KELLY'S DIRECTORY
 OF THE
Merchants, Manufacturers
 AND
Shippers of the World.

BEING

A GUIDE TO THE EXPORT, IMPORT AND MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES.

This Work contains Lists of the
 IMPORTERS, EXPORTERS, BANKERS, CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE, MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, AND OF THE COMMERCIAL WORLD.

The Directory is divided into Two Sections—

- (1) British Colonial and Foreign, Price 30 -.
- (2) Great Britain and Ireland, Price 24/-.

The two sections in one volume, 36 -.

BRITISH COLONIAL and FOREIGN SECTION.—The First Section embraces the British Colonies and Possessions throughout the World, and the various Foreign Countries and their Colonies to which British Manufactures are exported; they are arranged under the following heads:—

BRITISH INDIA and COLONIAL POSSESSIONS.	EUROPE (Continental). CANADA.	UNITED STATES of AMERICA. AMERICA (Central and South).	ASIA. AFRICA.
---	-------------------------------	--	---------------

With each country will be found a concise statistical account of its financial position, its Ports and Principal Towns, with a short Topographical account of each, together with Classified Lists of the

CONSULS, BANKERS,	MERCHANTS, COMMISSION MERCHANTS,	BROKERS, AND SHIPPING AGENTS,
----------------------	-------------------------------------	----------------------------------

And BUYERS OF FOREIGN GOODS, and Manufacturers of Goods Exported.

BRITISH SECTION.—The Second Section of the work embraces the Names and Addresses of the actual Manufacturers in the United Kingdom, in alphabetical order, and classified under their various Trade headings, and also classified Lists of Merchants exporting British Goods.

P R E F A C E

THE present issue of the DIRECTORY OF SCOTLAND is the fifth produced jointly by Slater's Directory, Limited, and Kelly's Directories, Limited, in accordance with a working arrangement made between these Companies.

Under each County the several Parishes, Towns and principal Villages have been arranged in strict Alphabetical order, with a view to facility of reference, and the names of the Magistrates, the Members of the County Councils, the County Officers, &c., have been given.

The Cities of Edinburgh and Glasgow, with a Street Directory in each case, are given separately.

In addition to the ordinary lists of the private residents and trading classes, there is also one of the "Principal Seats," with references to the pages on which these are to be found, and the names of the occupiers.

Prefixed to the Book is a complete Index to the whole of the places given therein.

The Map of Scotland has been corrected for this Edition, so as to bring it fully up to date.

June, 1911.

SCOTLAND

THIS most northerly of the great divisions of the British Isles lies north of England, with an inclination to the west, which throws the western coast, taking the direction from south to north, considerably west of the line of the coast of Cumberland, and in the same proportion the line of the south and centre portion of the eastern coast recedes to the west of the line of the coast of Northumberland (though north of Aberdeen, about Peterhead, the coast trends eastward, only to recede again north of the Moray Firth), thus the Mull of Cantyre, the southern portion of Argyllshire, is in the longitude ($5^{\circ} 50'$) of Belfast, the district of Ardnarmurchan in that of Portrush, in the north of Ireland, and the Hebrides lie still further west, while on the east coast, Edinburgh and Leith are in the longitude of Silloth, on the west coast of Cumberland, and Dundee in that of Carlisle. The kingdom lies between the longitude of 2° to $1^{\circ} 50'$ and $7^{\circ} 30'$ west of Greenwich and between $54^{\circ} 35'$ and 61° north latitude; this includes the Orkney and Shetland Isles, and gives a length, from north to south, of 470 miles, of which the mainland takes 295 miles, while the breadth varies from 105 miles, on a line taken east to west from Grangemouth to the western side of Colonsay, to 225 miles from Peterhead to the west of Uist (or 385 miles if the outlying Isles of St. Kilda are included); the total acreage of land being 19,069,500, or 29,796 $\frac{1}{2}$ square miles.

The coast line is extremely varied, and resembles that of Ireland in having its western coast indented with long inlets, with the addition of a long breakwater of islands, 140 miles in length, off the north-western coast, with the large islands of Skye, Mull, Jura and Islay closer in to the mainland. These islands, and a large portion of the coast which lies behind them, are exposed to the Atlantic, though the great current which, after its division into two by Ireland, has such an influence on the banks and estuaries of the Irish Channel, only glances against the south-western point of Cantyre and Port Patrick, Wigtownshire, and after sending a portion of its force into the Firth of Clyde, and a minor current into the Solway, passes down channel. The total length of coast line (not including the islands, nor any except the largest estuaries) is about 1,100 miles, but measured in and out of all the estuaries and lochs, it is rather more than double that distance. The land border from Berwick to the head of Solway Firth is only 90 miles; the centre part of this is formed by the Cheviot Hills and the eastern by the Tweed, and going north from the mouth of this river, the east coast trends north-west in a tolerably even line, only broken by St. Abb's Head, and the small harbour of Dunbar. At Tantallon, near North Berwick, it turns direct west, being here broken by the Firth of Forth, subsequently turning north-west at Fife Ness to the Firth of Tay, resuming its northerly direction at Buddon Ness, the north-east horn of St. Andrews Bay, and runs up with a slight trend eastwards past Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen to Peterhead. About 10 miles north of this, near Fraserburgh, the coast has a direct westerly course for nearly 80 miles into the Moray Firth, then north-east to Tarbet Ness, which forms the southern point of Dornoch Firth; after clearing which the coast takes another bend to the north-east as far as Wick, thence due north to Duncansby Head, the Land's End of Scotland. From here the coasts of Caithness and Sutherland extend due east to west, turning abruptly south at Cape Wrath, and from this point to the Mull of Cantyre is a broken and rocky coast line, indented with numerous sea lochs and studded with long promontories; it trends south-west to the southern point of Loch Cairnbawn, thence easterly into Loch Broom; again to the west past Lochs Gruinard and Ewe; south past Lochs Gair and Torridon to Loch Carron, south of which the Isle of Skye indents into Loch Alsh; the coast from here is broken by Lochs Hourn, Nevis, Morar, Na Nuag and Moidart, and then projects some 15 miles in the promontory of Ardnarmurchan, succeeded by Loch Sunart and the Sound of Mull, which takes the coast 20 miles easterly to Loch Linnhe, the southern end of the Caledonian canal, thence it proceeds south and consists of the broken coast of Argyllshire as far as the Mull of Cantyre, which ends the rocky portion of the coast, and forms the western horn of entrance to the Firth of Clyde, round which the coast line passes the large Lochs Fyne and Long, returning down the coast of Ayrshire, passing the peculiar shores of Wigtown, which are indented in its northern side by Loch Ryan and south by Luce Bay, to which, round Burrowhead, succeeds Wigtown Bay, and the coast runs thence in a north-easterly course along the north shore of the Solway Firth.

Inland, the best known divisions are the Highlands and the Lowlands, marked out not only by their configuration and hills, but also by the differences apparent in their inhabitants, in their language, and even in their cattle; these divisions may be indicated by a line starting from the Mull of Cantyre, along the eastern side of the Islands of Arran and Bute, and along the east of Loch Lomond, thence north by east to Inverness, crossing the Moray Firth, and ending at Duncansby Head; the west and north-west of this line is the Highland country, embracing, it is estimated, about 18,000 square miles of the mainland, or with the islands 21,000; here are the highest mountains, and the largest inland lochs; the most prominent amongst the former being Ben Nevis 4,400 feet above the sea level, Cairngorm 4,083, Ben Lawers 3,980, Ben More 3,850, Ben Cruachan 3,700 and Ben Lomond 3,200. The Lowland district stretches eastward and south; the loftiest peaks in the district being Broadlaw 2,750, Hart Fell 2,650 and Criffell 1,860.

The principal rivers, beginning from the south, are the Tweed, debouching at Berwick, the Esk, the Annan and the Nith, falling into the Solway Firth. The Clyde, rising in the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire and flowing westward to its own Firth. The Forth, rising in the Perthshire hills and flowing south-east to the German Ocean. The Tay, having its source in the same watershed, but debouching east by north between the counties of Fife and Forfar. The Dee and the Don, the one flowing east and the other south-east, but both debouching by Aberdeen, and the Spey, rising in Inverness-shire and falling into the North Sea in the north-east of Morayshire. From here, round the north and west coasts to Firth of Clyde, the rivers are comparatively small, the water, in nearly all cases, forming a succession of lochs, on its way to the North Sea or Atlantic.

The sea lochs have been already named in the coast line, and those inland are very numerous; a few of the largest are on the western and centre portions, Loch Lomond (which covers about 20,000 acres), Lochs Awe, Katrine, Tay, Rannoch, Arkaig, Loehy, Laggan, Ness, Fannich, Maree, Shin and Stonine, while on the east, Loch Leven is the only prominent sheet of water. The Western Isles also contain a few large lakes. All these provide good fishing grounds, and the sea lochs and coasts abound in fish.

HISTORY.—The earliest record that can be trusted is that relating to the Roman invasion, which took place A.D. 79, at which time an army under Agricola crossed the Solway Firth and by the next year had established themselves on the north bank of the Clyde, shortly afterwards (A.D. 81) erecting the wall of Antonine, from Bowling to Grangemouth, between the Firths of Clyde and Forth, taking that natural division line of the country as their northern boundary. At this time the country generally was known as Caledonia, though it would appear that the Caledonians proper held the extreme north, and the Picts the more southerly portion, except in the south-west, where a British tribe had planted themselves; the Romans remained until 410, and on their departure, the Britons and Picts contended for the sovereignty. Meanwhile, a Celtic tribe from the north-east of Ireland took possession of Cantyre and pushing into Lorn and Strath Clyde imposed their yoke on the inhabitants of the western districts, and forming a kingdom known as the Dalriadic, attempted, with varying success, the conquest of the Picts, and as they, coming from Scotia (as Ireland was then called), got the name of Scots, may be said to have originated the name of Scotland. Ultimately, in 843, the Dalriadic and Pictish thrones were united under Kenneth, grandson of Achaius. Meanwhile, on the eastern side, the kingdom of Northumbria, a foundation of the Norsemen under Ida, was pushed forward to the Lothians on the banks of the Forth, and in 617 extended from the Humber to the Forth and in 654 included Strathclyde, but in 685 the Picts defeated Egfrid, King of Northumbria, at Dunichen, though it was not until 966 that Kenneth III. got the Lothians ceded to him, the final annexation taking place in 1058, under Malcolm III. "first king of Scotia" (surnamed Ceanmore).

Between 881 and 1057 a constant war was waged with the Danes, upon whom no less than eight defeats were inflicted by Scottish sovereigns, the principal being Danes Dyke 881, Forteviot 908, Lincarty 961 and Mortlach 1010. In 1066, Edgar Atheling, the Saxon claimant to the English throne, with his two sisters and many Saxon and some Norman nobles, sought refuge in Scotland; the king received them well and settled them in various parts of the kingdom, marrying two years later Edgar's sister, Margaret. He was killed 1093 at the siege of Alnwick and was succeeded (after four years usurpation by Donald Bane) by his son Edgar, whose sister married Henry I. of England. After him came Alexander I. 1107 and David I. "The Saint," 1124. William the Lion, so-called from his cognisance, a red lion rampant, which afterwards became the shield of Scotland, who came to the throne 1165, was taken prisoner at Alnwick 1174, and only released by Richard I. in 1189; he was succeeded by Alexander II. who inflicted the great defeat upon Haco, King of Norway, at Largs in 1263. Alexander III. was killed by a fall at Kinghorn, 1286 (in the time of Thomas the Rhymer); his young daughter, Margaret, dying 1290, left the crown open to various competitors, and gave Edward I. of England an excuse to step in and decide between the claims of John Baliol and Robert Bruce, and first opened up the claim to the English suzerainty; John Baliol, proving the most pliant, was placed on the throne, only to be deposed, and during this time William Wallace made a gallant attempt to retrieve the fortunes of his country, and defeated Cressingham at Stirling (1297), was himself defeated at Falkirk (1298), and being captured (1305) was executed. Robert Bruce, grandson of the first competitor, was crowned 1306, but not until 1314 did he prove successful, and then he won his great battle of Bannockburn; but in 1324, Edward II. ravaged the South and East of Scotland; and in 1329 Bruce died, and was succeeded by his son David II. a minor, and in 1334, John Baliol's son Edward, under the auspices of Edward III. made an attempt on the throne; David being taken prisoner in 1346 (at Neville's Cross), was released in 1359 on his marriage with Joanna, sister to Edward III. and died 1371; the next year John of Gaunt sought refuge in Scotland, and in 1385, Richard II. burnt Edinburgh. Robert II. (1371) was the first of the Stuarts and a grandson to Robert Bruce, and in his reign (1388) Douglas won the battle of Otterburn, to which followed a long truce, during which Robert III. became king, and in 1405 his son James was captured by the English and only released in 1424, when he became James I. and was assassinated (1437) at Perth. James II. then six years old, succeeded and was killed at the siege of Roxburgh in 1460; he assassinated the Douglas in Stirling Castle during a dispute; James III. succeeded him, and James IV. 1503, married Margaret of England, and in 1513 perished at Flodden. James V. long a minor under the control of Angus, married, 1537, Magdalene, daughter of Francis I. of France; and in 1538, Mary of Guise, mother of Mary Queen of Scots, and this brings us to better known times; Mary, as a minor, was brought up in France, and Arran was Regent in 1545. Hertford, an English noble, afterwards Duke of Somerset, burnt Edinburgh and many border places; in 1554, Mary of Guise became Regent; 1558, Mary (the younger), married Francis, Dauphin of France, and in 1561 Mary came to Scotland a widow, married Darnley, 1565; Bothwell in 1567, fled to England the same year, and was sacrificed to Elizabeth's jealousy 1587. James VI. had been made king in 1567, and in 1603 succeeded Elizabeth on the English throne and removed to London, revisiting Scotland only once afterwards (1617). After James VI.'s death, his son Charles succeeded him as Charles I. of England and Scotland; he visited Edinburgh in 1633, and was crowned in the Chapel Royal of Holyrood, and in 1641 he again came to his northern capital to win over, if he could, the Covenanting Lords, and five years later he threw himself into the arms of the Scottish army, only to be surrendered by them to the English Parliament, when the latter settled the arrears of pay due to the Scots. Charles II. came in 1650, on the invitation of the Scottish Parliament, and while he was there Cromwell invaded the kingdom and gained over General Leslie the victory of Dunbar, but could not venture to attack the Scottish forces stationed with King Charles about Stirling. In the succeeding year Charles was crowned King of Scotland at Scone Palace, and in August of the same year he marched from Stirling to Worcester. The army stationed in Scotland, under Monck, was mainly instrumental in the Restoration, and previous to his succession to the throne, James, Duke of York (afterwards James VII. of Scotland and II. of England) resided sometime in Edinburgh, but on his abdication William III. espoused the cause of the Presbyterians, and the reign of his successor, Anne, was marked by the passing of the Act of Union, and henceforth, if we except the two attempts, 1715 and 1745, made by the Stuarts to regain their hereditary dominions, Scottish history as a distinct kingdom ceased.

During these periods from the Norman invasion, the border land lying along the Tweed and the Cheviot Hills had been the scene of constant forays carried out by the English border chieftains, to which those on the Scotch side promptly retaliated, and though there were on both sides nobles called "Wardens of the Marches," commissioned by their sovereigns to maintain order, the reiving still went on and was varied occasionally by a regular invasion from one side or the other, such as of Lords Sussex and Hunsdon in 1570; later on the only purely Scottish events were Mar's rising in 1715 and the gallant attempt of Prince Charles Edward in 1745 to recover the possessions of his ancestors. But in 1707 an event was consummated which ended the independence of Scotland as a kingdom, for the Articles of Union, which, after much show of opposition, had been (1706) approved by a majority of thirty-three in the Scottish House of Parliament, consisting of about 240 members, came into effect; and from that time Scottish constituencies were represented in the Imperial Parliament, originally by 45 members but now by 72, and the Scotch Peerage by sixteen members elected each Parliament to sit in the House of Lords.

The Scottish Parliament, abolished at the time of the Union, was constituted on a slightly different form to the present Imperial Parliament. It consisted from early times of one House only, composed of Ecclesiastical Barons (Bishops and mitred Abbots), the Higher Temporal Barons, the Lesser Barons and Burghers. These two last classes were often represented by delegates, and the towns more often by their provosts; there existed also a peculiar committee with functions somewhat analogous to those of an English grand jury (but applying to bills for consideration of the House and not indictments), who, under the style of "Lords of Articles," were appointed each session, and who examined all proposed bills and rejected any that they considered it was inadvisable to lay before the House; these Lords, originally named by the Crown, were latterly elected by the Separate Estates, and in 1560 consisted of ten Spiritual Lords, ten Greater Barons, six Lesser Barons and ten Provosts of Cities. The Scottish Order of Knighthood, that of "The Thistle," first founded in 819 by King Achais, was revived in 1540 by James V. and again in 1687 by James VII. and still remains one of the "Orders" of the United Kingdom.

ECCLESIASTICAL.—The early settlers, Picts or Caledonians, were heathens, and it was to the missionary labours of the Irish Priest Columba (A.D. 630) and a reflux of Christian teachers and Prelates from Northumbria, together with the visit of a Welsh bishop, that Scotland owed her conversion to Christianity; for some time there were two sects of the church working in the kingdom, the monks from the North of England holding to a more modern form of Romanism than the ancient Celtic fathers; however, all finally settled to one orthodox usage, but the supremacy over the western portion claimed by the Archbishops of York was rejected, and the Church of Scotland was governed by its own archbishops, but the Civil dissensions in Queen Mary's reign favoured the Reformers, and in 1580 Episcopacy ceased, and in 1592 Presbyterianism was established by law, and was followed by the destruction of abbeys &c. In 1625 Charles I. tried to revive Episcopacy, but was met in 1638 by the National Covenant, the adherents to which in 1679 murdered Archbishop Sharpe, and were persecuted for some years, but as the Episcopal Church could not in conscience support William III. he gave his support to the Presbyterians, and in July, 1689, Prelacy was abolished by Act of Parliament, and since that the Presbyterian Church has been the Established Church of Scotland, and though it was somewhat shaken in 1843 by the great disruption, on the question of patronage and State veto and the foundation of the Free kirk, it still holds its own as the State church; there is, however, an Episcopal hierarchy and one of the Roman church and several powerful sects of dissenters.

ANTIQUITIES AND RUINS.—Overrun as it has been by so many varied races, Scotland contains a large number, not only of ancient warlike remains, but also many ecclesiastical ruins, the destruction of these latter being in many cases due to changes in the national religion; amongst the warlike ruins we find the vitrified forts, built it is supposed of mud and wattle and hardened by the application of fire; of this class is Menmuir, in Forfarshire; to this or a slightly later age belong the old circular towers or broughs as in Burra, Orkney Islands, and the so-called Dun forts, built of boulder stones without cement, while later came the Roman camps and their celebrated wall of Antonine from the Forth to the Clyde, with its ditch and inner road (which latter was long used by trains of packhorses); next are the older castles founded from the 11th century up to the 14th or 15th, and now nearly all ruins, as Dunstaffnage, Cardross, Castle Campbell, Loch Leven, Caer Laverock, Cawdor, Inverlochry, Fast Bothwell &c. the ruined palaces of Falkland and Linlithgow, the three royal castles, maintained under the Articles of Union, viz., Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbaron, and the many fortified houses, some still habitable, and the border Peel towers. Among the ecclesiastical remains are the standing stones or Druidical temples of Stennis and of Callanish, the great Runic crosses of Iona and others scattered through the land, the old Cathedral of Iona, the grand Border Abbeys of Jedburgh, Melrose, Dryburgh and Kelso, and the eastern ones of Brechin and Elgin and the perfect specimens of cathedrals still in use at Glasgow and Kirkwall, while the chapel of Holyrood and the older tower of that palace may be ranked with antique buildings. There are two round towers, similar to those found in Ireland, still standing at Abernethy and Brechin.

HIGHLAND CLANS.—The clans were the pastoral tribes of a hilly district, each tribe obeying a chief who represented the original headman, and was directly descended from him, and a very similar state of government exists at the present day amongst the hill tribes of Afghanistan; each clan had its distinct district and was distinguished by its tartan or plaid and its badges; they seldom united themselves with any of the adjoining clans, and then only to oppose a common enemy, and when thus collected in strong bodies their action was most effective, though marred to some extent by their custom of returning home after each successful action to deposit their plunder and see to their own settlements. The chief in each clan was paramount, presided over it in peace and led it in war, and next to him stood the dunniewassels, or gentlemen of the clan, who were generally the only fully armed members (with targe, pistols and claymore, to which was afterwards added the Spanish musket), and the poorer members of the clan, with often only a claymore or a Lochaber axe, formed a second or supporting line. Their form of government was patriarchal and all shared in the spoil, while the chief held the power of life and death; the king's warrant did not run in these wild districts, and their love of fighting led to constant forays of one clan against another; however, by the time James VI. came to the throne they had been in a measure subdued, and the risings of 1715 and 1745 finally broke up their power and they now only exist by the community of name and family, though the chief in many cases can still trace his descent. Some of the clans were deported to Canada, and Pitt's wise measure of making regiments from other leading clans was the means of pacifying them and giving them a congenial employment.

The Highland district contains the largest civil parishes, Contin being 197,493 acres, Lochbroom 261,020 acres and Gairloch 200,646, all in Ross-shire, which possesses four other parishes over 100,000 acres each, while Sutherland has seven parishes over that figure, of which the largest is Farr, 258,752 acres, Caithness two, Inverness ten (and one, Kilmonivaig, of 267,047), Perthshire one (231,034 acres) and Argyll three of over 100,000 acres each, while Ayrshire shows one of 54,997 acres, Edinburghshire one of 26,138, Wigtonshire one of 35,800 and Linlithgow one of 10,264 acres; from 5,000 to 12,000 acres being a very common size for a lowland parish.

The agricultural holdings are many of them small, and in the islands and some North Highland parishes the crofters, or small farmers, chiefly those of Argyll and Inverness, have suffered from an accumulation of arrears and by rents beyond the capacity of their farms. A commission appointed under Acts of 1886 and 1887 has fixed about 15,000 fair rents, and by the establishment of new piers and harbours and lighthouses, subsidising lines of steamers and helping the extension of railways, has afforded the fishermen and crofters facilities for getting their produce to market. The Commission on Deer Forests reported in March, 1883, that about 1,700,000 acres might possibly be found suitable for crofter occupation, but of this only about 400,000 acres were in the vicinity of the districts affected by the crofter question.

SOIL AND AGRICULTURE.—The face of the country is very variable, the north centre and the western coast down to Cantyre and Arran being mostly of a sterile and heathy nature, and suitable only for the sustenance of sheep, mountain cattle and deer, while the eastern portion (especially the flat land between the mountain ranges and the sea) affords a most suitable ground for corn and other crops, and fine grazing ground, not only for sheep, but for the better class of cattle and horses. South, again, of the Firths of Forth and Clyde, the land shows a belt of minerals, extending from Ayrshire in a north-easterly direction into Fifeshire, some good arable land down the course of the southern streams, a less prolific eastern coast line than that further north, and a rough moorland along the border north of the Cheviots and along their slopes. The mean annual temperature has been estimated at about 44 to 47 degrees, varying with local peculiarities of height above the sea level &c.; the arable land does not range higher than 300 feet above this level. The acreage of corn crops and pasturage is very nearly equal (about 1,300,000 acres), but half of the first-named crop is in the eastern district, one-third in the south, only one-tenth in the north, and about one-twelfth in the bare western division; the same proportion occurs in the root crop, and to some extent in that of the green crops, though in this last the south holds a place nearly level with the east division, which has one half of the crop, but on a comparison of pasture land it is found that the south has over half the total acreage, the east only a fourth, and the west and north one-ninth and one-eleventh respectively. Heath (or mountain) land, which counts for one half of the total acreage, shows, as may be expected, a preponderance in north and west, the latter accounting for one-third, and the former showing five-eighths, the east only one-sixth, while the south, owing to its extensive moorlands and border hills, accounts for four-eighths. The woods only cover one-twentieth of the total area, and are distributed chiefly in the eastern and western districts.

The distribution of sheep and cattle does not quite follow that of the heath and pasture, the north carrying a small proportion of both, the west one-fourth of the total in sheep, but only one-ninth in cattle, while the east, with only one-fifth of sheep, feeds nearly half of the total of cattle, and the south, with a very heavy preponderance (three-sevenths) of sheep, has fewer cattle than the eastern divisions. See tables.

ANIMALS &C.—The most notable breeds of cattle are the Galloway short horns, the Kyloe small black cattle from lower Argyll and Bute, and the Highland breed of small short-legged cattle with shaggy hides and straight horns. The sheep in the same districts are also of a small, sturdy, black-faced breed and very active, while on the southern border is a larger species, indigenous to the Cheviot Hills, and on the east coast a breed belonging to the Grampians district. The horses show the same characteristics; the Shetland pony, only seven or eight hands in height, active and sturdy, is now much sought after, while in the south-west is the breed of Galloways, somewhat resembling the Welsh pony, but rather higher, and the original mount of the "Border Pricker" in his English forays; and in the valley of the Clyde and Ayrshire are found the celebrated Clydesdale horses. The east coast, about Fife and Forfar, likewise furnishes a good breed of roadsters, and this side of the country furnishes the largest supply of horses generally. The tall, shaggy Scotch deer-hound is well-known, and terriers show some fine breeds, while the Scotch collie is a finer bred dog than the southern sheep dog. The deer, which constitute a leading feature in the Highlands, where they have some 2,000,000 acres for their use, are the red deer, found in few other districts in these islands, and the roe deer, and Hamilton park has one of the three herds of the wild cattle extant in Great Britain. One of the attractions of Scotland lies in the abundance of salmon and trout, both found in the majority of its rivers and lochs. Amongst birds is the grouse and the scarce capercaillie, the gannets of the Bass Rock and some few other island rocks.

RAILWAYS AND CANALS.—The railway system of the country originated with the means of communication with England, from which country two main lines enter Scotland, one (the Caledonian) at Gretna, close to the head of the Solway Firth, whence it proceeds north to Carstairs, and, dividing, goes east to Edinburgh and west to Glasgow, with numerous cross branches, including one to Ayr, one to Peebles, another through Paisley to Greenock and Wemyss Bay, and one between Edinburgh and Glasgow, and carrying its main line via Stirling and Perth on to Aberdeen, and a branch westward from Dunblane to Oban. From Connel Ferry, near Oban, a line is now in existence to Ballachulish. The other line from England (the North British) enters at Berwick-upon-Tweed, at the eastern extremity of the border, runs round the coast by Dunbar, and by another branch, via St. Boswells Junction through Melrose and Galashiels, to Dalkeith and Edinburgh, and thence across the Forth Bridge to Inverkeithing and Perth and through Fifeshire; from the latter place is a branch via the Tay Bridge to Dundee; also from Edinburgh via Falkirk to Glasgow, Airdrie, Hamilton and Dumbaron. From Polmont Junction on the main line is a branch to Stirling and Aberfoyle. From Perth starts the Highland railway, running up north via Aviemore Junction to Inverness, Dingwall (from whence a branch runs to Strone Ferry and Lochalsh), Tain, Thurso and Wick. From Inverness is a branch through Nairn and Elgin to Keith and Buckie. From Aviemore Junction is a branch via Granttown to Forres. The Great North of Scotland occupies the ground north-west of Aberdeen, from which places are branches to Peterhead and Fraserburgh, to Macduff via Inverurie, and to Banff, thence going westward to Portsoy, to Elgin and Lossiemouth; on the Banff branch is a loop line through Keith to Nethy-bridge, and up the valley of the Dee is a line to Ballater, the station for Balmoral. The West Highland (the most recent of the lines) runs from Helensburgh, west of Loch Lomond to Tyndrum, Loch Rannoch and Fort William. The Glasgow and South Western Railway, leaving Greta, runs via Dumfries (where a line branches to Castle Douglas, Kirkcubright and Newton Stewart), Thornhill, Cumnock and Kilmarnock to Glasgow, and has branches to Paisley, Greenock, Ardrossan and Ayr. The Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway starts from Castle Douglas, and with a terminus at Portpatrick, having branches at Newton Stewart for Whithorn, and one from Dunragit to Girvan.

CANALS.—The principal are the Caledonian Canal, along the Glen Albion, from Fort William to Inverness; the Crinan, across the upper part of Cantyre, both of these being used for steamer traffic; the Forth and Clyde Canal, from Bowling, on the Clyde, to Grangemouth on the Forth, following very much the line of the Roman wall, and the Union Canal, which, leaving the Forth and Clyde at Larbert, connects it with Edinburgh, and the Monkland Canal, which, leaving Port Dundas, the Glasgow terminus of the Forth and Clyde, extends to Airdrie, Gartsherrie &c.

ABERDEENSHIRE

THIS important county is situated in the north-east part of Scotland, and is bounded on the north and east by the North Sea; on the south by the counties of Kincardine, Forfar and Perth, the Grampian Hills separating it from the two latter, and on the West by Inverness-shire and Banffshire. In form it approaches to that of an oval, the length of which, from north-east to south-west, is about eighty-five miles, and its extreme breadth about forty, and comprises 1,970 square miles. The coast line, which is indented by numerous bays and creeks, is about 60 miles in length. The county ranks as sixth in size and fourth in population. In 1891 it contained a population of 294,036, and in 1901, 304,439 (males, 144,836; females, 159,603), showing an increase in the ten years of 20,403. Inhabited houses in 1901 were 62,985; uninhabited, 3,524; building, 467.

The total acreage of the land of the county, according to the census of 1901, was 1,261,437, and of land and water, exclusive of foreshore and tidal water, according to the agricultural statistics, 1910, 1,261,971, of which, according to the statistics, 200,628 were under corn crops, the principal crops being oats, 190,389 acres; barley or bere, 18,156, and 96,154 under green crops—the principal being turnips and swedes, 86,437 acres, and potatoes, 7,063; vetches or tares, 2,421; clover, grasses and sainfoin for hay, 51,368 acres; not for hay, 227,249; permanent pasture for hay, 4,006 acres; not for hay, 34,891; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 162,093; woods and plantations, 105,931. Of live stock there were in the same year in the county, 23,438 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 7,980 unbroken horses; 42,144 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; 125,224 other cattle; 84,358 ewes kept for breeding; 144,420 other sheep; 1,609 sows kept for breeding; 9,599 other pigs.

Climate and Natural Features.—Towards the sea the land is fertile and comparatively level; but a great proportion of the county lies amidst the wilderness of the central Highlands. Turnips succeed better in this county than in any other in Scotland. The climate is cold, yet it is less liable to extreme low temperature than other districts lying further south and inland.

The county is divided into five districts, viz.:—Mar, Garioch, Strathgogie, Fromartine and Buchan. Mar lies in the south-west and south portion of the county along the river Dee and south of the Don; Garioch north of the Don and west of Kintore; Strathgogie is on the north-west of Garioch and its southern point touching the north boundary of Mar; Fromartine lies to the east of Garioch and south of the Ythan; Buchan occupying the north-east portion of the county north of the Ythan and east of the Deveron and upper part of Strathgogie. The appearance of the upper part of the district of Mar is wild, rugged and mountainous. Towards the east and north-east the surface becomes more level, but is in many places moorish and barren; but the woods, mostly fir, are extensive, producing fine timber. The rivers Don and Dee have both their sources in this quarter. Balmoral, the Highland residence of His Majesty King George V. is in this district. From the top of Craigenarroch there is, perhaps, one of the most grand and picturesque views in Scotland. At the termination of a deep glen in Strathdee is the pass of Ballater, which forms the eastern entrance into the Grampian mountains. The district of Buchan is not so hilly, lying mostly on the east and north coast, but being almost destitute of wood its appearance is bleak and naked; from the quantities, however, of large timber found in many mosses, no doubt can exist of its having once been well wooded. Anciently this extensive domain was the property of the Earls of Buchan, on whose attainder, in 1320, King Robert Bruce divided the land among his adherents. Subsequently the title was revived in the Erskine family, but without a restoration of the lands, and the present earl has no property in this quarter. The districts of Strathgogie, Garioch, and Fromartine are generally well cultivated.

Inhabitants.—There is a characteristic difference to be observed in the natives of Aberdeenshire from those of any other county in Scotland. They are in general regarded as an active, vigorous and enterprising race; and when they emigrate they seldom fail to succeed. The dialect of the inhabitants, too, is peculiar from those of the South of Scotland; and to a stranger's ear appears to be attended with a slow pronunciation and broad accent. On the sea coasts they have a distinct difference of physiognomical appearance from other inhabitants of this county and attest by this, as well as by their speech, that they are descended from a race of people which originally came from the northern regions of Europe, and fixed themselves in this part of Scotland.

Rivers, Mountains &c.—The principal rivers of Aberdeenshire are the Dee, the Don, the Ythan, the Ugie, and the Deveron. These rivers are of great value, from the immense quantity and fineness of the salmon they produce; but are too rapid to admit of navigation to any great extent. The river Ythan deserves particular mention on account of the pearl fishery, formerly carried on in it with great success. On the Don are the ruins of Kildrumny

Castle, an ancient seat of the Earls of Mar. The Dee runs through the vale of Strathdee, surrounded by lofty mountains. At the top of the vale of Braemar, a short way above Mar Lodge, is the noted waterfall called the Linn of Dee. In the valley of Glenmuick there is likewise another picturesque cascade, and a little below, on the southern banks of the Dee, most romantically situated, are Pannanich Wells, much frequented in summer. On the sea shore are several remarkable caves, curious pectorations in the rocks, and echoes which reverberate sounds with wonderful distinctness. On the coast, to the south of Peterhead, is a remarkable natural feature, called the Bullers of Buchan. It is a large oval cavity, in depth about one hundred feet, formed by the steep rocks. A natural arch opens into the sea at the eastern end, into which boats are sometimes drawn and dashed to pieces. The mountains of greatest altitude and importance in Aberdeenshire are—Ben Macdhui, 4,296 feet; Braerlich, 4,248; Cairnton, 4,241; Cairngorm, 4,090; Ben-a-Bour, 3,924; Ben Avon, 3,843; Lochngarm, 3,786; Morven, 2,954; Buck of Cibrach, 2,368; Tap o' Noth, 1,852; and Benachie, 1,696. There are no lochs of any size in this county.

Railways.—Lines in this county belong to the Great North of Scotland system, and radiate from Aberdeen city, the southern branch running west-by-south along the Deeside to Banchoy, Aboyne and Ballater next the main line, north-west to Huntly, Keith and Elgin, throwing off a branch at Dyce Junction direct north to Fraserburgh, with a line from it at Maud Junction east to Peterhead, another branch from Kintore westerly to Alford; one at Inverurie north-by-east to Old Meldrum, and one at Inveramsay north-by-west to Turriff and Banff. A branch was opened in 1897 from Ellom, on the Aberdeen and Fraserburgh section, to Boddam.

Commerce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—The making of linen and sail-cloth has been successfully introduced in several parts, the other branches being the manufacture of flax, cotton & woolsens, paper and envelope making, tanning, distilling, and the curing of fish and provisions. Shipbuilding, both wood and iron, is carried on at Aberdeen, Peterhead, and Fraserburgh. The sea coast abounds in fish of great variety and richness, and the river and sea fishing, together, form a great source of wealth to the inhabitants. The herring fishery is prosecuted on a very extensive scale at Peterhead and Fraserburgh, the harbours of these places during the fishing season being crowded with boats, which has the effect of considerably augmenting the population; of recent years the herring fishery has also been largely pursued at Aberdeen. The three principal ports are Aberdeen, Peterhead and Fraserburgh. At Aberdeen 447 boats were registered on December 31st, 1900, equal 14,171 tons; Fraserburgh, 578, equal 10,803 tons; Peterhead, 314, equal 5,823 tons. The number of men and boys employed were:—Aberdeen, 3,051; Fraserburgh, 2,940; Peterhead, 1,427. The number of steam and sailing vessels registered as belonging to the port of Aberdeen, Dec. 31, 1900, was 366, of 108,000 tonnage; Fraserburgh, 48, of 1,409, and Peterhead, 135, of 3,980 tonnage. Peterhead is also engaged in whale and seal fishing, the former being carried on in summer off the north-east of Greenland and in Davis Straits. Granite—green, blue, and red—is a valuable and extensive production of this county, and presents an article of considerable traffic, many thousands tons being conveyed to London and other distant parts, for paving and building purposes, and for monuments, tombs, statues &c.; it is chiefly found in the neighbourhoods of Aberdeen, Peterhead, New Pittligo, and Mouynmsk. During the year 1905, 258,018 tons were raised; in the same period, 20,362 clay; 45,931 tons of gravel and sand and 6,564 tons of sandstone were obtained. Slate is also quarried from the Foudland Hills, Inch. Leulia produces amianthus, made by the peasants into snuff boxes and ornaments; plumbago has been found on the banks of the Deveron; and near Peterhead, onyx pebbles are to be met with. The largest rock crystal ever found in Scotland was discovered upon the estate of Invercauld in this county; its size was nearly that of a child's body at the age of four years. On the same estate have also been obtained amethysts and aquamarines, equal in colour and hardness to those so eagerly sought after in the East. Topazes of great value, provincially called Cairngorm stones, are also to be met with in Aberdeenshire. Tale, mica, asbestos, and amianthus, commonly called mountain cork, and mountain leather, are found in several of the hills. At Craig, in the district of Strathgogie, there is a fine flaxen asbestos, both green and white. A great proportion of the land-holders reside on their estates, and planting, the introduction of superior breeds of cattle, and better modes of agriculture, have for some time engaged attention.

Divisions, Representation &c.—This county contains eighty-three parishes and three royal burghs—Aberdeen, Kintore, and Inverurie. The contributory boroughs (or those which, in conjunction with others, are represented in Parliament) belonging to this county are Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead (Elgin District Burghs). The city of Aberdeen returns two members to Parliament, one respectively for the North and South divisions, and the county also sends two members, one respectively for the East and Western divisions. The parliamentary constituency of the Eastern division of the county for 1908 numbered 12,503, that of the Western division being 10,704.

ABERDEEN,
AND THE PARISH OF OLD MACHAR, WITH TORRY AND WOODSIDE.

ABERDEEN, the capital of the county to which it gives name, is the chief seaport in the north of Scotland, and the fourth Scottish town in population, industry and wealth. It is 116 miles N.E. from Edinburgh and 523 by railway and 536 by road from London; and by means of its rail communication it possesses easy access to any part of the United Kingdom. Regular communication is maintained with London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Newcastle, Hull, Glasgow, the Moray Firth, and the Orkneys and the Shetlands, by steam packets, a species of conveyance which has done more to lay open the north-east shore of Scotland to improvements from the south than any other means. In addition to the above, there exists the means of rapid transit by the Caledonian and North British railways to all parts south of Aberdeen; and access is given to the north by the Great North of Scotland and the Highland railways, to Wick and Thurso, and the Dingwall and Skye railway, to Strone Ferry, in Ross-shire. The Deeside line to Banchoy was opened in 1863, and is now extended to Ballater, and the Great North of Scotland Railway Co. has also a service of road motor omnibuses running between Ballater and Braemar in connection with the trains which pass the Royal residence of Aberfeldie and Balmoral to Braemar. Aberdeen is of great antiquity, and is supposed to have been known to the Romans by the name of "Devanua." It is probably among the earliest of the burghs in Scotland found entitled to any royal marks of distinction. As far back as 1153 it seems to have been known to the Normans, and in Macpherson's treatise on commerce it is observed that in the year 1179, Eystyn, one of the joint kings of that country, landed and pillaged the town in the course of a piratical cruise along the British coast. In early times Aberdeen was frequently visited by royalty; and it appears that King William, surnamed the Lion, had an occasional residence here, situated at the lower side of the town, and near the east end of the Green. This edifice was afterwards bestowed on the monks of the Holy Trinity, who were about that time introduced into Scotland. The first charter obtained by Aberdeen is supposed to have been granted at Perth about 1117, by William the Lion, and is still extant. It confirmed to the burghesses the power of enjoying their trade of merchandise as freely, quietly, fully and honourably as their ancestors did in the time of David, his grandfather. This king afterwards granted two other charters, both of which, dated from Aberdeen, are still in good preservation, and have the great seal of Scotland, in green wax, appended to each. The city received many subsequent royal charters, including the great charter of Charles I. dated at Ostlands, in 1638, by which all previous charters are confirmed, and this charter was subsequently ratified by Parliament. The burgh records are the oldest of any Scottish burgh, beginning in 1398, and being complete to the present time, with only a short break from 1413 to 1433.

The burghal constitution of Aberdeen has undergone various alterations since its first establishment. The original magistracy consisted of an alderman, four bailies and a common council, chosen by the Merchant Guild; subsequently this arrangement gave way to a self-electing system. The council now consists of a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a master of shore works, a master of kirk and bridge works, a master of mortification, a master of Guild Brethren Hospital and 21 councillors. By the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1871," the whole powers and authorities of the former Commissioners of Police were transferred to the Town Council, and the business of the Police department is managed by separate committees. By the same Act the undertaking of the former Gas Light Company was also transferred to the Town Council. The boundaries of the municipality were largely extended by the Act of 1883 (46 and 47 Vict. c. 60), and legislative sanction given to a large scheme of civic improvements, including the formation of an access to the Rosemount suburb. In 1891 a further "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act" was passed, by which the boundaries were further enlarged, the adjoining burghs of Woodside and Old Aberdeen, and the fishing village of Torry on the other side of the Dee being now included within the municipal area. The circuit court of justiciary for the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine is held in Aberdeen. A sheriff's court is held every Wednesday and Friday; and the small debt court on Thursday, during the legal sessions. The city returns two members to Parliament, one for the North and the other for the South Division. The parliamentary constituency for 1911 was—North Division, 10,341; South Division, 13,657. Aberdeen confers the title of earl on a branch of the noble family of Gordon, distinguished for its active loyalty to the crown in the 17th century.

The city was burned by Edward III. in 1336, but it was soon rebuilt and extended, and called New Aberdeen. In 1497 a blockhouse was built at the harbour mouth, as a protection against the English. During the religious struggles in the 17th century between the Royalists and Covenanters, the city was plundered by both parties. In 1715 the Earl Marischal proclaimed the Pretender at Aberdeen, and in 1745 the Duke of Cumberland resided a short time in the city. Her late Majesty Queen Victoria visited Aberdeen on more than one occasion, and especially on Oct. 13, 1863, when Her Majesty inaugurated a statue of H.R.H. the Prince Consort.

The city, pleasantly seated upon an eminence rising gradually from the sea, is an elegant and well-built town, and has been called "The Granite City," on account of its native light-grey granite being the material chiefly employed in building; the streets, which are spacious and uniform, are also paved with granite, well lighted with electricity and gas, and the city is plentifully supplied with water from the Dee at Invercannie, 21 miles above the city, to which it is conveyed by gravitation, the higher parts being aerved from the pumping station at Cults; the present supply is 6,895,000 gallons daily, and the total cost has been £303,610; the electricity, gas and water supplies are all under the control of the corporation.

Union street, running to the west, is a handsome thoroughfare, and about the middle of this fine street a granite bridge of one arch of 130 feet span, widened in 1907, designed by Thomas Telford F.R.S. the famous engineer, is thrown across a ravine through which runs a brook called the Denburn, now arched over. Besides Union street there are four other fine streets, namely, King street, Market street, George street and Holburn street, and the city continues to extend, particularly to the west and north-west. An arched promenade with granite balustrade, facing the Terrace Gardens, has been constructed in Union Terrace. The Joint Railway station (for the Great North of Scotland, Caledonian and North British railways) is a large building in Guild street, with a segmental arched iron and glass roof; and was designed by Mr. Smith, the city architect. In Castle street stands a granite statue of George, 5th and last Duke of Gordon G.C.B. d. 28 May, 1836. At the corner of Union terrace, near Union Street bridge, is a bronze statue of H.R.H. Prince Consort, by Marochetti, placed on a pedestal of polished Peterhead granite. Further along Union terrace, and in an angle formed by its junction with the Rosemount viaduct, stands a colossal statue of Wallace, in bronze, by W. G. Stevenson A.R.S.A.; this is 16 feet in height, and was erected by means of a bequest of £3,000, left by Mr. John Steell, of Edinburgh, and unveiled on the 29th of June, 1888, by the Duke of Argyll K.T. then Marquess of Lorne. A bronze statue of Major-Gen. Charles G. Gordon C.B. killed at Khartoum, 26 Jan. 1885, executed by the late T. Stuart Burnett A.R.S.A. and cast in Sir John Steell's foundry, Edinburgh, stands in the square in Schoolhill, in front of Robert Gordon's College; this monument, which was subscribed for principally by members of the clan Gordon, stands 9 feet 6 inches in height, and is placed on a granite pedestal 9 feet high; it was unveiled by the Marquess of Huntly P.C. as head of the clan, on the 16th June, 1888. A fine bronze statue of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, by Mr. C. B. Birch A.R.A. stands in Union street, and was unveiled 20 Sept. 1866, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. then Prince of Wales; it occupies the site of a former marble statue, executed by the late Alexander Brodie, of Aberdeen, and now in the Town House, where is also a marble statue of Provost James Blaikie, by Sir John Steell, and a bust of John Phillip R.A. the painter, an Aberdonian, by his friend and fellow-townsmen, the late William Brodie R.S.A. A bronze statue of Robert Burns, executed by H. Bainsmith, London, stands in the centre of Union terrace.

The City and County Buildings and Court House, in Castle street and Union street, form a magnificent structure, comprising all the offices required for municipal purposes, as well as a noble hall and Court House, and includes a lofty tower with spired angle turrets and a lantern. The Council Chamber has a fine oak roof adorned with the armorial bearings of eminent Aberdonians; on the walls are portraits of the late Prince Consort, by John Phillip, and of various ex-Provosts, by F. R. Pickersgill R.A. and Sir George Reid R.S.A. besides other works of art; above the mantelpiece in the Committee room is a mirror in a panel of carved oak, with the arms of the town shov, formerly in the old Council Chamber. The Town Clerk's room and offices contain a number of old city trophies, including an ancient coat of mail, said to have been worn by Robert Davidson, Provost of the city, at the battle of Harlaw, 24 July, 1411, and the axe of the machine known as "The Maiden," used towards the close of the 16th century for the decapitation of criminals. The Court House has a lofty entrance hall, with a groined freestone roof. The great hall is frequently used for fashionable assemblies, art exhibitions and the like. On the walls are portraits of Queen Victoria, Queen Anne, George IV. Earl of Aberdeen K.G., K.T. and sometime Prime Minister, and George, fifth and last Duke of Gordon G.C.B. d. 28 May, 1836. At its east end is a hall for the meetings of the County Council. The Courtroom has a small gallery, and will seat 300. A passage to the right leads to the corridor of the eastward entrance to the building, immediately under the old tolbooth tower, built during the first quarter of the 17th century. The Town Council purchased the old prison in Lodge walk, immediately adjoining the present buildings, on a site of which Police offices (including Court and Barrack accommodation) were erected from the plans of Mr. John Rust, city architect, at a cost of £15,000. The Advocates' Hall, in Broad street, is connected with the Court House Buildings. The Society of Advocates (as the local legal practitioners are called) was elected into a corporate body in 1774, and had their privileges confirmed in more ample terms in 1799 and in 1862. A library, principally on law subjects, was established in 1786, and contains over 10,000 volumes. The number of members belonging to this institution is about 110.

The offices of the Aberdeen Parish Council, at 20 Union terrace, erected at a cost, including fittings, of £13,190, are of grey granite, in the style of the Italian Renaissance.

The Free Press Building, in Union street, is a structure of grey granite in the Renaissance style, from designs by Messrs. Ellis & Wilson, of Aberdeen. The Commercial Bank, also in Union street, is a building of granite in the Domestic Gothic style, from designs by Mr. Sydney Mitchell, architect, of Edinburgh. The Post Office, in Crown street and Dee street, built during the period 1903-7 at a cost of £50,000, is a structure of granite in the Scottish Baronial style, from designs by Messrs. W. W. Robertson and W. T. Oldrieve, of H.M. Office of Works, Edinburgh, and is three storeys in height, with a spacious basement. The building was formally opened 6 April, 1907, by the Rt. Hon. S. C. Buxton P.C., M.P. Postmaster-General.

The Music Hall Buildings, Union street, the property of the Aberdeen Music Hall Company Limited, formerly the County Buildings, has a portico of six columns of the Ionic order, thirty feet in height; it includes a ball room, and rooms known as the Square Room and Round Room, which are generally used for meetings and lectures. The Music Hall, opened 14th September, 1859, is furnished with an admirable organ, and will seat about 3,000 people.

The Masonic Temple, in Crown street, erected in 1910 from designs by Mr. Harborne Macdonald, architect, at a cost of £10,500, is a structure of grey granite in the English Renaissance style of architecture. The entrance hall has a panelled ceiling, single fireplace and mosaic flooring; on the ground floor are a small hall and a chapter hall; a grand staircase leads to the Craft hall on the first floor, which is 60 feet by 34 feet and has an arched and panelled ceiling. The Market Cross, near the eastern extremity of Castle street, is hexagonal in form, and consists of open semi-circular arches, supporting a cornice and deep parapet, displaying in twelve compartments busts in relief of Scottish monarchs, the last of the series being James VII. in whose reign (1686) the cross was completed; through the centre rises a pillar, on which is a column with capital surmounted by the figure of a unicorn; this cross stood originally at the west end of the square in the centre of a raised pavement called the Plainstones, but was removed in 1842 to its present position. The Market House, known as the New Market, stands in Market street, was erected by a joint-stock company, and opened in 1842, but having been destroyed by fire in 1882, was rebuilt as at present; it contains two floors and has a continuous gallery all round and several refrigerating chambers. At the west end of the market is a fountain of polished Peterhead granite. His Majesty's Theatre, on Rosemount viaduct, the property of "The Robert Arthur Theatre Co. Limited," was erected in 1906 at a cost of £35,000, and is a structure of granite in the Classic style, from designs by Mr. Frank Matcham, and will seat 2,650 persons. St. Katharine's Hall, Shiprow, will seat 800 persons. The Barracks, on Castle hill, are fitted up for 240 men, but are capable of containing double this number. Aberdeen is the depot of the Gordon Highlanders Regimental district (No. 75), to which there is attached the 3rd Reserve Battalion; there is an excellent hospital for the depot on an adjoining eminence.

The port of Aberdeen is admirably adapted for commercial intercourse with the northern parts of Europe, and it also participates in a good share of the trade with America; it was opened to the East India trade and appointed a port for warehousing tobacco in 1839. The limits of the port were defined and legal quays appointed in 1850, and since that time additional quays have been legalised as the trade of the port increased. Early in the 17th century a number of ships of small tonnage belonged to the port, and a considerable import and export trade was carried on with various parts of the continent, as well as coast trading. The shipping appears to have considerably decayed during the civil wars and visitations of the plague, and no revival took place for many years. In 1656 there were only 9 vessels of the aggregate tonnage of 440. In 1692 all the shipping was two gallions of 30 tons each. In the home trade the total number of steam and sailing vessels which entered the port in the year 1910 was 3,036, with a total net registered tonnage of 839,537, while in the foreign trade the number of vessels was 297, with a total tonnage of 190,250. In addition to the trading vessels 15,880 fishing vessels, of an estimated total tonnage of 500,000, arrived in the port during the year and landed 100,000 tons of fresh fish. The total quantity of goods imported and exported was 1,206,331 tons and 213,026 tons respectively. The fame of the "clipper bow," so justly due to the ship builders here, especially to the late Mr. William Hall, who successfully established his claim to the invention, spread the fame of Aberdeen ship building to all quarters of the world. The number built during the year 1909, exclusive of those built for foreigners, was 25 (steam), of a tonnage of 2,716; the number built for foreigners was two (steam) of 163 tons. The number of fishing boats registered in 1909 under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," was 464, of which 262 were steam, requiring 3,051 men and boys to work them; the number of resident fishermen (men and boys) in 1909 was 3,453. The harbour revenue for the year 1910 was £89,514, of which £16,755 was derived from rents and fees duties and £6,691 from salmon fishing. The salmon fishings on the Dee and Don are, as they have for a long time been, an important branch of industry. The customs receipts for the year 1909 amounted to £80,329. Since the year 1810, when the principal improvement in the harbour commenced, there have been expended upon it vast sums. A pier was constructed to the north of the harbour entrance (formed by the river Dee joining the sea), and now extends 2,500 feet seaward. A wet dock of 29 acres, and with 6,000 feet of quays, was completed in 1848, and called the "Victoria Dock," in honour of the visit of Her late Majesty to the city in that year. The diversion of the river and the construction of the south breakwater were later undertakings. The first turf removed for the diversion of the river was cut by Lord Provost Leslie, on the 22nd of December, 1869. The new course is about a mile in length, and forms a large arc of a circle, from the suspension bridge to about opposite Marischal street, and from that point to Torry, where it joins the harbour entrance. The bottom of the new channel is 170 feet wide. The breakwater, the entire length of which is 1,050 feet, is carried out to a depth of water of 50 feet at high tide. A number of additional quays have since been constructed, and a spacious graving dock was opened in June, 1885, in what was the old bed of the river Dee, now known as the Albert basin; the total length of the dock is 624 feet, and it is 48 feet wide at the floor, the width gradually widening till it reaches 74 feet at the cope; the depth on the sill is 20 feet; this dock is furnished with hydraulic machinery, and its total cost was about £50,000. There are two floating docks for the repair of fishing vessels, and another larger one is now (1911) in course of construction. Since 1887 Aberdeen has become a great centre for trawling. At present close on 300 steam vessels prosecute the industry from the port. The trawling vessels discharge their cargoes in the Albert basin, where extensive quay space has been provided, and an excellently appointed fish market erected, at a cost of £20,000. The harbour office, on Regent quay, which is surmounted by a clock tower, was erected about 1885, from a design by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, architects, of Aberdeen.

Aberdeen has been the seat of manufactures from a very early period. Provost Alexander Jaffray and others established a woollen manufactory in 1636, in Correction wynd, under a patent of Charles I. for the manufacture of "broad cloth, kerseys, serges, and other coarse cloths," and the manufacture of these and of stockings was carried on successfully and extensively for some time. The manufacture of winceys is also carried on by many firms in Aberdeen. Jute spinning is also maintained by a limited liability company. The manufacture of combs was introduced about the year 1830 by Messrs. Stewart and Rowell, and has been conducted on a very extensive scale since that period, first by the original firm, and latterly by Messrs. S. R. Stewart and Co. but now by the Aberdeen Comb Works Co. Limited. Among firms engaged in the manufacture of preserved provisions are Messrs. John Moir and Son Limited; Marshall and Co. of Torry; Alexander Milne and Sons, Canal road; C. and E. Morton, South Mount street, Rosemount, and W. Bruce, Links street; all manner of fish, flesh, soups, vegetables, fruits &c. are preserved in tin cases of all sizes, and in every variety of preparation. Messrs. Mitchell and Muir Limited, biscuit manufacturers to the King, have an extensive factory here. The paper works at Stoneyking, carried on by Messrs. Alex. Pirie and Sons Limited, were established nearly 150 years ago, and are the largest of the kind in Scotland. Messrs. C. Davidson and Sons Limited manufacture wrapping and packing papers of all kinds and paper bags, and also print and lithograph wrappers and paper bags, and produce roofing and foundation felt. There is also a large paper mill at Cullter, belonging to a limited liability company, and the Donside Paper Co. Limited, at Woodside. Messrs. D. Macandrew and Co. are horticultural builders, and are largely engaged in the manufacture of joinery and cabinet work. The chemical works at Sandilands, near the Links, cover several acres of ground, and were begun by Messrs. John Miller and Co. in 1848, and now produce naphtha, creosote oil, asphalt, sulphate of ammonia, artificial manures, sulphuric acid &c.

The granite trade may be said to be indigenous to Aberdeen. The greater part of the county, and portions of the adjoining districts, are composed of igneous rocks of all varieties, the quarrying of which commenced about 250 years ago, but made little progress till the year 1741, when a disastrous fire occurring in Aberdeen, destroyed a large number of the wooden houses of which the town was chiefly composed. An act of the magistrates and council was then passed ordaining the outside walls of dwelling-houses to be built of stone or brick. About 1764 the streets of London began to be paved with Aberdeen granite; but it was not till 1795 that larger blocks were required, and machinery began to be applied. Rubialaw Quarries then supplied stones for the Government docks; and Dancing Cairn, which began to be wrought about this time, supplied granite for the Union bridge and the new street extension of the city, and this material is now used extensively in the construction of bridges, docks and other public works. The dockyards of Portsmouth and Sheerness, the docks of many ports along the east coast, including those of Newcastle, Hull and Leith, as well as London Bridge, were all formed of Aberdeen granite, and the piers of the Forth Bridge were also made of granite from the quarries belonging to Messrs. John Fyfe Limited. There are over 20 quarries in operation in the district, yielding granite of various colour and quality. The quantity of stone quarried annually is very large, one quarry above Rubialaw, yielding over 80,000 tons of saleable material. A considerable export trade is carried on, and Swedish and other foreign granites are beginning to be largely imported for the purpose of being polished here. The late Mr. Macdonald, about 1840, was the first to apply machinery to the cutting and polishing of granite, and the firm of Alexander Macdonald and Co. Limited, supplied the enormous granite sarcophagus, 30 tons in weight, now containing the remains of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and H.R.H. the Prince Consort, in the royal mausoleum at Frogmore, Windsor, besides a smaller one for Her late Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent. The same firm also manufactured the massive granite sarcophagus in which the remains of Napoleon III. and the late Prince Imperial are entombed. Numerous other firms also do a considerable business. From 10,000 to 12,000 tons of granite are used annually for polishing purposes at the various works in Aberdeen, consisting not only of the native local rock, but also of granites from the West of Scotland, from Ireland, and from various parts of Germany and Sweden. The demand for polished granite increases every year, and orders for architectural, general and monumental purposes are sent from all parts of the world to the Granite City.

There are three joint stock companies for the manufacture and sale of agricultural materials—the Commercial, the Lime, and the Northern Agricultural—each of them having steam mills for pulverising bones and carrying on the manufacture of oilcake, linseed oil, rape oil &c. There are also brick and tile manufacturing companies, several soap and candle manufactories, coach building works, and many other large establishments; iron and metal works further employ a large number of skilled workmen, and there are engineering establishments and foundries, and other works connected with shipping, sail and rope works, and boiler factories. Apart from the import of foreign timber, a large business is done in home grown wood from the upper districts of Aberdeenshire. Deeside fir has been a staple article in Aberdeen from time immemorial.

The principal hotels include the Palace and the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station; the Grand, adjoining Union Terrace gardens and the railway station; the Imperial, adjacent to the railway station; the Douglas, in Market street; the Waverley, in Guild street; Forsyth's, in Union street, and the Central, in Bridge street; the two latter are temperance hotels. There are besides many excellent inns.

The earliest banking company formed in Aberdeen was started in 1752. In 1766 the "Aberdeen Banking Company" was originated, and long enjoyed almost a monopoly of the banking business of the north, but about 1849 was merged in the "Union Bank of Scotland." There is also the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, in Castle street, having about 150 branches in the northern counties of Scotland, besides branch offices of most of the Edinburgh and Glasgow banks. The Aberdeen Savings Bank was established in 1815, and its funds now exceed £1,800,000. The Northern Assurance Company Limited, established in 1836, has offices, erected in 1885, in Union terrace, built entirely of light grey granite in the Italian Renaissance style, from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, of Aberdeen, and the principal English and Glasgow and Edinburgh insurance companies have offices here.

There are seven incorporated trades:—1, the Hammermen, incorporated September, 1519; 2, the Bakers, recognised as a company as early as the year 1398; 3, the Wrights and Coopers, who obtained their original seal of cause on the 6th of August, 1527; 4, the Tailors, who were recognised in a corporate capacity about the year 1511; 5, the Shoemakers, acknowledged as a corporate body in the years 1484 and 1620; 6, the Weavers, the deacons of this corporation were approved by the council and sworn into office in the year 1449; and 7, the Fleshers or Butchers; these originally dealt in fish as well as flesh, but were prohibited in the year 1518 from practising more trades than one; they received a seal of cause in 1534. The several incorporations hold their meetings in Trinity Hall, in Union street, a building of rather florid architecture, erected in 1846-7, from designs by the late Mr. John Smith, architect. The affairs of each corporation are under the direction of a deacon and box-master, who are chosen annually, a convener, master of hospital, and convener court governing the joint affairs of the seven corporations. The Rev. Dr. William Guild, one of the town's ministers, and afterwards principal of King's College, founded in 1632 a Trades' Hospital for the benefit of indigent brethren, assigning to the incorporation for that purpose the monastery and other property that formerly belonged to the monks of the Holy Trinity. Among the several clubs existing in this city the "Royal Northern Club," founded in 1854 and since enlarged, has now (1911) 210 members; there is also the "University Club." The "Public Libraries Acts" were adopted in April, 1884. The Public Library, removed in 1892 to a new building on the Rosemount Viaduct, erected at a cost of about £12,000, was opened July 12th, 1892, and in 1906 a new reading room was provided and the reference department largely extended; the central reading room is supplied with a large and varied stock of newspapers and magazines; the lending department has over 36,000 volumes, and in 1910 circulated 370,000 volumes. The reference department contains over 43,000 volumes and pamphlets, the use of which in the library is free to all persons over 12 years of age; there are branch reading rooms at 34 Castle street; High street, Old Aberdeen; 122 Victoria road, Torry, and Fonthill road, Ferryhill. The Art Gallery, in Schoolhill, is a building of granite, in the Italian Renaissance style, from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Mackenzie, architects, as was also the adjoining Art School, erected in 1883, at a cost of £5,000, by the late Councillor John Gray, and gifted by him to the town. The buildings are united by an archway over the entrance to Robert Gordon's Technical College. A nucleus for the Art Gallery has been formed by the bequest of a magnificent collection by the late Mr. Alexander Macdonald, of Kepplestone. Two daily morning newspapers, two daily evening, three weekly, and one weekly satirical paper are issued from the Aberdeen press—the titles and particulars of which are given elsewhere. The first almanac ever printed in Scotland was published in Aberdeen, in 1623, by Edward Raban, the year after setting up the first printing press in the North. It was entitled "A New Prognostication for the Year of our Lord God, 1623, being the third after Leape Year, serving most fitly for the Kingdom of Scotland, and all the partes of North Britain &c." The almanac seems for a long time to have been looked upon as a property of the Aberdeen printers, for a successor of Raban, named John Forbes, issued one entitled "A New Prognosticator calculated for North Britain." He sold fifty thousand copies annually, and the price of each was only a plack, or the third part of a penny sterling. His success induced the publication of pirated editions at Edinburgh, which were suppressed by the Court of Session, and for many years the town enjoyed a complete monopoly in the sale of almanacs.

The Territorial Force stationed in the city comprises the 2nd Scottish Horse Yeomanry and G Squadron of the Regiment, 1st Highland Brigade Royal Field Artillery, No. 1 Co. North Scottish Royal Garrison Artillery, the Highland Divisional Royal Engineers, the City of Aberdeen Fortress Royal Engineers, the 4th Battalion Gordon Highlanders, the 3rd Gordon Brigade Co. Highland Divisional Transport and Supply Column Army Service Corps and the 1st and 2nd Highland Field Ambulance, 1st Scottish General Hospitals and the 1st

Highland Division School of Instruction of the Royal Army Medical Corps.

Prominent among the ecclesiastical edifices of the city are the East and West churches. These form one building, and occupy the site of the ancient parish church of St. Nicholas, built at various dates between the 11th and 13th centuries. The present West church occupies the site of the old nave, and was erected in 1755, from a design by James Gibbs, a native of Aberdeen and an eminent architect; it is in the Renaissance style, and has a nave and aisles divided by massive square piers and semi-circular arches; the interior is finely proportioned, and affords sittings for about 1,450 persons. There are several monuments, particularly one in marble to Mrs. Allardyce, of Dunottar, by Bacon. The large west window is filled with stained glass; Gibbs, who was extensively employed, also designed the Radcliffe Camera at Oxford, and the Senate House at Cambridge. The old East church, which it was deemed necessary to take down in 1835, was built in 1447, partly on the site of the chancel, and formed the choir of the church, the east end being semi-octagonal, and under it was St. Mary's chapel, restored in 1838. The East church, altered in 1836, in accordance with a design by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, is of finely dressed granite in the Decorated style; the old transepts, known as Drum's and Collison's aisles, now form a vestibule, over which at its intersection with the churches there was formerly a tower with a wooden spire, which on the 9th October, 1874, together with the aisles and much of the interior was destroyed by fire, but the church has since been restored and a new tower with spire of granite 195 feet in height erected, from a design by Mr. W. Smith, architect, of Aberdeen, which contains 38 bells, hung at a cost of about £4,000. The Old Norman arches and piers under the tower were taken down and rebuilt in their original form in part with the same materials, and the church will now seat 1,350 persons. St. Clement's, of Footdee, church has a tower 45 feet in height, containing a clock presented by the magistrates. Greyfriars, or College church, which stands on the east of Broad street, adjoining the south end of the new buildings of Marischal College, was rebuilt in 1903, and consists of chancel, with vestry and organ chamber, nave, south aisle and a spacious vestibule, over which rises a lofty square tower in the Perpendicular style, with numerous pinnacled buttresses; the lower stage is lighted by tall and narrow coupled lights, and the upper by two traceried windows in each face; there is a high open-work parapet, relieved by crocketed pinnacles, and from the centre of the roof springs an octagonal spire, with crockets and a final cross; above the vestibule is a gallery open to the church. The South church, in Belmont street, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a square tower, and will seat 1,450 persons. The North church, in King street, is an edifice of granite, in the Classic style, from a design by the late Mr. John Smith, architect, and affords about 1,550 sittings.

Old Machar Church, otherwise St. Machar's cathedral, is at the northern extremity of Old Aberdeen, for which see back of this page.

St. Paul's church, in Loch street, was erected in 1720 for such Episcopalians as refused to submit to the jurisdiction of the Scotch bishops, but this building was superseded in 1865 by the present church, which seats 680 persons. The Episcopal church of St. James, in Union place, is a small but striking building of red Corrennie granite, erected in 1888, and affording 390 sittings; the Rev. James Taylor Floyd Farquhar M.A., B.D. of Pembroke College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1900. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, in King street, built in 1813, is an edifice in the Gothic style, consisting of nave, aisle and a chancel, with lofty octagonal turrets at the angles; near the entrance is a statue of the late Bishop Skinner, by Flaxman. The chancel was added in 1880, from a design by the late Mr. G. E. Street R.A.; and in 1885 an elegant reredos was placed in the church to the memory of the late Right Rev. Thomas G. Suther, Bishop of Aberdeen 1857-83, and for many years incumbent of this chapel, which has 1,150 sittings; the Rev. William Perry M.A., B.D. of Aberdeen and Edinburgh Universities, has been rector since 1910. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, in Crown street, built in 1854, has a small tower at the south end, and will seat 317 persons; the Rev. Robert Cruickshank M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1889. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, in Carden place, built in 1862, will seat 380 persons; the Rev. Francis William Christie M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1885. St. Margaret's Episcopal church, Gallowgate, erected in 1870, was consecrated in 1879, and a chapel added at the west end in 1889; there are 380 sittings; the Rev. Frank Powell Williamson M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1907. St. Peter's church is in Victoria road, Torry, and the Rev. William Disney Innes has been priest in charge since 1896. The Rev. Henry Burdon B.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham, has been priest in charge of St. Mark's church, Short Loanings, since 1908. St. Clement's Episcopal Mission church, in Prince Regent street, built in 1889, will seat 250 persons; the Rev. Robert Walker Watt M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been priest in charge since 1909. The Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Mary of the Assumption, in Huntly street, erected at a cost of about £20,000, and opened December, 1860, is an edifice of granite, in the Early Pointed style, from designs by Mr. Alexander Ellis, architect, and consists of sanctuary, nave, aisles, north and south porches and a tower with spire, reaching to a height of 200 feet, and containing 9 bells, hung at a cost of £1,300, the largest weighing 35 cwt. On each side of the sanctuary are vestries; and in advance of the high altar are two side altars. The whole of the windows are filled with fine painted glass, and the west window, 30 feet high by 15 in width, has tracery and sculptured figures in the centre; the church seats 1,500 persons. The Roman Catholic church, in Grampan road, Torry, built in 1910 at an expenditure of about £4,000, from designs by Mr. Charles J. Menart, architect, Glasgow, is a building of rubble granite in the Norman style:

there are 400 sittings. In addition to these places of worship, there are others belonging to various denominations.

The Grammar School, in Skene street, at the west end of the town, was founded before 1256; the present buildings, erected in 1863, at a cost of about £15,000, are in the Scottish Baronial style, from plans by the late Mr. James Matthews, architect, of Aberdeen, and contain a large hall, 80 feet by 40 feet, 24 class-rooms, library, museum, chemical and physical laboratories and lecture theatres. The school is arranged in classical and modern sides, with an elementary department. There are five entrance scholarships of £20, three of £12, four of £8 and 12 or more of fees yearly, and these are awarded in the middle of June. In 1834 Dr. Patrick Duca left a bequest for the better payment of the masters. There are now (1911) 580 boys; the school is controlled by the Aberdeen School Board. Many eminent men have received their education here, among whom may be mentioned Lord Byron, 1797; Sir James McGrigor, 1784; David Wedderburn, 1602; Field-Marshal Keith; Thomas Reid, private secretary to James VI.; Dr. James Dunn; Dr. James Melvin; Sir Robert Hamilton; Sir George Strahan; the Rt. Hon. Sir James Stirling Kt., P.C.; Sir James Westland K.C.S.I.; Sir James Reid bart. G.C.V.O., K.C.B., M.D.; Sir William McGreggor G.C.M.G., C.B., M.D. and Admiral Sir A. Farquhar K.C.B.

The United Free Church College, Alford place, erected in 1850, at a cost of £2,000, is a building in the Elizabethan style; the staff consists of a principal, four professors in theology and lecturers in natural science and Evangelist theology. In its hall the Aberdeen Presbytery and Synod of the Free Church hold their stated meetings. There is now a good library and a museum, both of which owe much to the liberality of the late Mr. Thomson, of Banchory, near Aberdeen. The college also possesses some valuable paintings by Sir George Reid and John Phillip R.A.

Robert Gordon's Technical College, Schoolhill, was founded by Robert Gordon in 1730, and extended by Alexander Simpson, of Collyhill, in 1816. The President and Governors were incorporated by Royal Charter under the Great Seal of Scotland, dated 15 June, 1772, and by another Royal Charter, dated 16 May, 1792. They were also incorporated under the name and title of "The President and Governors of Robert Gordon's College in Aberdeen," by a Provisional Order, dated 10 June, 1881, made by the Secretary of State, under the "Endowed Institutions (Scotland) Act, 1878," which Provisional Order came into operation on 1st August, 1881. The Governors were incorporated under "Robert Gordon's Technical College and Aberdeen Endowments Trust Order Confirmation Act, 1909," an Act to confirm a Provisional Order under the "Private Legislation Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1893," relating to Robert Gordon's Technical College and Aberdeen Endowments Trust, which Act, dated 5 November, 1909, came into operation on 1st January, 1910. In the terms of this Act the Governors are empowered to carry on the following schools:

(1) Primary, Intermediate and Secondary, in the buildings of Robert Gordon's College. The scheme of instruction includes intermediate and post-intermediate courses, leading to University and Technical College preliminary examinations, and to the leaving certificate of the Scotch Education Department. (2) A central institution or technical college, which includes the day and evening classes of Gray's School of Art and the advanced evening classes meeting in Robert Gordon's College. The day classes of Gray's School of Art to qualify for the diploma of the school in the departments of painting, designing and sculpture. (3) A School of Domestic Science. This school, situated at 352 King street, provides a diploma course mainly for students who wish to become teachers of domestic science. The College stands on land anciently possessed by the Dominican Friars, and has a large quadrangle in front. The earlier building was erected in 1739, after a design by Gibbs, at an expense of nearly £1,000, and the extension was completed in 1832, in the Classic style, from designs of the late Mr. John Smith, at a cost of about £13,000, the ancient structure being somewhat altered to harmonise with the different style of architecture. The sum originally bequeathed by the founder was £10,000; this was invested in land, and at the present time (1911) yields about £5,000 per annum. The object of the charity was to maintain and educate the sons of decayed burghers; but by a Provisional Order, obtained in 1881, the original bequest was set aside, the hospital system abandoned, and the institution converted into day and evening schools, the application of its benefits being also widely extended.

Aberdeen Royal Infirmary has, since its foundation in 1739, undergone great extensions and improvements, though still occupying the original site on Woolmanhill—the very centre of the city. The Hospital has long enjoyed a high reputation from the eminence of its professional staff, including several of the professors connected with the University, and a large number of students are in attendance. The new buildings, completed about 1897, in commemoration of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria in 1837, at a cost of £30,000, stand on a site containing about 2½ acres, and surrounded by open streets. The old Infirmary, now remodelled internally as the administrative block, faces the south; the new surgical ward block, for 140 patients, stretches along the west side, its large circular theatre projecting boldly beyond the main line. A tower-like building on the north contains the pathological theatre and the laundry, with an open dry-gate-ground on the top storey, under the roof. The east side is occupied by the new medical west block, built in 1895 for 92 additional patients. To the west of the administrative block is the boiler house block and the electric light building. New operating theatres were built in 1910-11, and the out-patients' department has undergone extensive improvements. Aberdeen Royal Asylum was founded in 1800, but since that time important additions have been made to the institution. At the end of 1910 the patients numbered stood at 367 males and 438 females; the grounds extend to over 145 acres. In connection with the main institution is Elmhill House, for the treatment of members of the better classes able to pay special rates of board, and at Daviot is a Branch Asylum, with a farm of 283 acres. The Asylum for the Blind, in Huntly street, opened in 1843, is supported partly by revenue from endowments and partly by legacies and public subscriptions. Work is provided for blind persons of both sexes belonging to the city of Aberdeen and the counties of Aberdeen, Banff and Kincardine. The chief industries carried on are twine spinning, basket, mat and mattog and mattress making; from 60 to 70 blind persons are thus employed. The board of management, as re-constituted under the authority of the Endowment Commission, consists of persons elected by the subscribers, or nominated either by benefactors to the institution or by certain public bodies in Aberdeen or the above-mentioned counties. The Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, at 10 Mount street, and now under Government inspection, is principally supported by voluntary contributions; the average number of pupils of both sexes is 20. The Aberdeen Endowments Trust, 352 King street, was incorporated by "Robert Gordon's Technical College and Aberdeen Endowments Trust Order Confirmation Act, 1909." The free revenues of the Trust are applied in providing business scholarships, which are tenable at schools within the city of Aberdeen, and in support of a girls' home, at which 30 girls are trained for domestic service. The Medical Society's Hall, King street, built in 1818, at a cost of £2,000, has a handsome front, with a portico of four Ionic columns, and contains a library of 6,453 volumes, and a large hall for the meetings of the society. In the hall are some portraits, including an original painting of Harvey, by Vandyke, and two by James Giles R.A.

The weekly markets are held on Wednesdays and Fridays, and the feasting markets Friday before and after the 28th of May and Friday before and after 28th November.

The population of Aberdeen in 1881 was 20,341; in 1891, 24,943, and in 1901, 33,497, including 938 officials and patients in Aberdeen Royal Asylum; 420 officials and inmates of Aberdeen East Poorhouse; 298 officials and inmates in Aberdeen West Poorhouse; 175 in the Industrial School for Boys; 108 in the Industrial School for Roman Catholic Children; 113 in the City Hospital for Infectious Diseases; 97 in the Hospital for Incurables; 127 in the Royal Hospital for Sick Children; 306 in the Royal Infirmary; 160 in Nazareth House and Orphanage; 225 military in barracks; 56 on H.M. ships and 333 on vessels in the harbour.

The population of the municipal wards (excluding shipping) was:—Ferryhill, 13,730; Greyfriars, 16,427; Rosemount, 16,682; Rubislaw, 17,074; Ruthrieston, 15,182; St. Andrew's, 17,351; St. Clement's, 10,858; St. Machar, 12,578; St. Nicholas, 15,287; Torry, 9,386; Woodside, 8,579; total, 153,114.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was:—Greyfriars, 4,985; John Knox's Church, 7,006; St. Clement, 8,033; St. George's-in-the-West, 4,486; Trinity, 2,395; Old Machar, 13,385; Craigiebuckler, 1,097; East Kirk, 3,628; Ferryhill, 6,989; Gilcomston, 15,726; Hoiburn, 22,274; Mannofield, 2,397; North Kirk, 13,630; Rosemount, 17,160; Rubislaw, 7,030; South Kirk, 2,243; West Kirk, 5,517; Woodside, 8,288.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1901 was:—North Division, 65,793; South Division, 77,935; total, 143,728. The city parish was extended to the municipal area, May 16th, 1895, under provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," taking over the whole of St. Nicholas and portions of the parishes of Old Machar, Nigg and Peterculter. Acreage of city parish (as extended), 6,748; gross rateable value, 1910-11, £918,172; population to middle of 1910 estimated at 181,918.

TORRY, a fishing village, taken from the parish of Nigg (Kincardineshire), is included within the limits of the city parish of Aberdeen.

OLD ABERDEEN AND OLD MACHAR

OLD ABERDEEN stands about a mile to the north of the city, on an eminence on the south bank of the river Don, formerly in the parish of Old Machar, but under provisions made in the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894," now forms part of Aberdeen city parish. Formerly this town was the seat of the Bishopric of Aberdeen, but it now derives its importance from King's College (amalgamated with the University of Aberdeen) and the Cathedral. The charter was renewed by George I. when the power was conferred of electing its own magistrates, but by the "Aberdeen Municipal Extension Act, 1891," it was merged into the burgh of Aberdeen. The principal curiosity in the neighbourhood is the "Brig o' Balgownie," or old bridge of Don, which crosses the river Don by one pointed arch; Mr. Kennedy, in his "Annals of Aberdeen," states it to have been erected in the time of Robert Bruce (1281) by Henry Cheyne, Bishop of Aberdeen. The see of Aberdeen appears to have been first established in 1015, at Mortlich, in Banffshire, by King Malcolm II. but was translated to Aberdeen by Nectans, the 4th bishop (1106), in the reign of David I. A new church was built in the 12th century, but this was superseded between 1281 and 1382, under the direction of King Robert Bruce, by a more imposing structure, in part erected by Bishop Kynmound, who succeeded to the episcopate in 1356, but of this only the western piers of the central tower now remain; the choir has wholly disappeared, having been pillaged in 1560, and dismantled about 1650 by the Cromwellian troops, who used its materials in building fortifications, and the central tower fell in 1683, destroying the transepts, of which only portions of the north and south walls are now extant. The existing cathedral, dedicated to St. Machar, commonly known as "Old Machar church," thus consists only of the nave of seven bays, with its aisles, western towers and south porch, and was chiefly the work of Bishop Lightoun (1424-40)—the whole, with the exception of the spires, being constructed of red granite; the nave piers are cylindrical and carry pointed arches, above which is a clerestory, with small round-headed windows; the original deal roof, erected by Bishop Lindsay, in 1444, was taken off and renewed in 1866: the flat panelled ceiling below, the work of Bishop Dunbar, in 1520, is adorned with the shields of kings, nobles and ecclesiastics, and the cornice beneath it bears the names in black letter of Scottish sovereigns and bishops: the east end of the nave, now built up, is in part inclosed, and contains the organ and pulpit: the west end has a double-arched recessed entrance, and over it six tall and narrow lights with rounded heads: the square western towers are military rather than ecclesiastical in style, and have double angle buttresses, and bold machicolated battlements, from within which rises a low square store with dwarf pinnacles, carrying the octagonal spires; these are of grey sandstone, and are relieved by two embattled bandings and numerous dormers: several of the windows are stained, and there are some interesting tombs, including, in the nave, one to Archdeacon Barbour, c. 1400, and another to Bishop Scougal, 1685; in the ruined transepts are the tombs of Bishops Lightoun or Leighton, Dunbar and Stewart: the interior of the fabric was repaired in 1722, and in 1866 was renovated on a report by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott, and since this the present east window has been erected.

The Cruickshank Botanic Gardens and Museum, in the Chanony, were opened in 1899.

Woodside, formerly a police burgh, was also in the parish of Old Machar, but by the above-mentioned Acts also merged into the city parish and into the burgh of Aberdeen, is distant from Aberdeen 2 miles, and has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway.

The area of Old Machar parish is 7,039 acres; rateable value in 1910-11, £16,210; the population in 1901 was 1,457.

The parish of Old Machar, as it remains without the portion between the Dee and the Don, which has been included in the Aberdeen city parish, is now wholly on the north side of the Don. The land rises in a gentle slope from the sea, and is beautifully diversified by undulating grounds. The windings of the Don—the manufactories and the woods on its banks, interspersed with many private residences, together with the numerous admirable prospects of the sea—impart a pleasing variety to the general appearance of the parish. Great improvements in agriculture, at a very considerable expense, have been effected, which have been the means of materially enhancing the value of the land, and beautifying the neighbourhood of Aberdeen.

THE UNIVERSITY OF ABERDEEN.

The University consists of two colleges, united by Act of Parliament in 1860, viz.:—King's College in Old Aberdeen, and Marischal College in Broad street. The former was first instituted in the year 1494, by William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen, under the authority of a Bull of Pope Alexander VI. and the original foundation charter is still extant in the charter chest of the College. The students wear a scarlet cloth gown, but do not reside within the college buildings, which form a quadrangular court, originally erected in 1500. There is a large library, in which is a very valuable collection of books, and a memorial window to the late Dr. J. Melvin. The old chapel, restored internally at a cost of about £3,000, is five bays in length, and is lighted on the north side by large traceried windows and on the south by a clerestory only, containing small square windows: the roof is of wood work, highly ornamented, and at the west end is an organ gallery, with an antique screen, the upper portion of which, flanking the organ on either side, consists of elegant tracery; the lower portion has three canopied stalls on each side, and these are continued down the chapel so as to give twelve stalls on either side, with other stalls or benches in front; the rest of the space is seated with chairs. There are memorial windows to Principal Campbell and Professors Macpherson, Mearns, W. Robertson Smith and Sir W. D. Geddes: the large west window was filled with stained glass by Mr. John Webster, late M.P. for the city. Near the east end, in the middle of the chapel, is the tomb of William Elphinstone, Bishop of Aberdeen 1484-1515, a large moulded slab, slightly raised above the floor: opposite to it, on the north side, stands the pulpit, an elaborately panelled work of the Early 17th century, with sounding board, ornamented with pendent pinnacles and a cresting. At the north-west is a lofty square tower, strengthened by buttresses, and from the parapet spring crocketed arches meeting at the top, and forming an open crown upon which rises a stone lantern, surmounted by another crown of stonework, with a globe and cross; the tower formerly contained a peal of 13 bells. The Senatus room is ornamented with portraits of Bishops Elphinstone, Dunbar and others. This college possesses a silver mace made in 1650 by Walter Melvil, an Aberdeen goldsmith, who was deacon of the hammermen, deacon-convenor of the trades in 1662, and master of the hospital in 1656-7; it is 3ft. 1½in. long, and has a plain shaft, divided into two portions by two moulded knobs richly chased, with collars of acanthus leaves above and below; the spreading globular base is similarly treated: the head, attached without brackets, bears scrolled cartouches supported by winged cherubs, one charged with the arms of Bishop Elphinstone, the other with the emblem of the Virgin, a pot containing a triple-flowered lily; on the flat top are embossed the Royal Stuart arms and the motto "God save the King;" round the top is a fillet and cresting, from which sprang four headed arches, supporting an orb and cross: the mace was repaired about 1891. The college once had two other and more ancient maces, both of which have been lost. A pavilion was erected in 1907 in the recreation grounds, at a cost of £1,500. Marischal College, in Broad street, which prior to 1860 exercised separate University rights, was founded and endowed by George Keith, Earl Marischal of Scotland, in 1693, by a charter ratified by Act of Parliament. The college buildings stand on the site of a Franciscan convent, and were rebuilt in 1836-41, at a cost of over £21,000, from designs by the late Mr. Archibald Simpson, architect. In 1891 a large and very important scheme of building extension was initiated, and has since been carried out at a total cost of over £200,000, the whole of which, with the exception of £46,000 contributed by the State, has been raised by voluntary subscriptions, including £25,000 from Lord Strathcona G.C.M.G. the present Chancellor, and by the munificence of the late Charles Mitchell esq. LL.D. of Newcastle-on-Tyne, who generously gave over £20,000 for the purpose; this extension also includes a large Graduation Hall, adorned with stained windows, a Students' Union, and the heightening of the great tower of the buildings, inaugurated Oct. 1895. His son, Mr. C. W. Mitchell, has also been a generous contributor. The new buildings, opened by His late Majesty King Edw. VII. and Queen Alexandra, 27 Sept. 1906, are of light grey granite in the Perpendicular style of the period of Hen. VII. from designs by Messrs. Marshall Mackenzie and Son, architects, of Aberdeen and London, and for the most part surround a large quadrangle of varying width: on the ground floor are the administrative offices, and the departments of Medicine, Modern Languages, Agriculture, Natural Philosophy, Materia Medica, Botany, Pathology and Chemistry; at the east end are cloisters and an entrance hall below the tower, leading to the Midwifery department and to tea, smoking and retiring rooms; from this block extends a long eastern annexe, with a corridor throughout its whole length, and containing a lady students' room, refreshment department and students' union, comprising billiard room, council room and debating hall, and adjoining this the department of Anatomy. On the first floor is the library and the departments of Geology, Natural Philosophy, Medical Jurisprudence, Natural History, Archaeology, with a museum, Surgery and Chemistry, and in the eastern annexe is the picture gallery and the Mitchell hall: the second floor is devoted to Physiology and Education and has an Educational museum. The principal feature of the buildings from without is the great or Mitchell tower, which rises at the eastern end of the quadrangle, and is 40 feet square and 260 feet in height, with spired turrets at the angles, a lofty parapet and a lantern of two stages, adorned with pinnacles and terminating in a crocketed spirelet with vane: the Mitchell or Graduation hall, situated in the eastern annexe, on the first floor, is 116 feet long and 42 feet wide; the walls are of rose-coloured granite, jointed in gold and there is an elaborate lierne-vaulted oak roof springing from pilasters between the windows, all of which are traceried, and, including the great east window which fills the whole of the space behind the dais, illustrate, in stained glass, the history of the University: on either side are galleries, with richly carved front panelling divided by pinnacles with pendants, and forming a continuous canopy to enclosed seats below: the Court Room, a fine apartment on the ground floor, near the main entrance, is panelled throughout, and the stuccoed ceiling, divided by massive beams, is enriched with shields of arms: the students' reading room contains the Cruickshank memorial window. Belonging to this college is a silver-gilt mace, obtained in London, 25 May, 1671, at a cost of £31 14s.; it is 3 feet in length and has a plain shaft, divided into two portions by bulging chased knobs, and terminates in a spreading base, ornamented with foliage and having a pendant of grapes; from the upper knob are four scrolled brackets supporting the head, which is richly embossed with cherub heads, triply-winged, and between these, four rounded spires, two of which bear respectively the arms of the Earl Marischal, with coronet, and those of James Leslie, principal 1661-79, within olive branches, dividing the letters D; above is a fillet and a cresting of thistles, roses and fleurs-de-lis, from which spring banded and beaded arches, carrying a flattened orb and cross; on the domed top of the head are the Royal Stuart arms.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Skene street.

The Grammar School of Aberdeen is one of the eleven Schools in Scotland scheduled in the Education Act of 1872 as Public Secondary Schools. Its management was thus vested in the School Board of the Burgh. The date of foundation is unknown, but the School has existed for more than 650 years, since, in the Register of the Abbey of Arbroath (date 1262), one Thomas de Bennum is designated "Rector Scholarum de Aberdene." The succession of rectors since 1479 is known. Before 1872 the Grammar School, in Schoolhill, was under the management of the Town Council, who erected the present building, opened 23rd October, 1863, & in 1882 additional Class-rooms were built for the Lower School. In 1894-5 the Hall & Class-rooms were refitted & remodelled & fitted with new desks seats; the Chemical Laboratory was enlarged & refitted & a class-room converted into a Science Theatre, with Physical Laboratory attached. In 1897 two large rooms were appropriated for Physical Sciences, & in 1906 a new wing opened for the Lower School

ABERDEENSHIRE

NEW ABERDOUR is a village in the parish of Aberdour, 8 miles north-west from Strichen station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, 9 miles west of Fraserburgh, and 16 east of Banff. The parish stretches along the Moray Firth for about 10 miles, the shore here being bold and precipitous, with only three places where boats can effect a landing, and the rocks have been worn by the sea into innumerable caves, one of which is 90 feet long and 22 broad. The parish is in Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court. The Established church, built in 1818, is a plain edifice of stone, remodelled internally in 1885, and has sittings for 800 persons. There is also a Mission church at Auchmedden, and a United Free church; here also is a Public Hall and Library, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. On a precipice overhanging the sea are the ruins of the ancient castle of Dundargue, a place of great strength and importance in feudal times, and noted for sustaining a long siege in 1836, when Henry de Beaumont, the English Earl of Buchan, was obliged to capitulate to Andrew Murray, Regent of Scotland, during the captivity of King Robert Bruce in England. Alexander Dingwall Fordyce esq. of Brucklay Castle, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 14,031 acres; valuation 1902, £8,269. Population of New Aberdour in 1891, 620; in 1901, 583; of the whole parish 1891, 2,019 and 1901, 1,601; ecclesiastical parish, 1,562

Pennan is a small fishing village in the parish of and about three miles west from New Aberdour. Population in 1901, 199.

Auchmedden is a hamlet joining Pennan, and has an Established Mission church.

ABOYNE, or Charlestown of Aboynay, is a growing village and parish in the district of Mar, and a popular summer health resort, with a station on the Dee Side railway, 32½ miles west-south-west from Aberdeen, 4 west from Kincardine, and 11 north-east from Ballaber, on the north bank of the Dee, and in the county and small debt court district of Aberdeen. The parish is united to that of Glen-Tanar, and is watered by the river Dea and likewise by the Tanar and the Allachy, which during heavy rains become impetuous streams. The Dee here is crossed by a suspension bridge, erected by the County Road Trustees in 1871, but originally built at the sole expense of George, Marquess of Huntly K.T. in 1830. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, as well as an Episcopal church dedicated to St. Thomas, built in 1908 at the expense of George Coats esq. of Glen-Tanar, and seating 250 persons. Aboynay Castle is the seat of the Marquess of Huntly P.C.: in the grounds of the castle is a coffin-shaped slab, bearing a cross. The forest of Glen-Tanar is extensive and contains some large timber. The principal landowners are George Coats esq. of Glen-Tanar, Ean F. Cecil esq. of Roydon Hall, Tonbridge, and the trustees of the Marquess of Huntly. Loch Kinord is about 4 miles from Aboynay and contains some small islands, on one of which there is said to have been a castle built by Malcolm Canmore; in the loch various antiquities have been found, including an ancient axe, oaken boats, cut out of the solid tree, and a bronze pot. There is a good library and reading room in the village and an excellent golf course. Auction sales are held fortnightly and fairs on the Friday after Aiky fair in July and the first Tuesday and Wednesday in October (old style). The area is 24,921 acres; rateable value, £15,655; the population in 1901 was 1,477 in the civil parish, 1,216 in the ecclesiastical parish, and 561 in the village.

Post, T. & M. O. Office (letters should have Aberdeenshire added to them); Charles C. Smith, postmaster. Deliveries, 9.50 a.m. & 5.50 & 7.5 p.m.; on Sunday (to callers), 9 to 10 a.m.; dispatches, 7.45, 9.5 & 10 a.m. (May to Sept. 12 noon) & 3.30 & 5.50 p.m. & on Sunday 7 a.m.

AUCHINDOIR, a parish with which Kearn has been incorporated, is about 7 miles long and 5 broad; the village, situated on the Bogie water, is 13 miles south from Huntly and 8 miles south from Gartly, the nearest railway station, on a branch from Ioveramsay of the Great North of Scotland railway, and is in the Huntly small debt court district. Here are Established and United Free churches: the Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, built in 1859, will seat 100 persons. A bluish-coloured fibrous asbestos is found in great quantities in the fissures of the rocks. The parish also abounds with freestone. Clova, the residence of Hugh Gordon Lumsden esq. D.L., J.P. is in this parish. Cattle markets are held from Dec. to April, on the first Monday in each month, and fairs on the second Tuesday in May, the second Friday in June, and the third Tuesday in August. Area, 15,310 acres; rateable value, £6,951; population in 1891, 1,374, and in 1901, 1,216.

LUMSDEN is a considerable village in the parish of Auchindoir, about 4 miles south from Rhyndie, and contains a United Free church and a public school. The population in 1901 was 487.
 Post, T. & M. O. Office, Lumsden; Chas. Mann, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Aberdeenshire added. Delivery, 10.45 a.m.; dispatches, 6.55 a.m. & 2.15 p.m. No delivery on Sunday

AUCHTERLESS,

BADENSCOTH AND GORDONSTOWN.

AUCHTERLESS is a parish lying about midway between Aberdeen and Banff, about 7 miles long and 3 broad; the village is 6 miles south of Turriff, and has a station 3 miles distant on the Inveramsay and Maeduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Rothienorman, 2 miles distant, has a station on the same branch.
The parish is in Buchan poor combination and Turriff small debt court, and is watered by the river Ythan. In the parish are vestiges of an extensive fortified camp, the inclosed area of which is computed at 120 acres. The parish church is a building of stone and has a tower with spire, containing one bell: the spire was erected by the family of the late John P.
Watson esq. of Blackford, in memory of himself and his wife and daughter, who are buried in the churchyard. There are sittings for 800 persons. Some portions of the former church are still standing in the churchyard, as well as the remains of the earlier pre-Reformation church. The United Free church was erected in 1862.
The chief landowners are Garden Alexander Duff esq. D.L., J.P. of Hatton
Castle, Reginald William Henry Crawford-
Leslie esq. of Rothienorman, and Slingsby
W. Bethell esq. of Blackford. Acreage, 16,826; population in 1891, 1,853, and in 1901, 1,787 civil, 1,623 ecclesiastical.

Badenscoth and Gordonstown are small places in Auchterless parish. Rothienor-man, 2 miles distant, is the nearest railway station.

—Ballater station being that at which the Royal family usually alight for Balmoral Castle, which is 9 miles distant, and for Aberfeldie Castle, distant 6 miles.
Near here are the ruins of Knock Castle,
and on Loch Kinord, also in the neighbourhood, is a small island with the ruins of another castle, said to have been once a hunting seat of Malcolm Canmore: the lake is beautiful and romantic in its features, and skirted with birch, hazel and other woods. The village of Ballater is small, but regularly formed—the Established church standing near to its centre, and the United Free church upon the outskirts. There is also a Roman Catholic church and the Episcopal Mission church of St. Saviour, which seats 170 persons; there are Public Reading and Billiard rooms and the Victoria and Albert Memorial Halls and Gordon Institute. Military barracks, for 70 men, were erected here in 1870. Population in 1891, 981, and in 1901, 1,247; area 223 acres; rateable value, burghal, £8,970.

BELHELVE is a parish and village on the coast, in the district of Formartine, 8 miles north from Aberdeen and 5 1/2 miles from New Machar station on the branch from Dyce junction to Ellon of the Great North of Scotland railway, and in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. Here are Established and United Free churches. The aspect of the country is very unfavourable, especially at a distance from the sea coast, where it exhibits nothing but heath and stones: towards the sea, however, there is some arable land. Balmiedie is the seat of Harry T. Lumsden esq. Acreage, 12 1/4; rateable value, £13,222; population in 1891, 1,613, and in 1901, 1,614.

BIRSE, the most southerly parish of Aberdeenshire, and extending to Forfarshire, lies on the south bank of the river Dee, one mile from Aboyne railway station and about 28 miles south-west from Aberdeen, and forms nearly a square of ten miles. There are three districts in the parish, inclosed by the same number of ridges of hills, which take a south-westerly direction towards the Grampians from the river Dee; in the valleys formed by these ridges flow two streams—the Feuch and the Chattie. The proportion of uncultivated land is very considerable. The road from Dundee to Inverness passes through this parish, which is in the Aberdeen small debt court district. There are Established and Roman Catholic churches, and at Finzean an Established Mission chapel. Large upright stones, cairns and other monuments of antiquity are frequently met with, as is limestone in abundance. William Edward Nicol esq. D.L., J.P. of Ballogie, and The Rt. Hon. Robert Farquharson D.L., J.P., M.D. of Finzean House, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 31,563; rateable value, £8,465. Population in 1891, 1,094, and in 1901, 1,085.

BODDAM is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed in 1880 from Cruden and Peterhead, on the east coast, about 4 miles south of Peterhead, and is the terminus of the Cruden Bay branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, opened in July, 1897, and is in the Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The harbour here was extended by a former Earl of Aberdeen, at a cost somewhat exceeding £2,000, and subsequently further improvements were made by the late William Aiton esq. of Sandford, at a cost of over £12,000. An Act of Parliament was passed in 1845 constituting Boddam a port or harbour. The Established church, built in 1865, is a plain stone building and has sittings for 600 persons. There is also a United Free church and a meeting house for Plymouth Brethren. The Public Hall, the property of a limited liability company, is a plain stone building, erected in 1878, and has 500 sittings. The population in 1891 was 1,855, and in 1901, 2,216 in the parish and 800 in the village.

CASTLETON, see CRATHIE.

CHAPEL OF GARIOCH is an extensive parish lying in the centre of the county, 13 miles in length and from 3 to 4 in breadth, the river Don dividing it on the south from Kemnay and Mobyusk. The village is 20 miles north-west from Aberdeen, 18 south-east from Huntly and 5 north-west from Inverurie, with a station at Pitcaple on the Inveramsay and Huntly section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish church is situated in the small village of its name, and at the southern extremity of the parish is the church of Blairdaff, which is now a quoad sacra parish. There are also United Free churches here and at Blairdaff, and a Roman Catholic church at Fetternear. In the parish are the ruins of Balquhain Castle, and remains of a stone circle; here also is a sculptured relic, called "the Maiden Stone." In this district, 24 July, 1411, was fought the battle of Harlaw, between Alexander (Stewart), designate Earl of Mar, and Donald, Lord of the Isles, when the latter was defeated. Buchanan relates that the number of nobility who fell in this obstinately-contested action was greater than had fallen in any foreign engagement for many years before. Area, 13,059 acres; rateable value, £13,603; population in 1901, 1,559.

PITCAPLE is a small village in the parish of Chapel of Garioch, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Pitcaple Castle is the seat of Col. Henry Lumsden D.L., J.P. CLUNY is a parish in the district of Aboyne and small debt court district of Aberdeen, about 2 miles from Monymusk and 3½ miles from Tillyfourie stations on the Kintore and Alford section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 16 miles west from Aberdeen and 10 south-southwest from Inverurie. In length it is about 10 miles, and in breadth from 2 to 3 miles. Four-fifths of the parish is under cultivation. There is an Established church and two United Free churches: in the district are three druidical remains and several cairns.
 Castle Fraser, the residence of Mrs. Mackenzie-Fraser, is said to have been erected in the beginning of the 15th century.
 Cluny Castle, the chief part of which is modern, is the residence of Capt. Sir Reginald Archibald Edward Cathcart bart.
 D.L. and Lady Cathcart. There are red granite quarries in this parish. There are ruins of a large castle at Tillycairn.

COULL is a parish in the district of Cromar and in the Aberdeen small debts court district, the kirk being about 30 miles west from Aberdeen and 4 north from Aboyne station on the Deeside section of the Great North of Scotland railway; the village lies at the head of Strathcromar, and is separated from the Dee on the south by Aboyne. It is a finely sheltered tract of land, triangular in shape, and generally fertile, the hill portions being, however, bleak and pastoral. The ruins of the very old castle of Coull are distinguishable, but of its ancient possessors little is known. The trustees of the late Hon. James Ochoonor Forbes (d. 1900) are the principal landowners. Acreage, 9,044; rateable value, £4,095; population in 1891, 746, and in 1901, 684 civil, 422 ecclesiastical.

Post Office, Tillylodge; William Robbie, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Lumphanan, Aberdeenshire. Delivered at 12.15 a.m.; dispatched at 6.45 a.m. & 1 p.m. No Sunday delivery. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Tarriland, 4 miles distant.

CRATHIE,

BALMORAL AND BRAEMAR OR CASTLETOWN.

CRATHIE is an extensive and mountainous parish, in the heart of Mar, among the Grampian mountains, incorporating for civil purposes the quoad sacra parish of Braemar; jointly they comprise a territory 40 miles in length and 20 in breadth, the former place being 8 miles west-south-west and the latter 18 west from Ballater terminal station on the Deeside section of the Great North of Scotland railway, which is the nearest station for both; the joint parishes are in the Aberdeen small debt court district. This district is supposed to be more elevated above the level of the sea, and farther distant from the coast in every direction, than any other parochial section in Scotland. On some of the mountains snow may be found all the year round; Ben-Macdhui, 4,300 feet in height, and Lochnagar, 3,800 feet in height, are among the principal eminences in this quarter. Nearly the whole of the district was once covered with wood, and constituted the Forest of Mar, which, with the forests of the Duke of Athole, in Perthshire, and the Duke of Gordon, in Badenoch and Glensven, formed the principal part of the great Caledonian forest. In Braemar a considerable portion still remains, and is well stocked with deer.

Balmoral Castle, the highland residence of His Majesty King George V. and Aberfeldie Castle, leased by H.M. the King from Reginald H. L. Gordon esq. of Aberfeldie, are in this parish. The parish church, which occupies a site 920 feet above the sea level, was erected on the site of the old church, and opened June 18, 1895: it is a cruciform structure of white granite, in a modified form of Early Gothic, from designs by Mr. A. Marshall Mackenzie A.R.S.A. consisting of circular apsidal chancel, lighted by lancets, vestries, transepts, a nave of two bays, with traceried windows, and a central tower with machicolated parapet stepped at the angles, from within which rises a lantern stage lighted by pointed windows, and surmounted by an octagonal broach spire, relieved by holdy-projecting dormers; in the tower are 4 bells: a window of triple lancets in the north transept has been filled with stained glass to commemorate the 60th year of the reign of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria: the south transept is appropriated to His Majesty the King and the Royal household. There is a United Free church at Crathie, and at Braemar are United Free and Roman Catholic churches and the Episcopal Mission church of St. Margaret. The principal landowners are H.M. the King, the Duke of Fife K.T., G.C.V.O., P.C. Alexander Haldane Farquharson esq. of Invercauld, and Reginald Hugh Lyall Gordon esq. of Aberfeldie. Area, 700 square miles or 448,000 acres; rateable value, £26,878; population in 1891, 1,534, and in 1901, 606 in Crathie ecclesiastical parish, and 846 in the quoad sacra parish of Braemar and 516 in the village or water district of Braemar.

LOCHNAGAR, so famed for its whisky distillery, is likewise in Crathie parish. The principal lakes are Loch Callater and Loch Brotachan, which contain trout, salmon and eels. The great military road from Blairgowrie to Fort George passes through the whole extent of the district. On this line is the village of Castleton of Braemar, near which are the ruins of an ancient castle, said to have been a hunting seat of King Malcolm Canmore. The village is divided by the river Cluny—the one side of the water, called Auchendryne, belonging to the Duke of Fife, and the other to Alexander Haldane Farquharson esq. At a short distance from Braemar is the castle of Braemar, now leased to H.H. Princess Dolgorouki: it was once garrisoned by King William III. and burnt in the contest which took place between the Royal forces and the Earl of Mar; in 1749 it was rebuilt, and till within the last few years was occupied by Government troops, to prevent the smuggling which was so frequent in this district. This part contains inexhaustible quarries of limestone and slate. Braemar, with a population of about 846 persons, possesses two first-class hotels, and is much resorted to in summer by tourists; near here is Mar Lodge, the seat of the Duke of Fife K.T., G.C.V.O., P.C.: the old seat was Corrymuilzie, unfortunately destroyed by fire, June 14, 1895, but a new mansion has since been erected on the north side of the present Mar Lodge.

Session Clerk, William Clubb

CRIMOND is a parish and village 3 miles from Lomay station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 8 north-west from Peterhead and 8 south-east from Fraserburgh, upon the east coast of Buchan, with a front to the German Ocean of about three miles in breadth, but declining to a point, at the distance of rather more than five miles: it is in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. On Rattray Head, a very dangerous promontory, a lighthouse was established in 1895, and here also is a coastguard station. In the parish is Loch Strathbeg, near the east end of which is the Castle Hill, where Comyn, Earl of Buchan, had a castle. In the 18th century there was a communication between the Loch Strathbeg and sea; at the east end a harbour, now filled up by the drifting of the sand. On this harbour formerly stood the burgh of Rattray, near the site of which is a small ruined chapel, said to have been erected by the Earl of Buchan, about the year 1200. The parish church, built in 1812, is an edifice in the Scottish Gothic style; it was remodelled in 1895 and a clock provided: there is a memorial window to the Rev. Dr. Irvine and the Rev. Alexander Boyd, former ministers, and on the west wall is a brass containing the names of all the ministers since the Reformation: there are 404 sittings. The ruins of the old church stand in the churchyard, to the north of the present church. Here is a Public Hall and a Hospital, used in the case of operations only, and supported by the Countess of Southesk. The Countess of Southesk, of Crimonmogate, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 5,891 acres; assessable value, £5,590; the population was in 1891, 308, and in 1901, 735.

CRUDEN parish, about 9 miles south-south-west from Peterhead, lies on the east of Buchan district, extending from 8 to 9 miles along the east coast and about 7 inland, and is in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The parish comprises the villages of Port Erroll, which in 1901 had a population of 681, Hatton, population in 1901, 282, Loughaven (or Coldwells) and Whinnyfold, and has three railway stations, namely, Hatton, Cruden Bay and Loughaven, on a branch of the Great North of Scotland railway from Ellon to Boddam, opened in July, 1897. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. James, built in 1843, will seat 460 persons; the rectory, net value £156, has been held since 1893 by the Rev. J. Strachan M.A. of Aberdeen University; attached to this church are the Coldwells and North Haven and Whinnyfold Mission churches. The soil is various, a large proportion being a deep rich clay, while the remainder is light and gravelly, with some mosses. Slains Castle, the seat of the Earl of Erroll K.T., C.B. is a large mansion on a precipice overhanging the sea. The celebrated "Bullers of Buchan," in this parish, are formed by the inrush of the sea through a natural archway into a large rocky cavern, open to the sky. The rocks here are about 100 feet in height, both to the interior of "The Pot," and on the sea front. Area, 18,235 acres; valuation, 1911, £19,168; population in 1901, 3,444 civil, 2,730 ecclesiastical.

PORT ERROLL is a large village and popular watering place on Cruden Bay, with a hotel erected by the Great North of Scotland Railway Company, who have also laid down an electric tramway from the village to Cruden Bay station; adjoining the hotel is a golf course of 18 holes, extending over 3 miles. Here also is a Public Hall and a Congregational chapel.

NEW DEER is a parish lying almost in the centre of the Buchan district, extending 14 miles from north to south, and about 7 in breadth, and is in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village, which is well built, is about 30 miles north from Aberdeen, 2 miles west from Maud Junction station and 4 south-west from Brucklay station, both on the Great North of Scotland railway and in this civil parish, and is 12 miles east from Turriff, 16 south-west from Fraserburgh and about 16 west of Peter-head. The parish church, built in 1838, is a plain edifice of stone with a tower containing a clock; the organ cost about £800; the silver communion service was presented by Lord James Reid, chief of the judges of the King's Bench at Montreal, in Lower Canada, and a native of this village; he died in 1848, aged 79,
and there is a memorial in the church,
which affords sittings for 1,100 persons.
There are also two United Free churches and a Congregational chapel, and two branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. About 2 miles from the church stand the remains of a fortress, called "Federate," which appears to have been a place of considerable strength. There are a few Druidical remains and several tumuli, some of which have been opened and found to contain urns, enclosed in stone coffins.
A market is held on Tuesday, and fairs
on the third Tuesday in January, Tuesday after the 12th of April, Thursday before 28th of May, Tuesday after 18th of June, second Tuesday in August, Tuesday after 18th of October and Thursday before 28th of November. The chief landowners are the Earl of Aberdeen K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G.
of Haddo House; A. Dingwall Fordyce esq.

D.L. of Brucklay; J. Dean Leslie esq. of Nethermuir, and John H. Bridgea, of Federate. Acreage, 26,750; population of the entire parish in 1901 was 4,371—2,763 in the ecclesiastical and 739 in the village.

BRUCKLAY is a village in the parish of New Deer, with a station on the Maud and Fraserburgh branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. Brucklay Castle, built in 1540 and now the seat of Alexander Dingwall Fordyce esq. D.L. is about 2 miles from the village, and occupies a romantic situation in the midst of delightful scenery; the lawns are tastefully laid out, and the park is encircled by the waters of the Ugie.

OLD DEER is a parish 10 miles in length, by a mean breadth of between 5 and 6 miles, in the district of Buchan, Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village is 1 mile west from Mintlaw station, on the Aberdeen and Peterhead section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 10½ west from Peterhead and 30 north from Aberdeen by the Mintlaw road. A branch of the river Ugie intersects the parish near its centre, and another branch crosses it on the north; upon these streams are several mills. The parish church, built in 1796, on the site of the old Celtic church of the 6th century, is a plain edifice of stone with a western tower; it was entirely renovated in 1883, and further alterations were made and a new organ provided in 1898 at a cost of £900; there are sittings for 750 persons. There is a United Free church at Clola: the Episcopal church of St. Drostan, built in 1851, seats 350 persons; the rectory, net value £180, has been held since 1907 by the Rev. George Richard Lightfoot B.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham University. The ruins of Deer Abbey, built in the beginning of the 13th century by William Comyn, Earl of Buchan, are about a mile from the village. There were at one time no less than twelve stone circles here, of which four, tolerably entire, are yet remaining, that at Biffle being the most conspicuous. On Aikie Brae, Edward Bruce defeated the army of the Comyns, and laid waste the whole surrounding country. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. George Arthur Ferguson D.L., J.P. of Pitfour; James Ferguson esq. K.C., D.L., J.P. of Kinnmudy; Major-General Francis Shirley Russell C.M.G., D.L., J.P. of Aden, and Eustace Robertson Burnett-Stuart esq. D.L., J.P. of Criche, in this parish. The pleasure grounds and woods of Pitfour, the seat of Lieut.-Col. George A. Ferguson D.L., J.P. are highly picturesque. Near the village of Old Deer is a cemetery, opened in 1875. The Old Deer Educational Trust provides 265 yearly. A fair is held at Aikie Brae on the first Wednesday after the 19th of July, and at Drostan on the first Wednesday after the 19th of December. The area is 27,363 acres; valuation, 1911, £28,410. The population in 1901 was 2,559 in the ecclesiastical and 4,313 in the civil parish.

DYCE is a parish and village on the south bank of the Doon, which river separates the parish from Fintry, and Newhills parish divides it from Aberdeen, and is in the Aberdeen small debt court district. The Great North of Scotland railway has two stations in the parish, one at the village of Dyce, which is the junction for Cruden, Peterhead and Fraserburgh, and another at Pitmedden, about 2 miles distant. The village is situated about 5½ miles north-west from Aberdeen and has Established and United Free churches, each with a mission hall in the village. The Recreation Hall and Library, opened in 1908, was the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle. The Tyre-Beggar ridge runs through the district from south to north, one of the hills being surmounted by a Druidical temple composed of ten large upright stones. Acreage of the parish, 5,237; rateable value, £9,563; population in 1891, 1,343, and in 1901, 1,482.

ECHT is a parish, 6 miles north-west from Park station on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, 7 miles north-north-east from Banchory, 12 miles west of Aberdeen, and about 5 miles in length and the same in breadth. It is a hilly district, but having a large proportion of the land under cultivation. Here are Established and United Free churches. In this parish is Dunecht House, once the property of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, but now belonging to Lady Cowdray. The Observatory, established here in 1872, together with the library, were presented by Lord Crawford to the Crown, and transferred to the Royal Observatory, Edinburgh. On the summit of a hill adjacent to Dunecht are the remains of an ancient camp. Fairs are held on the first Monday in every month, with the following exceptions—the second Monday in May, the day before Michaelmas fair, in October and the second Tuesday in November. The parish has an area of 11,948 acres; value, £7,084; and in 1901 contained a population of 1,249.

ELLON is a police burgh and parish, extending about 9 miles in length from north to south and 5 in breadth, in Buchan poor combination and the small debt district of Aberdeen. The surface is uneven, and there are some rising grounds, the heights of which are considerable. The burgh has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, which is the junction for branches to Boddam, Peterhead and Fraserburgh; it is 16 miles north from Aberdeen, and has a bridge over the river Ythan, which is navigable for large boats to within half a mile of the village; a trade in coal and corn is carried on. The Established church here has been improved at a cost of £500; there is also a United Free church. The Episcopal church of St. Mary on the Rock, built in 1875, is an edifice in the Early Gothic style from designs by the late Mr. G. E. Street R.A. and will seat 250 persons. The Victoria Hall is a fine building in the Late Perpendicular style, erected in commemoration of the 60th anniversary of the reign of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, in 1897. Here are branches respectively of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The Gordon Hospital for Infectious Diseases, established in 1889, comprises a scarlet fever block, with 10 beds and 4 cots, and an enteric fever and diphtheria block with 14 beds and 2 cots. The trout fishing on the Ythan has long been celebrated. Ellon Castle, the residence of Arthur John Lewis Gordon esq. C.M.G., D.L., J.P. the present landowner, erected about 1850, stands just outside the village, close to the ruins of an old castle built early in the 16th century. Esleemont is the residence of Col. John Wolrige-Gordon J.P. There are two hotels, namely, the New Inn and the Station hotel. The market, formerly held on the first and third Moudays in each month, is now held every Monday by the Central Auction Mart and the Ythan-side Auction Mart, also on Tuesday after the 11th of May and on the Wednesday after the 12th of November. Acreage of the parish, 23,134; burgh, 277; rateable value, burghal, £6,019; landward, £29,435; population of the parish in 1901 was 4,123, of which 1,527 were in the burgh, and of ecclesiastical parish, 3,264.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Market street; David Fraser, postmaster. Deliveries, 8 & 9.20 a.m. & 5.45 p.m.; dispatches, 7.55 & 10.15 a.m. & 1.45, 4.10 & 7.45 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. Telegraph office open 7.30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Post Office, Loughaven; Geo. H. Stephen, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Aberdeen. Delivery, 10 a.m.; dispatch, 3.40 p.m.; no sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order office is at Port Erroll, 3 miles distant; the nearest telegraph office is also at Port Erroll for delivery, but the railway station at Loughaven is nearest for collection. Port Erroll is also a telephone call & express delivery office

FINTRAY is a parish and village about 10½ miles north-west from Aberdeen, the nearest railway station being at Kinaldie, on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish is 5 miles in length by from 3 to 4 in breadth, and lies on the banks of the Don, where the land is fertile and susceptible of profitable cultivation, but other parts are hilly. It is in the Aberdeen poor combination and small debt court district of Aberdeen, and has an Established church. An abbey formerly existed in this parish, and the Rev. J. Leslie, a former minister, possessed a stone inscribed with the date 1386, supposed to have formed part of the building, and a silver onp, dated 1633, said to have been manufactured from a silver image of St. Medan, the tutelal saint of the parish. Fintray House, the property of Lord Sempill, is the principal seat. Acreage, 7,319; valuation, £7,166; population in 1891 999, and in 1901, 866. Post, M. O. & T. FORGUE is a parish in the Huntly small debt court district, 10 miles in length and about 8 at its greatest breadth; it is 7 miles north-east of Huntly, the nearest railway station, on the Great North of Scotland system, and 9½ west of Turriff, and is intersected by two rivulets—the Frendraught and the Forgue. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret, consecrated in 1858, will seat 220 persons: the rectory, net value £150, has been held since 1909 by the Rev. William Leask Davidson M.A. of Aberdeen University. The public hall was presented to the parish by the late Walter Scott, of Glendronach. The soil in the lower parts produces good crops, but towards the south the ground is mostly covered with heath. On several of the estates much has been done in planting and improving the wastes. The celebrated Glendronach distillery is situated in this parish. The principal landowners are Col. Frederick de Lemare Morison, of Frendraught; Robert Skirving esq. J.P. of Cobairdy; William F. M'Hardy esq. J.P. of Drumblair House; Miss Lillias Thain, of Auchaber, and the trustees of the late Thomas Gilzean Rose-Innes esq. of Kinellan. The area is 17,354 acres; population in 1901, 1,948, of which 1,107 are attached to the parish church.

FOVERAN is a parish and village on the coast, and on the river Ythan, which forms the boundary on the north, and is navigable for about 3 miles: the parish is 7 miles in length from east to west, and about 2 in breadth, and the village is 10 miles from Aberdeen and 4 south-east from Ellon junction station on the Great North of Scotland railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. The parish is generally level, but the ground rises by a gradual ascent from the sea, though not to any considerable height. The soil varies from sand to a rich loam and strong clay, the whole of which is arable. At the mouth of the river is the small village of NEWBURGH, a growing place of popular resort, in which a considerable trade is carried on in grain, lime, bones and guano. It is in the Aberdeen poor combination and small debt court district, and contains a Public Hall and lifeboat and police stations, and there are golf links with a course of nine holes. In this parish are the ruins of several ancient castles and chapels. Area, 10,537 acres, the rateable value, £12,873; population of the parish, 1901, 1,789, and of Newburgh, 600.

FRASERBURGH

FRASERBURGH is a flourishing seaport town on the north-east coast, and a burgh of barony and regality, in a parish of the same name and in Buchan poor combination, and has a station which is the terminus of a branch (opened May 1st, 1865) of the Great North of Scotland railway. A new light railway to Inverallochy and

St. Combs was opened July 1st, 1903. The town is 16½ miles north-east of Edinburgh, 47½ north of Aberdeen, 22 east of Banff (26 by the new road), and 18 north-west of Peterhead, and is situated on the south side of Kinnaird Head, a bold promontory, surmounted by a light-house, built upon the site of an ancient castle, once held by the Frasers, barons Saltoun. The parish occupies the north-eastern angle of land in this part of the county, and extends about 3½ miles each way. At one time the name of the parish was Philorth, and the name survives in Philorth House, the seat of Lord Saltoun D.L., J.P. The original name of the burgh was Faithlie, and in 1546 it was declared a free port and burgh of barony by royal charter, in favour of Sir Alexander Frazer, of Philorth. By a precept of sasine granted by King James VI. in 1592, the name was altered to Port de Fraser, and by a crown charter dated April 4th, 1601, the same monarch caused it to be a burgh of regality and the name changed to Fraserburgh, from the name of the proprietor or superior, Sir Alexander Frazer, of Philorth, to whom and his heirs these charters gave the superiority of the burgh. In 1872 the burgh adopted the "Police and Improvement Act (Scotland), 1862," and was controlled by commissioners under the "Police Act of 1892," but it is now under the "Town Councils Act, 1900," governed by a provost, magistrates and councillors. The town is neatly built, forming a square, and well supplied with water, and the streets, which are tolerably spacious, are lighted with gas by a company. Near the centre is the Town House and a modern cross. A sheriff's small debt court is held monthly.

There is an excellent harbour, much improved during recent years, under a Provisional Order of 1873 and a harbour act obtained in 1878. The harbour (the annual revenue from which is £14,000 to £18,000) is managed by the Provost, five persons elected by the feuars, two by the ship-owners, two by the town council, three by the harbour commissioners and one by the feuars managers. A breakwater (commenced in 1875, and upon which £72,000 has been expended), extending about 860 feet into the bay in a southerly direction, has been completed. A further sum of £70,000 has been expended in deepening the south and the north harbours, widening the piers and other additions to existing works, and in 1898 Balacava harbour was deepened and a new south breakwater constructed at a cost of £80,000. Between 1903 and 1911 a sum of £40,000 was expended on the strengthening of Balacava Breakwater and other protective works, while a new harbour, to be named the Station harbour, is now (1911) being formed at a cost of £120,000. This harbour encloses 10 additional acres of water space and will afford safe anchorage for many trading vessels, as well as for hundreds of fishing craft during the herring fishing season. The berthage has also been greatly enlarged, and now extends to about 9,500 feet, where fishing boats can safely lie and discharge fish, and of which 6,425 feet is available for shipping. During spring tide vessels drawing from 16 to 17 feet enter the harbour, and during neap tides the depth is from 13 to 15 feet. The total area of the harbour when the additions are complete will be 28 acres.

The herring fishery, which has been established here for upwards of a century, has been so largely developed within recent years that Fraserburgh may now be considered as one of the foremost stations in Scotland. The number of boats registered under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1899, as belonging to the port, Dec. 31, 1909, was 578 of 10,803 tonnage, employing 678 men and boys; and 2,940 men and boys during the fishing season, from July to September, and about 700 to 800 boats and 5,000 men and boys are casually employed. The value of herrings exported in 1905 was £169,817. The value of the fish landed in Fraserburgh in 1909 was £222,122, and value of fish cured in the same year £294,555. A fish market, 200 feet in length, was built in 1899. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port with cargoes and in ballast in 1909 was 47 foreign of 12,981 tons, and cleared 59 of 13,294 tonnage. In the general coasting trade 352 entered of 40,968 tons, and 336 cleared of 40,451 tonnage.

A trade is done in timber, imported from Norway and Sweden, the other chief imports being coals, salt, white fish &c. while the principal exports are herrings, grain, empty barrels, fish manure and oil, potatoes &c.; there are also works for the making of machine tools. The total value of the imports in 1909 was: sawn wood, £14,359 and hewn wood, £9,092; other articles, £1,517; total, £24,968. The total value of the exports in 1909 was £197,140, of which £190,360 was herrings.

The parish church, in the centre of the town, built in 1803, is a plain edifice of stone, with a clock tower at the west end; the organ was erected at a cost of £400; the interior was entirely renovated and extensive structural alterations made in 1899, at a cost of £2,000; there are sittings for 1,050 persons. The hereditary burying ground of the Fraser family is within the church inclosure. The west parish church, built in 1876, is a plain stone building with tower and spire, containing a bell presented by Mr. William Whitelaw; there are 480 sittings. The South United Free church, in Seaforth street, is a structure of granite, erected in 1880 at a cost of £6,500. The West United Free church is in Mid street. The United Free church, in Saltoun place, will seat 250 persons. St. Peter's Episcopal church (Bishop Jolly Memorial), in Charlotte street, consists of chancel, nave and aisles, and was consecrated on August 31, 1892; there are sittings for 400 persons. The Catholic church and Presbytery in Commerce street, erected in 1895, are of granite; the church has 400 sittings. Thomas Walker's Hospital, within the burgh, was erected at a cost of £3,000, on a site given by Lord Saltoun. It is supported by voluntary contributions, and has an endowment of £1,000 from the Helen Watson Memorial Fund, under which poor people are admitted free of charge; there are 25 beds. Dalrymple Hall and Café, erected at a cost of about £6,000, is due to the late Captain John Dalrymple, who presented the site, along with sum of £2,300, for its erection; in addition to the café and dining rooms, it has a reading room, museum, school of art, recreation room and baths, together with a public hall capable of holding 1,000 people, and the necessary ante-rooms.

The Public Libraries Act was adopted by the Town Council in July, 1903, and a library was built in 1905 on a site given by Lord Saltoun at a cost of about £4,000, towards which Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, contributed £3,630 and local subscriptions £50.

The Central School, erected at a cost of £7,000, was opened on the 12th September, 1882, by Lord Saltoun; at the north end is a tower containing a clock and a bell, and in 1891 a large addition was made at an expense of £1,300. The Infant School, erected at a cost of £6,000, was also opened by Lord Saltoun in September, 1901. The North School was erected at a cost of £3,250 and opened in 1908. The Technical School was erected at a cost of £1,600 and opened in 1908. Fraserburgh Academy, built at a cost of £2,500, and endowed by James Park esq. was opened in 1870, and in 1894 transferred to a governing body elected partly by the School Board and partly by the Town Council. The Academy at present the Secondary School for Fraserburgh, is leased by the School Board, who are now the managers. The New Academy, in Dennvuff street, was built at a cost of £7,600 and opened in 1909. There is also a school belonging to the Episcopalians in Victoria street. The "Bruce Bequest" of over £40,000, left by James Bruce, of Inverquhony and Longside, provides an income of £1,240 yearly, which is distributed to the poor of all the parishes comprising the Presbytery of Deer. This charity is vested in trustees. There are three hotels here—the Royal Hotel, the Saltoun Arms Hotel and the Station Hotel. The market, chiefly for corn and cattle, is held on Tuesday. Area of parish 5,621 acres, of burgh 333 acres; rateable value, burghal, £54,366; landward, £7,177; population of the burgh in 1901 was 9,105, and the civil parish 9,915, including 107 on ships in the harbour, and 5,470 in the ecclesiastical.

BROADSEA, a fishing village, is within the burgh. A fishermen's hall was also erected in the village in 1887 by public subscription.

Technury, a detached portion of Fraserburgh parish, has been transferred to Strichen.

WOODHEAD AND ROTHIE-NORMAN.

FYVIE is an inland parish and village on the high road from Aberdeen to Banff, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 8 miles north-north-west from Old Meldrum, 9 south-south-west of Turfiff and 25 north-north-west from Aberdeen, in Buchan poor combination and Turfiff small debt court; the village occupies both sides of the river Ythan, which, between Fyvie and Methlick, flows through a romantic wooded gorge called the Braes of Gight, containing the ruins of an ancient castle, which, with the estate of Gight, belonged to the ancestors of Lord Byron, and is now the property of the Earl of Aberdeen. The parish church, standing on the site of the old church which existed at the Reformation, was built in 1808 and enlarged in 1901, and is a plain stone building with a belfry containing 2 bells, one of which bears the date 1609, and the inscription, "Soli Deo Gloria;" there are two stained windows; the memorials include one with a pre-Reformation inscription, and a Gothic cross to Tiffies Annie, the heroine of the old ballad of Andrew Lammie; the church affords 1,200 sittings. The church hall, given to the parish by Captain and Mrs. Gordon in 1884, contains two valuable oil paintings and a marble bust of the donor, and will hold 400 persons; it is used for Sunday school, parish library, lectures and entertainments of various kinds. There is also the Mission church of St. Mary and two United Free churches. A cottage hospital was founded and endowed in 1879 by Colonel and Mrs. Cosmo Gordon, of Fyvie. Fyvie Club, erected in 1905 at the sole expense of Lord Leith of Fyvie, is a building of stone, and contains billiard, reading, dining and bed rooms. Fyvie Castle, now the seat of Lord Leith of Fyvie, is a mansion in the Domestic Gothic style, and has been repaired and greatly improved. The scenery around is highly pleasing, and a loch intersects the grounds. Near the church, on the banks of the river, is a cross, marking the site of a priory founded, along with the parish church, in honour of the Virgin Mary, by Fergus, Earl of Ruchan, in 1179, and given to the abbey of Arbroath. The chief landowners are the Earl of Aberdeen K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G., Lord Leith of Fyvie, Reginald William Henry Crawford-Leslie esq. of Rothie, the trustees of Charles Hugh Lindsay Henderson Chalmers, of Monkhill, the trustees of Thomas Gilzean Rose Innes esq. of Netherdale (d. 1904), and the trustees of William Leslie esq. of Warthill. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in February and July. Rateable value, £26,351; area, 29,586 acres; population of the parish in 1901, 3,677 civil and 2,695 ecclesiastical.

ROTHIE-NORMAN is a small village in this parish, about 3 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west therefrom, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The Episcopal church of St. George, at Folla-Rule, built in 1796, will seat 252 persons. The Rev. George Bartlet M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been incumbent since 1909. Cattle markets and auction sales are held here on alternate Saturdays.

WOODHEAD is a small village 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Fyvie station. The Episcopal church of All Saints here, built in 1849, has 200 sittings. The Rev. Francis William Campbell Turreff M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been incumbent since 1903.

GLENGAIRN, see GLENMUICK.

GLENMUICK is a large parish in the district of Mar, formed by the union of the parishes of Glenmuick, Tullich and Glengairn, which are in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. It lies about 40 miles west of Aberdeen, is about 18 miles in length and 15 in breadth, and is intersected by the Dee and several of its tributary streams; the nearest stations are at Ballater and Cambus O'May, both on the Deeside section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish kirk is in Ballater, but there are Established churches at Glengairn and Cromar. Glas-selb Shiel, a shooting box belonging to H.M. the King, is in this parish. The soil is shallow, producing good grain; the hills are of considerable elevation, and many of them covered with wood to their very summits. Specimens of lead ore have been found near the castle of Glengairn, and limestone is everywhere abundant. Close by the Bridge of Muick is a cairn, erected to mark the spot where Her late Majesty Queen Victoria reviewed the 1st Battalion Gordon Highlanders prior to their departure for South Africa, in September, 1899. The principal landowners are His Majesty the King, Alexander H. Farquharson esq. of Invercauld, Sir Victor A. F. Mackenzie bart. M.V.O. of Braikley House, Alexander Keiller esq. George Coats esq. Reginald H. L. Gordon esq. of Abergeeldie, and J. C. Barclay-Harvey esq. J.P. of Dinnet. Acreage, 88,798; rateable value, £26,330; population of the civil parish, exclusive of Ballater, in 1901 was 1,213, and of ecclesiastical parish, 1,975.

In the village of Tullich are the remains of an old kirk, the walls of which inclose the burial place of the Farquharsons of Whitehouse. The view from this spot looking towards the west presents a series of hills rising one above another, with the lofty Lochnagar towering over all.

The mineral wells and baths at PAN-NANICH are within about 2 miles of Ballater, on the banks of the Dec. These waters are serviceable in cases of scrofula and dyspepsia, and in all complaints where the blood is either deficient in quantity or vitiated; they have also proved beneficial in cases of stone and gravel. There is a good hotel adjacent to the wells.

Post Office Bridge of Gairn; William Harvey, sub-postmaster. Letters through Ballater, Aberdeenshire. Delivery, 10.15 a.m. & to callers 6.15 p.m.; dispatches, 6.15 a.m. & 2.35 & 4.40 p.m. & on Sundays, 5.20 a.m.; Sunday delivery (to callers), 1.30 to 2 p.m. Ballater, 1½ miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

HUNTLY

HUNTLY, a burgh of barony and the seat of presbytery, is a pleasing modern town, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 140 miles north of Edinburgh, 66 east of Inverness, 40 north-west of Aberdeen, 21 south-west of Edinburgh, and 18 south-east of Forthabers. The parish is about 10 miles in length and 4 in breadth, and was formed by the annexation of the parishes of Dubnennan and Kinnoir. The town is well lighted with gas by a company, and occupies a dry and salubrious situation, on a point of land formed by the confluence of the Bogie with the Deveron, the stream of each being crossed by a bridge; of late years it has become a fashionable summer resort. There are four principal streets crossing each other at right angles, and forming a spacious square. Here is an Established church, an Episcopal church, three United Free churches, and Roman Catholic and Congregational chapels. The Brander Public Library and Museum, erected in 1885, is a fine building in the Perpendicular Gothic style of the 16th century, and was presented by William Brander esq. of London, as part of a gift of £6,500 for educational purposes. The library contains about 7,500 volumes. Stewart's Hall, in Gordon street, burnt down in 1886 and rebuilt in 1887, is an imposing structure, surmounted by a tower containing a clock; the large hall, used for public meetings, will seat 650 persons. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. who is superior, appoints a baron hallee. Justice of peace courts are held as occasions require, in the council chamber in the hall, and a sheriff's small debt court quarterly, the jurisdiction of the latter extending over twelve parishes. A monument of granite and stone, standing in the square, was erected in 1862 to Charles Gordon Lennox, 5th Duke of Richmond and Gordon, d. 21 Oct. 1860, by the tenantry of Huntly. There is also a drinking fountain of granite, erected in 1882 to James Robertson, banker, of Huntly, d. Feb. 1877.

There are branches here of the North of Scotland and Town and County and Union Banks Limited. The Strathbogie Lodge of Good Templars has a hall in M'Veagh street. The Gordon schools, opened in 1841, were founded by the late Duchess in 1829, and are near to the Lodge, formerly her residence. The premises were enlarged in 1888, and since then two separate blocks have been added, one for the upper Elementary department and one for the secondary department: the latter is at present (1911) being added to. Attached to the school are six Gordon Bursaries, three for boys and three for girls. A home for the aged and destitute of both sexes, founded and endowed by Alexander Scott esq. in 1830, was enlarged in 1899 at a cost of £5,000, and endowed with about £70,000, left by the late Mr. Morrison, of Bognie. The Cottage Hospital, erected by subscription in 1887-8 as a memorial of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, contains 36 beds, and is maintained by surplus funds from Alexander Scott's trust. There is also an Infectious Diseases Hospital under the same management and supported by rates. The principal hotels are the Huntly Hotel, the Gordon Arms and the Strathbogie Hotel. Agriculture has achieved great success in this parish. The acreage of arable land is very considerable, and some of the emicences are clothed with fine plantations. Mungo's Hill, in the district of Kinnoir, has the appearance of an extinct volcano, and on the summit there is a basin, generally filled with water, though in dry seasons peat is obtained from it, strongly impregnated with sulphur; and pieces of lava have, it is said, been found round it. Limestone, some of which approaches to the nature of marble and takes a very high polish, is also obtained in the parish. The weaving of linen has gradually decreased, but there are two woollen factories, a hosiery factory and an extensive agricultural implement factory, which give employment to a number of hands. Auction sales are conducted every Wednesday, and feeing markets for hiring servants are held on the Thursday before the 28th of May, the second Thursday in July and the Thursday before the 28th November. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. is the lord of the manor and principal landowner. Area, 12,475 acres; rateable value, £21,142; population of parish in 1891, 4,583, and in 1901, 4,839, of which the burgh contained 4,163.

INSCH

INSCH is a burgh of barony in the Upper Garioch district, 27 miles north-west from Aberdeen and 13 south-east from Huntly, and has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish extends 5 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and is bounded by Culsalmond on the east, Kenneymount on the west and separated by the water of the Urie from Drumblade and Fergie; the burgh is in the Huntly small debt court district, is lighted with gas, has established and United Free churches and a Congregational chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Drostan, built in 1802 and consecrated in 1895, affords 130 sittings. There are branches here of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland, and also a Savings Bank. On the top of the hill of Dun-i-Deer are the ruins of an old castle and a vitrified fort. The Northern Auction Co. Limited hold sales here every Monday, and feeing markets are held in May and November. Bainshole is an outlying part of the parish, 6 miles north from Insch. Acreage, 8,370; rateable value, £9,791; population in 1891, 1,384, and 1901, 1,343, of which number the burgh contained 610.

INVERALLOCHY is a quoad sacra parish, formed about 1877 from the parish of Rathen, and is in Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court. The village, on the sea coast, is 2½ miles from Rathen Station, and has a station called Cairnbulg on the St. Combs Light Railway section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish church, built about 1840 and remodelled in 1880, is a plain building of stone, with tower and spire at the north end, and has sittings for 500 persons. In the parish are some remains of a castle. There are 90 boats here, employing 260 men and boys, registered for the village. Mrs. Mackenzie Fraser, of Castle Fraser, Cluny, is the chief landowner. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,865, and of the village, 636.

CAIRNBULG is a small fishing village in the parish, on the north coast of the county, adjoining Inverallochy, and has a public hall and police and coastguard stations. Cairnbulg Castle, restored in 1897, is the seat of John Duthie esq. There are 80 boats, employing 209 men and boys, registered for the village. The population in 1901 was 569.

INVERNETTIE and INVERUGIE, see PETERHEAD.

INVERURIE is a town, royal burgh, and parish, lying at the termination of the peninsula between the river Ury on the north and the Don on the south, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway and is 17 miles north-west of Aberdeen, 24 south-west of Huntly and 5 west-by-south of Old Meldrum, pleasantly situated on the neck of land formed by the confluence of the streams before mentioned. Tradition reports that In-verarie was erected into a royal burgh by King Robert Bruce on the occasion of a signal victory obtained by him in the neighbourhood over Comyn, Earl of Buchan, the King of England's general in Scotland. The oldest charter is a novodamus by Queen Mary, the preamble of which states that Inverurie had been a royal burgh from time immemorial, but that the charter of its erection had been lost during the civil wars. The town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and three councillors, and under the Reform Act of 1832 is included in the parliamentary division of the Elgin Burghs, returning one member. The town is well lighted with gas, and supplied with good water brought from the lands of Keith Hall. The Great North of Scotland Railway Co. has extensive engineering works here, and a fine passenger station was built at the north end of the town in 1901. A bridge was erected in 1791 over the Don, at an expense of £2,000, and subsequently another was carried over the Ury. Here are Established and United Free churches and a Mission hall, a Roman Catholic church, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and a hall for the Salvation Army. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1843, will seat 200 persons. The Town Hall, erected in 1862, at a cost of nearly £3,000, is a structure of light grey granite, with a tower containing a clock placed in 1889; the building comprises a public hall, market hall, council chamber, committee room, public library and museum. The Drill Hall and Armoury, erected in 1896 at a cost of £1,500, is a building of stone, with a residence for the drill instructor. The Public Fountain, in the Market place, was erected in 1879, at a cost of £200, as a memorial to John Annand, provost from 1870 to 1879. The North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The Higher Grade School, built in 1908 at a cost of about £5,000, with a residence for the head master attached, is a building of granite. The Hospital for Infectious Diseases, erected in 1898, at a cost of about £3,000, is a building of stone, with 10 beds. Inverurie has become a favourite resort during the summer months, the Don and the Ury affording ample sport to the angler, and there is a first-class hotel here, the "Kintore Arms." Inverurie confers the title of Baron Keith of Inverurie on the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. who has a fine mansion, Keith Hall, a little to the east of the town. The Bass of Inverurie, a conical mound, 50 or 60 feet high, overhangs the isolated churchyard near it, and appears to have been the site of the chief castle of the Earls (or rather lords) of Garioch, as early as about the year 1200; the field in which it stands is still called the Castleyards of Inverurie. The area is 4,946 acres; rateable value—burghal, £18,173; landward, £4,321; population of the parish in 1891, 2,954, and in 1901, 3,058 in the parliamentary, royal and municipal burgh, 97 beyond the burgh, and 336 landward; total, 3,491; in 1910 it was estimated at 4,500.

Post, M. O. S. B. & A. I., Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, West High street; Francis Massie, postmaster. Deliveries, all parts, 6.45 & 9 a.m. & 2.30 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 6.35, 7.30, 8.5, 8.50 & 9.40 a.m. & 1.55, 2.20, 4.15, 5.50, 6.50 & 9.10 p.m. No Sunday delivery. KEIG is a small parish and village intersected by the river Don, and is 3 miles from Whitehouse station and 4 miles north-east from Alford terminal station, both on a branch from Kintore of the Great North of Scotland railway, and 25 north-west from Aberdeen, in the Aberdeen small debt court district. Here are Established and United Free churches. Castle Forbes, the seat of Lord Forbes, situated in this parish, is surrounded by thriving plantations and a natural wood of considerable extent, and commands a fine view of the windings of the river Don for many miles. In the parish are two stone circles and a barmekin or Celtic fort. Area, 8,059 acres; rateable value, £4,710; population in 1891, 748; 1801, 626.

Post Office, Robert Simpson, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Aberdeen, via Whitehouse. Deliveries, 9.40 a.m. & 5.55 p.m.; dispatches, 7.25 a.m. & 12.55 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest telegraph & money order office is at Whitehouse, 3 miles distant

KEITH HALL and KINKELL form a united parish in the district of Garioch, lying on the left banks of the rivers Ury and Don, which unite opposite its centre. The village of Keith Hall is 3 miles east from Inverurie station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and has an Established church. Some of those who fell in the battle of Harlaw, 24 July, 1411, were, it is said, buried at Kinkell. At Kinnuck, also in the parish, the Society of Friends established themselves about the end of the 17th century, and their meeting house here contains a good library. The estate of Kinnuck belongs to the University of Aberdeen, and another small estate is the property of the Synod of Aberdeen. The Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. who resides occasionally at Keith Hall, is the proprietor of the rest of the parish. Area, 7,639 acres; rateable value, £7,640; population, (1901), 803.

Post Office, Kinnuck; James Robb, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Inverurie. Delivery, 12.15 p.m.; dispatch, 12.15 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Inverurie, 3½ miles distant

KILDUMMY is a parish and village lying in a valley 7 miles from Alford terminal station on a branch from Kintore of the Great North of Scotland railway, 35 miles west from Aberdeen and 16
south from Huntly, and is in the Huntly small debt court district. Here is an Established church, and at Clova a Roman Catholic church, and in the village is a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The castle of Kildrummy, which anciently belonged to David, Earl of Huntington and Garioch, was a seat of King Robert Bruce, and served as a place of retreat for his queen in the winter of 1306; it is a ruin of great antiquity and appears to have been strongly fortified and furnished with subterraneous passages and places of concealment. One of its seven towers, from the whiteness of its stone, was called the

"Snow Tower;" the ruins cover an acre of ground, but the whole, including the grounds, was purchased in 1899 by James Ogston esq. Brux Lodge is the residence of the Hon. Atholl Monson Forbes D.L., J.P. The parish has an area of 10,352 acres; rateable value, £4,636; population in 1891, 569, and in 1901, 574.

Post Office, Mossat; Robert Cruickshank,

KINCARDINE-O'NEIL is a parish and village, the latter being on the public road and on the banks of the Dee between Aberdeen and Ballater, 26 miles west from the former, 16 north-east from the latter and 2 south-east from Deas station on the Deeside section of the Great North of Scotland railway, and in Aberdeen small debt court district. St. Erchan's well, whose waters are said to be of a medicinal character, is near this village, which is largely resorted to by invalids
during the summer season, being much protected from the north and east winds, and having an extensive prospect up the river towards the Grampian mountains.
The parish, which is about 9 miles in length by 6 in extreme breadth, is partly hilly and pastoral and partly arable, while in some places are thriving plantations.
There is an Established church and an Episcopal church, called Christ Church, built in 1886 and seating 100 persons.
The village contains a public hall, erected in 1885 by an inscription. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, and on the Wednesday and Thursday after the last

Tuesday in August (O.S.). Mrs. Mary
Pickering and Major Ducan Francis Davidson, of Deas House, are the principal landowners. The acreage of the parish is 13,132; rateable value, £14,987; population in 1891, 1,828 and in 1901, 2,005;
ecclesiastical parish, 967.

KING EDWARD is a parish and village, with a station on the Inveramsay and Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 6 miles north from Turriff, 5 south from Macduff and 5 south-east from Banff. In the northern part of the county, in Buchan poor combination and Turriff small debt court; the parish is 12 miles in length from west to east by from 2 to 5 in breadth, its western extremity being washed by the Deveron; on the north it is bounded by Gamrie, on the east by Nev Byth and on the south by Turriff. The general surface is nodulating; there are extensive plantations and a district is advanced in agriculture. A streamlet, tributary to the Deveron, pursues a westerly direction through the parish, and on its right bank stands the ruins of the ancient castle of King Edward, once the seat of the potent Comyns, Earls of Buchan. The parish church, built in 1848, is a plain edifice of stone, with a belfry at the west end containing one bell: there are sittings for 600 persons. The principal landowners are Sir Richard Nicholson kt. of Eden, Banff, Lieut.-Col. Francis E. R. Pollard-Urquhart D.L., J.P. of Craighton, and Garden Alexander Duff esq. D.L. J.P. of Hutton Castle. The area is 17,523 acres; rateable value, £12,784; population in 1891, 2,817, and in 1901, 2,434 in the civil and 992 in the ecclesiastical parish, which extends into Banffshire.

KINMUCK, see KEITH HALL AND KINKELL.

KINTORE is a royal burgh, parish and small town, 12½ miles north-west from Aberdeen and between 3 and 4 south-east from Inverurie, on the public road near the Don, and has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, which is also the junction for Alford. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, assisted by a council of nine other burgoesses, and is in the same parliamentary division as Inverurie. There are Established and United Free churches, a Public Hall, opened in 1895, and a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. In this parish are numerous cairns and tumuli, said to point out the position where Robert Bruce overtook and destroyed the army of Edward I. after the defeat of Comyn, Earl of Buchan, near Inverurie; and within the parish are the ruins of Hall Forest Castle, formerly a hunting seat of King Robert and now the property of the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. to whom three-fourths of the parish belongs. Port Elphinstone, a village in this parish, on the river Don, about a mile from Inverurie, has meal and paper mills and a brewery; here also are erected several good residences. The area of the parish is 9,092 acres; rateable value, burghal £3,270, landward £9,776; population 1901, parish 2,553; burgh 789.

Post, T., M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office (letters should have Aberdeenshire added); Miss Mary Cruickshank, sub-postmistress. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 6.45 p.m. & to callers at 10.30 a.m.; no Sunday delivery; dispatches, 7.35 & 9.55 a.m. & 2.10, 4.25 & 6.10 p.m.

LEOCHEL-CUSHNIE is a joint parish, 2½ miles from Whitehouse station on the Kintore and Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland railway and 3 north from Alford, in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. Here are established and United Free churches. The ruins of the ancient castles of Lynturk and Corse are within the parish. In the latter several of the Forbes family were born, one of whom, Patrick Forbes of Corse, Bishop of Aberdeen 1618-35, wrote a Commentary on the Revelations. Craigievar Castle, the seat of Lord Sempill D.L. J.P. is also in this parish, and from its elevated situation commands an extensive prospect of the country. Acreage, 12,856; rateable value, £7,520 17s. 9d.; population in 1891, 1,146, and in 1901, 1,018 in the civil and 1,280 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LESLIE is a parish and village in the district of Garioch, 3 miles south-west from Insch station on the Inveramsay and Huntly section of the Great North of Scotland railway, and in the Huntly small debt court district; it is watered by the small river Gadie, a stream celebrated by Arthur Johnston M.D. of Aberdeen University, in his elegant Latin poems, and in a familiar Scotch song; he was born at Caskieben, in this county, in 1587, and died at Oxford in 1641. Here is the fine old ruin of Leslie Castle, and several Druidical remains, besides cairns and an ancient encampment. Here is an Established church, seated near the river side, and there is also a United Free church. Duncanstone is a detached part of the parish, about 4 miles from Insch, and has a Congregational chapel. Acreage, 4,444; rateable value, £2,860; population in 1891, 461, and in 1901, 443.

LONGHAVEN, see CRUDEN.

LONGSIDE is a parish and village, with cungway station, 6 miles west of Peterhead, 4 east from Old Deer and about 30 north of Aberdeen, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. Peeing fairs are held on the second Thursday in May and the second Tuesday in November.
The Established church, built in 1836, is a plain edifice of stone, seating about 1,200 persons. The old church, built in 1620, still stands in the churchyard. The entrance to the churchyard is by a lych gate, built in 1705, a feature rarely seen in the North of Scotland. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist is a fine building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a central tower, 90 feet in height; the altar is of white Sicilian marble, and there is a beautiful credenza of Caen stone: the church affords sittings for 500 persons. The Rev. Robert Mackay M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1885. In the churchyard of this parish is a monument to the Rev. John Skinner, who died in 1807, having been for 64 years minister of the Episcopal congregation at Longside; he was also dean of the diocese, and author of the popular song entitled "Tulloch-corum," as well as other poetical compositions, and a contemporary of Burns.
His son, John Skinner, was Bishop of Aberdeen, 1786-1816, and his grandson, William Skinner, was bishop 1816-57, and both subsequently held the office of Primate of the Scottish Episcopal Church.
There is also a United Free church, in connection with which is a hall, erected in 1910, to seat 230 persons. There are two Parish Halls, erected in 1910, the larger of which will seat 400 persons. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. Geo. A. Ferguson J.P. of Pitfour, Vincent C. Bruce esq. of Inverquhomery, Major-Gen. F. S. Russell C.M.G. of Aden, George Bertram McPherson-Grant esq. F.R.G.S. of Faichfield, and William E. Hutchison esq. J.P. of Cairngall. Acreage of the parish, 16,836; valuation, £17,983; population, 1901, 2,760 in the civil, 2,408 in the ecclesiastical parish and 417 in the village.

MINTLAW is a village in this parish, three-quarters of a mile from Mintlaw station (in Old Deer parish), on the Great North of Scotland railway. The Public Hall was erected in 1893, and there is a Public Library. Population in 1901, 393.

LONMAY is a parish and village, with a station on the Fraserburgh branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, 5½ miles south-east from Fraserburgh, and has about 4 miles of sea coast; the parish is 10 miles long, and varies in breadth from half a mile to 4 miles. It is in Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court. The parish church, erected in 1788, is a plain building of stone, and has sittings for 400 persons; of the former church, built in 1607, part of a wall is still standing. The original church of the 12th century, now in ruins in the churchyard at St. Combs, was dedicated to St. Columba, and hence the name of the modern village which now stands beside it. Adjoining the present church is the family burying-ground of the Gordons of Cairness. The Episcopal church of St. Columba, originally built about 1720, but reconstructed and enlarged in 1862, consists of chancel, nave, small transept, porch and vestry, and has sittings for 200 persons: there is a brass by the chancel arch in memory of Lady Arabella Diana, wife of Sir Alexander Bannerman, 9th bart. d. 10 Feb. 1869, and in the churchyard is the grave of Sir Alexander Bannerman bart. of Elsick and Crimonmogate, d. 21 April, 1877. Crimonmogate is the seat of the Earl and Countess of Southesk; and Cairness is the property of Charles T. Gordon esq. D.L., J.P. The chief landowners are Charles T. Gordon esq. D.L., J.P. and the Countess of Southesk. The soil is sandy, but generally fertile. The acreage of the parish is 11,075; population in 1891, 1,726, and in 1901, 2,161 in the civil and 1,622 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ST. COMBS is a fishing village in the parish, with a terminal station, opened July 1st, 1903, on a light railway to Fraserburgh, on a branch of the Great North of Scotland line, and has a Mission hall. Population in 1901, 530.

CHARLESTOWN is a fishing village adjoining St. Combs.

LUMPHANAN is a parish and village with a station on the Deeside section of the Great North of Scotland railway, and is about 26 miles west from Aberdeen and 16 north-east from Ballater; the parish, which is about 6 miles in length and 4 in breadth, is in the Aberdeen small debt court district. Here are Established and United Free churches. In this district Macbeth is said to have been slain by Macduff in the year 1057; the spot on which tradition asserts the combat to have taken place is about a mile north from the kirk, on the brow of a hill, where a large cairn of stones (in the midst of which a stone coffin was found some time ago) has been raised to commemorate the event. The principal landowners are the Rt. Hon. Robert Farquharson P.C., D.L., J.P., M.D. of Finzean, Aboyne, Lord Sempill and the trustees of the late Robert Smith esq. The parish consists of 8,754 acres; rateable value, £5,551; population in 1891, 992, and in 1901, 966.

NEW MACHAR is a parish in the district of Buchan, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway; it is 5 miles in length by 2½ in breadth, and is in the Aberdeen poor combination and small debt court district. The village is 10 miles north-north-west from Aberdeen, and has Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal Mission church of All Saints, at White-rashes, built in 1859, and consecrated in 1880, will seat 100 persons. The Kingseat Asylum of the Aberdeen City Lunacy Board, situated here, and opened in 1904, was erected at a cost of about £132,000 and will hold 700 patients. The country is generally rather flat and the soil is mostly arable, with several patches of mossy land, while in the southern quarter are some fine plantations. Near the boundary of Old Machar is a small lake called Bishop's Loch, in which is an island with the ruins of a castle once belonging to the Bishops of Aberdeen. The area is 9,308 acres; rateable value, £13,588; population 1901, 1,393 civil and 1,363 ecclesiastical.

OLD MELDRUM is a police burgh and market town in the civil parish of Meldrum, pleasantly situated on the road from Aberdeen to Banff, 18 miles north-west from the former, 27 south-east from the latter and 5 north-east from Inverurie, with a terminal station of the Great North of Scotland railway on a branch from Inverurie. The streets and dwellings are irregularly laid out, but of late have been much improved. Meldrum was constituted a burgh of barony in the year 1672, under the jurisdiction of two bailies, and was elevated a police burgh in 1893. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Matthew will seat 180 persons; the Rev. Alexander McPherson has been rector since 1906. The Town Hall has a tower with an illuminated clock, and there is a Public Library. The North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited has branches in the town, and there is an extensive distillery and a brewery. The district is partly arable and partly pastoral; the soil of the southern portion is fertile, but that of the northern shallow and less fruitful. Acreage of the parish, 8,102; rateable value, burghal £3,672, landward £6,346; population in 1891, 2,019, and in 1901, 1,855. The area of the burgh is 186 acres; population in 1901, 1,197.

Post, T. & M. O. Office; Mrs. Elsie Rennie, sub-postmistress. Letters should have Aberdeenshire added. Deliveries, 8 & 11.10 a.m. & 3 (to callers only) & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 7.5 & 8.40 a.m. & 1.15, 3.35 & 5.40 p.m.; Sunday dispatch, 9 a.m.; Sunday delivery (to callers), 8 to 10 a.m.

METHLICK is a parish and village, 6 miles west from Arnage station on the Aberdeen and Peterhead section of the Great North of Scotland railway, about 7½ miles east-south-east from Fyvie, the same distance north from Old Meldrum, 14 south-east from Turriff and 21 north-west from Aberdeen; the parish is bounded by Fyvie on the west, New Deer on the north, Savoch and Ellon on the east and Tarves on the south; it extends 9 miles in length by upwards of 4 in breadth, and is in Buchan poor combination and Ellon small debt court. The district is intersected throughout its extent from the north-west to the south-east by the river Ythan, on the banks of which are some thriving plantations. Close to the village the river is crossed by an iron bridge. The parish church, built by the Earl of Aberdeen in 1867, at a cost of over £4,000, is a cruciform structure in the Norman Gothic style, after plans by Messrs. Brown and Wardrop, Edinburgh, and consists of nave, transept, eastern apse, vestry and a saddle-back tower: there are sittings for 920 persons. The old church, built in 1780, is now in ruins and covered with ivy; in the old churchyard is the mausoleum of the Hamilton-Gordon family, Earls of Aberdeen. There is also a United Free church, two branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and an Institute. The Beaton Hall, erected in 1909 at a cost of £2,000, provided by James Beaton esq. contains a hall to seat 600 persons, a billiard room, dining room and kitchen. Two miles from the village is Haddo House, a seat of the Earl of Aberdeen K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G. (Lord Lieutenant of Ireland), lord lieutenant of the county and sole heritor of the parish; the mansion is in the Palladian style, but has been frequently added to and altered, the present earl having built a chapel on the north side and made large additions on the south side; surrounding it are extensive parks, finely wooded. Fairs formerly held in the village on the first Thursday after the 11th of May and the first Wednesday after the 18th of November, are now obsolete. Area, 13,967 acres; rateable value, £ ; population of the parish in 1891, 2,067, and in 1901, 1,692 in the civil and 1,789 in the ecclesiastical parish.

MONYMUSK is a parish and village 9 miles south-west from Inverurie, with a station about half a mile distant, on the Kintore and Alford branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, and another at Tillyfourie, on the same branch, 3 miles distant. The parish is about 6 miles long, by from 4 to 6 broad, and is in the small debt court district of Aberdeen. Monymusk House, the property of Sir Arthur Henry Grant bart. D.L., J.P. and the residence of Capt. Arthur Grant D.S.O., J.P. is on the right bank of the Don, environed by fine plantations; the estate is remarkable for its fine timber, and some of the larch and fir trees near the river are of unusual size. Pitfichie Castle, now in ruins, is finely situated. The village is built in the form of a square, and on one side stands the parish church, a part of which is believed to have been erected about the time of Malcolm Canmore: there was formerly an ancient priory beside it. The Episcopal church, built in 1801, will seat 150 persons; the rectory, value £150, has been held since 1910 by the Rev. John Elphinstone Fyffe M.A. of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford. Area, 10,728 acres; rateable value, £8,095; population in 1891, 1,025, and in 1901, 1,106.

NEWHILLS is a parish of an irregular hexagonal form, 6½ miles in diameter, and distant from Aberdeen 5 miles north-west, the river Don forming its boundary on the north-east; it is in the Aberdeen small debt court district, and has an established church in the centre of the parish and a United Free church at KINGSWELLS. The general appearance of the country is hilly, and towards the west becomes mountains. Here is Summerfield Isolation Hospital, erected in 1900, containing 16 beds and 12 cots. The Aberdeen Poor House, at Oldmill, erected in 1906-7, at a cost of over £130,000, is in the parish. A Public Hall was erected at KINGSWELLS in 1901.

BUCKSBURN is a village in the above parish, 3½ miles from Aberdeen, and has a United Free church; here also is the Episcopal church of St. Machar, built in 1880, and seating 320 persons; the rectory, net value £150, has been held since 1874 by the Very Rev. James Wiseman D.D. of Aberdeen University, who is also Dean of Aberdeen and Orkney. Near the village are the extensive paper mills of Messrs. Alexander Pirie and Sons Limited and Messrs. Charles Davidson and Sons Limited BANKHEAD and Stoneywood are also small villages adjoining, at each of which is a station, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and at Bankhead is Stoneywood Established church. In the parish are also large granite quarries. The area is 10,322 acres: rateable value, £34,084; population in 1891, 5,626, and in 1901, 5,763, viz.:—Bucksburn Town, 2,231; Landward, 3,522.

PETERCULTER is a parish about 8 miles in length and 4 in breadth, and its village is 7½ miles south-west from Aberdeen and has a station, called "Culter,"
on the Deeside section of the Great North of Scotland railway. The surface is rugged and uneven, with hills and valleys, rocky eminences and marshy flats interspersed.
On the banks of the Dee and its tributary streams, however, the soil is tolerably fertile. On the summit of the hills of Oldtown are the remains of a rectangular encampment. In the parish are Established and United Free churches. There are paper mills, which employ a number of hands. The area of the parish is 12,776 acres; rateable value, £52,760; population (1901), 4,940, ecclesiastical parish, 2,408, and the population of Culter village (in this parish) in 1901 was 1,068.

CULTS and BIELDSIDE are pleasant suburbs of Aberdeen, in the parish of Peterculter, on the north bank of the Dee,
on the road to Ballater, distant from Aberdeen 4 miles south-west, with four stations on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, called respectively Bielside, Cults, West Cults and Pitfodels. At BIELDSIDE is the Episcopal church of St. Devenick; the Rev. Arthur Austin Foster M.A. of Edinburgh University, has been rector since 1900. Countess-wells House is the residence of Sydney James Gammell esq. J.P. In the vicinity are many handsome villas and cottages, chiefly the residences of those engaged in business in Aberdeen. Here is a convalescent hospital in connection with the Royal Infirmary, Aberdeen. In 1897 a park was presented to Cults by David Allan esq. to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

MURTLE and MILLETIMBER are villages
on the road to Aberdeen, both with stations on the Deeside railway. Culter House is the residence of Theodore Crombie esq.

PETERHEAD,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF BUCHANHAVEN, BURNHAVEN, INVERNETTIE AND INVERUGIE.

PETERHEAD is a considerable sea-port town, burgh of barony, and parish, within the district of Buchan, and is the terminus of the Formartine and Buchan section of the Great North of Scotland railway, opened 1862. It is miles north-by-west of Edinburgh. 54 south-east of Banff, 33 north-east of Aberdeen, 18 south-south-east of Fraserburgh and 584 from London. It is situated upon a peninsula (the most easterly point of Scotland), about a mile south of the mouth of the river Ugie, the isthmus between the peninsula and the mainland being only eight hundred yards wide. The town is built in the form of a cross and is divided into four districts called the Kirk-town, Roanheads, Keith Inch and Peterhead proper. The houses are built of granite, and the town is lighted with gas and supplied with excellent spring water. In years gone by the medicinal wells of Peterhead were much frequented; the waters are chalybeate and abundant both in the town and neighbourhood. Fossil shells in great quantities and of various kinds are found in this locality, at a height of 20 or 30 feet above the level of the sea, some being of kinds not met with in an original state; many curious pebbles also may be picked up on the shore. The Court House, in Queen street, is a building of granite, and here the sheriff's court is held every Friday, except the last in each month. The Town House, at the head of the principal street, is an elegant edifice, with a spire 129 feet high and an illuminated clock, and contains the council chamber. The Music Hall buildings comprise upper and lower halls, small halls and convenient ante-rooms, with shops on the ground floor. The Police Offices, in Merchant street, erected in 1899, are also of granite. Peterhead was founded and erected into a burgh of barony by George,

Earl Marischal, in the year 1593; but in 1715 it was forfeited by this family in consequence of their adherence to the unfortunate house of Stuart, and purchased in 1726, with the neighbouring lands, by the York Building Co. but on the dissolution of the company, it was bought by the trustees or governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital, Edinburgh (now called the Merchant Company Education Board), for £3,000, who are still the superiors.

The town is governed by a provost and magistrates and a town council. The nomination of the magistrates was, by charter, vested in the superiors of the town and the magistrates and councillors, the latter of whom were formerly elected by a majority of the feuars, but since the elective franchise was conferred upon the burgh the magistrates and councillors are elected by the householders therein. The town now enjoys the privileges of a parliamentary burgh, and in conjunction with Kintore, Elgin, Cullen, Banff and Inverurie, returns one member to Parliament for the Elgin district of burghs, and when, in 1868, the county of Aberdeen was separated into Eastern and Western parliamentary divisions, each returning one member to Parliament, Peterhead was created the returning burgh for the Eastern division, and is known as the capital of Buchan or East Aberdeenshire, but the electoral returns are now made in Aberdeen. In front of the Town Hall and facing the main street, on a pedestal of granite, stands a statue in bronze of Field-Marshal James Francis Edward Keith, born at Inverugie, 1696; killed at the battle of Hochkirchen, 14 October, 1758. This statue was presented by William I. King of Prussia, to the Town of Peterhead, in August, 1868.

For a long series of years the harbours of Peterhead have been held to be of great importance. So early as 1661, in the first Parliament of King Charles II. an Act was passed "for a contribution for repairing the harbours of Peterhead." In 1705 an Act of the Scottish Privy Council was obtained for a voluntary contribution within all the parish churches of the three Lothians and west of the Forth, for building and repairing these harbours; and in 1729, and again in 1739, the convention of royal burghs authorised a voluntary contribution throughout all the royal burghs in Scotland for the same purpose. In 1807, and again in 1827, Acts of Parliament were obtained for their further improvements. In recent years very large sums have been expended on the harbours, and Peterhead now possesses the finest and safest harbours to be found along the whole of the east coast of Scotland. The harbours are managed by a rotary board of trustees, a certain number of whom are elected annually from among the proprietors of lands and heritages in the burgh, the ship owners and shore due ratepayers. The revenue can be applied only to the maintenance of the harbours, the payment of the interest of the debt, and the liquidation of the principal. In 1884 Peterhead was selected as the site of a national harbour of refuge for the Scotch coast, to be constructed by convict labour, and a large convict prison has since been erected, to which all Scotch convicts are now drafted. The South Bay, which is the site of the projected harbour of refuge, has good anchorage. Peterhead possesses both north and south harbours, respectively of 14½ and 7 acres in extent, communicating by means of a canal or channel, over which is a cast-iron swing bridge, upon the construction of which upwards of £5,000 was expended. In the north harhour there are two graving or dry docks, and at the entrance to both harbours are good lighthouses. During 1906-7 considerable improvements and extensions were made, both in the south and north harbours and at Port Henry, a sum of £80,000 having been spent on deepening and improving the harbours, with a view of allowing the large fleet of steam drifters belonging to the port to enter or leave the harbours at all states of the tide. The total number of British and foreign vessels entered with cargoes and in ballast in 1910 was 60, tonnage, 18,193; the number cleared was 90 of 23,451 tons; in the general coasting trade 592 entered, 65,040 tons; 563 cleared, tonnage, 48,869. The number of sailing and steam vessels registered under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, on Dec. 31, 1910, was 140 of 4,293 tons net register. The number of fishing boats registered as belonging to this port under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, on Dec. 31, 1910, was 321, requiring 1,318 men and boys to work them. In addition about 1,200 regular fishermen (men and boys) are resident within the limits of the port, and 400 are occasionally employed in sea fishing. Fishing boats and their implements are to be marked with the letters P. D. The revenue of the harbours for the year ending March 1st, 1911, is estimated at £17,900. The total amount of the imports in 1910 was £35,708, and of exports of British and foreign produce £237,947, of which the value of herrings was £237,900. The whale and seal fisheries, owing to the exhaustion of the Arctic fishing grounds, are now practically extinct. The herring fishery, commenced here in 1818 by a joint stock company, is now important. The value of the fish landed at Peterhead in 1909 was £240,657, and cured £378,588. Independent of the fishing and shipping trades, the town enjoys a good local trade. There are also two extensive and prosperous granite polishing establishments, employing upwards of 100 men, and Peterhead granite has attained considerable popularity throughout the world. The quarries are largely worked by Aberdeen polishing firms.

The parish church, standing at the junction of the south and west roads, founded in 1804 and opened in 1806, is a plain edifice of stone, with a tower containing an illuminated clock; a new organ was provided in 1911 at a cost of £1,000; the church has sittings for about 1,500 persons.

The East church (quoad sacra), in Queen street, was erected in 1877, and is Gothic in style, and affords about 600 sittings.

The Episcopal church of St. Peter, built in 1814, is also in the Gothic style, and affords sittings for 630 persons; the Rev. John Wilkinson has been rector since 1908. There are also three United Free churches, Baptist, Congregational, Wesleyan and Roman Catholic chapels, and two Mission halls. A hall in connection with the Congregational chapel was erected in 1910.

The Public Cemetery was laid out and enclosed by the governors of the Merchant Maiden Hospital (now called the Merchant Maiden Company Education Board), Edinburgh, who are proprietors of the estate at Peterhead.

The Post Office, in Marischal street, erected in 1910, is a building of granite.

The Reading Society, established in 1808, has now (1911) a library of over 6,000 volumes. The Public Libraries Act was adopted in 1890, and a building erected in 1892 in St. Peter street, at a cost of about £6,000, which contains the Arbuthnot Museum and Art Gallery, a reading room, lending library of over 15,000 volumes, and reference library; the museum, founded by the late Adam Arbuthnot esq. by whom it was bequeathed to the town, contains a great variety of specimens from the animal and mineral kingdoms, and a good collection of coins; the museum is under the care and management of the Public Library Committee; the foundation stone was laid 8th August, 1891, by Mrs. Carnegie, wife of Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, who contributed over £1,000 to the funds of the building.

The golf course on South road is public and free to all. The golf course of 18 holes at Craigewan is pleasantly situated on the north bank of the river Ugie, and has a commodious club house.

Public Baths were re-constructed in 1899, in Lodge walk, and comprise two swimming ponds and Turkish, Russian and slipper baths. Two newspapers are published here—the "Peterhead Sentinel," established in 1896, and the "Buchar Observer;" the "Sentinel" is published on Saturdays, and the "Observer" on Tuesdays. The market is held on Friday and the fairs on the third Tuesday in May and the second Tuesday in November. The area of the parish is 9,170 acres; the assessable value of the burgh is £56,813, and of the landward part of the parish, £18,273; total, £75,086. The population of the burgh in 1891 was 12,226 and in 1901, 11,794 (including 31 on board ships); the total population of the parish in 1901 was 15,146, which includes 274 inmates and 261 officials and their families in the Convict Prison. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: Peterhead (parish church), 7,922; East Church, 4,838.

BUCHANHAVEN is a small fishing village on the east coast, within the burgh of Peterhead and about half a mile distant. Here is situated the Infectious Diseases Hospital, built in 1905, and containing 14 beds and a house for the matron.

BURNHAVEN and INVERNETTIE are two small villages in the parish of Peterhead, about halfway between that town and Boddam. At Invernettie are the very extensive works of the Glenugie Distillery. The nearest railway station is at Peterhead, 2 miles distant.

INVERUGIE is a village, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 2½ miles west from Peterhead. Inverugie Castle was the birthplace, in 1696, of James Francis Edward Keith, field-marshal in the Prussian service. The ruined castle of Ravenseraig, standing on a rock on the opposite side of the river, is a good specimen of the ancient Scottish baronial style of the 13th century.

PITCAPLE, see CHAPEL OF GARIOCH.
 PITSLIGO, see ROSEHEARTY.

NEW PITSLIGO is a quoad sacra parish formed in 1853 from Aberdeen, New Deer, Strichen and Tyrie, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village is about 4 miles north-west from Brucklay station and 4 miles west from Strichen station, both on the Great North of Scotland railway, and 12 south-west from Fraserburgh, and was founded in 1787 by Sir William Forbes. Pillow lace is made here. Near the village are several good quarries of granite, largely used for building purposes in Buchan district. The Established church, standing on the hill of Turlandie, was erected in 1804, and rebuilt in 1853, and is a plain edifice of stone with a belfry; there are sittings for 850 persons. The United Free church, built about 1846, is also of stone and will seat 350 persons. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist was erected in 1871, on the site of the former building, at a cost of about £4,000, from designs by Mr. George E. Street B.A.; it is in the Early English style and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, transept and crypt, and has sittings for 450 persons. The Congregational chapel, built in 1862, has sittings for 250 persons. There is a Public Hall and Library, a Freemasons' Hall, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The population in 1891 was 2,433, and in 1901, 3,332 in the ecclesiastical parish and 1,674 in the village.

RHYNIE and ESSIE form a united parish in the district of Strathbogie, comprehending an area of 30 square miles, and bounded on the north by the barony of Gartly, on the south by Auchindoir and on the west by Cabrach, in the Huntly small debt court district. The centre may be about 10 miles south from Huntly. The town is 4 miles south from Gartly station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and has established and United Free churches and a Congregational chapel. The soil is rich and fertile on the banks of the Bogie; towards the hills it is light and gravelly, yet productive. Feeding markets are held on the Mondays before the 28th of May and the 28th November, and cattle markets from November to May, on the Saturday before the fourth Monday in each month, and the day after Keith in September and the day after Kennethment in October. The most important object of antiquity in this parish is a vitrified fort on the top of Noth Hill. The area is 12,897 acres; rateable value, £1,841; population in 1891, 1,043, and in 1901, 1,005 in the parish and 476 in the village of Rhyne. Post, T. & M. O. ROSEHEARTY AND PITSLIGO PARISH,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF SANDHAVEN, PITTLIE AND ARDLAW.

ROSEHEARTY, a maritime village and formerly a burgh of barony, is now a police burgh under the Act of 1892, in the parish of Pitsligo, Buchan poor combination and Fraserburgh small debt court, 4½ miles west from Fraserburgh and 18 east from Banff. It has two good harbours, capable of admitting vessels of from 80 to 150 tons. The chief imports are coals and salt, and the chief export fish. There were on December 31, 1909, 56 fishing boats registered here, employing 300 men and boys. Although inconsiderable in size, it was a burgh of barony by charter of Charles II. dated July 13th, 1681. Here is an Established church, Mission Hall, a United Free Church, a Fishermen's Hall, Coastguard station, a Golf club and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The area of the burgh is 260 acres; rateable value, £2,675; the population in 1901 was 1,185.

Post, T. & M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office; Alexander Mitchell, postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. Deliveries, 10.20 a.m. & 4.20 p.m.; dispatches, 8 & 9.50 a.m. & 5.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery. Wall Letter Box, Peat hill, cleared 2.15 p.m. week days only.

PITSLIGO parish lies in the district of Buchan, on the sea coast, betwixt New Aberdeen on the west and Fraserburgh on the east, commencing about 2 miles west of Kincaid Head. The land is generally fertile, and the face of the country level. The Established Church, originally built in 1632, and rebuilt in 1890, is a plain edifice of granite in the Gothic style; in the Pitsligo aisle is a carved oak screen, removed from the old church, where it was placed in 1634 by Alexander, first Lord Forbes of Pitsligo; the aisle and the pulpit are panelled with carved woodwork, also taken from the old church; there are sittings for 520 persons. Pitsligo Castle, formerly the seat of the Barons Forbes of Pitsligo, is an ancient structure, now in ruins, surrounded with extensive gardens. Pittulie Castle, half-a-mile east, once in possession of the Cumyn family, is also now in ruins. The labouring portion of the population are principally employed in fishing. The area of Pitsligo civil parish is 4,641 acres; rateable value, £9,020; the population of the latter in 1901 was 1,122, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,307.

SANDHAVEN and Pittulie are two small villages, both situated between Kincaid Head and Roseheart Point, inhabited chiefly by fishermen. At Sandhaven are Established Mission and United Free Churches. There are 25 fishing boats registered here, employing 70 men and boys. At Sandhaven is a good harbour, which has been considerably enlarged and improved, £20,000 having been expended on it by the proprietor, Lord Clinton, of Fettercairn, Kincardineshire. The population in 1901 was 617.

ARDLAW is a small hamlet in this parish.

Post & T. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Sandhaven; Peter Slessor Third, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. Delivery, 9.45 a.m.; dispatches, 10.20 a.m. & 5.55 p.m. No Sunday delivery. The nearest money order office is at Fraserburgh.

Post Office, Ardlaw; Lewis Ironside, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Fraserburgh. Delivery, 11.5 a.m.; dispatch, 5.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery. Roseheart is the nearest money order office & Tyrie the nearest telegraph office, 2 miles distant.

ST. FERGUS is a pariah and village on the north-east coast of Aberdeenshire, in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. It is bounded on the east by the North Sea and on the south by the small river Ugie, which separates it from Peterhead. The village is 5 miles north from Peterhead terminal station on a branch from Maud Junction on the Great North of Scotland railway, and 13 south-east from Fraserburgh. The Established church, built in 1849, is a plain building of stone with a belfry at the west end, and affords sittings for 677 persons. There is also a United Free church. James Francis Edward Keith, field-marshal in the Prussian service, killed at Hochkirch, 14 Oct. 1758, and of whom a statue in bronze was presented to the town of Peterhead by King William I. of Prussia, was born in 1696 at Invergie Castle, the ruins of which stand in a bend of the river. Acreage of the parish, 8,856; assessable value, £6,432; population in 1891, 1,318, and in 1901, 1,194.

SLAINS (which includes the ancient parish of Forvie) is a parish and village on the sea coast, about 5 miles east from the burgh of Ellon. On the old turnpike road between Aberdeen and Peterhead, and is bounded on the east by the German Ocean, the coast here being rocky, with many caves. One of which is 200 feet in length. Here is an Established church, erected in 1806.

FORVIE was once a parish, and see the ruins of the old church may still be seen there. A sandy desert, partly covered with bent, lies directly south from Collieston, and in the immediate neighbourhood. The ruins of Slains Castle, dismantled about 1594, stand on a rock 120 feet above the sea and about 2 miles north of St. Catharine's Duh, where it is supposed that the "St. Catharine," one of the ships of the Spanish Armada, was wrecked in 1588. North-west of the village is a small loch. The area is 9,124 acres; rateable value, £6,922; population in 1891, 1,279, and in 1901, 936.

COLLIESTON and OLDCASTLE are villages, largely frequented by visitors in summer for sea bathing; the former has a coastguard station; a harbour has also been constructed.

STRICHEN is a parish and village, with a station on the Elton and Fraserburgh section of the Great North of Scotland railway, and is 3 3/4 miles north of Aberdeen, 20 east of Banff, 16 west-by-north from Turriff, 15 north-by-west from Peterhead and 9 south from Fraserburgh, situated on the north bank of the Ugie, and in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The village is well supplied with water, and the streets are lighted with gas by a company. The Established church, built in 1799, and re-modelled and re-seated internally about 1884, is a plain edifice of stone, and has sittings for 900 persons. The Episcopal church of All Saints, built in 1801, consecrated in 1868, and enlarged and re-consecrated in 1891, is a small building in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave, and has sittings for 200 persons. The United Free church, opened in July, 1894, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 400 persons. The Town House is a structure erected in the year 1816 by the late Mrs. Fraser, of Strichen, at an expense of £2,000. There is also a Public Library, and two branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. On the side of Mormond hill in this parish are the figures of a horse and a stag, formed by large pieces of stone, which have a singular effect at a distance. Upon the same hill is a hunting lodge, on which is inscribed, "This hunter's lodge, Rob Gibb commands." An auction mart for cattle is held weekly on Monday. Blankets and woollen goods are made here. Acreage of parish, 10,183; population in 1891, 2,171, and, including Technuiry, 2,552, and in 1901, 2,313; ecclesiastical parish in 1891, 1,902, and in 1901, 1,729, and village, 1,025.

The district of TECHNUIRY, which was until 1890 part of the parish of Fraserburgh, was transferred in that year by the Boundary Commissioners to the parish of Strichen; it contains a school under the management of the School Board of Strichen; it is also used as a preaching station in connection with the Established church of Fraserburgh.

Post, T. M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office (letters should have Aberdeenshire added to them), High street; Mrs. Isabella Elrick, sub-postmistress. Deliveries. 7.55 & 9.45 a.m. & 6.20 p.m.; despatches, 7.10 a.m. & 1.34 & 7.10 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters.

STUARTFIELD, see OLD DEER.

TARLAND is a parish in the Western division of the county and in the Aberdeen small debt court district. The village, which is a burgh of barony, is 31 miles west from Aberdeen, 5½ north-west from Aboyne and 11 north-north-east from Ballater, and is situated nearly in the centre of the district of Cromar, the nearest railway stations being Aboyne, 6 miles, and Dinnet, 5 miles distant, both on the Great North of Scotland railway. The lands about here are mostly level, but the greater proportion of the parish is mountainous, and the seasons are cold; the woods which have been planted will, however, be the means of materially ameliorating the latter. A small rivulet falls into the river Dee near Aboyne. Here are Established and United Free churches, and branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited are established in the burgh. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in January, second Wednesday in March, third Wednesday in May, first Wednesday in June, Friday after St. Sairs in July, third Wednesday in November and first Wednesday in December. The Earl of Aberdeen K.T., G.C.M.G., P.C., P.S.A. is the principal landowner. Acreage, 16,303; rateable value, £4,955; population in 1891, 688, and in 1901 2,239. The population of Tarland-Migvie ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 975, and of the village of Tarland, 367.

TARVES is a parish and village, lying between Ellon and Old Meldrum, the village being 4½ miles north-east distant from the latter place, and in Buchan poor combination. The nearest stations are Old Meldrum terminal station, 5 miles distant, on a branch from Inverurie of the Great North of Scotland railway and Uday, 6 miles distant, on the Dyce and Ellon section of the same line. The parish is bounded by Methlick on the north and Old Meldrum on the west, and is watered in its eastern quarter by the river Ythan; its length is about 9 miles and its breadth 6, the general outline of the parish being flat but interspersed with some hills of inferior altitude. Here are Established and United Free churches and a public Free Library. The soil is diversified in its composition, but is for the most part fertile, and there are some fine plantations on the verge of the river. Craigdam is a hamlet in this parish. The area is 16,303 acres; rateable value, £4,989. Population in 1891, 2,344, and in 1901, 2,239; ecclesiastical parish, 1,644.

TURRIFF is a free burgh of barony, the seat of a presbytery and the capital of the parish of that name, with a station on the Inverramsay and Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway, 34½ miles north-north-west of Old Meldrum and 11 south-south-east of Banff; it is situated on a tributary stream of the Deveron and near that river, and is in Buchan poor combination. A charter, dated 10th March, 1511, was granted by James IV. in favour of Thomas Dickson, prebend of Turriff, by which the inhabitants were entitled to hold a weekly market on the Sabbath day, and three fairs annually, each to continue eight days. Justice of peace and police courts are held in the Town Hall when required. In 1858 the householders adopted certain provisions of the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act of 1850, and latterly almost the entire provisions of the more recent Act of 1852, but the affairs of the
