DUNLOP is a parish, formerly partly in this county, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," it is now entirely included in the county of Ayr.

EAGLESHAM is a parish and modern village in Paisley small debt court district and poor law combination, 9 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, and 11 south-south-east from Paisley, about a mile to the north-west of the old castle of Polnoon and 2½ miles from Thornton Hall station on the Glasgow and Hamilton branch of the Caledonian railway. A tributary of the river White Cart runs through the village, that river forming the eastern boundary of the parish, which is bounded on the north-west by the Earn water. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Viet. sections 44 to 50), boundary order 75, a part of East Kilbride parish in Renfrew county, without population, has been added to this parish. The old village was demolished in 1769, but was shortly afterwards rebuilt under the direction of Archibald, 11th Earl of Eglintoun, who also, in 1790, erected the church, an octagonal structure, with an elegant steeple, containing a good clock and a fine-toned bell. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The old castle of Polnoon was built with money received by Sir John Montgomerie from the Percy family, in ransom for Sir Henry Percy, better known as "Hotspur," who was taken prisoner by Sir John at the battle of Otterburn or Chevy Chase, 10 Aug. 1388, hence the name Polnoon, "Poind Money." Ballageich, one of the highest points in Renfrewshire, 1,084 feet high, is in this parish, and on the side of the Ballageich Hill is the spot called "The Queen's Seat," the tradition being that Mary Queen of Scots rested there on her flight after the battle of Langside, 13 May, 1568. Blackwood Hill, 1,000 feet in height, is in this parish, which also contains three small lochs. Eaglesham House is the seat of Allan Gilmour esq. D.L., J.P. A flower show is held in place of the old fair on the third Thursday of August. The barony of Eaglesham was in the Montgomerie family, Earls of Eglintoun, from the year 1250, but is now the property of Allan Gilmour esq. D.L., J.P. who is the chief landowner. The area of the parish is 15,794 acres; rateable value, £15,054; the population in 1891, 1,207, and in 1901, 1,075, of which the village contained 686.

ELDERSLIE is a quoad sacra parish and village in the civil parish of Paisley, about half a mile distant from Johnstone, and 2½ miles west from Paisley, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. There are Established and United Free churches. Cotton spinning and the manufacturing of carpets is carried on here. The village has acquired considerable interest, from the fact of its having at one time been the residence of the renowned warrior Sir William Wallace, who in 1305, being betrayed by Sir John Monteith, fell into the hands of Edw. I. and was executed on Tower Hill, London, 23 Aug. 1306. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 3,955, and in the village, 1,761.

INKERMAN is a mining village in Paisley parish, between 2 and 3 miles west from Paisley, which sprung into existence about the time of the Crimean war, and was named in commemoration of the battle of that name, fought Nov. 5, 1851. The population has decreased because of the decline in the mining industry; the population of Inkerman village in 1901 was 589.

ERSKINE is a parish and village, the former being 6 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and situate on the Clyde, in the small debt court district of Paisley. The ground rises gently from the river, and is laid out in rich plantations, orchards and corn fields. At this point is a ferry, said to be the oldest on the Clyde. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish and has a station at Bishopston. The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a fine square tower, and has sittings for about 750 persons. A very fine memorial has been erected here to Lieut.-Gen. Robert Walter, 11th Lord Blantyre C.B. who died Sept. 23rd, 1830. W. A. Baird esq. D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late George Jardine Kidston, of Finlayston, William T. Lythgow esq. of Drums, William Houston esq. of Rossland, and John C. Cunningham, of Craignids, are the principal landowners. The area is 7,520 acres; rateable value, £19,238; population in 1901, 1,519.

BISHOPTON is a small village in this parish, on the Glasgow and Greenock road, 12 miles west-south-west from the former place and 10½ east-south-east from the latter, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and a United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Brick making is carried on here. The population in 1901 was 530.

GIFFNOCK, see EASTWOOD.GLENFIELD now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.GLENPATRICK, see Elderslie.

GOUROCK is a seaport town and burgh of barony, in Inverkip and Gourcock parish and small debt court district of Greenock, 3 miles west from Greenock, 25 west from Glasgow and 69 west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and there is a tramway from Greenock, opened in July, 1873. The town is beautifully situated on the south side of a fine bay of the river Clyde, and is lighted with gas and supplied with water from special works. The haven affords excellent anchorage ground; the quay was constructed at a cost of about £5,000, and has a depth of nine feet at low water. The town, which is about two miles in length, has become a fashionable resort for families from Glasgow and other places during the summer. Gourcock was incorporated as a burgh of barony by a charter from William and Mary, dated the 24th of April, 1694, the privileges of which are very extensive and include the right to hold a weekly market and two annual fairs. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six town councillors. The original chapel, built in 1773, was replaced in 1832 by a new church, with a handsome tower containing a clock. There are two United Free churches here and a Mission at Cardwell Bay; a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel; the Episcopal church of St. Bartholomew, built in 1857, and enlarged in 1910, will seat 320 persons; the rectory, net value £209, has been held since 1891 by the Rev. W. J. Howell M.A. of Edinburgh University. The Gamble Institute, opened in 1876, was built and endowed by the late Mrs. Gamble, of Ashburn, at a cost of about £8,000, and contains a public hall, billiard and reading rooms, a library, bath rooms &c. There are bowling, golf and yacht clubs. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A Drill Hall, in Bonnie street, was opened in May, 1899, by the late Duncan Darroch esq. Major Duncan Darroch, of Torridon, is lord of the manor of Gourcock and the principal landowner. The area of the burgh is 3,600 acres; rateable value, £51,891; the population in 1891 was 4,443, and in 1901, 5,244, viz.: first ward, 1,433; second ward, 1,479; third ward, 2,332. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 6,356.

GREENOCK

GREENOCK is a seaport and municipal and parliamentary borough, and the head of a poor combination, in the western division of the county, 22 miles west from Glasgow, 15 west from Paisley, 66 west from Edinburgh and 419 from London. Greenock is the terminus of a branch line from Glasgow via Paisley of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has also a station on the Greenock and Gourock section of the Caledonian line; from Upper Greenock on this branch is another branch to Wemyss Bay. The town stands on the south bank of the Clyde, and comprehends three parishes, respectively called the West parish, the Mid parish, and the East parish, all formed out of, and separated from, the original parish of Greenock. The first, which may be styled the mother parish of the three, includes the western part of the town and the greater proportion of the country district, and the east includes part of the town of Port Glasgow. Under the Improvement Act, considerable parts of the older districts of the town were cleared and rebuilt at a cost of £150,000.

Lyle road, a wide thoroughfare leading up to the "Benians," a hill at the west end of the town, overlooking the river, was formed in 1878, at a cost of about £17,000. From the top of this road a very extensive view of the Clyde is afforded from Bowling to Dumoon and the Arran Hills.

The Esplanade, constructed at a cost of about £20,000, extends from the foot of Campbell street, in a noble sweep, of about a mile and a quarter, along the shore of the Firth of Clyde, and is protected by a substantial sea wall, with palisades, provided with numerous landing places and seats, and ornamented with a fountain, erected as a memorial to John Galt, the novelist, who died at Greenock, 11 April, 1839.

The burgh is divided for municipal purposes into 8 wards, and the government is vested in a provost, 6 bailies, a town treasurer, a dean of guild and 16 councillors.

Greenock was constituted a parliamentary burgh in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

The town is lighted by electricity from works at Dellingburn, erected in 1907, and in Hunter place, erected in 1899, and with gas from works at Inchgreen, at the east end of the burgh; both undertakings are the property of the Corporation.

Greenock has in addition to a domestic water supply, a supply for power to millsteads on two lines of falls or aqueducts. The Shaws Water Joint Stock Company was incorporated under an Act obtained in 1825, and constructed works which supplied the town and these millsteads by gravitation, the chief source being an artificial lake called Loch Thom, formed by the construction of a large dam across a valley through which the stream called the Shaws Water flowed. These works were acquired by the Corporation in 1866 and have been enlarged from time to time, until now the supply for domestic, trade and power purposes amounts to 270 gallons per day per head of the population.

Greenock, in the early part of the 18th century, was a small village, inhabited chiefly by fishermen, and without quay or harbour: it now, however, possesses several harbours, and in the Clyde, just off the port, is a large sandbank, extending to half a mile above Port Glasgow, the west end of which, known as the Tail of the Bank, affords the best anchorage ground in the Firth.

The various harbours and docks are as follows:—

1. The Mid harbour, the original harbour of the port, constructed during the 18th century, and about 8 acres in extent.
2. The East India harbour, formed early in the last century, and covering about 5 acres.
3. The Victoria harbour, extended over 6 acres, constructed at a cost of £120,000, and opened in 1850. This harbour is particularly well suited for vessels of large tonnage, and has a crane capable of lifting 100 tons, so that steamers of the largest class may have their engines fitted without touching the ground.
4. The Albert harbour, about 11 acres in extent, constructed at a cost, including quays, of £200,000, and opened in 1867. The Prince's pier, west of this harbour, about 1,600 feet long, was erected at a cost of £70,000, and opened in 1870, and has direct communication with the Glasgow and South-Western railway. 5. The James Watt wet dock, opened in 1886; it was designed by Mr. Walter R. Kinipple C.E. of Greenock and Westminster, and is upwards of 2,000 feet in length, 32 feet in depth, and 400 feet in width, and is capable of receiving the largest vessels afloat. There are large warehouses on the margin of the quays for grain and other merchandise, with elevators and hoists of the most improved description worked by hydraulic power. 6. The Tidal harbour, outside the wet dock, where timber vessels can be discharged, and coal and pig iron shipped, is 60 acres in extent. 7. The oldest of the public graving docks, at the Mid harbour, built in 1780, and adapted for vessels 150 feet in length, and drawing 10 feet. 8. Another graving dock, at the East India harbour, 300 feet in length, 16 feet in depth and 40 feet wide on the sill. 9. The third, or Garvel dock, constructed at a cost of £120,000; it is 600 feet in length, 20 feet in depth, and 60 feet in width on the sill. The water space occupied by the wet docks is 90 acres; the quays extend for a distance of 3 miles, covering an area of 100 acres, and there are three other smaller graving docks. There are also two private docks, belonging to Messrs. Caird & Co. Limited, and Scott's Shipbuilding & Engineering Co. Limited. The various docks and warehouses being connected both with the Caledonian and Glasgow and South-Western railways, ample means are afforded of receiving goods and distributing them to all parts of the country.

Trade of the Port.—Exports in 1909.

The following is a statement of the articles of the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom, with their respective values:—Coal, coke and patent fuel, £1,823; manufactured iron and steel, £13,096; ships and boats, new (not registered as British), with their machinery, £274,229; total of all exports, £317,000.

Imports in 1909.

Principal articles, with their respective values:—Unrefined sugar, £1,529,848; refined sugar, £29,666; hewn wood, £62,611; sawn wood, £162,439; furniture wood, of all kinds, £56,732; cotton seed, £20,869; paper making materials, £10,399; total value of imports, £1,927,736.

The amount of Customs revenue in 1910 was £429,644.

In 1909 the number of sailing vessels entering the port of Greenock (including Port Glasgow) with cargoes, including their repeated voyages, from foreign countries, was 5, with a tonnage of 4,879 and from British possessions 6, with a tonnage of 5,261. Of steam vessels there were 72 from the former, of 105,539 tons, and 6, with a tonnage of 6,151, from the latter. The number of foreign vessels cleared with cargoes and in ballast was 27, of 43,104 tons, and for British possessions 19, of 34,599 tonnage.

Of sailing and steam vessels entering coastwise with cargoes, including their repeated voyages, there were 3,164, with a tonnage of 287,269, in the general coasting trade, and 278 of 50,105 in the trade between Great Britain and Ireland. In 1909 the number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," belonging to the port was 74 sailing and 123 steam, with a total tonnage of 238,318. In 1909, 1,988 fishing boats, of an average tonnage of 467, and requiring 451 men and boys to work them, with 166 additional hands, registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894." Two sailing and 18 steam ships, of 30,234 tonnage, were built here during the same year. In addition, one steam vessel, of 411 tons, was built for foreigners. The boundaries of the port, as fixed in 1861, include part of the Clyde, and Mull, Tiree, Coll, Muck, Egg, Rùm, Cana and others of the western islands. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters G. K.

Among the most important industrial works here are four large shipbuilding establishments. Most of the steamers belonging to the Peninsular and Oriental Steamship Company have been built here. Steamboats leave this port for London, Liverpool, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, the Isle of Man, Campbelltown, Ayr, Inverness and other places in the Highlands at stated periods, and there are many others plying on the Clyde only. The steamers carrying the Irish mails are also despatched from this port. There are several extensive engine works, marine and otherwise, and iron foundries, ropewalks, tan yards, and extensive sugar and glucose refineries, manufactories for woollen and sail cloth, and large mills for spinning wool and flax and for making paper.

New buildings were lately completed for the manufacture of torpedoes, the main body of the staff having been transferred from Woolwich.

The weekly market is held on Friday, and there are two annual fairs, one taking place on the first Thursday in July, the other on the fourth Tuesday of November, and horse and cattle markets twice a year—on the Friday before Glasgow Whit-Monday fair, and on the Friday immediately preceding Kilmarchae fair.

At the western extremity of the Esplanade, on the Clyde, is a pier and also a torpedo battery, constructed for the protection of the river and its traffic. In the vicinity are several very agreeable coast resorts, with an excellent service of steamboats.

The old town offices, taken down to make way for the new buildings, were designed in 1760 by the father of James Watt, the famous engineer, who was at that time one of the bailies of the town.

The present municipal buildings, which stand in the centre of the town, were erected from designs by Messrs. Barclay, architects, of Glasgow, at a cost of £120,000, and opened in 1882, and contain a spacious town hall, seating 2,000 persons, and the various departments connected with the Corporation and the Harbour Trust.

The County Buildings, in Nelson street west, contain the sheriff and other courts, and apartments for the necessary officers connected therewith; the district prison for females for Argyll, Bute and the lower district of Renfrew, adjoins the court buildings. The prison for males was transferred to new buildings on the Inverkip road in August, 1910, adjoining which a new prison for females is now (1911) in course of construction.

The Custom House, the north front of which faces the water, with a fine open space extending to the quay, is a building in the Classic style, erected from designs by Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh, and here the business of the customs and excise and inland revenue and the Board of Trade Mercantile Marine and Labour Exchange is transacted.

The Greenock Library (Watt Memorial), in Union street, occupies a site given for the purpose of a library by the late James Watt esq. to contain the statue of his father, and was erected from a design by Mr. Blore, architect, of London, at a cost of upwards of £7,000. Within the entrance is a statue of Watt, executed by Chantrey, at a cost of £2,000.

The Mechanics' Institute, in Sir Michael street, has also a good library, news room and club room.

The McLean Museum, in Kelly street, presented to the town by the late James McLean, saw miller, of Greenock, was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and besides a large collection of objects of interest from all parts of the world, it contains some fine models of the large steamships built at Greenock, and other models of steam engines and sugar making machinery.

Greenock Public Library.—The Public Libraries Acts were adopted in Greenock, 14th April, 1900, and on the 22nd Oct. of the same year, Dr. Andrew Carnegie's offer to present Greenock with the old Post Office buildings, in Wallace square, for its library was accepted. The property, purchased from the Improvement Trust for the sum of £8,500, has been adapted to the requirements of a public library. The lending, reference and juvenile departments contain over 30,000 volumes, and the newsroom is supplied with about 100 current newspapers and magazines.

The News Room, in William street, is also used for the meetings of the Greenock Chamber of Commerce.

The King's Theatre, in West Blackhall street, was built in 1905, at a cost of 39,000.

The Hippodrome, in West Blackhall street, a well-appointed place of amusement, was opened in 1858.

The Post Office, in Cathcart street, erected by the Government from designs by W. Robertson esq. of H.M. Office of Works, Edinburgh, at a cost of £20,000, was opened in May, 1899.

The Public Baths are in the same building as the Mechanics' Institute, the entrance being in Tobago street; the West End Baths Co. Limited have premises in Campbell street.

The Masonic Temple, in West Stewart street, was opened in 1898.

The Territorial Force stationed in Greenock comprise the Highland (Howitzer) Royal Field Artillery and the 1st and 2nd Renfrewshire Batteries, Renfrewshire Fortress Royal Engineers and 5th (Renfrewshire) Battalion Princess Louise's (Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders) and A, B, C, D, F and G Companies of the Regiment.

A Poor House and Lunatic Asylum, at Smithston, about a mile out of the town, was erected at a cost of over £80,000.

There are several charitable institutions, the finest of which, as a building, is Sir Gabriel Wood's Mariners' Asylum, an institution founded by the late Commissary General Sir Gabriel Wood, a native of Greenock, for the relief and comfort of aged and decayed master mariners and merchant seamen.

The Greenock Hospital and Infirmary, in Duncan street, originally erected in 1809, has since been considerably enlarged.

The Eye and Ear Infirmary, in Nelson street west, was opened in August, 1894.

The Greenock and District Combination Fever Hospital, Gate-side, about 1½ miles distant from Greenock, on the Inverkip road, was erected in 1908 at a cost of about £73,000, and contains 150 beds. The buildings comprise 7 fever blocks, an administrative block, besides kitchen and laundry premises and an engineer's house &c. The nursing staff numbers 27.

The Buchanan Night Asylum, built at the cost of the late J. C. Buchanan, merchant, of Greenock, affords both food and shelter to poor persons, and there is also a Sailors' Home.

The West parish church, in Nelson street, is a modern structure. The old church, which stands within its burial ground near the shore, was for some years in a ruinous condition, but has been repaired, and is still used for public worship; the churchyard is the resting place of Burns's "Highland Mary," over whose grave a monument has been erected.

The Mid parish comprehends the central part of the town; the church, in Cathcart square, is an elegant structure, with a lofty steeple.

The East parish church is in Regent street, and there are eight other Established churches, 16 United Free churches, two Roman Catholic churches, a Reformed Presbyterian church, Baptist, Congregational, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels, a Seamen's chapel and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1878, will seat 600 persons, and attached are two Mission chapels. The incumbency, gross value £475, has been held since 1897 by the Rev. Canon Thomas Lennie, of Edinburgh University.

The Cemetery, which belongs to the Corporation, is about 100 acres in extent, and is beautifully laid out.

Greenock Academy is a large establishment for both sexes, under the supervision of a rector, and together with 10 public elementary schools and a higher grade school, is under the control of the Burgh School Board.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited; also the Greenock Provident Savings Bank.

Two newspapers are published here, the "Greenock Herald" (weekly) and the "Greenock Telegraph and Clyde Shipping Gazette" (3 editions of which are published daily).

The Well Park, in Regent street, is a small but well laid out recreation ground, overlooking the town, and approached from Cathcart street by a series of terraces, and on a clear day fine views of the Clyde and the Argyllshire hills may be obtained.

Wellington Park, situated near the Drumrochar road, was formally opened June, 1872, the ground, presented to the town by the late Sir Michael R. Shaw-Stewart bart. is of considerable extent; the lower and more level portion contains bowling, cricket and playing grounds, while the more elevated parts afford space for pleasant rambles, and very fine views are also here presented of the town, the Firth, and surrounding scenery. Adjoining this is another public resort called the White Hill, and comprising about 50 acres.

Connected with the town are various rowing, cricket and bowling clubs, all of which are well supported, and the grounds and bowling greens are kept in excellent order.

On the hills, adjoining Lyle road, is an excellent 18 hole golf course, with a club house at the head of Forsyth street.

Greenock was the birthplace of the illustrious James Watt LL.D., F.R.S. the perfecter of the steam engine, who was born here 19 January, 1736, and died at Heathfield, Birmingham, 25 August, 1819.

John Galt, the biographer and novelist, who was born at Irvine, in Ayrshire, 2 May, 1779, lived for several years in Greenock, and dying 11 April, 1839, was buried here.

The area comprises 2,517 acres; gross valuation of the borough (1910), £434,978; the population of the town in 1901 was 68,217, in 1891, 63,423, and in 1881, 63,902. The population of 1901 comprised: burgh, 67,654; landward, 75; military in Fort Matilda, 18; Royal Navy, 149; shipping, 321; total, 68,217. The population in 1911 was 73,496.

Included in the total population is 153 in the Industrial School and 124 officials and prisoners in the Prison.

The population of the wards in 1901 was: first, 5,800; second, 7,782; third, 5,945; fourth, 7,121; fifth, 7,694; sixth, 12,714; seventh, 9,039; eighth, 11,577.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was:—Augustine, 2,578; Cartburn, 8,203; East, 6,040; Ladyburn, 2,752; Middle, 5,643; North Church, 3,897; South Church, 11,554; Well park, 920; West, 26,237.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 8,160.

Greenock (Daniel MacAlister M.I.C.E. engineer); offices, Municipal buildings

HOUSTON and KILLELAN form a united parish, which includes part of the town of Bridge of Weir; it is in the Paisley small debt court district, and is about 6 miles in length by 3 in breadth. The low grounds are in general fertile and beautified by some fine natural tracts of wood. It is bounded on the east and north by the Dargavel brook, and south by the river Gryfe.

Houston (or Houstoun) village is on the Houston burn, 14 miles west from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Paisley, and the like distance south-east from Port Glasgow, with a station 3/4 miles east on the Paisley and Greenock section of the Caledonian railway, and another at Houston-Crosslee, about 2 south, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It consists of two long streets, one on each side of the rivulet. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in weaving and embroidering. The parish church, originally of very early date, was rebuilt in 1874 by the Speirs family, and is now an edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower containing one bell; the interior contains an effigy to John Houston, dated 1456; there are sittings for 400 persons; there are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Houston Castle, an ancient mansion, now no longer extant, stood to the east of the town, and was the residence of the knightly family of Houston, but demolished in 1780 by a proprietor of the estate. Houston House, which has been considerably enlarged, is the seat of Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. and stands in a large park. The principal landowners are Sir Charles Bine Renshaw bart. of Barochan, and A. A. Speirs esq. The area of the united parish is 7,558 acres; rateable value, £14,733; population in 1891, 1,946, and in 1901, 2,041, of which 639 are in Bridge of Weir; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,402, and of the village of Houston, 447.

About a mile hence is CROSSLEE, the prosperity of which has greatly suffered owing to the destruction by fire of a large cotton mill, in which many hands were employed. The population in 1901 was 374.

INCHINNAN is a parish and village to the north-west of Renfrew, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is watered by the rivers Clyde, Black Cart and Gryffe. At the confluence of the two latter streams is a fine bridge of ten arches, forming a communication with Renfrew; vessels navigating between Paisley and the Clyde pass this bridge by means of a canal, which is spanned by an iron swing bridge. The road from Glasgow to Greenock passes through the whole length of this parish. St. Conval, a follower of St. Mungo, is said to have built a monastic cell here A.D. 606, and subsequently a wooden church was erected, superseded during 1124-53 by a more permanent structure, successively held by the Knights Templars and Hospitallers. The old parish church was built in 1828, on the site of a church of the Knights Templars. A new church was erected in 1904 on the foundations of the old church, the total cost being defrayed by Lord Blythwood: there are sittings for 600 persons. In the churchyard is the burying-place of the Campbells, of Blythwood. Here also is a United Free church. Rev. Lord Blythwood, of Blythwood, is the chief landowner. Acreage, 3,330; rateable value, £6,744; population in 1901, 573.

Post & T. Office, Inchinnan; Thomas Dingwall, postmaster. INKERMAN, see ELDERSLIE.

INVERKIP is a village and with Gonrock forms a parish in the small debt court district of Greenock, from which it is 6 miles south-west, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is situated on the Kipp water, which intersects the parish from east to west, and falls into the Clyde, and the Daff and other rivulets flow through the district, and at some points form small cascades. Ardgowan, the seat of Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. pleasantly situated on a kind of peninsula, a little north of the village, is a fine modern mansion, surrounded with beautiful and romantic pleasure grounds. The parish church is a neat edifice, and has a tower with spire containing a clock; there is also a United Free church. Sir M. Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 12,476; rateable value, landward, £21,271; burghal (Gonrock), £51,891; population in 1901, 7,263 (which includes 5,261 in Gonrock town and 52 officials and 572 inmates of Greenock Poorhouse); of the ecclesiastical parish, 785, and of the village, 369.

JOHNSTONE is a town and police burgh, in the new parish of Paisley and in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 3½ miles west from Paisley, 10 west-south-west from Glasgow, 8 north-north-east from Beith and 14 south-east from Greenock, with two stations on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The Glasgow, Paisley and Johnstone canal, 11 miles in length, was opened in 1810. In the burgh-neighborhood are two large cotton mills, a large paper mill, iron foundries, engineering, machine and tool manufactories and thread mills; near the town are iron, coal and shale mines. The town, which is lighted with gas and well supplied with water, is very regularly laid out, and has two spacious squares, one of which forms a market place. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven town councillors. There are two Established and three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, dedicated in 1874, and consecrated in 1879, has 400 sittings; the rectory, value £278, has been held since 1910 by the Rev. Stanley Gilbert Wade. The burgh buildings, in Collier street, erected at a cost of £2,000, and opened 28th September, 1888, include a spacious court room, well fitted and ornamented with the arms of the burgh in relief: in the Council chamber is a full-length portrait of Sir William Milliken Napier, 9th bart. (d. 4 Feb. 1852), presented to him by his tenants, and given to the burgh by the late Sir Archibald Lennox Napier, 10th bart. (d. Jan. 18, 1907), in November, 1887; there is also a portrait of Mr. James Reid, the first town clerk of the burgh, 1857-93. The Johnstone Town Hall includes a news room and a public hall holding 1,000 people, and there are Temperance & Good Templars' halls, two hospitals, and various friendly societies. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. A pleasure fair is held in the middle of July, and lasts for three days. George Ludovic Houston esq. D.L., J.P. of the Castle, Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. D.L., J.P. of Neilston House and J. C. Cunningham esq. of Craighands, are the chief landowners. Acreage of the burgh, 241; rateable value, £50,982; the population in 1891 was 9,668, and was in 1901, 10,503, viz.: first ward, 885; second ward, 3,246; third ward, 2,097; fourth ward, 4,275. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 10,225.

KILBARCHAN is a parish, town and burgh of barony, in the small debt court
 district of Paisley, 1 1/2 miles west from Johnstone, and about 5 west from Paisley,
 with two stations, one at Milliken Park
 and one at Kilbarchan, on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1946. The old parish church, built in 1724, is a plain edifice of stone,
 with a belfry tower at the north-east
 angle, and is now used as a hall for the Sunday School. The new parish church, built in 1901, has sittings for 1,000 persons. There are also a United Free church and a Baptist chapel. There is a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited.
 On the tower of the old church is a statue,
 executed by Archibald Robertson, sculptor,
 of Greenock, of Habbie Simpson, the well-known Scotch piper, who was born in this parish. Ranfurly Castle, now in ruins, is 1 1/2 miles west of Kilbarchan village.
 John C. Cunningham esq.; Robert Thomas
 Napier esq. D.L., J.P. of Gudee, Muthell, and James Widdrington Shand-Harvey esq. D.L., J.P. of Castle Semple, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,098 acres; rate-able value, £55,085; population in 1901, 7,226, including 2,886 in the town and 1,503 in the Bridge of Weir, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,730.

CLIPPENS is a village in Kilbarchan
 parish, about 3 miles west from Paisley.

BROOKFIELD is also a rapidly increasing village in this parish.

KILMALCOLM (or Kilmaccolm) is a parish and village on the road from the Bridge of Weir to Port Glasgow, in Greenock small debt court district and Paisley poor combination, 10 miles northwest from Paisley, 7 south-east from Greenock, 10½ north-west by weat from Paisley and about 7 miles, in the same direction, from Johnstone, with a station

 on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The district is intersected by the Gryffe and Duchal streams. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and extends from the Clyde into the hilly country south of Port Glasgow, and takes its name from the cell founded here by St.
 Columba; in later times it was the burying place of the Earls of Glencairn. The hills rise to a considerable height; one known as the Laird's Seat is 1,084 feet high,
 and Hyndal Hill, 1,244 feet. The parish church, built about 1826, is a plain edifice
 of stone, with clock tower, and has sittings
 for 500 persons; in the church is a memorial to the Rev. Alexander Leck, a former minister, and a brass inscribed to the Cun-ninghames, Earls of Glencairn, a title which became dormant on the death of John, 15th earl, 24th September, 1796; they were for many generations owners of the lands of Finlaystone in this parish, and this memorial was erected in August, 1892, by their descendant Robert Bentine Cunninghame-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartmore.
 There are also two United Free churches.
 The Royal Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. There is a hydropathic establishment and sanatorium here. Duchal House, 2 miles south of the village, the property of Sir Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart.
 D.L., J.P. is the residence of George H.
 Wallace esq.; near it are the ruins of Duchal Castle; in the neighbourhood is Divots or the Devil's Glen, containing some fine scenery and noted as being the place across which Sir William Wallace forced his horse to leap when escaping from the English. Finlaystone House is the seat of Miss Kidston. Sir Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. of Ardgowan, the trustee of the late G. J. Kidston, and Henry Macdewall esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartland and Carruth, are the principal landowners.
 The area comprises 19,459 acres; rateable value, £36,666; population of the civil parish in 1901, 4,869; viz.: 2,640 landward
 and 2,220 town.

LOCHWINNOCH is a parish and town in the Paisley small debt court district, 15 1/2 miles south-west from Glasgow, 10 1/2 south-south-west from Paisley, 6 1/2 south-south-west from Johnstone and 3 1/2 north from Beith, with two stations on the Glasgow and South Western railway, Lochside station being a mile distant and Lochwinnoch station in the centre of the town. The village is situated on the north-west bank of the beautiful lake from which it derives its name, and is surrounded by scenery of a most interesting and romantic character, including the banks of the Calder, the cataract of Reekna Linn, Gurratt's Linn, the Calder Glen, and the remains of several ancient castles. The lake, which stretches north and south, lies in the eastern part of the parish; it receives the Calder water on its west side, and its issue forms the Black Cart river; it is now about 2 miles in length by 1 in breadth though formerly much more extensive, but has been divided by an embankment whereby several hundred acres of land have been reclaimed and brought into cultivation. The town is lighted with gas by a company. There are five extensive cabinet and chair manufactories, which together give employment to a large number of hands, a bleach-field &c. There is also a branch here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The parish church, built about 1825, is a plain edifice of stone with a tower and spire, and affords sittings for about 750 persons. There are also two United Free churches. Justice of peace courts are held here on the first Friday of each month. An annual fair, called the "Fair of Hill," is held on the first Tuesday in November (old style). Castle Semple House, the seat of James Wylie-drington Shand-Harvey esq. D.L., J.P. on the north-west shors of the loch, occupies the site of the ancient castle of Semple, founded by Lord John Semple about 1500, but demolished in 1735. Garthland is the residence of Henry MacDowall esq. D.L., J.P. On a small island in the lake is a peel tower, the remains of some forgotten stronghold of MEARNS is a parish and village, in Paisley poor combination and small debt court district, 7 miles south from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Paisley, and about 3½ south-west from Clarkston station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway. The parish lies in the south-eastern part of the county, and is 7 miles in length by about three in breadth. The surface of the land is finely diversified by undulations, rising gradually from east to west; it is generally fertile. The great road from Glasgow to Ayr and Kilmarnock runs through the whole length of the parish; and a road has also been opened from Glasgow, which, passing Newton Mearns, joins the former one, near the Logana Well. The parish is irrigated by the waters of three lakes, one of which, named Black Loch, is nearly 2½ miles in circumference. In the parish are several bleachfields. Mearns Castle, which stands on a rocky height near the village, now consists chiefly of a large square tower in a dismantled condition, but commanding an extensive and beautiful prospect; it is encompassed by a strong wall, and the entrance appears to have been once secured by a drawbridge. It belongs to Wallace Fairweather esq. Pollok Castle stands about 2 miles north-west of the village on the road to Pollokshaws. James Crawford Ferguson-Pollok esq. of Pollok Castle, and Wallace Fairweather esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 12,491 acres; rateable value, £28,452; population in 1901, 3,409 in the civil and 2,141 in the ecclesiastical parish.

NEWTON MEARNS (or Newton) is a village in Mearns parish, 3 miles south-west from Giffnock. Here is the parish church, an edifice of stone with a tower and spire containing a clock. The church affords 700 sittings. There is also a United Free church, and at SHEDDENS a Roman Catholic church. In the village is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a good inn. The population in 1901 was 812.

BUSBY is a small village partly in this parish and partly in East Kilbride parish, Lanarkshire, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway, and is 6 miles south from Glasgow. Here are established and United Free churches. Bleaching is carried on here, and there is a chemical manufactory. The population in 1901 was 1,786, of which 542 are in Lanarkshire.

PAISLEY

PAISLEY, generally supposed to have been the "Vandura" of Ptolemy, is a town, burgh of barony and parliamentary burgh, parish, the head of a poor combination and the seat of a presbytery, in the Western division of the county. This parish was constituted, May 15, 1895, from the old parishes of the Abbey of Paisley and the Burgh of Paisley, and includes Barrhead and Johnstone police burghs; the burgh is 53 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, about 7 south-by-west from Glasgow and 17 south-east from Greenock, with a station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways and on the Glasgow and Paisley joint railway, built at a cost of £150,000. The country around Paisley (except on the north, where a wide and fertile plain, known by the name of the "Carse of Renfrewshire," extends itself) is agreeably diversified. The town occupies a healthy and picturesque situation on the banks of the White Cart, about 3 miles above the confluence of that river with the Clyde, and consists of two portions: the burgh, or Old Town of Paisley, on the western side of the river, and the New Town on the eastern side. The portion called the Old Town is considerably more extensive than the New, and contains all the chief warehouses of the manufacturers. Many of its streets are well built, and three of these running parallel to each other, from east to west, are of great length. The New Town occupies a level site on the eastern side of the Cart, and the entire length of both divisions can scarcely be less than 2 miles; the extreme breadth from north to south being at least 1½ miles. A ridge, forming a natural terrace, runs through the town westward from the river for nearly half a mile, terminating abruptly at a point where the Romans had a fortified camp, with which several minor stations on neighbouring eminences are believed to have had communication, these including Woodside, the Knock and Castlehead. Canseyside, one of the streets of the burgh, is also thought to indicate the former existence of a Roman road, leading to or by the principal station.

Three bridges connect the Old Town with the New; the old stone bridge at the foot of High street has been widened and made in harmonise with its new neighbour; the other two, one of which is known as "Abercorn Bridge," are modern structures, and there is a single large arch carrying the railway across the river.

Between 1786 and 1791 the White Cart river was made navigable from the Clyde to the town for sloops of 40 to 50 tons burthen, at an expense of £4,000, and in 1842 attempts were made to deepen it by means of dredging machines, but it was then found impracticable. This work has, however, since been accomplished, borrowing powers for the purpose up to £100,000 having been obtained from Parliament in 1855. Commodious quays have also been erected and the river is now navigable for vessels drawing 15 feet of water.

As a manufacturing town, Paisley was in former years chiefly distinguished for the beauty of its shawls and muslins, and its extensive production of thread. The earliest fabrics made here were coarse linen checks: to these succeeded textiles of a lighter kind, such as lawns, both figured and plain. About 1760, silk gauze then took the lead, and such was the celebrity of Paisley gauze that warehouses were engaged for its sale in London, Dublin and Paris. The demand for gauze subsequently decreased, and muslin, cambric and cotton thread were made instead; the manufacture of silk and cotton shawls, scarfs and plaids composed of silk and merino wool began in 1805, and these still continue to exhibit in great perfection the ingenuity and taste of the Paisley weavers. The manufacture of cotton thread, however, is now by far the most important industry; there are also numerous bleaching and printing works, dye-houses, power loom factories, iron and brass foundries, engineers' and millwrights' shops, timber yards, soap, starch and corn flour manufactories and a tannery.

By a charter granted by James IV. in 1488, in favour of Abbot George Schaw, Paisley was created a burgh of barony. The fourth centenary of Paisley as a burgh was celebrated in August, 1888, and Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and the late Prince Henry of Battenberg, graced the ceremony by her presence. This was the first visit of royalty to the town during the long period of 271 years.

By a proclamation under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts, 1833" (3 and 4 William IV. cc. 76-7) the town was divided into five wards, and in 1895 was again divided into eight.

The present municipal body consists of a provost, six bailies, a treasurer and sixteen councillors, with a town clerk, procurator fiscal, and chamberlain. The provost and bailies act as justices of the peace.

Paisley was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, under the provisions of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), and returns one member.

Gas was first introduced in 1824, and the works, in Black-stoun road, are now the property of the Corporation; the town is also well supplied with water.

The Town Hall, standing close to the river Cart, was erected at a cost of over £100,000, wholly defrayed by Messrs. George A., Jamea, William, and Stewart Clark, brothers, and was opened on the 30th January, 1882; the building includes a tower, containing a chime of bells playing 35 tunes, which are varied each day of the month. The fine organ was presented by Mrs. Clark, mother of the Messrs. Clark, at a cost of about £5,000.

The Municipal Buildings, formerly the County Buildings, form an embattled structure, with towers and turrets.

The county gaol, formerly a bridewell, but now used as a police station, and including a chapel erected in 1820, stands in rear of the municipal buildings, from which it is separated by two courtyards.

The County Buildings, in St. James street, next the Sheriff Court House, were opened in 1830, and are in the Classic style, from designs by Messrs. Clark & Bell, architects, of Glasgow. The edifice is two storeys in height, and has a central pedimented portico supported on columns of the Ionic order, and adorned with a frieze executed by F. W. Pomeroy esq. of London. The building contains the county hall, with committee rooms, offices for the county clerk, county road clerk, medical officer for the county, sanitary inspectors, county assessor and chief constable and head quarters for the county police, with cells; there is also a justice of the peace court hall and offices for the clerk.

The Sheriff Court House, in St. James street, erected at a cost of £15,000, and opened June 30, 1885, is an edifice in the Italian style, and includes a court hall holding about 300 persons, and rooms for the magistrates, jurors, reporters &c. There is also special accommodation for witnesses, and retiring rooms for both judge and jury, besides offices &c. for the sheriff clerk and procurator fiscal.

The Free Library and Museum was the gift to the town of the late Sir Peter Coats kt. J.P., F.R.S.E. of Woodside (d. 1890).

The Coats Observatory is in Oakshaw street.

Public reading rooms for the working classes have been established by some of the principal manufacturers in different parts of the town.

The Fever Hospital, in Bridge street, belonging to the Corporation, is under the supervision of the medical officer of health for the Burgh, with a special staff of nurses; the Royal Alexandra Infirmary, in Earbour park, is also the property of the Corporation.

The Lunatic Asylum ward is arranged to hold 93 patients.

The Paisley District Asylum, Riccarton, is a large building occupying an elevated position on the south side of the town.

The Workhouse, erected in 1850, in the upper part of the town, is in the Elizabethan style, and available for 600 inmates.

The Abbey Church of St. James, St. Milburga and St. Mirin, is the parish church of the New Town of Paisley and an extensive rural district lying around the town. The church was originally 251 feet in length, with a central tower and an elegant choir, without aisles, 123 feet long and 32 feet wide; as now existing, it consists only of the nave, with parvise, north and south transepts, and central tower, restored to a height of nearly 90 feet, north porch, with parvise, and a small but lofty chapel on the south side: the choir has almost entirely disappeared, only a few feet of the height of its walls remaining above ground: within the choir lie the remains of Walter Fitzalan, the first of the Scottish Stewarts, Marjory Bruce, the two wives of King Robert II. and King Robert III. himself: over their resting place a chaste monument of Sicilian marble was placed by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria in commemoration of her visit to Paisley in 1888. The extant portion of the church is almost entirely Early English; the nave, of six bays, 93 by about 60 feet, has triforium and clerestory, and the west front is arranged in three stages; the lowermost has a recessed doorway of seven orders, flanked by blind lancets, all the arch mouldings being relieved with dogtooth ornament; in the second stage are two lofty Decorated windows, of three lights each, with Geometrical tracery; the gable is lighted by a similar window of five lights, and over it is a quatrefoil; the whole is flanked by tall and narrow buttresses and square turrets, and at the western angles of the aisles are other turrets, with spired caps: the groined roof, 82 feet high, is now concealed by a coved ceiling; under the recent restoration, the rough stone walls which filled in the arches between the chapel and the south transept since the fall of the central tower in 1549, have been removed, and the chapel forms part of the church, as it did originally. The windows are mostly filled with stained glass, and include memorial windows to Mr. John Polson, to the families of Clark, Coats and Arthur, as well as to the Hamiltons, Dukes of Abercorn, and to the Cathcart, Shaw-Stewart and other noble families.

The High church, which stands on a fine eminence, called Church hill, laid out on its northern slope in gardens, was built in 1754 at a cost of £1,600, and renovated in 1877 at an expense of £4,000: an organ was provided in 1898, at a cost of about £2,150: it will seat 1,313 persons.

St. George's church, built in 1820 at a cost of £6,183, was renovated in 1894, and has sittings for 1,300 persons.

The North church, in Love street, built in 1834, and rebuilt in 1889, is a plain building of stone in the Gothic style, and has sittings for 725 persons.

The Middle Parish church, on Church hill, built in 1781, was renovated in 1885, and affords 870 sittings.

St. Columba's or the Gaelic church, in Oakshaw street, is a very plain stone building erected in 1793, and will seat 444 persons.

The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1833, will seat 325 persons; the Rev. Charles Leonard Weatherburn M.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1910. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Barnabas, erected in 1893, affords 350 sittings; the Rev. William Robson has been priest in charge since 1910.

The Thomas Coats Memorial Baptist church, in High street, was erected in memory of Thomas Coats esq. a local philanthropist.

There are also United Free, Roman Catholic, Reformed Presbyterian and Wesleyan Methodist churches and Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels and Salvation Army barracks.

The Technical College and School of Art, erected in George street, at a cost of over £25,000, was designed by Mr. T. G. Abercrombie, architect, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, and exhibits a façade 120 feet in length, and three storeys high, arranged as a central block with slightly advanced wings, and an open lantern of several stages, rising from the ridge of the roof. On the ground floor are a large vestibule, board room, principal and art masters' rooms and offices, as well as accommodation for the School of Art. The rest of the building is occupied by class rooms for science, engineering and technology. The courses of study include classes for Matriculation and the Intermediate and Final Examinations for the Science and Engineering Degrees of the London University.

The John Neilson Educational Institution, Oakshawhead, richly endowed by the late John Neilson esq. (a citizen of Paisley), was opened in 1852, and is a massive structure, occupying an elevated site, and surmounted by a lofty dome.

The Campbhill Public School, situated on an eminence, is the largest elementary school in Scotland, and will hold 1,900 scholars.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited and Farrow's Bank Limited. There is also a Savings Bank, which occupies premises in High street, Wellmeadow street and Neilson road.

The Fountain Gardens, the gift of the late Thomas Coats esq. of Ferguslie House, extending between Love street and Caledonia street, comprise six acres of ground, tastefully laid out, with a large and ornamental fountain in the centre, and a smaller one at each of the four angles of the gardens.

Brodie Park was originally a farm of 26 acres, bequeathed to the town council of Paisley many years ago by the late Mr. Brodie.

Races are held annually in August on a picturesque course half a mile from the town, near the Greenock road. This ground, comprising 40 acres, has, by Act of Parliament, become the property of the community, and is now named St. James's Park.

The weekly market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the third Thursdays in February and May, and the second Thursday in August and November respectively. February and August are the principal for cattle; August fair and races take place at the same date, and last for two days. Those of May and November are mostly for hiring servants.

Two newspapers are published in Paisley, viz.: the "Express," daily, and the "Paisley and Renfrewshire Gazette," weekly.

Alexander Wilson, the celebrated writer on American ornithology, was born here in 1766, and died 23 August, 1813; Robert Tannahill, a weaver and lyric poet, was also a native of Paisley, where he was born 3 June, 1774; he was the author of several still popular ballads, but died by his own act, 17 May, 1810. Here also, 19 May, 1785, was born the celebrated John Wilson, best known as Christopher North, and famous both as a critic, essayist and wit; he was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, where he took his degree, and also carried off various University honours, including, in 1806, the Newdigate prize for English verse, besides highly distinguishing himself in athletic contests. In 1820 he became professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, but his chief reputation rests on the "Noctes Ambrosianae," a series of papers contributed to Blackwood's Magazine (1822-35); he died at Edinburgh, 3 April, 1854. Dr. John Witherspoon, long the minister of one of the parishes here, wrote several of his best theological works in Paisley, prior to his emigration in 1768 to America, where he became president of the college at Princeton, where he died 15 November, 1794.

The mitred abbey of Paisley was founded in the year 1163 by Walter, great steward of Scotland, and son of Alan, the first of the Stewarts, who, for a long period, made this abbey their family mausoleum. It was originally a Cluniac priory, colonised from the abbey of Much or Great Wenlock, in Shropshire, and dedicated to St. James, Milburga and Mirinus, but was afterwards elevated to the rank of an abbey, and its lands erected into a regality by James II. the abbot being constituted lord thereof. Abbot George Schaw, in 1484, surrounded the abbey precincts with a lofty wall of hewn stone, a mile in circumference, the greater part of which has been demolished, but a portion still remains, and there exists a rhyming inscription, setting forth Abbot Schaw as its builder. This inscription, once on a tablet in the wall, is now inserted in a house in Lawn street. The monastic church is now the parish church of New Paisley: there were cloisters on the south side 60 feet square, but the domestic buildings have largely disappeared.

In 1560, after the Reformation, the abbey and lands were made a temporal barony in favour of Lord Claud Hamilton, third son of James, 2nd Earl of Arran, and Duke of Chatelherault, in France, on whom was conferred the title of Lord Paisley in 1652. The abbey lands were transferred from James, 2nd Earl of Abercorn and grandson of Claud, Baron Paisley, to the Earl of Angus, and from him passed in 1663 to Lord Dundonald, but the greater portion became the property, by purchase in 1764, of John James, 9th Earl, and 1st Marquess of Abercorn, who eventually let it on building leases; so that the park, orchard, and gardens of the abbey subsequently became the site of the new town of Paisley, and the materials of the monastery were used in the erection of the houses.

Ferguslie Park, the seat of Sir Thomas Glen Glen-Coats bart. V.D. Lord Lieutenant of the county, and Hawkhead

House, the property of the trustees of the late William Stevenson, but now (1911) vacant, are in this parish.

The area of the newly constituted parish is 16,838 acres, but the area of the burgh is 3,487 acres; rateable value, £426,784 5s. 3d. The population of the burgh in 1891 was 66,425, and in 1901 was 99,899, viz.: burgh, 79,363; Barrhead burgh, 1,216; Johnstone burgh, 11,331; landward, 7,989.

The estimated population in 1910 was over 93,584. The population of the wards in 1901 was: first, 7,850; second, 10,846; third, 11,678; fourth, 9,702; fifth, 13,266; sixth, 6,914; seventh, 12,822; eighth, 6,906.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: Abbey, 15,057; Greenlaw, 9,965; High Church, 10,037; Low Church, 6,492; Martyrs, 12,049; Middle, 7,879; North, 7,738; St. Columba, 3,617; South Church, 9,208.

Included in the total population was 128 in the Royal Alexandra Infirmary; 175 in the Industrial School; 112 in Kibble Reformatory for Boys; 26 officials and 622 inmates of the Poorhouse; 31 officials and 245 inmates of the Parochial Asylum.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 12,541.

POLLOKSHAWs, see GLASGOW.

PORT GLASGOW is a seaport, and parish, town, police and parliamentary burgh, pleasantly situated on the south bank of the river Clyde, 20 miles north-west from Glasgow and 3 east from Greenock, with a station on the Greenock section of the Caledonian railway. It formerly belonged to the parish of Kilmacolm, but in 1695 it was erected into a separate parochial district. The town, which partly stands on the old barony of Newark, is neatly and regularly built; the streets run at right angles to each other and are lighted with gas. It is protected on the south by a range of high hills, and the lower grounds in the vicinity of the town have many good houses. The harbours are remarkable for their facility of entry and egress. Contiguous to the harbours is a large graving dock, which has been extended and improved at a very considerable cost, and there is also a wet dock. The number of vessels entering and clearing the port are included with the Greenock returns. The number of vessels registered under Part 1. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31st, 1909 was 18, with an aggregate tonnage of 8,245. Connected with the town are eight shipbuilding establishments, some of which are upon an extensive scale and employ many hands. In 1909, 34 vessels were built of 62,429 tons. In addition 9 vessels of 9,156 net tonnage were built for foreigners. There are also saw mills, roperies, sail cloth factories and engineering and sail making works. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven councillors, with a town clerk and other officers. A burgh police court sits every Thursday and a justice of peace court on alternate Mondays. Port Glasgow, together with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The Town House, erected in 1815, at a cost of nearly £12,000, is a structure in the Classic style, and has a tower with spire 150 feet in height, and containing a clock; the interior includes a council chamber, court hall, police station, and offices for the town clerk and other public officers. The Town Hall, in Princes street, is a large stone building, used for public meetings &c. and contains an organ given in 1902 by Andrew Carnegie esq. The Moffat Library is an elegant building at the north end of King street, erected in 1887 from part of a bequest left by the late James Moffat, merchant, Port Glasgow, and comprises, besides the library, reading, billiard and smoking rooms. Broadstone Jubilee Hospital was built in 1907 and contains 23 beds. The Carnegie Park Orphan Homes, at the east end of the town, and erected from the same bequest, were built at a cost of about £7,000.

NEWARK is a quoad sacra parish erected out of that of Port Glasgow. The ancient castle of Newark, formerly occupied by the Maxwells of Pollok, is now the property of His Majesty's Board of Works, having been transferred to them by Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. of Duchal, and Vice-Lieut. of Renfrewshire, as representative of the Maxwells of Pollok and Springkell; the ruins are well preserved, and from the site a fine view is obtained of the Clyde and its adjacent scenery, particularly the wild and singularly-formed rocky eminence on which stands the castle of Dumbarton. Port Glasgow parish church, erected upon the site of the old one, is a purely modern structure. There is an annual fair, which takes place on the first Thursday in July, and continues for three days. Birkmyre Park, consisting of 9 acres, presented to the town by William Birkmyre esq. ex-M.P. and situated at Glen Huntly, was opened in July, 1895, and includes two bowling greens, a football field and a quoit pitch. Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the civil parish comprises 1,018 acres; rateable value of the whole parish, £74,110; area of burgh, 444 acres; the population of the parish in 1891 was 14,624, and in 1901, 16,888, and the burgh, 16,857; the population of the wards in 1901 was, first, 5,200; second, 4,034; third, 7,597; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 10,150. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 2,268.

QUARRELTON, see ELDERSLIE.

RALSTON now forms part of the new civil parish of Paisley.

RANFURLY, see BRIDGE OF WEIR.

RENFREW is an ancient town and royal burgh and the capital of the county, and a parish in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, and is 50 miles west from Edinburgh, 13 east-by-south from Port Glasgow, 6 west from Glasgow, and 3 north from Paisley; a short distance from the Clyde, and 1 mile east from the White Cart; the parish lying on both banks of the Clyde. The town, which has four stations, two on the Glasgow and South-Western railway and two on the Glasgow and Renfrew District railway, consists of three good streets, from which several smaller ones issue, and it is well lighted with gas. There are two extensive shipbuilding yards, with a dock capable of accommodating vessels of large burthen, and also a commodious and substantial wharf, at which the largest vessels frequenting the river may discharge and load with as great facility as at Glasgow. The main line of the Paisley and Renfrew railway is connected with this wharf, at which passengers to and from the river steamers navigating the Clyde arrive, and here goods are also shipped and discharged by the Liverpool, Irish and other boats. Renfrew received its first charter from Robert III. in 1396, and in 1614 James VI. granted a charter for a school; it also gives the title of baron to the Prince of Wales. As a royal burgh, Renfrew is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A magistrate's court sits every alternate Monday; and quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Renfrew, together with Port Glasgow, Dumbarton, Kilmarnock and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The Brown Institute, in Canal street, was presented to the town by Andrew Brown esq. The parish church, built in 1862, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, erected in the form of a Greek cross, and has a tower with a tall and graceful spire. Within the church lie two stone figures of Sir John Ross, of Hawkhead, and his wife, and on one of the walls is a marble tablet to the late Archibald Douglas Campbell esq. of Blythwood (d. 1868), grandfather of the present Lord Blythwood; a brass has also been erected by the Rt. Hon. James Parker Smith P.C. to his father and grandfather, and there is a marble tablet to the late Rev. Robert Stephen, for 39 years minister. The Established church affords sittings for

1,050 persons. Walter Stewart built a castle here, on an eminence called Castle-hill, by the margin of the Clyde; and Renfrew was an early and favourite residence of the Stewart family, long ere they ascended the Scottish throne. There are besides United Free and Roman Catholic churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels, an Evangelistic Hall and Salvation Army Barracks. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Margaret is in Fulbar street. On 22 April, 1907, the town was visited by T. M. King George V. and Queen Mary, then the Prince and Princess of Wales, being on their way to open the new buildings of Glasgow, and received an address from the provost and council, afterwards proceeding to Blythswood. Blythswood, the seat of Rev. Lord Blythswood M.A., J.P. is situated on the banks of the Clyde in this parish. Rev. Lord Blythswood M.A., J.F. Alexander Archibald Speirs esq. J.P. of Houston House, the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and James Gordon Oswald esq. are the chief landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,248 acres; of the burgh, 1,590 acres; rateable value, £171,189 gross; the population in 1891 was 15,142. The population of the parliamentary and royal burgh in 1901 was 9,205, and royal burgh, 7,860.

The population of the wards in 1901 was: first or Meadowside, 2,124; second or Blythswood, 2,019; third or Townhead, 2,337; fourth or Moorpark, 2,816.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 13,348.

SCOTSTOWNHILL is a village in Renfrew civil parish. The population in 1901 was 379.

ANNIESLAND is a village in the parish. The population in 1901 was 487.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 2,340.

SCOTSTOUN is a town in the civil parish of Renfrew and county of Renfrew, forming a suburb of Glasgow, in which section it will be found.

SHEDDENS, see MEARNS.

UPLAWMOOR is a small village in the civil parish of Neilston and in the quoad
 sacra parish of Caldwell formed in 1889;
 it is 5 miles south-west from Barrhead
 and 5 1/2 north-east from Baith, with a station at Caldwell on the Glasgow, Bar-head and Kilmarnock joint railway, and another station on the Caledonian railway, on the eastern side of the village. The parish church of Caldwell is in this village.
 The place has a considerable reputation as a health resort; it has a splendid golf course and there is also a curling club;
 a large number of visitors reside here
 during the season. Loch Libo is within the parish. Colonel William Mure D.L., J.P. of Hall of Caldwell, is the chief landowner.

THE COUNTY OF ROSS AND CROMARTY

THIS is a large county in the north of Scotland, and includes the districts of Easter and Wester Ross, Ardmearach or the Black Isle, and four-fifths of the Island of Lewis, and the former county of Cromarty: this last, being formed of scattered portions within and adjoining Ross, was, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, united for all purposes with the county of Ross. The present outline is irregular and the boundaries on the east and west sides touch the North Sea and the Atlantic Ocean: the west coast of the Mainland is much indented with bays and lochs, and its actual water boundary is the North Minch, the strait which divides it from the Isle of Lewis. On the north and north-east the county of Sutherland forms the boundary as far as Dornoch Firth, from there southwards to the Beaulieu basin the North Sea and Moray Firth constitute the eastern boundary, and thence Inverness with the Isle of Skye extend around the south and south-west borders: the Ross portion of the Isle of Lewis being bounded by Harris, the portion of the island belonging to Inverness on the south, the North Minch on the east and the Atlantic on the north and west: the portion of the Isle of Lewis belonging to the county measures 40 miles from north to south by 25 in breadth, while the part belonging to the Mainland extends from east to west 67 miles and from north to south 53 miles. It comprises an area of 3,988.6 square miles, or 1,976,707 acres of land and 72,974 of water, and in point of size ranks as the third, and in population as the twelfth of the counties of Scotland. In 1891 the population was 78,727, and in 1901, 76,450, viz.: males, 36,253, and females, 40,197. The inhabited houses being 16,079 in 1891, and in 1901, 16,049.

Of the early history of this county but little is known: it was at the time the Romans came to these parts inhabited by three tribes, the principal of which, the Caledonii, must have been a part of a larger Sept, as the name occurs in other districts in 1135. There was an Earl of Ross, but this title early became extinct.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The portion of this extensive county capable of cultivation is very small. The arable lands extend along the eastern coast, and are found in patches here and there on the western; a great proportion of the low lands of Easter Ross, and a small portion of those near Dingwall, is louny clay, the rest being light soil of various qualities. The whole of this comprehensive shire, except a district on the east side called Easter Ross, is mountainous, wild and pastoral; the mountains are for the most part in groups, many of them reaching a considerable elevation, where they appear in continuous chains from north-west to south-east, and the lochs necessarily follow the same direction. The most lofty mountains are Ben Dearg, 3,547 feet; More, 3,505; Teallach, 3,474; Wyviss, 3,429; Alton, 3,383; Slioch, 3,217; Eag, 3,160; Fin, 3,060 and Ben Alligin, 3,015, besides which, on the confines of Ross and Inverness, is Main Soul, 3,862. Almost the whole of the west coast presents magnificent mountain scenery, and the interior is in general picturesque. The climate is unsteady, and exhibits the extremes of long, dreary, cold winters and some very hot summer weather, and the west coast is subject to heavy rains. The natural forests, which formerly covered large tracts, have nearly all disappeared, with the exception of the birch and some oaks in different parts of the county; the remains of firwood are extensive, and the trunks of oaks of an immense size are still to be seen. Planting is prosecuted, and large additions have been in progress for many years. The deer forests of Ross are forty-eight in number, and extend over 835,645 acres, and the shootings are a source of profit to the proprietors. The improvements effected in farming have completely changed the aspect of the district of Easter Ross.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are: oats, 29,872 acres; barley or bere, 10,413; wheat, 1,479; rye, 504; the total corn crops being 42,316 acres; turnips and swedes, 15,528 acres; potatoes, 7,086; vetches or tares, 455; total green crop, 23,216 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 13,787, not for hay, 28,967; permanent pasture, for hay, 2,640, not for hay, 29,207 acres; total area of land, 1,977,248 acres; the mountain and heath land being 848,331; woods and plantations, 60,638.

The live stock in 1910 comprised: 6,058 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 2,134; cows and heifers in milk, 15,308, in calf, but not in milk, 2,141; other cattle, two years and above, 7,370, one year and under two, 9,175, under one year, 9,415; ewes kept for breeding, 113,818; other sheep, one year and above, 67,033, under one year, 96,757; sows kept for breeding, 570; other pigs, 3,201.

The mineralogy of the shire is interesting to the geologist, but of little commercial value. Sandstone occurs in several localities, 3,052 tons being raised in 1909.

The salmon fishery is carried on to a considerable extent in the different rivers and estuaries, and that for herrings has of late years become uncertain. At Ullapool in 1909 there were 355 boats registered under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, employing 1,159 regular hands. There are no manufactures of any importance, but in the neighbourhood of Dingwall, Invergordon and Tain several extensive distilleries are established.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers on the east side of the county are the Conan, fed by the Orrin, Meig, Sheen, Farnich and Blackwater, which flows into the Cromarty Firth, and the Aultgraat and Alness, which have the same outlet, and the Oikel and the Carron, which pass into the Dornoch Firth. The river Ewe, on the west coast, has a short course from Loch Marce, and the Broom river falls into Loch Broom. The Conan and its principal branch, the Raney (or Blackwater), form some falls of considerable height and beauty. The indentations of the sea, or saltwater lakes, on the west coast proceeding from north to south, are Loch Enard, Loch Broom, Loch Grienord, Loch Ewe, Gair Loch, Loch Torridon, Loch Keabhorn, Loch Carron and Loch Alsh, with its inner southerly arm, Loch Daich. The county likewise possesses a great number of lakes of fresh water in the interior, but none of them save Loch Marce, near the west coast, are of much magnitude or beauty. The Highland railway enters the county at Beaulieu in the south-east, runs north to Dingwall, whence a branch passes west-by-south round the north of Loch Luichart, up the Sheen water and along Glen Carron to the south part of Loch Carron, where Kyle of Lochalsh is the terminus, and from thence the steamers of the Company sail to the Isles of Skye and Lewis; the main line continues from Dingwall along the north side of the Cromarty Firth to Invergordon, whence it turns north to Tain and by the south of Dornoch Firth to Culrain, where it leaves the county and proceeds to Golspie &c.; from the Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh section is a short line to Strathpeffer, and from Muir of Ord on the main line is a branch to Fortrose; the scenery through which the line passes is very fine and varied; there is also a short branch from Dingwall to Strathpeffer Spa.

Lewis has some mountains, 1,200 to 1,700 feet, in the south and south-west portion of that section of the island, also an inland loch, Langabhat, about 8 miles long, and numerous inlets or "sen" lochs, the largest being Loch Boag on the west coast. There is a good harbour at Stornoway, sheltered from the north-east by the Eye peninsula. The population in 1901 was 20,626. The principal industry is sheep breeding.

Divisions, Representations &c.—The county contains 33 civil parishes and 34 entire and parts of 11 ecclesiastical parishes; it has three royal burghs, namely, Dingwall, Tain and Fortrose. The two former, with the town of Cromarty, join with Kirkwall, Wick and Dornoch in returning one member to Parliament, and the shire of Ross and Cromarty sends another. The parliamentary constituency numbered in 1911, 8,259. The burgh of Fortrose is associated with Inverness, Nairn and Forres in parliamentary representation.

ALNESS is a parish in the eastern half of the county, and a small village, partly in this parish and partly in that of Rosskeen, 3 miles south-west from Invergordon and about 10 from Dingwall, situated on both sides of the Averon (which river separates the two parishes), the part of the village lying in Rosskeen parish being known as Bridge End of Alness. The parish is bounded on the east by Cromarty Firth and Rosskeen, on the south and west by Kiltarn, and on the north by Rosskeen, and is about 20 miles in length, with a mean breadth of about 5 miles. There is a station here on the Inverness and Wick section of the Highland railway. Alness is in the Dingwall small debt court district, and Bridge End in that of Tain. There are Established and United Free churches about half a mile west of the village, and the latter has lately been rebuilt at a cost of £1,100. The production of whisky is carried on extensively in two distilleries. Iron and silver ores have been found in this neighbourhood. Teaninich House is the seat of Stuart Caradoc Munro esq. and Dalmore, that of Andrew Mackenzie esq. J.P. The Right Hon. Ronald Cranford Munro-Ferguson P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P. of Raith and Novar; S. C. Munro esq.; C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. of Ardross Castle, and Frederick Shoobred esq. of Gildermorie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 41,041 acres; rateable value, £6,992; the population of the parish in 1891, 1,039, in 1901, 956; the population of the village (including Bridge End) in 1901 was 1,035.

ANNAT, see APPLECROSS.

APPLECROSS is a parish and small village about 16 miles north-west from Strome Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and about the same distance from Lochcurron. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, and measures about 25 miles by 23, lies between Loch Torridon on the north, and Lochcarron on the south, and is bounded on the west by the Inner Sound, dividing it from Raasay Island, and on the east by the parishes of Gairloch and Lochcarron; its largest loch is Loch Damph, 4 miles in length; there are several detached hills varying from 2,000 to 2,936 feet above sea level, and the parish is well watered by small streams. The climate is very moist, torrents of rain being frequent all the year round. At Applecross are Established and United Free churches. There is a good limestone quarry on Applecross Bay, but the population is chiefly engaged in fishing. The greater part of the parish is occupied as a deer forest by Lord Middleton, the Earl of Lovelace, of Horsley Towers, Leatherhead, Major Duncan Darroch, of Torridon, and Charles James Murray esq. D.L. of Lochcarron. Shildaig, a village in this parish, has Established, Free Presbyterian, and United Free churches. Torridon, another village including the townships of Annat and Fasag, and Croulin Island is also included in it, but part of the original parish has been transferred under boundary order 129 to Lochcarron parish, and part of Lochcarron to Applecross. At Torridon is a United Free church. Charles James Murray esq. D.L. of Conrhill, Lochcarron; Lord Middleton, of Applecross House; Major Duncan Darroch, of Gourcock and Torridon, and the Earl of Lovelace, of Ben Damph Forest, Torridon, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 109,293 acres, rateable value, £4,385; population in 1891, 1,786, and in 1901, 1,126, including 3 on Croulin Island.

CROMARTY

CROMARTY is a contributory parliamentary burgh, seaport and small parish at the entrance to the Cromarty Firth, an inlet of Moray Firth. The town, which stands on a promontory on the south side of the strait leading into the fine harbour formed by Cromarty Firth, is situated 134 miles north-east from Inverness, 17 north-west from Nairn, 11 south from Tain, 9 north-by-east from Fortrose, 7 east, by water, from Invergordon, a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway, and 10 from the terminus of the Inverness. Muir of Ord and Fortrose railway. The harbour, formed by the Cromarty Firth, is one of the safest on the East Coast, the entrance being well protected by two headlands, known as the North and South Souters; it was known to the Romans as the "Portus Salutis," and is capable of holding a large fleet, and the bay presents good facilities for bathing. The herring and white fishery is carried on to some extent in this quarter. In 1900, 193 fishing boats of 1,756 tonnage were engaged in the Cromarty district, giving employment to 636 men and boys. The total value of the fish landed was £8,930. The burgh is controlled by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The parish church, built in pre-Reformation days, stands at the east of the town; the records of the Kirk session date from 1671. There is also a United Free church, a Gaelic chapel (Church of Scotland) and an Episcopal Mission church. The Town Hall, an ancient building, in Church street, contains an old bell believed to be one of the many captured by Sir Charles L. Ross, of Balmagown, during the French war, and presented to several northern towns. In the burgh is a good public hall, erected by the inhabitants of Cromarty as a drill hall and place for entertainments. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Beneath the South Souter is a chasm, called "Charlie's Seat," and a petrifying stream called the "Dropping Cave." Near the North Souter are several snoken rocks, termed the "Kings' Sons," so named from the tradition of three kings' sons having been drowned near these rocks when on their way from Denmark, and to their memory were erected three obelisks, one in the parish of Nigg and two in the parish of Fearn. On an eminence immediately behind the town is a column 40 feet high, surmounted by a full-sized figure, to the memory of the late Hugh Miller (d. 1856), the eminent geologist, and author of the "Testimony of the Rocks," who was a native of Cromarty. Mr. Handyside Ritchie, of Edinburgh, was the sculptor, and the monument was erected by public subscription in 1860, at a cost of £1,500. In the house in which Hugh Miller was born, 1802, is a small museum of fossils &c. Cromarty was anciently a royal burgh, but was disfranchised by an Act of the Scottish Privy Council, in compliance with the solicitation of Sir John Urquhart, a former proprietor of the estate of Cromarty; it now joins with Kirkwall, Wick, Dornoch, Tain and Dingwall in returning one member to Parliament. The present proprietor is Col. Walter Charteris Ross C.E., J.P. of Cromarty House. The area of the parish comprises 8,017 acres; burgh, 133 acres; rateable value, burgh £2,823, landward £5,105; the population in 1901 was 1,848, including 1,242 in the burgh.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 142.

DINGWALL

DINGWALL is the county town of Ross and Cromarty, and a parish, royal burgh and market town, 178 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh, 21 north-west from Inverness, 20 south-west from Cromarty, 13 south-west from Invergordon and 9 north from Beuly, with a station at the junction of the Inverness and Thurso and Dingwall and Kyle of Lochalsh sections of the Highland railway. The town consists chiefly of one main street and several smaller ones, and is situated in the eastern part of Ross-shire, on a fertile plain near the western extremity of the Firth of Cromarty, which is navigable at high water for light craft as far as the town, and about three-quarters of a mile from the town is a pier or jetty, for vessels discharging their cargoes or taking in freight. Dingwall was erected a royal burgh by Alexander II. and its charter was renewed by James IV.; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and ten councillors, and joins with Cromarty, Tain, Dornoch, Wick and Kirkwall in returning one member to parliament. Water is supplied from springs above the town and gas from works in Tulloch street, and the town is also lighted by electricity from works at Glenskaich. It is supposed that at some remote period Dingwall was much more extensive than at present, as causeways and foundations of buildings have been found some hundreds of yards from the site of the present town. With the exception of a distillery, there are no manufactories or large works. The Town House, near the centre of the burgh, was entirely rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1905. The Carnegie Free Library, adjoining the Town House, was erected in 1903. In the High street are branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. Dingwall is the headquarters of the 4th Territorial Battalion of the Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, The Duke of Albany's) Regiment. The Established church is a plain structure on the north side of the town. Near the church is an obelisk, 57 feet in height, erected in 1703 to Sir George Mackenzie bart. and first Earl of Cromarty, who died 17 Aug. 1714, and, in accordance with his last injunction, was buried here. The Episcopal church, in Castle street, originally built in 1797 and rebuilt in 1872 after being destroyed by fire, contains several fine stained windows and a handsome organ; it affords 128 sittings, and has attached St. Anne's Mission church at Strathpeffer. The Roman Catholic church, in the same street, dedicated to St. Lawrence, was opened July 29, 1902. The old Free church, in the same street, is now occupied as offices by the "Ross-shire Journal" newspaper. The new Free church, built by the late Rev. Dr. John Kennedy, is in High street; it is a handsome edifice, and has seats for 1,000 people. The United Free church, erected in 1909, in Castle street, has 500 sittings. The Free Presbyterian church is in Greenhill terrace. The Ross Memorial Hospital, in Ferry road, is a small stone building, erected in 1873. A little to the east of the town stand the County Buildings, completed in 1845, at a cost of £5,000, and containing a county room, a sheriff court room and county clerk's and other offices, together with a prison; here the County Council meet. On Mitchell hill is a square tower, of Mediaeval character and 100 feet high, erected as a national memorial to the late Brig.-Gen. Sir Hector Archibald Macdonald K.C.B., D.S.O., A.D.O. (d. 1903), whose birthplace is within a few miles of Dingwall, at a cost of about £3,000, and inaugurated May 23rd, 1907, by the Marquess of Tullibardine M.V.O., D.S.O. A memorial cross of pink granite has been erected at the top of High street by the officers, non-commissioned officers and men, past and present, of the Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Burghs), The Duke of Albany's Regt. to their comrades who died in South Africa 1899-1902. There is an extensive distillery, owned by the Ferintosh Distillery Co. Limited, Tulloch Castle is the seat of Duncan Davidson esq. D.L., J.P. The market is held every Wednesday. Duncan Davidson esq. of Tulloch; Col. James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Braban Castle, and William Daziel Mackenzie M.A., D.L., J.P. of Fawley Court, Henley-on-Thames, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,314 acres; burgh, 431 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £13,452, and of the landward portion of the parish, £4,396; total, £17,848; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,576, and in 1901, 2,758, including 2,518 in the burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,789. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1893" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish has been transferred to Fodderty. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 434.

FODDERTY is a parish 20 miles in length by a breadth varying from 1 to 5, bounded by Edderton on the north, Dingwall and Kiltarn on the east, Dingwall on the south, and Contin on the west, and is intersected by part of the river Blackwater; it is in the Dingwall small debt court district; the village is 4 miles west from Dingwall, and about 1 west from Auchterneed station on the Strone branch, and 2 north-west from Strathpeffer terminal station, also on a branch of the Highland railway, both being in the parish. The Dingwall and Skye railway traverses part of the parish. There are Established and United Free churches.

Loch Ussie, about 1½ miles square, and Ben Wyvis Mountain, 3,429 feet in height, are in the parish. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, a part of Dingwall parish was transferred to Fodderty. Coull, situated in this parish, is the property and residence of Sir Arthur G. R. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. Brahan Castle, the ancient and princely residence of the Seaforth family, is the property and residence of Colonel James Alexander Francis Humberston Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth. This beautiful seat is situated below the southern slope of Knock-Farrel, and commands an extensive and varied prospect, comprehending the partially wooded and cultivated courses of the river Conon and Orrin. The principal landowners are the Countess of Cromartie; Col. J. A. F. H. Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Seaforth, and William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. of Fawley Court, Henley-on-Thames. The soil is fertile and well cultivated. The area is 46,600 acres; rateable value, £15,424; population in 1901, 1,727 civil and 1,366 ecclesiastical.

STRATHPEPPER (which sec) and Maryburgh are villages, and Auchterneed is a hamlet in this parish. The population of Maryburgh in 1901 was 354.

FORTROSE is a small town and royal,
police and contributory parliamentary burgh and quoad sacra parish out of the civil parish of Rosemarkie; it is 10 miles north from Inverness, 21
south from Tain and 18 north-northeast from Beauly, situated on the southern slopes of the Black Isle, on the north side of the inner part of the Moray Firth, nearly opposite to Fort George, from which it is distant 2½ miles. In November, 1893, a branch line of the Highland railway was opened, commencing at Muir
of Ord, and having its terminus at Fortrose, which has advantages for sea-bathing. James II. in 1445 united the town in burghal privileges with the neighboring village of Rosemarkie, under the name of Fort-Ross, which has since been softened down into Fortrose. It reverted to the Crown at the Reformation, and was in consequence enfranchised and erected into an independent royal burgh in 1590, and again annexed to Rosemarkie in 1592 under the name of the Royal Burgh of Fortrose. The burgh is now governed by a provost, three baillies, a dean of guild and nine councillors; and it joins with Inverness, Forres and Nairn in sending one member to Parliament. The Bishopric of Ross was founded by King David I. between the years 1124 and 1128, but in 1762 was united to Caithness, and in 1769 to Moray,
and is now part of the consolidated dioc-
cese of Moray, Ross and Caithness, formed in 1864. The cathedral here, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Boniface, is an edifice of red sandstone, in the purest form of the Decorated style, and consisted, when entire, of choir with aisles, nave of four bays with aisles, western tower, quasitransepts, lady chapel, crypt and chapter house, but the only portions now standing are the south aisle of the chancel and nave and the detached chapter house: in the aisle are several ancient tombs of the 14th century, and a piscina. There are established, United Free and Free churches. The Episcopal church of St.
Andrew, built in 1828, affords 190 sitings; the rectory, net value £153, has been held since 1835 by the Rev. Canon Spence Ross. Attached is the Mission station of Cromarty. The town has an excellent harbour, built by the parliamentary commissioners, and a jetty about 250 yards in length, erected at a cost of £3,000. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland in the town, which depends for its prosperity on agriculture and fishing,
and its advantages as a summer and seaside resort. The area of the burgh is 510 acres; rateable value, £5,129; the population of the royal burgh in 1901
was 1,178; police burgh, 1,065; ecclesiastical parish, 664. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911
was 171.

Post, M. O. & T. Office (letters should

GAIRLOCH is a large parish and village, in the small debt court district of Dingwall, 29 miles north-west from Achnasheen station on the Dingwall and Skye
section of the Highland railway, 52 northwest from Dingwall, 30 north-east from Portree and 45 south-east from Stornoway.
The parish is about 40 miles in length by from 16 to 20 in breadth, on the west coast of Ross-shire, having about 20 miles of coast line on the east of the Minch, between the hills of Duodonnell
and Torridon; bounded on the north-east
by Lochbroon, on the east by Contin, and on the south by Applecross and Lochcarron,
and is intersected for 12½ miles by Loch Maree and by some smaller lochs, as well as by the rivers Grudie, Relugan, Kerry
and Lungard and some rivulets. Here is an Established church, a Free church and a Free Presbyterian church. There is a branch here of the Bank of Scotland,
and there are large hotels at Gairloch, Kilchoewe and Loch Maree. The soil is fertile and mostly in cultivation, with some good plantations and deer forests.
The parish abounds in mountains, lochs
and heaths, and has some beautiful scenery and an abundance of game of all descriptions. The three highest mountains are Ben Stioch, 3,217 feet, Ben Eay, 3,160
feet, and Ben Alligin, 3,105 feet high.
The principal landowners are Sir Kenneth
J. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. of Gairloch, the Marquis of Zeland K.T., P.C. and Osrood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. of Inverewe. Acreage, 200,646; rate-able value, £11,928; population of the civil parish in 1801, 4,181, and in 1901, 3,797, and in the ecclesiastical, 1,961.

AULTREA, Strath. Badaehro and Kialoche are small villages in this parish.

GLENSHIEL is a parish and village in Dingwall small debt court district, 21 miles south from Strom Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway. The parish is about 25 miles in length, by a breadth varying from 1 to 8. Loch Duich, a sea loch, is the north-west boundary of the parish, which is bounded on the south-west and east by Inverness, and on the north by Kintail; the river Shiel and the Clunie water take their rise in the parish. In the village are Established and Free churches. Ben More, or Ben Fhada mountain, 3,505 feet high, one of the loftiest in the county, is in the parish. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Sir James Thompson Mackenzie bart. of Glenmuick, Aberdeenshire; James Ewan Bruce Baillie esq. M.V.O., J.P. of Dochfour and Ewen Macrae esq. of Salem House, Crown drier, Inverness. Acreage, 57,320; rateable value, £23,367; population in 1901, 343.

INVERGORDON is a police burgh and seaport town in the parish of Rosskeen and Eastern district of the county, 12 miles south-south-west from Tain, 13 north-north-east from Dingwall and 4½ west from Cromarty, with a station on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway; it lies on the northern point of the entrance to the inner or narrower portion of Cromarty Firth. There is steamer communication from the town to Cromarty and a pier was erected in 1821 at the expense of the county and the Government, so that boats could land their passengers at any time of the tide. The late proprietor, R. B. ZE, McLeod esq. of Cadboll, at his own expense constructed a harbour in 1828. In 1857, large wooden piers were built extending several feet further into the channel, and which admitted of the steamers plying with Leith, London &c. coming alongside; the extension, however, of railway communication to the town in 1863 has diverted a large proportion of this traffic. The bay is very commodious and safe, and has good anchorage. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The United Free church is a handsome cruciform edifice, with a tower and spire about 140 feet in height. In High street there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland Bank Limited. The Town Hall, also in the High street, opened in April, 1871, is a building in the Italian style with a pediment displaying a figure of Neptune, accompanied by various symbolical sculptures. The manufacture of hemp was once carried on in this town, but the principal industry at present is a bone crushing and manure manufacturing establishment, which together with the timber yards give employment to a number of workpeople. There is also a naval coaling station here. The principal hotel is the "Commercial," in High street. In 1864 the town was taken under the provisions of the Lindsay Police Act. The area of the burgh is 99 acres; rateable value, £3,836; population in 1901, 1,047.

KILTEARN is a large parish and village, in Dingwall small debt court district, the parish being about 18 miles long by 5 wide, and bounded on the north by the Ault Graat water, extending on the south to Cromarty Frith. The village is about 2 miles north from Fowls station and 1 south from Novar station, both in the parish, on the Tain and Dingwall section of the Highland railway, 6 north from Dingwall and 7 south-west from Invergordon. Here are Established and Free churches. Loch Glass, about 4½ miles long and 1 broad, is in the parish, through the southern part of which runs the Skiach water, which flows into Cromarty Frith near the village. Amongst the objects of interest in the neighbourhood are the Falls of Conaas, and the grave of the Rev. Thomas Hogg, of Kiltearn, a distinguished northern Covenanter. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Hector Munro bart. A.D.C., J.P. (Lord Lieutenant), of Foulis Castle; The Right Hon. Ronald Craufurd Munro-Ferguson P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P. of Novar House, Evanton; Rupert Shoobred esq. of Wyvis, and Mrs. Jackson, of Swordsale. The area of the parish is 27,792 acres; rateable value, £10,061; population in 1901 was 1,257, including 489 in Evanton.

EVANTON is a rural village in this parish, about a mile from the parish church, on the north side of Cromarty Bay, and sheltered by a row of trees from the sea breeze. A Mission Hall in connection with the parish church was erected here in 1894. About 2 miles to the westward is Foulis-Ferry, used for loading grain, timber and cattle, and a mile north-east of the village is a deep ravine called "The Black Rock of Novar," supposed to have been formed at some very early period by a mighty convulsion of nature. The population in 1901 was 489.

KINCARDINE is a large parish and village in Easter Ross poor combination and Tain small debt court district, about 13 miles north-west from Tain and 13 west from Dornoch. There are stations on the Inverness and Thurso section of the Highland railway at Bonar Bridge, 1 mile west, and Culrain, 4 miles north-west from the church, both within the parish, which is about 25 miles in length; the breadth varies from 6 miles in the east to 15 in the west; it is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth and rivers Oykel and Kye, on the south by Contin, Alness, Fodderty and Rosskeen, on the east by Edderton and Rosskeen, and on the west by Lochbroom and Assynt. There are Established, Free and United Free churches. The parish contains several small lochs, and the Carron water runs through the centre of the parish, flowing into the Kyle near Bonar Bridge. There are also several small rivers in the parish. The principal landowners are Sir Charles Henry Augustus Frederick Ross bart. D.L. of Balnagown; Sir Kenneth James Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Gledfield House, Ardgay; Alexander Littlejohn esq. D.L., J.P. of Invercharron; Francis T. Gervens esq. of Armat; Col. Henry Platt, of Gruinards; William E. Gilmour esq. J.P. of Rose Hall, Invershin; C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. J.P. of Ardross Castle, and the Dowager Duchess of Sutherland, of Culrain Lodge. The area is 153,054 acres; rateable value, £13,423 9s. 2d.; population of the civil parish in 1891, 1,417, and in 1901, 1,265 civil and 1,077 ecclesiastical.

ARDGAY is a village in the parish of Kincardine, and in the immediate vicinity of Bonar Bridge station on the Highland line, situated on the north border of Ross-shire. It has a Public Hall and a good hotel. A deed was granted in the year 1688 to erect the village into a burgh of barony, but this was never carried into effect.

CULRAIN. Gledfield, Oykel, Donne and Brae are small hamlets in this parish.

LOCHALSH is a parish, in the Dingwall small debt court district, containing four stations on the extended line of the Highland railway, 53 miles south-west from Dingwall and 30 south-east from Portree. It is a large parish, being 28 miles in length and 8 in breadth, on the west coast of Ross-shire and on the shores of Loch Carron, Loch Alsh and Loch Long, intersected by the river Aven Lunge for about 12 miles, and by the river Attadale for 6 miles, and contains numerous small streams and trout lochs, the two principal being Scavan and Doule, both being about 1½ miles long. It is bounded on the north by Contin, on the south by Loch Alsh and east by Urray and Kintail. At Kyle, on Loch Alsh, is an Established church. In the parish are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, respectively at Kyle and Ardelve, and one of the Bank of Scotland at Kyle, and there are hotels at Kyle, Balmacara and Ardelve. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in fishing. The soil in the east end of the parish is fertile, whilst the west end is mountainous, but covered in some parts by deer forests and plantations, the former abounding in red deer and game. Near PLOCKTON, which is about 4 miles from Strome, is Duncraig Castle, one of the seats of Sir Kenneth J. Matheson bart. D.L., J.P. of Lochalsh, the principal landowner. Acreage, 49,532; rateable value, £5,634; population in 1901, 1,820 civil and 976 ecclesiastical parish.

KYLE, in this parish, on the shore of Loch Alsh, is the terminus of the Dingwall and Skye railway, which has been extended to this place from Strome Ferry, and is now the most direct route to Portree, to which place steamers ply regularly, and from thence there is communication by David MacBrayne Limited steamers with Stornoway, Glasgow &c. The Established church, a building of stone, was erected in 1839, at a cost of £650; here is also a Free church.

BALMACARA and Plockton are villages, and Strome Ferry, Ardelve, Reraig, Duirinish, and Auchtertyre hamlets in this parish. At PLOCKTON are Established, Free and United Free churches; at STROME FERRY are Established and United Free churches, and there is a Free church at Ardelve. The population of Plockton village, 1901, was 855.

GILLEAN ISLAND, on which is a lighthouse, is in this parish. The population in 1901 was 8.

LOCHBROOM is a large parish, in Easter Ross poor combination and small debt court district of Dingwall, 25 miles north-west from Garve station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland line, and 33 north-west from Dingwall; it is about 50 miles in length and from 8 to 22 in breadth, and lies on the shore of Loch Broom, an inlet of the sea from which it takes its name, in a picturesque and mountainous district. It is bounded by Assynt in Sutherlandshire, on the north, Kincardine and Contin on the east, Gairloch on the south, and the Minch on the west, and is intersected by the rivers Achall and Ullapool and some smaller streams; Loch Broom extends inland for about 8 miles, and Little Loch Broom about the same distance, and in the parish are several smaller lochs, including Loch Lurgan, Loch Anchall, 2 miles long and 1 broad, and Loch Skinaskink, and the mountain peaks known as An Teallach, 3,474 feet high, Ben Deargum, 2,974 feet, the Dundonnell Hills and other ranges. The Summer Isles, Isle Tanera, Isle Martin, Priest Isle and numerous islets form part of this parish. Fishing, principally for lobsters, is carried on to some extent. The number of fishing boats belonging to the district in 1909 was 350 of 1,378 tonnage, employing 1,078 men and boys. The value of the fish landed in 1909 was £28,757. The parish church stands at the head of Loch Broom, and was built in 1844, and there are also United Free, Free and Free Presbyterian churches. Four miles north-west of the parish church is Leckmeil, the residence of Francis D. Pirie esq. and to the south-east is Braemore House, overlooking Loch Broom, and situated on the spur of a hill, 600 feet above sea level. Deer forests cover a considerable portion of the parish. The principal landowners are Sibell, Countess of Cromartie; Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Dundonnell; Sir John Edward Fowler bart. of Braemore; the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. of Ardlair; William E. Gilmour esq. J.P. of Woodbank, Dumbartonshire; the trustees of the late Alfred Hugh M. Cotton esq. of Grunard, and Major James Matheson, of Lews. The area of the civil parish is 261,020 acres; rateable value, £13,858; population (1901), 3,207 civil, and 1,249 ecclesiastical.

The population of MARTIN ISLAND in 1901 was 33 and of Tanera Island 71.

NIGG is a parish and village in Easter Ross poor combination and in the small debt court district of Tain, about 9 miles south from Tain and 4 south from Nigg station on the Highland railway. The parish is bounded on the north by Fearn, south by Cromarty Firth, east by Moray Firth, and on the west by Nigg Bay and Logie Easter, and is 5 miles in length with a breadth of 3½. Here is an established church and two United Free churches. A third of the parish consists of its most interesting physical feature, the Hill of Nigg, rising to a height of 500 feet; from the highest point nine counties may be seen by the naked eye. The principal landowners are Col. Walter Charteris Ross C.B. of Cromarty, the Scottish Reversionary Co. Limited, 33 Charlotte square, Edinburgh; the trustees of the late Captain Andrew G. Reid; Sir Charles H. v. Ang, Frederick Ross bart. D.L. of Balnagown Castle; the trustees of the late Captain Andrew Gildart Reid, and George Ernest Romanes esq. of Pitcairnie. The area is 7,818 acres; rateable value, £5,847; population in 1891, 930, and in 1901, 892.

Nigg includes the fishing villages of SHANDWICK and BALNABRUACH.

POOLEWE is a fishing village and a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Gairloch; the village is 64 miles west from Dingwall, about the same distance south-east from Stornoway and 35 north-west from Achnasheen station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and is situated at the head of a fine bay called Loch Ewe. According to an inventory from the title deeds in the possession of the Gairloch family, the old name for the village of Poolewe was Clive. In 1619, a charter of registration in favour of the then proprietor was granted under the great seal, erecting Clive, on the water of Ewe, into a burgh of barony, and the harbour of Ewe into a free port, with power from year to year of electing a provost, bailies, besides other privileges, but it does not appear that any use was ever made of this charter. Since the opening of the Dingwall and Skye railway, there is regular communication by coach from the hotel at Achnasheen station to Kinlochewe, Gairloch, Poolewe and Aultbea. There are Established and United Free churches. Poolewe is part of the estate of Gairloch, the present proprietor being Sir Kenneth J. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. At Bualnaluib is a school, erected and endowed by Francis Harford Mackenzie esq. and now a board school. Loch Maree, about 2 miles distant, is about 13 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, and abounds with fish; this lake contains about thirty islands, from one of which, called Maree, the water takes its name; some of these are but little raised above water level and are covered with scattered firs and with thickets of birch, alder and holly, while they are separated by narrow sinuous channels; the northern margin of the loch presents a variety of scenery, consisting of rocky and wooded bays and creeks, crowned by overhanging cliffs and mountains. A fine view of the loch, embracing nearly its whole length, is obtained at Tollie, about two miles from Poolewe. Loch Maree is in part the property of Sir Kenneth J. Mackenzie bart. of Gairloch, and the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. The river Ewe, which is scarcely 2 miles in length, falls into Loch Ewe, and is the natural outlet of Loch Maree; the river has a rapid and turbulent course, and is noted for the abundance of its salmon. On a small island off the western shore of the lake are the ruins of a chapel, said to date from the 8th century, and in the rough burying ground in which it stands are several ancient tombstones, incised crosses and other carvings; here also is a consecrated well, whose waters are reputed to be a cure for insanity, and by an aged tree, on which have been affixed the miscellaneous offerings of pilgrims and supplicants. Inverewe is the residence of Osgood Hanbury Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. Area, 200,646 acres; the population of the quoad sacra parish in 1901, 1,836.

ROSEMARKIE is a parish and village in Black Isle poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dingwall, about 1 mile from Fortrose terminal station on a branch from Muir of Ord on the Highland railway and about 18 east from Dingwall. Rosemarkie and Fort George in Inverness-shire are connected by a ferry. The parish extends for 9 miles along the coast of the Moray Firth, and is 3 miles in breadth. The hills both on the north and south are for the most part arable, being in summer covered with verdure, and producing early and abundant crops. The coast all along between Rosemarkie and Cromarty is romantic, being bold and rocky, and as the country lies dry and has the benefit of fine sea breezes, the air is pure and salubrious. The parish church, completed in 1821 and renovated in 1897, is in the Late Gothic style. James Douglas Fletcher esq. D.L., J.P. of Rosehaugh and Ethie Avoch; Adam Roberts esq. of Raddery House, and the trustees of the late Mrs. Crosbie, of Flowerburn, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 6,675 acres; rateable value, landward, £4,035; burghal (Fortrose), £5,129; the population in 1901 was 1,465; of this number, 286 were returned as belonging to the village of Rosemarkie, the remainder being in the Fortrose burgh; the population in the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 801, including 23 in Black Isle Combination Poorhouse.

ROSSKEEN is a parish and village in the eastern district of the county, bounded on the north by Kincairdine and Edderton, on the east by Kilmuir Easter, on the south by the Firth of Cromarty, and on the west by Alness; the length of the entire parish is about 20 miles with a breadth varying from 3 to 5 miles. The lower part of the parish, which runs along the Firth, and for about 2 miles back, forms a gentle and easy access to the hills. The town was supplied with gas in 1872. The parish church, situated one mile west of the town of Invergordon, is a substantial building, erected in 1827, with 1,200 sittings. There are also United Free and Free churches. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in April, the first Tuesday in August, the second Tuesday in October and the third Tuesday in December. A hill called Knock-Navie, or Cold-hill, divides the lower from the higher part of the parish. Beyond the upper arable ground and inhabited glens is a very considerable range of mountains, applicable to no other purpose than that of pasturing sheep. The parish possesses some fine plantations, the chief of these belonging to the Ardross estate and Invergordon Castle. About 1 mile from the town of Invergordon is Invergordon Castle, the seat of Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. of Cadboll. In November, 1801, the centre of the mansion was accidentally destroyed by fire, but was rebuilt in 1873-4 on the old site in the Elizabethan style; in the park are some fine plantations. Ardross Castle is the property and residence of C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. F.R.A.S., J.P. Capt. R. W. Macleod, of Invergordon Castle; George Inella esq. J.P. of Newmore; the trustees of the late Roderick Mackenzie, of Kincaird; C. W. Dyson Perrins esq. and Andrew Mackenzie esq. of Dalmore, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 33,725; rateable value, landward, £13,033; burghal (Invergordon), £4,546; population in 1891, 3,480, and in 1901 was 3,460; of this number 1,047 were returned for Invergordon; the population of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,460.

SALTBURN, 1 mile east from Invergordon, is a hamlet in this parish. Letters are received through Invergordon & should have Ross-shire added to them

STRATHPEPPER is a modern village, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles west from Dingwall, in the parish of Foddery, and the terminus of the Strathpeffer branch of the Highland railway. There is also a station at Auchterneed, 2 miles north, on the Kyle of Lochalsh branch of the same line. The village has Established, Free and United Free churches, and also the Episcopal Mission church of St. Anne's, which seats 500 persons. Here also is a branch of the Bank of Scotland. Strathpeffer Mineral Wells are at the upper extremity of a fertile valley of that name, which stretches about six miles due west from Dingwall. In the summer months many people suffering from gout, rheumatism &c. visit these wells; numerous villas for invalid visitors have been erected near them, and there are three good hotels and three temperance hotels, and many of the adjacent farmhouses likewise furnish lodgings during the season from May to September. The springs rise through the shaly sandstone which is prevalent in the district, and at no great distance from the lofty mountain Ben Wyvis, one of the most conspicuous eminences in the North of Scotland, having an altitude of 3,429 feet. From the summit views may be obtained of the counties of Ross, Sutherland, Caithness and Inverness. The waters have long been known as medicinal, and an analysis of their composition was published by Mr. Donald Munro in the "Philosophical Transactions" for 1772. They were brought into considerable celebrity by Dr. Morrison, of Aberdeenshire, who affirmed that they were the strongest and most salubrious in Great Britain. They have subsequently been visited by Dr. T. Thompson, in May 1828, who analysed the water, which is strongly charged with sulphuretted hydrogen gas. Large additions have been made to the spa establishment, which consists of a pump room, hot and cold baths, a pavilion and reading room. Strathpeffer is bounded on the north by a high sandstone ridge, and on the south it is skirted by the steep green wooded acclivities of Knock-Farrel, one of the most extensive and best preserved vitrified forts (or ancient beacon hills) in the country. The public road bounds the grounds of Castle Leod, a castellated mansion and the seat of Major E. W. Blunt-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. The same road, on quitting the strath, runs by the wooded knolls of Coull, the property of Sir Arthur G. R. Mackenzie bart. D.L., J.P. and the manse, village and island plain of Contin, beyond which are the shores of Loch Achilly and the sheepwalks of Comrie to the cascades of the Conon, or, holding more to the north, the falls of Rogie, on the Blackwater, which flows from the upland lake and moors of Strathgarve. Nearer to the mineral spa is a walk through the lawns and pleasure grounds of Braham Castle. The population of the village in 1901 was 354.

STROME FERRY, see LOCHALSH.

TAIN, a royal, police and contributory parliamentary burgh and a market town, is a parish in Easter Ross, and has a Union Combination Poorhouse for that district. The town has a station on the

Highland railway, and is 46 miles north from Inverness and 26 north-by-east from Dingwall, occupying a gentle acclivity about a mile from the Firth of Dornoch, across which arm of the sea ferries have been established. The ancient Gaelic name of the town is Bailie Dhuthaich boch head, signifying "The pretty town of St. Duthic" (or Duthus), to whom the old church and chapel in the parish had been dedicated. A rich agricultural district surrounds the town, which is old and irregularly built, but has received considerable improvements and additions. The parish extends 8 miles along the south shore of the Dornoch Firth, by a breadth of 4 miles inland, and is bounded on the north by the Dornoch Firth, on the south by Logie Easter, on the east by Fearn and on the west by Edderton. The ground in general is flat, but towards the west is rather hilly; the district is tolerably well wooded and much improved by agricultural operations. The sea shore is flat and sandy. As a royal burgh, it is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and nine councillors, and unites with the northern district of burghs in returning one member to Parliament. A sheriff small debt court is held every Wednesday during session, and a justice of peace court every Thursday fortnight. The church of the Establishment is a quadrangular structure, with an embattled tower at each angle; it was renovated and reseated in 1896, at a cost of £700, and reconstructed in 1903, at a cost of £800, when a new organ and carved oak pulpit were provided. The United Free church was erected in 1892, at a cost of £6,000. There are also a Free Presbyterian and Free churches. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew will seat over 100 persons; attached to it is a Mission church at Dornoch and Tarbat House private chapel at Delny; the Rev. Angus Cameron has been priest in charge since 1905. The old chapel of St. Duthus, standing below the town near the railway station, was built about 1200; to this edifice Robert the Bruce's queen and her retinue fled for refuge, but were taken captive by the Earl of Ross and delivered up to the English. The chapel, founded by Thomas, Bishop of Ross, in 1423, is an elegant structure, and was used as a parish church until 1815, but was afterwards left unprotected for upwards of 40 years, and remained in a dismantled condition until its restoration in 1877 by Mr. John McLeod, then provost of Tain, and afterwards by his son, George McLeod, in 1882; it contains some stained windows in memory of families in the district, and monuments to Thomas Hogz and Patrick Hamilton, the Scottish martyrs, and likewise a replica of a finely carved oaken pulpit, presented to the people of Tain by the "good regent" Murray. St. Duthus enjoyed a great reputation as a saint, and in the 15th century many pilgrimages were made by royal and other personages to his shrine in Tain; these included James IV. who travelled hither with unusual expedition, resting only a short time by the way at the monastery of Pluscardine, and on his arrival bestowed upon the town of Tain extensive grants of land with other immunities: the inhabitants, hearing of his approach, constructed a hasty roadway over a peat moss within a few miles of the town, which is still called "the King's Causeway." The Royal Academy, in an open park at the west end of the town, was founded by royal charter in 1809, and opened in 1813. The cost of its erection having been raised by subscription: the Academy is conducted by a rector, who is classical master, and assistants. The Court House, previous to 1833, was used as a place of confinement for debtors, but in April of that year it was destroyed by fire, when three persons perished in the flames: the present Court House, erected on the old site, retains the ancient tower and bartizan. In the town is a large hall for assemblies and public meetings, and a good hotel called "The Royal." The Masonic Hall, in Manse street, was opened in March, 1896, and cost about £600. The Town Hall, a handsome building, has been reconstructed and decorated at the cost of Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, who also in 1903 established a Free Library. The trade here consists principally in the woaden manufacture and in distilling. There are branches

here of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and a savings bank. The principal corn and cattle markets are held every alternate Friday. In the year 1895 the ancient "Mercat cross" was restored by the late James Vass M.D. sometime provost. Loch Eye, 3½ miles south-east from the town, is well stocked with trout, and near it are the ruins of Lochlin Castle. There is a golf course of 18 holes, and a bowling green with a pavilion attached. Captain Roderick Willoughby Macleod D.L., J.P. of Caddell and Invergordon, ex-Provost Fowler and Count De Serra Largo are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 16,668 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £5,371 7s. 9d. and of the burgh, £7,654 19s.; total, £13,526 6s. 9d.; population in 1891, 2,818, and in 1901 was, royal burgh, 2,076; police and parliamentary burgh, 1,645; civil and ecclesiastical parish, 2,756. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 300.

INVER and Inver-Skinnerton form a village, principally in Tain parish, but partly in that of Tarbat; the population in 1901 was 265.

TARBAT is a small parish and village, in the extreme north-easterly part of the county, 8 miles north-east from Fearn station on the Highland railway; the parish forms a peninsula, 7 miles by 3, between the Moray and Dornoch Firths, and contains, besides its own kirktown, the villages of Portmahomack, Rockfield and part of that of Inver; it is in the poor combination of Easter Ross and the small debt court district of Tain. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches. On Tarbat Ness, the extreme north point of the peninsula, there is a lighthouse. Rockfield is the residence of Finlay Munro esq. J.P. who, together with Captain Roderick W. Macleod, of Cadboll, and Col. William Hugh Eric Murray J.P. of Geanies, is the principal landowner. The area is 6,787 acres; rateable value, £6,467; population in 1901, 1,358.

ULLAPOOL is a seaport and fishing village and quoad sacra and parliamentary parish, erected from the civil parish of Lochbroom; it is in the small debt court district of Dingwall, but justice of the peace courts are held in the village, which is 61 miles west-by-north from Inverness, 45 north-west from Dingwall and 30 north-east from Poolewe; it is situated on the north shore of Loch Broom, about 5 miles from the mouth, and is 32 miles north-west from Garve station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway. It was begun under the auspices of the British Fishery Society in 1783, and has gradually increased since that period. It possesses a spacious and excellent harbour, and there is a good quay. Steamers sail regularly to Stornoway, in Lewis, and to Glasgow. There is an Established church, and a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The herring fishery is the main dependence of its inhabitants; shoals of this fish appear on the coast of Loch Broom as early as May, but they do not enter the lochs and arms of the sea so as to be of benefit to the inhabitants until the month of September, when their appearance is anxiously looked for and great preparations made to profit by them; when the shoals set fairly in, and remain in the lochs and bays, the number taken is very great, and of the very best quality. Ullapool, in the season, is attended from all parts of the east and west coast by curers, and during this period the place presents a very animated appearance. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31, 1903, was 355, aggregating 4,350 tons, employing 1,150 men and boys. The late Hugh Mackenzie esq. of Ardross and Dundonnell, opened up new roads in various directions. Ullapool is the property of Major Duncan Matheson, of Lewis Castle, Stornoway, and is visited in summer by sportsmen from all parts to enjoy the fishing and shooting. There are two hotels, the "Royal" and "Caledonian," the former having a small grouse shooting attached, and visitors to both hotels have the privilege of free trout fishing on the river Ullapool. The Drill Hall is also used for meetings. The population of the village in 1901 was 705, ecclesiastical parish, 1,958.

URRAY is an extensive parish, in the small debt court of Dingwall, 15 miles in length and 9 in breadth. The village stands on the road from Inverness, Beauly and Gurge, and is about 2 miles west from Muir-of-Ord station on the Highland railway, 5 south from Dingwall
and 3½ north from Beauly, and has Established, Free and United Free churches.
The rivers Orrin and Meig both have their source in the western part of the parish, and are confluent with the Strath
Garve at its eastern extremity. Scour Rudd Mountain, 3,254 feet high, is on the Inverness-shire border, and Scour Vullin in the northern part of the parish.
Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52
and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 65, parts of Contin and Fodderty, in this county, and of Kilmoreak parish, in Inverness-shire, have been transferred to Urray. Major William Stirling D.L., J.P. of Fairburn; Col.
James Alexander Francis H. Stewart-Mackenzie D.L., J.P. of Brahan Castle;
James Evan Bruce Baillie esq. M.V.O.,
J.P. of Dochfour, and Mrs. Mackenzie Gillanders, of Highfield, are the principal landowners. The area is 72,486 acres;
rateable value, £13,936; in 1901 the population was 2,094 in the civil, and 2,037 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ROXBURGHSHIRE

THIS county, lying on the south-eastern border of Scotland, is bounded on the north-east, east and south-east by the county of Northumberland and by a small corner of Cumberland, south and south-west by Dumfries-shire, west by Selkirk and Edinburghshire and north by Berwickshire; the shape of the county is extremely irregular, and it measures from its extreme point on the south to that part which is inserted between the counties of Berwick and Edinburgh upwards of 40 miles; and from east to west, near the centre, about 30 miles. The area of the shire contains 665.7 square miles, or 426,060 acres of land, and 2,437 of water. The county is divided by its waters into several districts, of which the chief and largest is Teviotdale, being that division drained by the Teviot and its tributary streams; this district comprehends about 500 square miles. Liddesdale, which forms the south-west corner of the county, comprehends the Alpiæ territory, which is drained by the Liddle and its tributaries, and contains 120 square miles. The third division lies between the Gala and Leader streams, measuring 26 square miles; and the fourth, which is situate north of the Tweed, is included in "the Merse," and comprehends 27 square miles. The population in 1891 was 53,500, and in 1901, 22,349 males and 26,455 females; total, 48,804. The inhabited houses in 1891 were 10,863, and in 1901, 10,845. In size Roxburgh is the twelfth, and in population the sixteenth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History &c.—The earlier traditions assign this part of Caledonia to the Gadeni and Ottadini, and after being occupied by the Romans, as remains of forts, camps and roads show, from A.D. 79 to 410, it fell into the joint possession of the Strathclyde Britons, on the west, and the Bernicians on the east, to whom succeeded in 573 the kings of Northumbria, then embracing the country between the Forth and Humber and across from the German Ocean to the Wigtonshire coast; to this period belongs St. Boisil, the head of the monastery at Old Melrose, after whom the town of St. Boswells is named. This county shared the shifting fate of the Northumbrian kingdom up to 954, when it was reduced to an earldom, and in the next century Malcolm Ceannmor got back the present border counties for Scotland, and in or about 1157, under Malcolm IV. the border line was definitely settled, and from that time forward this border county had to bear the burden of the various disputes between the sovereigns of the two kingdoms. In 1215 John burnt Roxburgh, and in 1292 the English court of King's Bench sat at Roxburgh, and early in the 13th century, Edward II. held court in the same town and a little later the English burnt Dryburgh abbey; in 1460 Roxburgh, which had been held by the English for 50 years, was recaptured by the Scots and dismantled. In 1566 Queen Mary held a court at Jedburgh and rode thence to Hermitage Castle to see her favourite, Earl Bothwell. In 1715 the Highlanders held Kelseo for a few days on their way into England, and in 1745 Prince Charles stayed a night at Kelseo. The district is intersected by Roman roads in various directions, and another class of antiquities belonging to the county are towers or castles; among them the castle of Jedburgh, that of Roxburgh and Hermitage Castle (in Liddesdale). The district was likewise famed for its religious edifices, which included the abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose and Kelseo.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The southern part of Roxburghshire is very mountainous, and throughout the whole territory there is little land absolutely flat. The following are the principal hills, with their respective altitudes above the level of the sea:—Cheviot, 2,682 feet; Anchopecairn, 2,382; (Hill Hill, Millenwood Fells and Windhead Fells, each 2,000; Todhope Fell, 1,830; Carter Fell, 1,602; Meggs Hill, 1,480; Ruberslaw, 1,392; Eildoo Hills, 1,330; Dunning, 1,021; Minto Hills, 858; and Minto Craigs, 649. The soil of the county is various, and much of it exceedingly fertile; in some parts a rich loam, in others, gravel and clay; the heavy clayey soil occupying the higher grounds, while loam occurs near the beds of rivers and rivulets. In Liddesdale there is much mossy land. It has been ascertained that so early as the 12th century the district produced great quantities of corn, and the amount of barley then ground at the mills exhibited the progress made in this branch of commerce. Under the intelligent monks the agriculture of the county arrived at considerable perfection; and they introduced the knowledge of horticulture. Apples and pears are cultivated in the orchards of Melrose, Jedburgh and Kelseo. Excellent crops of wheat, barley and oats are now grown, as are also potatoes, peas, beans and turnips, the latter serving as food for the great numbers of sheep and cattle that are reared, and for the disposal of which large stock sales are held at Hawick, Kelseo and Newtown St. Boswells.

The chief crops in 1910, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," are: oats, 27,354 acres; barley or here, 11,582; wheat, 342; the total corn crops being 39,562 acres; turnips and swedes, 20,397 acres; potatoes, 1,238; cabbage, 267; rape, 381; vetches or tares, 296; total green crops, 22,911;—clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 8,568 acres; not for hay, 39,839 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 7,388; not for hay, 60,178 acres. The total area of land is 426,028 acres; heath and mountain land (used for grazing), 221,453 acres; woods and plantations, 17,069; small fruit, 67; orchards, 80.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS.—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 181; above 5 and not exceeding 50 acres, 532; above 50 and not exceeding 300 acres, 364; exceeding 300 acres, 205; total, 1,282.

The live stock comprised: 3,755 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 543; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 4,663; other cattle, 13,386; ewes kept for breeding, 215,932; other sheep, one year and above, 71,684; under one year, 247,893; sows kept for breeding, 502; other pigs, 2,227.

The mineralogy is neither valuable nor varied. Between the years 1700 and 1770 coal was discovered in the hill called Carter Fell, in this county, near the borders of Northumberland, but though wrought for some time it was ultimately abandoned; another seam was subsequently found near the south-eastern portion of Liddesdale, from which little benefit has been derived beyond that detached district. Various attempts have been made to find coal in different places in the county, but the inhabitants are still supplied from Dumfries-shire, Edinburghshire, or Northumberland. The only mineral raised in 1909 was igneous rocks, 24,777 tons. The manufactures of Roxburghshire do not vary much. The staple of the county is the woollen trade, the seats of which are at Hawick, Jedburgh and Kelseo, where flannels, blankets and tartans, woollen cloth, lambs' wool yarn, and hosiery are extensively produced. The salmon fisheries of the Tweed are of consequence, and yield handsome rents.

Rivers and Railways.—The principal streams of Roxburghshire are as follows:—the Tweed, which enters the county near the influx of the Ettrick and winds through the vales of Melrose and Kelseo, and in a course of 30 miles receives the Gala, the Allan, the Leader, the Teviot, and the Eden. The Teviot, which falls into the Tweed nearly opposite to Kelseo, after passing through a vale to which it gives name, and in a course of from 30 to 40 miles receives the Borthwick, the Ale, the Slitterick, the Rule, the Jed, the Oxnam, and the Kealie waters, with many subsidiary streamlets. The Liddle rises in and runs through the parish of Castletown; it gives the name of Liddesdale to a division of the county, and for a distance of 4 or 5 miles forms the boundary with England. The streams tributary to the Liddle are the Hermitage, the Tweeden, the Tennis, the Kershope, and the Blackburn. The Tyne and Coquet rivers rise in this county, and entering England, fall into the sea at Tyne-mouth and Coquet Isle. The lochs are small and few in number, the principal being Yetholm Loch, which is about a mile and a half in circumference. The railway system is in the hands of the North British company, and comprises a line from Carlisle, which entering the county at Kershopefoot station, passes through Hawick and St. Boswells Junction, and leaves the county at Bowland station, a little south-west of Lauder, on the Waverley route to Edinburgh; this has branches from Riccarton Junction to Sanghtree, and thence to Hexham and Newcastle; from St. Boswells to Kelseo, via Roxburgh, from which place a branch goes to Jedburgh; a second branch goes from St. Boswells to Earliston, Dunna and Berwick, and a line from Melrose to Falkirk; and the North-Eastern railway has a branch from Berwick-on-Tweed, via Coldstream, to join the North British at Kelseo.

Division, Representation &c.—The county comprises 30 civil parishes, and has 35 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of 2 others, all contained in the synod of Meræ and Teviotdale and presbyteries of Kelseo, Jedburgh, Earliston and Selkirk, except Castletown, which is in Langholm presbytery synod of Dumfries; it contains only one royal burgh—Jedburgh—which, previous to the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder in returning a member to Parliament, but was then merged in the county. The parliamentary constituency for 1911 numbered 6,114.

ANCRUM is a parish and village in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district, 5 miles in length by 5 broad, and bounded on the south-east for about 5 miles by the river Teviot, west by Minto and Lilliesleaf, north by St. Boswells and north-east by Maxton and Roxburgh. The village is pleasantly seated on the right bank of the water of Ale, about a mile above its junction with the Teviot, 2½ miles west from Jedfoot Bridge station on the Roxburgh and Jedburgh branch, 4 east from Belses section on the St. Boswells and Hawick section of the North British railway, 11 south-west from Kelso, 11 north-east from Hawick and 4 north-west from Jedburgh. There are Established and United Free churches. At a short distance east of the village stood Ancrum Castle; opposite to which, in the face of a perpendicular rock, are some caves, supposed to have been places of retreat in the troubles of former ages. In the early part of the last century the banks of the Teviot and Ale, at this spot, were the favourite haunt of the poet Thomson, author of "The Seasons," and one of the caves is still pointed out as a spot to which he frequently retired, and is called "Thomson's Cave." Wm. Buchan M.D. the celebrated author of "Domestic Medicine," issued in 1770, and other medical works, was born in this village in 1729, and died 25 Feb. 1805. Part of the Roman road that led from York to the banks of the Forth passes through the north corner of the parish, and the remains of a Roman encampment are discernible. Monteiot House, situated in a large park, is the residence of the Marchioness of Lothian. Chesters is the residence of Mrs. T. E. Ogilvie; Kirklands is the residence of Capt. Lord George William Montagu-Douglas-Scott. Ancrum House, the residence of Miss C. E. Scott, stands in a delightful position, and commands some picturesque prospects. The trustees of the late Sir William M. Scott bart. (d. 1902) are lords of the manor, and Sir George Brisbane Douglas D.L., J.P. of Springwood park, Kelso, and the Marquess of Lothian are the principal landowners. The population of the parish in 1891 was 1,241; 1901, 973; acreage, 10,302; rateable value, £12,664.

Longnewton is a hamlet in this parish. Post, M. O. & T. Office. Letters should have Roxburghshire added. Miss Ellen Black, postmistress. Delivery, 7.20 a.m.; dispatches, 2.45, 4.40 & 8 p.m.; no Sunday delivery.

BOWDEN is a parish, in Jedburgh poor combination and small debt court district of Melrose; it is about 5 miles from north to south and from ¾ to 6½ from east to west, and is bounded on the west by Selkirkshire, north by Melrose, east by St. Boswells and south by Lilliesleaf. The village stands in a high situation, through which a rivulet passes to the Tweed, and is a mile and a half from St. Boswells Railway station on the North British railway and 3 south from Melrose. The parish comprises a portion of the Eildon hills, from which the land gently declines in well cultivated and enclosed fields. Vestiges of a Roman military road, and of some stations or encampments, may be traced in this district, and at Holydean are remains of the ancient fortified residence of the Dukes of Roxburgh. Here are Established and United Free and Original Secession churches. A Public Hall was erected here in 1896 for meetings, concerts &c. Midholm, or Midlem, is a small village in Bowden parish, pleasantly situated on rising ground, 4 miles south-east from Selkirk. Kippilaw is the seat of Major John McNeill M.A. and Cavers Carre of Capt. Ralph Gervase Riddell-Carre. The Duke of Roxburgh K.T., M.V.O. who is also lord of the manor, and Major John McNeill are the principal landowners. Acreage of Bowden parish, 7,666; rateable value, £7,230; population in 1901, 668.

CAVERS is a parish in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district: it is of very irregular figure, and is about 13 miles long by about 2½ to 3½ broad, bounded on the west by Teviothead and Hawick, north-west by Minto, east by Jedburgh and Hobkirk, and south by Castleton. The church is about 2½ miles east from Hawick station on the North British railway, and there are also United Free and Evangelical Union churches. Shankend station on the Riccarton Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway is in the southern part of the parish, and near the station the line crosses the Longside brook by a viaduct. Maiden Paps Mountain, 1,677 feet high, is at the southern extremity of the parish. Cavers House, situated in a small park, is the property of Captain Edward Palmer Douglas J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner, but is now the residence of John Fyfe Jameson esq. The area of Cavers with Kirkton is 24,465 acres; rateable value of Cavers, including Kirkton and Denholm, £18,087; the population in 1891, 920, and in 1901, 1,250 civil, and 1,006 ecclesiastical.

DENHOLM is a small village in the parish of Cavers, 1½ miles south-west from Hassendean station on the Hawick and Melrose and Kelso sections of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Jedburgh, and 5 north-east from Hawick, pleasantly seated on a small plateau, shelving abruptly to the right bank of the Teviot, which is here crossed by a stone bridge erected in 1864. The village was much improved some years since, at a considerable expense, by the late James Douglas esq. of Cavers, and has a United Free church. There is a subscription library in the village, and a horticultural society was formed in 1849. John Leyden M.D. physician and poet, was born here in 1775, and a monument has been erected to him in the centre of the village green. The upper part of the district is hilly and pastoral, while the lower declines into rich arable fields. Population of Denholm in 1901, 349.

KIRKTON, or Kirktown, formerly a parish, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894" (57 and 58 Vict. c. 58), added for civil purposes to Cavers, but still remains a separate parish for ecclesiastical purposes, and has an Established church. It is 3 miles south-east from Hawick, and is in Hawick small debt court district. Capt. Edward P. Douglas and the War Office are the principal landowners. The population in 1901 was 244.

EDNAM (or Edenham) is a parish and village in Kello poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Kello, bounded on the north-east by Berwickshire, south-east by Spronston, south-west by Kello and north-west by Stichill. The village is pleasantly seated on the small river Eden, about 3 miles north-east from Kello station on the North British railway. Here is an Established church. Ednam was the birthplace, 11 Sept. 1700, of the poet James Thomson, author of "The Seasons," his father having been incumbent of the parish; he was educated in Jedburgh for the Church, but came to London in 1725 and published the poem "Winter," which was succeeded by "Summer" in 1737, by "Spring" in 1728, and in 1730 by "Autumn," and among other works was the "Castle of Indolence;" he died 27 Aug. 1748; a monument erected to the poet stands on an eminence near the village, and there is also one in Westminster Abbey. The Rev. Henry Francis Lyte, author of "Abide with me" and many other beautiful hymns, was also born here. The land of the parish ranks among the finest in this fertile district, and is exceedingly well cultivated and enclosed. This place affords the title of Viscount to the Ward family, Earls of Dudley. Sir Richard John Waldie-Griffith bart. D.L., J.P. of Hendersyde Park, who is lord of the manor, and W. A. Macfarlane-Grieve esq. M.A., F.S.A. of Impington, Cambs. are the principal landowners. The area is 3,849 acres; rateable value, £6,929; population in 1901, 523.

GALASHIELS, a parliamentary burgh and parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred wholly into Selkirkshire.

HAWICK

HAWICK is a manufacturing town, a free burgh of barony, police and parliamentary burgh, head of a poor combination and parish, 50 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Kello, 11 south from Selkirk and 45 north from Carlisle, on the high road between the last-named city and Edinburgh, on the Waverley route of the North British railway, for which there is a station not far from the centre of the town. This burgh, together with Galashiels and Selkirk, forms the Hawick parliamentary district, constituted in 1868, and returning one member. The town is seated at the confluence of the Slitrig with the Teviot rivers; by the former stream it is divided into two parts, which are connected by three stone bridges. The village of Wilton, on the north bank of the Teviot, is now included within the burgh boundaries, the river being spanned by two stone bridges, one re-erected in 1865, and several foot bridges. From its approximate position to the border of the two kingdoms, Hawick generally suffered severely from the incursions of the English, and was more than once burnt: one of the most destructive conflagrations occurred in 1570, when it was set on fire by the English under Sir Thomas Ratcliffe K.G.

3rd Earl of Sussex. The present town consists chiefly of one long line of streets, from which other thoroughfares diverge on the right bank of the Teviot; and on the left, or Wilton bank of the river, of another continuous line of streets, with minor thoroughfares extending from it. The environs of Hawick are much admired, the banks of the Teviot being extremely picturesque and delightful. The great increase of manufacturing establishments, together with the erection of extensive mills, and the enlargement of others, have conduced to the increase of the population.

The town is generally well paved and lighted with gas and electric light supplied by private companies; the water supply was in 1865 considerably increased by the introduction of the stream of the Allan, a mountain burn which joins the Teviot 5 miles above the town, and this was supplemented in 1881 by a supply from Dodburn in the same locality, at a total cost of about £32,000. A thorough system of drainage has since been carried out at a cost of £28,000. Hawick is a burgh of barony, independent of the lord of erection, and appears to have existed free from a very early period; but the documents of the burgh having been either lost or destroyed during the inroads of the English borderers, a charter was granted in the year 1537 by James Douglas, 7th baron of Drumlanrig, confirming to the burgesses such rights and lands as they formerly possessed; and in the month of May, 1545, this was confirmed by another charter, granted by Queen Mary. Under these grants the burgesses annually elected their magistrates, consisting of two bodies and two representatives of each of seven incorporated trades, who, with fifteen councillors (elected for life), managed all the municipal affairs of the town. In 1861, the inhabitants, with the concurrence of the existing Town Council, made application to Parliament for a reform of the municipal constitution, and the result was an Act which considerably extended the burgh boundaries, and provided that the councillors should be elected as in royal burghs, and have the whole management of the town property. The town is now divided into five wards, each of which returns three councillors, who retire by rotation. The council elect a provost, four bailies, a treasurer and town clerk, and, besides acting as custodians of the burgh property, exercise all the functions of commissioners of police. The provost and baillies are justices of the peace during their tenure of office. An efficient police force is established and a court for petty offences is held daily; the justices of peace court being held as required, and a sheriff's court is held on Wednesdays for the disposal of civil and criminal cases. There are five Established churches, seven United Free churches, Baptist and Congregational churches, and a Roman Catholic church: the Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert, built in 1858, will seat 375 persons: the rectory, net value £169, has been held since 1911 by the Rev. Alex. James Hay M.A. The Town Hall and Municipal Buildings were rebuilt in 1885-7, at a cost of £15,000. The Public Free Library, in North Bridge street, opened May 17, 1904, was presented to the burgh by Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. of Skibo Castle, Sutherlandshire, at a cost of £10,000; it contains 25,000 volumes, and a reading room. The Buccleuch Memorial Science and Art Institute was built by public subscription in 1886, at a cost of about £3,000, including a grant of £800 from the Science and Art Department; it is now used as a Technical college. The Exchange is a large and handsome building, erected in 1865. A combination poorhouse was built in 1857, at a cost of £4,000, to hold about 103 inmates. There are two Masonic Halls in the burgh: Lodge St. John's, No. 111, which received its charter in 1763, and Lodge St. James's, No. 424, which had its charter granted in 1663, and occupies a new hall in Union street. The Teviotdale Farmers' Club was established in 1859. The West Teviotdale Agricultural Society, established in 1835, holds an annual exhibition of live stock. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland. One of the principal hotels here, called "The Tower," in the Market place, was a fortress, belonging to the superior of the burgh, and the only building not destroyed by the forces of Lord Sussex: at a later period it was the frequent residence of Anne, Duchess of Buccleuch and wife of James, Duke of Monmouth E.G. executed in 1685.

Hawick ranks as one of the most considerable manufacturing and trading towns in the south of Scotland. There are two branches of the woollen manufacture—hosiery and Scotch tweeds, and for the production of both the town enjoys a fair reputation. The market is held on Thursday, and there are auction sales of stock on alternate Mondays, and at the special sales during the summer as many as 200,000 to 250,000 lambs are occasionally sold. The fairs are held on the first Thursday in March, the 17th of May and the 8th of November; any of these days happening on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the fair is held on the following Tuesday. A tryst is likewise held in October for the sale of horses, and a wool fair on the first Thursday after St. Boswell's fair in July. The town is noted for its great annual festival known as "the common riding," which has been regularly celebrated without intermission for at least three centuries; according to tradition, some young men of the town, in the year after the battle of Flodden (1514), having surprised a party of marauding English during the night, about 2 miles below the town, and slain the greater part of them, took possession of their colour. A fac-simile of this colour or ensign is now borne on the occasion by an unmarried man of the burgh, elected for the purpose, and called the "cornet," who accompanies the authorities in procession round the lands belonging to the town, of which a grant was made from the Laird of Drumlanrig, as a reward for the valour displayed in obtaining the standard. The estate known as Wilton Lodge was purchased by the Town Council and laid out as a public park at a cost of £14,000, and opened in May, 1890; in the park is a monument erected in honour of the men of Hawick and district who fell in South Africa during the Boer War, 1899-1902, and unveiled by Field-Marshal Earl Roberts K.G., V.C. Aug. 22, 1903. Stobs Castle is the property of the War Office, who have acquired a tract of land (amounting to 3,600 acres) in the vicinity of the Castle for the purpose of military training. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Hawick parish, now including

Wilton parish, comprises an area of 14,873 acres; burgh area, 842 acres; rateable value: burgh, £81,283; landward, £15,570; the population of the civil parish, including Wilton, in 1901 was 18,502, and of the ecclesiastical, 4,750 (including 52 in the combination poorhouse); of the wards—first or North High street, 3,741; second or South High street, 4,085; third or Slitrig, 2,748; fourth of Teviot, 3,302, and fifth or Wilton, 3,427; total, 17,303.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: St. John's, 4,871; St. Margaret's, 1,866; St. Mary's, 3,250.

The number of electors on the Hawick parliamentary register in 1910 was 2,732, and Hawick District of Burghs, 6,142.

WILTON, which forms part of the burgh, has now, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," been amalgamated for civil purposes with Hawick. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,765.

HETTON, see ROXBURGH.

HOBKIRK (or Hopekirk) is a mountainous parish, in Hawick poor combination and Jedburgh small debt court district, 7 miles south-east from Hawick station on the North British railway; it is 11 miles long and about $1\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, and adjoins the parishes of Oavers, Bedrule, Southdean and Castleton. Two small streams, feeders of the river Rule, rise in the southern part of the parish. Windburgh hill, 1,662 feet, Rubers Law hill, 1,392 feet and Bonchester hill, 1,069 feet high, are in this parish. There are established and United Free churches. The Public Hall and Reading Room, erected in 1900, at a cost of £2,000, was the gift of Sir Robert Laidlaw, of Warren House, Hayes, Kent, and a native of the parish. The principal landowner is William C. Elliot esq. of Harwood. Acreage, 16,209; rateable value, £8,098; population in 1901, 552.

JEDBURGH

JEDBURGH is a royal burgh, the county town, the seat of a presbytery, the head of a poor combination and a parish, 56 miles south-east from Edinburgh (by Lauder), 10 south-by-west from Kelso, the same distance north-east from Hawick and 12 north from the English border; a branch of the North British railway from Roxburgh terminates here after crossing the Jed, and has two stations, one near the river called Jedfoot Bridge, and the other in Jedburgh, which is situated on the left bank of the Jed, the name of which river, with "weorth," the Saxoo name for hamlet, formed its ancient appellation of "Jedeworth," or "Jedworth": in the course of time it became perverted to its present designation, but through a very extensive district in the south the old name is partly retained by pronouncing it "Jeddart," or "Jethart," names which are almost exclusively used by the common people. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 123, a part of Oxnam parish has been transferred to Jedburgh and part of the latter parish annexed to Oxnam. The town, which stands on the declivity of a hill, and surrounded on every side by others of considerable height, is in general well built, and consists of four principal streets which cross each other at right angles, and form a square or market place in the centre. The streets and principal shops are lighted with gas. Electric light has also been supplied to the town by a company since 1903, and there is an excellent water supply. The river Jed, which takes its rise in the Carter, one of the hills of the Cheviot range, and runs along the south-east side of the town, is crossed by no fewer than seven bridges within a mile. In recent times Jedburgh has been greatly improved, and many buildings have been erected. Jedburgh is a burgh of very ancient erection, and, from a charter granted by William the Lion, appears to have been a place of note previous to 1165. It has the honour of parochial precedence, being the oldest parish in Scotland of which any historical record has been transmitted to posterity. Prior to the Union it was a place of importance, and one of the principal towns in the south of Scotland. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and a council elected by the constituents resident within the burgh. The lords justiciary and lords commissioners of the jury court hold courts here for the south circuit (which includes the counties of Roxburgh, Berwick and Selkirk), generally in April and September, and the sheriff holds a court on Thursday for the dispatch of civil and criminal business, and a small debt court and the ordinary sheriff court is held on the same day: the justices of the peace hold their court on the first Tuesday in every month and when required, and here also the court of general quarter session sits. The burgh formerly joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Lauder in returning one member to Parliament, but under the "Redistribution Act, 1885," it is now merged in the county. There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1843, will seat over 190 persons. The County Building was erected in 1811, and the Public Hall in 1900. The Gaol and Bridewell, designated the "Castle," from its occupying the site of the ancient fortress, though no longer used as a prison, is a good battlemented structure, and from its elevated situation affords a delightful view. The manufacture of tweeds, blankets, plaidings &c. is carried on to a large extent, and in the neighbourhood are many corn mills. Considerable trade is derived from the orchards and gardens that surround the town. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March, 16th May if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, first Tuesday after 26th May, 20th July (or two days after St. Boswell's), 20th August if Tuesday, if not the Tuesday preceding, 25th September, and servants' hiring first Tuesday in November.

Golf links were opened near the town in October, 1893; the course is a nine-hole one and extends over a mile and a half.

Jedburgh Abbey, the principal architectural and antiquarian object of attraction in the town, stands between the houses and the river, and was founded for canons regular by David I. about the year 1118 or 1147; although for the most part in a ruinous condition, it still exhibits an outline of its original magnitude and magnificence; the principal parts now remaining are the nave of nine bays, 130 feet long, nearly the whole of the choir, with the south aisle, the centre tower 90 feet in height, and the north transept, which is the burial place for the Kerr family, Barons Jedburgh and Marquesses of Lothian: the lofty west front is divided into three portions by pilaster buttresses, the great door being round-headed and deeply recessed; above is a two-light Pointed window, and a martingold window in the gable: in February, 1286, Alexander III. was married here to his 2nd wife, Yolande, daughter of the Count de Dreux; at various periods the buildings were suffered by fire in the many conflicts of early times, and in 1559 they were reduced entirely to ruin; the structure has, however, since received considerable repairs. Hartridge House, which stands in a large park, is the seat of Lord Stratheden and Campbell J.P., D.L. The Marquess of Lothian is the principal landowner in the parish. Jedburgh parish comprises an area of 22,535 acres; rateable value, landward, £15,938; burghal, £12,247; population of the civil parish in 1891, 4,814; in 1901, 4,533 civil and 4,385 ecclesiastical. The population of the royal burgh in 1901 was 2,222 and of the police burgh, 3,136.

KELSO

KELSO is a burgh of barony, police burgh,
 market town, the head of a poor combination parish, 52 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 10 north-north-east from Jedburgh, 23 south-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 60 north-by-east from Carlisle and 6 west from the English border. It is connected with the North British railway from Hawick and Melrose and the North-Eastern railway from Newcastle and Berwick, by branches which approach within a mile of the town; it occupies an extensive plain on the north bank of the Tweed and opposite to the confluence of that river with the Teviot, and is surrounded on all sides by a delightful amphitheatre of wood-clad hills. Kelso is a place of very great antiquity, and has been the scene of many memorable events in early history: its border situation subjected it to the almost continual incursions of enemies: it was damaged in 1522, 1542 and 1544, and subjected to several desolating conflagrations, especially in 1636 and 1738: the town
 consists of a spacious central square,
 from which diverge four principal streets.
 The bridge which crosses the Tweed was built in the beginning of the 19th century, at a cost of about £18,000, after a plan by the late Sir John Rennie, the architect of Waterloo Bridge, London, of which it may be said to be a copy: it consists of five arches of equal span, and about 200 yards above it occurs the confluence of the Tweed and Teviot. The town is lighted with gas, and is well supplied with spring and river water. The government is vested in a provost and two bailies and a body of town councillors, who derive their powers from the Scotch Burgh Police Act. There are two Established churches, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, originally built in 1757 and rebuilt in 1663, will seat 314
 persons: the rectory, net value £200, has been held since 1893 by the Rev. Walter John Clarke M.A. of Worcester College,

Oxford. The cemetery is in Sheddon Park road. The Town Hall, on the east side of the square, erected in 1816, contains a portrait of an ancestor of the Duke of Roxburgh: in this hall periodical courts are held by the sheriff, justices of the peace and magistrates, as are also the meetings of the town council: in 1907 the hall was restored and renovated at considerable cost, and the rooms on the ground floor are now used as municipal offices. The Corn Exchange, which stands in the Wood market, is of much service to the farmers and merchants. The Public Free Library was opened in 1906, Dr.
 Andrew Carnegie contributing £3,500 toward the cost. There are also several other libraries, a museum and three public halls, and two news and reading rooms, an association called the Tweed-side Physical and Antiquarian Society,
 and several benefit societies. The principal branches of business are comprised in an extensive manure and oil cake
 factory, an iron foundry, and carriage building and fishing tackle works; there are also many corn mills in the neighbourhood. The domestic trade of Kelso is also well supported. The weekly market, chiefly for corn, and in the winter months
 for store cattle, is held on Friday, and a market for fat cattle and sheep is held once a fortnight, on Monday. An annual fair takes place on the 5th of August.
 There are branches here of the Bank
 of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Bank.
 The principal hotels are the "Cross Keys" and the "Spread Eagle." Two newspapers, the "Kelso Mail" (established in 1797), and the "Kelso Chronicle" (in 1832), are published in the town. The Dispensary, founded in 1777, has been reorganised, and employs a nurse for the treatment of poor persons either within
 the institution or at their own homes:
 there is also a Cottage Hospital, founded in 1907. There is a society for educating poor children. Sheddon Park, at the east end of the town, was presented to the inhabitants by Mrs. Robertson, of Ednam House, in memory of her nephew, who perished in the search for Sir John Franklin, the Arctic explorer. Steeple-chases are held in the spring, on a course about a mile to the northward.

 On the north bank of the Tweed is Floors
 Castle, the princely residence of the Duke of Roxburgh K.T., M.V.O. originally erected in 1718, and surrounded by a noble park. On the south bank of the Teviot is Springwood Park, the beautiful seat of Sir George Brisbane Douglas bart.
 D.L., J.P. In the centre may be seen the ancient border castle of Roxburgh, with the Eldon Hills in the distance. Eden
 Hall is the seat of Capt. George Sholto Douglas.
 The venerable remains of Kelso Abbey are entirely of the Transition Norman style, of which it is a splendid specimen; this nited abbey of SS. Mary and John the Evangelist, was founded by David I. in 1125, and exhibits all the massiveness of Norman construction: the existing portion consists of the northern part of the west front, the transept, in more perfect condition, 76 feet by 23 feet, two bays of the choir and two sides of the central tower,
 which is 91 feet high and 23 feet square:
 the triforium and clerestory form continuous Norman arcades, supported by arches, these resting on heavy, low pillars, 7 feet in diameter: during the repairs
 of this monument of ancient ecclesiastical magnificence some years ago, the fragment of a bell was found, which is supposed to have been, when perfect,
 about 3 feet in diameter and one ton
 and a half in weight: Earl Henry of Northumberland, the founder's son, was buried here in 1152; James III. was crowned in the abbey 10 Aug. 1460, but in 1545 it was burnt by Sir Edw. Seymour, Earl of Hertford, and again burnt by Lord Hunsdon
 in 1570. The Highlanders under Macintosh spent a night in Kelso, and here proclaimed King James in 1715. Prince Charles Edward passed through the town in 1745. The Duke of Roxburgh K.T., M.V.O. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 5,466; burgh, 971 acres; rateable value, landward, £8,442; burghal, £26,497; population in 1891, 4,730, and in 1901 was, burgh, 4,008, viz: Bridge street ward, 638; Horsemarket ward, 1,003; Roxburgh Street ward, 1,547; Woodmarket ward, 820. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,461. The population of North Kels0 in 1901 was 2,051.

LILLIESLEAF is a parish, in Hawick poor combination and Jedburgh small debt court district; it is 6 miles in length and varies from 1 to 4 in breadth, bounded on the north by Bowden, west by Selkirkshire, south-east by Minto and Ancrum, and intersected by the river Aik. The village is 13 miles south-east from Galashiels, 11 north-west from Jedburgh, 8 south-east from Hawick, 6 south-east from Selkirk, 3 west from Belesse station and 4 north from Hassendean station on the Hawick and St. Boswells section of the North British railway. The lands are under good tillage, and the district has a very pleasing appearance. Here are Established and United Free churches, a Public Hall, built in 1891 in memory of William Currie, and a subscription library. Linthill is the seat of Mrs. Otto; Capt. Mark Sprot, of Riddell, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 6,396; rateable value, £6,451; population in 1891, 649, and in 1901, 592.

Post, M. O. & T. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office (Sub-Office). Letters should be addressed Roxburghshire; William Law, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.5 a.m. & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 5.40 & 11.10 a.m. & 4.40 p.m.; no delivery or dispatch on sundays. Office open on sundays from 9 to 10 a.m. for dispatch of telegrams

LINTON is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, 6 miles in length by 2½ in breadth, and bounded by Spruon on the north, Northumberland on the east, Eckford on the west and Yetholm and Morebattle on the south. It is separated from the latter parish by the Kalle, and besides that stream has a small loch, which abounds with trout and eels. The village is about 5 miles east from Kirkbank railway station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, about the same distance from Kelso station, and 10 north-east from Jedburgh. The church, beautifully seated on a high sand mound, is an ancient edifice, remodelled internally; above the door is an old carving of the legend of the "Worm of Wormington." Robt. Hy. Elliot esq. D.L., J.P. of Clifton Park, is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 6,396; rateable value, £6,039; population in 1901, 408.

MAKERSTOUN is a small agricultural parish and village, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district; it is bounded on the south by the river Tweed, on the east by Kelso, on the north by Smallholm, and on the west
 by Mertoun, in Berwickshire. The village is 2 miles north-east from Rutherford station on the Roxburgh and St. Boswells section of the North British railway, and about 5 miles west from Kelso, and has Established and United Free churches.
 Hugh James Eibank Scott-Makdougall
 esq. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 2,867; rateable value, £4,674; population in 1891, 401,
 and in 1901, 337.

MELROSE is a police burgh and parish in Galashiels poor combination, bounded on the east by the Leader water, a feeder of the river Tweed; the town, a small and ancient place, is 36 miles south-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Jedburgh, 7
 north-east from Selkirk and 4 south-east from Galashiels, delightfully situated at the foot of the Bieldon Hills, with a station on the North British railway. The town stands on the wooded south bank of the Tweed, which, about 2 miles west, receives the Allan and Gala waters. It is built in the form of a triangle, with small streets
 leading from the corners: in the centre stands the cross, a structure supposed to be coeval with the abbey, and some of the older houses have incorporated in their walls portions of stone carving,
 once forming part of its buildings. Buck-holm Hill, 1,064 feet high, is in the parish. Previous to the abolition of hereditary jurisdictions, Melrose was a burgh of regality, and afterwards a free
 burgh of barony. In the beginning of 1895
 it was formed into a police burgh under the
 "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," including the village of Darnick, which joins Melrose on the west. It is governed by nine commissioners, including a provost and two bailies. A sheriff's small debt court is held four times a year, on the last Fridays of March, June, September and December. A justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday of each month.
 There is an Established church, two

MAXTON is a parish on the road between Roxburgh and St. Boswells, in Jedburgh poor combination and Duns small debt court district; it is about 4 miles
 in length by 3 in breadth, and lies in a rich agricultural district, bounded on the south-west by the Roman road Wailing Street, which separates it from Ancrum,
 north by the river Tweed, which divides it
 from Berwickshire, and east and south-east
 by Roxburgh. In the village is a station on the Roxburgh and St. Boswells section of the North British railway, 6 miles west from Roxburgh and about 1½ from St. Boswells church. At Rutherford, a small hamlet in the parish, is also a station on the same branch, 3 miles east from Maxton. The parish church, which is the burial place of the Kers, of Littledean, has a Norman doorway at the west end. On the estate of Littledean, about a mile distant, are the remains of an old tower, once a strong fortification, and long the residence of the Kers. At Lilliard's Edge, on the boundary
 betwixt this parish and that of Ancrum, was fought, early in 1545, the famous battle between the Scots under Angus Arran and Scott of Buccleuch, and the English under Sir Ralph Evers and Sir Brian Latour, when the latter were totally routed with the loss of a thousand men slain and made prisoners. About half a mile north-east from Rutherford station is a rocky height overhanging the Tweed and known as "Ringley Hall," often used as a camp in the time of border feuds, by the hostile parties on both sides. Sir Henry Ramsay-Fairfax-Lucy bart. of St. Boswells, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 4,429; rateable value, £6,004; population

 in 1891, 473, and in 1901, 411.

Post Office; Mrs. Isabella Crichton, post-

MELROSE

United Free churches and a Congregational Union church: Roman Catholic services are held at the Ormiston Institute. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1849 and enlarged in 1900, will seat 272 persons; the rectory,
 net value £360, has been held since 1833
 by the Rev. Philip Sydney Lockton M.A.
 of Oxford University. The Corn Exchange,
 in the Market place, includes a hall holding 400 people. The principal hotels and posting houses are the Abbey, the George and Abbotsford, and the King's Arms. The Ormiston Institute, erected out of a sum of £4,000 bequeathed by Mr. Charles W. Ormiston, of Melrose, comprises a library of about 600 volumes,
 reading and smoking rooms and a billiard room; the cost, including the furniture, amounted to £1,700; the remainder of the capital sum is held as an endowment fund: there is also a Masonic Hall. The Roxburgh, Berwick
 and Selkirk District Lunatic Asylum, about three-quarters of a mile from the town, at the foot of the Bieldon Hills, and opened in May, 1872, was erected at a cost, including subsequent additions, of £155,000, and will hold over 440 patients;
 the building is beautifully situated, and with the grounds occupies an area of nearly 80 acres. At the west end of the town is a large pond. Skirmish hill, to the north of the town, was the scene of one of the last border frays of the district.

Melrose Abbey, the finest and largest of the great border abbeys, was founded by King David, in 1136, and colonised by Cis-tercians from Bievaulx, in Yorkshire: it was not consecrated until 1246, and after having been frequently burnt and pillaged
 in the many border frays, it suffered so much in 1322, when Edward II. gave it up to fire and sword, that it had to be almost rebuilt, and it is from this period that the present remains mostly date. The great church, standing in a meadow on the south side of the Tweed, between which and the church were the cloisters and conventual buildings, was 258 feet in length, the breadth of the nave being 69 feet, including the south chapels, and the choir was 28 feet in breadth; the transept, 137 feet in length,
 had eastern aisles: the principal entrance to the church seems to have been in the south transept: the existing remains consist of the south wall of the nave, or rather of the eight lateral chapels, each lighted by a fine four-light window; the windows, still retaining much of their tracery, are a principal feature of the ruins, which, though now roofless, have a more perfect appearance than many of their contemporaries; on the north side of the nave, the wall of the aisle adjoining the cloisters still remains, and is about half the original length of that side of the nave, and across the fourth bay,
 from the tower, extends the rood loft, on a somewhat heavy screen; further eastward

is the western wall of the great central tower, which was 84 feet in height, rising one storey above the roof, and 41 feet square, machicolated and having angle turrets: the walls of the transepts with the southern gable remain; the great five-light window over the south doorway retains its tracery, and the doorway itself is a fine recessed pointed arch: of the chancel of two bays a great portion of the walls remain, as well as much of the window tracery; that of the great east window still entire, being a good example of Perpendicular work: two of the flying buttresses also exist, and two of the nave chapels retain their vaulting, and there is some over the altar: the clerestory is Perpendicular. The heart of Robert Bruce, and the body of King Alexander II. (1249), rest here, and here likewise were buried the remains of Earl William Douglas, "the dark knight of Liddesdale" (1353), and William Douglas, who died from wounds received at Poitiers, in 1384. There is a slab of black marble over the grave of St. Waldare, the second abbot (1158). Of the domestic buildings there are no remains. About 2 miles east from the town is the site of the still more ancient abbey of Old Melrose, founded in 664, and said to be the first abbey founded by the Cuthberts who settled in this part of the kingdom: all that remains, however, of this structure is a small ruin on a peninsula formed by the Tweed, whose banks at this point are lofty and wooded, varied with perpendicular rocks, jutting out into the river, and the spot commands a fine view of the Tweed valley.

Abbotsford, for many years the residence of Sir Walter Scott, and in fact created by him, lies 3 miles west from Melrose, on the south bank of the Tweed, just below its junction with the Ettrick, and a now very much as Scott left it; he bought the property in 1811, probably influenced in his selection by the fact that he was himself descended from the Haliburtons, of New Mains, on the same river at the other side of the parish. The house consists of a square tower, together with a series of gable-fronted buildings, the whole presenting a fine appearance from the river: on entering by a Gothic porch, the hall, panelled with oak, is reached, and from it a broad corridor, or gallery, hung with arms, targets and trophies, collected by Sir Walter, and including many Highland relics: on either side of this corridor are the drawing and dining rooms; the former, a fine saloon, containing many cabinets and specimens of old furniture, and the latter having on its walls a good collection of pictures, including several fine portraits: the chief remaining rooms are the breakfast parlour, in an angle overlooking the Tweed and the Yarrow, hung with a collection of water-colour drawings; the study, a small room, with a light gallery running round it, and opening from it is the library, a room 60 feet long by 50 broad, with a carved oak ceiling, and containing about 20,000 volumes. Around the house and grounds are many specimens of carved stonework, including the gate of the old Tolbooth of Edinburgh: the grounds were laid out by Sir Walter Scott, and comprise many seats placed so as to command the best views. Sir Walter died here 21 September, 1832, and was buried in the Haliburton vault. The nearest railway station to the house is Abbotsford Ferry, on the Selkirk and Galashiels line; the house is the property of the trustees of the Hon. Mrs. Mary M. wife of the Hon. Joseph Constable Maxwell Scott D.L., J.P., and is at present (1911) unoccupied; the house can be viewed on payment of a small charge. Eildon Hall, in this parish, is the seat of the Earl of Dalkeith. Acreage of civil parish, 26,684; burgh, 489; rateable value, landward, £29,997; burghal, £15,823; population of the civil parish in 1891, 4,882, and in 1901, 4,707, of which the town contained 2,195; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 4,283. Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 126, parts of the parishes of Earlston and Lander, in Berwickshire, have been transferred to Melrose.

GATTONSIDE is a rural village, on the north bank of the Tweed, in the parish of Melrose, but 1 mile north of the town, communication with which is maintained by a suspension bridge, opened 26th Oct. 1826, and formerly subject to toll, but on Whit Sunday, 1880, the bridge was made toll free. The village is surrounded with orchards, and it is computed that a greater quantity of fruit is grown about this place than in any other part of the vale of the Tweed. There is a board school in the village. Population in 1901 293.

DARNICK, a small village in Melrose parish, on the road leading to Galashiels, and now almost joined to Melrose town, was made part of the burgh of Melrose in 1895. Here is a Memorial Mission hall. In the centre of the village stands Darnick Tower, the ancient stronghold of the lairds of Darnick, and now the residence of Andrew Grainger Heiton esq. Population in 1901, 278.

NEWESTEAD is a small village in Melrose parish, but 1 mile east from the town, and also having a Mission hall; near it once stood the "Red Abbey;" population in 1901, 180.

BLAINSLIE is a small rural village in the parish of Melrose, at its northern extremity, on the Berwickshire border, and on the road from Earlston to Lander, 4 miles north-west from Earlston station, on the St. Boswells and Greenlaw section of the North British railway, and about 7 miles north from the town of Melrose.

MOREBATTLE is a parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, about 9 miles in length with a mean breadth of 4 miles, and bounded by Linton and Yetholm on the north, Eckford on the west, Hownam on the south-west, and the county of Northumberland on the south and east. The greater part of the land is hilly and pastoral, the low grounds only being arable. The Kale and Bowmoat run through the parish, both waters affording excellent sport to the angler. The village, which is becoming a summer resort, and stands near the Kale river, is 5 miles east from Kirkbank station on the Jedburgh branch of the North British railway, 7½ south-east from Kelso, and 10 east-north-east from Jedburgh. The ancient and more correct mode of spelling the name is "Merebottle," which signifies "the dwelling place at the marsh." Here are established United Free churches. The vestiges of ancient camps and various ruins, particularly Whitton Castle and Corbet Tower, indicate this parish to have been the scene of frequent warfare. The Duke of Roxburgh K.T., M.V.O. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 22,429; rateable value, £10,561; population in 1891, 846, and in 1901, 779.

NEWCASTLETON is a modern village in a large and mountainous parish formerly known by the name of "Castletown," but more generally by the popular title of "Liddesdale," being in the vale of the Liddle water, and in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district. The village owes its rise to Henry, 3rd Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. 1746-1812, and has superseded the old village which remains a little further up the vale; it consists principally of two long streets of houses, occupying a haugh on the right bank of the Liddle in the centre of the lower and more arable part of the district and on the road which proceeds up Liddesdale; the station here, on the Riddings Junction and Hawick section of the North British railway, is 26 miles south-south-west from Jedburgh, 20 south from Hawick, and 10 north-east from Canonbie. In the parish there are also three stations on the North British railway, one at Steele, Road, 5 miles north from New Castleton, another at Riccarton Junction, 7 miles north, where the line from Newcastle-on-Tyne joins the Edinburgh section, and a third at Saughtree. The parish is upwards of 18 miles in length by 14 in breadth in the north, but only 3 miles at its extreme south point: it is bounded on the west by Dumfriesshire, east by Cumberland and Northumberland, and north by Southdean, Hobbkirk, Cavers and Telfohthead. There are Established and United Free churches and a Congregational chapel, and also an Established church at Saughtree. There is also a Mission hall, built in 1888, at a cost of about £1,100. The northern part is mountainous and bleak, but affords good pasture for sheep. On the east, near the head of the parish, rise the rivers Tyne and Liddle, in the midst of a vast bog, called "Dead Water, on account of its stagnant appearance. Through the centre runs the Hermitage, a feeder of the Liddle. Mineral springs, which are of considerable repute for their medicinal properties, exist at Flat, Lawston, Thories Hope and Tweeden, the last of which exhibits the various stages of the petrifying process. The banks of the river are covered with natural wood and extensive plantations, which afford an infinite variety of the most picturesque scenery. In the parish are four mountains, viz:—Roan Fell, 1,862 feet, Din Fell, 1,735 feet, Cooms Fell, 1,609 feet, and Tinnis Hill, 1,326 feet high. Within the district are the ruins of no less than five churches, and many castles and fortified places; but the most remarkable object in Liddesdale is the ancient castle of Hermitage, erected in the 13th century, by Comyn, Earl of Monteith, and one of the largest fortresses on the border. It has been repaired by the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. and during the progress of the work several small pieces of cannon were found, and a gold ring, bearing the inscription "In Broaderlie Amite." There is a branch of the British Linen Bank in the village. The Liddesdale Unionist Club, in South Hermitage street, is a fine building of stone, erected in 1898 by the Duke of Buccleuch, and comprises reading, card and billiard rooms. Fairs are held in April, May, September and November; some of them are for hiring servants. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 67,909; rateable value, £25,005; population in 1891, 2,023, in 1901, 1,872, of which the village contained 815.

ROBERTON is a parish, in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district, and was formerly partly in Selkirkshire, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), sections 44 to 50), it is now wholly in this county. It is 13 miles long and about 5 broad, very mountainous, and bounded on the west by the county of Selkirk, east by Teviothead and Hawick, and north by Wilton and Selkirkshire. The Hawick and District Joint Hospital Board's Infectious Diseases Hospital at BURNFOOT was erected in 1900 at a cost of £5,000 for 24 patients. In 1905 a small-pox pavilion was added at a further cost of £960. The church is 5 miles west from Hawick station on the North British railway. There are Established and United Free churches. The Borthwick water, a tributary of the Teviot river, rises in the southern extremity of the parish and runs through the centre of it. Stock hill, 1,561 feet, and Craik Cross hill, 1,482 feet high, are in the south part of the parish. Harden, the seat of Lord Polwarth D.L., J.P. is in this parish. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. is the principal landowner. Acreage, 20,456; rateable value, £8,176; population in 1901, 397.

ROXBURGH is a small village and parish, in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, and is bounded by Mackerston and Kelso on the north, Maxton on the west, by the Roman road, Watling Street on the south, and by Crailing and Eckford on the east. The village is a short distance west from Roxburgh station, on the North British railway, which is the junction of the line to Jedburgh, and 3 miles south from Kelso. Here is an Established church. The ruins of the once famous castle of Roxburgh crown a high mound, picturesquely situated in the narrow space between the Tweed and Teviot and about 2 miles from the site of the present village. Near the castle, and between it and the Tweed, stood the old burgh of Roxburgh, which has entirely disappeared; the castle was demolished by the Scots in 1460, after they had retaken it from the English, and the burgh having lost its protection gradually decayed. In a field near the parish church are the remains of a border tower, called "Wallace's Tower," but only the lower part, consisting of a stone vaulted chamber, is now intact. This fort was burned by the Earl of Hertford in his marauding expedition of 1545. The ancient fair of St. James of Roxburgh is still held annually, on Aug. 5th, on St. James's green, close to the site of the old burgh; it is mentioned in a charter of William the Lion to the monks of Kelso, and was for long the best known fair in the south of Scotland. Sunlawa, the seat of Lieut.-Col. Robert Scott-Kerr D.S.O., J.P. is in this parish. The Duke of Roxburgh K.T. M.V.O. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 7,714; rateable value, £10,805; population in 1891, 954, and in 1901, 835 civil and 848 ecclesiastical.

HEITON is a village in the parish, and is on the road from Kelso to Jedburgh.

FAIRNINGTON is a district adjoining the Roman Causeway, and is owned by Henry Rutherford esq.

ST. BOSWELLS (or Lessudden) is a parish, in Melrose small debt court district, bounded on the north by the river Tweed, west by Melrose and Bowden and south-east by Acrem and Maxton, and is 5 miles in length by from 1½ to 2 in breadth. On the west rise the Eldon hills, and on the east and north the ground is undulating, the latter quarter containing the fine woods of Dryburgh, separated from the village by the Tweed, which is here a beautiful river, inclosed within high banks. The village of St. Boswells, nearly in the centre of the parish, consists of one long street, running east and west from the green, and is 1 mile west from the St. Boswells station on the North British railway, 10 south-west from Kelso, 9 north-west from Jedburgh and 4 south-east from Melrose. An ample supply of water is now obtained from Lindean, near Selkirk. There are Established and United Free churches. The Buccleuch Arms Hotel, much frequented during the hunting season, stands on the green. Here are the kennels of the Duke of Buccleuch's foxhounds, the largest pack in the south of Scotland, which hunts four times a week in the three counties of Roxburgh, Selkirk and Berwick; Kelso and Melrose are convenient places for hunting visitors. On the green at St. Boswells is held on the 18th of July one of the most important horse fairs in Scotland. This fair also attracts a large number of salesmen of miscellaneous goods. There are several seats in the parish: Maxpoffie, the seat of Lady Elliott; Benrie, of Mrs. Pringle; Elliston House, of Miss Dalrymple; Maxton House, of Sir Henry William Ramsay-Fairfax-Lucy bart.; Holmes, of Daniel Norman Ritchie esq. and Lessudden House, of Walter Scott esq. Lord Polwarth, the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. Sir H. R. Fairfax-Lucy bart. and Miss Dalrymple are the chief landowners. Acreage of the parish, 3,466; rateable value, £11,050; the population in 1891 was 962, and in 1901, 940.

SELKIRK, a royal burgh and parish, formerly partly in this county, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 60, sections 44 to 50), is now wholly included in Selkirkshire.

SMAILHOLM is a small agricultural parish and village in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, 3 miles long by $\frac{3}{4}$ broad, bounded on the east, north and west by Berwickshire, and south-east by Makerston, in the north-eastern part of the county. The village is 7 miles north-west from Kelso station and $\frac{6}{8}$ miles east from Melrose station on the North British railway. The nearest railway (for goods) is at Farn Loanend, about 4 miles from the village. The church, an edifice in the Norman style, was renovated in 1903 at a cost of £750, and an organ has been provided at a cost of £200; in 1906 a memorial window to Sir Walter Scott was placed in the church. In the parish, about $\frac{1}{4}$ miles from the church, is the farm of Sandyknowe, the place where Sir Walter Scott spent a few years of his childhood, and adjoining the farm are the ruins of the Tower of Sandyknowe, immortalised by him in the ballad of "The Eve of St. John," written in 1799. Col. Lord Binning C.B., M.V.O., D.L., J.P. of Mellerstain, Kelso, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 4,194; rateable value, £4,938; population in 1891, 340, and in 1901, 341.

TEVIOTHEAD is a parish, in Hawick poor combination and small debt court district. 10 miles long and 8 miles broad, bounded on the north by Robertson and Hawick, Dumfries-shire on the south, on the south-east by Castleton and Cavers. The parish church is about 10 miles south-west of Hawick station on the North British railway. This is a mountainous district, and famous for its breed of Cheviot sheep. As its name implies, this parish contains the source of the Teviot, and the Allan water, one of its tributaries, runs through the eastern part of the parish. Cauldcleugh Head mountain, 1,936 feet, and Wisp hill, 1,950 feet high, are in the parish, and on one of the hills stands a monument to Henry Scott Riddle, a former minister, and author of "Scotland Yet." In the churchyard here Johnnie Armstrong (mentioned in the "Tales of the Borders") and his band were hanged by James V., and about 1898 a mural tablet was erected in the churchyard to commemorate this tragedy. The parish also contains the "Fair Dodhead," the scene of the Border Ballad of that title. There is a small public hall, erected in 1907. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.O. and Samuel S. Steel esq. of Stirling, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 31,487; rateable value, £8,437; the population in 1901 was 419.

Post & T. & Telephone Call Office; James Moodie, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Hawick. Delivery, 9.15 a.m.; dispatch, 2.20 p.m. & Saturdays at 2.20 p.m.; no delivery on Sunday. Hawick is the nearest money order office, 9 miles distant.

WILTON, see HAWICK.

YETHOLM parish, in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court district of Roxburgh, is bounded on the north-east and east by the English border, and divided into nearly equal parts by the water of Bowmont, an excellent trout stream. The surface is hilly, but covered with verdure, and is pastured by numerous flocks of sheep. Situated on the western boundary is Yetholm or Primsido Loch, measuring nearly a mile and a half in circumference. There are considerable hanghs (or meadows) on the banks of the Bowmont; the soil is good, and adapted for wheat. The parish comprises two villages, or rather a village in two parts, situate on either side of the Bowmont; that on one side, called Yetholm, is 4½ miles west from Midrum station on the Coldstream and Alnwick branch of the North Eastern railway, and about 8 south from Kelso, and has two United Free churches; the other, designated Kirk-Yetholm, is about a quarter of a mile on the other side of the stream, and contains the parish church, an edifice of black stone, with white stone dressings, erected in place of an ancient thatched building. There is also a Public Hall and a Reading Room and Library. In the village of Yetholm is a stone obelisk, erected in 1903 as a memorial to the late Major-General A. G. Wauchope C.B., C.M.G. of Niddrie, in this parish, who was killed at Magersfontein, South Africa, in 1899, during the Boer war. A fine view of the vale of Bowmont is afforded from the street which runs up the hill, called "Staeorogh." The fairs formerly held at the villages are now discontinued, but an annual sheep show for shepherds' packs is held in September. The representatives of the late Maj.-Gen. Andrew Gilbert Wauchope C.B., C.M.G. of Niddrie, and the Marquess of Tweeddale K.T. of Yester House, Haddington, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,869; rateable value, £6,122; population in 1891, 884, and in 1901, 802, and Yetholm and Kirk-Yetholm village, 571.

SELKIRKSHIRE

IS a small county in the south of the kingdom and considered one of the border counties; it is bounded on the north by Edinburghshire and the northern part of Roxburghshire, east by this latter county, south by Dumfries-shire and west by Peebles-shire; its form is irregular and its extent is 27 miles from south-west to north-east, and 17 in breadth, exclusive of a small detached part on the east. Its area comprehends 266.8 square miles, or 170,762 acres of land and 1,788 of water. The population in 1891 was 27,712, and in 1901, 10,673 males and 12,633 females; total, 23,356. The inhabited houses in 1891 were 5,447 and in 1901, 5,301. In size Selkirk stands as the twenty-sixth, and in population the twenty-eighth of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This border county was formerly designated the "Sheriffdom of Ettrick Forest," from being in a great measure the vale of the Ettrick and its tributary streams, and from its being covered with wood. It was stocked with large herds of deer, and formed a favourite scene for the enjoyment of the chase by the Scottish monarchs. In many royal charters it is entitled "The Forest," and before regular sheriffs were appointed it was placed under the jurisdiction of a keeper, who generally held the office of constable of the King's Castle at Selkirk. Placed as it is between the eastern portion of the kingdom, where the influence of the Earls of Northumberland prevailed, and before them of the East Anglians and kindred tribes, and the western shires, where the Dalriadans and Strathclyde Britons held sway, it was much under the control of its stronger neighbours, and has less of a history of its own than a share of that of other shires; the Romans occupied it during their stay of 350 years, but have left few traces of their presence. A stupendous work of the Romanised Britons called the "Catrail," once a vast fosse, having a rampart on either side, constructed during the 5th century as a strong line of defence against the invading Saxons, belongs to a rather later period and the central position of the county placed it beyond the direct routes of armies proceeding to either the east or west coast. About 1120 David I. at that time an Earl and not having yet succeeded to the throne, founded a monastery at Selkirk, afterwards transferred to Kelso, but unlike Roxburghshire, this county contains few or no remains of ecclesiastical establishments, though it possesses a number of ruined "keeps," the seats of feudal strength.

Soil, Produce, Manufactures &c.—With the exception of a very narrow portion on its eastern side, the county may be said to be a continual alternation of hill and dale, and many of the eminences rise to a considerable height. The principal vales are those of the Ettrick and Yarrow, besides a portion of the vale of the Tweed and the Gala; from these vales there shoot out many "cleughis" and "hopes," that run up for some distance between the heights. Around Galashiels and Selkirk the hills are now under cultivation and wheat is raised at a considerable elevation above the level of the sea. In the upper valleys of Ettrick and Yarrow, tillage is confined to the haughs and low grounds contiguous. The principal mountains, with their altitudes, are—Ettrick Pen, 2,269; the Wiss, 1,932; Ellbank Law, 1,715; Brown Knowe, 1,718; Sauchie Law, 1,449; Hopehead, 1,897 and Black Knowe, 1,806. Great attention is paid to sheep farming and the improvement in the breed of sheep; this was stimulated by a Lord Napier, who betook himself to the vale of Ettrick, and commenced farming. The shire is almost wholly stocked with white-faced sheep, except in a high tract of country towards the sources of its rivers, of which Hindhope, on the Ettrick, and Lawdhope, on the Yarrow, are the lowest points. The chief crops in 1910 as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," are—oats, 4,762 acres; barley or here, 347;

the total corn crops being 5,057 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,433 acres; potatoes, 193; total green crops, 2,292 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 1,079; (not for hay) 6,505 acres; permanent pasture (for hay), 1,880; (not for hay) 11,865 acres; total area of land, 170,793 acres, of which 136,351 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing), and 5,293 woods and plantations.

The live stock comprised in 1910—horses, 648; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 1,283; other cattle, 2,230; ewes kept for breeding, 85,253; other sheep, one year and above, 10,833, under one year, 81,641, and pigs, 410. According to the "Mine and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1909, the only mineral raised in that year was 1,335 tons of igneous rock. The manufactures, for which see Selkirk and Galashiels, consist in both towns of woollens, tweeds, tartans, shawls and hosiery, together with the tanning of leather and the dressing of sheep and lamb skins. There are also several engineering and machine making establishments.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The county is well watered by the Ettrick, the Yarrow, and the Tweed. The latter river, after draining Peebles-shire, intersects the northern extremity of Selkirkshire from west to east, running in a deep channel of 9 miles, when it is joined by the Ettrick, and, receiving the Gala, passes on to Roxburghshire and Berwick-on-Tweed, where it empties itself into the German Ocean. The Gala cannot be counted as a river of this county; it takes its rise in the parish of Heriot, in the county of Edinburgh, and flowing through a portion of Roxburghshire, falls into the Tweed about a mile below Galashiels. The Yarrow has its source at a place called Yarrow Cleugh, near the rise of the Moffat Water, in Dumfries-shire, and falls into the Ettrick 2 miles above Selkirk. The county has some small lakes, the chief being St. Mary's Loch, 15 miles south-west from Selkirk, about 3 miles long, and less than 1 in breadth, and the Loch of the Lowes, about a mile in length, and a quarter of a mile broad, lying at the head of St. Mary's Loch. The mileage of railway actually within this county is very small, consisting as it does of about 12 miles of the Edinburgh and Peebles section of the North British line from Galashiels, through the northern extremity of the county, leaving it near Hoyiee, and a short branch from Galashiels to Selkirk; this extent of railway being, however, in the centre of a system gives easy access to Glasgow, Edinburgh, Berwick-on-Tweed, Newcastle and Carlisle.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The county of Selkirk contains only seven complete civil parishes, and six complete and six parts of ecclesiastical parishes. There is a combination poor house at Galashiels, for paupers belonging to the parishes of Galashiels, Selkirk, Melrose and Yarrow. The only towns are those of Selkirk and Galashiels—the former a royal burgh, and these two join with Hawick in sending one member to Parliament. This county joins with Peebles-shire in returning a member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency (Selkirkshire) in 1911 was 958.

CADDONFOOT is a parish in the Galashiels poor combination and presbytery and in the small debt court district of Selkirk. It was originally a quad sacra parish, but in 1896 was formed into a civil parish by Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 33, dated Dec. 17, 1897, and embraces parts of the civil parishes of Yarrow, Galashiels, Stow, Innerleithen and Selkirk, in the North Eastern division of the county. The village is 1 mile from Clovenfords station on the Peebles branch of the North British railway, and about 4 miles south from Galashiels station on the same line. The Established church here is a small edifice of stone. Torwoodlee House, which stands in a small park, is the seat of James L. Pringle esq. M.A. Oxon., J.P. In the parish is a fine golf course. Clovenfords is a small village transferred to Caddonfoot parish in 1898; close by is Meigle hill, 1,387 feet in height. The area is 19,252 acres; rateable value, £9,165; population in 1901, 663.

CLOVENFORDS, see CADDONFOOT.

ETTRICK is a large parish in the south-west part of the county, and in Selkirk small debt court district; it is 13 miles long by from $\frac{1}{2}$ to 10 broad, and is bounded on the west by Peeblesshire, south by the county of Dumfries, east by Roxburghshire and Kirkhope, and north by Yarrow. The centre of the parish is 20 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway from Galashiels, and 18 north-east from Moffat terminal station on a branch from Beattock on the Lockerbie line of the Caledonian railway. The Established church here stands near the Ettrick water, and in the churchyard lies buried Francis, 10th Baron Napier and 1st Baron Ettrick, and sometime ambassador to St. Petersburg, who died 19 Dec. 1898. There is also a Free church, serving for the two parishes of Ettrick and Kirkhope. The public hall, erected in 1909, will seat 160 persons, and contains a library. The Loch of the Lowes, about 1 mile long by about half a mile wide, is in the parish, which is also watered by several streams, the principal being the Ettrick water, a tributary of the Tweed, rising in the south-western extremity of the parish, near Ettrick Pen, and running through the centre, receiving in its course the Tema water, the Rankle, the Tushielaw, and several other burns. The Yarrow water, in the north-west of the parish, falls into St. Mary's Loch at the northern boundary. The parish is very mountainous, the highest peaks being: Ettrick Pen, 2,269 feet; Capel Fell, 2,223; Andrewhinny Hill, 2,220; Wind Fell, 2,180; Bodsbeck Law, 2,173; Bellis Craig, 2,046; Herman Law, 2,014; Ward Law, 1,951, and Muckle Knees, 1,928. Thirlstone Castle, which stands in a park over 1 mile long by a quarter of a mile wide, and near the Ettrick water, is the seat of Lord Napier and Ettrick D.L. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. who is also lord of the manor, Lord Napier and Ettrick, and George Pott esq. of Potburn, are the principal landowners.

In the northern part of this parish, at CHAPELHOPE, a small hamlet at the head of the Loch of the Lowes, is a monument, erected to James Hogg, known as the "Ettrick Shepherd," who was born in Ettrick forest either in December, 1770, or January, 1772, and died at Altrive in the adjoining parish of Yarrow 21 Nov. 1835; he was first brought to notice about 1801 by Sir Walter Scott, who, in 1807, encouraged him to print a volume of his poems; this, and a prize gained from the Highland Society for an Essay on Sheep, induced him in 1810 to take up the role of author, and he published a good many poetical and prose pieces, the best being "The Queen's Wack" and "The Brownie of Bodsbeck"; this memorial consists of the figure of a border shepherd standing on a high pedestal, and at Ettrick Hall farm is another memorial, erected in 1898 by public subscription. Acreage, 42,450; rateable value, £8,614; population in 1901, 331.

GALASHIELS

GALASHIELS is a parliamentary burgh, market town and parish, and head of a poor combination, 13 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 31 east from Peebles, 5 north from Selkirk, 4 north-west from Melrose and 34 south-by-west from Berwick, with a station on the main line of the North British railway (Waverley route); there is also a branch line to Selkirk, and one to Innerleithen and Peebles. The town stands on a kind of tableland on both sides of the Gala, about a mile above the confluence of that river with the Tweed. The Gala is crossed by six bridges, two being for foot passengers only. The parish of Galashiels was formed, in the early part of the 17th century, out of the two old parishes, Lindean, in Roxburghshire, and Boldside, in Selkirkshire, and was in hoto counties until, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1839" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), it has been placed wholly in Selkirkshire. This burgh, together with Hawick and Selkirk, forms the Hawick parliamentary district, constituted in 1868, and returning one member. It is governed by a provost, four bailies and nine councillors. The town is comparatively of modern erection, the oldest houses not having been built more than a century, whilst the greater number have not existed more than 50 years. The town consists of several streets, most of which run parallel with the river; there are also a large number of villas in the immediate neighbourhood, chiefly the residences of the manufacturers and merchants of the town. The Old, or High Town, as it is now called, contains the parish church, manse, and a few of the original houses, but has been much improved and enlarged. A small debt court is held in the town on the second Mondays of February, April and June, the last Monday of July, the first Monday of October and second Monday of December. The town is supplied with water by gravitation from Caddon Waters. St. Paul's Established church, in Scott crescent, is a fine edifice of red freestone, erected at a cost of £15,000, in the Gothic style, from designs by Messrs. Hay and Henderson. There are other Established churches at Ladhope and Kirkbrae. St. John's United Free church was erected in 1875 at a cost of £6,000, from the designs of Mr. Starforth, of Edinburgh. The Ladhope United Free church, erected in 1855, at a cost of about £5,000, is a building of whinstone, in the Early English Pointed style, with a tower and spire, from the designs of Messrs. McKissack and Rowan, architects, of Glasgow; there are also two United Free churches in High street, and one in Gala Park road, a Roman Catholic church, and Baptist and Congregational chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Peter, in Abbotsford road, built in 1853, will seat 440 persons; the rectory, net value £331, has been held since 1866 by the Rev. Canon A. A. Jenkins Assoc. K.C.L. The Public Hall, erected by a private company, is a handsome building in High street, with a large hall on the upper storey used for public meetings and concerts. The Drill hall of the F and G Companies of the 4th Territorial Force Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers is also well adapted for public purposes, and there are, besides, four other halls holding from 300 to 500 persons. The head quarters of the 4th Battalion are at Roundtree house, Galapark road. The Free Library, opened October, 1874, and maintained by the rates under the "Free Libraries Act," contains at present upwards of 10,000 volumes in almost every department of literature; the reading rooms are supplied with daily, weekly and monthly newspapers and magazines, and a new reading room was opened in 1899, at a cost of £1,400, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. The principal trade of Galashiels is the manufacture of tweeds, and there are many houses engaged in it. The manufacturers and weavers meet annually on the Friday nearest the 10th of October, for the purpose of electing a deacon of their trade, and conferring on matters therewith connected. In the town is a large leather tannery. The National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank all have branches here. There are four hotels and posting houses in the town, namely: "The Douglas," "Maxwell's," "The Royal" and "The Abbotsford." Two newspapers are published here, the "Border Telegraph" and the "Border Standard," both of which have a large circulation in the border counties. The Combination Poor House is at Windyknowe, and contains 57 beds. A Cottage Hospital, the funds for which were raised by public subscription, was erected at Eastlands in 1894, at a cost of £3,813; it contains 14 beds and is attended by the medical men of the town. The Hospital for Contagious Diseases is also at Eastlands, and contains 10 beds. The Public Park, Abbotsford road, was presented to the town by J. H. F. K. Scott esq. in 1882. Gala House, standing in a small park, is the seat of John Henry Francis Kinnaird Scott esq. D.L., J.P. The civil parish of Galashiels comprises an acreage of 6,456; burgh, 846 acres; gross assessable value of the parish, £76,377; the burgh, £70,820; the population in 1901 was: civil parish, 13,969; police burgh, 13,615; parliamentary burgh, 12,822.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: Parish Church, 5,394; West Church, 3,913. The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was: first, 2,634; second, 3,686; third, 2,558; fourth, 2,112; fifth, 2,425.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 2,330.

CLOVENFORDS, originally a hamlet in this parish, was transferred in 1898 to Caddonfoot parish, and will be found under that heading.

ROBERTON is a parish, formerly partly in this county and partly in Roxburghshire, but is now included wholly in the latter county, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 41 to 50).

HEATHERLIE, see SELKIRK.

INNERLEITHEN, a parish, formerly partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Peebles, has now been transferred entirely to Peebles-shire under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50).

KIRKHOPE is a parish, formerly part of the parish of Yarrow, from which it was disjoined in 1852; it is in the presbytery of Selkirk, and in Hawick poor combination and Selkirk small debt court district, and is 9 miles long by 5 broad, bounded on the north-west by Yarrow, north-east by Selkirk, east by Ashkirk and Roxburghshire, and south-west by Ettrick. The Ettrick water, which in its course is fed by several burns, flows through the north-west part of the parish, which is very hilly, there being eight eminences in the parish above the height of 1,000 feet. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school at Ettrick Bridge End, a small village in Kirkhope, 7 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on the branch of the North British railway. The Duke of Buccleuch, Lord Polewarth and Thomas Scott Anderson esq. M.D., J.P. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 22,734; rateable value, £6,042; population in 1891, 500, and in 1901, 399.

SELKIRK

SELKIRK is an ancient town, occupying a rising ground, at the foot of which flows the river Etrick, and is a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, and the capital of its county and parish, in Galashiels poor combination, 38 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 22 east-by-south from Peebles, 12 north-north-west from Hawick, 8 south-west from Melrose and 6 south from Galashiels, with a terminal station on a branch from Galashiels of the North British railway. The place derives its name from a kirk established here at an early date, when the locality became distinguished as a hunting seat of the "kings. In the oldest charter it is called "Selechschirche," which signifies the Kirk of the Shiels or Shielings. After the transfer to Kelso of a monastery, founded here by David I. about 1113, the town around the old castle received the dignified title of "Selkirk Regis," while the village of the monks was denominated "Selkirk Abbatis." Of the Castle of Selkirk, at which David I. occasionally resided, little is known, and its size cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained. The rivers Etrick and Yarrow form a junction about a mile and a half south-west from Selkirk, and empty their waters into the Tweed, about 2 miles north of the town. As a royal burgh, Selkirk is governed by a provost, 2 bailies, a dean of guild, and 11 councillors, one-third of whom retire annually. The sheriff court is held on Friday. The magistrates hold criminal courts as occasion requires. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday of October, and special justice of peace courts when found necessary. The water supply of the town has been augmented and the source changed from Mill Haugh to Howden Haugh. Here is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and Baptist and Congregational churches. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1869, will seat about 180 persons; the rectory, net value £254, has been held since 1910 by the Rev. James G. McCall M.A. of Cambridge University. The old Town Hall, in the Market place, contains the court room in which Sir Walter Scott once presided as sheriff of the county; it is now used for burgh courts, meetings of Town Council, and other public bodies. In 1870 buildings were completed for the business of the county, including a sheriff clerk room, and offices for the sheriff, procurator fiscal, and other officials. The Victoria Hall, built by public subscription at a cost of £7,400, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, and opened in 1897, is used for public meetings, concerts &c. The old Mercat Cross, standing in the Market place, was rebuilt in 1898, by public subscription, as a similar memorial. There is also a Masonic Hall and a Free Library. Selkirk was in past ages celebrated for the making of brogues (a description of single-soled shoes); tradition carries the existence of this trade so far back as the period of the battle of Flodden, in which conflict, it is asserted, the brogue makers or "souters" of Selkirk took a distinguished part. As a further proof of the consequence and ability of the professors of this craft, it appears from the town records that when the Highland army, in 1745, commanded the magistrates of Edinburgh to furnish 6,000 pairs of shoes, these civic officials made a call upon the burgh of Selkirk for no less than a third of the quantity, which was supplied. The principal manufactures now carried on consist of various descriptions of woollen goods—tweeds, tartans, plaids and shawls—and wool spinning and tanning. A hospital for contagious diseases was built and opened in 1899. The market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the 5th April and 31st October. There is also an auction mart, where sales are held for cattle &c. fortnightly on Wednesday. There are branches in the town of the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is a Savings Bank. The principal inns are the "County," the "Fleece," and the "Station Hotel." Three weekly newspapers are published in the town:—the "Southern Reporter," the "Saturday Advertiser," and the "Selkirk Advertiser." In the Market place is a fine monument to Sir Walter Scott, and, in High street, is another, by Andrew Currie, a native artist, to Mungo Park, the African traveller, who was a native of Foulshields, in this county, born 10 Sept. 1771, and drowned in the Niger, 1805. Bowhill, the beautiful mansion of the Earl of Dalkeith (vice-lieut.), stands near the junction of the Yarrow and Etrick waters, in a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a small lake. Philiphaugh, an ancient estate, an existing charter of which dates from the time of Robert the Bruce, was the scene of the disastrous battle, 13 Sept. 1645, when the royalist forces under the Marquess of Montrose, were defeated by David Leslie and the Scottish Covenanters; it is now the residence of Samuel Strang esq. J.P. and includes a castellated mansion, standing in a park on the north bank of the Yarrow. The Haining, the seat of Professor A. Seth Pringle-Pattison LL.D., J.P. has a park about 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and contains a lake about a quarter of a mile in length. Broadmeadows, on the north bank of the Yarrow water, in a small park, is the seat of Robert James Lang esq. J.P. Sunderland Hall, on the south bank of the Tweed, surrounded by grounds, is the seat of Charles Henry Scott-Plummer esq. D.L., J.P. Whitnour Hall is the seat of C. W. Dunlop esq. D.L., J.P. Newark Castle, near the Yarrow water, but now in ruins, was built by James II. and the royal arms, with the unicorn, are carved in stone on the western side. The office of keeper was lately held by the Douglas-Scott family, dukes of Buccleuch, and when the forest of Etrick was dispersed, they obtained a grant of the castle in perpetuity. The area of the civil parish is 17,854; burgh, 325 acres; gross rateable value of the landward, £13,126; of the burgh, £29,595; population, 1891, 7,298, and in 1901, civil parish, 7,090; ecclesiastical parish, 4,960; royal and parliamentary burgh, 5,701; police burgh, 5,486.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 1,080. Under the provisions of the "Local Government Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), that part of Selkirk parish formerly in Roxburghshire has been added to this county.

HEATHERLIE is a quoad sacra parish, constituted in January, 1885, and comprises about one-third of the area of the lower part of the parish. Here is an Established church and a Congregational chapel. The population in 1901 was 2,146.

STOW is an extensive parish and village partly in this county, but chiefly in the adjoining county of Edinburgh, where particulars will be found.

YARROW is a large parish, in the Galashiels poor combination, in the small debt court district of Selkirk and in the pres-byteries of Selkirk and Galashiels; it is 15 miles long by from 1½ to 7 broad, and is bounded on the west and north by Peeblesshire, north-east by the river Tweed, south-east by Selkirk and Kirkhope and south by Ettrick. The village from near the centre of the parish is 11 miles south-west from Selkirk terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and about the same distance south from Innerleithen station on the Galashiels and Peebles section of the same line. The parish is very picturesque, and its prairies have been well sung by James Hogg, the "Ettrick Shepherd." There are Established and United Free churches.

The Parish Hall, erected in 1908, will seat 170 persons. St. Mary's Loch, which is about 3 miles long by half a mile broad, on the borders of Peeblesshire, is a great resort for visitors in summer, and excellent accommodation can be had at the Rodono Hotel and at "Tibbie Shiels," a favourite "houf" of Christopher North, who has immortalised it in his "Noctes Ambrosiane." The Yarrow water, which flows from St. Mary's Loch, and in its course receives several burns, runs through part of the parish, and after forming part of its south-eastern boundary, traverses the parish of Selkirk, and joins the Ettrick about 2 miles south of that town. The highest mountains in the parish are, Black Law, 2,285 feet; Blackhouse Heights, 2,213; Deer Law, 2,065; The Wiss, 1,932; Minch Moor, 1,856, and Black Knowe, 1,806. The Hangingshaw is the residence of Richard Brown esq. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. who is lord of the manor, the trustees of the late James Henry L'Estrange Johnstone, of Alva, and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. of Traquair, are the principal landowners. The area is 48,451 acres; rateable value, £9,880; population in 1891, 638, and in 1901, 500 civil and 440 ecclesiastical. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 60, sections 44 to 50). boundary orders 56 and 59, a part of Lyne and Megget parish in Peebles county has been transferred to this parish.

MEGGET, originally united with the parish of Lyne in Peeblesshire, was transferred by boundary order 58, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," to this parish, but was left united to its former co-parish for ecclesiastical purposes and has a United Free church; it lies north-west to St. Mary's Loch, and had in 1901 a population of 73.

THE SHETLAND ISLES

(OR COUNTY OF SHETLAND)

THE SHETLAND, or Zetland Isles, which form a county of Scotland, are above 100 in number, twenty-eight of which only are inhabited, forming a group of islands, islets and rocks, in the Northern Ocean, 200 miles west of Bergen, in Norway, lying between 50 degs. 48 mins. 30 secs. and 60 degs. 52 mins. north latitude, and between 1 deg. 52 secs. and 1 deg. 57 mins. west longitude from London. Fair Island, one of the Shetland group, lies 25 miles south of the other islands and half way to Orkney, Sumburgh Head, the southern point of Shetland, being 100 miles north-east from Duncansbay Head, the northern point of Caithness, and 52 north-east of Dennis Head, North Ronaldshay, the extreme north point of the Orkneys. There are three principal islands in the group, namely, Mainland, Yell (on the north), and (still further north-east) Unst; on the east of Yell lies Fetlar, which is the largest of the interior islands, the lochs of which are famous for trout, and several of the other islands abound with seal, otter and wild fowl. The next island in point of size is Brassay; the smaller ones are Whalsay, Out Skerries, Samphray, Big Island, Mickle Roe, Papa Stour, Burra, Fona, Trondray, besides a great number of islets, holms and skerries. The highest land in these islands is Roeness Hill, which attains an elevation of 1,447 feet. The Hill of Fonia is next in altitude, being about 1,300 feet above the level of the sea. The aggregate area is 551.4 square miles, or 352,319 acres of land and 9,636 of water. The population in 1891 was 28,711, and in 1901 was 12,413 males and 15,753 females; total, 28,166; and the inhabited houses were in 1891, 5,564, and in 1901, 5,422. The population in 1911 was 27,911.

Early History.—It seems probable that the Romans visited the coasts of Shetland, from the coins of that people which have been discovered—those of Galba, Vespasian, Trajan and Ælius Cæsar; and the remains of a small Roman camp are to be traced on the island of Fetlar. There seems to be little doubt these islands were first inhabited by the Scandinavians, the laws having been administered by "Udallers," who acted as a sort of petty princes, and under these chiefs and the Udal laws cultivated land was free of tax. In the year 875, Harold Harfager, or "The Fair-haired," subdued these islands, and gave them to Count Sigurd, who was the first Earl of Orkney, from whom sprang the true Norwegian dynasties of the Earls of Orkney and Shetland—the latter county being at first too insignificant to be included in the title, although it was included in the grant. On the cession of the Shetland Isles to the Scottish crown, the laws of the former were gradually encroached upon by the endeavours of the Scotch earls to introduce feudal subjection and seigniorage in place of the ancient udal tenures. From 1468, when a marriage was concerted between the Scottish monarch, James III, and the Princess of Norway (when Orkney and Shetland were pledged to the royal husband), to the time when the two countries passed to the English crown, in the persons of Charles I. and II. and afterwards to the Earl of Morton (who sold the estate to Sir Lawrence Dundas), nothing occurs relating to the possession of Shetland that calls for any particular notice. Lord Robert Stuart, natural brother to Queen Mary, had a grant of the islands in 1565 and in 1581 was made justiciar, and in 1612 the islands were erected into a stewardry as Crown property.

Soil, Produce &c.—The general aspect is bleak and barren; and although there is but little to attract in the form of landscape in what may be called the interior of the islands—the whole of them being destitute of wood—their coast scenery presents views of a highly interesting character; and the tourist may here see wild scenery of diversified appearance and picturesque grandeur in the coast of Shetland. The peculiar breed of Shetland ponies are bred for exportation, and these small ponies, or "shelties" as they are called, traverse their way across the wastes without much difficulty. The cattle of Shetland are of a very diminutive breed, a cow weighing from two to three hundred weight upon an average; an ox from three to four, but seldom exceeding five hundred weight. A great abundance of poultry is kept on almost every farm, and small swine are numerous. The sheep are very small, but produce wool of an excellent quality, which is knitted into shawls, veils, stockings, gloves and mitts. Little attention is paid to agriculture, and the system of cultivation adopted is poor, the principal crops grown being oats, potatoes and turnips, the latter introduced early in the last century.

The chief crops in 1910, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," were: oats, 7,829 acres; barley or bere, 1,198; the total corn crop being 9,030 acres; potatoes, 2,722 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,354; cabbage, 705; total green crops, 4,784 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 1,210; not for hay, 710; permanent pasture, for hay, 1,937; not for hay, 39,846 acres; total area of land, 352,319 acres, of which 287,609 acres are mountain and heath land (used for grazing); there are no woods or plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 3,374; other horses, 2,375; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 7,600; other cattle, two years and above, 3,394; one year and under two, 2,491; under one year, 2,734; ewes kept for breeding, 76,584; other sheep, one year and above, 20,791; under one year, 56,597; sows kept for breeding, 92; other pigs, 1,134. The fuel in general use is peat, the cutting and drying of which occupies diligent attention.

The chief support of the Shetlander is dependent on the white fishery—herring, cod and ling abounding on the coasts; besides which many men and boys are employed every season in the Davis Straits whale fishing. Persons are also engaged in angling for the small fry of the coal fish or "gadus carbonarius"—known in Shetland by the name of "sethe." These, which swarm in myriads within the numerous creeks and sounds of this northern archipelago, first appear in May scarcely more than an inch long, and about August they become more abundant, measuring about eight inches in length, and in the early part of the following year they attain the ordinary size of the cod-fish. A profitable fishery then takes place in deep tideways, supplying the inhabitants with a portion of food and oil from the livers for light and other purposes. In 1909 there were 570 fishing boats registered at Lerwick under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," with an aggregate tonnage of 8,890, and employing 2,848 men and boys and 2,850 occasional hands.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered as belonging to Lerwick on the same date was 69 of 2,664 tons.

The Shetland Isles, or county of Shetland, comprise 12 civil parishes, comprising 18 ecclesiastical parishes in two presbyteries and one synod. The only town in this northern group is Lerwick; besides it, there are only a few villages and hamlets on the shores, of which Scalloway is the largest. The islands now pay their proportion of the land tax, and in every other respect have become subject to British laws. They are represented in Parliament as in connection with the Orkneys, to which sheriffdom they belong. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 4,022.

BRESSAY is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, separated from Lerwick, the capital of the islands, by the Sound of Bressay, which is 6 miles in length, with a breadth of from 1 to 3 miles. The original parish comprised Bressay, Burra and Quarff, but in 1830, Burra and Quarff was erected into a separate parish. Previous to the Reformation, there were in Bressay three small churches or chapels, viz: St. Olla's at Gunnista, St. Mary's at Cullensbough, and St. John's at Kirkabaster; the ruins of St. Olla's and St. Mary's still remain, but these, in the former case, consist only of the foundations: the chapel of St. Olla consisted of chancel and nave, together about 27 feet in length, but the nave is proportionate, being nearly as wide as it is long; the walls are much broken, varying in height from 4 to 10 feet, and only the east window is left. To the north-east of Bressay, on the top of a hillock, stands a rude monolith, 10 feet in height, called the "Standing Stoe of Keldabister." At Cullingsburgh is a burial ground, with a very small chancel and a nave placed transversely. The parish church, an ancient structure, contains two marble tablets to members of the Cameron Monat family: the church has been enlarged, and in 1895 was repaired and restored, and two stained windows inserted; there are sittings for 500 persons. Bressay is well known for its bold and beautiful rock scenery, the most striking feature being the Isle of Noss, which lies due east of Bressay and is separated from it by a narrow and dangerous sound; on the west side are fragments of a chapel, 14 feet long, and traces of a burial ground. The Noup of Noss, a grand precipitous height, is nearly 600 feet above the sea level, and here innumerable birds of various kinds may be seen during the summer months, and grey eagles are occasionally found. The "Holm of Noss," a small table-land lying on the south-west, is detached from the main island by a sheer gulf of 85 feet. The island belongs to the Rt. Rev. William Monat Cameron M.A. (formerly Coadjutor Bishop of Capetown), of Gardie House. The area is 7,403 acres; rateable value, £1,593; the population in 1891 was 802, and in 1901, 686.

NOSS ISLAND is included within this parish. The population in 1901 was 7. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 94, East Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal, Papa, Quarff, Mainland and West Burra Islands have been transferred to Lerwick.

DUNROSSNESS is a parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, and embraces the quoad sacra parish of Cunningsburgh with Sandwick, and also Fair Isle, for which see separate headings. It forms the southern extremity of the Shetland Archipelago, and extends about 20 miles south-west from Lerwick. Fitful Head, 923 feet on the south-west, and Sumburgh Head, 300 feet, the extreme southern point and about 100 miles north of Caithness-shire, are in this parish; the latter, 25 miles from Lerwick, is surmounted by a lighthouse, erected in 1820, by George Stevenson, at a cost of nearly £40,000. There are Established and United Free churches, and Baptist and Wesleyan chapels. Opposite Sand Lodge, in this parish, is Monsa Island, and close to its western shore stands what is known as a "Pict's Castle," a cylindrical structure of rude masonry, about 40 feet in height and 158 feet in circumference at the base, and tapering upwards: the lower portion of the wall is 16 feet in thickness, but the upper part not more than 6ft. 5in.; the entrance is over 6ft. high and has a square head and sloping jambs. Sumburgh House is the seat of Mrs. Bruce. Area, 32,131 acres; rateable value (including the above quoad sacra parishes), £5,272; population of the whole parish of Dunrossness in 1891, 3,752, and in 1901, population of parish, 3,638, and of the ecclesiastical district, 1,522.

Fair Isle is in the civil parish, and will be found under a separate heading.

FAIR ISLAND, situated midway between the Orkney and Shetland Isles, 26 miles north-east of North Ronaldshay (Orkney) and 21 south-west of Sumburgh Head, the southernmost point of Shetland, forms part of the civil parish of Dunrossness and is in the poor combination of Zetland and the small debt court district of Lerwick. The island is about 34 miles long and 2 broad, and is the property of Robert H. Bruce esq. J.P. It has generally a level and verdant surface and is bordered by lofty and wildly indented precipices, from which, at the south end, the land falls in fine grassy slopes to a cultivated hollow, extending to about the middle of the island: to the north the ground is mostly coarse and hilly, and serves as pasture: on the east side is the tiny isthmus of Bunes, which has a fine sandy beach, and to the south-east is the curiously formed Sheep Crag peninsula. At Schwarz Gio, south of the Sheep Crag, a ship of the Spanish Armada is said to have been wrecked in 1588. There are lighthouses on the north and south points of the island, and an Established church. The area is 1,939 acres; valuation included in that of Dunrossness; population in 1901 was 147.

FETLAR is an island and parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district, lying east of Yell, from which it is separated by Co'grave Sound, and distant about 34 miles north-north-east of Lerwick. It is a grassy and picturesquely diversified island, and appears to have once had quite a number of chapels, of which there are now scarcely any remains. There are Established and United Free churches, the former being at the head of Tresta Bay, on the south. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 93, Yell Island has been transferred from this parish to Yell. Brough Lodge, in this parish, is the residence of Sir Arthur Thomas Bennet Robert Nicolson bart. D.L., J.P. The area is 9,905 acres; rateable value, £825; population in 1901, 347.

Post & T. Office; Thomas Thomason, sub-postmaster. Letters through Lerwick. Deliveries & dispatches, three times weekly; no sunday delivery. Mid Yell is the nearest money order office, 6 miles distant by sea

LERWICK

LERWICK, the principal town in Shetland and the head of a poor combination, is (by steamer) 272 miles from Leith, 186 from Aberdeen, 165 from Peterhead (Aberdeenshire), 146 from Wick, and 100 from Kirkwall, and is situated on the east coast of Mainland, the largest island of the group. It bears the name of the bay upon whose margin it is built; and that, in turn, derives its name from a long, narrow inlet on the opposite shore of the island of Bressay, called "Lera-voe," remarkable for its extensive deposit of clay and mud; a projecting point at the entrance to "Lera-voe" is called "Leranness," and the whole bay, including the roadstead of Bressay sound, is named "Lerwick," which signifies the "bay of clay" or "mud"—compounded of Icelandic leir, Danish leir (clay, mud), and the Scandinavian "wick," or "vig" (an arm of the sea, an anchorage). The site of the town, founded by Dutch smugglers in 1670, is a segment of the sea shore of nearly half a mile in length, becoming gradually more elevated as it recedes from the coast line and presenting the appearance of a perfect amphitheatre, which, viewed from the opposite anchorage, has a singularly picturesque effect. The principal street extends through the whole length of the town, following the curvature of the sea shore, and numerous lanes and closes, laid out at right angles to it, lead to a spacious road on the eminence above the town. By the "Lerwick Harbour Improvements Act, 1877," an Esplanade was made along the shore, extending nearly to the whole length of the town, and a pier, 350 feet in length, constructed; both were completed in June, 1886; the total cost being £23,089. In 1907 a new quay and covered fish mart, for the use of the fishermen and salesmen, were erected at a cost of £15,000. The houses are built of a species of grey sandstone, which abounds in the immediate vicinity, and is of great durability. The town is well supplied with water brought from Sandy Loch, about 2 miles above the town, in 1871, at a cost of £4,140, and at the same time sewerage works were constructed at a cost of £2,365. The harbour of Lerwick (or Bressay sound, as it is frequently called) is very spacious, and is bounded on the east by the island of Bressay, and on the west by Mainland, having an entrance from the south and another from the north. Its extent may be inferred from the fact that a squadron of war ships has anchored in it. During the year 1910 there entered the port from foreign countries, including vessels from deep sea fisheries, 554 vessels of 56,998 tonnage. During the same period there were cleared 623 vessels of 75,856 tonnage. During the same period 65 vessels of 2,524 tons were registered under part 1 of the "Merchants Shipping Act, 1894." In the general coasting trade of 1910, 658 vessels of 140,532 tons entered and 593 of 122,828 tons cleared.

The herring fishery is carried on here by boats coming from the chief ports on the east coast of Scotland and England, as well as from the Isle of Man; the bulk of the herrings are salted and exported to the continental markets; the value of the cured fish in 1910 was £727,880; the value of fish landed in Shetland in 1909 was £658,140. The number of fishing boats registered in 1910 belonging to the port was 524, with a tonnage of 7,956, employing 2,586 men and boys. The number of vessels registered in the same year was 69 of 2,664 tons. The value of the imports in 1909 was £75,584 and of exports £650,735.

PORT CHARLOTTE stands on a rocky eminence at the northern extremity of the town, and commands the whole range of the anchorage, from the south to the north entrance of the harbour. It was originally built in the reign of Charles II.; but having been dismantled and allowed to fall into a state of dilapidation, it was rebuilt in 1781, and received the name it now bears in honour of the consort of George III. It is at present used as a coast guard station. Lerwick is a burgh of barony, by charter dated 1818, and is now, under the provisions of the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," governed by twelve councillors, including a provost and two bailies; by special provision of the Act, it has power to appoint its own police, separate from the county. The sheriff ordinary, debt recovery and small debt courts are held every Friday during the session. The justice of peace small debt court is held as occasion requires. The commissioners of supply and the provincial synod of Shetland also hold their meetings in Lerwick. The parish church, situated on an eminence at the south end of the town, is a building of stone in the Classic style, but has a somewhat heavy appearance; there is also a United Free church and Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and meeting rooms for Plymouth Brethren and the Salvation Army. The Episcopal church of St Magnus, built in 1864, will seat 240 persons; the Rev. Benjamin Maturin M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, has been rector since 1908. A Roman Catholic church is now (1911) in course of erection. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £5,500, the foundation stone being laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, 24th Jan. 1882, is an edifice of Orkney freestone, in the Scottish Gothic style, from designs by Mr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and was opened on the 12th of August, 1883. In 1887, on the occasion of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, a clock and a fine peal of 8 bells, provided by subscription, were placed in the building, at a cost of about £600, and in 1906, 3 additional bells, the gift of the late E. P. Gilbertson esq. of London, were added. Near the Town Hall are the County buildings, erected in 1875, containing a sheriff court house and offices and a county hall, and attached to these is the prison. The Shetland Literary and Scientific Society have a library and news room in Commercial street, which is open to the public; the library contains about 4,000 volumes. The Anderson Institute, built in 1862, and the Widows' Homes, erected in 1865, are at the south end of the town. Both were founded by the late Arthur Anderson esq. a native of Shetland and founder of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, who represented Orkney and Shetland in parliament during the session of 1847. The Institute, which consists of a higher grade school, is now under the Lerwick school board. The Widows' Homes, erected for the indigent widows of fishermen, for whom a pension fund has also been provided, consists of 12 houses, of from three to six rooms each. The "Gilbert Bain" Memorial Hospital, containing 9 beds, was presented to the county by the sisters of the late Gilbert Bain esq. in 1901. The Combination Hospital for Infectious Diseases, on the South road, contains 8 beds. The Poorhouse, erected outside the town, at a cost of £5,000, contains 55 beds, and is for the poor of the whole of the county. Adjacent is a hospital for the inmates, built at an expenditure of £2,000, and containing 17 beds. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and two branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. Two newspapers are published here weekly, the "Shetland News" and the "Shetland Times." There are two first-class hotels: the "Grand" and the "Queen's." Near Lerwick, on a small freshwater island, reached by stepping-stones from the shore, is a Picts' Castle, called "Burgh Olickamin," similar to that on Mousa island; it is nearly circular, with walls in stages of unequal thickness, varying from over 26 feet at the base to 11 feet at the top, which has a diameter of 33 ft. 6 in. but the total height is now only about 16 feet; the entrance is on the west, and there are openings in the thickness of the wall which led to the summit: this fort was surrounded at a short distance by a curtain or vallum, part of which, on the south side, remains, and at the point where the stepping-stones reach the island, is a square gateway or barlican. A public park was presented to the town in 1895 by the late Robert P. Gilbertson esq. and bears his name. A considerable portion of the produce of Shetland, consisting of fresh and salted fish, beef, oil, butter and hosiery, passes to market through the merchants of Lerwick, who, in turn, import nearly all the groceries, spirits and manufactured goods used throughout the islands. Sheep and cattle sales are held every Monday during September, October and November, and the Shetland Agricultural Society hold their annual show here in August. The area of the civil parish, 10,908 acres; rateable value of landward, £5,372; burghal, £22,043; population in 1891, 5,757 in the civil, and in 1901, civil parish, 6,519, including 51 in the Shetland Combination Poorhouse and 235 shipping; ecclesiastical, 5,431; police burgh, 4,286 and in the town, 4,541.

Quarff, Mainland, East and West Burra, Hevera, Holm of Papal and Papa Island, forming together the quoad sacra parish of Quarff, were on May 15, 1891, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," transferred from Bressay parish to Lerwick. Quarff is situated on Mainland, about 6 miles south-west from Lerwick, and has Established and United Free churches. East and West Burra are small islands situated to the west of the mainland, from which they are separated by Clift sound, and are distant about 4 miles south from Scalloway; there is a United Free church. The area is 5,255 acres; rateable value included with Lerwick. The population of Quarff ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,088. The population in 1901 was: East Burra, 203; West Burra, 612; Hevera, 25; Holm of Papal, 2; Papa, 16.

LUNNASTING, see NESTING.

MAINLAND (sometimes called Shetland) is the largest island, and consists of the parishes of Delting, Dunrossness, Lerwick, Nesting, Northmavine, Sandsting, Tingwall and Walls; its length from Fethaland Point at the northern extremity to Sumburgh Head at the southern, is 55 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; the total area comprises about 240,000 acres; its form is irregular and the coast much indented; the narrow portion of the island begins on the south and runs northward for 20 miles, it then projects westward, containing the parishes of Walls and Sandsting, the breadth at this point being about 18 miles, subsequently the width is reduced to 10 miles, and trends to the east, here containing the parish of Northmavine, which projects to the west, and is 15 miles in extreme length; between the two westerly projections lies St. Magnus Bay, and to the east of the northern parish is Yell Sound, which divides it from the island of that name. Mainland contains the two principal towns of the group, Lerwick and Scalloway.

MID YELL, see YELL.

MOSSBANK, see DELTING.

NESTING is a parish on the eastern side of Mainland Island, in Zetland poor combination and the small debt court district of Lerwick; it includes the quoad sacra parish and island of Whalsay, and the islands of Bound Skerries, Burrie Skerries, Gruna Skerria and Housie Skerries, as well as the kirktowns of Lunna and Nesting, which contain the two Established churches of the Mainland portion of the parish; there is a Wesleyan chapel at Nesting and a Baptist chapel at LUNNASTING.

WHALSAY ISLAND lies to the east of Mainland, from which it is divided by Lunna Sound, and is about 15 miles north-east from Lerwick, with which town it has steam communication three times a week. There is an Established church on the island.

The SKERRIES ISLANDS (or Out Skerries) lie a little to the north-east of Whalsay. Here is an Established Mission church.

On BOUND SKERRIES ISLAND is a lighthouse.

WHALSAY and Skerries form a quoad sacra parish. The population in 1901 was 1,099.

VIDLIN is a hamlet on Mainland, with a steamer pier and post office, about 24 miles north from Lerwick, to which town a steamer sails once a week. The total area of the parish, including Lunnasting, Whalsay and Out Skerries, is 30,983 acres; acreage of Nesting proper being 13,523; of Lunnasting, 11,806, and of Whalsay, 4,881, and the Skerries, 773; rateable value of the entire parish is £2,352.

The population of the entire parish in 1901 was 2,480, being 1,381 in Nesting and Lunnasting (Mainland Island), 975 in Whalsay and 124 in the four Skerries.

Post & T. Office, Skellister (Nesting); Mrs. Catherine Gray, sub-postmistress. Letters through Lerwick. Deliveries & dispatches, four times weekly; no Sunday delivery of letters. Lerwick is the nearest money order office

NORTHMAVINE is a parish, in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick small debt court district. It comprises the most northerly portion of Mainland Island, is about 15 miles in length and from 5 to 10 in breadth. Hillswick, on the west side, the principal village, is 36 miles north-north-west by road from Lerwick and contains the parish church, erected in 1733, and occupying the site of the ancient church of St. Magnus. OLLABERRY is a small village on the east side, about 8 miles from Hillswick, and has a United Free church. At North Roe, in the extreme north of the parish, is an Established Mission church and a Wesleyan chapel, and at ESHANESS, on the extreme west, is another United Free church; at SULLOM, to the south, is a Congregational chapel. HILLSWICK is frequented in the summer by a large number of tourists. The St. Magnus hotel, belonging to the North of Scotland and Orkney and Shetland Steam Navigation Co. is beautifully situated amid fine scenery, and has both loch and sea fishing free to visitors. There are three whaling stations in the parish. The area is 49,037 acres; rateable value, £2,712; population in 1901, 2,014.

SANDWICK together with Cunningsburgh forms a quoad sacra parish, on Mainland, taken from Dunrossness, and in Zetland poor combination and Lerwick
small debt court district, and is about 14
miles south-south-west from Lerwick.
Here is an Established church and United Free and Wesleyan Missions, and a Public Hall. Mousa island, noticed under Dun-rossness, is about a mile to the east.
There is a lighthouse on Ness Head,
and a new pier, 290 feet in length, boat
slip and quay were constructed in 1904
at a cost of £7,500 at Brownie's Taing.
The fishing industry has very much increased at this place, and there is a fine
fleet of sailing boats. The telegraph cable laid in 1906 to Faroe and Iceland has its shore end at Sandwick, and connects with the land line to Lerwick and all parts of the United Kingdom. There is an Established church as well as United Free and Wesleyan missions. The area is 9,559 acres; valuation included with Dunrossness; the population in 1901 (including Cunningsburgh) was 2,116.

SCALLOWAY is a village and seaport
in the parish of Tingwall, 6½ miles from Lerwick, on the north side of a fine bay on the west side of Mainland, and anciently
the capital of Shetland. Here are Established and United Free churches and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, a Public Hall and a Custom House; here also are sub-branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Near the village, on the east side of the bay, and situated on a ness jutting south towards the island
of Trondra, are the ruins of Scalloway Castle, erected in 1600 by Patrick Stewart, 2nd Earl of Orkney (of that family), and Lord Zetland; these consist chiefly of an irregular square tower, with gables and angle turrets, and windows barred with gratings. Fishing is the chief industry,
the hauls consisting principally of cod,
ling, haddock and herring, and for facilitating this trade there are several quays, warehouses and coepages. Some of the inhabitants possess fenced ground, and have erected houses for themselves. The village is well supplied with water, which is conveyed in pipes from the Scord above, and in 1906 a reservoir holding 50,000 gallons was constructed. On the west shore is a spring of excellent water, the flow from which is uninfluenced by the seasons, being constant and abundant; but it is covered by the sea at high water. There is now a pier here at which steamers call. The population of the village in 1901 was 857.

TINGWALL is a parish, comprising
the islands of Hidesay, Langa, Linga, Oxna
and Trondra, and the districts of Tingwall, Whiteness and Weisdale on Mainland, and in this portion is situated the large village of Scalloway, which will be found under a separate heading; Whiteness and Weisdale form a quoad sacra parish. The parish is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland. There are Established churches in the villages of Tingwall and Whiteness;
that at Tingwall was rebuilt in 1805 on an ancient site at the head of a fresh water loch about 4 miles north of Scalloway; there is also a United Free church
at Weisdale and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels at Whiteness. Tingwall, as its name implies, was at one time the place of meeting for the folkthong or great assembly of the people for legislative purposes. "Gallows Hill" is so called from its having formerly been the place of execution; the last who suffered on the spot are said to have been two females, who fell a sacrifice to superstition in the 17th century for the alleged crime of witchcraft. The area of the entire parish is 29,206 acres; rateable value, £6,351; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,329, and in 1901, 2,273, viz.: 195 on the islands and 2,078 on Mainland, of which the village of Scalloway contained 857.

TRONDRA ISLAND, which lies immediately off the west coast, had in 1901 a population of 151. Hildesay island lies north-west, and Oxna and others to the west.

The population of the quoad sacra parish in 1901 was 771.

UNST, the most northerly of the large islands, and separated from Yell by the Blue Mull Sound, is also a parish which includes the islands of Balta, Muckle Flugga and Uyea, and is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland; it is 16 miles in length from north to south and about 6 miles in extreme breadth, but its coast line on the east is irregular and deeply indented; Saxa Vord hill, to the north of the island, reaches a height of 935 feet. At Cowfield the juridical assemblies or folkings were once held, but these were afterwards removed to Tingwall on Mainland. Baltasound, about the middle of the island, is, after Lerwick, the second chief station of the herring fishing in these islands, and here are Established and United Free churches, and there is also a United Free church on Uyea Sound, to the south of the island. At the head of Balta Sound is the House of Bunes, the residence of Laurence Edmondston esq. J.P.; here, in 1817-8, Jean Baptiste Biot, the French chemist and philosopher, and Capt. Henry Kater carried out their experiments in order to determine the variations in the length of the seconds pendulum, and there still exists in the grounds of Bunes two stones used by Biot in his measurements. A rock on the coast has a natural arch or tunnel nearly 300 feet long, through which boats can pass. Haroldswick is a village a little north of Baltasound, and has a Wesleyan chapel and traces of two ancient churches. In 1817 chromate of iron was found in the vicinity of Bunes. Balta island lies off the east coast and Flugga is off the extreme north point; Uyea is an island in Skuda Sound, at the south end of Unst, and contains remains of a chapel, 37 feet in length, with an apparent chancel at the west end about 13 feet long. The island of Unst is well stocked with wild fowl. The area comprises 24,498 acres; rateable value, £6,126; the population of the entire parish was in 1891, 2,280, and in 1901, 1,946, smaller islands having only 6 inhabitants in 1901.

WALLS is a parish comprising the islands of Foula, Linga, Papa Stour and Vailla and the districts of Walls and Sandness on Mainland, the distance from Walls to Lerwick being 24 miles by road. The parish is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and poor combination of Zetland, and occupies the western extremity of Mainland to the south of St. Magnus Bay, the southern part of the parish containing the village or kirktown of Walls, which contains Established and United Free churches and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and at Sandness, near the west coast, is an Established Church Mission. Foula Island, in this parish, lies 27 miles west from Scalloway, and is high and magnificently wild; it is about 3 miles in length by $1\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth; the land on the east side is low, but on the west rises abruptly to a lofty ridge, the highest point of which reaches 1,369 feet above the sea level. The principal village is Hametown, at the south end of the island, situated in a pastoral and agricultural district, but Ham, on the centre of the east coast, is the chief place of business, since it has a small harbour into which laden craft may run. Here is an Established Mission church and a Congregational chapel: the former, standing in a burial ground near Hametown village, is a quaintly simple edifice of uncertain date, kept in repair by the proprietor of the island. At the north end of the island are the "Friars' Rocks," a magnificent stack, one of which is raised over three lofty arches, and on the summit of another is a ruined burgh or fort. Papa Stour Island lies about 2 miles off the north coast of the parish, and is noted for its granite precipices and caves, in which seals are found at certain seasons. This island was visited by the Irish missionaries, who also settled at Iona. It has a low landing place opposite Melby on Mainland, from which the land rises by smooth grassy slopes towards the north-west, where it ends in precipices of singular grandeur and picturesqueness. On the island is an Established Mission church. VAILLA ISLAND lies south-west of Mainland, in Vailla Sound, and Linga Island on the north in Olna Firth. The area of the entire parish comprises 29,856 acres; that of Foula, 3,299, and Papa Stour, 2,107 acres; total rateable value, £1,925; the population of the parish in 1901 was 1,995, which included 222 in Foula Island and 272 on Papa Stour Island and 33 on the smaller islands.

YELL is a large island lying between the islands of Mainland and Unst, about 2 miles south-west of the latter, and separated from it by Blue Mull Sound and from Mainland (Northmavine parish) by Yell Sound; it formerly comprised the parish of Mid and South Yell and part of that of Fetlar and North Yell, but under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," and by boundary order No. 93, the whole of the first-named parish and that part of the parish of Fetlar and North Yell which appertained to Yell Island were united into one parish under the name of Yell: the ecclesiastical divisions consist of the Old Mid and South Yell parish and the quoad sacra parishes of North Yell, Mid Yell and South Yell, and the whole is in the small debt court district of Lerwick and the poor combination of Zetland. The village of Reafirth, or Mid Yell, lies about 35 miles north from Lerwick, and has an Established church and a Wesleyan Mission chapel; that of the kirk-town of North Yell is 10 miles further north, and contains Established and United Free churches. There is also an Established church at South Yell, a mission at Westsandwick, and a United Free Mission at West Yell. The Episcopal church of St. Colman, at Burravoe, south of the island, will seat 164 persons. The Rev. Alfred Blackham has been priest in charge since 1902. At Reafirth, within a burial ground, are remains of an older church of the 17th century, with a gable bell-turret. Near Gloop Voe, in the extreme north of the island, at a place called Toft, stands the ruined church of Cullivoe, known as "Kirk of Ness": it is a rudely built structure, about 34 feet long and from 12 to over 15 feet wide, with several square-headed windows and a doorway. The area of the civil parish is 52,129 acres; rateable value, £3,255; the population of the entire parish in 1901 was 2,483, composed of 1,155 in Mid Yell, 637 in South Yell, and 691 in North Yell.

STIRLINGSHIRE

THIS is a midland county, marking the commencement of the Highlands, and is bounded on the south-west by Dumbartonshire, south by Lanarkshire and Linlithgowshire, on the west by Dumbartonshire, north by Perthshire and on the east by the very small county of Clackmannan and that of Linlithgowshire; from its position at the head of the Firth of Forth it is to some extent a seaboard county, Grangemouth having an extensive trade; its boundaries are in many places distinctly marked by water-courses or lakes—the principal boundary line on the north being the river Forth, the Avon on the east, the Kelvin river on the south, the Endrick water in the south-west, and Loch Lomond on the west. The figure of the county is extremely irregular; its length from east to west is 36 miles, but following the curvature of its form from east to its northern point, it will measure upwards of 45 miles; its breadth varies from 12 to 20 miles, except where it turns towards the north, and here the distance across is very trifling. The shire comprises an area of 451.3 square miles, or 288,842 acres of land and 3,003 of water. The population in 1891 was 118,021, and in 1901, 72,773 males and 69,518 females; total, 142,291; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 23,180, and in 1901 were, inhabited, 28,115; uninhabited, 1,750; building, 363. In size Stirling stands as twentieth, and in population as the ninth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1911 was 161,003.

Early History.—Originally part of the Pictish possessions, it appears to have passed under the Roman rule about A.D. 80, and they have left traces of their long occupation in camps &c. while the wall of Antoninus, which extends from the Clyde to the Forth, runs across the southern portion of the county. Abandoned by the Romans in 410 it again fell under the Pictish rule until they were expelled by the Saxons and Scots, and about 1060 it became more settled under Malcolm (Ceanmor), though even then subject to Norman raids, while two centuries later Edward I. extended his forays thus far, capturing the castle of Stirling in 1296. The victory of Stirling Bridge by Wallace over the English in 1297, and a similar victory by Bruce, at Bannockburn, 24th June, 1314, checked the English for a time. James II. was born in Stirling castle, and in 1457 he stabbed the 8th Earl of Douglas in a small room in the same castle. In June, 1488, James fought his rebel nobles at Sauchiehall. In 1528 James V. having escaped from the dominion of Angus, the Regent, assumed control of affairs at Stirling, where he subsequently built the palace still existing in the castle. On 29 July, 1567, James VI. still an infant, was crowned at Stirling, and Murray (who was shot in 1570) assumed the regency; the noble who succeeded him in this office was killed in September, 1571, by a band of Mary's adherents who surprised the town, and in 1651 Charles II. started from Stirling on his expedition to England which terminated so disastrously at Worcester. In the 12th century David I. erected several religious houses, particularly that at Cambuskenneth, and these communities tended to civilize the rude manners of the inhabitants.

Surface, Soil, Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—The part of the county which is adjacent to Loch Lomond, is a mountainous district; here Ben Lomond rises to the height of more than 3,192 feet. East from this the land becomes flat, or gently inclining towards the Forth, or the Endrick. In the centre of the county the ground is again elevated into a series of hills, of which those of the greatest altitude are from 1,300 to 1,500 feet high; from one of these, in Kilsyth parish, there is obtained a view computed to embrace an extent of 12,000 square miles. Many of the hills in the central, and more especially in the southern division, have their sides and even their summits clothed with a fine grass sward, which affords excellent pasturage for sheep. The eastern division of the county consists of carse land, in many places quite flat, and in others presenting a succession of inclined planes, gradually rising towards the south from the rich valley of the Forth. Almost every variety of soil to be met with in Scotland occurs in Stirlingshire; but the most common and the most fertile is the alluvial, or carse land, which occupies many thousand acres on the banks of the Forth. In this species of soil there are beds of shells, clay, marl and moss. In the western and central districts, on the banks of the rivers, the land is generally of a light and gravelly description; while patches of rich loam form the surface in other parts of the county. Large crops of oats, barley, beans, turnips, potatoes &c. are raised, and the culture of artificial grasses has also been very generally adopted in this county. The extensive ranges of moor in the upland district are exclusively devoted to the feeding of sheep, which are of the old black-faced, or Highland breed; there are comparatively few cattle reared, the county being supplied from the Highlands.

The crops in 1910, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," were—Oats, 18,039 acres; barley or bere, 1,836; beans, 2,299; wheat, 1,534; rape, 293; the total corn crops being 23,807 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,062 acres; potatoes, 3,035; total of green crops, 7,702; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 13,104; not for hay, 12,332; permanent pasture, for hay, 6,026; not for hay, 51,126; bare fallow, 891 acres; total area of land, 288,842 acres, of which there was—mountain and heath land, 134,519 (used for grazing); woods and plantations, 14,703; small fruit, 172, and orchards, 116 acres.

The live stock in 1910 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 3,397; unbroken horses, 1,087; cows and heifers in milk, 3,662; in calf, but not in milk, 2,685; other cattle, two years and above, 7,508; one year and under two, 6,232; under one year, 4,388; ewes kept for breeding, 54,637; other sheep, one year and above, 20,771; under one year, 43,868; sows kept for breeding, 231; other pigs, 1,695.

The mineral productions, as appears from the Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics for 1909, include coal, fire clay, gravel and sand, igneous rocks, iron ore, limestone, oil shale and sandstone. The principal coal pits are in the southern base of the Lennox Hills; but this valuable article is also obtained in the eastern district in the vicinity of the Forth and Clyde canal, and in such quantities as not only to be sufficient for home consumption, but to admit of exportation. The production of coal in 1909 was—East Stirling, 1,050,672 tons; value, £345,846; West Stirling, 1,866,636 tons; value, £746,654; fire clay, 160,206 tons; value, £31,954; brick clay, 10,257 tons; iron ore, 49,412 tons; value, £19,200. There are four blast furnaces, but the production is returned jointly with those of Lanarkshire, viz.: Lanarkshire, 54 3-12th; Stirlingshire, 3; pig iron made, 963,505 tons. The total quantity of coal used in the manufacture of coke was 562,501 tons, the quantity of coke obtained being: at gas works, 22,961 tons, and at gas ovens, 344,495 tons. The production of gravel and sand, 62,042 tons; igneous rocks, 85,775 tons; limestone, 3,912 tons; sandstone, 40,752 tons. The staple manufacture of this county is iron goods, both cast and malleable, the chief seat of which is at Carroo, near Falkirk. The making of nails for carpenters' work is also carried on in several parishes (especially in that of Saint Ninians); at Saint Ninians are likewise manufactured tartans; at Stirling, carpets, tartans and shawls; and at Bannockburn tweeds are produced, while in other towns and localities are calico printing works, large distilleries, tanneries, breweries, chemical and other establishments. At Grangemouth 2 steamers, of 1,142 net tonnage, were built, and 1 steam, built for foreigners, together of 1,329 tonnage.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The Forth is the principal river in Stirlingshire. It takes its rise from a spring near the summit of Ben Lomond, and, after receiving in its course the Teith, the Allan, and the Devon, expands into the estuary called the Firth of Forth. Between Stirling and Alloa, a distance of only 7 miles in a direct line, the stretch is more than 20 by the course of the river, owing to the numerous windings, which are termed "the links of the Forth." The next river in magnitude is the Carron, which has its source in the central district, and is navigable for vessels of large burthen for about 2 miles from the place where it forms a junction with the Forth. The other streams are the Avon, the Endrick, the Blank, and the Kelvin. Loch Lomond, a fine inland lake 23 miles in length by 5 in breadth at the widest part, to a little over 1 at the narrowest, extends from Balloch, 5 miles north of Dumbarton, to Ardnie, 2 miles south of Forverman, and contains several considerable islands, of which three principal ones, Loch Cruin, Inchfad, and Inchealloch, belong to this county, and a line drawn from the lake shore 1 mile west of Buchanan Kirk, to the centre of the Loch, and thence continued northward, passing to the east of Incheonaig, up the middle of the Loch to a point just east of Inchevow, above Inverness, forms the western boundary of the county; there is some fishing and the Loch is much frequented by tourists in search of scenery. Ben Lomond lies to the east, about half way up the Loch, and the western side is skirted by large mountains for most of its length. The Forth and Clyde canal and the Union canal pass through the county, the first aimed debouching at Grangemouth and the Union joining it from Edinburgh, at Falkirk. There are also numerous springs, but the most noted are the Airthrey Wells, at Bridge of Allan, the waters of which contain saline and other properties. The eminences of great altitude above the level of the sea are: Ben Lomond, 3,262 feet; Ben a' Choin, 2,524; Maol Mohr, 2,200; Ben Bhrearc, 1,922; Ben Uird, 1,957; and Earls Seat, Campsie Fells, 1,894 feet.

The railways running from Glasgow into the south of the county are the Alloa, Stirling and Perth branch of the North British line, which enters the county at Castledary, and passing by Larbert and St. Ninians to Stirling, throws out a branch to Alloa, where it joins the line of the same railway from Stirling, via Dunfermline, to Edinburgh; there is another line from Glasgow and Yoker, entering the county at Summerston and running to Kilsyth, from whence a branch goes to Bonnybridge, and over this the Caledonian line runs to Larbert; the North British railway has also a branch from Lenzie Junction, via Kirkintilloch, running north-west, by Strathlaine to Gartness, where it joins the line from Stirling to Balloch and from Buchlyvieon this latter line nearer to Stirling runs a branch to Aberfoyle; the only other line is that running north and north-west from Stirling to Doune and Callander, by Bridge of Allan; this belongs to the Caledonian railway.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Stirlingshire comprises 22 complete civil parishes and 25 complete and 12 parts of ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Perth and Stirling. It contains two parliamentary burghs—Stirling (which is the only royal burgh of the county), and Falkirk; the former joins with Culross, Queensferry South, Dunfermline and Inverkeithing in returning a member to Parliament, and Falkirk is associated in representation with Linlithgow, Lanark, Airdrie and Hamilton. The county sends one representative. The parliamentary constituency in 1911 was 20,294.

AIRTH is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Falkirk, about 5 miles in length by about 1½ to 3 in breadth. The ancient village stands on the banks of the Forth, nearly opposite to Kennetpans, and has a station, 2 miles east, on the Larbert and Alloa branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 27 miles west from Edinburgh, between 8 and 9 south-west from Stirling and 6 north-west from Falkirk. It was at one period a place of considerable importance, but is now greatly decayed. The Pow burn, a tributary of the Forth, runs through the centre of the parish. There are three small ports or harbours on the Forth, into which vessels of light burthen can enter, and two ferries across that estuary, at which are boats for the transport of cattle, carriages &c. to Alloa and other places on the Fife side. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew at Dunmore affords 30 sittings. The Very Rev. George Grub F.S.A. has been rector since 1906. The salmon fishery is prosecuted here with considerable success. In the parish is an ancient tower, of very early date, called "Wallace's Tower," from the circumstance of that hero having privily entered the building, slain the captain and one hundred men, and released his uncle, who was a prisoner; the tower is still in tolerable preservation. At Dunmore is another tower, and at Dunmore Hill, at least half a mile from the present course of the river, an anchor was found some years since. This place, in 1633, conferred the title of Earl on the Grahams, Earls of Monteth; it became extinct in the male line on the death of the 2nd Earl, 12 Sept. 1694, but the Earldom of Monteth has several times been claimed, though unsuccessfully. Airth Castle, the property of the Misses Graham, but now (1911) occupied by Robert McLaren esq. J.P. is an elegant mansion in the Gothic style standing in a park about 1 mile long by half a mile wide. Dunmore Park, about 1 mile long by half a mile wide, is the seat of Claud A. Hamilton esq. Miss Dawson, Alexander Nimmo Sheriff esq. of Carronvale, The Carron Co. James J. Stainton McLaren esq. of Ratho Park, and C. E. Walker Ogilvie esq. of Pocknave, are the principal landowners. The whole parish, with the exception of the hills of Airth and Dunmore, is a level tract, and the soil rich and well cultivated. Acreage of parish, 5,561; rateable value, £12,456; population in 1891, 1,325, in 1901, 1,360, of which the village contained 558.

BALDERNOCK (anciently Bather-nock), is a parish in the southern extremity of the county and in the small debt court district of Lennoxton. It is about 3½ miles long by 2½ broad, and is bounded by the river Kelvin and Allander on the side fronting north-east and by Campsie, and on the south-west lies the loch of Bardowie. The church is about 2 miles north-west from Balmore station, and 1 mile from Bardowie station, both of which are in the parish, on the Glasgow and Bonnybridge section of the North British railway, and 7 north from Glasgow. The parish abounds with cairns and similar memorials; the most remarkable of its antiquities is a structure denominated "the auld wife's lifts," consisting of three stones, two of which are laid on the earth close by the side of each other, and on the top of this the third is placed in the same direction, the ends in each case pointing north and south; the whole is 18 feet in length by 11 in breadth and 7 in height. Acreage of the parish, 4,320; rateable value, £9,785; population (1901), 582.

BALFRON is a parish and village in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district, about 6 miles in length and 3 in breadth, and bounded on the east and south-east by Gargunnoch and Fintry, on the south by the Endrick water, which separates it from Killearn, west by Dry-

men, and on the north by Buchrye and Kippen. The village stands on the declivity of a hill, and has a station 2 miles west on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway, and is supplied with water from a spring on Spittal and Shean farms, the works of which cost £800 and £700 respectively. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. A Board school now stands on the site of the old parish school, with a dwelling house for the master; the school will hold about 200 children, and is under the charge of one of the few remaining schoolmasters appointed by the heritors prior to the passing of the Education Act. There is a branch of the British Linen Bank in the village. Acreage of the parish, 7,821; rateable value, £9,241; population in 1891, 1,202, and in 1901, 1,092, of which the village contained 737.

BANNOCKBURN is a small town and quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile from that place, on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and on both sides, but chiefly on the east bank of the Bannockburn rivulet, which here runs through a glen, and after a course of a few miles falls into the Forth. It has a station half a mile east on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, and is 3 miles south from Stirling and 8 north from Falkirk. There is an Established church, and United Free churches at Ladywell, Murrayfield and Cowie, and a Roman Catholic church. The manufacture of tweeds, tartans, and carpets is carried on. Coal is obtained in the vicinity in great abundance. In this district the country is characterised by its long descending braes, with a northern exposure to the Firth of Forth, and it was on one of these uplands, between this village and that of St. Ninians, that was fought on the 24th June, 1314, the memorable and decisive battle of Bannockburn; the result of which was the permanent security of the independence of Scotland. In this conflict the army of the English, under Edward II. and the Earls of Pembroke and Gloucester, numbering about 100,000 men, attempted to relieve Stirling Castle, then besieged by Robert Bruce, but was defeated with heavy loss, although the Scots numbered considerably less. Bruce's forces were stationed along the front of an eminence called Gillies Hill, and extended from south-west to north-east, between the farm of Greystell and the village of St. Ninians. About half a mile south from the latter, upon the summit of a commanding elevation called Calden

Hill, is a large stone, termed the "Bored Stone," having a hole in the top in which the Scottish king inserted his standard on the day of battle. The height called the Cat Craig Hill, from which the English king watched the progress of the battle, has been almost quarried away. At Milton, about half a mile from the town of Bannockburn, are the remains of "Beaton's Mill," to which James III. retreated after the battle of Sauchieburn, fought in June, 1488, about 2 miles further to the south-west. There is a Public Hall in the village, erected at a cost of £1,700. The Fever Hospital here, erected in 1895 at a cost of about £3,000, and enlarged in 1903, is under the control of the County Central District Committee. A fair is held in Bannockburn on the third Tuesday in June (old style). Bannockburn town contained a population in 1901 of 2,444, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 4,050.

COWIE is a rapidly increasing village in the parish. The population in 1901 was 849.

BONNYBRIDGE is a parish and modern town of considerable importance,
 on the Bonny water and the Firth and Clyde canal, and has two railway stations, one belonging to the Caledonian,
 the other to the Caledonian and North British Companies jointly, and within a radius of a mile are the High station and Greenhill Junction station, also on the Caledonian system. The village is 4 miles west from Falkirk, 9 south from Stirling and 17 north-west from Glasgow. Bonnybridge was formed into a quoad sacra
 parish in 1878, from Denny, Dunipace
 and Falkirk civil parishes. The Established church is a plain stone edifice,
 erected in 1878, and has about 600 sittings.
 Here is a Roman Catholic church. At High Bonnybridge is a United Free Mission church. In the village is a large public hall and library, erected in 1900-1,
 to which Mr. Andrew Carnegie gave £800 towards the purchase of books. There are five foundries. The foundry of Smith and Wellstood Limited, on the banks of the Forth and Clyde canal, is celebrated for the manufacture of light and ornamental castings and American stoves; there are also five brick works, two saw mills and grain mills. The population of the ecclsiastical parish in 1901 was 4,264, and of the town, 3,009.

BOTHKENNAR is an ecclesiastical parish in Grangemouth civil parish and in Falkirk small debt court district, and is about 2 miles long by an equal breadth, bounded on the north by the parish of Airth, on the west by the parish of Larbert, on the south by the parishes of Falkirk and Polmont, and on the east by the river Forth. The Established church is about 3 miles north from Falkirk. The parish is a rich and fertile district, and there is abundance of coal. The Marquess of Zetland K.T. P.C.; the Carron Co.; the trustees of the late T. George Dundas esq. of Carron Hall; the trustees of the late William Dawson esq. of Powfouls, and Henry Burn Callander esq. of Preston Hall, Dalkeith, are the principal land-owners. The population in 1901 was 1,972.

BRIDGE OF ALLAN is a popular watering place on the river Allan, about 1½ miles from its confluence with the Forth, and nearly at the western extremity of the Ochill hills. It is a police burgh and quoad sacra parish erected from Logie civil parish, with a station on the main line of the Caledonian railway, and is 1½ miles north from Causewayhead station, which is in the parish, on the Stirling and Edinburgh line of the North British railway, and 3 north from Stirling, 13 north-by-west from Falkirk, and about 8 north-west from Alloa. The bridge from which the town takes its name crosses the river Allan near the entrance to the burgh. In 1810 Bridge of Allan was made a burgh under the provisions of the Lindsay Act; its municipal affairs are managed by a Town Council of nine councillors, who elect a provost and two bailies under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1832." The higher part of the town in the neighbourhood of the wells and Coneyhill is of considerable elevation, forming a terrace or plateau, on which many villas are erected, and the sloping sides of the hill are adorned with trees, and command views of the vale of Menteith, Stirling, with its castle and carse, watered by the Forth, Teith and Allan, and other objects of interest. This place is resorted to as well for pleasure as on account of the bracing quality of its air and salubrity of the climate, the beauty of the surrounding scenery, and the fame of its saline mineral waters, which are in the higher village, within a few minutes' walk from the centre of the town; these springs, regarded as the chief saline waters in Scotland, contain 47½ grains of common salt in 16oz. and a nearly similar amount of muriate of lime. Prior to the discovery of the springs, the place was comparatively little known, but there are now many well-built houses and villas, and several hotels, including the Royal Hotel, the Queen's Hotel and Carmichael's Private Hotel. There is a Parish church and two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Saviour, built in 1857, will seat 200 persons; the rectory, net yearly value £339, has been held since 1911 by the Rev. John Arnott MacCulloch hon. D.D. of St. Andrews University. In the burgh are reading rooms and libraries, the M'Farlane gallery of sculpture and pictures and a bowling green. Airthrey Castle is the seat of Mrs. Graham. Westerton, the property of the trustees of the late General Sir James E. Alexander K.C.B. (d. 1885), is now (1911) occupied by Henry Barr esq. Both Airthrey Castle and Keir House are open once a week to the public, and there are also several miles of good angling, a good golf course and public tennis courts. The "Strathallan Meeting" for Scottish athletic games is held annually on the first saturday of August, in the public park, at the east end of the village. Among the business establishments are the large cotton manufacturing works of Messrs. R. Pullar and Sons Limited, and a paper manufactory. The trustees of the late General Sir James E. Alexander K.C.B. and Mrs. Graham, of Airthrey Castle, are owners of the manor. The area of the burgh is 774 acres; rateable value, £27,391; population of Bridge of Allan in 1891, 3,207, and in 1901, 3,240; ecclesiastical population in 1891, 2,690, and in 1901, 2,777.

Post, M. O. & T. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office; Miss E. M. Hall, post-mistress. Deliveries, 7 & 11 a.m. (to callers) & 2.15 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 6.45 & 11 a.m. & 4, 5.45, 7.45 & 10.30 p.m.; Sunday, 4 p.m.; open on Sunday for telegraph from 8 to 10 a.m

BUCHANAN is a parish and village, in the western extremity of the county, in Dumbarton poor combination and the small debt court district of Stirling, about 19 miles in length by 2 to 5 in breadth, and bounded by Dumbartonshire and Perthshire and Drymen parish on the north, Loch Lomond on the west, by the river Endrick on the south, and by Drymen on the east. The river Forth rises in the district, at the back of Ben Lomond, and the Endrick waters intersect the parish. Lake Arklet, about 1 mile long by half a mile wide, is in the northern extremity of the parish, and from it flows the Arklet water into Loch Lomond. The village is about 4 miles north-west from Drymen station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 12 north from Dumbarton and 24 west-by-south from Stirling, and has an Established church. Loch Lomond is a large inland lake, 23 miles long by 5 broad at its widest part, and 1 at its narrowest point. The boundary line between the counties of Stirling and Dumbarton commences at the loch shore about 1 mile west of Buchanan Kirk to the centre of the loch, and thence continues northwards to the west of Inchcrun Island, up the centre of the loch to a point just east of Vow Island. There are several islands in the lake, of which Buckinch, Caerdach, Inchailloch, Inchfad and Inchcrun are included in Stirlingshire boundary; on Inchailloch are the foundations of a church, 51 feet in length. At Rowardennan is a ferry to Iuveruglas, in Dumbartonshire. There are several mountains in the parish, including Ben Lomond, 3,192 feet high; Ben a Choin, 2,524 feet; Ptarmigan, 2,398 feet; Mael Mor, 2,249 feet; Cruinn a Rheinn, 2,077 feet, and Ben Uird, 1,957 feet. Rob Roy's cave and prison are both in this parish. The Montrose Home, opened by the Duchess of Montrose in May, 1891, is at Balmaha, on the borders of Loch Lomond; the institution, the cost of which was entirely defrayed by the Duchess, is in connection with the Evangelistic Institute of Glasgow, and will hold 30 poor children, who are boarded for two weeks. Buchanan Castle, which occupies the site of the old residence destroyed by fire in 1850, is the seat of His Grace the Duke of Montrose K.T., A.D.C. Inrd Lieutenant of the county; it stands on the margin of Loch Lomond, near the Fort of Inversnaid, and is surrounded by a large park. The castle obtained its present name from having, prior to 1682, when it was purchased by the Montrose family, belonged to the Buchanans, and the place has, since 1707, conferred the title of Marquess on the Dukes of Montrose. Acreage of the parish, 41,644; rateable value, £9,555; population, 1901, 487.

BUCHLYVIE is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed from Kippen and Drymen civil parishes, and is in Stirling small debt court district and parliamentary voting district of Balfour. The village is on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, and has a station, 1 mile north, on the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway, which is also the junction of the Aberfoyle branch, and is 14 miles west from Stirling and 27 north from Glasgow. There are Established and United Free churches. From Port of Menteith station, which is in Kippen parish and on the same railway, the tourist may proceed to the Lake of Menteith, in Perthshire, in which are situated the islands of Inchmahome and Tullis; on the former are considerable remains of an Augustinian monastery, founded in 1238 by Walter (Comyn), Earl of Menteith, and dedicated to St. Colmoe; the ruins include the choir and nave of the church, together 161 feet in length: the east window is of five lancets under a single arch: on the north side of the nave are three pointed arches, two of which opened to a destroyed aisle or chapel, the other to a north-west tower: the west doorway has good mouldings, and on either side are two acutely-pointed blank arches: the style is generally of Early Gothic character. Many historical associations are connected with the place, among which may be mentioned the fact that Queen Mary retired here after the battle of Pinkie, 10 Ang. 1547, and planted a box-wood bower, part of which still remains. Here also Sir Walter Scott conceived the idea of writing his "Lady of the Lake." Arrigibbon Glen, much frequented for the grandeur of the scenery, is in the neighbourhood. Population in 1891, 806 in the ecclesiastical parish and 313 in the village, and in 1901, 815 in the ecclesiastical parish and 386 in the village.

CAMPSIE is a parish, in Stirling small debt court district; it lies in the central part of the county, and is 8 miles in length by 7 in breadth, and bounded on the north by the parish of Fintry, by Baldernock and Strathblane on the west, on the south by Cadder and Kirkintilloch, in Lanarkshire, and on the east by Kilsyth; it consists of a fertile strath or valley, bounded on the north by the Campsie hills or fells, which reach an elevation of about 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The rivers Kelvin and Glazart pass through this parish, which is intersected by the two great roads from Kippen to Glasgow and from the latter city to Edinburgh. Earl's Seat mountain, 1,804 feet in height, is on the northern boundary of the parish. The church stands about 1 mile north from Campsie Glen station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway, 9 north from Glasgow and about 20 south-west from Stirling. The Lennox Joint Fever Hospital is situated in this parish, and was opened in 1900; its area comprises the burgh of Kirkintilloch, the eastern district of Dumbartonshire and the western district of Stirlingshire, Lennox Castle, which stands in a park 1 mile long by half a mile wide, is the seat of Mrs. Peareth-Lennox; Glorat, in Milton, of Sir George Murray Home Stirling bart. D.S.O. and Craigharnet, of Capt. Miller Graham-Stirling. Capt. Miller Graham-Stirling, Mrs. Peareth-Lennox, Col. the Hon. Frederic Gordon D.S.O. the Hon. Huntly Douglas Gordon, Mrs. Isabella L. Reid, of Carlestown House, Sir James King bart. LL.D. of Carstairs, Charles M. King esq. James A. Fleming esq. K.C. of 33 Melville street, Edinburgh, David James McFarlane esq. and James Reid esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 17,860 acres; rateable value, £34,024; the population in 1891 was 5,338, and in 1901, 5,425, of which Lennoxtown contained 2,651.

CAMPSIE GLEN village is rather more than a mile from Lennoxtown, and stands on the low grounds at the foot of the Campsie glen, which from its romantic scenery and waterfalls is a place of great resort in summer; it has a station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway.

TORRANCE village, in the parish of Campsie, or, as it is generally called, the Torrance of Campsie, is about 3½ miles south from Lennoxtown, on the direct road to Glasgow, and has a station on the Kelvin Valley line of the North British railway. Here also is a United Free Church Mission hall. The population, with Wester Balgrochan, in 1901 was 580.

MILTON (or Milton of Campsie, as it is generally called) is a small village 2 miles east of Lennoxtown, in this parish. Here is an Established church and a Public Hall. There is a printwork in the neighbourhood. The village has a station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle branch of the North British railway. Population in 1901, 702.

CASTLECARY, see CUMBERNAULD, DUMBARTONSHIRE.

CAUSEWAYHEAD is a small village with a station on the central section of the North British railway; it is in the parish of Logie, about midway between Bridge of Allan and Stirling, at the foot of Abbey Craig—a detached portion of the Ochil range—which presents a precipitous front with a height of about 560 feet above the level of the Forth. On its most elevated ridge, and almost perpendicularly over the village, stands the Wallace monument, a structure 220 feet in height, in the form of a Scottish tower, surmounted by flying crocketed arches converging to a centre and forming a crown, from designs by Mr. Rothead, of Glasgow. The foundation stone was laid June 24th, 1861 (the anniversary of the Battle of Bannockburn), with masonic honours, by the Duke of Atholl. From the summit, which is reached by a spiral stair, the view obtained is rich in natural beauty and full of historic associations. Population in 1901, 540.

Post Office; Miss Janet Bean, postmistress. Letters received through Stirling. Arrivals, 8 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7 a.m. & 3.45 & 7.20 p.m.; sundays, 3.15 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph offices are at Stirling & Bridge of Allan, each 2 miles distant

DENNY is a parish, town and police burgh in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The parish is about 6 miles long, by an average of 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the south-west by the parish of Kilsyth, on the west and north by the Carron, and south-east by Falkirk. The town is on the road directly west from Falkirk, through the centre of the county, the road from Stirling to Glasgow also passing through, and is 29 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 north-east from Glasgow, 7 south from Stirling, and 5 west from Falkirk. Denny and Dunipace are controlled by a provost, a police judge, with two bailies and five commissioners. The Denny railway, opened in 1859, is a branch of the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian line, which joins the main line at Larbert, nearly 4 miles distant. The terminus is close to the town and from it run two sub-branches extending to the coal mines in the neighbourhood, by which the coal is conveyed to Glasgow and Grogemouth for shipment over the country generally, and near here is the Forth and Clyde canal. Here are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches and a Baptist chapel. Here are a large public hall, in which concerts and public meetings are held, and the Ancient Order of Foresters Hall, in which that society, the Oddfellows, the Free Gardeners, and the Freemasons hold their lodge meetings. There is also a People's Club, with a library, reading rooms and billiard rooms. The uncommon extent of the water power, as well as the purity of the Carron water have caused the establishment of considerable works on its margin, comprising paper and chemical works, and in the district are extensive coal mines and iron foundries, the whole furnishing employment to a large population.

Places of interest in the neighbourhood are the Hermitage, Carron Glen, the ruins of Torwood Castle and the Lady's Leap. The banks of the Carron were the scene of many of the most interesting and heroic deeds recorded in Scottish history. William Forbes esq. V.L., J.P. of Calendar, is the principal landowner. Acreage of the parish, 8,267; burgh, 270 acres; rateable value, landward, £38,515; police burgh of Denny and Dunipace, £16,921 (of which £13,440 is within Denny parish and £3,481 is within Dunipace parish); population in 1891, 6,373, and in 1901, 8,268; of the latter number the burgh of Denny and Dunipace contained 3,794, and Bonnybridge town, 1,074; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,842, and in 1901, 4,701.

At HOLLAND BUSH, near Hags, 15th August, 1645, was fought the battle of Killybeg, in which Montrose defeated the Covenanters. The population of Holland Bush and Hags village in 1891 was 623, and in 1901, 1,296.

PARKFOOT and LONGCROFT is a village 2½ miles south-west from the village of Denny; its population in 1891 was 588, and in 1901, 969.

HAGGS is a quad sacra parish and village in the south of this parish, 2½ miles west from Bonnybridge, 1½ west of Denny Loanhead, and 1 mile north of the Banknock station (which is in the parish) on the Glasgow and Bonnybridge section of the North British railway. Here is an Established church. The population in 1901 was 2,147.

DRYMEN is a parish and village in Dumbarton poor combination and Stirling small debt court district. The parish is 12 miles long, 3 miles broad towards the south and 12 in the north, and is bounded on the north by Aberfoyle, in Perthshire, on the east by Kippen, Balfour and Kilslearn, south by Dumbartonshire, and on the west by Buchanan. The village, which stands on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, is about 1 mile north from the Endrick water, which flows into Loch Lomond, and is 17 miles north-north-west from Glasgow and 12½ north-east from Dumbarton. Drymen station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, is 1½ miles south of the village in the parish of Kilmarnock, in Dumbartonshire. There are Established and United Free churches, a Public Hall and a Reading room. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is located in the village. Fairs for cattle are held on the last Wednesday in April (old style) and 17th May (new style). Duchray castle is the residence of Edwin Bolton esq. Acreage of the parish, 30,854; rateable value, £38,113; population in 1901, ecclesiastical parish, 794, village, 340.

At GARTNESS, about 2½ miles south-east from Drymen, is a waterfall about 12 feet in height, which the salmon, when going up the river, clear by a leap. Near the village is a factory for woollen cloth and felting. John Napier, lord of the free barony of Merchiston and the inventor of logarithms, born in 1550, resided here for a considerable time; he died 3 April, 1617. There is a station here on the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway. Population returned with Drymen.

DUNIPACE is a parish, divided into the four districts of Little Denovan, Meikle Denovan, Dunipace and Forwood, in Stirling small debt court district and is united to Larbert for ecclesiastical purposes. The parish is bounded on the north and west by the parish of St. Ninians, on the east by Larbert and on the south by the river Carron, which divides it from Denny. The village is situated on the road from Stirling to Glasgow and Falkirk, about 1 mile north from Denny terminal station on a branch from Larbert of the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, 6 miles south from Stirling and 5 north-west from Falkirk. Dunipace is included in the police burgh of Denny and Dunipace, and has established and United Free churches. This parish was formerly rich in minerals, and has an extension line to the mines of the Denny branch mineral railway, crossing the river Carron, which divides this and the adjoining parish of Denny. In this locality are two eminences called "the Hills of Dunipace," presumed to be sepulchral memorials. It was at Dunipace that Edward I. of England, on the 14th of October, 1301, signed a warrant to his ambassadors, then in France, authorising them to consent to a truce with the Scots as an indispensable preliminary towards a peace with their ally the French king, between whom and Edward a destructive war had long been waged. Herberthshire Castle is the residence of Charles William Forbes esq. D.L., J.P. and Dunipace House of John A. Harvie-Brown esq. J.P., F.Z.S., F.R.S.E. Edwin Bolton esq. J.P. of Carbrook, Dunipace; John A. Harvie-Brown esq. and William Forbes esq. V.L., J.P. of Callendar, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 5,593; rateable value, £10,880; population in 1901 was 2,050.

FALKIRK

FALKIRK is an ancient town, parliamentary and police burgh, the principal town of the eastern district of the county, and a parish and the head of a poor combination; the extreme length of the parish is 9 miles, and its breadth from 2 to 5½; it is bounded on the north by Denny and Larbert, on the south by Slamannan and Muiravonside, on the east by Polmont, and on the west by Dumhartonsire. Falkirk has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, another at Grahamston on the same line, which is also used for the town, and a third on the Caledonian railway. The town is 24 miles west-by-north from Edinburgh, 22 north-east from Glasgow, 11 south-south-east from Stirling and 3 south-west from Grangemonth, and is situated on the face of an eminence, overlooking the broad expanse of country called "the Cars (or Kerse) of Falkirk," and commanding a most extensive prospect. Besides the rich and fertile "cars," the prospect includes the river Forth, the great canal, which intersects the county about half a mile north of the town; and to the south Callander wood, shrouding a rising ground a short distance from the town.

The port of Grangemonth, about 3 miles to the north-east of Falkirk, is connected with the burgh by a branch of the Caledonian Railway.

The Union canal joins the Forth and Clyde canal about a mile west from the town, but its trade is limited, it having been purchased by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway Company. About half a mile south of the town it passes through a tunnel 796 yards in length.

The Falkirk and Larbert Water Trust introduced in 1890 a supply of water from the Denny Hills, at a cost of about £80,000, and under later Acts, passed in 1896, 1900 and 1908, extensions were carried out at a cost of about £180,000.

The town is partly lighted with gas supplied by the Town Council, who purchased the works in February, 1895, from a private company; in 1905 new works were erected at Grahamston; the town is also lighted by electricity installed in 1902 at Parkfoot by the Town Council.

In 1905 electric trams, with a station and offices at Larbert, commenced running, on a circular route, linking up Camelon, Larbert, Carron, Bainsford and Grahamston with Falkirk.

Falkirk was created a burgh of barony in the reign of James I. and a burgh of regality in the reign of Charles I. but no baron baillie has been appointed for many years. A body of "stent masters," chosen by the different trades of the town, formerly managed its affairs, but that body being abolished by Act of Parliament, their powers and property were transferred to the magistrates. The town is now governed under the Town Councils and Burgh Police (Scotland) Acts of 1892-1903 by a provost, four bailies and ten councillors.

Justice of peace courts and petty sessions are held. A sheriff court was first opened at Falkirk in 1834, for the eastern district of the county, comprising the parishes of Falkirk, Grangemouth, Muiravonside, Slamannan, Larbert and Airth.

The old church of Falkirk, mostly taken down in 1810, is believed to have been founded by St. Modan. The name of the town owes its origin to the church, and the Highlanders still call it by the old Celtic name of "Eglais Bhrac," or "Eglais bracc," or spotted church, which is synonymous with the old Saxon name "Fawkirik," bearing the same meaning. The present church, erected under the superintendence of Mr. George Watson and the Rev. Dr. Anderson, Edinburgh, incorporates the tower of the ancient fabric; the old south aisle, formerly in the possession of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, and endowed by them, has also been rebuilt. The total cost of these alterations, including a new organ, was about £4,000. The Kirk Session Records, which extend as far back as 1617, mention the fact that a marble tablet, which is now inserted in the tower, was found when the old church was taken down. It bears the following inscription:

FNVDATVM
MALCOLMO III.
REGE SCOTIÆ.
A.M. 1057.

In the churchyard lie the remains of Sir John de Græhame (the friend of Wallace) and Sir John Stuart, who were slain on the memorable field of Falkirk, in 1298; a plain coffin-shaped stone marks the grave of the latter, and a former Marquess of Bute erected a granite cross to the west of the church, to the memory of the men of Bute who were slain with their chief, Sir John Stuart. There is also a monument to Sir John de Græme, surrounded by a railing, surmounted by a Gothic cupola. A bronze casting of the two-handed sword used by this hero has been affixed to the tomb. In the same cemetery stands a monument, erected by Robert Dollar esq. of San Francisco, and a native of Falkirk, to Sir Robert Munro, of Foulis, and his brother, Dr. Munro, who fell in the second battle of Falkirk, between the forces of the Pretender and the Duke of Cumberland, Jaouary 17th, 1746: a memorial has also been erected to William Edmondston, of Cambus Wallace, Captain-Lieutenant of the 17th Regiment of Foot, who fell in battle near Falkirk, 27th January, 1746, and there is another in memory of Mr. Dollar's mother, who was buried in the same grave.

St. Andrew's United Free church, in Newmarket street, erected about 1896, at a cost of £7,200, is a building of red freestone, in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire, and will seat 950 persons. There is also a Roman Catholic church and Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels and several mission halls. The Episcopal church, called Christ Church, built in 1864, affords 266 sittings, and attached is a Mission church, at Grangemouth; the Rev. Francis Ellington-Wright, of Downing College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1894.

All the burial grounds being now closed, a cemetery has been provided, about a mile west of the town, for the entire parish; it embraces an area of 14 acres, and was enlarged in 1899 by an addition of 22 acres.

The County Buildings, erected in 1868, in lieu of the old court house, are in Hope street, and include court rooms for the sheriff and justices, and a procurator's room. At the same time a prison and county police office were built, and Burgh buildings were erected in Newmarket street in 1878. The Eastern district of the County Council of Stirlingshire have offices in West end, erected in 1904.

The Exchange, or Corn Market, originally built in 1859, was replaced by the present hall in 1878. The Corn Market is now held in the Town Hall.

Falkirk derives its chief importance from being the seat of an extensive iron trade, which is still rapidly increasing. The number of foundries in the burgh has increased from 1 in 1848 to 11 in 1898, and in the immediate neighbourhood there are nearly a dozen others. In addition to these there are many collieries in the district, several large chemical works and other industries.

Falkirk is within a very populous district, with no large town in the immediate neighbourhood, and commands an extensive inland trade, and the various iron and other works (from which the town derives material support) render it the market town for between 50 and 60 thousand people.

In the parish are the Falkirk Iron Works, the Grahamston Iron Company's Works, the Burnbank Iron Works, the Park-house Iron Works, the Callendar Iron Works, Abbot's Iron Works, and about 1 mile to the west the works of M. Cockburn and Co. Limited, and the Dorrator Iron Co. Limited. There are various coal mines in the vicinity, and extensive timber yards, tanning and currying establishments, fire brick and tile manufactories, a distillery, a brewery and several chemical works.

The market for grain is held on Thursday; there is a weekly sale of fat stock every Tuesday and of store stock on Thursday at the repository of Messrs. Binnie Limited.

The days for hiring servants are the first Thursday in April, and the last Thursday in October, which are called feeing Thursdays.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, as well as a Savings Bank.

In the town is a tower 146 feet high, containing a clock and 2 bells. In Newmarket street is an equestrian statue of the great Duke of Wellington, erected in 1854 by public subscription. A statue was unveiled by F.M. the Earl Roberts V.C., K.C., K.P. in 1906, in memory of the officers and men of the Eastern District of Stirlingshire who fell during the South African war in 1899-1902.

Falkirk is historically famous as being the scene of two memorable battles; the first, between Edward I. of England and the Scots, under Sir William Wallace, was fought July 22, 1298, on the level ground to the north of the town, and, mainly through the havoc created by the English archers, resulted in the total defeat of the Scots, and sealed the fate of Wallace, who never recovered his position, and was ultimately executed on Tower Hill, 23 Aug. 1305; the second conflict took place Jan. 17, 1746, on high ground south-west of the town, between the young Pretender, Prince Charles Edward, and the English forces under General Hawley, who was defeated with the loss of guns and baggage and retreated into Falkirk, and thence to Linlithgow and Edinburgh.

Callendar House, the seat of William Forbes esq. V.L., J.P. is pleasantly situated in a well-wooded park of 500 acres; in the park is a mausoleum. South Bantaskin is the residence of the Misses Wilson. William Forbes esq. V.L., J.P. the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late John Wilson, of South Bantaskin, are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire civil parish is 15,111 acres; burgh, 1,670 acres; rateable value, landward, £50,410; burghal, £148,184; the population of the parish in 1891 was 30,731, and in 1901, 36,628, as follows:—Bonnybridge Town (part of), 1,935; Falkirk Burgh (parliamentary and municipal), 20,515; Falkirk Burgh (municipal, beyond parliamentary), 8,765; Laurieston Town, 2,060; landward, 3,333. Included in the total population was 3 officials and 111 inmates of the Poor-house.

In 1901 the population of the wards were: First, 5,219; second, 5,196; third, 6,030; fourth, 7,161; fifth, 5,664.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 18,889. The number of electors on the Falkirk parliamentary register in 1910 was 3,107.

CAMELON is a quoad sacra parish, formed in 1852, from Falkirk civil parish, and was incorporated in the borough of Falkirk under the Falkirk Borough Gas and Extension Act of 1900. It lies on the road from Falkirk to Stirling and the Forth and Clyde canal, and consists principally of one street, with a joint station on the Scottish Central section of the North British railway and on the Larbert and Grangemouth branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish church is a plain stone edifice, built in 1839, and has about 600 sittings; there are also two United Free churches and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, erected in 1906. In the vicinity there are several foundries and extensive chemical works. Camelon is a place of considerable interest to the antiquary, and was represented by the early writers as a maritime city, in corroboration of which assertion fragments of anchors, blocks of stone with rings attached, and even an entire boat of ancient model, have been found embedded in the soil. The city, it is alleged, was built by Vespasian (A.D. 69-79), and when subsequently possessed by the Picts, had twelve brazen gates; no vestige, however, of this magnificent place remains except one portion of a wall, visible from the Glasgow road. The sea is now about 4 miles distant. The population in 1901 was 6,386.

GRAHAMSTON is a quoad sacra parish in the burgh of Falkirk, and separated therefrom only by the line of the Caledonian railway. There are Established and United Free churches and a Wesleyan chapel. The population in 1901 was 8,680.

BAINSFORD is a small village in Falkirk parish, 1 mile from the town hall, on the Larbert high road, and has a United Free church and a Mission hall.

LAURIESTON (or Lawriestoun) is a village in the parish of Falkirk, about 1 mile east from that town, and has Established and United Free churches. Nail making, formerly carried on to a considerable extent, is now extinct. The place was originally called Langton, afterwards Merchiston, and is now named Laurieston, in honour of the late Sir Lawrence Dundas, who made considerable additions to and much improved it. The population in 1901 was 2,080.

FINTRY is a parish pleasantly situated to the north of the Campsie Fells, in the small debt court district of Stirling, extending from east to west 6 miles, and averaging in breadth, from north to south, about 5 miles; it is bounded on the north by Balfroun and Gargunock, on the east by St. Ninians and Kilsyth, on the south by Campsie and on the west by Killeara. The village is 7 miles west from Balfroun station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 8 north from Lenuxtown station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle line of the same railway, and is 41 miles west from Edinburgh, 16 west-south-west from Stirling and 18 north from Glasgow. Here is an Established church. Both the Endrick and the Carron rivers have their source in this district, and in their course through it form several romantic falls, among which is the Loup of Fintry, a cataract of the Endrick descending 91 feet: on the Carron is another of about 112 feet, called the "Auchinlich Lino Spout." Near the village of Fintry is a hill called the "Doon," on which is a range of perpendicular basaltic columns, some 50 feet in length. Bin Mountain, 1,870 feet high, and Stroned, 1,676 feet, are in the parish. Craighen is the seat of Mrs. Gibb and Culcrench, of Sir Walter Menzies M.P., J.P. The Duke of Montrose K.T. Mrs. Gibb and Sir Walter Menzies M.P., J.P. are the principal landowners. Acreage of parish, 13,783; rateable value, £4,069; population in 1891, 357, and in 1901, 315.
 Post, M. O. & T. Office; Miss Elizabeth Pattison, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Balfroun Station, Stirlingshire. Delivery, 9.30 a.m.; dispatch, 1 p.m.

GARGUNOCK is a parish in Stirling small debt court district, 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the east and south by St. Ninians, on the west by Fintry, Balfroun and Kippen, and on the north by Kincardine and Kilmadock. The river Forth divides the parish on the north from Perthshire. As regards its agricultural features and capabilities, it is divided into two districts, one of which, on the south, is hilly and pastoral, and the other is a flat carse land which spreads from the town of Stirling in a south-westerly direction towards the county of Dumbarton. The chief business here is basket making. Gargunock Hill, 1,591 feet, and Leea Hill, 1,349 feet high, are in the parish. The village stands on the side of a hill on the south edge of the carse, and on the road from Stirling to Lenuxtown, with a station about one mile north on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and 6 miles west from Stirling. There are Established and United Free churches. Gargunock House, the property of Charles Stirling esq, is the residence of Mrs. Fleming. Boquhan house is the seat of Stephen Mitchell esq. J.P. George Younger esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Leckie House, Stirling. C. Stirling esq.; S. Mitchell esq. J.P.; Mrs. K. H. C. Dalrymple; Sir Alan Henry Seton-Steuart bart. D.L., J.P. of Touch, and John Kerr esq. of Baltic Head, Balfroun, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,562; rateable value, £6,855; population, 1901, 633.

Post & T. Office, Gargunock; Mrs. Katharine Philp, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Stirling. Deliveries, 7.35 a.m. & 6.15 p.m. (callers only); dispatches, 11.30 a.m. & 4.25 p.m. No Sunday delivery. Kippen, 4 miles distant, is the nearest money order office

GRANGEMOUTH

THIS is a police burgh, seaport and civil parish, 3 miles north from Falkirk, 27 north-north-west from Edinburgh and 25 north-east from Glasgow, situated on the Firth of Forth, at the junction of the river Carron with the Clyde and Forth canal, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors, under the Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1903. The ecclesiastical parish was formed from the parishes of Bothkenna, Falkirk and Polmont. The town is lighted with gas from works now the property of the Town Council, and purchased from the Grangemouth Gas Co. Limited, in May, 1906, at a cost of £28,000, and by electric light, supplied by the Scottish Central Electric Power Co. A branch railway, which joins the North British at Falkirk, was constructed in 1859, thus connecting the port with the railway system of the country. The Caledonian Railway Company has also a branch line, which joins their main line at Larbert. This port was commenced in 1777 by Sir Lawrence Dundas, for the shipping passing through the canal to and from the Clyde and Glasgow, of which it is the natural eastern port; its growth is attributable to the moderate rate of charges, as well as to the facilities for vessels of the largest tonnage: the canal rates of toll are also low: the wet dock, opened in 1843, affords room for nearly 20,000 tons of shipping. Docks of nearly 60 acres in extent were opened on the 3rd of June, 1882, and of this area, 19½ acres represents the water area of the docks and timber basins, the actual dockage area being about 10½ acres. New docks of 30 acres, begun about 1899, were opened 6th Oct. 1906, at an estimated cost of £1,500,000. The amount of Customs duty collected in 1909 was £34,475.

In 1909 the number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port with cargoes, and in ballast, was 1,423, of 988,007 tonnage. The number cleared was 1,546, of 1,061,658 tonnage. In the general coasting trade 1,471 sailing and steam vessels entered with cargoes, and in ballast, of 536,125 tons, and 1,197 cleared, of 445,495 tonnage. The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port in 1909 was 55, with a tonnage of 19,713. There are commodious quays, granaries and warehouses; also shipbuilding yards, a graving dock and timber yards.

The imports from Norway, Sweden, Denmark, America, Germany, and the Baltic in general, are chemical manufactures, timber, sugar &c. The total value of the imports in 1909 was £3,894,606; the principal, with their values, being:—Chemical manufactures and products, £111,031; cotton goods, £111,323; dye stuffs, £149,544; manufactured glass, £68,056; hides (raw), £60,129; iron ore, £123,570; manufactured iron and steel, £426,469; machinery, £51,814; manures, £30,930; margarine, £207,028; oil (fish, train, blubber, sperm &c.), £166,266; painters' colors, £28,960; paper (including strawboard), £211,343; paper-making materials, £187,460; sugar (refined) £208,857; (unrefined) £128,636; timber (sawn), £566,583; timber (hewn), £83,777;

woollen and worsted yarn for weaving, £34,945; zinc (crude), £142,065. Steamers ply regularly to and from London, Rotterdam, Hamburg, Stettin, Dunkirk, Copenhagen, Middlesbrough, Christiania &c. The total value of the exports of the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom in 1905 was £2,297,472; the principal, with their values, being:—Chemicals and chemical preparations, £64,410; coal, coke and patent fuel, £948,890; coal products (except dyest), £57,606; cotton piece goods, £63,874; cotton goods of all other kinds, £66,006; manufactured iron and steel, £174,795; machinery, £247,873; manure, £50,302; metals (unenumerated), £16,157; refined sugar, £54,699; oil, £45,957; spirits (British and Irish), £46,168. In addition to above mentioned goods, foreign and colonial merchandise to the extent of £21,019 was exported. The advantages and cheapness of the port, and the readiness of communication by canal and railway with the populous manufacturing districts, and with inexhaustible supplies of iron and coal, combine to invest Grangemouth with the great advantages for the above imports and of other continental produce, as well as for the export of the mineral and other productions of the West of Scotland. There is an Established church, and one at Kerse, four United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Mary is an iron structure and is served from Falkirk. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of about £5,500, has a large hall capable of seating 900 persons; there are also included in the building town clerk's and surveyor's chambers, a council room and small hall for committee meetings. The Victoria Library was erected in 1887, at a cost of about £1,800, including site, one half of the sum being presented by Mrs. Carnegie, the other being raised by voluntary contributions and assessment. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank have branches here. A public park of 8½ acres, granted by the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. was opened in 1882. The area of the civil parish is 8,046 acres; rateable value, £133,530; area of burgh, 1,067 acres; the population in 1901 was 17,463, of which 8,386 were in police burgh (including 418 shipping). The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 7,928.

The following are villages in Grangemouth civil parish:—Brightons; population in 1901, 739. California; population in 1901, 490. Longdyke; population in 1901, 304. Skinflatts; population in 1901, 505.

KINNAIRD is a village in Grangemouth and Larbert parishes; population in 1901, 306.

WALLACETOWN and STANDRIGG form a village in Grangemouth and Muiravonside civil parishes; population in 1901, 553.

KILLEARN is a parish in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district, and is 12 miles long by an average breadth of 2½, the river Endrick, with the parish of Balfour, forming its northern boundary. It is bounded on the east by Fintry, on the south by Strathblane and the parish of New Kilpatrick, and on the west by Drymen, in Dumbartonshire. The land is fertile, and is watered by the Endrick and the Blane. The village is almost in the centre of the parish, in a pleasant part of the country, and has two railway stations, Dumgoyne, about 2 miles south-west, and Killearn, ¼ miles west, on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle section of the North British railway, 30 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Stirling, and nearly 17 north-by-west from Glasgow. The village is supplied with water by Alexander Buchanan esq. The church, a handsome structure, was built by the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing bart. of Ballikrain, in memory of his daughter, at a cost of £8,000, and presented to the parish. The old church is now used as a public hall. There is also a United Free church. The minerals in the district are chiefly limestone and freestone, and beautiful specimens of jasper are occasionally met with among the fragments of basaltic columns which abound here. The woods produce great numbers of indigenous plants. Considerable interest is attached to this part of the country as having been the birthplace or residence of men eminent in the biography of Scotland. In its more secluded recesses, Sir William Wallace was known to have occasionally found a retreat, and it was the birthplace, in Feb. 1506, of George Buchanan, the celebrated poet and historian, tutor to James VI. and principal of St. Leonard's College, St. Andrews; he was born at a place called The Moss, a small farmhouse on the bank of the Water of Blane, about 2 miles from the village of Killearn, and died 5 December, 1582. In the village is an obelisk of freestone, 19 feet square at the base and 103 feet in height, erected to his memory in 1788. Ballikrain Castle is the seat of Sir Archibald Ernest Orr-Ewing bart. D.L., J.P., and Killearn House of John Connell esq. Acreage of the parish, 15,375; rateable value, £22,792; population (1901), parish 929, village 318.

NEW KILPATRICK, a parish, formerly partly included in this county, was, in 1831, wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton, which see.

KILSYTH is a town, police burgh and parish, in the small debt court district of Lennoxton. The parish is about 7 miles in length, and $\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth. In form it is an irregular oblong, bounded by the river Carron on the north, which separates it from St. Ninians, Fintry on the north-west, Cumbernauld and Kirkin-tulloch, in Dumbartonshire, on the south, Denny on the east, and Campsie on the west. It is watered by the Carron and Kelvin rivers. The Garrel Burn, a tributary of the Kelvin, intersects the parish and burgh. The Barton Loch and Birken-head reservoirs of the Forth and Clyde canal are in the parish. Railway communication with Glasgow was opened here in 1873, through the Blane Valley section of the North British line, and there is a line from Larbert on the Caledonian railway. The town is on the main road from Stirling to Glasgow, 35 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 south-south-west from Stirling, between 12 and 13 north-north-east from Glasgow, and nearly 12 west-by-south from Falkirk, and is governed by a pro-

voet, two bailies and six town councillors. Here is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Roman (Catholic) church, and Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. The Cottage Hospital, for Kilsyth and district, erected at a cost of £2,000, was opened in May, 1903, and contains 12 beds; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions. The public buildings include a Town Hall, the Victoria Hall and the Unionist Rooms. Here are branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited and a Savings Bank. A police and justice of the peace court is held every Monday. About the middle of the parish is a hill, 1,393 feet high, which exhibits a fine specimen of basaltic columns. The parish is stocked with coal and ironstone and the working of these and whinstone quarrying form the main industries. Hand weaving, formerly the staple industry, is almost extinct, but power loom weaving is now carried on. There are golf links and a bowling green. The parish also contains 2 small villages, Bonton to the east of the burgh and Chapel-green to the west. There is whinstone and freestone quarrying at Barwood, Auchinstarry, Colzium, Neilston, Beltmoss, and the Glen quarries. In this parish is a new reservoir for the supply of water to Lenzie, Kirkinulloch and Waterside, constructed about 1906, at a cost of £24,000. Kilsyth formerly gave the title of viscount to the unfortunate family of Livingstone, attainted in 1715 for their attachment to the house of Stuart; in Kilsyth church, the burial place of this family, the bodies of Jean, wife of William, 3rd and last Viscount Kilsyth, and her infant son lay embalmed for many years, and were identified on the examination of the grave in 1795; the last viscount died an exile at Rome, 12 Jan. 1733. In 1637, near the village, the Covenanters, commanded by General Baillie, were defeated by Montrose. Colzium House, at present occupied by Hugh Moncrieff esq., is the property of Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. C.V.O. of Dunbreath Castle, Strathblane, who is the principal landowner. The Duke of Montrose K.T. Henry M. Caddell esq. of Grange, Bonness, James and Thomas Lenzie and Messrs. William Baird and Co. are also landowners. Acreage of the civil parish, 13,123; burgh, 280 acres; valuation of the parish, landward, £35,900; burghal, £21,425; population in 1891, 7,424, and in 1901, 9,840, the town numbering 7,292; ecclesiastical parish, population in 1901, 8,526. The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was, North, 2,292; East, 2,098; West, 2,902.

BANTON and MALLINS form a village in Kilsyth civil parish. Population in 1901, 427.

CHAPELGREEN, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles west, and Banton, about 2 east, are hamlets in this parish. The former has a station called GAVELL, on the Glasgow and Kilsyth section of the North British railway. For the latter the nearest station is Colzium, on the Larbert and Kilsyth line of the Kilsyth and Bonnybridge railway.

Post, M. O. & T. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office; Miss Mary Shanks, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 7.45 a.m. & 2.30 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 9.35 & 11.50 a.m. & 2, 3.10, 7.20 & 10.15 p.m. Post Box, Old station, cleared 10.20 p.m.

KIPPEN is a parish in Dumbarton poor combination and small debt court district of Stirling, 8 miles in length by 2 to 4 in breadth, and bounded on the north by the river Forth, which separates the county from Perthshire, on the east by Gargunock, on the south by Balfour and Finny, and on the west by the parish of Drymen; it is well watered, and from some of the higher grounds an extensive and varied prospect, including Stirling Castle and the romantic woody eminences adjacent, is presented. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order No. 13, the part of Kippen parish formerly in Perthshire has been transferred to Stirlingshire. The village is in the eastern part of the parish, on the road from Stirling to Dumbarton, and has a station $\frac{1}{4}$ miles north on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, and is 10 miles west from Stirling. In the neighbourhood are several mineral wells or springs, and near the village is a quarry of red stone. Fairs are held at Kippen on the second Wednesday in December, and at Balgair, a moor about 2 miles from Kippen, for horses, cattle and sheep, on the Friday before the 26th June. There are Established and United Free churches. Near the railway station is the Ford of Frew, where, in 1746, Prince Charles lost his cannon while retreating before the Campbells. Archibald Stirling esq. of Garden; Sir Charles William Cayzer bart. J.P. of Gartmore; Stephen Mitchell J.P. of Boquhan; Robert Leckie Ewing esq.; William L. Galbraith esq. of Blackhouse; Daniel Fisher esq. of Ballamenoch; John Monteath esq. of Wright's Park; Henry David Erskine esq. C.V.O., D.L., J.P. of Cardross; Harvie Forrester, of Arngibbon, and James McFarlane, of Oxhill, are the principal proprietors. The area of the civil parish is 11,263 acres; rateable value, £11,311; the population in 1891, 1,486, and in 1901, 1,456; of the ecclesiastical parish, 968.

CAULDHAME and SHIRGARTON are places in the civil parish.

LARBERT (or Larbet) is a parish and village in Falkirk small debt court district, $\frac{3}{4}$ miles broad by 3 long, and bounded on the north by St. Ninians, north-east by Airth, east by Bothkennar, south by the river Carron, which divides it from Falkirk, and west by Dunipace. The village is situated on the side of a hill, on the northern bank of the Carron, and on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and has a station on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway; it is 3 miles west from Falkirk and 8 south-south-east from Stirling. The civil parish of Dunipace is included in Larbet ecclesiastical parish. The present Established church, erected in 1822, from designs of Mr. Hamilton, of Glasgow, is an edifice of stone in the Tudor Gothic style, with a square tower containing one bell, and has upwards of 1,000 sittings. There is also a United Free church. Close to Larbet station are the works of Messrs. James Jones & Sons Limited, timber merchants. Near this place the great Roman road or caneway passes, and about a quarter of a mile to the west the foundation of a bridge is visible when the Carron river is low. Kinnaid House, standing in a park of 120 acres, is now the residence of Mrs. Orr; it formerly belonged to James Bruce, the celebrated traveller, who was born in this house 14 Dec. 1730, and died here 27 April, 1794; his remains are interred in the parish churchyard, and a monument of iron, cast at Carron, is erected over his grave. Carron Hall is the seat of Capt. Robert Dundas Orr. Mrs. Sherriff, of Carronvale, Sir John H. Graham bart. of Larbet House, and Capt. Robert Dundas Orr are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 3,971; rateable value, £48,327; population in 1891, 8,340, and in 1901, 11,684, viz.: landward, 6,500, and Stenhousemuir Town, 5,184. Included in the total population are 56 officials and 264 inmates of the Scottish National Institution for Imbecile Children and 107 officials and 669 inmates of Stirling District Asylum. The population of the village in 1901 was 1,442 and of the ecclesiastical parish, 13,694.

STENHOUSEMUIR is a small town in the parish of Larbet, of which it forms a continuation, and contains Established and United Free churches, a Calvinistic chapel and several Mission halls, besides a Public Library, erected in 1904, partly by the munificence of A. Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle. Another half mile distant is the hamlet of North Broomage, near which is the Scottish National Institution for the Education of Imbecile Children. In this locality is also the Stirling District Lunatic Asylum for the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, Linlithgow and Clackmannan. In July, 1893, a new hospital was opened, at a cost of £20,000, from designs by Messrs. A. and W. Black, architects, of Falkirk, and in 1895-6 a large addition was made, and a house for 80 nurses was erected in 1907, at a cost of £9,000. Dobbie Hall, Stenhousemuir, was presented to the parish by Major Robert Dobbie, and will seat 1,000 persons. The cemetery of 8 acres was purchased by the Parish Council in 1901, and is under their control. Population of Stenhousemuir in 1901, 5,184.

Post, M. O. & T. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Larbet; Mrs. Janet McLachlan, postmistress. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 1.50 (saturdays excepted) & 5.50 p.m.; dispatches, 7.45 a.m. & 1, 4.40, 7.15 & 8.30 p.m.; sundays, 9 till 10 a.m. to callers; Sunday dispatch, 4.40 p.m. Telegraph office open from 9 to 10 a.m. on sundays

Town Sub-Post, M. O. & Telephone Call Office, Stenhousemuir; Mrs. Janet M. Walker, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Larbert. Deliveries from Larbert, 7 a.m. & 1.50 & 5.50 p.m.; dispatches, 6.15 a.m. & 12.10, 4.15, 6.50 & 7.55 p.m.; Sunday dispatch, 4.15 p.m. Telegrams are dispatched but not delivered from this office

LIMERIGG, see SLAMANNAN.

LOGIE is a parish, in the small debt court district of Stirling, and is bounded on the north-west by Perthshire, east by Clackmannanshire and south by the river Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 & 127, a part of Lecropt parish in Perthshire has been transferred to Logie, and parts of Logie in Clackmannanshire have been transferred to the parish of Alloa and Alva, and those portions of Logie parish formerly in the counties of Clackmannan and Perth have been added to Stirlingshire, the whole parish of Logie is therefore now in the latter county. The kirk is about 3 miles from Stirling station on the North British and Caledonian railway, and the same distance from Bridge of Allan station on the Caledonian railway. The village of Blairlogie is very agreeably situated at the base of the Ochil hills, and is a favourite resort in summer for visitors from the large towns. There are Established and United Free churches. The remains of Cambuskenneth Abbey, founded in 1147, by King David I. for Augustine canons, stand near here on the north bank of the Forth, and about 1 mile east of Stirling; some of the materials were used in the building of the structure called "Mar's Work," in Stirling, James VI. having given the abbey to the Earl of Mar at the Reformation; but the massive detached tower still remains nearly perfect: the foundations of the church have been excavated so as to disclose the plan and extent of the buildings, and during the progress of this work the body of James III. killed at Sauchieburn 11 June, 1488, and here buried, was discovered and reinterred in a new tomb near the site of the high altar, the expense being borne by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, who had an inscription detailing the particulars placed on the tomb. About 1 mile north of the abbey stands the Wallace Monument, a lofty stone tower of 4 rooms, which contain relics of the hero, including his sword from Dumbarton, busts of other Scottish worthies, and various curiosities; on the outside, in front, is a bronze statue of Wallace, who defeated the English at the battle of Stirling Bridge, near this spot, 12 Sept. 1297. The principal landowners are Mrs. Graham, of Airthrey; J. M. Morris esq. of Gogar; Lieut.-Col. James Hare, of Blairlogie, and the trustee of the late Gen. Sir J. E. Alexander K.C.B. The area of the parish previous to the alteration of the boundary was 11,814 acres; rateable value of present area, landward, £15,061; burghal (Bridge of Allan), £27,301; the population in 1891, 4,252, and in 1901, 4,432, viz.: Bridge of Allan police burgh; Stirling burgh, 252; landward, 940; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 1,415, of which 77 are in Clackmannanshire.

Post Office, Blairlogie; William Ritchie, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Stirlingshire added. Delivery, 7 a.m.; dispatches, 10.15 a.m. & 2.15 & 7 p.m.; sunday, 12.50 p.m. Menstrie, 2 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

MENSTRIE, a village, has been transferred by boundary order No. 124 from Stirlingshire to Clackmannanshire.

MILNGAVIE, a town and a police burgh (generally called Millgay), is a quoad sacra parish erected out of that of New (or East) Kilpatrick, and in the counties of Dumbarton and Stirling. For further particulars and names see Dumbartonshire.

MILTON, see CAMPSIE.

MUIRAVONSIDE is a parish, in Linlithgow poor combination and Falkirk small debt court district; it is 8 miles in length by 2 in breadth, bounded by Polmont on the north-west, the river Avon on the east and south-east, which divides it from Linlithgowshire, Falkirk on the west and Polmont on the north. The village is on the left bank of the Avon, and on the west bank of the Union canal, and is about 2 miles from Linlithgow and about 4 south-east from Falkirk. There are two established churches. On the Avon in this parish are the ruins of a nunnery, founded by Malcolm IV. and half a mile west are the remains of the ancient castle of Almond, for several generations the favourite seat of the Livingstons, Earls of Callendar. Muiravonside House, the property of Thomas Stirling esq. is at present occupied by Thomas Paterson Gillespie esq. William Forbes esq. V.L., J.P. of Callendar, and T. Livingstone Learmonth esq. are the principal landowners. The land is nearly all arable and enclosed, and beneath the surface there is an abundance of coal. The parish of Muiravonside covers an area of 7,964 acres; rateable value, £29,134; population in 1901, town, 3,332; ecclesiastical parish, 3,441.

STANDEBURN is a village in Muiravonside civil parish; population in 1901, 949.

MADDISTON, 1 mile south from the church, is a village in this parish. The population with City Hill in 1901 was 617.

At CAUSEWAYEND, about 1 mile east from the church, are the works of the Linlithgow Foundry Co. iron founders, and a station on the Coatbridge and Manuel branch of the North British railway.

At BLACKSTON, in this parish, 3½ miles south from the church, is a station on the same branch, from which place is a line to Bathgate and Westfield. BOW-HOUSE station, also on the Manuel branch, is about 2 miles south of the church. MANUEL station is also on the line from Edinburgh to Larbert.

PLEAN is a quoad sacra parish, formed from St. Ninians. The village is on the road from Falkirk to Stirling, and has a station on the Glasgow and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway, 6 north from Falkirk and 5 south from Stirling. In the village is an Established church and a hospital for old and indigent men, more especially soldiers and sailors, founded by Colonel Francis Simpson, of East Plean, who died in 1831, having bequeathed upwards of £30,000 and an estate for the purpose. The establishment contains, at present, 60 inmates, who are boarded, clothed, and have a small allowance of pocket-money. A new residence for the governor and chaplain was erected in 1907. A Public hall was erected in 1909 at a cost of £1,400. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 845, and in 1901, 1,318, including 56 in the William Simpson Asylum.

ST. NINIANS is a town and parish, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district. The form of the parish is irregular; in extent it may be computed at about 12 miles from east to west and about 6 from north to south, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Airth, on the south by Dunipace and the river Carron, which separates it from Denny and Kilsyth, on the west by Fintry and Gargunock, and on the north by the river Forth, which separates it from Kincardine, Lecropt, Logie and Alva (if a small space occupied by the parish of Stirling be excepted). Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1887" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 118, a part of St. Ninians parish has been transferred to Stirling, and a part of that parish added to St. Ninians. Subsequently, by an order of the Secretary for Scotland, the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," the town was incorporated with Stirling burgh; it is on the road from that place to Falkirk and Glasgow, 2 miles south from Stirling, and consists of one long and rather narrow street, the houses of which are curious and old-fashioned, and many of which retain the dates of their erection, and some are rudely and grotesquely carved. There is an Established church, two United Free churches and a Mission Hall. Well-cultivated grounds and thriving plantations abound in the vicinity. The parish derives its name from the patron saint of the ancient church, the steeple of which still remains, but the rest of the fabric, being used as a powder magazine by the Highlanders in 1746, was blown up immediately before their retreat to the north. The manufacture of nails has for a long time been carried on at St. Ninians; other industries are the manufacture of screw bolts, and there are also coal mines. Earls Burn, a feeder of the Carron, and Bannock Burn, a tributary of the Forth, both rise in the western part of the parish, in which are also Earls Hill, 1,443 feet high, and Hart Hill, 1,428 feet. Polmaise Castle, the seat of Major Alastair Bruce Murray D.L.; Sauchie-Burn House, of Arthur Herbert Drummond Ramsay-Steel-Maitland esq. M.P., J.P.; Touch House, of Sir Alac Henry Seton-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. and Craigforth House, of James Couper esq. J.P. are in this parish. Major Alastair Bruce Murray D.L., A. H. D. Ramsay-Steel-Maitland esq. M.P. Sir Alan Henry Seton-Stewart bart. Sir Michael Hugh Shaw-Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. of Carcock, Edwin Bolton esq. of Duchray Castle, Aberfoyle, James Mitchell esq. of Bannockburn, the Duke of Montrose K.T. and the trustees of William Simpson's Asylum are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 37,543 acres; rateable value, £94,880; population in 1891, 9,571, and in 1901, 8,152, viz.: Bannockburn, 2,444; Stirling burgh, 72, and landward, 6,836. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 5,731.

CAMBUSBARRON is a village in the parish of St. Ninians, 1 mile north-west from that place, and has a United Free church and a Mission Hall. A number of the inhabitants are employed in connection with the Murrayhall Lime Stone Mines. A Board School was erected in 1875, at a cost of £4,000. Population in 1901, 919.

EAST PLEAN is a village in the parish. Population in 1901, 610.

WHINS OF MILTON is a hamlet in this parish. Population in 1901, 387.

CARNOCK is a small district in the parish of St. Ninians, but in the postal delivery of Larbert.

FALLIN is a small district with an Established church and a school, and many houses are being built; the inhabitants are employed at the coal mines.

SHIELDHILL and BLACKBRAES constitute a quoad sacra parish, formed from Polmont and Muiravonsida civil parishes (now amalgamated with Grangemouth parish), and are equidistant 2½ miles from Falkirk and Polmont stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and from Avonbridge station on the Coatbridge and Manuel line of the North British railway. The Established church at California, in the centre of the parish, is a plain edifice of stone, and has upwards of 150 sittings; there is also a United Free church at Shieldhill. In the parish are collieries of the Carron Co. which give employment to the majority of the inhabitants. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 3,269, and in 1901 was 4,550.

The population of Blackbraes village in 1901 was 558, and of East Shieldhill, 810.

SLAMANNAN is a parish, lying on the south bank of the river Avon, and extending along the margin of that stream (or about 5 miles, its breadth being from 3 to 4 miles; it is in the small debt court district of Falkirk; there has been added in 1895 a portion taken from the parish of Falkirk extending along the north bank of the Avon. Near the north-west end of the parish there is a point where the shires of Stirling, Dumbarton and Lanark meet, and at the south-west end the shires of Stirling and Lanark meet that of Linlithgow. On the southern boundary of the district is a small lake called Black Loch, which in part supplies the great reservoir for the Forth and Clyde canal. The village is on the road from Linlithgow to Glasgow, with a station close to it on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manuel section of the North British railway, 6 miles south-west from Falkirk and 10 south-west from Linlithgow. The Established church, erected about the beginning of the 19th century, is a plain edifice of stone, with a small tower containing one bell, and has about 800 sittings. Here also is a United Free church, and Baptist and Wesleyan chapels. In the village is a branch of the Bank of Scotland. A considerable portion of the land is arable; the remainder consists of bog and moss. Alexander, Peddie-Waddell esq., D.L., J.P. of Balquhatstone; John Motherwell Alston esq. of Coatbridge; Messrs. Aitken Bros. of Falkirk, and Mrs. Paton, of Avonhill, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 10,856; rateable value, £17,218; the population in 1901 was: civil parish 5,286, village 1,720, ecclesiastical parish 5,286.

AVONBRIDGE is a small village partly in the parish of Slamannan and partly in that of Muiravonside and Torpichen, about 4 miles east of Slamannan and 7 miles south-east from Falkirk, with a station on the Glasgow, Coatbridge and Manouel section of the North British railway, and has a United Free church and a Congregational chapel. Here is a woollen and yarn spinning mill. Population in 1901, 510.

LIMERIGG and Lochside form a village in Slamannan civil parish. At Limerigg is a Roman Catholic church and a Mission church. Population in 1901, 956.

BINNIEHILL and Southfield form a village in Slamannan civil parish. Population in 1901, 1,022.

STIRLING

STIRLING is an ancient royal burgh, also a parliamentary burgh and head of small debt court district and poor combination, as well as the capital of the county, and a parish, and has stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 36 miles west from Edinburgh, 29 north-east from Glasgow, 33 south-west from Perth, 11 north-west from Falkirk and 6 south from Dunblane, about 7 miles above Alloa. The strath through which the Forth flows expands into a broad flat plain, through which the river winds until it merges into the Firth; just at the widening of this strath, which at this point has a breadth of about 2 miles, stands a detached mass of rock, to the south of the river, sloping upwards from the south-east and terminating on the north in an abrupt precipice 230 feet in height; the town occupies the slope of the rock and also the level summit, on which are the ancient church, Mar's Work, Argyll's Lodging, and lastly the Castle, which occupies the extreme and highest point of the hill.

The old bridge, erected at the beginning of the 15th century, is a graceful structure, and still retains its four original arches; it rises to a point in the centre, and at each end is a gateway tower. The new bridge was erected in 1831, from plans by Robert Stephenson, the eminent engineer, and the railway viaducts cross near these. The battle of "Stirling Bridge," in which Wallace defeated the English, 11 September, 1297, was fought further up the stream by an ancient bridge of wood.

The streets of the burgh are well paved and lighted both with gas and electricity; there is also a good supply of water, brought from reservoirs on the Touch Hills, a distance of about 5 miles.

Stirling, as a burgh, dates from a period anterior to the times of King David I. the earliest known charter referring to Stirling as an existing burgh having been granted about 1124.

The sheriff courts for the Stirling, or Western, district of the county are held here.

The burgh is governed by a provost, five bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and fourteen councillors.

The burgh, in conjunction with Culross, Queensferry, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, returns one member to Parliament.

There are four Established churches, six United Free churches, an Episcopal church, Wesleyan, Baptist and Congregational chapels, Salvation Army barracks and several Mission Halls. The high, or parish, church of the Holy Rood existed in the 12th century. It consists of a lofty choir, built about 1507, transept, clerestoried nave with aisles, dating from 1414, and an embattled tower, 90 feet in height, with a small spire, and containing 4 bells; the choir, or east church, is of four bays, with aisles of three bays, and contains a number of stained windows, the east window being a memorial to John Cowane, the founder of the hospital of that name; the nave, or west church, is also adorned with stained glass, and has a number of mural tablets to benefactors of the town, and others; adjoining the church is the old churchyard, in which is a sundial and a number of monuments of great interest, including one to the Covenanters, others to John Knox, Ebenezer Erskine, James Guthrie, James Renwick, and the Wigton martyrs (Margaret MacLachlan and Agnes Wilson); here is also a huge rocky mass, known as the "Ladies' Rock," from which magnificent views are obtained.

The Peter Memorial Church, in Park terrace, erected in 1902, at a cost of about £13,000, from a legacy bequeathed for that purpose by the late Mrs. R. Peter, a former member of the North church congregation, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, with a massive tower, and will seat 850 persons. The North church, in Murray place, is an edifice in the Norman style; in Murray place is also the Free South church, which has a fine spire.

The Episcopal church of the Holy Trinity, Albert place, erected in 1878, will seat 546 persons, and attached is St. Ninian's Mission church. The rectory, net value £400, has been held since 1905 by the Rev. Robert Percival Brown M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge.

The Roman Catholic church, in Upper Bridge street, and dedicated to St. Mary, was erected in 1903, at a cost of over £12,000.

In St. John street is a statue, erected at a cost of over £500, in memory of Ebenezer Erskine, the founder, in 1740, of the United Presbyterian body.

The Municipal Buildings, King street, comprise a tower with a lofty spire, containing a clock with four dials; the council chamber and town clerk's offices are in the upper portion of the building, and over the entrance portico is a statue of Sir William Wallace, presented by the late W. Drummond esq.

The Clock Tower, at the junction of Union and Wallace streets, was presented to the town by Provost Bayne in 1910; it is a structure of stone 40 feet in height, and contains a four-dial clock.

The Public Libraries Acts were adopted here in September, 1898, and the library building, begun in 1900, was completed in 1903, from the designs of Mr. H. Ramsay Taylor, architect, of Edinburgh, and opened in Feb. 1904, at a cost of £7,000, provided by Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle. It comprises on the main floor a lending library, ladies' room and reading room and a reference library and committee room above. The MacFarlane Library, with its endowment, has been transferred to the Public Library. The books belonging to the Stirling Natural History and Archaeological Society have also been transferred to the Public Library, and there are now in the lending library over 9,000 volumes and in the reference library over 9,000 volumes.

The Arcade, a glass-roofed thoroughfare, between Murray place and King street, was built in 1892, and includes, besides shops, the Douglas hotel and three halls, the largest of which seats 1,200 persons, and is licensed for stage plays.

The Public Hall, in Dumbarton road, was erected in 1883, by a Limited Company, from designs by Mr. William Simpson, jun. architect, of Stirling, at a cost of about £12,000, and contains a large hall, licensed and fitted for dramatic performances, and seating 1,400 persons, and containing an organ, provided at a cost of £2,300; there is also a smaller hall, seating 300, with retiring and cloak rooms and a keeper's apartments.

The old Town House, in Broad street, is a plain building of three storeys, with a lofty square tower, finished with a balustrading and lantern, and containing a clock with chimies; in front of the building stands the Mercat cross, restored in 1891, and consisting of a shaft raised on four steps and surmounted by the figure of a unicorn; behind it, in St. John street, is a military prison. The County Buildings, in Barnton street, erected in 1874, comprise a justices court room, where the lords of session sit twice a year, sheriff and justice of peace court rooms, county council offices, law library, and the offices and cells of the county constabulary, opposite to which is a fountain of granite erected in honour of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria.

The Smith Institute, in Dumbarton road, erected in 1873, was founded, at a cost of £5,000, by the late Thomas Stuart Smith esq. of Glassingall, who also left funds for its future maintenance; the town council gave the site, and the building embraces a museum and picture gallery, open free to the public, and controlled by trustees.

The Stirling Tract Enterprise, established in 1848, is in Dumbarton road.

The Stirling Royal Infirmary, founded about 1873, is a building of two storeys, in the Italian style, with a lofty pedimented portico, and circular spired turrets at the angles. An administrative block and a children's ward is now (1911) being added. During the year 1910 the number of in-patients was 412, and of out-patients treated in the Dispensary, 2,110.

The Poor House was erected in 1856, at a cost of £7,000, and new probationary wards were built in 1903, at a cost of £750; the hospital block was remodelled in 1907 at a cost of £3,000.

The new Combination Hospital, Drip road, was opened in 1903, the estimated cost being £14,000.

Cowane's Hospital for decayed Guild Brethren was founded in 1639 by John Cowane, merchant, and sometime dean of Guild, and consists of a central block with stepped gabled wings and a square tower with ogee roof; over the tower entrance is a statue of the founder; in 1852 the interior was re-modelled, and is now used as a Guild hall, and the almshouse are treated as pensioners. Here is preserved the founder's oak chest, richly carved and inscribed, and bearing the date 1636, besides other objects of interest.

The newspapers published here are the "Stirling Observer," the "Stirling Journal and Advertiser," the "Bridge of Allan Gazette," the "Bridge of Allan Review," the "Stirling Sentinel," the "Visitor," and the "Callander Advertiser," all of which circulate throughout the district.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, besides the Stirling Savings Bank.

The principal hotels are the Golden Lion, in King street, Lennox's Station hotel, and the Douglas hotel, in Murray place.

The manufactures of Stirling, although not extensive, comprise carpet weaving, worsted spinning and woollen waste and flock making; there are also india rubber works, a large cooperage, an iron foundry, agricultural implements factory, perambulator and folding bedstead factories, carriage works, cabinet making and confectionery works and a tannery.

A weekly market and stock sales are held on Thursdays.

Stirling Castle, which stands at the end of a steep ridge of rock, is entered from the town across an esplanade and over a drawbridge leading to the inner courtyard, around which are grouped the palace built by James V. a building of stone ornamented with grotesque carving; the Parliament House, erected by James III. and the chapel, built by James VI.; in the castle is the Douglas room, in which, in 1451, James II. who was born in this building, 16 Oct. 1430, assassinated William, 8th Earl of Douglas; the other royal personages connected with this fortress were Alexander I. of Scotland, who died here 24 April, 1124, James VI. who was crowned here at the age of 13 months, 29 July, 1567, and Charles II. who after being crowned at Scone, 1 Jan. 1651, occupied Stirling on his way to Worcester. The Regent Lennox was killed during an attack made on the town by Mary's adherents in 1571. James VI.'s eldest son, Prince Henry, was baptized in the castle chapel. Round the castle rock is a pleasant walk accessible from the town, and between the castle and the church is "The Valley," where tournaments took place, and near it the gardens, in which is a curious mound known as the King's Knoll; here also is the King's Park of about 100 acres. Stirling Castle is the depot of the 91st Regimental District, comprising four battalions of the Princess Louise's (Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders), 1st (91st Foot), 2nd (93rd Foot), 3rd (Special Reserve), with head quarters at the Castle, and 4th (Extra Reserve), with head quarters at Paisley.

No. 2 Company of the Highland Division A.S.C. have head quarters in St. John street.

The Argyll and Sutherland Infantry Brigade and the 7th Battalion of the above named regiment have head quarters in Princes street.

Argyll's Lodging, on the east side of the Castle wynd, is a fine house, erected in 1632 by William (Alexander), 1st Earl of Stirling, but now used as a military hospital; here King Charles II. lodged in 1651. Mar's Work, in Broad street, erected by John, 17th Earl of Mar, in 1570, includes the lower portion of a gatehouse, flanked by octagonal towers, and some adjacent walls, all which are adorned with panelling, heraldic devices and inscriptions; much of the work is ecclesiastical in its character, and is said to have been taken from Cambuskenneth Abbey.

The town, in 1147, was given to the English to secure the terms of the treaty of Falaisa and restored to the Scotch by Richard I. in 1186, but in 1297 the English, in an attempt to regain it, were defeated by Wallace at Stirling Bridge and their army, under the Earl of Surrey, was cut to pieces; in 1304, Edward I. after a severe siege took the castle and town. In 1314 Robert Bruce besieged it, and a relieving army under Edward II. having been destroyed at Bannockburn, the fortress surrendered, but Edward III. having extorted from Baliol in 1333 a surrender of all the principal fortresses of Scotland, in 1339 the Scotch again took it, and then for two centuries it remained in their possession undisturbed, until Queen Mary's adherents made an attempt on it in 1571, and the Earl of Ruthven and his brother took it in 1583. The Covenanters held it in 1633, and the Duke of Argyll occupied it in 1715 for the Hanoverian Government. In 1745 Prince Charles Edward unsuccessfully attempted its capture, and this ended its vicissitudes and it is now a military depot.

On the esplanade of the castle stands a statue of King Robert Bruce, nearly 11 feet in height, overlooking the battle fields of Stirling and Bannockburn; the figure, modelled by Mr. Andrew Currie, was unveiled by Lady Alexander, 24th Nov. 1877. The Wallace monument, erected to commemorate the victory of Stirling Bridge, is at Abbey Craig, Causeway-head.

In 1907 a monument was erected here to commemorate the soldiers of the Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders who fell in the South African War, 1899-1902.

The area of the civil parish is 1,825 acres; assessable value, £122,198; area of burgh, 1,377 acres. The population in 1891 (after alterations under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1893") was 14,170, and in 1901 was 18,609, including 7 officers and 84 inmates of the poor house and 179 military and 119 non-military servants &c. in the Castle.

The population of the royal burgh in 1901 was 14,355.

The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was: First or King Street, 3,213; Second or Port Street, 3,913; Third or

Baker Street, 3,822; Fourth or Cowane Street, 5,115; Fifth or St. Ninian's, 2,340.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 10,649. The population of the whole parliamentary burgh in 1901 was: Stirling, 18,403; Culross, 335; Dunfermline, 22,039; Inverkeithing, 1,909, and Queensferry, 1,850; total, 44,536.

The number of electors on the Stirling parliamentary register in 1910 was, in Stirling 3,381, and in the Stirling District of Burghs, 8,331.

Mary Kirk is a quoad sacra parish taken from that of Stirling; population in 1901, 5,013.

STRATHBLANE is a parish deriving its name from the vale of the river Blane, which pursues a north-westerly course through it; the land of this valley is exceedingly fertile, and the hills are clothed with natural woods; the parish lies in the south-western part of the county and is 5 miles in length from north to south and about 4 wide, and bounded on the east by the parish of Campsie, on the south by Baldernock, south-west by the Allander river, which separates it from East Kilpatrick in Dumbartonshire, and on the west and north by Killearn, and is in the small debt court district of Lennoxton. The village stands at the junction of the roads from Glasgow and Kirkintilloch through Aberfoyle to Loch Katrine, and has a station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle branch of the North British railway, and is 10 miles north from Glasgow, 20 west from Falkirk and 7 north-west from Kirkintilloch. There are Established and United Free churches. A new United Free church was erected in 1907, at a cost of £2,000, to replace one burnt down. About 2 miles to the west is Duntreath Castle, the seat of Sir Archibald Edmonstone bart. D.L., C.V.O. and 1½ miles south-west is Mugdock Castle, the property of the Duke of Montrose K.T. but now occupied by J. A. Reid esq.; Craigend Castle, in a small park, the property of Sir Eric Alexander Buchanan bart. is the residence of James Ontram esq. Sir A. Edmonstone bart. D.L., C.V.O. Sir E. A. Buchanan bart. D.L., J.P. Allan Graham-Borns-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Craigallian, the Duke of Montrose K.T. John C. Graham esq. and Lord Ardwall, of 14 Moray place, Edinburgh, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,085; rateable value, £23,155; population, 1901, 590.

BLANEFIELD is a village, about 1 mile west from Strathblane, with a station on the Glasgow and Aberfoyle branch of the North British railway, and has a Roman Catholic church.

SUTHERLANDSHIRE

THIS is the most northerly but one of the counties of Scotland, and is bordered on the north and west by the Atlantic Ocean, which accounts for the rugged and deeply indented coasts on those two faces; it also has a coast line of 26 miles on the Moray Firth on the south-east, and 18 miles along the Dornoch Firth on the south, its remaining boundaries on the east and south being the counties of Caithness and Ross respectively, but though it possesses this extensive sea coast it has only one port of any importance, viz. Dornoch, on the south-east coast; from east to west it extends 62 miles, and from north to south 49 miles. It has an area of 2,027.9 square miles, or 1,297,914 acres, exclusive of 47,631 acres of water, 12,812 of fresh-water, and 1,553 of tidal water. The population in 1891 was 21,896, and in 1901, 10,445 males and 10,935 females; total, 21,440; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 4,713, and in 1901, 4,760. In size it ranks as the fifth, and in population as the twenty-ninth, of the counties of Scotland.

Early History.—This northern county appears to have been held by the Picts, and though the Romans penetrated here, there seems to be no record of any permanent occupation by them. The Dalriads in 767 fought the Picts at Forteviot, Perthshire, but did not succeed in penetrating further, though in 843 their king succeeded to the Pictish throne, and these northern tribes had to turn their attention to resisting the constant invasions of the Danes, and were also frequently engaged in clan feuds. King James I. made several expeditions to the north to control the clans, but these feuds continued; early in the 15th century the Lord of the Isles invaded this county, but was defeated at the Sands of Fleet, and in 1517 the Mackays made an incursion, but were repulsed. These feuds continued up to the early part of the 17th century, and in 1650 Montrose ravaged these parts.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—This large county consists almost entirely of an uninterrupted succession of mountains, valleys and morasses. The northern and western coasts are bold and rocky, deeply indented by inlets and bays, and with many large promontories, among which Cape Wrath, at the north-western corner, is most prominent. The shire comprehends the political districts of Strathnaver (anciently a county of itself), Assynt and Sutherland, the first-named including the northern part, and the two latter the southern. The interior is divided naturally into three districts—the Eastern, the Middle and the Western. The first is a level narrow strip of land on the east coast, sheltered from the north by a ridge of mountains from 300 to 800 feet high; the second is occupied by the four straths of the rivers Helmsdale, Brora, Fleet and Oykel; and the Western district, which borders on the Atlantic, is wild and mountainous, abounding in salt and fresh water lochs. The mountains of greatest altitude in the shire are Ben More, 3,235; Ben Clebrig, 3,157 and Ben Hope, 3,040 feet above the level of the sea. The large extent of Sutherlandshire was the last district in Scotland subjected to the improvements of modern times. Until about the close of the XVIII. century it was a country lying in nearly the same condition as it must have exhibited centuries before, and, in many respects, was shut out from the progress of civilisation. The great barrier to improvement was the dangerous narrow firths to be crossed, and the total destitution of roads, either along the shore or into the interior. Two circumstances at length brought about the introduction of efficient measures of improvement. The first was the exertions made by the noble family of Gower, and the second was by Parliament, which agreed to advance a moiety of the expense for certain roads and bridges in the Highlands. Breeding of sheep is the great staple business of the shire, for which its sheltered straths and swelling hills, as well as its climate, eminently adapt it. The county rears many thousands of sheep, mostly of the Cheviot breed, of which a great number are annually exported. The soil, being of a sandy, open-bottomed nature, bears excellent crops of oats, barley, turnips and clover. The crops in 1910, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," are—oats, 7,995 acres; barley or bere, 829; the total corn crops being 8,905; turnips and swedes, 3,067 acres; potatoes, 1,460; total green crops, 4,599; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 4,150; not for hay, 5,164 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 1,704; not for hay, 6,929 acres; the total area of land being 1,297,914 acres, of which 855,916 acres are mountain and heath (used for grazing), and woods and plantations, 20,382.

The live stock in 1910 comprised—horses used for agriculture and brood mares, 2,152; other horses, 617; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 5,330; other cattle, two years and above, 1,535; one year and under, 2,327; under one year, 2,423; ewes kept for breeding, 85,536; other sheep, one year and above, 53,402; under one year, 71,571; sows kept for breeding, 91; other pigs, 544. The exports of farm produce have been much assisted by the erection of piers at Helmsdale and other places on the coast, chiefly at the cost of the late Duke of Sutherland.

Coal has for many years been wrought at Brora, and the production of coal in the county in 1909 was 6,390 tons, value £1,303. Sandstone was raised in 1909 to the extent of 720 tons. From the fishing stations on the coast there are annually exported immense quantities of herrings, besides cod and ling. This county is almost devoid of manufactures, the only works being at Brora and Rogart, at which places tweeds, blankets &c. are made. Hand looms are, however, still worked in many of the crofters' houses.

The chief rivers are the Brora, Borgia, Naver, Helmsdale, Halladale, Laxford, Inehard, Inver, Shin, Fleet, Strathmore and Gruke; the chief sea lochs, the Fleet, Glencoul, Glendhu, Inver and Laxford, and the principal fresh water lochs are the Assynt, Cama, Garbheg, Hope, Loyal, Meadie, Merkland, More, Naver, Shin (17 miles long) and the Veatie. The railway system belongs to the Highland Railway Company and comprises a line which, coming north from Inverness, turns to the west when it reaches the Dornoch Firth and enters this county at Invershin, runs due north to Lairg, when it turns eastward to Golspie, runs up the coast to Helmsdale, where it turns again to the west and north-west, quitting the county near Forsinard station and proceeding to Wick and Thurso; from the latter place steamers run to the Orkney Islands.

Division, Representation &c.—Sutherlandshire comprises 13 parishes and 15 entire and 2 parts of ecclesiastical parishes, in the synod of Sutherland and Caithness. It contains only one town, Dornoch, which is a royal and parliamentary burgh, joining with Kirkwall, Wick, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty in returning one representative, and the county at large sends another. The parliamentary constituency in 1911 numbered 3,255.

ASSYNT is a large parish, on the Minch Channel, between Kyle Sku and Loch Enard, and is in Sutherland poor combination; it is 23 miles long from Stoer Point to the Cromalt Hills, and about 13 broad, bounded on the east by Eddrachillis, south-east by Ross-shire, south-west by Lake Veayatie and the river Kirkaig, which divides it from Cromarty, and west by the Minch. Assynt kirk, which is on the southern extremity of the lake of that name, is 20 miles north-west from Lairg station on the Tain and Golspie section of the Highland railway. There is also a United Free church. In the parish there are two hundred and eighty named lakes, the largest being Assynt, about 8 miles in length by 1 in breadth; Cama, 4 miles long, with a breadth of nearly 1 mile; and Urgiall, 2 miles long and 1 broad. Assynt lake contains salmon and trout. Inver is a sea loch on the shore of the village of the same name. The mountains in the parish are Ben More, 3,273 feet in height, Canisp, 2,779 feet, Quinag, 2,653 feet and Suliven, 2,403 feet. Oldney Island, which forms part of the parish, is to the south of Eddrachillis Bay; it is about 1½ miles long by 1 broad, but is now (1911) uninhabited. About 5 miles west of this island is Stoer Point, a prominent headland. Sithean Mor on this headland rises to a height of 530 feet. Slate, spat and marble are found in this parish. The area of the parish is 110,111 acres; rateable value, £6,000; the population in 1901 was 2,386 in the civil and 1,154 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LOCHINVER is a village in this parish. It is beautifully situated on bay of same name, facing the Minch, and is a popular resort for anglers and tourists.

BRORA is a thriving village, in the parish of Clyne and small debt court district of Dornoch; it is on the south-east coast, at the point where the river Brora falls into the Moray Firth, and is about 12 miles south-south-west from Helmsdale, and 6 north-north-east from Golspie, and has a station on the Georgemas Junction and Golspie section of the Highland railway. Here are Established and Free churches, and services are held in the English church during the summer months only. The climate is very dry and the temperature warm, and the sands here attract a large number of bathers. The links have long been famous for golf. There is excellent fishing in the Brora water, and at Strathbrora, both of which places abound with salmon. About a mile of free sea trout fishing is also to be had. The curing of fish employs some of the inhabitants, and there is a distillery in the neighbourhood, and a coal pit which has been worked for 300 years. Bricks and tiles are made here, and there is a large tweed mill. In the village is a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank. Population in 1901, 518.

COLABOLL, see LAIRG.

CREICH is a parish and village in Sutherland poor combination and Dornoch small debt court district; the parish is about 35 miles long by a breadth varying from 2 to 8, bounded on the north by Lairg, on the south by Kincardine and Edderton, in Ross-shire, on the east by Dornoch and Rogart, and on the west by Kincardine (in Ross-shire) and Assynt. The village is on the north side of the Dornoch Firth, 1 mile south from Bonar Bridge station on the Highland railway, 14 north-west from Tain and 13 west from Dornoch. The river Oykel, which rises in the northern extremity of the parish, near Ben More, a mountain, 3,273 feet high, forms the western boundary of the parish for about 20 miles and separates it from Ross-shire; this river in its course receives the Caseley, which also rises in the parish. Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, Sir Charles Henry Augustus Frederick Lockhart Ross bart. D.L. of Balaigowne, and William Ewing Gilmore esq. J.P. of Rosehall, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 107,652 acres; rateable value, £12,125; the population in 1901 was 1,838.

BONAR BRIDGE is a considerable village in the parish of Creich, on the great north mail road, and on the north side of the Firth of Dornoch, with a station on the Highland railway, and is 15 miles north-west from Tain and 13 west from Dornoch, and has Established, Free and United Free churches. Kyle of Sutherland is here crossed by an iron bridge, completed in 1893, at a cost of £13,000, from designs by Messrs. Crouch & Hogg, engineers, of Glasgow; it has three spans of 70 feet, 105 feet and 140 feet respectively, and a roadway of 25 feet. Here are two hotels, a branch of the Bank of Scotland, and a Drill Hall for the Territorials. Fairs are held in the village on the second Monday in April, June, July, August, September and October. Population in 1901, 401, including 30 officials and inmates in Sutherland Combination Poorhouse.

ALTASS, Spinningdale, Rosehall, Inveran and Invershin are also small villages in Creich parish. At INVERSHIN is a station on the Highland railway, 3 miles north from Bonar Bridge, and at ROSEHALL is an Established church.

DORNOCH, a parish on the south-east coast, to the north of Dornoch Firth, is also a small seaport and a royal and parliamentary burgh, the capital of the county and head of a sheriff court, and in the Sutherland poor combination; it is 9 miles north from Taio. 7 south from Golspie and 15 north from Cromarty. The parish, which is bounded north by Golspie, south by Creich and west by Rogart, is 10 miles in length from east to west, by 6 in breadth, and has a terminal station on a branch from The Mound on the Highland railway. Dornoch was constituted a royal burgh by Charles I. in 1628, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, with four councillors. In conjunction with Wick, Kirkwall, Dingwall, Cromarty and Tain, it forms the Wick parliamentary district, returning one member. The trade of the town is very limited, owing chiefly to its locality at an angle of the county and the free navigation of the Firth being obstructed by the bar of dangerous sand banks extending between Dornoch and Tain. Of late years on account of its fine golf links, upon which there are two 18-hole courses, and its sands and sea bathing, the town has become highly popular as a summer resort. The water supply and drainage are both good. A Free Library, the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, was opened in 1907. The cathedral, now serving only as the parish church, was originally the head of the diocese of Caithness, founded, it is said, by King David I. (1124-53), but at present, for the purposes of the Episcopal Church in Scotland, is united to those of Moray and Ross, with a cathedral church at Inverness. The cathedral of Dornoch was first erected by Gilbert de Moray, bishop of Caithness (1223-60), and is in the Early English and Early Geometric styles, consisting of choir, aisleless nave, transepts and a low central tower with stunted spire: the church, with the exception of the tower, was almost entirely destroyed by fire in 1570, during an incursion of hostile tribes, and on 5 November, 1605, one of the arcades was blown down by a violent gale: John, 12th Earl of Sutherland, in 1614 began the repair of the fabric, which was subsequently completed in a plain style. In 1536-7, the Duchess and Countess of Sutherland (d. 1839) restored the church to its original dimensions and added the groined roof: at the west end is a memorial with marble effigy by Chantrev. to George, 2nd Marquess and 1st Duke of Sutherland K.G., P.C. d. 19 July, 1833. A small part of the bishop's palace still remains, but all the manses of the other dignitaries of the cathedral have disappeared, and the town has lost much of its ecclesiastical importance since the triumph of the Reformation. Here also are Free and United Free churches. Within half a mile from the village of Clashmore is Skibo Castle, the seat of Andrew Carnegie esq.: this castle, at one time a residence of the Bishops of Sutherland and Caithness, was for a long time a fortress, and the celebrated Marquess of Montrose, in the year 1650, spent two nights as a prisoner in the castle, after his defeat by the Presbyterian army near Bonar Bridge, and his subsequent capture by Neil Macleod, of Assynt, who delivered him up to his enemies: subsequently the castle was dismantled and allowed to go to ruin, until early in the last century, when it was demolished and the present castle erected on its site. Large additions were made to the castle in 1890.

A public fair or market is held annually in the town, on the first Tuesday in November. The Duke of Sutherland K.G. and Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 32,988 acres; burgh, 1,297 acres; rateable value of the landward, £7,252 18s. 2d. and of the burgh, £4,796; the population in 1901 was 2,794, which included 624 in the royal burgh, and the ecclesiastical parish, 2,850.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 121.

CLASHMORE is a modern village, about 4 miles west from Dornoch, and on the estate of Skibo, now the property of Andrew Carnegie esq. A fair is held here on the first Monday in May.

EMBO, a fishing village in this parish, is 2 miles north-east from Dornoch, with a station on the Dornoch branch of the Highland railway. Here is a new harbour for fishermen, constructed to a great extent by Government aid. Population in 1901, 546.

DURNESS is a parish and village in Sutherlandshire poor combination and in the north-west part of the county, between Whiten Head and Cape Wrath; the parish is 20 miles in length, and in breadth 13 miles, and consists principally of hilly pasture; it is bounded on the west by Eddrachillis parish, and east by Tongue. Its northern boundary of about 17 miles facing the Atlantic Ocean. Cape Wrath, the most northerly promontory on the western coast, rises perpendicularly from the sea to a height of 523 feet, and presents a series of rugged rocks with a sunken reef in front; on this promontory is a large lighthouse and fog signal station and there is also a signal station at Cape Wrath. Whiten Head is another promontory, 500 feet high, in the eastern part of the parish. Durness kirk, with the tomb of Rob Don, the Gaelic Bard, stands on the east side of the Kyle of Durness, and is about 60 miles north-by-west from Lairg station on the Tain and Brora section of the Highland railway. Here also is a United Free church. Loch Erriboll is a sea loch, extending about 8 miles inland. Hope loch, an inland loch, is about 6 miles long by about 1 broad. The parish is watered by several small streams. The mountains are—Ben Hope, 3,040 feet in height, one of the loftiest in the county; Fornaven, 2,980 feet; Ben Sproonn, 2,536 feet, and Savaal More, 2,547 feet. Lime is quarried here. The noted cave of "Smoo" is on the coast. Acreage, 140,812; rateable value, £4,295; the population in 1901 was 870.

FARR is a large parish and a village extending for 33 miles from the north coast at Strathly Point to the centre of the county, by 20 miles broad, and containing, besides the kirktown of Farr on the north coast, the villages of Armadale (also on the north coast) and Altnaharra; the latter, at the head of Loch Naver, being 14 miles south of Tongue; the parish, which is in the poor combination of Sutherland and small debt court district of Tongue, is intersected by the river Naver, and has in its south portion the Lochs Naver and Choire, the former about 6 miles and the latter 5 miles long; these lochs are surrounded by high hills, extending down the sides of Strath Naver. There are Established and United Free churches. Along Strath Naver are some large sheep farms, part of one of which was bought from the Duke of Sutherland by the Congested Districts Board and divided into twenty-nine Crofter Holdings. There are also four lodges for the accommodation of the shooting and angling tenants, and several large lochs in which trout angling may be had free. Some of the hills or Bens are of considerable height. Strathly is a quoad sacra parish erected out of Farr and Reay parishes, and is given under a separate heading. The area comprises 258,752 acres; rateable value, £11,063; the population in 1901 was 2,557 in the civil and 1,025 in the ecclesiastical parish.

GOLSPIE is a parish and village—the latter, situated on the Moray Firth, 8 miles north of Dornoch, 16 north from Tain and 15 east of Lairg, has a station on the main line of the Highland railway, and there is another station at Monod on the south boundary of the county; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Dornoch and poor combination of Sutherland, is 8 miles from east to west by 6 deep, and is bounded north by Clyne, west by Rogart and south by Dornoch. The parish church, a small building, erected in 1619, stands within a well enclosed burial ground, surrounded by trees; at the west end of the village is the Free church, and at Fountain road, in the middle of the village, is the United Free church. The great parliamentary road passes through the village, in which there are branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and the British Linen Company's Bank. The pier was constructed at a cost of £2,000, defrayed by the County Council. The Sutherland Technical School here was founded in 1903 by the Duchess of Sutherland, the building and equipment being provided by the Duke of Sutherland K.G. and Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. and is available for 48 boarders. Near by is the Lawson Memorial Hospital, erected and endowed by the late Alexander B. Lawson, of Clynelish, and opened July 27, 1900, for non-infectious medical and surgical cases occurring in the county of Sutherland, and has 10 beds. To the north of the village stands Dunrobin Castle, the seat of the Duke of Sutherland K.G. Lord lieutenant of the county. It is known to have existed in the 12th century, and, according to old historians, it was even long before that period the family forte of the ancient Thanes and Earls of Sutherland, tradition fixing the date of erection as 1098. Malcolm Caenmore (1057-1093) bestowed the title of earl on the then Thane of Sutherland, and William, the 4th earl, married the lady Margaret, daughter of King Robert Bruce; the castle is a massive edifice of freestone, with turrets, in the Scottish style; its high-pitched roofs and turret caps giving it the appearance of a French chateau; at one angle is a tower over 100 feet in height, with an arched gateway leading into the courtyard; the grand staircase of polished Caen stone is very fine, and there are some good rooms, including the state rooms on the sea front, appropriated to the use of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, during her visit in 1842, and a good collection of pictures and a museum; the gardens are large and well laid out; the mountain called Ben-Bhraggle towers over all to the height of 1,300 feet; upon its summit is a lofty monument to a former Duke of Sutherland, and near the village a memorial has been erected to the late Duchess, raised by subscription. There is a private railway station on the Highland line, near the Castle, where trains stop by signal only. The Duke of Sutherland K.G. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 19,690 acres; rateable value

£7,061, including £2,750 for village of Golspie; the population in 1901 was 1,665, including 1,024 in the village.

HELMSDALE is a modern village, in the parish of Kildonan, and in the Sutherland poor combination; a small debt court district is held here twice a year. There is a station here on the Highland railway. The village is 50 miles south-by-west from Wick and 17 north-east from Golspie, at the mouth of the river from which it takes its name, and on the coast road that passes northward to Wick. A harbour was constructed in 1896 at a cost of £14,000. The river that flows through the extensive strath to Kildonan abounds with salmon. Fishing is carried on to some extent. In 1909, 116 boats of 1,042 tons were engaged, employing 387 resident men and boys, the total value of the fish landed being £4,093. Here are established, Free and United Free churches. In the village is a branch of the British Linen Bank. Just opposite the village stand the ruins of a castle, built by Margaret Baillie, Countess of Sutherland, after the death of her husband John, 7th Earl of Sutherland, in 1460; her son, with whom she had some differences, damaged it, but it was restored in July, 1867; these ruins serve as a landmark to mariners. The principal landowner is the Duke of Sutherland K.G., LL. The population in 1901, including East Helmsdale, was 779.

WEST HELMSDALE is a village on the west bank of the river Helmsdale. The population, including Marrel and Gartymore, in 1901 was 480.

LAIRG is a parish and village in Sutherland poor combination and the small debt court district of Dornoch, and is 25 miles in length by a breadth of from 7 to 10 miles; it is bounded on the north by Farr, south-west by Creich, east by Rogart and west by Eidrachillis. The village, which is at the head of Loch Shin, is about 1½ miles north from Lairg station on the Highland railway, and 20 north from Dornoch. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches, a Public Library, and a branch of the Bank of Scotland. Loch Shin, one of the largest lakes in Scotland, is in this parish, and is about 16 miles long by 1 broad, being fed by several rivers, chiefly the Fiag and the Terry; the Loch contains salmon-ferox and trout. Loch Merland, a feeder of the Shin, is about 3 miles in length by 1 in breadth; Grian Loch, about 2 miles long by 1 broad, is the source of the river Garvie, which empties itself into Loch Shin. There are eight other smaller lochs in the parish. Ben Hee mountain is 2,864 feet high. The Duke of Sutherland K.G. and Major Lewis Matheson are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 121,359; rateable value £6,649; population in 1901, 1,081.

ACHANY is 3½ miles south of Loch Shin, in South Sutherland.

TONGUE is a parish and village in the north central part of the county, and divided into two for about half its length by the Kyle of Tongue, a deep inlet of the sea on the north coast, off which lies the Island of Roan, which is also included in this parish. The parish is 18 miles in length from north to south by about 9 broad, and has on its eastern side the large loch of Loaghal, 5 miles long; the parish is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean on the north, the parish of Farr on the east and south, and Durness on the west; it is in the small debt court district of Tongue and the poor combination of Sutherland, and is watered by the rivers Borgia and Kinaloch, together with lochs Laaghal, Dherue, Meadie, and many small lakes; it is also very mountainous, Ben Hatick being 1,340 feet, and Loaghal 2,504 feet above the sea level. The village of TONGUE lies on the east side of loch Loaghal, 5 miles from its mouth, and has Established, Free and United Free churches, and one of the latter at Melness; there is also a comfortable hotel and a library and reading room. A small debt court is held at Tongue village twice a year. The area comprises 81,037 acres; rateable value, £4,047; the population in 1901 was 1,783, including 67 on Roan Island.

WIGTOWNSHIRE

THIS, the extreme south-western county of Scotland, formed part of the ancient district of Galloway; it is extremely irregular in shape, caused by the indentation of Luce Bay on the south, an open space of water 13 miles wide by 16 from north to south, its western head forming the Mull of Galloway, and the eastern one Burrowhead; these two headlands are known by the Celtic name of the Rhynns (Rhyns or Rhynnos) of Galloway. On the eastern boundary of the county Wigtown Bay extends from Grange of Cree, on the north to Eggerness, just north of Gardiston Bay, a distance of 8 miles; and on the north of the county Loch Ryan indents for a like distance. Its boundaries are the Irish Channel on the west and south, Wigtown Bay and Kirkcudbrightshire on the east, and Ayrshire on the north, its length being 32 miles, and extreme breadth from east to west 28, and contains 486.9 square miles, or 311,609 acres of land and 2,796 of water. The population in 1891 was 36,062, and in 1901 comprised 15,273 males and 17,412 females; total, 32,685; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 7,001, and in 1901, 6,902. Wigtownshire stands seventeenth in point of size and the twenty-second in population of Scottish counties.

Early History.—When in 79 A.D. the Romans crossed the Solway into North Britain, the ancient British tribes of the "Novantea" inhabited the whole of Western Galloway, having "Leucophibia" (the modern Whithorn) for their principal town, and "Ierigonium" (Loch Ryan) for their principal port, and during the Roman occupation, 397, St. Ninian introduced Christianity and founded a monastery at Whithorn; after the Romans had evacuated the kingdom in 410, the Strathclyde Britons gained the upper hand, but the Anglo-Saxons overran the district in the 6th century, and Osway, the Northumbrian king, settled at Whithorn. During the 9th and 10th centuries the county on the west was inhabited by the Picts from Ireland and the Isle of Man, and hence the name of Galloway, or "the country of the Gael," was conferred on the territory. About the 12th century Galloway passed into the hands of the Scottish king, Alexander II. In the sanguinary conflicts between Bruce and Baliol, the chieftains of Galloway long remained attached to the party of the latter, whose family they sheltered after Edward Bruce had subdued the whole country. The family of Douglas subsequently became possessed of the lordship of Galloway; but, on the attainder of the nobleman of that name in 1455, the title became extinct. It was revived, however, in 1623, and now bestows an earldom on the Stewarts, Lord Garlies, but the Maxwells of Nithsdale received a portion of the estates. The proximity to Ireland and the Isle of Man caused the country of the Gael to remain for a long period a separate community from the rest of Scotland, and the Gaelic dress, manners and language lingered here long after they fell into desuetude in the rest of the Lowlands. Their chiefs derived their authority sometimes from the kings of Scotland and at others from the kings of Northumbria, but neither could subdue the turbulence and insubordination of the chieftains or their vassals, who were very troublesome neighbours. The position of the shire so much to the west preserved it from many of the border raids, nor was it associated to any extent in the movements of 1715 and 1745, and Queen Mary's progress from Langside to cross to England led her through Kirkcudbrightshire.

Soil, Climate, Produce &c.—This shire is one of the most level districts in Scotland; and the hills, of which there are none of great altitude, are generally pretty free from rocks; the best lands lie near the shores, the inland division being more elevated, and largely mixed with heath and moss. The major part of the soil is of that kind sometimes called a dry loam, though it often inclines to a gravelly nature. The county presents an exposure to the south, and its waters mostly descend to the Irish Sea. The climate is moist, with winds from the south-west, which prevail during the greater part of the year. In early times this district of Galloway, like most other sections of the country, was covered with woods; and in modern days planting has been pursued most extensively, and the salutary improvements that have been effected in this county have been ascribed to the efforts of the Agricultural Society of Dumfries. This district has long been pre-eminent as being an excellent pastoral one, and for the superiority of its wool.

The chief crops in 1910, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," were—oats, 31,423 acres; barley or bere, 267; wheat, 110; beans, 187; the total corn crops being 32,010 acres; turnips and swedes, 14,261 acres;

potatoes, 1,306; mangold, 360; total green crops, 16,127 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses for hay, 5,108, not for hay, 53,615 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 5,260, not for hay, 37,943 and bare fallow, 156 acres. The total area of land is 311,984 acres, of which 115,604 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 8,526 wood and plantation.

The live stock in 1910 comprised—horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 4,253; unbroken horses, 1,743; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 25,957; other cattle, two years and above, 9,730, one year and under two, 8,634, under one year, 7,938; ewes kept for breeding, 50,171; other sheep, one year and above, 21,978, under one year, 47,271; sows kept for breeding, 509; and other pigs, 10,937.

The only mineral raised, as shown by the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1909, was, 4,565 tons of igneous rocks.

The shipping trade of Wigtownshire has felt the impetus of steam navigation, the ports of Stranraer, Wigtown and Whithorn deriving considerable benefit from the coasting trade. There is also great activity in the fisheries connected with the numerous ports and lochs, and this industry is carried on at Stranraer and Wigtown, under which places full particulars will be found. There is an almost entire absence of manufactures in this shire, if we except mills at Kirkcowan and Minnigaff, at which blankets, tweeds &c. are made. The great industry of Wigtownshire is, however, the production of cheese by the farmers of the Rhins district of the county, who have been for many years the principal prize takers for the celebrated Cheddar cheese made by them.

Rivers and Mountains.—This county has no considerable rivers; the principal are the Cree, the Bladenoch, and the Tarf, with a few of smaller size. The Cree, which is a boundary river between this county and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, rises in Carrick, in Ayrshire; after forming a lake at the head of Wigtownshire, it flows again as a stream, and, passing Newton Stewart on the east, falls into a creek at the head of Wigtown Bay. The Bladenoch also has its source in Carrick, and, after running a course of 24 miles, falls into Wigtown Bay. The Tarf issues from a small lake in Ayrshire, and, after a course of 21 miles, unites with the Bladenoch. The mountains, with their elevations above the level of the sea, are—Lange, 1,758 feet; Mochrum Fell, 1,020 feet; Knock of Luce, 1,014 feet and Barhullion, 814 feet. The railway system belongs to the Glasgow and South-Western and the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire lines; the former running south from Ayr and Girvan enters the county 3 miles north of Glenwhilly station and runs through New Luce to Dunragit station, where it joins the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is an independent line leaving Newton Stewart and running westward through Glencue to Stranraer, from whence it sends a branch to Portpatrick and also sends a branch from Newton Stewart southward to Wigtown and Whithorn.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Wigtownshire comprehends 17 civil parishes and 17 complete and parts of three ecclesiastical parishes and the small islands called The Scaera, not attached to any parish, and has three royal burghs, namely, Wigtown, Stranraer and Whithorn. Prior to the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," these three last-mentioned towns, in conjunction with New Galloway, returned one member to Parliament; but on the passing of that Bill the representation was merged in the counties. The county sends one member. The burghs of barony in the shire are Newton Stewart, Gardleston, Kirkcowan, Glencue and Portpatrick; it has several thriving villages, and a number of small seaports, or natural harbours, and many mansions and seats. The parliamentary constituency in 1911 numbered 5,817.

GARLIESTON is a seaport, village and burgh of barony in the parish of Sorbie, at the head of Garlieston Bay (a small haven on the west side of Wigtown Bay). The place is built in the form of a semicircle, facing the sea, with a safe and commodious harbour, capable of receiving a large number of vessels. From the pier-head the Ross light bears south-east-by-east. The tide at the spring flow rises 13 feet. The Broughton and Poutenburn streams, which here flow into the bay, are crossed by several bridges. Garlieston is the terminal station of a short line from Millisle on the Newton Stewart and Whithorn branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway, and is about 8 miles south from Wigtown. In the village is an Established church and Congregational chapel. Population in 1891, 632, and in 1901, 528.

Post, T. & M. O. Office. Letters should have Wigtownshire added. John Fingland, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.40 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 3 & 6.10 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters.

GLENLUCE, see OLD LUCE.

INCH is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, about 8 miles in length, extending for 6 miles along the eastern shore of Loch Ryan, and about 6 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ayrshire, east by the water of Luce, which separates it from New Luce, south-east by Old Luce, and south by the Piltanton Burn, which divides it from Stoneykirk, and west by Portpatrick and Leswalt. A portion of the burgh of Stranraer is in this parish. The kirk is 1½ miles north from Castle Kennedy station, which is in the parish, on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, 3 east from Stranraer and 21 west from Newton Stewart. There is also a United Free church. The highest mountains in the parish are—Mid Moile, 844 feet high; Brockloch Fell, 769 feet, and Drummuckloch Boech, 700 feet. The ruins of the old parish church stand on the margin of the lake, in which there is a small and beautifully wooded island; the lake is divided into two portions, called the "Black loch" and "White loch," by a neck of land on which are the ruins of Castle Kennedy, the property of the Earl of Stair. The castle was formerly the seat of the family of the Earls of Cassilis, who for 300 years took a leading part in Galloway affairs: it was accidentally burnt down in 1716, during the absence of the family, and has ever since remained a ruin: in an island on the Black loch is a heronry: the grounds are open to the public every Wednesday and Saturday, and contain a collection of araucarias, said to be the finest in Great Britain. At a short distance south of Inch church, on a peninsula in a small lake, are the remains of Souleset Monastery, founded about 1160, by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, for monks of the Premonstratensian order: its abbot was the head of his order in Scotland. Loch Inch Castle is the residence of the Earl of Stair J.P. Acreage, 30,814; rateable value, landward, £16,650; burghal (part of Stranraer), £7,802; population in 1891, 3,981, and in 1901, 3,876, of which 1,889 were in the burgh of Stranraer. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,585. Included in the total parish were 6 officials and 104 inmates of Wigtownshire Combination Poorhouse and 86 in the Reformatory School for Boys.

CAIRNRYAN is a small village in this parish, on the eastern margin of Loch Ryan and on Cairn Point, 6 miles north-east from Stranraer, which is the nearest railway station. There are Established and United Free churches. The harbour here affords safe anchorage for vessels, which frequently take refuge here, and there is a lighthouse for their guidance. Loch Ryan House, close to the village, is the residence of John Alexander Agnew Wallace esq. D.L., J.P. At Castle Kennedy is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. The population in 1901 was 291.

Post, T. & M. O. & Public Telephone Call Office, Cairnryan; Miss Grace McNeill, postmistress. Letters through Stranraer. Delivery, 9.30 a.m.; dispatch, 4.40 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters.

Post Office, Castle Kennedy. (Letters should have Wigtownshire added); Andrew Paterson, sub-postmaster. Letters are delivered at 6.15 a.m. & dispatched at 3.35 & 5.5 p.m. No Sunday delivery. Stranraer is the nearest money order office. The telegraph office is at Castle Kennedy station (Sundays, nil).

Post & T. Office, Lochans: James Taylor sub-postmaster. Letters through Stranraer are delivered at 7.40 a.m. & dispatched at 7 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order office is at Stranraer.

KIRKOWAN is a parish village and burgh of barony, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district. It extends from north to south 15 miles, by a general breadth of about 5 bounded on the west by the Tarf water, which divides it from the parishes of New Luce and Old Luce, south by Machrum and Kirkinner, east by the Baidnoch river, which separates it from Penninghame, and north by Ayrshire. The village is on the Tarf water, near its junction with the Baidnoch, 10 miles north-east from Glenluce, 8 north-west from Wigtown and 7 south-east from Newton Stewart. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway has a station a quarter of a mile from the village. Loch Ronald, about 1 mile long by three-quarters of a mile broad, is in the parish. The church was erected in 1829, its site, as well as the churchyard, was given by the late Captain W. C. Hamilton of Craiglaw. There is also a United Free church, and adjoining the village are woollen factories, belonging respectively to Messrs. William Armstrong and Son Ltd. and Mr. William Milroy, which furnish employment to many of the inhabitants. Here also is a Public Hall. The principal hotels are the "Commercial" and the "Craiglaw Arms." The surface of this district is various, consisting of moorland interspersed with pieces of arable land. Acreage of the parish, 35,864; rateable value, £ 1,153, population in 1901, 1,153, of which 600 were returned for the village.

KIRKINNER is a parish and village in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district, and extends 3 miles along Wigtown Bay, the Baidnoch water dividing it on the north from Wigtown parish; Mechrum lies on its western boundary and Sorbie on the south. The village is about 3 miles south from Wigtown, on the road to Carlisleton, and is remarkable for its beautiful and picturesque scenery; Kirkinner station, on the Wigtown and Whithorn branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway, is 3½ miles south from Wigtown and about 9 south from Newton Stewart. The Killantrae burn flows through the centre of the parish. Here is an Established church. The ruins of Longcastle church, a parish now incorporated with that of Kirkinner, stand at the southern extremity of the parish. Here are also the remains of the ancient castle of Baldoon, formerly a residence of the Dunbars. Barnbarroch, a stately mansion, and seat of Lieut.-Col. John Vans-Agnew D.L., J.P. stands in a park about one mile long by about three-quarters of a mile wide, through which the Baidnoch water flows. Acreage of the parish, 15,372; rateable value, £13,967; population in 1901, 1,255.

WHAUPHILL is a small village in the parish of Kirkinner, about 5 miles south from Wigtown, and has a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint railway.

KIRKMAIDEN is a parish occupying a great portion of the western limb or peninsula of Wigtownshire, projecting into the Irish Sea, with Luce Bay on the east, and tapering to a point, inclining eastward. This parish, which is in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, comprehends the most southerly district of Scotland, and is about 12 miles in length and from 1½ to 3 miles in breadth; it still has a wild appearance, but produces good crops of corn and potatoes, and has a very large number of dairy farms. The coast is generally bold, and indented by coves, one of which contains the cave-chapel of St. Medan, standing on a shelf in the face of the cliff: it is now roofless, only the front wall with traces of a doorway and a splayed window, and the back wall with an opening leading into the inner cave, now remaining. On both sides of the peninsula, however, there are several good anchoring grounds. There is a tolerable harbour at Drummore, in Luce bay, on the east coast, where the coast guard has a station, under the command of a chief boatman; vessels of small tonnage frequently call here. Salmon fishing is carried on at Chapel Rossan, and cod fishing at Drummore. The church, a plain edifice, is near the centre of the parish, not far from Drummore Bay, and 6 miles from the Mull of Galloway, 35 south-west from Wigtown, 36 south-west from Newton Stewart, 18 south-east from Stranraer, and 16 south-east from Portpatrick station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. There is also a United Free church at DRUMMORE, and a Congregational chapel at LOGAN. The ancient church of Kirkmaiden stood on the farm of the Mull, a mile north of the isthmus of Tarbet. On the estate of Andrew Kenneth Mc'Donnal esq. of Logan, is a fish pond, hewn out of the solid rock, and having communication with the sea by means of a natural gully in which are built large stones between which the water ebbs and flows, but the fish cannot pass. The parish of Kirkmaiden has an area of 13,675 acres; rateable value, £12,600; population in 1891, 2,192, and in 1901, 1,943.

Drummore is a village about one mile east from Kirkmaiden. The population in 1901 was 459.

LESWALT is a parish, in Wigtownshire
poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, in the northern part of the county; it lies between the Irish Channel
on the west and Loch Ryan on the east,
and is bounded on the south by Portpatrick
parish, and on the north by Kirkcubbin.
The surface of this district is most agreeably varied with hill and dale, while the sea coast presents bold and rocky features.
The kirk is about 4 miles north from Stranraer station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and about 25 west
from Wigtown, and there is also a United Free church. Lochnaw Castle, which stands on the edge of a lake 50
acres in extent, is the residence of Sir
Andrew Noel Agnew bart. D.L., J.P.
The "Monument," a tower standing on a high hill in this parish, was erected in 1850 as a memorial to Sir Andrew Agnew, 7th bart. who died 28 April, 1849. Acreage, 12,526; rateable value, landward,
£7,866; burghal (part of Stranraer),

NEW LUCE is a parish, in Wigtown-shire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district; until 1646 it formed part of the parish of Old Luce, and is now
about 10 miles in length by from 5 to 6
in breadth; the greater proportion of the high ground in the parish is covered by rocks or heath; the arable land, which is not of great extent, lies principally on the banks of the rivers. The parish is bounded on the west by the main water of Luce,
which divides it from the parish of Inch,
south by Old Luce, east by the Tarf water,
which separates it from Kirkcowan, and north by Ayrshire. The village is on the Luce at the point where the Cross water falls into the river, and has a station on the Girvan section of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is about 15 miles north-west from Wigtown and about 10 north-east from Stranraer. There are Established and United Free churches.
The Standing Stones of Lagganarn have been taken in charge by the Government Commission for the preservation of ancient monuments. The Earl of Stair is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 28,811 acres; rateable value, £7,332; population in 1901, 557.

At GLENWHILLY, about 5 miles north from New Luce, is a station on the Girvan section of the Glasgow and South
Western railway.

OLD LUCE (or Glenluce) is a parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, about 12 miles long by a width varying from 3½ to 7½, and is bounded on the north by Inch and New Luce, north-east by Drumpail Burn, which separates it from Kirkcowan, east by Mochrum and south by Luce Bay. Glenluce is a village and burgh of barony on the banks of the river Luce, and on the road from Newton Stewart to Stranraer, at the head of Luce Bay, which here forms a tolerably good harbor for small vessels, it is 19 miles east from Portpatrick, 18 west from Wigtown, 16 south-west from Newton Stewart and 10 east-by-south from Stranraer. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire joint line runs through the town, and is joined by the Girvan line at Dunragit station, which is in the parish. There is an Established church and two United Free churches, and a Public Hall and Reading Room. The principal hotel is the "King's Arms." About a mile to the north of the church, and further up the vale from which the village takes its name, are the ruins of Luce Abbey, founded by Rolland, Lord of Galloway, in 1190, for monks of the Cistercian order; the ruins at present cover about an acre and a half, but the only part now remaining entire is the Chapter house, a small apartment on the east side of the cloisters, with a central shaft, about 14 feet high, from which spring eight arches supporting the roof: tradition reports that Michael Scott, the wizard, was once abbot here: many curiosities, together with several skeletons, in an upright position, have been found on the site: in the collections of the Ayrshire and Galloway Archaeological Association, vol. v. a full description is given of the abbey, with plans. Dunragit House, in this parish, is the seat of John Charles Cunningham esq. D.L., J.P. The Earl of Stair, J. C. Cunningham esq. Sir Mark J. McTaggart Stewart bart. D.L., J.P. of Ardwell, Stranraer, A. K. McDouall esq. D.L., J.P. of Logan, and Admiral the Right Hon. Sir John Charles Dalrymple-Hay bart. G.C.B. of Craigenveoch, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 31,596; rateable value. £17,030; population in 1901, 2,157; of the village of Glenluce, 792.

ST. HELENA ISLAND, with 2 inhabitants in 1901, is included in this parish. Post, M. O. & T. Office, Glenluce. Letters should have Wigtownshire added; Miss Helen Carson, postmistress. Deliveries, 6.15 a.m. & 5.20 p.m.; dispatches, 5.10 a.m. & 3.50 & 7.20 p.m.; no delivery on sundays

MOCHRUM is a parish and village, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district, about 10 miles in length and extending inland to a distance of between 4 and 5 miles; it is bounded on the west by Old Luce, north by Kirkcowan, east by Kirkinner, and south-west by Luce Bay. The village is $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Whauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and about 8 south-west from Wigtown, and has an Established church. Mochrum Loch, about $\frac{1}{2}$ miles long by half a mile wide, and Castle Loch, 1 mile in length by half a mile in breadth, as well as four smaller lochs, are in the parish. Malzie water, a tributary of the Bladenoch, is formed from the first-named lochs. The Castle, or "Old Place" of Mochrum, surrounded by lakes, is a very ancient and picturesque building in an inland part of the parish: it was formerly the family seat of the Dunbars, knights of Mochrum, but has for many years been the property of the Marquess of Bute, who has made alterations at considerable expense. In this parish is Monrean, the handsome residence and demesne of the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Eustace Maxwell bart. Lord Lieut. J.P. and proprietor of the place: the mansion, which stands on the bank of a fine lake, commands an extensive prospect of the Bay of Luce, the shore of Galloway, the Isle of Man and the coast of Cumberland. Near it is an old castle surrounded by lofty trees, and contiguous are the remains of the old parish church of Kirkmaiden, now occupied as a place of sepulture by the family of Maxwell, whose ancestors formerly possessed the estate. Acreage of the parish, 24,118; rateable value, £13,031; population in 1891, 2,166, and in 1901, 1,958, of which 667 are in Port William village, of which full particulars are given under a separate heading.

Post Office, Mochrum; Mrs. Mina Donnan, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Port William. Delivery, 10 a.m.; dispatch, 4 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. Port William is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant.

NEWTON STEWART

NEWTON STEWART is a thriving town, a burgh of barony and police burgh, principally in the parish of Penningham, with a small portion on the opposite side of the stream in the parish of Minnigaff, county of Kirkcubright. It is on the high road from Dumfries to Portpatrick, and on the right bank of the river Cree, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, connecting the two divisions of the town: and has a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, which is also the junction for the line to Carliston and Whithorn; the town is 121 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 82 south from Glasgow, 52 west from Dumfries, 26 east from Stranraer and 8 north from Wigtown, and owes its origin to a younger branch of the Stewarts, Earls of Galloway, who possessed the estate of Castle-Stewart, and founded the village upon it, to which they gave the name of Newton Stewart. The town is principally composed of one large street, in the centre of which is the Town House, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. Here is an Established church, and there are United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Works were completed in 1832 for providing water by gravitation, the source of supply being the Coldstream burn, about 4 miles distant: about half way between the intake at the burn and the town a tank and filter have been constructed, the former having a capacity of 100,000 gallons; the cost of the works was upwards of £4,000. Drainage works were carried out in 1899, at a cost of £8,000. The Douglas Academy, founded by Samuel Douglas esq. of Jamaica, and the Ewart Institute, founded by James and John Ewart, merchants, of this district, are richly endowed educational establishments, incorporated under the title of the Newton Stewart Educational Trust. The Industrial Home here was founded by a few benevolent ladies, for the support of about fifty destitute and orphan girls. McMillan Hall, in the centre of the town, is a structure in the Italian style, erected in 1885 at a cost of £5,000, which sum was left for that purpose by the family from which the hall derives its name, and who formerly carried on business in Newton Stewart. The Mechanics' Institute has a news-room supplied with the leading newspapers and periodicals, and a library containing about 1,000 volumes. The staple commodity here at present is wool, which is furnished from the surrounding country, and mostly supplied to the Yorkshire markets. The weekly market is held on Friday; cattle markets are held on the second Friday in every month, and the annual hiring fairs are held on the second Friday in April and October and the horse fairs in February, June and November. The British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, have each a branch here. The principal hotels are the "Galloway Arms" and the "Crown." A newspaper called the "Galloway Gazette" is published here every Saturday. A monument in the Gothic style was erected here in 1875, at a cost of £1,000, to Raudolph, 9th Earl of Galloway, who died at Galloway House, near Carliston, 2 Jan. 1873. At the upper extremity of that part of the town which lies in Minnigaff parish, there is a large moat hill, where David Graham, brother to the famous John Graham, of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee, and superior of this district prior to the Revolution, administered justice. The area of the burgh is 234 acres; rateable value, £10,431; the population in 1891, 2,332, and of the town, 2,738; in 1901, of the burgh, 2,204, and 2,598 in the town.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Newton Stewart; James Hunter, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 5.15 & 8.5 p.m.; dispatches, 4.30, 6 & 10.30 a.m. & 4 & 9.30 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. Telegraph office open on week days from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. & Sundays, 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Note.—Attention is directed to the necessity of addressing letters &c. Newton Stewart, Scotland, or Newton Stewart, Wigtownshire, not Newton Stewart only, as in the latter case letters may be forwarded to Newtown Stewart, Ireland, instead of their proper destination.

PENNINGHAM (or Penninghame) is a parish in Wigtownshire poor combination and Wigtown small debt court district; it extends along the right bank of the river Cree for about 15 miles, with a breadth of from 3 to 5 miles, and is bounded by Wigtown on the south and the river Bladenoch on the west, which separates it from Kirkcowan. The north of the town district is moorish and uncultivated, and chiefly adapted to pasture. Loch Ochiltree is in this parish. About 3 miles to the north of Newton Stewart are the remains of Castle-Stewart, formerly belonging to a branch of the Stewart family, Earls of Galloway. Merton Hall is the property and residence of James McMeeken esq.; Corsbie House, of John Power esq. and Mochrum Park, of Sir William Co-patrik Dunbar bart. C.B. Acreage, 33,364; rateable value, £21,687; population in 1891, 3,593; in 1901, 3,356, of which 2,204 are in Newton Stewart burgh, which is principally in this parish, a small portion being in the parish of Minnigaff, in the county of Kirkcubright. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,228.

PORT LOGAN, see KIRKMAIDEN.

PORTPATRICK is a seaport town, burgh of barony, and a parish, on the Irish Sea and on the west coast of the county, in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district. The parish is about 5 miles in length from south-west to north-east, and 3 from north-west to south-east, and is bounded by the parish of Leswalt on the north-west, Inch on the north-east, Stoneykirk on the south-east, and the Irish Sea on the south-west. Here is the terminus of the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, with which this place has communication, via Girvan, with the north and west of Scotland, and via Castle Douglas and Dumfries, with the south of Scotland and England. At Colpin, about 3 miles north-east from Portpatrick, is a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire line. The port is 133 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 89 south-south-west from Glasgow between 34 and 35 west from Wigtown, the same distance west-by-south from Newton Stewart, rather more than 7 south-west from Stranraer, 117 from Dublin, 36 from Belfast and 21 from Donaghadee (19 nautical), on the coast of the North Channel. The town is small, but is being greatly improved by the erection of new houses and the carrying out of an efficient system of drainage and water supply; its situation is delightful, having a fine southern aspect, backed by a ridge of small hills, and it is consequently a great resort for visitors during the summer months. The parish church, built in 1842, has an embattled tower: the United Free church, erected in 1887, is an edifice in the Gothic style. The Portpatrick hotel, situated on an eminence, commands a fine view of the coast of Galloway, and in clear weather the Isle of Man and the Irish coast are both visible. There is a local golf club, which has a course of 18 holes, and a club house. It was formerly, with the estate of Dunskey, the property of the Lords Montgomery, who resided at the old castle of Dunskey, erected about 1100, and the remains of which stand on the brink of a precipice overhanging the sea. The present Dunskey House is a modern residence, with gabled ends, in the Scottish style, and stands in beautiful grounds, 300 feet above the sea level, and commanding a magnificent view of the Irish Sea. About 1648 the Dunskey estate became the property of the Blair family, whose heiress married James Hunter esq. subsequently created a baronet (1786), under the name of Hunter-Blair. The present owners are the trustees of the late C. L. Orr-Ewing esq. M.P., J.P. whose widow, the Lady Augusta H. E. Orr-Ewing, is the present occupier of Dunskey House. The quay is now almost in ruins. Maay

years ago extensive and important improvements were made in the harbour, under the auspices of the Government and under the direction of Sir John Rennie, the engineer, for the accommodation of Her late Majesty's packets, and a new basin of about 200 feet square was then constructed, and connected with the harbour by means of a channel containing ten feet of water at low tides. The town has a lifeboat and rocket apparatus station, and the Admiralty has leased a piece of land for the erection of new stations for the coastguard, war-signalling, and wireless telegraphy. Extensive improvements in this place have been largely effected at the cost of successive owners of the Dunskey estate. Acreage of the parish, 9,154. lr. 33p.; rateable value, £8,775; population in 1901, 1,136, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,048.

Post, T. & M. O. Office. Letters should have Wigtownshire added; Miss Mary Hannay, sub-postmistress. Deliveries, 7.55 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 8.15 a.m. & 2.10 & 6.5 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters

PORT WILLIAM is a seaside village on the shore of Luce Bay, in the parish of Mochrum, 6 miles south-west from Whauphill station on the Wigtown branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway, 24 south-east from Stranraer, and 15 south-south-east from Glenelue. The harbour, though not of great extent, is commodious and safe, and from it large quantities of grain and potatoes are exported to Glasgow, Liverpool and other ports on the west coast. The houses in general are very well built, and afford excellent accommodation for families and tourists during the bathing season. Here is a United Free church. The principal hotel is the "Monreith Arms." Population in 1901, 667.

Post, M. O. & T. Office. Letters should have Wigtownshire added; Miss Mary Johnston, postmistress. Deliveries, 8.40 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatch, 5.20 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters

THE SCARES are a group of small islands, containing in all 4 acres, but are not attached to any civil parish; they lie at the entrance of Luce Bay, about midway between the Mull of Galloway, the southern point of Kirkmaiden parish and Burrow Head, at the southern extremity of Whithorn parish.

SHEUCHAN, see STRANRAER.

SORBIE is a parish, on the south side of the mouth of Wigtown Bay, and contains the village of Sorbie and the seaport village of Garlieston (which latter see); the first-named is 3 miles inland to the west of Garlieston and 6 south from Wigtown, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway, and has a United Free Church. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, lies for about 9 miles along the coast, which is indented by the bays of Garlieston and Rigg, and possesses two bold headlands, Eggerness to the north and Crugleton Head to the south of these bays; the boundaries are Kirkerin parish on the north, Glasserton and Whithorn on the west, and the latter on the south-west. The ancient Tower of Sorbie, now a ruin, is about 1 mile north-west of Garlieston and 2 east of the village; it was a stronghold or peel of the Sorby family, and subsequently passed to the Hannays. Between the headlands of Eggerness and Crugleton is the Park and House of Galloway, erected in 1740 and a seat of Lady McEacharn, and on the headlands themselves are the remains of two ancient castles, one of which, Crugleton Castle, is believed to have been built by the Danes and Norwegians in 1093, and shortly afterwards fell into the possession of the Kerlies, or McKerlies, who retained possession until the Reformation. Previously, they owned Carolton, now Carleton Castle, near Girvan, which the Catharts obtained in 1824. Crugleton Castle is celebrated for one of the successful exploits of Sir William Wallace, the Great Scottish patriot, who, after it had been taken by treachery, recaptured it for his friend William Kerlie. Eggerness Castle was also built by the Danes. The Established church at MILLISLE, about 1 mile from Garlieston, and 2 from Sorbie, and opened in 1877, is a fine cruciform edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire rising to a height of over 60 feet, and was erected at a cost of about £2,500. The area of the parish comprises 9,777 acres; population in 1901, 1,373, including 528 in Garlieston.

Post Office, Sorbie. (Letters should have Wigtownshire added); Miss Jane Lymburn, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 7.20 a.m.; dispatch, 6.33 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. Garlieston is the nearest money order & telegraph office for delivery, & the railway station for collection of telegrams. The station telegraph office is open on week days from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Sunday nil.

STONEYKIRK (more properly Steven's Kirk) is a parish in Wigtownshire poor combination and Stranraer small debt court district, extending about 12 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and comprehends the three old parishes of Stoneykirk, Clayhant and Tockerton; it lies in the western peninsula of the county, to the north of Kirkmaiden, and has an east and south-east coast line on Luce Bay of about 6 miles, and of about 12 miles on the Irish Channel, on its western side, and is bounded on the north by Portpatrick, the Piltanot burn separating it from Inch and Old Luce. The Kirk is 6 miles south-east from Stranraer, and about the same distance east from Portpatrick, both of which have stations on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway; there are also stations at Colfin and Dumragit. The surface is generally hilly and of a pastoral character; the low grounds are arable, and in some places planted. Ardwell was constituted a quoad sacra parish in 1902. The Kirk, erected at the expense of Lady McTaggart-Stewart, at a cost of nearly £5,000, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and has a western tower with spire. Balgreggan, the property of Arthur Cuthbert esq. stands in a park about 1 mile square; on the estate is an artificial mound, supposed to be of Roman origin, and to have been used as a beacon in time of war. The Manse is now (1911) unoccupied. There is a similar mound on the estate of Lady M. Susan McTaggart-Stewart, who resides at Ardwell. The parish contains 19,654 acres: rateable value, £17,272; population in 1891, 2,703, and in 1901, 2,420.

STRANRAER

STRANRAER (or Strarawer) is an ancient town, a royal and police burgh and the seat of a presbytery and parish, in Wigtownshire poor combination. The police burgh comprises, in addition to the parish, parts of the parishes of Inch and Leshalt. The town is seated at the head of Loch Ryan, a sea loch which extends for 8 miles from its mouth, and is about 3 miles wide at its broadest part; the burgh has two stations, one in the town and the other at the harbour, both on the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway. The Glasgow and South Western and North British railways both have running powers into Stranraer. The burgh is 81 miles south-south-west from Glasgow, nearly 10 north-west from Glenluce, rather more than 8 north-east from Portpatrick and 30 west from Wigtown, and, as a royal burgh, is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and 14 councillors. A justice of the peace court is held on the first Monday in every month, and a burgh court on the first Tuesday in each month. The sheriff substitute of the county holds a court on Thursdays, and a small debt court is held fortnightly, on Thursdays, during session.

The bay of Stranraer affords excellent anchorage, as the motto on the burgh arms (Tutissima Satio) implies, and the harbour is now large and commodious, and has east and west piers and a breast-work, affording excellent accommodation to all classes of vessels; the east pier is used for the large cross-channel traffic now passing by the Stranraer route between Great Britain and Ireland, and is connected with the railway by a branch line, conveying cattle, goods and passengers direct from the steamers; there is 20 feet of water at high tide at the east pier, and vessels of 1,100 tons burthen can discharge there. In 1909 a portion of the harbour was dredged and the west pier repaired and widened at a cost of about £5,000. The number of British vessels that entered the port in 1909 from foreign countries and British possessions was 5 only, of 641 tons. The number in the general coasting trade was: entered, 210, of 15,473 tons; cleared, 204, of 14,573 tons; in the intercourse between Great Britain and Ireland 419 entered and cleared of 204,680 tonnage. The depth of water in the loch, which is sheltered from all winds, is such as to allow ships to ride at anchor with perfect safety. The bay affords a splendid supply of oysters, the right of fishing for which belongs exclusively, by ancient charter, to John A. Wallace esq. of Loch Ryan House, but is now leased to a company who have replenished the beds, and the output is now continually increasing. Several kinds of white fish are caught, and herrings are occasionally obtained here equal in quality to the best caught on any other part of the Scottish coast. During 1905, under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," 7 vessels, of 1,191 tons were registered as belonging to the port. The sea bathing is excellent, and the loch is beautifully situated for villas. Here is a custom house.

There are two Established churches; that in Church street is a handsome structure in the Pointed style, with a lofty front surrounded by pinnacles. The other church, at Shenchan, the western extremity of the town, stands on a lofty eminence, and with its tower is a conspicuous landmark from the loch; there are also four United Free churches; the Episcopal Mission church of St. John, in London road, will seat 144 persons; the Rev. William A. Douglas Hamilton has been priest in charge since 1909; the Reformed Presbyterians and Original Seceders have places of worship, and there are Salvation Army barracks and four Mission halls. The cemetery, situated above the town, presenting a fine view of the loch, is tastefully laid out, and contains some monuments. A Reformatory, now under Government control, was opened in 1855; wood turning, bookbinding, and the manufacture of netting, twine and bee appliances are carried on in the institution, besides the making of clothing and shoes for the inmates.

The County Buildings, in Lewis street, opened in 1874, contain a court house, town hall, and offices for the procurator fiscal, sheriff clerk and witness and committee rooms. The old Town Hall in George street, is now converted into an Athenaeum, which has over 100 members. Stranraer has large mills, through which great quantities of grain pass every year; it is also particularly noticeable for the extensive nurseries on all sides of the town, which afford employment to many persons. A new reservoir was constructed in 1908 at a cost of about £8,000. The district is agricultural, grain, cheese and all kinds of farm produce and cattle being conveyed to Glasgow regularly by railway and twice a week by steamer. The market is held on Friday. The following are the annual fairs:—For horses, the first Monday in January, the Thursday before the 29th of June and the Monday before the second Thursday in October; for cattle, on the third Friday in every month, commencing in April and ending in November; other fairs for general business are also held in May and August. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Ltd. the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches in the town. The principal hotel is the "King's Arms." In the centre of the town stands a building, originally a castle, of considerable antiquity, but the date of its foundation has not been satisfactorily ascertained; it is mentioned in a charter granted by James VI. and is called the "Tower, fortalice and manor place of Chapel," and was once the residence of the family of Kennedy, of Chapel and Chrychan: the tower, or Castle, as it is now termed, was used by Graham of Claverhouse as his head quarters in the district during the Covenanted period; in the year 1614 it was inhabited by John Kennedy, of Grennan, and Elizabeth, his wife, then Lady Ochtreure. The lands of Ochtreure are immediately contiguous to the burgh of Stranraer, and are now the property of the Earl of Stair. The area of the civil parish is 61 acres; rateable value, £15,367; of the burgh, 380 acres; valuation of police burgh, £29,615 13s.; the population of the police burgh in 1901 was: part of Inch, 1,889; part of Leshalt, 1,291, and Stranraer, 2,856; total, 6,036.

SHEUCHAN is an ecclesiastical parish, taken from those of Leshalt and Portpatrick; it comprises part of the burgh of Stranraer. The population in 1901 was 1,502.

WHAUPHILL, see KIRKINNER.

WHITHORN (or Whithern), is a parish, royal burgh and a village, in the south-east of the county, 11 miles south from Wigtown, 13 by rail from Newton Stewart and 26 from Strauraer, with a terminal station on the Whithorn branch of the Port Patrick and Wigtownshire railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Wigtown and Wigtownshire poor combination, is bounded on the north by the parish of Sorbie, north-west and south-west by Glasserton, and on the south and east by the Irish Channel. In A.D. 80, when the Romans first arrived, this district was peopled by the Novantes, and the town was one of some importance; it was mentioned by Ptolemy under the name of Leucophibia; the Saxons called it Hwitorn, and from the latter the appellation Whithern is derived. St. Ninian built a church here in 397, and attached a monastery to it; this church the Venerable Bede mentioned as being the first built of stone in Scotland; during the 8th century it was the seat of the bishops of Candida Casa, and it formed the episcopal capital of a bishopric of Galloway in the 12th century: after the period of the Reformation, however, it seems to have sunk into obscurity. The see has long been united to that of Glasgow, and now forms part of the revived see designated Glasgow and Galloway. The town consists chiefly of one street running from north to south with several others diverging from it. From successive kings Whithorn received various charters constituting it a burgh of barony; it is now a royal burgh, but the period when it attained that distinction does not appear: it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The parish church is a spacious building, erected partly on the ruins of the priory founded by St. Ninian, of which there now only remains a fine 12th century chancel, roofless, but containing some good Early English work, and a perfect western doorway: in the building may be found shields with the armorial bearings of Scotland, the bishops of Galloway, and the Coultbarts of Coultbart. There is also a United Free church, a Reformed Presbyterian church and a Roman Catholic church. The Town Hall, opened in 1885, is a plain but substantially-built structure, erected at a cost of £1,100, and will hold about 500 persons. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The inhabitants support a subscription library and a Bible Society.

Castlewigg Castle is 3 miles north-west of the village.
 The area of the civil parishes, 11,891 acres; burgh, 198 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,678; burghal, £3,912; the population of the parish in 1901 was 2,235, including 1,188 in the burgh, and 301 in Isle of Whithorn.

The ISLE OF WHITHORN is a village on the east coast, about 3 miles south-east from the railway station at Whithorn, of

WIGTOWN

WIGTOWN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, parish and the capital of the county, and is in Wigtownshire poor combination. The parish extends 5 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by the Bladnoch river, northwest and north-east by Newton Stewart and east by Wigtown Bay. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire railway has a branch from Stranraer. The town is pleasantly seated on a height near the north side of the Bladnoch Water, 2 miles from its junction with the Cree, or Bay of Wigtown, and is 105 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 58 south-west from Dumfries, 28 east-by-south from Stranraer, and 7 south from Newton Stewart. It is a place of considerable antiquity, having come into existence during the Middle Ages, from the erection of a castle on the spot by a band of Saxons; the name is derived from the Scand. "wick" or "viq," a dwelling, with the adjunct "ton" or "town." The castle of Wigtown subsequently became a royal residence, but the town itself does not appear to have been conspicuous till the reign of David II. when it gave the title of earl to the family of Fleming. In the year 1591, Wigtown was specified as one of the king's free burghs: as a royal burgh it is governed by a provost, two bailies and twelve councillors. The principal street is a parallelogram of which the interior space is enclosed by a wall and iron railings, and the centre laid out in walks
 and a bowling green and double tennis court, forming an agreeable promenade for the inhabitants: at the end is a modern cross of granite, sculptured in an elegant manner. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The County Buildings, situated in the centre of the town, include a tower of considerable height, and contain the court room,
 the sheriff's small debt court, the ordinary courts, the sheriff clerk and county fiscal's offices. The sheriff courts are held every Tuesday in time of session; the justice of peace court monthly, on notice from the clerk.

Wigtown harbour is safe, and has a depth of water for vessels of 300 tons:
 it is the seat of a customs port, its limits being defined by the "Customs Act, 1846," to include the creeks of Wig-townshire and those of the stewardry of Kircudbright, from the Mull of Galloway to the mouth of the river Fleet. The number of vessels that entered the port was 4 of 617 tons. In the general coasting trade, 185 entered, with cargoes and in ballast, with a tonnage of 12,452, and 204 cleared of 14,202 tons. In 1809 the fishing boats registered under Part I.
 of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894,"
 as belonging to the port, were included in the Ballantra returns; fishing boats and their implements to be known by the letters W. N.

An annual cattle show is held in July,
 and numerously attended. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. There is a subscription library containing about 1,600 volumes. On the top of Windyhill is a monument erected, at a cost of £200, to Margaret Wilson and Margaret McLachlan,
 the martyrs who perished in the Bladnoch Water, in the year 1655. At the western extremity of the parish is a stone circle
 of 19 granite monoliths, traditionally said to mark the tomb of King Galdus. The parish of Wigtown contains 7,988 acres:
 burgh, 2,264 acres; rateable value, landward, £ ; burghal, £ ; population, 1901, 1,747, the town numbering 1,366.
