wee being resolved as well to provide for the just ease and liberty of all our subjects (especially those of our royall borrowes) as to maintaine the due rights and priviledges of our admirality, therfor it is our will and pleasur that yow signifie to the said judges, clerks, and other officers of the said courts of admirality, that wee have discharged, lykeas we heirby discharge them or any of them in any sort to require or impose vpon any of the aforesaid persons concerned in the said ships, boats, and other sea-faring vessells, the taking out of the said passes and safe conducts, or to make them any demand, trouble, or molestation whatsoever for ther not taking out therof, but that they leave the taking or not taking of the said passes to ther owne free choise ; provyding nevertheless that in all cases wher passes are neidfull or shall be desired the admirall and his deputs doe still have the sole right of granting of the said passes and safe conducts, heirby unprejudged, conforme to the said act of parliament ; and also providing that in all cases wherin, by the law, passes and safe conducts are needfull, these presents shall be noe excuse to the forsaid persons concerned for ther wanting therof ; which our will and pleasure wee require yow to caus to be intimated to and registered in the books of our said courts of admiralty, and that all the said judges, clerks, and other officers therof doe conform themselves therto under the pain of such punishments as yow shall think fit to inflict vpon the contraveeners. And yow are lykwise further to take notice how that being informed that our royall borrowes are often charged to receive and keep into ther tolbooths and prison houses prisoners who have not wherwith to maintain themselves but to become a charge vpon the said borrows, wee have thought fitt by our letter directed to them of the dait of these presents to allow them to refuse any such prisoner presented by privat persons except the pairty whoe presents him give (if required) satisfieing assurance for his maintainance, which wee require you will alsoe take care to see observed ; and soe wee bid yow heartily farewell. vj^c and sevinty two, in regaird all the comon good they had wes eleven bolls of bear and twenty four pounds Scots of money, which wes allocat for payment of ther ministers, and that they had noe customes or casualties; and yet nevertheles of ther distressed condition, and that they are past all hopes of having trade in tyme coming, the royall borrowes wer not desyrous they should be expunged out of the taxt roll, bot that the said burgh might continow as a member for the futur, and to evidence ther willingnes to complye with the forsaid desyre they wer content, vpon clearing them of all byganes and bringing them to twelve pennies in the taxt roll, and they getting vp ther disposition to ther comon good, and the borrowes procuring to them a charter of royalty, to continow as a member of the borrowes for the futur; which petition and desyre therof being considered by the convention, the convention thought fit to restrict ther pairt of the taxt roll, which wes formerly fyve shilling, to twelve pennies, and that till the alteration of the taxt roll, and ordanes the agent to pay the other four pairts of the said fyve shillings yearly till they be brought to the said twelve pennies, and alsoe ordaines him to pay four pairts of the haill byganes and that the said burgh pay a fyfth pairt of the haill byganes, and ordanes ther disposition of ther comon good lying in the clerks hands to be delyvered back to ther comissioners, and appoynts the said burgh to obtane a new charter of erection vpon ther owne charges.

Inverary.

8. The convention appoynts the agent to exact from the burgh of Inverary the four shillings which is ther proportion they are to pay by the taxt roll, and that for all byganes since the year j^m vj^c and forty nyn, and also in tyme coming, delaying alwayes the exaction of the sam till the nixt generall convention.

Sir George Mackenzie's and his servants pensions.

9. The convention rescinded the fourth act of the general convention in July 1688 appointing the agent to pay Sir George M'Kenzie of Rosehaugh and his servant their pensions from July 1685 to July 1688, and instructed the agent not to make payment of any part of their pensions.

state, ther pensions.
Pensions rescinded.

10. The convention discharged the agent to make payment to the late secretaries of state of their pension of 2000 merks since July 1688.

11. The convention revived the twelfth act of the general convention of 1685 rescinding all former acts establishing pensions upon certain persons who do service to the royal burghs, and declared all acts in prejudice thereof to be null and void.

Rhenfrew.

12. The agent having been appointed to pay to the burgh of Renfrew 1000 merks for repairing of their tolbooth, the convention instructed him to retain one half of the sum till the commissioners of Glasgow and Dumbarton ascertain that the first 500 merks "wes reallie applyed toward the repairing of the said toll-buith and that the work is advanced." EDINBURGH.

4 July 1689.

13. The convention discharged George Moncur, their officer, to crave money from any burgh when he delivers the missives. Moncur, officer.

14. Appointed the agent to assist the burgh of Lanark in applying to parliament, or any other judicatory, for reparation of the many and great losses they have sustained. Lanark.

15. The convention, considering that the collectors of the several sea ports had collected money "vpon the accompt of the deceist Sir James Kennedy, conservator, his gift, to which the borrows hes right," appointed the agent to obtain the money and to pursue those liable for the dues which the collector had not uplifted. Dues under Sir James Kennedy's gift.

16. Exempted the burgh of Sanquhar from sending a commissioner to conventions for three years, "in respect of the poverty of that burgh and that they live at a great distance." Exemption, Sanquhar.

17. Instructed the agent not to pay any part of the sum of 2000 merks appointed by the 12th act of last general convention to be paid to Sir James Kennedy for his services, "pairt wherof he did never performe and for the other pairt he wes mor than sufficientlie rewairded by former conventions, he having receaved considerable sounes of money for litle or noe services and wes many wayes burdensome to the borrowes." Sir James Kennedy.

15 July 1689.

18. Rescinded the 24th act of the general convention of 1687 altering the platform of commissions, and revived the former old platform "wherby the saids commissions are to bear that ther commissionars are men fearing God, of the trew protestant religion publictly professed and authorized by the lawes of this kingdome, without suspicion in the contrair, expert in the comon affaires of borroues, merchands, traffequeurs, and inhabitants within the burgh, bearing all portable charges with ther neighboures, and such as may tyn or win in all ther affaires." Platforme of Commissions.

19. Referring to the 13th act of the particular convention in November last allowing £800 sterling to Sir Magnus Prince for his services at court, the convention "seing noe particular convention can lay on any burden or sounes of money vpon the royall borrowes without speciall warrand from a general convention," and the matter not being mentioned in the missive calling the particular convention, "wherby the commissionars of the burghs whoe then mett wer not specially instructed by ther respective burghs," the convention unanimously declared the said act to be null and void. 20. The convention "after some debate vpon the matter of Sir Magnus Prince his allowance for his expenss and gratification in prosecution of his commission given by the general convention to him in July 1688 and his wholl negotiation at court," allowed him £300 sterling in satisfaction of his claims.

21. The convention considering that the wholl number of the commissioners doe not keep the meettings at the generall conventions, wherby the matters in debait befor the conventions are retarded and the concerns of the borrowes therby prejudged, doe therfor statut and ordaine that in all tyme coming twenty fyve comissioners of these burghs that sends ther commissioners to the generall conventions shall be a quorum.

22. Directions given as to the numbers and quorum of commissioners appointed by certain acts of last general convention to visit and report on the burghs of Glasgow, Air, Rutherglen, Inverness, Peibles, and Irving.

23. The convention considering that ther is ane burden vpon the borrowes by the agents debursing for coach hyres and drink money when any comitty of the borrowes goes to the Abbay or to visit any great person, they doe therfor discharge the agent to pay any coach hyres in tyme coming or give drink money without ane order from the conventione.

24. After considering the petition of the burgh of Culros "bearing ther distressed condition throw want of the trade in coall and salt they formerly had, and ther decay of trade in making of girdells," the convention appointed a committee to visit the burgh and report to the next general convention, "and that the agent concur with the said burgh in getting againe the gift of the coquets."

25. The convention taking to ther consideration the petition of John Carnegie, provost of Forfar, craving that for vindicating his integrity in the administration of the affaires of that burgh and of his intromission with the comon good therof, he wes most willing that the samen should be exposed to publict view and considered by indifferent and impartiall persons such as the convention should appoynt, and that ane accompt of ther dilligence should be reported to the nixt generall meeting, the convention considering that a proces of compt and reckoning befor the supream judicatories is both tedious and expensive, and being prosecut by humor and heat as is usuall in such caices the same may tend to the ruin of the said burgh, which the convention conceaves they are in dewty obleidged to prevent and obviat, especially when application is made to them as in this caice of all partities concerned, both the magistrats and inhabitants, and to the effect that ther may be ane impartiall scrutinie made of the petitioners intromission of the comon good of the said burgh therfor the convention appoynts [a committee to audit the accounts of the petitioner's intromission with the common good, and hear the objections of all concerned, and to see all matters "don and acted fairly and orderly, without animositie or humor," and to report to next general convention.]

EDINBURGH.

27. The convention recomends to such of ther commissioners as are members of parliament to consider what person is most fit and qualified to supplie the office of conservator, which is presently vaccant, till the sitting of the nixt generall convention, and to mak application to the Kings Majestie or to the parliament or secret councill theranent as they shall think fitt.

Office of conservator.

28. The convention taking to ther consideration that ther meeting at this present convention hes bein longer then vsuall, which wes occasioned by their vehement and zealous desyre to doe ther outmost and best service for the good of the borrowes at this tyme when the parliament is sitting, and to have every thing that is burdensome to the trad and interest of the royall borrowes removed and ther grevances redressed by this parliament, and that in purseuance thereof they have taken paines to reduce the samyn to the particular poynts efter following, recomending the further prosecution of them to the commissioners whoe are members of parliament efter this convention is dissolved, and which they thought fitt to have insert in the borrow books to shew ther care they had of the concerns of the borrowes to succeeding conventions, wherof the cheaf and capital grivance is that of the invasion made vpon ther priviledges by the burghs.

(15.) Item, that the power of granting licence to export what native comodities may concern manufactories ought to be ludged in the convention of burrowes and in those deligat by them.

(16.) Item, that the act of parliament anent arreistments within burgh be either rectified or repealed.

(17.) Item, that all penall statuts inferring pecuniary mulcts be discharged preceeding this tyme.

(18.) Item, that it should not be in the power of any judicatory to erect any incorporations within burgh prejudiciall to the ancient incorporations already established or to dissolve or divyde the said ancient incorporations.

(19.) Item, that the old impost of 4 li. vpon the tune within royall borrowes payable to the exchequer, as lykwayes the sexpence vpon the pynt of brandie, be considered and how far its fitt to move in them and to have them taken away.

(20.) Item, the gift in favores of Peter Braus anent vending and selling of playing cards, and all that hes followed vpon it, to be declared null.

(21.) Item, to crave redress of the mentenance of prisoners put in for civil and criminall causes into the tolbuiths of the royall borrowes by the shirreffs, justices, etc., which is very heavie and chargeable to the royall borrowes.

(22.) Item, that some redres be sought of the lait fynes imposed vpon Provost Petrie of Aberdeen, Provost Anderson of Glasgow and Provost Ainsly of Jedburgh, who suffered fying and imprisonment as acting dewtifullie as members of the convention of borrowes in 1675.

(23.) Item, that redres be craved of the great grivance of the inequality of measurs that are within royall burghs and burghs of baronie and regalitie, such as Dalkeith and vthers, and that the act of parliament 1587 anent mets and measures be revived.

(25.) Item, that the petition given in be the merchants of Edinburgh anent a free trade be seconded by all the assistance the royall borrows can afford in petitioning the parliament for that effect.

29. The convention taking to ther consideration the representation made to them by the burgh of Queensferrie holding furth the great lose the said toune hes sustained since the year j^m vj^c and sevnty eight, quherin the inhabitants had interest, extending to twenty seven thousand pounds Scots money, in maner particularly insert in ther representation, and that by and attour the lose of men and boyes which wer lost when ther ships wer cast away at sea, besyds ther burden of the mentinance of sevnty orphants and eightein widowes which are mentained vpon the said burghs expenssis, and alsoe that the heritors in regaird of the poverty of the said burgh doe contribut the third pairt of ther rents for paying the Kings cess and vther publict burdens, which burden and lose altogither hes rendered them to that condition that they cannot any longer subsist wnles ther condition be taken to the generall conventions consideration and some effectuall way may be condescended vpon to ease them of the havie and insupportable burden they lye vnder, the convention appoynts the burghs of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Stirling, Innerkeithing and Culross, or any three of them, to visit the said burgh of Queensferrie, take tryall of ther lose and burden forsaid and the trew condition of the said burgh and report to the nixt generall convention.

royall borrowes anent ther grivances, wherof noe pairt is as yet redressed, especially as to those grivances in relation to trade, the convention returns his lordship ther most hearty thanks for his care in the borrowes concerns, and having taken the said missive to ther consideratioun they find it necessar that som of ther number should be sent expres to court for that effect, and having experience of the fitnes, ability, and knouledge of Sir James Ogilvie, Sir William Hamiltoun, advocats, and David Spence, merchant, they doe therfor elect and chose the saids Sir James Ogilvie, Sir William Hamilton and David Spence to be ther commissioners furthwith to repair to court and to present to his Majestie the following adress of the royall borrowes, and to doe ther outmost endeavor to obtane the desyre therof granted, wherof the tenor followes:—To the Kings most sacred Majestie, the humble address of the commissioners of the royall borrowes of your Majesties ancient kingdome of Scotland. Wheras wee being amongst the first zealous asserters and ouners of your Majesties authority in this kingdome, and does firmly resolve for ourselves and in name of all that we doe represent to mantaine the samen for the futur with our lyves and fortunes, judging our happines both as to our religious and civill concerns to be inseperable from your Majesties welfar and interest, and therfor are incouraged to represent to your Majestie the speciall grivance following lying on our trade. For as much as it wes the undoubted and vnquestionable priviledge of your royall borrowes, by a constant and uninterrupted series of lawes and acts of parliament for many hundreds of years in ther favores, to have the trade both of export and import within this kingdome, wherby not only the kingdome in generall did flourish and the royall borrows therby rendered mor capable to serve your Majesties royall ancestors, having our immediat dependance vpon the thron, and supporting the samyn by bearing a sext pairt of the whole publict burdens of the kingdom, besyds the payment of our custome and excyse, and being lyable to watching and wairding and keeping, maintaining, and building of prison houses for the benefit and advantadge of the wholl subjects of the kingdome, and wes in some tollerable condition to have continowed to serve the royall authority towards these ends untill of late, whyll arbitrary government wes creiping in upon us, by one strock of ane act of parliament in the year 1672 the saids numerous lawes and acts of parliament soe often confirmed made in our favores wer whollie cut of and our trade communicat to the inhabitants of the burghs of regalities and barronies whoe hes ther immediat dependance and holds ther lands of vther superiors and not of your Majestie as your royall borroues does and bears noe pairt of our burden, wherby we are outterly ruined in our trade and the mean of our lyveliehood and subsistance whollie taken from us. May it therfor pleas your sacred Majesty to instruct your commissioner to the nixt session of parliament to give the royall assent to such ane act as shall be voted by the estaits of parliament for redressing the said grivance, and your Majestie may be assured that non of your subjects shall be mor forward to serve your interest with ther lyves and fortunes then, may it pleas your sacred Majestie, your Majesties

8. The convention taking to ther consideration the petition given in to them by Sir James Cowper, bearing that after his long absence in the East Indean, wher and in other forraigne nations he attained great honor and credit, and that after he brought the East India Dutch fleet to Holland he wes sollicit by severall of his cuntriemen, particularly the Scots factors, to make application to the royall borrowes for a recommendation to the Kings Majestie for the conservatorship of the Scots priviledges in the Netherlands, bot the generall convention wer dissolved befor his aryvall at this place, and therfor he thought fit to apply himself to this particular convention for the said recommendation, and if the said office should be conferred vpon him he assured the convention he wold mentaine the honor of the place (though it should cost him a pairt of his oune means) and should be very faithfull in the exercise of his office, and therfor craveand the convention to favor him with ane recommendation to the Kings Majestie for preference to the said office, and in the meantyme till he procure his gift to authorize him to exerce the said office; which petition and desyre forsaid being considered by the convention they declare they are weell satisfied with the good report and reputation the petitioner hes acquyred to the honor of his countrie by his deportment abroad in forraigne places bot finds they are not authorized to ansuer fully his desyre in relation to the conservators office and therfore they doe recomend the petitioner to the royall borrowes whoe are members of the nixt session of parliament to consider the said petition and doe therein as they shall think fitt.

6. The convention having perused Mr Andrew Kennedys commission, together with the commission granted to the deceist Sir James Kennedy, late conservator in the Netherlands, and the dewes and exactions contained in the said Sir James Kennedys commission, they find the saids dewes and exactions to be exorbitant and tending to the prejudice of the state of borroughs, and having considered the former dewes and exactions in use to be payed befor the said Sir James Kennedys gift to be too litle and not able for mantaining the dignity and charge of the conservators office in the Netherlands, the convention are of oppinion and doe recom-

end that the nixt generall convention of burroughs should allow to the said Mr Andrew Kennedy three hundred pound sterling yearly, which they esteem at present ane sufficient allowance for mantaining the dignity and charge of the said office of conservatorship, and that for three years to come and thereafter yearly during ther pleasur and ay and whyll the samen be recalled by a generall convention, and lykwayes they doe authorize and impower the commissioners for Edinburgh, Perth, Aberdeen, Glasgow, Dundy, Montros, Air, Invernes, Dumbarton, Linlithgow, Stirling and Bamff, or any three of them to be a quorum, to meet as a comitty at any tyme betuixt and the doun sitting of the nixt convention and to offer and report ther oppinion to the said convention anent the way and maner of vplifting and collecting the said soume of three hundred pound sterling.

Commissions
approved.

3. The convention approved of the whole commissions.

Heads of mis-
sive.

4. Appointed a committee to consider the missive and report their opinion on each head to the convention.

Brandie.

5. Instructed the same committee "to draw up reasons why brandie ought not to be discharged to be imported by act of parliament."

Selkirk, Forfar.

6. Granted liberty to the commissioner for Selkirk to return home, and excused the absence of Forfar.

Keeping dyets of convention.

7. The convention revived the eleventh act of the convention in June last, and of new ordained that any commissioner who after producing his commission should be absent from two successive diets, without reasonable excuse, should incur the usual fine for absence. It was also ordained that nineteen at general, and thirteen at particular, conventions should be held a "sufficient number to represent the royall borrowes."

12 July 1690.

Heads of mis-
sive.

8. Continued till next general convention heads of the missive relating to qualifications of commissioners, stopping of monopolies, Dumbarton bridge, free-men partners with unfreemen, residence in royal burrows, uniformity of measures, and the creditors of Thomas Cunninghame, factor in Campheer.

Visitations of burghs.

9. Referring to the visitations which the convention had appointed to be made to certain burghs, and considering "that severall of the saids burghs, by the troubles arysing and difficulties of the tymes, occasioned by the war, did hinder the reporting their particular conditions to the convention," the commissioners continued the visitations of the burghs of Glasgow, Inverness, Peibles, Irving, Sanquhar, Rhenfrew, Forfar, Quensferry, Elgin, Pittenweem, Kirkcudbright and Bamff, conform to former acts.

Kirkcaldy and Montross, tax roll.

10. Having considered reports as to Kirkcaldie and Montross, the convention appointed these burghs to be eased in the tax roll, Kirkcaldie in 11s. 8d., and

Montross in 10s. Scots, and appointed these sums to be laid on the following ^{EDINBURGH.}
burghs, viz., Aberdeen, 10s., Dundie, 6s. 8d., and Dumfreis, 5s. ^{12 July 1690.}

11. The convention eased the burgh of Burntisland of 7s. in the tax roll and Elgin, tax roll.

same on the burgh of Forfar.

13. The convention considering "the poor and mean condition of the burgh Dysart.
of Dysart" recommended to the preses, with advice of such of the burghs as are in town, to assist the burgh in all their concerns and particularly in obtaining warrant from the secret council for choosing new magistrates and council and in settling all debates between the burgh and Lord Sinclair.

14. Ratified the acts of last general convention in favor of Andrew Kennedy Conservator. of Clowburn as conservator of the Netherlands.

15. After having fully considered as to the particular method by which the Conservators allowance to the conservator should be paid, the convention found that for pay- dewes.
ment of dues by merchants the same should no more be laid upon the sack of goods but upon the value of goods transported to the staple port, therefore they ordained that in all time coming fifteen stivers upon the value of the hundred gilders of goods should be exacted by the conservator and his deputies from merchants, and skippers to pay upon the sack of goods as formerly. All dues for other than staple goods to be paid to the conservator as in the time of his predecessors, and factors on their admission and merchants at their first voyage to pay as formerly. The commissioner for Aberdeen protested against this act.

16. The convention, considering "ther are no factors for the present legallie Gordoun, facsettled at Campher, and to the effect that a present expedient may be fallen upon tor at Cam-for the weell and interest of the royall borrows and the merchants trading to the pheir.
Netherlands, that ther goods be not squandered away in the meantyme for the want of care and industry of factors," they accepted the offer of Alexander Gordoun, provost of Aberdeen, to bind himself for William Gordoun, in Holland, that he shall account for all goods belonging to Scots merchants intromitted with by him.

17. The convention "doe earnestly recomend to Mr Andrew Kennedy of Scots poor in Clouburn, present conservator, to doe his outmost dilligence in procuring payment Campheir.
from the toune of Campheir of such soumes of money lying in ther hands belonging to the Scots poor."

18. The instructions given by the royall borrowes to Mr Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, present conservator, being read in presence of the royall borrowes, wer approved by the convention and signed by the conservator, wherof the tenor followes :—

22. The conventione, vpon certane important considerations moving them, and for the better executione of the lait act of parliament in favores of the royall borrowes,¹ enacts and ordanes in all tyme coming

¹ By Act of Parliament, Gul. et Mar., 14 June 1690, c. 15, it was ordained "that the importing of all forrain commodities and merchandise either by sea or land, doth and shall belong to the freemen inhabitants of ther Majesties royall burrowes allennerly, excepting cattell, horses, sheep and other bestiall, and likewise excepting such commodities as noblemen and barons shall import for their own use;" also "that the exporting by sea of all the native commodities of this kingdome doth and shall belong to the freemen inhabitants of the royall burrows, only excepting corns, cattell, horses, sheep, mettalls, mineralls, coalls, salt, lime and stone, but prejudice to noblemen and barons to export as much of the other native product of the kingdome. whether staple commodities or others, as may answere to the value of the commodities which shall be imported by them for their own use as said is; as also but prejudice to all the leidges to transport by land out of this kingdome all the native commodities thereof, and in case any persons shall doe in the contrair of this present act they shall be punished according to the tenor of the acts of parliament made against unfree traders in all points. Declareing hereby that the inhabitants of burghs of regalities and baronies and others shall and may trade in buying and selling all native commodities, that noe burges of any royall burgh shall buy from any wnfrieman any forraigne imported goods for retailing againe, except from such strangers whoe shall make first offer of ther goods to the magistrats and toun councill of any royall burgh in haill bulk, certifieing such friemen as shall contraveen this present act or any pairt therof shall be lyable to the borrowes in the fourth pairt of the vallow of the goods soe bought.

25. Approved of the agent's account of disbursements from July 1689 to July 1690, extending to £6320, 5s. 8d. scots, and ordained the burghs to pay their proportions.

15 July 1690.

Agent,
gratuity.

26. The commissioners allowed to John Buchan, their agent, a gratuity of £800 Scots for services here and at London.

Papers relating to 50 solz per tun.

27. The clerk produced the whole principal papers relating to the fifty solz per ton, which were ordered by act of privy council to be delivered up to the burghs, and the convention instructed the agent to pay to him £20 sterling "in consideration of the pains taken by him in finding out the saids French papers when he had the trust of keeping the publick records of the kingdome."

Servants
gratuities and fees.

28. Appointed the agent to pay certain gratuities and fees to the seryants.

Inverary,
Anstruther Wester.

29. Appointed the burgh of Inverary to pay 4s. scots of the stent roll, and Anstruther Wester to be eased of that sum.

Protestation,
Aberdeen, con-
servatorisdues.

30. Follows the protestation given in be Alexander Gordoun, commissioner fo rthe burgh of Aberdeen, for himself and in name and behalf of the said toun, against the alteration of the table of the staple goods at Campheer, [referred to in the 15th act of this convention]:—

First. Becaus the said table hes continowed for the space of ane hundred and fourty years and upwards, and the samen being appoynted by our predcessors whoe should not bot know the condition of the staple also weell as wee doe, and it wer hard now to alter the samen efter soe long a tract of years.

Secundly. Wheras now it is pretendit that the conservators dewes be vplifted be the vallow and not be the bulk, this extraordinar method is not only vnjust for the reasons forsaid, but alsoe becaus the conservator is at alsoe much pains to attend and doe justice to a skipper whoe brings a loadning of coalls as to him who brings a loadning of plaiding or any other staple comodities to the said port, and is alsoe much obleidged to doe all incumbent dewties and personall attendance either at the said staple port or any other toun or sea port of the haill seventeen provinces.

Thridly. I the said Alexander Gordoun, commissioner for the burgh of Aberdeen, for myself and in name and behalf of the said burgh, protests that what ever dewes belongiug to the conservator be allowed to this present conservator the samen shall be in satisfaction of all cellaries allowed to him, otherwayes it will be presumed that he will nether attend nor be soe exact be himself or his deputs in vplifting and exacting his dewes as other conservators hes been, when he may recur vpon the borrowes for his cellary of three hundred pounds sterling yearly established vpon him by this present convention, especially seing he hes ane other settled cellary from the toun of Campheir.

Fourthly. It is humblie conceaved and represented that the royall burgh of Aberdeen, nor noe other burgh within this kingdome whoe exports staple commodities, can be lyable either to this new cellary of three hundred pound sterling granted to the present conservator or to the new imposition conforme to the vallow and not vpon the sack as wes formerly in vse, becaus the said votis [were] caried by plurality of dry burghs whoe hes noe export of staple goods, and consequently payes noe pairt nor portion of the conservators cellary, bot the samen is altogether a burden vpon such burgh as exports.

EDINBURGH.
15 July 1690.
Protestation,
Aberdeen, con-
servatoris dues.

31. The same day it being represented to the convention by the lord provost of Edinburgh that the good tounne had vsed great pains and been at considerable expenss in procuring the extracts of the Scots priviledges in France in relation to the royall borrowes trade to and from that kingdome, and had not only obtained extracts therof bot lykwayes by ane order from the secreit councill had procured vp the principall charters and priviledges granted by the kings of Frauce to this nation to be kept for the vse of the royall borrowes, and accordingly produced befor the convention the said principalls, and craved that since they wer concerned in the trade of this kingdome, and that it wes most wunreasonable that the good tounne should be put to the wholl charge of extracting the same and obtaining vp the principalls, that therfor the convention might order ther agent to repay the toun what charges they had depursed vpon that accompt with a deduction of the good touns proportion, the convention appoynts the same to be ane heid of the nixt missive to be considered by the generall convention in July 1691.

32. Dissolved this meeting, and appointed the next general convention to be held at Edinburgh in July 1691.

The comittie appoynts ane letter to be sent to the burghs of EDINBURGH. regality and barrony of this kingdome in relation to ane accomodation of 19 November 1690. the matter of trade betuixt the royall borrowes and the saids burghs of Burghs of re- regality and barronies, as alsoe ane other letter to be sent to the Duke of gality and Hamilton and other superiors of the burghs of barronies and regalities, barony. and lykwayes ane third letter to be sent to the royall borrowes requyring them to dispatch with exact care and dilligence the letters direct to the burghs of barronie and regality within their presincts, and to direct such letters as wants directions, and to give ane full accompt of the trade of these burghs of barrony and regality, that the comitty may know in what termes to treat with them, and recomends to Mr James Smollet, provost of Dumbartoun, to draw the drawght of the saids letters against the nixt meeting.

21 November 1690.

3. Mr James Smollet, provost of Dumbartoun, presented to the Burghs of comitty ane drawght of ane letter to be sent by the comitty to the barony and burghs of barrony and regality, wherof the tenor followes :—Sir. The regality. royall borrowes, at ther last generall convention in July, did nominat a comittie for putting to execution the lait act of parliament restoring ther priviledges, and accordingly the comittie hes mett in this place, and albeit many pregnant and convincing arguments wer offered for a speedy execution against the burghs of barrony and regality, yet such is our tendernes towards yow as being our nighboures and countreyemen that I am allowed, befor any legall dilligence be vsed, to give yow advertise-ment that in caice your burgh of barrony will, by your representative, attend the comittie heir the [blank] of [blank] nixt to come, and make such satisfieing proposalls as may inclyn the comittie to ane acceptance, yow shall be fully heard as to your communication of trade with the royall borrowes. Meantyme ye will be pleased to keep the dyet pre- cisly and doe both yourselves and us the justice to believe that this method proceids only from our aversion to take legall courses against yow if they can be prevented by friendly accomodation. This is signified to yow in name and at the desyre of the comitty by, Sir, your humble ser- vant, (sic subscribitur;) JOHN HALL, P.

4. Followes the second letter, direct to the Duke of Hamiltoun. Letter to Duke of Hamiltoun.

Letter to Duke of Hamiltoun.

May it pleas your Grace. The royall borrowes did at ther last generall meeting appoynt a comitty for putting in execution the lait act of parliament restoring ther priviledges, and accordingly they have mett in ordor thereto, bot the comitty considering that your grace hes considerable interest in the matter they have thought it ther dewty first to acquaint your grace that if these burghs wherin your grace is concerned will make any reasonable proposalls that may prevent legall execution the comittie will readily imbrace them, and have written them to this purpose ; and as your grace may be very confident that nothing les then indispensible necessity will obleidge the royall borrowes to be in opposition to any of your concerns, soe they are very confident your grace will dispose these of your interest to doe what is reasonable for ther oune advantadge and our exoneration. This, at the desyre and in name of the comitty, is signified to your grace by, may it pleas your grace, your graces most humble and obedient servant, (sic subscribitur;) JOHN HALL, P.

Letter to royall borrowes.

5. Followes the third letter, to be sent to the royall borrowes. Right honorable. Yow may remember that the royall borrowes at ther last generall convention in July did nominat a comittie of ther number to consider what might be the best way for effectuall execution of the lait act of parliament maid in our favours, and the comittie having mett heer wee have thought it convenient for taking of all clamour that afterwards may be raised, and to leave the burghs of barrony, regality and others, altogither inexcusable, to wryt letters to each of them to sie if, without any legall hearing, wee can bring the matter to ane accomodation, and for that end wee have transmitted the inclosed to yow which ye are to caus carefully delyver ; and least any of these burghs or others should be omitted whose designations wee know not, ther are some letters left to your direction on the back, and therfor the comitie does expect and requyre yow that ther letters be carefullie sent and lykwayes that yow transmit to us ther answers with the best information yow can have of the trade and handling of every particular burgh of barrony within your bounds, that incaice the busines betuixt them and us can be taken vp in a freindly way wee may know what demands to make towards them; and in caice ther be not soe many letters inclosed as will disperse throw the haille burghs of barrony and regality within your bounds ye are by this impowred to wryt letters from your selves to the same purpose mentioned in our letter. Your dilligence and care in these particulars is desyred as ye wish weell to your selves and the rest of the royall borrowes and wheranent ane accompt will be taken at our nixt meeting. This is signified to yow in name and at appoyntment of the comitty by, right honorable, your very loving friend and servant, (sic subscribitur :) JOHN HALL, P.

and for that effect appoynts and nominats four visitors, viz., James Fletcher, commissioner for the burgh of Dundie, and Alexander Walker, commissioner for the burgh of Aberdeen, John Moor, commissioner for the burgh of Air, and Maister James Smollet, commissioner for the burgh of Dumbartoun; and that the commissioners for the burghs of Dundie and Aberdeen shall visit the south royall burghs of this kingdome, and the saids commissioners for the burghs of Air and Dumbartoun to visite the north royall burghs of the said kingdome, and that according to the divisions to be made in ther respective circouts as the saids commissioners can best agree amongst themselves; and ordanes the saids commissioners to begin ther journeys in ther respective circouts and divisions betuixt and the (blank) day of (blank); excepting alwayes furth of this visitation the burgh of Kirkwall in Orkney, Week in Caithnes, and Innerarie in Arguylshyre and Rothesay in Boot, becaus of the difficulty of acces to these places. And the convention considering that the charges and expenss of the said visitations ought in justice and equitie be made vpon the comon charges of the borrowes and that the samen ought to be such as is suitable for the borrowes to grant and the commissioners to receave, therfor they ordane the agent to pay to the saids four commissioners the sounge of two hundred pound sterling, declaring that if ther saids commissioners shall happen to be superexpended in mor then the said two hundred pound sterling that the burghs will reimburse them of the samen vpon ther ovne simple declaration and word of honor.

The following instructions appoynted for the visitors of the royall borrowes being publictly red in presence of the convention they doe approve threof.

(1) [Same as art 1 of Instructions, antea p. 125].

(2) Item, that the magistrats and toune clerk produce ane exact account vpon the termes forsaid of all the mortifications belonging to the toune councill, or gildrie, or trades therof, and that the saids visitors are to consider the mortifications in swa far only as they are employed to ease the burghs of publict burdens and taxes layed vpon the same.

(3) Item, the visitors appoynted for the south royall burghs of this kingdome that in their circout they call for the measurs kept by Jedburgh to sie if they be conforme to the standart.

(4) Item, the visitors of the royall borrowes to take inquiry that when they come to the burghs of Stirling, Linlithgow, Haddingtoun, Banff and (blank) burghs whither the burgesses of these burghs lyes under an absolute necessity of loadning and vnloadning at vnfree burghs to the effect that if it appear that if they lye vnder ane impossibility to load and vnload at vnfree ports that then they may have a particular dispensation to load and vnload at unfree ports.

(5 to 13) [Same as arts. 3 to 11 of Instructions, antea pp. 125-6].

(14) Item, that the visitors of the royall borrowes in ther circuit of visitatione take information from the magistrats of the royall burghs of the state and condition of the regalities, barronies, and other vnfree burghs within ther respective precincts, as to the trade, comon good, and condition of the houses and inhabitants of these vnfree burghs, and that the said information be given in be the saids magistrats to the visitors during the tyme they stay within ther burghs.

(15) [Same as art. 14 of Instructions, antea p. 127].

Thir instructions are delyvered by the convention to James Fletcher, provost for Dundie, Alexander Walker, commissioner for Aberdeen, John Moor, comissionar for Air, and Maister James Smollet, comissioner for Dumbartoun, appoynted visitors for the burghs benorth Forth and the burghs besouth Forth ; and the convention does heirby requyre from the respective royall borrowes abovementioned a chearfull and reddie concurrence with the saids visitors and ane exact obedience to the instructions and rules abovementioned, and if any of the said severall borrowes shall faill (as is not expected) to give the forsaid concurrence and obedience as they will be esteemed vnfaithfull to the estait of the royall borrowes soe they will be considered as places of singular repair and traffique and according represented to the next generall convention at the making vp of the taxt roll. This with the forsaid instructions is transmitted to yow, in name and at the desyre of the forsaid convention, by their preses.

declars that if heirefter it shall be found that the burgh of Jedburgh is prejudged and wronged by the inhabitants of the said toun of Hawick in the matter of the measurs and weights that they will espous the interest of the said burgh vpon the comon charges of the borrows.

Dumbarton
comon milne.

10. Granted warrant to the burgh of Dumbarton to set their common mill on tack for nineteen years, "provyding alwayes that the samen be done be way of public roup and having the consent of the deacons of crafts and most substantiall burghesses of the said burgh and not vnder the former tack dewty."

Burghs, missive dewes.

11. Instructed the agent to take immediate proceedings against the burghs in arrear for recovery of their missive dues, "to the effect these burghs whoe makes payment of ther missive dewes may noe longer run the hazard and be lyable for the deficiencie of the burghs that becomes insolvent."

Maintaining
souldiers.

12. The convention considering the great prejudice many of the royall burghs of this kingdome hes sustained by mantaining souldiers vpon ther oune expenses, being induced therto as beleiving they wer to haue retention in ther owne hand of what they wer dew to the publict in soe far as they had advanced to the souldiers, and that ther is acts of parliament ordaining the three moneths cess and the hearth money to be applyed for that vse which hes yet proven ineffectuall to the royall borrowes, therfor the convention does appoynt the commissioners for Edinburgh, Air, and Dumbartoun to consult Sir William Hamiltoun to draw a bill in name of the royall borrowes to the lords of privie councill or lords of the thesaurie for payment of what is dew to the royall borrowes vpon the accompt for-said out of the saids fonds, and appoynt the agent to advance money for drawing of the said consultation.

commissioners.

13. The convention considering that the visitation of the royall burghs wes vnder the view and prospect of the last generall convention, and for that effect they had impoured a comitty to name visitors, and that the said comitty had actually appoynted visitors, viz., the commissioners for Perth, Aberdeen, Air, and Dumbartoun; and when they wer in readines and made preparation for their journey and had waited a considerable tyme in Edinburgh they wer disappoynted by the indisposition of the commissioner for Perth, wherthrow the saids commissioners of Aberdeen, Air, and Dumbartoun wer at a great lose by ther said attendance and preparation, the convention in consideration therof allowes to them twenty pound sterling which they ordane the agent presently to pay to the saids three commissioners.

14. The convention vpon a representation made be the commissioner EDINBURGH.

being in themselves soe considerable, and which the royall borrowes wold have purchased at a rate three tymes above eight hundred pound sterling, and therfor humbly craued and expected from the honorable meeting that they wold discharge the agent to persew for the two thousand and seven hundred pounds Scots and appoynt the three hundred pound which wes yet wanting of the eight hundred pound to be payed to the petitioner for herself and as tutrix to her children, especially considering that her husband wes knownen to have acted faithfully and effectually in that trust and that he wes a person of soe great ingenuity and candour that he never took ane indirect way to enrich either himself or his familie; as the representation bears. Which, together with the present circumstance of Sir Magnus Princes family whoe deserves ther favors, being considered be the convention, therfor they appoynt Maister John Buchan, ther agent, to stop any farder proces for recoverie of the said soume of two thousand and seven hundred pounds and impowers him to discharge any such action of repetition, the representatives of the said Sir Magnus Prince discharging the royall borrowes for any pretence they can have for the other three hundred pound sterling acclaimed by the said representatione.

19. Anent the supplication given in be John Anderson, provost of Glasgow, in name and behalf of that burgh, mentioning that wher the toune of Glasgow having of a considerable tyme bygane flowrished in its trade and inhabitants and payed a large share of the publick burdens dew and payable by the state of borrowes, trew it is that of late the said burgh is become altogether incapable of subsistance inregaird of these heavie burdens that lye thervpon, occasioned by the vast soumes that have bein borrowed by the late magistrats and the misapplying and dila-pidation of the touns patrimony in suffering ther debts to swell and employing the comon stock for ther ounie sinistruous ends and uses, wherin if the petitioner should be expres in the particular it wold exceid-ingly tend to the dishonor and disparadgement of these whose dewty it wes to have bein the patriots and supporters of the place, bot without any designe to reflect or expatiate vpon ther misdemeners the petitioner humbly represents that ther wes ane absolut and indispenssible necessity for the prasant magistrats to sell and dispose of a great pairt of ther patrimonie, especially the lands and barronie of Provan, towards the defraying of ther most vrgent and pressing debts, and without doeing therof they cannot propose any personall security from the touns creditors, nor will ther be any persons found to represent the toune in the office of magistracie till they be secured from legall dilligence, which can only be done by disposing of ther patrimonie to a present sale; and therfor desyring the convention to interpose ther authority and grant warrand to the present magistrats and counsell of Glasgow to sell and dispoen ther saids lands of Provan, and such other lands or few dewties as belong to them, to be employed for payment of the forsaid debts, as the supplication bears; which being considered be the convention they heirby interpose ther authority and grant warrand to the present magistrats and counsell of Glasgow to sell and dispoen ther saids lands of Provan to be employed for payment of the debts owing be the said burgh of Glasgow.

20. The convention taking to ther serious consideration the memoriall presented by the conservator, and, first, as to the extraordinar charge he wes at befor he went over to Holland, being obleidged to attend a considerable tyme at London towards the obtaining of credentialls from his Majesty and others mentioned in the said memoriall, and that his expenss and charges ought to be considered and allowance accordingle given him; as alsoe, considering the condition represented by the conservator of the Scots affairs in relation to the observance of the staple, they in respect of the severall difficulties that offers at this tyme doe seriously remit to the prudence of the conservator to doe therin as he shall sic most just and expedient. The convention appoynts that pairt of the conservators memoriall in relation to the staple port to be recorded in ther books, wherof the tenor followes:— At Campheer thoe the magistrats on ther pairt professes all reddines to observe the conditions of the contract, yet on our pairt the conservator found the condition of the staple to be very ill and soe little observed as it ought to be, and as the conservator is particularly instructed and ordored by the royall borrowes it should be that it seems in a manner much to be deserted, the current of the trade having for severall years past run as it wer in a course to Rotterdam, for at Campheer at present ther is, primo, noe legall established factor (but one by way of expediencie) into whose hands the nation may saifly consigne ther goods; secundo, noe Scots merchant;

tertio, no minister; quarto, no consistacy; quinto, no congregation save two or three men, wherof only one is a Scotsman, and three or four women; sexto, noe consergery hous, which is most necessary for our nation, the Dutch innes ther being exorbitantly dear. Whence the conservator is much straitned what to doe as to punishing breakers of the staple according as the honorable convention haue obleidged the conservator, for if it wer bot one particular person or veshell wherby the staple wer broken it wer easie to rectifie it, but when the bulk of the wholl trade as said is runs to Rotterdam it is the mor difficult; and the rather becaus it is asserted that in tyme of war and danger they ought to have seasonable convoys to Campheer, which not coming in dew tyme they tak occasion to goe with the Rotterdam convoy, and having unloaded ther goods at Rotterdam and payed all customes and dewties for them ther they complain that they should be compelled to be at the expens of transporting ther goods (most of which are bulkish and weighty) from Rotterdam to Campheer, and the rather becaus most of the staple goods at Campheer are bought by people of Rotterdam and soe most be at a new charge in retransporting them thither; wherfor the conservator humbly craves that the convention wold seriously consider this caice that he may haue ther directions how to behaue himself heirin for the good of the trade of the kingdome, for which caus the conservator wes come expresly hither to attend the convention, for the dew and exact observing of the staple wold be as to his particular his great ease and advantage. And siclyk, the convention considering the years cellary payable to the conservator commencing from the first of Apryll j^m vj^c and nynty to the first of Apryll j^m vj^c and nynty one and his being necessarily detained in attending the royall borrowes till he wes admitted and receaved in his place, and being thereafter interrupted in the speedy acces which he designed for Holland, being the tyme of war, wes forced to attend convoyes and it wes impossible for him to haue collected his dewes conforme to the table granted to him by the last generall convention from the tradding ships, nor could they in reason be obleidged to pay till they had the benefit of a conservator receiding vpon the place to exerce his office; lykeas the convention having considered the accompt of the conservators intromission, which he hes given vp vpon his word of honor and credit, [instructed the agent to pay him the difference between 954 gilders 5 stivers, being the

21. The convention, taking to ther consideration that by the 23rd act of the last generall convention [a committee was appointed to take means for carrying into execution the late act of parliament in favor of royal burghs,] and the said comitty having mett vpon the nyntein day of November last, did out of a good meaning and sincere intention to doe most acceptable services for the interest of the royall borrowes fall vpon this expedient that befor any furder procedor be made in executing the said act of parliament that a treaty for ane accomodation of trade with the regalities, barronies, and other vnfrie places, should be first offered to them to sie if they wold vndertake any considerable pairt of the burden lying vpon the royall borrowes, which wes the cheif and principall designe of the said comitty, and that accordingly letters wer written to them and to seuerall noble and honorable persons ther superiors, and that the said comitty had appoynted the saids vnfrie burghs to return ther answer, viz., those lying vpon the south syd of Forth against the second Twesday of March last, those on this syd of Spey vpon the third Twesday of the said moneth, and those beyond Spey vpon the fourth Twesday of the said moneth ; and the said comitty having mett and attended at Edinburgh the wholl moneth of March last, during which tyme non compeired for the saids vnfrie burghs except Borrowstounnes, Falkirk, Greenock, and Elie, whoe refused to condescend and liquidat what proportion of burden they wold vndertake for these burghs ; and that those persons that compeired for the vnfrie burghs of Dunkell, Dun and Lesly, refused altogether to vnderly any pairt of burden for ther trade, whervpon the comitty by ther act the first of Apryll last did declare that in regaird ther offer had bein slighted and vnderallowed, and that of all the great and vast number of vnfrie burghs within the kingdome none of them bot sex com-

peired, whereof fyve of them did extinuat ther trade and wold not liquidat ther offer, and that only Falkirk had offered three shilling Scots vpon the hundred pound, all which the comitty conceaved tended to a delay that the vnfrie burghs might have a years further trade, whervpon the comitty fand that the lenth the vnfrie burghs cam did nowayes answer the end and expectation of the royall borrowes, and therfor it wes ther opinion that every royall burgh should tak the best means they could for putting the act of parliament in execution against ther nixt adjacent burghs of regality and barrony ; yet notwithstanding of the said comitties rationall and convincing procedor, and of ther finall resolution in the said affair, the present convention thought fitt to reassume the consideration of the said matter, to the end that vnfree burghs might have noe pretext or ground of clamour against the royall borrowes bot be rendered inexcusable in all tyme coming, they caused severall tymes publict intimation to be made at the dore of the councill house wher they satt by calling over a list of the vnfrie burghs to sie if any persons wold compear for them that the royall borrowes might enter into a comuning and treaty with them, bot of all the saids vnfrie burghs non compeired bot the laird of Greennock, younger, for the said burgh, and James Dawling and John Hunter, skippers, commissioners from Borroustounnes, and (blank) from Falkirk ; and having called befor them the saids commissioners for Borroustounnes they wer demanded what proportion of burden they wold offer and how the said offer if agreed to should be secuired, they altogether refused to condescend and liquid a certane soume of money or to secure that the samen should be payed to the royall borrowes ; as lykwayes (blank), whoe pretendit to be commissioner for Falkirk, being interrogat if he had a commission from the said burgh to treat with the burghs denyed the same, and declared that he could offer nothing in name of the said burgh ; and sicklyk, Sir John Schaw, younger of Greennock, compeired and offered for the said burgh to pay such a proportion of burden as efter valuation it ought to pay, and that he wold secure the payment therof bot by noe means wold condescend vpon a quota ; all which being againe and againe considered and reconsidered by the convention they look vpon the offer made by Borroustounnes as noe wayes satisfactory, tending only to hold the royall borrowes in suspence and in the dark and at ane vncertainty, that they may all the whyll use the trade of a royall burgh ; and sicklyk that the offer by Falkirk was a meer sham and a ridicouling of the borrowes to send a person without any commission to treat; and as to the offer made by the laird of Greenock, albeit the same be mor ingenuous and poynted then the rest, yet in regaird he wold not liquidat his offer, and that the same wes bot a single unfrie burgh whoes proportion will doe litle to ease the wholl royall borrowes, and that it tends to destroy the interest of Glasgow, which is the second trading royall burgh of the kingdome, they cannot acquiesse to the said offer, being soe circumstantiat; and therfor the convention does vpon the wholl matter declare that as they give ther hearty thanks to the said comitty for comencing the for-said treaty with vnfrie burghs as tending to the weell of the borrowes, soe lykwayes the convention does for the reasons and causes forsaid declare that the said treaty is now at a period and close, and doe heirby warrand, allow, and authorise the saids royall borrowes and every one of them to execut the acts of parliament in ther favores against the nixt adjacent burghs of regality, barronie, and other vnfrie places; but becaus of the singularity of Greenocks offer the royall borrowes doe recomend to the nearest adjacent royall burghs to Greenock to deall discreetly with the inhabitants of the said burgh in executing the said act of parliament vntill the nixt generall convention.

Campheer.

26. The conservator represented to the convention that at present ther is noe minister at Campheer, and that it is the interest of the royall burrowes to have that function supplied with some qualified person least if it be delayed the stipend allowed by the toun of Campheer, being nyn hundred gilders, may fall indeswetood and be applyed to some other vse, wherby the burden of the minister stipend will lye vpon the borrowes to provyd, and lykwayes represented that he had made some steps, with consent of the Scots congregation at Campheer, by inviting Mr Robert Fleming, younger, to be minister ther, which being considered by the convention they think fit the conservator ought to be encouradged to proceed further in the said affair and to acquent the presbitry and magistrats of Edinburgh that ther consent may be had in givinge a call to him or any other fitt person to supplie that function.

factors.

27. The convention considering that ther are noe factors legally established at Campheer and that this tyme is a tyme of war, and least the merchants should suffer by having ther goods squandered when they come to the staple, ther being non to look efter them, the convention does therfor think fitt as a fitt expedient during this intervall to impouer the conservator, lykeas they be thir presents impouer and authorize him to treat with any able and qualified merchand receiding at the staple or Rotterdam, or any other pairt of the Low Countries, to accept to be factor, and to find sufficient caution for that effect, whoes names with ther cautioner the conservator is to acquent the provost of Edinburgh and the comitty vnderwitten to the effect they may approve of his dilligence and authorize them in ther offices, and for that end the convention grants power and comission to the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Aberdeen, Montross, Dundie, Glasgow, Anstruther Easter, Haddingtoun, Linlithgow, Dumbartoun and Quensferry, or any fyve of them, to meet as a comitty after the convention is risen to receave ane accompt of the conservators dilligence heiranent, with power to them to authorize the saids merchants whoe shall setle and agree with the conservator in maner forsaid to act as factors vntill the nixt generall convention, at which tyme they are to qualifie themselves by being admitted factors by the said convention.

6. The convention, considering the drawght of the petition presented to them by the comittie to be given in to the lords of ther Majesties privie counsell in name of the royall borrowes, which being publictly read in presence of the convention they ordane the samen to be recorded, wherof the tenor followes:—Vnto the right honorabill the lords of his Majesties privie counsell—The supplication of the commissioners of the royall borrowes of this kingdom humbly sheweth:—That wher the petitioners being called to a generall convention presently mett at Edinburgh anent a patent presented by certane persouns at London to ther Majesties for inhaunceing the trade of linnen cloath, which patent his Majestie hes been graciously pleased to delay, considering the royall borrowes interest therein, and as the petitioners resolve to return his Majestie ther most humble and heartie thanks for vouchafing his royall protection towards them soe they find themselves obleidged to extend and imploy ther outmost endeavours for the improvement of the linnen trade within this nation, and for that effect have considered severall acts of borrowes made theranent, and particularly the 43 act of the first session, first parliament of King Charles the Second, as alsoe the 12 act of his Majesties 3d parliament, with ane other act made by the counsell of trade dated the fyfteen day of August 1688 heirwith produced, by all which great cair and paines have been taken to improve the forsaid trade of linnen, and yet noe suttes suitable to the designe of the forsaid lawes, and for which noe probable reason can be assigned except that the forsaid lawes have not been put to dew execution and therby are become indeswetude, and it is humble represented to your lordships that the forsaid trade of linnen is the vniversal concern of the wholl nation, ther being a great pairt of many of the nobility and barrons rents arysing therfrom besyds the importance therof to the royall borrowes, soe they humbly offer to your lordships consideration that the only effectuall way to promot and advance the forsaid trade of linnen is to put the lawes made theranent to dew execution, wherin the petitionars doe make ane humble offer of ther chearfull and hearty concurrence; and if your lordships will be pleased to revive the forsaid acts of parliament and councill of trade mad for the improvement of linnen cloath and yearn, and joyn the magistrats of the royall borrowes within the respective shyres to sie the forsaid lawes dewly put in execution, also weell in landward as burgh, the petitionars in that caice are very confident to improve the trade of linnen to the great advantadge of the wholl nation and to ther reputation abroad which suffers a great daill throw the irregularitie and insufficiencie of linnen cloath which is exported furth of the kingdome. May it therfor pleas your lordships to take the premisses to your consideration and to lay doune such methods as your lordships in justice shall think fitt which may best conduce to the advancement of the forsaid trade and wherin the petitionars doe humble offer ther outmost endeavours for attaining the ends above mentioned, and your petitionars shall ever pray, etc. The which petition they approve and appoynts Mr John Brichen, ther agent, to wait vpon the clerks of privie councill and give in the said petition and advance what money is requisit in the said affair which shall be allowed in his accompts; and appoynts the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Glasgow, Montross, Haddington, Dysart, Air and Kirkcaldie to wait vpon the members of their Majesties privie councill and solicit them in the said affair.

8. The convention taking to ther consideration the fyfteen article of the missive anent the overturs for curing of hering and salmond and anent the goodnes and sufficiencie of barrells, as lykwayes taking to ther consideration the lait act of parliament anent the fisherie wherby its recommended to the lords of privie councill to receave such overturs from the royall borrous as may most conduce for the better curing of fishes and for the profit and honor of that trade and that ther lordships wold interpose ther authority to the saids overturs; therfor the convention does enact and ordane the following particulars in relation to the said trade of fishing:—
First, that all casks be made of weell seasoned knaple or oaken timber free of all whyt wood or worm holls, the heads of them dowlled, the step or stave of a dew and sufficient thicknes of knaple, and if one of staves that non of them be reft or clift, the barrell containing eight gallons and two pynts, and to be full hooped, at least in the one end, with eight hoops on the other end. 2d. Item, each royall burrow that makes casks for export they are to keep ane burning sale, and the magistrats or dean of gild of that place to appoynt ane honest couper for whom they will be answerable whoe is to view all barrells made for export, and befor they be loadned the maker of the saids casks is to put his oune mark vpon them, and thereafter to call the visitor appoynted by the said toune whoe is to try the samen, and if sufficient to put the publict sale vpon them, for which the said visitor is to have four shilling Scots for each last from the maker, and what of the saids barrells are found to be vnsufficient are to be forfeaulted for the vse of the poor, and if the saids casks shall be found to be vnsufficient efter the publict mark soe affixed the visitor is to pay therfor sex pounds Scots for each last, and whatever cask shall be found loaden for packing of herrings befor they be visited and soe marked are to be seased as if vnsufficient and applyed for the behoof forsaid. 3d. Item, that all herrings for export be made with French bey or Spanish salt, and that they be all repacked, weell filled and washed, excepting such as goes to the Sound in the foir end of the year. 4th. Item, that each royall burgh are to appoynt ane honest man of judgement in herrings, for whom they are to be answerable, whoe is to visit all herrings exported out of that presinct and whoe is to have a publict burning mark whoe is to affix the samen vpon all whoe is found sufficient, and if any shall be found vnsufficient at the said tryall then they are to be seased on and confiscat for the vse forsaid, and the first buyer to have recourse vpon the maker or curer of the saids herrings; and if found vnsufficient at the port of discharge by legall probation from that place from the dean of gild or merchant judge or the attestation vpon oath of the master of the ship whoe exported the samen and two merchants of good fame declaring the vnsufficiencie therof, and that the samen have bein throw the not right curing and making and packing of the saids herrings at first, then the saids merchant is to have recourse for the wholl damnadge sustained throw the insufficiencie therof of the first maker and curer therof; for the better distinguishing of the samen, all makers or curers therof to put ther oune mark by a burning iron vpon them; and whatever herrings are exported wanting the makers mark vpon them the merchant is to have noe recourse for any damnadge, and if shipped aboard for export without the said mark the visitor forsaid hes power to seas and confiscat the samen for the vse forsaid; the said visitors is to have four shilling Scots for each last from the merchant or owner therof. 5th. Item, for the better advancing of the interest of salmond in all forraigne pairts abroad, that the magistrats or dean of gilds of each royall burgh may be authorized to put the acts of parliament in executione within ther severall presincts, and that noe salmond may in tyme coming be salted, pyned, or cured for export bot with Spanish or French salt. And that the agent petition in name of the borrowes the secreit councill for approbation of this act, and to crave that the royall borrowes may have power to put this act to execution within the burghs of regalities and barronies and other places lying within ther presincts, reserving alwayes to Edinburgh and to any other royall burgh ther gifts of jedgerie as accords of the law, reserving lykwayes to Aberdeen the priviledge of jedging of salmond as accords of the law.

Pension to secretaries of state.

9. The convention taking to ther consideration how necessar it is for the good and interest of the royall borrowes that they have the kyndnes and freindship of the secretars of state, and seing that these many years bypast persons of honor whoe wer in that eminent character had established vpon them a pension from the royall borrowes of two thousand merks yearly, therfor the convention revives all acts of former conventions in relation to the said pension, and that in favores of the two principall secretars of state, and ordanes the present agent and his successors in his office to make payment to them of the said two thousand merks yearly, begining the first years payment at the dait of thir presents by way of advance, and the convention does heirby reschind all former acts of borrowes made against granting pensions to the secretars and declares the samen voyd and null in all tyme coming.

12. Ordained the agent to assist any burgh which may be charged at the instance of Ewan M'Grigor in connection with the manufacture of "old broad cards." Old broad cards.

13. The convention find that the royall borrowes are not deficient in putting to executione the saids acts within ther respective jurisdictions, bot that the trew caus, stop, and hinderance why linnen cloath is not of that vniversal breadth and soe sufficiently wrought and bleitched as it ought to be within the shyres of the kingdome, is for want of power and jurisdiction in the royall borrowes to execut the saids acts within the saids shyres, and therfor authorizes and impowers the agent, by advyce of the provost of Edinburgh, to petition the lords of secreit councill craving that ther lordships wold take some effectuall course how the royall borrowes may be authorized and impowered to execut the saids acts of parliament within ther respective shyres. royall borrowes, at Candlemas j^m vj^c and nynty one, having vnder ther view the lait act of parliament in ther favores, did wryt to the lords and gentlemen whoe wer masters of the burghs of barronies and regalities, desyring them to come or send persons instructed to them for making proposalls in order to the communication of trade, the petitioner vpon receipt of his letter with others did come and wait vpon the comittie and ther made the offer efter mentioned which was rejected by a single vot in that comittie consisting of sex. In July thereafter, the convention of borrowes having mett, the petitioner made application to be heard vpon the justice and reasonableness of his offer, which being allowed by the borrowes he resumed his offer for his toune, viz., that it should pay a proportionable pairt of the burden imposed vpon the royall borrowes by act of parliament effeirand to the trade of his toune, he alwayes having a vote with the borrowes in making vp of the stent roll, and for that effect the said petitioner desyred that the convention might take the same way of tryall as to the trade of his toune that they tooke for the tryall of the burghs royall. It being asked at Greenock how his offer could be made effectuall if the borrowes wer willing to accept therof, to which Greenock answered that he wold ingadge himself for the burden put vpon his toune and to make the offer effectuall, the borrowes royall allowing him to suit execution of the lait act of parliament made in ther favors in ther names against such of the inhabitants of his toune as did trade and wold not pay ther proportion of the stent to be imposed vpon them for the releif of the royall borrowes for which he wes to vndertake. Vpon this offer the royall borrowes wer pleased to appoynt ane comittie to meet with the said petitioner, John Anderson of Dowhill being one, and vpon the report of the comittie Greenocks offer being soe reasonable the convention did allow to him ane liberty of trade for his toune till the nixt convention of borrows, yet, notwithstanding of the forsaid offer and the borrowes liberty to Greenock in February last, the toune of Glasgow did applye to ane comitty of the borrowes then sitting at Edinburgh for a warrand to secure some herrings that wer to be exported by the tounsmen of Greenock and since hes caused sumond threttie or fourtie of Greenocks men at the dean of gilds instance befor the comissars of Glasgow. royall care of us in the project for setling a lining manufactorie in this kingdome by English hands, as it does threaten the prejudice of our state in particular soe the adjusting of it wold requyre the wisdom of the parliament as being the generall concern of the nation.

Severall of our merchants have applyed to us humbly to address your Majestie that yow wold be graciouslie pleased to caus remove ane arreist of ther effects by the magistrats of Campheer vpon alledged breatch of contract, which in tyme of war cannot possiblie be dewlie observed but by ther furnishing necessar and reddie convoyes, in which event wee purpose to hold the contract stable. Great Sir, wee doe earnestly beseech Almighty God to vouchafe his best blessings on your Majesties sacred person and government and that his divyn hand may give succes to your armes which shall ever be the prayer of, may it pleas your sacred Majestie, [etc.] (Sic subr) ARD. My Lord,—The royall borrowes conveyined in February last to deliberat vpon the project of the lining manufactory did conclud it most prejudiciall to ther state, and towards the improving of that manufactory did apply to the lords of ther Majesties privie councill humblie supplicating that ther lordships wold be pleased to revive these acts of parliament appoynting the breadth and lenth of the pices of the linning cloath, and therin offered that not only in ther respective jurisdictions they should take care to have these acts observed bot if ther lordships wer pleased to conjoyn them with shirriffes or ther deputs, baillies of regalities and ther deputs, that they wold concur with them that the manufactorie might be regulat effectuellie over the wholl nation, being convinced that if these measurs be not speedely taken ther neighbours may come to outdoe them. We have hitherto waited ane returne to it bot the committie of borrowes ordored to attend it judge they cannot be accomptable to the borrowes to delay any longer the addressing his Majestie vpon that project; as alsoe that he wold be graciously pleased to interpose for removing the arreists put vpon the effects of severall of our merchants at Campheer by ther magistrats which as yet does continow, to ther great prejudice, for ane alleidged breatch of contract which in tyme of war cannot in all its punctilioes be got observed, as yow will perceave by what we have writt to his Majestie. Wee are bold to leave these two immediat concerns of the borrowes to your wyse conduct, and wee alsoe humbly intreat that your lordship may be pleased to interress your self in such of ther affaires as at any tyme requyre your favor and assistance, which will exceedingly add to the former obligations yow have put on us and obleidge us to continow vnder the dew sense of them. My Lord,—Wee doe heartielie congratulat your advancement which we are perswaded will be ane advantadge mor nationall to us then peculiar to your self. Ye will sie by this how airly wee adventur to give yow trouble without any other apologie then that it concerns your oune native countrie. Wee doubt not bot ye have heard of a designe that some particular merchants at London had to sett vp a linning manufactory, or rather monopoly, in this kingdome, which wold have ruined us and prejudged a great deall mor whose rents arryse to them from the product of linning cloath. This designe it pleased his Majestie to delay, and wee hop from what wes offered by us against it the thing may be over. Wee judge it not fit to be too secure, and therfor we doe by this address your lordship, that if any such motion shall be againe renued yow will be pleased to make it knowen to us and use your endeavours with his Majestie to stop in the meantyme till wee be fullie heard vpon it. Your lordship shall further know that the toun of Campheer, which is our staple port, have most unjustlie, vpon some pretence of a breach on our pairt of the contract anent the staple, arreisted a great deall of Scots effects in Campheer, to the very great prejudice of severall of our merchants. This is the hardest dealling can be, considering that wee have given noe provocation, and albeit that might be pretended wee think they are sufficiently provyded to a remedie by our being bound in a contract, especially now when wee are under one King whoe can command the performance of mutuall justice betuixt us, soe we most recomend it to your lordship to take your oune prudent way with these people of Campheer that they may remove ther arreistment without further hearing.

Letter for the able the magistrats of Campbeer.

My Lords,—Wee are exceedingly surprysed by your last letter to us quherby yow are pleased to insinuat that a breach is made vpon our pairt of that contract betuixt your toune and us, and we vnderstand that some privat persons resident with yow have bein active to foment this matter, and yow have soe far proceeded vpon this groundles mistake as to arreist the effects of severall Scots merchants. Wee most tell yow that this is aue other kynd of treatment then wee expected, for as we are readie vpon the one hand to vindicat our selves of all these aspersions, and that our acts and letters are all of one piece and not contradictorie as your letter does import, soe wee think ye are sufficiently secure in all events by our being bound in a contract with yow to get reparation in any thing that can be pretended, without the necessity of falling vpon and seasing privat mens goods against whom nothing can be said, besyds that, blessed be God, wee are vnder the protection of a gracious Prince whoe will take care each performe conditions to other. It is our opinion that the sooner these arreistments yow have laid on be removed it will soe much alleviat the prejudice that is taken vp by some of our members ; and in the mean tyme, for vindicating the honor of the royall borrowes, ye may be confident that wee will readilie performe our pairts of that staple contract, yow being reciprocally in the matter soe that yow may spare the taking vp of any jealousie against us untill yow have better grounds, for as we never meant to violat the faith we have pledged soe wee are sorie that anything should prevaill with yow to suspect us ; and if any Scots ships have without our knowledge or allowance passed your port, except in the caices of inevitable necessity, wee shall readilie, vpon the dilation of them, doe justice against the ouners or in anything els repair yow wherin ye shall instruct your selves lesed by us ; and this we both think and hop may give yow satisfaction except yow resolve to break up all correspondance. Wee are confident our conservator will give yow noe just ground of offence, or if he does it shall be taken to our consideration efter we have heard both pairties vpon it. Wee vnderstand the conservator to be of a temper mor readie to obleidge then offend, and wee could wish and doe very much desyre that ther may be noe mistake betuixt yow and him but that matters amongst all of us may runn in the old channell of love and freindship as it hath been keeped vp by our predicesors. This in name of the burrows is signed by, my lords [etc]. Edinburgh 19 Apryll 1692.

My Lord Conservator,—Wee are very sensible of your singular care in all the affaires relating to us under your trust, and whatever insinuations may be made to the contrare shall not perswad us to make the least question of your sinceritie and dilligence. Wee think the magistrats of Campheer have dealt hardlie with us and soe as to make ther contract of a short endurance. Wee have written to the King and both the secretaries about it, and have sent the inclosed to them which ye will be pleased to delyver, and that yow may know the contents wee have given yow a just double. Wee are confident that if they demur in the least to loose ther arreistments the King will be concerned to doe it and then we shall know to whom wee owe the favor. Meantyme wee desyre ye may caus cite Mr Gordoun befor the nixt generall convention for we vnderstand he hes been noe good instrument. It will be necessar that he appear befor us to make compt for what Scots effects he hes had and to renew his caution becaus Provost Gordoun of Aberdeen whoe wes hes last cautionar is now dead. Wee approve what ye did in the matter of that protest against him, and wee resolve to let any man know that disobleidges yow in the exercise of your trust that we most be pairties. You may let the toune of Campheer know that wee are sufficiently resolved to doe them justice but can never be satisfied to think vpon them without grudge soe long as they oppress particular persons whoe are not concerned vpon our pretended breach. Wee have nothing more to say in particular but that wee doe remit what concerns our merchants to your care and justice and yow shall find us readie vpon all occasions to give a dew resentment of your respects towards us. Yow need not apprehend that wee will grant any patents or erections to the prejudice or monopolizing of the trade or manufacture of that our ancient kingdome, or to discouradge our royall borrowes or other subjects ther. The publick faith of the burrows obleidges yow to be exact in keeping the staple port and performing all the articles of the contract betwixt yow and the toune of Campheir. Wee have interposed with that toune to take off the arreist they have laid vpon your effects ther that the failours which may be committed hitherto by either partie may be past over, and that for the futur both yow and they may observe the contract in every poynt, that they may provyd sufficient convoyes for the securitie of the ships during the war at such seasons as they and our conservator and resident shall agree, in which he will advyse with yow, and yow are to intimat to your inhabitants to have ther ships ready to saill with the convoyes at these fixed dyets soe as the trade may be secure and the convoyes may not come in vain to yow, which wee judge may prevent any mistakes betuixt yow in tyme coming. Right honorable, I yet stay heer for the extract of ther act that all may be sure, as lykwayes for a declaration that now they have come to have the possession in ther hands of two perpetuall obligations belonging to the poor of the staple congregation, the one being for 400 lib. and the other for 300 lib., Fleemish, for which principall and annual rents dew thervpon they have promised to give me ther declarations they are and shall be comptable ; and, right honorable, I intreat ye will be pleased to let me farther vnderstand what mor I should doe thairin. Right honorable, his Majestie is highly concerned for the royall borrowes, and withall is very desirous that ye would caus the contract with the toune of Campheer to be exactlie observed, in ordor to quhich I am most ready to obey your directions, and the magistrats of Campheer and I have agreed that they shall send a sufficient convoy to Leith road against the 20 of September nixt, in our stile, that all ships whoe carry staple goods may be acquented to be in readines and to carry ther staple goods, to the port of Campheer and not to goe any wher els. If your honors think not this a fit season, betuixt and that tyme ye may advyse me how yow would have it altered, as alsoe to what other fixed dyets for sending of convoyes your honors shall judge most convenient for the advantadge of trade ; and, right honorable, by all means I shall endeavour my outmost to answer my trust and the good oppinion your honors in yours are pleased to expres of me.

Right honorable, the staple cannot be dewlie kept without legallie established factors whoe have found sufficient caution and are admitted according to law. Ther are non soe qualified at present, either in Zealand or Holland. Your honors by your act of the 17 of July last, intituled Concerning factors, took care to provyd for the interim till your nixt generall convention, soe that act in it self expyres in July nixt, and nothing wes done thervpon, the interruption of the staple by the arreist discouraging all from entering factors, wherfor I intreat your honors may be pleased to renew and enlarge your former act as ye think fitt that I may be in capacity to serve the nation and the staple. As also, I intreat that a comittie with whom I may correspond not only as to admitting of factors but as to all other things relaiting to the staple, may be appoynted, for wee need a minister, a master of the conserjarie house, etc.; as alsoe, right honorable, this comittie may be impowred to call befor them William Gordoun, or any other person they think fitt to caus cite, in respect I have not cited William Gordoun to appear befor your nixt generall convention as your honors requyred me in yours, for ther wes bot 30 free dayes to the first of July efter yours cam to my hand; besyds, I wes wnwilling to furnish him with any occasion of being now absent when he should pay his bills. I am not much disposed to speak to any mans disadvantage tho never soe trew, wherfor I shall only say in generall, I assure and for many weighty reasons can fullie satisfie your honors, unles William Gordoun mend his manners yow will not allow nor can I admit him to be a factor, and this for my trust and office obleidges me to tell your honors. Ther are two young men whoe have bein speaking to me to be admitted factors, one is ane Aberdeen's man, Robert Pantoun, whoe seims abundantly capable and offers satisfieing caution. I remember two sureties he offered, Henry Pantoun of Hiltoun and Alexander Galloway, merchant in Aberdeen. Ther is another young man whoe inclynes alsoe to be a factor, John Hamiltoun, at present pairtiner with Alexander Carstairs, merchant at Rotterdam. He is brother german to Claud Hamiltoun of Barns in Rhenfrew, and, being of good freinds and very capable too, noe doubt will find unquestionable caution. I desyre your honors directions heirin that wee may have some what lyke the face of a staple. Right honorable, I will not trouble your honors now with any accompt what and which way my dewes fall short near a thousand gilders of the 300 lib. sterling ye are pleased to allow me, viz., for the last year from the 1^o Apryll 1691 to Apryll 1692. I must tell your honors the contention and contumacie of William Gordoun, at Camphreer and of James Gordoun at Rotterdam, and a few whom they influence, is the caus heirof, for since March wes a year I have received nothing from William Gordoun and from James Gordoun since that tyme I received only 120 gilders, and I suppose ther may be at least sex or

At Campheer ther are not soe many of our nation as to make a court to pas sentence on him though I haue laid on ane arreist, and at Rotterdam I have not soe full power as at Campheer, and it is not reasonable the borrowes should be burthened with any cellary soe far as they have quherwith to satisfie, quherfor if I can doe noe better, I intreat I may be impowred to cit them befor the comittie to be appoynted for the bussines of the staple that they may be brought to order. I most intreat from your honors ane extract of any acts which pas in your generall or particular conventions which relait to my office seing by them I am to regulat my self, and on all occasions I shall be very ready and very reall in testifieing my faithfulness and diligence in all the concerns of the royall borrowes, and especiallie as to what is by your honours comitted to, right honorable, right worshipfull, and right worthie, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: ANDREW KENNEDY. Much honored Sir,—Yours of the $\frac{10}{20}$ cam to us at the sitting down of this convention, wherin wee perceave your care with his Majestie and toune of Campheer to get the arreist taken off our merchants effects, for the which wee haue receaved his Majesties gracious letter and the magistrats of Campheers, and doeth and have resolved and wryt accordingly to Campheer that wee will obleidge our merchants to keep the saids articles with the said toune soe far as is possible for them to doe in this tyme of war. The coppie of ther letter wee send yow hear inclosed to the which refers yow. As to these two obligations to the poor yow wryt of, wee desyre yow to acquent our comittie at Edinburgh (whoe is to correspond with yow in what is neidfull) whoe are the granters of these bonds, to whom payable, and how they com to have ther oune bonds in ther oune hands as we suppose. As to the factors yow wryt is wanting ther, wee have recived for the samen Robert Pantoun, Gilbert Stewart, and Thomas Grahame, which have found caution for ther fidelity and trust, and John Hamiltoun whoe is to find caution to our comitty. As to William

Gordoun, by our act he is appoynted to be cited, and James Gordoun, if yow think fitting, that he or they may appear befor our comittie at (blank ;) against which tyme yow are to send all that yow have to say against him or any other of our people ther, and that soe fully as yow or they can. As for what your dewes fall short of your expectation, blaime not us, for yow shall want noe assistance from us in causing all to pay according to our acts ; and for the better accomplishing the samen, by our act yow are appoynted in your absence to have your deput at Campheer. For your accompt presented by Mr Buchan, the convention have delayed it till they meet with yourself or a mor opportun tyme. Wee make noe doubt bot yow know that in many artickles the toun of Campheer hath brock with us, quhich we judge yow have and will signifie to tham, and that in tyme coming they will sie to obtemperat the same ; and now particularly in this tyme of war it is the speciall desyre of the convention that they be carefull to send to the road of Leith two convoyes, weell maned, twyse in the year, consisting of 30 gunes apice, to witt, against the midle of September and the midle of March ; and the saids two convoys both to attend thair 20 dayes every tyme for conducting our ships saif to Holland, and that they furnish yow with the samen or the lyk convoys back to Scotland accordingly ; and this yow are not to fail to signifie to the magistrats of Campheer, the quhich the Kings Majestie is acquainted with, and alsoe the magistrats of Campheer in our letter to tham. All quhich, with quhat els concernus the royall borrowes, wee recomend to your care and remains, Sir, your very humble servant. Sic subscribitur : JA. FLETCHER, P. Dundie 15 July 1692.

11. The convention "having considered the commissiones given in by the communities of the burghs of Curus and Enster Easter, and the saides commissiones being illegal and contrarie to the plateform," they, for several reasons, allowed the commissioners to sit and vote, with this provision that the eases in the tax roll allowed these burghs by last general convention shall in future be set apart for their bygone missive dues till the same be completely paid.

Bonds of factors to be appointed.

12. The bonds of caution of the factors admitted by the general convention at Dundee not having been reported to this meeting it was ordered that the bonds be produced to the lord provost or clerk of the royal burghs before 15th September next and laid before next general convention.

Pantoun, factor, his bond.

13. One of the cautioners of Robert Pantoun produced the bond granted in terms of his act of admission as factor.

Dischargeing factors not admitted.

14. It being represented that there are several persons acting as factors in Holland without being admitted by the royal burghs or caution received for the faithful discharge of their office, the convention appointed the conservator to fine and punish them conform to the acts and particularly the sixth article of the conservator's instructions.

Anent minister of Campheir.

15. The convention takeing to ther consideratioune the fitnes of Mr Thomas Hog, present minister to the English congregation at Delf, to be minister at Campheir, and the conservators recomendatione in his favours, doe therefore recomend to the magistrats of Edinburgh to take the advyce of the presbitrie of Edinburgh thairanent and to recomend to them that the said Mr Thomas Hog, or some other qualified fitt persone, be called to be minister at Campheir with all convenience.

My Lords,—By your letter the eighteen day of June, ane thousand six hundreth and nyntie two yeares, wee hade reason to expect such convoyes as might give security to our fleits. The commissioners from the sewerall burrowes at this present conventione complain that your lordships gaue no return to our last nor affoorded the convoyes judged necessary by them, which was two frigats of thretty guns the peice, sufficiently maned, as necessary at leist for the security of ther ships. As wee, carefull on our part to observe the contract unviolable, soe your lordships will not suppose wee can containow in it if our fleits be not allowed sufficient convoyes. Wee doe not love to be uneasie to yow but complaints are given in to ws by sewerall merchants, particularly by John Rutherford, master of ane Bruntisland ship, who was taken within ane league of the convoy who did not endeavour his reskew, and wee acquaint your lordships that our merchants will not be prevailed with to observe the staple port unless sufficient convoyes be affoorded seasonablie. Hitherto they ascryve the preservation of ther goodes and ships only to the providence of God and not to your convoyes. Therefore wee will not doubt your sending sufficient convoyes and that they keep the exact tyme of coming to the rod of Leith, against the midle of September and March yearly, dureing the warr, and that yee give them strick and particular ordors to lye twentie dayes allanerlly and then to saill, wiud and weather serveing. and not to be induced upon the application of any privat merchant or particular burgh to stay any longer. Wee wryte at length to our conservator to wait upon your lordships and to give yow information of this and other affairs, wherin both the stat of the royall burrowes and your lordships are concerned. exacted for cornes exported from Scotland to the Netherlands but only for cornes imported to Hollaud from the Baltick and other forraigne nationes in Scots vessalls. As to this wee referr yow to our act made theranent wherin yow are obleidged to exact no further deuty upon cornes exported, and that yow send ane exact accompt of what yow uplifted this last yeir to the next generall conventione. As also yow are appoynted to report what yow have to lay to the charge of William Gordoun why he should not be admitted factor upon sufficient caution in respect he made application to this convention for his admission, and the convention haveing ordored yow peremptory to give ane return to the comitty who are appointed to meet at Edinburgh the fyfteenth day of September nixt upon that affair, that the merchants of Edinburgh and his imployers, and who give testimonie of his fidelity in ther concerns comitted to him, may not be leised or hurt in ther sewerall interests. We had a bill given in by Alexander Steivinsone complaineing of the abuses comitted by Robert Pantoun, factor, to which wee referr yow to our act made by this convention theranent, and upon application made to us by Charles Devie, merchant in Edinburgh, that the value of his goods were arreisted by your ordor, the convention has appoynted yow to louse the said arreistment since he hes found sufficient caution acted in our borrow bookes to mak the value of the goodes furthcomeing as accords of the law. It is also represented that ther is ane absolut necessity for ane anchor to be sunk in the road of Campheir, right oposite to the entrie of the harbour, with a boy therupon, by which ships may sail furth to the road with saifty in tyme of ane easterly wind, conforme to the staple contract. Much honoured, signed, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: JOHN HALL, preces.

Right Honourable, right worshipfull, and right worthy. — Your honours leter to me of the 15th of July last was in all things exactly obeyed, and in November thereafter I wrote at large to my lord provost of Edinburgh, Sir John Hall, as to what concerned the setleing of a minister and master of the consergerie house at Camphere, as also concerning these bonds dew to the poor of the Scots congregacione ther, but the contraversie concerning the magistracie of Edinburgh falling in was the cause of my lord provosts not conveening the comittie of the royall borrowes and why I had no answer. Their is a great need of a minister, and a weell qualified one would be a considerable encouragement to the staple, and hitherto I have taken care dewly to provyde a minister for the congregation so long as ther was any Scots ships at the port, and thereby kept the stipend dew by the magistrats of Camphere to the Scots minister in use of payment for defraying the charge of supplying the congregatiōe. I lyikwayes wrote to my lord provost of Edinburgh concerning a particular minister and intreated the comities directions and instructions thereabout, but these not comeing I could proceed no further, and now that minister is otherwise disposed of so that wee cannot expect him, wherfor I haue been considering where to find one qualified and fitted for the place; and seeing ministers at present are so scare at home I have cast my thoughts upon one in this countrey who is a person of great pietie, good learning, sound judgement, and unquestionable loyaltie. He is a Scotsman and settled minister in Holland, but his congregation is so small that his usefull talents there are in a sort altogether hide, and hade I your honours allowance and instructions for giving him a call, etc., I doubt not but wee might haue him and be very happie in haveing of him; quherfore I intreat your honours answer as to this with all possible expeditione, for besides many other weighty considerations wee cannot soe weell clame as seek these two bonds of the poors mony now in the hands of the magistrats of Camphere till wee have a minister and a consistory who properlie have power to enquire after them. The magistrats of Camphere are not debtors in these two bonds, but the steats of Zealand are debtors for the one in four hundreth pound, Fleemish, and the toun of Flushing is debtors for the other of three hundreth pound, Flemish; and those two bonds being in the custody of Thomas Cuninghame, late factor at Camphere, who being ane elder of the consergorie house the tyme of his decease, his wyfe being a Dutch woman, it was thought fit they should be taken out of her hands, and debeat falling betwixt Hugh Wallace, then agent for the royall borrowes, and at Camphere, and ane Mr Andrew Skeen, each contending to have them, they wer depositat in the hands of the magistrats of Campheire who put them in the custodie of ther secretaries or clerk from whom neither the magistrats nor the Scots consistory could get them up for many yeares till in the moneth of September last the secretaries delyvered them up to the magistrats and then the magistrats gave me ane authentick extract out of thair records that they haue them in ther possessione and that they belonged to the poor of the Scots congregatione. As for a master to the consergorie house, it is most necessary, and the settleing one therin belonging to your honours, all I could doe to permitt one for the tyme to accomodat our countrey men, and haveing litle choice here I behooved to take such as I could get but wish your honors would provide one mor sufficient or let me have directions and power to doe somewhat thairin. I intended to have waited on your honours this July enshewing to receave your comands particularly, but it haveing pleased the Lord to visit my self and family with some sickness I could not. However, nothing to the outmost of my power to serve the intrest of your honors concerns shall be wanting nor shall I spare paines and expences as your intrests require. With my first strength, after my beginning to recover, I went last week to the Hague about a concerning and leading case which I hope shall come to a good issue. A vessell from Mussellburgh loadened with wheat and barley, in which some merchands in Edinburgh are concerned, comeing from Rotterdam at the very mouth of the Mouse was taken by a caper belonging to Flushing, carried thither as a prize, her cargo they took out, together with the seamens provisiones, on designe to draw them from possessione, all which was done without bringing the matter to any legall hearing, quherupon I gave in diverse memorials to the stats generall whose resolutione was ordoring the admirality of Zealand to examine and report the mater to them. Applications were accordingly [made] to the admirality of Zealand, but meeting with nothing but delayes, by new memorials I importuned ther highnesses and mightyness and in privat informed and solicited all the great men in particular. At length the capers pretended that Scots ships was bound for France and that the ransome breif was no reall thing but a bussiness conceived in France as a passport, to which, by memorial, I made reply that I could produce letters of advice to sewerall merchants heir that such a merchant was comeing to Rotterdam with bills of loadning to them together with a breif of ensurance at Amstradam of the ship and cargo, as also a charter pairty narraiting the wholl, so that ther wuld be no possible cheat in the caice, and for the ransome it fell now so high by detaineing the ship a moneth, in quhich tyme the pryce of the carns is fallen a 3d., and by carieing out the cargo and hotness of the season it is embasseled another third, so that the ransome equals if not exceeds the value and cargo, and it were very hard to lose the ship and cargo and pay the ransome which was so far from being a pretended ransome that I frankly offered to let the caper have the ship and cargo provyding he would releive our pledge. May it pleas your honours, this being the first Scots ship taken after this maner I judged myself obleidged to be at more then ordinary payns about it as being of concern to the wholl nation, that a bade precedent might be prevented, for these Zealanders have not only many Sweeds, Danes and Dutch, but also four or fyve English ships in the lyck circumstances quhich are not yeit cleared, albeit some of tham have been detayned one and some two yeares. However I obtained lettres to the admirality of Zealand and to the ower of the caper to restore ship and cargo with all damnadges and expences quhich I dispatched away yesterday and now hope and expect good success. Your honours in your letter to me are pleased to delay the considering account of my extraordinary expences presented be Mr John Buchan to our meeting or a more convenient tyme. I nothing doubt your honours justice and generosity nor shall any delay discourage me from my duty in serveing your concerns for the futur, nor shall I at this tyme make any complaints as to the payment of my dewes, but I shall only take liberty to say it were a very convenient tyme for me now, no man leiving here remembering of a generall dearth of all things necessary for the lyfe of men as hath been and is this tyme of ware, so that when all my ordinaries and extraordinaries are fully payed, tho I cannot complain, yeit I can assure your honours they will hardly be a subsistence for me and my family, quherfore I expect your honours will now take that litle bussiness to consideratione and doe something thairin. Quhatever concernes the royall borrowes shall be my cair to employ my outmost dilligence with all zeal and faithfulness in ansuer to that trust your honours reposed in, right honourable, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: ANDREW KENNEDIE. Letter from the committee to the conservator.

The same day, ther being ane petition given in to the comity of the royall borrowes by Mr William Grahame, merchant in London, representing the procedour of your court in Campheir by arresting and giving warrand for consigning in order to seall some effects of his and one Joseph Ormeistoun of considerable value, we have seen and considered the extracts of your decreits, quherof wee shall have no opinion at this distance further then to say that it is not the custome by the law of Scotland, nor by the practique of merchants heir, to sequestrat goods becaus the first owner was debtor to the arreisters debtor; and in this case it appears not to ws that the arreisters have instructed that James Gordon was indebted to them, nor that Joseph Ormeistoun was indebted to James Gordon. The comitty is verie tender of the reputatione of your court, and the rather that quhat is done in this affair was in your absence and without your knowledge or approbatione, which obleidged the comity to goe as great a length as possible to accomodat the affair in thir tearmes, that ye will be pleased to cause appretiat the goods sequestrat and delyver the samen to Mr Robert Pantoun, or any haveing Mr Grahames ordor, upon ther finding cautione that the value as they are appretiat shall be furthcomeing to those who hes best right; the arreisters, John and William Gordons, on the other hand, finding the lycke caution to be lyable for the damnadges alreaddie sustained or to be sustained in caice any be found at the event of Mr Grahames proces, as the samen shall be determined by the royall borrowes or your court; and with all seeing it was represented to the said comity by the Gordons factor heir that John Gordon was arreisted at London be Mr Grahame for the same caus and hade found cautione there for 15,000 lib., starling, it is thair opinion that those to whom the goods are delivered shall in name of Mr Grahame pas frae the said English cautione upon the Gordouns finding cautione in your books for the damnadges in maner forsaid, but if the saids John and William Gordouns refuse to find cautione then the goods are to be delyvered to Mr Grahams ordor after appretiatione as above, without any caution; and in caice at the event of the actione ather befor the borrowes or before your court they think proper to persew the damnadges ye are to give all the speedie and just reparatione that is requisit and usuall in the lyck cases. The comity expects ye will comply with this thair desire, which is all from, Sir, your most humble servant. Signed in name and at the desire of the said comity, JOHN HALL. Edinburgh 28th November 1693. EDINBURGH.

Commissioners of Edinburgh's report.

7. The commissioners of Edinburgh reported that James Young, late surveyor of Dumfreis, having procured a gift under the Kings hand for being general surveyor of the bullion through the whole kingdom, the provost of Edinburgh prevented the same from being passed in exchequer ; "as also their was great endeavours used by the taxsmen of the inland excyse to obleidge all the merchants in this kindome to pay sexpence upon the poynt of brandie as if they were retaillers which has been severall tymes fully heard and debated befor the lords of exchequer and stands yeit undecided." The convention approved of the report and recommended Edinburgh to endeavour to stop any other gift prejudicial to the burghs.

Staple factors.

8. The clerk reported that he had received from John Hamiltoun and Gilbert Stewart the bonds granted by them as staple factors ; and Thomas Grahame who has not yet given in his bond was allowed till 1st November next to do so.

Burgh of Cromarty.

9. The committee appointed by the 17th act of last general convention not having met, the convention of new appointed the provost of Edinburgh, Coupar, Dumbartoun, Queensferrie, Innerkeithing and Innerara to commune with the viscount of Tarbat as to the affairs of the burgh of Cromarty.

Innerara, Falkland.

10. The burgh of Inverara being unable, through poverty and want of trade, to pay their share in the tax roll, and the convention being informed that the burgh of Falkland "who have been for a long time exeimed from bearing any publict burden with the royall borrowes are now in a conditiome to pay a proportion," they appointed a committee to inquire into the condition of Falkland, and if it be able to bear a proportion of the tax roll Inverara to be eased of two shillings Scots and in the meantime and till next convention, the agent was instructed to place the two shillings upon the general account of the burghs.

Perth, common clerkship.

11. On the application of the commissioner of Perth, the convention ratified and approved of the gift of the common clerkship of that burgh in favor of Robert Grahame during all the days of his lifetime.

Comity for establishing of staple port.

12. The convention considering that pairt of the conservators later relateing to the staple port and the terminatione of the contract betuixt the royall borrowes and the toun of Campvere, and it being of great importance to the state of borrowes that all dew tryall and informatione be taken anent the settleing of the staple for the tyme to come, and that it may be necessar to call over the conservator theranent, as also sewerall other things may emerge after tryall which will conduce to the generall advantage of the borrowes, all which requires so great deliberatione as that the samen cannot be done dureing the siting of this present conventionone nor is it proper to delay the samen to the next generall conventionone, therfor the conventionone nominats and appoynts the burghs of Edinburgh, Dundie, Aberdeen, Linlithgow, Glasgow, Air, Kirkcaldie, Montross, Coupar, Inverness and Dumbartoun, to meet as a comitie, wherof seven to be a quorum, after the disolveing of this present conventionone, and appoynts ther first meeting to be on Monday next at ten acloack, and therafter to adjourn themselves from tyme to tyme as they shall think fitt ; with full power to them to take wnder consideratione the wholl affair relateing to the staple port and to receave all intelligence, information and tryall they can have theranent, with what offers shall be made by the touns in Holland and Zealand anent the establishment of the said staple, and in lyck maner with power to them if need beis to call over the conservator and to comon with him theranent, and after all tryall is taken by the said comitie who are heirby impowered to acquaint [twenty-four burghs to meet as a particular conventionone,] with full power to the said particular conventionone to treat, vote, and determine the wholl mater anent the staple and conclud the samen by contract, and to doe everie thing needfull theranent sicklyik and als freely in all respects as the generall conventionone might doe therein themselves, which they heirby obleidge themselves to ratifie the next generall conventionone.

EDINBURGH.

Comity for
staple port.

13. The convention haveing considered ane accompt of debursements given in by Mr Andrew Kennedie, present conservator, and that sewerall articles in the said accompt was debursed upon the generall accompt of the royall borrowes and his attending his Majestie and the secretaries of state for takeing of the arreist led by the toun of Campheir on the Scots effects upon the speciall order of the royall borrowes, doe therefore, in consideratione of the forsaid accompt produced and considered in presence of the conventionone, and his cair and dilligence in prosecuting and attending their affaires in takeing of the forsaid arreist, they appoynt Mr John Buchan, ther agent, to pay to the said Mr Andrew Kennedie the sowme of fyftie pound sterling mony.

Agent to pay £50 to conser-
vator.

14. The convention haveing considered the petition given in by Sir James Oswald of Finlithoune and James Dunlap, collectors, wherby ther is resting of bygane cess by the toun of Cromarty the sowme of two thousand pounds Scots, and in respect they can have no access to the said burgh for payment therof, as being expunged out of the roll of royall burghs by acts of parliament and secreit councill, and therfor most have recourse upon the wholl royall borrowes for payment therof, and intends to quarter upon the good town of Edinburgh for the samen if there be not some speedie course taken theranent, do therefore recomend to the comity that is to sit after dissolving this present conventione to comon with the said Sir James Oswald and James Dunlap anent what is trewly resting of cess by the said burgh of Cromarty, with full power to them to examine the wholl mater and call for Baillie Walkers report of the caice and conditione of the said burgh, and after full tryall taken of the wholl affair to appoint the agent to pay what shall be found justly resting to them upon the accompt of the said cess.

Burgh of Dysart.

15. Appointed the burghs of Edinburgh, Coupar and Dumbartoune to treat with Lord Sinclair in relation to the difference between his lordship and the burgh of Dysart.

Tayn and Dornoch.

16. Appointed certain burghs to visit and report upon the condition of the burghs of Tayn and Dornoch with reference to petitions from these burghs.

Stevensone and Pantoun.

17. Remitted to the committee which is to sit after the dissolving of this convention to settle differences between Alexander Stevenson, merchant in Edinburgh, and Robert Pantoun, merchant in Campheir, referred to in the 29th act of last general convention.

6 July 1694.

Act in favour of Bruntisland.

18. The convention haveing considered the petition given in by the burgh of Bruntjsland and the reasons and causes therein specified, doe therfor appoynt Mr John Buchan, ther agent, to pay three hundreth marks towards the present repairatione of the harbour of the said burgh of Bruntjsland, and appoynts the said money to be payed in to the commissioner of Innerkeithing who is heirby appoynted to be overseer of the repairationes of the said harbour and by whois advice and directione the samen is to be done and to take inspectione of the caice and conditione of the said burgh.

Mackenzie of Rosehaugh,
Kennedie.

19. The convention remitts to the comitty who are to sitt after dissolving of this conventione to take wnder ther consideratione the decreit obtained at the instance of George Mackenzie of Rosshaugh, son and air to the deceast Sir George M'Kenzie, late lord advocat, against the royall borrowes, for payment of his bygone pensione resting to him, as also the proces comenced at the instance of the creditors of the deceast Sir James Kennedy, with full power to the said comity to give instructions to ther agent in defending of the saids proces, or otherwayes to compone and transact with them to the best advantage.

EDINBURGH.
6 July 1694.

Mackenzie of Rosehaugh,
Kennedie.

20. Appointed the burghs of Hadingtoun and Dumbar to inspect and report as to the condition of the burgh of North Berwick, with power to the particular convention if they think fit to advance what money is necessary for the repair of their harbour. Also, appointed the burghs of Edinburgh, Dumfreis, Selkirk and Lanark to visit and take trial of "the condition of the burgh of Peebles, and particularly anent the incroachments made be the Duke of Queensberrie in building his park dyks and other absuses."

Northberwick and Peebles.

21. The dean of gild of Edinburgh reported that Whytfeild Hayter of London, citizen, and his pairteners, haveing obtained ane act from their Majesties privie councill erecting a manufactory for dressing and collouring all sorts of leather in any place of this kingdome without royalties, declaireing them to have right to all the priviledges of a manufactory, and they haveing a great stock and (as being declared ane manufactory) many imunities, it is to be feared that they may, be export or otherwayes, inhance the trade of skins and leather, to the great hurt and prejudice of the leidges, and more especially of the skinnners and others dealeing in skins and leather in royall burghs; which report being considered by the convention, they grant warrant to the commissionars of Edinburgh and Mr John Buchan, ther agent, in name and behalf of the royall borrowes, to assist and concurr with the incorporation of the Skinnners of Edinburgh for preventing and remeading the forsaid inconveniences of the said Whytfeild Hayter inhanceing the trade of the skins and leather of this kingdome, befor any judicatory competent.

of the skinnners of Edinburgh.

22. The convention being credibly informed that ther are sewerall staple factors who are actuall traders and copartners in shipeings, contrar to sewerall acts of borrowes, doe therfor appoynt the conservator to give ane particular accompt of all factors that are traders and copairtners in shipping goeing from Scotland to the staple port, as also appoynts the conservator to make report to the particular convention of borrowes that is to sitt after disolveing of this present convention of all factors who have taken and signed the oath of alleadgiance to their Majesties King William and Queen Mary and subscrivit the assurance.

Staple factors.

EDINBURGH.

Conceaved prayers.

23. The conventione, considering ane act of the generall conventione of borrowes in July 1648 anent conceaved prayers, to be used by all particular or generall conventiones, doe therfor ratifie, approve, and confirme the said act in all the heads, clauses, and articles therof, and recomends to each royall burgh that conceaved prayers be said at all ther meetings of councill in all tyme comeing.

Agent's
accmpts.

24. Approved of the agent's accounts of disbursements from July 1693 to July 1694, extending to £3844, 11s. 4d. Scots, and ordained the burghs to pay their proportions. The following items are included in the accounts :—

Item, to the secretaries man in the comity attending the secretary anent procureing of ships for secureing the trade, . . .	11 li. 12s.
Item, to the Dutch interpreter of the Dutch letter from Campheir, . . .	5 li. 16s.
Item, for a dinner at Leith to the captain of the Zealand convoy, by order of the comity, . . .	12 li.
Item, to the king's advocat consulting anent the ann of the relicts of ministers in royall burrowes, . . .	29 li.
Item, to the chancellors men when the comitty attended his lordship about mantaineing of the two ships of force, . . .	5 li. 16s.

Anent the linnen manufactory.

25. The convention haueing taken to ther consideratione that ther is a linnen company seting up in this kingdome, wherof ane considerable pairt is in the hands of English and some of Scots merchants, and that few of the members of the royall borrowes are intressed therin, and it being most important to the royall borrowes that such of them as are willing to imploy ane stock in the linnen trade should joyn together and sett up ane linnen manufactory, aither by them or in conjunction with any others who will concurr with them, therfor and to the effect the for-said designe may have some effectwall ryse and begining, and that none of the members of the borrowes may be excluded, therfor the conventione does heirby recomend to the comity or particular conventione that is to sitt after disolveing of this conventione to meet, comon, and delibrat anent the forsaid linnen manufactory, and to take in and consider what offers and overtures shall be made to them theranent, and to conclude and determine as they shall think convenient in that mater, and as each burgh is heirby advertished to concurr if they think fitt in the forsaid mater so no burgh shall be lyable or bound to joyn in the said manufactory except they be convinced and satisfied that it is there particular intrest to doe the same.

26. The conventione considering the great prejudice which ayses to the tread of this kingdome by the frequent takeing of our ships by pirrats and privateers, and the great and unsupportable loss which all treading merchants did sustaine therby, that if some effectuall course be not taken for preventing therof the tread of the royall borrowes will be intirly distroyed and all merchants discouraged, doe therfore impower the comity or particular conventione of borrowes that are to sitt after disolveing of this conventione to take under ther serious consideratione the most effectwall means for secureing the sea costs from privateers, with full power to them to apply to the secreit councill or the secretaris of state that they may informe their Majesties of the absolut necessities of secureing their trade, that his Majesties give instructions to his commissioner at the siting of the next sessione of parliament that some effectuall course be taken thereanent, and in caice the parliament doe not meet betuixt and the first of January next the conventione grants powar to the said comity to make offer to the government that the state of borrowes are willing and content to furnish ane hundreth and fyfty seamen and pay their wages for four moneth tyme, the government furnishing three ships of sufficient force with all things necessar for that effect, and that two of those ships may guaird the eastern coasts and one of them guaird the coasts upon the west, and ordains the agent to advance moe as the comity or particular conventione shall ordour to the effect forsaid.

EDINBURGH.

Pirratts and privateers.

27. The conventione considering that Sir James Stewart, ther Majesties advocat, hes been verie active in serveing the just intrest of the state of borrowes on all ocasioness, both in parliament and privie councill, and assisting them as ther advocat in all caices quherin they are concerned, doe therfor nominat, elect, and choyse the said Sir James Stewart, ther Majesties advocat, to be assessor to the royall borrowes for the year to come, and allowes him fyve hundreth marks of sallarie, to comence from the date heirop and to containow to the next generall conventione.

Difference between Earl of Traquhair and burgh of Peebles.

21. The conventione haveing considered the petitione given in by the burgh of Peebles, representing that they and ther predecessores hade the priveledge to sease all light weights and short elvans and other unsufficient goodes in all the fairs and publict marcats within the shyre of Tifvidaill, yeit of late they were impeded by the Earle of Traquair, therefor the conventione recommends to the burghs of Coupar, Dumbartoun, and Lochmaben, to comon with the Lord Traquair anent the mater above represented, and to use ther outmost endeavour to accomodat the same, and report to the next generall conventione.

Comity to settle the staple port.

22. The conventione considering that the contract anent the staple port past betuixt the royall borrowes and the states of Campheir did expire in Aprile last, and that they did commissionat Mr Andrew Kennedie, lord conservator, to comon with such places in the Netherlands as he should think fit anent what encouragement they would offerr for establishing of the said staple amongst them, and since the conservator hes been impeded at this tyme against his will, so that he cannot attend the dyet of this present conventione nor report his dilligence to them anent the setleing of the said staple port, therefore the conventione remitts the whole affair of adjusting, determineing, and setleing the said staple port to the burghs of Edinburgh, Dundie, Aberdein, Glasgow, Air, Montrose, Irvine, Dumbartoun and Culross, whereof fyve to be a quorum, and the provost of Edinburgh to be preces, to meet as a comity after disolveing of this conventione whenever the preces shall acquaint them; and how soon the conservator comes over, to hear him fully anent what he hes to propose for the setleing of the said staple port for the benefeit and advantage of the royall borrowes, with full power to the said comity to adjust, determine, and setle the said staple port and enter in contract with such places in the Netherlands and upon such termes and conditiones and for so many yeares as shall be judged most proper and convenient by the said comity, to condescend to for the generall benefeit of the royall borrowes, which the conventione heirby obleidges them to ratifie in the nixt generall conventione, and remitts the elleventh article of the missive anent the conservators dewes to be determined by them as they shall think fitt; and recomends to the said comity to take the affair anent the brandie wnder consideration whether the agent shall advance monie upon that accompt or not.

7. The comity takeing to ther serious consideratione of how great import and concerne the setleing of the staple porte at Campheir will prove to the state of borrowes and haill trade of the kingdome, and how necesarie and expedient it is that some discreit and weell qualified persone be impowered to treat with the Magistrats of Campheir for that effect, and being fully persuaded of the integrity, abilities, and other fit qualifications of Mr Andrew Kennedy, his Majesties resident in the Netherlands, and present conservator of the Scots priviledges, therefore by thir presents grant full power and commissione, expres bidding, mandament, and chairge, to the said master Andrew Kennedie to transact and conclude with the magistrates of Campheir in the expres tearmes of the threty nyne articles aggreed upon by the comity and extended in ane contract subscrived by the lord provost of Edinburgh in name of the comity, firme and stable holding and for to hold what shall be transacted and aggreed upon by the said Mr Andrew Kennedie in the termes above mentioned and no other wayes ; and that the said Mr Andrew Kennedie acquaint the lord provost of Edinburgh from tyme to tyme what progres he hes done therein.

8. The comity, considering that ther wes a generall conventione called to meit at Edinburgh the twenty nynth day of September last for raisinge of mony to exped the setleing of the staple port now in agitatione, as also for reimburseing of the former chairges which the conservator hes been alreadie put to theiranent, but that there came not a quorum of the conventione so that the said affair is yett left vndone, and seeing the said comity hes given commissione to the said conservator for concludeing the bussines of the staple, and finding it just and reasonable that he should be reimbursed of the expences alreadie given out by him and of what he shall further expend therupon, as also ought to be suittably gratified for his pains and trouble, therefore the comity does heirby recomend the said conservator to the royall borrowes that they may doe the samen effectwally at ther first generall meeting.

spected Lords.—The lord conservator, Androw Kennedie, did doe us the honour to give us the knowledge that a fleet of ships, with staple goodes and with other goodes unloaded, lay ready to come hitherwards with the first convoy, and accordingly have sought or required that wee would be pleased to have the inspectione thereof for to get a good and sufficient convoy to be sent hitherwards for to fetch of the common staple ships, for which cause wee did presently address our selves to the counsell of admiralty heer and sought for the required convoy, which lyckwayes upon our requiests the ship called the Flushing, amounted with fyfty foure canons, they have ordained for to be a convoy of the forsaid staple fleet to come hitherwards, and that the same ship with the first good wind should be sett forward on ther voyage towards the Firth of Leith, wee have for that effect as not willing to be wanting for your honours respects to yow the knowledge heiroy, with serviceable requiests that your respective honours, in conformity of the staple contract, ye would be pleased to have the foresight thereof and cause it to be done that all the staple wairs or goodes might be sent towards this staple place and to none other. And since that the forsaid staple contract was made for one and twenty years, in short shall come to be expired, wee neither would nor could neglect but by this to give your honors the knowledge heiroy, lyckwayes as formerly more often by misive was done, soe that wee containoweing the bypast tyme since that the contract was made have seen litle fruits of the Scots staple containwally upon Campheir, but not so weell as it ought to have been, it being remarked that as much or more staple goodes went to other streames and roads then have been brought heir to the staple port, occasioned by that the transgressors ware not punished according to ther merits. Your respective honors and wee most assure our selves fully that the intrest of the Scots natione comes to require that the forsaid staple contract may be again for the lycke one and twenty yeares or more may be containowed, and accordingly wee have thought it our deuty wholly and freindly to requiest your honours that the aftermentioned contract might be renewed again upon such equitable and reasonable conditiones, wherein your honours and wee could and should be fully satisfied, and that the more for that his Majestie of Great Brittain, our gracious Lord and Marqueis of this towne, the same verie earnestly would see, lyckas his highnes respected Majestie of Great

Brittain hath lyckwayes made the samen knowen to the lord conservator, which the forsaid lord conservator in your honourable meeting hath presented, as lyckwayes that with no other toune no better conditiones should or could be attained as with this towne of Campheir is made. Wee will therfor one that pairt make no doubt but that your honors should alyck with us be inclyned for to accomplish his Majesties desire, so that your honours can be weell assured that wee by all occationes shall contrive to bring to your honours all sort of satisfieing contentment, wherewith wee your honourable government doe comitt to Godes providence, with assurance that wee shall allwayes show to be and remain, [etc.] Sic subscribitur : P. My Lords,—Wee have thought fitt to delay our ansuer to your last letter untill this tyme that wee hade occatione to send it by the lord conservator, to whom wee have delyvered the staple contract dewly signed by us, with full instructions for his manadgeing of all relaiting to that affair. You may remember that, in compliance with your desires to have the staple containowed inteir with yow untill such tyme as the articles were conserted and the contract signed, wee gave you full assurance thereof, soe that wee make no doubt but yow have wnderstood that the Scots priviledges were in ther full exercise and that no increatchment thairupon could be excused by any pretended interwall of tyme that was necesarie betuixt the elapseing of the old and signeing of the new contract. Wee doe with the greater willingnes accept of your appologie for the unsufficiencie and unseasonablnes of these convoyes mentioned in yours because since that tyme yow have shoven your care to provyde better shipps and that wee expect yow will in tyme comeing give us no reason to complain. It is certainly weell knowen to yow that our encouragments from sewerall places in Holland were considderable and inveiting to have settled our staple with them, but the dew regaird wee hade to his Majesties inclinationes, and the old kyndnes which hes been long containowed betuixt yow and us, did obleidge us to admitt of no competitione, and we hope that the rules of gratitude, als weell as your own intrest, will perswade not only to ane dew observance of the contract but lyckwayes to evidence all the affectione in our own and countrey mens concerns that is expected at your hands. And this leads us to tell yow of ane complaint exhibited to us by Gilbert Stewart, factor, anent ane affair of some skins wherin your magistrats were pleased to interpose ther authoritie and sentance, albeit in a subject only competent to the lord conservator and his deput, wherein wee have now desired him to exerce his jurisdictione without respect to anything that is past ; as also allow us to take notice that yow have thought fitt to sustain your selves judges in a very considerable difference latly fallen out betuixt William Gordon and his wyfe, upon pretence that the contract betuixt us was ended whilst in the mean tyme yow were assured of its containwance in full force, and if yow consider that our jurisdictione ought to have been kepted inviolable as wee did your privieledges yow cannot but reflect upon the breach and so far repair it as to put that bussines in as inteir ane conditione as it was when yow medled in it, which wee undoubtedly expect. Anent which, and all other our concernes in that place, wee have given the lord conservator full credit and instructiones, and wee hope yow will upon all occationes give unto him such assistance as is dew to his character and necessarie for preserving of our privieleidges. Wee remitt to him what further is to be communicated; and wee ade no more but that wee still are, my lords, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: ARD. MURE. Edinburgh, 2 March 1697.

Letter from the borrows to the magistrats of Campheir anent William Gordon. My Lords—Being together in a generall conventione wee have taken notice of ane letter formerly sent yow from a comity of our number touchting sewerall particulars, and especiallie ane affair of Mr Gordons, and as wee doe weell approve what was written by the comity one that subject soe wee think ourselves at this occatione obleidged to give yow our farder thoughts therof. Yow may remember that by condition betuixt yow and us and assurance one both sides our jurisdictione and privieledges in the Netherlandes, als weell as the immunities aryseing to yow from the staple contract, should be inviolably kept untill the renewing therof, and wee are confident that no breach hes been made on our pairts, soe that wee hade much confidence of the same treatment and correspondance from yow, and it surprizes us exceedingly to have receaved a demonstratione to the contrary, wherof Mr Gordons caice is a cleir instance, which wee beleive your own inclinationes could never have produced if yow hade not been imposed upon by the pernicious influences of designeing men who to gratifie ther ends haue verie much exposed yow. It were needles to look back on the steps have been made in that bussines, and thairfor wee shall only desire and expect that so soon as this reatches yow yow may without delay procure Mr Gordon to be put in the same conditione he was befor yow medled in his affair and let it be tabled befor the lord conservator or his deputs to doe justice thairin as he shall sie cause, and quheranent wee have given him full instructiones. Wee judge it unnecessarie to spend many words upon this subject to men of your prudence, only know that the royall borrowes are unanimously of opinion that your dipping in Mr Gordons bussines is a papable breach of our privieledges and nothing but a present repairatione of it in the termes wee have spock of can make us digest what is past, and if ane speedy accompt shall not come of your giveing full satisfaction in this matter it will be taken under consideratione at the nixt generall conventione in July, and beyond all doubt will be understood and construed as a sufficient ground to break up correspondence. Wee most also tell yow that being informed some of our ships haue been long detained for want of convoyes wee desire it may be quickly remeidit by your spedie provisione of sufficient convoyes, that no more reason may be giuen to complain heirefter, since the French privateers are in squadrons on our coasts. This wee hope ye will endeavour to prevent as yow would testifie that affectione for us which upon all occationes yow may expect from your most humble servants, [etc.]. Sic subscribitur: ARD. My Lord.—The royall borrowes were together in a generall conventione which wes called for consideratione of what measours were most proper to be taken to secure the payment of the taxt roll dew by the unfree tradders of this kingdome upon the accompt of the communicatione of trade allowed to them by act of parliament, especiallie now when Mr Buchans tack is so neir expired. My lord, the conventione hes a deip sense of your lordships concerne for them, both when they hade the honour of your lordship being a member, and allwayes since, which makes them to presume upon the containowance of your lordships favor and protectione. Wee doe by this represent to your lordship ane considerable lesione done to our priveledges in the Netherlands by the magistrats of Campheir medleing in ane affair of one William Gordon, our countrie man, wherby he hes been most untenderly treated to his verie great prejudice as wee are informed. This being ane manifest invasione upon us who have the sole jurisdictione in all matters relaiting to Scots men in the Netherlands, and now understanding that this bussines is tabled before the court of justice at Hague, wee desire your lordship may be pleased to interpose with the King that the court of justice ther may desist and referr it absolutly to the conservator to doe justice therin as he shall sie cause. Your lordships assistance and patrociniij in this matter will be considerit by us as ane new demonstratione which most obleidge the royall borrows to oune themselves, my lord, [etc.]. Sic subscribitur: ARD. If he use his utmost diligence for recovery of the cess and missive dues the royal burghs are to relieve him of all loss and damage he may sustain. As he has to advance considerable sums, the royal burghs, for supporting his credit, oblige themselves as cautioners for 10,000 merks to any person who shall lend the same; for relief whereof and of 10,000 merks already undertaken by the burghs and borrowed from the good town of Edinburgh, John Buchan disposed as much of the cess and missive dues owing by the several shires and unfree trades as will satisfy said sum. Stewart.

24. Remitted to the committee appointed to meet after this convention a petition by the representatives of the deceased James Stewart, merchant in Dundie.

Burgh of Perth.

25. Having considered a petition by the burgh of Perth, the convention "grant warrand to the present magistrats of Perth and ther successores in office to few out such parcells and pairts of the comon mure as they shall think most convenient, or otherwayes to set tacks thereof for nynteen or twenty one yeirs at ther pleasour, as also to sett ther milnes, Inches and fishings for the space of seaven or nyne yeares in tacks to any person who shall offer most therfor, by the advyce of the burghs of Dundie, Stirling and Montrose or any two of them."

Lanerk.

26. Appointed the agent to pay to the burgh of Lanerk 500 merks towards the building of their bridge whenever the same is founded, which is to be expended at the sight and be the advice of Sir Thomas Stewart of Coltness.

Forras, Aberbrothock, Bamff, Nairn,
St Andrews,
Kinghorne, Inverurie.

27-34. Having considered petitions given in by the burghs afternamed, the convention appointed committees to visit (27) the burgh of Forras and take inspectione of their tolbooth; (28) the caise and condition of the burgh of Aberbrothock and the decay of their pier and harbour; (29) the burgh of Bamff and take inspection of their harbour; (30) the burgh of Nairn and take trial and inspection of their tolbooth and repair of their bridge; (31) the harbour of St Andrews; (33) the burgh of Kinghorn and take inspection of their pier, harbour, and the road leading up the Pittiecurr; and (34) the burgh of Innerury and take tryall of their common good and what condition they are in "and also to take inspectione of that place where they desire the bulwork." All the committees were appointed to give in their reports to next general convention.

Relict of conservator.

35. Having considered the petition of Helen Strachan, relict of the deceased

Sir James Kennedie, lord conservator, the convention allowed her £5 "of present supply." PERTH.

36. Exempted the burghs of Sanquhair, Dingwall, Cullen, Fortrose, Anstruther Wester, Northberwick, Lochmaben, Wigetowne, Dornoch, Whythorn and Kilrenny from attending conventions for the space of three years. Exemptions.

36a. The conventione declaires that whensoever any fond shall happen in favours of the royall borrowes wherby they may be enabled to ease any of ther number that then the enshewing conventione shal take under speciall consideration the burghs of Air, Dumfreise, Irvine, Dumbartoun, Wigetowne, Dumfermling, Kinghorn and Stanraer for getting ane ease in the taxt roll accordingly, and they to be first considered befor any other royall burgh and eased as said is. Act in favour of Ayr, etc.

37. In terms of the 25th act of the general convention in July 1696 the agent reported the burghs in arrear of missive dues, and the convention declared "this act to be a sufficient exoneration to such burghs as have payed in ther proportion of the said missive dewes altho ther discharges be lost." Missive dewes.

38. Anent the petition given in by the burgh of St Andrews, mentioning that they have obtained ane decreit in foro against the university of the said burgh, wherby the lords of sessione after full hearing fand that the burgh of St Andrews being erected in a burgh upwards of two hundred years befor the erection of the university could not be prejudged in thair jurisdictione by any posterior gift granted in favours of the university, whereupon they did give in ane bill which is appoynted to be seen and answered, and the petitioners being nowayes able to mantain thair priviledges or defend the said plea any longer without the royall borrowes assistance, creaveing thairfor that they appoynt thair agent to defend them on the publict expences of the borrowes, as the petition bears; which being considered be the conventione they grant the desir therof and appoynts the agent to defend the towne of St Andrews just rycht against the university therof till the nixt generall convention, on the publict expences of the borrowes, not exceeding fyve hundreth marks. tion of the sewerall burghs can be knowen, yeit, notwithstanding, the generall conventione hath proceeded to tax the said town of Edinburgh at great randum and without takeing notice to the visitors report, which is contrair to law and reason.—(2^{do}.) It being uncontraverted that the subject of the tax roll is the trade of the kingdome, and for which the burden layed upon the borrowes is payed, soe that in the makeing up of the tax roll it is the certain and only rule that each burgh be taxed according to there trade, which hath not been observed in this caice in so far as, albeit it was offered to be proven and still is, that the present trade of Glasgow is fully equivalent to the present trade of Edinburgh, wherby in reason these tuo burghs ought to bear ane equall proportione in the tax roll, yeit, notwithstanding, the town of Edinburgh is palpably injured being made near three tymes as much as Glasgow.—(3^{tho}.) In the laying on of a tax roll ther ought to be candid and plain dealings and no preoccupation of the members upon promises of gratificationes and eases, but so it is that unwarrantable methods hath been used in the present distributione of the taxt roll; and therfor upon the forsaid reasone and others forsaid the saides commissionars doe protest for coast, skaith, damnadge, and for remead of law; and therupon took instruments. Wherupon Hugh Broun, commissioner for Innerara, adhered to the said protestatione and therupon took instruments.

the protesta-tionn.

.(1^o.) It is answered that altho the abovesaid report wes in reddines to be given in by the visitors appoynted as said is, yeit, notwithstanding, the then commissionars for the towne of Edinburgh, being affrayed of a considerable augmentation in the tax roll by the said report, did prevail with Mr John Buchan to take upon him the tenth pairt of the tax roll for the freedome of trade to the burghs of barronies and regalities, which the said Mr John haveing condescend to the conventione appointed, by ther act Jully 1692, that the said report should be sealed by the seal of the provost of Dundie, then preses, to lye in retentis till the conventione should think fit to call for it, but so it is that the said report hath never yeit been called for by any member either at this or any prior conventione nor by the toun of Edinburgh itself untill now that the tax roll was fullie concluded by the comitty, wherof the town of Edinburgh was members, and the report of the said comitty was made in full conventione and allowed by them; neither can it be thought reasonable that the said report can be now a rule for proportioneing the said tax roll after so long tyme as fyve yeares, ther being now a great alteratione of the conditione of these burghs then visited from what they were at that tyme. (2^{do}.) It is answered that the comitty did deal with all candor and ingenuity in lyeing on of the said tax roll, haveing fully heard the toune of Edinburgh by ther representatione given in in wryt, as also, viva voce, concerneing ther trade and conditione, and considering that ther are other subject for a tax then meir trade, as also haveing heard the commissioner for Glasgow answer against the said representation that they did setle the tax roll as is now given in to the conventione. (3^{tho}.) It is answered that this third reasone being a calumnious and malicious reflectione against the candor of the comity it ought to meet with a severe rebuik, no such practises being used unless by these of the toune of Edinburgh, as is nottour to the whole conventione.

Walter Stewart, comissioner for Lithgow, protested against his being hightened in the tax roll and gave in his protestatione, subscribed with his hand, quhich was read, and adheired to the protestationes given in by the commissioners for Edinburgh and therupon took instruments. As also Mr William Jonstoun, commissioner for Annan, gave in ane protestatione, subscrivit with his hand, quhich was read, adheiring to the protestationes given in by the commissioners for Edinburgh and thairupon took instruments; to both which protestationes the conventione oppons the ansuer given in to the town of Edinburghs protestationes.

2. [The committee, conform to the 14th act of last general convention, directed the following letters to the conservator and magistrates of Campheer :]

(1.) To the lord conservator.

My Lord.—Your two letters, both of the dait the $\frac{11}{21}$ June, and the memorialls sent therwith, were all read in presence of the generall conventione laity held at Perth. Your great care and dilligence in these matters was verie much approven and comended by the conventione, but because it would have taken up much tyme to have considered the same in plain conventione, they did therfor remitt to a comitty of ther number the particular consideratione therof, as ye will perceave by the inclosed act to that purpose, which wee have transmitted, not as apprehending yow were to doubt the comities authority but to satisfie yow that the conventione did soe far limitt our power as wee cannot dispence with your concluding of the staple contract untill first dew satisfaction be given of former breaches and reimbursement be made of the charges and expences occationed in the affair of Mr Gordon. One of your letters mentiones that yow have gott satisfactione as to your preliminaries, and that yow were readie to enter upon the articles of the contract, and desireing that the conventione would advyse yow what yow are to demand farder then what is contained in your former instructions, as to which wee think that it will be necessary to take full assurance that no breach or violatone shall be for heirafter made upon the Scots jurisdictione, but they shall be intirely and inviolably observed ; as also that full satisfactione be given of your own and sons expences and of Maisters Gordon and M'Kenzie's damnadge and expences sustained be them through the magistrats of Campheirs medleing in ther affairs. We remitt what farder may be proper to your own prudence, beleiveing allwayes that ye will demand nothing which is not necessarie both for the honour and intrest of the Scots natione. As to the affair of Mr Hoge, some of our number were appointed to attend the presbitrie of Edinburgh, which accordingly they did on Wednesday last and gave in reasones why he ought not to have been transported, but the presbitrie wes notwithstanding pleased to vote his transportatione from Campheir to Clackmanan against the moneth of March next enshewing, and in remuneratione the presbitrie hes offered ther concurrence in provideing the toun of Campheir with ane other fitt persone so soone as it shall be desired. Wee did not imagine that the presbitrie would have gott over the reasones were given them for retaining Mr Hoge at Campheir, as being in our humble opinion a great deal more weighty and convinceing then anything offered in the contrary, but wee understand the trew caus was that Mr Hoge was under discouragements at Campheir and therfor they thought it ther deuty to embrace the occasion for bringing him home to his oun countrey. Wee think it will be seasonable to remember these two articles anent the poores money and metsters, and wee desire that now when yow are about the settleing of the staple contract, the poors mony and bygone intrest therof may be delyvered to yow and the minister, and by your ordor so disposed of as may be made furthcomeing for the use of the poor ; as also that in time comeing it be provided that a Scotsman may be a mettster alsweell as any other, and particularly if yow think fitt that one Walter Younger may be the man to be presently choosen. As to your own particular, it was spoken of at some length in the generall conventione, and albeit all the members were satisfied that your care, dilligence, and expences in ther affairs did deserve suteable gratificationes, yeit considering that the staple contract is not fully perfyted and that ther may be ane additionall charge necessarie befor it can be exped, they were generally of opinion to delay that matter to the nixt generall conventione, at which time they will have all under thair view ; and wee doubt not but they will treat yow discreitly and suteably to the merits of the cause, nor can it be any lose to your intrest that the nixt conventione is to meet at Aberdeen, these being the people who reap the greatest advantage of the staple port of Campheir and will certainly lay out themselves to see yow get full satisfactione. The affair of your sons commission to be conjunct with your self was lyckwayes discoursed in the convention and they did conclud nothing about it nor give us any particular instructione thairanent but so far as our warrant reaches wee see no reason to except against his admissione, but rather judge it to be the intrest of the royall borrowes, seeing therby the great objectione of not residence at Campheir will be removed, and two persons can certainly manadge what is unpracticable for one. Besides your son is represented to us as a gentleman of good expectatione and of whom wee have confidence that his actions will render him allwayes acceptable, the best wee can wish for him that it may be justly said patrem sequitur. Wee know nothing to hinder his takeing the oath de fidelj before Mr Pringle or any other persone yow think fitt. As to the point of admitting factors, wee are satisfied that ye can best judge what numbers therof ought not to be exceeded, for though the merchants doe affirm that it is ther intrest how many ther be if honest and sufficient. However, befor your letters came to be considered, ther was one Patrick Gellie, sone to Baillie Gellie in Aberdeen, admittit factor, and found cautione; but wee shall represent to the conventione that non be admitted for the futur untill your opinion be required theranent. Wee know not of any further necesarie to be moved for us at the treatie of peace then what wee have formerly communicated to yow to which wee remitt you. Wee suppose yow have lately, under Captain Gordons cover, ane coppie of ane address intended by the royall borrowes to his Majestie which was delayed untill the secretaries of state should see the samen. Accordingly, wee have waited on both secretaries and they are satisfied with the draught, only secretary Ogilvy thought that the paragraph of it mentionning the delay of perfyting the staple till repairatione were given by Campheir for invadeing the Scots jurisdictione might be noticed by the King as too peremptor, but wee told ther lordships that wee designed to convoy the address by your hands who would take care not to present it if yow understood anything therin would offend, and therfor wee have thought it expedient to send yow over the address and be sure yow consider it seriously, and if yow can discover any thing thairin that can give the least dissatisfaction to his Majestie, after advyseing it with such as are about the King, then doe not by any means present it but rather let us have your judgement in what other termes ane new address may be made and it shall be done accordingly. EDINBURGH.

22 July 1697.
 Ther is ane petition referred to us by the convention, given in to them (1.) To the lord conserva-
tor.
 by the representatives of the deceast James Stewart, merchant in Dundie, which wee doe heirwith transmitt to yow and desirs yow may give the petitioners all the justice and despatch in your power, which will be verie obleidging to the conventione, the defunct being sometyne a member himself and his memory verie fragrant among us, he being a kynd and discreit persone. Wee have seen your last lettres direct to the lord provost of Edinburgh to which wee suppose what is said may be ane return, only as to that ratificatione, wherof ye show the difficulty, it is not in our power as a comity to dispence with it, being as yow will see limited. However, if all other things be adjusted to satisfacione wee shall use our endeavours to get ane convention called pro re nata that they may consider upon it, and wee are hopefull that if the magistrates of Campheir shall satisfie in all other matters, and particularly in Mr Gordons affair, it will be a considerable inducement to the conventione to ease them so far as can consist with ther safety and trust, and so much will depend upon themselves in that matter. Yow cannot expect such exact returns from us in thir publick affaires as are agreeable to the observationes yow make upon them yourself, which wee doubt not is effect of more thinking then wee can bestow upon it, only wee send yow ane breiff accompt of what occurs to us at present, and what is wanting now shall be afterwards supplied as yow give us opportunity. In the mean tyme wee expect that the same principle of fidelity to your trust and zeal to your native countrey which hes heirto acted yow in all your proceedings will still determine your continwance therin; and as yow have just ground to expect ane reciprocally meeting from the royall borrows in generall, soe wee, in particular, shall not be wanting to approve ourselves upon all occationes, my lord, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: JOHN ROBERTSON, preses. Ther is ane petition presented to us by Alexander Wyllie, who is now at Campheir, desireing to be master of the conserjorie house and with whom wee are generally satisfied but haue delayed to admitt him till wee understand if ye have any reasonable objection against him.

My lords. Your last to the royall borrowes wes read in ther late conventione at Perth. The vindicatione therby offered of your procedour in the affair of Mr Gordon was not so satisfieing as to justifie any one circumstance of it as being in everie point redargued by the informatione sent to them, but the generall conventione haveing named us as a comittie to give our sentiments of that affair, wee resolve to eshewn these altercationes and calumnious expressions which your letter provocks from us, either by your questioneing the reality of our signeing or sealing our last letter or anything els, and do desire that all former mistakes may be in oblivion and that as wise men wee may look forward and promote the comon intrest, to which purpose and for removeing of all jealousies and former bad impressions it is our earnest desire that such satisfactione may be given to the lord conservator and to masters Gordon and M'Kenzie as may retrieve these unfortunat stepts were made to ther prejudices, and wee are confident that if your honors please to lay out your selves effect-wallie this may be obtained from his Majestie, at whois door yow say it now stands, for hade the King been informed that the old staple contract was by mutuall consent still in force until the new was perfyted then his Majestie would have given his royall allowance for the exercise of the Scots jurisdictione by thair conservator court as formerly. However, wee apprehend no difficulty if your honors expres willingnes to have that matter adjusted to satisfactione. Wee have laitly received letters from the lord conservator that yow have come a considerable length in setleing the new contract and have returned him our thoughts theranent. Wee shall wish that all things may proceed with that equality betuixt yow as may leave no umbrage of discontent in tyme comeing, and nothing shall be more acceptable to us than the intertainment of a good correspondance according to the laudable example of our predicessores. And in the meantyme be pleased to know that the comittes power from the late generall conventione is expresly limited so as the staple contract cannot be renewed untill first satisfaction be given and repairatione made of the injuries done to the conservator, masters William Gordon and Mackenzie, of the coast, skaith, and damnadge sustained be them through the toun of Campheirs interfering with the Scottish jurisdictione, as your honors will plainly perceave by the act of the generall conventione which wee have transmitted to the conservator to be comunicat to yow ; as also he will impairt to your honours the information which the conventione hade anent the whole stepts of that affair and that the originall of all that hes happened to Mr Gordon is therby most clearly lodged upon one of your burgemasters ; but wee desire to eveit all reflections as is formerly said and shall evidence on all occations how readie wee are to continu, my lords, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: JOHN ROBERTSONE, preses.

7. The draught of ane addres to his Majestie by the present generall conventione, creaveing his royall allowance to send to London ane or mae commissioners to the treatie of comerce to be held ther, being red, wes unanimously approven by the conventione and appointed to be recorded, whereof the tenor follows:—May it please your sacred Majestie. Wee your royall borrows being here convened towards the setleing of the staple contract betuixt the town of Campheir and us, and understanding that it is your Majesties pleasour that wee should dispence with that pairt of the contract whereby the magistrats of Campheir were to procure the ratificatione of the states generall of the United Provinces therunto, wee have as ane instance of our dew compliance with and obedience to your royall will and pleasour removed that article, and haveing hade so many signall proofis of your Majesties royall care of us in all our concerns, wee are therby encouraged to present our addresses upon all occations wherein your Majesties appearance in our behalfs is necessarie. And seeing it hath pleased God, of his infinite mercy and goodnes, to make your Majestie the great and happy instrument of ane honourable peace to these your kingdomes, and being informed that in prosecutione therof ther is ane treaty of comerce to be held betuixt your subjects of Brittane and these of France, wherein the matter of trade may be adjusted and your subjects of this kingdome restored to ther antient priuieledges, it is humbly represented to your Majestee that your antient kingdome of Scotland is verie much interested to have sewerall impediments of ther trade to France removed and taken of, as especiallie ane act discharging our importing herring to France which was made since the beginning of the lait warr, as also ane act of fyfty solz per tunn imposed upon shiping, both which have been verie greivous to the subjects of this your ancient kingdome, considering that our fishing is our greatest manufactory and if ther importatione to France shall not be allowed as formerly it will tend highlie to the prejudice of this natione, for preventing wherof, as your Majesties interpositione is humbly intreated, soe that your Majestie will be graciously pleased to authorize our commissionars, ane or mae as your

8. The same day, ther wes red and approven by the conventione the letters directed from them to the lord secretaries, which wes ordained to be recorded, whereof the tenor followes:—My lord. The royall borrowes doe reckon it both ther honour and advantage to be patronized by your lordship in all ther publict concerns, and are most sensible that they owe ane deutiefull aknowledgement upon all occationes. They have in compliance with your lordships opinion, signified by yours to the lord provost of Edinburgh, of the date the twelt of October last, kepted a generall conventione wherein they have dispenced with that article of the staple contract, obleidging the magistrates of Campheir to procure the ratifica-tione of the states generall of the united provinces, soe that nothing does now stop the perfyting of that contract. The conventione haue lyckwayes taken under ther consideratione that it does verie much import to the trade and comerce of this kingdome that the royall borrowes should be represented in the treaty of comerce which is to be held at London betuixt Ingland and France, but befor they should proceed to nominat commissionars for that end they did judge it ther deuty to address his Majesty for allowance to send up ther commissionars, of quhich address the just coppie is heirwith transmitted. It is humbly desired by the royall borrowes that your lordship will be pleased to concurr with this addres and interpose with the king for his gracious answer thereto, which when obtained ane new generall conventione will be called for giveing such instructiones as shall be necessary for carieing on ther designe. I

11. [The convention taking to their consideration the act and contract entered into with John Buchan, mentioned in the 24th act of the convention at Dundee on 13th July 1692], which act and contract was also ratified and approven by the act of parliament j^m vj^e and nyntie thrie, for the communicatione of trade in maner therein exprest, lykeas by the said act of parliament it is farder statut and ordained that ther shall be a communicatione of trade to the saides burghs of regalities, barronies, and others upon ther payeing and releiveing the royall borrowes of a just proportione of the hundred pounds of the taxt roll imposed upon them by act of parliament, as the said act more fully beares. In prosecutione of the which acts and contract the said Mr John, notwithstanding of the outmost dilligence that could be used, did meet with great and unsuperable difficulties, whereby he was necesitat to lay out and engadge for considerable sowmes for payment of his undertakeing, which at length obleidged him to apply to the lords of privie counsell, to the effect ther lordships, in regaird of the free offers he did make to the respective shyres of the kingdome of the moderat proportions that he demanded of each of them for the whole unfree traders and unfree tradeing within ther respective bounds, the commissioners of the said shyres might be conveened to consider his said offers, conforme to ane taxt roll that he hade at that tyme exhibited to the counsell, and to subdevide and proportione the same upon the forsaid unfree traders for the benefit of the above mentioned communicatione as they should find reasonable, which supplicatione the lords of his Majesties privie counsell did grant and ordored a proclamatione to be thereon emitted, as the same of the date the eighteen day of Februarie last by past at more length proports; lykeas the said Mr John haveing intented action befor the lords of sessione against unfree traders within certain burghs of regalities and others, such as Dalgkeith, Musleburgh, &c., the lords by their decreit fond that not only the unfree traders themselves but also all retailleurs, tradesmen, and other burgesses and inhabitants within the saides burghs were lyable to bear ther proportione of the forsaid taxt roll exhibited by Mr John Buchane to the lords of privie counsell in maner abovementioned, and farder by ane other decreit the saides lords did also find that the unfree traders within the forsaid burghs whom the said Mr John hade conveened on that accompt, and where the forsaid proportione was not agreed to and undertaken by the burgh where they traded, were lyable to the escheat of ther whole moveables conform to the acts of parliament; lykeas, after the expyreing of the forsaid first contract betuixt the conventione of borrowes and the said Mr John, the conventione mett at Perth the twelth day of Jully last

And farder the foresaid conventione at Perth did lyckwayes allow of the thrie pound ten shilling that by the taxt roll exhibited by the said Mr John to the privie councill in maner forsaid was added to the forsaid ten pounds, and the convention being verie sensible of Mr Johns care and dilligence in all this matter, and also of the difficulties that he hath mett with and the burden that still lyes upon him, and with all considering how much it is ther own intrest to have the forsaid bargains made effectuall for releiff of the royall borrowes, and that Mr John for advanceing of the said intrest doeth freely give over in favours of the said royall borrowes the forsaid thrie pounds ten shillings that was added to the said ten pounds in recompense of his pains and expenssis, have therefore ordained and doe heirby with consent of the said Mr John Buchan ordain and enact that the said Mr John Buchan shall grant subtacks or assignments to the burghs particularly after specifiet, viz., . . . * and that for payment of ther respective proportiones mentioned in the taxt roll imposed upon the burghs of barronies, regalities, and other unfree traders within the saides shires and haill bounds thereof, with full power to the saides burghs to uplift and levie the forsaid quota and proportion from the persones therin lyable and to use all execution competent to the said Mr John for that effect, which subtacks and assignments they doe farder ordain the forsaides burghs to accept of and that they pay for the same for makeing up of bygones preceeding Lambas last, each of them quarterly, beginning the first quarters payment at the said term of Lambas last and so furth to continow ay and whill the said Mr John be completely payed of the haill soumes particularly wnderwryttin, viz.,† . . . have in that treaty, and that no commissionars are as yett nominat for them, they judged it ther humble deuty, als weell as ane nationall intrest, to represent to your lordship what discouragements the trade and comerce of this kingdome is under through the heavie impositiones and burdens that are upon the goodes they import to France, as particularly all ther Scots woollens, butter, linnen cloath, coalls, and all other goods imported to France, wherof the duty is soe great that it is equall to ane prohibitione. As also the fishing of this natione, which is undenyably the farr greatest manufactorie thereof, cannot be vended in France, being vnder ane absolut prohibitione, only since the beginning of the lait warr, whereby most considerable quantities of herring which wes sent thither this last and present season were stopt from sale and the owners obleidged to dispose them otherwayes, to ther great loss and disadvantage, and some who could make no use therof in forraigne marcats are obleidged to bring them back. And in lyckmaner ther is ane imposition of fyfty solz per tunn exacted from Scots ships and veshells tradeing to France, besides manie other inconveniences the traders of this kingdome are exposed unto, by all which the trade of this nation will be brought to ane very low conditi-one if remeid be not provided. And therfor the convention humbly propose to your lordship that yow will be pleased to address his Majestie upon this exigence that such from this kingdome as his Majestie shall be pleased to nominat may be admitted as members of the forsaid treatie of comerce, to represent this nation in these most weighty and important concernes therof, and your lordship will direct the royall borrowes to doe what may be proper for them upon this emergent, wherewith they will deutyfullie comply, especially considering that this kingdome hes many repeited immunities from the French granted to them, which they are hopefull may deserve consideratione in the treaty of comerce if allowance be given to represent them therein.

Complaint of Robert Rennald, lait provost of Montrose.

6. Anent the petition given in to the convention by Robert Rennald, lait provost of Montross, mentioneing that where by the [28th] act of the generall convention in Jully last ther was a comittie appoyntit to visit the caice and conditione of the burgh of Aberbrothock and the decay of their peer and harbour, wherof the petitioner was one, in obedience whereunto the said comitie did appoint a day for viseiteing of the said burgh, and accordingly the petitioner, conform to the constant custome of his prede-cessores, after receaveing two misives from the said burgh intreating the petitioner to attend the said day, and being acquainted by the provest of Dundie who wes conveener of the said comity of the day prefix, did (as in dutie bound) punctwallie attend the same with the remanent members of the said comity conform to the forsaid act, and accordingly visited the caice and condition of the said burgh and took inspection of ther peer and harbour, as the report alreadie extended and signed, ready to be given in to the nixt generall conventione, does testifie; notwithstanding whereof some of the present magistrats of the said burgh of Montross, thinkeing that the petitioner did not pay them the dew regaird he should by acquainting them of the appoyntment of the said comitie, did, contrair to the constant practise and constitutione of the said burgh, meet in ane taverne and granted commissione to Baillie Ogilvie, one of there present baillies, to repair to the said burgh of Aberbrothock, and ther mett with the remanent members of the comity and visit the said burgh conform to the above act of borrowes, who, after his arriveall ther, signified to the comity that he was sent according to the above mentioned appoyntment to represent the said burgh of Montrose as one of ther number at the visitatione of the said burgh, and protested in the hands of George Brookie, nottar publict, that be virtew of his said commissione he was willing to goe along with the comity in visiting the said burgh; whereunto it was ansuered be the comity that they are willinge to accept of the said Bailly Ogilvie joyntly with the petitioner, and not otherwayes, and that they and the petitioner hade already obeyed the comand of the said act off borrowes, and according thereto hade visited the said burgh and ther peer and harbour and that the petitioner and they did nothing but what hes been and still is the constant custome (upon such occationes) not only of the toune of Montross in particular but lyckwayes of the haill royall borrowes, and that they acted nothing but what they shall be ansuerable for to the nixt generall conventione. Whereupon, after the said Bailie Ogilvie returned home again, the saides magistrats of Montross did, contrair to the laws and constitutions of the royall borrowes and constant custome of the said burgh, send one of ther number to Edinburgh to consult the whole matter with lawers who (upon misinformatione) advysed them not only to fyne and imprisone the petitioner but lyckwayes declair him incapable to represent the said burgh in any publict capacity in all tyme comeing. Which petition being heard, read, and considered by the conventione, together with the comities report thereof, they appoynt the magistrats of Montross to forbear any farder procedour against the petitioner untill the nixt generall conventione, and that the commissioner for the said burgh intimat the same to the saids magistrats, and in the mean tyme recomends to both pairties to aggree and adjust the difference betuixt and that tyme. Whereupon the commissioner of Montross protested against the said act in regaird that this convention is only called for determineing a particular caice mentioned in the misive direct by the provost of Edinburgh to the borrowes and lyckwayes seeing the magistrats of Montross are not ceited or appointed to see and ansuer the said petition given in by Provost Rennald against them and theirupon took instruments.

39. Anent the petition given in to the convention by William Gordon, factor in Campheir, mentioneing that in the petition presented to the convention at Perth, praying consideratione might be hade, previous to the settlement of the staple, of the petitioners great chairges he hade been put to in defending himself against the towne of Campheirs breach of contract and violating the nations jurisdiction, the convention then were pleased to appoint and ordain reparation to be made him conform to the contents of the said petition and signatour theron in the clerks hands which is creaved may be again called for and considered; lyckeas upon ane other petition presented to the conventione mett at Edinburgh in November last, much the same with that above mentioned, the petitionar obtained the favour of a letter from the convention to the magistrats of Campheir requireing them to consider and repay his great expences and damnadges occasioned by thair meanes, quherunto the said magistrats have hade no

regaird, neither have refounded one farthing, the petitioner creaved leave to represent that the staple contract is again renewed and yeit no redres made of his great loss and chairges, wherefor is obleidged once more to complain of the severe measour he hath mett with by being exposed to the malice and oppresseone of the town of Campheir through the petitioners endeavoureing to vindicat the nations honour, maintain the privieledge and jurisdiction of the royall borrowes and get justice done him in his own particular; as also to represent to the convention that, conform to the constitution of a staple factors admissiōe, the petitioner (who hade served his countrey in that station these sewerall yeares) did find sufficient caution for makeing good the product and price of all goodes consigned to him tho the buyers should prove insolvent, and that accordingly the petitioner hath de facto counted with his imployers for debts which he never received, to the value of one thousand pound sterling, as can be made appear by his bookes and other good evidences, and being now obleidged to abandon his imployment as factor after sustaineing soe great losses in the service of his countrey, creaveand thairfor that the convention would soe far countenance the petitioner as to appoint his reimbursement out of some effectwall fond, seeing in all equity and justice everie societie should protect its members and dependants, and the petitioners expences creaved are plainly bestowed and laid out for behooff of the royall borrowes and maintaineing ther honour and priveledges, and its humbly conceived that if the petitioner hade been so mean as to neglect his duty and suffer his nation to be affronted and bafled by succumbeing, the convention would have wudertaken the matter and followed it out prima instantia upon ther own chairges, and it were verie hard that the petitioners makeing himself the first advancer should sustain and lye under the loss of what he hath soe necessarily laid out, and if ther remain any scruple or difficulty with the conventione its humbly creaved that they would be pleased either to call the petitioner and hear him on the premissis in ther own presence or appoint some of ther number to hear and examine the said matter and either to determine or to report as they shall sie cause, as the petition bears. Which being considered by the conventione they declair that since the lord conservator hath setled the staple port without reparatiōe of William Gordons damnadges and expences, which by act of borrowes and the sewerall letters wryttin be the comity to the conservator he wes expresly forbidden to setle the staple at Campheir till repairatione hade been done to the said William Gordon, doe therfor appoynt the conservator to use his outmost endeavours with the towne of Campheir to procure repairatione to the said William Gordon of his damages and expences, and that betuixt the date heiroy and the nixt generall convention in July j^m vj^c nyntie nyne; and untill repairatione be made to the said William Gordon the conventione are resolved that they will not take wnder ther consideratione the conservators charges or any other demands till the nixt generall conventione.

Right trusty and weelbeloved, we greet yow well. Wee were well satisfied with your letter to us of the 15th October 1696, whereby yow signifie your resolution to renew the staple contract with the town of Campheir, and for this end yow hade granted a commission to Sir Andrew Kennedie, our resident in the Netherlands, since which tyme wee understand that in prosecution of this commission the forsaid contract is ended and the staple court established in the forsaid toun, and that thereby there are very advantagious privieledges granted for the trade and comerce of that our antient kingdome of Scotland which wee will be carefull to have punctwally observed and will lyckwise take care to remove whateuer may occatione any misunderstanding between the royall borrows and the said town of Campheir; and by this contract it being agreed that the same shall be ratified both by the states of Zealand and by a convention of our royall borrows, and which being allreadie done by the saids states wee haue therfor appointed your meeting at this tyme that yow may also ratify the same, and that thereafter wee may interpose our authority and give our ratification thereof. Wee have frequent accounts of your loyalty and fidelity to us on all occations, and therfor wee give yow full assurranse of our royall protectione in all your concernes ; and soe wee bide yow heartily farewell. Given at our court at Kensingtone, the 31st day of January 169⁸, and of our reigne the 10th year. By his Majesties command. Sic subscribitur : SEAFEILD.

paines and penalties as are contained in the acts of parliament and borrowes, which the convention be thir presents renews and revives all and quhatsomever [acts] and statuts made by any former conventiones in favours of the staple, and that against the breakers and contraveeners of the same, declaireing the generallity heirof to be als sufficient as if every particular act, statut, penalty and certification were specially heirin exprest, quheranent this present convention dispences forever.

7. Ther wes redd and approven by the convention the letter direct from them in answer to his sacred Majesties royall letter to them, which they ordained to be recorded and signed by ther preses, whereof the tenor follows :—May it pleas your Majesty. Wee your royall borrowes, being heir conveyed by your Majesties comand for ratifeing of the staple contract past betuixt us and the magistrats of Campheir, haue, in obedience to your royall will and pleasour, ratified and confirmed the said contract in all the heads and articles thereof, and seeing your Majestie hes been graciously pleased to assure us of your royall care to remove all occationes of difference betuixt them and us, whereupon wee doe rely and depend, wee are therby encouraged to transmitt ane accompt of the indignities and injuries comitted be them upon the conservator and our factors and dependants befor and since the renewing of the staple contract, and have recomend the samen to be laid befor your Majesty by your secretary of state, and are verie confident from many experiences given us of your royall protectione that in this exigent, wherein your state of borrowes are soe deeply concerned, your Majestie will be pleased both to appoint reparatione of our damnadges alreadie sustained and interpose your royall comands that ther may be a dew observance of the contract in tyme comeing. Wee doe lyckwayes humbly offer to your Majesties consideratione the great disadvantages this your antient kingdom in generall, and wee your royall borrowes in particular, doe ly under by the prohibitione of the importing our herring and other fishes to France, for therby is occasioned ane extraordinary decay of trade and comerce, it being beyond question that our fishing is the farr greatest manufactorie wee can pretend unto ; as also ther is ane impositione of 50 solz per tunn upon all Scots ships and veshells that goe to France which is ane heaveie burden, besides great impositiones upon all our manufactories ; and seeing wee are informed the commissionars for the treaty of comerce are conveyened at London towards setleing of such matters as relait to trade, wee doe humbly intreat your Majestie will be graciously pleased to appoynt the trade of this natione to be specially regairdit in that treaty by such persons as your Majestie in your royall wisdomes shall think fitt to nominat for that effect. Wee return your Majesty our most humble and hearty thanks for your gracious letter upon this occation, with full assurance of our unalterable resolutiones to serve your Majestie with our lyves and fortunes as being, may it pleas your Majestie [etc.] (Signed) G. 8. Ther was redd and approven by the conventione the draught of ane letter direct from them to the secretary of state, which they ordained to be recorded and signed by ther preses, whereof the tenor followes :—May it pleas your lordship. Yours of the 30th January to the lord provost of Edinburgh wes by him comunicat to us at this convention, and in obedience to his Majesties commands and your lordships intimation thereof wee have been very frequent in our meetting, and after consideratione of the staple contract have ratified the samen, which is heirwith transmitted to your lordship to be approven by his Majestie, albeit nothing less then our duty to the King would have obleidged us to ane compliyanse, considering the many abuses comitted be these magistrats of Campheir without any shadow of justice or reasone, as your lordship will perceave by the memoriall heirwith sent yow, which wee doe most earnestly recomend to your lordships care, both for presenting the same to his Majestie and interposeing with him for ane redress; and, particularly, wee humbly think that, by your influence, reparatione may be hade from Campheir, both of the indignities done the conservator and the wast chaarges that William Gordon wes necesitat to expend through ther incroachments. This opportunity seemes verie seasonable because wee have good ground to expect it from his Majesties gracious letter to that purpose, and wee judge ourselves both upon honour and intrest concerned that it be effectwally done. Wee have lyckwayes taken wnder our consideratione the discouradgements which our trade lyes wnder by the prohibition of our herring and other fishes to France and the heavie impositiones and burdens that are upon all the goodes wee import there, as also the 50 solz per tunn upon all our veshells that goe to France, and that it does verie much import to the trade and comerce of this kingdome that speciall regaird be hade thereto in the treaty of comerce betuixt Ingland and France which is presently sitting at London as is informed, but befor wee could proceed therein wee did judge it our duty to address his Majesty on this occatione. It is therfor humbly intreated by the royall borrowes that your lordship would be pleased to concurr with and assist us by interposeing with his Majestie for his gracious answer, especially considering that this kingdome and the trade therof hade many immunities from the French granted to them, which wee are hopefull may deserve consideratione in the treaty of comerce if the samen be represented ; as also that your lordship would be pleased to take notice of the heavy imposition ledd on our linnen cloath by the English, which is almost equall to ane prohibitione and will intirely ruine that trade if speedie remead be not provided. Wee could never believe the royall borrowes better stated then since your accessione to the present character, of whose manifold favours wee have receaved sufficient prooffs, and wee most still depend upon your lordship to patronize us in this and all our just concerns, which wee have the more confidence to expect seeing as we have allwayes hitherto found ourselves and the intrest of thestate of borrowes safely lodged in your hands, soe wee cannot be more sensible of anything then that wee are upon all occationes bound to appear, may it pleas your lordship, [etc.].

28. The conservator and Robert Pantoun, in obedience to the foregoing act, discharged each other of "all claggs, claimes, debaits, contraversies, playes, and processes for whatsomever cause or occatione bygone preceeding the dait heirolf."

Mutuell discharge between conservator and Pantoun.

29. The conventione haveing considered sewerall representationes given in to them against the lord conservator, wherein they have not now tyme to enquiry and to make such scrutinie as were necessarie in order to ane decisione, doe therfor think fitt to pass over the samen, but declare that in caice any complaints shal be offered and instructed against him for heireifter that the conventione will proceed against the said conservator as the merits of the cause shall require, and in the mean tyme recomendes to him that he may use all dew methods to keep the staple port both as to merchants and factores in peace and queit and that non may have just cause to complaine.

30. [Referring to the third article of the staple contract, the convention agreed to] wryt to the magistrats of Campheir that notwithstanding of the said third article that all salmond comeing to Campheir at any tyme befor the first of November yeirly after they make offer thereof and staying only eight dayes thereafter may goe to any other place, and that all stockens comeing to Campheir in caice ther be no seal therfor may be transported within fourteen dayes thereafter to any other place.

Referring to the 4th act of convention dated 24th March 1697 and the 15th act dated 19th November 1697, and John Buchan having repaid both sums advanced to him, the convention "declair that the said Mr John Buchan, ther agent, hes releived the royall borrowes of ther said cautionry for the forsaid two sowmes of twenty thousand marks, annualrents and penaltie, contained in the saids two bonds and acts of borrowes."
Petition anent the wooll.	44. Ther being ane petition read in presence of the conventione for stoping the exportation of wooll, wherof the tenor followes: Unto the right honorable my lord chancellor and the lords of his Majesties theasaurie and exchequer, the supplicatione of the commissioners of the royall burghs to this present generall conventione, humbly sheweth,—That notwithstanding of the good lawes made against exportatione of wooll furth of this realme, yeit the same hes been exported and is dayly exported to the ruine of the manufactors of this nation and the starveing many poor people that leived by the manufacturing of the wooll, therfor the commissioners of the royall borrowes presently conveyened in thair generall conventione doe make thair most humble and earnest address to your lordships, as the proper judges to whom the execution of the laws is incumbent, to make strick inquire into the exportatione of all wooll soe contrair to law, and to prosecut the transgressores and all persones accessory therto conforme to law, and your lordships would be pleased to enquire and authorize his Majesties advocat to prosecut them accordingly without delay, especially seeing wee are informed that the transgressors doe collour thair delinquencies by obtaining transiers or sufferances to transport the said wool from one port to ane other, and yeit without goeing to the said port the same is exported to forraigne ports; therfor your lordships would be favourable pleased to obleidge the receavers of the said sufferances or transieries to unload at the port designed and obtain ane certificat accordingly that the samen is unloaded accordingly, otherwayes that it shall be holden as exported abroad contrairie to law, and that your lordships would be pleased to take such other measours as your lordships shall think fitt for preventing the exportatione of wooll in tyme comeing ; as also that great quantities of forraigne wooll being imported to this kingdome to be exported thair is great occatione to export considerable quantities of the native product therwith, which makes the saids laws and acts elusorie, that your lordships would be pleased to declair that for heirafter all forraigne wooll being imported to this kingdome the same should not be exported. May it therfor please your lordships to take the premissis to your consideratione and to prescribe such effectwall methods against the exportation of wooll in all tyme comeing as your lordships shall think fitt ; and your petitioners shall ever pray. Which petition they appoint Mr John Buchan, thair agent, [to present] to the thesaurie and exchequer and report his dilligence.

45. The conventione statuts and ordains the first article of the nixt generall misive in maner followeing, viz., that each burgh in obedience to his Majesties lettres and acts of borrowes send thair commissioners sufficiently instructed for keeping the conventione, with ther commissions vnder the comon seal and subscriptione of ther magistrats or comon clerk, testifying them to be men fearing God, of the trew protestant religion publictly professed and authorized by the lawes of this kingdome, without suspitione in the contrair, expert in the comon affairs of the borrowes, merchants, tradsmen, and inhabitants within the said burgh, bearing all portable charges with his neighbours and bears a pairt of thair public burdens, and can tin and win in all ther affairs ; vnder the pain of 100 lib. Scots ; or if the person elected commissioner be not ane merchant traffecquer and residenter that he be testified to be a member representing the said burgh in the current parliament for the tyme, and that the haill commissions be according to this present platforme in all tyme comeing, inviolably to be observed by ilk burgh heirafter, vnder the forsaid penalty, by and attour the casting of thair commissions and the penalty of 1000 marks to be payed be each burgh granting commissions to persons not qualified in maner abonewrittin ; and this instead of all former plate-

acts, reports of burghs.

46. The conventione haveing considered that Æneas Macleod, thair generall clerk, did, conform to the 44 article of the last misive, produce in presence of the convention the compend of the acts, statuts, and constitutions of the generall and particular conventions to July 1700 yeirs, together with the abreviat of the said compend, as also that he had recorded the wholl reports of the particular burghs of this kingdome made by the visitors appointed for that effect in July 1691, with ane Index thair of, which being considered by the conventione they accept therof as good and acceptable service done to the royall borrowes; therfor they appoynt the said compend with the abreviat therof and recording of the particular visitationes, with the said Æneas Macleod his great trouble and paynes in soe usefull and necessarie a work, be containowed as a head of the nixt generall misive.

demission.

47. The same day, Æneas Macleod, generall clerk to the royall borrowes, haveing in presence of the conventione freely demitted his office as clerk in the hands of the generall conventione to be disposed of by them at ther pleasour, and which being considered by the conventione they accept therof and declaires that he hes faithfully served the royall borrowes dureing the wholl tyme of his office, doe therfor allow him the sowme of one thousand pounds Scots mony as a gratuity, and ordains the agent to make present payment therof.

Clerks elected.

48. The conventione, considering the abilities and good qualificationes of Mr George Home and Mr James Stewart, conjunct toun clerks of Edinburgh, and ther fitnes to exerce the office of being conjunct generall clerks to the royall borrowes, they have elected, nominat, and chosen, and by thir presents elects, nominats, and choises the saides Mr George Home and Mr James Stewart conjunct generall clerks to the royall borrowes dureing ther pleasour, and allowes to them the fies, dewes, and emoluments belonging to the said office, with power to them to uplift the same, sicklyck and als freely in all respects as any former clerk or clerks hes been in use to doe, and the saides Mr George Home and Mr James Stewart compeiring accepting thair office, made faith de fidelij, and in presence of the conventione did take the oath of alleadgiance to his Majestie and subscribed the assurraunce.

49. The conventione, considering that Mr John Buchan by his contract at Dundie is bound to produce to the generall conventione sufficient discharges of all the cess whereof he was obleidged to releive the royall borrowes be the said contract, and he haveing declared that the receipts granted to him by the generall receavers and ther deputs were brunt in the lait fire, and haveing in presence of the conventione produced ane extract wnder Robert Rutherfoords hands wherby it is evident that all the cess is payed except eight hundreth and fyftein pownd sterline due to Sir James Oswald and James Dunlop, for clearing of which eight hundreth and fyftein pownd sterline a declaratione wnder the hand of the said James Dunlop is produced bearing that ten thousand merks were payed in therof to Sir James Oswald and him and receipt granted therupon which was brunt in the lait fire, and as for the ballance, extending to two hundreth and fifty nyne pounds, a coppie of arreistment at the instance of Sir John Shaw of Greenock and others for the sowme of one thousand pound sterline in the hands of the said Mr John was produced ; the conventione appoints the said Mr John to pay in the said sowme of two hundreth and fifty nine pound sterline and recover discharge therof against the nixt generall convention, or to consigne the same in the hands of the magistrates of Edinburgh and recover the towns bond therfor.

Clyde therin mentioned, in the haill heads, articles, and claussis therof, with the possession attained by the said burgh of Glasgow and their burgessis and inhabitants by vertew of the saids decreets, wherby they are and have been free of the haill dewties formerlie acclaimed by the magistrats and burgh of Dumbartoun upon accompt of their ships and veshells loading and livering within the river of Clyde, which dewtye and impositions are heirby discharged in all tyme comeing; and the saids magistrats and toun councill of Dumbartoun, for themselves and in name and behalf forsaid, doe heirby bind and obleidge them and their successors in office that they shall never stop, trouble, or molest the burgessis, inhabitants, and others belonging to the toun of Glasgow in tyme comeing in the peaceable possessione of the rights and priviledges decerned in favours of the said burgh of Glasgow by the forsaid decreets and sentances of declarator and absolvitor respective, and the saids magistrats and toun councill of Dumbartoun shall not move any actione, place, or question, against them theranent, nor against their successors in any tyme heir-after; and sicklyke, the saids provost, baillies, and councill of the burgh of Dumbartoun, and deacons of crafts, for themselves and in name and behalf of and takeing burden upon them as said is haveing considered that the dewties wherunto they have right of weyadage, tunnadge, anchoradage, measuradge, dockmeall, cockets, and other dewes quhatsomever payable to the burgh of Dumbartoun by all strangers ships unloading within the river of Clyde, hath created the said toun of Dumbartoun ane great dale of trouble and vexatione, besyds the expensis in uplifting therof, which most ordinarily exceeded the dewes themselves; as also considering that divers and sundrie debats and questions have fallen out betuixt the saids two burghs anent the uplifting of the saids dewes, the town of Glasgow pretending that by vertew of their decreets abovementioned pronounced in their favour that any of the burgessis of Glasgow haveing interest by freight or otherwayes in these strangers ships did make the samen free of dewtie to the burgh of Dumbartoun; lykeas the said burgh of Dumbartoun being oft tymes defrauded of the dewties payable by strangers who had no shift nor excuse but haveing past speedily out of the river befor ever the said burgh of Dumbartoun was acquainted of their comeing therto; and farder, ane other debate hes frequetlie happened anent the touns offers dew and in use to be payed by all strangers who imported goods and merchandize to the said river of Clyde, wherby they stand obleidged to make the first offer of ther goods and mechandize sua imported by them to the saids two burghs of Glasgow and Dumbartoun, at such a price and rate as the said strangers offerers shall not have power or liberty to undersell the samen to others, and it haveing often happened that both the said burghs were disappointed of the benefites of the saids offers by certaine stratagemes and devýces made by the importers as sometyme by consignatione of the goods imported to some of the burgessis of the saids burghs, therby simulating to them a right wheras in effect they had non but of purpose to defraud the saids burghs of their just rychts, and in the mean tyme raising therby ane animosity betuixt the burghs themselves anent the benefites of the saids offers, wherof both were disappointed, and it being therfor agreed that not only the dewes payable by the strangers ships who have no interest in the river of Clyde but also the benefite and priviledge of the touns offers should in all tyme comeing solly appertane and belong to the saids magistrats, toun councill, and comunitie of the burgh of Glasgow. Therfor, and for certaine other onerous caussis after mentioned, the saids provost, baillies, and toun councill of the burgh of Dumbartoun, for themselves and in name and behalf of the deacons of crafts and comunitie of the samen burgh, to have sold, assigned, and disponed from them and their successors in office, lykeas they doe by these presents sell, assigne, and dispone from them and their forsaid successors, to and in favours of the saids provost, baillies, councill and comunitie of the said burgh of Glasgow, and their successors, &c., all and hail the saids dewties formerlie payable to the said burgh of Dumbartane of weyadage, tunnadage, anchoradage, measuradage, dockmeall, cokets, and hail other dewties whatsoever, dew and payable by all ships, barks, &c., wherof the freemen inhabitants of the said burgh of Dumbartane are not ouners or fraighters, and who shall happine to load or unload within the samen river of Clyde in all tyme comeing; and sicklyke all and hail the said burgh of Dumbartoun their share and proportion of any offers dew and lyable to be made by strangers not freemen, inhabitants of the said burgh of Dumbartane, who shall import any goods to the said river of Clyde in tyme comeing, with all right, title, interest, property and possession, als weell petitor as possessor, whilks the saids magistrats councill and comunitie of the said burgh of Dumbartane had, hes, or anywayes may have,

clame or pretend in, and to the saids dewties particularlie above wryten and touns offers above mentioned, and to and in favours of the saids provost, baillies, toun councill and comunity of the said burgh of Glasgow, present and to come, whom they have surrogate and heirby surrogats and substituts in their full pouer, right, title, and place of the premissis for now and ever ; with full power to the saids provost, baillies, and toun councill of Glasgow and their successores, for themselves and in name and behalf above wryten, to intromet with, uplift, ask, creave, and receave the saids dewties of weyadge, tunnadge, anchoradge, measureadge, dockmeall, cockets, and other dewes whatsoever, as also the touns offers in sua farr as the samen did formerlie belong to the said burgh of Dumbartane, with the haill profits, priviledges, emoluments, casualties and dewties belonging therto, and if neid beis to convene, call, follow and pursew therfore, and to use all dilligence and executione for inbringing of the samen, sicklyke and als freele in all respects as the saids provost, baillies, and councill of the burgh of Dumbartoun or their predecessors have done or might have done at any tyme befor the makeing heiroy ; provyding alwayes that thir presents doe noewayes prejudice the said burgh of Dumbartane as to the freedoms, liberties, and immunities of all ships, barks, boats, &c., belonging to or fraughted by the burgessis and freemen inhabitants of the said burgh within the said river of Clyde notwithstanding of what is above dispoyned to the said burgh of Glasgow [Here follows a formal clause of warrandice from fact and deed and procuratory of resignation]. And farder it is expreslie agreed betuixt the representatives of the saids two burghs of Glasgow and Dumbartane that in all tyme heirafter the veshells of whatsoever syce or burden belonging to the burgh of Glasgow, Port Glasgow, and haill burgessis and inhabitants therof, that shall happine to come to the harbor of Dumbartane or any other port or harbor belonging to the said burgh, shall have exemptione from and shall not be lyable unto the payment of any dewtie whatsoever to the said burgh of Dumbartane, and in lyke maner that the haill veshells and boats belonging to the burgessis, inhabitants of the burgh of Dumbartane, are exeemed from and nowayes lyable in payment of any dewty whatsoever at the said burgh of Glasgow, Broom-of-law, Port Glasgow, or any other port or harbor belonging to them, so that both burghs are heirby declaired free at each others ports in all tyme heirefter ; provydeing alwayes, lykeas it is heirby expreslie provyded and declaired that nether of the saids two burghs nor their burgessis and inhabitants shall be allowed to collour the veshells belonging to unfree men under the collour of their oun in any tyme coming. And in respect that the saids provost, baillies, dean of gild and thesaurer of the said burgh of Glasgow haue, for and in consideratione of the premissis, instantly payed to the saids provost, baillies, dean of gild and thesaurer of the said burgh of Dumbartoun, to be employed for the use after specifiet, all and hail the soume of four thousand and five hundreth merks good and usuall Scots money, wherof they hold them weell content, satisfied and payed, and discharges the samen for ever; therfor the saids magistrats of the burgh of Dumbartane doe heirby bind and obleidge them and declair that the forsaid soume shall be applyed by the said burgh of Dumbartane, for payment of their burghs debt pro tanto, to the effect it may therby appear that the forsaid transacione is reasonable and onerous and that the successors in office of both the saids burghs may have no ground to apprehend that this present contract is proceeded upon frae any collusion of the present magistrats and counccills but upon fair and just grounds tending to the benefite and advantage of both the saids burghs. of the royall borrows of Scotland, being the third state of the kingdome. Great Sir,—Albeit that most of your royall borrows have alreadie upon this occatione, with the generality of your other good subjects, made ther sewerall addresses of loyaltie and deutie to your Majestie, yeit wee have longed with some impatience for this opportunitie to give this united testimony and assurance of our sincere affection and zeal for your Majesties person and government according to our bound deutie. It was the state of your royall borrowes that in the late unhappie reigne did suffer the first and greatest attacks of arbitrarie government, whereby for the more easie introducing of popery and slaverie our rights and liberties were in a maner subverted. What thanks then can wee render to Almighty God and to your Majestie, as his choisen instrument, for that great deliverance wrought for us by your Majestie from such ane eminent ruine. Nor can wee be less sensible of these great and manifold blessings of peace, truth, libertie, and righteousness that your Majestie hath ever since procured and maintained for us, with all the labour and hazards yow have undergone in your oune royall persone in a long and heaveie warr, whill at the same tyme wee enjoyed in all tranquility these most desireable fruits of your Majesties most auspicious and rightfull reigne over us. These are the obligations that we stand under to your Majestie, and which most perpetuallie engadge us to all the loyalty, fidelity, gratitude, and affection possible wee can expres, and more especiallie to resent and detest with the greatest abhorrance the arrogant injurie offered by the French King to your Majestie, and all your kingdoms, in owneing the pretendit Prince of Wales as king of this and your Majesties other dominions, contrair to your Majesties undoubted right and title soe righteously and eminently established and owned both by God and man. And therfor wee doe in all sinceritie, and with all that faithfulness whereof wee are capable, assure your Majestie that wee will adhere to, mantain, and defend your Majesties royall person and most rightfull government as our only undoubted lord and soveraigne against the said pretendit Prince of Wales and all your Majesties other enemies to the outmost of our power, earnestlie beseeching almighty God long to perserve and ever to prosper your Majesties persone and government for the defence of the true protestant religion, the maintaineing the peace of Europe, and the confort and happiness of all your Majesties dominions. May it please your Majestie, [etc.] Signed by all the members of the conventione.

Address to his Majestie.

11. The conventione haveing heard and considered the draughts of three sewerall letters to be sent to his Majestie, states of Zealand and towne of Campheir, brought in by the comity appointed for that effect, they approve of the samen, and ordains the saides letters to be recorded, whereof the tenor followes: May it please your Majestie,—Wee the representatives of your royall borrowes mett in a generall convention have received your royall letter of the sixth instant touching the complaints made by the states of Zealand and magistrats of the towne of Campheir of the violation of the staple contract, and can assure your Majestie since the same was entered unto wee have not been negligent to have it dewly observed as the prosecutiones made by our agent from tyme to tyme of sewerall transgressors will testifie; but in obedience to your Majesties letter, and for your Majesties full satisfactiōe in this affair, wee have again [taken] the wholl to our consideratione, and to cutt of all complaints for the futur, have in the first place ratified and revived all former acts for the exact and strict observance of the staple port, and have choisen two of our own number to goe with the conservator to Zealand betuixt and the first of March, and ther to adjust with the magistrats of Campheir and states of Zealand all matters for remedie and redress of complaints, and to concert the strictest methods for the observance of the staple port in tyme comeing. Wee have now lyckwayes made chois of and fully impowered a sufficient person and weell acquainted with the affaires of the staple for prosecuting all transgressors and particularly those sett down in the list sent from Campheir, and wee have farder resolved that the conservator shall reside for heirafter at Campheir, but because he hes not at present personall safety to reside there, by reason of ane sentance of the houff of Holland standing against him, at the instance of one master Ryx, [whereof we] have formerly complained as contrairie to our privieledges, wee doe in all humilitie beseech your Majestie to interpose effectwally in this affair with the states of Zealand that this sentance may be taken of soe as he may reside ther with safety and freedome. These things wee hope will be satisfieing to your Majestie, and both in these and all thinges els wee shall constantly endeavour to aquyte ourselves in all deutie and loyalty as becomes, great Sir, [etc.] Signed in presence and by warrant of the conventione by PATT. Right honourable,—Wee desired the lord provost of Edinburgh to give yow the reason why your letter of the 18th October last could not soe soon be taken under consideratione as wee would have inclined. Wee have since had the honour to receive exhibiteing to us sewerall complaints of the breach of the staple contract and desireing that effectwall methods may be taken for remead thereof in the future, and that for this end commissioners may be sent over fully instructed by us to treat with your honors in order to take away all grounds of complaints. Wee have allwayes been and still are desirous that the said contract be inviolably observed, and to remove as much as is in our power all obstructiones therof, wee have at present in compliance with your honours desire made such inquirie into the affair as is possible at this distance and sent over two of our number, viz., the provosts of Perth and Aberdeen, with full instructiones to make a farder tryall and to treat with your honours and use ther outmost endeavours to adjust all differences. They are persons of such ability and integrity that wee doubt not but they will give all possible satisfacione as to the particulars complained of or what may be thought needfull on the place. The lord conservator is appointed to goe alongst with them and to reside at the staple port in tyme comeing. Wee have also revived former acts against the non observers of the staple and laid down effectwall methods for puting the laws against contraveeners formerly and in tyme comeing in full and vigorous execution. These, wee hope, shall be successful means to remove all the present greivances anent the staple, and wee shall be verie glad to doe anything that may be judged farder needfull to give your honours inteir satisfacione, it being our cordiall desire to maintain that good understanding hes allwayes been betuixt us. mannadgers should not have a vote in this affair, and that whatever were carried should not be prejudicial to their burghs their seeking redress at any judicatorie they thought fitt; and declaired they would give it in nixt sederunt. Thereafter the said [act] being put to the vote, the commissioners for Annan and Montrose protested that this was caried without a contradictorie vote and thairupon took instruments. Follows the protestatione tacken by the said Captain Philp Enster and his adherents: —I, the commissioner for Enster Easter, doe in our name and in name of such other burghes present or absent as shall adhere to us, protest, that in regaird the tack of the forraigne customes and excyse hes been sett to and taken in name of the borrowes, and that the comon good of the wholl burghs of this natione [becomes] lyable to his Majestie for payment of the tack deuty therof, and seeing that the manadgement was comitted by the borrowes to certain of our number who have never yeit compted therfor, but have expresly declined to exhibit ther bookes of manadgement to the royall borrowes to be inspected by them that therby ther loss or profeit might appear, whereupon it was most justly decerned and ordained by the last convention or meeting of borrowes, holden att Edinburgh in the moneth of January last by past, that they should exhibit and produce thair haill books in relatione to the saides customes befor the comitty then appointed by them, and albeit they were frequently desired by the said comity soe to doe, yeit they most unjustly declined the same, soe that the comity was necesitat to decern against them in the said matter, and albeit the said comity was legall and the wholl steps of ther procedour warrantable, and which ought to be expresly approven of in this present convention, yeit the authoritie of the said convention and comity therof beginns now to be contraverted and impugned; therfor wee, and all our adherents and such as shall after adheire to us, albeit absent for the tyme, heirby decline all manadgers, collectors, surveyors, and all others employed by them or haveing dependance upon them in the said matter, from sitting, treating, argueing or voteing in this affair of the customes, as being pairties intrested and consequently incapable to judge theranent; and in respect the affairs of the customes hes alreadie been tabled befor the last conventione and comitted and sentance pronounced by the comity therupon, wee for ourselves and all those adhering as said is, protest that in caice this present conventione proceed any further in this matter then to approve of the comities report presently in the clerks hands, that it shall be but prejudice of our own burghs which wee represent and of all the burghs presently adhering or that shall afterwards adhere to us their intrests and rights in the forsaid tack of the forraigne customes and excyse, and but prejudice to us and our adherents to quarrell and impugne any further procedour of this present conventione, consisting of soe great ane number of manadgers and other dependants, and to prosecute and persew our respective rights and intrests befor any judges or judicatories within this kingdome; and lyckwayes in regard ther hes been soe many representatives of the burghs royall debarred from sitting here and representing ther saides burghs, which in it self renders this ane restricted and limited conventione, and that all judges are obleidged by the law and practique of the kingdome to give their oath de fidei administratione in their respective stationes, and that it hes been refused, in ther respective, by the members of the committie in this conventione to whom the alteration and cast of the ten pound on the stent roll was committed to give their said oath de fidei administratione; therfor wee and all that adheres or shall adhere unto us as saidis, doe protest against any alteratione of the said stent roll by this present conventione as not having ane full, free, and legall warrand to doe the samen, and heirby protests for all coast, skaith, and damnadge wee may be put to in obtaineing redress in any of the premissis, whereupon wee take instruments. To which protestatione the borrowes underwritin adhered and desired their adherance to be recorded in manner underwritin. Sic subscribitur: Ph. Anstruther for Anstruther Easter. Jo. Dounan, assessor for Edinburgh, in absence of my lord dean gild, principall, adheres to the forsaid protestation in soe far as concernes the tack of the customes. Ansuers to the test.

To the which protestatione, its answered, the forsaid convention haveing fully considered the same, they find the forsaid protest groundless, illegall and undeutiful, for the reasones followeing :—(1^{mo}) Because they decline all manadgers, collectors, surveyors, &c., as being pairties, quhilk can nowayes be allowed, in regaird the forsaid tack as they aknowledge was taken in name of the borrowes and the manadgement comitted to a considerable comittie of ther number, wherof the meaneing and import could never be that these intrusted in that comity should be therby excluded from all farder treating or voteing in that affair and made pairties subject to a censour and controll of the remaineing borrowes who according to the taxt roll might have a far less intrest in the wholl tack ; but farder it might happen if the forsaid manadgers and all others depending on them in the said matter were to be declined and excluded from farder treating and voteing therein, that a verie smal remaineing pairt of the royall burghs might become judges and controlers of the wholl ; but the truth is, the royall borrowes became pairtners in this tack and are to be regulat be the rules of ordinarie societies, but soe it is that members haveing particular offices in any ordinar societie were never theirby thought to be excluded from their vote, and if the convention shall be farder understood to be a court haveing its dew authoritie, it was never heard that a comity appointed by the same court for the better manadgement of its concernes was excluded from haveing a vote even upon their own manadgement and the report their of. (2^{do}) The last convention in January was but a convention pro re nata, and when ever a convention pro re nata doth medle in anie incident it is without contraversie and the constant practice of the royall borrowes that all its medleings and actings are subject to be ratified and controlled by the solemn anwall convention in July, and that less they be therin ratified they have not their compleit authoritie and force. (3^{tio}) Its unheard off that the convention, haveing undoubted power to approve or disapprove what past in a former extraordinarie conventione or ther comittie, should be protested against in case they proceed any farder then to approve, which is plainly to take away the power and liberty of the convention. (4^{to}) For the protesters protesting that this conventiones proceedings be but prejudice to ther respective burghs, it is beleived to be beyond ther comission and contrairie to that respect and defference that particular burghs owe and have ever payed to the authoritie of the conventione. EDINBURGH.

9 July 1702.
Answers to the forgoing protest.
(5^{to}) This convention haveing debarred none from sitting therein which are not expresly excluded by the rules and acts of the convention, often ratified in parliament and constantly observed by all conventiones if not pro tempore dispenced with, soe that this peaper doth verie groundlessly and undeutiffully call this a limited conventione. (6^{to}) Its altogether unheard of that a comitty appoynted by any meeting should be required and obleidged to take a new oath de fidei, since their first oath and deuty doth equallie obleidge them in comitties as in full meetings, and they are no otherwayes judges in comities then in ther full meetings, and the same oath bindes for both, soe that the alteratione of the taxt roll belonging undoubtedly by acts of parliament to the convention of borrowes they might verie justly and legally delegat the same to a comity of ther own number, and to require a new oath of that comity is both illegall and superfluous and doth manifestly bear ane undue suspicion and reflection upon the persones named upon the comitie who are undoubtedly still under the force and obligatione of ther first oath. For these reasones, and others that may be added, the convention have judged and doe judge the forsaid protestation to be groundless, illegall, and undeutifull as said is, reserveing to the convention the farder censour of the protestouris as they shall see cause.

8. It being agreed "not to alter the taxt roll but the ten pound being the Taxt roll. quota for the unfree trade," the convention, on the recommendation of a committee, proportioned the said ten pounds as follows:—to the burgh of Perth an addition of £2, Dundie £1 7s., Aberdeen 10s. 6d., Stirling 4s., Glasgow 16s., Hadingtoun 12s., Dysart 8s., Kirkcaldie £1, Montrose 8s., Coupar 7s., Enster Easter 3s., Inverness 6s. 8d., Bruntisland 4s., Inverkeithing 3s., Kinghorn 3s., Irvine 6d., Pittenweem 4s., Dumfermling 8s. 4d., Enster Wester 1s., Dumbartoun 6d., Elgine 7s., Nairne 1s., Forras 1s., Lauder 1s., Queensferry 1s., Stranraer 1s., and Campbeltown 1s. 6d.

9. Appointed committees to meet with the sheriffs of Murray and Nairne Forras, Nairne. and endeavour to adjust the differences between them and the burghs of Forras and Nairne respectively, for holding courts in any other places than these burghs which are the head burghs of the shires.

10. Cautioners presented for James Douglas, staple factor at Campheir. Douglas,

Jedburgh.

18. Having considered petition of Jedburgh, the convention appointed the agent to make payment to the burgh of 500 marks.

Dumfreise.

19. The convention haveing considered the petition given in by the burgh of Dumfreise, representing the sade and deplorable condition thereof through the late fire that happened ther, wherein fyfty families were brunt out and the most of them left in a poor and mean conditione, doe therfor recomend to the wholl royall borrows to be liberall in ther contribution for their releiff how soon the lords of Her Majesties privie councill shall emitt ther proclamation for that effect, and appoint the former visitours to give in ther report.

20. The conventione haveing heard and considered the petitione given in by the burgh of Tayne, mentioneing that it is nottourly knowen that they have been thir ten yeares bypast a head of the misive for supply to help the reparatione of ther tolbooth and steeple, and that severall of ther number hes been supplied is made appear by the records, and the said burgh haveing the misfortoun of late that one Sinclair of Rater, being incarcerat within thair Tolbooth severall moneths, did in Apryll last make his escape by breacking through the rume quher he was and by false keyes to the outer door, and he being arrested by sewerall of his creditors [for] upwards of four thousand pownds Scots, your petitioners are distressed for payment therof, which will undoubtedly ruine us except the honorable convention take our caice to consideratione and appoint the agent to concurr with your petitioners in persewing the said Sinclair of Rater upon the publict expences since he is solvent, your petitioners being most willing to repay what expenssis shall be debursed therin after wee shall recover payment of Rater; which being considered by the conventione they heirby appoynt ther agent to concurr with ther petitioners upon the publict expences in persewing Rater befor the privie councill or any other judicator, and to deburse what mony shall be needfull therin; and the agent to proceed therin by advyce of the comity anent the staple.

5. The convention takeing to their consideration that it was necessary for them to clear and condescend upon the reasons why this present convention did not preceisly observe the dyet of the first Tuesday of July as hes been formerly keeped and was appoynted by the last generall convention in July j^m vij^c and two years, therfor they doe hereby declair that the samen was done for the reasons followeing :—(1^o) Because the parliament was then sitting and that seweralls of the members therof hade comissions to attend the generall convention, which being to meett at Glasgow these who were members of both could not be present at the convention. (2^{do}) There were most important affairs relative to the royall borrowes depending befor the parliament, as particularly the ten pound of the taxt roll payable by the unfree tradders, and lyckwayes the trade of the royall borrowes which was under much decay, soe that it was necessary the members should attend. (3^{tho}) The records of the royall borrowes were inspected and it was found that in anno j^m vj^c and eighty one that the lord provost of Edinburgh for the tyme did upon the emergent of the sitting of a session of parliament adjourn the generall convention, which was thereafter ratified by the generall convention and thanks given to the lord provost of Edinburgh for the samen. All which being dewly considered, the generall convention are weell satisfied that the forsaid lait adjournment was reasonably done with a dew regaird to the weell fare of the estaits of borrowes, and therfor they doe ratife, confirme, and altered.

6. The convention doe alter the present plateforme in maner following, viz., that in caice the person elected commissioner be not merchant, traffecquer, and constant residenter within the burgh which he designs to represent, it shall not be a sufficient qualificatione that his commission testifie him to be ane proprietar of lands holding burgage in the said burgh to the value of three thousand merks except he shall upon his solemn oath depon upon the verity of the said attestatioun and value of the lands, and that he shall not be admitted as a member of the said conventione untill he depon accordingly, but prejudice in all other particulars.

Act anent
Ewan M'Grigor
and partners.

7. Anent the article of the misive anent Ewan Macgrigor and his manufactorie of old broad cairds, ther was ane universall complaint of the comissioners against him that he haveing obtained ane patent for the manufactoreing of cairds hes upon pretence therof procured a heavie impositione to be laid on old cairds imported and that his cairds are insufficient, and that by vertew of ane decreit surreptisiously obtained he forces the leidges to buy the same, or otherwayes by undirect methods puts them to trouble and expences, whereupon the conventione remitts this affair to Edinburgh, Hadingtowne, Lithgow, Glasgow, Dumfreise, Dumbartoun, Bamff, and Innerurie, with power to them to call such other burghs as shall be at Edinburgh for the tyme and to receave the complents of the borrowes against him, and to prosecut the samen befor the lords of her Majesties privie councilor befor the parliament as shall be found most expedient, and to proceed therein with all dilligence.

8. The convention delayed the alteration of the tax roll till next general convention, reserving power to relieve such burghs as are most heavily burdened by the ten pounds of the tax roll appointed to be paid by unfree traders.

Tax roll.

9. "Here follows the accompts of the missive dewes for the years j^m vij^c, j^m vij^c and one, and j^m vij^c and two years." The disbursements in the account from July 1700 to July 1701 amount to £14,793, 2s. 4d.; for 1701-2, to £12,556; 1s. 4d.; and for 1702-3, to £11,124, 15s. 4d.

Accompts.

10. Appointed the agent to pay to Æneas Macleod of Cadboll, £1136, 4s., due to him as a creditor of John Buchan, agent of the convention, which sum is already allowed to the agent in his stated accounts.

Agents' creditors.

11. The conventione considering that the great expence of incidents payed out by the agent does ly verie heavie upon the royall borrowes, therfor to prevent the lyck expence in tyme comeing they dischaarge the agent for heirafter to pay out any incidents for the accompt of the royall borrowes without a speciall warrand from the royall borrowes themselves, or the lord provost of Edinburgh for the tyme; and the conventione declaires that in case the agent shall deburse any incidents without such warrants that the same shall not be allowed in his accompts, and that the warrants soe to be given contain the reasons, and the saids incidents to be under the recognizance of the nixt generall conventione.

Act anent the incidents.

12. The generall convention haveing considered ane letter from her Majestie anent the staple port,* and after consideratione therof finds that a great many of ther members being obleidged to repair to the parliament, soe that the convention have not tyme to goe through the particulars contained in the said letter soe as to give her Majestie ane present answer, they doe hereby nominat and appoint [a committee] to consider hir Majesties letter and to examine the report given in by the lait commissioners sent to Campheir, with the documents and instructiones therof, as also the letters direct to them by the states of Zealand and town of Campheir, and all other petitiones and reports anent the staple, with such answers as shall be offered be the lord conservator therunto,

13. Having considered a petition of certain merchants in Glasgow, the convention appointed the cautioners of John Hamilton, factor in Campheir, to see and answer the petition.

Act in favours
of Margrat Orrock.

14. The conventione haveing considered the petition given in by Margrat Orrock, relict of George Oliphant, late provost of Perth, and the reasones therin represented, and albeit they are convinced that ther is no legal obligatione upon the conventione to pay the same, yeit considering that the defunct dyed in the conventions service and the relicts circumstances, they appoynt the agent to pay to the said Margrat Orrock eight hundreth pounds Scots as a gratuity for defraying the funerall chairges of the defunct.

Act in favours
of Provost Allardes.

15. The conventione haveing considered the petition given in by John Allardes, lait provost of Aberdeen, and what is therin represented, and albeit he hes no legall clame against the conventione for his expences debursed by him in going to Campheir in order to setle and adjust all differrences at the staple port, yeit notwithstanding they appoynt thair agent to make payment to the said John Allardes of the sowme of fyfty pound, sterline, and that as a gratuity for the said service, and delayses the said petition, with Mrs Oliphants petition, to be taken under any farder consideratione untill the fynes dew be the transgressors of the staple port be made effectwall ; and in the mean tyme ordains the said John Allardes to lodge the report of his negotiation in the clerks handes untill which tyme the agent is heirby discharged to make payment of the above sowme.

£300 sterling apportioned amongst several burghs.

16. Referring to the 8th act of this convention, they appointed the sum of £300 sterling to be divided by the committee appointed to meet anent the staple amongst the burghs most heavily burdened by the laying upon them of the ten pounds of the tax roll appointed to be paid by unfree traders. The convention also remitted to the committee to consider the petitions and condition of several burghs.

James Armour.

17. Remitted to a committee to consider the petition given in by James Armour, merchant, with his project relative thereto.

18. The conventione haveing considered the petition given in by the maisters of St Leonards Colledge in St Andrews and the reasons therin represented, they appoynt the agent to make payment to them of the sowme of three hundreth marks as a gratuity given to them for assisting the reparation of the said colledge.

summonds and makè the forsaid intimatione and deburse what is needfull theranent, and manadge the wholl affair by advyce of the said comitie.

7. Sir James Smollet did present to the conventione the draught of ane letter to be sent to the burghs off barronies and regalities, which being publictly read was approven and ordained to be recorded and to be signed by the lord provost of Edinburgh, ther preses, in ther name, wherof the tenor followes: Gentlemen,—The last anwall conventione at Glasgow did appoynt ane conventione to be called by the lord provost of Edinburgh to give ordors anent what might be fitt to doe in reference to the unfree trade, and wee haveing accordingly mett and considered the remitt made to us by the said anwall conventione, with the acts of parliament impowering us anent the unfree traders, wee have resolved to condescend upon the sewerall proportions whereof they are to releive us, at our generall meeting in Glasgow, Jully nixt, and to proportione the samen with all the justice and equalitie that wee are capable of. Meantyme wee thought it our deuty upon our pairt to advertise yow as wee have done others concerned to be present at that conventione, and wee think your own intrest will prevail with yow for that effect, that by your informatione wee may the better know the circumstances of the burghs of barronie and regality which may direct us in our procedour, haveing no other intention but to adjust the sewerall proportiones according to the condition of the unfree traders; and because this referrs only to the payments in tyme comeing wee are obleidged for ansuering the trust committed to us to send lyckwayes ane citatione for payment of the bygons, that wee may be in the course of dilligence, but wee intend not to proceed to any decisione therin untill first the convention in Jully be over. Meantyme be pleased to comunicat this letter to the unfree traders within your jurisdictione that they may not pretend ignorance.

Unfree traders.

8. The convention, for the better discovering of the unfree traders, recommends to the haill royall borrowes to send in to the agent, with the lists of the unfree traders within ther precints, lists of all the freemen, burgesses within ther respective burghs, that packs and peills with unfreemen or keeps chopos in unfree burghs or places for retailling of forraigne comodities, and that betuixt and the said third Tuesday of Febwarie.

sion of clerk,
6 March 1704.

FOLLOUES the ACT of the TOUN COUNSELL of DUMFREIS anent the admission of a clerk, appoynted to be recorded by the 26 act of the last generall convention holden at Glasgow wpon the fourth day of July 1704 years.

At Dumfreis the sixth of March j^m vij^c and four years. The magistrats and toun counsell, considering the many great inconveniencies that hitherto have and hereafter may redound to the prejudice of the good toun, magistrats and toun counsell therof, by admitting of persons to the office of toun clerkship ad vitam aut culpam, which admissions in favours of the persone elected are thereafter procured by them to be ratified by the burrows, they thereafter (as hath been found by experience) have not demained thamselves with that deference and regard, nor did not give that attendance as became servants to the good toun, or as in gratitude wes due to the touns liberalities and benevolence to them, and otherwise have sometymes had a hand in making of parties of the counsell to the detriment and damage therof, which should not be done by any persone intrusted in that office; therfor, for remeid therof in tyme coming, the magistrates and toun counsell of this burgh enact and ordain that after the deceis or fault of John Herries, their present clerk, no person be elected toun clerk of this burgh but durante bene placito allanerly, so that it shall be leisum to the magistrats and toun counsell to turn any persone out of his office of clerkship at their pleasure and to put in any person they think fitt in his place, and that any clerk to be hereafter admitted obliges himself to accept of the office in these termes, and to acquiesce, submitt to, and obtemper any act of the magistrats and toun counsell, whom he is to accept as his sole judges ther exclusive of all others, exaucterating, divesting, and depriving him of the said office, without any appellatione, opposition, or contradictione whatsoever on his part, and that wnder the pain and penalty of ane thousand pounds Scots, attour performance of the premisses, which he is to oblige himself to make payment of to the toun theasaurer for the tyme in name and behalf of the then magistrats and toun counsell. And further, it is heirby enacted and declared that ilk member of the counsell who hereafter shall either vott the rescinding of this present act, or in contrair hereof, shall be ipso facto lyable in the sum of tuo hundred pounds for which he may be pursued either at the instance of the then present or of any the then late magistrats and counsellors of this burgh, one half thereof to be payed as aforesaid and the other half of the said tuo hundred pounds to the pursuer. And appoynts ane extract of this act to be laid befor the next generall conventione of the burroues for their approbation and ratification hereof. Extracted be ws, wnder subscribing, at the appoyntment of the said counsell, Sic subscribitur: ALEX. BARKLAY; WM. CORRIE.

20. Appointed the agent to pay to the relict of George Oliphant, late provost of Perth, who died abroad in the service of the burghs, £20 sterling, "in leu of all she can clame wpon account of her said deceist husbands service or any manner of way whatsoever."

21. Having considered petition of Inerary, craving the convention to take their indigent case to consideration, they appointed the agent to pay to the burgh an equivalent to the present augmentation of one shilling of their proportion of the tax roll.

22. Allowed the burgh of Bruntisland 500 merks Scots for repairing their harbour if it should be found that the sum formerly given was rightly applied.

23, 24. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade (1) a petition by Sir John Shaw of Greenock craving the discharge of annualrent on the sums paid by him, and (2) a petition by Thomas Crauford of Carsburn craving the convention to accept twenty pence of the tax roll for the unfree trade of his town of Crauford-dyke.

25. Appointed a committee "to take off Sir Robert Forbes his accompts both as to the missive dues and unfree trade and report."

26. The convention, "considering that severalls of the burghs of barronie and regalitie and unfree traders will be willing to agree with the royall burroues for the communication of trade," appointed a committee to meet on the first Thursday of each month till next general convention to "agree with those who will make such reasonable transactions with them for ther unfree trade" from 1st July 1697 till 1 July 1706. The convention also remitted to the committee the whole affairs relating to the staple port and the complaints against the master of the old broad manufactory.

27. Remitted to the committee on staple affairs a petition by Alexander Clark and John Frazer, merchants in Inverness, for damages sustained by wrongous imprisonment for two months in Campheer, and also a petition by William Adam, merchant in Culross, against John Hamilton, factor in Campheer.

28. Considering that the present tax roll, which is to continue for five years, has been made "upon the account that some of the royall burroues are increased and others decreased in their trade, yet, inregard that befor the expiring of the saids five years the course of trade may circulat and be removed to other places," the convention resolved to receive at their annual meetings in July such representations as should be made by any of the burghs concerning the decay of their trade and to "applye the superplus fund of the wnfree trade, after Sir Robert Forbes, ther agent, is compleitly reimbursed of his wnder takings theranent, for the use and behove of the said royall burroues as they shall see cause."

29. The convention considering that Sir Robert Forbes, their agent, is content to relieve the burghs of £6 of the tax roll for five years yet to come, resolved to appropriate what shall be paid in by the unfree traders to be applied towards EDINBURGH.

Accompts,
unfree trade.

38. On report of the committee appointed to audit the agent's account with the money paid by the unfree burghs for their bygone trade from July 1697 to July 1705, appointed to be applied towards payment of the proportion of £5 of the tax roll from July 1704 to July 1705, the convention found that he had paid £3600 Scots of cess to her Majesty's depute receiver and £600 Scots of missive dues; and that he has received from the town and parish of Weems £446, 8s. 7d. and from Sir John Shaw of Greenock £3125, 0s. 1d. Scots; leaving £628, 11s. 4d. due to the agent, which is to be allowed to him out of what he shall afterwards receive from unfree traders.

Inverbervie.

39. Appointed a committee to visit the burgh of Inverbervie and report as to their common good and trade.

Conservator.

40. Remitted a petition by the conservator to the committee anent the staple affairs and unfree trade.

Gordon, factor
at Camphier.

41. Remitted to the same committee a petition by William Gordon, late factor at Camphier, showing that in 1693 "he had received a part of the vaccant steepand due to the minister at Camphier, and by order of Sir Androw Kennedy, conservator, did pay the same out towards the repairing of the Scots church at Camphier, and therfor craving to be exonered therof and to be free from all trouble and molestation upon that account."

Sir Alexander
Cumming's gift
produced.

42. Sir Alexander Cumming of Coulter, advocat, having produced to the conventione ane gift under the great seall, making and constituting him her Majesties resident and conservator of the Scots priviledges in the Netherlands, with ane leter from her Majestie direct to them relative therto, both which being read in convention, and the leter appoynted by them to be recorded in the burrou books after dissolving of the conventione, the said Sir Alexander Cumming therupon took instruments in the clerks hands, and Sir Andrew Kennedy protested that the reading or receiving of the said Sir Alexander Cumming's commissione might be without prejudice of his standing gift and without prejudice of his plea of declarator, reduction, and improbation depending befor the lords of counsell and sessione, and therupon also took instruments; all which being considered by the convention they remitted the same to the staple committe, recomending to the said committe to wryt ane ansuer to her Majesties gracious leter in relatione therto; and sicklyke remitts to the said committe to consider the leter from the magistrats of Camphier and return ane answer therto. EDINBURGH.

13 July 1705.

43. Ordained the agent to pay to the burgh of Lochmaben £100 Scots "for building and repairing ther tolbuith;" as also to Neugallauay £40, to Stranraer £40, and to Sanquhar £40, "in consideration of the low and decayed condition of the saids burghs." Lochmaben, Neugalloway, Stranraer and Sanquhar.

44. Appointed the agent to pay certain salaries and gratuities to the clerks, servants and others. Sallaries and gratuities.

45. Remitted to the committee anent the staple port and unfree trade, a petition by John Allerdice, merchant in Campheir, to be admittid a staple factor there. John Alerdice.

46. Dissolved the present meeting and appointed next general convention to be held at Edinburgh in July 1706. Act of adjournment.

47. Fined each absent burgh, except Cullen which was excused, in the sum of 1000 merks Scots. Absent burghs fined.

FOLLOUES her Majesties letter to the Royall Burroues, appointed to be recorded by the 42d act of the preceding General Convention.

Sic superscribitur : ANNE, R.

Trusty and well beloved, we greet you well. We wrott to yow formerly concerning some complaints that had been made to us by the states of Zeland and toun of Campheer, and by the envoy of the states of Holland, of the violations and infringments of the staple contract and of the great loss and damage sustained by the inhabitants of the said state and toun, thereby desireing you to examin the report of your commissioners sent the year befor to Campheer for enquiring into that affair and adjusting differences, and likewise to consider the representatione made by the toun of Campheer, and by reason our laws, their priviledges, or the treaties with the states of Zeland and toun of Campheer, have been violated or disappoynted, in order to have these abuses rectified and redressed and the transgressors punished ; to which letter we received ane answer by your committee appoynted for that purpose wherin they refer us to the report of these commissioners which ye sent over and other papers relating therto ; and it appearing plainly to us that the violations and infractions made of the staple contract and the bad consequences therof have proceeded from the misbehaviour and malversations of Sir Andrew Kennedy of Cloburn and John Veir Kennedy, his son, we have thought fitt to lay them aside, and have nominated and appointed Sir Alexander Cuming, a person well recomended to us as fitt and qualified for that office, who we hope will be very acceptable to you, and we further desire that no disput that may arise in relatione to the commissione which we have granted in favours of Sir Alexander Cuming may be any impediment or delay to your giving him all the encouragement possible upon your part, and that you will receive him with such chearfulness as may enable him to be the more serviceable towards the firm observance of the publick faith, the promoting of the trade and manufactur of our ancient kingdome, and the preserving your rights and priviledges and the laws relating therto, which we are firmly resolved to maintain as wee are to discountenance all that have been any impediment or occasione of the breach therof ; and so wee bid you heartily fare well. Given at our court at St James's, the 7th day of Apryll 1705, and of our reign the fourth year. By her Maiesties command. Sic subscribitur :

The same day, wes presented to the committe ane extract of a letter from her Majestie to the lords of her thesaurie anent the outrigging the ship, the Royall William, wherof the tenor folloues :—Ut superscribitur : ANNE, R. Right trustie, [etc.,] wee greet yow well. Whereas our parliament, last session, gave a fund for outrigging our ship the Royall William, and ordered that the royall burrowes should outrigg the friggots with all couvenienie, and recomended to the lords of our theasury to assigne so much to them of the said fund as shall be debursed by them for that end, notwithstanding of which order of parliament, wee are informed that the royall burrowes do decline to advance what money is necessary for the said purpose, and we taking into our royall consideratione how necesar it is for securing of trade that the said ship be speedily outrigged and sent to sea, and that seeing the royall burrowes, as being the chief traders, will reap the greatest benefite therby, we think it most just and reasonable that they should advance what money is necessary for that effect in pursueance of the order of parliament, therfor it is our will and pleasure, and we hereby authorize and require yow, to call the royall burrows and signifie this our pleasure to them, and that we expect their ready compliance therwith, and on their so doing yow are to assigne them to so much of the moneths supply granted be the parliament for the said use as shall be debursed by them for that end, but if they refuse yow are to acquaint us therwith that we may give such farder orders as are necessary theranent; for doing of which this shall be your warrand, and so we bid yow heartily farewell. Given at our court at St Jameses, the thirty one day of January 170⁵/₆, and of our reign the fourth year. By her Majesties command. Sic subscribitur: MAR. Which being considered by the committe, they were unanimously of opinione the calling of a generall conventione wes not absolutly necessar, and that it would be acceptable service to the royall burrowes to save them the trouble and expence of meeting on that occasione, but in obedience to her Majesties commands, and also considering that it wes the interest of the natione, and the royall burrows in particular, the trade of the natione should be secured, they were also unanimously of opinion that a consideration or premium should be given by the royall burrows to those who would advance the summs necessar upon the said account, for the which premium the royall burrows should be bound, and for their reimbursement they are to be assigned by the lords of theasury to so much of the moneths cess laid on for that effect as shall be advanced by them; and apoynts the burghs of Edinburgh, Stirling, Kirkcaldie, Montross, Dumbarton and Bamf, as a sub-committe, to call Captain Gordon and make a computation what money may be necessar to be advanced upon the said account and to comone with the obtained by your conquering armes in the Netherlands under the wise conduct of your valiant and victorious generall the duke of Marleacknowledge the great and signall blessings we enjoy under your Majesties most happy and glorious reign by reaping the advantages of a tranquil peace whill many other nations suffer under the sadd consequences of a dreadfull warr. To curb the insolence and reduce the exorbitant pouer of ane faithless monarch and rescue the sinking empire from imminent danger, and when upon the brink of ruine and confusione to recover kingdomes from ane usurper and restore the same to their lawfull prince ; to defeat, and that with fener numbers, armies (impiously boasted to be invincible) are actions which future ages will admire and non befor your sacred Majestie could pretend to. Allow us, great Sovereigne, with the rest of Christendome to rejoyce and stand astonished at these great conquests which attend your Majesties victorious forces and which Heaven is pleased to bestow as a return of your Majesties examplar piety and goodness, wherby we have all ground to hope that the usurping French monarch shall be rendered wncapable any more to disturb the quiet of Europe or persecut the protestant interest therin and unavoidably to acknowledge his error in not ouning your Majesties just right to the crown of Brittain. Goe on, unparallelled Princess, and we shall still wish and pray that your Majestie may live long and reign gloriously, triumphing victoriously over all your enemies, and reigning in the hearts and affections of your people, that your Majestie may still hold the ballance of Europ, that victory and conquest may still attend your forces by sea and land, that the protestant interest at home and abroad may flourish and be further confirmed by the wisdom of your royall counsells and the admirable success of your conquering armes, and that your Majestie may be the glorious instrument of uniting your tuo kingdomes of Scotland and England in a more strict and firm union, to the advantage of both nations in their religious and civil concerns, as we firmly believe to be the duty of, may it please your Majestie, your Majesties most loyall and most obedient subjects and servants. Week.

23. Appointed the commissioner from Week to give in to the agent a list of the unfree traders in Thurso.

Ratification of a charter by Elgin.

24. Ratified and approved "ane dispositione and chartor of ane useless piece of ground neer to the burgh of Elgin called the Cattails, disponed by the magistrats and toun counsell of Elgin to William Paull and David Brymmer, burgesses ther, to be holden few of the said burgh," dated 13th July 1703; and authorised the burgh to expose to roup a rood and a half of land and apply the price for payment of the town's debts.

Kirkwall,
Queensferry.

25, 26. Remitted petitions by the burghs of Kirkwall and Queensferry to the committee for unfree trade which is to meet after the dissolving of this convention.

Petitions to be considered.

27. Anent the petitions given in be the burghs following, viz. :— Air, Kirkcaldie, Ruthglen, Jedburgh, Dumfermling, Dysert, Forres, Innerkeithing, Kinghorn, Lanerk, Selkirk, Enster Wester, Kirkudbright and Peebles, the convention finds that at present trade is in a great decay and the condition of the royall burrows very low, and the granting of a gratuity to one burgh is the burdening of the rest, and that now the convention hes not tyme seriously to consider the saids petitions, therfor the conventione do recomend to the committy anent unfree trade and the staple port to sit after dissolving of this present convention to take the saids petitions to their consideratione and prepare ane expedient for ease and relief of the saids burrows against the next generall conventione.

Meetings as to trade and the Union.

28. The conventione, considering that the burghs of barrony and regality and other unfree traders within the natione have the benefit of trade (which only belongs to the royall burrows) without bearing any adequat burden of their taxt roll, therfor the conventione recommends to the respective royall burrows of the kingdome to consider and advise against the sitting of the parliament whether or not it will be conducive to the interest of the burrows to address the parliament to stent the burrowes complexly with the land rent of the rest of the kingdome, conforme to their valuations to be made, and that the haill kingdome have the benefite and priviledge of trade, with power to the lord provost of Edinburgh not only to call a generall conventione of the royall burrowes pro ea re nata when he thinks fitt, but also to call the said conventione in case the great concern of ane union with England comes to be laid befor and considered by the parliament, that the burrows may advise what is fitt to be represented to the parliament as most tending to the advancement of trade, the benefite and priviledges of the burrowes, as well as to ease them of the unsupportable burden they lye under ; and ordains the haill burrows to send up ther commissioners fully instructed hereanent.

Glasgow.

34. The convention having considered petition by Glasgow, "representing their great and unsupportable burdens, and finding that the missive dues this year have risen extreamly by the advance of money for outrigging the ship called the Royall William," they recommended to the next general convention that the ease of that burgh should have first place in their consideration.

Fraserburgh.

35. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade petition from the town of Fraserburgh as to payment of their quota for unfree trade.

Air, tolbuith.

36. Remitted to the same committee petition by the town of Air "representing the ruinous condition of ther tolbuith and that the same would certainly fall to the ground befor the nixt conventione if no remedy be fallen upon to prevent the same."

Letter to the magistrats of Campvere.

37. The conventione approved the draught of ane letter to the magistrats of Campvere to be sent from them, and ordained the samen to be signed by Sir Samuell M'Clellan, dean of gild of Edinburgh, their preses, in their name, of which the tennor folloues:—Right honorable. We being very desirous that the staple contract be inviolably observed, have therfor thought fitt to acquaint yow that we are firmly resolved to do all and every thing on our part in order to a strict observance therof, but at the same time we take occasione to signifie to yow the great disapoyntments the royall burrowes hes met with for want of convoyes, duly and seasonably sent to take care of our ships in the terms of the staple contract, the want wherof doeth certainly oblige our ships to go to other places, and therfor seeing Sir Andrew Kennedy, our conservator, is preparing to go to the toun of Campvere to take care of our affaires, we take this occasione to intreat your honours will be more careful for the futur to send convoyes at such tymes as our said conservator shall desire and our trade doth require; and we on our part have ordered our said conservator to take most speciall care that the staple port be duly observed and that he timously and frequently acquaint our agent of such persons who are guilty of the breach therof, that so they may be punished according to law, to which we shall alwise give our assistance. We are most desirous to entertain a good friendship and correspondence with your honours and do expect and desire that you will give all due incouragement and protectione to our said conservator that so he may be inabled to discharge his office with that dilligence and care which we expect from him. We are, right honourable, your honours most humble servants. Signed by order and in presence of the conventione mett. Sic subscribitur:

SA. M^CLELLAN, preses. Wherupon Collonell Patrick Ogilvie, commissioner for the burgh of Cullen, for himself and in name and behalf of all those that would adhere to him, protested that in respect of the competition depending befor the lords of sessione anent the office of conservator, betwixt Sir Alexander Cumming and Sir Andrew Kennedy, that this convention of burrowes do nowayes medle in anything that may be prejudiciall, and further protested against the draught of the said letter to the magistrats of Campvere in so far as it is anyuise inconsistent with her Majesties gift in favours of the said Sir Alexander Cumming and letter to the last conventione, or may be anyuise prejudiciall to Sir Alexander Cummings interest, who is at present out of the natione, and therupon took instruments in the clerks hands. To which Sir Andrew Kennedy, conservator, being personally present, made the following ansuer: (1^o) That no member of the conventione did second such a protest nor adhere therto so that the same ought not to be marked, being only taken by one member. (2^o) Sir Andrew having been received and admitted by the conventione, no other can pretend right untill he be duly admitted by the royall burrows. (3^o) The said Sir Andrew instantly produced ane decreet of the lords of sessione wherby his possession is declared and continued, in which decreet the Queens Majestie is compearing, and the said Sir Alexander Cumming decerned to desist from mollesting or troubling the said Sir Andrew Kennedy in the free and peaceable possessione of his office, wherby the matter is res judicata; wherupon the said Sir Andrew Kennedy protested for cost skaith and damage and therupon took instruments in the clerks hands.

Elgin.

39. The conventione considering how dangerous and inconvenient it is to the commone good of borrowes that any burgh should sell, annalyie, or wadset any part of their burgage lands or any uther lands in use to be taxed with the burghs to any person without obliging the purchaser to pay ane proportionall part of all publick burdens imposed or to be imposed upon the said burgh effeiring to the rentall of the purchase, therfor the convention statuts and ordains that when any burgh shall happen to sell, annalyie, or wadset any part of their burgage lands, tenements or houses, or any others in use to be taxed with the toun in time coming, the same shall be convoyed with the burden of all impositions which may happen to affect the said burgh, and that effeiring to the true rentall of the lands, tenements, houses, and others purchased; and likewise the convention doth declare that for hereafter they will grant no warrand in favours of any burgh for selling or wadseting any part of their lands, tenements, houses or others forsaid, neither shall any sale made be ratified and approven except in the terms above writen.

Air, privilege of summer imprisonment.

40. On a representation by the burgh of Air as to an action against them for alleged wrongous imprisonment for payment of petty customs due to the tacksmen of their meal market, the convention ordained the agent to concur with the magistrates of that burgh "in defending their priviledge of summer imprisonment for payment of petty customes, it being the generall concern of the wholl royall burrows."

Caution to be found for applying gratuities.

41. The convention, considering that frequently gratuities are granted by the royall burrows to severall burghs to be applied for speciall ends, and how necessar it is that the same be applied accordingly, therfor the conventione do hereby discharge their agent for hereafter to make payment of any such gratuity that shall be granted to any burgh untill first good and sufficient cautione be found by the said burgh in the hands of our clerk that the said gratuity shall be applied to the end for which the same wes granted, and that the applicatione therof be duly reported to the next generall conventione; declaring that in case the agent shall do in the contrair hereof the same shall not be allowed to him in his next accompts and the burghs shall be pursued in the terms of their caution.

Act for composing differences and debates.

42. The conventione, considering that frequent debates do happen within severall burghs, both in relation to the manadgment of their commone good and as to the way and manner of their elections of their magistrats and deacons of crafts and other office bearers and manadgment of their revenues, and anent their priviledges and encroachments thereon and other publick concerns, and how necessar and convenient it would be that, conforme to the pouer granted to the royall burrowes by seuerall acts of parliament, all such differences and debates might be composed and agreed by the royall burrowes or a commitie of their number, without bringing the parties concerned to unnecessar trouble and expence and to great heats and animosities within burgh in case the same cannot be egreed at home, therfor the conventione do hereby ordain all such differences and debates which shall for hereafter happen or arise, either betwixt burgh or burgesses within burgh in relatione to the forsaids matters, to be first brought and tabled befor them or a committe of their number yearly to be appointed to sit at Edinburgh for that end, in order to be composed and agreed by their mediatione, hereby declaring that whoever shall do in the contrair hereof shall be reckoned disturbers of the peace of the burrowes and contemnners of their authoritie, and shall be fyned and urtherwise punished as the conventione or committe shall think fitt conforme to law. And ordains the extracts hereof to be transmitted to the severall burghs to be insert in their counsell books and to be read immediately after ilk annuall electione in presence of the magistrats and haill toun counsell. And ordains each burgh to report to the next generall conventione their dilligence herein by ane extract under their toun clerks hand.

Act for composing differences and debates.

43. The conventione, considering how much it imports the state of the burrowes of this natione to have their trade duely regulat and their product and manufactory well improven, as also the laws and acts of parliament made anent trade put to due executione, do therfor appoynt the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Aberdeen, Glasgow, and Montross, each to send one of their number to Edinburgh fully instructed be the trading persons in and about the respective burghs from whence they come what may be most conducive to the advancing the various branches of the trade of the natione, and puting to due executione the laws and acts already made; which persons are to reside at Edinburgh during each session of parliament to give their best advice to the state of burrowes in relatione to what concerns the trade of the natione; and further the conventione ordains Sir Andrew Kennedy, conservator of the Scots priviledges in the Netherlands, yearly to send to the agent to the royall burrowes ane account of what alteratione trade does undergoe, especially in reference to the product of this natione, and that a month befor each annuall conventione.

Act for advancing of trade.

44. Ordained the agent to pay to the secretaries of state £1333, 6s. 8d. Scots, Sellaries and to the advocate £333, 6s. 8d., and certain salaries and gratuities to the clerks, gratuities. servants and others.

Disposition by Elgin of Cat-tails.
13 July 1703.

DISPOSITION by the Burgh of Elgin of the lands called the Cattails, ratified by the 24th act of the preceding convention.

The narrative proceeds thus:—"Forasmuch as diverse Kings of Scotland, with advice of the three estates of this nation, esteemed it profitable to sett in feu farm the lands of this kingdome, and that for the policie and decernment therof, and conforme to the tenor of the acts of parliament, made theranent, the commissioners of the burrowes of this kingdome being lafully convened in the convention holden at Montross the ninten day of June j^m v^c and ninty one, did ordain the commone lands of the haill burghs of this kingdome to be set in feu farme for the profet the respective burghs might have therby; which act our umquhill Soverign Lord, King James the sixth, of blessed memory, by his charter of confirmatione under his great seall, ratified and approved and specially recomended the same to the burrowes who had not then sett in feu ferme their commone land, consenting, commanding and ordaining them that they should sett and lett out in feu farme all and sundry their commone lands to the actual inhabitants burgesses of the said burghs for the profit and comoditie of the burgh and in augmentatione of the rentall of the same, and that they should confirme and ratifie the infeftments made or to be made therupon, as in the acts of burrowes and charter of confirmatione at more length is contained; lykeas in ane act of the generall conventione of burrowes holden at Aberdeen upon the [eighth] day of July j^m vj^c and nynty eight years, for the reasons and causes therein contained, the said conventione did grant warrand to the magistrats of the said burgh of Elgin for the time and their successors to dispose of their grass lands of Cattails either in feu or long tack as they should think fitt, as the said act at more length bears." The deed then proceeds that "for augmentation of the rental in twenty shillings Scots more as ever the lands after specifeit paid" to them or their predecessors, and also for 1150 merks Scots paid to them, the magistrats and council disponded "the greens called the Cattails lyand besouth the burgh crofts" in feu farm to David Bremner and his heirs male and assignees, "being actuall inhabitants, burgesses of the said burgh of Elgin or duelling any wher ells sua they have and obtaine the liberty therof, and for the same shall pay to us and our successors in office" 200 merks, for which sum they are to be admitted to the freedom of the burgh, "provyding aluayes he be a man of good life and inclinatione and carry and behave himself as a burges and peaceable man, subject to the laws as it is prescribed by the burrou laws, and if he cary and behave himself wtherwise we are not obliged to enter and admit him." The yearly feu-duty is £42 Scots as old tack duty and 20s. Scots of augmentation.

The address of the commissioners to the general conventione of the royall burrowes of this ancient kingdome, conveyen at Edinburgh the twenty ninth of October last, upon the great concern of the Union proposed betwixt Scotland and England, for conserting such measures as should be esteemed proper for them to take with relatione to their trade and other concerns, humbly sheweth:—That as by the Claim of Right it is the priviledge of all subjects to petitione, so at this time we being mostly empouered by our constituents, and knowing the sentiments of the people wee represent, it is our indispenceable duty to signifie to your grace and the honourable estates of parliament that as wee are not against a honourable and safe union with England, consisting with the being of this kingdome and parliaments therof, without which wee conceive neither our religious nor our civil interests and trade as we now by law enjoy them can be secured to us and our posterity, farr less can we expect to have the conditione of the people of Scotland with relatione to these great concerns made better and improven without a Scots parliament, and seeing by the articles of union now under the consideratione of the honourable estates of parliament it is agreed that Scotland and England shall be united into one kingdome, and that the united kingdome be represented by one and the same parliament, by which our monarchy is suppress, our parliament extinguished, and in consequence our religione, church government, claim of right, lawes, liberties, trade, and all that is dear to us dayly in danger of being encroached upon, altered, or wholly subverted by the English in a Brittish parliament, wherin the mean representatione alloweed for Scotland can never signifie in securing to us the interests reserved by us or granted to us by the English; and by these articles our poor people are made lyable to the English taxes, which is a certain unsupportable burden, considering that the trade proposed is uncertain involved and wholly precarious, especially when regulat as to export and import by the lawes of England and under the same prohibitions, restrictions, customes, and dutyes; and considering that the most considerable branches of our trade are different from those of England and are and may be yet more discouraged by their lawes, and that all the concerns of trade and other interests are after the union subject to such alterations as the parliament of Brittain shall think fitt; we therfor humbly supplicat your grace and the honourable estates of parliament, and do assuredly expect that yow will not conclude such an incorporating union as is contained in the articles proposed, but that yow will support and maintain the true reformed protestant religione and church government as by law established, the sovereignty and independency of this crown and kingdome, and the rights and priviledges of parliament, which have been generously asserted by you in the [present] sessione of this present parliament, and do further pray that effectuell means may be used for defeating the designes and attempts of all popish pretenders whatsoever to the succession of this crown and kingdome, and for securing this natione against all the attempts and encroachments that may be made by any persons whatsoever upon the sovereignty, religion, lawes, liberties, trade and quiet of the same; and we promise to mentain, with our lives and fortunies, all those valuable things, in opposition to all popish and other enemies whatsoever, according to our lawes and claim of right. amongst the inhabitants of the said burgh, as also that the said illegally elected magistrats did take out of the touns charter chist severall papers which concerned the community, and that they still retained the same, craving therfor the committe would interpose their authority and appoint some of the neighbouring burrowes to endeavour to accomodat all differences amongst their saids inhabitants, particularly in the matter above represented, as they are in use to do in the like cases ; which being considered by the committe they appoint the commissioners for the burghs of Perth, Dundie, Montross, Brichen, and Forfar, whereof three to be a quorum, to meet at the said burgh of Aberbrothock upon the first day of Aprill next to come, and to adjourn themselves from time to time as they shall think fitt, to endeavour to compose all differences amongst the inhabitants of the said burgh, and particularly to get the persons who prosecuted the said illegall electione reimbursed of their expences and to see the saids papers restored and report to the nixt generall conventione, declaring that in case they shall refuse to submitt to the determination of the commissioners of the saids burghs our agent shall be furthwith appointed to con-curr against them.

5. Continued certain articles to be heads of next general missive.
6. On report of the committee as to the present circumstances of Burntisland for want of a magistracy, the convention remitted its farther consideration to the committee on unfree trade, with power to allow a sum not exceeding £50 sterling, including 500 merks formerly voted but not paid, for repair of their harbour. "And recomends to such members of the conventione as are members of the parliament of Great Brittain to petition the parliament in name of the royal burrows to take care of the peer and herbour of the said burgh or any other burgh that shall applye, and that for the conveniency of the trade of North Britain."

Conservator,
Clark and Frazer.

7. Appointed a committee to endeavour to adjust the differences between the conservator and Alexander Clark and John Frazer, merchants in Inverness.

5 July 1707.

Irving, power to feu lands.

8. "Anent the petition from the burgh of Irving, shewing that ther being a piece of sandy and barren ground belonging to the said burgh, at present useless and in danger of being overblown with sand, which the magistrats thought might be improven by fewing or setting the samen in tack, and this was accordingly done by act of toun counsell, but in regard the inhabitants of the said burgh do refuse to medle by vertue of the forsaid act, therfor craving the convention would ratifie, approve, and confirme the samen ;" which being considered, the convention ratified and approved the act and authorised the burgh to set the land in feu or long tack. EDINBURGH.

5 July 1707.

9. Recommended the state of the burgh of Cuper in Fife, which is "ane inland place having no trade but retail," to be considered by next general convention. Cuper in Fife.

10. Ratified, approved, and confirmed disposition by the burgh of Elgin of a rood and a half of land sold in terms of the 24th act of last general convention. Elgin, disposition ratified.

11. Anent petition by the burgh of Brichen, shewing that they are unfortunately engaged in a process with the Earl of Panmuir before the lords of session, and "put to such expence as they are no longer able to subsist against so potent ane adversary," which being considered by the convention, "they recomend to Sir Alexander Ogilvie of Forglane, one of the senators of the colledge of justice, to wait upon the Earl of Panmuir in order to adjust the said affair." Brichen, Earl of Panmuir.

12. Anent the petitione from Aberbrothock, shewing that after a visit made by the contiguous burghs in order to adjust all differences amongst the inhabitants ther, the pains taken by the visitors proved vain, conforme to the report produced, and the offenders continued obstinat, refusing the mediatioun of the visitors either as to the modificatione of the expences disbursit by privat persons for retriuing the priviledges of the burgh invaded by a moab or their adjusting other abuses committed be them, particularly their refusing to pay multur to the touns milns, conforme to ane contract of thirlage, wherby the saids milns are turned void of tenents and useless, and likewise by a great storme in January last the greatest part of their harbour was broken down and cost great expence to put the same in a tollerable conditione, craving therfor the conventione would not only ordain ther agent to concurr with the said burgh in prosecuting their saids rights and priviledges but alsoe to grant some supplie for repairing their said harbour, as the petitione bears ; which being considered by the conventione they ordain their agent to concurr with the said burgh in the forsaide actions, reserving to the committee for unfree trade to be named by this conventione, at conclusion of the cause, to determine whether the said concurrence shall be upon the common expence of the burrows or not, and farder that the burghs of Dundie, Montross, Brichen and Forfar, or any two of them, visit the harbour and make enquiry into the circumstances of the said burgh and report to the next conventione. Aberbrothock.

13. Anent a petition by the burgh of Craill shewing that the pier of the said Craill.

burgh being old and ruinous a great part of it was beat down by a storme this last winter and the rest therof likely to run the same fate unless a speedy remedy be applyed," the convention appointed a committee to visit the pier and harbour and report.

Act as to selling herrings.

14. Anent another petitione from the burgh of Craill, for themselves and in name and behalf of the other burghs in Fife concerned in the fishing, and in name of the burgh of Dunbar, shewing that the petitioners finding in their experience that the selling of herrings by tale is a great loss to the merchants, being often injured in telling therof, besides the herrings themselves being dashed and spoyled, craving therfor the conventione would obviat the saids inconveniencies by provyding that the herrings in the saids burgh be sold by ane mett containing fourty two pynts of liquid measure, commonly called the two hundred herrings mett, and that the magistrats of each burgh wher herrings are bought and sold may keep a standart of the said mett, that all the metts within their jurisdictione be agreeable therto, as the petitione bears; which being considered by the conventione, they recomend to the saids burghs of Craill and the other burghs in Fife and Dunbar, that for hereafter no herrings be bought within their respective jurisdictiones by tale but only by the forsaid mett called the two hundred herrings mett, and to take care to keep ane standart of the said measure, to the effect all other measures may be agreeable therto, but prejudice always to the town of Linlithgow of keeping metts and their priviledges of keeping metts and measures as formerly.

Dysert.

15. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade petition by the burgh of Dysert "craving some supplie to help them to rebuild their tolbuith, the said burgh not being in a conditione to cary on that work without help."

Agents accompts.
Glasgow.

16. Remitted to a committee to consider the agent's accounts and report.

17. Anent petition by the burgh of Glasgow, "shewing their bad circumstances, with their great loss they have laitly sustained in ther shiping," the convention appointed the agent to pay the burgh 2000 merks Scots of present supply, and the condition of the burgh to be a head of next general missive.

Act in favours
of Kirkcud-
bright.

18. Anent the petitione given in for the burgh of Kirkcudbright, shewing that it had been the imemoriall and constant sett and consuetude of the said burgh ever since its erectione into a royall burgh, to elect and choise the magistrats to officiat in the said burgh at the term of Michal-mass yearly, and the new counsellors yearly at the said term viz, eight dayes befor the said term of Michalmas yearly, the magistrates and toun counsell of the burgh which consists of seventeen persons, viz., the provest, two baillies, the thesaurer, and thirteen common counsellors, does elect and choice tuo or three new counsellors, the number of tuo or three being still optionall to the saids magistrats and counsell, and immediately the saids magistrats and old counsell do vott three of their own number of the counsell in lieu and in place of the three new counsellors votted as aforesaid, which tuo or three new counsellors votted to come upon the counsell are warned to attend the electione of the magistrats upon Michalmass day, wher they are qualified and received befor votting, and therafter proceed to the electing of the provest, who is still to be a merchant or heretor within the burgh, and then to the electione of the tuo baillies and thesaurer, who are to be merchants or tradsmen as they shall happen to be votted; and at the said electione the community of the burgh doe still name a persone to represent them who is to have a vott in the electione of the magistrats only but not of the new counsell, and that beside the ordinary toun counsell of seventeen persons, but the forsaid representative for the community is no furdre a member of the toun counsell nor hes no vott but simply in the said electione; the forsaid tuo or three new counsellors yearly assumed into the counsell and the forsaid tuo or three old counsellors put of the counsell in lieu of them are indefinitely either merchants or tradsmen as the counsell, by plurality, shall vott; and besides the forsaid magistrats, thesaurer and counsell, ther was never within the said burgh either dean or deacon of craft, neither had any tradesmen liberty to conveen to consider any matters relating to their severall crafts without the authority and consent of the magistrats, nor were ther any incorporat crafts in the said burgh or any compositione or fyn due by any tradsmans to the fraternity of his trade, but that every man who was a burges of the burgh might exerce and follow the occupatione he was capable of. Which being considered by the conventione, together with overtures anent the sett of the said burgh, they ordered both the petitione and overtures to be recorded upon conditione that the instantant or overseer mentioned in the saids overtures shall not be continued in office above tuo years together, the tenor of which overtures followes:—Overtures by the commissioners of Dumfries, Wigtoun and Neugallauay, for accomodating differences betuixt the magistrats and Tayn.

21. Anent the petitione from the burgh of Tain, sheuing that wher the Earle of Cromerty having raised ane actione of declarator and moles-tatione against the said burgh, which long depended to their great loss, and the same having been agreed, the said burgh for the summ of ane thousand merks renuned their pretentions to a part of the commony of Morwichmuir, reserving to themselves commony [of] the rest therof, conforme to ane act of the toun counsell produced, craving therfor that the burrows would approve the samen in communi forma; as als that in the moneth of September last ther happened a dreadfull fire which in three or four hours destroyed the best part of the toun, and that the tolbuith, steeple, and counsell house will shortly be rebuilt, that therfor ane visita-tione should be appointed to report the verriety of the premisses and that the conventione would provyde some remedy to support the said burgh from ruine and appoint their agent to concurr with them in their actione against Sinclair of Ratter, conforme to the twenty act of the generall con-ventione, j^m vij^c and tuo, as the petition bears. Which being considered by the conventione they appoint the burghs of Inverness, Dingwall and Fortrose or any tuo of them to visit the case and condition of the said burgh, tolbuith and steeple, &c., and to report the verriety of the same to the nixt generall conventione, and particularly whether or not the summ of five hundred merks formerly granted to them by the conventione for building of their tolbuith was rightly applied. And als the conventione ratifies and approves the renunciacione granted by the said burgh of that part of the commony of Mortuichmuir in favours of George, viscount of Tarbat, now earle of Cromerty, with this express condition and quality EDINBURGH.

10 July 1707. that ane extract hereof be not given out untill the saids visitors report to the nixt conventione that the said renunciations is profitable to the said burgh; and the conventione appoints the said renunciations to be recorded after the acts of this present generall conventione.

22. Ratified a disposition by the burgh of Queensferry to William Patersone, Queensferry. late bailie thereof, and his spouse, of a ruinous tenement sold by public roup; with this express condition that report be made to next convention by the burghs of Linlithgow, Inverkeithing and Dunfermling, that the price has been applied towards payment of the town's debt.

23. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade a petition by the burgh of Dunbar. Dunbar, "craving that the agent may be appointed to concur with and assist them upon the comone expence of the burrows in defending a vexatious and expenceive proces intended against the burgh at the instance of the heretors of the landuair paroch of Dunbar, for payment of a third part of the expence of repairing their church and manse."

24. Anent a petition by the burgh of Peebles, "craving the conventione to Peebles. order some supplie to enable the burgh to repair their bridges which were in great hazard of falling," the convention appointed a committee to visit the burgh and report the condition of the bridges to the committee anent unfree trade, "in which report the visitors are to take notice what gratuities have been granted by the conventione to them since the revolutione."

25. Allowed the burgh of Kirkcudbright "to set a nynteen years tack of Kirkcudbright. their fishing in order to their improving therof, at the sight of the commissioners for Air, Dumfreis, and Wigtoun, in case they find it for the utility of the burgh; and appoynted the saids visitors to report the same, with the state and conditione of the church and steeple of the burgh, to the committee anent unfree trade."

26. Relieved the burgh of Fortrose of 1s. Scots of their proportion of the Fortrose. tax roll in respect of their great poverty and appointed a committee to visit the burgh and report to next general convention.

27-29. Appointed committees to visit and report to next general convention St Andrews, Inverkeithing,
Kirkaldie. on the condition of the burghs of (27) St Andrews, (28) Inverkeithing and harbour thereto belonging, and (29) Kirkaldie, tolbooth, and pier thereof.

30. The convention, considering "that very few of the burghs of barony and regality and other unfree traders have made agreements for communicatione of trade, and that these who have agreed were only continued by the last annual conventione to this instant month of July," appointed a committee with full power to transact and agree with the saids burghs of barony and regality, or any Committee for unfree traders,
etc.

- EDINBURGH.

- Forras. 31. Appointed a committee to visit the burgh of Forres and report how far the tack of a piece of waste ground set to Robert Taylor in 1700 "was profitably done for the good and utility of the burgh."
- Selkirk, Week. 32. Remitted petitions from the burghs of Selkirk and Week to the committee anent unfree trade.
- Office of conservator. 33. The conventione recomended to Sir Alexander Ogilvie of Forglan, one of the senators of the colledge of justice, to represent to the lords of session that it is the earnest desire of the royall burrows that the proces depending before their lordships betuixt Sir Alexander Cuming of Coulter and Sir Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, in relation to the office of conservator of the Scots priviledges in the Netherlands, be brought to a speedy conclusion, in regard the saids royall burrows have particular concerne therein.
- Act for advancement of trade. 34. The conventione, considering that by the articles of Union of the tuo kingdomes of Scotland and England, the priviledges of the royall burrows are therein reserved, and that it is the great interest and concern of all royall burrows that due care be taken now after the Union for advancement of trade and encouragement of the product and manufactur of this part of the United Kingdome, and for asserting the saids priviledges, anent which many things may occur betuixt and the next annual conventione of the royall burrows, therfor the conventione did nominat, constitut, and ordain the burgh of Edinburgh [and twenty-five other burghs, whereof five to be a quorum, to meet every month] to deliberat and take informatione anent what may be most conducive to the advancement, encouragement, and security of the trade of this northern part of Great Brittain, and to do every thing requisit and necessar in relatione to trade and commerce, as fully and freely in all respects as the convention could have done themselves; and ordaine their agent to advance what money might be necessary in prosecutione of the premisses, the same not exceeding ane hundred pounds sterling; and in case the said committee shall find it necessar to address or petition her Majestie or the parliament of Great Brittain in the said affair, the conventione do hereby impouer the lord provost of Edinburgh to call a conventione for that effect; and recommended to the said committe to cause revise the laws and acts of parliament in favours of the royall burrows and the priviledges therby granted to them, together with the severall advices of lauers therupon which are lying in ther agents hands, that ane summary may be made of the for-said priviledges, and appointed ther agent to cause print the same and send cotypes therof to the severall royall burghs betuixt and the first of September nixt.

EDINBURGH.
10 July 1707.

35. The conventione, considering that ther is due to the royall burrows ane considerable summ of money conforme to their subscriptions for the sum of three thousand pounds sterling in the Affrican Companies books, which probably in a short time will be payed by the commissioners of the equivalent, therfor the conventione autherised and gave warrand to the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Dundie, Aberdeen, Stirling, Linlithgow, St Andrews, Glasgow, Air, Haddingtoun, Dysert, Kirkaldie, Montross, Dumfreis, Inverness, Irving, Kirkcudbright, Dunbarton, Dunbar, Craill, Bamf, Northberwick, Lauder, Annan, Queensferry and Inverbervie, wherof five a quorum, Edinburgh being aluisse one, as a committe to sitt at Edinburgh after dissolving of this present conventione, to impower Sir Robert Forbes, agent to the royall burrows, or any other persone they shall think fitt, to uplift and receive the forsaid summ and to distribute and proportione the same amongst the respective burrows conforme to their proportions of the taxt roll at the time of their respective advances, and that at the sight and by directions of the said committe, with full pouer to the said Sir Robert or any other persone so to be appointed by warrand forsaid to grant discharges therof in the same way as the generall conventione might do themselves, he being alwayes comptable to the said comite for what he shall so receive and uplift; and the conventione autherised the said committe to determine in all contraversies that may arise in relatione to the proportioning the said sum and to give such directions in the manageing therof as they shall see just, and that the said committe make report hereof to the nixt generall conventione to whom the said committe are ansuerable for the equall distribution of the forsaid sum.

This deed narrates that an action of declarator and molestation had been raised by George, viscount of Tarbat, against the burgh, pretending right to the lands of Morvichmoir and also a counter action by the burgh against him, and that the dispute had been settled by the viscount agreeing to pay to the burgh 1000 merks Scots in consider of this renunciation. The burgh therefor renounced any right they had to "that part of Morvichmoir which lyes within that stryp or shannell which runs north of Newtoun of Lochslene as the sea flowes in at the highest streams to Balnagall, and by the lands of Balnagall to the houses of Pitnilzies, and from thence to the northwest house of Pitnilzie now possest be John sheueth :—That wher wee, undersubscribing, having upon the faith of the treaty of unione sent from Scotland to England severall goods and merchandice allowd to be imported to Scotland befor commencement of the unione, and which were entered and payed her Majesties dutyes, and for which befor transportatione we obtained coasting coquets (a copy quherof as appoven by the attorney generall at London was transmitted to the lords of thesaurie here and delyvered by them to the officers of her Majesties customes) upon quhich we had good ground to rest secure, yet to our great surprise we have informatione that not only our ships and goods are seized but the goods themselves made havock of and imbaizled (expressly contrair to the articles of union) our seamen impressed and our ships thereby rendered useless, which treatment is so unsupportable that all these promised advantages by the union are like to be so many traps to ensnare us which in end must turn to our inevitable ruine, for if our effects be seized and our ships laid up and taken from us by violence wher shall we have any hopes left us for trade. These our greivances we have thought fitt to lay befor your honours, the representatives of the royall burrows in conventione assembled, that yow in your prudence may address her Majestie in such termes as the present emergent of so much import and concern to the natione doth require. May it therfor please your honours seriously to consider of what we have above represented and to lay our case before her Majestie. Which being considered by the conventione, they remitted the consideration therof to the burghs of Edinburgh, Dundie, Stirling, St. Andrews, Kirkaldie, Montross, Dunbarton and Annan, wherof three to be a quorum, as a committe to draw up ane address to be presented to her Majestie in relatione to the said affair, and recomended to the said committe to take advice of my lord advocat, Sir David Cuninghame, Sir David Dalrymple, and Mr William Black; and appointed ther agent to deburse what money might be necessar in consulting the said affair; and accordingly the said committee brought in the draught of ane address, the tenor wherof followes: To the Queens most excellent Majestie, we your Majesties most loyall and dutyfull subjects, the generall convention of the royall burrows in this part of your Majesties United Kingdome called Scotland, do most humbly represent that having received severall grievous complaints from the trading merchants how that they upon the faith of the late treaty of union betuixt the two kingdomes, ratified in both their parliaments, have from severall ports of Scotland sent to London and seuerall ports in England goods and merchandice allowd to be imported to Scotland and actually ther imported before the Union, for which they not only payed your Majesties duty but being resolved upon the faith of the said treaty to send them to England after due deliberatione they by warrand from England received coast coquets and other ordinary documents from your Majesties commissioners of the customes latly established, and did also to cutt of all pretext make faith befor the lords of your Majesties thesanry and exchequer and other judges that the goods were imported for their own propper account and upon their own proper risque. Notwithstanding wherof they have very surprising accounts from their correspondents in England that the commissioners of your Majesties customes ther have given orders to seise their ships and goods, and that some of them are actually seised and others both seised and imbazled, and that the best conditions they can obtain from your Majesties said commissioners in England are that they should give security or bail, in some cases for ship and cargo and in other cases for paying new and high dutyes at the determination of the British parliament, all which being in our humble apprehensione nothing agreeable but contrary to the faith of the said articles of treaty and a manifest disappointment of these advantages and incouragements that we still did and do firmly promise ourselves from your Majesties royall justice and most gracious government, and with all such visible hardships as must be the loss and even the ruin of many bonnest traders who cannot bear their ships and goods to be thus incumbered by bail and law sute or double and high dutyes and withall subjected to the delay and hazard of uncertain determinationes. We cannot but in the greatest submission wherof we are capable, and with a yet greater confidence of your Majesties royall justice and goodness, wherof we have had so great and innumerable proofs, lay the case befor your Majestie as it is, viz., that by the first article of the treaty of Union the tuo kingdomes are for ever united into one after the first of May last, which plainly after that day excludes the very notion of importatione or importers betuixt them and all former restrictions and penalties imposed therupon; and by the fourth article it is agreed that all the subjects of the said United Kingdome shall from and after the union have full freedom and intercourse of trade to and from any port or place within the said United Kingdome, and that thair be a communicatiōne of all other rights and priviledges which do or may belong to the subjects of either kingdome, by which it is plain that we haue the same priviledge to transport our effects, notwithstanding of former restraints, from one part of Brittain to another, which your Majesties subjects of Berwick, Newcastle, Bristoll, &c., do enjoy, in importing now to Scotland without any controll all such goods both of English and forreign manufactur and growth as were befor the union expressly prohibit by our laws; and farder by the twenty fifth and last article of the said treaty it is statut and enacted that all laws and statuts in either kingdome, so far as they are contrary to and inconsistent with the articles of the union, shall from and after the unione cease and become void, wherby it evidently appears that the prohibitions and restrictions that might have been of force on either side whill we were seperat kingdomes are now made void and for ever to ceas. Being then founded upon such clear and evident grounds, and yet much more upon the assuring experiences that we have aluise had of your Majesties justice, equity, and unparalleled goodness, we do with all submission and humility beseech and obtest your Majestie that you would be pleased to give such ordors to your high thesaurer and commissioners of customes and others in England that the aforsaid heavy and vexatious grievances may be remeeded and removed, that so the hearts and interests of all your good subjects may be united, to your Majesties satisfactiōne and perpetuall glory. Signed at Edinburgh the 25 July 1707 years, in name and by appointment of the conventione, by, Sic subscribitur: SA. M'CLELLAN, preses. Which address being considered by the conventione, they unanimously approved therof and appointed Sir Samuell M'Clellan, lord provost of Edinburgh, their preses, to signe the same in their name, and letters to be written to his grace the Duke of Queensberry, his grace the Duke of Roxburgh, the principal secretaries of state, and Mr Gilbert Steuart, merchant, and signed by their said preses; and doubles of the said address to be transmitted in the saids letters; and appointed the principall signed address to be transmitted to the Earle of Marr, secretary of state, attending for the time, in order to be laid befor her Majestie. Letter from Secretary of State.

Wee waited on the Queen and the treasurer and told what was the lawers oppinion in this affair who the merchants had consulted. The attorney and solicitor generall had a report ready to give in to the Queen in councill of what had past betuixt the merchants and them, but upon our talking with them they said if the merchants lawyers and they were mett they doubted not but they would come to ane agreement to both their likeings, so it was thought expedient to delay giving in their report till once this meeting was over, which the merchants approved of. However, we thought we could not keep the address any longer in our hands without presenting it to her Majestie, so the Duke of Queensberry and the Earle of Loudoun and I waited on the Queen with it and read it to her. She was pleased to give this answer that it would alwayes be her care to see the articles of the Union observed and particularly what concern'd the royall burrows. As to the particular for which they adrest she had put that affair in such a method that she hopt would end quickly to their satisfactiione.

In talking we were told that there was a necessity to have this affair put in some way of examinatione that those to whom the goods belonged might be discovered, to the end that those who are not Scotsmen might not shelter themselves under that cloke and so hurt the fair traders both of Scotland and England. This imbarra of the trade at the beginning of the union was very unluckie, but it can never happen againe, and since the occasion of it was not to prejudge the fair traders, but otherwayes, and will be now, I hope, accomodat, I hope ther will be no more uneasiness about it in Scotland. The Queen hes all along shown all the desire imaginable to have this affair adjusted, and these two lords and I have been at all the pains we could and used all our interest to have it determined to the satisfactiione of our countrey, and as it was our duty so I assure you we shall continue in this and every thing ells so farr as in our pouer. You'll communicat this to the conventione of the royall burrows, and I am, my lord, your most humble servant. Sic subscribitur :

Recommendation to call a convention.

4. The committe recomends to Sir Samuell M'Clellan, lord provest of Edinburgh, to write to Sir Patrick Johnston, late provest of the said burgh, after his arrivall at London, intreating his uttmost care in what concerns the merchants in this part of the United Kingdome, the trade in generall or estate of the royall burghs thair, and for doing the same more effectually to call for the assistance of the other representatives of North Brittain, and to acquaint the lord provest of Edinburgh from time to time with what occurs theranent.

Recommendation to write to Sir Patrick Johnston.

5. It being represented by severall members of the committe that diverse illegal exactions are made upon the liedges by the officers of the custome houses, therfor the committe recomends to the lord provest of Edinburgh to take care that some of the members of the committe doe lay the same before the commissioners of the customes in order to have the same redressed.

Exactions by officers of custom houses.

2. Anent the petitione given in be Thomas Donaldson of Kinairdy, merchant, burges of Elgin, for himself and these that adhere to him, shewing that wher upon differences arising in our burgh and applicatione made to the conventione of burrows, ther was by their appointment a sett and rule of electione and government made for the burgh in the year j^m vij^c and five, wherby we judged that all differences might have been prevented in time coming, but now at this last electione, when we thought to have proceeded orderly and peaceably conforme to the said sett, a party amongst us did factiously so influence the elections and cary the magistracy that we, tho the plurality, viz., of nyn of seventeen, are in a manner excluded, for the forsaid party contriving how to cary it did not only

admitt non residenters to be elected contrary to our sett and assume two votts for one to their chairman without any necessity, and likewise chuse a perfect novice to be a baillie who had neither been counsellor or so much as residenter in the burgh save since June last, on purpose to strengthen their factione, but farder, they knowing or fearing that we would make the plurality, they procured Alexander Innes, one of our number, to be shut up within walls as he was coming to the elections, and ther detained him forcibly, and albeit this was immediately represented to the provest and the meeting that they might take off the restraint yet they refused to doe it, as ane instrument taken therupon testifies ; whereby it is evident that they made the said violence their own and did ratihabit the said restraint, which plainly renders their proceeding thereafter void ; and now seeing the conventione of burrows did wisely provyde that differences and debates of this nature should be brought before the conventione and by them terminat, and we being most willing to acquiesce to the judgement of the conventione, for the good and peace of the place, whereby necessary it is for us to have your honours warrand to intimat this our complaint to the other party, and to advertise them to compear and make ansuer before your honours, therfor craving the commite to consider the complaint and to grant warrand to them to intimat the same to Mr William Sutherland, provest, and the rest of his adherents, that they may be ready to answer at the meeting of the burrows in November next, and to ordain the said Mr William Sutherland and his adherents in the meantime to see and ansuer that the burrows give judgement for setleing the present difference in finding the forsaid wrongous electione void and ordaining a new one, agreeable to the said sett and the constitutione of the burgh, as the petitione bears. Which being considered by the committe, they granted the desire therof, and ordained the same to be intimat and a full double therof given to the said Mr William Sutherland for himself and his adherents, and allowed him and them to send up any one of their number sufficiently instructed for the rest to ansuer to the above complaint and underlye the judgement of the royall burrows, and that upon the eighteen day of November next, at Edinburgh, where the royall burrows meet, with continuacione of days ; as also gave warrand to cite witnesses against the said day.

| 4. Upon a report from the comite to whom the consideratione of the present missive was remitted, the conventione approved of severall overtures for the encouragement of trade to be presented to the parliament, wherof the tennor followes :—Overtures from the royall burrows of Scotland for the encouragement of trade. (1 ^o) That ther be payed for each hundred of codd, ling, or syth fish, either dry or in pyle, being twelve and within eighteen inches long, ane premium of sixteen shillings and eight pence to the exporter as the just proportione appointed by act of parliament for fishes of that kind of a greater seize. The reasone is that albeit the act of parliament only mentions a drawback upon fishes of a greater seize yet the demand for the smaller seize is as great proportionally in Malaga and some other ports in the straits as ther is for the greater fish and must be cured with forreign salt as well as the other. | Overtures approved. |

(2°) That in respect it hes been customary in this part of the Island to export cod, ling, and syth fish in barrell, that therfor the same drauback be allowd for each barrell of codd, ling and syth when exported as is allowed for the herrings. The reasone is that for the conveniency of sorting a cargoe ther must be cod barrelld which is a loss to the merchant who would have more drauback in proportiōne when in pyle then when barrelld, also ther are some mercats wher barreled codd is in greater demand then in pyle.

(3°) That seeing ther arises some differences anent the payment of the drauback upon fish cured with forreign salt, imported befor the first of May last, that it be recomended to the officers of the custome house to pay the draubacks without distinctione of fishes cured in the terms of the articles whither the salt was imported befor the Union or since.

(4°) That the materialls for fishing such as clapboard, barrell staves, and hemp for netts and lines, &c., be continued to be free of duty as formerly. The reason is that by the laws of Scotland, for encouragement of fishing, which is the most valuable branch of trade and every way beneficiall to the natione, all materialls for fishing are free of duty ; and considering that the encouragement of fishing will be a nurserie for seamen the granting therof will be a mean both to encrease shiping and seamen to the great advantage of the United Kingdome.

(5°) That seeing by the articles of union our fish must be cured with forreign salt, and that we have litle trade with Spain or Portugall, that therfor during the warr we may be allowed to import forreign salt from any place not in enmity with her Majestie. The reasone is we are not furnished with convenient ships for bringing salt from Spain or Portugall, and the act of navigatione hath been dispenced with in such emergents, as particularly seuerall species of goods hath been allowd to be imported from Holland by speciall licences, which is not the product of the country.

(6°) That none but her Majesties British subjects have liberty to cure fish for export upon any part of the lands, herbours, or creiks of this United Kingdome or islands therto belonging. The reasone is the Hamburgers and others set up a trade in buying and curing fish in Zetland and other places and import to these places all sorts of forreign commodities, wherby not only our natives are prejudged but also her Majesties customes in these remott parts altogether disappointed.

(7^o) The salmond fishing being one of the most valuable branches of trade in Scotland, it is reasonable the laws theranent should not only be ratified but that the fynes upon killers of salmond in forbidden tyme and the destroyers of frye or smolts of salmond should also be augmented, and the laws appointed to be duly execut, and wheras formerly the prohibitione of killing of salmond was from the eight of September to the thirty of November, it is thought fitt for the greater benefite of fishing that the time be altered and the prohibitione commence from the first of September and continue to the first of January yearly, and that the laws relating to salmond fishing take effect on the river of Tueed and rivers or waters running to Sollauay as in other places. It is also convenient that the bind of the salmond barrell in Scotland be continued as being most beneficiall for tade. The reasone is, wheras formerly ther hes been exported from Scotland ten thousand barrells of salmond yearly, but by the killing of salmond in forbidden time and destroying of smolts this nationall product is reduced to a fourth part of what was exported befor the Revolutione; and as to the salmond barrell, experience hes proven that the fish keep much better and more free from gilting in a lesser then a greater bind and ther is great difficulty to procure barrell staves for a greater seize.

(8^o) That in transporting fishes or other goods from one part of Brittain to another, in case any ship shall touch at any port by the way, the productione of their cocquet should free them of any further trouble, either by seizur or areistment, untill they come to the port of discharge.

(9^o) That for encourageing of fishing, all oak timber and plank imported for building of ships should be free of duty. The reasone is we have few ships convenient for our trade, and in respect a great many have been taken in this warr and that we have not oak propper for building of ships, it would very much tend to the encouragement of trade if her Majestie would dispence with the duty of oak timber for building of ships, which aluayes hath been allowd for encouragement of shipping in this part of the Island.

(10^o) For encouragement of trade, that a sufficient number of men of warr or friggots be appointed to remaine in the northern firths, that upon occasione they may receive orders for cruising on the coasts for convoying ships out and in, and that a fort be built at Brassie Sound in

Zetland, another at Kerstoun in Orkney and other convenient places in the west, for security of shipping and trade, and that bassons in Leith and Burntisland, or any other convenient place be made, and navall stores be kept for the use of her Majesties ships. The reasone is that the herbours of Brassie Sound in Zetland and Kerstoun in Orkney are convenient for herbouring the greatest fleets and ships of the greatest burden, and all ships from the straits, East and West Indies, that come north about, or the Russia fleet from Archangel, may harbour at these places, and if fortified might lye ther conveniently and securely to the great encouragement of trade ; as also the having of cruizers for defence of our coast will prevent considerable losses, we having sustained great damage last summer for want of cruizers and convoyes to secure our trade.

(11^o) That we be allowd a port to which we may bring wool from Ireland for the benefite of our manufactories, inregaird South Brittain hath three ports for the importatione of wool that North Brittain may have one allowd them. The reasone is that we cannot consume our own wool in manufactur without a mixture of fyn wool.

(12^o) That a method be fallen upon for the ease and dispatch of merchants in Scotland in procuring certificats of plantatione bonds, Mediteranian and Queens passes, protections, &c., necessary in forraigne voyages. The reasone is that befor the necessary dispatches can be procured from London, ships may lose the opportunity of their voyage.

(13^o) That for encouragement of tanning, the exporting of bark from Scotland to Ireland or any wher els be prohibit.

(14^o) That ther be a further prorogatione of the exemptione granted to Scotland of the duty payable for coall, water born, transported from one part of Scotland to another, inrespect of the many navigable rivers of this part of the kingdome. The reasone is that most part of the coall of Scotland lyes in some few places and the greater part of the same cannot be supplied but by water born coall which will be ane unsupportable burden to the poor if any duty be laid thereon.

(15^o) That the linnen cloath be made of well sorted yarn and of equall fynness and sufficiency from one end to the other, and that all broun linnen exposed to sale should be a yeard broad and each piece fourty elns, and half piece twenty elns, and quarter piece ten elns ; and that all linnen for bleitching be woven yeard and tuo inches broad or three quarters of ane yeard and tuo inches, that when bleitched it may be full yeard or three-quarters of a yeard broad; and that befor exposing it to sale the ouner shall procure to each piece, half piece, or quarter piece, a seall bearing the impressiōne of a thistle and the name of the toun wher it was sealled, and after it receives the seall that the same be bought upon the faith therof, and that the sealmaster be lyable in case any broun or whyt linnen shall be sealled not of equall sufficiency, fynness, breadth or length abovementioned, conforme to the Scots acts of parliament made theranent; and for that effect that all the weavers of Scotland doe furth-with make the cloaths abovementioned in the terms of the said acts and immediately provyde looms fitted for that end, with certificatiōne that if any shall be found after the first of November j^m vij^c and eight years to weave the forsaid cloath otheruise then is above proposed they shall be lyable in the summ of (blank), and the cloath otheruayes woven shall be seized by any persone and the one half applyed for the use of the poor and the other half to the apprehender, and both buyer and seller to be over and above the said confiscatiōne lyeable in the sum of (blank).

(16^o) That fingrams, plaidings, searges and drogets, made for export, may be woven of one sort of wool of equall fynness and sufficiency from one end to the other, and that each piece of plaiding, fingrame or wolen droget, be three quarters of a yeard and tuo and a half inches broad, and that each piece of searge be yeard and tuo inches broad and containe fifty six elns, and the half piece twenty eight elns and the quarter piece fourteen elns, and that the same be allowd to be exported whol as formerly; as also that when the said plaiding, fingrames, droget or searges, be put to sale that they be made up in folds of ane yeard or three quarters length and not rolled as befor, and that the owner procure to each piece, half piece, or quarter piece, a seall in the same manner and under the same penalties as are above prescribed for the linnen cloath.

(17^o) That for the better improvement of stocking manufactures it is thought fitt that for hereafter all prick stockings may be made of three plyed wosten and of due proportiōne.

(18^o) Inregard by the articles of the treaty ther is no bounty money provyded for the encouragement of the export of oats, that a reasonable bounty money be allowd for each quarter of oats exported, proportionable to what is allowd for oat meall and other grain.

5. The conventione appoints the above overtures to be transmitted to Sir Patrick Johnstone, the representative of the burgh of Edinburgh in the parliament of Great Brittain, to be laid by him before the said parliament, and remitted to the commissioners for the burghs of Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Stirling, Dumfreis, Dunbarton and Annan, to draw up letters to be sent to the lord chancellor of Scotland, his grace the Duke of Queensberry, the principal secretaries of state, and Mr Francis Montgomerie, to be communicat by him to the rest of the barrons, and to Sir Patrick Johnstone to be communicat by him to the representatives of the burrows; which letters being read were approven, the tennor wherof folowes, with power to the said lord provest to writ to such others of the nobility as his lordship shall think fitt.

6. Ther being a conventione of the royal burrows called to consider upon the most effectuall methods for promotting of trade, and after severall dayes sitting and imploying their thoughts on that subject they have prepared some overtures which are judged by them most necessar to be represented to the parliament and have transmitted to your lordship ane just copy therof, which they humbly desire your lordship may be pleased to peruse and communicat your thoughts therof to Sir Patrick Johnston, whom we have desired to attend your lordship for that effect. My lord, this being the most proper season of makeing applicatione, and that we are therunto encouraged by her Majesties most gracious speech, and likeuise that we are so happy in having so great and noble patrons and well wishers of your native countrey, we are very hopefull that the high and honorabill court of parliament will take nottice of our address in such manner as may not only conduce to the flourishing of this part of the United Kingdome but also the wholl Island, which is all that is designed by this trouble given to your lordships, by, my lord, etc.

7 My lord. The state of the salmond fishing being laid befor the burrows, they were universally complained of as much decayed by the killing of salmond in forbidden time and destroying the frye and smolts, the commissioners of the northern burrows in the shires of Mearns, Aberdeen, Elgin, Forras, and Inverness informed us that for preventing these former abuses they had applyed to Colonel Grant, commander of the independent company in that district, that he would use some endeavours by appointing watches in the high countrey, at the heads and branches of the rivers wher salmond usually spaun, which he had done with that good success that his endeavours in that matter hes been more effectuall in six months then all the former methods used in executing the laws by citatione, sentances, and other dilligence hes done these twenty years. The burrows have therfor thought fitt to applye to your lordship that Colonell Grants company may be keeped up, and seeing the greatest and most valuable salmond fishings within this part of North Brittain lye within the district committed to his care, and that the rivers and branches thereof are many and will require a greater number of men then presently by the establishment are contained in his company, that therfor his company may not only be freed of any of their being draun for recruits, in regaird his men are best knoun to the creeks and branches of the rivers, but that also the number of sentinalls may be augmented, and that your lordship will interpose with her Majestie for that effect, wherin we shall not doubt but your endeavours will be succesfull, the obtaining wherof tends to the preservatione of so valuable a branch of our trade in this part of the Island, which is all that is designed by this trouble given to your lordship by, my lord, [etc.]

8. Right honorable. At this junctur the royall burrows have thought it their duty to meet in a generall conventione and to consider the matters of trade, and after some days spent therein have framed some overtures which they hope will meet with a generall acquiescence. They have transmitted a just double inclosed which they desire yow will be pleased to puruse and communicat to the rest of your honorable state who represent this countrey in parliament. The royall burrows doe most earnestly entreat yow will patronize them in this most important bussiness, seeing that the prosperity and flourishing of trade depend upon it, and we doe humbly think that persons of all ranks are much concerned, but more especially the barrons who cannot but be sensibly touched with our decay of trade, and will as sensibly feel the advantage of its encrease, so ther is no need to use arguments to gentlemen of your honour and penitratione, besides your interest in that subject, and therfor we lay it befor you as the good patriots of your native countrey to whom we wish all happiness as being, with great respect, your most humble and faithfull servant.

Patrick Johnstone.

9. Sir. The royall burrows having stayed together these severall dayes and imployed their thoughts most concernedly about the matters of trade, as judging it their proper province, they have at length framed a great dale of overturs which they hope will be found as well agreeable to the parliament as we think they are calculat for the benefite of trade. We are fully satisfied that much of the success in this affair will depend upon the management therof above, and think ourselves happy that you and so many other good members representing our state are upon the place who have formerly shoun their concern for the good of their countrey, and we need not use arguments to convince that this may be the propper season to relieve our languishing conditione and make ws feel the benefites of the Union, so that we doe most earnestly solicit your care and dilligence in this important affair. You'll please delyver the inclosed as adressed, wherby yow will knou the contents by the copies inclosed, and now that the hapiness or misery of your native countrey depends much upon the event of this negotiacion ther can be no doubt of imploying your outmost endeavours, and that yow will from time to time correspond with the lord provest of Edinburgh that what is further necessary may be done by the royall burrows who resolve to evidence all the zeall possible in this matter. Meantyme they tender their due respects to yourself, which is all from your most humble servant.

All which letters the conventione appointed to be subscrivit by Sir Samuell M'Clellan, their preses, in their name, and to be transmitted to the forsaid persons with doubles of the saids overtures.

Agent to con-curr with magistrats and counsell of Jedburgh.

10. The conventione, considering that by the report of the comitte of the burrows appointed to visit the burgh of Jedburgh it appears that ther hes been no misapplicatione or imbazlement of the commone good of the said burgh but that the same was applyed for the utility therof though not distinctly stated, and that for composing of the differences ther it was ther opinione that some of the pursueris party be brought to the magistracy and into the toun counsell, which condescendence nevertheless did not please the pursueris of the proces against the magistrats; therfor the conventione appointed Sir Robert Forbes, agent to the royall burrows, to concurr with the magistrats and counsell of the said burgh in the actione intended and depending before the lords of sessione against them at the instance of some of the inhabitants therof, and withal the conventiones recommended to these persons who were members of the said committee to go and acquaint the lords of session with the state of the said affair and how, after much pains taken by them in order to adjust the said differences, yet all endeavours that way through the obstinacy of the pursuers proved fruitless and unsuccessfull.

11. Remitted to a committee to consider and report to next annual convention on an overture given in by the commissioner of Stirling "that Scotland being under an inequality in fishing by reason of the difference of the salt employed in fishing and duty thereon, that therefore the subjects of Scotland should be upon the same footing (with regard to the salt so far as employed in fishing) with the subjects of England, whereby the subjects of Scotland will be the better enabled and encouraged to prosecute the trade of fishing upon a just equality."

Overture from Stirling.

12. Remitted to a committee to meet on Tuesday next to compose differences amongst the inhabitants of the burgh of Queensferry.

Queensferry.

13. The same day was presented to the convention an overture from several of the burrows of the southern and western shires, whereof the tenor follows: That whereas by the article of the treaty of Union, the parliament of Scotland, in consideration that the wool masters would be at a great loss by reason of the strict prohibition of the export of wool, did therefore appropriate fourteen thousand pounds sterling to be paid out of the equivalent in the space of seven years, being two thousand pounds yearly to be employed for wool manufactories at the sight of the commissioners of the equivalent, as also seeing that two thousand pounds as the first payment fell due at Martinmas last and that a due effectual application of the said sum will not only be of use to the wool masters and to several of the royal burrows in the southern and western shires, it is therefore desired the convention may recommend to the commissioners of the equivalent to advance the said sum of two thousand pounds sterling to the several burghs aftermentioned, according to the proportions after-specified, viz., [the burghs of Dumfries, Jedburgh, Selkirk, Peebles and Kirkcudbright £400 sterling each,] and the burgh of Annan have also a part of the said equivalent proportionally with the rest of the said burghs of the said first two thousand pounds sterling; and which proportions being paid to them respectively, that the convention may ordain and appoint that each of the said burghs shall employ the sum received by them in manufacturing tarrad or laid wool in such sort of manufacture as shall be most usefull, and for that end that they imploy the poor that are able to work and appoint servants for their oversight and directione, and that they be accountable for the sum received and due application therof yearly at the generall conventione that therby the commissioners of the equivalent may be satisfied the summs advanced in the terms aforesaid are duly applied conforme to the act of parliament and articles of the treaty above specifiet; which being considered be the conventione they recommended the severall burrows abovenamed to the commissioners of the equivalent to the effect above mentioned.

Letters to Duke of Argyle and Earle of Leven.

14. The conventione recommended to the committe to sit after dissolving of this present conventione to writ to his grace the Duke of Argyle and the Earle of Leven that the exacting the assise upon herrings was very prejudiciall and discouraging to the herring fishing and that their lordships, as having right to the said assise, would be pleased to propose some expedient for removing the said grivance by obtaining some equivalent thairfor as they in their discretione should think fitt, and that their lordships would be pleased to acquaint the committe if it would be expedient or not to address her Majestie for that end, and that the committe send their reasons to these lords why the same should be taken away.

27 November 1707.

Additione to the fifteen overture.

15. The conventione appointed the following additione to be added to the fifteen overture anent the linnen cloath and to be transmitted therewith as a part of the overture, viz. :—And in regard that the linnen cloath is so great a branch of trade and to be regulat in the breadth and length as aforesaid, and that befor the same can be made uniforme it will be very expensive to these concerned in making the said linnen to provyde looms and other necessar materialls for that effect, that for their farder encouragement all linnen to be exported be declared free of duty, in the same manner as the woollen cloath; and more especially considering that the present duty upon linnen exported will yeald a very small and inconsiderable duty to her Majestie, wheras by granting the forsaid exemptione a farr greater quantity of linnen cloath will be exported, and it is most obvious that the product and returns therof will very much add to her Majesties revenue by the duties that will arise from the saids returns.

27 November
1707. that wheras ther are severall exactions made by the custome officers for fees, therfor that the board would please to give a particular table of these dues by which the merchants may know what they are to pay at the severall ports, as also what is to be payed for the oath, certificat, and registration of ships, barks, and veshells, which are deemed free by the articles of union ; secundo, that ther be severall small veshells and open boats, some of them not exceeding a chalder or tuo of coalls, and the place wher they load at being at a great distance from any custome house, that ther may be some effectuall method taken for preventing of the charge of coquets and other fees exacted theron at present, and in case they have any other goods to transport that ther may be custome house officers appointed, inrespect severall places complain of this, such as Kirkcudbright which is twenty four miles from any custome house, Frazerburgh and Peterhead more than the said distance, and Craill sixteen miles distance, Innerkeithing, and severall others; to the commissioners for the burghs of Edinburgh [and sixteen other burghs as a committee to meet after the dissolving of this convention], to use their endeavours to procure ane satisfieing answer to the saids overtures from the commissioners of her Majesties customes, in such due and competent time that unless they be redressed the same may be represented to the parliament. . . . And farder the conventione recomended to the severall burrows to send up ane account to the committe of what fees have been exacted by the officers of her Majesties customes from any of their inhabitants since the commencement of the Union.

17. The convention recomended to the committe appointed to sitt after disolving of this present convention to consider the book written be Mr William Black, advocat, anent the priviledges of the royall burrows. Mr William wrongous imprisonment.

3. In pursuance of the preceding act, the committee found that the imprisonment of Clark and Frazer "was unwarrantable, and whereunto both the magistrats and conservator were accessory, and therefor it is the oppinione of the committe the summ of eleven hundred pounds Scots money be alloued to the saids Mr Alexander Clark and John Frazer in name of damnages and expence sustained by them through the said wrongous imprisonment; and the committe remitts to the next generall conventione to determine how farr the saids magistrats of Campveer and how farr the said John Vere Kennedy shall be lyable in payment of the said sum."

The committe having read her Majesties letter directed to the royal burrows, dated at Kingsingtoun the twenty-seventh day of January 170⁷/₈, with ane English translation of the double of a letter in French from the toun of Campveer to her Majestie, they appointed and hereby appoint both the said letter and double to be recorded in the burgh book, as also appoint the wholl members of the committe to be acquainted to meet at Edinburgh in the ordinary place upon Tuesday come a fourthnight, being the twenty fourth instant, to consider her Majesties said letter and draw ane ansuer therto, and in the meantime the committe recomends to Sir Samuell M'Clellan, lord provest of Edinburgh, to acquaint Sir David Nairn, secretary deput, with their resolutione taken hereanent; lykeas the committe in order to the discussing of the said affair more succesfully ordaine the wholl members who are in toun to meet upon Tuesday next at tuo of the clock in the afternoon to enquire into the matters complained of and to prepare the same against the meeting of the grand committe, of which letters the tennors follow:—Sic superscribitur: ANNE, R. Right trusty and well beloved, we greet you well. Whereas we did receive a letter from the toun of Campveer, dated 27th of August last, complaining in very pressing terms of continued infractions of the staple contract, to the great prejudice of the toun of Campveer and of that part of our kingdome who enjoy many considerable priviledges by vertue of the said contract, and wheras the envoy of the States Generall residing at our court has seconded the said letter by repeated instances to have the abuses complained of rectified and the transgressors punished, we have thought fitt by these to signifie to yow that it is our royall will and pleasure that the publick faith be inviolably kept on the part of our subjects, conforme to the staple contract, and we have herewith sent yow a copy of the forsaid letter from the town of Campveer to ws that yow may enquire into the matter therein contained, and if there have been contraveeners of the staple contract to enquire if they have been prosecut according to law, and that yow lay an account of these matters before ws that we may give such further directions therein as may suit with our just and royall regard to our good allies, our tender concern for the preservatione of the privileges and advantages which belong to our subjects, and our great desire for the encouragement and encrease of trade. So we bidd yow heartily farewell. Given at our court at Kingsing-ton, the 27th day of January 170⁷₈ and of our reign the 6th year. By

MADAM.—After we had taken the liberty in the moneth of June in the year 1703 to present humbly to your Majestie our just complaints concerning the continuall breaches of the staple contract by your Majesties subjects in that part of Great Brittain formerly called Scotland, and that in the issue it had pleased your Majestie graciously to writ upon that affair in favours of our city to the commissioners of the royall burrows concerned in trade in such pressing terms, we were made to hope that by so favourable a dis-positione on your Majesties part we might at length reap the true sweats

so long in vain looked for from a contract which cost ws so dear and by which the Brittish natione enjoy so many priviledges, immunities, and other advantages of trade very considerable in this city. But on the contrair we find ourselues yet obliged to remonstrat, with all submissione, to your Majestie, that these affairs are in a worse conditione at present then hitherto, without the least instance of amending so nottar and inexcusable contraventions, which hath so encouraged the breach that the merchants and masters of ships haue not only dared publickly to refuse to come to this city under the convoy which the states of this province of Zeland, at our reiterat solicitations, had sent of purpose to Edinburgh about the last spring (the ordinary time stipulat by the said contract) to make the last essay, but, moreover, at the same time they took the occasione of ane English convoy, and a litle after of ane Dutch convoy, to come to Rotterdam, to the number of more then seventy, loaden with staple commodities; in so much that the convoy of this province after having remained to no purpose more then a moneth in the road of Leith was obliged to return hither only with three or four small barks which arrived at the staple port. Upon all which we are resolved for our intier exoneratione to intimat of new to the royall burrows of North Britain who are in contract with ws, and to demand of them ane just and satisfactory reparatione, but as we are persuaded that these last efforts with them, as well as all our other successive protestations upon this head, will be fruitless, unless actually backed and seconded by a new declaratione of your Majesties will to the saids burrows and ministers of state of that part of your kingdome and to whom your Majestie shall think fitt. Wee presume once more to intreat your Majestie with profound respect that you would be pleased to honour ws with your sovereigne protectione, to the end we may once succeed in so just and reasonable demands, believing that we may at present demand this favour of your Majestie with more hope and appearance of success then ever, in so much as by the fruitless expeditione of a convoy so sufficient, and arriving at the prefixt time, the breakers of the contract are deprived of every excuse and pretext which they made use of hitherto to elude the laws and sincere intentione of your Majestie and to lay the blame of their not performing their part of the contract, if it had been possible, upon ws. Expecting then this favour from your Majesties goodness, we pray God, with all our heart, may take your sacred persone under his pouerful and divine safeguard and may encrease more and more the prosperity and glory of your reign, to the good of your subjects and for the commone interest of all Europe. 2. The committe, after reading ane English translatione of a letter in Dutch from the toun of Campveer to the royall burrows, dated the second day of July j^m vij^c and seven years, appointed the samen to be recorded ; and ordained Sir Androw Kennedy, conservator, as soon as possible to give in a memoriall to the committe of all the breaches of the staple contract since the year of God (blank). Followes the tennor of the forsaid letter :—Noble and honourable lords. Although we can scarce promise ourselves better success upon this present then upon the many complaints without redress formerly made with so much earnest in our successive letters, remonstrances and protestations, almost to every conventione of the royall burrows, of the breaches and contraventions of the staple contract, yet we would not forbear (for our full exoneratione) to writ yow this one time more upon that subject and hereby to notefie to your lordships the just reasons of displeasure that have now againe of late been given ws, which we think we can at this time doe with as much ground and convictione as ever befor, seeing the states of Zealand, upon our repeated intreaties to deprive the backward of all sorts of subterfuge by which they have hitherto endeavoured to paliat their notorious transgressions to elide the good laws and directions (and if possible to bring the blame upon us), send timeous and sufficient convoy once more to experiment what ships would come hither under the protectione thereof, but so farr from that that the skippers and merchants, my lords, subject to your jurisdictione, did take this opportunity of sending their goods with safety to the staple place as they indeed are obliged to doe, but on the contrary we heard that severalls openly declared they would not put themselves under that convoy, but shortly after the departur of the said convoy with three or four small vessels only, two wholl fleets, the first under ane English and the last under a Hollands convoy, arrived at Rotterdam, with a vast quantity of staple goods, so that this one example so prejudicial to our toun ought once to open your lordships eyes and to cause yow see that all the exceptions that the transgressors have hitherto made about the want of timeous convoy have been nothing ells but meer excuses to committ their transgressions unpunished. Wee must acknowledge that we cannot comprehend how a natione so famous for their integrity and exact keeping of their word can, in prejudice of the publick faith, break and transgress so solemn a contract (the fundatione whereof was laid two hundred years agoe upon a mutual hermony and faith and which hath been kept on both sides thus long with so much exactness and sincerity) as if there were no tye nor obligatione on either side. Lykeas, upon this occassione, we cannot but shew your lordships that we very much strange that your lordships has not hitherto ansuered our last letter dated the fourth of July j^m vij^o and five, in which we desired the ratificatione of the latter agreement made in the year j^m vij^o and two, so much the more that in it the life and executione of the wholl staple contract is contained and without which (in our opinione) no redress of the decay of the staple can be expected. Therefore, for brevities sake, we refer your lordships to the contents of our said last letter and to our other just complaints made from time to time. We expect that your lordships will, with more zeall then hes hitherto been shewn, consider the affairs of the staple, cause punish the transgressors as they deserve, and prevent all further grounds of discontent and loss of our toun and the inliabitants therof, and finnally make us find the redress and satisfactione which we have sought so long in vain, wherewith we remain your lordships most obliged friends, shirrif baillies of the city of Campvere. 2. The committe, considering her Majesties letter with the double of a letter sent by the toun of Campveer to her anent the staple, and transmitted by her Majestie to the royall burrows, they made the following ansuers thereto and appointed the same to be recorded, of which the tennors follow :—May it please your Majestie. Your Majesties letter of the 27th January last came to us by the hands of the lord provest of Edinburgh, who having called the commissioners appointed for the affaires of the staple port by the last generall conventione, we have in obedience to your Majesties commands made strict enquiry anent the aledged infractions of the staple contract complained off, and we find that the reasons why our merchants went to Rotterdam and other ports and did not arrive at Campveer were because they had not sufficient convoyes for securing of their trade, for albeit by the staple contract the toun of Campveer be oblidged to send four well furnished ships of warr yearly, not mounted under thirty guns a piece, whereof two in April and two in October, during the warr, as a convoy to our ships, yet sometimes they neglected to send any, and at other times but one, and that not sufficiently manned or of competent force to guard our ships, and particularly in the year 1704 when our ships sailed with the convoy then sent two of the most valuable fell into the hands of their enemies which our merchants imputed to the insufficiency of the convoy. Wee, by our letter in July 1706, to the toun of Campveer, did complain of our wanting sufficient convoyes whereunto we had neither return nor redress. They did, indeed, in July last acquaint ws that many of our ships had under ane English and Dutch convoy gone to Rotterdam whill the convoy they sent returned with three or four small veshells to Campveer. We upon receipt of that letter made enquiry in the matter and caused our agent prosecut the delinquents who gave in for their defence that there was but one ship sent in place of two due by the staple contract and even that ship sent was neither well manned nor of a competent force. Wee doe, therefor, humbly lay befor your Majestie this affair as it truly stands, and since the toun of Campveer proposes that the staple contract be inviolable kept it is our humble address that your Majestie would be pleased to recomend to them that they on the other hand take care that sufficient and well provyded convoyes be sent in due season for guarding and convoying our ships. We shall aluayes on our part, with the utmost zeall and care, maintain and preserve the publick faith, and from time to time give the necessary directions for punishing delinquents, and we return your Majestie our most humble and hearty thanks for the great care and concerne your Majestie is pleased to express towards your royall burrows; and as your royall pleasure shall aluayes direct ws in the due observance of what belongs to the staple contract so we are firmly resolved from a deep sense of our many obligations to testifie upon all occasiouns our dutyfull zeal and affectione to your sacred persone and government, which God long preserve and maintain. toun of Camp-veers letter.

3. Right honourable. Wee have had one or tuo of your letters complaining of the contraventions of the staple contract. We would have returned the ansuers sooner but having gevin our necessary orders to our agent to prosecut the delinquents we delayed till we should be in a capacity to give you some satisfying return. We writ to yow in July 1706 complaining of the want of sufficient convoyes, which we must say is not yet redrest and when our agent pursued those mentioned in your last letter for goeing under English and Dutch convoyes to Rotterdam, they gave in their defence that the Zeland convoy then in the Firth was not of sufficient force to protect them. Wee have received a letter from her Majestie, our Sovereigne, by which wee understand yow have laid your complaints befor her and could have wished that befor you had complained to her Majestie yow would have redrest our former grievances offered to yourselves for not sending sufficient convoyes to guard our trade. By the staple contract we should have tuo sent twice a year and yet these severall years by past yow have sent only one, and that of very small force. Wee take occasione at the same time to acquaint you that the observing of the staple contract depends in a great measure upon your sending good and sufficient convoyes for guarding and protecting our ships, which being done we shall take care for performing all on our part. As to the report of the commissioners that were sent to Campveer in the year 1702, whereof you crave the royall burrows approbatione, we find the said report hes not yet been considered by them but shall represent the same to the generall conventione in July next, we being only a committe autherized for the matters remitted to ws by the conventione. Right honorable, [etc.] Edinburgh, 2 March 1708.

4. The committe, considering that by the copy of ane appeal given in to the lords of sessione by Sir Andrew Kennedy he insinuats that the communicating the benefite of the staple to strangers being discovered by the burrows they did approve of the same without challenge and past noe censure upon it, they appoint a copy of the appeal to be laid befor the next generall conventione.

Overtures in relation to

burghs.

3. The same day, was presented to the conventione severall overtures in relatione to trade and other concerns of the royall burrows, which being read was ordained to be recorded, whereof the tennor followes :—Memoriall for the committe of the royall burrows. (1^o) That the condition of the staple port be taken under consideratione, and that some effectuall method be taken for keeping the same at Campveer conforme to the staple contract, and for that effect that due provisione be made for seasonable convoyes to secure the ships that trade to Holland, and if this cannot be made effectuall to applye to her Majestie that the royall burrows may be made free of the said contract and staple port and from payment of any dues to the conservator upon that account. (2^o) Inrespect by ane express article of the late treaty of union ther is a particular reservatione of the haille rights and priviledges of the royall burrows, and that notwithstanding thereof the unfree traders do enjoy a great part of the benefite of trade and do not pay any suteable proportion of the taxt roll effeirand to their trade, but the royall burrows are still burdened therewith, it is most necessar to consider what can be effectually done for obligeing of the said unfree traders to bear ane just and equall proportione, whither by the royall burrows their making applicatione and presenting this grievance to the parliament of Great Britain or any other method shall be thought most fitt for attaining the forsaid end. (3^o) In regard of the severall good laws and acts of parliament made for encouraging of fishing in this part of Great Britain, that considerable drawbacks are allowed to the exporters of herring, salmond, and whit fish, and now that the time of fishing approaches and seeing the said trade of fishing is more considerable then all the other branches of trade which the royall burrows do enjoy, it deserves the committes serious consideratione to fall upon such wayes and meanes that may best advance and promote the forsaid manufactory. (4^o) Seeing by the treaty of Union there is now access for ane open and free trade to the West Indies and to all other forreigne places wher the English have access to trade, wherby the manufactories of linnen and woolen may be exported and considerable returns made to the advantage of this natione in generall and of the royall burrows in particular, the committe will be pleased to consider what may be the best and most effectuall method for promoting the saids manufactories in the severall burghs royall and exporting thereof furth of the kingdome, and the convention appointed the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Dundie, Aberdeen, Stirling, Lithgow, Glasgow, Haddington, Selkirk, and Dunbarton, as a committe to consider the saids overtures and what ells should be remitted to them by the conventione.

4. The committe to whom the consideratione of the overtures given in to the conventione was remitted reported that they having mett and considered the first paragraph of the saids overtures concerning the staple port, they were of oppinion the consideration thereof should be delayed till the next annual conventione, in respect the committe appointed by the last annual convention for the staple port had not yet received any ansuer to the letter written by them to her Majestie and toun of Campveer thereanent; and having likewise considered the second paragraph of the said memoriall they fand the committe appointed by the last generall convention for the unfree trade had already appointed the unfree traders to be cited befor them upon the first Thursday of June next and therefor delayed the further consideratione thereof till the said committe make report of their proceedur thereanent to the next annuall conventione; and having also considered the third paragraph of the said overtures it was their opinion the convention should recomend to the said committe for trade appointed by the last generall convention to draw up ane address to be presented to her Majestie in relatione to the said affair; and having likewise considered the last paragraph of the saids overtures they were of oppinione the conventione should remitt the further consideratione thereof to the said committe appointed by the last generall conventione for trade that they may prepare the same against the meeting of the next annual conventione. Which report of the said committe being heard and considered by the conventione, they approved thereof and recomended to the said committe to draw up the said address to be presented to her Majestie in relatione to the said affair.

Cess, taxt roll.

5. The conventione takeing to their consideratione that by ane act of the British parliament, intituled Ane act for granting ane aid to her Majestie to be raised by a land tax in Great Britain for the service of the year j^m vij^c and eight, the particular proportione of cess payable by the severall royall burrows is not duly adjusted conforme to their present taxt roll, and that by the said act it is particularly provyded that the proportione of the said burrows in Scotland be rated and payed as their taxt roll now is or shall be settled by themselves, therefor the conventione recomends to the burghs of Edinburgh and Aberdeen to draw out a list of the taxt roll as it was last proportioned by the royal burrows, with the particular sum payable by each burgh, and appoints their agent to send inclosed in the next generall missive the particular quota payable by the respective burghs conforme to the said taxt roll, and recomends to the burghs of Edinburgh and Dumbarton, or any one of them, to delyver ane authentick double thereof to the receiver of her Majesties cess of North Britain to be the rule by which he is to collect the same in all tyme coming during the continuance of the said taxt roll, and this to be delyvered under forme of instrument.

Qualifications of representatives in parliament.

6. Severall members having craved advyce how to proceed in the electione of fitt persons to represent them in the ensueing parliament of Great Brittain, particularly anent the qualifications of persons to represent them, as being a matter of great import and concern to the burrows, both in itself and in the preparative as to ensueing parliaments, and the convention having taken this matter into their consideratione, they befor ansuer remitted the consideratione thereof to the committe appointed to consider the overtures, and recomends to the said committe to revise their records, the laws and acts of parliament and acts of conventione in relatione to the qualifications of persons to represent the burrows in parliaments or generall conventions of estates. EDINBURGH.

14 May 1708.

7. The committe having reported to the conventione that they had purused their records and acts of conventione of burrows relating to the qualifications of persons to represent them in parliaments, as also severall laws and acts of parliament relative to this matter, and they found that by the ancient constitutione and many acts of conventione for severall ages, and by severall acts of parliament in severall reigns of our sovereigns, that persons comissionat by burghs to represent them in parliament or conventione of estates behoved to be trading merchants, residenters, and who bore charges within burgh, and who were gainers or losers in their concerns, and that at severall times persons not so qualified have been rejected and that these acts when not observed have been revived by subsequent acts, and the convention having considered the report of the committe, with the acts of parliament and acts of conventione of burrows as they stand recorded in their books, to which the report did relate, they did remitt this matter to the said committe to be revised and reported to them against the morrow at ten oclock at which time they are to have the same under consideratione. Report as to qualifications of representatives in parliament.

15 May 1708.

8. The committe did resum their former report in relation to the qualifications of persons to represent the burrows in parliament, with this additione that when the burrows in Scotland were a third estate of the natione and had so full a representation of above sixty members, it was not alwayes easie to find so many persons qualified conforme to the constitutione of burrows and the forsaide acts to represent them in the parliament of Scotland, and therefor tho frequently revived were not constantly and duly observed, yet seeing now by the union of the tuo kingdomes only fifteen persons are to represent the wholl burrows in Scotland it will be easier to find fifteen trading merchants to represent them in the ensuing parliaments of Great Britain, and considering the great poverty of the burghs occasioned through the great decay of trade and the necessity to have persons to represent them who will be concerned in the advancement and promotting of trade and the interests of burghs arising therefrom, Act as to qualifications of representatives in parliament.

without which they will not be able to bear their proportion of cess and other burdens within burgh, they are of oppinion that it should be recommended from the severall burghs as also from this convention to the wholl burghs of North Britain to make choise of knowing skilfull trading merchants, burgesses of any burgh in Scotland, to represent them in all the subsequent parliaments of Great Britain, as being the fittest persons conforme to the qualifications forsaid required by the said acts and most concerned in the interest of the burrows and most sutable to the erectione and constitutione therof. The conventione having heard the forsaid report, and haveing taken the same with the severall acts of parliament and acts of convention of burrows as they stand recorded in their books, in relation to the qualifications of persons to represent them in parliaments, as also considering the great poverty of the burrows which hes ensued through the decay of trade and not observing of these acts and qualifications of commissioners to represent them, as likewise considering the smalness of the number who are now to represent the burrows in Scotland in the parliament of Great Britain, and that there will nothing more contribute to the retriving of the decayed circumstances and conditions of the burghs and to the advancement and promoveing of trade in the United Kingdome and the interest and advantage of the burghs then to have knowing trading merchants to represent them in the ensuing parliaments, therefor they doe hereby seriously recommend to all the burghs of Scotland as they are cantoned and in districts to make choise of honnest knowing trading merchants, burgesses, or magistrats and counsellors of any burgh in Scotland, to represent them in the ensuing parliament of Great Britain, as being a necessary qualificatione, conforme to the ancient erectione and constitutione of burghs, enjoyned and required by severall laws and acts of parliament, and by many acts and conventions of burrows, such persons being most concerned in the promoting of trade and the true interest of burrows, and which will be the true mean and way to revive and restore the decayed circumstances and conditions of the burghs, and whereby they will be enabled to bear their proportion of the cess and publick burdens as well as the other burdens and charges within burgh.

We do most heartily congratulat the success of your Majesties navy and armes, so speedily and seasonably provyded to defeat that horrid interprise. We do likeuise, in all humble duty, give your Majestie full assurance that we shall never be wanting to maintain and defend your Majesties royall persone and successione in the protestant line against all attempts of the Pretender and his adherents; and that the divine protectione may be aluayes towards your sacred persone and government, that your counsellis and armes may be ever attended with success, and that, by the blessing of God, your life and reign may be long and prosperous, is and shall be the constant prayer of, may it please your Majestie, [etc.]

Preses.

1. Sir Samuell M'Clellan, lord provost of Edinburgh, elected preses.

Members
qualified.

Immediatly thereafter the wholl members of conventione with their clerks and deput tooke and subscribed the abjuratiōe ; as alsoe such other of the members as had not formerly taken the oath of alegiance did take the same and subscribe it with the assurance.

Revising commissions.

2. Appointed a committee to revise the commissions.

7 July 1708.

Commissions
approven.

3. Approved of the whole commissions except that of Tain the consideration of which was again remitted to committee.

Missive remitted.

4. Remitted the general missive to the consideration of the committee appointed to revise the commissions.

Heads of missive continued.

5. Having received report of the committee, the convention appointed certain articles to be heads of next geueal missive.

Erecting
manufactories.

6. The conventione considering that notwithstanding by the sixth article of the missive each burgh is appointed to erect and set up manufactories within their several bounds for employing idle and poor people and thereby disburden these burrows of maintaining such persones, yet ther hes been hitherto noe effectuall executione of that act, to the great prejudice and apparent ruine of the state of burrows if not timeously remeeded, therefore they doe not only appoint and ordaine the said sixth article to continue to be ane head of the missive but also they doe of new statute that each burgh doe report their dilligence to the next generall conventione of their puting the forsaid act to due executione, with certificatione that all or such of the saids burrows as shall failyie in executing the said act and giving in report of their dilligence to the said next annuall conventione shall be obliged to pay in to the agent of the royall burrows the sum of ane hundred pounds, Scots money, without delay or defalcatione, and which sums so to be incurred of penalty are appointed to be applied for the use of the royall burrows who shall give obedience by setting up manufactories and imploying their poor and idle inhabitants.

Erecting
manufactories.

7. It being represented by some of the members that in severall burghs wherein there are mortifications that the same are missapplied and gevin to severall persons and uses contrair to the foundations, wherby not only such pious dotations are discouraged but also many people are incouraged in ane idle and lazie triffling their youth, and become depauperat and burdings to the places of their residence, having no vther view but by their relations or interest with the managers of such mortifications to be provyded in ane livelyhood, therefore the conventione expressly inhibite and discharge all such misapplications in time coming, and do hereby declare that when any of the burrows shall be found guilty of or accessory unto any such mismanagements they shall be censured and punished by the conventione according to their demerit.

applicatione of mortifications.

8. The conventione considering that nothing does more contribute to the decay of the royall burrows then the idleness of their inhabitants, and that the same is much incouraged by the supine negligence of such magistrats as either allow or connive at the harbour and resett of idle and vagrant persons, who when they become bankrupt and destitute of livelyhood doe creep into royall burrows and there lurk and must certainly be subsisted either by sorning or thieving or some other such indirect methods, therefore the conventione does discharge any of their burrows to suffer any idle or vagrant persons to remaine within there burghs, and to stop and hinder any such people to come and reside amongst them in time coming, and for that effect they shall convene befor them all such idle or vagrant persons and take an account of the way of their living and if they cannot give satisfying accounts of themselves that they can live without being a burden to the place then they are instantly to be removed therefrae; and each burgh is expressly appointed to report their dilligence in this matter to the next generall conventione, under the same penalties and certifications as are contained in the act made anent erecting of manufactories. It is aluise hereby declared that wher mortifications are express in their destinations and applications the same are to be punctually observed according to the letter thereof; as also that in such burghs wherein are objects of charity, either consisting of persons old and superannuat, who have been antient burgesses and inhabitants, or decrippd sickly persons who are not able to work, that such are excepted and nouayes comprehended in this act.

of lands.

9. The committee appointed by the 11th act of the general convention in July 1705 reported that they had considered the sale of "the lands of Bridgehaugh and the lands upon the east side of the shoar calsay belonging to the burgh of Stirling," and found that the same had been profitably sold and the price applied towards payment of the town's debt. The convention approved and appointed the disposition to be recorded in the burgh records.

Act for composing differences in burghs.

10. The burghs of Aberdeen, Kirkaldie, Montrose, Inverness, Peebles and Kilrenny produced extracts of the "act for composing of differences within burgh, etc., and the conventione did yet allow such burghs as have not yet given in extracts thereof to transmitt the same to their clerks betuixt and the first of November next."

Bruntisland.

11. The convention directed that the report by the committee appointed to see the sum given to the burgh of Bruntisland bestowed for repairing their harbour should be a head of next general missive.

Tain.

12. Approved of report by the committee appointed to see the sum of 500 merks given to the burgh of Tain for building their tolbooth rightly applied.

9 July 1708.

Culross.

13. Anent the petitione from the burgh of Culross, shewing that the said burgh being now destitute of magistrats and thereby rendered incapable to send any member to the honorable conventione, in and through the late magistrats their not takeing and subscribing the oath of objuratione as by law appointed, whereby the commone good of the said burgh and all its affairs are like to suffer and perish, therefor craving the conventionone would fall upon such wayes and means as they should think fitt for restoring the said toun againe to a settled magistracy, and in the meantime to autherize some of their number to repair to the said toun, at whose sight some fitt persons may be appointed by the community to uplift the commone good and to applye the same for payment of the publick and other debts, as the petitione bears. Which being considered be the conventione, they declare they will address her Majestie for a popular electione in order to obtaine a new magistracy for the said burgh, and in the meantyme ordained the burghs of Stirling, Linlithgow, Dumfermling, Innerkeithing and Queensferry, or any three of them, to repair to the said burgh of Culross upon the tenth of August next, that at their sight the community may chuse tuo or three fitt persons to uplift the commone good and cess of the said burgh, the persons sua chosen finding cautione for their intromissione and right applicatione thereof and qualifying conforme to law and that the saids commissioners order the stent to be laid on as formerly.

Culross.

14. The committee appointed in 1706 to visit the tenement in Queensferry sold to William Patersone and to enquire how the price was bestowed, reported that the tenement was in a ruinous condition, that the burgh was not in a capacity to repair it, and that Patersone was the highest offerer, having offered 600 merks Scots which "was given in dote for augmenting the ministers stipend of the burgh."

15. The conventione approved ane address to be sent to her Majestie upon occasione of the great victory obtained against the Freuch King in Flanders, as also ane address to his royall highness Prince George of Denmark, with ane letter to the Earle of Godolphine, lord high treasurer of Great Brittain, of which addresses and letter the tennor folloues:—May it please your Majestie. Wee your royall burrows in conventione assembled esteem ourselves in duty bound to lay hold of this occasione to evidence to the world the great sense we haue of the many blessings we enjoy under your Majesties glorious reign, and likeuise to express our humble thankfulness for your Majesties constant care and concern for us and all our rights and priviledges. Letter to
of Denmark.

Folloues the Letter to Prince George :—May it please your Royall Highness. Wee having had occasione at our annual meeting to consider the trade of this part of the natione, the protectione wherof doth so much tend both for increasing of her Majesties customes and the welfare of the subjects, we humbly begg leave to represent to your royall highness that many of our ships haue been taken of late by French privateers who doe very much abound upon our coasts, and any litle trade we haue is thereby rendered so precarious and uncertain that we must earnestly beseech that for the futur the convoyes and cruzers who are to guard our coasts may be ordered to call at the seuerall herbours and ports from the firth of Forth to the Orkneys on the east part, and from the Isle of Man to the mouth of Clyde on the west part, and take such ships as may be therein under their safe conduct and convoy. We also humbly represent to your royall highness that Captain Campbell, commander of her Majesties ship the Dumbartone, having been taken of late by the French upon the western coast, our trade hath suffered extreamly since that time for want of ships of force there, which we are confident your royall highness will cause take care of for the future. Wee intreat your royall highness in your great wisdome would be pleased to consider that seeing a great part of our trade is only from one harbour here to another, that therefor some ships of a small force would be of great use to protect us and to delyver us from the dangers to quhich our ships are obnoxious from small privateers which lurk in the creeks of the coast, and likewise that the ships appointed for that statione may be ordered to convoy our ships bound eastward to the mouth of the Sound in the same manner our friggots were formerly in use to doe. These things we in all humility lay befor your royall highness, being confidently assured of your great care and concerne for the trade of this part of the natione and the protectione thereof, and praying for all health and happiness to your royall highness. May it please your royall Highness [etc.] Edinburgh, 10 July on this occasione to give your lordship our humble thanks for the books relating to her Majesties customes transmitted to us by your lordships order, and likewise to assure your lordship that we shall still use our endeavours to give all due encouragement to these are or shall be im-ployed in her Majesties revenues. We have addressed his royall highness the Prince George of Denmark, for securing our costs from the insults of French privateers which doe constantly infest us, and are very prejudiciall to our trade, wherein we doe earnestly intreat your lordships concurrence. The many demonstrations we haue had of your favour and the great confidence we repose in your lordship affords this new trouble that your lordship would be pleased to doe us the honour to present our humble address to her Majestie with our letter to his Royall Highness which is herewith transmitted, and we doe assure your lordship that upon all occasions we will give proof how much we are in all sincerity, may it

Earl of Panmuir and toun of Brichen.

20. The commissioners for the burghs of Stirling and Dumbarton, appointed by the committe to interpose with the Earle of Panmuir in order to accomodat the difference betuixt his lordship and the toun of Brichen, reported that the earle being by contract obliged to chose a baillie out of a leet to be made up by the toun at Michaelmass yearly, and the persone last chosen being rendered incapable to exerce through his not qualifying himself according to law, and that no new leet being given the earle did put in a baillie of his own chosing, but at the same tyme the Lord Grange having right from the earle was willing to give it under his hand that the puting in the present baillie should be no infringement of the touns priuiledges and so was willing to keep up friendship with the toun of Brichen and observe the contract strictly in all time coming ; wherupon the conventione appointed the commissioners of Dundie, Aberdeen, Stirling and Montrose, to wait upon the earle and thank his lordship in the conventions name for his condescendance in this affair and to intreat his lordships fauour to the said burgh in time coming.

burgh of Tain.

21. Appointed a committee to make exact inquiry into the ancient constitution, use and wont of the election of the magistrates and town council of the burgh of Tain, and if the same has been altered, with full power "to make a new sett and constitution for the said burgh conforme to its ancient constitutione, use and wont and to take all such other methods as may creat a good understanding in the said burgh, to the effect they may live in emity and peace and within the due bounds and limits that is suitable to all the members of such incorporations."

Justices of the peace.

22. The commissioners from the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Dundie, and Dumbarton, who were appointed by the committe to consult her Majesties advocat anent the true extent and bounds of the justices of peace, their jurisdictione, inregard of seuerall inroachments made be them upon the royall burrows, and in case any new power hath been granted to the saids justices contrair to the rights of the burrows to see what was the readiest way to get redress, reported that they having informed the lord advocat thereof his lordship answered that he was desired by the Earle of Sunderland to enquire into the very same affair now depending betuixt the toun of Edinburgh and the justices of peace of the shire of Midlouthian and to transmitt to her Majestie his opinione thereanent, which he was to doe, and desired the other burrows to acquaint him with any incroachment made upon them by the saids justices of peace that he might acquaint the Queen therewith; whereupon the conventione appointed Sir Robert Forbes, their agent, furthwith to transmitt to the haill burrows the lord advocats opinione theiranent.

23. The committe appointed to consult the lord advocat anent the staple contract reported that it was his lordships oppinione that the staple contract could not be broken up on pretence of violations on either side, inregard of a particular clause in the contract alloweing only reparatione against the transgressors thereof, but that the conventione might address her Majestie and represent the many infractions of the staple made by the toun of Campvere and with all to intreat the Queen would be pleased to signifie to the said toun that unless they obserued the contract punctually in time coming she would interpose her royall authoritie in order to the freeing the burrows therefrom, whereupon the conventione appointed the burghs of Dundie, Stirling and Dumbarton, to bring in to the conventione the draught of the said address and of the ansuere to the toun of Campvere and secretary Boyll. Thereafter the conventione appointed this report to be reconsidered inrespect it seems to have proceeded upon wrong informatione.

26. The committe appointed to bring in ane draught of ane address to her Majestie anent the staple, with ane ansuer to the letters from the toun of Campvere and Mr Secretary Boyll thereanent, reported the same to the conventione, which being read was votted and approven, the tennor whereof followes :—May it please your Majestie. We your royall burrows, assembled in this present generall conventione, having taken your Majesties gracious letter concerning the observance of the staple contract with the toun of Campvere under our serious consideratione, and thereby understanding that it is your Majesties inclinatione that we should continue the samen, we doe in all humble duty complye with your royall pleasure and doe resolve to pass by all the former breaches the toun of Campvere has made on their part, upon expectatione that in time coming they will send seasonable and suitable convoys to our ships and performe the other conditions of that contract, for quhich end wee humbly desire that your Majestie would be graciously pleased to recomend it seriously to the states of Zeland and toun of Campvere that they give us no farther ground of complaint nor discouragement to the merchants and masters of ships who shall for hereafter resort to the Netherlands, that so ane good correspondence may be cultivated betuixt them and us and that your Majestie may receive no further trouble by complaints upon the account of new breaches and failyures by either parties concerned. We doe earnestly pray that the Almighty God may pouer forth his best blessings upon your royall persone and government, as being the greatest earthly hapyness that is proposed by, may it please your Majestie, [etc.]

vere.

Folloues the ansuer to the toun of Campveres letter :—Right Honourable. In answer to your letter of the 18 of May and of the memoriall you transmitted to us, we haue after full consideratione of the samen resolved to pass by all the grounds of complaint formerly given us by ther not sending seasonable and suteable convoys and other breaches of the staple contract, and are willing that any mistakes which have fallen out upon either side be buried in oblivione, and firmly to obserue the staple contract for hereafter, upon the confident expectatione that ye will undertake and assure us that ye will performe what ye are bound to doe upon your part in the precise terms of the contract, and if any failiure should happen, wherby our merchants and trading people may be disappointed and discouraged, ye will in justice agree that we can be no longer bound, for it is very obvious that it were the greatest hardship to oblige our merchants to keep the staple when they want the protectione of your convoys to cary them thither. Meantime we haue renewed and approven all former acts for observing of the staple and appointed that the samen be put to due executione, which is ane infalible sign of our sincerity in the matter and of our earnestness to cultivat ane good and perfect understanding betuixt your honours and us. We recomend you all to the protectione of the Almighty God, and are, with much duty and respect, right honourable, [etc.] EDINBURGH.

able. In ansuer to yours of the 24th of June anent the memoriall presented to the Queen in relatione to the staple contract betuixt the toun of Campvere and us, wherein her Majestie hes also signified to us her royall pleasure, we have hereby transmitted our return which we desire your honour may be pleased to present to her Majestie as to the complaints made of our breaches of the staple. We had more then equall reasons to be the first reclaimers, yet considering her Majesties inclinations to remove all former mistakes we doe not insist upon them but are willing to observe the staple contract for hereafter. Meantime we earnestly desire you will be pleased to interpose with the states of Zeland and toun of Campvere to performe their parts by sending seasonable convoies to our merchants and fulfilling the other obligations of the contract, and by so doing we are confident her Majestie shall receive no further complaints, and we shall be the better enabled to prosecut such as shall transgress the laws of the staple. We hope you'll pardon this trouble and send yow just coppies both of our address to her Majestie and of our letter to the toun of Campvere.

27. The conventione, anent the representation made to them by the burghs of Stirling, Linlithgow and Lanerk, who have right to the keeping of the standards of weights, measures, &c., find that each of the saids burghs have in their custody the number of ninten of the saids standards, which were transmitted to them by the lord provest of Edinburgh by warrand of her Majesties privy counsell, and that it will not be necessar for the said burghs to retaine all the saids standards, but that a great part thereof may be instantly delyvered up to such of the royal burrows as shall be hereafter appointed, therefor, in the first place, the conventione declare that the delyvery up of the saids standards by their warrand shall be noc infringment of the rights and priviledges of the saids three burrows anent their keeping of the saids standards conforme to their antient rights and priviledges thereof, according as they and their predecessors were in use to exercise the samen. Item, the conventione appoint and ordaine that the number of seventeen of each of the saids severall standards be furthwith delyvered up by the said priviledged burghs to such of the burghs royall as the lord provest of Edinburgh shall nominat for receiving of the same. Item, the conventione appoint and ordaine the said three priviledged burrows to prepare and furnish exact setts of the saids weights, measures, &c., precisly conforme to the standart, with the respective burghs marks stamped upon them, and that each burgh who shall receive of the saids standarts from the said priviledged burghs shall pay thirty pounds Scots for each of the saids setts ; and in case any particular burghs shall require ther setts of mettall the conventione recomend to the said priviledged burghs to be discreit in their exactions for marking the saids setts, they paying the expence of the mettall. And in case any difference arise betuixt the said priviledged burghs and such as shall have occasione to call for setts from them, the conventione remitt to and authorize the committe anent the unfree trade, &c., which shall be appointed to sitt after disolving of this present conventione to determine the saids differences. And to the effect ther may be ane uniformity of weights and measures, &c., through the wholl burrows, the conventione appoint and ordaine the wholl royall burrows to provyde themselves with the setts above mentioned betuixt and the first day of November next to come, after which time the conventione discharge the wholl royall burrows to make use of any other weights, measures, &c., then those abovementioned, under the penalty of ane hundred pounds Scots. And the conventione appointed the magistrats of the wholl royall burrows to make intimatione hereof to their inhabitants. And inregard of the generous offer and concessione of the good toun of Edinburgh to provyde the wholl royall burrows with setts of the eln and yeard, and that gratis without any pryce or compositione, therefor the conventione returned their hearty thanks to the representatives of the said good toun.

30. The committee appointed to consider the agent's accounts reported that they had considered his account of intromissions with the money payable by unfree traders, and the cess and missive dues paid out by him conform to six pounds Scots of the tax roll. The sum received extended to £2,358, 17s.6d., and the cess and missive dues paid, to £6838, 0s. 4d., so that the balance due by the burghs to the agent was £4,479, 2s. 10d. Scots. The convention approved of the account and recommended the committee on unfree trade to "use their utmost dilligence against the unfree traders and to fall upon such wayes and means as may be most effectuell for the speedy recovering of the money due by them in order to pay the said ballance."

Accompts for

unfree traders,
&c. 39. The conventione considering that few of the burghs of barrony and regality have agreed for the communication of trade, and it being fitt that a committe be appointed with full power not only to agree with unfree traders that shall make offer but also to continow or highten the proportione of these who have agree das they shall see cause, therefor the convention did nominat and appoint [a committe,] giving and granting to them full pouer, warrand, and commissione to compone, transact, and agree with the saids burghs of barrony and regality, or any unfree traders, for the said communicatione of trade, both for bygones and in time coming, or ferme the same in wholl or in part as they shall see cause, and likewise to continue or augment the proportione of those who have already agreed, the payment being aluayes made to Sir Robert Forbes, their agent, who shall be comptable to the conventione therfor, whom the conventione hereby impouer to quarter upon such burghs of barrony and regality and other unfree traders as have already agreed or hereafter shall agree, and that as they are at present or shall hereafter be stented and taxed ; and farder the conventione remitted to the said committe the consideratione of all affaires relating to the staple port, with pouer to them to do everything requisit and necessar theranent sicklyke and as freely in all respects as the conventione might have done themselves ; and with pouer to the said committe to determine in all debates within burghs in relatione to the management of their commone good, and as to the way and manner of their elections of their magistrats and deacons of crafts and management of their revenues and anent their priviledges and incrochments thereon and other publick concerns, in the terms of the fourty second act of the generall conventione j^m vij^c and six years ; and inregard it will be of great import to the trade of this natione that a good correspondance be keeped betuixt the royall burrows and the members of parliament in this part of the United Kingdome, and that everything tending to the advancing of trade be dully prepared and laid befor the parliament, therefor the conventione also impouered the said committy not only to transmitt to the parliament the overtures anent trade agreed upon in the conventione in November j^m vij^c and seven years, but also to transmit such other overtures as they from time to time shall agree to ; and the conventione appointed the first meeting of the said committe to be upon the sixteen of July instant, with pouer to them to adjourn themselves from time to time as they shall see cause ; and the conventione seriously recomended to the said committe the proportione of the six pounds undertaken be Sir Robert Forbes upon the burghs of barrony and regality and other unfree traders in the first place, and in case the said six pounds be not wholly taken off by the said unfree traders the conventione recomended to the next generall conventione to do the same or they goe upon any other business ; and, finnaly, the conventione impouered the said committe to address her Majestie or the parliament in relatione to the drawbacks or anything relating to trade as they shall think fitt.

Queensferry.

41. Remitted a petition by the burgh of Queensferry to the committee on unfree trade, and recommended them "to wryt to the proper office for relief of the prisoners belonging to the said burgh detained at Dunkirk, and to consider the unfree traders who have deserted the burgh and gone to live at the end of the town."

Voluntar contribution for Stonhivie.

42. Recommended to each particular burgh to make a voluntary contribution towards repairing the harbour of Stonhivie "in regard of the great security it affords to all ships trading upon that part of the coast both from storms and privateers."

Glasgow, 1000
merks.

43. On a petition from the burgh of Glasgow, the convention appointed the agent to pay to the burgh 1000 merks Scots of gratuity, and that out of respect the present convention have to Robert Rodger, their present provest and commissioner.

John Home to pursue unfree
traders.

44. The convention, "in order to the prosecuting of the unfree traders more succesfully, granted full power, warrand and commissione to John Home, writer in Edinburgh, to pursue the haille unfree traders within this kingdome in the terms of the severall acts of parliament made thereanent in favours of the royall burrows befor the judge admirall or any other judges competent."

Abridgement
of acts.

45. The convention recomended to their clerks to continue the abridgement of the acts of the convention and cary it down to this present tyme, and impouered the committe anent the unfree trade, &c., appointed to sitt after dissolving of this present convention, to cause print the same or not as they shall see cause.

tion.
Kirkwall,
Week, unfree trade.

46. Remitted a petition of Mr John Buchan, advocate, to the consideration of the burghs of Edinburgh, Dumbarton, Bamf and Annan.

47. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade consideration of opinion of a committee that Kirkwall be discharged of their missive dues and get assignation to pursue unfree traders in Orkney and Zetland, on their assigning to the burghs' agent their share of the profits of the tack of customs and their share of the equivalent and on payment of 500 merks formerly offered by Mr Robert Douglas; also that the town of Wick on payment of their missive dues be assigned to the unfree trade within their bounds.

Profets of bur-
customes.

48. The convention considering that by the sixteen act of the convention holden at Edinburgh the nynten day of November j^m vj^c and nynty seven the tack of the customes was to be communicated to the wholl royall burrows, conforme to their proportion of the taxt roll, and now that inregard ther are severall of the burrows who have not as yet gott payment of their proportions of the profets ariseing from the said custome tack, and that other of the burrows have been imposed on by misrepresentations of the true extent of the profets, therefor the conventione ordaine ther agent to intent ane actione against the persone or persons having in their hands the profet of the burrow tack, not only to make payment to such of the burrows who yet want their share of the profets of the said burrow tack of the customes from the first of November j^m vj^c and nynty seven to the first of November j^m viij^c and tuo, but also to raise such actions as may obtaine the burrows their just rights, and to prosecute the same at the sight and by the directione and advice of the committe anent the unfree trade appointed to sitt after dissolving of this present conventione.

FOLLOUES the REPORT anent the burgh of Tain appointed to be recorded by the 12th act of the last generall conventione :—

Report anent the burgh of Tain.

At Tain the ninth day of June j^m vij^c and eight years. Anent and in pursuance of the desire of the twenty one act of the generall conventione [in July 1708, convened the commissioners of Inverness and Fortrose,] and having seen, examined, and tryed the stat and conditione of the said burgh of Tain, we see and perceive the commone defect of trade with the said burgh, because for want of means or way to effectuat the same, having noe safe way by sea within a considerable space to them, being that a boat of twenty bolls victuall burden cannot with safety come within a considerable space of their shoar, besides that the said burgh is not only surrounded with severall burghs of barronies but also that a great many of the country heretors and gentlemen about the place trades in buying and selling tobacco, salt, iron, and other gross commodities, which as we are made to understand tends to the great break and ruine of this burgh, and to evidence it further we see the most considerable part of the toun in a ruinous heap through decay and accidental fire, and that neither the heretors nor possessors are able to repaire the same for want of trade, money or people, and for any commone good they have or can pretend to is much less then the annual rents of the debts they owe and rest to severalls; and after tryall taken in revising, reading, and considering of the contract of agreement past betuixt the said burgh of Tain and Alexander Stronach, master meassone, for the building of the said tolbuith and steeple and of the receipts of payment granted by him to the said burgh, among which we have seen and read a particular receipt from the said master meassone and subscribed be him befor famous witnesses in favours of the said burgh of Tain for the said five hundred merks given by the royall burrows to this burgh for the building of their tolbuith and steeple, and having called the said master meassone to oune and acknowledge his said receipt to have been granted by him he came present before ws and did the same; and likewise the said tolbuith and steeple with the pricket thereof consisting of six storry high, together with a counsell house of tuo houses hight adjoyned thereto, are finished to the securing of the plate-forme and bartisone head of the said steeple, which in effect is a considerable work, and as was made evident to us hes involved the place in much more debt then wes conserted on in the said contract with the said master meassone; and as to the renunciatione granted by this burgh to the Earle of Cromerty to a part of the commonty of Morewich Muir, for which the Earle gave them bond for the sum of ane thousand merks, we have convened befor us the wholl members of counsell of this place, together with a great part of the most knowing and ancient inhabitants thereof, and after communing with them thereanent to the full we see and perceive that the said bargain whereupon the said renunciatione followed is profetable to the place, being that every one declared that the burgh was nothing the better formerly of the fruits and emoluments of the said commonty but in the contrair that the burgh was at vast charges and expence in defending their right thereto, being contraverted and debated for many years before the said renunciatione with the said Earle of Cromerty and many other adjacent heretors to the said commonty, which clearly convinces us by all that we can see and learne the said renunciatione was much more profitable to the burgh then if left in the former state it was in, by quhich the place would be lyable in a great deall of expence in defending the same and that though they gained it would be so farr from paying their expences that it would not yield hardly to the interest of the sum granted be the Earle of Cromerty. And this we returne as our report to the generall convention of burrows.

backs.

1. Sir Patrick Johnston, lord provost of Edinburgh, elected preses.
2. On a petition from several merchants, referring to the eighth article of the treaty of union stating that the officers of her Majesty's customs had refused to pay the allowances on exported fish, the committee appointed the dean of guild of Edinburgh and Sir James Smollet to consider the affair and bring in an overture to next meeting of committee.

3. The dean of gild of Edinburgh having presented to the committee a letter from the magistrats of Campvere, with the double of ane placacet inclosed, both in Dutch, which being considered the committee appointed them to be translated into English and then recorded in the burrow books, and appointed the advertisement when done into English to be put into the Courrant for the informatione of the merchants and all concerned, of which letter and placacet the tennor follow:—Noble and honourable lords. Wee duly received your honours letter of the 15th of July last, in ansuer to what we were pleased to writ to your honours the 18 of May preceeding, from which we observe your assurances of performing for the future all that's stipulated by the staple contract and that in the meantime you had ratified and revived all former acts for the strict observance of the staple and ordained the same to be put in due executione, and moreover assuring us of everything that may tend to keep up a good understanding betuixt your honours and us, which assurances were most acceptable to us, that the staple which is much decayed may once be putt in a better conditione, for which end we have already (to give further proof of our readiness) procured a very fitt man of warr, mounted with forty four guns and two hundred and fourty men, for convoying the ships bound to and from Scotland and to saill against the 20th of this instant October, as your honours will at more length see from the printed advertisement of the counsell of admirality of this province, whereof we send your honours herewith a cobby, of which we could not forbear to give your honours previous notice, that your honours may give such orders timeously thereanent as your honours shall think fitt; and we againe assure your honours that we will live in true friendship and good correspondence with your honours, not doubting but the same will be answered by the like zeall upon your honours part, wherewith we commend your honours in God's protectione and remaine, noble and honourable lords, your honours good friends, [etc.] Signed: PETER HAAK KERKMAN.

7. The committee gave in the following memorial to the commissioners of her Majesties customes, of which the tennor followes:—Memoriall from the committee of the royal burrows to the commissioners of the customes. It being represented by severall merchants to the said committee that, albeit they have required from the collectors of the customes the drawbacks for herring and other fishes loyally cured and exported by them, conform to the act of parliament made in their favours, yet notwithstanding the saids merchants have received no satisfactione nor allowance from the collectors, and therefor the committee desire to know how farr the commissioners doe authorize their collectors in refusing the drawback or if they will be pleased to appoint these collectors to give satisfaction to the merchants in their demands, seeing the law is very clear and express in that matter. To which memoriall the saids [commissioners] returned their ansuer as followes:—Gentlemen. Having received a memorial from a committee of the royal burrows by Sir James Smollet, desireing to know how farr the commissioners of the customes, &c., do authorize their collectors in refusing drawbacks on fish cured with salt imported befor the first of May 1707, as also that they would appoint the collectors to give satisfactione to the merchants demands, seeing (as is alledged) the law is very clear in this matter, and that the royall burrows designe to represent this affair to the parliament of Great Britain; in answer to which we do humbly represent that whatever the royall burrows may apprehend to be the law in this case as to drawbacks upon their fish cured with salt imported before the Union, yet seeing this drawback demanded is a drawback of £0, 10s. 5d. per barrell which was appointed in consideration of the high duty upon foreign salt, and that salt imported into Scotland before the first of May 1707 did not pay this high duty, we do with all submissione think we have reasone to demur to this demand made untill the matter be further cleared and we obtain a superior direction for it. Sic subscribitur: Ja. 8. The committe approved ane address to be sent to the parliament of Great Brittain in relation to the drawbacks and other concerns, and ordained the said address to be presented to the parliament, and that the overtures agreed to in November j^m vij^c and seven be all extracted out care of the burrow books, with the coppies of the letters sent to the severall persons of quality at London, and that these be recommended to the special of the representative of Edinburgh and other representatives of the burrows for manageing the same before the parliament with all care and dilligence, of which address the tennor followes:—To the honourable the knights, citizens and burgesses in parliament assembled, the humble petition of the representatives of the royal burrows of North Brittain, formerly called Scotland, humbly sheweth. That by the eight article of the act of Union it is enacted that all fish exported from Scotland to parts beyond the seas which shall be cured with forreign salt only shall have the same eases, premiums and drawbacks, as are or shall be allowed to exporters of the like fish from England. That for encouragement of herring fishing there shall be allowed and payed to the subjects inhabitants of Great Brittain (during the allowance for other fish) ten shillings and five pence sterling for every barrell of white herring that shall be exported from Scotland; and by the said act it is statut that there shall be allowed to the exporters of beef and pork for sale five shillings for each barrell. Upon the faith and credit of the said act, your petitioners have cured with forreign salt only and exported from Scotland into forreign parts severall quantities of white herrings and other fish and of beef and pork. That many of the merchants of the said royall burrows have

The merchants of Edinburgh and severall other touns of this part of Great Brittain having applied to us concerning the encouragements and drawbacks upon herrings and other fishes exported by them since the first of May j^m vij^c and seven, to which they are intituled by the eight article of the act of Union, and it being our province to use outtmost endeavours in behalf of the merchants who reside within our severall burghs, we could think upon no better means then to address your lordship, of whose justice and favour our merchants do acknowledge they have had many good proofs and experimentis, for which we return your lordship our most humble and hearty thanks, and since that bussiness most necessarily be sifted befor the parliament of Great Brittain we have instructed this gentleman, Mr Gilbert Stewart, who is the bearer, to wait upon your lordship with ane copy of our petitione, earnestly beseeching your lordship would be pleased to vouchsafe your assistance, especially seeing it is a matter of universall concern to all North Brittain, and we know nothing will more effectually cement and unite South and North Brittain then the parliaments favourable ansuer in this affair, for thereby the mouths of enemies will be stoped who still continue to possess both our merchants and people with prejudices against the Union, and in particular that this of the drawbacks will not be successfull, but we hope better things and rest assured that in this nationall concern your lordships conduct will bring it to ane happy issue, which will be ane obligatione never to be forgotten, by, my lord, your lordships most humble servants.

Letter to Sir

Isaac Newton that a warrand be granted for coining a sum in Scotland not exceeding eight thousand pounds sterling, in tuo pence, three pence, and four pence pieces, of which the tennor followes:—Very honorabill. It being represented to us by severall of our merchants and trading people that it would be of importance to them and to this wholl country of North Brittain that some small species of money, such as tuo pence, three pence and four pence, were coined to be circulat through this part of the kingdome, as was formerly in use before the Union, we thought it duty to applye to your honour for procureing ane allowance to the generall and other officers of the mint at Edinburgh to coin the forsaid species to the value of eight thousand pounds and not exceeding the same, out of what coinage yet remanes to be coined in this part of Great Brittain. This will give much satisfactiōe to our people in generall and will conduce much to their ease and conveniency. We have many experiencies that the Queens Majestie does incline upon all occasions to give tokens of her affectione to all her subjects, and if yow will be pleased to represent this matter to her Majestie we make no doubt of her gracious ansuer, and your appearing for us will lay perpetuall obligationes upon, Sir, your most humble servants.

Overture anent fishing.

16. The committe approved of the overture given in by the commissioner for Dunbar for encouragement of fishing, and appointed the same to be recorded in the borrow book, and ane copy to be transmitted with the overtures relating to trade to the parliament of Great Brittain, of which overture the tennor followes:—Overture for the encouragement of fishing. That all forreign salt which shall pay her Majesties duty and happen to be caryed coastwayes from one port to another for the benefite of fishing, and which may be lost at sea, that the merchant importer thereof who payed her Majesties duty be relieved of the same upon sufficient proof that the salt was cast auay or lost at sea, especially considering that this is no new burden upon the customes inrespect it has been the constant practice of all tacksmen and managers of the customes, both when in the Queens hand and when roused, to return to the merchants all such dutyes as they payed upon the event of their goods being cast auay. Item, that there be allowance given for the waist of all forreign salt caryed coastwayes from one port of the kingdome to another for the benefite of the trade of fishing proportionable to what is given in England upon rock and white salt caryed coastwayes.

MEETINGS OF COMMITTEE, held at EDINBURGH.

Sederunt. Edinburgh, George Warrender ; Hadingtoun, Richard Miller ; Linlithgow, Alexander Glen ; Dumbarton, Sir James Smollet ; Bamf, Sir Alexander Ogilvie ; Queensferry, James Dalglish.

Preses. 1. George Warrender, dean of guild of Edinburgh, elected preses.

Memorial and letter from Lord Weemyss, protection of trade. 2. The same day, was read a memoriall from the right honorabill the Earle of Weemyss, with a letter direct to the lord provest of Edinburgh, relating to the trade of Scotland and protectione thereof, another letter also from the said earle desiring to know the number of seamen in Scotland and what number may be there more then sufficient to navigat the ships, barks, &c., thereof ; which being considered by the commite they were of oppinion that a letter of thanks be writ by the dean of gild of Edinburgh to the Earle of Weemyss, acquainting his lordship that the affair contained in his first letter and memorial was prevented by my lord high admirall his conferring the command of all her Majesties ships in North Brittain upon the lord provost, which was effectuell provisione for the trade in those parts ; and as to the other letter that they were resolved to communicat the same to all the maritim burrows as the most propper means to satisfe his lordship in the said matter, ordaining them either to bring up or transmitt lists of their seamen betuixt and the fifteenth day of July next.

Letters to maritim burrows as to lists of ships and seamen. 3. The comitte did recomend to the lord provost to acquaint the maritim burrows in the letters to be sent to them with the command of the cruizers upon the north coast latly conferred by the lord high admirall upon his lordship.

Letter to Lord Wemyss. 4. My Lord. I gave your lordship ane former account that I had received your lordships of the 15th and 17th of March last, with the memoriall therein, since which time I have advertised severall of the neighbouring royall burrows to meet at Edinburgh towards the more effectuell executione of your lordships commissione, and accordingly they have conveened, and after reading of your lordships letters and memoriall to the committe they are very sensible of the honour and respect my lord high admirall and your lordship has put upon the royall burrows and the care and concern you have shewed in securing the trade of North Brittain and for which they return your lordship their most humble and hearty thanks. Meantime it is their unanimous oppinione that I should in their name writ to the wholl maritim burghs of this natione that they may prepare lists in the terms of your lordships letter of the severall seamen within their bounds, and either to bring up or transmitt these lists against the fifteenth day of July next, whereby your lordship may haue full informatione and light in that matter. Your lordship knows there be a great many burghs of barrony and regality who have a considerable number of seamen within their bounds, and how farr they will be influenced by our advertisement it is uncertain, so that if your lordship think fitt to issue particular orders to the landslords and masters of these unfree burghs for the above purposes it may conduce to accomplish the wholl designe, and the committe have delayed to give them any advertisement till they had your lordships thoughts thereupon. My lord, we cannot but be convinced that both my lord high admirall and your lordship have had the trade of this part of Brittain much in your mind and under your deliberat thoughts by the provisione that is already made, and the merchant traders must be sensible that much care is taken of them by the authority your lordship have put in the hands of the lord provost of Edinburgh, who we are confident will faithfully serve in that statione, and I am very hopefull that such returns of duty and affectione to her Majestie shall be alwayes rendered by the royall burrows as may evidence their sense of her Majesties royall favours. We are in all humble duty as becometh, my lord, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: GEO. WARRENDER, Preses. Edinburgh, 12 Aprill 1709.

unfree burghs, did ordain letters to be written to the royall burrows injoyning them to send up lists of their ships, barks, boats, and other craft, with the lists of their seamen and complement of men annexed to each ship, to the clerk of the royall burrows, against the generall convention in July next, and also injoyning each royall burgh to intimat to all unfree burghs within their respective bounds to do the like against the said time, and for that effect to send to each of the saids unfree burghs a printed double of the earle of Wemyss order.

Disaster to Scots fleet.

3. It was recomended to the lord provost of Edinburgh to thank Sir Alexander Cumming, conservator, for his letter informing anent the disaster which happened the Scots fleet bound for Holland, and desireing him to use his utmost endeavours with the proper persons to procure reparatione of the damnages sustained by the said fleet, and particularly to complain of severity used by the English seamen towards these that were retaken from the French, and to doe every thing in order to relief of the prisoners.

was so valuable a branch of the trade of this part of the United Kingdome that the generall decay thereof cannot but sensibly affect the wholl nation and more especially your royall burrows who are most concerned in the trade thereof. It is very well known that nothing hath so much contributed to this decay of salmond as the killing of black fish and young frie, and although many good laws have been made for preventing thereof yet the end hitherto hath not been attained. The northern countreys finding by experience that Collonell Grants company quartered in the Highlands was very usefull in discovering the killers of black fish and young frie, were encouraged to petitione your Majestie for ane augmentatione of the said company, and your Majestie being graciously pleased to add thirty sentinels thereto the salmond fishing in those parts did immediately revive. And seeing there is no doubt but if the like method were pursued in the other parts of the natione the like effect would follow, wee do most earnestly intreat your Majestie would from your iunate goodness not only grant the same augmentatione to the other Highland company commanded by Lieutenant Colonell Campbell of Fin nab, with orders to the said Collonell to give his utmost assistance to the justices of peace and others in discovering and bringing to due punishment the transgressours of the forsaid laws and acts of parliament, but also command such others of your officers as you shall see meet to quarter their companies in such places of the southern countreys as they may oversee the principall rivers and concurr with the justices and others to the end aforesaid. Which address the conventione appointed to be signed by their preses.

13. The conventione agreed to ane address to the barrons of exchequer of which the tennor followes :—Memoriall from the conventione of the royall burrows, to the lord chief barron and rest of the barrons of exchequer. That wher by the fifteen article of the Union it is provided that tuo thousand pounds sterling per annum out of the equivalent for the space of seven years shall be applyed towards encourageing and promoting the manufactur of course wool within those shires that produce the samen, and seeing the royall burrows do bear ane sixth part of the wholl burdens laid upon North Brittain, and that through the decay of trade the forsaid burden is heavy upon them, it is humbly expected and desired that as occasione offers your lordship will give them all possible incouragement, particularly that in proportioning the forsaid tuo thousand pounds sterling yearly for erecting of manufactures your lordship will have regard to such of the royall burrows as are situat in those southern and western shires where course wool is produced and appoint the manufactures to be erected therein, and all due care and dilligence shall be used to improve the same to the best advantage. Which memoriall the convention appointed to be signed by their preses.

15. Anent the petitione from the burghs of Stirling, Linlithgow and Lanerik, keepers of the weights and measures, shewing that albeit, in obedience to ane act of conventione j^m vij^e and eight, they had prepared settis of the saids weights and measures and that the wholl burrows should have provided themselves therewith betuixt and the first of November last, yet few or none have taken out the same, craving therefor the conventione would be pleased to renue their former order for that end; which being considered by the conventione, they ordained such burghs as have not taken out their weights and measures, in obedience to the former appointment, to do the same betuixt and the first of November next, under the penalty of thirty pounds Scots to be payed by each burgh failyieing so to doe, attour performance.

Weights and

16. The convention, considering that there is resting to the general receiver £480 sterling, being eight months' supply for the six pounds of the tax roll laid on unfree traders, and that there is imposed other four months' supply which will be due before next annual convention, and that the burghs are threatened with quartering for payment of said sum; and that the commissioners who were appointed to confer with Gavin Plumer, receiver of the supply, reported that he was willing to make payment of the whole sums on the conventione becoming bound to repay him against next general meeting, with the annual rent thereof, "and a consideration for the quartering which he was content to refer to the conventione themselves." The conventione bound themselves accordingly and ordained the several burghs to pay their proportions along with the missive dues.

formerly used to oblige the burghs of barrony and regality and other unfree traders to accept of the communicatione of trade, in the terms of the act of parliament made thairanent, and to relieve the royall burrows of the ten pounds of the hundred pounds of the taxt roll for their said communicatione of trade, hath been hitherto ineffectuall, and that the relief arising from such of the said unfree traders as have already accepted and agreed for a proportione of the said ten pounds to be payed by them amounts only to one pound eleven shilling, and the same is not payed conforme to their agreements, do therefor appoint the burghs of Edinburgh, Perth, Dundie, Aberdeen, Stirling, Linlithgow, St Andrews, Glasgow, Air, Haddingtoun, Kirkaldie, Montrose, Dumfreis, Inverness, Irving, Dumbarton, Renfrew, Dunbar, Craill, Tain, Bamf, Lauder, Annan and Queensferry, whereof three to be a quorum, Edinburgh being aluayes one, to meet as a committe after dissolving of this present generall conventione, with pouer to them to call befor them the wholl unfree traders who have not formerly agreed for the said communicatione of trade, and to compon, transact and agree with them thereanent, and to give such ease of bygones as they shall think fitt and agree for what proportione shall be payed by them in time coming till the next annual conventione; and if any of the said unfree traders shall refuse or neglect to transact or agree with the said committe as said is, the conventione appointed the burrow agent to pursue them befor the judge competent and allowed to him a premium of twenty per cent out of the first and readiest of what he shall recover from such of the unfree traders as shall refuse to transact and agree with the said committe, and declared that the said premium shall be in full to him of all he can ask or crave of the conventione in name of sellary or expences in pursuing thereof; and appointed their agent to receive instructions from time to time from the said committe and to proceed accordingly; and ordained the remander of what shall be so recovered after deduction of the said premium to be employed at sight of the said committee in payment of supply that may fall due betuixt and the next annuall conventione upon account of the six pounds in the taxt roll undertaken by Sir Robert Forbes for the unfree trade; and recommended to the said committe to take informatione of the said unfree traders at such of the royall burrows as are next adjacent to them for what proportione they may be able to bear; and the conventione declared that if any of the said unfree traders shall compone and agree with the said committe by vertue of the said agent his dilligence that the conventione will take to their consideratione the trouble and expense he shall be at in pursuing thereof.

23. The conventione, considering that by the act of her Majesties last sessione of the parliament of Scotland, dated the fifth of February j^m vij^c and seven years, it is ordained that the city of Edinburgh elect their commissioner and the other royall burghs to elect each of them a commissioner as they have been in use to elect commissioners to the parliament, as at length is prescribed by the said act; and understanding that in the last sessione of parliament there were severall objections made against the qualificationes of commissioners and the forme of their commissions and how they ought to be verified, which has been chiefly occasioned through the not knowing the plateforme of the burrows; therefor to prevent further mistakes and that burgesses elected to represent in the parliament of Great Brittain may be put to no trouble or expences on that head, the conventione did revive, ratifie, and perpetually confirme the act of the generall conventione of burrows anno j^m vj^c fourty tuo, ordaining all commissions to parliaments, conventions of estates or burrows, to be subscribed be the magistrats themselves and the clerk of the burgh, in name of their counsell, and the seall of the burgh affixt therto or by way of extract, under the subscriptione of their clerk and seall of cause; as also they ratified, approved, and confirmed the qualifications of the persons as established by the present plateforme, that is to say that the commissions testifie and declare the commissioners to be men fearing God, of the true protestant religion publickly professed and autherised by the laws of this kingdome, without suspicione in the contrair, expert in the commone affaires of the burrows, merchants, tradsmen, and inhabitants within the burgh, bearing all portable charges with their neighbours and bears a part of the publick burdens and can tine and wine in all their affaires; or, if the persons elected commissioners be not merchants, traffickers, and constant residenters as above said, that it shall not be a sufficient qualificatione that their commissions testifie them to be proprietors of lands holding burgage of the burgh to the value of three thousand merks except they shall upon their solemn oaths depone upon the verity of the said attestatione and value of the lands. Declaring hereby that all commissions to be granted hereafter to persons for electing burgesses to serve in the parliament of Great Brittain, conventions of estates, and conventions of burrows, shall bear the qualificationes both of the commissioners and commissions above written, under the penalties contained in the severall acts of burrows, over and above the casting of their commissions. And farder, the conventione ordained the severall communities of burghs, befor they proceed to elect their commissioners to choise a burgess to represent them in the parliament of Great Brittain, to take such oaths as are by law required, and that the commissions do bear the same, under the penalties and disabilities abovementioned. And to the end that each burgh may be sufficiently advertised hereof, the conventione ordained their agent to transmitt duplicats of this present act to them that the same may be registrat in their counsell books, and appointed the counsell of the burgh to return their receipt of the said duplicat to the generall clerks of the burrows to be by them marked in the records of the conventione.

Inverkeithing. 24. Allowed to the burgh of Inverkeithing 300 merks towards the repairing of their harbour.

John Buchan, £200. 25. On petition of John Buchan, sometime agent of the burghs, the convention allowed him £200 Scots of present supply, and remitted to the committee on unfree trade to endeavour to adjust all differences between him and the present agent.

George Smollet elected agent. 26. The conventione unanimously elected Mr George Smollet, advocat, to be their agent in place of Sir Robert Forbes, advocat, and allowed to him the sellary and casualty thereto belonging, who compearing accepted his office, maid faith de fidei, and did take the oaths of Inverness.

34. The conventione taking to their consideratione the petitione from the burgh of Inverness, shewing that notwithstanding the act of the conventione appointing all differences betuixt burgesses of burghs royall anent the management of their commone good and other publick concerns should be first tabled befor the conventione, yet James Porteous, Simeon M'Kenzie, William M'Lean, and others the inhabitants of the said burgh, have raised proces against the magistrats thereof befor the lords of sessione and endeavour to overturn the constitutione of the burgh and act of sett ratified and approven by the royall burrows, which has been inviolably observed ever since the year j^m vj^c seventy eight; which being considered by the conventione they fand the saids persons highly censurable for contraveining the acts of the royall burrows, but in regard they were not present they appointed the burghs of Elgin, Tain, Fortrose, Nairn and Dingwall, or any three of them, to meet at the burgh of Inverness [to hear parties and determine in the matter as they shall see cause].

Cruzers and convoyes.

35. The conventione, considering that Sir Patrick Johnston, lord provost of Edinburgh, has been at great pains and trouble in giving the necessar orders to the cruzers and convoyes put under his directione by the lord high admirall of Great Brittain, and that the same has been effectuall for the security of the ships under the said cruzers and convoyes their protectione, to the safty of the trade and satisfacione of the merchants, therefore the conventione return his lordship their hearty thanks for his said care and vigilance, and declare that they will not be wanting to express their gratitude by a suteable return whenever opportunity shall offer, and in the meantime appoints the agent to pay what money his lordship shall call for frome time to time for that service, and also appoints that what money the provost of Glasgow shall give out on that account shall be repeated.

36. The conventione, taking to their consideratione the petitione from the magistrats and toun counsell of the burgh of Dunbar, shewing that they are in use to set at a publick roup yearly their commone milns, with a piece of mireish ground therto belonging, and to repair the same upon the publick charge, whereas if they were alloued to get a tack of fifteen years or thereby and burden the tacksman with the reparations it would be a great ease to the said burgh, and the myrish ground would be thereby improven; and seeing they are not alloued to set a longer tack then three years without consent of the royall burrows, craving therefor the conventione would allow the saids magistrats and counsell to set a tack of fyfteen years or theirby of the saids common milnes and myrish ground as the conventione shall think fitt; which being considered by the conventione they hereby grant warrand to the saids magistrats and counsell to set a tack of the said commone milns and myrish ground for fifteen years to the best advantage and to report the same to the next generall conventione in order to get the said conventions approbatione of the said tack.

Illegal practises in trade.

38. Remitted to the committee appointed to sit after dissolving of this convention, petition by Gilbert Stewart, commissioner named in the act of committee dated 4th December last, shewing that "he upon the faith of this act and commissione went to London and addrest the parliament in name of the royall burrows and obtained ane act not only regulating the payments to the severall persons concerned therein but settling the payment of drawbacks upon a sure foundation in time coming, the obtaining of quhich act did not only put him to a great deal of trouble and loss of time but to a very liberal expense which in reason ought effectually to be refounded."

39. The conventione anent the petitione given in be James Cuming, merchant in Edinburgh, for himself and others concerned in the ship and loading of wines aboard the Drummond of Leith, John Tait, master, complaining that Captain Blois, commander of Her Majesties ship the Shear-ness, and Captain Massie of the Glasgow, appointed by the lord high admirall to convoy some Virginia ships from Leith to the river of Thames, the said John Tait took the opportunity of the said convoy and received sailing orders accordingly, but the convoy left the fleet in the night tyme, without so much as acquainting them, when they were about half way in their intended voyage, and the said ship became a prey to the French privateers; and also anent the representatione made be the commissioner for the burgh of Kirkcaldie, that the ship the Ester of Kirkcaldie, whereof James Hallow, master, having taken the opportunity of the said convoy was also taken by the French, and that sometime of befor the same Shearness, Captain Blois, commander, being to convoy some ships from the road of Leith to the Theams, did leave the fleet in the voyage, whereby the Jean of Kirkcaldie, Robert Forrestdale, master, was taken by the French privateers. Which being considered by the conventione they remitted the matter above complained upon to the committe impoured to sitt after dissolving of this present conventione, to be by them in name of the royall burrows laid befor her Majestie or the parliament or both, as they shall judge meet, for geting ane effectuall redress in the said matter.

Representa-tione from Earle of Wemyss.

40. The convention remitted the representatione from the Earle of Wemyss to them, with the letters from severall merchants in London recomending Alexander Bain, esquire, to the burrows as a fitt persone to correspond with in matters of trade, to the committe appointed to sitt after dissolving of this present conventione.

Dundie, Dunbar, Hadingtoun.

41-43. Appointed committees to visit the burghs of Dundee, Dunbar, and Hadingtoun, and report the particular condition thereof to next general convention.

Culross,
justices of the peace.

44. The conventione, upon a memoriall from the burgh of Culross, representing some incroachments made by the justices of the peace of the shire of Pearth upon the said burgh and its priviledges, remitted the consideratione therof to the committe appointed to sitt after dissolving of this present conventione, to give to the said burgh of Culross their best advice in the said affair ; and farder, the conventione recommended to the severall other burghs who have any such complaints against the justices of the peace to give in their informations theranent to the burrow agent, whom the conventione appointed to consult her Majesties advocat and Sir James Stewart, senior, for their advice in the said complaints, and to transmitt copies of their said advice to the severall burrows by the directione of the said committe.

Sir David
Dalrymple elected assessor.

45. The conventione, considering the great ability of Sir David Dalrymple of Hales, her Majesties advocat, to serve the royall burrows, and that on all occasions he has appeared for their intrest, did therfor appoint him to be their assessor during the conventions pleasure and alloued to him five hundred merks of yearly sallary and appointed the agent to pay the same accordingly.

46. On petition by Newgalloway, the convention appointed their agent to pay that burgh £100 Scots of supply on their paying bygone missive dues ; and appointed the burghs of Dumfreis, Wigton, and Annan to endeavour to compose the differences betwixt the burgh of Kirkcudbright and John Chalmers, bailie of Newgalloway.

granges overtures, Buchan, Home.

52-54. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade consideration of (52) "any overtures that may be given in be William Morisone of Prestongrange for advancing the trade of this part of Great Brittain ;" (53) "any memoriall that shall be given in by Mr John Buchan, advocate and late agent to the royall burrows, anent the unfree traders," and (54) "petition given in be John Home, servitor to Sir Robert Forbes, advocate ;" and "appointed the said John Home to lay befor the said committee the state of the several processes intended by him befor the admirall court against the unfree traders."

Act appointing the agent to prosecute
unfree traders.

55. The conventione, considering that severall methods hath been hitherto taken for obtaining relief from the unfree traders of their proportion of the taxt roll and that the same has not been effectuell, and it being proposed that the following essay and triall may be made, to witt, that the burrow agent shall with the first conveniency and as he is able to overtake it repare to the severall shires of this kingdome, Orkney and Zetland excepted, and there take informatione of the unfree traders within their respective bounds and convenen them at such royall burghs within the same as shall be thought fitt by the commity for the unfree trade, and to acquaint such of the representatives of the royall burrows as the said committe shall appoint to meet within the saids severall districts, by whose advice and directione the said agent may transact and agree with these unfree traders for all bygones and till the next generall conventione ; which proposall the conventione approved and authorised and appointed to be put to due executione, and referred to the said committe to give such further orders and instructions to the said agent, and appointed summonses to be sent to the saids unfree traders with the letters appointing them to meet in their respective districts, that in case they do not so agree for the communicatione of trade they may be proceeded against by the said agent with the utmost dilligence.

Whithern.

56. On petition from the burgh of Whithorn, showing the ruinous condition of their tolbooth and harbour, the convention allowed the burgh £100 Scots for their reparation.

57. Appointed the agent to pay certain sallaries and gratuities.

SETT of the BURGH of TAIN, appointed to be recorded by the 9th act of the preceding General Convention.

AT TAIN the eighteenth day of August j^m vij^c and eight years. In obedience to [the 21 act of the general convention of burghs, held in July 1708, compeared the commissioners of Inverness, Elgin, Forras, Dingwall and Fortrose,] and wee having considered the counsell books of the said burgh of Taine farr above fourty years backward, we find (notwithstanding some of their books produced be defective in severall particulars) yet that the number of their counsell, including provost, baillies, dean of gild and theasurer, did not exceed fifteenth, and some years thirteenth, till Michalmass one thousand seven hundred and six years, att which time the laird of Balnagowine was made provost, the number was augmented to seventeenth, which is tuo more than their ordinar number and old constitutione; and at Michalmass j^m vij^c and seven, having mett upon the twenty ninth day of September, they continued the seventeenth of the former years electione, and upon the niuth day of October thereafter they added six more to their counsell, viz., William Lord Ross, William Lord Strathnaver and John Lord M'Leod, William Ross and John Mansone, merchants, and Charles Ross, wigmaker in Taine, as new counsellors; and on the fourth day of June last j^m vij^c and eight years instant, the laird of Balnagowine provost having convened a quorum of the counsell of the said burgh, did motione therein that in respect and by the deceas of John Ross, late provost, and Alexander Ross, baillie, being on death bedd, and the honourable Lord Ross is living at such a distance that he could not attend the said counsell, therefor craved that the counsell should nominat other three counsellors to officiat, and accordingly they did proceed and elect William Ross of Easterfearne, William Ross of Aldie and Thomas Ross, junior, merchant in Taine, to exerce in that statione as counsellors; which with the former number makes twenty-six counsellors, including the magistrats. It is unanimously the oppinione of us, the members of the committe, that the electione at Michalmass j^m vij^c and six and at Michalmass j^m vij^c and seven, and the additione of counsellers the ninth of October j^m vij^c and seven and the fourth of June j^m vij^c and eight are palpable incroachments upon the constitutione of the said burgh of Tain and contrare to the setts of other well governed burghs; and for remeed thereof we recomend to the magistrats and counsell of Tain in time coming that they do not exceed the number of fifteenth counsellers, including the provost, baillies, dean of gild and treasurer, and that they be all men qualified conforme to the acts and constitutione of burrows, viz., that they be merchants, traffeckers, actuall residenters, tradsmen, inhabitants, or such persons as can gain or lose in the concerns of the burgh, and that for hereafter their provost not continue above three years, being yearly chosen be the toun counsell, and that their baillies, dean of gild and treasurer, continue not above tuo years, being yearly chosen as said is, and that they turn off yearly at Michalmass four of their old counsell, and in place of them to chose four new counsellers, and the new counsell so chosen to elect the magistrats out of the said number of fifteenth. And this we give as our report in obedience to the said act and commissione, and we publickly intimat the same to the magistrats, counsell, and inhabitants of the said burgh of Tain.

Gentlemen. The royall burrows have used all the tenderness in their pouer towards the unfree traders, till at length the burding upon them is become so heavy and unsupportable that they cannot any longer delay the seeking of ane relieff, and therfor have ordered Mr George Smollet, advocat, their agent, to prosecut the unfree traders in the terms of law and to give them all citations for that effect, but in the meantime as a farder proof of the royall burrows aversione to put you to unnecessar trouble and expences, and to prevent these extremities which the result of a legall proces will certainly produce against the unfree traders, they have impouered their said agent to agree with you even at your own doors, at the sight and advice of such of the adjacent royall burrows as he will advertise you, and it is now expected that you will not slight this last opportunity of saving yourselves but will embrace the occasione of observing what shall be desired, and the royall burrows hope that when they are so happy as to be incorporat together you shall find the good effects. —To the Queens most Excellent Majestie. The most humble address of the royall burrows of Scotland now North Britain. For as much as it hath pleased God so to prosper the just arms of your Majestie and your allies as to bring about a treaty of peace, whereby this long destroying war may be happily ended, we your Majesties most loyal and faithfull subjects take leave in all humility to represent that the royall burrows having the sole priviledge and manadgement of forreign trade, and bearing no less then the sixth part of all publick burdens within North Britain, haue ever had the most gracious protectione of your Majestie and all your royall ancestours, with the speciall favour of the many and great encouragements which they haue hitherto constantly injoyed, and therefore do presume to lay before your Majestie the memoriall herewith offered of our rights and liberties, that haue been of late either wholly refused us or inroached upon by the French King in the matters of our trade, to the great prejudice of us and your Majesties other good subjects; wherefore we do in all humility intreat that it may graciously please your Majestie to give such particular instructions to your plenipoten-tiaries, or others to be commissioned by your Majestie to the said treaty, as may procure us the just redress of the hardships that we visibly suffer, in such way and manner as your Majestie shall judge reasonable. in order to a redress in the treaty of peace. First. After ane old alliance and mutuall correspondence for severall ages betuixt the French and the Scots, in the year 1558 all Scots men were naturalized in France and all French men were naturalized in Scotland, as the acts of naturalizatione recorded in the acts of the parliament of Scotland the said year doe testifie. By virtue of which acts the Scots enjoyed all the rights and priviledges of French men in France and particularly were freed from the droit de oaubaigne, whereby the goods of all others dieing in France do fall unto the King ; as also of all impositiones imposed upon strangers, and especially the impositione of fifty solz per tunn imposed upon forreign ships ; which the Scots enjoyed untill the year 1663 ; and therefore it is humbly craved that their right and priviledge specially as to these tuo particulars may be restored.

Secondly. Since the late warrs with France there hath been ane express prohibitione made there against the import of all herrings and other white fish from Scotland, or at least such impositiones laid upon them as amount to a prohibitione, and herring and white fish being as it were the naturall product and richest commodity of Brittain, especially of Scotland, the import thereof according to the law of nations ought to be allowd as the same was indeed allowd before the late warr.

Thirdly. Since the late warrs the French King hath laid ane additional impositione upon salmond imported, which impositione is almost equall to a prohibitione and much prejudices that branch of trade.

Fourthly. The French King hath of late prohibit the importatione of all our wool manufacture, such as cloaths, fingsrams, stockings, kerses, &c., which were formerly and before the warr freely imported into France from Scotland.

Fifthly. The French King hath raised impositiones upon coalls, butter, tallow, tanned leather, peuther, leed, beef, candles, suggars, and other goods, to that height that either amounts to a prohibition or at least hinders the equality of fair trading, contrary to the just freedome of commerce amongst nations, and for which it's humbly craved that a reasonable tariff may be for hereafter established.

These particulars are humbly offered to her Majesties consideration, and they will also lead to severall other articles that at this time ought to be farder cleared for a just regulation of trade, specially in this seasone that appears to be so oppertune for obtaining a fair settlement in all these matters which may certainly tend to the great relief and advantage not only of the royall burrows of North Britain but to all her Majesties good subjects of Great Britain now so happily united by the late union in the same common interest.

6 July 1710.

9. The conventione, taking to their serious consideratione that notwithstanding of the great care which has been taken by their committee appointed anent the unfree trade, and of the dilligence, travell, and expences which was necessar for puting these acts in executione, yet it has happened through mistake that some of their number has granted certificats in favours of severall unfree traders in their vicinity and neighbourhead declaring them to be burgesses within their respective burghs and that they bear burden with them, which certificats are improven, to the manifest prejudice of the royall burrows, and thereby endeavours to make their desigene of prosecuting these unfree traders altogether elusory; for preventing whereof in time coming, it is expressly statut and ordained if any burgh royall for hereafter shall grant any such certificats in favours of any merchant or trader who doe not actually dwell and reside in their burghs, or shall any other way concurr with or collour the said unfree traders, that then and in that case the said burgh royall shall be proceeded against with all rigor and severity, and the laws and acts made against collouring of unfree trade put to full executione; likeas, their burgh are and shall be declared lyable in all the proportion of stent which these unfree traders might have been decerned to pay according to the laws and acts of parliament made against them; and for hereafter discharges any burgh to burden these persons living without burgh with any part of their stent. And ordanis thir presents to be printed and each member to have a coppy thereof to his burgh to be recorded in the counsell books. Against granting certificats to unfree traders.

10. On a petition by Anstruther Wester "complaining that they were distressed at the instance of the representatives of Mr Taillor, sometime their minister, for paymentt of a debt, albeit the same might be extinguished by the said Mr Taillor his intromissions with the burghs revinue if they were in a conditione to defend themselves therein," the convention remitted to a committee to endeavour an accommodation between the parties. Anstruther Wester.

11. The conventione, anent the petitione given in for the burghs of Innerkeithing and Dumfermling, shewing that the said burgh of Innerkeithing had been in use to cary and transpor tcoalls from the coall heughs of Dumfermling and other adjacent places through the ground of John Innerkeithing and Dumfermling, road to coall heughs.

Stenhouse of Southfodd, and upon their being interrupted be him in their possession and use of the said high wayes they raised a declarator at their instance against him before the lords of session and represented the matter to the generall conventione in July last, who recomended the case to some of the neighbouring burrows in order to ane accomodatione, whereupon Southfodd was so far convinced of the reasonableness of the petitioners demands that he did some time thereafter grant a consent subscribed with his hand obligeing himself never to stop or mollest the petitioners in the use of the saids roads under the penalty of five hundred merks attour performance, which consent was by both parties depositat in the hands of John Hendersone in Fordergreen till a discharge of the process intended by the petitioners were subscribed by the hail toun counsell which they are still ready to grant, and the very next day Southfodds wife snatched out of the hands of the depositor the said subscribed consent and tore the same, though the substance of the writ remains intire but wanting Southfodds subscriptione; craving therefor the conventione would recomend to their agent to concur with the petitioners in raising and prosecuting a proving of the tennor of the writ so deposited and terms of depositions, or such other process against Southfodd as may secure them in the peaceable possession of the saids roads, as the petitione bears. Which being considered be the conventione, they recomended to the commissioners for the burghs of Stirling and Culross, with all convenient dilligence, to endeavour ane accomodatione betuixt the petitioners and Southfodd, and to signifie to him in name of the convention that unless he secure the petitioners of the possession of the roads abovementioned, the conventione would grant warrand to their agent to concur with the burgh of Innerkeithing not only in declaring their right to the saids roads before the lords of sessione and proving of the tennor of the forsaid consent but also in pursueing a riot for unuarrantable lacerating thereof; and ordained the saids commissioners to report their dilligence to the next generall conventione.

7 July 1710.

Agent, prosecution of unfree traders.

12. The convention found that Mr George Smollet, advocate, agent of the burghs, had exactly obeyed the instructions given to him by the committee in relation to the prosecution of unfree traders, and allowed to him for his "expence in making the circuit conform to these orders" £800 Scots, with £1000 Scots for his trouble. EDINBURGH.

7 July 1710.

13. Appointed the agent to pay to Gavin Plummer, deputy receiver of her Majestys cess, £946, 3s. 7½d., being cess and annual rents for unfree traders in March last and previously, conform to the 16th act of last general convention, with £60 sterling "as ane gratificatione to him for preventing quartering." Cess for unfree traders,
Plummer.

14. There being petitions from several burghs for supplies, the convention "appointed their preses to mark and dock these petitions to be considered be the conventione how soon they shall be in a conditione to supply these burghs." Petitions from burghs for supplies.

15. On a petition from the burgh of Elgin, "shewing that there were severall incroachments made upon the privileges of the said burgh by the sherreff of the shire," the convention remitted to a committee to endeavour to compose the differences. Burgh of Elgin and sherreff of the shire.

10 July 1710.

16. Ordained the agent to take proceedings against burghs for enforcing Missive dues. payment of their missive dues.

17. Remitted to the committee on unfree trade petition by the burgh of Jedburgh. Jedburgh as to the process raised at Blackhill's instance against them. Jedburgh.

18. For "severall weighty reasons and considerations," the convention continued the tax roll as it now stands till July next. Taxt roll continued.

19. The conventione considering that all methods formerly used to procure relief of the ten pounds of the hundred pounds of the taxt roll of the royall burrows appointed by act of parliament to be proportioned amongst the burghs of barrony and regality and other unfree traders for the communicatione of trade hath hitherto been ineffectuall, and that notwithstanding by the present taxt roll of the royall burrows there is ninty four pounds of the said hundred pounds proportioned amongst the said royall burrows, yet the agreements hitherto made with the burghs of barrony and regality and other unfree traders does not relieve them of the other six pounds of the said hundred pounds of the taxt roll, and that they have been necessitat to pay annual rents and to give gratifications to procure delayes of quartering for the deficiency of the said six pounds, to the great detriment of the royall burrows; for preventing whereof in time coming the conventione doe appoint four pounds of the said six pounds to be proportioned amongst the wholl royall burrows conforme to the present taxt roll. [The roll of apportionment is here inserted]

Balance due by agent.
Agents
accounts.

20. The convention found from the agent's accounts that there was due by him a balance of £1781, 2s. Scots, which ought to be charged in his accounts for 1709-10.

21. Approved of the agent's accounts of his intromissions with the missive dues and money received from unfree traders from July 1709 to July 1710. The charge, including £17,000 of missive dues, and the previous year's balance, amounted to £19,198, 3s. 8d., and the discharge (including £10,080 of cess), to £20,315, 1s. 2d., leaving due to the agent £1,116, 17s. 6d. Scots. The following items are contained in the accounts:—

Item, to the clerks for bringing up the compend,	£240	0	0
Item, for paper added to the abridgment and rebinding,	3	0	0

Item, tavern bills,	40	0	0
Item, expenses for the agents circuit through the kingdome anent the unfree traders,	800	0	0
Item, to the agent of gratuity for his pains in the said matter,	1000	0	0
Item, ane bill spent be the committe in Stephen Cuthills, November 1708,	22	1	0
Item, another bill spent in Andrew Tennents,	43	19	8

Agent to procure discharges.

22. Appointed the agent to procure discharges by the general receiver for the sums included in the foregoing accounts within twenty-four hours after dissolving this convention, and to enforce immediate payment of all missive dues.

Committee appointed.

23. Appointed a committee to transact and agree with unfree traders, and to consider all affairs relating to the staple port, debates within burghs relating to management of their common good, elections of magistrates, council, and deacons of crafts, management of their revenues, and anent their privileges and encroachments and other public concerns of the several burghs, with power to address her Majesty and the parliament in name of the whole royal burghs if they shall see cause.

St Andrews.

24. Having heard report by the committee to whom petition by the burgh of St Andrews was remitted, the committee found "the case and conditione of the harbour of St Andrews required present supply to prevent the ruine and lose thereof," and therefore the conventione allowed the sum of £400 Scots to be employed in making up the breaches upon the harbour.

Kirkcaldie.

25. Authorised the burgh of Kirkcaldie to set the lands of Murehouses and others in tack for nineteen in place of three years as formerly.

Linnen yeard,
Ireland, customs.

26. Remitted to the committee appointed by the 23rd act "ane complaint made be the commissioner for Glasgow that great quantities of linnen yearn was exported from Scotland to Ireland and broun linnen imported thence to Scotland without payment of customes." EDINBURGH.

10 July 1710.

27. Appointed the commissioners of Edinburgh, Dundie, Stirling, Dumbarton, Bamf, and Annan, "to wait upon George Baillie of Jeriswood, one of the commissioners of the counsell of trade of Great Britain, and to thank him in name of the conventione for his kind offer to serve the burrows in what concerns their trade." George Baillie of Jeriswood.

28. Appointed the decreet arbitral by the committee appointed to adjust the differences between the magistrates and trades of Inverness to be recorded amongst other sets of the burghs. Inverness.

29. Anent the petition by Sir Andrew Kennedy of Cloburn against Robert Panton, factor in Campvere, the convention found that the latter ought to pay the former conservator's dues for goods consigned prior to 9th December 1707, but refused to determine as to subsequent dues while the process is depending between Sir Andrew Kennedy and Sir Alexander Cumming. Kennedy against Panton.

30. Anent representations as to elections in Queensferry, the convention ordained the present magistrates and council to continue in office till Michaelmas next, and remitted to the committee appointed to sit after the dissolving of this convention "to make a sett to be the rule of electione of the magistrats and counsell of the said burgh in time coming." Queensferry.

31, 32. Remitted to the committee (1) the auditing of the accounts of Sir Robert Forbes, late agent, with petition of John Home, his servant; and (2) petition by the burgh of Wick. Sir Robert Forbes, Wick.

33. Anent petition by the burgh of Couper, the convention recommended the commissioners of that burgh to use diligence in bringing in unfree traders in the district, and the burgh will be considered at alteration of the tax roll. Couper.

34, 35. Granted warrant to the burghs of Dumbarton and Lochmaben "to set ane tack of the muirish ground belonging to them," Dumbarton for nineteen and Lochmaben for nine years. Dumbarton, Lochmaben.

36. Appointed the agents to pay certain salaries and gratuities to the clerks, agent, macers, officers, and others. Sellaries and gratuities.

37. Dissolved the present meeting, and appointed next general convention to be held at Edinburgh in July 1711. Act of dissolution.

Letter from commissioners

of trade.

1. Adam Broun, lord provost of Edinburgh, elected preses.
2. The lord provost of Edinburgh, preses, presented to the committee a letter to his lordship from William Popple, esquire, secretary to the lords commissioners of trade and plantations, which being read the committee appointed the same to be recorded, whereof the tenor followes :—
Whitehall, March 6th, 17th. My Lord. The lords commissioners of trade and plantations, among other things, impouered and required by Her Majesties commissione under the great seall to examine into and take ane account of the state and conditione of the severall trades of this kingdome into all forreign parts and from time to time to make representations thereon to Her Majestie, to the end that by her royall interposing with forreign princes and states in favour of her subjects and by other proper methods to be taken within her Majesties dominions the said severall trades may be promoted and advanced. Your lordship is therefore desired by the lords commissioners of trade and plantations to give notice to the merchants in North Britain concerned in the fishery that they confer together and draw up a state of the present conditione of that trade with regard to its increase or decrease, the causes or occasions thereof, or what obstructions if any it has met with, and to propose in what manner and by what proper methods they may be removed and that trade preserved and improved. When they have prepared such ane account of the state and conditione of that trade with regard to the severall matters before mentioned, their lordships desire you will please to communicat it to them as soon as may be for their consideration, in order to their laying a representation thereon befor her Majestie that such methods may be taken as shall be judged proper and may tend to the promoting and advancing that trade. The present customs, duties, and impositions which affect our forreign trade having been granted for the necessarie services of her Majesties government and appropriated for the re-payment of publick loans, their lordships desire that the methods to be proposed be such as shall be consistent with the said duties. I am, [etc.]. Sic subscribitur : WM. POPPLE, Secretary.

(1) Forasmuch as the tariffs and contracts between the Croun of France and the King of Spain for his dominions in the Netherlands and other states, have been the cause why herrings, codd, salmond, &c., have either been prohibited to be imported into these countreys from Scotland, or have been put under such regulations, or made lyable to such duties, as were equall to a prohibition, whilst these commodities, the native product of Her Majesties seas, were allowed to be imported to these very places by the subjects of other states, it may be worth considering if regular contracts can be made by Her Majestie with any touns in France or Flanders, with the allowance of the government in these places, in authentick forme, for the importation of such fish from Great Brittain by the Queens subjects, and if such contracts may not be managed with less observation and difficulty then formall treaties, but if matters of that kind are to be done by treaties it may be considered if anything can be done as to such parts of Braband and Flanders as are subject to King Charles the third of Spain, such as Ostend, Bruges, Brussells, Antwerp, &c., or if we must wait for a generall peace.

(2) Nerva and Riga were places of great consumpt for herring and some other commodities. These are now in the hands of the Czar of Muscovy and are blocked up by the Suedes. It may deserve consideratione if any applicatione shall be made to the court of Sueden for allowing our ships to trade as formerly with Nerva and Riga, with some restrictione as to counterband goods during this present war betuixt the Suedes and Muscovites, and if some treaty should not be endeavoured with the Muscovite for preserving and improving that trade.

(3) The Lewis fishing of herring is greatly decayed within these sixteen years, whereof there are many causes, but one difficulty seems to arise from the want of a custome house and warehouses in a proper place, and as to that matter it cannot be sett in a better light then it is in a letter sent a merchant on occasione of this very inquiry. The words which concern that matter are,—Wee labour under severall inconveniencies. For instance, befor we can upon any solid ground propose to get a loading of herring we buy our salt, including in the price the value of the highest duty, and the most of the other necessities, at Leith, so that bringing it about from thence to the Lewis and other places of fishing, and thereby in time of war are exposed to the hazard of privateers and at all times to the sea risque and cross winds, by which means it often happens that when the herrings come into the lochs where only our fishers can take them there is neither salt nor tree nor any other provisione at hand. Another difficulty we labour under is that after our herrings are made we have no custome house or officers to give dispatch within any tolerable distance, for our greatest fishings are in the lochs within the mainland, and the nearest custome house is in the Lewis, Orkney, or at Inverness, so that the law requiring ane officer to be witnes to the fishing we are forced to wait for such ane officer after our fishes are made, sometimes ten weeks, when if we were dispatched we might go to the forreign mercat in ten dayes; and the reasone is plain, the officers to be sent from Orkney or the Lewis depend upon the wind, which in the fishing seasons in that cuntry is most commonly westerly and blows from the shoar, so that ane officer cannot come from thence to the place of fishing. The custome house of Inverness is for the most part sixty miles distant from these places where the greatest fishings are and exceeding cross rod, scarce fitt for a horse to ride. To remove these difficulties it were to be wished that a custome house and some proper officer were appointed in some sentri-call place, having a good statione for ships, and there warehouses might be built for the Queen, and the salt lodged in the custody of her officers, to be used whenever the opportunities of fish does entitle. By these means merchants would have constantly stores and servants to improve every opportunity of the fishing, which by the by is not constant but must be taken as it offers, and the frauds committed in the curing of fish and in the drawbacks would be more effectually prevented then in any other way, to the great advantage both of fair trade and the revenue.

(4.) It will much facilitat the fishing trade if a packet boat were settled between John of Groats house on the mainland in Caithness and Kirkwall or some other convenient place in Orkney.

(5.) The ancient duty of assise or sise fish, or a certain number of fish out of every boat, belonging to the Croun, but is every where set out for inconsiderable rents and hes never been profitable to the Croun or of any considerable advantage to the grantees, yet is a very considerable prejudice to the fishing, especially herring, and therefore it may be of good use if Her Majestie would be pleased to discharge that duty, burdensome in itself and much more so in the way of levying of it, and this would be easie if any proper way were thought of to repair the damage of the grantees who are not many.

(6.) The fishers have seldome stock enough to buy salt and other materials for curing of fish, and they sell their herring by retail to the merchants, but the fish being delivered by tail they grow cold and unfitt for salting and are bruised by casting from hand to hand in telling. This can only be remedeed by ane act of parliament appointing fresh herring to be sold by the fishers at the places where they are taken by measure and not by taill.

(7.) There are some inconsiderable differences in word between the oath appointed to be taken by exporters of fish from England to entitle them to a drawback and that appointed to be taken by the exporters of fish from Scotland for the same end, and these differences tho very small raise disputs at making out of debentures which can be no otheruise remedeed then by ane explanatory act of parliament making the oaths the same in every word excepting these words which concern the curing of fishes here with forreign salt.

(8.) It is thought, with submission, that for security of the fishing and for safety of fleets that either come home north about the coast of Scotland and from voyages to the East and West Indies, the Straits, &c., as well of such fleets that goe to Archangel or other northern places, forts should be built at Brassay Sound in Zetland and Kerstoun in Orkney, tuo excellent roads. The necessity of this in time of peace as well as of war is evident, for in such places fleets of fishers may be secure, and if forts were built, magazines of salt, nets, tree, and others, would be made to attend the fishing seasons, and stores would be provided to supply disabled ships. In time of war these places are as open and free to enemies as to natives or allies, so long as there are no forts in these places, and at this time the enemies ships do often lye there in wait and exact a kind of contribution. Besides, if any rivalship arise concerning the fishing trade, or if the pouters in the north shall increase their navall force, it will be of great use for the Queen and her successours to have forts on these places, which may be built for small charge and maintained by small garrisons.

(10.) The pressing of fishermen into the sea or land service is an exceeding discouragement to the fishing, for upon the least appearance of a ship or officer the fishers desert their bushes, and it would very much incourage and increase the number of fishers if her Majestie would be pleased to give her protectione to such as by proper certificats under the hands of any number of justices of peace in the neighbouring county and the principall officer of the nearest customhouse shall appear to be engaged in the fishing.

Memoriall to

of trade.

(11.) There is a particular kind of codd taken upon the north coast of Scotland called the Ratray codling, which at its maturity is a short thick sweet fish, and for which there is greater demand at Malaga, Leghorn, and some other parts in the straits then for any other kind of codd, and whereof great quantities could be furnished upon due incouragement; but this fish being generally from twelve to sixteen or eighteen inches long there is no drawback received neither for the salt consumed in curing nor for incouragement, and there is very good reasone to believe that if an encouragement proportionall to what is given for other salted codd exported were given for the said Ratray codling of twelve inches and above, it would prove a very profitable trade and improve the revenue far beyond the charge.

(12.) There has been a trade of barrelled codd, ling, and seith fish, for which there is a considerable demand at Hamburg, Breman, and in the Baltick, for which also there is no allowance of drawback, that is, no regular allowance, and therefore the merchants are put once to the necessity of entering the fish first by tail and then when they are brought aboard to barrel them. This is no advantage to the Queen and a burden and uneasiness to the merchant, and the people here that are accustomed to that trade would be contented with a smaller drawback for barrelled codd, ling and seithed fish, then they get when the same fish are exported without being barrelled, so that both the revenue and the merchant would be eased.

(13.) Seeing by the articles of Union our fish must be cured with forreign salt, and that we are neither furnished with ships proper for bringing salt from Spain or Portugall nor convoys for protecting that trade, and that the act of navigatione hath been dispenced with in such emergents, that therefore during the war we may be allowed to import

(14.) The salmond fishing is a very valuable branch of trade, but has of late years decayed exceedingly, of which the causes are partly the non execution of the laws against the killers of salmond in forbidden time, and the destroyers of the fry or smolts of salmond, of which there is one very pregnant instance, the case of the fishing on Dee and Don where the fishing being in a state of decay and growing worse yearly has on a sudden been greatly revived, Her Majestie having been graciously pleased to give an extraordinary commission to the captains of the independent companies to enquire into the breakers of these laws, which they having execute with dilligence, hes ansuered the end, and partly this decay hes been occasioned by the shortness of the close time, that is the time wherein the law prohibits the killing of salmond, for whereas that prohibition now begins at the eight of September and ends the thirty of November the nature of the thing does require that the prohibition should beginn upon the first of September and continue till the last of December both inclusive. As to this trade also, it is to be considered that Tueed, being for some way the ancient boundary of England and Scotland, was almost neglected by the laws and usages of both, and thereby and other particular mismanagement a very considerable salmond fishing has been near ruined, for remeedy whereof it seems expedient that the justices of peace on both sides of the river in the counties of Berwick and Northumberland be appointed conservators of the said river with the same priviledges as the justices of peace upon the rivers of (blank) in England have, and to make this the more effectuell the miln dyke at Berwick must be regulated.

(15.) The lobster fishing, though not of equall value to those mentioned, yet it is too valuable to be lost for want of necessary rules, and whereas from Craill and other places there used to be sent five or six ships in one year, at present they have scarce any at all, which is occasioned by destroying the fry of the lobsters when they come into the rocks in the months of May, June and July, which may be easily prevented by a law discharging the taking of lobsters in these months, and indeed the gentry and burrows on that coast are so much disposed to

(16.) The whale fishing is another branch of the fishing which though it does not only nor indeed chiefly lye upon the north coast of Scotland yet begins from the Orcades and extends northward, and if that trade had due encouragement there are people here very well inclined to set it a going, and that it may be understood what encouragement is desired there is herewith sent a draught of a bill to be presented in parliament and past into ane act.

Tho' the letter from Mr Popple, secretary to the board of trade, does only mention the case of the fisheries, yet there are some other things concerning the state of the trade in this country which deserve the consideration of that honourable board; and, first, the wool in Scotland, since the strict prohibitions against export, is become a drugg and has greatly impaired the rents of a considerable part of Scotland, nor is there any possibility to bring it againe to be of any use but by the mixture of finer wool, and therefore it seems to be very reasonable that a port be appointed upon the west coast for importatione of Irish wool to be mixed in the manufacture with the coarse wool here. In like manner, there is a little trade springing up in this country which is in danger to be niped in the bud, that is the tanning of lether which through the exporting the bark of trees chiefly to Ireland is like to come to nothing, and now when there is a further duty laid upon green hydes if the materialls of tanning be allowed to be exported it will be a very sensible prejudice.

To the Queens most Excellent Majestie, the humble address of the committee of the convention of the royall burrows in Scotland. May it please your Majestie. Wee your Majesties most loyall and faithfull subjects, the committee of the convention of the royall burrows in Scotland, doe presume to approach your most excellent Majestie with the most profound and dutyfull respect, humbly and with chearfull hearts to acknowledge the many blessings that we and the trading people in these parts enjoy under your Majesties most auspicious government, and more particularly that ships are appointed both for convoyes and cruzers along this coast, but that your royall care for the good of your people may be more effectuell then hitherto it has been, we beg leave with great submissione to informe your Majestie that though three ships are appointed to be convoyes for securing the trade along this coast, tuo only have been here for many months past, and these tuo have lyen for the most part in Leith road, so far within land that small privateers have come up the firth almost in their view and made prizes, insulting at the same time the shoar and calling for supplies both of provisions and even pilots, on pain of military executione. There has been none or very few ships convoyed from the north to the firth or from thence to the northward these many months by reasone of their want of necessary supplies. Though these ships are very fitt for protecting our coast from the insult of the enemies, greater privateers, for convoying our trade to the east countrey or Holland and for bringing about the Russia and West Indian ships that come north about, yet these being joyned by frigots of smaller force would be of great use for covering our coast where the enemies plye with small privateers and run into creeks and under shoar where great ships cannot come at them, whereby it happens that our trade is on the one hand discouraged for want of such small frigots to clear the coast though the government is at considerable expence for that service, and on the other hand these ships who on that account lye here doe press the men from on board of our ships and barks not only to make up their own complement but to turn them over to other ships. This misfortoun, whereby the end of your royall goodness is disapointed, is so much the more remarkable here because of late years and since the beginning of this war your Majesties coast of Scotland was effectually secured by small frigots, but our coast now is much more infested with privateers then at that time. Wee therefore most humbly submitt to your Majesties consideratione if it be not therefore expedient that tuo more small frigots of sixteen or twenty guns be added for convoyes for securing our northern trade, and that they be also instructed to attend that service strictly and receive orders from the provost of Edinburgh for the time, and if it may not be usefull to give the commanders of such ships instructions to abstain from pressing of fishermen or seamen employed in the coasting trade, especially these outward bound, or even from on board ships returned from long voyages, unless where your Majestie on some urgent occasion shall order otherwayes, for the pressing of seamen in Scotland before the Union was not done by any of your royall ancestors, and however the law may be altered in that point by a consequence since the Union yet that custome of pressing men being new, with submissione, it would seem to be for the good of the service that it be gone about with some greater cautione then is needed in places where it has long taken place. One great occasione of the convoyes failling in their business is that when ships are foull, want repairs or victualls, there is neither a dock at Leith at present fitt to receive and clean great ships nor navall stores nor contracts for providing your Majesties ships here, and for that reason wee doe also most humbly presume to offer to your royall consideratione if the carying on the designed improvement of the harbour of Leith may not be of use for your royall navy, the security and accomodation of convoys and cruzers, and the good of trade in generall, which improvement your Majestie has most graciously had in your thoughts and towards which some progress has been already made, to the great satisfactione of your people here, for increase of trade and preservation of your ancient city of Edinburgh from unseemly ruines, and if for the same reasone of advantage to your royall navies, convoys, cruzers, and trade, it may not be expedient that a better magazine of navall stores be erected and contracts settled at Leith for provyding your Majesties ships on occasione. Wee submitt, with that deferrence that is due to your royall wisdom, if these things may not be reall improvements of the Union of your Majesties kingdome of Great Britain, and of what use it may be not only in this war but in any subsequent war and even in time of peace for the service of your fleets and increase of trade and navigatione.

Wee beg humbly pardon for having taken up so much of your Majesties time, so precious and constantly imployed in a manner worthy of a great and good Queen. Your Majesties tender regard to the good of your people and that readiness shown to hear them and provide for their happiness has given us the boldness thus humbly to address your Majestie in the foregoing particulars. Wee shall only beg leave to add our most ardent wishes for your Majesties long and prosperous reign, to the unspeakable good not of your people only but of all Europe. May it please your Majestie, [etc.] Sic subscribitur : ADAM BROWN, preses.

other things under consideratione the small benefite our trade has had, notwithstanding of the charge the government is put to in maintaining of cruzers and convoyes on this coast, and the prudent care your lordships are pleased to take about that matter, of which the committe and all here are very sensible, they have therefore sent ane address to be presented to Her Majestie on that subject and some other particulars which have a near connexione with it, whereof I presume to send at the desire of the meeting a copy inclosed. The address contains the substance of the generall complaints, and the humble and dutyfull desire of the trading people here for remeeding of them, to which I referr myself. The meeting did also desire me to beg your good offices in procuring what they do with submissione propose. They do with the greater assurance hope for your lordships countenance because nothing can be done for giving quiet to mens minds here in matters of this kind which will not at the same time advance her Majesties service and the trade of Great Britain, as well for the benefite of traders in the southern parts as in the north. My lords. I did acknowledge the receipt of Mr Popple, secretary to the Board's letter of the 6th of March, written by your lordships commands, by the next post after it came to hand, and did pursuant thereto give nottice of it to the royall burrows in Scotland and to the most considerable merchants every where concerned in the fishery by sending a copy of Mr Popple's letter to them. Since that the committe of the conventione of the royall burrows have mett extraordinary, and besides the commissioners from some places very much concerned in the fishery they were assisted by some of the most intelligent and greatest traders in these parts. It is their desire that I give myself the honour to write to your lordships at this time.

The intimatione people here have by Mr Popples letter that Her Majestie has impoured and required your lordships to examine the state and conditione of the severall trades in this kingdome and to make representations thereon to her Majestie, to the end that by her royall interposing with forreign princes and states, and by other proper methods within her dominions, the said severall trades may be advanced, that intimation I say, has given fresh cause to Her Majesties subjects here to acknowledge her princely care and to pray that God, who has blessed this nation with so excellent a Queen, may long preserve her for the happiness of her people and continue to attend her great and wise counsells with success and glory.

The trading people here have also a very gratefull sense of your lordships great zeall to second her Majesties most gracious intentions in that matter, and of your care for the trade of this place of the Island, and do return their most hearty and sincere thanks for it. The promotting of the fishing or any other trade here must certainly be of very great advantage to the shipping and commerce of Her Majesties kingdome of Great Brittain in generall, and your lordships applicatione to procure the good of this corner is indeed necessary to revive the spirit of business amongst us. Nothing can more effectually demonstrat the advantages of the Union to both ends of this great Island then the concern shown to improve the fishing on the north coasts wherein, tho the people in Scotland must be employed because of the situation of the countrey, the principall advantages will still fall to the share of the southern parts where the great consumption of stocks will aluays be. It will take some time before exact accounts, as your lordships desire, can be drawn up of the state and present condition of the fishery with regard to its increase and decrease, the causes or occasions thereof, or what obstruction it has met with and what is fitt to be proposed by way of propper methods for removing these obstructions and preserving and improving the trade, matters very fitt for your lordships inquiry, but to proceed with that exactness both as to facts and reasoning as the committe desire and your lordships will very justly expect, it does require to consult the most knowing and impartiall inhabitants on or about the chief seats of the fishery, which we have begun to do, and as soon as all their returns come to hand we shall presume to communicat to your lordships what may deserve your consideration. In the meantime I take the liberty, at the command of the committe, to transmitt the inclosed memoriall on such heads as presently occur. Some articles do indeed require a remedy by act of parliament, yet even as to these the committe thought that acts would be the more easily passed if the matters were before hand examined and approved of by your lordships and representations made thereon to the Queen. I have also transmitted ane address to the Queen by the committe of the royall burrows concerning the convoys appointed for this coast and the use of having a dock with magazines and wayes laid down for victualling ships on occasion in this firth at Leith, which the committe thought to have so near a relatione to the improvement and security of trade that they commanded me to communicat it to your lordships and very earnestly to beg your lordships assistance in the subject of that address. The committe doe reckon it a very great happiness that there is ane occasione in matters concerning trade to apply to persons of such worth and emmenence and so well disposed to do reall service to the Queen and your countrey as your lordships are and who can know the reall state of trade both south and north. They hope that as occasion occurs to give further informatione your lordships will be pleased to receive it. They will always endeavour to make their humble overtures impartially and with all due regard to the trade in other places and to the revenue. The committe and I in their name and of all that wish this place well do beg and hope for the continuance of your lordships countenance and protection to this corner, which being so far removed from the ordinary seat of our Princes, the parliaments, and of the great concurse and spring of trades that attend these advantages, doe need the greater care for keeping heat and vigour amongst us, for if these extremities of the island shall decay and want nourishment and strength it must certainly affect the whole body. Give me leave to take this opportunity to add for myself that I am a sincere wellwisher to the com-mone good of Great Britain, a most faithfull subject to our most excellent Queen, and, with very great respect and truth, I am, [etc.] Sic subscribitur: ADAM BROUN. The meeting was pleased to desire me in their name to beg your graces assistance in this business wherein the trade and satisfacione of these parts are very nearly touched. Letter to Jeriswood.

Honoured Sir. The committe of the royall burrows have appointed me in a particular manner to give you their thanks for minding our poor country, so long and often forgot. They and everybody are convinced by the letter of the 6th of March from the secretary of the counsell of trade of what good use it is to the Queens service and the good of her people to have men at that board conversant intimatly with the people and having interest and experience in both the south and north parts of her kingdome and so perfectly sincere and firme as you are. The memoriall of the burghs has many heads and yet more might be proposed and perhaps less gratefull but they will be willing to be advised by yourself in the forme and manner of such applications. There are some particulars which I can explain with more freedome to you then to others. In the first article the manner of making particular agreements with touns in France, Brabant and Flanders, such as has been made with Hamburg, mutatis mutandis, may seem at first looke impracticable, for how (may one say) can these things be done without treaties, how shall treaties be caryed on with particular touns or in her Majesties name with France who does not oun her authority. To these I ansuer you, that such contracts have anciently been with Bruges and Antwerp, such are now standing with Campvere in Zeland, for the staple contract is originally a contract with the royall burrows who proceed with approbation of the Queen, and forreign states willing to treat will proceed in that method, allowig particular touns to treat, and such contracts will bind as long as they are good for both sides, and now I pray you tell me what contracts or treaties will hold out longer. Yet these things are to be mentioned with cautione to others lest these pouers in our burrows seem too suspicious.

One thing the committee has charged me with, as to the bringing salt from Hamburg, whether it may be done by the treaty latly concluded with that place. If that treaty does not allow our people that liberty they have it not otherwayes and are at a lose that they cannot bring salt so necessary for their fishing from such places where their fish is imported, besides that straitning of the importing forreign salt from any place seems to be ane unnecessary discouragement, and at this time (which pinches us more) the Danes doe not suffer, as usually, forreign salt to be exported from their countrey, that it may be wholly imployed on fishing there, so that if we have not leave to bring it from Holland or Hamburgh our ships will often return in a great part empty and at least stored with the less profitable commodities. From the first of these places, possibly, men will not allow us to bring our salt, but there seems to be good reasons to allow us to bring our salt from the latter who take our fishes. Upon this head give me leave still by order of the committee to acquaint you that severall people here have a mind to complain that Hamburg stealls our herring trade in Orkney, &c., but this has been waved at this time for many reasons for it does not seem congruous to complain so soon after a treaty. Next, the Hamburgers do maintain the people of the countrey in the mean time and give them labour, and why should they not till we can do it and our fishing be a little advanced, yet that kind of commerce between the Hamburgers and the inhabitants in these islands deserves consideratione both for the sake of the trade and of the revenue, and this is a farther reason to encourage the fishing that when it grows we may work out strangers gently and for building of forts to secure Brassi Sound and Kerstoun. I am, [etc.] Edinburgh, 14 Aprile 1711.

APPENDIX.

No. I.

ABSTRACT OF ACTS OF CONVENTION between 1631 and 1649. From "Compend of the Acts, Statuts, and Constitutions of the Generall and Particular Conventions," submitted to the General Convention in July 1700. (See p. 306.)

Here begins the 5th Burrow Book, from Anno 1631 to 1649.

THE matters of the fishings being in agitation and likely to take effect, the convention ordains that there be ane particular exception contained in the said gift, according to the bounds sett down here as follows:—The commissioners of burrows being convened anent the letter sent down be the commissioners of this kingdome in the matter of the fishing to the lords of counsell, requiring their advyce anent the bounds of the fishings of this countrey, and the saids commissioners having advyced thereanent, hes condescended thereupon in manner following, viz., upon the east coast of Scottlaud, from St Obbs Head [to the Red-Head] in Angus, which compehends the coast of the Merse, Lothian, the Firth, Fyfe, and ane pairt of the coast of Angus, and fourtie myles without the course from the said St Obbs Head to the Red Head; from the Red Head north noreast alongs the coast of Angus, Mearns, Marr, and Buchan to Buchanness, and 40 myles of the said coast; from Buchanness norwest and benorth to Duningsbayhead in Caithness, comprehending therein the coast of Bamfe in Murray upon the south side, Murray Firth, and the coast of Rossa, Sutherland, and ane pairt of Caithness upon the north, and fourty myles within the course from the said Buchanness to the said Duningsbiehead; and from the said Duningsbiehead in Caithness west alongs to the coast of Caithness and Strathnaver to Fairayhead in Strathnaver and fourty myles of the said coast; with fourty myles round about the Isles of Orkney and Zetland; from the said Fairayhead directly from alongs the coast of Strathnaver to the head of Storeashen and 40 miles of the said coast; and from the said head of Storeashen to the outmost point of the Isle of the Lewis, comprehending therein the haille seas interjected betwixt the said head of Storeashen and outmost point of the said Isle of Lewis, with all the isles and lochs within the samen and fourteen myles without the course from the said head of Storeashen to the said outmost point of the Lewis; from the said outmost point of the Lewis south about fishings necessary for the particular use of the countrey of Scotland, they haveing convened and taken the samen to their consideration, declares that the fishings of the firth of Lothian lyeing betwixt the land of St Obbs Head in the Merse on the south and the Red Head in Angus upon the northand within the course betwixt the saids heads ; the fishing of Murray first betwixt Buchanness and Duningsbiehead and within the course betwixt the saids heads ; and the fishings within Dumbarton firth lyeing betwixt the Mule of Kintyre and the Mule of Galloway ; and the course within the saids two points are so necessary to this countrey that it can not subsist if the same be communicat to any other nation and not reserved for the proper use of the nation. They likeways declare that it is necessary for the weill of the saids fishings within the saids firths that 40 myles be reserved likeways to the natives without the course betwixt the saids heads and betwixt Buchanness and Duningsbiehead, yet heirin they submitt themselves to the determination of his Majesty. And farder it is declared that in the space betwixt Redhead and Buchanness there is an absolute necessity of reservation of 40 myles of the said coast for the dayly use of the inhabitants liveing thairupon. As likeways, for the good of salmond fishings in the rivers of Dee, Done, Ivie, and both the Esks, which be the incroaching of the bushes nearer the shoar then the said distance may altogether be undone, to the great prejudice of the hail kingdom, being one of the most pryme native commodities of this land. And as for the Isles of Orkney, Zetland, and remanent isles and lochs therein, and in the main foreagainst the same, they agree that the same be remitted to the commissioners of burrows further advice and declaration. And last, it is humbly desyred that the privie counsell would be pleased to recommend to the commissioners for this kingdome to interceed with his Majesty for such retribution as can be had for the benefite granted to the English upon this our coast. Follows the advice of the burrows anent the other places of the fishings, remitted to their consideration :—That where it hes pleased the privie counsell to desyre the commissioners of the burrows to declare their opinions what fishings in the lochs in the mayne land without the firth is reserved and isles adjacent thereto and lochs within the samen, remitted to the consideration of the commissioners of burrows be the nobility and gentry, are fittest to be observed and reserved for the benefite of trade, and haveing maturely advised thereant have delyvered their opinions as after followes :—IMPRIMIS, Anent the lochs in the mayne land lyand betwixt the Fairyhead and Strathnaver and the Mule of Kintyre, they declare its necessare to reserve all the lochs within the said mayne land lyand betwixt the said Fairyhead and the Kyle, together with Loch Wryne lyand upon the south side of the said Kyle. (20.)

Isles, lochs.

Anent the isles, being in number above 220, and the lochs of the samen, being infinite in number, they declare its fitt to reserve the inner syde whilk is the east side of the isles of Lewis, Ewest, Bara, and Muggersland, and lochs of the samen, together with the Bread Loch and the Bybillhead upon the north part of the Lewis; as also Locharloway upon the backside thereof.

Item, in the Isle of Skye they declare that it is fitt to observe and reserve Loch Ushert lyand upon the east side of the said Isle.

Item, they declare for the good of the fishings reserved in the saids isles and maine lands, it is absolutely necessar that there be noe bush fishing betwixt the islands and the mayne lands whilk is from the Fairayhead upon the mayne and the north east point of the Lewis, nor within the course lyand betwixt the saids two points and 40 myles from the north eastmost point of the Lewis.

Item, anent Orknay and Zetland it is necessarie to reserve the coasts of the samen and 14 myles from the saids coasts, yet anent the saids 14 myles they refere the samen to his Majesty.

They declare also that the salmond fishing in these places are wholly to be observed to the use of the natives.

Item, they declare that all these fishings hes been continually fished be the merchands and fishers of this realme, and that they are able to fish the samen to the full, and that noe stranger hes been admitted to fish in these places. And that, without reservation of the same, trade can not be mentained nor subsist.

And last, for the remanent lochs of the mayne land betwixt the Kyle and Mule of Kiutyre, excepting Loch Wryne, as also for the back sydes of the saids Isles of the Lewis, Ewest, Bara, Muggersland and Sky, excepting the particular lochs above mentioned, and all the hail remanent lochs and isles of the samen, as hes been formerly declared in the former instructions, they remit the samen to his Majesties consideration how maney of the same his Majesties royall judgement shall think fitt to communicat. (20.)

There is commission given to Mr John Hay to go to London anent the for-said fishing and burghs of barrony that are come to soe great height that they render the burghs royall altogetther of noe trade.

There being many prejudices threatned by the coyneing of copper oppones severall burghs to get the samen stopped. (25.)

The King being to come to Scotland, and probable occasion may offer to clear the differences betwixt royall burghs and burghs of barrony, therefor ordains, be way of preparation, that ane signature be drawn ratifying all the burrows priviledges and the charter granted be King David to the burrows, and to be extended in such lawfull manner as may be agreeable to the laws of this countrie. (26.)

There is ane act for clear rydding of marches betwixt burghs of royallty and barronie, and ordaineing ane signature to be drawn up concerning the priviledges of burrows, seeing the samen was warranted by the act of parliament, and to be docked by his Majesties advocat, as also there is to be eiked to the 58 patent ane commission to sett down laws and ordinances anent shipping and for guyding of masters and mariners and ordering them as follows:—

commissioners of burrows having thir many years bygone endeavoured to have made ane perfect distinction betwixt them and the burghs of barrony and other unfree places, whereby the foresaids usurpers might be suppressed, and especially haveing for this effect upon the fifth day of December last, ordained ane signature to be drawn up containing ane ratification of their haill libertyes contained in the acts of parliament and in their Generall Charter granted to them be King David ; lykeas, the present commissioners, after mature deliberatione had anent the said signature, hes for diverse causes thought it good that the said charter granted be the said King David should not be confirmed but rather soe much thereof as they have thought necessar shall be contained in that part of the new signature where his Majesty does of new dispoone certain libertyes to the saids burrows ; and haveing caused draw up the said new signature containing the haill privileges of the burrows, and having perused the samen, they ordain the said signature as the samen is conceived to be wrytten over in mundo and docked be the advocatt and to be sent to Mr John Hay, their commissioner, to be expedie be his Majestie ; and for this effect ordains ane letter to be sent therewith to the said Mr John in their names, earnestly recommending the prosecution thereof to him, and withall to intreat his Majestie in their names for directing ane warrand to the lords of councill and exchequer for passing of the same without any question, since the same is soe weill warranted be acts of parliament, and to desyre him to send the samen down with all the dilligence he can to Edinburgh ; which being done ordains the said burgh to convene with them the burghs of Dundee, Perth, Aberden, Stirling, Linlithgow, Glasgow, Aire, and Haddingtoun, with all convenient dilligence thereafter, to which the burrowes and most pairt of them convened, the present commissioners, for themselves and in name of the haill remanent burrows, gives full power and commission for prosecuting of the said signature and for useing of all means for obtaining the samen past and depurseing such soumes of money as they shall think necessary for performance thereof, which being suae depursed they obliedge them and their burghs for themselves and in name foresaid to refound the samen with the interest thereof. And farder, the saids commissioners considering that they be the acts of parliament hes power in their conventions to sett down laws for the weillfare of the burrows and flourishing of the merchand estate ; and considering that there is nothing concerns them more than the flourishing of shipping and the good government amongst masters and mariners, throughout lake thereof both the merchand estate and shipping is much prejudged ; therefor they ordaine the clerk to eik to the said patent ane commission to the saids commissioners in their conventions to sett down lawes and orders for governing of the shipping and for guideing masters and mariners of this kingdome wheresoever they travell, outwith or inwith this kingdome, shall be subject to such laws and orders as the saids merchands and mariners shall be enjoyned into in all things ; with power to every burgh within themselves to putt the saides lawes to execution ; and with power also to the said commissioners, either be themselves or judges foresaid, at the instance of the agent or any other particular party, to execute the same, with all other clauses needfull, whereanent thir presents shall be their warrant. And ordains Mr John Hay to be acquainted herewith and be desired to use his best means for passing of the signature with this addition forsaid; if not, to wrytt over the said signature leaving out the said commission anent the shipping, and with diligence to send the samen hither; and ordains the burgh of Edinburgh to advance the soume of 530 merks for expedeing of the said signature; and the saids commissioners for themselves and in name of the hail remanent burrows oblidges them to repay the samen at the next general convention without any further warning or premonition to be made to them, and in case of not payment at the tyme foresaid to pay the same with interest due therefor. And the saids burrows and the said master John Hay to report their diligence anent the premisses to the next general convention, and the said matter to be remembered at the next convention. (30.)

There is report made be Sir John Hay anent his diligence at London as to what particulars the burrows had enjoyned him and gave particular accompt of every point as follows :—(45.)

Item, anent the several heads of the missive concerning the several commissions given to Sir John Hay for dealing with his Majesty in the matters after specifit, compeared the said Sir John and declared the first, conforme to one of the instructions given to him be the commissioners convened at Perth, 23 of September 1631, ordaineing him to deal with his Majestie for ratification of the patent granted to the burrows of this kingdome of their ships and goods in payment of custome in England and Ireland as the natives there, and especially for makeing of the samen effectuall in Ireland, he had procured a new gift of the equality of customes in all his Majesties kingdoms, under his Majesties great seal, dated at Westminster 10th April last, which the said Sir John produced, conforme whereunto there was the lyke granted in Scotland under the great seall thereof to his Majesties subjects in England and Ireland, and declared that the same was intimat lawfully throw the ports and burrows of England; as likeways ane copie of the said patent signed by his Majestie direct to the deputes of Ireland, with ane other letter for publishing thereof there. And anent the eight act of the particular convention holden at Perth the 23 September 1631, anent the burghs of barrony and commission given to him for suppressing of their encroachments upon the free burghs, declared that he had procured ane letter from his Majesty to the lords of session, conforme to their commission which was delyvered to them, as lykeways to the lords of counsell, willing them that in no erection of burghs of barrony hereafter there be no farder liberty granted to them in any patent then by the lawes of this kingdome competent to any burgh of barrony, and that none of them hereafter be erected with any priviledges which be the lawes of this kingdome are proper to burghs royall. And anent the patent procured be Robert Buchan of the fishing of the peell in Scotland, which by the said commission he is ordained to procure the recalling thereof, the said Sir John produced a letter from his Majestie to the lords of counsell, with ane copie thereof, willing them to conven before them the said Robert and discharge the said patent and publish the said discharge and expead no other thereafter, as the letter dated at Oatlands, the last of July last, bears. And anent the fifth act of the last convention, holden att Edinburgh the twenty-sixth of April last, ordaining the said Sir John to deall with his Majestie anent the act of parliament made anent maltmen, the said Sir John produced a letter from his Majestie to the lords of counsell, willing them to sett ane new price according to the tyme betwixt the boll of barley and the boll of malt, and in the meantyme discharging the execution of the former act dated att Oatland last of July last. And likewise produced a letter direct be his Majestie, willing that no new gift be expedie tuitching the office of constabulary till the commissioners of free burrows be lawfully cited and heard to object; and if any question arise anent their libertys to remitt the same to the judge ordinar. And sicklyke, the said Sir John reported that he being informed that there was some persons bussied in procuring certain patents for manufactories for cloath and stuff within this kingdome, and least the burghs should suffer prejudice therein, that he had procured a letter to his Majesties counsell willing them to call before them the counsell of Edinburgh, or such other burghs as they shall find willing to undertake the inbringing of tradesmen, and to grant them such priviledges as may encourage them, restraining all others during their tyme, dated at Oatlands the last of July last. And sicklyke produced ane letter from his Majestie to the present commissioners, willing them to contribute their endeavours for bringing the work of fishing to perfection, for which his Majestie promises to mentaine and defend their libertyes, dated at Beaulie the 15 of August last. Sir John Hay,

diligence at court.

The expences of Sir John Hay, his jurney to London, since the year 1629, being employed by the burrows, extends to 24,000 li., which Edinburgh did advance, and the burrows obleidges them to pay the samen at 3 termes, Edinburgh paying their proportion of the said soume conforme to the taxt roll. (45.)

Sir John Hay's
expences to

countrie and incommody they sustaine be the restraint forsaid. As likeways to supplicat his Majestie anent the manner of money. And the said Sir John to report his diligence hereanent to the next general convention of burrowes. And this to be ane head of the next missive. (46.)

Commission to Sir John Hay to go to London anent the fishing and reserved places. (47.)

Imprimis, the saids commissioners shall informe his Majesty of the necessity of reservation of the lochs of the main land and isles and others, contained in the declaration given in be them to the privie councill, and to humbly supplicate his Majesty to ratify the samen. Next, if his Majesty shall insist for the further enlargement of the saids places, to declare to his Majestie their willingness and that they have taken to their consideration how the samen work may be most profitable and upon sure grounds begun and continued, and have thought fitt in all humility to represent to his Majesty the great oppression and wrongs done to his Majesties subjects be the subjects of the estates of the Low Countreys, and be the Hamburgers and Brymers, be encroaching upon the seas and coasts of Scotland and upon the Isles of Zetland and Orknay, and now lately upon the isles in the Lewis, to the great detriment of his Majesties subjects ; and if the samen be continued it is likely that these rich fisheries which formerly has been the means of the trade shall be made unprofitable to his Majesties subjects ; and therefore to show their willingness to advance all his Maiesties designes, that they would humbly entreat his Majestie to free the seas of Scotland and isles of the samen of the bushes of the saids Northlands and other strangers resorting to the Isles of Orknay and Zetland, at least to free the coasts of the said kingdome of the saids bushes or other fisher boats of the Netherlands, the space of 28 or 14 myles ; and to discharge them to have any fishing near the coasts of the said mainland or isles, and the Hamburgers and Brymers of that trade within Zetland or Orknay, otherways than according to the lawes of Scotland ; for the which they as his Majesties most humble subjects will offer to his Majestie this his Majesties most royall work of fishing to the utmost of their power, be setting furth such ane competent number of bushes as shall proportionably fall to their part, and use all other means for improveing of the saids fishings of the isles and lochs of the samen and of the mainland of this kingdome, but also will consent that his Majesty grant liberty to the subjects of England and Ireland who shall be free of the association of the fishings, intendit freely to fish in all the seas of the said kingdome and isles thereof and lochs of the main land and isles of the same in the same manner as they doe, exceptand always the particular firths of Lothian, Murray and Dumbarton, and the bounds reserved for the salmond fishing and indemnity thereof, contained in the declaration given in be the lords of his Majesties privie counsell, both nobilitie and gentry, and the said commissioners of burrows ; in the which case and noe otherways they declare they are able to grant the said enlargement without their own undoing utterly ; therefore humbly to supplicat his Majestie that since the fishing within the isles and lochs of the same and main land of this kingdom will be unprofitable if any bush fishing be permitted betwixt the Fairayhead in Strathnaver and the north eastmost point of the Lewis, or within the seas lyand within the saids two points of the Lewis and 14 myles from the eastmost point of the said Isle of the Lewis, and therefor his Majesty would be pleased to discharge any bush fishing there ; with liberty always to the association to fish within the saids bounds in manner as is presently accustomed be the natives, whilk is most usefull in these parts. As also that his Maiestie would be pleased to discharge any bush fishing there, and that he would be pleased to remove the strangers furth of the Lewis and isles adjacent thereto, and to appoint the tymes of the fishing as follows, viz., the bush fishing upon the east coast the 24 June yearly, and the Isles fishing the first of September yearly. Farder, since the liberty of trade and packing and peilling of fishes granted be his Majesties predecessor to the free royall burrows of this realme, and that they at his Majesties desire consents that all the members of the association, English and Irish, shall be free to pack and peill fishes and export the samen, that therefor his Majesty might discharge them from any other trade within the said kingdom and isles thereof, and that they hire none of the fishers of the said kingdom and isles thereof to the prejudice of the natives, and that they associat no strangers to themselves, and that English nor Irish shall fish any salmond fishing within the said kingdom or isles thereof.

APPENDIX I.

acts, 1631-49.
Instructions to Sir John Hay.

As also, it may please his Majesty to grant to the subjects of Scotland of the said association liberty to fish freely in all their coasts and seas of England and Ireland and isles of the samen, and that alsewell herrings and whitefish as pillsheats, and that upon the samen conditions, libertyes and payment of customes, as the natives doe, and with the lyke liberty to pack and peill upon the maine land and export the samen furth thereof.

Fishing in English and

There is commission given to Edinburgh to treat with the secret councill anent the dollars and money.

Statut anent the verification of the missive and which way the samen is proven. (56.)

Statut that no portage shall be allowed to masters and mariners but that such competent allowance be given to them in their hyres whereby they may live honestly, and that no freeman shall be partner with ane unfree skipper under the paine of ane hundred pound. Followes the tenor of the statute :—The commissioners of burrows being convened, the 36 and 47 acts of the last generall convention of burrows holden at Montrose, July 1632, concerning the trading of unfree skippers and restraineing of freemen to be partners with them, the present commissioners statuts that there shall be no portage allowed to masters and mariners, but such competent allowance be given them in their hyres whereby they may live honestly ; and whereas in the matter of fishing it might seem the allowance of portage to be necessar, its thought fitt and ordained that the merchand that employes them shall agree with them for their portage before the hand. And farder for restraineing of unfree skippers dwelling at unfree ports, it is statute and ordained that in no tyme comeing merchands be partners either in ships or goods with the saids unfree skippers, under the paine of ane hundred pund and deprivation of their liberties. And the said commissioners ordaines that all such burgesses as are for the present partners with them shall, betwixt and the next generall convention, free themselves of the ships belonging to them, or otherways draw them to their own parts, under the said paine. And ordaines ilk commissioner to intimat the samen to their burghs, and ilk burgh to intimat the samen to their nighbours, and putt the samen to due execution, under the paine of fourty pound, and to report their diligence thereanent to the next general convention ; and this to be ane head of the next missive. (57.)

There is an act of parliament in favours of burrows, granted in the year 1633, as followeth :—In the parliament holden at Edinburgh upon the 28 June 1633, our Sovereigne Lord and estates of this present parliament hes ratified and approved, and be thir presents ratifies and approves of all new acts and statutes of parliament made be his Majesties predecessors in favours of the free burrowes, with all privilegedges, &c., granted and given to the hail burrows in any tyme bypast be any of our Sovereigne Lords progenitors, with all that hes followed or may follow thereupone, and decerns and ordaines the samen to have full force, strength, and effect in all tyme comeing, suae that the samen may be putt to due execution in all points ; and especially, without prejudice of the generality above written, ratifys the act of parliament made be King James 3d, 1466, ordaining that none saill nor pass in merchandizeing out of the realme but freemen, burgesses, or their familiars, factors, servants being with them in household at meat and drink, excepting and reserving to the prelates, lords, barrons and clerks, as in the said act is contained, and all other exceptions contained in any other act of parliament in force preceding the day and date hereof ; and sicklike the act of parliament made be King James the 4th, 1503, cap. 84, ordaining that noe person dwelling out of burrows use any merchandize, nor yet top nor sell wax, wine, silks, spices, nor sicklyke stuff, staple goods, and that none pack nor peill in Lieth nor other places without the Kings burrows, under the escheat of the goods shall be topped, sold, packed or peilled, to incurr that statute ; and sicklike the 152 act K. Ja. 6th, 12 par., ordaineing that noe person exerce the trafficque of merchandize but burgesses of free burrows, under the paine of escheat of their hail goods, giveing poure to every burgh be themselves or collector or commissioner depute to search the saids unfreemens goods, intromitt with the samen as escheat, either within the countrey or any other part, to arreist, call, follow and pursue befor any unsuspect baillies to be creat be them ; as also the 6th act of K. Ja. 6th, parl. 9, ordaining letters of horning to be direct against unfreemen to find caution for desisting from usurping of the libertyes ; declareing that the saids liberties and priviledges mentioned in the said acts are only competent to royall burrowes that hes vote in parliament, discharging all others of all useing and exerceing of the saids libertyes and priviledges ; and ordaines letters of horning to be direct be the lords of counsell at the instance of all burrowes upon the saids priviledges and former acts of parliament made thereupon without calling of any partie. (3^o) That upon complaint of the conservator or his deputes upon any merchand, skipper, or others who shall have broken the staple and escapes his hand and punishment in the Low Countreys, the party defender shall be cited before the burrows and there make present satisfaction for his fault to the rigour, and find sufficient caution and be referred back to the conservator. (4^o) That all factors and merchands att the staple port be discharged from selling any staple wairs to any person or persons who shall have known to have bought or cause be bought for their use, directly or indirectly, any plaides, skins, hydes, cairseyes, or any other sort of Scots staple wairs at Rotterdam, Amsterdam, or any other place within the 17 provinces by the staple port, under the pain of xx lb. great Fleymes money for every tyme they shall transgress. (5^o) That they be lykewayes inhibited under the pain forsaid to sell any staple waires to any Dutch burgesses, merchands, or factors, to be lay'd up for their own use, or in commission, and for the use of any person or persons who shall be known to be ane trader and buyer of staple wairs in other places then at the staple port directly or indirectly. (6^o) That some trustie person be ordained to take notice of the staple waires shipped at Lieth, especially of skins fast and louse, and that he or they delyver ane note under their hands to the skippers, specifyeing the number and mark of every cord of skins (especially such as are broken up) and of hydes and other staple waires according to their quality, and that the skipper in absence of the said appointed person be strictly enjoyned to take no goods aboard, that so the multitude of pleyes may be avoyded at the staple port. (7^o) That in case any goods be damnified and iulakeing in any ship, the factors or any party interested be enjoyned to give notice thereof to the conservator within four days after the unloading of the said ship or else to have no action against the skipper. (8^{vo}) That the factors be enjoyned in their own person, their speciall servants in their absence, to attend the louseing and loading of the ships, and that the skippers and their clerks be tyed to doe the same. (9^o) That no merchands or other servants, or any person whatsoever not being lawfully admitted, shall be suffered to play the factor in buyng or selling of staple wairs, but what belongs to themselves, and for their own and masters proper accompt, to the end that the factors may the better attend upon their calling and not be constrained to play the merchand or shift otherwayes. (10^o) That the factors be enjoyned to meet at certain sett tymes, especially in October or February, or upon any sudden alteration for fear of change, in presence of the conservator to draw up ane common information tuitching the pryces of all staple commodities and appearance of the mercat, that suae formally we may give notice and true advertisement to their merchands in tyme according to the said list and prescript to which they ought to be tyed under ane certain penalty, and not to be suffered to every one to wrytt of the estate of the mercatt at random, and often tymes much above the rate for drawing employment to themselves, much to the prejudice of their merchands who afterwards finds the smart thereof. (11^o) All skippers coming to the staple port with staple wairs shall be injoyned to have ane formal charter party for the pryce of the conditional fraught, subscribed be ane competent number of his merchands fraughters, to the end that all questions aryseing ordinarily upon the different wryttings of merchands to their factors may be avoyded. (12°) That the skippers immediately at their arryveal at the staple port deliver their cocquets to the conservator or his clerk, to the end that the entryes in the custome house there of all staple wairs be made be the conservators clerk, and that noe other person or persons whatsoever be suffered to wrytt the samen, that soe all disorder and inconvenience aryseing therefrae may be prevented. (13°) That the merchands assignements upon their factors or their factors notes and promises for accompt of their merchands may be absolute payment to the merchands and indwellers in the Low Countreyes, especially at the said staple port and other towns within the Isle of Walker ; and that all factors and merchands be inhibited to bargain with any in the said island that will not consent to the premisses. (14°) That the conservator grant noe warrants of arreastment upon any goods or money unless the arreaster find sufficient cautione to pursue his action in tyme comeing before the conservators court, or in case of failyie, or that after the process intended be heard and discussed he be found in the wrong, to pay all the cost, skaith, damadge, interest, and expenses of the party innocent. (15°) That some course be taken for preventing strangers ships to incroach upon our sea trade, especially those of the Low Countreyes, who in regaird of their peace with Spain will ingross all to themselves with their great flotts and saill our ships quytt out of the waters, and therefore it is necessarie to raise some new duetyes and impositions upon all Dutch and other strangers ships comeing into or going from any port of this kingdome with any loadning whatsoever, to pay so much for every tunn according to their full burden, and such as loaden coall is to pay soe much beside every chalder. and conforme to that point of the said act impowering them to settle and compose all their differences in order to ther futur election as farr as possible can be, and to establish ane sett and plateforme of government of the said burgh, most agreeable to the laws of the kingdome, example of the best governed burrows of the nation, and particular of the said burgh, have decerned and ordained and hereby decernes and ordaines that at the next electione of the magistrats and counsell of the burgh of Inverness, and yearly at their electiones in tyme comeing in the said burgh, ther shall be strictly keeped and observed, without the least change or alterationes, these rules and ordinances following, to witt:—Primo, that the number of the toun counsell of Inverness shall consist of twenty one counsellours and no more, whereof the then present magistrats to be ane part of the number, and which conforme to the sett made be the toun counsell of Inverness in anno j^m vj^c fourtie eight yeares; and in respect that the great complaint of this place hes been containowing of the counsell these many years bygone, therfore and for rectifieing of the samen, the saids commissioners hes ordained for this next ensueing year only that this present counsell shall elect and choose their counsellers for the next ensueing year the persones followeing, viz., John Polson, John Barbour, John Stewart, William Thomsone, William Patersone, Donald M'Lean, John Cuthbert and Alexander Clunnes, who are to come in place of the eight of the present counsell to be put of and discharged be the presents magistrats and counsell, and after the eight old counsellers are put out and the new eight put in the counsell to make choose of the present provost, beallies, dean of gild and thesaurer, and in caice of their not acceptance with power to them to lite and make choose of other magistrats to containow for the next ensueing year. And ordaines that in all tyme hereafter that the modell sett and plateforme shall be as followes, to witt, primo, that they shall change fyve new counsellers everie year and the fyve old counsellers being removed the counsell shall out of their own number everie year make a choose of the magistrats; secundo, the provost of Inverness heirafter to be choosen to containow at the most in the office of provostrie but the space of three years together, and if he shall containow the whole three years, but intermissione, he shall not be capable to be upon the lite of the provostrie for the fourth year; and this but prejudice to the magistrats and counsell to choose him yearly as they think fitt; lyckeas, it is declared to be but prejudice to him to be choosen provost the fyfth year or at any other time thereafter; and it is hereby declared that the provost of the burgh shall have two votes in counsell, which makes in the wholl twentie two votes. Secundo, The saides commissioners have decerned and ordained that the baillies and dean of gild and thesaurer shall at most containow but two yeares in the office, and if they containow so long without intermissione in the saides offices then in the third year they shall not be capable to be listed and choosen to officiat in these offices the said year thereafter, and it is hereby providit that the magistrats and counsell hes power to elect and choose them yearly

as they think fitt, but prejudice also to them to be choosen the fourth year or any other tyme thereafter ; and for the more clearing the former sett it is hereby declared that the provost, baillies, dean of gild, and theasurer, shall containow counsellors the next year after ther beareing chairges and offices of magistracie, ex officio ; and they have ordained that the persones to be chosen counsellours or magistrats in tyme comeing within this burgh shall be actuall residenters within the samen and liberties thereof, and actuall traffectand merchants or maltmen allanerly. And for the more firme settleing of the peace of this burgh, the saids commissioners haue decerned and ordained for the encouragment of trades and trademen within this burgh that the severall trades followeing, providing that each one of the incorporationes underwrittin consist of seven friemen burgessis, viz., the hamermen, wrights, shoemakers, tayllors, skimmers and weavers, shall be incorporat within themselves, with power to them for their further encouragement, first, that they shall yearly give in ane lite of thrie of their number to the magistrats and counsell, who shall choyse one of the thrie to be visitors or overseers of each one of ther respective trades for the next ensueing year ; secondly, that one of the saides visitors or overseers being informed that any extraneous persone does incroach upon the priviledge of their respective trades by working within the freedom of this place, then and in that caice they are to apply themselves to the magistrats of the place who are heirby obleidged to fyne the persones delinquents as they shall think fitt and to dischairge the saides persones from encroaching upon the priviledges of the respective crafts and to cause them enact themselves wnder a penaltie to doe so no more in tyme comeing ; thirdly, that the prentices of any of the forsaides trades, being lauchfullie admittit prentice, whose names are holden to be booked in the counsell books and who serve their prentisships dayly and faithfullie and have dischairges of their indentores, shall be holdin and accepted of as burgessis of this burgh on ther payeing ther ordinar dues, and are to be received as freemen within the respective trades ; and it is hearby declaired and decerned that it shal not be leisum to any maister of the forsaides trades to take in prentice but one in thrie yeares tyme (except upon death of or running away of another prentice) ; fourthlie, That in caice any of the foresaides trademen shall transgress of makeing of any insufficient work, or keep up of any persones work too long, or shall any otherwise transgress in ther said calling, then and in these caices it shall be leisum and lauchfull to the overseers or visitors of any of the respective trades, with the major part of any of ther respective trades, after tryall made of the forsaides faults, to fyne the delinquents, the fyne not exceeding ten shillings Scots, and which fynes are yearly to be compted for to the magistrats and counsell of this burgh by the visitors and overseers, that they may sie the samen applyed to the mantainance of the poor or other pious uses of the respectiue incorporationes from whom the fynes are taken ; fythly, that any frieman within the respectiue trades, or any of ther children or apprentises after the expyreing of ther prentisshipes, actually queiting ther trades and take themselves to merchandizing, they shall be admitted freemen of the gildrie, they payeing the ordinary dues of the gild brethren, and shall be capable of being elected either counsellors or magistrats of this burgh. And in respect that the great stents and impositions and way of imposing of the same hes bein of the great greivances of this place, therefore the saides commissioners have decerned and ordaines and hereby decernes and ordaines that it shall not [be lawful] to the magistrats or counsell to stent or impose taxationes upon the inhabitants of this place without ther own consent, or at least the most pairt thereof (except the stent imposed by publict authority); and in case ther be necessity for imposing any stents upon the inhabitants of this burgh, then and in that caice the magistrats shall give notice to the inhabitants what is the cause of the samen by towk of drum, and of the tyme, place, and maner how the samen is to be imposing, and for the more regular and equall way of imposing the samen they ordaine that the magistrats and counsell of this burgh shall nominat and elect fyfteen persones of best fame and repute within this place to be stent masters, who shall be holdin to give their oaths in presence of the counsell de fideli, whereof eleven of the fyfteen shall be a quorum, who shall meet in the tolbooth of this place, and no persones to be suffered to be with them but one of the magistrats, and after the samen is imposed and collected the magistrats and counsell of this place shall be obleidged to make it appear that the stent is bestowed and expendit to the ends for which it was imposed. And because it is informed to the saids commissioners that the towne is in debt in the soume of eight thousand marks or theirby, and that ther is no other way for payeing the samen but by imposing the samen stents upon the inhabitants of the place, they doe seriously recomend to the inhabitants of the said burgh to concurr with the magistrats therof for stenting the neighbours in order to the payment of the said debt of the toun, and to levie and raise the said stents at such tymes as they may best doe with ther convenience. And, finallie, that no vestig or memorie be left of former differences, and for takeing away all grounds of dissentiones and divisiones in the place, the saids commissars ordaines all actiones and persuits of law betwixt the present counsell, gildrie, and trades of this burgh, for whatsomeever cause or occatione, intentit or that might haue been intentit preceding the date heirof, to be simpliciter discharged and to be void and null in themselves in all time comeing, and all such proces to be cancelled and never insisted in hereafter; and ordaines the contract or bond betwixt the present counsell, gildrie, and trades to be presently destroyed and cancelled in ther presence. And in lyckmaner the saids commissioners wills and declares that the aboue wryttin decreit in all points shall stand and containow unviolable unchanged in all time comeing, certifieing the breakers that the royall burrows will notice the breakers of the same, and punish them accordingly and state themselves as pairties against them. And the saids commissioners ordaines that thir presents shall stand in force in all tym comeing, and for the rule and government of the said burgh of Inverness, and that extracts shall be given furth thereof be the said master Alexander Edward, clerk to the saids commissioners, and the samen to be als valid and effectuell as if the samen were subscribit be the said preses, and that the abouewryttin decreit is to be insert and registrat in the town court bookes of Inverness. In testimonie whereof, the principall is subscriv'd be the said Sir Patrick Threipland, preses, and be the said master Alexander Edward, clerk, and in name and at the desire of the remanent commissioners abouewryttin. Extracted by authority and comand forsaid, by me. Sic subscribitur : J. Threipland, preses, Alexander Edward, clerk.

6. As to the sixt article, its answered that there forraigne trade of export and import will not exceed 20,000 markes of stock yearly but is within it, and that they have no Inland trade, and that the retail of their shops is inconsiderable, not exceeding 10,000 marks yearly in the haill, and that they vent and retail about ten tunns of French wine yearly, including seck and brandie, and that they vent and consume ane hundreth bolls malt weekly.

7. As to the seaventh article, it is answered that they have two galliots belonging to them, about threty tunn a peice and 1000 marks each of value, which are for the most part employed by others, and that they have no other ships, barks, or boats, belonging to them.

8. As to the eight article, it is answered that they are neither owners nor partners of any ships, barks, or boats belonging either to burghs of regality or barrony, nor are they concerned in matters of trade with unfree burghs.

9. As to the nynth article, its answered that ther cess is payed by a mark on the boll of malt which also helps to defray other publict burthens.

10. As to the tenth article, its answered that their first minister hes ane hundreth pownds, the second minister seaven hundreth marks, ther schoolmaster four hundreth marks, all out of the comon good, and that all other ther publict servants are payed out of the same.

11. As to the elleaventh article, its answered that all ther publict works (save ther hospitalls) are mantainit out of the comon good.

12. As to the twelth article, that the most part of ther houses are inhabited by ther respective heretors, and that the rent of the best in the toune will not exceed 100 marks and the worst will be fourty shillings.

13. As to the threteenth article, its answered that they have four yearly fairs, each of one dayes containwance, and a weekly marcat, the customes of all which are a part of ther common good as in ansuer to ther first article.

14. As to the fourteen article, it is answered that they have within ther shire and others adjacent the burghs of regality and barrony followeing, viz., Falkirk, Kilsyth, Bathlivie, Alloway, Downe, Dumblane and Airth, who have a considerable trade and are very prejudiciall to them. Ther houses are in a good conditione and sett at a better rate then many in ther burgh.

15. As to the fyfteenth article, it is answered ther are no soumes of mony resting to the towne, and ther fewes of houses, burgers admissions, &c., are a part of ther comon good. Ther bloodwitts are employed for the magistrats particular use, and they have no cess bookes.

This is the true accompt of the state and condition of the burgh of Stirling, in answer to the abovewryttin instructions, as it is given up upon oath by the

BURGH OF LITHGOW.

LINLITHGOW.

The twelth day of May j^m vj^c and nyntie two yeares, compeired before James Fletcher, provost of Dundie, and Alexander Walker, baillie of Aberdeen, commissioneris appointed be the convention of royall borrowes for visiting the wholl royall burghs be south and west the river off Forth, the present magistratis and toun clerk of the said burgh of Linlithgow, who gave in ane accompt of ther patrimonie and comon good, together with ane answer to the saids visitors instructionis as follows:—

1. As to the first article, its answered that ther comon good, communibus annis, will extend to two thousand and eight hundreth pounds Scots, and that their debts amount to 18,235 lib. 6s. 8d. of principall soume.

2. As to the second article, its answered that they have no mortificatione.

3. As the third article, it is answered that they are not concerned therin.

4. As to the fourth article, it is answered that a certain number of the lords of counsell and session, with sewerall skilfull and intelligent skippers, did visit ther own pairt of Blacknes belonging properly to them, and found the same alltogether unsufficient and unsecure, and which the saids visitors have lyckwayes seen and considered.

5. As to the fyfth article, it is answered that they have produced ther theasaurers bookes for fyve proceeding years, and that the ballance of the last years accompt oweing be the theasaurer amounts to 187 lib. 14s. 6d., and that ther eiquies with clerks and other dewes amounts to 64 lib. 14s. 8d.

6. As to the sixt article, its answered that ther forraigne trade, both of export and import is very inconsiderable, and that they have no inland trade in gross except about 10,000 weight of tallow and 1600 or 1800 sheep skines or thereby, yearly, and that the retail they have by ther shopes they cannot positively condescend on, but against the nixt meeting of borrowes they shall inform themselves more particularly and give their report therof by ther commissioner to the convention, and that they have vented and consumed about tuo tunn of French wine, seck and brandie, yearly, these fyve years bygone, and that they consum about three scoir bolls of malt or therby weekly.

7. As to the seaventh article, its answered that they have no ships, barks, boats, or ferrie boats belonging to them.

8. As to the eight article, it is answered that they have only five or six of ther burgers and inhabitants that have interests in ships, and the masters therof are freemen and obleidged to reside with them conform to the act of borrowes ; and these masters being examined upon oath by the saides magistratis whether or not they had any unfreemen pairtners with them in these veshells, answered that they being surprized could not satisfie them therin at that tyme, but desired that they have four moneths tyme to consider on it, that if there were any unfreemen concerned with them they might take them of befor the term forsaid, and that they are not concerned in matter of trade with unfrec burghs.

9. As to the nyynth article, it is answered that ther cesses was payed formerly out of the impost on the malt, but since the discharge therof it has been still payed by a tax on the inhabitants.

10. As to the tenth article, it is answered that ther first minister is payed out of the teynds of the parish, ther second minister by tax on ther inhabitants, and ther schoolmaster, precenter, and all other ther publick servants are payed out of ther comon good.

11. As to the elleaventh article, it is answered that a part of there church and all ther other publick works are supported out of the comon good.

12. As to the 12 article, it is answered that the rents of ther houses will be tuixt 100 lib. and four pounds Scots, and that the most pairt of them are inhabited by ther respective heretors, and that they have few stranger inhabitants.

13. As to the threteenth article, it is answered that they have six yearly fairs of two dayes continvance each and a weekly marcat, the customes of all which are a pairt of ther comon good as in answer to the first article.

14. As to the fourteenth article, it is answered that they have within ther precinct and adjacent to them the burghs of barronies and regalities followeing, viz., Borrowstounes, Grangepanns, Kirklistowne, Torphichen and Bathgate, all which are highly prejudiciall to ther trade both outland and inland, particularly Borrowstounes and Grangepans whose houses are in a better conditione and sett at a higher rate then many of ther burgh, besides the great prejudice they have by a number of villages and kirktowns within ther precinct and adjacent to them, who wrong ther trade by venting abundance of staple comodities to the countrey.

15. As to the fifteenth article, that ther fewes of lands and houses are reckoned with the rest of ther comon good, as also that ther burgers freedoms and ther fynies are inconsiderable and imployed for the publick use also, and there stent and cess is stented four shillinges monethly upon the twenty pownd of rent, and there trade is stented according to the discretione of sworne men, and that they put six shillinges monethly upon each twenty pownd land rent.

This is the true accompt of the state and condition of the said burgh of Linlithgow, in answer to the abovementioned instructions, as it is given up upon oath by the saides magistratis and toun clerk wndersubscryveing to the best of ther knowledge and surest information they can have to the saids visitors day and

Glasgow the sixth day of May j^m vj^c nyntie two years. Compeired befor James Fletcher, provost of Dundie, and Alexander Walker, baillie of Aberdeen, commissioners appointed be the royall borrowes for visiting the wholl burghs royall be south and west the river of Forth, the present magistrats and toun clerk of the burgh of Glasgow, who gave in ane accompt of ther patrimonie and comon good, together with ane answer to the saids visitors instructions as follows :

1^{mo}. As to the first article, it is answered that ther comon good will amount to, comunibus annis, to the sowme of sixteen thousand nyne hundreth and tuo pounds Scots, which is expended as in the 10th article and conform to a particular accompt given in by the saids magistrats, and that ther debts extends to ane hundreth and seaventy eight thousand eight hundreth pounds Scots principall and annua rents.

2^{do}. As to the second article, it is answered that they have no mortificationes but what hath been mortified for the maintenance of poor people and children, and that the towne is nothing eased therby.

3^{tio}. As to the third article, it is answered that they are not concerned therein.

4. As to the fourth article, its answered that they are not concerned therein, haveing a port of ther owne.

5. As to the fyfth article, it is answered that they have produced ther thesaurers compt books for fyve preceeding years, which the saides visitors have at length considered, and that the ballance for the said fyve yeares makes them supperexpended in the sowme of fourteen hundreth threttie four pounds six shillinges seaven pennies, and that ther eiquies with clerks and other dewes extends to ane hundreth and fyfty pounds Scots which is anwally payed and mentioned in the accompt given in by themselves.

6. As to the sixt article, it is answered that ther forraigne trade of export and import, according to the exactest calculatiōe they can make, amounts yeirly to the value of two hundred and fyve thousand pownds Scots monie or therby, and that they cannot condescend upon any retailing inland trade they have by ther ships, the most part thereof being included in the export and import as afore-said ; and that they vent and retail about twenty tunns of French wine, twenty butts of seck, and about ten or twelve butts of brandy or thereby, yearly, but the consumption of ther wines is still less or more according as ther price is high or low, and that they vent and consume about a thousand bolls of malt monethly.

7. As to the seaventh article, its answered that they have fyfteen ships, whereof ther are eight lyeing in ther harbour and seaven abroad and eight lighters, whose burthen, value, how and by whom employed, is at length contained in a

APPENDIX III. peaper apairt given by the saids magistratss to the saides visitors, and have no REPORTS, 1692. other ships, barks, boats or ferrie boats belonging to them.
 GLASGOW.

8. As to the eight article, it is answered that they are owners and partners of four ships belonging to unfree burghs, whose burthen, value, how employed, is at length contained in the above mentioned peaper given in by themselves, and ther trade with unfree burghs is condescended upon in the same.

9. As to the ninth article, it is answered that ther cess is payed by a tax on ther inhabitants.

10. As to the tenth article, it is answered that ther ministers, schoolmasters, and all other ther publict servants, are mantainit and payed out of ther comon good, which is at length containit in a peaper apairt given in, including also ther comon good as in answer to the first article.

11. As to the elleaventh article, it is answered that all ther publict works are supported and maintained out of the comon good.

12. As to the twelfth article, it is answered that by the decay of trade a great number and many of the best of ther houses are waste, yea that ther is near fyve hundreth houses standing waste and that those inhabited are fallen near a third pairt of the rent they payed formerly, and that ther best and worst will be betuixt ane hundreth pounds (whereof they have not eight inhabited by burgers) and four pounds Scots yearly, except some large taverns.

13. As to the threteenth article, it is answered that they have one yearly fair of fyve or six dayes containwance and three yearly marcats each of one dayes containwance, and a weekly marcat, and that the toun hath no benefit by them.

14. As to the fourteen article, it is answered that they have the burghs of regality and barronie followeing, viz., Hamiltoun, a considerable distance from the sea and soe hath no forraigne trade but a great inland, and most pairt therof from Borrowstouness, and is in a flourishing conditione ; item, Paisly hes a great inland trade and is in a very flourishing conditione ; item, Greenock hes a very great trade, both forraigne and inland, and particularlie prejudiciall to the trade of Glasgow and other places on the river of Clyde by buying portage from skippers and sailors to the value of the tenth pairt of the loadening, and for better effectuating therof they stock the samen out with comodities and goes half profite with them ; item, Craufurdsdyk belonging to Craufurd of Craufurdsburne and his sone, two burgers and inhabitants of Glasgow,—it hath some trade in furnishing seamen with meat and drink. And that all these burghs are highly prejudiciall to ther trade, a mor particular accompt whereof they shall represent by ther commissioner to the nixt convention of burrows.

This is the trew accompt of the patrimony and comon good of the said burgh of Glasgow, together with the answer to the saids visitors instructions, as it is given up by the saids magistrats wnder subscryveing, who having used their best endeavours by conveyeing befor them seweralls of ther tradeing merchants best known in the trade of the place, as also they have perused ther councill bookes APPENDIX III.

wherein the toun were concerned lost. As also it is to be remembered that by the decay of trade and poverty of the inhabitants, the comon good being but mean and casuall, soe that therby the toun does contract yeirly of debt. And particularly in the great and vast expences they are put to yearly in the uphold-ing, beating, and repaireing of ther harbour, which are almost altogether ruinous, and before the key can be repaired will coast ten thousand marks, which the visitors hes seen, as also that ther are about ane hundreth and fourty waste houses besides sewerall ruinous houses and particularly tuo great tenements on each syde of the marcat cross both ruinous, one whereof are on each side of the streett.

This is the trew accompt of the patrimonie and comon good and state of the said burgh, which are given by the magistrats and toun clerk substitut under-subscribeing, at the said burgh of Air, the last day of Apryll j^m vj^e and nyntie two yeares. Sic subscribitur: John Osburne, provost, Hew Craufurd, baillie, Jo. Fergusone, clerk substitut.

Air, the thretteen day of Aprill j^m vj^e and nynty two yeares, compeired befor James Fletcher, provost of Dundie, and Alexander Walker, baillie of Aberdeen, commissioners appointed be the convention of royal borrowes for visitieing the wholl royall borrowes be west and be south the river of Forth, the present magistrats and toun clerk of the said burgh of Air, who gave in a particular accompt of their patrimony and comon good in a peaper apairt, together with ane answer to the saids visitors instructions as followes :—

1^{mo}. To the first article it is answered that ther common good extends communibus annis to the sowme of 1770 lib. 12s. Scots, conform to the forsaid particular accompt given in and subscrivit by the saids magistrats, and that ther debts amounts to 7750 lib. 13s. 4d., conform to the forsaid particular accompt.

2^{do}. As to the second article, it is answered that they have no mortification belonging to them except that of the towns milns which was mortified be Queen Marie for maintainance of ther second minister, schoollmaster, and precenter, conform to the will of the mortifier.

3^{tio}. To the third article, its answered that they are not concerned therin.

4. To the fourth article its answered that they are not concerned therein, having ane harbour of there owne.

5. To the fyfth article its answered that they have produced to the saids visitors ther theasaurers bookes for fyve preceding yeares which is stated in answer to the first article, and that ther eiquies with their clerks and other dewes will amount to fyve pownd sterling which is annwally payed when they are given in or called for.

6. To the sixt article it is answered that most of the forraign trade they have hade these fyve yeares bygone are the particulars followeing, viz., four fyfth pairts of the cargo of ane small veshell from Virginia of 70 tunn of burthen or thereby, the fourth part of which cargo was sold in England by the master to whom it belonged. Item, three small veshells from Stockholme, with iron.

Item, twenty last of tarr and some few daills from Norway.

Item, about twenty tunns of French wine in another veshell.

Item, another with sixteen peice of canarie, the most pairt of which French wine is alreadie exported to Ireland and no apparent sale for the rest, but the most pairt of what is sold therof is vented to the countrey.

Item, ane other small veshell with suggar from the West Indies.

As also some small trade they have from Borrowstounness to Holland, and that ther inland trade consists for the most pairt of some skins, Galloway plaiden, and cloath they send to Holland, the value wherof they cannot particularly condescend on there trade, and that they have consumed about twelve hogsheads of wine or thereby these three years hygone, and that they consume and vent about two thousand bolls of malt, Air measour, yeirly, the occation it is soe small is the great decay of trade in that place.

7. To the seaventh article it is answered that they have no ships, barks, or boats belonging to them, save a little boat the value of fourty pownds Scots which belongs to one John Campbell.

8. To the eight article it is answered that they are not owners nor partners of any ships, barks or boats belonging either to burghs royall of regality or barrony nor are they concerned in trade with unfree burghs.

9. As to the nynth article, it is answered that ther cess is payed by a tax on the inhabitants.

10. As to the tenth article, it is answered that ther first ministers stipend is payed out of the teynds, and that ther second minister, schoollmaster, and precenter are payed out of the forsaid mortified milns, and that all other ther publick servants are payed out of the comon good as is at more length condescended on in the particular accompt abovementioned.

11. As to the eleaventh article, it is answered that all ther publick works are maintainit and upholden out of the comone good.

12. As to the twelfth article, it is answered that a great pairt of ther houses are inhabited by their respective heretors and that the visitors have taken notice of the conditione of the same, and that the rent of ther best and worst will be tuixt fyfty and four pownds Scots yearly and that the rent of the wholl is computed to be about 3671 lib., eighteen shillings, Scots, yearly, and that they have few or non stranger inhabitants, and as to the rent of the wholl they cannot condescend certainly.

13. As to the thretteen article, it is answered that they have two yearly fairs, each of two days containwance, the customes whereof are reckoned as a pairt of ther comon good in the answer to the first article, and that they will amount about four pownd yearly, and that they have one weekly marcat throughout the wholl year and another weekly marcat for cattell of six weeks containwance each year, and that the customes of this last will amount to about ten pownd sterling and is a pairt of ther comon good and also stated as aforesaid.

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
AIR.

14. As to the fourteenth article, it is answered that they have about ten burghs of regaltie and barronie within ther precinct which are very prejudicial to ther trade, a more exact accompt whereof their commissioner shall represent to the next convention.

15. As to the fifteenth article, it is answered that ther casualties are so inconsiderable and uncertain that they cannot condescend on them.

This is the true accompt of the state and conditione of the said burgh of Air in answer to the abovementioned instructions, as it is given up on oath be the saides magistrats and toune clerk wndersubscriybeing to the saides visitors day and dait forsaid, and all this to the best of their knowledge. Sic subscribitur : Jo. Osburne, provost; Hew Craufurd, baillie; P. Fergusone, baillie; Jo. Fergusone, clerk substitut.

BURGH OF HADINGTOUNE.

Hadingtoun the sixteenth day of April j^m vj^e and ninety tuo years, compeired befor James Fletcher, provost of Dundie, and Alexander Walker, baillie of Aberdeen, commissioners appointed be the royall borrowes for visiting the wholl west and southerne borrowes, the present magistrats of the said burgh, who gave in the accompt of the patrimony and state of ther burgh as follows :—

1. Imprimis, as to the first article it is answered that the charge of ther comon good as it wes roused at Martinmas last extended to 446l lib. 6s. 8d. Scots, besides some other caswall dewes which the towne receaves at the admission of burgesses and ringing of ther great bell at burials, which is commonly within 100 lib., and that ther debt at clearing of the last theasaurers accompt which wes upon the fourth day of Jully j^m vj^e and nyntie one years, did extend to the soume of 4546 lib. 13s. 4d. monie forsaid.

2. As to the second article, it is answered that they have no mortifications belonging either to ther towne or gildrie.

3. As to the third article, it is answered that the towne is nowayes concerned therein.

4. As to the fourth article, it is answered that the saides visitors have visited the harbour and considered the same, being called the harbour of Aberladies, and doe find that the same cannot be made navigable or a safe harbour without ane extraordinary expences which they are not capable, and suppose they were in a condition (as they are not) yeit they could not have water for bringing up ships of any burthen, and that the same is four miles distant from the said towne.

5. As to the fyfth article, it is answered that they have produced to the saids visitors ther theasaurers bookes for fyve preceding years, by which it appears that ther comon good is lyck to be exhausted be ane considerable sowme by reason of the many publict works which hes fallen out to be done this year, such as the repairing the roof of the tolbooth, building of a new roof to the steeple, and covering the samen with lead, laying of new calsays in the publict streets of the burgh, repairing of the common milns and paroch church, and doeing of sewerall which were all absolutely necessary to be done ; and as to the touns eiquies the samen are placed yearly in the theasaurers discharge of his intromissione with the touns comon good and is yearly 130 lib. by and attour the dewes payable for making therof which is yeirly 7 lib. 6s. HADINGTOUNE.

6. As to the sixt article, it is answered that none of the burges of Hadingtowne these fyve years backward hes hade any forraigne trade except three or four at most who hes some little inconsiderable trade in English goodes and Hollands goodes, and which is maintained more by their credit then by any stock of their owne, and to evidence that ther trade is very small and inconsiderable none of ther import, at least very litle, is sold in haill sail but all retailed in ther owne shops and for goodes which was wont to be exported, being skin and hyde. There has been so few exported these fyve or four years they are not worth the nameing, they being about 2,000 or 3,000 skins yearly ; and as to the inland trade of Scots comodities the samen is inconsiderable and not worth the noticeing, being only manadged by poor mean packmen ; and as to the trade and went of wyne, ther uses nor hes been non imported by the burgesses of Hadingtowne the space abovewrittin ; and as to the vent and retail of wyne within the burgh these three years bygone the same according to the best information that can be hade does not exceed fyve or six tunns ; and as for the tuo or three years befor the samen would not exceed six or seaven tunnn ; and as to the consumption of malt, conforme to the best informatione that can be hade from the collectors of he excyse and ther surveyors and the tacksmen of the touns comon milnes, will extend to weekly about fourtie bolls of malt.

7. As to the seaventh article, it is answered that they have no ships, barks, nor ferrie boats belonging to them, except one burges called John Mathie, master of the ship called the John of Prestounpans, betuixt 70 or 80 tuns, of value about 3000 lib. Scots, and who is but a late residerter and burges of this place.

8. As to the eight article, it is answered to the first pairt therof that they know non of ther burges to have any pairts of ships belonging to burghs of barronie or regality except one George Cockburn, who hath only a small pairt of a bark, belonging to Fisheraw. As to the second its answered that they know of none ther burges or inhabitants to have any trade with unfree burghs of regality or barronie.

9. As to the nynth article, it is answered that since the year 1685 there was paid yearly three moneths cess out of the comon good for easinge of the poor inhabitants, and from that tyme what was more then fyve moneths payed was payed out of the comon good, and that allwayes there was a pairt of that fyve moneths cess payed out of the comon good.

10. As to the tenth article, it is answered that the first minister of Hadingtowne hath payed him out of the comon good ane 100 lib. Scots yearly, of which

APPENDIX III. they may have relieff out of the borrow aikers, and the rest of his stipend is REPORTS, 1692. payed out of the landwart parishes, and that the second minister hath 600 marks HADINGTOUNE. yearly payed him out of the comon good and the rest payed be the heretors of the landwart parishes, and that the master of the Gramar Schooll, presenter, and ther other publict servants, are all payed out of the comon good.

11. As to the elleaventh article, it is answered that all ther publict works such as churches, bridges, &c., and all others belonging to them, are maintained and supported by the comon good.

12. As to the twelfth article, its answered that the most pairt of ther houses belongs to the particular heretors by whom they are possessed, and the valuation of the wholl houses and burrow roods will amount to tuixt 9 or 10,000 lib.
 Scots.

13. As to the thretteenth article, it is answered that they have two fairs yearly and that the same continows only for the space of two dayes albeit ther priviledges allows them eight, and that the intrinsick and trew value therof is stated in their charge as a pairt of ther comon good.

14. As to the foureteen article, it is answered that Tranent, Prestounpans, Prestoun, Port Seatoun, Ormestoun, Dirletoun, Auldstocks, Stentone, Giffoordhall, Penstoun and other places thereabouts, are burghs of barrony round about Haddingtoun, which are now more frequented and more buying and selling of goods therein then in Hadingtoun, and by which places the marcat and trade of Hadingtoun wes upholden, which decay of trade therin and publict burdens imposed thernpon hes occasioned the decay and ruine of the towne and therfor ane ease of their taxt roll is desired ; and all which is represented to the royall burrows.

This is the trew accompt of the conditione of the said burgh, given up upon oath to the saids two visitors and subscribed be the saids magistrats and toun clerk at Hadingtoun, the said sixteenth day of April j^m vj^c nyntie tuo years.

BURGH OF DYSART.

DYSART.

Ane state of the condition of the burgh of Dyssart.

The said burgh being ane antient and flourishing burgh royall, bearing all portable chairges with the rest of the burrowes till the year of God 1644 and 1645 they came to decay by the intestine and unuatural war against Montross where the most pairt of the skippers and traffiquers were killed and destroyed, and by their building and edifieing of ane harbour pertaineing to the said burgh they did borrow the soume of 15,000 marks at sewerall tymes from sewerall persons towards the building of the forsaid harbour and for payment of their publict cess, they paying ane considerable pairt of the stent roll beyond ther ability, and for defending and maintaineing of the touns propertie against the Lord Sinclair and Sir James Cockburne, which is all yeit resting and eight or ten years annual rent therof, who for ther unability and want of magistrats for ane considerable tyme hes rendered the wholl comon good pertaineing to the said tounne useless ; and the emoluments of the harbour of the said burgh, which is the greatest pairt of the burghs comon good, is at present in the possession of the said Lord Sinclaire who possesses the same by ane decreit recovered at his instance against them surreptiously befor the lords of session, and all the comon good which the said tounne is in possession of is the hand bell and pettie customes which extends to the sowme of three hundreth marks, out of which they have the second ministers stipend to pay yearly, extending to the soume of 450 marks, and to the schoolmaster yearly the soume of 115 marks, by and attour the fees of the publict servants of the place. And now the said burgh being altogether without trade, ther being no ships pertaineing to the place except two small doggars and ane other ship, the skipper wherof resides for the present in the place, but not one naill belonging to any burges within this burgh, by which it is evident what a poor and distressed conditione this poor place is in and how unable they are even to bear any ane verie small proportion of the stent roll, the tuo parts of the burgh being either unhabitat or ruinous ; the verrity of which is too evident to all passengers and travellers.

Dyssart the eighteenth day of September 1691 years. This is the trew and just accompt charge and dischairge of the comon good of the said burgh, given up by the magistrats and toun clerk, upon oath, to the visitors appointed be the royall burrowes for that effect ; and they have subscrivit the same, day and place forsaid. Sic subscribitur : Alex. Suyne, D. Huttone, Wa. Pittillo, clk. Debtis, 10,000 lib. ; comon good 200 lib. ; cess and minister stipend payed by tax ; no trade at all.

Dumfreise the twenty third day of April j^m vj^c nynty two yeares. Com- DUMFREIS.
peired befor James Fletcher, provost of Dundee, and Alexander Walker, baillie of Aberdeen, commissionars appointed by the royall borrowes for visiting the wholl royall borrowes be south and west the river of Forth, the present magistrats of the said burgh of Dumfreise and ther toun clerk, who gave in ane accompt of ther patrimonie and comon good, together with ane answer to the saids visitors instructions as followes.

1^o As to the first amount, it is answered that ther comon good to the best of ther knowledge will amount to 2,666 lib. 13s. 4d. or thereby, comuni bus annis, and that ther debts will be about twentie thousand marks or therby.

APPENDIX III.

REPORTS, 1692. 2^{do} As to the second article, it is answered that they have no mortificationes belonging to them.

DUMFREES.

3th As to the third article, it is answered that they are not concerned therein.

4th As to the fourth article it is answered they are not concerned therein.

5th As to the fyfth article, it is answered that they have produced ther thesaurers bookes for fyve preceeding yeares to the saids visitoris who have considered the samen, and that they are stated in the answer to the first article, and that ther eiquies with ther clerks and other dewes therto belonging amounts yeirly to twenty nyne pounds Scotcs, which is instructed by the dischaarges produced to the saides visitors.

6th As to the sext article, it is answered that they have had these fyve years bygone of forraigne trade the followeing particulars, viz., ane small ship from France with eighteen tunns of wyne and sex tunns of brandie or thereby; item, ane other veshell from Norway with fyve thousand dailis; item, a small veshell from Stockholme loadened with iron; item, ane other small veshell from Bristoll, of the burden of twentie tunns, loadened with cydar botles hopes and some other small goodes of inconsiderable value, being four in all. And as to ther inland trade they have had the particulars followeing, viz.: Threttie packs of linnen cloath at twenty pownd sterline the pack in neat twelve hundreth pownds sterline, and other goodes of that nature to the value of four hundreth and eighty pownd sterline; item, fyve thousand sheep skins at fyfty pownd sterline the thousand in neat two hundreth and fiftie pound sterline; item, sex thousand mort lambskins, worth seaventeen pound sterline, which they sell yearly to merchants in Edinburgh and others. And that they have ten or twelve merchants shops that retails tarr, lint, and iron, and tuo shops that sells cloath and London goodes; and that they have some other shops of little accompt that sells brandy, pypes, tobacco, candle, and such lyck wares; and three apothecaries shops. And this is all forraigne and inland trade they have to the best of ther knowledge and surest informatione they can gett. And that ther is vented yeirly within ther burgh about three tunns of wine yearly these fyve years bygone, and that they cannot condescend upon what malt they consume yearly in regaird ther milns are roupd with the rest of ther comon good and that they are no further concerned then the tack duty payable be the tacksmen, and that ther is litle malt made in the toune, and that the most pairt of ther malt is brought from the countrey, and that the tacksmen of the excyse are in use to sett leases therof to others soe that it is not possible for the magistrats to give a trew accompt thereof.

7th As to the seaventh article, that they have four veshells belonging to ther towne, viz., the Adventure, of burthen about 36 tunns, the Providence, 20 tunns, the Concord, 20 tonn or thereby; and which three ships they value at ane hundreth and fyfty pownd sterline, and that they have lyen up these three or four yeares for want of trade and soe are ruinous; and the Elizabeth of 140 tunns which is lying at Kirkcudbright ruinous and disabled, soe that she cannot goe to sea ; and that they have no other ships or barks belonging to them ; and that they have a small boat about three tunns, a yoa and no ferry boat.

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
DUMFREES.

8. As to the eight article, it is answered that they are not owners nor pairtners themselves, nor know they any of ther burgesses to be owners or pairtners of any ships or barks belonging to any other burgh royall, barrony, or regality, nor are they anyways concerned in trade with unfree burghs.

9. As to the nynth article, it is answered that ther cess is payed by a valuation of ther houses and land rent by a stent roll of ther trade, and which roll is revised and altered from tyme to tyme as trade encreases and decayes, and that now by the decay of trade the cess is lyke to fall on the land and houses ; the valnation bookes of the saids houses and borrow reeds being produced to the saids visitors, which were considered by them, extends to 12,000 lib. or thereby.

10. As to the tenth article, it is answered that the minister draws the teynd ipsa corpora for payment of his stipend of the borrow aikers as ther pairt therof, the rest being payed out of landwart parish, and that they pay threty pounds for the half of the ministers manse out of ther comon good, and the landwart parish the other half, as also they pay to there schoollmaster, doctors, presenter, and others there publict servants, 970 lib. Scots yearly ; inde the haill 1000 lib. which is payed out of the comon good, together with the annual rent of 20,000 marks of debts mentioned in answer to the first article.

11. As to the elleaventh article, it is answered that they have no hospitalls nor any harbour that hath any key, there being but a small water and very shallow and sand banks all down the water twenty mills from the towne, which hes been considered by the saids visitors, and ther being a necessity for makeing use of lighters from Kirkcudbright and Hasting it is very expensive and consumes the profeitt of ther trade. And that they maintain the rooff and fabrick of ther church, as also ther bridge consisting of nyne large arches, tolbooth, prison houses, milns, milndams, closes and schoolhouses, out of the comon good ; and that the expenses of all these above mentioned will amount to 500 lib. yearly or therby, wherby and by the expences of ther commissioners to the parliament, convention, and other publict charges, ther patrimonie is exhausted and will necessarily engadge them to contract debts, and by reasone of the inconveniencie of the river and the chairges off lighters its feared that trade will totally decay even tho ther were peace.

12. As to the twelth article, it is answered that the most pairt of ther houses are inhabited by ther respective heretors, and ther other tenements and houses will not amount to above three per cent., and that ther will be about twentie tenements on the High street ruinous, besides some houses in closes, and that the wholl northsyde off Lochmabanegate, being a long street, was totally destroyed by fire about a twelvemoneth since or therby, a great deall whereof is as yett unbuilt.

13. As to the threteenth article, its answered that they have two yearly fairs and a weekly marcat, and that each of these fairs is privieledged to continow

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
DUMFREIS.

eight dayes, but that they are often inconsiderable, and that one thereof, notwithstanding of the forsaid priviledge, continowes but one day, and that the customes of both are a pairt of ther comon good and soe stated in answer to the first article.

14. As to the fourteenth article, it is answered that ther are sewerall regalities, barronies, kirktowns, and other countrey villages within some few miles of ther toune, which they consider to be within ther precinct, who have a considerable trade and vent staple comodities in prejudice of ther burgh, all which shall be more fully made appear at the nixt convention of borrowes.

Nota. It is to be remembered at the reporting the state and conditione of the said burgh that ther comon good is necessarily exhausted from year to year, and a great decay of ther trade, and many houses ruinous and waste, soe that they expect to be releived and eased in the fyve shilling they were heightened in the taxt roll Jully was a year.

This is the trew accompt of the touns patrimony, comon good, and state of ther burgh, with answers to the abovewrittin queries and instructions, which are given upon oath by the saids magistrats and towne clerk wnder subserveing, to the best of ther knowledge and informatione, to the saids visitors, day, date, and place above wryttine. Sic subscribitur : Tho. Rome, provost ; Robert Johnstoun, baillie ; John Irveing, baillie ; Wm. Menzies, clerk.

BURGH OF BRICHEN.

BRICHEN.

ANSWERS by the burgh of Brechine to the querries given in to them by John Muir, provost of Air, and Mr James Smalet, provost of Dumbartoune, visitors appointed by the borrows for the royall borrowes benorth the water of Tay.

1. To the first, requiring ane accompt of the comon good and debt, its answered by ane peaper apairt containeing both.

2. Its answered that they have no mortificationes belonging to the toune or gildrie.

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
BRICHEN.

3. Its answered that the touns thesaurers accompt fitted for fyve years preceeding the year 1691 are presented to the visitors.

4. Its answered that they haue no forraigne trade, being ane inland and countrey burgh. As for ther inland trade its but very mean and small, being altogether failed within these three or four years last, soe that more then a third pairt of the merchants and inhabitants of the toune are either become bankrupt or left the burgh, as will appear by a list of the vacant houses therof, and soe all the inland trade is small commodities, such as soap, starch, salt, iron potts, pans, and other small wairs bought from the nearest sea port, and soe the advantage is litle or none. There are some tuo or three of the inhabitants of the burgh who are employed by merchants in the adjacent burghs to buy green lining for them and have some litle benefeit therby, and for the rest of the inland trade its by eight or ten of the inhabitants tradeing in bear and maill for serveing the inhabitants of the burgh, and some few in the burgh and paroch and countrey round the towne with malt and maill ; all which is extraordinarily inconsiderable, soe that the haill inhabitants groan under the burden of the monethly cess and supply, being fyve pound ten shillings sterline monethly, and altho the samen be laid on by way of taxatione yett verie often the inhabitants prove insolvent of their respective stents, in which caice the towns comon good pays the deficiencie of the towns stent roll, which hes amounted to considerable soumes these three years by past, as may be seen by the thesaurers accompt produced. As to the vent of wyne ther is but one house or inn in the towne that vents wyne, while these three years bypast there hes been litle seck or brandie. There are some sallars of aile that vent brandie about ten points a year. As for the vent of malt its not considerable, the wholl toune being decayed soe that the brewars have litle or noe seall for aile but from strangers and at the comon fairs belonging to the toune, and the excyse roll is become a great deall short of what it was formerly.

5. Its answered that ther is no shipping great or small belonging to the burgh, the samen lyeing fyve mylls from the sea.

6. It is answered ther is no inhabitant hes any pairt of or portioners in with others in shipping in other royall borrowes or burghs of barronie.

7. Its answered that the cess of the burgh being fyve pound ten shillings monethly is laid on by taxatione on the inhabitants but often they fail in payment of their respective stents, soe that the deficiencie is made up out of the comon good and falls out to be considerable.

8. Its answered that the first ministers stipend is payed out of the bishops rents, the second minister is payed out of the teynd of the parochine and bishops rents, except ten pounds for ane yeard yearly. The rest of the publict servants fees are payed out of the publict and comon good of the burgh as will appear by the peaper apairt.

9. It is answered that the wholl publick works are mautained out of the comon good, such as ane bridge on the water of Southesk, which did cost the towne in anno 1685, upwards of 1000 marks, and soe brought the publict in debt. Item, the grammar schooll, whilk is ane verie old house and most now be altogether repaired, besides ane good sowme it hes stood the towne yearly for many years bygone. Item, the tolbooth which is extream old house and is to be taken downe and of new built and fortified out of the comon good. Item, the publict marcat cross whilk is altogether demolished and will just now stand the town upwards of (blank). These, besides the publict streets, ports, and dycks of the comon grass, and mantaineing the comon milns, one of which in anno 1688 did stand the towne for ane new house, ane stone stooll and other materials the sowme of 100 lib. sterline, and the other is demolished.

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
BRECHEN.

10. Its answered that the marcat is the calsay marcat, being on Tuesday weekly, beginning the first Tuesday of Lent and containeweing till Pash Sunday, being four dayes. Item, ane weekly marcat on Tuesday throughout the wholl year. Item, ane yearly marcat called Palm Tuesday lasting one day. Item, ane yearlie fair called Trinity Fair beginning the Wednesday after Whitsonday on the Trinity Mure of Brechine, whilks is the sheep marcat day, Thursday therafter the nolt marcat day, Fryday therafter the horss marcat day, and Tuesday therafter retuorneing into the town. Item, Martimas Tuesday one day yearly. Item, the weekly Craft Marcat, beginning the Tuesday after Michaelmess and containeing to Christmas, both the Calsay and Craft marcat being some better than the ordinarie weekly marcats.

11. Its answered as to the burghs of barrony and regality within the precinct of Brechine, that the laird of Edzell, within three mylls of the town, hes a weekly marcat on Wednesday and also ane yeirly fair called St Laurence Fair the tyme of the comon fairs of Brechin, as also ther is ane other on Munday weekly, without any ground or warrant, within four mylls of the town at the north water bridge whilkis altogether destroys the touns marcats ; and sicklyck there are sewerall persons that dryve a trade of merchandizeing within three or four mylls of the town, to witt, John Davidsone, James Ross, Alexander Stronach, in the parochin of Aberlemno, James Patersone in the parochine of Oathlow, David Smart and David Curdean in the parochin of Tannadice, Alexander Allan in the parochin of Menmure, James Carnegie fiar of Cookstone and Francis Stevensone in the parochin of Breichin, John Downie in the parochin of Ballgais ; item, Roscobie a considerable burgh of barronie and regality ; item, Killiemuire a considerable burgh of barronie and regaltie, consisting of sixteen merchants and sewerall yearly fairs, and a considerable weekly marcat. As to ther particular trade it cannot be condescended on.

	To Robert Law	133	6	8
	To Marie Cleiland	100	0	0
	This besides upwards of 500 marks oweing to some inhabitants	333	6	8
		2000	0	0
		<hr/>	<hr/>	<hr/>
	The annual rent of this 2000 lib. is yeirly	120	0	0
	To the minister of mony yeirly	200	0	0
	To the schoollmaster	100	0	0
	Item, sett apairt for upholding the harbour	72	0	0
	Item, for the tolbooth and bridge	28	0	0
	Item, the towns equies and missive dewes comunibus annis will be at least	40	0	0
	The officers and drumers wadges	30	0	0
	The upholding of the kirk comunibus annis	20	0	0
	The other incident charges will be comunibus annis	200	0	0

Soe ther will be at least yearly besyde the comon good to be payed furth four hundreth and fyfty four pounds Scots. This is stented upon the inhabitants yearly and collected with the cesses.

2. Ther are thrie mortificationes of aikers about the towne, one belonging to the sea poor box, one to the crafts box, and one to the kirk session box ; the rent of all which is above fyve chalders bear. This with the collectiones is bestowed totallie upon the poor of the burgh, besides what the inhabitants giveth weekly, soe the toun hes no ease therby of ther publict burdenes.

3. The third article concerning Jedburgh needs no answer.

4. The fourth article requireth no answer from this burgh.

5. The theasurers accompts and equies for fyve preceeding yeares produced.

6. As to the forraigne and inland trade, ther is non in this place, the inhabitants being served in wyns and other comodities from Edinburgh and other places ; and as to the vent of wyne ther is only now one taverne in towne these (blank) yeares bygone. There were tuo or three these for fyve years backward could not vent yearly tuo tunns of wyne and now hardly half a tunn. As to the consumptione of malt ther will hardly be betuixt thretie or fourtie [bollis] malt made use of in the moneth.

7. As to ships, there are only two ships, whereof William Bell and Thomas Whyt are masters, the one 70 tunns and value 700 lib., the other 90 or 100, value 250 lib. sterling, all except one sixteen pairt of everie one belonging to the masters pertaineing to and imployed by the merchants of Edinburgh. There is also ane litle catch, wherof James Cook is master, belonging to James Cook, present baillie, about 55 tunne, value 100 lib., imployet for the most pairt be merchands in other places. The names of these ships are Sophia, Mary and George. There are no barks, boats, or ferrie boats belonging to this place, only the number of six small lyne boats who slayes whyt fish in the summer and winter, and goe to dreave at Lambas when ther is any tack of herringes, the owers wherof these sewerall years past are great loosers and have no benefeit, and the poor fishers in winter live on charitie.

8. Ther are non within this burgh that are owners of any ships or other veshells belonging to other burghs or townes, except James Cook, baillie, who hath ane sixteen pairt of Thomas Cook, skipper, in the burgh of barronie of Elie.

9. As to the payment of the cess imposed upon this burgh, it is payed by stent on the inhabitants and houses of the towne, and no pairt of it on the comon good, as may appear be the answer to the first article.

10. As to the tenth, the minister, precentar, and schoolmaster, and all other publict servants stipends and sallaries are payed, after exhausting of the comon good, by taxatione on the people, and the greatest pairt of the ministers stipends out of the teynds of the paroch. Nota. The answer to the first article clears thus.

11. The whole publict works are mantainit out of the small comon good and be stent upon the inhabitants, and the harbourie being the greatest concerne in the town both for the safety of ships and boats and for defending the houses on the shoar for the violence of storms, is now in a most lamentable conditione, needing great reparatione and the burgh not able to do it.

12. As to the houses in the towne, they are in so bad a conditione and that the great third pairt are either ruinous or these that are in repair (which are the best houses in the towne) are standing void without any inhabitant and these that are inhabited the best of them will not extend to 16 lib. Scots of maill yearly, and ther are no strangers liveing within the burgh.

13. As to the fairs and publict marcats, ther is only one fair on the 22 Jully yearly. The greatest comoditie sold therein is wooll and the custome of all will not be 20 lib. Scots which is a pairt of the 136 lib. custome. There is no weekly marcat here, but the inhabitants are served out of Anstruther Easter ther weekly marcat.

14. As to the burghs of barronie and regality within the precincts of this burgh, there are none, except Elie who have a good harbour, some shiping and trade. The houses are pretie good and the towne indifferent populous. There is also Saint Monance who have only fish boats, and the inhabitants who are populous and have good houses have ther livelyhood by ther fishing and labouring of land.

APPENDIX III. Pittenweem the 17th September 1691. This is the trew accompt of the condition of the said burgh, given up by the magistrats and towne clerk, upon oath, to the visitors appointed by the royall borrowes for that effect, and is subscrivit by the saides magistrats and town clerk, day and place forsaid. Sic subscribitur:

TAYNE.

BURGH OF TAYNE.

Ane counsell holden within the tolbooth of Tayne, the twentie nyynth day of August 1691, by John Ross, provost of Tayne, Angus M'Culloch and Alexander Hay, baillies thereof, Thomas Mansone, dean of gild, Walter Ross, lait provost,

David Ross, theasaurer, Alexander Ross, (blank) Williamson, Hugh Fraser, David Mansone, Charles MacCulloch, and Nicoll Ross, counsellors of the same. The whilk day, the said John Ross produced ane missive letter of the dait at Invernes the twenty eight instant, under the signe and subscription of John Moor and James Smolet, declaireing that where they both being the tuo that were appoynted for the north by the last convention of burrowes are come the length of Inverness to visit our conditioun and to take ane accompt of our comon good and debts and of our mortificationes and trade, to the effect and for the causes specifiet in the said missive letter, conform to which missive letter and in obedience therto, the said provost, baillies, and councill of the said burgh of Tayne ordained me, wnderubscribing, there clerk, to put the condition and accompt of ther burgh, comon good and debts and of our trade in writ, whereof the tenor followes :—

First, the said burgh hes of comonitie to the value of 18 lib. Scots, yearly, which is all the sallarie ther clerk hes.

Item, two milnes of yearlie rent 240 lib. Scots monie, wherof belongs to the said burgh nyne pairts, being yearly ane huudreth and eightie pounnds Scotcs.

Item, the comon customes of the said burgh, yeirly, 60 lib. Scots.

Item, resting be the said burgh to Hugh Bayne in Culrairie, which was borrowed from him to help us to buy the saids milnes 1000 lib. Scots.

Item, resting be us to William Ross of Aldie of borrowed monie, for the use forsaid, 66 lib. 13s. 4d.

Item, resting be us to Mr James MacCulloch of Piltoun the sowme of 1000 lib., which was borrowed from his vmquhill father to pay our part of John M'Leod, lait collector of the excyse, his deficiencie, this burgh being then joynt commissionars with the shire.

Item, rest to Rorie M'Leod of Cambusairrie the sowme of 300 lib. mony forsaid, borrowed from him for payment of bygone cess.

Item, this burgh payes yeirly to the knock waiter and bell attender the sowme of fourty pounnds.

Item, to the schoolmaster yeirly 100 lib. Scots.

Item, to remember that this burgh hes no seaport or harbour or any boat or boats great or small belonging therto, nor hes any concerned in haill or in pairt with any within this kingdome by shipping or other wayes, only that the poor inhabitants soe traffiques from hand to hand and by ther correspondance with the burghs of Invernes and Elgine, and from these who are the second or third hand therin the poor chapmen of this place buyes there goodes and not other wayes.

Item, to remember that a great pairt of the building of this poor place is waist and turned ruinous, in soe far as many of the inhabitants and families were necessitat to quyt the towne by reasone of the stress of quartering of the forces and publiet stress and impositions, and that notwithstanding thereof the forces are in areirs and resting the poor inhabitants for bygone quartering to the extent

APPENDIX III. of the sowme of 8000 marks, which occasioned the removing of many from the REPORTS, 1692. place and extingwishing ther families, and for want of payment of the said rest TAYNE. many more are lyck to be removed.

Item, to remember and it should be considered that the poor chapmen of this place who travelit and did keep up the burden of this place did within thir four years loss by sea ane great boat with the full loadening of merchant goodes brought from Elgine, to the value of 5000 lib. Scots monie, by and attour the loss of mariners and certain persones of the incorporacione, soe that this place is soe redactit as not able to traffecque in the least.

Item, it is to be considered that the kirk, steiple, councill and prison house of this burgh, are soe ruinous and demolished that they are in repaireing and cannot be made up in the same integrity it was formerlie without payment and advancement of ane considerable sowme to the extent of two thousand marks, which is a thing impossible for this poore place and burgh to doe without the christian and charitable supply of weel affected neighbours. In testimonie wherof, wee have subscrivit thir presents, at Tayne, the 29 August 1691 yeares. Sic subscribitur: John Ross, provost; Angus MacCulloch, baillie; Alex. Hay, baillie; Thomas Mansone, dean of gild; Cha. Mansone clerk.

BURGH OF DINGWALL.

Ane trew accompt and representatione of the circumstance and condition of the burgh of Dingwall, faithfullie given up and subscribed be the magistrats therof to the commissionars appointed be the royall borrowes to visit the conditione of the northern burghs of this kingdome.

Imprimis, that the said burgh hes no kind of publict good belonging to it, by reasone ther predecessores did few and sell the litle thing they hade many years for payment of ther publict debts, soe that all that now remains is only twenty nyne poundes Scots of few deuties, wherof the toun clerk gets twenty pounds yearly of sallary.

2. Their was never any mortificatione within the said burgh.

3. The said burgh hes no trade, by reason there is not a man amongst [them] of that stock as to ventur abroad, soe that anything they are able to vent is bought from the adjacent burghs, Invernes and Elgine, nor is ther any hopes that ther can be any trading in the said burgh by reasone of the burghs of barronie and regality erected about it, such as the burgh of barronie of Alnes, within sex myles be east it, the burgh of barrony of Ochterneid belonging to the Viscount

APPENDIX III. of Tarbat within two mylls be west it, the burgh of barronie of Contan belonging

 DINGWALL. of Contan intercepts all the trade the said burgh wes wont to have with the highlanders, the burgh of barronie of Bewlie belonging to the lord Lovat within four mylls south west of it, the burgh of barronie of Redcastle belonging to the laird of Redcastle within three mylls be south it, and the burgh of barronie of Conlbockie belonging to the laird of Findon within two mylls south east of it, everie one of which burghs except that of Ochterneeds have for the tyme ther shopes and vent als much comodity as the burgh of Dingwall.

4. The said burgh hes no tolbooth nor bridge nor are they able to build any; upon all which accompts the herretors and inhabitants are obleidged to mantain the liberty of the burgh and forced to stent themselves and ther land for payment of ther cess, outtreiking of a commissioner to the parliament, conven-tiones of esteats and borrowes, ther eiquies and missive dewes, to pay the mail of ane house hyred for a tolbooth and a stipend to ther schoolmaster and to defray all other contingencies.

5. The said burgh hes no publict debt, because they will not get credit, ther being no visible way how creditors could be payed by ther publict; and, lastly, this being the conditione of the said burgh it is visible they most of necessity quyt and resigne ther privileges unless the royall borrowes fall upon some way for ther support, which the magistrats and counceill humbly intreat the saids commissioners may represent to the royall borrowes at ther first meeting, especially for ane ease to them in the taxt roll, without which it may easily appear that it is impossible for them to send a commissioner to either parliament or conventione. In testimonie wherof, subscribed at Dingwall, the last day of burgh of Queensferrie, the rest of the magistrats and toun clerk being absent, who gave in ane accompt of ther patrimonie and comon good, together with ane answer to the rest of the saids visitors instructiones as followes:

1. As to the first article, it is answered that ther comon good extends to two hundreth fyften pownd nine shillings and two pence Scots and they are oweing two hundreth marks of principall by bond.

2. As to the second article, it is answered that they have no mortifications belonging to them.

therin having a bay for ther harbour.

5. As to the fyfth article, it is answered that they keep no theasaurers books but adjust ther accompts annwally and ther charge and discharge is for the most pairt equal; ther exchequer eiquies is with clerks and other dewes the sowme of thretteen pounds Scots which is annwally payed.

6. As to the sixt article, it is answered that ther export is verie inconsiderable, consisting mostly of coalls which the merchants of Edinburgh and others layes in for ther oun account; ther import consists of some Norway trade and some from Holland, as the masters and others have occatione to imploy ther stocks, the particular value wherof they cannot condescend on; and ther inland trade and retail is also very inconsiderable; and that [for] three yeares bygone they haye had no consumptione of French wines and not above a tunn yearly for the two yeares preceeding these, and a verie small and inconsiderable quantity of seek or brandie, and that they cannot condescend on ther consumptione of malt in regaird they have no milns nor impost upon ale.

7. As to the seaventh article, it is answered that they have seaven ships belonging to them betuixt ane hundreth and ane hunder and twenty tunns the piece, the value of which wee cannot condescend on, and ane open boat for carrying coalls and stone, which ships are of the most pairt employed by the merchants of Edinburgh.

8. As to the eight article, it is answered that they [have] two sixteen pairts of two ships the masters wherof are burgars of a royall burgh and no other wayes concerned in trade with any unfree burghs.

9. As to the nynt article, it is answered that ther cess is payed by tax on ther iuhabitants.

10. As to the tenth article, it is answered that ther ministers locall stipend is four hundreth marks, which is payed by taxatione and pew mailles, and ther schoolmaster hath fourtie pound out of the comon good and twelve pound by a mortificatione; all other ther publict servants are payed out of ther comon good.

11. As to the elleaventh article, it is answered that all ther publict works are supported out of the touns comon good save ther church which is mantained out of its own pious renewes.

12. As to the twelfth article, it is answered that there are many of ther houses unhabited, and a full rental of them shall be given in by ther commissioner to the nixt conventione of borrowes, and that they have no stranger inhabitants.

13. As to the thretteen article, it is answered that they have oue yearly fair of one dayes containwance and tuo weekly marcats whose customes are inconsiderable and stated as pairt of ther comon good in answer to the first article.

APPENDIX III. 14. As to the fourteenth article, it is answered that they have no precinct

QUEENSFERRY.

15. As to the fyfteenth article, it is answered that ther burgers freedoms, fynes, &c. are inconsiderable and reckoned as pairt of ther comon good.

This is the trew accompt of the state and conditione of the said burgh of Queensferrie, in answer to the above mentioned instructiones, as it is given up by the said baillie, undersubscryveing, who declairs the same to be the authentick relatione to the best of his knowledge, to the saids visitors, day and date forsaide. Sic subscribitur: Jo. Kinnaird, baillie.

Nota. Its to be remembered that ther is omitted of the first article of the debts ten pounds Scots they pay yearly to the burgh of Linlithgow. As also its to be remembered that the commissionars charges to parliaments, conventiones of borrows, transporting of shouldiers and other contingencies lyes heavie on them and is much more then ther comon good will discharge.

BURGH OF FORTROSE.

FORTROSE.

Information by the magistrats and clerk of the united burghs of Fortrose and Rosemarky, by act of parliament and the Kings chartour, under the great seall, of old and lately ratified in parliament, anno 1661 yeares, now both called be the said chartour and ratificatione the burgh of Fortrose, and which as to Fortross was called the chanonrie of Ross, being the bishop and chanons seat, to the commissionars now at Invernes, appointed be the honourable members and commissionars of the haille royall borrowes of the kingdome of Scotland for visiting the northern borrowes and takeing ane account of ther comon good, debts and mortificationes (and of ther trade if any were) and be the saids visitors sua appointed to be reported to the next general conventione of the borrowes to meet and sitt at the burgh of Dundie.

1. The said burgh of Fortrose (united ut supra) have no trade by merchandizing nor never hade that wee know or can learne of, being but a litle village and formerly a kirk toune or the bishop and chanons seatt, the few cramers or chopkeepers therin did not heirtofor nor does not now export or import any merchant vair, victwall, or any thing els of whatsoever kynd, be sea or land, that we know or can hear of, except some litle salt, iron, litts, spices, and such small comodities that the saids few merchants bring from Invernes, Findhorne, and Elgin; and they are not able to doe otherwayes, for, to the best of our skill and knowledge, these in Fortrose called merchants are not intrinsique value, including ther chops and what they have in them, worth tuo hundreth pownd sterlin, and tuixt the one of the year and the other and tuixt ther credit and stock they doe not vair and buy to the extent and value of the said sowme, ther being but four of them in number, and all the rest of the inhabitants are but shoo makers, skimmers, wivers, taillors and husbandmen laboureing the ground, and suchlyek poor men and trades, whose poverty wee are ashamed to inform; and for further clearing of thus the informers appeal to the good town and magistrats of Invernes ther nixt neighbours.

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
FORTROSE.

2^{do}. As to comon good, the burgh of Fortrose, of old called the chanonrie of Ross, have no comon good under the sunn, in less or more, to walk and work upon, except the custome of their tuo marcats which some years yields ane hundreth marks effectwally and no more and some years less, and of that the magistrats gives ther clerk thretie pownd Scots of fie and fourtie pownd to their schoolmaster, and when the custome mony is deffective any year for payment of the said two what is wanting to them, with their officers fies, is imposed on the inhabitants, together with the Kings cess, per annum, by way of stent. The said burgh, of old called the chanonrie, have no lands, houses or yeards holden in libero burgagio de regie or few of the magistrats therof sed e contra all holden of the sea, bishops and channons of Ross, when existing, and now of ther Majesties jure corone, and who get the haill few deuties, &c., dew and payable furth of these lands, houses and yairds, and it was ever soe since the foundatione of the bishoprick and by all appearance will hold soe, by which the poor burgh hes no help that way by way of the comon good; and when cess, outrig of whatsoever kynd, the dewes of royall burrowes and missives dewes and other publict contingencies occurs to be payed, there is no way for it but allwayes to stent the inhabitants by the pole or pro capita, which as to tymes past and upon the accompt the heavie burdenes that occurred, made sixteen families if not more remove of the place to the countrey, being brock, and the rest lyck to go that way for that same cause, and which may be evidently seen by the stent roll imposed for payment of the present Lambas cess heirwith sent to the saids visitors to be seen and considered, wherein there are several persons stented that lyve on the charitie of the church and other good people, whereof wee are ashamed to condescend. As to the old burgh of Rosemarky, its trew that ther is lands and houses there holden in libero burgagio de regie to the extent of three or four hunder pounds Scots, highly racked, and that valued rent is incorporat with the shyre and payes in there cess with them anwally and did soe since the year 1638 that the troubles beginne and burdens laid on be way of monethly maintainance and cess, and by all appearance will containow soe, by which the poor united burghs have no help that no not of litle of their own lands since the shire keeps be it and maks the cess practicable in payment majori vj, which in good Scots terms may be called quartering, and not only in cess but in all other publict outrique, such as leavies to horse and foot, corne and strae, &c., since the poor burgh is not in conditione because off their poverty to daker with the shire for remead. And in that towne of Rosemarkie wherein there is no merchant or traffiqner in that station and but few inhabitants, such as suttarmen, husbandmen and wyvers, they allwayes [stent] the inhabitants for ther proportion of the said cess and all publict burdenes as those in chanonrie doe on all occasiones and as their stent roll sent to the visitors will sufficiently clear.

APPENDIX III.
REPORTS, 1692.
FORTROSE.

3. The magistrats and councill of the saids united burghs owes debt upon the publict accompt of the place, there is no doubt of it, for they owe and are resting upon that head eight hunder pound Scots if not more and no way wnder heaven to pay it unless the inhabitants be stented, which dare not be medled with in this junctur of tyme for fear the most of them runn away, and therfor as that upon annwallrent payeing in hopes of better tymes, and that the honourable royall borrowes will have pittie on the poor place and take their conditione wnder consideratione by giving help one way and easing of them as to their present proportion in the taxt roll, otherwayes there willbe noe magistracie heir, the people and inhabitants will runn away and no face of a burgh kept up at Fortross, by all appearance ; and [it has been] with great difficulty thir sewerall years past that magistrats was gott to wndergo that charge, and for fear of the charge and trouble occurreing thereby seweralls that were fittest to undergoe the office left the place and went to leive in the countrey ut supra.

4^{to} The united burghs of chanonrie and Fortross have no mortificationes nor ever hade. As to monie victwall or any else belonging to them or at the disposall of the magistrats, except the annwallrents of 1000 marks left by the late Alexander Mackenzie of Coull to the poor of chanonrie and be the magistrats there for the tyme to be manadged and distributed for the end mortified, its trew that the lait Barbara countes dowager of Seaforth mortified ane chaldre victwall yeirly, and the lait Bishop Patersone of Ross the annwall rent of fyve hundreth marks yearly also to the poor of chanonrie, and both mortifiers left the minister and elders, including the magistrates of chanonrie, for the pairt of Bishop Patersone, to be patrons, manadgers and distributors of the said mortified victwall and mony, and these mortificationes being sacred in themselves cannot be any help to the burgh sed e contra most be applyed for the end and use proposed and mortified and noe other way.

5. Upon all these considerationes the burgh and inhabitants thereof being soe mean and miserable and their condition deplorable, could not heirtfoir give punctwall attendance to parliaments, conventions of esteats, or to the convention of the royall borrowes, aither particular or generall, yeit they sent to sewerall parliaments and conventions of lait for resigning ther priviledges as a burgh and for getting themselves expunged as a burgh royall, to be freed and quyt of ther unsupportable trouble and burdens, though heirtfoir their intention took no effect, but if now the royall borrowes doe not consider the condition of the said place and inhabitants thereof as to all what [is] said, and therein give them help and ease, the poor burgh will represent itself when occasione offers and resigne ut supra, and if not accepted, certainly we think there will be no magistrats in Fortross and all the people or most of them will leave the place and cannot otherwayes doe rebus ut nunc stantibus.

Fortrose, the twentie nyntyh day of August, j^m vj^o and nyntie one yeares what [is] represented in this sheet of peaper and fyve articles sett downe therin in behalf of the said burgh and inhabitants therof, is attested to be of verity by us. APPENDIX III.
