burgh are now regulated and administered under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, by nine commissioners of police, three of whom are elected annually. These commissioners elect from their own number a provost and two junior magistrates, who in their turn appoint a procurator fiscal, and within their jurisdiction exercise in all cases of petty offences the functions of sheriff and magistrates of police. The town is clean and neat, and lighted with gas by a private company, formed in 1837. The parish church, built in 1784, is a plain edifice of stone, slightly Gothic in style, and has sittings for 1,500 persons. The church of Turriff belonged in the Middle Ages to the Abbey of Arbroath, and the former church, now in ruins, stands on the site of an earlier fabric. The Episcopal church of St. Congan, built in 1862, consists of chancel, nave and a tower with spire 80 feet high; the windows are stained, and there are sittings for 300 persons; the Rev. Garden Llanloe Duff M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1888. The Free church, built in 1844, is a plain building of stone, and has sittings for 500 persons; the manse adjoins the church, and has a good garden. There is also a Parish Church Hall, built in 1894, at a cost of £1,500, with sittings for 600 persons, and the Episcopal Church Hall, erected in 1897, at a cost of £350, with 400 sittings; both are available for all descriptions of public meetings. The Town Hall, a plain building of stone, was erected in 1898, at a cost of £1,100; it will hold 600 persons and is the property of a limited liability company. The Municipal Buildings in High street, erected in 1908-9 at the cost of the late Provost Hutecheon, are of red stone and are used for Town Council meetings &c. The Cottage Hospital was erected by the Commissioners of the burgh and the Turriff district committee of the County Council, for the joint use of the burgh and district, at a cost of £2,000; it contains 16 beds, and is used for infectious diseases. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, two of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The premises of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, in Main street, erected at a cost of about £2,000, are of red sandstone, in the old Scotch style, and include a tower containing a clock with three dials. The public park, on the old Market hill, over 11 acres in area, was purchased by the late Provost Hutecheon, at a cost of £400, and presented by him to the burgh in 1899. The Haughs, situated between the town and the railway station, and extending over 44 acres, were taken over, about 1875, from the Earl of Fife on an improving lease and reclaimed from a bog state, and in 1898 purchased from the present superiors of the burgh, at a cost of £1,600; the land is at present under the control of the Haughs Association, but will eventually become the property of the burgh. The Trot of Turriff was fought between the Covenanters and Royalists in 1639, and was the first blood shed in the great Civil war. Within the parish are the ruins of Towie Barclay Castle, the seat of the ancient family of Barclay, the banqueting hall of which is still in perfect preservation. Prince Michael Barclay De Tolly, the famous Russian general, born in Livonia in 1755, but of this family, led the Russian army on the occasion of Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Moscow in Oct. 1812. The chief landowners are Ainslie D. Ainslie esq. D.L., J.P. of Delgaty Castle; Garden A. Duff esq. D.L., J.P. of Hatton Castle; Henry A. Farquhar-Spottiswood esq. J.P. of Muirensk; William J. Woodman Smith esq. of Leithers; Lt.-Col. Francis E. R. Pollard-Urquhart, Craigston Castle; John Adam Milne esq. J.P. of Ardmiddle and Sir George William Abercromby bart. of Birkenbog and Forglen. Messrs. Alexander and Francis George Macduff, of Banff and Macduff, are the proprietors of the burgh. Fairs are held on the second and fourth Wednesday in each month, but these are now obsolete; those now held are on Saturday before the 27th of May (feeling market) and Saturday before the 23rd of November; cattle markets and auction sales are held every Tuesday and Thursday. The area of the parish is 18,386 acres; rateable value, £28,276; population in 1901, 4,139, of which the town contained 2,273.

TYRIE is a parish and village $5\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Fraserburgh terminal station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The parish is about 10 miles in length by $4\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth, and in Buchan poor combination and Peterhead small debt court. The surface is agreeably diversified with hill and dale, heath, moss, meadow, corn land and grass parks. On the northern verge of the parish is the old church of Tyrie, an ancient structure, supposed to have been originally erected about the year 1004, when the Thane of Buchan routed the Danish army upon the neighbouring eminences. The present church, built in 1800, is a small edifice of stone, with an eastern apse, added in 1903 at a cost of £800, and will seat about 300 persons. The Episcopal Mission church of St. David, at Boyndlie, affords 130 sittings, and is attached to Strichen. The area of the parish is 11,182 acres; rateable value, £14,537; the population of the entire parish of Tyrie in 1891 was 2,843, and in 1901, 2,742 (of which 1,995 belong to New Pitsligo, which see); ecclesiastical parish, 747.

Boyndlie is a part of the parish of Tyrie, and is a large farming district. Boyndlie is the seat of John Charles Matthias Ogilvie-Forbes esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. The nearest railway station is Strichen, distant 5 miles south.

ARGYLLSHIRE,

Or, as is frequently written, Argyleshire, and known to the Latin geographers as "Argathella," is a large county in the south-western extremity of the Highlands, the second largest county in Scotland, and third largest in the United Kingdom, extending 115 miles from north, near Loch Eil, to the southern point Sanda, an island lying off the Mull of Cantyre, with a width, excluding its most westerly islands, of about 70 miles. It is bounded on the north by Inverness, east by Perth, Dumbarton, Renfrew, Bute and Ayr, and on the south and west by the sea; its coast is very much indented by bays, inlets and sea lochs, and the coastline measures nearly 700 miles: this includes the numerous islands belonging to this county, of which the largest are Islay, Jura and Mull. The area comprises 1,990,471 acres of land and 35,311 of water. The population in 1891 was 74,085, and in 1901, 73,842 (36,177 males and 37,465 females); the inhabited houses were 15,491 in 1891, and in 1901, 15,886.

The early history is to some extent that of the kingdom of Scotland. The Scots, who were reputed to be a Spanish sept, settled in Ireland, then known as Scotia, having in the third century sent out an expedition under Cairbre Ruadh, son of Conan II. king of the Scots; this army landed in Cantyre, in the county, and founded Dalruadhain (now Campbeltown), but the Scots were afterwards driven back to Ireland, only to return in the fifth century under Lorn Angus and Fergus, sons of Ere, from the first of whom a large division of the county took its name: these Scots, subsequently conquering the North and South Picts, and Strath Clyde Britons, became kings of what was from that period styled Scotia, or Scotland. Later on, when they moved their seat of government to a more central position, the county of Dalruadhain (or Argyll) fell under the dominion of the Macdonalds of the Isles, who assumed royal powers, holding parliaments, and enacting laws, until the Bruces brought the disorderly clans into some kind of subordination. The ancient inhabitants of the Highlands of Argyllshire prided themselves on their endurance of hunger and fatigue, and they were passionately fond of music and poetry. In former ages the western coast of Argyllshire was perpetually exposed to descents and depredations of the Danes and the Irish, who could not penetrate any considerable distance into the interior; if an enemy landed, or was seen hovering on the coast, in the course of a few hours the whole country was alarmed, and the men repaired to the shore completely armed. The men celebrated by Ossian were a militia, established in Argyllshire, for the purpose of defending the country in any sudden emergency. The Stone of Destiny, now in Westminster Abbey, London, on which the Scottish kings were crowned, was brought from Tara to Iona before being deposited at Scone, and it was in the Isle of Iona that Christianity was first introduced into Scotland.

Soil. Surface. Produce. Climate &c.—The surface of this county is like most other parts of the Highlands, mountainous. Glencoe and Glencoe are, perhaps, amongst the most picturesque valleys that can be found. The coast is rocky, but indented with navigable bays and islets, which afford good harbours for shipping. Its western coast, lying as it does clear of the northern extremity of Ireland, is exposed where not sheltered by outlying islands to the full force of the Atlantic. From the nature of the county, agriculture is not widespread, but in certain districts in Lorne, near Campbeltown, and in Islay, farming is favourably pursued. The staple corn crop is oats and barley, and large quantities of excellent potatoes are grown. The mountains feed numbers of sheep, and the cattle bred are of the hardy Highland type and reared for exportation to the Lowland markets. Limestone is abundant, and granite is occasionally met with, whilst near Campbeltown is worked a remarkably productive seam of coal. Lead is wrought in Islay, but the chief mineral is slate, of which there are several quarries, the most extensive being at Ballachulish, and in Easdale, Seil and Luine Islands. In the beginning of the eighteenth century, much of the natural wood was cut up and sold by the proprietors, at prices by no means proportionate to the injury perpetrated on the face of the country. The number of acres in tillage bears an insignificant proportion to those occupied by pasture, wood, hills, lakes and rivers. The climate of the lower parts of Argyllshire is mild and temperate, but in the upper inland districts the atmosphere is severe, and on the tops of many of the hills the snow often lies for months, giving the country a cheerless aspect, even in tolerably mild, open weather. In the valleys the air is of a more mild nature, these places being protected from the north and north-west winds, and having generally a southern exposure. The central districts are more subject to rains than the coast, from the proximity of high hills, whose summits attract and break the clouds from the Atlantic. The most considerable elevations in the county are:—Ben Starao, 3,541 feet; Stob Gabhar, 3,565; Ben Fhionnlaidh, 3,139; Ben Doirean, 3,523; Ben Cruachan, 3,611; Ben Soucaird, 3,053; Claeh Leathael, 3,602, all in the north-eastern district; Ben Inne, 3,313 feet and Ben Arther, 2,891, on the eastern border; Paps of Jura, 2,412 feet; Ben Resipol, 2,774; Ben Mere, 3,185; Ben Buy, 2,352, in the south and north-west.

According to the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," the chief crops are—Oats, 16,692 acres; barley or bere, 1,441; rye, 439; total corn crops, 19,097 acres; turnips and swedes, 5,615 acres; potatoes, 3,725; cabbage &c. 193; total green crops, 9,556; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 10,606 acres; (not for hay) 13,711; permanent pasture (for hay), 16,829 acres; (not for hay) 60,604; bare fallow, 354 acres. The total area of the county is 1,990,472 acres of land, of which 1,469,437 acres are mountain and health land (used for grazing), and 35,311 acres of water. The live stock in 1910 comprised 4,611 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,844; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 21,332; other cattle, 35,224; ewes kept for breeding, 371,639; other sheep, 464,728; sows kept for breeding, 539; other pigs, 4,236.

The only minerals raised in 1909 were, igneous rocks, 66,449 tons; limestone, 4,109 tons, and slate (from quarries), 13,259.

The Manufactures of Argyllshire are on a very small scale. The principal article made for exportation is whisky, which is of a remarkably fine quality. Campbeltown alone boasts about 20 distilleries, and there are others in several parts of the county, for which Glasgow is the depot. Among the other branches of industry may be named net and rope making, and the manufacture of woollen cloth and gunpowder, for which latter there are several extensive works. From the way that the county is intersected by lochs and other water ways, the communication between its insular and mainland portions has been greatly facilitated by steam navigation; and now a very considerable number of steam vessels are constantly employed conveying passengers and goods to and fro throughout the county, and in transporting produce to Glasgow. There is not, at the present day, a hay, a loch, or inlet, but there is a daily or a weekly communication with the Lowlands, and the several districts of the county. By this means the farmers are encouraged to fatten stock and adopt modern improvements in husbandry.

Fishing is also an industry of some importance. The number of boats registered in 1909 at the three fishing ports were—Campbeltown, 338, of 1,398 tons, employing 1,121 hands; Oban, 245, of 686 tons, employing 530, and Tarbert, 273, of 1,350 tons, employing 730, while 20 vessels equal to 987 tons were registered as being owned at Campbeltown.

Rivers, Lakes & Railways.—The county is well watered by rivers (none of which are very large), brooks and lochs, which abound with fish. Loch Fyne is celebrated as furnishing the best herrings of any found on the coast of Scotland, and it was estimated that there were caught in this arm of the sea from twenty to thirty thousand barrels annually; but the "take" has greatly fallen off in later years, the herring having deserted the loch, which has caused the fishing centre to be removed from Tarbert to Campbeltown. Loch Shiel is about 25 miles long, and contains salmon and sea trout. Loch Awe is a beautiful fresh water lake, about 28 miles long and from one to two broad, reckoned the most picturesque lake of any in the Highlands, and possesses many woody islets, among which are seen the ruins of several old castles. Its waters, which abound with salmon, trout and eel, discharge themselves into Loch Etive, a branch of the Atlantic Ocean, at Bonaw Ferry. There are many smaller lochs, some of them situated amidst grand and mountainous scenery. Loch Long is 24 miles in length, and is recorded to have been made use of by the Norwegian invaders. Loch Linnhe is really the beginning of the Caledonian canal.

The only railway is a branch of the Caledonian line from Tynrum, where the West Highland joins it, to Oban, on the Firth of Lorne, and the West Highland railway skirts the eastern border of the county, entering it twice for a short distance. There is a line from Oban to Ballachulish.

Divisions &c.—The county is divided into 6 districts—Argyll Proper, Cowal, Islay, Kintyre (or Cantyre), Lorne and Mull. Cowal is divided from Dumbartonshire by Loch Long, and bounded by Loch Fyne on the west; betwixt Loch Fyne and Loch Linnhe, and stretching away to the north, is Lorne; from which, on its south-west quarter, there extends in a southerly direction into the Irish Sea the peninsula of Kintyre. The islands of Mull, Jura and Islay are divided from the continent, or from each other, merely by narrow sounds, and may be taken from their proximity and accessibility as little else than portions of the mainland. There are other districts of inferior size within the principal ones—as Ardnurchan, the most westerly point of Sunart; Appin, a piece of Lorne hording on Loch Linnhe; Glenorchy, another portion of Lorne on its eastern side; and Knapdale, occupying a position between Kintyre and Nether Lorne.

There are 39 civil parishes, in which are 2 royal burghs, Inveraray and Campbeltown; quarter sessions are held at Inveraray, and small debt courts at Inveraray, Campbeltown, Oban, Dunoon, Tobermory, Lochgilphead and Bowmore (Islay); there are 70 ecclesiastical parishes, divided into 7 presbyteries, in the synod of Argyll. The county returns one member to Parliament, the constituency in 1911 being 11,572. The burghs of Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban, in connection with Ayr and Irvine (Ayr District of Burghs), return one member. The county gives the title of duke to the Duke of Argyll and of Marquess of Lorne (one of the county districts) to his eldest son. The Argyll title dates back to 1457, but the connection of the Campbells with the county is much older. The lordship of Campbell was elevated to the earldom of Argyll in 1457 by James III.; to a Marquisate in 1641 by Charles I. and to a Dukedom in 1701 by William III.

APPIN, or Port Appin, is a village on the shore of Loch Linnhe, 12 miles north from Oban and 35 north-west of Inveraray, in the united parish of Lismore and Appin and the poor combination of Lorne. There is a ferry here to Lismore island. The nearest railway station is at Appin, 3 miles distant, on the Oban and Ballachulish section of the Caledonian railway, and steamers also run from Glasgow to Airds pier, Appin. The parish is of great extent, chiefly occupied as grazing farms. The ruins of the old parish church, built in 1649, are still standing on the Strath of Appin, a little off the high road, a distance of 2 miles from Appin pier. The present parish church was opened in July, 1890. The Episcopal church of St. Cross, at Portnacroich, built in 1809, stands a short distance from Rose place, and will seat 120 persons; it is attached to St. Mary's, Glencreran, and in its churchyard rest the remains of the Stewarts of Fasnacloich. The United Free church, built in 1846, stands on the south side of the bay running in past the castle of Stalker up to Kenlochlaich. On a small island near Portnacroich, full 2 miles north, is the ancient and partly dilapidated castle of Stalker, which is nearly square, of considerable height, and was evidently been a place of some strength; though its area is not extensive, it occupies almost a moiety of the little islet on which it stands; it was once the seat of the Stewarts of Appin. Shuna island also contains the ruins of a castle. Appin House, the seat of R. A. Macalpine Downie esq. is about 5½ miles north, and stands in finely timbered grounds. About half a mile from the pier, situated in a park on the road to Shuan, is Airds House, the residence of Robert Lang Anderson esq. which commands a fine view of the head of Airds Bay. Beyond this, at a distance of a quarter of a mile, is Drimneil House; and near the village is Kenlochlaich House, the residence of D. H. Campbell-Munro esq. This parish includes Glenceo, for which see Ballachulish (South). A. K. Stewart esq.; Tom Bullough esq. Fasnacloich; Duncan H. Campbell-Munro esq.; the trustees of W. M'Alpine Leny esq. of Duro; Alexander P. Cameron esq. of Ardsheal House; John Montague Spencer-Stanhope esq. of Invercraan; Robert Lang Anderson esq. and John Macintyre, of Invernahole, are the principal landowners. The area of the parishes of Lismore and Appin is 92,656 acres; rateable value, £26,590; population in 1901, civil, 3,707, ecclesiastical, 940.

ARDCHATTAN & MUCKAIRN

form a united parish including Duirinish, Eriska and Innishonan islands, in the Lorne poor combination. Ardchattan, which is the kirktown, lies close to the north shore of Loch Etive, 5 miles north-east of Oban and 25 south of Fort William; the nearest railway stations are Connel Ferry, Taynuilt and Loch Awe, on the Oban and Callander section of the Caledonian system; the parish extends 25 miles from north to south by 13 in breadth, and is bounded west and north-west by Lismore and Appin, east by Glenorchy and south by Kilchrean and Kilniver, and is bisected from north-east to south-west by the river and Loch of Etive, and on the south of the loch are the remains of an ancient Benedictine priory, founded in 1232 by M'Coull, ancestor of the Lords of Lorne. Here Bruce is thought to have held a Gaelic council after the battle of Methven. The mountain Ben Cruachan, in the south-east of the parish, is 3,670 feet above the sea level and 20 miles in circumference at its base; the view from its summit includes the whole archipelago of the Western Isles from Islay to Skye. The Established church at Ardchattan, erected in 1836, at an expense of about £1,000, affords sittings for 400; here also is a United Free church. Archibald A. L. Campbell esq. of Lochnell; Ferguson Menteith Ogilvie esq. of Barcaldine, and Allan G. Cameron esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 114,916 acres; rateable value, £22,486; population in 1891 was 1,975, and in 1901 was 2,128; the population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: Ardchattan, 1,494; Muckairn, 632.

MUCKAIRN, besides being the joint civil parish with Ardchattan, gives its name to a quoad sacra parish, erected out of the original ecclesiastical parish of Ardchattan and Muckairn. The Established church was built at the expense of General D. Campbell, of Lochnell, in 1827, and there are United Free and Roman Catholic churches and a Baptist chapel. A rude block of granite, the first monument erected in Britain to the memory of Lord Nelson, stands here on an eminence.

TAYNUILT is a village, in the united parishes of Ardchattan and Muckairn, and has a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, about 13 miles east from Oban and about half a mile south of Loch Etive. Anglers can obtain fishing in the famous salmon river Awe. Two miles east of Taynuilt, where a stone bridge crosses the river Awe, is the scene of Sir Walter Scott's tale of the "Highland Widow," and 2 miles further is the Pass of Cruachan or Brander, where King Robert Bruce defeated Macdonald of Lorne in 1309.

ACH-NA-CLOICH, in this parish, about 9 miles from Oban, is a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway. A pier has been erected, from which a steamer runs to the head of Loch Etive during the summer.

ARDENTINNY, see DUNNOON.

ARDGOUR is a civil parish and village on the shore of Loch Linnhe, with a pier for steamers, 9 miles south from Fort William station on the North British railway and 3 west from Ballachulish. There are established churches at Ardgour and Kingairloch, and a reading and recreation room in Ardgour village. The old seat of the Macleans, Ardgour House, is about 1 mile west of the pier of Ardgour and near to the village of Olovullin. At Corran Ferry, where Loch Linnhe narrows to a quarter of a mile in breadth, a lighthouse has been erected. Ben Nevis is distinctly seen from here, and to the right there is a magnificent view of Glenceae.

KINGAIRLOCH is a small village in the parish of Ardgour, 16 miles south-west from Ardgour, and has an Established church and school.

The Earl of Morton, Conaglen House; Alexander J. H. MacLean esq. J.P.; William K. Gair esq. of Kilmalieu, and Herbert Strutt esq. of Kingairloch, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 80,600 acres; rateable value, £4,798; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 757, and in 1901, 547, and of the ecclesiastical, 470.

ARDNAMURCHAN is a parish at the north-western extremity of the county, in the poor combination of Mull; the parish is 26 miles from east to west by 7 in breadth; it is bounded by Loch Snartan on the south, Ardgour on the east and the sea on the north and west, and its coast is considered dangerous, the Atlantic breaking with full force on Ardnamurchan point, which lies exposed between the Islands of Rum and Coll. Upon the point a lighthouse has been erected by the Commissioners of Northern lights, which is of great service to navigation. At Ardnamurchan are Established, Free and United Free churches. The village of Strontian is in the quoad sacra parish of Strontian, partly in this parish and partly in Morven, at the eastern extremity of Loch Snartan, and has Established, Free and United Free churches. This place is about 20 miles south-west from Fort William station on the West Highland (North British) railway. At Strontian, fairs are held in May on Thursday before last Wednesday; June, on Friday after third Thursday (O.S.); and in October, on Thursday before last Wednesday. Kilchoan, near which are the ruins of Mingary Castle, is a village near the entrance to Loch Snartan, and has an inn, Dorlin House, the residence of Lord Howard of Gossop, is situated at Moildart, at the mouth of Loch Moildart, a hamlet in this parish. The soil of the parish is sterile, but feeds large flocks of sheep and cattle, and the hills are stated to be rich in minerals. The land from Acharacle to Ardnamurchan belongs to Charles Dunsell Rndd esq. of Castle Glenborrodale. The area of the entire parish comprises 109,402 acres; rateable value, £7,879; population in 1891 was 3,636, and in 1901, 1,952. The ecclesiastical parish of Strontian had a population in 1901 of 566; in Ardnamurchan in 1901, 1,914.

ARDRISHAIG is a quoad sacra parish and small seaport on Loch Fyne, at the southern mouth of the Crinan canal, which connects the Sound of Jura with Loch Fyne, and saves a detour round the mull of Cantyre; the canal is 9 miles in length, the northern entrance being at Crinan or the Sound of Jura. Ardrishaig is in the civil parish of South Knapdale and the small debt court district of Lochgilthead, to which place it serves as a port; it lies 20 miles south-west of Inveraray and 11 north of Tarbert. In addition to a breakwater of 400 yards in length, with a small lighthouse at its extremity, there is a commodious low-water pier and slip within the harbour, with a depth of 11 feet, erected in 1837 by the Commissioners of the Crinan canal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing and curing herrings. Steam packets pass through the canal on their way from Glasgow to all parts of the western coast, and by the Caledonian canal to Inverness. Here are Established and United Free churches. The "Royal" is a first-class hotel and posting house. The increased facilities of communication with the south have made this place a favourite coast resort. The rateable value (South Knapdale) is £17,815, and the Ardrishaig drainage and water district £5,448; in 1901 the population of the ecclesiastical parish was 1,378; the population of the village being 1,258 in 1891, and 1,285 in 1901.

BALLACHANTUIE, see KILLEAN AND KILKENZIE.

BALLACHULISH AND GLENCOE

BALLACHULISH (South) is a village and small port on the southern shore of Loch Leven, close to the entrance to the Loch from Loch Linne, in the civil parish of Lismore and Appin and the quoad sacra parish of St. Munda (Glencoe), 10 miles north-east of Appin, 23 north-east of Oban and 10 south of Fort William. Here is the terminus of the Ballachulish branch of Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway, which runs from Connel Ferry. On Eilean Munde, a small island opposite the village of Ballachulish, are the ruins of an old chapel, 50 feet long internally, and supposed to have been built by St. Mungo; it has three flat-headed windows and a doorway of similar character, but the west wall is gone; in the burying ground are some fine specimens of tomb slabs and broken crosses &c. At Ballachulish South Ferry is a hotel and posting house, and a station on the Connel and Ballachulish section of the Caledonian railway, and, about three-quarters of a mile distant, a pier, with waiting room &c.; here the steamers call, and a conveyance from the hotel awaits their arrival. At Ballachulish South are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of St. John, built in 1842 and consecrated in 1848, affords 380 sittings; the Rev. Dugald Macdonald has been rector since 1904. There are very extensive slate quarries at the foot of the Glencoe Hills, which employ about 500 men and boys. Ardsheal is the residence of Alexander P. Cameron esq. About a mile above the quarries, on the margin of Loch Leven, is Glencoe House, the residence of the Rt. Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. The population of Ballachulish in 1901 was 1,143, and of ecclesiastical parish of St. Munda (Glencoe) 1,718.

GLENCOE is a wild and picturesque mountain pass, on the road from Ballachulish to Dumbarton, and is historically celebrated as being the spot where the massacre of the Macdonalds by 120 soldiers of a Campbell regiment, under an order signed by William III. took place 13 Feb. 1692. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1880, affords 250 sittings; the Rev. Alexander Stewart M'Innes has been rector since 1891.

BONAWE is a scattered village in the civil parish of Ardhattan and Muckairn. The name Bonawe was formerly applied to the village on the south side of Loch Etive, at the mouth of the river Awe, but this is now generally included under the name Shere, Taynult, being within a mile of the post office and railway station of Taynult; it is on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, 80 miles north-west of Glasgow, 12 east of Oban and 20 north of Inveraray, by Port Sona-chan Ferry, but round the head of Loch Awe, by Dalmlaly, avoiding the ferry, it is 32 miles. The Episcopal Mission church at Ardhattan is attached to Oban. The Bonawe granite quarries, leased by Messrs. J. and A. Gardner and Co. Ltd. Glasgow, employ about 200 workmen. The river Awe is much celebrated for its salmon fishery, which affords employment to a considerable number of persons in the season. Large quantities of fish are sent fresh in boxes to Glasgow and other parts of Scotland. The railway has brought an increased number of tourists, and many houses have been built in the neighbourhood.

CAMPBELTOWN is a royal and parliamentary burgh, parish and seaport on the east coast of Caoytre; 144 miles west-by-south of Edinburgh and 80 south-west of Glasgow by sea, but by land the distance to either city is greater by 36 miles; 76 south-south-west of Inveraray, 37 south of Tarbert, 10 north of Southend and 6 east from Machrihanish Bay (or Saltpan); the town is reached by mail steamer from Glasgow to Tarbert, thence by coach daily or direct steamer from Glasgow. The parish extends 11 miles from north to south by 8 in breadth, bounded east and west by the sea, south by Southend parish and north by those of Saddell and Killeen. The burgh is a place of great antiquity, having been a royal residence so early as the fifth century, at which period Fergus, the first king of Scotland, fixed his residence here, and it continued the seat of his successors till 843. It was then called Dalruadhain, or the capital of the kingdom Dalruadhain, founded by the Scots who came from Ireland under Cairbre Ruadh, a son of Conan II. king of Ireland, and a place on the north side of the present town is still known by the name, now written Dalaruan; a strong castle existed where the principal parish church now stands; but the appellation formerly applied to the site of modern Campbeltown was Ceann Loch (i. e. "head of the Loch"), by which name the country people still designate the town in Gaelic; the present name was given to it in honour of Archibald, 1st Duke of Argyll, when it was made a royal burgh in 1708. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and twelve councillors: under the "Reform Act of 1832" this burgh, combined with Ayr, Inveraray, Irvine and Oban, forms the Ayr parliamentary district, returning one member. The town is lighted with gas, and the inhabitants are well supplied with water from Lochruan and Crossbill. The town is sheltered on the north and south sides by lofty mountains, and has one of the safest harbours in the Western Highlands, possessing a depth of from three to fifteen fathoms at low water. The haven is spacious, being nearly two miles in length by one in breadth, and protected at its mouth by the Isle of Davaar, which has a lighthouse, and is joined to the mainland on the south side by a bar of sand: visible at low water, and about half a mile long—the entrance to the bay being from the north. From the shore two quays project into the bay, for vessels to load and unload at low water, and there is a third small quay on the opposite side of the loch, adjoining that part of the town called Dalintober. The town does a small import trade, the total value in 1909 being £40,469. A large fishery trade is carried on, the number of boats registered at this port in 1909 being 338, with an aggregate tonnage of 1,398 tons, requiring the employment of 1,121 men and boys, and in addition occasionally 142; in addition the number of vessels registered as being owned at the port was 20, with a total tonnage of 897 tons, and two steam vessels were built in 1909, the net total being 1,432 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters C.N. The total value of the fish landed at Campbeltown in 1909 was £33,849. The Established church, Castlehill, was erected in 1781. The Established Gaelic church, so named from the language in which the service is rendered, was built in 1807, and has a stone spire, added in 1836. The Episcopal church of St. Kieran, in Argyll street, was opened in 1891 and affords 260 sittings; the Rev. Canon Charles Thomas Wakeham has been rector since 1885. The United Free church, erected in 1767 and rebuilt in 1874, is an edifice of stone in the Italian style, with a tower, 150 feet in height, built in 1834. There are two other United Free churches, one in Lochend and the other in Lorne street, as well as a Mission church. The Roman Catholic church, opened in 1849, is a neat structure, with a carved stone front and pinnacles. The Town Hall, a convenient building, ornamented with a spire, contains a council chamber and an assembly and other rooms. The Free Library and Museum, opened in 1838, and presented to the burgh by the late James Macalister Hall esq. of Tangy and Killean, is a building of Kilkewan stone with sandstone dressings, and comprises a reading room, ladies' room, museum and keeper's apartments; the library contains about 10,000 volumes. The Campbeltown and District Cottage Hospital, opened in 1896, was founded by Mrs. Peter MacKinnon, of Ronachan, and contains 12 beds. The County Buildings, on Castlehill, opened in 1871, are of stone in the Baronial style, and contain a justice of the peace court, sheriff's court, and the fiscal offices; and adjoining is the County Office of Supply. There is also a custom house. The Territorial Force stationed in the town comprise the Argyllshire (Mountain) Battery Royal Garrison Artillery, whose head quarters are at the Argyll Drill Hall, Argyll street, and B Co. 8th (Argyllshire) Battalion, Princess Louise's (Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders), with a large drill hall, called the "Victoria Hall," in Kinloch road, erected in 1887 in commemoration of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. There are branches in the town of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, besides a bank for savings in Bolgam street, established in 1827 under the provisions of the Act 59, George III. cap. 62. The principal trades here are the distilling of whisky and malting. A woollen factory, a colliery, a net manufactory, a rope walk and a ship building yard add to the importance of the place, whilst its neighbourhood abounds with lime and stone. Some of the finest and richest land in this part of Scotland lies to the north and west of the town, and is chiefly the property of the Duke of Argyll P.C., K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. and the trustees of the late Capt. Hector Macneal, of Losset Park. Steam vessels sail regularly to Glasgow and Greenock and occasionally to Ayr and to the adjacent coast towns, and to Belfast &c. in Ireland; and numerous coasting vessels to Liverpool and other parts of the country. The principal exports are whisky, wool, herrings, fishing nets, live stock, coal and potatoes. The imports are barley, timber, grain, yeast, groceries, ironmongery &c. The most remarkable object of antiquity in the town is an ancient cross, erected in the middle of the main street; it stands on an octagonal graduated base of six steps, and consists of a tapering shaft and circular head, from which the arms of the cross slightly project; the entire surface is covered with interlaced and foliated ornament, elaborately carved. The inscription is in the Lombardic character, and the following is a literal copy, with the translation annexed:—HEC EST: CRUX: DOMINI: XVARII: M: H: EAOHYRNA. QUONDAM: RECTORIS DE KYLRREGAN. ET: DOMINI: ANDREE: NAIT: EJUS: RECTORIS DE KIL: COMAN: QUI HANC CRUCEM PIERI FACIEBAT: "This is the cross of Master Edward M. H. Eactran, once Rector of Kylregan, and Master Andrew his son, Rector of Kilcoman, who erected this cross." There is, however, no date, but it is said to have been executed about the twelfth century, and to have been brought from the Isle of Iona: an iron railing incloses the whole. The market is held on Monday, and the fairs on the first Thursday in February, for horses; the second, on the last Wednesday in May, for horses and cattle; the Wednesday before the second Thursday in August, for sheep and lambs; and on the second Thursday in the same month for horses; and the third Thursday in November for horses. South of the town is the high mountain called Bengoelion, from which there is an extensive view of the surrounding country, including the distant objects of Arran and Pladda islands, Cowal hills, the bay and heads of Ayr, the Lowlands as far as Loch Ryan, Ailsa Craig, Black Head at the entrance of Belfast Lough, Dunaverty, Sanda Isles, part of the Irish coast near the points of Garroch Head, Red Bay and Fair Head, the dangerous bay of Machrihanish, the Mull of Islay and the Paps of Jura; also the cemetery at Kilkerran, with the points of Saddell, Carradale and Skipness. The Duke of Argyll P.C., K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.; the trustees of the late Capt. Hector Macneal, of Ugadale; the trustees of Richard Campbell-Davys esq. of Askomeil; the trustees of the late William James Laidlay esq. of Drumore; Captain Duncan Stewart R.N. of Knockrioch; the trustees of the late John Colville, of Machrihanish; Robert Reid esq. of Killeilan; Mrs. James Weir, of Balegreggan House, and Neil McNeill esq. of Ardincross, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 44,256 acres: rateable value of the burgh, £39,874, and landward, £24,438; total, £64,722; the population of the parish in 1891 was 10,260, and 1901, 10,236, including 8,234 in the town and 4 officials and 46 inmates of Campbeltown combination poorhouse. The population of the royal burgh in 1901 was 5,255; of the police burgh, 8,286; of the parliamentary burgh, 8,234. The number of voters on the parliamentary register in 1910-11 was 905.

MACHRIHANISH, formerly called Salt-Pans, from salt having been made here from sea water, is a small village 5½ miles west of Campbeltown, on the southern shore of Machrihanish bay; here are the extensive links of the Machrihanish Golf Club. Nearly half a mile south is Losset House, the modern mansion of Mrs. Macneal, of Ugadale. At Drumlembie, about 4 miles from Campbeltown, are the works of the Argyll colliery, connected with Campbeltown by a narrow gauge railway, extended to Machrihanish in 1906, and now used for passenger traffic. At Kilkerran, on the south side of the bay, is an ancient burial place and the remains of a castle.

CLACHAN-CANTYRE is a village in the parish of Kilmallon and poor combination of Lochgilphead, lying near the mouth of Loch Tarbert and on the road from Tarbert to Campbeltown, 11 miles south-west of the former and 27 north-east of the latter, the road following the western shore of Cantyre through most of its course. The parish church is in this village, and there are also Free and United Free churches. Duncan McKinnon esq. is the proprietor of the larger part of the village; the other portion is in the estate of Ronechan, and belongs to Mrs.
 McKinnon, of Ronachan. In the vicinity,
 on a hill called Danskeig, to the northwest, is a vitrified fort on a large scale,
 and another contiguous stone fort in ruins; and among the hills to the east
 are several fresh water lochs, well stocked with trout.

Post, T. & M. O. Office; Neil McAlister,

COLL, a parish in Mull poor combination,
 is an island lying about 2 miles north of Tiree and 10 west of Ardnamurchan
 Point; it is 13 miles from north to south
 by a breadth of 2 to 4 miles; its coast is indented by several small bays (the largest,
 known as Loch Breachacha, runs about a mile into the land), but there is only one tolerable harbour, called Arinagour. Close to the modern castle, the property of the trustees of the late Col. John Lorne Stewart D.L., J.P. who are the proprietors of the island, are the ruins of a castle. The chief industry is cheese making, for which Coll has attained a wide reputation. A fair is held here in May and October, on the Tuesday before those in Mull. The area comprisea 18,318 acres; valuation, £2,395; population in 1901, 432.

Post, T. & M. O. Office: Robert Sturgeon, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through

COLONSAY AND ORONSAY are islands lying to the west of Jura and south of the mouth of the Firth of Lorn, 11 miles south of the Ross of Mull, and together form a united parish about 12 miles in length. Oronsay, the most southern, being only 2 miles in extent; the division between the two islands is a narrow strait, dry at low water. There is an Established church on Colonsay. It was here that St. Columba and St. Oran landed on their arrival from Irelaad in 563, and on Oronsay, they first founded their college, moving later on to Iona.

 An abbey was founded here at Kilouran,
 at a subsequent date, of which there are now no remains, but at Kilchattan are remains of a chapel with a burial ground
 and two monoliths called "Carragheao."
 On Oronsay there are extensive remains of a priory founded in the 14th century,
 consisting of a church, 78 by 18 feet,
 retaining its altar, and a large cloister,
 besides a fine sculptured cross, 12 feet
 in height, bearing on the circular head a representation of the Crucifixion, and on the shaft part of an inscription to Collins, a prior, who died in 1510;
 north-east of the church is another round-headed cross now shattered; there are also several slabs carved with figures of ecclesiastics and warriors. Colonsay is the property of Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal G.C.M.G., G.O.V.O., P.C.
 (Canada), D.L. The area of the united parish is 11,076 acres; rateable value, £ ; population in 1901, 313, of whom 301 were in Colonsay.

CRAIGHOUSE, see JURA.

CRAIGNISH is a parish in the west of Argyllshire, bounded on the north by the parish of Kilmelford, on the east by the parish of Kilmartin and on the south and west by the Sound of Jura. It stretches from north-east to south-west
 in the form of a long peninsula, about 10 miles in length and from 2 to 4 miles broad. At the Point of Aird in the extreme south-west there is a passage between the shore and an outlying island, called the "Dornis Mar," through which the tides rush with great violence as they sweep on and help to form the whirlpool of Corryvreckan, 5 or 6 miles off the land between the islands of Jura and Scarba. The steamers on the royal route to Oban and the north pass through the Dornis immediately after leaving the Crinan canal and the flow of the tides is watched with great interest by the passengers. Here is an Established church. Colonel F. R. French-Gascoigne
 D.S.O. of Craignish Castle, Major Stewart
 MacDougall D.L., J.P. of Lunoga, and
 J. A. Campbell esq. J.P. of Barbreck, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is about 9,283 acres; the rateable value, £2,625; the population in 1901, 327.

DUNOON AND KILMUN

DUNOON with KILMUN constitute a united parish in the south-eastern district of Argyllshire: the police burgh of Dunoon and seaside town is situated on the Firth of Clyde, 3 miles south of Holy Loch, 4 from Gourock station on the Caledonian railway, on the opposite side of the Clyde, 27 south-east of Inveraray, 30 west of Glasgow and 8 west of Greenock; Kilmun is 6½ miles from Dunoon. The head quarters of the Sheriff court were transferred from Inveraray to Dunoon in 1903, and the burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine town councillors: it has no regular trade, but depends upon its summer visitors. A system of filtration for the water supply has been adopted, and in 1906 a refuse destructor was built 1 mile north of the pier.

The town of Dunoon is built on the shores of two small bays (east and west), and extending for 2 miles in both directions are ranges of houses for the families who resort here in the summer season for sea-bathing, and there are also many villas occupied by the merchants and professional men of Glasgow. The united parish extends 15 miles from north to south, by 8 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Strachur, north-east by Lochgilphead, east and south by the Firth and west by Inverchaolain. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches and Congregational and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1850, will seat 300 persons: the rectory, net yearly value £260, has been held since 1903 by the Rev. Charles Grub. In the burial ground of the Established church are two massive freestone slabs, with armorial bearings and inscriptions, indicating the graves of Andrew Boyd, Bishop of Aberdeen, 1613-37, and Hector Maclean, Bishop, 1680-88. The Burgh Hall, in Argyll street, built in 1873, is of stone and contains a fine assembly room. The Sheriff Court House, in George street, a fine building of stone, erected in 1902, is used for county business and the sittings of the Sheriff's ordinary and small debt courts, which are held here every week and Criminal courts as found convenient. The West of Scotland Convalescent Seaside Home, originated and promoted by the late Miss Beatrice Clugston, of Glasgow, was opened on the 14th of August, 1869, for the purpose of affording sear and bathing to invalids, and is a building of stone in the Romanesque style, available for over 300 inmates: the west wing and dining hall were extended in 1907, so as to provide for 50 additional inmates. The Dunoon and Cowal District Combination Hospital for Infectious Diseases affords 35 beds: there is also a Cottage Hospital. The Post Office, a building of stone, was erected in 1902. A Fire Brigade Station and Burgh Depot were erected in 1903 at a cost of about £3,000. A little to the west of the pier at Dunoon is a mound about 80 feet in height, on which stand the ruins of Dunoon castle, formerly regarded as one of the most formidable strongholds on the coast of Argyllshire; originally a royal residence, the hereditary keepership was bestowed by Robert Bruce on Sir Colin Campbell, of Loch Awe, through whom it came into the possession of the Dukes of Argyll. Queen Mary visited her sister, Lady Jane Stuart, at Dunoon Castle about 1563. The modern Castle of Dunoon, built in 1832, was purchased by the burgh commissioners for the benefit of the town: it contains a reading room, and the grounds are tastefully laid out as a recreation ground for the inhabitants and visitors. A pavilion of brick and rough cast, with a frontage of stone, erected at a cost of nearly £17,000, was opened in Aug. 1905, by H.R.H. Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and contains a large concert hall and reception rooms. A recreation and pleasure ground with a cycling track was opened in 1905 for football, cricket &c.: here is held annually the Cowal Highland gathering. In 1906-7 the East Bay Esplanade was rebuilt at a cost of £40,000: it has a maximum width of 120 feet and a minimum breadth of 60 feet, and now extends for two miles, joining Dunoon and Kilmun. Facing the Firth is a very fine stone statue representing "Highland Mary." Fairs are held on the first Thursday in January and February for horses. Three newspapers are published here, viz.: "The Dunoon Herald and Cowal Advertiser," on Friday, "The Dunoon Observer and Argyllshire Standard," on Saturday, and the "Dunoon Advertiser," on Thursday.

HOLY LOCH, in this parish, is fully 3 miles long; the entrance is scarcely a mile wide, but within it expands to a fine sheet of water, a mile and a half in width, at its head it receives the lesser and greater Echaig, the latter river flowing from Loch Eck, a beautiful fresh water lake, 7 miles long and 1 broad, whose steep, rugged shores, rising to a considerable height, form a striking contrast on a fine day to its wide placid waters. Both the loch and the two rivers afford plenty of sport to the angler, and the valley to Strachur or Loch Fyne is remarkable for wild scenery.

KILMUN is a village in the parish, situated on the north shore of Holy Loch, 6½ miles north from Dunoon, and 8 west from Greenock. The ancient collegiate church, founded in 1442 by Sir Duncan Campbell, of Loch Awe, has a tower, and is the burying place of the Campbell family; six of the Dukes of Argyll lie here, and some monuments are still in existence. There is also a United Free church in the village. About a quarter of a mile westward of the village is the Kilmun Seaside Home for Convalescent Poor. A marble monument was erected here in 1906 to James Duncan, a former laird of Benmore, who by chemical researches greatly benefited the sugar refining industry. The population of Kilmun in 1891 was 347, and in 1901, 443 in the village and 752 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BLAIRMORE and Strone form a village in the parish, and will be found under the heading of Strone.

HUNTER'S QUAY is a village in this parish, and forms part of the burgh of Dunoon, from which it is distant 2 miles north-east, on the Firth of Clyde, and close to the mouth of the Holy Loch. The Episcopal church of Emmanuel is in this village.

KIRN is a village and quoad sacra parish in this parish, and is also part of the burgh of Dunoon, from which it is distant 1½ miles, on the Firth of Clyde. There is an Established church, opened in 1909; the old church is now used as a public hall; there are also a United Free church and a Board school; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,407.

ARDENTINNY is a village and quoad sacra parish in this parish, situated 4 miles from Blairmore and 7 from Greenock and 12½ miles from Dunoon, on the west shore of Loch Long. There is a church of the Establishment and a Board school. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 205.

INNELLAN, also in this parish, contains the Episcopal church of St. Margaret, built in 1875. See under separate head.

GLENLEAN (or Clachaig) is a hamlet in this parish, situated 6 miles north-west, and 3 north-west from Sandbank. The surrounding country is mountainous, and in the vicinity are the Clyde Mills Co.'s gunpowder works, which are now entirely closed.

SANDBANK is a village in this parish, and will be found under a separate heading.

TOWARD is a hamlet in this parish, situated 4 miles south-west from Innellan and 8 from Dunoon. Here is a church of the Establishment and a Board school. Castle Toward is a massive modern edifice, erected by the late Kirkman Finlay esq. and now the residence of Major John Finlay. The grounds contain the ruins of the ancient castle, at one time the seat of the family of Lamont, of Ardnamont. Walter Long esq. J.P. of Glengarr; Henry Johnston Younger esq. D.L., J.P. of Benmore, Kilmun; Mrs. de Courcy Hamilton, Major John Finlay and J. McArthur Moir esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the united parish comprises 44,606 acres; rateable value, £114,057, including landward; population in 1901, 10,468; area of burgh, 1,006 acres; rateable value, £74,494; the population in 1901 was 6,779.

THE ISLANDS OF GIGHA, CARA AND GIGLUM.

GIGHA is an island off the western coast of Kintyre, about 7 miles north-west from the mouth of West Tarbert loch; it is 6 miles long by 2 to 3 broad, and with the islands of Cara and Giglum forms a civil and ecclesiastical parish, the church of which is near the landing place at Gigha, 2 miles from the south end of the island, and facing it is a small but comfortable inn. At Kilchattan, a mile south, within a burial ground stands the ancient church of St. Catan, now roofless, though otherwise fairly perfect; it is 33 feet long, and over 15 feet wide, and has a narrow lancet at the east end, and one on each side, and by the east window lies the basin of an octagonal font: 2 miles north from Kilchattan, near Millbar stand three ruined hill-forts, and an ancient of these, near Tarbert farm, is a north of buring ground containing a much broken cross, 7 feet in height. Near Cairban point, north-east of the island, is apparently another cemetery, containing stone cells or kirkvans roofed with heavy slabs, and some incised with strange marks. The island of Cara, which is the property of John Ronald Moreton-Macdonald esq. D.L., J.P. who resides at Largie Castle, is divided from Gigha by a narrow rock-strewn channel, and is less than a mile in length, but contains a ruined chapel about 29 feet long, and of rude masonry: the narrow windows are square headed, and one has a height of 3 feet 4 inches. William James Yorke Scarlett esq. J.P. of Achamore House, is the proprietor of the island of Gigha. The area of the parish comprises 3,662 acres; rateable value, £1,020; the population in 1891 was 401, and in 1901 was 374, of which 2 are in Cara Island. Post, T. & M. O. Office; Robert A. Cavana, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Letters arrive from all parts (by steamer via Tarbert) at 2.30 p.m. & are dispatched at 10 a.m. No Sunday delivery

GLASSARY (or KILMICHAEL GLASSARY) is a parish extending from the lower half of Loch Fyne to Loch Awe, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Lochgilphead, which town is included in the parish. The village of Kilmichael Glassary, about 5 miles north of Lochgilphead, at one time a burgh of some size, is now merely the kirk town of the parish, containing the church and manse of Glassary. At Bridgend, on the river Add, half a mile west of Kilmichael, is a market stance, and a good temperance hotel. Between Kilmichael and Kilmartin there are numerous Druidical remains.

CRARAE is a village in the parish, 3½ miles south-west of Inveraray and 4 south-west of Furnace, and has some large granite quarries.

CUMLODDEN is a village and quoad sacra parish on the eastern shore of Upper Loch Fyne: it was formed out of the parishes of Glassary & Glenarary, and has an Established church. The population in 1901 was 629.

LOCHGAIR is a hamlet in this parish, on a bay of same name, on the west side of Loch Fyne, and is 7 miles north-east of Lochgilphead; there is an Established Mission church here. Col. Edward Donald Malcolm R.E., C.B., J.P. of Poltalloch, is the principal landowner. The parish comprises 60,234 acres; rateable value, including Lochgilphead, £18,065; the population in 1901 was 3,778, including 1,313 in the town of Lochgilphead.

Post & T. Office, Kilmichael Glassary (letters should have Argyllshire added); Neil M'Lachlan, sub-postmaster. Delivery, 2.35 p.m.; dispatch, 11.10 a.m. No Sunday delivery. Nearest money order office is at Lochgilphead.

Post & T. Office, Cairnbaan; William Smith, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Lochgilphead. Delivery, 2.40 p.m.; dispatch, 10.45 a.m. No Sunday delivery. Nearest money order office at Lochgilphead.

Post & T. Office, Lochgair; Archibald McEwan, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Deliveries, 9.20 a.m. & 7.15 p.m.; dispatches, 9.14 a.m. & 7 p.m. An extra delivery at 3.30 p.m. in summer. No Sunday delivery. The nearest money order office is at Minard.

GLENORCHY and INISHAIL form a united parish in the Lorne poor combination, lying to the north of Loch Awe, bounded on the west by Ardchattan, on the north by Lismore and Appin, and on the east by Perthshire; it extends 25 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth. The village and station of DALMALLY, on the Tyndrum and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, are in the south of the parish, and the West Highland railway runs close to the east boundary of the parish, with stations at Tyndrum and Bridge of Orchy, the latter being in the parish. The parish church is just outside Dalmally, on the road to Oban; the original foundation was of great antiquity and there are many old tombstones in the kirkyard. The southern portion of the parish includes the head of Loch Awe, which extends 26 miles in length from one to half a mile broad, its most attractive scenery being between here and Port Sona-chan; the hills on each side are thickly clothed with timber and several small islands diversify its surface. On Inishail, a low grass-grown island near the north end of the loch are some remains, about 51 feet in length, of a reputed Oistercian nunnery, and apparently of the first Pointed period; surrounding the ruins is a burial ground, containing several carved slabs, and a now prostrate cross 6 feet in length. On a rock are the fine old ruins of Kilechurn Castle, supposed to have been built about 1440 by Sir Colin Campbell, the first knight of Glenorchy. Fairs for cattle are held at Glenorchy on the third Wednesday in March and fourth Tuesday in November. Population of the parish in 1891, 252, and in 1901, 1,194.

CLADICH is a hamlet on Loch Awe, 10 miles north of Inveraray, and in this parish; a road to the left leads to Port Sona-chan ferry, 3 miles distant, crossing Loch Awe, by which the distance to Bonaw and Oban is shortened 10 miles; another road from Cladich on the right leads to Dalmally, and round the head of Loch Awe to Oban. Here is an Established Mission church, and a Post office.

DALMALLY is a scattered village in the parish, 16 miles north-east of Inveraray and 24½ miles by rail from Oban, and beautifully situated near the head of Loch Awe, and in view of the vale of Glenorchy. Here are United Free and Free churches. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 146,628 acres; rateable value, £20,148; the population in 1891 was 1,252, and in 1901, 1,194 in the civil and 1,037 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Dalmally; Andrew Cameron, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m.; dispatches, 7.10 a.m. & 1.45 & 5.20 p.m.

Post & T. Office, Cladich; Donald Campbell, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Delivery, 6 a.m.; dispatch, 11.45 a.m. No Sunday delivery. The nearest money order office is at Port Sona-chan, 4 miles distant.

INVERARAY is a parish, royal and parliamentary burgh and the county town of Argyllshire; the burgh is situated on the western shore of Loch Fyne, at the south-west angle of a small bay, into which flow the rivers Aray and Shira, from which there is a ferry to St. Catherine's. Inveraray is about 15 miles south from Dalmally station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, and about the same distance east from Arrochar station on the West Highland (North British) railway, 102 west-by-north of Edinburgh, 60 north-west of Glasgow, 32 south-east of Oban, via Port Sonachan Ferry, and 42 via Dalmally, and 76 north-north-east of Campbelltown. The parish extends 15 miles from north-east to south-west, and is bounded north by Glenorchy, west by Kilchrean, south by Kilmichael and east by Loch Fyne. Inveraray was erected into a burgh of charter, granted by Charles I. in 1648, and its government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, with eight councillors, a town clerk and a treasurer. This burgh, with Campbelltown and Oban in this county, and Ayr and Irvine in Ayrshire, forms the Ayr district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. The Court House and Gaol, a substantial building of stone, stands on the shore. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May, August and last Tuesday in October; a burgh court is held occasionally, and the sheriff's court four times yearly. The Established church, in the main street, is a stone building with a spire, and services are conducted here both in Gaelic and English; the United Free church, erected in 1836, on land given by D. Paterson esq. is now closed, but a new church was built in 1844, at the south end of the town, at a cost of £1,700; the Episcopal church of All Saints, erected in 1836, at a cost of about £1,600, on a site given by the late Duke of Argyll, is a small edifice of stone, seating 142 persons; the Rev. Emilius George Higinbotham Little M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, has been rector since 1887. In the town are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union

Bank of Scotland Limited; the principal hotel is the "Argyll," beautifully situated near the chief entrance to Inveraray Castle.

On the town esplanade stands a sculptured stone cross, brought from Iona, and supposed to date from 1400; it is eight feet high and bears the following inscription:—"Hæc est crux nobilium virorum, videlicet, Dondocani, Meic Gyllichomghan, Patricii filii ejus, et Maelmoro, filii Patricii, qui hanc crucem fieri faciēbat." (This cross is in memory of noble men, viz., Duncan M'Comyn, Patrick, his son, and Lndovick, the son of Patrick, who caused this cross to be erected.) In a garden near the church is a small obelisk, which marks the place of execution, in the year 1685, of some persons of the name of Campbell, for preaching against the teachings of the Romish Church. A splendid view can be had of the surrounding scenery from the top of "Duniquaich," which in olden times was a beacon or watch tower, and is mentioned in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Legend of Montrose." Loch Fyne terminates about 9 miles from the town, and from the fineness of its scenery and the fame of its herrings is justly remarkable. The value of herrings taken out of the loch in a single season, until within the last twenty or thirty years, frequently amounted to £30,000; for some years it hardly yielded any, but recently the fish have been coming up in large shoals. The loch is 50 miles long, and is about 10 broad below Loch Gilp, seldom exceeding 3 above Otter Ferry. From a convenient part of the town, and projecting from the shore, is a well-built quay, at the neck of which is a stone building, erected at a cost of upwards of £1,000, in memory of Elizabeth, late Duchess of Argyll, who died in 1878, and used as a coffee and reading room. Fairs for cattle are held at Inveraray on the last Friday in May and the last Thursday in October, and a wool market on the third Friday in July.

At the extremity of the bay stands Inveraray Castle, the seat of the Duke of Argyll P.C., K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. and now (1911) occupied by Lord George Campbell; it is approached by a fine avenue of limes, and has extensive and well-wooded policies; the building is three-storied, of grey stone, in the Later Baronial style, somewhat formal in outline, being a square with rounded angles, which rise as towers one storey above the roof; the centre is occupied by a large square hall with a gallery around, giving access to the upper rooms; the hall is lighted by a square lantern tower, rising rather above the angle towers, and its walls are lined with about 150 stand of arms, being the muskets used by the Clan Campbell regiment at Culloden; the principal rooms open from the hall and are hung with some good tapestry and pictures; there are also two beautiful pedestals of a rare kind of red granite, or porphyry, obtained near the Bosa of Mull. Upon the lawn is a brass gun that belonged to the admiral's ship "Florida," one of the "Invincible" Armada, blown up in Tobermory bay in 1588, where she was forced to put in through stress of weather. The gun, which was taken from the bay and is about ten feet in length, is named the "Gunn-Cam," or "gleid gun." Two other Armada guns have also been added.

GLENARAY is a small civil and ecclesiastical parish, and lies in the north of the parish. Population in 1901, 379, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 379.

FURNACE is a village about 8 miles south from Inveraray, on the western bank of Loch Fyne; here are granite quarries.

About a mile and a half north-east of Inverary is Glen-Sbirra, in length about 6 miles, the scenery through which is exceedingly beautiful, presenting gently-sloping hills, whose sides are clothed with wood. The Duke of Argyll P.C., K.T., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 46,887 acres; rateable value of town £2,710, of landward £5,576; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 836, and in 1901, 1,369, including 723 in the royal burgh and 16 in shipping, but the parliamentary burgh only contained 682, and the town of Inveraray 678. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 739. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 135.

IONA is a small island and quond sacra parish, 3 miles long by 1 broad, off the western extremity of the Ross of Mull, across a sound about a mile in width, traversed by a ferry, and it is 9 miles south-west of Staffa; it is within the parish of Kilfinichen and Kiltiveckan, and is known also as Icolmkill or Icolmkill, but was anciently called Hy, or I, and the seat of the first Celtic University in Scotland, founded by St. Columba on the occasion of his mission from Ireland in 563; it now possesses Established and United Free churches, the remains of an ancient cathedral church and the reputed graves of the kings, and is much visited by tourists.

PORT-NA-CURRACH, "The Bay of the Boat," on the south-west side, derives both its name and importance from a tradition of its having been the landing place of the currach, the hide boat of St. Columba

Iona belonged to the sea of the isles, i.e. the Hebrides or Southern isles (Sudreyar), so called to distinguish them from the northern isles of Orkney and Shetland (Nodreyar); the sea is said to have been founded in 1098 by Magnus III. King of Norway, to whom these islands had been ceded by the usurper Donald Bane, brother of King Malcolm II. of Scotland: about 1113 the diocese of the Isle of Man was united to this sea, thenceforward called "Sodor and Man," and although the two dioceses were again separated about 1380, the style of the joint see is still maintained by the Bishop of Man; the sea of the isles, of which Iona became, in 1507, the chief seat, after having been abolished about 1680, was revived in 1733 in connection with that of Caithness, and is now held with Argyll. The island was at a very early period venerated as a place of sanctity and learning, and had already been Christianised for over a century when St. Columba lauded here, 12 May, A.D. 563. The monastic settlement established by him on this spot for the training of itinerant missionaries continued to maintain an independent ecclesiastical status until 716, when the monks, with their abbot, Adamnan, agreed to accept the usages of Rome: from 794 the island was ravaged again and again by the Norse invaders, and many of the monks mercilessly slain; in 818 the monastery was rebuilt by Abbot Diarmid, and the shrine containing the relics of St. Columba placed within the church, and towards the close of the 12th century it was again rebuilt by Abbot Reginald, who was also bishop of the Isles, and refounded the abbey as a house of the Cluniac order, and it thus became connected with the Cluniac abbey of Paisley. Simon of Orkney, bishop of the Isles 1229-43, was also abbot of Iona, and at the close of the 15th century the abbey was formally annexed to the see. In pursuance of an Act passed in 1563, the monastery was suppressed and vacated; the cathedral church, being disused, was allowed to fall into decay, and nothing now remains of either woodwork or fittings: as at present existing it consists of a long choir, with clerestory, a south aisle of three bays, and a sacristy on the north side, transepts, an aisleless nave, and a central tower of two stages, 75 feet high, with plain corbelled parapet; the nave and choir are each 62 feet in length and 22 feet wide, measured internally; the internal width, through the transepts, is 69 feet, and the total length, externally, 160 feet, the axis of the church and adjacent buildings being directly south-east and north-west; the monastery adjoins on the north, and the cloisters, immediately abutting on the nave, are 72 feet from north to south, by 66 from east to west, and have alleys 11 feet wide: the east side is formed in part by the north transept of the church, the chapter-house with its vestibule, and two other chambers; on the north side was the refectory, with the stairs thereto, but the west side seems to have been inclosed by a wall only; other portions of the domestic buildings extended northwards, and detached from these, and lying east and west, was a rectangular structure, 60 by 37 feet, the purpose of which is only conjectural. The church has been rebuilt at various periods of red granite with dressings of grey sandstone, and from the method of its construction it is difficult to fix exactly the date of different portions, but there is no doubt that the earliest parts of the existing fabric are to be found in the transepts, including the tower piers, and the north walls of the nave and choir; these are Late Transitional of the latter part of the 12th or the beginning of the 13th century, the remainder, including the sacristy and the tower, which in plan is almost an oblong, was rebuilt during the Late Decorated period, 1315-60, and still later the south aisle of the choir, the pent roof of which is singularly carried on a species of flying buttresses rising from the floor, and supporting masses of masonry reaching up to the line of the clerestory; this aisle retains sedilia and a piscina, and the site of an altar and the caps of the piers are carved with various scriptural subjects; a fine bold doorway, with trefoiled head, leads into the sacristy, and built into the wall above, at a height of 6 1/2 feet from the floor, are two pointed Transitional arches, enriched with dog-tooth carving, and resting in the centre on a circular pier with foliated cap; the choir has also sedilia and piscina, but the high altar of marble, entire in the 17th century, has wholly disappeared. In the centre of the floor, below the first step from the east, is a great slab once containing a brass to a knight of the Macleod family; north of this is the effigy in stone of Abbot Lachlan Mackinnon, d. 1500, and on the south that of Abbot Kenneth Mackenzie, d. 1489, besides which there are other tomb slabs, both in the choir and north transept, and some of these are adorned with Celtic ornament: the splayed east windows of the north transept are recessed under arches, and between these is another arch, with traces of an altar; three sides of the tower are lighted by square openings filled with varied tracery, and the fourth or north side by a two-light pointed window; the east and other windows contain Decorated tracery of graceful flowing character; about 1603 the nave and south aisle were walled off, and the remainder of the church fitted for Divine service, and it continued to be so used until the beginning of the 18th century: in 1902 the church was roofed in, and in 1903 certain restorations carried out, and further repairs are now (1911) in progress. Divine services are now held during the months of July, August, and September. Of the monastic buildings, the oldest portion is the chapter-house, which is Transitional, and coeval with the earliest part of the church; it is entered through two circular arches resting on a central pillar, the ornamental work being very similar to that of the two walled-up arches in the choir; within the chapter-house, on either side, are four arched recesses, with sedilia, and it has a small east window; the refectory is Early English, and the rest of the buildings, so far as can be ascertained, belong to the Decorated period; north-east of the chapter-house, and standing obliquely to it, is a small detached chantry chapel of the 16th century, 38 by 21 feet, with three windows and a doorway on the north side; in the cemetery, and 100 yards south-west of the cathedral, stands the roofless chapel of St. Oran, a structure of red granite, 60 by 22 feet, and now the most ancient fabric remaining on the island: it has a western doorway and small loop windows, and has lately been repaired. In this cemetery have been buried, it is affirmed, 48 kings of Scotland, 8 kings of the Sudreyar or Southern Isles, some Norse-Irish monarchs, and one king of France, besides a number of the priors of Iona and a number of members of the clan MacLean: there are still nine rows of carved and incised slabs and tombstones, the most important of which are now inclosed within iron railings: it is also said that the island had at one time as many as 160 crosses, of which 60 were taken up and cast into the sea by Archibald, 4th Earl of Argyll, on his embracing the doctrines of the Reformation, and but four now remain, viz.: St. John's, Maclean's, St. Martin's and John McFingon's; the only complete one is that of St. Martin of Tours, standing within the inclosure by the west end of the church, where are the graves of St. Columba and his servant Diarmid; it is 15 feet high, on a base of three steps, and is elaborately carved with interlaced work and bosses; Maclean's cross is 11 feet in height, and richly sculptured, and McFingon's bears the name of one of the abbots of Iona, d. 1439, and the galley device of the Norse kings of Man. The island is the property of the Duke of Argyll P.C., K.T. G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. The late Duke, about 1880, cleared the site of the cathedral and adjacent buildings, and effected various repairs and replacements at considerable cost: the carved fragments then found were carefully collected, and are now in the chapter-house. The population in 1891 was 247, and in 1901, 213 in the village and 562 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ISLAY, the most southerly of the Hebrides, is a large, irregularly-shaped island about 25 miles from north to south, by 18 broad, and is divided into 3 parishes, Kilchoman, Kilarrow and Kilmoney and Kildalton; it is divided from the island of Jura by the sound of Islay; two salt lochs, Loch Indaal on the south and Loch Ghruinnard on the north, run some distance into the island, almost cutting off its westerly portion, and in boisterous weather many vessels seek the former for shelter; its chief villages and ports are Bowmore and Bridgend, on Loch Indaal; Port-Ellen on a bay to the south; Port-Askaig on the north; Portnahaven on the south-west point of the entrance to Loch Indaal, and Port-Charlotte, halfway up the west shore of this loch, and at Bruichladdich, near the head of Loch Indaal, is a pier for steamers. There are two fresh water lochs, Loch Gorm in the western limb of the island, and Loch Finlaggan to the north, both containing islands on which are remains of the fortified houses of the Macdonald chieftains. Finlaggan was the principal stronghold, and here the chiefs were installed with great ceremony on a stone still preserved on the islet, which also has remains of a chapel, and in the burial ground some ancient slabs. The mountains on the island attain a considerable altitude; Ben Beighen reaches a height of 1,609 feet, Ben Bhan 1,544 feet, Sgarb Breac 1,192 feet, and Ben Tartabhaille 758 feet, and these are the resort of eagles, falcons and other birds; great numbers of seals are also to be found along the coast. The shore is very rugged, but in some parts has fine flat beaches and sandy bays, and the face of the country is finely varied by hill and dale. Many parts are well planted, and besides Lochs Gorm and Finlaggan, there is Loch Skerrola, and numerous smaller lakes, well stocked with trout; there are also two rivers, the Sorn and the Laggan; the former empties itself into Loch Indaal, and the latter, a fine salmon stream, into Laggan Bay. Before Islay became the seat of government of the Lords of the Isles, it appears to have been under the dominion of the Danes and Norwegians, as there are many duns and castles, evidently of Danish origin, besides many places which have Danish names. The land is tolerably cultivated, and upwards of 3,000 head of black cattle, and several hundred horses of the Clydesdale breed, are annually exported, besides sheep. An immense quantity of whisky, the produce of the distilleries in the island, is also exported to Glasgow, England and America. Lead and iron are said to abound in the island. There is a regular daily communication by steamer from Port-Ellen, and on Tuesday and Friday from Port-Askaig, with Glasgow and West Tarbert on the main land, and there are lighthouses at Rudha Mhail, the extreme northern point of the island, at McArthur's head on the east, and at Rhinnis point on the south-west. Perhaps the most remarkable natural curiosity on the island is Slochd-Mhaol-Doraidh, a large basin formed in the rock by the action of the sea, on the south-west point of Laggan Bay, about 4 miles from Port-Ellen and 9 from Bowmore, into which the turbulent waters of the western ocean rush by two naturally arched channels and dash up through an aperture in the dome-shaped roof. Near Loch Ghruinnard is the site of a great battle fought in 1598 between the Macdonalds and MacLeans, and at Benbigger the Macdonalds were almost destroyed by a combination of the MacLeans and MacLeods, Camerons and McNeils, by instructions of James VI.

OA is a quoad sacra parish, formed out of Kildalton, and has an Established church and a school; the population in 1891 was 210, and that of KILMENY, a similar parish, formed out of Kilarrow, 173.

BOWMORE, in Kilarrow parish, is the principal place on the island. It was founded in 1768, and is situated on the east side of Loch Andail, 3 miles south of Islay House, 11 south-south-west from Port-Askaig, and the same from Port-Ellen and Port-Charlotte. The village, which consists of two principal streets and several smaller ones diverging, possesses a good quay. It is a place of some business, several trading vessels belonging to it. The parish church is a circular edifice, with a peculiarly formed spire; there is also a United Free church and a Baptist chapel. The Scotch Episcopal Mission Church of the Good Shepherd will seat 80 persons. The Public Hall is a large building, with sittings for over 500 persons, and the Public Library contains about 1,800 volumes, and also includes an assembly room. The Islay Combination hospital, situated on the Bridgend road, about a mile from the town, was erected in 1904 at a cost of £1,100; it contains 7 beds, and rooms for the matron and nurse. There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland. A sheriff's court is held here once a year. The distillery here is worked by the Bowmore Distillery Co. The Bowmore Imperial and the Seaview hotels are the principal inns. The population in 1901 was 788.

BRIDGEND, in Kilarrow parish, is a village 3 miles north of Bowmore and 8 south of Port-Askaig, and has a branch of the National Bank of Scotland Limited. A court is held monthly for the trial of petty offences, and a sheriff's court once yearly. Islay House, the seat of Hugh Morrison esq. D.L., J.P. is situated at the head of Loch Indaal, of which it commands a fine view, as well as of the adjacent country, and has fine gardens and attached grounds. Of the ancient church of St. Maclrubha there are now no remains, but several broken slabs lie in the churchyard, and on an eminence here, called the "Battery," is the carved stem of a cross. To the north-west, near Loch Ghruinnard, are the remains of a chapel, 30 feet in length, with two round-headed windows.

About 4 miles from Bridgend, on the road to Port-Askaig, is the village of BALLYGRANT, where there is a lead mine, which when working gives employment to a number of hands. The lead is of first-rate quality, and contains a small quantity of silver.

BRUICHLADDICH is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, 8 miles from Bowmore, on the road to Port-Charlotte. Here is a sub-branch of the National Bank of Scotland, a large distillery, a temperance hotel, and post office; at the quay vessels of considerable burden can unload in fine weather.

PORT-ASKAIG is a small creek or harbour on the north-east side of the island, opposite Feoline, in Jura, from which it is separated by the sound of Islay, about a mile broad. The port is 11 miles north-east of Bowmore, and has a quay where vessels of considerable burden can load and unload at low water. Here lobsters are found in abundance. Between Port-Askaig and Bowmore is a burial ground retaining fragments of a chapel and the base of a cross, and at Kills, near the port, are traces of the chapel of St. Columba, with the shaft of a cross, 6 feet in height, and several carved slabs.

PORT-CHARLOTTE is a small village in the parish of Kilchoman, on the west side of Loch Indaal, nearly opposite to Bowmore; it is 16 miles south-west of Port-Askaig, and contains a United Free church, a good inn, a distillery, and an excellent school erected by Charles Morrison esq. This portion of the island forms a peninsula, and on the southern part called "the Rhinnis" stood the ancient church of Kilchoman, of which no trace exists, but in the attached cemetery are several crosses, one of which is 8½ feet in height, finely carved with foliage, figures of angels, a crucifix, and bearing an inscription. At Kilchieran, about 2 miles south, is a much ruined chapel, retaining a piscina and aumbry and part of a font. At Nerahols, on the east side of the peninsula, is a burial ground with traces of a chapel, and a broken cross carved with the figure of a bishop and another with a mutilated carving of the Crucifixion. Population in 1901, 508.

PORTNAHAVEN is a small village and seaport and quoad sacra parish formed out of Kilchoman; it is 24 miles south-west of Port-Askaig, and 16 south-west of Bridgend. It is at the southern extremity of the island, having a quay formed by the rocks on the shore; and on Rhinnis Point near the port is a lighthouse, erected in 1824-5. Here are Established, United Free and Free churches and a public school. Off Portnahaven lies the small island of Oransay, on which are remains of a chapel 45 feet in length. Neave island, west of the entrance to Loch Ghruinard, also has remains of a chapel about 22 feet long. A considerable business is done in the season, the shores on this part of the island abounding with fish. Population in 1901, 728.

PORT-ELLEN is a seaport and village in the parish of Kildalton, on the east side of the island, 11 miles south-east of Bowmore and 22 south of Port-Askaig. The bay is considered safe, and is nearly a mile wide. The quay, formed on a rocky promontory near the middle of the harbour, was erected in 1826, and enlarged and improved in 1832 and 1881, and considerably extended in 1891. Here are an Established church, two Free churches, a Baptist chapel and a school. In 1902 a large public hall was erected by Iain Ramsay esq. J.P. of Kildalton. A branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland is established here, and there are two inns. In 1863 the late John Ramsay esq. M.P., J.P. of Kildalton, became proprietor of that parish (which includes the quoad sacra parish of Oa). The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing. At Kildalton, about 9 miles north of Port-Ellen, are the remains of a church of the Early-Pointed period, about 60 feet long, with very narrow lancet windows and a canopied piscina, and built into one of the windows a mailed effigy holding a sword, and on the left a small figure in a niche; in the burial ground stands a fine cross nearly 10 feet high, with expanding arms, traversed by a circle, and ornamented with bosses, grotesque figures and interlaced work, and in a panel on the east face is a group of the Virgin and Child; outside is another and later cross, 7 feet high. At Kilnoughton, about 2 miles west, are the remains of another church, 38 feet long within, but much dilapidated, and in the burial ground lie several sculptured slabs. Off Port-Ellen, and distant about 3 miles, is the island of Texa, on which are the remains of a small chapel, several carved slabs, and part of the shaft of a cross, with carvings of a galley, a stag hunt, and a figure bearing a sword and spear. There are some good golf links here. Population in 1901, 863.

About 4 miles east from Port-Ellen are the villages of LAGAVULIN and ARD-BEG. At the latter place are schools, and also one of the largest distilleries in the island; there is also a commodious harbour, with a quay, at which vessels of 12 feet draught of water can lie and discharge at ebb tide.

The fairs held in the island of Islay are as follows:—For cattle, Bridgend, last Wednesday in April, last Tuesday in June, July, August and September. At Bowmore, February, Tuesday, if 12th, or first Tuesday after; August 12th, if Friday, or first Friday after, for horses; November, for horses; Friday, if 12th, or first Friday after; for cattle, Tuesday before. At Bridgend, for cattle and horses, Tuesday before second last Wednesday in October. At Bridgend, for cattle, second last Wednesday in May. At Port-Ellen, for horses and cattle, in November, day before that at Bowmore. The area of the parish of Kilarrow and Kilmeny comprises 65,956 acres; rateable value, £14,505; the population in 1901 was 2,629, and of Kilarrow ecclesiastical parish, 1,813, and of Kilmeny, 822. The area of the parish of Kilchoman comprises 37,048 acres; rateable value, £10,423; the population in 1901 was 2,360, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,632. The area of the parish of Kildalton comprises 47,201 acres; rateable value, £10,561; population in 1901, 1,872.

JURA is an island about 30 miles long-lying off the west coast of the mainland,
 from which it is separated by the Sound of Jura, and from Islay by the Sound of that name; it is a civil and ecclesiastical parish, the head of a poor combination,
 and in the small debt court district of Bowmore. The island has a chain of mountains running down its centre, the most prominent of which are "the Three Paps," mountains rising to an elevation of 2,615 feet above the sea-level and forming part of the same ridge, but having two valleys
 separating them; the southernmost is called "Beina a' Chaolais" (the Mountain of the Sound), the next and highest, "Beinn an-Oir" (the Mountain of God), and the third "Benshianta" (the Consecrated Mountain). There are actually five of these conical peaks, but only three of them are distinguished as "the Paps." Corrabheinn (the steep peak) is the most precipitous, but is lowest of the cluster. The other hills range from 1,200 to 1,500 feet, and afford
 a shelter to the east side of the island,
 where nearly all the cultivation is carried on
 and where most of the inhabitants reside,
 the west side being wild and desolate,
 except where Loch Tarbert penetrates far into the interior. There is a good road along a part of the eastern side, from Lagg to Feolin on the Sound of Islay,
 where there is a ferry to that island.
 At the northern end are several large caves, and off the northern extremity, between this island and that of Scarba, is the whirlpool of Corrieveckan, formed by the Atlantic tide running into a small inlet. The parish includes the islands of Balnubha, Fladda, Garvelloch, Lunga, Scarba and Skervuile, on which last is a lighthouse. Jura belongs partly to Colin Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. who resides at Jura House, and to Alexander Crossman esq. of Ardussa. It is the most rugged of the Hebrides, being composed chiefly of huge rocks piled one on another in the utmost disorder. The west side of the island is wild, intersected by numerous torrents, which come rushing down from the mountains. There are some good fresh water lochs, the largest, Knockbreg, being 1 mile long.

MILLTOWN, now called Craighouse, the principal village in Jura, is 8 miles from Port-Askaig ferry, north-east of Islay. It has a good quay, and a large harbour, which being formed by several small islands, has obtained the appellation of Small Isles Harbour; a wharf extends about 400 feet in length, and most steamers can now come alongside at any state of the tide. About half a mile north of the village is the church of the parish of

Jura; but the ancient church stood at Kilkerrade, near the village of Kiels. There is also a United Free Church. The village contains a distillery.

GARVELLOCH, or Holy Island, contains an extensive old fort, called Dunconnel, once a stronghold belonging to the Lords of the Isles. On the Nun's Island are considerable remains of a nunnery, said to have been founded by St. Columba, and including the remains of a chapel, about 22 feet long, but without gables, having a single rectangular window at the east end played on both sides, and traces of an altar; the other buildings comprise several cells, with dome-like roofs; to the south is a burial ground, and at the head of a narrow creek a spring called St. Columba's well; on an eminence near is an altar-like tomb, reputed to be that of Eithne, mother of St. Columba.

SCARBA, a lofty but very rough island, has on its eastern side a burial ground and some remains of a chapel, 25 feet long internally.

LAGG is a small village on the east coast. The red deer abounds in the uplands of this island, and from this place there is a ferry to Kiels in Knapdale. At Tarbert are the foundations of a chapel, 32 feet long, a rude shaft, incised with a cross, and a monolith, 8 feet in height. At Ardussa, on the north-east, are also remains of a chapel, within a cemetery. The area of the parish is 93,794 acres; rateable value, £ . . . The population in 1891 was 724, and in 1901, 625, including 38 persons on Balnaha, 4 on Lunga Island, 13 on Scarba Island, and 7 on Fladda Island.

KILBRANDON and KILCHATTAN form a joint parish, in Lorne poor combination, consisting mostly of the islands of Seil, Easdale, Luing, Shuna and Torsay. It is divided from Mull on the west by the Firth of Lorne, and from Jura on the south by the Gulf of Corrieveekan, in which there is a whirlpool; its mainland portion is bounded north by the parish of Kilninver. The trade is mostly connected with the slate quarries at Easdale and Luing. A marble quarry was wrought near the castle over a century ago. Lead mines have been worked in the islands of Luing and Seil; and there are several caves in Kilbride well worth visiting. Ardnamaddy Castle, an ancient seat of the Breadalbane family, on the mainland, about 2 miles east of Easdale, stands on a fine and pleasant bay; the grounds are well wooded and contain several pretty cascades; it is now (1911) occupied by Geoffrey Lubbock esq.

EASDALE is a village in this parish, partly situated on the island of that name, and partly on the island of Seil, from which it is separated by a narrow sound; it is 16 miles south-west-by-south of Oban, 30 north-north-west of Lochgilphead, 40 west of Inveraray, and 142 west of Edinburgh, and is chiefly remarkable for its slate quarries, said to have been open for three centuries; they are the property of the Marquess of Breadalbane, and are wrought by the Easdale Slate Quarries Company Limited, who altogether employ about 150 men, and produce about 8,000 tons of slate annually, of a superior quality, which is exported to all parts of Scotland and the north of England. Several of the quarries are above 250 feet below the sea, and are kept dry by pumping with steam engines. The geological formation of the slate rock here is similar, as to stratification and cleavage, to the Welsh rock; and the island of Easdale, which is nearly a mile in circumference, is entirely formed on this rock, except a few trap dykes which here and there intersect it. There is a good quay for shipping the slate, and safe anchorage in the sound, through which the Glasgow steam boats pass almost daily to and from the north. A pier was erected in 1873, at which the steamers call regularly. Portmary slate quarries, opened nearly a century ago, have been leased to the Easdale Slate Quarries Company Limited, and afford slate of first-class quality, commanding a ready and extensive sale. There is good quay accommodation. Cuan slate quarries adjoin the above, and yield slate of a blue colour, and here also is a quay at which vessels are loaded in any state of weather or tide. Houses have been built at Portmary for the workmen employed there. The population of Easdale island in 1901 was 284.

LUING is a pleasant and fertile island, about 6 miles long and $1\frac{1}{2}$ broad, and in the ecclesiastical parish of Kilbrandon. At the head of Kilchattan bay, on the east side, are the remains of the ancient church of St. Blane; the north, south and west walls are standing, and on the north side is a mutilated doorway and window; the burial ground contains no ancient memorials, but one to Alexander Campbell of Achadnadhre, d. 14 Nov. 1829, aged 78, with a singular admocation.

At TOBERONOCHEY (in Luing) slate quarries were opened about 1883; lessees, Messrs. H. & A. S. McCowan. There is good quay accommodation, and vessels can be loaded at almost any state of the tide. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. is the principal landowner. In 1901 the village had a population of 617.

BELNAHUA, a small island to the north of Scarba, contains several quarries of excellent blue slate, at present wrought by Mr. John Shaw. The number of men generally employed is about 30. The chief landowner is Mrs. Morrison, of Glasgow.

SHUNA is a small island lying off the coast of Nether Lorn, in Kilbrandon parish, situated 14 miles south-south-west of Oban. Fladda and Torsay are also small islands in the above parish. The Marquess of Breadalbane and W. H. R. Bedell-Sturwidge esq. are the principal landowners. The magistrates of Glasgow are the proprietors of Shuna. Population in 1901, 8. The area of the parish is 13,384 acres; rateable value, £5,339; the population in 1901 was 1,568.

SEIL is a small island also in the parish of Kilbrandon, and contains a fragment of the ancient church of St. Braandon, and in the burial ground are several slabs curved with swords and foliage. The population of Seil island in 1901 was 422, and of Torsay island, 7.

KILBRIDE, see KILFINAN.

KILCALMONELL is a parish lying on the shore of West Tarbert Loch, bounded on the north and north-east by South Knapdale, east by Saddell, south by Killeen, and west by the Sound of Jura. From West Tarbert, at the head of the loch, two roads start, following the shores of the loch, the northern winding through a fine well-wooded country, leading to Ardpatrik and Kilberry, and the southern to Campbelltown. At ARDPATRICK is a ferry, to the opposite side of West Tarbert loch. From Ardpatrik a road branches to the west; and at a distance of 4 miles Carse is passed; 5 miles further is Drimdrisraig, the property of W. Todd Lithgow. West Tarbert Loch is about 9 miles in length, but very shallow at the upper end, and the Islay steamer pier is a few miles down. A road, running by the edge of the loch, past the landing stage of the Islay steamer, has been found a great convenience by passengers going to or returning from Islay. The Royal Mail coach passes daily, both going to East Tarbert and returning to Campbelltown. Near the sixth milestone is the village of Whitehouse, containing a board school. The parish church is in the village of Clachan, which see. Colin G. P. Campbell esq. of Stonefield; Duncan McKinnon esq. of Loup and Balinakill; Mrs. McKinnon, of Bonachan, and John R. Morton-Macdonald esq. D.L., J.P. of Lergie, are the principal landowners. The area is 28,403 acres; rateable value, £10,447; the population in 1901 was 1,915 in the civil and 838 in the ecclesiastical parish. Post & M. O. Office, Ardpatrik; Miss Christina Carswell, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Tarbert, Loch Fyne. Delivery, 8.40 p.m.; dispatch, 8 a.m. The nearest telegraph office is at Clachan (by ferry), 3 miles distant. Post, M. O. & T. Office, Whitehouse; Miss Mary McArthur, sub-postmistress. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Deliveries, 10.50 a.m. & 1.30 p.m.; dispatches, 10.50 a.m. & 1.10 p.m.

KILCHRENNAN and DALAVICH

form a united parish, lying along both shores of the centre portion of Loch Awe, the village of Kilchrenan in the north of the parish being 13 miles north-west of Inveraray, and the hamlet of Dalavich about 3 miles west of Kilchrenan. The parish, which is in the poorhouse combination of Lorn, extends 14 miles from north to south by 7 in breadth, and is bounded north by Glenorchy, east by Inveraray, south by Kilmartin and Glassary, and west by Ardshehall, Kilfinver and Kilmore. There is no railway station in the parish, but the stations at Taynuilt, Loch Awe and Dalmaild, all on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway, are not far from its northern boundary, and steamers ply between Port Sonachan and Loch Awe station. Port Sonachan is the principal ferry on Loch Awe, and 7 miles distant are the falls of Blarghour, to which a coach runs daily in summer. There are two Established and two United Free churches. The private Episcopal chapel of St. James, at Ardbrecknish, is a building of stone, erected in 1891 by Col. James Thorpe, of Ardbrecknish, and the chapel is in the gift of Capt. J. S. Thorpe, of Ardbrecknish. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C.; Mrs. McDougall, of Sonachan, and James H. Scott esq. of Eredine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 45,953 acres; rateable value, £4,208; the population in 1891 was 415, and in 1901, 394.
Post, T. & M. O. Office, Kilchrenan; Mrs. Isabella McColl, sub-postmistress. Letters should have Taynuilt, Argyllshire, added. Deliveries, 8 & 11 a.m.; dispatches, 8.20 a.m. (3 months in the year) & 3.45 p.m. No delivery on Sunday

form a joint parish on the west side of Kintyre, Killean, the kirktown on the coast, being 17 miles north-west of Campbeltown. The parish extends 16 miles from north to south by 5 wide, and is bounded north by Kilmalmonell and east by Saddell. Killean village is about 2 miles south of Tayinloan. Near the road stands the parish church, a small stone building, erected in 1787, and about a quarter of a mile further, on an eminence, is a United Free church with a tower, erected in 1846, and close by is a board school. Seals are very often seen lying on the rocks near the coast.

BALLACHANTUIE is a village in this parish, on the coast, about 10 miles north-west of Campbeltown; it contains a small church, erected in 1825, and a board school. The road between this village and Campbeltown has been much improved, and another road several miles in length has been cut along the shore, at a great expense, to avoid the hills on the old road. The chief employment of the people on this coast is fishing and agriculture.

GLENBARR is a village nearly 4 miles south of Killean, situate on the banks of the Barr water, which is well stocked with fine salmon and trout.

KILKENZIE is a hamlet in the extreme south of the parish, 5 miles from Campbeltown.

TAYINLOAN is a small village in this parish, about 19 miles north from Campbeltown.

The Duke of Argyll K.T., P.C. G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.; Alexander Fleming esq. of Kilmah; Major Charles B. Macalister J.P. of Glenbarry Abbey & Crabasdale; William Kennedy esq. of Glencreggan House, Kintyre; Stuart Hall esq. of Killean; Allan Hall esq. of Tangy; John Ronald Moreton-Macdonald esq. D.L., J.P. of Largie; Mrs. Macneal, of Ugadale, and the trustees of Robert Colvill esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 42,138 acres; rateable value, £11,153; population (1901), 1,078.

Post & T. Office, Muasdale; Mrs. Janet Thomson, sub-postmistress. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Letters arrive from all parts at 3.20 p.m. & are dispatched thereto at 8 a.m. No Sunday delivery. Glenbarr is the nearest money order office, 3 miles distant KILMALIE is a parish, formerly partly in Argyllshire, but in 1891 this portion was transferred and the whole of Kilmalie is now in Inverness-shire.

KILMARTIN is a parish about 5 miles north of Crinan and the Crinan canal, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Lochgilphead, its kirktown; the village is 8 miles north-west from Lochgilphead and 32 south-west from Inveraray, through Lochgilphead; the parish extends 11 miles from north to south by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the east by Kilmichael Glassary, north by Kilchrean and west by Craignish. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches: the Episcopal church of St. Columba, built in 1854, affords 115 sittings; the rectory, value £303, has been held since 1892 by the Rev. C. G. Calvert B.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. In the south of the parish, on a promontory projecting into Loch Crinan, is Duntroon Castle, which occupies the site of an old fortress, and is the property of Col. Edward Donald Malcolm R.E., C.B. of Potalloch, who possesses extensive demesnes in this part of the county; the castle was destroyed by fire June 7th, 1899. Potalloch House, the residence of Col. Malcolm C.B. of Potalloch, was erected in 1840, and close to the village are the beautiful ruins of Carnazarie Castle, formerly the residence of the Bishops of Argyll. At Barbreck is the mansion and demesne of A. Campbell esq. J.P. Fairs are held at Kilmartin on the last Thursday in November for horses and hiring servants. A prize show in connection with the Potalloch Farming Society is held here for cattle, sheep and horses, in September. Col. E. D. Malcolm C.B. of Potalloch, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 25,102 acres; rateable value, £5,285; population in 1901, 663.

FORD is a hamlet about the centre of the parish. The islands of Maccaskan and Ree are also included in this parish. The population of the latter in 1901 was 8.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Kilmartin; Mrs. Catherine McCaskill, sub-postmistress. Letters should have Argyllshire added. Delivery, 3.10 p.m.; dispatch, 10.25 a.m. No delivery on sundays

LISMORE and APPIN constitute a united parish, formed of the island of Lismore and the district of Appin on the mainland and on the east shore of Loch Linnhe. The island lies at the mouth of Loch Linnhe, and is about 11 miles long by 2 broad; its name in Gaelic signifies "the great garden," and it is still very fertile, though abounding in small hills. The parish, besides the island and the mainland district, includes the smaller islands of Musdale, Sheep and Shuna. At the Clachan of Lismore, about 3 miles from the northern point of the island, is the church of St. Moluac, constituted the cathedral church of the see of Argyll on its formation, c. 1200: it consists simply of the choir of an apparently never-completed structure, and forms an aisleless oblong, in the Decorated Flamboyant style, 60 feet in length by 30 wide and internally 52 feet in height; in 1749 it was new-roofed, and retains three sedilia with round-headed arches and a plain piscina with a pointed recess, with a trefoil-headed niche behind it, and on the north side an acutely pointed doorway leading to the sacristy: in 1898 the church was entirely renovated: in the attached burial ground are some carved slabs: there is also a United Free church and a Baptist chapel. The palace or castle of the bishops stood about 4 miles south-by-west from the cathedral, and there are some remains of the buildings and also remains of two Danish or Scandinavian forts, called Cœffin and Tirfuir. There is a small village at Port Ramsay, and at the southern point of the island on a ridge of rocks projecting some distance into the channel stands a lighthouse of stone, in almost a direct line between Oban and the sound of Mull; the light is catoptric. A pier has been erected at Achnacroish, on the east side of the island, at which the mail steamer calls daily and twice on Wednesday and Friday during the tourist season. Great quantities of excellent lime, as well as oats and potatoes, are exported from the island. The principal industries are farming and fishing. There are three fresh-water lakes, in which there is a good supply of trout &c. The Duke of Argyll K.T., P.O., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. the trustees of the late Rev. James Fell, the trustees of the late A. A. Campbell esq. of Lochell, the trustees of the late Donald Campbell and Duncan M'Coll esq. of Port Charren and Achinduin, are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish is 114,918 acres; rateable value, £29,612. The population in 1891 was 3,242, and in 1901, 3,707, of whom 500 were on the island of Lismore and 3,187 on the main land, the remaining 20 being on the three small islands. The ecclesiastical parish of Lismore had a population of 681 in 1901.

LOCH AWE is a small village at the head of the loch of the same name, with a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway, 22 miles east from Oban, and within the civil parish of Glenorchy and Inishail; it has a pier from which steamers start for the lower end of the loch, and which is connected with the railway. St. Conan's Established Mission church was built in 1882 by Walter J. D. Campbell esq. of Blythward. The loch, which is 24 miles long, and one of the most beautiful as well as one of the finest fishing lochs in Scotland, abounding in trout, is surrounded on the north by huge mountains, of which the highest is Ben Cruachan, 3,689 feet. Its banks are well wooded and numerous islands are dotted here and there; on Inishail, one of these, at the north end of the loch, there was formerly a convent of Cistercian nuns; the existing remains, internally 51 feet in length, seem to indicate a building of the First Pointed or Lancet period: in the surrounding burial ground are several carved slabs, and a prostrate cross, measuring 6 feet in length. On a promontory at the head of the loch stand the ruins of Killehurr Castle. The most convenient hotel for the angler is the Loch Awe.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Loch Awe (letters should have Argyllshire added); Thomas Dow, sub-postmaster. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m.; sunday (to callers), 11 to 11.30 a.m.; dispatches, 6.30 a.m. & 1 & 4.45 p.m.

LOCHGAIR, see GLASSARY.

LOCHGILPHEAD is a village and police burgh in the parish of Glassary, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district, and also a quoad sacra parish taken from the parishes of Glassary and South Knapdale; it is 2 miles north of Ardrishaig and 24 south-west of Inveraray by road, and takes its name from its position at the head of Loch Gilp, which is a small inlet of Loch

Fyne, 12 miles north of Tarbert, and is $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles long by 1 mile broad at the widest part, with Ardrishaig and the entrance to the Crinan canal near its mouth. The burgh consists of several well-paved streets, and is supplied with water from a reservoir belonging to the commissioners: the streets are lighted with gas supplied by a company. Lochgilphead was constituted a burgh under the Act 25 and 26 Victoria, cap. 101, and is governed by nine commissioners of police, including one senior and two junior magistrates appointed under the Act. Meetings of the Argyll Police and Lunacy Boards are held periodically; meetings of the Mid-Argyll district committee of the County Council, and of the local justices, monthly, and a sheriff's small debt court is also held every month; here also are the head quarters of the constabulary. The burgh possesses a commodious court house and gaol. The inhabitants are principally employed in agriculture and fishing. In front of the main street a part of the loch has been embanked, and a site provided for the large cattle fairs or markets. The town is connected by numerous excellent roads with all parts of the county, and a line of telegraph also connects it with Campbelltown, Inveraray, Oban, the Islands of Mull and Islay &c. and Glasgow. On the Kilmory side is a quay for the small craft engaged in the herring fishery and coal vessels. The Established church, erected at the head of Argyll street in 1827-8, and rebuilt in 1885, at a cost of £2,500, is of native stone, with freestone facings, in the Early Gothic style. There are United Free, Free and Presbyterian churches and a Baptist chapel; the Episcopal church, called Christ Church, on the north side of the town, was erected in 1852, and is a building in the Decorated Gothic style, consisting of nave and chancel, and has a stained east window: there are 180 sittings; the living, value £218, is at present (1911) vacant. The Argyll and Bute District Asylum is available for 490 persons. An Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected in 1898, and near it is the Combination Poorhouse. The Crinan canal passes a few hundred yards to the west of the town, and separates it from Auchendarroch, the residence of Alastair M. Campbell esq. J.P. A mile to the south-east is Kilmory, the seat of Sir Arthur John Campbell-Orde bart. D.L. surrounded with well-wooded grounds, forming a conspicuous feature from all parts of the loch, especially from Ardrishaig, which is nearly opposite. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in March for horses, on the Wednesday fortnight after Kilmichael May market, on the second Wednesday after the last Wednesday in October for black cattle, and on the second Thursday after the fourth Thursday in November for horses. The area of the burgh is 103 acres; rateable value, burgh £5,128, landward £12,937; the population in 1891 was 1,320, and in 1901 was—burgh, 1,313 (including 28 in Lochgilphead Combination Poorhouse), ecclesiastical parish, 2,318.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Colchester square, Lochgilphead; James McNeill, postmaster. Deliveries, 10.15 a.m. & 2 p.m.; dispatches, 12.15 noon & 5.55 p.m.; an extra dispatch at 10 p.m. during the summer months; no delivery on sundays district of Dunoon; the parish is 16 miles in length from north to south, by 9 in breadth, and is bounded on the south by Dunoon parish, east by Dumbarthonsire and west by Strachur, and contains the villages of Lochgilhead, Kilmorich, Cairndow and Carrick. Lochgilhead village is situated at the head of Loch Gail, 14 miles north of Dunoon, and 11 south by east of Inveraray, and has Established and United Free churches and an hotel; here also is a pier for steamers from Glasgow. The country on both sides of the loch is mountainous, and Ben Lochain, a little to the west, reaches a height of 2,306 feet. Loch Gail is about 6 miles long. Cairndow is a small village at the head of Loch Fyne, 10 miles north-east of Inveraray and 9 miles north of Lochgilhead, and has an Established church. Carrick is a village about 6 miles south of Lochgilhead on the west shore of Loch Gail, and has a pier. On a rock on the shore near the village are the ruins of Carrick Castle, a strong square tower, erected in the 14th century. It seems at one time to have been surrounded by the sea, and connected by means of a draw-bridge with the mainland. A little south of Cairndow are the policies and old house of Ardinglas; close by a new mansion was erected in 1907 by Capt. Sir Andrew Noble bart. K.C.B. The area is 69,711 acres; rateable value, £7,909; population in 1901 was 671.

LOCHGOILHEAD and KILMORICH form a joint parish, lying west of Loch Long, and east of the upper part of Loch Fyne, and in the small debt court

MORVERN is a parish lying on the mainland north of the Sound of Mull, its kirktown being at the north-west opening of the sound, 5 miles south-east from Tobermory and about 23 north-west from Oban; it is in the poor combination of Mull; it gives its name to one of the sub-divisions of the county, but the most important village is Lochaline, about 8 miles to the south-east. The parish is bounded on the south and south-west by the Sound of Mull, south-east by the Sound of Lismore, and Loch Linne, and north and north-west by Loch Sunart, and extends 20 miles from east to west by 12 in breadth; the country is mountainous, Ben Iadain rising 2,423 feet above sea level, and is principally occupied in grazing farms. The parish church at Kiel, about a quarter of a mile from the village of Lochaline, and traditionally founded by St. Columba, was rebuilt of local stone and red freestone in 1907: the manse is at Finuary, 4 miles north-west. The United Free church at Lochaline is a building of local stone with freestone dressings, and close to it is the manse, which commands a fine view of the Sound. The Roman Catholic chapel at Drimmin, opposite Tobermory, is served from Oban. Near Lochaline are the ruins of Ardtornish Castle, anciently one of the residences of the Lords of the Isles; and here in 1461, the then Lord, with his Council, met the envoys of Edward IV. of England and entered into an alliance. Near Morvern kirktown are the remains of Killundine Castle, and of Kinlochaline Castle, which is 3 miles from Lochaline. At Achabeg, 3 miles from Lochaline, is a stone circle in good preservation, designated in Celtic "The Stones of Sacrifice," and at Rahoy, near Loch Sunart, is a fine vitrified fort, as yet unexplored. The Glencripedale estate in this parish consists of 27,000 acres and is the property of the Messrs. Newton; on the estate are many houses. The area of the parish, which includes the islands of Carna, Friel-house and Oronay, in Loch Sunart, is 90,736; rateable value, £6,603; the population in 1891 was 820, and in 1901, 730.

MUCKAIRN, see ARDCHATTAN AND MUCKAIRN.

MULL is a large island lying south of Morvern, from which it is separated by the Sound of Mull, and contains the town of Tobermory and the villages of Bunnessan and Salen which are given under separate headings; it comprises the greater part of the parishes of Kilfinichen and Kilvicuen, and Kilninian and Kilmore, and the whole of Pennygowan and Torosay; in extent it is about 27 miles from south-east to north-west, and 20 broad at its widest part; the poor combination takes its name from the island, and the small debt court district is that of Tobermory, the chief town; the two northern parishes are mountainous, the principal hills being Ben More, 3,172 feet above sea level, and Dundagu, 2,505, both in Torosay parish; the western coast is much indented by bays and lochs, two of which, Loch Scridain and Loch Na-Keal, run 7 or 8 miles into the island, and on the south-east, Loch Spelve, which is almost land locked, is about the same length. There are many fresh water lochs, of which the largest, Loch Frisa, 4 miles long, contains salmon and sea trout and out of it flows the river Aros. Loch Buie, a salt water inlet on the south of the island, is now a fishing station; there are also several small rivers. The island contains many remains of ancient castles &c. among which are those of Duart, once the stronghold of the chiefs of the MacLeans, occupying the brink of a high cliff which shoots out from the coast of Mull into the sound, opposite Oban, and Aros Castle, the stronghold of the Lords of the Isles, and now the property of D. Cameron MacLachlan esq. J.P. of Aros. From this part of the Sound of Mull is seen the lofty Ben More, 3,172 feet, and the ridge of Ben Tallach, 2,800 feet. There are also a number of smaller forts round the coast, probably erected as a protection against the Norwegians. On the western side, close to the Ross of Mull, is still worked a quarry of red granite, or porphyry.

The parish of Kilfinichen and Kilvicuen occupies the south-western portion of the island on each side of Loch Scridain, and includes the islands of Dhubeartach (on which is a lighthouse), Earraid, Inch Kenneth, Iona (for which see separate heading) and part of Mull; it also contains the village of Bunnessan. At Kilvicuen are the remains of a chapel rudely built, and retaining only the side walls; but there is a slab with the effigy of a priest within a trefoil-headed niche, and having on one side a chalice, and on the other a much worn inscription. The small island of Inch Kenneth, at the mouth of Loch-Na-Keal, was, in 1773, visited by Dr. Johnson, and still retains the remains of a church of the First Pointed period, about 41 feet long and 20 feet wide, with a ruined sacristy on the south-east: the windows are lancets, deeply splayed: there is a piscina, and a number of sculptured slabs, including one with a male effigy in helmet and short tunic, and bearing on the left arm a target, and holding in the right hand a ball; the figure carries a sword and dagger, and at the feet is a dog. At Pennycross, at the mouth of Loch Buie, is a plain cross on five steps, and 4 feet 3 inches in height. The area comprises 60,937 acres; rateable value, £5,664; the population in 1891 was 1,735, and in 1901, 1,529, of whom 1,274 were on Mull, 39 on Erraid and 213 on Inna.

KILNINIAN and KILMORE parish forms the northern section of the island, north of Loch-Na-Keal, which nearly cuts it off from the other parts of the island, the distance between the head of the loch and the Bay of Aros being only about 4 miles; it includes the islands of Calve, Gometra, Little Colonsay and Ulva, and contains the town of Tobermory. At Kilninan, which is finely situated on Loch Tua, the parish church, built in 1754, occupies the site of the ancient fabric, of which no traces now remain; in the burial ground are a number of richly carved slabs and the shaft of a cross, and hard by is St. Ninian's well, a fount of pellucid water. At Aros is Glenforsa, the seat of Lieut.-Col. Charles Greenhill-Gardyne D.L., J.P. At Treshinish, on Calgary bay, is the old burying place of Kilmaluag, in which stands a plain cross, 3 feet in height, and at Kilmore are some remains of a chapel, with a burial ground, containing a sculptured slab. The area comprises 74,267 acres; rateable value, £11,296; the population in 1891 was 2,341, and 1901, 2,272, including 974 on Mull, 1,175 in Tobermory police burgh, 53 on Gometra and 59 on Ulva and 8 on Calve islands.

PENNYGOWAN and TOROSAY parish is the largest in the island, and occupies the south-eastern portion to the south of Loch-Na-Kael. At Pennygowan are the remains of an ancient chapel, 39 feet 9 inches long within, the walls of which are standing, but the gables have fallen; there are three narrow windows with slightly carved heads, and a doorway on the north-west, and inside is the lower portion of a tapering shaft, carved in bold relief with the Virgin and Child, and spreading foliage; in the burial ground are several slabs with effigies. At Laggan, near the head of Loch Buie, is a chapel 35 feet long, with walls and gables entire, and narrow lancet or round-headed windows and doorway, and the octagonal basin of a font. Duart Castle, which belonged to the chiefs of the MacLeans, is 4½ miles from the old ferry house of Auchnacraig, and stands on a promontory, which forms the eastern side of Duart bay, nearly opposite to the southern point of Lismore island: the shell of the building is complete, and forms a parallelogram, 100 feet by 65 feet, the oldest portion being a solid square tower with walls 12 to 14 feet thick, with round headed splayed windows; the other buildings date from 1663, with subsequent additions. The area is 89,584 acres; rateable value, £7,245; the population in 1891 was 997, and in 1901, 911, all on Mull. The population of the ecclesiastical parish of Torosay in 1901 was 316.

SALEN (which is given under a separate heading) is a village in Kilninan and Torosay parishes, on the south-east angle of the Bay of Aros.

Fairs in Mull: at Salen, a large horse fair is held on the first Thursday after the 20th of August, or on the 20th if a Thursday; at Craiganure, Morvern and the islands of Coll and Tiree, fairs are held a few days before those at Salen.

O.A. see ISLAY.

OBAN is a modern town, parliamentary and police burgh and seaport, in the parish of Kilmore and Kilbride, 136 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 117 north-west from Glasgow, 49 south-south-west from Fort William, 32 west-north-west from Inveraray and 80 south-east from Tobermory with a terminal station on a branch from Stirling of the Caledonian railway, and is a great centre of the steamboat traffic to the Caledonian canal, West Argyllshire and the Western Isles. The town, which is divided by a small river into two sections, is situated at the head of a fine bay, protected by the Island of Kerrera, and having an entrance at each end. This bay is from 12 to 20 fathoms deep, is well sheltered by lofty mountains, and large enough to anchor with convenience a good number of merchantmen. There are three quays, which have been enlarged and improved, so as to afford ample room to the various vessels frequenting the port, and the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses constructed a pier for lighthouse purposes in 1908. The imports of Oban consist chiefly of merchandise from Glasgow, Liverpool and Ireland, and its principal exports are whisky, wool and sheep dip. The principal streets of the town are lighted with electricity from municipal works erected in 1903. Here are also gas works and a fire engine station. The municipal government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies, six councillors and a town clerk, and Oban, with the burghs of Ayr, Campbeltown, Inveraray and Irvine, forms the Ayr district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. The Municipal buildings, in Albany street, erected in 1897, at a total cost of £6,600, are of freestone, and contain the offices of the burgh officials. A sheriff's court is held every Friday, and a justice of peace court when required, and a police and burgh court every Monday and when required. The Sheriff Court House and Police Station were completed in 1889, in the Classic style, from the designs of the late Mr. D. Macintosh, of Oban. The Court House, the main entrance to which is in Albany street, contains the offices of the county procurator fiscal, the sheriff clerk depute &c. The front is entirely finished with a polished freestone, and the rear of grey granite with freestone dressings. Further along Albany street are the Police buildings, consisting of the police station and the usual offices, the material employed being granite and freestone. The church of the quoad sacra parish of Oban, in Combie street, was erected in 1893, on the site of the old church, at a cost of £3,200, and affords 650 sittings. St. Columba's Established church, in George street, erected in 1875, is an elegant structure with a spire 120 feet high. In Tweeddale street is a Congregational chapel, rebuilt in 1880, capable of accommodating 500. The Free High church stands on a hill to the east of the town, and has a Mission hall in connection in Stevenson street. The United Free church, in Argyle square, was erected in 1893, at a cost of £4,700. There is another in Dunollis road, a Free Presbyterian church in Campbell street, and Congregational and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist was erected in 1864, at a cost of about £1,700, and consecrated in Sept. 1864 by the Bishop of London, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, with stained windows; it was enlarged in 1887. The chancel, sanctuary, side chapel, one side aisle and one bay of a new church were erected in 1910, on ground adjoining, and affords at present, together with the old portion, about 600 sittings. The rectory, net value £330, has been held since 1895 by the Very Rev. C. Pressley-Smith M.A. of Aberdeen University, who is also a canon of Cumbrae cathedral and dean of Argyll and the Isles. On the Corran esplanade stands the Roman Catholic Pro-cathedral and the residence of the Right Rev. George John Smith, Roman Catholic Bishop of Argyll and the Isles. To the south of the town a combination poorhouse was opened in 1862, for the poor of the several parishes in the district of Lorn; there are branches of the Bank of Scotland, Clydesdale Bank Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, National Bank of Scotland Limited, North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland in the town. The Burgh Board school, for secondary education, in Scorba road, was built in 1890 and enlarged in 1896 and again in 1908; the school contains special class rooms for science, cookery and art teaching, and is one of the three Centre schools in Argyllshire. One newspaper, the "Oban Times," is published here weekly. There is a fine sandy beach at Ganavan, about a mile to the north of the town, which can be approached by boat, and by means of the esplanade there is direct access along the sea-shore. Fairs and markets, for cattle, on the Monday and Tuesday before the last Wednesday in May, and the Friday and Saturday before the last Wednesday in October; for sheep and wool, on the Wednesday after Inverness July market; for horses, on the Tuesday before the fourth Thursday in March, September and November; and for hiring, April and October. The value of the burgh is 881 acres; rateable value, £47,799; the population in 1891 was 4,946, and in 1901, 5,728 in the police and 4,848 in the parliamentary burgh and 3,841 in the ecclesiastical parish. The population of St. Columba ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,893. The number of electors on the parliamentary registrar in 1910 was 813.

KILMORE AND KILBRIDE form a parish on the coast of the Firth of Lorne and south of the mouth of Loch Etive, the kirktown of which is 5 miles south from Oban; the parish includes the parliamentary burgh of Oban and the island of Kerrera; it is in the Lorn poor combination and small debt court district of Oban, and extends about 10 miles from east to west by 6 north to south; its boundaries are the parishes of Ardcattan on the north, Kilchrean on the east and Kilniver on the south. At Kilmore is an Established church.

DUNSTAFFNAGE, DUNOLLIE and GYLEN Castles are in the parish. The first-named stands on a promontory, at the southern point of the entrance to Loch Etive; it is believed to have been the residence of the Kings of Scotland until they removed, about 850, to Scoone, when Kenneth II. took with him the "Stone of Destiny," or coronation seat, now in Westminster Abbey; the circumference of the castle is about 400 feet. Dunstaffnage Castle is the seat of Angus John Campbell esq. Dunollie Castle stands on a rock on the coast, half a mile north of Oban, and has a fine keep, still in a tolerable state of repair. GYLEN Castle stands on the south-east point of the island of Kerrera, and was a stronghold of the MacDougalls of Lorn. King Alexander II. is said to have died on this island, about 1249, when on an expedition against the western isles, and Haaco, or Haakon, of Norway, made the island a rendezvous for his galleys. There is a quarry of excellent freestone, about 4 miles south, on the shore of Loch Feochan. The area of the parish comprises 29,503 acres; rateable value, exclusive of Oban, £11,166; the population in 1891 was 5,729, and in 1901 was 6,301, of whom 5,427 were in Oban and 99 on Kerrera island. The population of Kilmore and Kilbride ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 567. Included in the total population were 7 officials and 94 inmates of Lorn combination poorhouse.

CONNEL FERRY is a rising village, about 6 miles north of Oban, on the shore of Loch Etive, and has a station on the Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway, and in 1903 a line of railway was constructed from this place to Ballachulish. The Established church of St. Oran, erected here, is an edifice of Ben Cruachan granite, from designs by the late Mr. David Macintosh, architect, of Oban; the United Free church was erected and opened in August, 1893, at a cost of about £800. Here is also a public library and reading and recreation rooms.

SADDELL and SKIPNESS constitute a parish in Cantyre, on the west side of Kilmbrann Sound, in the small debt court district of Campbeltown, from which port its kirktown is distant 12 miles north by sea and 14 by road; the parish extends 22 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the west by the parishes of Kilmalmonell and Killeen. At Saddell village are the remains of an abbey, founded in the 12th century by Reginald, son of Sommerled Theme, of Argyll. At the mouth of Glen Saddell, near the sea, is a strong castle, a massive rectangular structure, and at Skipness, at the north end of the parish, stands another castle, built on a promontory and apparently of great strength, its outer wall being 7 feet thick and 33 in height; there are also remains of Culltes at Airds and Torrisedale. The parish church is at CARRADALE, a village on the coast, a little north of Glen Saddell, where a pier has been erected at which steamers from Glasgow and Campbeltown call regularly, and here also is a United Free church. The burial place of the Macdonalds is in the abbey of Saddell, and the castle was one of their strongholds. Major William Macalister-Hall J.P. of Torrisedale Castle; Anstin Mackenzie esq. J.P. of Glen Carradale; Major Matthew Charles B. McAlister J.P. of Glenbrar Abbey; John McLeod Campbell esq. of Saddell; Robert Graham esq. of Skipness and Colin G. P. Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. of Stonefield, Tarbert, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 46,388 acres; rateable value, £7,375; the population in 1891 was 1,156, and in 1901, 1,087, being 766 in the ecclesiastical parish of Saddell and 321 in Skipness.

SKIPNESS is a quoad sacra parish and village, on the coast opposite to Loch Ransa, 10 miles south-east of Tarbert, and has an Established church.

THE SMALL ISLES.

The Islands of Canna, Muck, Rum, Sandy and Eigg together form a parish; of these, the latter was the only one originally in Inverness-shire, but by Boundary Order No. 91, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," the other four were transferred from this county to Inverness-shire, where full particulars relating to them all will be found.

SOUTHEND is a parish, occupying the southern portion of Cantyre, and including the island of Sanda, which lies about 3 miles off its south-east point; the village is on the coast opposite Sanda and is 10 miles south from Campbeltown; the country is hilly, and the inhabitants are employed in agriculture and fishing. About half a mile south of the village stands a rock called "Dunaverty," the scene of many sanguinary events, and especially of the massacre here in 1649 of 300 of the M'Donalds by General Leslie. Few traces of the castle now remain, but a mile and a half west stand the walls of a church, said to have been founded by St. Columba, who landed in Scotland in 563. It was called Cill-Cholum-Chille, and the burial ground was formerly divided by a small stream, on the north side of which the highlanders were interred and on the south side the lowlanders, but that distinction no longer exists. A little to the north of the village stands the parish church, and in the village is a United Free church. On the island of Sanda are the ruins of the church of St. Ninian, a rectangular structure 32 feet 9 inches long, with a north doorway and three square-headed windows at the east end, splayed within; that on the south-east has, on its eastern side, a circular projecting piscina; on the north side stands a rude cross with a central boss, and near it an upright slab bearing a tall Latin cross; both are about 7 feet in height. On the summit of the Ship Rock, on this island, is a light-house, and there is another on the Mull of Kintyre. At DUNAVERTY there is a lifeboat station, and there is also a life saving apparatus at Southend. The Duke of Argyll K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O.; James Boyd esq. of Carskey and Lephinsthath, and Ninian B. Stewart esq. of Keil, are the principal landowners. The links of the Dunaverty Golf Club stretch along the bay of Dunaverty, and have a course of 18 holes. The area comprises 30,801 acres; rateable value, £9,547; the population in 1891 was 844, and in 1901, 732, of whom 19 were in Sanda. The island of Sanda is the property of John Ronald McDonald esq.

STAFFA is a small island about a mile and a half in circumference, lying midway between the islands of Iona and Ulva in the bay formed by the western side of Mull, and is remarkable for its caves, which attract a large number of visitors, for whose accommodation a regular steamship service from Oban is maintained during the summer months; the island is about 8 miles from the coast of Mull and about 50 from Oban, and presents an uneven table-land, resting on cliffs of variable height—the highest point occurring between the "Great Cave" and the "Boat." The caves are numerous, but those existing on the south and north sides are remarkable neither for their beauty nor for magnitude, and five on the north-east are distinguished chiefly for causing loud reverberations when the surge of the sea breaks into them, resembling the distant discharge of heavy ordnance. Proceeding towards the south from the landing place, the objects of chief interest are, first the Scallop, or Clamshell cave; second, the Buachaille, or Herdsman rock; third, the Causeway and the Face, or Colonnade; fourth, Fingal's or the Great Cave; fifth, the Boat cave; sixth, the Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave. At the Scallop, or Clamshell cave, the columns on one side are bent so as to form a series of ribs, not unlike the inside of a ship; it is 30 feet in height, 16 to 18 feet in breadth at the entrance, and its length is about 130 feet. The rock Buachaille (the Herdsman) is a pile of columns about 30 feet high, visible only at low water. The Causeway here, presenting an extensive surface, is formed of the broken ends of columns, once continuous to the height of the cliffs. The Great Face is formed of three distinct beds of rocks, of unequal thickness, inclined towards the east in an angle of about nine degrees. It is only with the morning sun that the great face of Staffa can be seen in perfection, as the general surface is undulating and uneven; great masses of light and shadow are thus produced, so as to relieve that which, in direct light, appears a flat mass of strong wall. The Cormorants, or Mackinnon's cave, is easy of access and terminates in a gravelly beach, where a boat may be drawn up. The Boat cave is accessible only from the sea. Staffa is visited five or six times a week by the steamboat from Oban; visitors are generally landed at Fingal's cave, and stay about an hour on the island to examine its wonders.

STRACHUR and STRALACHLAN, two civil parishes, form an ecclesiastical parish extending for 18 miles down the eastern shore of Loch Fyne from St. Catherine's ferry to Otter ferry, bounded on the east by Kilmoran, Inverchaolain and Lochgoilhead parishes and south by Kilfinan; these parishes are in the small debt court district of Dunoon, and each has a poor combination. The village of Strachur is about 8 miles south of Inveraray, and has Established, United Free and Free churches, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited; that of Stralachlan is about 4 miles further south; the district generally is mountainous.

ST. CATHERINE'S is a village, with a ferry on Loch Fyne, at the northern extremity of the parish, 9 miles north-west from Lochgoilhead, $\frac{1}{2}$ north-east from Strachur village and 2 $\frac{1}{2}$ from Dunoon. The remains of Castle Lachlan are about 5 miles south-west of Strachur village. The principal landowners in Strachur are Roger H. Plowden esq. and Fitzgerald Charles Macdonald esq. and John MacLachlan of MacLachlan esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner in Stralachlan. The area of Strachur civil parish is 23,986 acres; rateable value, £4,051; the population in 1901 was 496. The area of Stralachlan civil parish is 14,290 acres; rateable value, £1,563; the population in 1901 was 238.

TARBERT (or East Tarbert) is a village and fishing station on the west shore of and at the mouth of Loch Fyne, at the head of a good, well-sheltered harbour, and lying partly in the parish of South Knappdale and partly in that of Kilmacdonnell and Kilberry, 38 miles north-east of Campbelltown and 39 south-west of Inveraray, the distance from the head of its harbour to West Tarbert loch head being only a little over a mile; and the isthmus was protected by three forts, and Magnus, King of Norway (1093), is reported to have transported one of his galleys across in order to claim Cantyre as an island. The village of East Tarbert forms a semicircle around the harbour, which is only small, and the entrance to it narrow, with several sunken rocks, so that it is difficult of access, but when a vessel has once entered no water affords more perfect shelter and security. The quays are commodious, and for many years it has been a noted fishing station, particularly for herrings, which are sent to the Glasgow markets. In 1909 there were 273 fishing boats, aggregating 1,350 tons and employing 750 men and boys, registered in this port. Occupying a commanding situation, overlooking the town and harbour, are the remains of an ancient castle and fortification, built by King Robert Bruce and inhabited by him in 1326; immediately behind the village, in a southern direction, is the Established church; there are also United Free and Free churches. The Union Bank of Scotland and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches here. An extensive fair is held at Tarbert on the last Thursday in July, which continues three days, and is for the sale of horses. The population in 1891 was 1,775, and in 1901, 1,637 in the village and 2,126 in the ecclesiastical parish.

WEST TARBERT, one mile distant, at which there also is a good quay, is seated at the head of a loch of the same name, which commences here, and in a circuitous route winds through the mountains to Ardpatrick, beyond which it empties itself into the ocean. Two roads follow respectively the east and west sides of the loch.

TIREE (or TYREE), an island lying to the west of Mull and 3 miles south-west of Coll, is a parish in the poor combination of Mull and is divided ecclesiastically into two parishes, that of Tiree and the quoad sacra parish of Hylopi; the island is about 12 miles in length from north-east to south-west and varies in breadth from 1 to 5 miles; it is 35 miles west from Tobermory on the north of the island of Mull. The island is flat and the soil is very fertile; there are long stretches of sandy beach. There is a small harbour available only for small craft, at Scarinish Bay, on the south-east, and another with a quay at Hynish in the south. A pier, commenced in 1908, is now (1911) in course of construction in Pott Bay; the estimated cost is £12,000. Here are established and United Free Churches and a Baptist chapel. In the island are numerous lochs, containing eels and trout. Marble abounds, but from some unexplained cause the quarries cannot be worked. In the churchyard at Soroby, still much used, is the shaft of a cross, carved with a representation of St. Michael overcoming the dragon, and bearing the inscription:—"Hec est crux Michaelis Archangeli Dei Annae Abbatissa de Y." Here also is a ponderous cross of granite, 3 feet 8 inches high, on a heavy plinth, and called Maclean's Cross, and a number of ancient slabs, bearing various devices. At KIRKAPOOL, north-east of the island, is a rudely built chapel, internally about 7 feet in length, with plain round-headed doors and windows arched with slates placed endways, and on an eminence near is another chapel 23 feet 5 inches long; the walls and gables remain, and there is a window on each side at the east end, and a south doorway. At KILKENNETH, on the west, is a ruined chapel, retaining little more than its end walls and gables, and a west doorway. At Kinnavara, to the south-west, is Temple Patrick, once 32 feet long, but little of the fabric is now left; under the east end is a rock basin over two feet deep, and called St. Patrick's well, and on the south side lies a slab incised with a cross. A fair for horses is held in August on the Monday before that of Mull. On the dangerous rocks called Skerryvore, which lie about 12 miles west-south-west of Tiree, a lighthouse has been built of granite, obtained from the quarries of Mull; the light is dioptric. The area comprises 18,896 acres; rateable value, £4,477; the population in 1901 was 2,195 in the civil and 932 in the ecclesiastical parish; these figures include three persons at Skerryvore.

HYLIPOL is a quoad sacra parish formed from Tiree, and contains an Established church; the population in 1901 was 1,263.

TOBERMORY, the capital of Mull, is a seaport, village and police burgh, in the parish of Kilmorian and Kilmore, and a quoad sacra parish, the head of a poor combination and of a small debt court district; it lies on the north side of a small bay opposite to and distant 3 miles from Drimmen, in the western angle of Morven. The town, built on a series of terraces overlooking the harbour, was founded about 1788, together with Ullapool, by the British Fishery Society, as a station for fishing boats, but subsequently became the property of Alexander Allan esq. of Aros. The harbour is one of the safest among the western isles, being protected from the Sound of Mull by Calve Island, which stretches nearly across the entrance, but leaves ample room at its northern point for the largest vessels to enter the harbour, though few vessels except small craft can enter at the south-east point, even at high water. There are two quays; the first was erected in 1835 by Colonel Campbell, of Knock, but subsequently a new quay and pier was constructed by F. W. Caldwell esq. proprietor of that part of the town known as Mishnish, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, and opened in 1864; it is more capacious and has a greater depth of water, and is provided with offices, stores, waiting rooms and a cattle pen. About 2 miles from Tobermory, in the Sound of Mull, is the "Runagall" lighthouse, erected in 1857, and a wireless telegraph station, on the Marconi system, has been erected on the hill facing the bay. The town is governed by a provost and two bailies; the sheriff substitute holds an ordinary and small debts court once a month; a police court is also held here as business requires. Tobermory is the polling station at county elections for all voters residing in the islands of Mull, Coll, Iona, Tiree, Ulyva, and in Morven, and, as the only town in Mull and the large circumjacent district, it possesses much provincial importance, and is the seat of a considerable domestic trade. The Established church was rebuilt in 1896-97, on the site of the old church, at a cost of upwards of £2,500, and opened in October, 1897, by Dr. Norman McLeod, of Inverness; in the ancient parish of Kilkcolmkill, now united to Kilmorian, are some traces of the old church, and a fine slab with two figures in canopied niches and a much-worn inscription: by the side of a narrow lane, near the burial ground, is the well from which the town takes its name. The Free church, situate in the centre of the village, was built at a cost of about £3,500, the late Mrs. Bryce Allan and her son, Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, being the principal contributors. The United Free church was built in 1911 at a cost of £2,000; there is also a Baptist chapel. The County Buildings, situated above the town, are of stone, and comprise the sheriff's court and procurator fiscal's office &c. The union poorhouse, erected at a cost of £7,700 for the poor of the six surrounding parishes, and distant rather over a mile from Tobermory, will hold 130 inmates. Aros Hall, the gift of Alexander Allan esq. of Aros, includes a reading room, billiard room, circulating library, and a large hall capable of seating 300 persons; the institution is open daily for the use of the inhabitants, and visitors are also admitted on payment of a small fee. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited occupies a handsome building of stone, in the main street, completed in 1865. There is also a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and a Savings Bank. The principal hotels are the "McDonald Arms" and the Mishnish Hotel and the "Mull" temperance hotel. A handsome stone clock tower, the gift of Mrs. J. P. Bishop in memory of her sister, was erected on the promenade in 1905. A regatta is held here once a year. From a hill in the neighbourhood a view of the islands of Tiree, Coll, Eiger, Muck, Skye and various others of smaller importance is obtained. The Spanish admiral's ship "Admiral of Florence," one of the war vessels of the "Armada," in 1588, was destroyed when at anchor here by an emissary of Queen Elizabeth's Government. Part of the wood of this vessel was presented to His Majesty George IV. on his visit to Edinburgh, by Sir Walter Scott; and there is in the possession of the Duke of Argyll a large bronze breech-loading cannon, which belonged to the same vessel, found many years since in Tobermory bay. Diving operations are now (1911) in progress to attempt further recoveries from the wreck. Close to the town is Mary's Loch, a beautiful expanse of water, situated between two finely-wooded hills, extremely precipitous in their descent. The population of the town in 1891 was 1,154, and in 1901, 1,175; the ecclesiastical parish contained in 1901 1,301 persons. The area of the burgh is 464 acres; rateable value, £4,971.

ULVA is an island and quoad sacra parish, in the parish of Kilmorian and Kilmore, Isle of Mull, forming the south side of Loch Tuadh, and divided at the eastern end from the Isle of Mull by a narrow strait; it measures 7 miles from east to west by 2½ in breadth, and is said to produce the best kelp in the Western Islands. There are a great number of basaltic columns on the shore, and on the south side is a cave 60 feet long, 58 feet broad, and 30 feet in average height, having an arched entrance in the face of an abrupt rock, with a span of 37 feet. About a mile to the north, on the mainland of Mull, a mountain stream falls in one unbroken descent from a rock 66 feet in height directly into the sea. Here is an Established church. The island is now the property of Francis William Clark esq. J.P. who resides there. The population of the island in 1891 was 46, and in 1901, 53; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 205.

AYRSHIRE

AYRSHIRE is a maritime county, stretching along the eastern shores of the Firth of Clyde, from Wemyss Bay, opposite to Mellan in Argyllshire, by the eastern entrance to the Kyles of Bute, in an irregular curve trending eastward as far as Ayr town, from which it turns to the south-west, ending at the south at Loch Ryan, which separates it from Wigtonshire, the distance measured direct from north to south being about 55 miles (but taking the line of coast 84), its breadth varying from 5 miles at each extremity to 26 at the widest part of the crescent, just below Troon; it is bounded on the north and north-east by Renfrewshire, east by Lanarkshire and Dumfriesshire, south-east by Kirkcubrightshire, south by Wigtonshire and west by the Firth of Clyde; the county area comprises 724,523 acres, and it is divided into the 3 districts of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle. The first lies on the southern side of the Doon; the second comprehends the whole of the county north of the river Irvine; and Kyle division is between the rivers Doon and Irvine. In point of size Ayrshire ranks as the seventh and in population as the sixteenth of the counties in Scotland. The population in 1901 being 125,269 males and 120,199 females, or a total of 254,468, against 226,386 in 1891; the number of houses in 1901 being, inhabited, 51,613, uninhabited, 3,705 and building, 548.

Early History.—This county was anciently inhabited by the British tribe called the Damnii, a branch of the Celtic nation, sometimes known as the Strathclyde Britons, who survived the period of the Roman yoke, and were in the course of time overrun by and amalgamated with the Scots-Irish from Kintyre, where they had founded the Dalriadic monarchy, at what is now known as Campbeltown. About 750 these again were partly conquered by a number of Northumbrians, who settled in Kyle, and from this followed the close connection in Ecclesiastical government between this portion of Scotland and the see of York. From this time up to 1097 it formed part of the Celtic Kingdom of Scotland, under the monarchs who held their court, first at Dunstaffnage and subsequently at Scone. Upon the accession of Edgar, in 1097, the jurisprudence of the county became changed, and an active colonization commenced from England. Barons now sprang up, who built castles and churches, and towns arose, which became inhabited by persons engaged in trade. In 1263, Hacon, King of Norway, fought a battle near Largs with Alexander III. King of Scotland, by whom he was defeated and compelled to retire to Norway. During the wars of Bruce and Edward, Ayrshire was the scene of perpetual turmoil. The son of the first Bruce marrying the Countess of Carrick, became Earl Carrick in her right; and it was then his son who, on the expulsion of Baliol, formed pretensions to the throne, which he obtained by his courage, fortitude, and prudence; thus Ayrshire possessed the honour of giving birth to the illustrious restorer of the Scottish monarchy. Bruce landed in Ayrshire from Arran to claim the kingdom. Some of the various exploits of Wallace, in supporting the national independence, occurred in this county, and scarcely any division in Scotland remained so long under the baronial system as Ayrshire. For centuries the chiefs were perpetually engaged in feuds and rebellions, and so weak or inefficient were the laws that it was seldom redress or punishment followed outrage. The Boyds, the Dalrymples, the Campbells, the Colvilles, and the houses of Eglinton and Glencarn had their respective quarrels of long standing, causing occasionally sanguinary slaughter. A great proportion of these disturbances arose from contests regarding heritable jurisdictions, such as stewardships and bailiwicks of certain districts. The county was frequently distracted by feuds of the Kennedys. So late as the reign of James VI. this powerful clan was involved in a feud of more than ordinary importance, which originated in the cruel treatment of Allso Stewart, the commentator, of Crossraguell, in 1570, by the Earl of Cassillis, and his brother, Thomas Kennedy, of Culzean. The vexations which the people of this county so long suffered inclined them to the institution of the Covenant, and the consequence was that, during the heats of the 17th century, few took so active a share in the insurrections which were opposed to royal authority. A committee of the Privy Council sat at Ayr in 1678, for directing the military executive; in July, 1680, a conflict occurred, wherein several insurgents were taken, and the rebellion on this occasion quelled. Proceedings of this harassing character induced a ready accession to the government of William III. Many remains of Danish forts and crannogs, as well as of numerous castles are scattered over the county; along the rocky portion of the coast occur the castles of Greenan, Dunure, Colzean and Turnberry, and there are several abbeys. To the south of Irvine stands the ancient castle of Dundonald, once a royal residence, and afterwards the family seat of the Cochrans, Earls of Dundonald. The castle of Rowallan is a few miles distant from Kilmarnock, and stands almost on the boundary line which separates the parishes of Kilmarnock, Fenwick and Kilmaurs. Dean Castle, the former residence of the Kilmarnock family, is still an interesting ruin.

Soil, Surface &c.—The most fertile part of the shire is the great vale of Cunninghame, which is comparatively level; Kyle possesses much valuable land towards the coast, but its interior lies high and is a rough mountainous territory; Carrick is a hilly wild region throughout, and is only of value or interest in its northern angle, betwixt the rivers Doon and Girvan. In a general sense, the whole district of Ayrshire is shut out on its easterly boundary from the adjacent counties by high ridgy land. The sea coast is mostly sandy, and indented with several excellent harbours, and in the rocks are some remarkable caves, worthy of the inspection of the curious. Though moist, the climate is healthy, the rainfall in this being much above that of the central and eastern counties, heavy rain not being infrequent and occasionally of long duration. For fully two-thirds of the year the wind blows from the west and south-west, thus causing the climate to be more temperate and mild than counties on the east coast. The principal eminences are:—Hareshaw Hill, 1,527; Cairn table, 1,650; Misty Law, 1,663; Hill of Stake, 1,711; Knockdolian, 1,950; Black Craig 2,298; Shalloch on Minnoch, 2,520; and Kirrieroch Hill, 2,562 feet.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—It was not until about the middle of the 18th century that the inhabitants of Ayrshire began to discover and avail themselves of its capabilities as an agricultural district. The settlement at this period of Margaret Countess of Loudoun in Lorn Castle may be deemed the epoch of efficient improvement, as by her great assiduity, precept and example, agriculture was promoted and encouraged; and in a short time the nobility and gentry of Ayrshire began in earnest to improve their estates upon systematic principles. Farmers were invited by them from more southern shires to instruct the tenantry, and the system of dairy farms then inaugurated has been persevered in, and the dairies in this district are superior, perhaps, to any others in Scotland; the value of their produce in milk and butter is very considerable, and "Dunlop" cheese is unrivalled throughout the country, finding a ready market; under the auspices of the County Agricultural Association, and many individual proprietors, of whom the late Mr. Campbell, of Craigie, was one of the foremost, the Cheddar method has been generally introduced, and with great success; so that Cheddar cheese is one of the staple productions of the county. According to the Agricultural Returns for Great Britain for 1810, the chief crops are oats, 44,082 acres; barley, or bere, 716; beans, 1,177; wheat, 783; total of all corn crops, 47,150; potatoes, 8,490; turnips and swedes, 326,223 acres; mangolds, 520; total of all green crops, 16,517; hay of all kinds, 32,129; clover, sainfoin and grasses (not for hay), 54,753; permanent pasture, 167,590; total area of land and water, 730,928 acres; mountain and heathland used for grazing, 326,223 acres; woods and plantations, 26,308; orchards, 117 acres; small fruit, 168. The live stock in 1910 comprised 7,612 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 2,099 unbroken horses; 53,450 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; 49,026 of other cattle; 159,221 ewes, kept for breeding; 195,439 other sheep; sows kept for breeding, 746; other pigs, 12,555. The breed of cattle has been much improved, the Ayrshire short-horns being much prized, both for the purpose of the dairy and the butcher. The manufacture of stockings, carpets, cloths, and bonnets extended generally, but Kilmarnock became the most noted. At the capital of the county, dye works have been established, also woollen factories, iron foundries, tanneries, large steam-engine manufactories and chemical works; at Cairns, well-known and extensive cotton works; at Kilbirnie are several works for the production of fishing nets; Mauchline is noted as the place where fancy wood-articles are made; at Stevenston are iron works and a dynamite manufactory; at Old Cumnock is an extensive pottery and a woollen manufactory; at Irvine, chemical manufactories and iron forges; and Muirkirk is noted for its ponderous iron works.

Fishing is also carried on at all the large seaports, herring, cod, ling &c. being caught, and in the lochs and streams there is an abundance of trout, and in the larger rivers are to be found salmon. The number of fishing vessels registered at the port of Ballantrae, which includes Ayr, Ardrossan and Troon, was 399 of 1,222 tons, and employing 974 men and boys. The number of vessels built in 1909 at Ardrossan, Ayr and Troon was 9, equal to 3,611 tons net.

The trade in minerals is an important one, especially that in coal, the figures as shown by the return for 1909 being, coal produced, 4,071,699 tons; valued at £1,272,406; fire-clay, 3,637 tons; value, £1,197; iron ore, 276,758 tons; value, £110,703; limestone, 4,109 tons; sandstone, 64,018 tons; value, £18,522. There were 6 ironworks in the county, with 31 furnaces at work in one year, the average number of furnaces actually in blast during that time being 26½, producing 413,742 tons of pig iron; the amount of iron ore, including clodder used in the production, was 919,400 tons and 777,562 tons of coal.

Rivers, Lakes, Springs and Railways.—In the ridge of hills which intersects the district of Carrick, almost all the rivers in the south originate. The Tweed, the Esk, the Nith, the Annan, the Urr and others flow to the east and south; while the Stinchar, the Girvan, the Doon, the Ayr and the Lugar traverse the county and pour their fruitful streams into the Irish Channel. Besides these, the Irvine and some smaller rivers water the northern parts of Ayrshire. In the midst of so many minerals, a number of springs impregnated by their qualities are to be expected; and indeed almost every parish has its mineral water, though none have attained the dignity of spas. There are various inland lakes, particularly in Carrick—the most extensive being Loch Doon, which is six miles long and about three-quarters in breadth, from whence the river Doon flows. The county is well served by railways, the Glasgow and South Western, which enters the county in the north-east, near Beith, runs from there to Dalry, whence a branch goes to the coast at Ardrossan and on to Largs, the main line continuing from Dalry to Kilmarnock, Mauchline and New Cumnock, leaving the county at about 3 miles east from the latter place for Dumfries &c., while from Mauchline a line passes through Tarbolton to Ayr, meeting there another branch from Kilwinning (the junction south of Dalry) which runs by Irvine and Troon to Ayr, and from Old Cumnock a branch runs east to Muirkirk, and another west forking north to Auchincruive, on the Mauchline and Ayr branch and south-west to Dalrymple, where it joins a line which runs from Ayr to Maybole and Girvan, leaving the county three miles north of Glenwhilly station, on its way to Stranraer from Dalrymple, via Hollybush; another branch runs to Dalmellington, a branch also runs from Irvine to Kilmarnock and thence via Galston to Newmilns, and the Caledonian railway has a line from Glasgow, entering the county at Lugton, where it branches north-west to Beith and south-west via Dunlop to Kilmarnock.

Ecclesiastical and Civil Divisions, Population &c.—The whole of Ayrshire was formerly comprehended in the bishopric of Glasgow, and it formed three deaneries, corresponding with the three divisions of Carrick, Cunninghame and Kyle; it now contains 69 ecclesiastical parishes, comprised in the two presbyteries of Ayr and Irvine, within the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. The civil divisions consist of 17 parishes, in which are 2 royal burghs (Ayr and Irvine) and 15 police burghs. The Ayr contributory parliamentary burgh comprises Ayr, Campbeltown, Inverary, Irvine and Oban; two members also represent the shire at large. The parliamentary constituency of the Northern division was in 1911 16,665, that of the Southern division being 18,733.

ALLOWAY is a small village, 2 miles south of Ayr, with a station on the Maidens and Dunure Light railway (a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway); it is also a quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Ayr and Maybole, and is remarkable for its connection with the poet Burns and his writings. The Burns monument here consists of a circular rustic base (in which is a room containing relics), surmounted by nine fluted Corinthian pillars supporting an entablature, above which rises a copper tripod. In Monument Ground are original statues of Tam O'Shanter and Souter Johnny &c. by James Thom, a Scottish sculptor; on the opposite side of the road stand the remains of auld Alloway kirk, the scene of Tam O'Shanter's frolic; it is now a roofless oblong structure, believed to date from the early part of the 16th century, and has a bell hanging in its belfry dated 1657. The present parish church stands opposite. At the entrance to the village is a thatched cottage, shown as the birthplace of the poet, 25 Jan. 1759, and adjoining is a museum containing numerous valuable manuscripts and relics, including a manuscript of "Tam O'Shanter," a 1st edition of Burns's works, purchased for £1,000, and his family Bible, for which £1,700 was paid. Near the monument is the "auld brig," and west of the kirk is the well where stood the thorn tree on which "Mungo's mither banged herself." Close to the kirk is Cambusdoon, the seat of William Baird esq. D.L., J.P., and a little further west is the old castle of Newark, the residence of Archibald Walker esq.; Doonholm is the seat of James Kennedy esq.; Auchendrane is the residence of Sir James Coats bart. J.P.; Old Auchendrane of James G. Walker esq. and Rozelle of Misses Houldsworth. Population of the parish in 1901, 969.

ARDROSSAN is a seaport town, police burgh and parish on the west side of the county at the mouth of the Firth of Clyde, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, and has also made some progress as a watering place. Originally only a small hamlet round the castle, it was at the beginning of this century planned as a port of outlet for Glasgow, and a fine dock built, and the importation of ores, limestones &c. and the export of coals &c. has in consequence greatly increased. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4 1/2 in breadth, and is bounded north by West Kilbride and Dalry, east by Kilwinning, and south by Stevenston, and besides the town of Ardrossan, the parish includes a large portion of the town of Saltcoats; it is in the poor combination of Cunningham and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The town is situated on a promontory to the south of the port, 30 miles south-west from Glasgow and 8 north-west of Irvine, and being laid out on a regular plan and the houses built chiefly of stone, has a fine appearance. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There are established and United Free Churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew was built in 1875 and consecrated in 1883. The Rev. Alexander Copland M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1902. The Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches here, and there are two hotels. A weekly newspaper, the "Ardrossan and Saltcoats Herald," is published in the town. The harbour was commenced under the auspices of Hugh, 12th Earl of Eglinton, who died in 1819, and by him and his successors a sum of nearly £400,000 has been spent upon it. The dock occupies an area of seventeen acres, and is one of the best in Scotland, having a depth of water on the sill of 18 feet at low water, and 27 at high water, as well as being fitted with all the latest appliances for both loading and discharging vessels, and railway trains are run on to the quays. The island of Horse alters the harbour from the north-west. The total value of the imports in 1909 was £424,183, and of the exports £125,986. There is a yard for shipbuilding at the harbour, engineering works, and some extensive timber yards and saw mills. The picturesque ruins of Ardrossan Castle stand on an eminence overlooking the town; here also is the Territorial R.F.A. drill hall. On an adjoining eminence is a monument to the late Alexander McFadzean esq. M.D. who, during the later years of his life, interested himself deeply in the various institutions connected with this place. The area of the parish comprises 6,703 acres; rateable value, burgh, £43,698, parish, £75,143 (including a portion of Saltcoats). The population in 1891 was 9,897, of whom 5,294 were in Ardrossan town and 4,228 in Saltcoats, and in 1901 was 11,845, of whom 5,933 were in Ardrossan burgh and 5,414 in Saltcoats; included in the total parish was 144 on board ships. The area of the burgh is 779 acres.

AUCHINLECK is a parish and village, on the eastern side of the county, 15 miles from east to west by 5 in breadth, bounded north by Muirkirk and Sorn, south by Ochiltree and Old Cumnock, and east by Lanarkshire; it is in the Kyle poor combination. Coal and ironstone are produced here, but the soil is for the most part rather unproductive. The village is somewhat above a mile north from Old Cumnock and about 3 from Sorn and Cantine, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; Established and Roman Catholic churches and an Original Secession chapel. A Public Hall was erected in 1837 in celebration of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. About 3 1/2 miles west from the village, in an angle formed by the Dippleburn and Lugar, stand the ruins of the castle, and in the neighbourhood is the "Place of Auchinleck," a mansion erected in the last century by Lord Auchinleck, senator of the College of Justice and father of the eminent and amiable James Boswell esq. the friend and biographer of Johnson; the house is still the property of the Boswell family. A fair for the sale of lambs is held annually on the last Tuesday in August. The Marquess of Bute, the trustees of the late Sir James Boswell, Sir Claud Alexander bart. Charles Howatson and Messrs. William Baird & Co. Limited, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 24,141 acres; rateable value in 1910, £34,416. The population in 1901 was 6,605, including 2,168 in the village, and in 1891 the figures were 6,103, and 1,489.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Auchinleck (letters should be addressed Auchinleck, Ayrshire); Miss Jane Crichton, post-mistress. Deliveries, 7.25 a.m. & 1 (to callers) & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 8.25 & 11.50 a.m. & 3.50, 6 & 9 p.m. Sundays, delivered to callers, 9 to 10 a.m.; dispatched, 9.45 p.m.

AYR is a seaport and royal burgh, the capital of the county, a parish and head of a sheriff court district and of the poor combination of Kyle, and of a petty sessional court, on the eastern shore of the Firth of Clyde, occupying both sides of the mouth of the river Ayr. The Glasgow and South Western Railway has a station here, with lines of rail from Glasgow, Ardrossan, Troon &c. in the north, and from Dalmellington and Girvan and Stranraer (via Maybole) in the south; there is a line running east to Muirkirk, Lenark and Edinburgh, and in 1905 a new light railway (named The Maidens and Dunure) was opened, which runs along the coast by the "Heads of Ayr" to Girvan. Ayr is 77 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 33 south-south-west of Glasgow, 34 south-south-west of Paisley, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 11 south of Irvine. The parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded south by Maybole, east by Dalrymple and Cuyllton, and north by Monkton.

In the 12th century, when the town was founded by William the Lion, traces of a Roman station were still extant. Wallace appears to have relieved it from an English garrison, and Cromwell built a fort, using for the purpose the old church and giving the inhabitants a grant of money, with which they built what is now known as the old kirk, on the site of a Dominican priory. The river is crossed by four bridges, two of which are celebrated by Burns as "the two briggs o' Ayr;" the old bridge, built in the reign of Alexander III. (1249-1285) by Isobel Lowe and her two sisters, was thoroughly restored between 1907-10, the sum of £11,000 being subscribed by admirers of Burns' poems. The new bridge, built in 1788, was rebuilt in 1878.

The municipal burgh of Ayr is formed by the districts of Newton and Wallace-town, in conjunction with Ayr proper, and the civil government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and eleven councillors. For parliamentary purposes Ayr is connected with the burgh of Irvine, in this county, and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban, in Argyllshire, the group returning one member to Parliament. The municipal burgh of Ayr was, up to 1895, within the parishes of Ayr, Newton-on-Ayr and St. Quivox, but by a Local Government Order, dated 15th May 1895, these three parishes were united under the one parish of Ayr.

The convenience for shipping is superior to most of the towns on the coast, as the harbour has been much improved by the construction of an extensive stone pier, affording a greater depth of water and security for vessels. A dock, eight acres in extent, with a quay space of 2,000 feet, and constructed at a cost of £160,000, has a depth of water at low tide of 15 feet. In 1897 the south side of the harbour was entirely rebuilt, at a cost of £23,000, and the Glasgow and South Western Railway Co. have built a new bridge to the south side of the harbour, thus affording greater facilities for the iron ore and limestone traffic. The income of the Harbour Trust for 1910 was £34,284. An extensive trade is carried on in the export of coal from this place to Ireland, the total for 1909 being 613,254 tons; coal mines, as well as fine quarries of stone, abound in the neighbourhood. The imports comprise iron ore, beans and timber. The total value of the imports in 1909 was £162,875, the principal article being iron ore, £92,473. The tonnage of vessels that entered the port in 1909 was 63,751. In the general coasting trade 1,163 vessels of 120,700 tons entered the port, and in the trade between Great Britain and Ireland 1,603 vessels of 222,162 tonnage. The number cleared was: General coasting 921 of 142,228 tons and between Great Britain and Ireland 1,876 of 250,370 tonnage. The number of vessels registered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port December 31, 1906, was 17 of 1,235 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letter A. R. The amount of customs revenue received in 1909 was £1,826.

There are regular sailings of steamers between Ayr and Belfast, Larne, Campbeltown, Girvan, Greenock and Glasgow.

A weekly market is held on Tuesdays for grain, cattle and dairy produce. Fairs for horses and cattle are held on the Friday before the second Wednesday in January; the third Tuesday in April, for hiring; the last Friday in April, for cattle; the Thursday before the second Monday and third Thursday in July; third Tuesday in October, for hiring; and on the second Friday in October.

The town is lighted with electric light, installed in 1895 at a cost of about £20,000, and with gas supplied by two companies, and is supplied with water from Loch Finlas and the Milton springs, both supplies being of excellent character and abundant in quantity. The Corporation Electric Tramways, opened in Sept. 1901, run to Prestwick Cross and to Alloway (Burns' Monument). There are three Established churches and a Mission hall. The parish church (the present old church of Ayr), which replaced the old church of St. John, taken by Cromwell for his fort, was founded in 1650, on the site of the Dominican priory; the pulpit was transferred to it from the old church of St. John; within the church are several mural tablets, including one to General Neill, who fell at the siege of Lucknow; also the old colours of the 21st Royal Scots

Fusiliers, and a brass tablet to the officers and men who fell in South Africa. There are also five United Free churches, an Evangelical Union church, Roman Catholic and Moravian churches, Baptist, Wesleyan and Original Seeders' chapels and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1835 and rebuilt in 1900, will seat 700 persons, and attached to it is St. John Baptist's Mission; the Rev. James Vansor Hammond B.A. of Selwyn College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1904. The Town's buildings, at the corner of High street and New Bridge street, erected in 1828 at a cost of £10,000, include a tower, with spire 219 feet in height; the spacious hall, capable of seating about 1,100 persons, was destroyed by fire in 1897, but rebuilt in 1904 at a cost of £12,000, and a new organ built at a cost of £1,300; the buildings afford offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain, surveyor, water engineer, medical officer of health, sanitary inspector and burgh police; here also the burgh records are kept, and the burgh courts held. The "Wallace Tower," in High street, built in 1830 on the site of an ancient tower, has on its front a statue of Wallace, by James Thom, a Scottish sculptor. A second statue of this warrior occupies a niche in the wall of a house in the corner of Newmarket street. Wellington square is a fine quadrangle, having on the west side the court house and hall, built at the joint expense of the county and burgh, at a cost exceeding £30,000. Three statues in bronze have been placed within the square, one to Archibald William, 13th Earl of Eglinton, lord lieutenant of the county, and for some years Viceroy of Ireland, who died 4 October, 1861; another to Brigadier-General J. G. Neill C.B. born in the square, and killed at Lucknow, 25th September, 1857, and a third to Sir James Fergusson bart. of Kilkerran M.P. Governor-General of New Zealand &c. A gun, captured at Sebastopol, stands in the enclosure round the County buildings. His Majesty's gaol is at the back of the County buildings, its front looking upon the bay.

Ayr is the depot of Regimental District No. 21 The Royal Scots Fusiliers, and the head quarters of the 3rd Special Reserve Battalion of the regiment.

The Territorial Force stationed in the town comprise the Ayrshire (Earl of Carrick's Own) Yeomanry and the A Squadron of the regiment, with head quarters in Oatfield place; the Ayrshire Royal Horse Artillery having head quarters in South Harbour street and the 5th Battalion Royal Scots Fusiliers and A Co. of the regiment with head quarters in Alloway street.

The Territorial Drill Hall, in Alloway street, erected in 1902, contains a small hall, together with officers' mess rooms, sergeants' mess room, reading and billiard rooms &c. It is also let for balls, concerts &c.

The new Gaiety Theatre, in Carrick street, was opened by a public company in 1902.

Ayr Academy, founded by subscription in 1796, is conducted by a rector, with six masters and 22 assistants. The present building was erected at a cost of about £10,000, and the management is now under the Burgh School Board: attached to the academy are a number of Bursaries offered by the Governors of the Ayr Educational Trust and other bodies, some tenable at the academy and others at the universities. The school is a centre for the training of junior students who intend to enter the teaching profession, and also for the higher education of pupils drawn from parishes throughout the county.

In 1907 a new Art department was erected at a cost of £8,000, and consisting of an architectural room, a workshop, an art studio, a modelling room and a painting studio. The Carnegie Public Library, in Main street, Newton, was erected in 1893, at a cost of about £12,000, by A. Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle; it contains 18,000 volumes in the lending and 8,000 volumes in the reference library. Three newspapers are published in Ayr, namely, the "Ayr Observer," on Tuesday; the "Ayrshire Post," on Friday, and the "Advertiser," on Thursday. The Low Green is a public park of about 50 acres facing the sea; a pavilion was erected in 1911 to hold 2,500 persons. R. A. Oswald esq. J.P. of Anchincruive and James A. Campbell esq. J.P. of Craigie, have presented to the town a public walk extending along the banks of the Ayr to Overmills, a distance of about 3 miles. The old racecourse on the south side of the town is now used as municipal golf links. A new racecourse, one mile and five furlongs in length, was completed at Hawkhill in 1907, at a cost of about £40,000, including the erection of stands &c.; there are meetings in May, July, August and September of each year.

The Earl of Eglinton's foxhounds hunt the county four times a week; the kennels are at Kilwinning, and Kilmarnock, Irvine and Ayr are convenient places for hunting visitors. There are curling and bowling clubs. The Ayr County Hospital, formerly in Mill street, was removed in 1883 to new buildings in the Holmston road, erected in that year, at a cost of about £20,000, and containing 100 beds; in 1910 there were 790 in and 1,512 out-patients. There is also a Dispensary, and in Heathfield road a Hospital for infectious cases. The Ayr (District) Asylum for the County of Ayr, situated at Gleggall, 2½ miles from the town, originally opened in 1869, was considerably enlarged in 1906 by the addition of a new hospital and administrative department, and now provides a total of 650 beds. There is an Industrial school in St. Leonard's road, erected in 1875 for 100 boys, and a Merchants' Company, established in 1655, with a fund formed in 1821 for decayed members, their widows and orphans. Robert Burns, the poet, was born 25 Jan. 1759, in the village of Alloway, about 2 miles south of Ayr, and his birthplace is still shown: Andrew Michael Ramsay D.C.L. historian and biographer, commonly called the "Chevalier Ramsay," and sometime tutor to the children of Prince James Edward Stuart, was born at Ayr, 9 June, 1686. At a short distance on the southern shore is Greenan Castle, a rectangular structure, on the summit of a rock overhanging the sea. In the same direction, on a clear day, may be discerned the rocky islet Ailsa Craig, rising nearly 1,100 feet perpendicularly out of the sea. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. J.P. of Anchincruive, vice-lieutenant of Ayrshire, J. A. Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. of Craigie, George Coats esq. J.P. of Belleisle, Sir James Coats bart. J.P. of Auchendrane, William Hamilton Dunlop esq. D.L., J.P. of Doonside, Miss Hamilton, of Rozelle, and William Wilson esq. J.P. of Castlehill, are the principal landowners.

The area of the old parish of Ayr comprised 6,939 acres and the new parish is 12,494 acres; the area of the burgh is 1,986 acres; rateable value, £221,354; the population in 1901 was 28,620, including 109 in the County Hospital, 571 in the District Asylum, 152 in Kyle Combination Poorhouse and 91 in H.M. Prison, and 144 military in the barracks; the population of the wards in 1901 was, First, 3,979; Second, 3,699; Third, 1,271; Fourth, 1,949; Fifth, 10,691; Sixth, 7,031. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: St. John (parish church), 8,373; Newton-on-Ayr, 10,708; St. Leonard's, 3,628; St. Quivox, 1,695; Wallace town, 6,555. The estimated population is now (1911) 32,000.

The population of the parliamentary district of burghs in 1901 was 50,255. The number of electors on the Ayr parliamentary register in 1910-11 was 4,491.

NEWTON, formerly a parish, but now amalgamated with Ayr, is divided from that place by the river, and has two Established churches and two United Free churches and Salvation Army barracks; here the principal manufactures of the town are carried on. There are two chemical works, a carpet factory, lace works, two shoe factories and several other manufacturing establishments. The railway communicates on this side with the harbour and dock, and the mineral products of the upper portion of the county are mostly shipped here.

ST. QUIVOX, a populous parish, amalgamated with the parish of Ayr by a Local Government Order, dated May, 1895, lies on the banks of the Ayr river, and is bounded on the east by Tarbolton, and on the west by Newton on Ayr and Monkton. Here is an Established church. The parish, which is nearly all arable, is finely enclosed and beautified by plantations.

WALLACETOWN is a thickly populated district adjoining Newton. The Established church here, erected in 1836, at an expense of nearly £1,500, has sittings for upwards of 800 persons. The Roman Catholic chapel, erected in 1826-7, at a cost of about £2,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, fronted with freestone; there is also a United Free church.

WHITLETTS is a small village in St. Quivox ward, parish of Ayr, and distant therefrom about 1½ miles east.

BALLANTRAE is a parish, village and seaport at the extreme south-west corner of the county on the north of Loch Ryan; the village being 8 miles south-west from Pinwherry station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 34 south-west from Ayr and 24 north-east of Port Patrick, in the poor combination of Wigtown and small debt court district of Ayr; the parish extends 9 miles from north to south by 7 in breadth and is bounded north and east by Colmonell, south by Wigtownshire and west by the Firth of Clyde. The nearest railway station is at Pinwherry on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 8 miles distant. The village lies at the mouth of the river Stinchar, and is a resort for summer visitors; it is principally supported by its oyster, herring and salmon fishery, the latter belonging to the Earl of Stair. The number of fishing boats registered as belonging to the district in 1909 was 402 of 1,233 tonnage. The total value of all fish landed in the same year was £28,573. Here are Established and United Free churches, and a Public Hall and Reading Room. Glenapp Castle is the seat of Mrs. Stock. The chief landowners are Mrs. Stock, Mrs. Oliver, of Laggan, Major D. Hughes-Onslow, of Balkissock, and the Earl of Stair. Here are the ruins of Ard-Stinchar Castle, formerly belonging to the Kennedy family. In the churchyard is the burial place of the Hamilton family of Bargeny and Ard-stinchar; Barons Bargeny (a title which became extinct in 1736), and there is a monument to Gilbert Hamilton, slain in an encounter with Lord Cassalis at Maybole in 1601. The parish area comprises 33,584 acres; rateable value, £10,471; the population in 1891 was 1,268, and in 1901 was 1,124 in the civil parish, including Glenapp, and 1,019 in the ecclesiastical parish.

GLENAPP, or BUTTERS CHURCH, is a quoad sacra parish formed out of Ballantrae parish, and has an Established church; the population in 1901 was 105.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Ballantrae; Miss Edith Wason, sub-postmistress. Letters should have Ayrshire added to them. Delivery, 9.45 a.m.; dispatch, 3.45 p.m.

BARRHILL, see COLMONELL.

BEITH is a town and parish, in the north of the county, on the borders of Renfrew-
 shire, and originally partly in that county,
 but transferred entirely to Ayrshire by the Local Government Act, 1889; the town lies 11 miles north-west from Kilmarnock, 10 north of Irvine and 22 north of Ayr, and has stations on the Glasgow and South Western main line, and the Glasgow, Barr-head and Kilmarnock joint railway; the parish extends 7 miles from north to south,
 by about 4 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; it is bounded on the north by Renfrewshire, west
 by Kibbirnie, south by Dalry and east by Dunlop. The town stands on an eminence commanding an extensive view of the country around, and of the Loch of Kilbirnie; it contains many excellent houses,
 is lighted with gas and well supplied with good water, and is a place of some considerable trade, being noted for its manufacture of linen thread, of which a large quantity is made here, both for the home and export trade. The tanning, currying and preparation of leather is also carried on, as well as rope making, cabinet making and upholstery, and the production of fling and other nets. The manufacture of silk goods, formerly extensive, has been almost entirely superseded by that of cotton and woollen, in the weaving of which many of the inhabitants are now employed by the manufacturers of Paisley and Glasgow. Silk printing is carried on at Roebank. The neighbourhood of Beith produces coal and iron and abundance of limestone. Lime burning is followed to a limited extent. The Established church, erected in 1807, stands on the most elevated part of the town, 343 feet above

 the level of the sea; it has a tower, and in 1885 was enlarged, resecated, and thoroughly renovated at a cost of nearly £3,000; and in 1899 a hall, with 600 sitings, was erected at a cost of over £1,800. There are three United Free churches, one of which, in Mitchell street, was rebuilt in 1892 in the Gothic style, at a cost of about £2,000. There is also a Congregational chapel. The Town House, built by subscription in 1817, contains a reading room; the lower part consists of shops. The constabulary station, with court house adjoining, is a stone building, opened in 1884, and erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Sheriff's Small Debt Court is held on the first Friday in February, May, August and November, and that for the justices of the peace on the first Monday in each month. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank
 of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank
 of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Masonic Hall, in Eglinton street, erected in 1907,
 is a building of stone, its lower stage
 being arranged as shops. Spier's school, built and endowed from funds amounting to over £60,000 left by the late Mrs. Spier, of Marshhall and Cuff, is a school for higher education, established under a scheme of the Scotch Education Endowments Commissioners: the buildings comprise a town hall, board room, numerous class rooms, and a large school house, occupied by the head master and specially adapted for the reception of boarders.
 Fairs are held on the first Friday in January (old style) (horse), on the first Friday after the 12th of May (old style), on the 30th of August (horse), and the first Friday after the 12th of November (old style). The whole of the parish is enclosed, and is almost all arable. At Giffen, a short distance from the town,
 are the ruins of the once stately castle of the Montgomeries; there is also another ruin at Hesselhead; and at the top of Cuff hill, a considerable eminence, is a rock-stone. Two large stone coffins were discovered here many years ago.
 Trbarne is the seat of William Ralston-Patrick esq. J.P. and Grange Hill, of Robert Marshall esq.; Woodside is the property of Mrs. Neil Kennedy Cochran-Patrick and the residence of Mrs. Findlay.
 The area comprises 11,189 acres; assessable value, £42,788; the population in 1901 of the civil parish was 7,523, of which 4,963 are in the town and 7,419
 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CATRINE is a thriving manufacturing town and quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Sorn, with a terminal station on a branch from Muchline, opened in 1903, of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 72 miles south-south-west of Edinburgh, 32 south of Glasgow, 14 north-east of Ayr, 12 south-south-west of Kilmarnock and 5 north from Old Cumnock, situated nearly in the centre of the county, on the north bank of the river Ayr. This place in 1778 contained only a blacksmith's shop and a meal mill, but its rapid increase arose from the erection of cotton works by the late Claud Alexander esq. of Ballochmyle, and the business is now carried on by Messrs. James Finlay and Co. Limited. There are Established and United Free churches, a Congregational Union chapel and a Mission hall. The Town Hall, opened in 1882, was erected at a cost of £1,000 left by the late John Wilson, who also bequeathed £1,000, the interest of which, about £40, is given to the poor at Christmas; the hall is under the control of six trustees. The A. M. Brown Institute, erected in 1898 in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, at a cost of upwards of £3,000, was the gift to the town of A. M. Brown esq. and contains reading and billiard rooms, a gymnasium and a library. The public library, of about 6,000 volumes, has now been removed to the institute. On the south side of the river Ayr is a school in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £2,000. The population in 1901 was 2,340.

COLMONELL is a parish and village on the west coast of the county, in the poor combination of Wigtown and small debt court district of Ayr, the village lying 5 miles north-east from Ballantrae on the Stinchar river and about 3 miles west from Pinwherry station on the Ayr and Stranraer section of the Glasgow and South Western railway; the parish extends 19 miles in length by 7 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by G-rvan, north-east by Barr and south by Ballantrae. A little south of the village are the ruins of Craignell Castle, occupied at one time by Robert Bruce; there are also remains of castles at Pinwherry, Knockdolian and Kirkhill, and on the coast at Carleton. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Public Hall, erected in 1890 at a cost of £754, includes a library and a billiard room; the tower, containing a clock, was added in 1897-8 by public subscription. From Lendalloch, in this parish, on the coast, the islet of Ailsa Craig may be conveniently visited. The Hon. Hugh Frederick Hishop Elliot J.P. of Corwar; Robert Finnie McEwen J.P. of Bardrochat; Cecil Victor Dalrymple-Hamilton esq. of Bargany; William Weir esq. of Kildonian; W. Phipson Beale esq. K.C., M.P. of Drumlarford, Barrhill; Sir Reginald A. E. Cathcart, of Carleton, and John McConnell esq. of Knockdolian, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 47,490 acres: rateable value, £26,039; population, 2,191 in 1891, and 1,954 in the civil and 993 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BARRHILL, a village 3 miles east of Colmonell, has a station on the South Western railway, and Established and United Free churches; here also cattle sales are held.

CRAIGIE is a parish and village, 4 miles south of Kilmarnock, which is its nearest railway station; it is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and the parish, which is bounded north by Riccarton, east by Manchine, south by Tarbolton and west by Symington, extends 5 miles from north to south by $\frac{1}{2}$ in breadth. Near the village are the remains of an old castle, the original seat of the Wallace family, from a younger branch of which Sir William Wallace was descended. Here is an Established church. Lieut.-Col. William Kentigern Hamilton-Campbell D.S.O., J.P. of Netherplace, Manchine; James Archibald Campbell esq. D.L., J.P. of Craigie House, Ayr, and George Douglas Findlay-Hamilton esq. of Cairn Hill, Hurlford, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,574 acres; rateable value, £10,167; the population in 1901 was 609.

Post Office, Alexander Paton, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Kilmarnock. Delivery, 9.10 a.m.; dispatch, 3 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Riccarton, 3 miles distant CUMNOCK (NEW) is a parish and village in the east centre of the county, and in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr; the parish extends 9 miles from north to south by 9 in breadth, and was separated from Cumnock and formed into a parish about the year 1652, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, about 43 miles south of Glasgow, 21 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, the same distance west by south of Ayr, 10 north by east of Dalmellington and 5 south-east of Cumnock. The parish, which lies on the eastern boundary of that of Cumnock (or Old Cumnock), is in general hilly, and affords excellent pasture for sheep; but there are many spots of rich arable land. The river Nith takes its rise in the south-west end of the parish, and runs through the centre of the whole; and there are several small lakes, the sources of the Aiton. Here is an Established church, erected in 1833, with 1,000 sittings, three United Free churches and a Baptist chapel. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. The Town Hall was erected in 1838, at a cost of nearly £1,000, from plans by Mr. Allan Stevenson, of Ayr, and is of stone; the building contains a lecture hall seating about 400 people, besides offices. Various mines of coal are worked in this neighbourhood, the property of William Hyslop esq. Lady Cathcart &c. and limestone abounds in different parts of the district. The Marquess of Bute, Lord Oranmore and Browne, Michael H. D. Thomson-Carmichael esq. of Eastend, Thankerton, William Hyslop esq. J.P. Sir Reginald A. E. Cathcart bart. of Cluny Castle, Sir James Stuart-Menteth bart. of Canandaigua, New York, U.S.A. the trustees of Neil Griffith Buchanan esq. of Knockshinnock, and the New Cumnock Collieries Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 48,176 acres; rateable value in 1910, £24,285; population, 1891, 4,419, and 1901 was 5,367, of which 2,005 are in the town.

CUMNOCK (OLD) is a town in the centre of the county, east of Ayr, and together with Holmhead was in 1866 erected into a police burgh; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and is a considerable market town, 60 miles south-west of Edinburgh, 16 east of Ayr, and 15 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, on the road between Dumfries on the south-east and Glasgow on the north, being 43 miles north-west from the former and 40 south from the latter. The Glasgow and South Western line has a station half a mile east, and the Ayr and Cumnock line a station a quarter of a mile south of the town. The parish of Old Cumnock, which is in the poor combination of Kyle and the head of a small debt court district, extends 9 miles from east to west by 3 from north to south, and is bounded on the north by Sorn, east by Auchinleck, south by New Cumnock and west by Ochiltree. The town is situated in a deep sheltered hollow, at the confluence of the Glaisnock and Lugar waters, and consists of a square, with several main streets. There is an Established church, a United Free church, entirely rebuilt at the cost of Miss Crichton, of Hillside, Cumnock, and now seating 520 persons, Congregational and Baptist chapels, and a Roman Catholic church, the cost of which was defrayed by the Marquess of Bute. A cemetery was formed a few years ago a little to the south of the town, at a cost of about £1,000. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland. The Town Hall, opened in 1885, is an edifice in the Classic style, from plans prepared by Mr. R. S. Ingram, of Kilmarnock, and was erected at a cost of nearly £3,000, towards which John, 3rd Marquess of Bute, contributed £500 and the site. There is also a Public Library, established in 1792 by a company of shareholders. Baird's Institute, erected in 1891, at an expenditure of close upon £3,000, was the gift of the late John Baird esq. of this town, who left funds both for its construction and endowment; it contains a museum, billiard, reading and recreation rooms. The Cottage Hospital was built and furnished by the Marchioness of Bute, at an expense of over £2,000. The sum of £20 annually, left for free education by the late Charles Duncan, merchant, of London, a native of this parish, has now, by the Commissioners of Endowments, been mostly applied to higher education in the public school. Two newspapers, the "Cumnock Chronicle" and the "Cumnock News," are published here on Friday. The market is held on Thursday, and the fairs on the fourth Thursday after Candlemas, the Thursday after the 6th of March, the Wednesday after the 6th of June, and the 27th of October. Woolen manufacture and wool spinning and dyeing are carried on, and there are two agricultural implement factories; the manufacture of switch gearage is carried on extensively by Messrs. George McCartney and Co. of Burnside works. In the neighbourhood is Terringzean Castle, now in ruins, also Dumfries House, a seat of the Marquess of Bute, who also holds the title of Baron Crichton of Cumnock. The old churchyard at Barrhill, near the town, was at one period the place of execution, and contains the remains of three persons who were shot on the spot in 1645 by a party of Highlanders, for their adherence to the Covenant; here also Alexander Peden, commonly called "the Prophet," was buried at the gallows foot. In 1891 a fine monument of Aberdeen granite, 21 feet high, and of Gothic design, was erected to his memory, at an expense of £300. The Marquess of Bute; John Marshall esq. of Glaisnock, and Major-Gen. R. Bannatine-Allason, of Logan, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 14,129 acres; rateable value in 1910 was £29,410; the population in 1891 was 4,712, and in 1901 was 5,144, including 3,088 in the police burgh.

DAILY is a parish and village in the southern portion of the county, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 93 miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Maybole and Ayr). 47 south by west of Glasgow, 46 north-north-east of Partpatrick, 15 south by east of Ayr, 7 south from Maybole and 6 north-north-east from Girvan. The parish is about 8 miles from north to south by from 2 to 6 miles broad, and is bounded on the west by the parish of Kirkoswald, south by Girvan and Barr, east by Barr and Straiton and north by Kirkmichael, and is in the small debt court district of Ayr and poor combination of Maybole. The uplands are bleak and pastoral, but the mora level parts are well cultivated, enclosed and planted. Coal and limestone abound in several parts of the parish. The celebrated island called "Ailsa Craig," rising out of the Firth of Clyde to a height of 1,097 feet, is in this parish, and has a lighthouse; it is most conveniently reached from Lendalfoot on the coast, in the parish of Colmonell. The old parish church is in ruins; the existing church was built in 1766. There is also a United Free church, built in 1901 at a cost of £2,560, including a new organ, and has sittings for 360 persons. There are also chapels for Plymouth Brethren, Bargany House, the seat of North Victor Cecil Dalrymple-Hamilton esq. J.P. is in this parish. Dalqnarhan Castle, the property of John Campbell Kennedy esq. is the residence of W. Macfarlane Wilson esq. North Victor Cecil Dalrymple-Hamilton esq. Major-Gen. Sir Charles Ferguson bart M.V.O., D.S.O. and John Campbell Kennedy esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,964 acres; rateable value, £25,166; population in 1901, 1,673, including Ailsa Craig Island Lighthouse.

DALJARROCK. see COLMONELL.

DALMELLINGTON is a parish and village, the latter being a burgh of barony, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 72 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 south of Glasgow, 42 north-west of Dumfries, 24 south-south-east of Kilmarnock, 15 south-east of Ayr, 14 east of Maybole, 12 south of Old Cumnock and 7 east of Straiton. The village is situated on the north bank of the water of Doon, and near to the base of an eminence, from the summit of which a fine view is obtained. The parish is in the poor combination of Kyle and the small debt court district of Ayr, and extends 9 miles from north-west to south-east by 3 to 5 in breadth, and is bounded on the south-west by Straiton, north by Dalrymple and Ochiltree and west by New Cumnock. Here are Established and United Free churches, a public library and reading room and a public hall. About 3 miles south of the village is Loch Doon, celebrated for its fine trout and a great resort for anglers; boats are furnished by the proprietors of the hotels at this place—The Black Bull and the Eglington. The loch is a beautiful sheet of water, with a hard rocky shore, extending 8 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and abounding with trout of fine flavour. In 1826 a fishing party discovered at the bottom of the loch what appeared to be boats, and, having obtained the necessary assistance, they succeeded in raising three canoes, the largest measuring 24 feet in length by 4 in breadth, hewn out of a solid log of oak. Two were much decayed, but the third was so little impaired as to allow of its being floated on the surface, with a person in it, for a considerable time; two are now preserved at the head of Ness Glen, by Mrs. McAdam, of Craigeingillan, from the inspection of visitors, and the third is in the Kelvin Grove Museum at Glasgow. On an island in the lake are the remains of Balloch Castle, in which, in June, 1306, after the battle of Methven, Sir Chrystal Seton, brother-in-law to Robert Bruce, took refuge, but the castle being stormed he was captured and executed at Dumfries. About 3 miles north-west of Dalmellington, on the road to Ayr, are the extensive iron works and collieries of the Dalmellington Iron Co. Limited, who built the villages of Craig Mark, Waterside, Lethan Hill, Burnfoot Hill and Benwhart. The village of WATERSIDE has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is lighted by gas, and has a Roman Catholic church and a Mission church. Mrs. McAdam, of Craigeingillan; Colonel the Hon. Augustus Murray Cathcart, of Kirky Malzeard, Yorks; the Duke of Portland K.G., G.C.V.O. P.C. and the Dalmellington Iron Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,818 acres; rateable value, £26,252; the population in 1891 was 6,383, and in 1901, 5,261 in the civil and 5,118 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DALRY is a parish and village-town in the Cunninghame district and poor combination and in the small debt court of Beith, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 69 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 25 (22 by rail) south-west of Glasgow, 16 south-south-west of Paisley, 5 south-west of Beith, 4 north of Kilwinning and 7 north of Saltcoats, pleasantly situated on a rising ground, surrounded by the rivers Caaf, Rye and Garnock; it consists of twelve streets, three of which diverge from a small central square, and there are many well-built houses. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and supplied with water by a system of gravitation, the supply affording 130,000 gallons per day. There are three reservoirs in this parish, one at Camphill and Rontenburn supplying Paisley; another at Munnoch for Irvine and district; and a third at Auld Muir for the town of Dalry; the total cost of carrying out the scheme amounted to £10,500. The works are the property of the Irvine and District Water Board. The sanitary arrangements are under the control of the County Council. Dalry bestows the title of Baron Boyle of Dalry upon the Boyle family, Earls of Glasgow. The local industries comprise worsted spinning, which is extensively carried on by Messrs. Biggart and Co. Limited, blanket and tweed manufacturing by Messrs. Kyle, Aitken and Gardiner, and the manufacture of hosiery; lime, coal and ironstone abound in the neighbourhood, and there are extensive iron ore and coal mines; wholesale cabinet making and brick making are rising industries. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited, the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland. The Public Hall, in Aitken street, belongs to a limited company; in Garnock street there is the Reformed Templars' Hall and the local library. In the centre of the town is a handsome granite fountain, presented by the late Thomas Biggart esq. of Baidland Hill. The Established church, rebuilt and considerably enlarged at a cost of nearly £6,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower and spire, and was designed by Mr. David Thomson, architect, of Glasgow; four of the windows are filled with Munich stained glass and there is a marble monument in the vestibule to General Neill, who fell at the relief of Lucknow (Sep. 25-26, 1857). There is also the West Parish Established church and mission hall; two United Free Presbyterian churches; a Roman Catholic church, and a Mission Hall, opened in 1883, at a cost of about £4,000, defrayed by the late Rev. Robert Stevenson D.D. of this town. The Episcopal church of St. Peter, built in 1888, will seat about 170 persons; the Rev. W. J. Wilson B.A. of Wadhams College, Oxford, has been priest in charge of the mission since 1889. The Biggart Memorial Hall in Courthill street, erected by the late Thos. Biggart esq. in memory of his son, is also used for mission purposes. The cemetery at Kirkland was extended in 1899 by the addition of four acres. A public park of about 20 acres, presented to the town by Mr. John Blair W.S. Edinburgh, a native of Dalry, was laid out in 1892, at considerable expense, and includes skating and curling ponds; it is managed by a body of trustees. The annual fair is held on the last day in July. The F Company, 4th Batt. Territorial Force Royal Scots Fusiliers, has its head quarters here. Blair House, 2 miles from Dalry, is an ancient mansion, a portion of which retains the date of 1203, but the original and still existing tower is said to date from 1130; the fabric is in good preservation, and its walls are of extraordinary thickness; one of the passages, a modern alteration, passing through a wall 14 feet thick; the mansion is at present occupied by Col. F. G. Blair C.B., D.L., J.P. Visitors are permitted to inspect the beautifully laid out grounds and the fine museum of British and Foreign curiosities contained in the house. In the parish is a natural cave, about 103 feet in length and from 5 to 12 feet in height; the roof is encrusted with petrifications, and over the entrance projects a vast rock, 30 feet by 27. The interior is arched, and expands near the middle into a spacious chamber, 35 feet long by 12 broad and 13 feet in height. In the reign of Charles II. this cavern afforded a refuge to the Covenanters of the parish, and it is also supposed to have given refuge to Wallace and his co-patriot Sir Bryce Blair, who was executed at Ayr by the English for the part he took with Wallace in the war of independence; adjoining is a farm known as "Wallace Fauld." To the west of the town is a beautiful natural cascade, which has a singular appearance during the continuance of frost. At Camphill and Rontenburn in Dalry parish the Scottish army is said to have encamped previous to the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263, in which Alexander III. defeated the Norwegians under Haaco. Acreage of parish, 19,284; population in 1901, 8,212, of which 5,316 were returned as belonging to the town and 474 in Glen-garnock; rateable value, £49,754.

 Post, T. & M. O. Office, New street; Miss A. Alexander, postmistress.
 Letters should have Ayrshire added. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 2.40 & 6.30 p.m.; sunday (to callers), 10.15 to 10.45 a.m.; dispatches, 6.40 & 11.40 a.m. & 2.45, 4.50, 7.25 & 8.5 p.m.; sunday, 1.55 p.m. Telegraph business, sunday, 9 to 10 a.m.

DARNCONNER, see LUGAR.

DARVEL is a police burgh and manufacturing town and ecclesiastical parish, on the river Irvine, in the southern portion of the parish of Loudoun, in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; the town is 9 miles east-by-south from Kilmarnock and 13 north-east from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The burgh consists of one principal street, from which a few small ones diverge. The Established church, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected at a cost of about £3,000; there are also two United Free churches, and Original Seceders' and Congregational churches. The cemetery here was laid out at the cost of the Marchioness of Hastings and endowed with £1,000 for its maintenance by the late Mr. John Fleming. The Working Men's Institute was erected by the late Miss Brown, of Lanfine, in July, 1870, at a cost of £2,200; it contains a library and reading room and a recreation room. There is also a free school, endowed by the late Alexander Mair, for the education of the children of this village, and now under the direction of the school board. The manufacture of lace, lace and tapestry curtains and muslin affords employment to a number of hands. The area is 215 acres; rateable value, £14,947; the population in 1901 was 3,070 in the burgh and 3,644 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Post, T. M. O. & Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, East Main street; John Cleland, postmaster. Letters should have Ayrshire added to them. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 12.40 & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.30 & 11.15 a.m. & 4, 5.40 & 7.45 p.m.

DREGHORN is a small parish lying to the east of Irvine, from which place its kirk-town is distant 2½ miles; the parish, which is in the Cunningham poor combination and the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, extends between 6 and 7 miles in an irregular curve from north-east to west by a breadth of about 2 miles, and is bounded north by Stewarton, east by Fenwick, south by Kilmarnock and west by Irvine. There are stations at Dreghorn and Springside on the branch line of the Glasgow and South Western railway from Busbie Junction to Ardrossan; the same railway has a station at Cunningham head, and the Caledonian branch from Kilmarnock to Dunlop skirts the eastern portion of the parish, the nearest station being Kilmarnock, about 5 miles distant. There is an Established church and two United Free churches, a Congregational chapel and a Mission Hall. In the neighbourhood are extensive coal mines and fire clay and brick works. Water is supplied by the County Council mains from North Craig reservoir at Kilmarnock, having been laid down in 1898 for this purpose.

SPRINGSIDE is a small village in this parish, and has an Established Church Hall and a Mission Hall. The Springhill Institute, erected in the village in 1891 by the Misses Maryann, Margaret and Helena Finnie and Mrs. Jean Buntine, daughters of the late Archibald Finnie esq. of Springhill, Kilmarnock, is a structure of red brick and contains reading, billiard and recreation rooms and a library of over 600 volumes. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton and the Misses Mure, of Perceon, are the principal land owners. The area comprises 5,623 acres; rateable value, £24,724; the population in 1901 was 4,332 in the civil and 4,099 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DUNDONALD is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde and contains part of the royal burgh of Irvine and the town of Troon; the kirktown is about 4 miles north-east of Troon, 5 from Kilmarnock, 30 from Glasgow and 4 south-east from Irvine, the nearest railway station being at Drybridge on the Troon and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway; the parish extends for 8 miles along the shore and is from 1 to 4 in breadth; it is in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Irvine. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Convalescent Home, built by Mrs. Vernon, of Auchans House, and maintained by voluntary subscriptions. Dundonald Castle, the property of the Earl of Dundonald C.B., K.C.V.O. stands on a hill about 3 miles from the sea, and is now a ruin; it was erected in the 12th century, and long occupied by the Lord Hugh Stewards of Scotland; and here Robert II. the first Stewart Sovereign, died 10 April, 1390. Old Auchans Castle, now a ruin, is the property of Lady Sophia C. Montgomerie, of Southannan House, Fairlie; Auchans House is the residence of David Macfarlane Wilson esq.; Fullarton House, of Sir Matthew Arthur bart. D.L., J.P.; Hill House, of James Baird Thornycroft esq. D.L., J.P. and Newfield, of Miss Montgomerie. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O.: the Earl of Glasgow G.C.M.G.; Lieut.-Col. J. A. Smith Cunningham M.A., D.L. of Caprington Castle, Kilmarnock; Peter Jeffrey Mackie esq. of Corraith; Miss Finnie, of Springhill; the trustees of the late Robert and James Kenneth, and Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie, of Fairlie, near Largo, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,365 acres; rateable value of landward part, £28,431; the population in 1901 was 1,745, exclusive of Troon, which contained 4,696, and Irvine, 4,809; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,260.

DUNDONALD is a parish and village, in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Kilmarnock; 8 miles north of Kilmarnock and the same distance east of Dalry, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway: the portion of the parish in this county extends 3 miles from north to south and the same in breadth, and is bounded west by Beith, south by Stewarton and east by Neilston. The Established church was erected in 1835. In the churchyard is a small mortuary chapel, now known as the "Picture House," erected by James (Hamilton) 1st Viscount Clarendon, in 1641, over the grave of his father, the Rev. Hans Hamilton, for 45 years minister of the parish and d. 30 May, 1608; it contains a monument in marble. Here also is a United Free church and a Public hall, with reading and recreation rooms, erected by public subscription, at a cost of about £800. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. The old schoolhouse was also built by Lord Clarendon, and in the wall is a stone formerly bearing the date 1611, and an inscription stating that it was erected and endowed by him "in love of his parish, in King James the Sixth his Raigae," but this is now obliterated; the building is in excellent preservation, but is not now used for school purposes. Dundonald has long been noted for the excellent quality of its cheese, which bears a high character throughout Scotland. Several firms are also engaged in ham curing. About the close of the 17th century, one Barbara Gilmour is said to have commenced the practice of making cheese from the entire milk, nothing but skimmed milk having been used in the process in this district previous to that period; at present all the cheese similarly made in the western counties receives the appellation of "Dundonald," a large quantity being still made here annually. A considerable trade in meal is also carried on by the inhabitants of the village and surrounding territory. The Dundonald and Stewarton Agricultural Society holds an annual show of cattle &c. in April. Near the village, and resting on a small knoll, is a stone of large dimensions, called the "O'Great Stone," and supposed to have been employed in some ancient rites of worship. Two fairs for the sale of dairy stock are held, one about the middle of May, the other on the 12th of November; both are generally well attended. Col. William Mure D.L., J.P. of Caldwell House, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,180 acres: assessable value, £18,340; population, 1901, 1,542.

Post, T. & M. O. Office; James G. Wyllie, postmaster. Letters should have Ayrshire added. No Sunday delivery of letters. Deliveries, 8.20 a.m. & 5.50 p.m.; dispatches, 10.10 a.m. & 2.25 & 7.45 p.m.

FENWICK (anciently Finnick) is a parish and village, in Cunninghame district and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is about 4 miles north-by-east from Kilmarnock, its nearest railway station, on the Glasgow and South Western railway, situated on the banks of the Macharnock stream and on the road to Glasgow. This parish was originally a part of Kilmarnock, from which it was disjoined in 1641, and was called New Kilmarnock or New Kirk of Kilmarnock; but the village of Finnick, now known as Laich Finnick or Rose Finnick, to distinguish it from the new village which sprang up beside the Kirk, and was called the Kirktown, eventually gave its name to the whole parish. Here is an Established church and two United Free churches. At a former period, the district was chiefly moorland, but the greater portion of the parish is now under cultivation. John Howie, who chronicled the sufferings of the martyrs and confessors of the Covenant, was tenant of the moorland farm of Lochgoin, in this parish, and his descendants still continue to occupy it. Many memorials of the Covenanters are preserved in the farmhouse, including the bible and sword of Captain Paton and the flag of the Phinick Covenanters used at the encounter at Bothwell Bridge, 22 June, 1679. Archibald Cameron Corbett esq. M.P. of Rowallan Castle; Lieut.-Colonel William Reginald Howison Craufurd J.P. of Craufurdland, and Andrew Brown Paton esq. of Hairshawmuir, Kilmarnock, are the principal landowners. Area, 18,077 acres; rateable value, £18,000; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,007, and in 1901, 1,063.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Fenwick; James Currie, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Kilmarnock. Deliveries, 8 a.m. & 6.35 p.m.; dispatches, 8 a.m. & 4 & 7 p.m.

Post Office, Waterside; Mrs. Kate Picken, sub-postmistress. Letters arrive through Kilmarnock. Delivery, 9 a.m.; dispatch, 2.10 p.m.; no sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Fenwick, 2 miles distant

FISHERTON, see MAYBOLB.

GALSTON is a town and parish, with a station on a branch from Hurlford of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is in the eastern portion of the county, and includes parts of three towns, Darvel, Galston and Newmilns. The town is a police burgh lying on the river Irvine in the parishes of Galston and Loudoun, 15 miles north-east from Ayr, 22 south from Glasgow and 5 south-east from Kilmarnock; the parish, which extends 8 miles from east to west by 3½ in depth, is in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Kilmarnock and is bounded on the north by Loudoun, west by Riccarton and south by Sorra and Mauchline. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The Established church was built about 1820, on the site of the previous church; the graveyard has been closed for many years, but contains a few stones of old date and some interest, notably one carved with the flag of the Galston Covenanters; the United Free church is an edifice in the Gothic style, erected at a cost of about £1,100. Trinity United Free church, erected in 1885, at a cost of about £2,500, is a building of red sandstone, in the Gothic style, from the designs of Mr. J. D. Wilson, architect, of Glasgow. The Roman Catholic church of St. Sophia, opened in December, 1886, and erected by the 3rd Marquess of Bute (d. 1900), at a cost of £10,000, is a structure in the Romanesque style, from designs by Dr. R. Rowland Anderson, architect, of Edinburgh. The public halls are the Victoria Assembly Hall, the Good Templar's Hall and the Co-operative Hall. Brown's Institute was erected in 1874, at a cost of over £3,000, given by the late Miss Brown, of Lanfane, and consists of a reading room, a library, containing about 3,400 volumes, and recreation and billiard rooms. Blair's school, opened in 1841, under the will of the late Charles Blair esq. of Galston, who bequeathed certain heritable property, to accumulate until the income amounted to £200 yearly, has under the "Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882," now become incorporated with the public schools. Here is a corn mill with water power; weaving and lace making and coal mining are also carried on, and a large quantity of coal is obtained from the estates of the Duke of Portland, who is superior of the parish. The surface of the parish is diversified with hills, but the land is generally arable, and there is a considerable quantity of wood. The district is watered by some small tributaries of the Irvine and the river Avon, which rises in the upper part of the parish. About a mile from the town is Loudoun Castle, a large structure in a modern castellated style, the property of the Earl of Loudoun; near this is the old castle of Cessnock and Barr. Cessnock Castle is the residence of J. Harling Turner esq. J.P. The annual fairs are held on the third Thursday in April, the first Thursday in June, and the last Wednesday in November. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. and Thomas N. McKinnon esq. of Lanfane, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 15,154 acres; rateable value of landward, £27,900. The area of the burgh is 1,910 acres; rateable value, £24,665; the population of the town of Galston in 1901 was 4,379, and the total of the parish was 6,979.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Galston; Miss I. S. Milne, sub-postmistress (letters should have Ayrshire added to them). Deliveries, 7 & 12.40 a.m. & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.30 & 11.20 a.m. & 4, 5.30 & 7.40 p.m.; Sunday, 11.50 a.m.

GIRVAN is a parish and police burgh, in the district of Carrick and Maybole poor combination and in the parliamentary division of South Ayrshire, 90 miles west-south-west of Edinburgh, 56 south-west of Glasgow, 35 north-north-west of Portpatrick, 31 north-north-east of Stranraer, 21 south by west of Ayr, 13 north by east of Ballantrae, 12 south-south-west of Maybole and 6 south-west of Dailly, with a station on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, extended to Portpatrick in 1876; the town stands on the left bank of the Girvan or Girvan river, near its confluence with the Firth of Clyde. The harbour of Girvan, which underwent considerable improvements in 1869-70, and more extensively in 1881-83, at the expense of the Harbour Commissioners, is now considered safe and convenient for shipping. Large quantities of grain of various kinds are annually exported hence, chiefly to Liverpool and Glasgow. The principal trade of the place is now the shipping of coal from the Girvan Valley in small steamers of about 10 feet 6 inches draft, and also the herring fishery, which occurs twice a year, beginning in December and May. The government of the town is vested in the town council, consisting of a provost, two junior magistrates and nine councillors. A justice of the peace court is held every month. There are two Established and two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John, erected at a cost of £1,100, is a structure in the Gothic style, and will seat 200 persons; attached to it is the Mission church of St. Oswald, at Maybole. A new Town Hall, the gift of John McMaster, The Holt, Canterbury, is now in course of erection, and will be opened in June, 1911. The M'Kechnie Institute, at the corner of Dalrymple street & Ailsa street, erected in 1887-8 at a cost of about £3,000, by the trustees of the late Thomas and Robert M'Kechnie and since endowed with about £2,000 by the late Mrs. Hart, of Girvan, is a building of red sandstone, consisting of library, reading rooms for both sexes, and smoking, billiard, draught and committee rooms. Mr. M'Kechnie left also the interest of £1,000, of which £12 is given to the preacher of the church for the instruction of 10 of the children in sacred music, the balance being divided among such poor householders as are not receiving parochial relief. The McClymont trust, amounting to £250 per annum, left in 1879 by Archibald McClymont esq. is in part given to the deserving poor and in part to the Royal Infirmary, Glasgow, the town of Girvan thus acquiring the right to send three patients annually to that institution; a portion of the fund is also assigned for educational purposes and for the support of the Girvan Town Mission. A market, chiefly for grain, is held on Monday; and the fairs are on the first Mondays in April and October, for stock, hiring servants, and general business. North Victor Cecil Dalrymple-Hamilton esq. of Bargany, is superior of the burgh. At a point in the Firth exactly opposite is the rocky islet called Ailsa Craig, which is 11 miles distant, and rises out of the Firth to the height of 1,097 feet: it is 2½ miles in circumference, and the top, which is conical, is covered with a luxuriant crop of heath, grass, ferns and other plants, supporting great numbers of goats and rabbits, and on the precipitous sides of the rock inconceivable numbers of solan geese, puffins and gannets flutter about, and produce an incessant deafening noise. On a long terrace, or shoulder of the Craig, at the elevation of 200 feet from the base, stands a deserted square tower, or castellated house, still very perfect as a ruin. Here also is a lighthouse. Higher up are two beautiful springs of water, one of which irrigates a marshy tract covered with various plants, and amongst others the hydrocotyle vulgaris, which here grows to an extraordinary size. The rock (locally in the parish of Dailly) belongs to the Marquis of Ailsa. The area of the civil parish is 14,685 acres; rateable value of landward, £15,366. The area of the burgh is 439 acres; rateable value, £23,694; the population in 1901 was: town, 4,204; landward, 848; total,

5,052. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,621. Post, T., M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Dalrymple street; Hugh M'Kechnie, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.30 a.m. & 2.35 & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, south, 7.30 a.m.; north, 8.35 & 12.30 a.m. & 2.15, 5.25 & 8.10 p.m.; Sunday, 6 p.m. No Sunday delivery Post Office, Pimmore; James Johnstone, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive from Girvan at 10.10 a.m.; dispatched, 5.20 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order office is at Girvan & telegraph office at Pimmore station, which is open on week days only

IRVINE

IRVINE is an ancient royal burgh, seaport, parish, the head of a presbytery, and of Cunninghame district and poor combination, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways, 67 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-south-west of Glasgow, 11 north of Ayr, 11 south of Beith and 7 west of Kilmarnock. The town is agreeably situated on rising ground on the north bank of the river Irvine, about a mile from its junction with the Garnock water and the sea, and is united by a fine stone bridge of four arches to the suburb of Fullarton on the south side of the river, but in the parish of Dundonald, which adjoins the Firth of Clyde, and includes the harbour and quay. In 1881 an Act of Parliament was obtained for extending the boundaries of the burgh, and for other purposes. By this Act, Fullarton, sometimes called the Halfway, was amalgamated with the burgh, so that the whole town is now under the jurisdiction of the municipality. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and eleven councillors. A halie court is held every lawful day, or business may require; and one for the recovery of small debts and for the trial of criminal cases before the justices is also held every Monday. The Dean of Guild Court is held on the first Tuesday of each month.

Under the provisions of the Reform Act of 1832, Irvine, Ayr and Campbeltown, Inveraray and Oban in Argyllshire forms the Ayr district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. Irvine burgh is one of great antiquity; the place is mentioned in an account of a dispute at an early period between Sir Ralph de Eglinton and the town of Irvine, and in the 12th century a charter was given to it. During the time of Alexander II. (1214-49) another charter was obtained, and this was confirmed by Robert the Bruce (1306-29). A monastery of Carmelite friars was founded here about 1300. A scheme for supplying the town with water was completed in Aug. 1878, by the authorities of the burgh of Irvine and the parish of Dundonald, at a cost of upwards of £90,000. Arrangements have since been made extending the supply to the towns of Kilwinning, Stevenston and Saltcoats, which by the Irvine Burgh Act, 1881, were included in the water supply district. Under the Irvine and District Water Board Order the control of the water supply is now vested in the Irvine and District Water Board of 17 members, viz.: 7 from Irvine, 3 from Kilwinning, 3 from Stevenston and 4 from Saltcoats. The horse fair is held on the third Monday in August, and with this commences the Marymass fair, which extends over the week and ends on Saturday with the races, conducted by the Irvine Carters' Society, the magistrates acting as stewards. Irvine was a customs port before 1760; its limits were defined and legal quays appointed in 1851, and in 1892 it was reinstated by Treasury warrant as a port of the United Kingdom. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port in the coasting trade with cargoes and in ballast in 1909 was 946, of 61,527 tons; the number cleared was 961, of 65,803 tons; in addition 23 entered with cargoes and in ballast from foreign ports of 5,425 tonnage. The total value of the imports in 1909 was £68,327, and of exports £13,205.

The harbour has been much improved at very considerable expense, and the trade has greatly increased, especially in the export of coal and the import of limestone. Here are the grain stores of J. F. Longmuir & Co. and John Orr, two steam saw mills, three iron forges, two large engineering and foundry yards, a hosiery manufactory and spelter works. Important chemical and chrome works have also been erected near the beach, which give employment to nearly 1,000 men. There are branches of the Royal, Clydesdale, British Linen and Union Banks. The principal inns are the Eglinton Arms and the King's Arms, in High street. The Municipal buildings form an elegant structure, surmounted by a turret with spire and containing a clock; the interior contains a council chamber, court house and various offices. The parish church is a building of large dimensions, with a spire and clock, and stands on rising ground in the centre of a churchyard; there is also the quad sacra church of Fullarton, four United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, a Baptist chapel, Salvation Army barracks and several Mission halls. The Irvine Royal Academy, at the north end of the town, now a Secondary school, was erected in 1814, at an expense of £2,250; it has since been established by a royal charter, and in 1872 was placed under the management of the School Board; in 1903 the premises were rebuilt, and science laboratories, workshops for technical education and a gymnasium added, at a cost of upwards of £15,000; attached to the Academy are several valuable bursaries. There are also Board and Roman Catholic schools. The Literary and Social Institute, in Bridgegate, has reading and recreation rooms, and a large hall for public meetings and entertainments. There are Templars' and Orange Halls. The statue of Robert Burns, who was born near Ayr, 25 January, 1759, but for some time worked at Irvine as a flax dresser, is a colossal figure of bronze, modelled by Mr. Pittendrigh Macgillivray A.R.S.A. and presented to the town of Irvine by Mr. John Spiers; the pedestal is ornamented with bronze panels displaying scenes from the poet's works. James Montgomery, a minor poet, some time editor of the "Sheffield Iris," and author of "The World before the Flood," the well-known hymn on "Prayer," and many other sacred poems, was born here, 4th Nov. 1771, in a small one-storey house, still standing in the street leading to the railway station, which has been purchased by some members of the Irvine Burns club with the view of preserving it. A tablet has been placed on the building, marking it as the birth-place of Montgomery. He visited his native town in 1841, and died at Sheffield, 30 April, 1854, and was buried in the general cemetery, where there is a monument with a statue in bronze, erected in 1861, at a cost of £1,000. John Galt, author of the "Annals of the Parish," &c. was born at Irvine, 2nd May, 1779; the house occupied by his father's family was taken down in 1858 and the office of the Union Bank erected on its site; a tablet in the Bank office commemorates this circumstance. The screw propeller, the principle of which was shown by Robert Hooke F.R.S. in 1681, and later by Du Quet, Bernoulli and others, was developed here in 1824 or 1825 by Messrs. W. McCririck, Maxwell Dick, and James Steadman, and successfully applied in 1836 by Fras. Pettet Smith and Capt. John Ericsson. The sect called Buchanites was founded here in 1779 by one Mrs. Elizabeth Buchan, who pretended to be the woman mentioned in Rev. ch. xii., and gathered many followers, with whom she journeyed through different parts of Scotland; she died in May, 1791, and the sect was then dispersed. From 1613 to 1640 Irvine was the scene of the labours of David Dickson M.A. afterwards professor of divinity at Glasgow University. On the 31st December, 1668, Blackwood and McCool, two Covenanters, were hanged at Irvine. The Marymass races are held on the Saturday following the third Monday of August, and the Eglinton Hunt meeting (over the Bogside course) generally in the beginning of April. The Town Moor and the Links at Bogside, and at Gailes, which are also adjacent to the town, form excellent sites for military encampments, and the 4th Battalion Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders (Special Reserve) have for many years held annual training on the Town Moor, which is also used by detachments of the Royal Artillery. At Bogside, on the Eglinton Estate and adjoining the moor, the Lanarkshire and the West of Scotland Territorial Artillery have camps of instruction during the summer. There is a splendid land range here with a battery of eight pieces, called Fort Eglinton. The camping ground at Gailes, which is on the Duke of Portland's estate, lies along the beach between Irvine and Troon. The Glasgow and Ayrshire Territorials occupy this ground throughout the summer months. There are golf links near the town; the Eglinton links at Bogside and two others at Gailes belonging to Glasgow clubs. A commodious club house has been erected for the Irvine Golf Club at Bogside, at a cost of upwards of £4,000. Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, stands within two miles of the burgh, and is famous as the scene of the grand tournament held here 29 August, 1839, and the following week; admission to the grounds and gardens (on Saturdays only) is obtainable by ticket. The area of the parish is 3,954 acres; rateable value, £24,120; area of the burgh, 1,795 acres. The population in 1901, including 367 in the Cunninghame Combination Poorhouse, was 6,458, of which 4,809 are in the burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 6,249, and of the parliamentary burgh, 9,604. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1906 was 1,883. The rateable value of Fullarton part of Dundonald parish is £22,489; population in 1901, 4,500.

KILBIRNIE, or Kilburney, is a populous town and parish, in Cunninghame district and poor combination, and in the small debts court district of Beith; 64 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 20 south-south-west of Glasgow, the like distance north of Ayr, and 3 west from Beith; it is 1 1/2 north-east from Glangarnock and Kilbirnie station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and there are also convenient stations at Bridgend (Kilbirnie), the terminus of a short line from Giffen) and at Glangarnock, both on the Caledonian system. The town is situated on the banks of the Garnock, in the heart of a fine country, and within a mile of the loch of Kilbirnie, which extends two miles in length by half a mile in breadth. The principal manufactories are the flax spinning, linen thread, and fishing-net works of Messrs. W. and J. Knox Limited, and there are also iron and steel works, and the rope works of Messrs. Robertson and Riddet, and J. Watt and Co. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Banking Co. Limited. The parish church is a plain edifice, but contains some fine examples of elaborate carving in wood. The gallery in the Crawford aisle, a perfect mass of beautiful carved work, is supposed to have been executed by the orders of John (Lindsay-Crawford), 1st Viscount Garcock (d. 1709), the quartered escutcheon of whose arms, impaled with those of his wife, Margaret (only daughter of John, first Earl of Bute), appear along its front; this gallery, for some time in a state of decay, has been restored by Sir James Knox bt. of Kilbirnie Castle. In the churchyard is the stately tomb of Captain Thomas Crawford, of Jordanhill, whose capture of Dumbarton Castle, in 1571, is one of the most daring feats recorded in history. There are also two United Free churches here and one at Glangarnock, and a Roman Catholic church. The Cemetery, covering two acres, was laid out at a cost of £900. The old castle of Glangarnock, one of the most ancient and stately ruins in Ayrshire, is supposed to have been the residence of the family of De Morville, which flourished in great splendour during the reigns of Alexander I., David I., Malcolm IV., and William the Lion. They held the high office of constable of Scotland, and were lords of Galloway and Cunningham. There likewise exist the extensive ruins of the old house of Kilbirnie, long the residence of the ancient family of Crawford, of Kilbirnie; but the Kilbirnie estates are now chiefly held by the Knox family. The parish of Kilbirnie comprises 10,370 acres; rateable value, £38,514; and had in 1901 a population of 7,207; of this number the town ward contained 4,571 and Glangarnock 1,633.

WEST KILBRIDE

WEST KILBRIDE is a parish and village in Cunninghame district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway; 73 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 24 south-south-west from Paisley, the like distance north-north-west from Ayr, 22 south from Greenock, 19 north-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-west from Irvine, 7½ south from Largs, 7 south-west from Dalry, 5 north from Saltcoats, 4½ south from Fairlie, and 4 north-west from Ardrossan; the village is surrounded on all sides by rising grounds, which on the west protect it from the keen sea breezes, and on the opposite aspect from easterly winds. The village is lighted with gas by a company. The scenery around is bold and romantic. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited; there is also a Public Institute, Library and Reading Room, the Paisley Convalescent Home, and Bowling and Curling Clubs. In the parish is an Established Church, a Roman Catholic and two United Free churches and a Parochial Cemetery. Near the village are the ruins of Law Castle, Portencross Castle and Hunterston Castle, and off the sea line of the parish one of the largest vessels of the Spanish Armada still remains sunk in ten fathoms of water. An attempt was made about a century ago to examine the internal condition of this ship, and the operation so far succeeded that a piece of ordnance was raised from her hull. Hunterston, situated in extensive grounds, is the seat of Mrs. Hunter-Weston. The principal landowners are Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie, of South Annan House, Fairlie; Mrs. Jane Hunter-Weston, of Hunterston; the trustees of the late Henry C. Hyndman esq. of Springside; William Graham esq. of Crosbie Tower; William Adams esq. of Portencross, and the trustees of the late James Arthur Carling esq. Area, 10,178 acres; rateable value, £34,129; the population of the parish in 1901 was 2,978, including 2,315 in the village.

SEAMILL, a small village on the sea shore, about 1 mile from West Kilbride, is a delightful summer resort and has a hydropathic establishment, known as the Seamill Hydropathic Limited; there is also here a Co-operative Convalescent Home.

KILMARNOCK

KILMARNOCK is a large and important manufacturing town and a parish, in Cunningham district and poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 6½ miles south-west of Edinburgh (through Glasgow), 21 south-west from Glasgow, 12 north-by-east from Ayr and between 6 and 7 east-by-north from Irvine. The town is situated on level ground near the confluence of the Kilmarnock water with the Irvine. The streets are regularly laid out and lighted with gas from works, the property of the Corporation, and also with the electric light, the supply of which began 5 Nov. 1904, under an order granted to the Corporation in 1899. This town, together with Dumbarston, Port Glasgow, Renfrew and Rutherglen, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member to Parliament. The civil government of the town is vested in a corporation, consisting of a provost, six bailies and eighteen councillors. The magistrates preside in the criminal court by turns, and the justices sit monthly. For years Kilmarnock seems to have been distinguished only for the manufacture of Scotch bonnets and military caps. Subsequently the staple manufacture was that of carpets, and this is still carried on. An extensive trade is also maintained in the manufacture of shoes for exportation, tweeds, winceys and cotton goods; there are skin works and tanneries and woollen and worsted spinning is also pursued, but the iron trade may now be said to be the staple trade of the town, and there are many large machine making and iron founding establishments, including the Caledonia works of Messrs. Andrew Barclay, Sons and Co. Limited, and others. The production of porcelain, enamelled and all kinds of fire clay goods, sanitary earthenware and glazed wall tiles is also extensively carried on here, the works of Messrs. J. and M. Craig (Kilmarnock) Limited giving employment to a large number of hands. Glenfield and Kenedy Limited, hydraulic engineers, have also a large factory, and here also are the engineering works of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Surrounding the town are extensive coal fields, from which the various works in the town are supplied, and quantities of coal are also dispatched by railway. The civil parish of Kilmarnock consists ecclesiastically of four parishes—the Low, the High, formed in 1731, St. Marneok's, and St. Andrew's, each containing an Established church. Part of the steeple of the Laigh kirk is of considerable age. St. Marneok's church, erected at a cost of £5,000, is a large and handsome edifice, in the Gothic style, with a tower, and affords sittings for 1,300 persons. The United Free Church has 10 places of worship in the town, one in the village of Crookedholm, in this parish, and a Mission Hall in Gilmour street. There are also Roman Catholic, Baptist and Congregational chapels, and places of worship for various other denominations. The Episcopal Church of Holy Trinity will seat 300 persons; the Rev. Allan Francis Blood has been rector since 1889. The old parish churchyard and that of St. Andrew's are now closed, but a public cemetery, covering seven acres of ground, was opened in 1875, and enlarged in 1892. The Town House, built in 1805, contains a council chamber and public offices. The Court House, in St. Marneok street, was erected in 1852, and attached to it are the sheriff's chambers, the offices of the procurator fiscal, those of the sheriff clerk and other offices. The Police buildings in Sturrock street were erected in 1898, at a cost of about £3,000, and contain a spacious court room and two flats of cells. The Corn Exchange buildings, erected by a joint-stock company, include a large hall. The Public Library and Museum in Elmbank avenue, London road, known as the "Dick Institute," was begun in 1899, and formally opened in April, 1901, the total cost, amounting to £15,000, being defrayed by James Dick esq. of Glasgow; the building is in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect; the ground floor is occupied by the reading rooms, lending and reference library and a spacious lecture hall, capable of seating 400 persons; on the second floor are the museums, containing the valuable geological collection of the late Mr. James Thompson F.G.S. and a large portion of the Braidwood collection, left by the late Dr. Hunter Selkirk; the late Mr. George Clark also bequeathed £500 to the library and museum, and the revenue from the trust funds of the late Mr. Robert Crawford amounts to about £80 per annum. The building was partially destroyed by fire on 26th Nov. 1909, and is now (1911) being reconstructed, with an extension of the museum. The Philosophical Society was formed in 1828, for the promotion of general and specially scientific knowledge. The Observatory, which occupies a fine site and is 70 feet in height, was erected in 1818 by the late Mr. Thomas Morton, at a cost of £1,000. There is a good Philharmonic Society. The Liberal Club is in Portland street; the Conservative Club, in Sturrock street, is a fine stone building in the Italian style, from the designs of Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect, and was erected at a cost of about £1,400; it contains a spacious hall seating 400 people, and billiard, reading and recreation rooms, and was considerably enlarged in 1892 at a cost of £500. The Ossington Coffee House, built by Lady Ossington, a former proprietor of the Barony of Kilmarnock, contains a reading room. There are four Masonic lodges, and others of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, the Free Foresters, the Free Gardeners etc. The Fever Hospital and Dispensary, which occupies an elevated site, is a building of stone, and was opened in 1868, at a cost of £4,136. The premises of the Kilmarnock Equitable Co-operative Society Limited, at the junction of John Finnie and John Dickie streets, were erected at a cost of nearly £20,000.

The Infectious Diseases Hospital was opened in 1909, at a cost of £23,500.

The Buchanan Charity, left in 1875, on the death of the last survivor of the Misses Buchanan of Bellfield, consists, according to a settlement made by the three sisters, of the mansion and estate of Bellfield, bequeathed by them for the benefit of the town of Kilmarnock and the village of Riccarton, close to which the estate, consisting of 240 acres, is situated. The trust provides £5 yearly to the Certified Industrial School; £3 to Kilmarnock Infirmary; £10 to the parish minister of Riccarton; to be expended on fannel for deserving poor; £130 yearly as salary to a missionary for Riccarton parish, and the balance of the yearly rents from lands and minerals is handed to the ministers of the Established church to be divided by them amongst the poor of the two parishes. Part of the mansion is fitted up to contain a reference library, now of about 1,500 volumes, for the public of Kilmarnock and Riccarton, and the gardens and policies are open for recreation. In accordance with the terms of the bequest the estate and funds are now administered by the provost and magistrates of Kilmarnock, the Established Church clergymen of the town and the minister of Riccarton. The mansion and grounds are open to the public every week day, and part of Sunday.

The Shaw Memorial, at the market cross, was erected in 1848 to the late Sir James Shaw bart. Lord Mayor of London, 1805-6, and a native of Mosshead, in this neighbourhood, who was born in 1764, and died 22 Oct. 1843. The memorial consists of a marble statue by James Fillans, a Scottish sculptor, and is eight feet in height, in civic robes, on a pedestal of the same height.

The Kilmarnock Academy, for 1,000 boys and girls, erected in 1897-8 by the School Board, at a cost of fully £25,000, was designed by Mr. R. S. Ingram, architect; the buildings include chemical and physical laboratories, a gymnasium, a workshop for manual instruction and a swimming bath. James Clark M.A., D.Sc. is the rector. In connection with the Academy a Technical School was erected in 1909, at a total cost of over £25,000, from the designs of Messrs. Andrew and Newlands; the building contains separate laboratories for chemistry, physics, electrical engineering, mechanics, hydraulics, mechanical engineering, mining, textile industries and biology, together with rooms for classes in cookery and laundry work. There are also rooms for the study of art, machine drawing, geometry and building construction. James Clark M.A., D.Sc. is the director. Kay's Endowed schools, in Bentinck street, now known as "Bentinck Public School," were founded by Alexander Kay, a native of Kilmarnock, who left the sum of £6,000 for their building and endowment; they have been transferred to the School Board, under a scheme of the Endowed School Commissioners, and the interest of the endowment is applied to educational purposes.

The Kay Park owes its existence to the late Mr. Alexander Kay, of Glasgow, and a native of Kilmarnock, who died in Jan. 1866, and by his will left £10,000 to purchase grounds for a public park and to maintain the same, and in 1878 the present site, consisting of nearly forty acres, was purchased from the Duke of Portland at a cost of £9,000. It includes the Clerk's Holm, and stretches from Braehed House to the Townhead bridge, and from the river on the west to Grassyards road on the east. A sum of about £3,000 was spent in laying out the park and forming drives and walks. In the centre of the Clerk's Holm is an ornamental fountain, erected at a cost of £800, and by a gift of the late Mrs. James Crooks a band-stand has also been erected, and a band plays here on Saturday afternoons. The park was publicly handed over to the burgh council, 9 Aug. 1879, and there is a limited fund for its maintenance. In 1882 the council purchased Strawberry Bank, an adjoining property, consisting of eight acres, for £1,800, and this has been incorporated with the Kay Park; portions of both are reserved for feuing purposes, and there is a small ornamental lake. In this section of the park stands a monument, erected in honour of the early parliamentary reformers. The Burns' Memorial, which stands in the park, was initiated at the public anniversary of the poet, held Jan. 26th, 1877, and consists of a museum and library, within which is placed a statue of Burns; the building, erected in 1878-9, is in the Scottish baronial style, from designs by Mr. S. Ingram, architect, of Kilmarnock, and has a height of 80 feet. The statue, of Scillio marble, was executed by Mr. W. G. Stevenson, Edinburgh, and cost £800. The entire cost of the building and statue was about £2,700. The collection of Burns' holograph MSS. preserved here is the most complete in existence, and includes the MSS. of many of his best known poems, besides many of his letters to correspondents in Kilmarnock and the neighbourhood, and other relics, including china, plate, silver spoons, glass and a chair. The Mackie Library, also kept here, contains almost every published edition of the poet's works, and comprises upwards of 800 volumes.

Dean Castle, formerly the property of the Boyds, Earls of Kilmarnock, but destroyed by fire in 1735, and now ruinous, stands in a dene or hollow, less than a mile north from the town. Kilmarnock House, a mansion once belonging to and the last residence of that noble family, is in St. Marneok street. From this house William Boyd, 4th and last earl, proceeded in 1745 to join the standard of the Pretender, but was taken prisoner at Culloden, and executed on Tower Hill, 18 Aug. 1746. His eldest son, James, Lord Boyd, subsequently succeeded in 1758 to the earldom of Errol, and his descendant William George, 17th Earl of Errol K.T., G.C.H. was in 1831 (17 June) created a peer of the United Kingdom under the title of Baron Kilmarnock. The building is now occupied as an industrial school. About 3 miles from the town, on the Carmel, is Rowallan Castle, a fortress of considerable antiquity, though greatly decayed. It was the seat of the barons of Rowallan, and is famous as the birthplace of Elizabeth More, or Mure, the first wife of Robert the Second and mother of Robert III. of Scotland. It was also the residence of Sir William Mure, author of a metrical translation of the Psalms of David, and other poetical works. The estate now belongs to Archibald Cameron Corbett esq. M.P. of Rowallan.

The market, which is held on Friday, is abundantly supplied. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in May, the last Thursday in July (commonly called the "grozet fair"), and for horses on the last Thursday in October. The cheese show and fair, held at the end of October, is affirmed to be the largest in the kingdom, and is attended by dealers from all parts of the country; 15,000 tons of cheese have been exhibited here at one show. The October show is purely an agricultural one. About the middle of April a large show of cattle, horses and sheep has been held for years. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O.; Lord Howard de Walden, and A. Cameron Corbett esq. M.P. are the principal landowners.

The area of the civil parish comprises 9,444 acres; rateable value in 1907, £183,713, inclusive of railways; the population of the entire parish was 27,968 in 1891 and 33,142 in 1901, viz.:—Parliamentary and police burgh, 31,150; Hurlford, 700, and landward, 1,292. As showing the progress of the town, it may be mentioned that in 1801 the population of the parish was only 8,079. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was:—Kilmarnock (Old), 12,482; High Kirk, 5,139; St. Andrew, 10,068; St. Marneok, 4,393. The parliamentary and police burgh had in 1901 a population of 31,168 in Kilmarnock parish and 3,011 in Riccarton parish; total, 34,179. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 7,094.

CROOKEDHOLM is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmarnock, and has a United Free church. Hurlford, on the Kilmarnock and Darvel section of the Glasgow and South Western system, is the nearest railway station, and is half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

KILMAURS is a town and burgh of barony and parish in Cunninghame district and poorhouse combination and in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway. The town is 2½ miles north-west from Kilmarnock, and stands on the right bank of a rivulet called the Carmel or Kilmaurs water. It was erected into a burgh or barony in 1627 by James V. at the instance of Outhbert, 3rd Earl of Glencairn, and his son, Lord Kilmaurs. The town, which consists principally of a single street, is lighted with gas from works belonging to a private owner. The most prominent trade now is the manufacture of boots and shoes and hosiery. Coal is also raised in the parish. The Established church has been thoroughly restored, and a new chancel and tower erected at a cost of about £2,000, defrayed by the heritors and members of the congregation. In the churchyard is a fine tomb to James (Cunynghame), Lord Kilmaurs and 7th Earl of Glencairn, and his family. There are also two United Free churches. The Town House, a small edifice with a tower and clock, stands in the middle of the street. The Public Hall, erected at a cost of about £1,500, is used for meetings and entertainments. The Duke of Portland K.G., G.C.V.O., P.C.; Lord Howard De Walden, and Lady Sophia C. Montgomerie, of Southannan House, Fairlie, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,914 acres; rateable value, £28,906; the population in 1891 was 4,453, and in 1901 was 4,549 in the civil and 2,094 in the ecclesiastical parish, and 1,803 in the town.

CROSSHOUSE is a small village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parishes of Kilmaurs and Dreghorn, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, about 1 mile distant from the village. The collieries and fire-clay works in the neighbourhood give employment to a number of the inhabitants. There are Established and Roman Catholic churches here, and Board and Roman Catholic schools. Population in 1901, 2,685 in the ecclesiastical parish and 897 in the village.

GATEHEAD is a hamlet in the parish of Kilmaurs, 2½ miles west from Kilmarnock and 4 south from Kilmaurs, with a station on the Ayr branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The population is returned with the parish.

ELDERSLIE, FARDLEHILL, and KELK PLACE are villages in the parish; the population in 1901 was 467.

KILWINNING is a market town, police burgh and parish, in Cunninghame poorhouse combination and Irvine small debt court district. The town lies situated on rising ground about 2 miles from the sea, and is 24 miles south-west from Glasgow, 3 north-west of Irvine, 4 north-east of Saltcoats, the same distance south of Dalry, 10 west-north-west of Kilmarnock and 5 east from Ardrossan, with stations on the Glasgow and South Western and Caledonian railways; the branch of the Lanarkshire and Ayrshire railway, from Barnhill to Ardrossan, was completed in the summer of 1888, the station being close to that on the Glasgow and South Western line. The town is lighted with gas by a company, and supplied with water by the Irvine and District Water Board from their works at Dalry, and is governed by a provost and two junior magistrates, having been constituted a police burgh in Nov. 1889. The trade consists partly in the weaving and manufacture of gauzes, muslins, and shawls for the Glasgow and Paisley markets; and in the neighbourhood are large iron, coal and fire-clay works. Several engineering works, an iron foundry, and a worsted spinning mill are also carried on. The agricultural produce of the parish is considerable, and coals are obtained in abundance. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Kilwinning (Joint) Hospital, in Fergushill road, completed and opened in 1897, is available for 30 patients; Miss Mary B. Mitchell, matron. The Established church, a mean edifice, has, however, an elegant tower of four stages, in the Early English style, erected at a cost of £2,000, with embattled parapet and pinnacles, and contains a clock with dials. There are also two United Free churches, and chapels belonging to the Evangelical Union, Original Seceders and Roman Catholics. The Board school, built at a cost of £10,000, will hold about 1,000 children. The picturesque ruins of the ancient abbey, founded by Hugh de Morville, in 1140, adjoin the church, but consist of little more than the gable of the south transept, a lofty fragment in the lancet style, and an arch once leading into the nave. The public park, in Dalry road, was formed with a sum of £7,000, bequeathed by the late John McGavin esq. formerly of Kilwinning. The Small Pox Hospital, erected in 1908, contains 20 beds.

Kilwinning is famous as being the first place in Scotland where freemasonry was established, and it is traditionally said to have been introduced by the foreign architect who was employed in erecting the abbey. Until the period of the Reformation the ancient masonic lodge here held its meetings in the chapter house of the monastery, but in 1779 a lodge was built in a plain Gothic style, and continued to be used until 1893, when it was removed for the purpose of making a new entrance to the churchyard. The new lodge, erected and opened in the same year, stands in the main street, a short distance west of the old site, and is a good building of red Manclina stone, the design being a free treatment of Scottish Renaissance style, by Mr. J. B. Wilson, architect, Glasgow. The main entrance door is semi-circular, with pilasters at each side, and a balustraded balcony above. The upper floor is lighted by a wide bay window in five divisions, and above it is a typical Scotch gable, with the usual corbie steps, and across it runs a carved frieze bearing the words "Mother Lodge." The large upper room, 24 feet by 20 feet, is used for meetings of the lodge, and there are several small rooms and an entrance hall. The ceiling is ornamented with wreaths of thistles, with various masonic emblems interlaced. It is also remarkable from being the seat of a company of archers ascertained to have existed so early as the year 1448; and a society of that kind is still in existence. Fairs are held on the first Monday in February and the first Monday in November; and a cattle show in connection with the Farmers' Society is held annually, Eglinton Castle, the seat of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton, lord lieutenant of the county, is famous as the scene of the tournament held there Aug. 29, 1839, and the following week. Here are the kennels of the Eglinton foxhounds, of which Lord Eglinton is master; the pack hunts 4 days a week; Ayr, Kilmarnock and Irvine are convenient places for hunting visitors. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton, and Lady Sophia Constance Montgomerie, of Southanhan House, Fairlie, Ayrshire, are the principal landowners. The population in 1901 was 8,125, of which 4,440 belonged to the town; area of the parish, 10,989 acres; area of burgh, 351 acres; rateable value, of landward, £34,324; burghal, £16,829.

Eglinton Iron Works is a village in this parish with a population in 1901 of 1,075. Fergushill is also a village (which see). Bensley, another village, had a population in 1901 of 318.

KIRKMICHAEL is a small village and parish in the district of Carrick and in Maybole poor combination. The village is 3 1/2 miles east from Marbole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 7 1/2 south-west from Edinburgh, 22 south from Kilmarnock, 10 south of Ayr, the same distance east of Dalmellington, 8 north-east of Daily and 4 west-by-north from Straiton, pleasantly situated in a valley, on the road from Newton Stewart to Glasgow, and is 36 miles from the former and 44 from the latter. The general surface of the parish is hilly, towards the south and east, mountainous and rocky; but the whole is more or less cultivated. The Girvan stream runs through the parish; the Doon forms its boundary for several miles, and the Dyrock water flows through the village. The ancient church was dedicated to St. Michael, and the present structure was built in 1787 on the old site. In the churchyard is the tomb of Gilbert M'Adam, who was shot in 1685 by the laird of Culzean and Ballochmyle, for his adherence to the Covenanters. Here is a public hall and reading room. Cloncaird Castle, an ancient building, is the residence of Hugh Robert Wallace esq. D.L., J.P. Area of the parish, 15,929 acres; rateable value, £14,823. Population in 1891, 1,870, and in 1901, 1,789 in the civil and 839 in the ecclesiastical parish and 311 in the village.

CROSSHILL is a village on the left bank of the Girvan, in the parish, and about 2 miles south of Kirkmichael, and is a quoad sacra parish, formed from Kirkmichael, Kirkoswald and Maybole parishes. There are established and United Free churches here. Population in 1901, 1,108 in the ecclesiastical parish and 662 in the village.

KIRKOSWALD is a parish in the district of Carrick and in Maybole poor combination. The village is 13 miles south-south-west from Ayr and 4½ southeast from Maybole station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and on the road from Portpatrick to Glasgow, being 90 miles from the former and 48 by the new road from the latter. The sea coast here presents a sandy beach with a rich sward extending to the sea mark; and there are two lakes, from which many small streams wind through the district towards the sea. Here are Established and United Free churches, a Working Men's Club and a Mission Hall. Culzean Castle, the seat of the Marquess of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor, is a fine and ancient mansion placed on a rock overhanging the sea; and on the land side are gardens and a noble park of great extent. Not far from the castle is a fort mounted with 13 guns and a mortar battery, both kept in efficient order. At Crossraguel, in a low valley between Kirkoswald and Maybole, are the remains of the abbey of St. Mary, founded in 1244, by Duncan, first Earl of Carrick, and at one period inhabited by Cluniac monks from Paisley. At the Reformation it became the property of the Earl of Cassillis, but now belongs to Major-Gen. Sir Charles Fergusson M.V.O., D.S.O. of Ladyburn. A lighthouse stands on the site of Turnberry Castle, once the residence and property of Robert the Bruce, and not more than a mile from it lies the farm of Shanter, once the residence of Douglas Graham, the hero of Burns' poem, "Tam o' Shanter," and now occupied by Mr. W. Gray. Area of the parish comprises 14,849 acres; gross rateable value, £17,411; the population in 1891 was 1,652, and in 1901, 1,579 in the civil and 1,411 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LARGS is a town, police burgh and watering place on the east shore of the Firth of Clyde, opposite the north end of Great Cumbrae Island, and as a parish is at the extreme north-west of the county, extending 8 miles from north to south by about 4 in breadth, and is bounded north and east by Renfrewshire, south by West Kilbride parish and west by the Firth, and is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The town is 70 miles west by south from Edinburgh, 30 south-west from Glasgow, 14 south from Greenock and 20 north from Irvine, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The town is governed by a provost and town councillors. In 1263 Haco, King of Norway, was defeated by the Scottish army under Alexander III. on the plain on which the town stands. The parish church is an edifice of red stone, with a spire and clock. There are two United Free churches, one of which, the Clark Memorial church, was erected by John Clark esq. J.P. at a cost of £30,000; there is also a Roman Catholic church, a Mission hall and a hall for Christian Brethren. The Episcopal church of St. Columba was built in 1877, and will seat 250 persons. An aisle in the old parish church, built by Sir Robert Montgomery, in 1636, is the burial place of the Montgomerys, of Skelmorlie, and has underneath a vault in which lies the body of Sir Robert, inclosed in a leaden coffin bearing a Latin inscription. The Rev. William Leslie Low M.A., D.D. of Aberdeen University and canon of Glasgow, has been rector since 1880. The cemetery is in Haillie road. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Bank. Considerable business is carried on in the fishery. The annual fair, commencing on the first Tuesday in June after the 12th (St. Columba's day), lasts two days. At Mackerston place is a granite fountain, erected as a memorial to the late John Campbell, surgeon, for 61 years a resident of the town. The old buildings of the Brisbane Academy, purchased by J. Stevenson esq. of Haillie, have been converted into an institute, with reading and recreation rooms and a library, which also includes the Mechanics' Library, increased by gifts of books from Mr. Stevenson. Knock Castle, the seat of Robert Hunter Craig esq. J.P. occupies a fine position overlooking the Firth, and is a conspicuous landmark; in the grounds are the ruins of the old castle. Brisbane is the seat of Charles Thomas Brisbane esq. D.I., J.P.; Netherhall, of Lady Kelvin; Halks-hill, of Charles Cunningham Scott esq. and Haillie, of Charles John Cathcart Douglas esq. D.L., J.P. The area of the parish comprises 21,848 acres; area of burgh, 353 acres; rateable value, landward, £30,064; burghal, £37,098; the population in 1901 was 8,125, of which 3,246 are in the burgh.

LOANS, see TROON.

LOUDOUN is a parish and village in the north-east of the county, in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The village lies $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-east of Kilmarnock and 15 north-east from Ayr and the nearest station is at Newmilns, on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish extends 10 miles from east to west by 3 in breadth, and is bounded east by Lanarkshire, north by Renfrewshire and the parish of Fenwick, west by Kilmarnock and south by Galston. The chancel of the old parish kirk of Loudoun, originally built about 1015, and the only part now remaining, stands near the castle, and is used as the burying place of the family of Hastings, and here rest the remains of Lady Flora Hastings, to whose memory, and that of her mother, a granite obelisk was erected in 1888, by a near relative, Miss Henry, of Cheltenham. In the parish is also Pate's Mill, celebrated in the song, "The Lass of Pate's Mill." Loudoun Castle, the property of the Earl of Loudoun, is a large structure in the Baronial style, standing in the midst of an extensive and well-wooded park. The Earl of Loudoun is the principal landowner. The area comprises 15,511 acres; rateable value, £43,712; the population in 1901, including the three towns, was 8,205, and exclusive, 1,088. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 4,920. The post offices are at Newmilns, Darvel and Galston, and the places of worship, Established and United Free church, are in the same towns.

LUGAR,

WITH CRONBERRY AND DARNCONNER

LUGAR is a village in the parish of Auchinleck, and was constituted a quoad sacra parish in 1907; it is $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east of Cumnock, with a station on the Ayr and Muirkirk section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. Here is an Established church and an Institute, a building of stone, the gift of William Weir esq. erected in 1892, at a cost of about £5,000 and comprising billiard, card and reception rooms, a large hall for public meetings and swimming and private baths. There are large ironworks adjoining the village, containing five blast furnaces, belonging to Messrs. William Baird and Co. Limited, and in connection with them is a co-operative store. The trustees of the late Lady Jane Boswell are the principal landowners. The population in 1901 was 1,268.

CRONBERRY is a village in Auchinleck parish, 2 miles north-east of Lugar, with a station on the Ayr and Muirkirk section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The population in 1901 was 664.

DARNCONNER is a village, 3 miles north-west of Lugar, in Auchinleck parish,

MAUCHLINE is a considerable town and parish in Kyle poor combination, 2½ miles west from Catrine, with a station, less than half a mile distant, on the Glasgow and South Western railway: the town is pleasantly situated and lighted with gas by a company. The Established church, erected in place of the old kirk, the scene of the "Holy Fair," is an elegant structure in the Gothic style with a square tower, and there are also United Free churches. In connection with the Established church an elegant and spacious church hall was erected about 1899. In the churchyard are the graves of the Rev. Mr. Auld, Nause Tinnock, Mary Morrison and several other persons who figure in the satires of Burns. The new cemetery is near the railway station. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Public Library and a Temperance Hall. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday after the 18th May and the 4th of November. The trade consists chiefly in the manufacture of fancy wood-ware &c. in sycamore wood, faced with various tartan patterns, for which this town has long been noted, and largely made by Messrs. W. and A. Smith. Messrs. T. and A. Kay have a wide reputation for the manufacture of curling stones. The red freestone quarries of Ballochmyle and Barskimming, worked respectively by Messrs. Marcus Bain, and Baird and Stevenson, provide employment for a great many of the inhabitants. Mauchline Castle is an ancient structure of considerable antiquarian interest. Burns resided several years at Mossiel, a small farm about half a mile to the north of Mauchline, on the left side of the road from thence to Kilmarnock; the steading may still be seen, environed by a few trees, as well as the fields, in traversing which, it is said, he composed some of his best poems. His chief resort when he visited Mauchline was the public house of John Dow, a thatched house of two flats, nearly opposite the churchyard gate, now entirely rebuilt and occupied as houses and shops. The cottage of "Poosie Nancy," or Mrs. Gibson, the scene of the "Jolly Beggars," stands immediately opposite the churchyard gate. The National Burns Memorial, erected here in 1898, is a square tower, used as a museum for relics of the poet, with cottage homes adjoining; the cost, about £5,000, was raised by public subscription. The principal landowners are Sir Claud Alexander bart. of Fay Gate Wood, Horsham, Sussex; the Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O.; John Meikle esq. of Barskimming; the trustees of the late Lady Jane Boswell, and William K. Hamilton-Campbell esq. The area comprises 8,907 acres; rateable value in 1910, £18,710; the population in 1901 was 2,572, including 1,767 in the town, and in 1891, 2,339.

MAYBOLE is a parish, police burgh and the head of a poor combination, in the district of Carrick, with a station on the Ayr and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 25 miles north from Ballantrae, 22 south-by-west from Kilmarnock, 12 north-by-east from Girvan and 9 south from Ayr. The town, which is beautifully situated near the coast of the Firth of Clyde, consists chiefly of narrow streets, and has few public buildings of any importance. It is lighted with gas by a limited company, and is governed by a town council. The principal industry is the manufacture of boots and shoes, and there are also agricultural implement works. The ancient collegiate church has been for some time in ruins, but the burial ground is still used. The parish church is in Cassillis road; there is also a quoad sacra church at Maybole West. Besides two United Free churches, the Episcopal Mission church of St. Oswald, built in 1883 and seating 118 persons, Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels and a Presbyterian Evangelistic hall. The town house, erected in 1887 by public subscription, is a handsome structure, and supersedes the old building, once belonging to the Kennedys of Blairquhan. The Carnegie Public Library, built at a cost of £4,500, was opened December, 1906. There are bowling and golf clubs and a coffee and reading room. The Carrick Farmers' Society holds its meetings here. The old mansion house or castle of the Kennedy family, Marquesses of Ailsa and Earls of Cassillis, is the finest surviving specimen of the various mansions formerly existing in Maybole. It is a stately, well-built structure, standing in the centre of the town, and is now occupied by Thomas Smith esq. factor to the Marquess of Ailsa, who is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Marquess of Ailsa, Major-Gen. Sir Charles Fergusson bart. M.V.O., D.S.O. and William Baird esq. In the vicinity are the celebrated ruins known as "Crossraguel." The area of the parish is 21,932 acres; area of burgh, 392 acres; rateable value, of landward, £29,379; burghal, £14,443; the population in 1891 was 7,599, and in 1901, 7,889, with 5,892 in the town; population of ecclesiastical parish, 3,764.

CULROY, or Minishant, is a small village in the parish of Maybole, 3½ miles from that town, and on the road to Ayr, from which it is 5½ miles distant. In this village is a manufactory for woollen goods. The church was erected by the late Sir Peter Coats, in memory of his wife, who died 21st April, 1877, and attached is a reading room and library. The population of Minishant in 1891 was 146.

DUNURE, or Fisherton, is a small village and quoad sacra parish, in the parish of Maybole, 6½ miles from the town, with an Established church, and is chiefly inhabited by fishermen. Near the village are the ruins of Dunure Castle, the ancient seat of the Kennedys, who have MUIRKIRK is a parish and town in Kyle district and poor combination, and in Old Cunnock small debt court district, with a station near the town, on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways; the town is 50 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south from Glasgow, 26 east-by-north from Ayr, 24 south-east from Kilmarnock and 16 north-west from Sanquhar, near the right bank of the Water of Ayr, and at the junction of the roads leading from Glasgow to Dumfries, and from Edinburgh to Ayr.

The town is lighted with gas by a company, and has an Established church, two United Free churches and Roman Catholic and Evangelical Union churches. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The Baird Institute, opened in Nov. 1887, was the gift to the town of J. G. A. Baird esq. D.L., J.P. and is a building in the Domestic Gothic style, consisting of reading, recreation and billiard rooms, and a library &c.; the total cost was over £2,000. There is also a Temperance Hall. Fairs are held for hiring on the first Tuesday after the 18th February and the first Thursday after the 18th December, and for pleasure &c. on the second Friday in June. A considerable portion of the land here is profitably employed in grazing and pasture. The pasture land ranges from 500 to 2,000 feet above the sea level and produces a celebrated breed of black-faced sheep and Ayrshire cattle, and also contains extensive grouse moors. Coal, iron and limestone are abundant. Messrs. William Baird and Jo. Limited have three blast and several puddling furnaces and rolling mills constantly in operation, for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron, besides extensive works for the manufacture of chemicals. The principal landowners are John G. A. Baird esq. D.L., J.P. of Muirkirk; Charles Howatson esq. J.P. of Glenbuck; Col. the Hon. Augustus M. Cathcart, of Kirkby Malzeard, Yorks; Mrs. Carleton Tuffnell, of Dollars, and Sir Windham Frederick Carmichael-Anstruther bart. of Carmichael House, Thankerton. Area, 30,263 acres; rateable value, £27,023, including railways; the population in 1891 was 5,165, and in 1901, 5,670, including 3,892 in the town.

GLENBUCK is a small mining village in the parish of Muirkirk, about 3 miles north-east from that place, with a station on the Caledonian railway, about one mile from the village, and has an Established church. The collieries give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. Glenbuck loch is the source of the river Ayr. Population in 1901, 1,037.

NEWMILNS is a manufacturing town situated on the river Irvine, in the parishes of Loudoun and Galston, 2 miles east of Galston, 24 south of Glasgow and 18 northeast of Ayr, with a station on a branch from Kilmarnock of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is (with Greenholm) a burgh in the poor combination of Cunningham and small debt court district of Kilmarnock. It was first created a burgh of barony in 1490 by King James IV. and this charter was confirmed by Sir Matthew Campbell, of Loudoun, in 1566. The bailies are competent to bold courts, from which there is no appeal, except to the court of session, and in other respects their jurisdiction is as ample as that of most royal burghs. There is an Established church, and two United Free churches. The Town hall is a substantial building of stone, situate in Main street. The Working Men's Institute was erected by Miss Brown, of Lanfine, and is similar to those at Galston and Darvel. In the centre of the town are the remains of an ancient castle, a former residence of the Hastings family. The manufacture of muslins and lace is carried on here extensively, a large number of hands being employed in this branch. The area of the burgh is 434 acres; rateable value, £18,475; the population in 1901 was 4,467. Post, T. & M. O. Office, Main street (letters should have Ayrshire added to them); John Brown, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 12.50 & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.35 & 11.15 a.m. & 3.55, 6 & 7.45 p.m.

NEWTON, see Ayr.

OCHILTREE is a parish and a small but pleasant village, in Kyle district and poor combination, with a station, about 1½ miles distant, on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 64 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 49 north-west from Dumfries, 37 south from Glasgow, 28 north-by-east from Girvan, 22 north-west from Sanquhar, 16 south from Kilmarnock, the like distance north-east from Maybole, 11½ east from Ayr and 4 west from Old Cumnock; the village stands on the south side of the Lugar water, and on the high road from Ayr to Dumfries and Edinburgh, and contains Established and United Free churches. The country around is delightfully picturesque, and the parish is well watered. The great Scottish reformer, John Knox, here married his second wife, Margaret, daughter of Andrew, 2nd Lord Stewart of Ochiltree, who at that period resided at Ochiltree House. The Marquess of Bute, trustees of the 7th Earl of Hardwicke (d. 1809), William Campbell esq. John Walker esq. of Polquhain, trustees of the late John Maxwell Gordon, the Misses Agnes Campbell and Jane Walker, and James Kenneth esq. of Buckridgen, Kilwinning, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 18,404 acres; rateable value in 1910, £20,222; the population in 1891 was 2,062, and in 1901, 1932, including 549 in the village.

TAIGLIM, or Drorgan, is a village in this parish. The population in 1901 was 354.

Post, M. O. & T. Office; Mongo L. Jamieson, sub-postmaster. Letters arrive through Cumnock. Deliveries, 7.40 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 2 & 7.5 p.m.; no delivery on sundays

PATNA is a small village in the parishes of Straiton and Dalmellington, with a station about half a mile distant on a branch from Ayr of the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is also a quoad sacra parish in itself for church and registration purposes, and has an Established church. The village stands on the banks of the Doon, which abounds with trout. Coal and ironstone are plentifully obtained in this neighbourhood, and the working of these minerals furnishes employment to many of the villagers. The Duke of Portland K.G., G.C.V.O., P.C. is the chief landed proprietor. The population in 1891 was 908, and in 1901, 482.

PRESTWICK, or PRESTEVIKKE, is a small burgh about two miles from Ayr, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it was at one period a place of some consequence, having been created a burgh of barony at an early date, and reconstituted in November, 1903, and its charter, renewed by James VI. in 1600, granted to it a weekly market and an annual fair, but the market has fallen into disuse. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Town House, in which meetings of the Council are held monthly. The market cross, which is of considerable antiquity, still exists. There are fine golf links, where the ancient game has been played for many years. The Prestwick Golf Club has a large and handsome club house, and there is also the St. Nicholas Club, both having a large number of members. The St. Cuthbert's Links were opened May 5th, 1899. The population in 1901 was 2,768, and is now estimated at 4,500.

RICCARTON is a parish and village, in the district of Kyle and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, on the left or south bank of the Irvine river; the village stands on an eminence on the road to Ayr, a mile to the south of Kilmarnock, with which it is connected by a long street and bridge over the river. The parish includes the village of Hurlford. The established church here was erected in 1823, and has a fine and lofty steeple, and there is also an Institute. Riccarton was once the residence of Sir Richard Wallace, uncle of the Scottish patriot Sir William Wallace, who frequently retired here after his marauding expeditions. Caprington Castle, the residence of Lieut.-Col. J. A. S. Cuninghame D.L., J.P. is an ancient and historic building. A considerable quantity of coal is raised in this parish. The principal landed proprietors are the Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. Lord Howard de Walden, Lieut.-Col. J. A. S. Cuninghame D.L., J.P., and the trustees of the late Carleton Tufnell esq. Area comprises 7,649 acres; rateable value of landward, £20,794, and of Kilmarnock portion, £6,433; the population in 1901, exclusive of Kilmarnock and Hurlford portions, was 238.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Riccarton; Miss Mary Ann Shadden, sub-postmistress. Letters are received through Kilmarnock. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 12 noon & 2.40, 5.30 & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 8.50 & 10.45 a.m. & 1, 4, 5.30, 6.30 & 8.30 p.m.

SALTCOATS

SALTCOATS is a seaport town and police
 burgh, partly in the parish of Ardrossan,
 and partly in that of Stevenston, with stations on the Glasgow and South-Western and Caledonian railways, and is less than a mile each from Ardrossan and Steven-ston, 73 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 29 south-south-west from Glasgow, 19 north from Ayr and 14 west-by-north from Kilmarnock. The town was made a burgh on 25th May, 1885, by the adoption of the General Police Act for Scotland,
 and is much resorted to in the summer
 by visitors from all quarters, on account of its facilities for sea bathing. The harbour here was constructed at the beginning of the 18th century, for the shipment of coal, brought down by canal from the extensive fields in the immediate neighbourhood. The shipping and shipbuilding trade of the port has, since 1852, been for the most part transferred to the harbour and docks at Ardrossan. The making of salt created at one time a very large trade, but ceased in 1890. Salts is, nevertheless, still a flourishing town. Its close proximity to Ardrossan on the one side, with its extensive harbours, docks
 and public works, and to Stevenston with its foundries on the other, and to the collieries in the neighbourhood, has improved
 the trade of the town, which has been provided with a thoroughly effective drainage system by the Town Council, and is lighted with gas and supplied with excellent water by a system of gravitation
 by the Irvine and District Water Board from their works at Dalry. There are two established churches, an Evangelical Union church, four United Free churches,
 a Roman Catholic church and Salvation Army barracks. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Bank of Scotland have branches here. The Town House, in Countess street, was built in 1825;
 the Town Hall, which adjoins it, erected in 1892, is a building of stone, with a clock tower, and has a large hall
 holding 900 persons, and a lesser hall holding 300. A justice of the peace court is regularly held here on the first Friday in every month in the lesser hall. The Good Templars' Hall is in Green street,
 and in Canal street is a Masonic Lodge and Hall and Territorial Drill Hall. The Cemetery, opened in 1855 by a company,
 was acquired by the Parochial Board in 1873, and has been twice extended; it now comprises 7 acres. The Mission Coast Home consists of three blocks of buildings, for the free reception and treatment of about 100 inmates, each remaining for a short period; the home is maintained by voluntary subscriptions.
 The area of the burgh is 472 acres; rate-
 able value, £42,542; population in 1901, 5,419 in Ardrossan Side and 2,701 in Stevenston Side; total, 8,120.

SEAMILL, see WEST KILBRIDE.

SKELMORLIE is a large village in the parish of Largs, on the coast, 2 miles south of Wemyss Bay, and a quoad sacra parish formed out of the parishes of Largs in Ayrshire and Inverkip in Renfrewshire, and is a summer resort for visitors. The nearest railway station is at Wemyss Bay, on the Paisley and Wemyss Bay branch of the Caledonian line. The parish is in the small debt court district of Kilmarnock. The village is lighted by gas & electricity supplied from works in the place. Here are Established and United Free churches: the former was rebuilt in 1894-5, when a new chancel and north aisle were erected, and the building now consists of chancel, nave, north aisle and a tower 100 feet in height. The Earl of Eglinton and Winton is the principal landowner. The population of the village in 1891 was 951, and in 1901, 1,096, and that of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 1,401, of whom 1,096 were in Ayrshire and 305 in Renfrewshire.

Post, T. M. O., Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, Skelmorlie (letters should have Ayrshire added); James Raphael, postmaster. Deliveries, 6.30 & 9 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 7.35 & 11 a.m. & 3 & 6.45 p.m. Deliveries, Sunday, to callers, 9 a.m.; dispatch, 2.15 p.m.

SOEN is a parish and village in the north-east of the county, in the poor combination of Kyle and small debt court district of Ayr, and the nearest railway station is at Mauchline, on the Glasgow and South Western line; the parish is bounded on the east by Muirkirk, on the south by Auchinleck, on the west by Mauchline, and on the north by Galston and Strathaven, and measures about 6½ miles each way. The parish church is about 4 miles distant from Mauchline, to which parish it once belonged. Sorn Constitutional Club was erected in 1892, and contains a hall for entertainments and a small library. The land, originally moorland, has been improved and well inclosed, and there are fine plantations near the river Ayr, which runs through the parish from east to west. Sorn abounds with coal, limestone and ironstone. Dugald Stewart F.R.S. the late celebrated professor of moral philosophy at Edinburgh, was born in the neighbourhood of Catrine, 22 Nov. 1753. Thomas Walker M. Intyre esq. J.P. of Sorn Castle, Sir Claud Alexander, Fay Gate Wood, Horsham, Sussex, Sir Henry Farquhar bart. D.L., J.P. of Gilmingscroft; Capt. R. M. Campbell, of Glainsnock; the trustees of the late Arthur Campbell esq. and Charles

STAIR is a parish including the mining village of TRABBOCH, in the district of Kyle, and on the south or right bank of the river Ayr, with a station at Trabboch, about a quarter of a mile from Stair village, on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. It was severed from Ochiltree and constituted an independent parish in 1673. The village, which is 7 miles east from Ayr, is romantically situated, and contains established and United Free churches, some good mansions and numerous other dwellings. Stair gives the title of earl and viscount to the Dalrymple family. The surrounding country abounds with coal. Burskimming, the residence of the Misses Anderson, is in this parish. The area comprises 5,346 acres: rateable value, £8,489; population in 1891, 1,137, and in 1901, 1,175 civil and 1,069 ecclesiastical. The population of the village of Trabboch in 1901 was 492.

Post Office, Stair; Miss Maggie Wilson, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Ayr. Delivery, 9 a.m.; dispatches, 11.20 a.m. & 6.45 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Tarbolton, 3 miles distant.

STEVENSTON is a parish on the shore of the Firth of Clyde, 2 miles south-east of Ardrossan, the town being 1 mile east of Saltcoats station on the Caledonian and Glasgow and South Western railways; the parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 1 to 3 in breadth, and is in the poor combination of Cunninghame and small debt court district of Kilmarnock, and is bounded north by Ardrossan, east by Irvine and Kilwinning and south and west by the firth. It derives its name from Stephen or Steven, the son of Richard, who obtained a grant of lands from Richard Morville, constable of Scotland, who died in 1189. Under this grant, Stephen settled here, and gave his patronymic designation to the place. Stevenston is supplied with water by the Irvine and District Water Board, from their works at Dalry. The parish abounds in valuable seams of coal. The extensive ironworks of Ardeer were erected here by Messrs. Merry and Cuninghame in 1852, and are now the property of the Glen-garnock Iron and Steel Co. Limited. There are also large works here for the manufacture of dynamite, Nobel's Explosives Co. Limited, and three large foundries. The Banks of Scotland and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have sub-branches here. The Established church is a large modern building, prominently situated, and there is a Mission church in connection at Ardeer. The old church formerly belonged to the Abbey of Kilwinning. There are also United Free, Free and Roman Catholic churches. At Ardeer is a golf course of 18 holes and 3½ miles in extent. The area of the parish comprises 3,836 acres; rateable value, £53,462; the population in 1901 was 9,498, which included 2,701 in the burgh of Saltcoats; the population of the town in 1901 was 6,554.

STEWARTON is a police burgh and parish in the district of Cunninghame, 16 miles south-by-west from Glasgow, 8 north from Irvine, 5½ north from Kilmarnock and 3 north-north-west from Fenwick, and is situated in a pleasant part of the county, on the banks of Annick water, with a station on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock Joint railway. The parish, which is about 10 miles in length, and from 3 to 4 in breadth, is a rich agricultural district, and has long been famous for its dairy produce. Stewarton, at one time an inconceivable and obscure village, is now a manufacturing centre. It is lighted with gas supplied by a private company, and is governed by a provost, two magistrates and 6 councillors. Here is an Established church, two United Free churches and an Independent church. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Cunninghame Institute has a library and reading and recreation rooms, and large and small halls, besides several committee rooms &c. The hospital here, erected and presented to the burgh by John James Kerr esq. of Robertsonland, at a cost of about £1,080, was opened in 1895; there is also an Institute, erected at the expense of J. W. H. Cunninghame esq. D.L. District courts for the recovery of small debts are held on the first Tuesday in each month, and such cases as fall under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace for the parishes of Stewarton, Dunlop and Fenwick are tried at the same time. The chief industries of the burgh are hosiery, lace, bonnet making and the manufacture of spindles and flyers, and beehives for apiaries. Fairs are held on the Monday before first Tuesday in May, for cattle, and horse fair on the Wednesday before Skiers Thursday, and first Wednesday in May. The principal landowners are John William Herbert Cunninghame esq. D.L. of Lainshaw; the trustees of the late John James Kerr esq. of Robertsonland; David Provan esq. and Lieut.-Col. Charles Godfrey S. McAlester, of Kennox. The parish comprises 13,635 acres; rateable value, landward, £14,462; burghal, £8,807; the area of the burgh is 148 acres; the population in 1891 was 3,957, and in 1901, 3,958, including 2,858 in the town; and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,897.

Post, T., M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Lainshaw st. Stewarton (letters should have Ayrshire added); Miss Mary B. Ferguson, postmistress.

STRAITON is a large parish and village, in Carrick district, 80 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 48 south-by-west from Glasgow, 30 north from Newton-Stewart, 26 south from Kilmarnock, 14 south-east from Ayr, 14 north-east from Girvan, 7 south-east from Maybole, 8½ north-east from Dailly and 7 south-west from Dalmeilington; the village is finely situated on the banks of the Girvan, and on the road leading from Glasgow to Newton-Stewart. The nearest railway station is Kilkerran, 6 miles distant, on the Ayr, Maybole and Girvan branch of the Glasgow and South-Western line. The parish, which extends about 20 miles in length by 8 in breadth, consists for the most part of pastura land, the surface, especially in the south-east, being wild and rocky, interspersed with a number of small lakes; there is, however, considerable natural wood and some extensive plantations, and besides the Girvan and lakes, the parish is watered by the river Doon. About half a mile south of the village are the remains of an oblong entrenchment, presumed to be of Roman origin; various ancient relics have been found on the spot, including two carved vases or urns, containing ashes. Milton, the property of Capt. Edward Hunter-Blair R.N. is about a quarter of a mile from the village. Blairquhan Castle, the property and residence of Capt. Edward Hunter-Blair R.N., D.L., J.P. is a mansion in the Tudor style, about one mile from the village, on the road to Girvan. The Marquess of Ailsa, Mrs. McAdam, Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Ferguson bart. D.S.O., M.V.O. the Duke of Portland K.G., G.C.V.O., P.C. and Capt. E. Hunter-Blair R.N. are the proprietors of the land. The area is 49,855 acres; rateable value, £12,500; the population in 1891 was 1,960, and in 1901, 1,016 civil and 545 ecclesiastical.

TROON is a municipal burgh and seaport in the parish of Dundonald, 75 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-west from Glasgow, 7 south from Irvine, 9 south-west from Kilmarnock and about 8 north from Ayr, with a terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The bay is extensive, and the port also has the advantage of a secure harbour, into which vessels of great burthen can confidently enter with the wind from almost any point. There are two superior dry docks for repairing vessels, large storehouses and a shipbuilding yard. Under the provisions of Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," 7 vessels, equal to 1,239 tons register, were registered as belonging to the port, December 31, 1909. In the general coasting trade, 796 vessels entered in 1909, of 80,009 tons; cleared, 644 of 81,498 tons. In the trade between Great Britain and Ireland 460 vessels entered of 45,540 tonnage; cleared, 603 of 59,160 tons. The number of sailing and steam vessels that entered the port in 1909 from foreign ports was 54, of 56,665 tons. The number cleared was 53, of 42,357 tons, exclusive of 14, of 4,680 tonnage, for British possessions. The total value of the imports in 1909 was 130,674 tons of iron ore of the value of £104,532, 8,808 tons of pyrites of iron and copper of the value of £17,616, and sawn wood of all sorts 1,636 loads of the value of £4,400. The total value of the exports of British and Irish produce in 1909 was 68,404 tons of coal, coke and patent fuel of the value of £29,469, 5,215 tons of pig iron of the value of £14,825, ship and boats (not registered as British) with their machinery, 4,476 gross tonnage, value

£88,200, and all other articles of the value of £3,057. A line of railway from the extremity of the harbour to Kilmarnock conveys coal, thence shipped to Ireland, France &c. The quantity exported in 1909 was 68,204 tons, value £11,317. This place also affords good boating and sea bathing, and has become one of the most popular and healthy watering places on the west coast, so that in summer the population is nearly trebled. The town is lighted with gas from works now belonging to the Town Council, and new water-works have been provided at a cost of over £70,000, the water being supplied from Loch Braden. The Established church was erected in 1896, and there are the Portland and St. Meddans United Free churches and a Roman Catholic chapel. The British Linen Bank has one branch and the Union Bank of Scotland two branches here. The Unionist Club, on Temple hill, erected in 1894, is a fine building, containing reading and billiard rooms, and a spacious hall in which entertainments are given; the town branch of the Union Bank also occupies part of these premises. Near the town are golf links with three courses, and a club-house, besides a ladies' golf course and club house; there are also the municipal golf links, with two courses and a club house, and a third course is now (1911) being laid out. A local newspaper, the "Troon Herald," is published here on Fridays. The area of the burgh is 833 acres; rateable value, £47,188; the population in 1901 was 4,764 burgh, 5,181 ecclesiastical.

BARASSIE is a sea bathing village, on the Firth of Clyde, a mile and a half north of Troon, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway.

LOANS is a village, 2 miles north-east of Troon.

THIS county, which is of no great extent, is bounded on the north by the North Sea, on the south and on the east by Aberdeenshire, and on the west by the shires of Elgin and Inverness. Its form is elongated, being 50 miles in extent from north to south, with a border of very irregular outline, but varying much in width, being 15 miles wide at the southern extremity between Benavon and Cairngorm, narrowing to 6 south of Ealasaid hill, and after extending again to 18 between Drummin and Cabrach it narrows to 8 a little south of Keith, northwards of which it extends to 35 miles, which is the length of its sea coast line.

The river Deveron for a considerable distance forms the north-eastern boundary between this county and that of Aberdeen, and enters the sea at Banff; and the Spey, its western, where it marches with Elgin. This district was at one time a component part of the province of Moray, which altogether forms one of the finest tracts of ground in the northern part of Scotland. On the eastern side of the Deveron, in the district of Buchan, the parish of Gamrie and some other spots of land belong to Banffshire, which both in point of size and in population ranks as the fifteenth county in Scotland, containing (land and water) 405,431 acres; and having a population in 1891 of 61,684, and in 1901, 29,359 males and 32,129 females; total, 61,488; the number of inhabited houses being 12,814; uninhabited, 669; building, 84.

Soil, Surface & Climate, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil, with few exceptions, is deep loam or teneous clay. The face of the country is agreeably diversified by an intermixture of valleys and ranges of hills, with many beautiful fertile braes, productive of the finest crops, or serviceable for the excellence of their pasture. The Strath of Glen-Avon proceeds from the forest of Glen-Avon, in a north-westerly direction, and Strath Devon to the east. Betwixt these is Glen-Livet, from whence to the north diverges Glen Fiddich, with Glen Isla further north. The principal mountains in the county are:—Noath, 1,830; Buck, or Cabrach, 2,377; Knockhill, 2,500; Corryhabbie, 2,558; Ben Rinnes, 2,747; and Cairngorm, 4,244 feet above the level of the sea.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 651; above 5 and not exceeding 50 acres, 1,707; above 50 and not exceeding 300 acres, 1,062; exceeding 300 acres, 26; total, 3,446.

The chief crops in 1910 were—Oats, 49,902 acres; barley or bere, 7,042; total corn crops, 57,203; turnips and swedes, 21,463 acres; potatoes, 1,909; total green crops 24,267; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 10,960 acres; not for hay, 16,273; permanent pasture (for hay), 291 acres; not for hay, 9,681 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 49,381 acres; woods and plantations, 28,638 acres.

The live stock comprised in 1910:—Horses, used solely for agricultural and brood mares, 6,936; unbroken horses, 2,514; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 12,327; other cattle, 31,900; ewes kept for breeding, 26,707; other sheep, 41,635; sows kept for breeding, 459; other pigs, 2,639. Great attention is paid to the cultivation of turnips for feeding purposes, the rearing of cattle forming for the most part the chief object of the farmer. The Aberdeenshire polled cattle and the pure short-horned are the breeds most esteemed. In many parts of the county fine flocks of sheep are to be met with, both of the Cheviot and the black-faced varieties.

The fisheries are also of importance, more than a dozen towns and villages being connected, to a greater or less extent, with this industry.

The minerals raised in 1909 were—Igneous rock, 7,058 tons; limestone, 75,210 tons and sandstone, 4,035 tons.

There were in 1909 1,060 boats, with an aggregate tonnage of 24,523, registered at the port of Banff, and employing

6,286 men and boys regularly and 250 occasionally, and 54 at Buckie, of 1,562 tons, employing 462 men and boys; and besides, 231 steam and sailing vessels, of 6,155 tons at the former and 48, of 1,499 tonnage, at the latter place. Cod, ling, haddock, whiting, halibut, skate and flounder frequent the Firth, and turbot and mackerel are occasionally caught, whilst in the season the herring yields a rich harvest to the fishermen. The curing of fish is of consequence, many persons being engaged in this branch of trade in several of the towns, in which are also extensive distilleries, Glenlivet whisky having become a famous brand. Limestone can be found beneath the surface of nearly the whole county, and at Portsoy is a fine vein of serpentine stone, called "Portsoy marble," as well as a species of granite which, when polished, exhibits the resemblance of Hebrew characters. Freestone, ironstone, marl and slate are also found in various parts. The chief articles of export are grain, fish and whisky; the salmon of the Spey and Deveron together also form an article of great consideration. The principal imports are coal, iron, timber and manures. The climate of Banffshire is precarious. In the hilly districts, all the evils of cold and rain are often felt; and as frost and snow frequently set in without any interval of good weather, the harvests are not only endangered, but at times are not finished until the end of October. The low ground of the shire, from Duffhouse to Forglan and Kinairdy (a tract of about twelve miles along the Deveron), and from Banff to Gordon Castle, including the districts of Boyne and Enzie, must be excepted, being nearly equal to the climate of Moray, and greatly surpassing most parts of the country in the fertility of the soil, the improvement of its agriculture and the richness of its productions.

Rivers, Railways &c.—The rivers, besides the Spey, which, rising in Inverness and debouching in Elgin, only forms the western boundary of this county, are the Deveron, reaching the sea at Banff, and the smaller rivers of Livet, Isla, Avon, Tervie, Rinnie, Fiddich, water of Crombie and water of Caiplich. The Spey and Deveron furnish quantities of salmon. The principal sheet of water is Loch Avon, in the extreme south of the county. The railways belong to the Great North of Scotland system, and commencing from the east run as follows: the branch from Inveramsay through Turriff ends at Macduff; the main line from Aberdeen through Huntly, after sending a branch from Granga Junction north-east to Banff, reaches Keith and thence branches southward to Dufftown and Aberlour and goes on through Muibon to Elgin, while a coast line from the latter town to Tillynaugh Junction below Banff feeds the various ports, such as Portsoy, Cullen &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Banffshire contains twenty-two entire civil parishes, and is partly in the synod of Aberdeen and partly in that of Moray in Ross; it contains two royal burghs—Banff and Cullen; these are also contributory burghs, or those which, in conjunction with others (Elgin District Burghs), are represented in parliament. The county returns one member. The parliamentary constituency in 1911 numbered 8,206.

ABERCHIRDER AND MARNOCH

ABERCHIRDER is a burgh in the parish of Marnoch, with a station, named Glenbarry, on the Great North of Scotland railway, 6½ miles distant, but the nearest station is Cornhill, 5 north-west on the same line; the village is 9 miles south-west of Banff, 11 north-east of Huntly, 8 west-north-west of Turriff and about 3 north of the river Deveron; it is in a buoan poor combination and Banff small debt court. Aberchirder was constituted a police burgh on 27th of Nov. 1839, by adoption of the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, but the affairs of the burgh are now administered under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892. The parish church of Marnoch, built upwards of 100 years ago, and renovated in 1884, is a plain stone building with a belfry on the west gable and has sittings for 700 persons. A Mission Hall of the Established church was erected in Aberchirder in 1898 and will seat 500 persons. The Episcopal church of St. Marnan, built in 1824, consists of nave, with vestry and organ chamber added in 1875; there are sittings for 150 persons. The Rev. James Alexander Boyes M.A. has been rector since 1909. A Cottage Hospital was erected in 1892 to the memory of Miss Elizabeth Ogilvie Rose-Innes, of Netherdale Cottage, for whose bequest of £5,000 the inhabitants are much indebted. The chief landowners are the Duke of Fife K.T., P.C., G.C.V.O.; the trustees of the late John Forbes esq.; the trustees of the late T. G. Rose-Innes esq.; the representatives of the late W. T. Reid esq. and the trustees of Chalmers Hospital. Alexander George esq. of Macduff, is the proprietor of the burgh of Aberchirder. Horse markets are held on third Tuesday in March and Monday before 28th May (feeting). The parish of Marnoch embraces an area of 14,954 statute acres; population of the parish in 1891, 3,006, and in 1901, 2,851, the burgh of Aberchirder containing 1,141 of that number; area of Aberchirder burgh, 62 acres.

ABERLOUR is a parish and village, founded in 1812, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village, formerly called Charlestown, created a burgh or barony in 1814 and police burgh in 1894, is about 2½ miles from Craigellachie Junction, 6 miles south-west of Dufftown, where the river Lour joins the Spey; the town formerly consisted only of one long street and a large square, but other streets have been erected. The Established church is a Norman structure with a tower and clock. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret of Scotland, a structure in the Early English style, was erected in 1880, at a cost of £11,000, the work having been commenced by the late Miss Macpherson Grant; the cancel screen was exhibited at the Paris Exhibition of 1862; the organ, a powerful instrument, was erected in memory of Miss Macpherson Grant; the altar is of Caen stone and green Irish marble and elevated on nine steps; the tabernacle, of wrought brass, and a massive silver sanctuary lamp were the gift of the Duke of Newcastle to commemorate his visit here in 1887; there are nineteen stained windows and the church affords 250 sittings; there is also a United Free church. The Fleming Hall, in Queen's road, was built and opened in 1899, from a bequest by the late James Fleming esq. The Fleming Cottage Hospital was erected in 1899, at a cost of £4,000, from a similar bequest, and the Fleming Suspension bridge, which crosses the river Spey from Aberlour to the Elchies, in Morayshire, was also built with a bequest from Mr. Fleming and cost £1,000. The Orphanage here, established in 1875, is supported by voluntary contributions; this institution is for the reception of orphans and fatherless children in Scotland and elsewhere, and they are looked after while earning their living, and a home made for them when out of situation or ill; there are now (1910) upwards of 600 inmates. A drinking fountain was erected in The Square in 1897, and presented to the town by the then Provost William McGowan, to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee in 1897 of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. There are two branch banks in the village. The distilling of whisky is carried on extensively, the Daluaine distillery having made large additions to their premises. Ben Rinnes, 2,755 feet above the level of the sea, is in this parish. A short distance from the village stands Aberlour House, the residence of Mrs. Findlay; it is quadrangular in form, with columns of the Grecian Doric order, and affords splendid views of the surrounding country. Carron House is the seat of James William Hamilton Grant esq. J.P. The principal landowners are John Ritchie Findlay esq. of 27 Drumshugh gardens, Edinburgh; James William Hamilton Grant esq. of Carron House; James Eadie esq. of Glenrinnes and General Sir Peter Stark Lumsden G.C.B. of Buchromb House, Dufftown. Fairs are held on the third Thursday in May and November (feeing). Acreage of the parish, 14,781; rateable value, £13,462; population in 1891, 2,072, and in 1901 was 2,619, of which 1,176 are in Charleston of Aberlour police burgh; area of burgh, 268 acres.

CRAIGELLACHIE is a pleasant village, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, in the parish of and situated 2 miles north-east from Aberlour. The Spey is here crossed by an iron bridge of a single span of 150 feet, erected in 1815 from designs by Thomas Telford F.R.S. at a cost of £8,000. From the bridge a fine view of the river is obtained. The Craigellachie distillery was erected in 1890. This beautiful district is frequented by a large number of visitors during the summer season, and a hotel ("The Craigellachie") was erected in 1892. The Elgin Market Green Auction Co. Limited hold a sale for cattle &c. at their mart every alternate Thursday. The population in 1901 was 454.

ALVAH is a parish, 2½ miles south-south-west of Banff station, on the river Deveron, which is here crossed by a private bridge, erected in 1772 by the Earl of Fife, and is in the small debt court district of Banff. The parish is 6 miles long and 3 wide, for the most part fertile; the Hill of Alvah being a conspicuous landmark on this coast. Sir George William Abercromby bart. of Forglun House, Turriff, Aberdeenshire; Lient-Col. Frederick de Lemare Morison D.L., J.P. of Mounthlairy, Turriff, Aberdeenshire, the Duke of Fife P.C., K.T., G.C.V.O., D.L. and Edward Brudenell Thomson esq. of Inverichnie, are the principal landowners. Acreage of parish (including the detached portion of King Edward), 12,535; rateable value, £10,182; population in 1901, 1,281 in the civil and 1,060 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Post Office, Itlaw, Alvah; John Dey, sub-postmaster. Letters through Banff. Delivery, 11.15 a.m.; dispatch, 12.15 noon; no Sunday delivery. The nearest money order office is at Banff & telegraph office at Forglun, 4 miles distant

BANFF is a royal burgh, the capital of the county and head of a parish, 155 miles north-by-east of Edinburgh, 80 east of Invercoe, 46 north-by-west of Aberdeen, 35 east of Elgin, 25 east-by-north of Fochabers, 13 east of Cullen and 8 east-by-south of Portsoy, on the coast of the North Sea, pleasantly situated on the side of a hill overlooking the west bank of the Deveron at its confluence with the sea. This river, which abounds with salmon, is here crossed by a substantially-constructed bridge of seven arches, which gives access to the seaport of Macduff and to the adjoining county of Aberdeen. There is a terminal station at Banff on a branch, from Tillynaught, of the Great North of Scotland railway, and at the eastern end of Banff bridge is another station on the Turriff and Macduff section of the same line. This town was part of the ancient thanedom of Boin, whence the name seems to be derived, for in some old charters it is written Boiniffe and Baineffe. It was founded, according to tradition, in 1163, by Malcolm Canmore, and was erected into a royal burgh in 1372 by Robert II. who endowed it with the same privileges and placed it on the same footing as Aberdeen; it comprises several well-built streets, and is supplied with gas from works the property of a company. Banff forms part of the Elgin parliamentary district of burghs, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member to parliament. The town is governed by a provost, three bailies and five councillors. The town council are also commissioners under the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892." A small debt court is held every Tuesday during the session. The Town House is a modern building with an elegant spire.

The Established church is an eighteenth century building with a spire. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1834, affords 250 sittings, and attached to it is a mission church at Macduff; there are two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, a Christian Meeting House and Salvation Army Barracks. The Museum and Free Library, in High street, was founded under the "Public Libraries Act, 1855" (18 and 19 Vict. c. 70); the library comprises 9,000 volumes, and both departments are controlled by a committee consisting of members of the town council and ratepayers; there is also a Law Library in the Court House buildings. Chalmers' Hospital was founded in 1861, in terms of a bequest by the late Alexander Chalmers, of Clunie, long a merchant in this town, and is for the support, maintenance, cure and relief of destitute sick and diseased persons of both sexes, born, domiciled and resident in any town or parish in the county of Banff. It is adapted for 50 patients, and has the requisite buildings for officials and attendants. A permanent revenue for the support of the hospital is derived from the rentals of the lands of Clunie and Knockorth. A Cholera and Small Pox Hospital has also been erected on the Braeheads to the west of the town. The Town and County Club was opened in September, 1881, and there are also two Golf Clubs. A drinking fountain was presented in memory of Walter Biggar esq. and Mrs. Ann Duff, his wife. The weekly corn and provision markets are held on Friday; Brandon fair on the last Fridays in May and November. There are five branch banks, a distillery, saw mill and an iron foundry. Ship and boat building, rope and sail making, and tanning are also carried on. The "Fife Acns" and Duff House Hotel Limited are the principal hotels. A newspaper, the "Banffshire Journal," is published on Tuesdays.

The inner harbour of Banff is secure, but has not a great depth of water; the outer basin, which is defended by a pier and breakwater, has a greater depth and affords very good shelter. A Morton's patent slip apparatus is here fitted up. The port, which extends from Pennan to Garmonth, stands sixth in the list of Scotch ports as regards tonnage of sailing ships. Shipping: The number of vessels (steam and sailing) registered at this port, Dec. 31, 1909, was 231, with a tonnage of 6,155. In 1909, 3 British & foreign vessels entered with cargoes and in ballast of 362 tons, and 1 only cleared of 99 tonnage.

In the general coasting trade 338 vessels entered of 37,296 tons, and 339 cleared of 37,960 tons.

The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," at Banff, Dec. 31, 1909, was 1,060 of 24,523 tons, employing 6,286 men and boys regularly and 250 occasionally. The number of men and boys, regular fishermen, residing within the limits of the port was 3,300. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters B. F. The chief trade is of an export nature, and comprises grain. In 1909, 1,066 barrels of herrings were exported, valued at £1,599. The value of the imports in 1909 amounted to £2,439. From the bridge a fine view is obtained of Duff House, which, together with 140 acres of the park, was presented in 1907 to the Councils of the Royal Burgh of Banff and Macduff by the Duke of Fife K.T.; the mansion is partly in the Corinthian and partly in the Composite style, and the front is elaborately decorated with sculpture. The House has been converted into an hotel. The town formerly possessed a castle of considerable strength and magnitude, and the ancient walls, the moat, and traces of the entrenchments remain, but a modern mansion now occupies part of the site. Edward I. visited Banff Castle on Sunday, the 22nd of July, 1296, after Balliol, King of Scotland, had surrendered to him, at Montrose, on the 7th July preceding. After his defeat of Wallace at the battle of Falkirk, 22 July, 1298, Edward marched north and visited Banff Castle a second time, on the 4th Sept. in that year, and the public records show that it was the last stronghold possessed by the English north of the Grampians. The Castle thereafter became a constableness, and the residence of the king's representative or constable, who exercised judicial authority in the county. Dr. James Sharp, the celebrated Archbishop of St. Andrews, was born in Banff Castle, in May, 1618. Acreage of the parish, 6,073, of the burgh 383 acres; rateable value, £20,328, i.e., burghal, £14,461; landward, £5,867; in 1901 the burgh of Banff had a population of 3,732, the civil parish 4,546, and the ecclesiastical parish, 4,202.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 995. Post, M. O., T. & Telephonic E. D. Office, Carmelite street; David W. S. Scott, postmaster. Deliveries at 7.15 & 10.40 a.m. & 4.30 & (to callers) 7 p.m.; dispatches, 5, 6.55, 9, 9.30, 10.30 & 11.50 a.m. (1st delivery London next day) & 1, 2.30, 2.55, 3.50, 5.5, 6.5 & 7.30 p.m. Sundays, delivery 7.15 p.m.; dispatch 6 a.m. Telegraph Office open 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

BOTRIPHENIE is a parish, in the botriphnie of Strathgogie, with a station at Drummur on the Great North of Scotland railway; there is also a station at Auchindachy on the same railway, at the east end of the parish, about 3 miles from Keith. The parish extends across the county, from Aberdeenshire on the east to Elginshire on the west, having an average breadth of about 3 miles. The soil for the most part is arable, and, generally speaking, fertile. The river Isla rises in Loch Park. Drummur Castle is the seat of Thomas Duff Gordon-Duff esq. D.L., J.P. who is the principal landowner. The places of worship comprise an Established church, erected in 1820 to seat 400 persons, and a United Free church. Here are lime works and two distilleries: the Glentauchers Glenlivet Distillery Co. Limited, near Mulben station on the Highland railway, and the Towiemore Glenlivet Distillery Co. Limited, about 1 1/2 miles from Drummur station. The area is 9,459 acres; rateable value, £5,781. Population in 1891, 729, and in 1901, 754. Post Office; Alexander Sutherland, snb-postmaster. Letters arrive through Keith. Deliveries, 7.40 (July to Sept.) & 8 a.m. (Oct. to June) & 12.40 p.m.; dispatches, 12.30 & 6.25 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order office is at Keith, 5 miles distant & telegraph office at Drummur station, open 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

BOYNDIE, see WHITEHILLS.

BUCKIE is a town and police burgh with stations on the Great North of Scotland and Highland Railways. It is in the parish of Rathven, 20 miles west from Banff, 6 west from Cullen and 7 east from Fochabers. In the beginning of 1888 the General Police Act was adopted, and Easter Buckie, or Buckie proper, and Buckpool are both included in the police burgh of Buckie. The town is divided by the Aultmore burn, Buckie proper lying on its eastern bank and Buckpool on the west. The tenure under which property is held is mainly fee right. The town is possessed of two harbours, that at Buckpool, constructed about 1862, at a cost of £18,000, and the Cluny harbour, begun in 1874 and completed by the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, at an expense of about £70,000; an inside jetty was added
in 1895, and is now (1911) being enlarged.
A number of curing stations and other stores have been erected by the Cluny Trustees. Steam service is carried on from Leith and Aberdeen to Buckie. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies

and nine councillors. A small debt court is held here. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of All Saints will seat 180 persons; the Rev.
Alfred Wild has been rector since 1907.
The number of fishing boats registered as belonging to the port, Dec. 31, 1909, was 667, of 18,927 tonnage, and employing 2,846 resident and 324 non-resident men and boys. The Fish Mart, a large building immediately facing the Cluny harbour, was erected in 1899 at a cost of about £2,000, and contains a large auction room
and numerous offices.

The Masonic and Literary Institute, in Cluny place, opened in 1891, was erected at a cost of about £2,000, and has since been enlarged at a cost of £1,000; it contains a council room, reading room,
library, museum, billiard room and masonic temple. There is also a public park. There are good hotels in the town.
The North of Scotland and Town and County (Low Street and Cluny Square)
Bank Limited, the Union Bank Limited and the Bank of Scotland have branches
here. The Buckie fishing district comprises the neighboring stations on the coast, but for the register of boats see Banff. Besides the fish curing trade there are other industries, including net and rope factories and steam saw mills, and at Incehogue is a distillery. In June, 1893, a public park was presented to the town by Lady Gordon Cathcart, of Cluny Castle. Cairnfield House, the seat of Mrs.
Gordon, and Letterfourie, the seat of Miss Shee, are in the vicinity. Trustees of the late John Gordon esq. of Cluny, trustees of the late Sir Robert G. Gordon, bart. and Miss Shee are the principal landowners. A newspaper, "The Banff-shire Advertiser," is published on Thursdays. The area of the burgh is 621 acres; rateable value, £21,659; population in 1901, 6,549 in the burgh and 4,461 in the town.

PORTESSIE became part of the burgh of Buckie 15th May, 1903, and has a Wesleyan chapel. It is a small coast village, 1 mile east, in the parish of Rath-ven, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The village is of some consequence as a boat building and fishing station. Rateable value, £2,873; population, 934.

CABRACH is a parish, part of which was formerly in the county of Aberdeen, but it is now wholly included in that of Banff, and extends in length 8 miles by about 5 in breadth and is about 10 miles south-east from Dufftown station on the Great North of Scotland railway and 12 south-west from Gartly station on the Inverurie and Huntly branch of the same railway; it is distant from Aberdeen 45 miles west-north-west and from Huntly 18 south-west. The Buck of Cabrach, a hill 2,368 feet in height, is in this parish. The historic hamlet of Aldivalloch is situated in this parish. In the parish is an Established church seating about 300 persons, with registers dating from 1731. The United Free church was erected in 1875 and has sittings for 200 persons; a tablet was erected in 1876 in memory of James Stewart, of Lesmurdie and Newmill. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., P.C. and W. J. Grant esq. of Beldorney, are the principal landowners. The Deveron and the Blackwater run through this parish. The mountains abound with game. Acreage, 34,103; rateable value, £4,607; population in 1891, 646, and in 1901, 581.

Post Office, Cabrach; Mrs. Mary Law, sub-postmistress. Letters through Rhynie, Aberdeenshire. Delivery, 1.40 p.m.; dispatch, 7 a.m. 13th Oct. to 11th Aug. & 5 a.m. 12th Aug. to 12th Oct. CULLEN is a royal burgh, and seaport town, 191 miles north-north-east of Edinburgh, 22 east of Elgin, 13 north-east of Fochabers, 14 west of Banff and 6 west of Partsoy. The harbour was constructed in 1819, at a cost of £1,000, and has since undergone extensive improvements. The burgh, situated on a commanding eminence overlooking the Moray Firth, formerly consisted of two distinct towns, the Sea Town and the Old Town, but between 1820-30 the latter was wholly removed from its site adjacent to Cullen House to its present position, the church alone remaining. It has a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, and on the west the line is carried over the town by a series of arches which terminate in a viaduct of eight arches between 70 and 80 feet high, spanning the mouth of the Cullen burn; there is also a station at Tochieneal, 1 mile distant, on the Great North of Scotland railway. The burgh, together with Banff, Elgin, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead, form the Elgin district of burghs, returning one member to Parliament. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors, and a justice of the peace small debt court is held on the first Tuesday in every month. The Established church is a pre-Reformation building of much interest, dating from the 14th century; it contains numerous ancient monuments and inscriptions in an excellent state of preservation, and on the north side is an ambury, with an inscription from the Vulgate. There is a United Free church, rebuilt in 1901, an Episcopal church, purchased from the United Free church in 1904, and a Wesleyan chapel. There is a public newsroom and library in the town, and three hotels. A fair is held on the third Friday in May. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The curing and exportation of fish is carried on and there is a brewery.

Cullen House, the property and residence of Caroline Countess Dowager of Seafield, is an ancient and irregular edifice, but the interior is furnished in the modern style, and adorned with paintings by eminent masters; the Cullen stream passes under the south walls, and on the opposite side are the park and pleasure grounds, which are connected with the house by an elegant arch of 84 feet span; the grounds are open to the public on Tuesdays and Fridays. Not far distant once stood the castle in which Elizabeth (de Burgh), queen of King Robert Bruce, died, 26 Oct. 1327. An eminence, called Castle Hill, at the western extremity of the town, is the site of an ancient fortification, which must formerly have been a place of great strength; an almost perpendicular rock renders it inaccessible from the north, and it is surrounded in every other direction by a deep ditch. Carvings in stone of the national and other arms, with two small bronze cannon of Queen Mary's time, still remain on the Castle Hill. In the centre of the town stands a cross bearing figures of the Virgin and Child; the shaft dates from the 17th century; but the main part is of recent date. The ruins of Findlater Castle, a building of great antiquity, are situated about 2 miles east of Cullen. The area of the parish of Cullen is 881 acres; rateable value, landward, £1,310; burghal, £5,139; the population of the parish in 1901 was 2,116. The population of the municipal burgh in 1901 was 1,936, and of the royal burgh, 4,071, viz.:—the whole of Cullen parish and 1,955 in Rathven parish. The number of voters on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 308.

DUFFTOWN AND MORTLACH

DUFFTOWN, a village, founded in 1817, was created a police burgh under the "General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act" in 1863. The burgh is in the parish of Mortlach and is 118 miles north of Edinburgh, 52 north-west of Aberdeen, 30 south-west of Banff, 14 north-east of Inveravon, 10 south-west of Keith and 6 south-east of Aberlour, situated a short way to the north of the old decayed hamlet of Mortlach, near the junction of the Dullian and the Fiddoch waters. It has a station on the Elgin and Keith branch line of the Great North of Scotland railway, via Rothes and Craigellachie Junction. This place has been much improved by its patrons, the Duke of Fife and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the former having in 1881 carried out a thorough system of drainage at a cost of about £700. The town comprises a central open square from which streets diverge each side. In the centre of the square stands a large tower of considerable height, with turrets at the corners and surmounted by a belfry containing one bell and a clock with four dials, which, in commemoration of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, were converted into illuminated dials at a cost of about £70; it was formerly used as a gaol, but is now used as the burgh chambers and court house, and includes a dwelling place for the burgh officer. During the summer months the burgh is much frequented by visitors, on account of its healthy situation and the beautiful scenery in and around its vicinity. There are two hotels, viz. the

Fife Arms and the Commercial. An extensive trade in lime is carried on by Mr. James Kemp, Parkmore Lime Works, and there are seven distilleries. There are three branch banks, viz. the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and two branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. A commodious Masonic Hall was built in 1887, which is also used for meetings &c. A sheriff court for small debt cases is held four times a year, in January, April, July and October, as fixed by the sheriff. The places of worship comprise a church of the Establishment, which is of very ancient date, restored in 1877 at a cost of £1,500; in 1888 a fine organ was erected at a cost of £700; the building has three fine lancet windows in the east end, and contains several interesting monuments, one being erected in 1420 in memory of a chamberlain of Balvenie Castle, another to a John Gordon, of Brodland, who died in 1433 at Buchrobb, also one at the end of the 17th century, interesting as being the monument of an ancestor of the present Duke of Fife: it is asserted that this church was the cathedral of the first Bishopric of Scotland, and that the three bishops of this see were buried here, the bishopric being afterwards transferred to Aberdeen. The United Free church was enlarged and remodelled in 1891, with a tower & spire were added, and a stained window has been presented by Lord Mount Stephen. A Congregational and Vestry Hall in connection therewith was erected in 1906 at a cost of about £280, most of which was defrayed by Lord Mount Stephen. The Episcopal church, erected in 1880 by Canon Jupp, of Aberlour, in memory of his mother, is an edifice in the Gothic style and will seat 135 persons; the circular east window is stained. There is also a Roman Catholic church. In August, 1901, Lord Mount Stephen set aside a sum of money to provide annual pensions of £16 to each of fifty old persons in his native parish: Trustees—The Cottage Hospital Trustees, Provost of Dufftown, and the ministers of the Established churches of Glenrinnes and Mortlach, United Free and Roman Catholic churches of Dufftown, and the chairman of the Mortlach Parish Council; secretary and treasurer, J. L. Craig, solicitor. The Stephen Cottage Hospital was founded in 1889, at a cost of £2,500, by Lord Mount Stephen, of Mount Stephen, British Columbia, Canada, and Bracket Hall, Hatfield, Herts, who was born at Dufftown in 1829; it is beautifully equipped and contains 10 beds and one cot; the endowment fund is £15,000, and it is open to the inhabitants of Mortlach and Glenrinnes. A new Isolation Hospital for Upper Banffshire was erected in 1903, containing 12 beds, at a cost of £3,664; the combining authorities are the upper district of Banff and the Police Burghs of Aberlour and Dufftown. The Mortlach Parish Hall, opened in 1894, at a cost of £1,600, is vested in the kirk session of the parish church, and comprises a public reading room and library; the hall itself will hold 700 people, Mortlach is famous as the scene of the signal victory gained over the Danes by Malcolm II. in 1010, which was fought a few hundred yards south-west of Balvenie Castle. The district also possesses the ruins of Auchindoun Castle and Balvenie Castle. The Elgin Market Green Auction Co. Limited hold a sale for cattle &c. at their mart every alternate Thursday, and feding markets are held the third Wednesday in May, the second Wednesday in July and the third Wednesday in November. The area of Mortlach parish is 34,184 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,313; burghal (Dufftown), £5,935; population of the civil parish in 1891, 2,754, and in 1901, 3,426, and 2,784 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which Dufftown contained 1,823.

Post, T. & M. O. & Express Delivery Office, Albert place, Dufftown; George Innes, postmaster. Letters should have Banffshire added. Deliveries, 8.30 & 10.30 a.m. (11.20 a.m. collers only) & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 7.20, 9.30 & 10.40 a.m. & 2.50, 3.45, 5.40 & 6.10 p.m. No delivery on sundays.

GLENRINNES is a quoad sacra parish formed in 1855 from Aberlour and Mortlach parishes; it is about 5 miles in length by 2½ in breadth, and comprises part of Mortlach and part of Aberlour, and is also a registration district. Dufftown, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and about 6 miles north-east, is the nearest railway station, and Aberlour, on the Boat of Garten branch of the same railway, is about 7½ miles north-west. Ben Rinnes, a hill 2,755 feet in height, is partly in this parish and partly in the parishes of Aberlour and Inveravon. The Established church, erected in 1812, and rebuilt in 1883 at a cost of £1,400, stands in about the centre of the parish, 5½ miles from Dufftown, and will seat 220 persons. The Dukes of Richmond and Gordon K.G., P.C. and James Eadie esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. Population in 1901, 337.

INVERKEITHNY, a parish in the south-eastern corner of Banffshire, about 15 miles south of Banff, lies on the right or south bank of the Deveron, along which it extends about 6 miles, and measures from 1 to 4 miles in breadth. Marnock bounds it on the north, Turriff and Auchterless on the east, Forgue on the south and Rothiemay on the west. The district is chiefly hilly. It is in Banff small debt county. Turriff, on the Inveramsay and Macduff, and Huntly, on the Keith and Inveramsay branches of the Great North of Scotland railway, are the nearest railway stations, both being 9 miles distant. The parish church, built in 1881 on the old site, is a plain edifice of stone with a belfry on the east side, and was erected from designs by Messrs. Reid, architects, Elgin; there are sittings for 450 persons. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Forbes esq. of Haddo, and the trustees of the late Thomas G. Rose-Innes esq. Acreage, 7,641; population in 1901, 769.

KEITH is a police burgh, market town and parish. The town is 170 miles north of Edinburgh, 22 south-west of Banff, 17 east-south-east of Elgin, 60 north-east of Aberdeen, 60 east of Inverness, 8 south-east of Fochabers, 17 south-south-west of Portsoy and 12 south of Cullen, and is situated on the banks of the Isla, in the centre of an amphitheatre of hills, with stations on the Great North of Scotland and Highland railways. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and councillors. Keith is divided into three distinct towns, namely, Old Keith, New Keith and Fife Keith; the latter, erected by a former Earl of Fife, is separated from Old and New Keith by the Isla. New Keith was begun about the year 1750 by James (Ogilvy) 6th Earl of Findlater, upon a barren tract of land, feued off in tenements of 15 yards by 60. It is formed on a regular plan of three parallel streets and a square, and is lighted with gas. There are no authentic documents to record the origin of Old Keith, but it has certainly existed for over six centuries, and was at one time the county town. The town has a provost and two bailies, and a sheriff court for small debt and debt recovery cases, proofs in ordinary actions, and other business, is held every alternate month in the Institute Hall. The water supply and sanitary arrangements of the town are now (1911) being extensively improved. The new water works when completed will yield an additional daily supply of about 120,000 gallons of water. The Established church, opened in 1819, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,800. There are also United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1833, will seat 300 persons. The Turner Memorial Cottage Hospital is a building of stone, erected in 1880 at the cost of £1,200, and endowed with £3,000 by the late James Taylor M.D. Inspector-General of Hospitals and Fleets, a native of Keith; it contains 16 beds, and in 1893 an extension for eight additional beds was provided by the late G. Kynoch esq. of Isla Bank; it also possesses various other endowments. In Reidhaven square stands a drinking fountain of polished granite, erected in 1885 to the memory of James Taylor esq. M.D. of this place, by his fellow townsmen. The Institute, in Mid street, erected in 1886, having been destroyed by fire, was rebuilt in 1889, and comprises a museum, public library, reading room and billiard room; various societies have their offices and hold meetings here. The Longmore Public Hall in Church street, the Territorial Hall in Cross street and St. Thomas Hall in Chapel street are available for meetings, concerts &c. The Police Station, in Truner street, was erected in 1899, and has attached dwellings for officers. Weekly markets are held on Saturdays, and fairs on March, May, July (harvest) and November. The horse market in September is one of the largest in the north. The market stance, at the south end of the town, is of considerable extent. There are meal mills, manure manufactories, two extensive distilleries and an agricultural implement manufactory and woollen factory. Branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank Limited are maintained in the town. On the banks of the Isla, a little below the town, are the ruins of a castle, which belonged to the Oliphant family. The Suit-Roll-Croft, on the banks of the Isla, near Keith, the ancient gathering-place of the Clan Gordon, is now marked by Suttrall House, Fife Keith. Keith was the birthplace in 1710 of James Ferguson F.R.S. the astronomer, who died 16 Nov. 1776. On the Caird's Hill are Druidical remains, and near these several tumuli, found to contain various sepulchral relics. The Duke of Fife K.T., G.C.V.O., P.C. Carolina Countess Dowager of Seafield and William F. D. Steuart esq. are owners of the manor and the principal landowners. The "Banffshire Herald" is published here. The area of the parish is 19,383 acres; rateable value, £27,604; population in 1891, 6,628, and 1901, 6,828, of which the town contained 4,753. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 5,340.

NEWMILL is a village in the parish of Keith, 1½ miles from that town, and with the neighbouring district was erected into a quoad sacra parish in 1867. The Established church and manse here were built in 1870, and there is also a United Free Church Mission hall, built in 1887. Population in 1891, 1,421, and in 1901, 657.

KIRKMICHAEL,
AND THE VILLAGE OF TOMINTOUL.

KIRKMICHAEL is a large parish, occupying the south-western extremity of the county from beyond the mountain of Cairngorm to near the confluence of the Livet
 with the Avon, a distance of 26 miles by a breadth of from 3 to 6 miles, and is 12 miles from Abernethy station on the Great North of Scotland railway. The Duke of Richmond K.G., P.C., and Mrs. Gordon
 Smith Cameron, of Delnabo, are heritors
 and the principal landowners. Tomintoul is the highest village in Scotland, being 1,160 feet above the level of the sea; it is 15½ miles from Ballindalloch station on the Great North of Scotland railway by coach, 15 from Grantown-on-Spey and 20

 from Balmoral. The parish church is in this village, and there is also another Established church and United Free and Roman Catholic churches. There are two hotels in the village, the Richmond Arms and the Gordon Arms. The North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited have a branch here. The area of the parish is 75,760 acres; rateable value, £7,098; the population of the civil parish of Kirkmichael in 1891 was 1,043, and in 1901, 1,035 (of this number Tomintoul contained 515), and of the ecclesiastical parish, 353.

MACDUFF,

CROVIE, AND THE PARISH OF GAMRIE.

MACDUFF is a seaport town and police burgh in the parish of Gamrie, about a mile east from the town of Banff, on the opposite side of the Devon river, and on the declivity of a hill descending towards the shore of the North Sea, and has a terminal station on the Turriff and Macduff section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Macduff harbour, now considered one of the best on the Moray Firth, was purchased by the town in 1838 and in 1903 it was deepened 6 feet, thus giving a uniform depth of 16½ feet during spring
 tides; as a station for the herring fishery,
 it is exceedingly valuable, large quantities
 of that fish being shipped from this port;
 several vessels trade with the Baltic; the number of fishing boats (which are registered under Banff) is very considerable,
 and there are various fish curing establishments. The town, which is in the small debt court district of Banff, forms a portion of the parliamentary burgh of Banff
 and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. It is built on the property of the Duke of Fife K.T.
 G.C.V.O. and is indebted for its chief improvement and prosperity to James, 2nd Earl of Fife, through whose influence
 it was created a burgh of barony by George III. in 1783, when its name was altered from Doun to Macduff, and from that period it has continued to increase in extent and consequence. The church occupies a conspicuous position on an eminence, and in its precincts stands a cross erected by the Duke of Fife. There is also a United Free church and a Congregational chapel. The Murray Institution is a school for poor children of both sexes, founded in 1849 by a Mr. Murray, of London, a canvas manufacturer and a native of Macduff; this school has been transferred to the School Board by virtue of a scheme under the provisions of the "Educational Endowments (Scotland) Act," which also provides for the administration of the funds, now amounting to about £6,000. The Town Hall was built at a cost of £2,100. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited have branches here. The greater portion of the grain produced for twenty miles east of Macduff is exported hence,

 as are salmon, cod and herring, and the country inland is supplied with coal, bone manure and lime, a manure factory being established here. The area of Macduff is 395 acres; population in 1901, 3,423.

The parish of GAMRIE extends along the coast, which is precipitous and indented with caverns, for about 9 miles, by an average breadth of about 2½. The village is situated about 2 miles south of Gamrie Bay, and has Established and United Free churches. Troup House is the residence of Francis Alexander Garden D.L., J.P. The land is partly under tillage and partly in pasture. Acreage, 17,041; rateable value, £23,536; population of the whole parish in 1901, 6,409.

CROVIE is a small fishing village in the parish of Gamrie, situated one mile east of Gardenstown. Macduff, 8 miles distant, on the Great North of Scotland railway, is the nearest railway station.
 Population in 1901, 261.

PORT GORDON is a coast village in the parish of Rathven, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, about 2 miles west from Buckie, which is the small debt court district. The harbour is commodious, and is enclosed with walls of Portland cement concrete, constructed at the sole expense of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon. The inhabitants are exclusively occupied in fishing and the ship coasting trade, and employ stake and bag nets for the capture of salmon, which are very abundant, this place being in the immediate vicinity of Speymouth. A narrow rivulet separates this village from Port Tannachy. Rateable value, £2,494; population in 1901, 1,204.

PORTSOY is a seaport in the parish of Fordyce, with a station on the Great North of Scotland railway, 178 miles north of Edinburgh, 62 east-by-north of Inverness, 18 east-north-east of Pochabers and 8 west-by-north of Banff; it is situated on a tongue of land projecting into the North Sea, at the head of one of those little bays by which this part of the coast is in many places indented. It was erected into a burgh of barony about the 16th century by the lord of Boyne, whose descendants embracing the fortunes of the Pretender in 1715 forfeited their lands to the Crown, and these were subsequently granted to James 4th, Earl of Findlater and 1st Earl of Seafield, and are still in the possession of the Ogilvy-Grant family, Earls of Seafield. The town is small and irregularly built, but, as a port, is in a thriving condition, and is lighted with gas from works the property of the Town Council. The point of land on which it stands forms a safe harbour, sufficiently deep for vessels of upwards of 100 tons burthen. The town adopted the General Police and Improvements Act on October 8th, 1889, the number of commissioners being nine, and is in the Banff small debt court district.

There is an Established church, erected in 1816, at a cost of £2,000, and restored in 1881, and two United Free churches, one built in 1844, at an expense of £1,800, and rebuilt in 1871, and another built in 1885, at a cost of £330; the Episcopal church of St. John the Baptist, erected in 1840, at a cost of £2,480, will seat 125 persons; the Roman Catholic church was erected in 1828. The Campbell Hospital, the gift of James Campbell esq. D.L., LL.D., J.P. of Old Cullen, opened July 30th, 1904, is a building of stone, situated on an eminence overlooking the sea and comprises two wards; it is intended for the benefit of the lower district of the county of Banff and the burghs of Macduff, Banff, Portsoy, Cullen and Buckie. There is a Christian Institute, with a library of about 1,800 volumes. The port, besides the proceeds of the herring fishery, which has been greatly extended of late years, has a trade in the exportation of meal and the importation of coal. Fish curing and distilling are prominent industries. The stone raised from the quarries of this district, and called "Portsoy marble," is a beautiful mixture of red, green and white, and is wrought into tea cns, vases and small ornaments; chimney-pieces are also made from it. Some singular specimens of schist and a species of asbestos of a greenish hue are met with in this neighbourhood; but the most remarkable mineral production is a granite of a buff or flesh colour, which is not found elsewhere except in Arabia. This district also abounds with excellent limestone. The Countess Dowager of Seafield, of Cullen House, Cullen, and of Castle Grant, Morayshire, is the principal landowner. The extensive ruins of the old castles of Boyne and Findlater, lying to the east and west of Portsoy, possess great attractions for the antiquary and pleasure seeker. A weekly newspaper, "The Banffshire Reporter," is published here every Wednesday. Rateable value, burghal (Portsoy), £5,577; population in 1901, 1,739 in Portsoy

CONVEYANCE BY RAILWAY,

On the Great North of Scotland line.
Station, Portsoy, John Martin, station mast
Station, Glassaugh, Robert Pratt, station master
Station, Tillynaught Junction, James Dawson, station manager

FORDYCE is a parish of great antiquity, about 8 miles west of Banff, on the Great North of Scotland railway; station at Portsoy, 2½ miles from Fordyce, and Glassaugh, about one mile; the parish is in the small debt court district of Banff. There are Established and United Free churches, the first-named built in 1806 and the latter in 1843. Large Board schools were erected in 1881-82, at an expense of £1,539, at which there are a number of bursaries, administered by the governors of the County of Banff Bursary Fund, and tenable by either boys or girls. At what was formerly the old parochial school the late Sir James Clark bart. physician in ordinary to Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, and the late John Forbes esq. physician extraordinary to H.R.H. the Prince Consort, received the early part of their education. A large castellated building, standing on the east side of The Square, and bearing the date of 1592, originally belonged to the Durn family, but is now the property of the Grant family, Earls of Seafield. Acreage of the parish, 17,198; rateable value, £21,612; population in 1901, 3,941, of which Portsoy contained 1,739. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,850.

SANDEND is a small fishing village in this parish, situated about 3 miles west of Portsoy. The nearest station is at Glassaugh, about a mile distant from the village of Fordyce and the same from Sandend, on the Great North of Scotland railway.

Post & M. O. Office, Fordyce: William Thompson, postmaster. Letters received through Portsoy, Banffshire, which is the nearest telegraph office. Deliveries, 8.20 a.m. & 7.30 p.m.; dispatches, 8.20 a.m. & 12.30 & 5.15 p.m.; no Sunday delivery

WHITEHILLS AND BOYNDIE

WHITEHILLS is a village in the parish of Boyndie, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles west-north-west of Banff, chiefly inhabited by fishermen, and is reached by rail to Ladystridge or by motor omnibus or waggontees from Banff. A harbour for fishing boats was constructed here in 1899, at a cost of £10,000. A Public Hall is now (1911) being built at a cost of about £800.

BOYNDIE parish is $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Banff, on the Great North of Scotland railway, and is 5 miles long by 2 wide, in the small debt court district of Banff. The Banffshire Lunatic Asylum at Ladystridge, opened in May, 1865, and the interesting ruins of Boyne Castle are also in this parish. Ladystridge is a station on the Tillynaught and Banff branch of the Great North of Scotland railway, distant $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Whitehills. Acreage of Boyndie parish, 7,119; rateable value, £8,964; population in 1901, of the parish, 2,005; of Whitehills, 1,036.

The Duke of Life K.T., G.C.V.O., the Dowager Countess of Seafield, of Castle Grant, Morayshire, and the Banff Lunacy Board are the heritors.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Whitehills; Mrs. Janet Wilson, postmistress. Letters received through Banff. Deliveries, 8.40 & 11.40 a.m.; dispatches, 9.30 a.m. & 12.40 & 5.35 p.m. There is no Sunday post

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED

WITH TWEEDMOUTH, SPITAL, SCREMERSTON AND ORD

BERWICK-UPON-TWEED (so denominated to distinguish it from North Berwick, in East Lothian, and several Berwicks in England) is a county of itself (so constituted by 6 and 7 Wm. IV. c. 103), a municipal borough and seaport, union and market town, and head of a county court district, 334 miles north-by-west from London, 64 north-by-west from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and 49 north from Morpeth; from the city of Edinburgh it is distant 58 miles south-east (by rail), and from Glasgow 103 east-by-south; it is in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of the county of Northumberland for parliamentary purposes, in the Northamshire and Islandshire petty sessional division, rural deanery of Northam, archdeaconry of Lindisfarne and diocese of Newcastle. It is a town of considerable importance, of Saxon or Teutonic origin. The etymology of its name is as doubtful as the period of its establishment is obscure. Meiland, the historian of Edinburgh, entered into a dissertation to prove that the title was transferred by the Saxon founders from a town of note of the same name in their own country—in the like manner as European emigrants designate cities and towns on the continent of America; others, and among them Camden, allege that the word Berwick is deduced from "Barwica," signifying "a village belonging to a manor;" while Leiland concludes it to be a shortened form of "Aberwic," from the Cymric aber, the mouth of a river, and the Scandinavian wick, a creek or station for ships. Berwick was fortified and defended by a garrison at a very remote period of British history; it became the chief town of the district, and was the centre, on various occasions, of many important transactions. The town stands on a gentle declivity on the north side of the river Tweed, about half a mile from the spot where that stream empties itself into Berwick bay, and is said to have been of importance as a barrier town in the 8th and 9th centuries. Prior to the year 1551 Berwick was alternately in the hands of the English and Scotch, but in pursuance of a treaty effected in that year between Edw. VI. and Mary, Queen of Scots, it was erected into a free burgh or distinct liberty, in some measure independent of either kingdom, having a small district attached to it, called "Berwick bounds," stretching about three miles north, and the like distance up the Tweed, and it is described as a large and populous town so early as the reign of David I. of Scotland (1124-53). It continued in the possession of the Saxons for some ages, and was subsequently held by the Danes. Malcolm II. of Scotland having defeated Eadulf Cudel, Earl of Northumbria, in the year 1018, became possessed of all the Lothians down to the Tweed, after which time Berwick remained in Scotch hands till the reign of Henry II. when it was delivered up to the English as security for the fulfilment of a treaty made in Dec. 1174, between Henry II. and William I. of Scotland, who, having joined Henry's three sons in rebellion, was taken prisoner near Alnwick, and conducted in chains before Henry, who obliged him to pay homage for the whole of Scotland, and as a security he was forced to deliver up the fort of Berwick, together with all the principal forts of Scotland. In 1291, 3 Ang. commissioners from both kingdoms, 104 in number, assembled at Berwick to determine the respective claims of Robert Bruce and John Balliol to the Scottish crown, when, after numerous conferences, on the 14th Nov. the king appointed John Balliol successor to the crown.

After the battle of Halidon Hill (1333) the town surrendered to the English, though considered a part of Scotland, and because of its peculiar position has been since specially mentioned in Acts of Parliament affecting England and Wales.

Berwick was but little affected by the conflicts of the Houses of York and Lancaster; on the accession of James VI. of Scotland to the English crown, he made his state entry into England from this town, the importance of which, as a border town, thenceforward declined. Before the Civil war, an agreement, known as "The Pacification of Berwick," was concluded here 17 June, 1639, between Charles I. and 5 Scottish commissioners, for the disbandment of their respective forces, and during the progress of the contest, the town maintained for the most part a neutral attitude. In the risings of 1715 and 1745, the populace sided with the English. Her late Majesty Queen Victoria visited the town on the opening of the railway viaduct, 29 Aug. 1850.

The town is surrounded by regular fortifications, the old line of which extended 2 miles 282 yards; the present walls, built chiefly in 1560, in the time of Queen Elizabeth, are only about one mile and a third in length, and at the present time the ramparts, which are in the custody of the Corporation, form an excellent promenade entirely round the town. The ancient castle, of which only the western curtain with its two towers remains, occupied a considerable eminence to the north-east of the town, and must have been of great strength. The modern town, well and regularly built, is united to Tweedmouth by a fine bridge of hewn stone, of fifteen spacious and elegant arches; the whole length of the bridge is 1,164 feet, and its width is 17 feet. It was commenced in 1610, in the reign of James I. and finished in 1634, in the reign of Charles I. at a total cost of about £15,000, and is now lighted with gas. About a quarter of a mile higher up the river is the railway viaduct, known as the "Royal Border Bridge," designed by the late Mr. Robert Stephenson and Mr. T. E. Harrison civil engineers, and opened by Her late Majesty and the late Prince Albert on the 29th August, 1850, the total cost being £134,143. This magnificent structure spans the broad valley of the Tweed, and completes an important link in the chain of railway communication between London and Edinburgh by the north-east coast. It forms the northern extremity of the North-Eastern railway; and in magnitude of construction and grandeur of design is, perhaps, one of the most remarkable architectural achievements of modern times. The foundation stone of this noble structure was laid on the 15th May, 1847, without any public ceremony. The viaduct consists of 28 circular arches, each 61 feet 6 inches span, springing from lofty piers 8 feet 6 inches broad at the narrowest point. One half of the arches span the river—here a broad and beautiful stream—and the remainder are built on the neighbouring land south of the Tweed. The total length of the bridge is 2,152 feet, and its greatest height from the bed of the river 138 feet 6 inches, including the parapets; its breadth between the parapets is 26 feet, allowing a double line of rails to be laid, and the greatest depth of water at high tide is 23 feet. The viaduct is built entirely of stone, with the exception of the inner part of the arches, which is brick laid in cement. The large embankment at the south end of the bridge, five-eighths of a mile in length, and in some places 60 feet high, completes the junction of Tweedmouth with Berwick, and at each of these places there are passenger and goods stations. The pier, begun in 1810 and finished in 1821 at a cost of £61,536, is 960 yards in length, and forms a fine breakwater, with a lighthouse at the extreme end; the pier, combined with Pier road, which extends westward, affords a fine and salutiferous promenade.

By a Treasury Order, dated January 6th, 1860, the port of Berwick-upon-Tweed was re-limited, and appointed to extend on and after that date from St. Abb's Head, the southern limit of the port of Leith, and to continue along the coasts of the counties of Berwick and Northumberland to Seton House Point, about 1 mile north of the river Alne, being the northern limit of the port of Shields; also to include Farns and three smaller islands; and the limits seaward to extend 3 miles from low water mark out to sea.

Trade of the Port.—The amount of customs revenue collected in 1900 was £6,485, and in 1909, £4,442. The total value of the imports was £50,275 in 1909. Of this amount the principal item was manures, value £15,204, and timber, £15,120. The total exports (produce and manufacture) of the United Kingdom in 1909 was £31,637, of which £27,796 was herrings. The number of British and foreign sailing and steam vessels, including their repeated voyages, that entered with cargoes in 1909 was 38, of 10,102 tons; the number cleared being 13, of 2,125 tonnage. In the general coasting trade 200 British and foreign sailing and steam vessels entered with cargoes of a tonnage of 11,242, and 162, of 9,668 tons, in ballast. The number cleared with cargoes was 272, of 14,169 tons. The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port on December 31st, 1909, under Part I. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, was 24, of 933 tons. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, as belonging to the port on 31 December, 1909, was 331, of 4,353 tonnage, requiring 1,519 men and boys. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters B.K.

The exportation of coal from the mine in the neighbourhood forms an important feature in the commerce of the port, while that of grain, manure, and salmon caught in the Tweed (the latter sent to the London markets), is nearly equally profitable. The principal fishing stations are from the mouth of the river to Northam, a distance of seven miles. The season commences on the 15th February and terminates on the 14th September. The port has the privilege of the "Warehousing Act, 1825" (6 Geo. IV.), and is now a bonded port for the reception of wines and colonial produce.

Berwick appears to have possessed a municipality with a guild from an early period: it is recorded as a borough in 1200, and received its first charter of municipal privileges from Edward I. in 1301, and James I. in his second year (1604-5) granted to the borough a new charter, extending the privileges of the Corporation, and augmenting the number of its officers, besides giving to it the power of life and death. Under the provisions of the "Municipal Corporations Act, 1835," the government is vested in a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, with a recorder and the usual assistant officers, under the style of the "Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of the Borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed;" the same Act divided the borough into four wards and provided it with a commission of the peace; there is also a sheriff. The peculiar power of life and death was abolished by the "Limitation of Jurisdiction of Quarter Sessions Act, 1842." Sessions are held quarterly, presided over by the Recorder, H. P. Manisty esq. K.C.; the Corporation, as lords of the manor, hold courts leet and baron twice in the year, and Berwick is included in the first circuit of county court towns under the acts for the recovery of debts. The limits of the borough are defined by the Boundary Act to comprise the parish of Berwick and the respective townships of Tweedmouth and Spittal. The borough was first represented in the English Parliament in the reign of Henry VIII. and from that time (1529) it continued to send two members until the passing of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," when it was included in the Berwick-upon-Tweed division of Northumberland, which extends from Felton on the south to Berwick on the north, taking in the whole of the coast from the Coquet to the Tweed, being bounded by the limits of the county on the west. It contains the petty sessional divisions of Bamburg, Coquetdale North, Glendale, Northamshire and Islandshire, Coquetdale East (except the parishes of Glastier Hill, Morwick, Acklington, Acklington Park, Amble, Hauxley, Warkworth and Tongstone), and the municipal borough of Berwick-upon-Tweed.

This place gave the title of duke (March 19, 1687) to James Fitz-James, natural son of King James II.

Up to the year 1310 Berwick was ecclesiastically in the archdeaconry of Lothian and diocese of St. Andrew's, but was transferred by Edward II. to Durham, and so continued until 1882, when it became part of the new diocese of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, formed by Order in Council, 17 May, 1882, under the "Bishoprics Act, 1878" (41 and 42 Vict. c. 68).

The parish church of the Holy Trinity, begun in 1648 and finished in 1652, is an edifice of stone, in a Pseudo-Italian style, and forms a parallelogram, 90 feet by 64 feet, divided by arcades of five arches into a nave, with aisles of equal length, and on the north side a smaller aisle and large vestry west of it, and a chancel, 23 feet in length: there being no tower, the 4 bells are placed in the bell-tower of the Town Hall: a reredos was erected in 1893 at a cost of about £300; in 1855 the church was repaired and enlarged by the addition of a chancel, and the interior re-arranged, at a cost of £3,000, and in 1867 was further improved at a cost of more than £4,000; in 1905 the north and south galleries were removed, an organ chamber erected and further improvements carried out at a cost of £2,000: there are 800 sittings. Since the public cemetery in the North road was opened it is only in rare cases that interments take place in the churchyard. The register dates from the year 1572. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £500, with residence, in the gift of the bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1897 by the Ven. Henry Bernard Hodgson M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, hon. canon of Newcastle and archdeacon of Lindisfarne; there is also a lectureship belonging to the church, in the gift of the Mercers' Company of London. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners are the rectors. The rectorial tithes amount to £2,300 yearly.

St. Mary's church, Castlegate, is a neat stone edifice, erected in 1858, at the expense of the late Captain George Gordon, who presented £3,000 towards its completion, and is built of polished ashlar stone, in the Lancet style, consisting of chancel, nave, transepts, north vestry and a small tower at the south-west angle of the nave, with an octagonal gabled belfry, surmounted by a spire and containing 2 bells: the lower stage of the tower forms a porch: there are 472 sittings. The register dates from 1859. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £320, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, and held since 1879 by the Rev. James King B.D. of the University of Durham.

The Catholic Church of Our Blessed Lady and St. Cuthbert, in Ravensdowne street, is a building of stone, erected in 1829, and has 300 sittings. The other places of worship comprise one of the Church of Scotland; three for the Presbyterian Church of England, that in Wallace green being a very fine building, erected at a cost of nearly £10,000, with 991 sittings; a United Free church, Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist and Baptist chapels, a Presbyterian Mission hall and Salvation Army barracks.

The cemetery, on the Edinburgh road, about one mile from the town, comprises about 9 acres, well laid out and planted with evergreens and trees: there are two mortuary chapels, in the Gothic style, and an entrance lodge. The ancient bier removed from the old church is deposited here, and bears the date 1620. The cemetery is under the control of a Burial Board of 9 members.

The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the east end of High street, was erected in 1754-61, and is a building of stone in the Classic style, approached by an ascent of fifteen steps: above the portico rises a tower, adorned with columns of the Tuscan, Doric and Ionic orders, and surmounted by a spire, the whole reaching a height of 150 feet, and containing an excellent peal of 8 bells, 4 of which are the parish church bells, placed here owing to there being no tower attached to the church; they are rung before the commencement of each service and the early and curfew bells are still rung daily, except on Sundays, at 5 a.m. and 8 p.m.; there is also a clock with 4 dials lighted by gas. All the municipal affairs of the borough are transacted here: the hall in which public meetings are held, and where the recorder holds quarter sessions four times a year, will hold 700 persons. There is also a council chamber, police office and cells to contain 14 prisoners, but these are now disused; the ground floor is appropriated to the sale of poultry, eggs and butter. The municipal insignia include two maces, a gold chain and a seal. Two early seals are also known: the first of these, which is appended to a deed of 1330, has on the obverse a bear chained to a tree, in the branches of which are two birds surrounded by a double treasure of fleurs-de-lis, and a mutilated inscription: the reverse displays a representation of the Holy Trinity, with another inscription. The other seal is a circular seal of the mayoralty, and bears what Lewis (Topog. Dict. 1835) describes as the arms of the town, viz. in base, a bear chained under a tree, over which in less are two shields of France modern and English quarterly, and in chief under a canopy, the figure of a king, robed and crowned and holding the orb and sceptre: the margin bears a legend. The modern seal has simply a bear chained under a tree and a surrounding inscription.

The Corn Exchange, in Sandgate, is a large and commodious building, erected by a limited liability company, and was opened in June, 1858. Besides being well suited for the purpose for which it was built, it is also available for meetings and entertainments, and is licensed for stage plays. It is well lighted and heated, and will hold 1,500 persons.

The Queen's Rooms, in Hide hill, erected by Mr. J. D. Purves, in 1880, are also used for meetings, entertainments &c. The large hall (with gallery) will hold 1,000 persons.

The Reading Room, Art School and Museum, in High street, is a very substantial building, erected in 1881 at a cost of £2,000. It also contains a museum of the natural history of the district.

The Masonic Hall, situate on the Parade, and erected in 1873, is a handsome building of stone, and in Coxon's lane is the Good Templars' Hall, built in 1874, and seating 600.

There are Subscription Reading Rooms, with a billiard room, in Palace green; numerous clubs and political associations, and an Athletic Society.

The Dispensary and Infirmary, in Infirmary square, was first instituted in 1814; the present building was erected in 1874, and enlarged in 1899, and is supported by voluntary contributions; it is available for 20 in-patients. An operating theatre was added in 1908, at a cost of £800.

The Local Charities for pensions and distribution amount to about £150 yearly.

At Berwick is the depot of the 25th Regimental District (King's Own Scottish Borderers), comprising 1st and 2nd battalions (25th Foot) and 3rd (special reserve) battalion, the head quarters of the latter being at Dumfries.

At Ravensdowne are the head quarters of the G and H Cos. 7th Territorial Force Battalion Northumberland Fusiliers.

The Barracks, on the Parade, near the walls on the east side of the town, were erected in the year 1719, and are arranged so as to form a quadrangle, 217 by 121 feet; the principal or north front includes the officers' quarters, mess-room and guard-room; and the remaining portions afford room for 240 men. In 1893 additional buildings were erected on the King's Bastion for ten married soldiers and families. New buildings were erected in 1900 for the storage of arms, army clothing and equipment for 1,000 men.

The Territorial Drill Hall, in Ravensdowne, the property of the Territorial Forces, built in 1891, is an edifice of stone, with a tower of two storeys; the hall is 82 feet long by 53 wide, and 16 feet high, and there are mess and other rooms attached.

The Coastguard Station, entered from and on rising ground above the Pier road, to the south-east of the town, was erected in 1879, and has a life-saving apparatus (the property of the Board of Trade) and two boats; there is a staff of one officer and six men.

The educational establishments of Berwick are the Grammar School, enlarged in 1899 for the convenience of teaching chemistry and physics; the Corporation Academy (endowed for the children of freemen solely, the salaries of the rector and teachers and all other expenses being paid by the Corporation); the High School for Girls; Council and Church of England and Roman Catholic schools.

There is a 9-hole golf course at Magdalen fields.

The banks here are the British Linen Bank; the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited; the North Eastern Banking Co. Limited, and Messrs. Barclay and Co. Limited, all in Hide hill; the Berwick and Tweedmouth Savings Bank, in Sandgate, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, 7 Bridge end.

There are three good hotels—the King's Arms, in Hide hill, the Red Lion, in High street, and the Station hotel, at the North Eastern station, Tweedmouth.

The MacLagan Memorial, in High street, is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1893 to Philip W. MacLagan esq. M.D.; there is also an elegant drinking fountain in Castlegate, presented June 20, 1897, in commemoration of the sixtieth anniversary of the accession of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, by Commander Francis Martin Norman R.N., J.P.

A marble monument, with granite base, bearing the following inscription: "Annie, Lady Jerningham, of Longridge Towers, Berwick-upon-Tweed, obit. 9th Oct. 1902; presented to the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed by Sir Hubert Jerningham K.C.M.G." was erected on Bank hill in 1908.

Berwick can scarcely be said to possess any staple trade except the salmon fisheries. There are two breweries and seed-crushing works.

There are two auction marts, one in the Magdalen fields the property of a limited company; the other, built in 1910, situated in North road, is the property of Messrs. John Embleton and Son, who hold sales every Monday.

The Fish Market, which is in general abundantly supplied, is held at the Quay side. Salmon, cod, whiting, haddocks, lobsters and crabs are the principal fish caught near here.

The Cattle Market, in Castlegate, was opened in October, 1886, and markets are held every Saturday; there is also an annual fair for cattle and horses on the last Friday in May.

The March hirings for farm servants are held on the first Saturday in March.

Five newspapers are published here.

The area of the civil parish is 5,234 acres of land, 18 of inland and 118 of tidal water and 415 of foreshore; the rateable value at Michaelmas, 1910, was £44,155; the population at the census of 1901 was 8,277, inclusive of 4 officers, 231 warrant and non-commissioned officers and men and 45 families, servants &c. in the barracks and hospital; 91 inmates and 7 officials in the union workhouse; 13 patients and 7 officials in the dispensary and infirmary, and 3 officials in the Port hospital for infectious diseases. The area of the municipal borough, which comprises the civil parishes of Berwick-upon-Tweed and Tweedmouth (including Spital), is 6,396 acres, and the population in 1901 was 13,437, viz. Berwick-upon-Tweed 5,234 acres, population 8,277; Tweedmouth 1,162 acres and 5,160 population. The municipal borough is divided into wards as follows, viz.: First or North, population 4,491; Second or Middle, 3,786; Third or Tweedmouth, 3,086, and Fourth or Spital, 2,074. The ecclesiastical parishes are Holy Trinity, population 5,770 and St. Mary, 2,607, and together are co-extensive with the civil parish.

TWEEDMOUTH is a populous parish and township, now forming part of the borough of Berwick. It is situated at the south end of the bridge, about a quarter of a mile from Berwick, and consists of several streets irregularly built, but the general appearance of the place has been much improved of late years. The North Eastern stations for both goods and passengers are at the eastern end of the town. The inhabitants are extensively engaged in the salmon fishery; and the other branches of trade, exports and imports, are of the like nature with those of Berwick. There are works for the manufacture of agricultural implements and engineering and boiler works, large timber and saw mills and boat building yards. The Corporation of Berwick, who are lords of the manor of Tweedmouth, and Robert W. Ramsey esq. are the principal landowners. The dock, opened 4th October, 1876, admits vessels up to 500 tons burthen, and has an area of 3½ acres, and a depth of 21 feet; the cost of construction was about £35,000. There is railway communication from Tweedmouth station to the dock by a branch of the North Eastern railway. The parish church of St. Bartholomew, rebuilt in 1783 and enlarged in 1866, is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, with vestry, nave, north transept and a western tower with one bell; the church was new-roofed and a porch added in 1907, at a cost of £800; there are 350 sittings. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £300, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Durham, and held since 1906 by the Rev. Philip Grame Peacocke M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. There is also an English Presbyterian church, and one connected with the Church of Scotland. Population of the civil parish, inclusive of Spittal, was 5,160, and of the ecclesiastical parish (St. Bartholomew), 3,463. The area is 1,153 acres of land, 3 of inland and 53 of tidal water and 113 of foreshore. The rateable value, inclusive of Spittal, is £21,423. The cemetery, covering 3½ acres, was formed in 1853; it has two mortuary chapels, and is managed by a Burial Board of nine members.

SPITTAL, which derives its name from an ancient hospital once existing here, is an ecclesiastical parish, but part of the civil parish of Tweedmouth, and populous village, about three-quarters of a mile from Berwick, and is situated at the mouth of the river. The curing of herrings is largely carried on, and there is also a spade and shovel manufactory, and extensive manure works. The gas works for the borough of Berwick are in this parish, and belong to a limited company; the water-works are also situated here. Many good houses have been built for the accommodation of visitors who resort hither for sea-bathing. There is also a valuable mineral spa, the waters of which contain iron, lime, magnesia and sulphate of soda. During 1894 a substantial sea-wall of concrete, about half a mile in length, was constructed. There is a motor boat service between Berwick and Spittal. The church of St. John the Evangelist, consecrated in 1871, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, comprising chancel, nave and south aisle, and seats 350 persons. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £300, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1908 by the Rev. John Herbert Sutcliffe B.A., L.Th. of Durham University. There is also a Presbyterian Church of England, a Congregational chapel, a meeting house for Christian Brethren, and a Mission Hall and Spittal Council schools. The Public Hall was erected by the Good Templars in 1885, and will seat 500 persons. The population of the ecclesiastical parish, St. John the Evangelist, in 1901 was 2,090.

SCREMERSTON is a scattered village, in the civil parish of Ancroft, and was formed into an ecclesiastical parish 14 Sept. 1844, in the county of Northumberland, 3¼ miles south-south-east from Berwick, its post town. Here are the extensive collieries, lime and brick works of the Scremerston Coal Co. Limited. The church of St. Peter, erected in 1812-3, is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and has a tower with spire, containing one bell. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £310, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Newcastle, and held since 1895 by the Rev. John Lightfoot L.Th. of Durham University. There is also a Primitive Methodist chapel and an Elementary school. The Lords of the Admiralty are lords of the manor and the principal landowners. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 859.

ORD, a widely scattered place, by order of the Northumberland County Council, confirmed by a Local Government Board Order 26,635, dated 24 Feb. 1891, was constituted a separate parish for civil purposes, comprising East, Middle, and West Ord, being that part of the old civil parish of Tweedmouth outside the municipal borough of Berwick. The area of the parish is 3,692 acres of land, 1 of inland and 71 of tidal water and 44 of foreshore; the population in 1901 was 601, and the rateable value at Lady Day, 1910, £6,127.

EAST ORD is a small village, 1¼ miles south-west from Berwick and 1 west from Tweedmouth. The Kelso branch of the North Eastern railway passes through the township. Here is a large space of land called the Green. Ord House, a spacious residence, situated to the east of the village, is occupied by Lord Francis Granville Godolphin Osborne J.P.

MIDDLE ORD is a small hamlet, 1½ miles from Tweedmouth.

WEST ORD is a hamlet, 3 miles west from Tweedmouth, consisting of one farm.

Occupies the south-east angle of Scotland, lying along the river Tweed, which on the south divides it from Roxburghshire, and on the south-east from Northumberland; in shape it is somewhat of a pentagon, the other three sides being its east coast, which runs due north from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed to Eyemouth, where it turns to the west for a few miles, afterwards continuing its course north to St. Abb's Head, from which point it runs north-west to Cockburnspath, where it joins Haddingtonshire, which county bounds its fourth or north side, the fifth, the west, being bounded by Edinburghshire and Selkirkshire. The coast has no prominent harbours or sea lochs or any large bays; the county measures 34 miles from east to west and 23 from north to south, and comprises 292,577 acres of land and 1,322 of water. It had a population of 32,290 in 1891, and in 1901, 14,725 males and 16,099 females; total, 30,824. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 6,775, uninhabited 592, and building 22. In point of size Berwick ranks as the nineteenth Scottish county, and in population as the twenty-fourth.

Early History.—At the period of the Roman invasion Berwickshire was inhabited by tribes of British called "Otdinii," and it was subsequently overrun by hands of Saxons, who engrafed their language and manners on those of the original inhabitants. The conquests by these foreigners extended a considerable way along the shores to the east and west; and in the course of time they gave the land of which they thus possessed themselves the title of Lothian, which it still retains in the western division. The entire area of Berwickshire was comprised in this Saxon territory, which was distinguished by the name of "Saxonia," superseding its previous designation "Bernio." Until the year 1020 this district of country was included within the kingdom of Northumberland; in that year it was ceded to King Malcolm II. by Cospatrick, Earl of Northumberland, who settled in Scotland and was created Earl of Dunbar. About the beginning of the eleventh century, many Norman and Anglo-Saxon families settled in Berwickshire, as well as other parts of Scotland. It is recorded as a fact that at Berwick-on-Tweed originated those laws which were framed and applied in Scotland for the regulation of burghs and their guild associations. Lying on the main route from England, Berwickshire suffered in the succeeding centuries in all the wars between the two hostile nations, and was occasionally involved in jurisdictional disputes with its ecclesiastical neighbour, the Palatine Bishop of Durham, and Berwick and the bridges across the Tweed were in general the main objects of contention. From the variety of successes and disasters which Berwickshire underwent for so many centuries, and from its successive occupation by different mixed nations, the people of this part of North Britain have not that distinct Scottish character so directly recognised in places more distant from the frontier. By their language and personal appearance, especially the former, the inhabitants of Berwick and its neighbourhood are easily particularised, and, in common with the Northumbrians, they speak with that remarkable "burr" which is found nowhere else in the kingdom. The "Men of Merse" distinguished themselves at Flodden and other bloody fields, under the command of Lord Home; and there is a tradition that a party, led to the Holy Land by some of their feudal chiefs, obtained on its ensanguined plains the highest honours for their unconquerable intrepidity. When Charles I. paid his first visit to Scotland, in the year 1633, Lord Home met him at Berwick with a train of 600 Merse gentlemen "gallantly arrayed" on horseback.

Surface, Soil &c.—Berwickshire is divided into three districts, namely Merse, Lammermoor (or Lammermuir), and Lauderdale. The Merse, so called from the word "march," or boundary, is the largest and most valuable district, occasionally giving name to the whole county, and embracing that tract of low land between the Lammermoor hills on the north and the river Tweed on the south, having Lauderdale for its western boundary. It is the most compact and extensive piece of level ground in Scotland, comprising 130,000 statute acres; in appearance it resembles a widespread portion of some of the English fertile counties, and is well enclosed and furnished with trees and plantations. Lammermoor, which consists of nearly 90,000 statute acres, is a highly pastoral district, with generally a wild, brown aspect, and runs on the northern border of the Merse, so as to divide the vales of Edinburgh and Haddington shires from the valley of the Tweed. The district of Lauderdale, which has received this title from the Leader water, along whose bank it ranges, is a mixture of hill and dale, the land in the valleys being essentially arable; this portion of the county contains about 67,000 statute acres.

The mountains lie mostly in the north-west of the county; none of them reach 2,000 feet above sea level, the highest being Crib Law, 1,670 feet; Blythe Edge, 1,521; Collie Law, 1,286; R. ddel Law, 1,270 and Dun Law, 1,292.

Produce, Minerals, Manufactures &c.—Within the last century very great exertions have been made to improve the agricultural character of the county, and in this respect it differs nothing from the neighbouring territory of East Lothian.

The chief crops in 1910, according to the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," were:—Oats, 31,033 acres; barley or bere, 9,598; wheat, 1,730; total of corn crops, 53,238 acres; turnips and swedes, 25,580 acres; potatoes, 2,849; cabbage, 221; vetches or tares, 586; total of green crops, 29,784 acres; clover, sainfoin & grasses under rotation for hay, 10,763 acres; not for hay, 5,643 acres; permanent pasture for hay, 1,879; not for hay, 50,524 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 70,830 acres; woods and plantations (1905) 14,500. The live stock in 1910 was:—Horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 4,279; unbroken horses, 762; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 3,027; other cattle, 14,189; ewes kept for breeding, 119,235; other sheep, 204,934; sows kept for breeding, 611; other pigs, 2,800.

The exports of Berwickshire consist of corn, sheep and eggs; and these, indeed, may be considered as the extent of its commerce. The only minerals raised in 1909 from quarries were igneous rock, 8,214 tons, and sandstone, 8,780 tons. The county is strictly pastoral and agricultural. Manufactures as yet have made little or no progress within its borders; what is connected with this system of industry finds its chief seat at the town of Berwick, on the borders. Paper is made at Chirside Bridge, and the manufacture of woollens is carried on at Earlston and Cumledge. The herring fishery, which is pursued at Eyemouth and other ports, is a profitable industry, as is also the curing of this fish.

Rivers and Railways.—The rivers mostly flow from north-west to south; the Leader, Eden, Langton and the Black and White Adder all flow into the Tweed, while the Eye debouches into the North Sea at Eyemouth. The Tweed is a large river, but it is not capable of navigation; it is, however, of great value from its salmon fisheries, which are under a strict system of water police. The Eden, which runs southwards from Lammermoor, has a remarkable fall, near the house of Newton Don, of about forty feet, exhibiting a fine appearance when there is a flood. It is a peculiarity of the Blackadder that no salmon can live in it; if any happen to enter they are said to die in a few days, though they are caught plentifully in the Whiteadder, which also abounds with trout &c. The North British railway has the control of the lines in the county, entering it from the town of Berwick-on-Tweed, and passing north to Burnmouth (from which place is a line to Eyemouth), where it turns westward and north-west to Reston, whence there is a branch line running south-west through Edrom, Langton and Greenlaw to Earlston, and thence to St. Boswells; the main line continuing on through Cockburnspath to Dunbar and Edinburgh; the southern and south-eastern portion of the county is supplied by the North Western railway, on the English side of the border, running via Norham, Coldstream and Kelso.

Divisions and Representation.—Berwickshire comprehends (exclusive of Berwick town) thirty-two parishes and thirty-four ecclesiastical parishes, forming the Presbyteries of Duns, Chirside and Earlston, in the synod of Merse and Teviotdale, and contains one royal burgh, Lauder, which until under the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to Parliament, but was then merged in the county, which is represented by one member in Parliament. The parliamentary constituency for 1911 was 5,752.

ABBAY SAINT BATHANS is a parish, situated in the midst of the Lammormoor hills, 7 miles north-north-west from Duns, and 5 from Grant's House, the nearest railway station, on the east coast route of the North British railway, in the Duns small debt court district. The soil is light and dry, and on the banks of the Whitadder fertile and well cultivated; but the hilly district is barren and covered with heath. There is an Established church here. In this parish are the remains of an ancient Cistercian nunnery, founded in 1180, and dedicated to St. Bathan. Edins Hall, about a mile below St. Barbaos, on the Whitadder, consists of two concentric circles of stone, the diameter of the innermost circle being about 55 feet. George Gillon Turnbull esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and owns most of the land. The parish has an area of 4,797 acres; rateable value, £2,308; the population in 1891 was 163, and in 1901, 213.

Post Office; William Aitchison, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Grant's House, Berwickshire. Delivery, 11 a.m.; dispatch, 1.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery. The nearest N. O. & T. Office is at Grant's House, 5 miles distant

AYTON is a parish and village, 2½ miles south-west from Eyemouth and 8 north-west from Berwick; the village occupies a delightful situation on the left bank of the Eye, and has a station about a quarter of a mile distant, on the main line of the North British railway. It is lighted with gas from works the property of a company. A justice of the peace court is held here monthly, and a sheriff's court for the recovery of small debts four times a year. The Millerton Joint Hospital Board's Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected in 1896 at a cost of about £800, with 8 beds and 2 cots. A caretaker's cottage was afterwards erected, increased accommodation being wanted. A new administrative block is now (1911) being erected. The Established church was erected in 1864-5, at a cost of about £7,000, near to the old fabric, then in a dilapidated state, and is an edifice in the English Gothic style of the 14th century, with a lofty tower, and affords nearly 600 sittings. There is also a United Free church. In the parish are various remains of ancient encampments, and urns and fragments of armour have been occasionally brought to the surface by the plough. Ayton Castle, to the east of the village, held a distinguished place during the Border wars, but was demolished by Thomas, Earl of Surrey, in 1497; it is now the residence of Mrs. Liddell-Grainger. The principal landowners are Mrs. Liddell-Grainger; Lord Tweedmouth M.V.O., D.S.O. of Hatton Castle; Earl Brownlow P.C., V.D., H. W. Lyall esq. and Mrs. Allan. The parish has an area of 6,699 acres; rateable value, £14,918; the population in 1901 was 1,629, including 609 in the village.

Post, T. & M. O. Office. Letters should have Berwickshire added; Miss Jane Stewart, postmistress. Deliveries, 7 & 8.40 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 7 a.m. & 12.30, 3.30, 4.30 & 8 p.m.

BUNKLE (anciently "Bonkyl") and PRESTON form a parish in the Duns small debt court district, about 4 miles north-north-east from Duns station and the same from Reston station, both on the North British railway. During the 13th and 14th centuries the lands in the parish of Bonkyl were held by a family of the same name, and by marriage descended to Sir John Steward. The soil on the high lands towards the Lammormoor hills was at one time thin, dry and poor, but by the application of lime and marl it has been much improved. The rest of the parish, particularly on the banks of the Whitadder, is a fertile loam, and well cultivated. The Earl of Home K.T., V.D. who is lord of the manor; Lieut.-Col. David William Milne-Home D.L., J.P. of Wadderburn Castle and Calder House, Duns, and Edwin Robert John Sandys-Lumsdaine esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 9,129 acres; rateable value, £8,765; population in 1901, 629.

BURNMOUTH (or Ross and Burnmouth) is a small fishing village in the parish of Ayton, with a station on the North British railway, and about 2½ miles from Ayton and 6 from Berwick, and is situated on a harbour at the foot of an almost perpendicular ledge of rock. The heights in the vicinity afford very beautiful and varied scenery, extending to the Ellidons on the south, Lammernmoor on the west, and Bamborough on the east. A number of boats are employed here for herring fishing. There is a United Free church here, also H.M. Board of Trade rocket apparatus and Coastguard station.

ROSS is a conjoint village with Burnmouth, but in the parish of Mordington. The population is included with that of Ayton.

CHANNELKIRK is a parish, situated among the Lammernmoor hills, 1½ miles from Oxtan station on the Lauder branch of the North British railway, in the small debt court district of Lauder and Kelso poor law combination. The parish is traversed by several rivulets, which unitedly form the river Leader, or Lauder, but the hills are mostly covered with heath, and are very bleak and unproductive.

Ugston, now called Oxtan, with a station on the Lauder branch of the North British railway, and about 5 miles north-north-west from Lauder, on the south of the Edinburgh road and in the upper part of the vale of the Leader, is now the only village in the parish of Channelkirk, the village of that name, about 2 miles west of Oxtan, being now represented only by the Established church and the manse belonging to it. Area of the parish, about 14,191 acres; rateable value, £6,135; population in 1891, 545, and in 1901, 563.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Oxtan. Letters should have Berwickshire added; Ronaieyn William Matthewson, sub-postmaster. Delivery. 8.30 a.m.; dispatches, 3 & 5.15 p.m. No Sunday delivery

CHIRNSIDE is a parish in the small debt court district of Ayton, and in Kelso poor combination, lying to the east of the Merse and on the north side of the Whitadder, and extending 4 miles in length by about 3 in breadth. The village, situated on an eminence affording extensive views, is 50 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 13½ north-north-east from Greenlaw, 9 north-west from Berwick and 6 north-east from Duns, and has a station 1 mile distant, on the North British Railway; it consists of two streets, the buildings of which are for the most part detached and straggling, and extend nearly a mile in length, but in the upper part of the village are several good stone houses; an excellent supply of water is brought from about a mile distant. There is a reading room and library and a children's mission hall. Besides a church of the Establishment there are United Free churches. The estate of Ninewells, the family seat of the Humes, is in this neighbourhood, and David Hume, the celebrated historian, though born in Edinburgh, 26 April, 1711, was from his infancy brought up in this parish; the mansion is the property and residence of James Alexander Ross-Hume esq. D.L., J.P. In this locality are some remains of ancient encampments. Alexander Harold Mitchell-Junes esq. J.P., who is lord of the manor, and Lord Tweedmouth M.V.O., D.S.O. are the principal landowners. Area, 5,553 acres; the rateable value is £11,523; population in 1901, 1,580.

CHIRNSIDE BRIDGE is a hamlet about 1 mile west, and here the Whitadder stream is crossed by a good bridge and also by a stone viaduct carrying the railway. On the banks of the river a species of gypsum is found, and in other parts of the district marl is obtained abundantly. Chirnside railway station is situated in this hamlet.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Chirnside; Thomas Ferguson, postmaster. Letters should have Berwickshire added to them. Deliveries, 8.25 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 6.55 a.m. & 12.50 & 4.55 p.m.; sundays, delivery (to callers only) from 9 till 10 a.m.; dispatch at 4.25 p.m.

COCKBURNSPATH is a parish and village on the sea coast, to the Dunbar small debt court district and East Lothian poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, and is 3½ miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north from Green-law, 14 north from Duns, 8 south-east from Dunbar and 21 north-west from Berwick,
 on the road between Berwick and Dunbar.
 The shore is precipitous, presenting a line of cliffs about one hundred feet above the level of the sea; behind the cliffs the ground rises gently towards the hills,
 having many deep glens, or ravines, whose sides are sometimes sloping and covered with verdure; but the general appearance is rocky, with overhanging woods; one of these ravines is crossed by the Peaths, or Pease bridge, erected in 1779-82, from the designs of Mr. Henderson; it is 123 feet in height from the bottom of the Pease burn, which flows beneath, 300 feet in length and 15 feet wide. There are Established and United Free churches.
 The ruins of the church of Auld Cambus, formerly united with this parish, are still standing. The Public Hall, erected in 1833-4, will seat 200 persons. Nearly a quarter of a mile west of the bridge are the remains of an ancient castle, and many traces of camps are visible on the rising grounds. Fisher's Cove is a small fishing village about a mile north and consisting of some fifteen or twenty houses,
 and on the way down to the small boat
 harbour is a curious tunnelled passage,
 with branching caves extending a considerable way into the rock. Sir Henry John Hall bart. and Sir George Grant-
 Suttie bart. are the principal landowners.
 The area comprises 12,632 acres; rateable value, £10,138; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,112, and in 1901, 982.
 Post, M. O. & T. Office: James E. Ogg, postmaster. Letters should have Berwick-shire added to them. Deliveries,

COLDINGHAM is a parish and village
 in the small debt court district of Aytton
 and in East Lothian poor combination;
 the parish is 10 miles in length and 5 in breadth, lying on the coast of Berwick-shire, and is bounded on the north and east by the German Ocean and is much resorted to for sea bathing. The village, a burgh of barony, is 45 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 21 north-north-east of Greenlaw, 17 south-east of Dunbar, 13
 north-north-east of Duns, 11 north-northwest of Berwick, 4 north-north-west from Aytton and about 3 miles from Reston station on the North British railway. The village, which consists of two or three small streets, meeting at a cross, stands on a small eminence in the centre of a fine valley, a short distance from the sea and near to St. Abb's Head, where a lighthouse was erected in 1862, and subsequently a building for fog signalling;
 here also is a Lloyd's signal station, and
 a coastguard station was erected in 1907.
 The Established church incorporates part of the fabric of the priory church; it was altered and restored in 1857 and affords 300 sittings; there is also a United Free church and a Public Hall.
 St. Abb's is a village in this parish, with a United Free church. Coldingham Loch, about a mile west from St. Abb's and 250 feet above the sea level, is triangular in form and upwards of a mile in circumference, and covers about 30 acres. On the top of Earnsough, 40 yards north of the loch, are the ruins of two oblong British camps, called Tynlaw, or Town-
 law. East Castle, in this neighbourhood, is supposed to be the place described as Wolf's Craig, in Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." On the south side of the town stand the ruins of the once magnificent priory of Coldingham, rebuilt by King Edgar, who personally assisted at its consecration. All that now remains of it is the east gable and north side of the church, forming part of the modern parish kirk, and a few straggling fragments, including a small Saxon arch, part of the palace said to have been erected
 here by the royal founder of the priory.
 A nunnery was settled here in the 7th century, of which St. Ebba, the daughter and sister of kings, became abbess in 670.
 The principal landowners are Mrs. Allan, of Peelwalls, Aytton; the Right Hon. A.
 J. Balfour P.C., M.P. of Whittinghame;
 Mrs. Bell, of Templehall; the trustees of the late Walter Carter esq. of West Reston Mains; C. L. Stirling-Cookson J.P. of Reston House; Sir Henry John Hall bart.
 of Duglass; Col. David W. Milne-Home
 P.L., J.P. of Wedderburn and Caldera;
 the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and the North British Railway Co. The area of the parish comprises 24,021 acres; rate-
 able value, £24,770; the population in 1901
 was 2,813.

COLDSTREAM, anciently called Lennel, is a police burgh and parish on the north bank of the Tweed and in Kello poor combination; the town is 1½ miles from Cornhill station on the Kello branch of the North Eastern railway, 47 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 14 south-south-west from Berwick, 10 south-east from Greenlaw, the like distance south from Duns, and 9 north-east from Kello. The streets are in general spacious and well paved and contain many good houses, and the town is lighted with gas and supplied with water under a scheme carried out by the Town Council. The Tweed is crossed about 220 yards east of the town by a bridge of freestone, erected in 1786, at a cost of about £7,000, from the plans of Mr. John Smeaton, the famous engineer, and the designer, in 1759, of the former Eddystone lighthouse. In consists of seven arches, including two for abutments, and is 305 feet long and 25 feet wide. In 1830 it underwent a thorough repair at a cost of about £2,000. From this bridge a very delightful view is afforded, both up and down the river. The town is governed by a Council, consisting of a provost, 2 bailies, 6 councillors and magistrates. Justices of peace courts are held as occasion requires, and sheriff small debt courts four times a year. The Town Hall is in the High street; there is also a Working Men's Club and a Mechanics' Institution, erected in High street in 1863, at a cost of £1,200, and containing a large lecture room, library, reading rooms &c. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and of the British Linen Bank. There are Established and United Free churches, both of which were rebuilt in 1907, the latter by Mrs. Agnes Black, of Lanton. The Episcopal church of St. Mary and All Souls seats 140 persons. The Rev. Ernest Alfred Leslie Clarke A.K.C.L. has been priest in charge since 1910. There is also the Hirsell Private Episcopal chapel, belonging to the Earl of Home, and a

COLDSTREAM

Catholic Apostolic church. In the Market place stands a fountain, erected by the late Sir John Marjoribanks bart. (d. 1884), in connection with the waterworks, and near the church is an obelisk, erected by the inhabitants as a memorial to the donor of the water supply, who died 18 Nov. 1884. At the east end of the town is a memorial, erected by the friends of the late Charles Marjoribanks esq. sometime M.P. for Berwickshire (d. 1833), to record the successful result of the contested election for the county in 1832. The Tweed bridge occupies the site of an ancient ford, by which Edward I. entered Scotland with his forces in 1296; it was generally used during the border wars both by the English and Scottish forces, and last by a Scottish army in 1640, when the Scots crossed the border by this means. Aug. 20, in their advance against Charles I. This neighbourhood is the scene of most of the incidents in Sir Walter Scott's "Marmion," and here was raised in 1600, by Gen. Monk, the famous regiment still known as the "Coldstream Guards," and now forming the 2nd regiment of Foot Guards. During the winter season Coldstream is much resorted to by the nobility and gentry for foxhunting; the Duke of Buccleuch's and the Berwickshire and East Lothian packs meet regularly in the neighbourhood. Lees is the residence of Charlotte, Lady Marjoribanks, and Lennel that of Capt. Walter Waring M.P. while to the north-west is The Hirsell, the seat of the Earl of Home K.T., V.D., D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are the Earl of Home; Capt. Walter Waring M.P. of Lennel; Miss Milne Home, of Milne Graden; George Jean Marjoribanks esq. J.P. of Lees, and Charlotte, Lady Marjoribanks, of Lees. The area of the parish comprises 8,320 acres; rateable value, burghal £6,927, landward £11,450; the population in 1901 was 2,281, including 1,482 in the burgh, and in 1891, 2,388, including 1,535 in the burgh.

CUMLEDGE. see DUNS.

CRANSHAWS is a small parish, lying amongst the Lammormoor hills, 10 miles from Duns (the nearest) station on the North British railway, about 30 east-by-south from Edinburgh, 15 south-east from Haddington, in the small debt court district of Duns; the kirktown lies in the northern portion of the parish. 8 miles north-west of Duns. The old castle of Cranshaws, still entire, is an ancient edifice of great strength. There are also remains of many encampments. Andrew Smith esq. J.P. of Cranshaws Castle, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 8,708 acres; rateable value, £1,902; the population in 1901 was 159.

DUNS, OR DUNSE

DUNS (or Dunse) is a parish and burgh of barony, in Kelseo poor combination, with a station about half a mile east on the North British railway, and is 45 miles east-by-south from Edinburgh, 15 west from Berwick, 11 south-west from Aytoun and 8 north-north-east from Greenlaw. The present town is built on a fine plain, under the southern slope of Duns Law, upon which hill the old town, destroyed by fire, formerly stood; the plain of Duns, 25 miles long, is encompassed on three sides by the Lammormoor ridge, and the river Whitadder, which produces the finest trout, flows past it. Duns Law, at the back of the town, rises to the height of about 500 feet, and the scenery from its summit is strikingly beautiful.

Duns is a place of great antiquity; but from its situation near the border, it was frequently subject to irruptions by the English, and on one of these occasions the town records were burnt, and its early history lost. The present town is generally well built, and is lighted with gas supplied by a local company, and with water by the Town Council. Under the provisions of the General Police and Improvement Act, 1862, and the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, the town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, forming the Town Council; the property vested in the feuars is managed by a committee of nine members, and a sheriff, small debt and debts recovery court is held eight times in the year, viz., the last Friday in January, February, March, May, June and November, the second Friday in July and the first Friday in October, at which debt claims of limited amount are adjudicated; the ordinary sheriff court is also held every Friday, except during the vacations, which are regulated by the Sheriff Court Act. The parish church, burnt down in February, 1879, was rebuilt on a larger scale by the heritors of the parish, at a cost of upwards of £4,000, and re-opened in December, 1880. There are three United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church, called Christ Church, built in 1854, will seat 220 persons, and attached to it is a small mission hall at Chirnside. The Rev. Walter Robert Macray M.A. of Oxford University has been incumbent since 1901. The Town Hall, standing in the centre of the market place, was originally founded by the Earl of Moray, but the present hall, a building in the Gothic style, was erected in 1816 by the feuars, assisted by subscriptions. The County buildings, in Newtown street, contain the police station, and were considerably enlarged in 1885; here the courts are held. There is a Subscription Library, a Working Men's Institute and a Masonic Hall. A Unionist club is now (1911) in course of erection in Golden Square, and will contain reading and billiard rooms. The A Company 4th Territorial Force Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers has its head quarters here, and a fine drill hall was erected in Langtongate in 1894, at a cost of £2,500. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank. The trade is chiefly in flour and grain. There are two hotels, viz., the White Swan and the Black Bull. A sale by auction is held every alternate Monday for cattle. A fair for hiring servants is held the first Tuesday in March, and single hirings are held on the first Tuesday in May and November. The fine public park was formed in 1895; the land was presented to the town by Andrew Smith esq. of Whitechester, and the expense of laying it out was wholly defrayed by the late Sir James Percy Miller bart. of Manderston. Duns Castle, a fine modern mansion in the castellated style, stands about half a mile north-west of the town. The ancient edifice was erected about 1320 by Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, the nephew and co-patriot of Bruce, and was restored and considerably enlarged in 1820 by its then proprietor, Col. Hay, but is now the seat of Francis Stuart Hay esq. J.P. and contains some fine paintings, including some from the Seton gallery, including a group representing George, 5th Baron Seton, the attached friend of Queen Mary, surrounded by his family, as also several portraits of the Stuarts, presented by the exiled Royal family to an ancestor of Mr. Hay. The learned and celebrated metaphysician and theologian, Joannes Duns Scotus, was born here about 1265, and died at Cologne, 8th Nov. 1308. The Rev. Thomas Boston, author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold State," and other works, was born here, 7th March, 1676; d. 20th May, 1732; Abraham Robertson LL.D. professor of astronomy at Oxford, and Thomas M'Crie D.D. Edin. were likewise born here. Francis S. Hay esq. J.P. of Duns Castle, who is lord of the manor; Lt.-Col. David William Milne-Home D.L., J.P. of Wedderburn and Calder; the trustees of the late Sir James Percy Miller bart. D.L., J.P. of Manderston (d. 1906), and the Hon. Mrs. Baillie-Hamilton, of Langton, are the chief landowners. The area comprises 11,474 acres; rateable value, £24,321; the population in 1901 was 3,199, and in 1891, 3,137.

At CUMLEDGE, about 2 miles north from Duns, a hamlet in that parish, there is a large steam and water mill for the manufacture of blankets.
