COULTER (or Culter) is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debt court district of Lanark, 3 miles south from Biggar and 11 south-east from Lanark, with a station, called "Coulter," on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish is traversed by the Culter water, and bounded on the extreme north-west by the river Clyde and on the east by Peebleshire. There are Established and Free and United Free churches, and in the village is a reading room with a library of 1,800 volumes, erected by the late Alexander Kay esq. of Cornhill, on a site given by the late R. G. Baillie esq. of Culter Allers. Agriculture and sheep farming appear to be carried on extensively. The trustees of the late Robert G. Baillie esq. of Culter Allers, and Mrs. Jane A. White, of Netherurd, are the principal landowners. The parish of Culter, which contains an area of 10,187 acres, is now wholly situated in Lanarkshire; rateable value, £11,563; population in 1901, 392.

DOUGLAS is a parish and village, in the Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark, on the south side of the Douglas water, and on the road from Edinburgh to Ayr, with two stations, viz., Douglas, 4 miles north, and Douglas West, 1½ miles north-west, both on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway, 41 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 31 south-south-east from Glasgow and 12 south from Lanark. The parish, which extends on the west to Ayrshire, is well watered, for besides the Douglas water there are three minor streams which fall into it, previous to its junction with the Clyde about 7 miles below the village, which consists of several narrow irregular streets, and is well lighted with gas. Near the centre, and within a burial ground, stand the remains of the ancient parish church of St. Bride, which contains monuments of some of the great chiefs of the house of Douglas. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here. The parish abounds in limestone, freestone and coal. Near the village, on the bank of the river, stands Douglas Castle, the residence of the Earl of Home K.T. Lord Lieutenant of Lanarkshire. The old castle was burned down in 1760, and the present edifice was begun in 1761, from designs by Robert Adam, the distinguished architect. The Earl of Home K.T. and John Paterson, of Carmacoup, are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 34,165 acres; rateable value, £22,492; population, 1901, 2,397.

RIGSIDE is a small village in the parish of Douglas, and 4 miles north-east from Douglas village, on the road from Edinburgh to Avr. The old village has been practically cleared away, and most of the houses pulled down. A new village of one hundred and fifty-eight houses has been erected near Ponfeigh station by the Coltness Iron Co. Limited, for their workmen in their extensive collieries, and it also abounds with rich and productive beds of ironstone, limestone and fireclay. The United Free church, with manse attached, was built in 1885, at a total cost of about £1,300, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, seating about 200.

INCHES is a village in this parish, with a station on the Lanark and Muirkirk section of the Caledonian railway.

HAMILTON is an ancient town and parliamentary burgh and parish, the head of a poor law combination and small debt court district, and the chief town in the Middle Ward of the county, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 37 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, 10½ south-south-east from Glasgow, 15 north-west from Lanark, 8 south from Airdrie and 7 north from Strathaven. The town lies along the base of a rising ground, extending nearly a mile in length, and consists of several streets of substantial, well-built houses, including a new thoroughfare forming a continuation of the London road, and crossing the ravine, dividing the old and new towns, which are connected by Cadzow bridge, widened and improved in 1903; the town is lighted with gas and electricity and supplied with water from works belonging to the Town Council. It was erected into a burgh of barony in the 15th century by one of the Hamiltons, lords of Cadzow; Queen Mary created it a royal burgh in 1548, but the rights and privileges thus acquired were afterwards resigned into the hands of Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, who, in 1670, restored to the community its former franchises, and erected it into a burgh of regality dependent on herself and her successors. It is now a Parliamentary burgh under the "Municipal Corporations (Scotland) Acts" (3 and 4 William IV. c.c. 76 and 11). The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, four bailies and ten councillors; and in connection with Lanark, Airdrie, Falkirk and Linlithgow, it forms the Falkirk Parliamentary district, constituted by the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. The magistrates and justices of peace hold regular courts for the trial of minor offences.

The parish church was made collegiate in 1451, by Sir James Hamilton, for a provost and prebendary. There are also two other Established churches, seven United Free churches, two Roman Catholic churches, Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels, and several Mission halls. The Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, built in 1849, will seat 390 persons; the Rev. Edward Archibald Forbes M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1910.

The Old Grammar School of Hamilton was founded by the ducal family of Hamilton early in the 15th century. It stood near the old churchyard, adjoining the present palace, and was endowed by Lord John Hamilton in 1588 with £20 Scots. In 1714, Anne, Duchess of Hamilton, built a school (now called the Old Grammar School), endowing it with an annual sum of £11 2s. 4d. the Town Council being the sole managers. The present school, erected in 1848 by the Town Council, the heritors of the parish of Hamilton, and subscribers was then called the "Hamilton Academy." In 1866 the subscribers handed over their interest in it, on certain conditions, to the Town Council, who, with the heritors, continued to be the governing body till 1872, when, by the Education (Scotland) Act of that year, it was transferred to the burgh school board, who, in 1876, erected it into a higher-class school; in 1890 various alterations and extensions were made to the buildings, but in 1898 these were unfortunately wrecked, and the school is temporarily carried on at Woodside school. A new school is now (1911) in course of erection.

The Town Hall is a building in the Classic style, and contains the various municipal offices.

The Post Office is in Brandon street. The district offices, in Beckford street, adjoin the County Buildings, and were erected for the district of the Middle Ward, and contain offices for the district clerk, district engineer, sanitary inspector, water engineer, inspector of buildings and medical officer of health.

The Victoria Hall, in Quarry street, erected in 1887, at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of red freestone, and the main hall will hold 1,500 persons.

There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited.

The weekly market for Hamilton is held on Friday. The hiring and cattle markets are held on the third Friday in April and the third Friday in October; and the annual cattle show in the month of June.

There is a hospital, in Muir street, for four old people, endowed by the late Mr. Aikman, of Ross. To the west of the town, on the road to Bothwell, are barracks.

Hamilton is the depot of Regimental Districts Nos. 26 and 71. In Almada street and opposite to the barracks, is a Soldiers' Home, containing reading and recreation rooms, and supported by voluntary contributions. Hamilton is also the head quarters of B Squadron the Queen's Own Royal Glasgow and Lower Ward of Lanarkshire Yeomanry Territorial Force; the 6th Battalion the Cameronians (Scottish Rifles), and A and B Companies of the corps.

At the junction of Muir street and Cadzow street stands a fountain which has been presented to the town by Sir John Watson bart. of Earnock; it is of Aberdeen and Peterhead granite, from designs by Mr. Gavin Paterson, of Hamilton, and consists of an octagonal base, from which rise eight columns of polished Peterhead granite, carrying a circular ogee-shaped dome. There are four recessed drinking basins, and the remaining sides are filled in with bronze panels, two ornamented with heraldic devices and one containing a medallion portrait of the donor. In the centre of the base, under the dome, is a bronze figure representing Industry. The total height is 22 feet.

In August, 1895, a public park of 23 acres was presented to the burgh by the late Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895), and in 1907 it was enlarged by 9 acres, the gift of James Dixon esq. of Bothwell.

The Liberal Club, in Brandon street, built in 1892, contains reading and billiard rooms, and an assembly room for meetings, dances, &c.

The Public Library, erected in 1907, at a cost of £15,000, and gifted to the burgh by Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, contains lending and reference libraries, reading and recreation rooms, a lecture hall and ladies' reading room; there are over 12,000 volumes. Public Baths and Washhouses were erected by the Corporation in 1909 at a cost of £11,000. Electric tramways now run through the town and connect it with Motherwell, Wishaw and Newnains, Bothwell and Uddingston and Larkhall, and to Blantyre and Cambuslang, in connection with Glasgow.

Hamilton Palace, the seat of the Duke of Hamilton, with its surrounding park and pleasure grounds, magnificently wooded, covers an area of about 1,400 acres; the palace is a stately mansion in the Renaissance style, and contains many fine apartments, but some of the pictures, ornaments &c. were disposed of by auction in London in the month of June, 1882, by order of the late Duke of Hamilton. The mausoleum in the palace grounds, in which lie the remains of various members of the Hamilton family, is a magnificent structure, erected at a cost of £160,000, and has bronze doors, richly ornamented. At the entrance to the vaults above the doorway are two colossal lions, each sculptured from a single block of stone, and the keystones of the arches are carved with symbolic figures of Time, Death and Immortality. In the middle of the great park, one mile from the town, on a rock overlooking the Avon, stand the ruins of Cadzow Castle, the ancient manor house.

Cadzow wood, or forest, in this parish, is the home of a famous breed of wild, white cattle, and it is said to be a condition appendant to the title of Duke of Hamilton that the breed should be maintained in this forest.

In the vicinity of the town is Barnclith, the seat of William C. Bishop; Earnock House, the seat of Lady Watson; Midstonehall, that of Mr. T. W. Watson; the Ross estate, owned by Col. Thomas S. G. H. Robertson Aikman D.L., J.P. and Udston estate, owned by Lady Belhaven and Stenton.

The Duke of Hamilton, the Town Council and Lady Watson are the principal landowners, the former being the lord of the manor. The parish of Hamilton embraces an area of 14,243 acres; rateable value, landward £128,826, burghal £157,456; the population in 1891 was 95,161, and in 1901, 40,371. The population of the municipal burgh in 1891 was 32,500, and in 1901 32,775; of the ecclesiastical parish, 19,004. The total includes 347 military in the barracks.

The number of electors on the burghal parliamentary register in 1911 was 5,942, and on the municipal register, 6,846.

HOLYTOWN is a village and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Bothwell, and in the Middle Ward, with a junction station on the Caledonian railway, half a mile distant, and 10 miles east from Glasgow, and has an Established church. The village derives its chief support from the extensive collieries in the neighbourhood, which give employment to a large number of persons. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Ltd. New Stevenston, which forms part of the village of Holytown, has a United Free church and Salvation Army barracks. The population, including New Stevenston, in 1901 was 2,551 and in the ecclesiastical parish, 15,496.

INCHES, see DOUGLAS.

KILBRIDE (EAST) is a burgh of barony, village and parish, in the Middle Ward, Hamilton poor combination and small debt court district; the village, on the road from Glasgow to Muirkirk, is 8 miles south by road from Glasgow and 10½ by rail, between 6 and 7 west from Hamilton and 45 west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Glasgow and East Kilbride branch of the Caledonian railway; there are also three other stations in the parish, viz.: Busby, 4 miles north-west; Thornton Hall, 3, and Hairmyres 1½ west from the village. The parish, which comprehends the abrogated parish of Torrance, contains some extensive lime works, and coal also lies beneath the surface. Under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," boundary orders 75 and 137, a part of the parish of Cathcart has been transferred to East Kilbride. There is an Established church and two United Free churches. Kilbride has produced several eminent men, among whom are Dr. William Hunter M.D., F.R.S. born 23 May, 1718, died 30 March, 1783, and his brother, John Hunter F.R.S. the celebrated anatomist and physiologist, born 14 July, 1728; he was at first a student at Chelsea Hospital and subsequently for some time a member of St. Mary Hall, Oxford, and his portrait hangs in the old dining hall there, now, with the other buildings of the Hall, forming a part of Oriel College, Oxford; he died 16 Oct. 1793, and an oration in his honour is annually delivered at the Royal College of Surgeons, in London. The cattle show, which is held on the first Friday after the 10th of June, for Clydesdale horses and Ayrshire cattle, is the only fair that takes place in East Kilbride. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. Busby is a village and railway station at the north-western extremity of the parish, partly in this county, but chiefly in Renfrewshire. The principal landowners are the Scottish Wholesale Co-operative Society, Lady Sophia C. Alenby Montgomerie, of Southannan House, Fairlie, Col. Robert Edward Stuart Harrington-Stuart, of Torrance, and Allan Graham-Barns-Graham esq. of Craighallan, Milngavie. The area comprises 23,736 acres; rateable value, £45,875; population in 1901, 3,948.

LANARK

LANARK (W. Hanerch, a clearing in a forest) is a royal burgh, market town, the seat of a presbytery, and the chief town in the Upper ward, the head of a poorhouse combination, and a parish on the main road leading from Stirling to Carlisle, one mile above the left bank of the river Clyde, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway connecting the burgh with the main line at Carstairs, and affording easy communication with Edinburgh and Glasgow, and also by a direct route with Ayr on the west; it is 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 25 south-east from Glasgow, 15 south-east from Hamilton, 35 from Stirling, 47 from Ayr, and 12 north-west from Biggar, and may be considered as the centre of the Lowlands. The parish is bounded on the east and south by the river Clyde, and on the north and west by the parishes of Carstairs and Carluke. An old arched bridge, of unknown origin, spans the Mouse or Moss water near its junction with the Clyde, a short distance north-west of the town, and from this point a fine view is obtained of Cartland bridge (erected in 1822, from designs by Thomas Telford F.R.S. the celebrated engineer) and Cartland Crags. The town occupies an elevated site about half a mile north-east of the Clyde; all the older streets, viz. High street, Wellgate, Castlegate, Broomgate, Bloomgate, Wyde close, radiate from a central space called the "Cross." The High street, a wide thoroughfare, extends eastward to the "Port," and is continued by St. Leonard street, which leads to Carstairs, and by Bannatyne street, conducting to the railway station. Hope street branches off from Bloomgate and leads to Cleghorn. Westport is a continuation of Bloomgate and conducts to the Old and New Carluke roads. The burgh is enclosed by a series of narrow lanes, called the North Vennel, the South Vennel, The Delves, Friars' or Arnold lane, Greyatonebalks and others. The road from Stirling to Carlisle traverses the parish from west to east, and the Mouse water, which rises in the moorlands, 8 miles distant, flows through the parish and falls into the Clyde, about a mile west of the burgh; on the banks of this stream are the deep and finely wooded ravines of Cleghorn and the famous Cartland Crags. The town is lighted with gas by a limited company, and an abundant supply of excellent water is obtained from the Tinto range of hills, 7 miles distant. The original charter of the burgh seems to have been granted by Alexander I. (1107-24); and in the reign of Malcolm (1153-65) the town appears to have been regarded as a royal burgh, many of the ancient kings of Scotland having made Lanark their place of residence. The charter was finally confirmed by Charles I. in 1632, and the town is now governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and 15 councillors. A sheriff court is held in the County Buildings every Tuesday and Friday during the session, and small debt and debts recovery court on Tuesdays. Here are also held the meetings of the County Council for the Upper ward. Lanark, together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Linlithgow and Airdrie, forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The landward parish is included in the South Lanarkshire parliamentary division, which also sends one member to Parliament. The old parish church, now in ruins, stands within its burying ground, on the south-east border of the town. Tradition asserts that in this church Sir William Wallace first saw Marion Braidfoot, who subsequently became his wife. In the cemetery which surrounds the ruins of the church was interred William Lithgow, a celebrated and eccentric traveller of the reigns of Queen Elizabeth, James VI. and Charles I., born at Lanark about 1582. After traversing a great portion of Europe and Asia he was tortured and committed to prison by order of the Spanish Inquisition, but eventually returned, though in a crippled condition, and settled in his native parish till his death, about 1645.

The modern parish church, which stands in the centre of the main street, is a plain rectangular structure of two storeys with a square projecting turret at the east end, the lower stage of which forms a porch; in the belfry are 2 bells; in a niche over the entrance is a statue of Wallace, executed by Forrest, a self-taught genius and a native of the district, and presented by him to the town. There is a Mission Church at New Lanark, erected in 1839. On Sat. 13 April, 1907, the beautiful church of St. Mary was almost entirely destroyed by fire. The fountain, in the Horse market, was erected by public subscription, in commemoration of the Jubilee in 1887 of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. The County Buildings, in Hope street, erected in 1836 at a cost of £5,000, are of freestone, in the Classic style, and contain court-rooms and a series of offices. The premises of the Young Men's Christian Association were erected at a cost of £2,000. In the town is a live stock auction mart belonging to Messrs. Lawrie and Symington Limited, at which important sales of Ayrshire dairy cattle and fat stock are held weekly on Monday. This is the recognised centre for the sale of black-faced sheep and lambs, the largest sales in the country being held here during the season. The fairs, still observed, are as follows:—Second Tuesday and Wednesday of June, rough sheep; Saturday, 13th July, Cattle Show; Tuesday before the 12th of August, lambs; Tuesday and Wednesday, 20th and 21st, black-faced, cross and cheviot lambs; Tuesday and Wednesday, 3rd and 4th September, sheep and lambs; second Wednesday, Thursday and Friday in October, Show and Sale of Clydesdale horses. Horse races are held in September on an extensive and excellent course, about a mile and a half east of the town. Lady Hosier's Convalescent Home was opened July 10th, 1893, by the late Baron Newlands (d. 1906), who presented a donation of £10,000 towards the endowment of the institution as a memorial to Frances, his wife, who died in 1891; the home is available for 42 inmates, and is connected with the Western Infirmary, Glasgow. Bellefield Sanatorium was founded in 1904 by the Glasgow and District branch of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, at a cost of over £20,000; there are 52 beds, and upwards of 150 patients are treated annually. There was anciently a castle here, which stood on an apparently artificial mound at the foot of the Castlegate, but the site is now converted into a public howling green. In the vicinity is Lanark Loch, a fine expanse of water, some 24 acres in extent, the shores of which have been embanked and planted, a pavilion built and a delightful promenade laid out, which is much frequented by the inhabitants. Numerous boats and steam launches ply on the loch for the pleasure of visitors. Adjoining the loch is Lanark Moor; on the upper moor races are held; the lower moor is used as a golfing green, and also affords ample space for cricket and football. The neighbourhood presents much fine scenery, including the romantic grounds of Bonnington, Cartland Crags and the Falls of Clyde; these last are three in number, viz.: Bonnington Falls, divided into two by a rocky islet; Corra Linn, where the water takes three distinct leaps, making a descent altogether of 84 feet, and Stonebyres Falls, three miles further down stream. In the parish are traces of ancient Roman camps and of a Roman road, the famous Watling Street, and indications of lake dwellings were met with in 1898, on Hyndford farm. The Lee is the seat of Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O.; the mansion is in the Scottish castellated style, with a round tower at each angle; in the grounds are some very fine oak and larch trees; one of the latter planted in 1739 is now 100 feet high and 18 feet in girth; here is preserved a curious stone, traditionally taken from the Saracens in 1329, and called the "Lee Penny;" it is reputed to possess healing virtues, and is said to have suggested to Sir Walter Scott the idea of his celebrated novel, "The Talisman." Behind the Clydesdale Hotel are the Assembly Rooms, erected in 1827 on the site of a Franciscan monastery. Handloom weaving, formerly the general occupation, has almost entirely ceased, but the manufacture of winceys, skirtings &c. is carried on by two firms; there are also two hosiery factories, a brewery and a tannery. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank. The principal hotel is the "Clydesdale." The Territorial Force stationed in Lanark comprises the Lanarkshire Yeomanry and B Squadron of the regiment and the 8th (Lanarkshire) Battalion Highland Light Infantry and B Co. of the corps.

Cleghorn House is the residence of Mrs. Elliott-Lockhart; Stanmore, of Jn. Westall King esq. J.P.; Jeriswood House is the property of the Earl of Haddington K.T., A.D.C. The Earl of Haddington, of Tynningham House; Sir Charles Henry A. F. Ross bart. of Bonnington and Balnagown; Mrs. Elliott-Lockhart, of Cleghorn; Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O. of Lee and Carnwath; Sir James King bart. D.L., J.P. of Carstairs House; J. Noble Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Carfin and Stonebyres; Charles Walker esq. J.P. of Breilargh Holt, Westmoreland; C. J. Edmondstone Cranston esq. D.L., J.P. of Corehouse, and Allan John Crawford Farie esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 10,385 acres; rateable value, burgh, £29,284 18s.; landward, £21,253 16s.; total, £50,538 14s.; the population of the civil parish in 1901, 5,103; ecclesiastical parish, 4,564; St. Leonards quoad sacra, 3,539; of the royal burgh, 6,440; and of the parliamentary burgh, 5,084.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 885.

NEW LANARK is a village, 1 mile south from Lanark, and on the same side of the Clyde, and in the parish, Upper ward and small debts court district of Lanark. It originated in 1783-4, when Richard Arkwright and Mr. David Dale built cotton mills here, and constructed a subterranean aqueduct, about 100 yards in length, through the solid rock, by which means the waters of the Clyde were conducted to the sloping plain on which the mills and the village now stand. Robert Owen, chiefly known as a social reformer, was in his earlier years a partner in the cotton mills in this village. Acreage and rateable value included with Lanark; the population of the village was in 1891, 672, and in 1901, 795.

LEADHILLS is a village and a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parishes of Crawford and Crawfordjohn, in the Upper ward, and is on the road from Glasgow to Dumfries, with a station on the Elvanfoot and Wanlockhead section of the Caledonian railway, 46 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 44 south from Glasgow and 15 south from Douglas, and has Established and United Free churches. There is a branch here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, a Masonic Hall and a Miners' Library. The place derives its name from the lead mines hereabouts, which have produced in some years 18,000 bars, of nine stons (avoirdupois) the bar; in the year 1909, according to the "Mineral Statistics," 1,987 tons of lead ore were raised, from which 1,567 tons of lead was obtained on smelting, and 6,954 ounces of silver. Gold was found in the mountain sands in an early period, and in 1881 the miners of Leadhills, during their spare hours, collected a quantity weighing 1,000 grains, and presented it to the Earl of Hopetoun, now Marquess of Lintlithgow P.C. lord of the manor, on the attainment of his majority. Allan Ramsay, the poet, was born here 13 Oct. 1685, and subsequently became a bookseller in Edinburgh; he died 7 Jan. 1758. A monument was erected here to Symington, a native of Leadhills, who first applied steam to navigation. Fairs used to be held on the second Friday of June and the last Friday of October, and both days are still observed as general holidays. The population in 1901 was 235, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 895.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Leadhills; Mrs. Agnes Williamson, postmistress (letters should have Lanarkshire added). Delivery, 8.25 a.m. & 7.10 p.m.; dispatches, 7.15 a.m. & 1.35 p.m. in summer, 7.15 a.m. & 1.25 p.m. in winter. No delivery on Sundays

LENZIE is partly in the parish of Cadder, in the county of Lanark, and partly in the parish of Kirkintilloch, in Dumbartonshire, and will be found in the latter county.

LESMAHAGOW is a parish and village in the Upper ward of the county and in Lanark small debts court district, with a station on a branch of the Caledonian railway from Glasgow and Hamilton, the village, also called Abbey Green, is on the river Nethan, a tributary of the Clyde, and is 38 miles west from Edinburgh, 23 south-east from Glasgow and 6 south-west from Lanark; the parish is 12 miles square, and bounded on the north-east by the river Clyde, south-east by the Douglas and Poniel waters, and north-west by the Kyle water; it abounds in coal, ironstone and limestone, in the working of which a considerable number of the inhabitants find employment; a line of railway, for this traffic only, passes through or near most of the mines, and joins the Caledonian main line at Motherwell. A line of the Caledonian railway was constructed in 1903 between Lesmahagow and Darvell and passing through Strathaven. The parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish in 1808, stands on part of the site of the priory, and in 1899 was internally restored, at a cost of about £3,500. The British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here. The principal hotels are the Abbey Green, the Commercial, the Royal, and the Masons' Arms, all of which are also posting houses. Two hiring fairs and two others for general business are held during the year. A market, known as Big Wednesday is held in the month of December. Here was anciently a priory, founded by David I. in 1140, and dedicated to St. Machutus. The noble ruins of Craignethan, or Draphane Castle, the property of the Earl of Home, are immortalised by Sir Walter Scott in "Old Mortality," under the name of "Tillietndlem Castle," and a room in the castle is still shown as that in which the unfortunate Queen Mary took refuge after her escape from Lochleven Castle, in 1567. The Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. and J. C. Hope-Verre esq. D.L., J.P. of Blackwood House, are the principal landowners. The area is 41,311 acres; assessable value, £72,005; population in 1901, 10,954 in the civil parish, and 9,453 in the ecclesiastical parish.

COALBURN is a mining village, about 4 miles south of Abbey Green, with a station on the Lesmahagow branch of the Caledonian railway, and has a United Free church. Population in 1901 was 672.

CROSSFORD is a village in a beautiful valley on the left bank of the river Clyde, and near its confluence with the Nethan; it is about 5 miles north-by-east from Abbey Green and 4½ north-west from Lanark, and has two United Free churches and a Baptist chapel. Population in 1891 was 818, and in 1901, 728.

KIRKMUIRHILL and BLACKWOOD are villages adjacent to each other, about 3 miles north-west from Abbey Green, on the Glasgow road, and at Blackwood is a station on the Caledonian railway. At Kirkmuirhill is a United Free church, and at Blackwood a Roman Catholic church. BOGHEAD is a village, about 1½ miles distant from Kirkmuirhill; the inhabitants of which are principally employed in Dunduff Stone Quarry. AUCHENHEATH, a mining village, is about 3 miles north from Abbey Green, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. Population in 1901: Kirkmuirhill, 495; Auchenheath, 642 and Southfield, 877.

OLD MONKLAND is a parish in the Middle ward and the small debts court district of Airdrie, and extends from the right bank of the Clyde to the border of New Monkland, a distance of between 7 and 8 miles, by a breadth near the Clyde of little more than 1, but afterwards expanding to nearly 4 miles. It is bounded on the north by Cadder and the barony parish of Glasgow, and on the south by Bothwell, and is rich in minerals. The village of Old Monkland and the parish church are now locally part of Coatbridge. D. W. R. Carrick-Buchanan esq. D.L., J.P. of Corsewall, Stranraer, and Ronald S. H. S. R. Colt esq. J.P. of Gartsherrie, are the principal landowners. The area of Old Monkland parish, as altered by order of the Secretary for Scotland, is 11,007 acres; valuation, landward, £109,047; burghal (Lanarkshire part of Coatbridge), £207,729; in 1891 the population was 44,615, and in 1901, 53,248 in the civil parish and 11,314 in the ecclesiastical, including 47 inmates and 4 officials in the Poorhouse.

BROOMHOUSE, in the parish of Old Monkland, is a small village, 2 miles from Baillieston and 6 from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Hamilton section of the North British railway. There are several collieries in this neighbourhood. John Fulton Millar esq. of Greenock, and Mrs. Scott, of Blantyre, are the chief landowners. Population in 1901, 624.

KENMUIR is a quad sacra parish, erected in 1897, from the parish of Old Monkland; it forms the south-western portion of the civil parish and is 3 miles long and 1 mile broad, the Clyde forming the southern boundary; it includes the villages of Mount Vernon, Carmyle, Clyde Iron Works, Fullarton and Broomhouse. The population in 1901 was 4,138.

CARMYLE is a hamlet in the parish of Old Monkland, on the Banks of the Clyde, and about 4 miles from Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. The population in 1901 was 967.

from Glasgow. The town was constituted a police burgh in 1865, and is governed by a provost, 4 magistrates, and 10 councillors. It is supplied with water from Coldstream Netherton, near Carluke, and Cutler, near Bigger, and the streets are lighted with electricity from works belonging to the Corporation. There are four Established churches, four United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and various chapels and halls. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1822, will seat 250 persons; the Rev. William Pennie M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been priest in charge since 1907. The Town Hall was opened in November, 1887, at a cost of about £8,000. The extensive works of Messrs. David Colville & Sons Limited employ over 2,800 hands; other important firms are the Lanarkshire Steel Co. Limited, the Motherwell, the Brandon Bridge and the Parkneuk Bridge Building Companies. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The Public Library, presented by A. Carnegie esq. at a cost of £12,000, was opened in April, 1906; the lending library contains 11,000 volumes. The population of the burgh in 1891 was 18,726, and in 1901, 30,418; rateable value of the burgh, £187,934.

NEWBIGGING, see CARNWATH.

NEW LANARK, see LANARK.

NEWMAINS is a small town, in Cambusnethan parish and the Middle ward,
 with a station on the Holytown and Morningside branch of the Caledonian railway, about 2 miles east from Wishaw. Here are the works of the Coltness Iron Company Limited. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and provided with water by the county authorities of Lanark. The church here was erected by James Houldsworth esq. of Coltness, in memory of his eldest son: there is also a Roman Catholic church and a Mission hall. The Houldsworth Institute, opened in 1910, was the gift of James Hamilton Houldsworth esq.
 Population in 1901, 2,755.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Newmains (letters should have Lanarkshire added); Misa Janet Russell, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.50 a.m. & 3.20 (callers only)

SHETTLESTON is a district, quoad sacra parish and considerable village, in the county of Loark, 2½ miles east-north-east from Glasgow and 1 mile from Tollcross, on the road to Edinburgh, with a station on the Clydebank and Airdrie section of the North British railway, and one at Carnyne (or Westmuir) on the same line. The district is 4 miles in length, with an average breadth of 3 miles, and has an area of about 5,000 acres. It is in the parish of Glasgow, lower ward of Lanarkshire and justice of the peace court of Glasgow, and had a population in 1901 of 20,493 in the quoad sacra parish and 12,154 in the town. The surface is varied and the soil generally fertile; there are coal mines and sandstone quarries, and these, together with agriculture, weaving and engineering, employ the chief part of the population. The Monkland canal passes through. The Established church was built in 1903, and seats about 1,400 persons; the church of St. Michael, in CARNTYNE, being used as a chapel of ease; there are also two Roman Catholic churches, besides Baptist and Primitive Methodist chapels; meeting rooms for Plymouth Brethren, Salvation Army Barracks and a Rechabites Good Templars' Hall. There are also United Free churches at Carnyne, Eastbank and Sandyhills, and at Lighthorn is a joint Fever Hospital. Capt. Robert Tennant left £460 for the poor of this place. D. W. R. Carrick-Buchanan esq. D.L., J.P. of Corsewall, Stranraer; John H. Cassells J.P. and Maj. W. Anstruther Gray M.P. of Kilmarnock, Cupar, are the principal landowners. TOLL-CROSS is a place in Shettleston ecclesiastical parish, with a population in 1901 of 7,221.

SHOTTS is a large parish at the north-eastern extremity of the county, extending from north to south about 8 miles and from east to west about 11 miles: it is bounded on the north-west by the parish of New Monkland, on the west by Bothwell and Dalziel, on the south by Cambusnethan, and on the east and north by the county of Linlithgow, and is in the Middle ward, Cambusnethan poor combination and small debts court district of Airdrie and Wishaw, and has a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. The kirktown of Shotts is $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west of the station, 7 south-east from Airdrie and $6\frac{1}{2}$ north-east from Wishaw, and has an Established church and a Mission chapel. Fairs are held here annually, on the third Tuesday in June and the last Tuesday in November. The parish also includes the villages of Harthill, Benhar, Salsburgh, Dykehead, and part of the village of Shotts Ironworks. The coal and iron works in the parish furnish employment for the inhabitants, and include the collieries of the Coltness Iron Company. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch at Shotts, and close to the station is a good hotel. The Duke of Hamilton, Lieut.-Col. Robert King Stewart D.L., J.P. of Mirdoustoun Castle, Newmains, and D. W. Carrick-Buchanan esq. of Corsewall, Stranraer, are the principal landowners.

HARTHILL and BENHAR have been erected into a quoad sacra parish, which has Established and United Free churches. The population in 1901, of Harthill only, was 1,618.

GREENHILL is a small village about 4 miles east from Holytown, and 1 from Omoa station on the Holytown Junction and Edinburgh section of the Caledonian railway. There is a Board school in the village, and extensive collieries in the neighbourhood.

SALSBURGH, "Sallysburgh," or "Salzburgh," is a village in the parish of Shotts, 5 miles east from Holytown and has an Original Secession church. The population in 1901 was 1,123.

SHOTTS IRONWORKS form a village on the southern border of the parish adjoining Shotts railway station. The population in 1901 was 1,213.

DYKEHEAD is a village half a mile from Shotts station on the Cleland and Mid-Calder branch of the Caledonian railway and has a Mission chapel. The population in 1901 was 1,943.

CLELAND, a large village and quoad sacra parish in this civil parish, will be found under a separate heading.

The area of the entire parish comprises 25,336 acres; rateable value, £81,593; population in 1901, 15,562, including 123 officials and 912 inmates of Lanark District Asylum.

STRATHAVEN is a market town and burgh of barony, on the river Avon, in the parish of Avondale and in the Middle ward and small debts court district of Hamilton, with a station on a branch from Blantyre station on the Caledonian railway, 44 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 15 south-by-east from Glasgow, 28

north-east from Ayr, 21 east-by-north from Kilmarnock, 14 west from Lanark and 7½ south from Hamilton. The town was erected into a burgh of barony in the year 1450, by William, Earl of Douglas.
There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and Mission Halls. The local trade is chiefly in cheese and grain, and the silk, cotton and hosiery goods manufactured here. The Public Park was the gift of the late Rev. James Allan, and Allison Green was presented by the late James Allison esq. of Oakley, Australia.
Here are the ruins of Strathaven Castle, formerly a place of great strength and occupied by the Douglas and Hamilton families. A new branch of the Caledonian railway was opened in 1905 from Lesmahagow, via Stonehouse, to Darvell, and passing through Strathaven. The auction mart, which is held on Tuesday, is well attended. There are branches here
of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. On the south side of the river Avon remains of a Roman road can be distinctly traced for several miles.
Population in 1901, 4,076.

WANDELL and LAMINGTON

form a united parish, bounded on the west by the river Clyde, on the south by Crawford parish and east by Culter parish, in the Upper ward and in the small debts court district of Lanark. The village of Lamington, 6 miles south-west from Biggar, has a station on the Glasgow and Carlisle section of the Caledonian railway. The district is hilly, but fertile, and chiefly agricultural. Here is an Established church. The private Episcopal chapel of the Holy Trinity here was built in 1857 by Alexander, 1st Lord Lamington. Lamington House is the property of Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E., D.L., J.P. and the principal landowner; the estate affords about 8,000 acres for shooting, and there is excellent trout fishing on the Clyde. The mountain of Tinto, 2,335 feet, and Couler Fell, 2,459 feet above sea level, are the loftiest eminences in this romantic neighbourhood. There is a reservoir for Airdrie and Coathridge at Cowgill. Acreage, 12,830. rateable value, £10,409; population in 1901, 362.

WISHAW

WISHAW is a quoad sacra parish, town and police burgh, in the Middle ward of Lanarkshire and civil parish of Cambus-nethan and Dalziel, and is 15 miles southeast from Glasgow and 32 west from Edinburgh, with stations on the Caledonian railway. As a burgh it is governed under the provisions of the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892 to 1903, by a provost,
 four bailies and seven town councillors,
 and the boundaries having been extended,
 now include within their limits the villages of Cambusnethan, Shieldmuir and Craigneuk. The town, pleasantly situated on the face of a hill, comprises several spacious streets. The parish church of Cambusnethan, on Kirk Brae, is a modern building with a square tower. Wishaw church (quoad sacra), in Main street, is a large edifice and has a tower with a spire and a clock, and there are United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew, built in 1892, will seat 170 persons. The Rev.
 James Morison Rollo Gladstone M.A. of Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities, has been priest in charge since 1906. There are also Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels, a Gospel Hall, several mission chapels and Salvation Army Barracks. A police court is held at the County buildings as occasion requires, and a sheriff's small debt court every three weeks. There are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland.
 The Wishaw Iron and Steel Works, two iron foundries, the malleable iron works of Messrs. John Williams and Co. the Stenton Iron and Steel Works, the Pather
 Iron and Steel Co. Limited, the railway wagon and axle works of Messrs. R. Y.
 Pickering and Co. Limited and the Clydesdale Distillery Co. Limited, afford employment to a large number of workpeople.
 Large cattle sales are held every Tuesday and Thursday by Messrs. J. and J. Marshall, auctioneers, Carlnke. Two newspapers, the "Wishaw Press," published every Friday afternoon, and the "Wishaw Herald," published every Friday.

About 2 miles south-west from Wishaw, and near to the Clyde, is an ancient graveyard, the burial place of the Hamiltons, lords of Belhaven and Stenton, a title first conferred, 15th December, 1647,
 on Sir John Hamilton kt. of Broomhill,
 and re-granted to him 10 February, 1675;
 it is also said that the original parish church stood upon this site, but no trace of it whatever now remains. In the graveyard stands the tomb of Robert Montgomery, 8th Lord Belhaven and Stenton K.T. and Baron Hamilton, of Wishaw, in the 22nd year of the United Kingdom, who died 22nd December, 1868. It was erected by his widow, and is a handsome structure of freestone, 28 feet in height, with granite tablets on three sides, one of which bears an inscription; the graveyard also contains many memorials, rudely but curiously carved, and of considerable antiquity; one of these, erected in 1773, commemorates Arthur Inglis, shot at Stackelton Drke, in Netherthoun, by John Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee,
 July, 1679, and several bear lengthwise
 the simple device of a sword. There are also memorials to Sir James Stewart Denham bart. and his wife, erected by their son, General Sir James Stewart bart.
 G.C.H. of Coltness and Goodtrees. Wishaw House is the seat of Lord Belhaven and Stenton D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, and Coltness House that of Mrs.
 Houldsworth.

In 1891 the burgh of Wishaw had a population of 14,869, and in 1901, 20,869,
 and in the ecclesiastical parish, 14,733;
 rateable value of the burgh, £89,169.

CRAIGNEUK is a small village in Dal-ziel parish, now incorporated in the burgh

of Wishaw, and has a United Free church.
 Here are the works of the Etna Iron and Steel Co.

LINLITHGOWSHIRE

THE ancient division of West Lothian, is a small county of a pentagonal shape, lying south of the inner portion of the Firth of Forth, and bounded on the west by Stirling, south-west by Lanark, and south-east and east by Edinburghshire; its extent along the Firth coast is 16 miles, and from north to south about 15. Its area comprises 120.1 square miles, or 76,861 acres of land and 449 of water; its population in 1891 comprised 52,808, and in 1901, 35,223 males and 30,485 females; total, 65,708. In 1901 the inhabited houses were 12,359; uninhabited, 471; building, 156. It ranks in point of size as the thirty-second and in population as the fifteenth of Scotch counties.

The population in 1911 was 79,456

Early History.—The Gadeni are the first who are mentioned as holding this district, and they were subdued by the Romans, whose great bulwark, "Grimms Dyke," ended at Carriden, in this county, and several forts can still be traced in other parts of the county; it suffered in common with other parts of Lothian from invasions by Norwegians, and by the successes of the Northumbrian Earls, passing at length in 1018 under the Scottish rules. This county was probably separated into the sheriffdom in the reign of David I. It was placed by Robert, however, under the administration of a constable, and so it continued until the time of James IV. (1488-1513). No other district appears to have been so divided into petty baronies, baileries, regalities and other independent jurisdictions, nor so domineered over by a number of peers inimical to peace and regardless of justice. The oldest family in the shire is that of Dundas, who can trace an unbroken line of descent and residence on the same spot up to the reign of William the Lion (1165).

Soil, Surface, &c.—This county has an irregular surface, but the hills are only of moderate elevation; the highest being found about the middle of the county. Many places present volcanic appearances, particularly at Dundas Hill, in the parish of Dalmeny, where there is a bold front of basaltic rocks, exhibiting in some instances columns of that character. The hills are generally well clothed with wood; about one-third of the county is either old pasture or laid down with artificial grasses; and there are more than four-fifths of the shire inclosed. Until the year 1723, there was little improvement in the agriculture of the district. Soon after this period, John, Earl of Stair, in conjunction with Charles, first Earl of Hopetoun, introduced new modes of husbandry, and commenced the cultivation of the cabbage, turnip, and carrot by the plough. The highest elevations are Cairnnaple, 1,000 feet above sea level; Biccarton, 800; Caithlaw, 940; and Drumbowie, 705.

Produce, Manufactures, Minerals &c.—The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910, are: oats, 9,993 acres; barley or bere, 2,412; wheat, 1,943; total corn crops, 14,635 acres; turnips and swedes, 3,462 acres; potatoes, 2,266; total green crops, 6,207 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 7,992 acres; (not for hay), 5,135 acres; permanent pasture (for hay), 1,041 acres; (not for hay), 22,604 acres; total area of land, 76,861 acres, of which 3,577 is mountain and heath land (used for grazing), and 4,865 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised: horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 1,708; unbroken horses, 620; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 4,840; other cattle, two years and above, 2,945; one year and under two, 2,187; under one year, 1,525; ewes kept for breeding, 5,927; other sheep, one year and above, 8,622; under one year, 7,056; sows kept for breeding, 247; other pigs, 1,044.

Linlithgowshire contains a considerable quantity of minerals. Coal abounds throughout, limestone is prevalent, in some parts ironstone is also found, and the whole surface rests on a bed of sandstone of the finest quality, and there is fire clay and brick clay. This is the richest district in Scotland for the production of shale, from which paraffin oil is extracted, and for the manufacture of which very extensive works are in operation in the neighbourhood of Bathgate, Linlithgow, Uphall and Whitburn. Besides this branch of trade, there are also large iron and steel foundries, paper mills, distilleries, chemical works, and brick, tile and earthenware manufactories.

The production of coal in 1909 was 1,987,966 tons, valued at £64,372; fire clay, 48,168 tons, value £12,056; brick clay, 44,442 tons, value £1,606; iron ore, 18,063 tons, value £5,946; oil shale, 2,261,086 tons (the largest production in Great Britain), valued at £621,799; sandstone, 38,958 tons; gravel and sand, 8,891 tons; igneous rocks, 43,648 tons.

Rivers and Railways.—The only river of consequence is the Almond, or Amond, but there are a number of considerable rivulets and burns. The Almond rises in the high grounds of Lanarkshire, and, pursuing a north-easterly course, falls into the sea at Crumrod; at its mouth it assumes the appearance of a small loch or arm of the sea, running up the bottom of a woody ravine; but it is only navigable for a very short distance, and then only for boats and very small sloops. Linlithgow Loch, north of the town, is the only considerable sheet of water in the county. The Union canal runs across the northern portion of the county. The railways belong to the North British Co. and their lines are one coming from Falkirk, entering the county about 2 miles west of Linlithgow town, and leaving it again near Hough; another branch from Ratho enters the county a little south of Hough, runs to Uphall, whence a line goes to Mid Calder; the main branch proceeds to Bathgate, from which three lines diverge, one south to West Foulshiels, where it again divides, going east to West Calder and west to Crofthead &c.; the second line from Bathgate runs west to Armadale and the third north-west to Blackston Junction, where it joins the line from Bo'ness to Slamannan. Besides these railways there is the line to Queensferry for the Forth Bridge, which crosses the north-east angle of the county.

Divisions, Representations, &c.—This county comprises 11 entire civil parishes and part of one other, and 11 ecclesiastical parishes with parts of 5 others, all of which are included in the Presbytery of Linlithgow; it contains two royal burghs, namely, Linlithgow and Queensferry; the next largest town is Bathgate. Its seaport is Bo'ness, and there are a number of thriving villages. The burghs of Linlithgow, Hamilton, Lanark, Airdrie and Falkirk, in conjunction, send one representative to the Imperial Parliament, and the shire at large another. The parliamentary constituency for 1911 was 11,840.

ABERCORN is a parish, in the northern part of the county, on the south bank of the river Forth, at the point where the Haugh brook flows into that river, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow, and contains the village of Newton and Philipstoun. There is an Established church at Abercorn, and a United Free church at Woodend. This place has afforded the title of baron (1603), earl (1606), marquess (1790) and duke (1838), to the Hamilton family. Hopetoun House is the seat of the Marquess of Linlithgow. The area of the parish is 4,508 acres; rateable value, £28,997 6s.; population in 1901, 866.

NEWTON is a village on the east side of the parish, about 2½ miles from Queensferry.

PHILPSTOUN is a village in Linlithgow civil parish, on the west of the Abercorn parish, with a station, about 1 mile south, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 4 miles east from Linlithgow. In the village is a large shale mine for the extraction of oil and other products, which gives employment to most of the inhabitants. The United Presbyterian church at Wester Pardovan, close to the village, is locally in the parish of Linlithgow. A club for the use of the workmen employed in the oil works of James Ross and Co. was opened in 1908. The nearest school for this village is at Bridgend, 1 mile distant. The population in 1901 was 644.

ARMADALE is a town and police burgh, entirely within the civil parish of Bathgate, and quoad sacra parish, formed from Bathgate and Torphichen parishes, 2 miles west from Bathgate, 20 miles west from Edinburgh, with a station, a mile from the town, on Bathgate and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 22 miles east from Glasgow, and 7½ south from Linlithgow. It was constituted a police burgh under the provisions of the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors, and is lighted with gas by a limited company. There is an Established church, a United Free church and a Wesleyan chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, built in 1858, will seat 150 persons; the rectory, net value £150, is at present (1911) vacant. The Burgh hall, a plain building of stone, was erected in 1904. In the vicinity are extensive coalfields and ironstone quarries; several brick and tile and fire-brick manufactories, shale works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products and large steel works. In the town is a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. Sir William Honyman hart, one of the lords of the Court of Session, in 1797, and Lord Justice Clerk in 1788-99, took the title of Lord Armadale from this place. The Rev. Sir William Macdonald Honyman bart. M.A., J.P. of Coton Hall, Salop; Alexander W. Robertson Durham esq. of Boghead, Bathgate; the trustees of the late Sir William Baillie bart. of Polkemmet (d. 1890) and Capt. Thomas Hope J.P. of Bridgecastle, are the principal landowners. Bathville is a thriving suburb of the burgh. The soil is of strong clay, and its products principally oats and grass for grazing purposes; the surface is flat and waving. The area of the burgh is 252 acres; rateable value, £9,842; population of the burgh in 1901 was 3,921, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 6,445.

BATHGATE is a market town, police burgh and parish, on the middle road betwix Edinburgh and Glasgow, with stations on the Bathgate branch of the Edinburgh and Glasgow and Monklands sections of the North British railway, in Linlithgow poor combination, 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 24 east from Glasgow, 14 east from Airside and 7 south from Linlithgow. The Bathgate water, a tributary of the river Forth, flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the west by the Barbauchlaw Burn. The town occupies a pleasant site near the southern base of a ridge of hills extending across the county, and sheltering the town on the north and east, and at the same time it has a fine southern aspect, and possesses several good streets. It is lighted with gas from works the property of a local company, and abundantly supplied with water of excellent quality from works erected at a cost of £6,000, and in 1903 an additional supply was obtained at a further cost of £13,600. Bathgate was made a burgh of barony by Charles II. in 1661, and created a free and independent burgh of barony by Act of Parliament in 1824; subsequently the burgh adopted Provost Lindsay's Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, two magistrates and twelve councillors. A small debt court is held in the burgh once a quarter. The old parish church, erected about 1737, was taken down in 1882. The present church, erected on the same site at a cost of upwards of £8,000, and opened in 1884, is a handsome edifice of stone, chiefly in the Gothic style, with a square tower at the south-west angle, rising to a height of 108 feet and ornamented with crocketed pinnacles. The tower contains a bell and an illuminated clock, presented by the late John Waddell esq. of Inch, at a cost of over £250; a gallery is carried round three sides of the church, and the east gable is relieved by a semi-circular apse with five memorial windows. The church affords about 1,100 sittings, and adjoining are vestries and a hall. The Evangelical Union church, in Marjoribanks street, rebuilt on the old site in 1895 at a cost of upwards of £2,200, is an edifice in the Early English style from designs by Mr. J. Graham Fairley, architect, of Edinburgh. St. John's United Free church, erected in 1894-5, and opened in October, 1895, at an estimated cost of £3,700, is an edifice in a plain Gothic style, and has a tower of three stages with octagonal broach spire, and containing one bell, weighing nearly a ton; various gifts have been made to the church, including a communion service and font basin of solid silver. St. David's United Free church, erected in 1907, is a lofty building of stone in the Early Gothic style; it contains a stone pulpit and massive font, and will seat 600 persons. There is also an Evangelical Union chapel, and a Roman Catholic church. The Bathgate Academy, which stands on a commanding and healthy site in the immediate vicinity of the town, was endowed by a bequest of the late John Newland, of Kingston, Jamaica, a native of this town, with a sum of between £16,000 and £17,000; the building is elegant and extensive, and contains class-rooms, a library and trustees' room. It is now under Government inspection, and is managed by a body of trustees, one of whom represents the lord of the manor and another is appointed by the Town Council. The neighbouring hills abound with old limestone quarries yielding fine specimens of fossil remains. Paraffin oil is manufactured in the locality. At Westfield, about 2½ miles distant, is an extensive mill of the Westfield Paper Co. Limited. In the town there are two iron foundries, spade and shovel works and a distillery, and in the district are many large collieries, and coal and ironstone &c. are much worked in the immediate neighborhood. On the north border of the parish are ancient silver mines worked in the early part of the 17th century, and a few years ago reopened. The market day is Monday. A cattle auction is held at the mart in Whitburn road on market day. The authorities of the burgh are entitled by Act of Parliament to hold seven annual fairs—namely, on the third Wednesdays in April, July and August, on the first Wednesdays after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas (o. s.), and the fourth Wednesdays in June and October; the principal fairs are those held at Whitsuntide and Martinmas, which are well attended by cattle dealers. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The "West Lothian Courier" is published here every Friday. The following eminent men were born in the parish—Dr. John Fleming, professor of natural science, Aberdeen; Dr. John Reid, professor of anatomy, St. Andrews, and Sir James Young Simpson burt. M.D. the discoverer, in 1847, of the anaesthetical properties of chloroform; he was born here 7th June, 1811, and died at Edinburgh 6th May, 1870. Boghead is the residence of Alexander W. Robertson Durham esq. The principal landowners are the Marquess of Linlithgow; the Governors of Daniel Stewart's Hospital, Edinburgh; Alexander W. R. Durham esq.; the trustees of the late Sir William Baillie bart. of Polkemmet (d. 1890); Maj. James Henry Cowan; George Readman esq. and Alexander Russell esq. of Moss Side. The land is fairly productive, while the surface is largely undulating. The parish of Bathgate has an area of 10,887 acres, of the burgh 401 acres; the rateable value of the parish (excluding railways) is £77,747; of that sum £26,526 represents the annual rateable value of the burgh of Bathgate, and £9,842 that of the burgh of Armadale. The population in 1901 was, parish police burgh, 6,786; beyond police burgh, 763; landward, 2,534; total, 14,004; ecclesiastical parish, 9,371.

At TIPPETHILL, near Armadale, in this parish is the Southern District Combination Hospital, erected in 1901 at a cost of £7,900.

BRIDGEND is an extension of the burgh of Bathgate. The population in 1901 was 523.

WOODEND, a small colliery village, ¾ miles distant, in Torphichen civil parish. The population in 1901 was 341.

DURHAMTOWN is also a mining village in this parish. The population in 1901 was 403.

BLACKBURN is a small village, on the river Almond and the road from Bathgate to West Calder, in the parishes of Livingstone and Whitburn, and is 1½ miles east from East Whitburn station on the Morning-side section of the North-British system, and 3 south from Bathgate. Adjacent to the village are leek stone-quarries, the stone from which is specially used in the construction of ovens, being capable of bearing any amount of heat, but it is unsuitable for building purposes. There are an Established chapel of ease and United Free church, erected in 1907. The population in 1901 was 879.

BLACKNESS is a small village on the coast, in the ecclesiastical parish of Carriden, and on the Firth of Forth, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles east-south-east of Borrowstounness, 4 north-east of Linlithgow, $5\frac{1}{2}$ west-north-west of South Queensferry, and 4 from Linlithgow station on the North British and Caledonian railways. There is a pier here for landing goods from small vessels. The nearest place of worship is at Carriden, 3 miles distant. Blackness Castle, situated on the banks of the Forth, close to the village, was during the reign of James VI. the principal state prison in Scotland, and as such received within its gloomy walls many distinguished persons; one of the most remarkable of its prisoners was James (Stewart) 4th Lord Ochiltree, who, for accusing the Marquis of Hamilton of aspiring to the Scottish crown, was here confined from 1631 for upwards of twenty years, during nearly the whole reign of Charles I. The fortress was subsequently converted into barracks, and has since been altered, repaired and fitted up as a powder magazine or depot, with barracks attached for a military guard in charge of the magazine, stores and premises.

BO'NESS AND CARRIDEN

BORROWSTOUNNESS (or, as it is now generally pronounced, Bo'ness) is a parish seaport town and police burgh, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Linlithgow. By a Local Government Board Order, dated 8th February, 1895, under section 51 of the Local Government (Scotland) Acts of 1893 and 1894, and which came into operation 15th May, 1895, the parish is now, for civil purposes, united to the parish of Carriden and also includes the villages of Borrowstounness and Newtown. The burgh has also been extended from the same date and now includes on the east side the suburban villages of Grangepans, Cowdenhill and Bridgeness, and on the west side the mining village of Kinnell. The town is built on low ground on the south shore of the Firth of Forth and is 18 miles west from Edinburgh, 9 west from South Queensferry, $3\frac{1}{2}$ north from Linlithgow and 8 east-by-north from Falkirk, and has a terminal station on the Monkland section of the North British railway. A tract of flat but rich alluvial land called the "Carse of Kinnell" lies to the north-west, and the beach from thence eastward is low ground lying between a high bank landward, and a great expanse of muddy silt extending at ebb tide to the sea; all the rest of the parish declines gradually from Erngath Hill to the west and north. The soil is deep loam and is well cultivated. The town consists principally of two streets, running eastward and terminating in one of nearly the same length, and the greater portion of the houses appear to be of ancient date. In 1907 a large area was cleared in the centre of the town and two new streets laid out, at a cost of £6,000. The town is lighted with gas and by electricity, and governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. Between 1750 and 1780 Bo'ness was one of the most thriving towns on the east coast, and ranked as the third port in Scotland, but on the construction of the Forth and Clyde canal, Grangemouth, at the east end of the canal, became the chief seat of commerce, and in 1810 was erected into a separate port, with a custom house. In 1878, under the provisions of an Act of Parliament, the Harbour Commissioners here began the construction of a new pier, and wet docks, $\frac{7}{8}$ acres in extent, finished towards the end of 1881, at a cost of £200,000. The quays have also been rebuilt and the area extended from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ acres, and the depth of water largely increased. The extent of the quayage in the dock is 2,400 feet, and in the harbour 1,900 feet. The harbour has a depth of water on the sill of 22 feet at spring tides and 18 feet at neaps, from which 2 feet has to be deducted for silt in the channel. The dock and attached works are of the most substantial character, and have been furnished throughout with hydraulic machinery of the latest description, and the lines of railways on the quays are in direct communication with the North British Railway Company's system, thus affording access to and from all parts of the United Kingdom. The hydraulic appliances consist of three coal-shipping hoists, each capable of shipping 2,000 tons of coal per day of 24 hours, or 6,000 tons by all the hoists, six portable cranes, each capable of lifting two tons, three of which can at one time be applied to the discharge of the same vessel, capstans for hauling ships into and out of the dock, and wagon capstans for working the movable traffic on the quays of the dock &c. Large sheds, in which are fitted hydraulic cranes for lifting goods, are also provided for the storage of cargoes. The trade of the town and port consists chiefly in the importation of timber, pitwood for mining purposes, asphalt, grass, man, iron ore, phosphate &c., and the exporting of coal, iron and general goods. Steamers run direct once a week between Bo'ness and London, and ample stanchage for coal wagons, worked by self-acting gradients, has been provided to facilitate in every possible way the quick shipment of cargo and bunker coal at the hoists. The total value of the imports in 1910 was £310,446, and of the exports in 1909, £342,049; total amount of coal dealt with at the docks in 1910 was 880,297 tons. The amount of customs revenue received in 1910 was £3,603. The number of vessels that entered the port in the general coasting trade in 1910 was 493, tonnage 142,999; cleared, 545, tonnage 160,487. In the foreign trade in 1910, 561 entered, tonnage 344,265, and 589, tonnage 329,784, cleared from the port. Amongst the chief industrial works of the burgh and district are three large collieries, freestone and whinstone quarries, an extensive distillery, earthenware manufactories, chemical manure works, ship breaking works and several iron foundries. The Established church, a good building with a tower and spire, was erected in 1835 at a cost of upwards of £1,000. St. Andrew's Free church, erected in 1906 at a cost of £6,000, is a building of stone, with tower, and will seat 600 persons; there is also a United Free church at Craigmailen, a Roman Catholic church in Stewart avenue, and a Scottish Coast Mission building in the Market square; the Episcopal Mission church of St. Catherine will seat 250 persons; the Ambulance, net value £130, has been held since 1903 by the Rev. Lawrence Sholto Campbell-Colquhoun. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Bank of Scotland. A Public Library was opened in 1905 at the Town hall. The Bo'ness Academy, opened in 1905, is a good building of stone, and is available for over 250 pupils. The "Bo'ness Journal" is published here every Friday, price 1d. Kinnell House, the property of the Duke of Hamilton, who is superior of the burgh and parish, is now (1911) unoccupied. Here the celebrated James Watt realised some of his earliest improvements in the steam engine. The Roman wall of Antoninus, commonly called "Graham's or Grim's Dyke," but chiefly constructed by the Pro-praetor Lollius Urbicus, A.D. 139-40, passes through the parish; and within a short distance of the town on the south-east, the traces of a Roman camp are still visible.

CARRIDEN, now a joint parish with Borrowstounness for civil purposes, adjoins it on the east, and is 7 miles west from South Queensferry and 4 north from Linlithgow, on the south bank of the Firth of Forth. The nearest railway station is at Borrowstounness. Here is an Established church. The soil is light and produces plentiful crops; the surface of the land is very unequal, rising rapidly from the shore and declining again to the south; it comprises part of the Erngath or Glower-overern hills, and has there an extreme altitude of 519 feet above the sea level; the land is entirely arable and enclosed. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. the Marquess of BRIDGEND, see BATHGATE.

BRIDGENESS, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

BROXBURN is a small town in the parish of Uphall, and in the small debts court district of Linlithgow; the town stands on the Brox brook, a tributary of the Almond, and the road from Bathgate to Edinburgh, and is 1 mile north from Drumshoreland station on the North British railway, 11 west from Edinburgh, 7 east from Bathgate and 7 south-east from Linlithgow. The town consists principally of one long street running east and west, and its western extremity is crossed by the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal. There is an Established church, two United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Public Hall was erected, together with billiard and reading rooms, in 1873, at a cost of £1,300, and will seat 500 persons. There is a branch here of the British Linen Bank. In the neighbourhood are the works of the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited, which afford employment to the greater part of the inhabitants. The population in 1901 was 7,099; in 1910 was 9,000; rateable value, £4,799.

CROFTHEAD, see WHITBURN.

DALMENY is a parish and small village; the parish consists of a landward portion and a burghal portion, the latter embracing the burgh of Queensferry, which see. Its length from east to west is about 6½ miles, and its breadth 3½ miles, and is on the shore of the Firth of Forth. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 9 and 123, that part of Cramond in this county has been added to Dalmeny. By the same act part of Dalmeny was annexed to Ecclesmachan and part transferred to Kirkliston parish. The village has a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and is about a mile from Queensferry and about 9 west from Linlithgow. This place gives the title of baron to the Primrose family, Earls of Rosebery. The parish church is an ancient structure, built probably about 1154, in the late Norman style; before the Reformation the patronage belonged to the Abbot and Convent of Jedburgh, but from 1545 it was attached to the barony of Barcoughle, and since 1712 the rights has been exercised by the Earls of Rosebery. A cemetery was provided by the parish council in 1898 for this place and South Queensferry, at a cost of £2,000. Nearly the whole of the parish is well cultivated and enclosed, and contains several mansions, amongst which are Dalmeny House, the seat of the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C., F.R.S., F.B.A., F.S.A. lord lieutenant of the county; it is surrounded by an extensive and beautiful park. The Earl of Rosebery, J. C. Hope-Veré esq. of Blackwood, Lesmahagow, John Stewart-Clark esq. J.P. of Dundas Castle, South Queensferry, and the Marquess of Linlithgow are the principal landowners. It has an area of 5,864 acres, as altered under the Secretary of Scotland's Order; the population in 1901 was 4,080, of which 1,850 were in Queensferry and 707 on ships of the Royal Navy (now removed); rateable value in 1910, excluding Queensferry, £51,763. The population of Dalmeny ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,179. The small hamlet of Craigie is in the parish.

DURHAMTOWN, see BATHGATE.

ECCLESMACHAN is a village, about 1½ miles north from Uphall station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway, and 5 miles south-east from Linlithgow. The parish, which is in the small debts court district of Linlithgow, is 4 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and is watered by the Brox and Buxen brooks, tributaries of the Almond. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 108 and 122, portions of Dalmeny and Linlithgow parishes have been added to Ecclesmachan. There is an Established church, and at Bangour is a lunatic asylum, built in 1903, for patients from Edinburgh. Robert Liston F.R.S. the eminent surgeon, was born here 28 Oct. 1794, his father then being parish minister; he died 7 Dec. 1847. Near the church is a weak sulphureous spring, called the "Bunion Well." The Marquess of Linlithgow, the trustees of the late Peter Thomson esq. of Binoy, the trustees of the late William Thomson, of Craighinning, and the Edinburgh Parish Council, are the principal landowners. The surface of the soil is flat and sandy. The land is under tillage, with a fair sprinkling of wood. Freestone and sandstone are plentiful in the parish. The area of the parish is 4,066 acres; rateable value, £16,318 6s. 5d.; population in 1901, 681 civil and 489 ecclesiastical. There is no post office in the village, but a post messenger calls at 7 a.m. & clears letter box at 7.30 a.m. Letters should be addressed Uphall, Linlithgowshire Post, T. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Burnside; Mrs. Jane Lockhart, sub-postmistress. Letters through Linlithgow at 8.45 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; letter box cleared at 9 a.m. & 6.45 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. Philipstoun, 1½ miles distant, is the nearest money order office

KINGSCAVIL is a small village, in the parish of Linlithgow, on the road from this place to Edinburgh, and in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, 15 miles west from Edinburgh, 10 east from Falkirk, and about 1½ miles east from Linlithgow station on the North British railway. The district is celebrated for the shale, from which oil and other products are extracted, and there are mineral oil works, which give employment to many of the inhabitants. The Established Mission church of St. Michael, erected in 1903, is a small edifice of stone, and will seat about 180 persons. Rateable value, £361; population in 1901, 629.

KINNEIL, see BORROWSTOUNNESS.

KIRKLISTON is a parish and village, partly in Edinburghshire, but chiefly in Linlithgowshire, and in Linlithgow poor combination; the village, anciently called Temple-Liston, from the fact that the Knights-Templars formerly had an establishment here, is situated on the left bank of the Almond, on the road from Edinburgh to Falkirk, and has a station on the Edinburgh, Rotho, and Dalmeny branch of the North British railway, 8 miles west from Edinburgh. The Niddry burn, in the northern part, and Brox brook in the southern part of the parish, both tributaries of the Almond, join that river in this parish. The village is well built, the principal industry being shale mining, but there is also a large distillery. The land is generally rich, well cultivated, and produces excellent crops. Here a former Lord Stair first introduced the culture of cabbage in the open fields. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders 83 and 122, a part of Dalmeny parish was added to Kirkliston. The parish church is an ancient structure, originally erected in the Norman period, and retains a fine doorway in that style; within the church is the mortuary vault of the noble family of Dalrymple, Viscounts and Earls of Stair, and here was buried Elizabeth (Dundas), wife of John, 1st Earl of Stair, and the "Lady Ashton" of Sir Walter Scott's "Bride of Lammermoor." The church affords 700 sittings; there is also a United Free church. The "Catstane," a remarkable monument of antiquity, within a field which stands on Westriggs farm, on the east bank of the river Almond, rises 4½ feet above the ground, and is about 11½ feet in circumference; it bears a much worn inscription as yet undeciphered. Newliston, now the seat of Stewart Bayley Hog esq. J.P. was once the property and favourite residence of the distinguished soldier, Field-Marshal John, 2nd Earl of Stair K.T. who fought at Oudenarde and Dettingen, but the estate was sold by John, the 6th Earl, who died in 1789; the mansion was built in 1794 from the designs of William Adam, and the plantations in its grounds are said to have been arranged so as to represent the disposition of the British army on the eve of the battle of Dettingen, fought 16 June, 1743. Carlourie is the residence of Mrs. Hutchison, and Newliston of Stewart Bayley Hog esq. J.P. The Marquess of Linlithgow, Mrs. Steel-Maitland, of Sauchieburn, Stewart Bayley Hog esq. J.P. and John Stewart-Clark esq. of Dundas Castle, South Queensferry, are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 8,010 acres; rateable value in 1906, including mineral and railways, £49,557; population in 1901, 3,904 civil, 3,874 ecclesiastical and village, 1,023.

NIDDRY is a hamlet in this parish, half a mile from Winchburgh, on the road to Kirkliston. Letters received through Winchburgh. This place, since 1814, has given the title of baron to the Hope family, Earls of Hopetoun. Population in 1901, 637.

LINLITHGOW (popularly called Lithgow) is a county town, a parish, royal burgh, and the head of a poor combination, small debts court district and presbytery, on the northern border of the county. The parish is bounded on the west by the river Avon, which separates it from Stirling-shire, and falls into the Firth of Forth near Borrowstounness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order 108, a portion of Linlithgow parish has been annexed to that of Ecclesmachan. The town, situated on the banks of a fine pool, or "lhan," from which in part it derives its name, consists chiefly of a single street which runs east and west along the south edge of the loch, and is nearly a mile in length. It has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and is 16 miles west from Edinburgh, 31 east-by-north from Glasgow, 8 east from Falkirk and 3½ south from Bo'ness. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, three magistrates, or bailies, and nine councillors, and together with Lanark, Hamilton, Airdrie and Falkirk it forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. This town has, since 1902, afforded the title of Marquess to the Hope family, Earls of Hopetoun. The Union (Edinburgh and Glasgow) canal, which terminates at Falkirk, where it is joined by the Forth and Clyde Navigation, completed in 1790, passes through the town and parish, and is carried across the Avon on a fine aqueduct of twelve arches. The local industries comprise paper and glue making, tanning, currying and boot making. Messrs. T. Nimmo and Co. are glue and grease manufacturers. There is also close to the town a distillery and paper mills, belonging to Messrs. J. Lovell and Son. In the vicinity are several stone quarries, and within 3 miles there are large shale mines, and works for the extraction of mineral oil and other products. The Town House, an elegant structure, erected in 1688, was partially destroyed by fire in 1847, but immediately repaired; it contains a council chamber and burgh court room, and a large hall, which is used for public meetings. To the north of this stands the County Hall, a handsome and convenient building, in which hang full-length portraits of General Sir John Hope K.C.B., 1st Baron Niddry, and subsequently 4th Earl of Hopetoun (d. 27th August, 1823), of his brother General Sir Alexander Hope G.C.B., M.P. (d. 19th May, 1837), of John Alexander, late Earl of Rosebery (d. 2nd April, 1873), and of John Adrian Louis, 1st Marquess of Linlithgow K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O. The Court House, on the south side of the street, contains offices for the sheriff, sheriff's clerk, procurator fiscal and chief constable, besides a spacious court room, small court room, witness and jury rooms, and a hall for the procurators of the court. A court is held every Tuesday for criminal cases, and on Friday for civil and small debts cases. The Victoria Hall, in High street, the foundation stone of which was laid, with masonic honours, December 31st, 1887, is a building in the Scottish baronial style, and was erected at a total cost of about £1,000, and comprises a hall seating about 800 persons and various rooms. The Masonic Temple, erected in 1907, at the cost of about £1,000, is of red brick and stone, and will seat 150 persons. The Hospital for Infectious Diseases, erected in 1905, is a plain structure of brick with stone dressings, and affords 24 beds. The Post office, in High street, erected in 1904, is a building of stone. The Combination Poor House at St. Magdalene's, standing on rising ground, about a quarter of a mile from the town, was erected in 1854, at a cost of £9,000. The Cross Well, immediately opposite to the Town House, is a fountain, completed 4th of June, 1807, in imitation of the ancient Cross Well. It is hexagonal in form, on a graduated base, the water descending from the top, which is surmounted by a unicorn holding a shield. The stream falls into a basin, from whence it is apouted into a larger one through the mouths of six grotesque figures, whence it again issues through the jaws of other heads into the lower basin, which is surrounded by statues. The work is said to have been entirely executed by Robert Grey, a one-handed stonemason, and there is an inscription on one side. In the town are several other fountains of similar design.

The church of St. Michael standing close to the south front of the palace, and occupying part of its outer courtyard, is an edifice in the Gothic style, consisting of apsidal choir, nave, transept, continuous aisles, vestries and a massive square western tower, which till the beginning of the present century was surmounted by a crown, something in the style of St. Giles's, Edinburgh; it has now a heavy parapet and pinnacles, and contains a fine peal of bells, one of which, re-cast in 1468, is named "Meg Duncan." In 1812 the interior was divided by a partition reaching across the nave at its junction with the transept, and had galleries in the chancel; the whole has now been removed, and a vestry built on the north side of the chancel, at a cost of from £1,000 to £5,000, towards which the Baird Trust made a grant of £1,000, and the late Capt. Urquhart, of Vellore, Linlithgow, bequeathed a legacy of £500. The central window of the apse is filled with stained glass as a memorial to the late Sir Charles Wyville Thomson kt. LL.D., F.R.S. director in 1872-6 of the Challenger Deep Sea Dredging Expedition, who died at Bonyade, 10th March, 1882; there is another memorial window to the late Mr. Robert R. Glen, formerly town clerk, and to his sister, and others have also been added to Adam Dawson esq. Mr. J. Miller Richard, of Clarendon, Mr. John Ferguson, and Esther Ferguson, daughter of the present minister. The font, presented in 1896 by the late Mr. William Gilkison, banker, of Linlithgow, and designed by Mr. John Honeyman, architect, of Glasgow, is of stone and consists of an octagonal panelled basin, ornamented with quatrefoils on a pedestal relieved with niches and crocketed pinnacles, the whole standing on a wide octagonal base of one step. The south end of the transept (called St. Catherine's aisle) is the spot where the Scotch nobles are said to have attempted, by means of a spectral apparition, to terrify James IV. from persisting in his invasion of England in 1513, an expedition which ended in his defeat and death at Flodden Field, September 9th in that year. In the vestry some interesting relics of the church are still preserved. There are also four United Free churches, an Evangelical Union chapel, a Roman Catholic church, and several Mission halls. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The weekly market for grain on Friday has been practically extinguished since the establishment of a weekly auction mart on Mondays. Fairs are held on the Friday after the second Tuesday in January, February 25th, the third Friday in April, the second Tuesday in June, Aug. 2nd, and the first Friday in Nov.

Linlithgow is the head quarters of the 10th (Cyclist) Territorial Force Battalion the Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment) and of A Co. of the corps.

The Royal palace of Linlithgow, now only a majestic ruin, stands, together with the church of St. Michael, on a terraced promontory jutting out into the linn, and occupies the site of an earlier structure, demolished by order of Robert the Bruce, but rebuilt by Edward I. and in the new fortress, Robert II. was elected King of Scotland in 1371; of this building three round towers on the east side still exist, and have been used as abutments for supporting the massive east wall of the palace. In 1410 the palace and castle were seriously damaged by fire, but were again rebuilt or repaired, and here, 10th April, 1512, James V. is said to have been born; his daughter Mary, afterwards Queen of Scots, was also born in the palace, 8th December, 1542, in a room on the west side. The palace, as now standing, is a quadrangular building, enclosing a spacious open courtyard, about 90 feet square, with a turret staircase at each angle; the latest portion is the north side, erected by James VI. (James I. of England) about 1618, after his visit in the previous year; the original entrance was on the east side, but the palace is now approached through a turreted gatehouse adjoining the western tower of St. Michael's church, and opening to the spacious outer courtyard on the south side of the palace, which is entered by a porch, and includes a hall, chapel and ante-rooms; the great hall, on the east side, is about 100 feet long and 25 feet wide; on the west side is Queen Mary's room, and another apartment at the north-west angle is called by the name of James III. who is said to have taken refuge here during the civil disturbances of his reign. The final ruin of the palace was accomplished by the droopings of General Henry Hawley, who were quartered here during the rebellion of 1745; in spite of the remonstrances of the custodians of the palace, the soldiery persisted in maintaining enormous fires, and on the night of 31st January, 1746, a conflagration broke out which destroyed everything save the walls. In the centre of the palace quadrangle are the shattered remains of a beautiful fountain, exquisitely and elaborately carved by Italian artists, brought over by one of the Stuarts. A restored facsimile of this fountain made under the direction of the late Mr. Matheson, now adorns the west front of Holyrood House. The fountain was supplied with water from the estate of Preston, about a mile distant, and the pipes leading to it have been discovered on the Carmelite Friars' lands on the south side of the town. Sir Walter Scott, in "Marmion," has vividly depicted the bustle and gaiety of the court when at Linlithgow. A miniature jewelled spinning wheel, formerly belonging to Mary of Lorraine, Queen of James V. and brought with other articles from the palace, is now the property of W. Murray Threipland esq. Her late Majesty Queen Victoria paid a visit to the palace in 1842. Among the ancient dwellings in the town a particular house used to be pointed out to strangers as the place from whence James Hamilton, of Bothwellhaugh, shot the Regent Murray (23rd January, 1570). A bronze tablet, with the effigy of the regent, has been inserted in the wall of the county-court room to denote the spot where the house stood. The St. Andrew badge of the Order of the Thisle, wrought in gold and enamel, and worn by the regent at the time of his assassination, now belongs to the Earl of Galloway. On the north side of the railway, a little to the west of the station, there stood an old house which formed part of a preceptory of the Knight Templars of Torphichen, and was used in the reign of James VI. as the Scottish mint, but was pulled down in 1886. The New Grange is the seat of H. M. Cadell esq. J.P., V.D. and Preston House of Seton Thomson esq. Champfleurie is now occupied by Hugh Taylor Brown esq. The Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C., L.L. the Marquess of Linlithgow, the Duke of Hamilton, the trustees of the late Patrick Baron Seton esq. of Preston, Charles Chalmers esq. J.P. of Longcroft, and H. M. Cadell esq. J.P., V.D. are the principal landowners. The soil in the south and south-east is a pretty strong clay, stiff and upon a retentive subsoil more suited to pasturage than to the plough, and in all other parts is generally light and free, easily cultivated and rich in its returns. The area of the parish is 10,264 acres: burgh, 286 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £17,293, and landwards, £20,206; the population of the whole of the civil parish in 1901 was 8,076, of which the royal and parliamentary burgh contained 4,279. Included in the total population are 11 officials and 182 inmates of the Combination Poorhouse. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 8,232.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 614.

LOCH MILL is a siding and goods station of the railway about one half mile distant from Linlithgow.

BRIDGEND, a small village on the Edinburgh road, 3 miles east from Linlithgow, consists mainly of the cottages of the working miners at the shale works adjacent. Rateable value, £383; the population in 1901 was 523.

J. LINLITHGOW-BRIDGE is a small village, partly in the parish of Muiravonside, Stirlingshire, but chiefly in the parish of Linlithgow, and in the small debt court district of Linlithgow; it stands at both ends of the bridge over the river Avon, on the road from Linlithgow to Falkirk, about 1½ miles west from Linlithgow station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, 7 east from Falkirk and 18 west from Edinburgh. The general appearance of the country around is undulating, diversified by small summits of hill and woods. The stone bridge over the river Avon was built about 1650, by George (Livingston), 9th Lord Livingston and 3rd Earl of Linlithgow (d. 1 Feb. 1690). A little above it is the viaduct of the Edinburgh and Glasgow railway over the Avon, with 20 arches of beautiful masonry, some of them upwards of 90 feet high. The nearest place of worship is at Linlithgow. The rateable value is £1,343; the population in 1901 was 688, of which 126 are in Stirlingshire.

Post Office; Mrs. Mary Meldrum, sub-postmistress. Delivery by postman from Linlithgow: dispatches, 10.30 a.m. & 1.15 & 7.30 p.m. Linlithgow, about 1 mile distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

LIVINGSTONE is a parish and small village with a station on the Edinburgh and Bathgate section of the North British railway; the parish, which extends for about 4 miles on the north side of the Breech water, is in the small debt court district of Bathgate. The village is 4 miles south-east from Bathgate and about 8 south from Linlithgow, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh. The parish church was rebuilt in 1732, and repaired in 1837. Here is also a United Free church. The soil varies from strong clay and loam to poor moor land. The shale oil works of the Pumpherton Oil Co. Limited are in this parish; and there are likewise the ruins of an old Peel tower and a royal hunting lodge. Dechmont House, the residence of A. J. Meldrum esq. adjoins the hamlet of Dechmont, 5 miles south of Linlithgow, on the Edinburgh road. The

QUEENSFERRY is a seaport town on the Firth of Forth, wholly in the parish of Dalmeny, under Secretary of Scotland's Order, small debt court district of Linlithgow and poor combination of the same, and is 8 miles west from Edinburgh and 8 east from Bo'ness; it is sometimes styled South Queensferry, to distinguish it from the town of same name on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, and took its name from the use made of the ferry by Margaret, the queen of Malcolm Canmore, in her journeys to and from Dunfermline. Queensferry ecclesiastical parish, which is very small, faces the Forth, and is bounded on three sides by that of Dalmeny. As a royal burgh, Queensferry is governed by a provost, two bailies, and a town council. This burgh, together with Stirling, Culross, Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, forms the Stirling parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The water supply is now obtained from Mid-Calder. There is a good harbour accessible at any time, and about half a mile distant is Dalmeny station, on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. At Newhalls (a little to the eastward of the town), is a ferry across the Forth, and a pier. A short distance westward is another pier for the convenience of boats when they cannot make the former point. At this place the Firth is contracted to a gut of two miles in width; in the middle of the strait lies a small rocky island called Inchgarvie, and on a height above the town stands

Dundas Castle, with a modern house adjoining and bearing the same name, the seat of John Stewart-Clark esq. The Established church was consecrated in 1633; there are also United Presbyterian and Roman Catholic churches. At the west end of the town are the ruins of the Carmelite priory of St. Mary, dating from 1330; the tower and part of the choir have been restored by the Dundas family, and are used by the Episcopal church; the Rev. Frederick Smith has been priest in charge since 1901. The cemetery is in Dalmeny parish. About half a mile to the westward is Port Edgar, so named from Prince Edgar having landed there. From this place George IV. when on a visit to Scotland, embarked on his return to England. The old Town house has a good steeple, in which a clock was erected, by public subscription, at a cost of over £200, in commemoration of Queen Victoria's Jubilee of 1887. The Countess of Rosebery Memorial Hall, erected in 1893, by the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T. at a cost of over £3,000, contains a library and reading room, billiard and games rooms, and also a grand hall for concerts and public meetings.

The Forth Bridge.—The channel of the Forth here is contracted by the promontory of North Queensferry to a width of a little over a mile. Including the north and south approaches, the structure is rather over 1½ miles in length and runs nearly north and south from the west end of Dalmeny Park to Carlin Knowes, Fifeshire. The spans are 26 in number, of which two are of 1,710 feet, two of 680 feet, 15 of 168 feet, four of 57 feet and three of 25 feet. The south approach, 1,994 feet in length, consists of four stone arches, 57 feet span, 10 spans of 168 feet each, carrying an iron lattice girder bridge, succeeded by a half span (cantilever) of 680 feet, two cantilever spans of 1,710 feet each, then a half span and five lattice girder spans, succeeded by three arches of granite, each 25 feet span; these last eight spans form the north approach, 980 feet in length; the portion crossing the deep water channel is 5,322 feet in length and is formed by three double cantilevers, each resting on four masonry piers, 49 feet in diameter, rising 18 feet above high water, the centre of each cantilever being 361 feet above high water. There is a double set of steel rails laid in steel troughs; the total weight of steel used was 54,076 tons. The engineers were the late Sir John Fowler bart. (d. 1898) and the late Sir Benjamin Baker, and the resident engineer, Mr. F. E. Cooper, the contractors being Messrs. Tancred Arrol and Co.

Public Baths (fresh and salt water) were erected by the Burgh of Queensferry in 1898, at a cost of £3,500. A fair is held on the second Friday in August. The area of the Police Burgh is 88 acres; rateable value in 1910, £11,619; the population in 1901 was 880 in the royal burgh and ecclesiastical parish, and 1,850 in the police burgh.

SEAFIELD, see LIVINGSTONE.

TORPICHEN is a parish and village; the former being in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, and bounded north and east by the parish of Linlithgow, south-east by Bathgate, and west and south by the county of Stirling; the village lies 2 miles west from Westfield station on the Blackstone and Bathgate branch of the North British railway and on the road to Linlithgow, from which town it is ½ miles distant. Adjacent to the village, on the north-east, are some remains of the hospital or preceptory of Torphichen, the principal house in Scotland appertaining to the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. This place gives the title of baron to the Sandilands family; Sir James Sandilands, the first peer (1564) was prior or preceptor here of the Knights of St. John. The parish church occupies the site of the nave of the preceptory church, and the ruins of the transept and a portion of the choir remain. There is also a United Free church. The Memorial Hall, erected in 1897 by Mrs. Fitzgerald, in memory of her husband, Capt. Gerald Fitzgerald, at a cost of about £1,400, contains reading and billiard rooms. The parish, although in some parts moorland, is generally fertile; coal and ironstone are found within it, and there is a paper mill. The Coltness Iron Co. Capt. Thomas Hope J.P. of Bridge Castle, James Wood esq. of Wallhouse, and Mrs. M. H. Bentley, of Lothcote House, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,937 acres; rateable value, £22,756 17s. 7d.; population in 1901, 3,225, viz.:—the village 530, ecclesiastical parish 1,413.

BLACERIDGE is a small hamlet in this parish, and an agricultural district on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, three quarters of a mile north-west from Westcraigs station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway and 5½ west from Bathgate. Here is a United Free church. Several coal fields in the vicinity afford employment to the inhabitants. The population in 1901 was 797.

WESTCRAIGS is a small hamlet in this parish, on the road from Bathgate to Airdrie, with a station (locally in Lanarkshire) on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway.

WESTFIELD, now a hamlet in this parish, is about 2 miles from Torphichen.

UPHALL is a parish and village; the former, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, is bounded by Kirkliston on the north-east and east, by Mid-Caldor on the south, Livingstone on the west, and Linlithgow and Ecclesmachan on the north. It is intersected from west to east by the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and is watered by a rivulet called Broxburn; its extent from north to south is 4 miles, with a breadth of 3 miles. Besides the village of Uphall, it contains the small town of Broxburn. Uphall is 1 mile north of the station of that name on the main line of the North British railway, and 1 mile south of Broxburn is Drumshoerland station, on the same line; the village is distant 11 miles west from Edinburgh and 5½ north-east from Bathgate. In the Buchan vault of the parish church are buried the Hon. Henry Erskine, 2nd son of the 10th Earl of Buchan, lord advocate of Scotland, who died 8 Oct. 1817, and his brother Thomas, 3rd son of the 10th Earl, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, created Baron Erskine, 1806, and died in 1823. There is also a United Free church and a Public hall, Shale, which is now so largely used in the manufacture of paraffin oil, of which there are three extensive works in the locality, is found in abundance in the neighbourhood, and is said to be of a very rich quality; owing to this important industry, there has been a great increase in the population within the past few years; bone manures are also manufactured in the parish. The district abounds in coal, sandstone, limestone and ironstone. In this parish is Almondell House, the property of the Earl of Buchan, and occupied by Adam Rolland esq. Houstoun House, the property of John Campbell Shairp esq. J.P. is the residence of Capt. Edward A. R. Clive. Middleton Hall and estate have been bought by the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited. The Earl of Buchan, the trustees of the late Robert Bell esq. J. C. Shairp esq. J.P. and the Broxburn Oil Co. Limited are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,561 acres; rateable value, £80,823 15s. 4d.; population in 1901 was 10,536, of which 1,840 are in the village.

LOWER UPHALL is a village; the population in 1901 was 1,144.

WHITBURN (or Whiteburn) is a police burgh and parish in the Linlithgow poor combination and small debt court district, bounded on the south-east by the Breich water, which separates it from Edinburghshire, and on the north by the river Almond. The Cultrig and Bickerton brooks, tributaries of the Almond, both rise in the south-west portion of the parish. The village is on the road from Edinburgh to Glasgow, 1 mile west from East Whitburn station on the Bathgate and Morningside branch of the North British railway, 4 south-west from Bathgate and 10 south from Linlithgow. Bents station, also on the Bathgate and Morningside branch is in this parish, 5 miles south from Bathgate. The village is well built and regular. The inhabitants are supported by the coal and iron mines with which the parish abounds. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Baillie Institute, opened in 1897, was the gift of Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet. The schools were built by the trustees of the late Mr. Wilson, under a bequest made by him for the purpose. These schools have since been purchased by the school board, and the trustees now devote the endowments for the purpose of encouraging higher education, by means of scholarships and bursaries. Professor John Brown D.D. the well-known biblical expositor, was born here 12 July, 1784. Isabel, Lady Baillie, of Polkemmet, the trustees of the late John Storry and John Waddell esq. are the principal landowners. The soil varies considerably. In the upper portion of the parish there is much moss and pasture land; in the lower, the surface is arable.

FAULHOUSE, formerly called Crofthead, is a large mining village in the parish of Whitburn, with a station, about 1 mile east-by-north, on the Morningside section of the North British line, and about 6 south from Bathgate.

LONGRIDGE is a small village in the parish of Whitburn, $1\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Breich station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway, and about 6 south from Bathgate. Here is a United Free church.

EAST WHITBURN is a village; the population in 1901 was 373.

EAST BENHAR is a village in Whitburn parish; the population in 1901 was 573.

STONEBURY COLLIERY is also a village in the parish; the population in 1901 was 573.

The area of the parish comprises 9,782 acres and the burgh, 454 acres; rateable value, £36,721; population in 1901, 6,835, viz.: police burgh, 1,442; Faulhouse (including Crofthead), 2,826; landward, 2,567.

WINCHBURGH is a small village in the parish of Kirkliston, in the small debt court district of Linlithgow, with a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway, and on the bank of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Union canal, 11 miles west of Edinburgh and 6 east of Linlithgow; it has an Established mission church under Kirkliston. The Oakbank Oil Works Limited have extensive premises here, erected in 1901, which afford employment to a considerable number of hands. The inhabitants are also employed in the large shale works and brick and tile works in the parish. Niddry is a hamlet in Kirkliston parish, and half a mile from Winchburgh, which is its postal district. The surrounding country is rolling and wooded, the soil being heavy, with a subsoil of clay, and growing fair crops of wheat, barley, oats and turnips, with a considerable acreage of pasture. The rateable value of the village is £2,734 10s.; population in 1901, 426.

THE LOTHIANS

LOTHIAN was in ancient times a district of the kingdom of Northumbria, and is now represented by the counties of Linlithgow (West Lothian), Edinburghshire (Mid-Lothian) and Haddingtonshire (East Lothian). Mid-Lothian is popularly used for Parliamentary purposes as a synonym for Edinburghshire.

MORAY

THIS was formerly a large district in the north-east of the kingdom, lying south from Moray Firth and east of the Great Glen, and included the present counties of Elgin and Nairn together with a large portion of Inverness and most of Banff. It is now sometimes used as an alternative name for Elgin. The ancient earldom of Moray said to have been held by Beth and Angus in the 12th century, was first regularly conferred about 1314 on Sir Thomas Randolph, who fought at Bannockburn, but this peerage became extinct on the death of John, third earl, in 1346. In 1359 the title was conferred by David II. on Henry (Plantagenet) Duke of Lancaster, but on his death in 1361 it reverted to the Crown. This title was subsequently held by the Dunbar, Stewart, and Gordon families, and in 1563 was revived by Queen Mary in favour of James Stewart, afterwards Regent of Scotland, and the title still continues in that family now called Stuart.

NAIRNSHIRE

THIS is a small maritime county in the northern part of Scotland, once forming a portion of the ancient province of Moray, and bounded on the north by the Moray Firth, on the east by the shire of Elgin, and on the south and west by the county of Inverness. It extends from the coast, on the north, to the small lake of Lochindorb (situate at its extreme southern apex) on the south, 20 miles; the breadth along the shore is about 10 miles, and its sides vary from 1 to 20 miles asunder. The shire comprises 161.6 square miles, or 103,429 acres of land and 816 of water. The population in 1891 was 9,155, and in 1901, 9,291, viz.: males, 4,415, and females, 4,876. In size this county ranks as the twenty-ninth, but as regards population it is, with one exception (Kinross), the smallest in Scotland.

Ancient History.—In this shire is Cawdor Castle, the seat of the Earls of Cawdor, erected in 1434, and in which it is stated Macheth, Thane of Cawdor, was murdered. In the roof of the highest part of the building is shown the apartment where Lord Lovat lay concealed from his enemies for some time after the battle of Culloden; upon the glass of the small window is rudely scratched the word "overcome," and the date 1665.

Soil, Produce &c.—The agricultural properties of Nairnshire assimilate closely with those of the county of Elgin. Exclusive of the hilly part of the district, it may be described as a narrow border of level ground, along the shore of the Firth, from 1 to nearly 6 miles in breadth—and here for the most part it is arable; but as the county recedes further from the coast, it becomes bleak and hilly; there are, however, no eminences of great altitude or note. The farms are usually small, and most frequently uninclosed. Sheep and black cattle are reared in considerable numbers, and chiefly fed on the natural pasture. From the "Agricultural Returns of Great Britain for 1910," the chief crops are shown as follows: Oats, 6,000 acres; barley or bere, 2,621; total of corn crops, 8,338 acres; turnips and swedes, 4,129 acres; potatoes, 337; total green crops, 5,514 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 1,853 acres; (not for hay), 7,701 acres; permanent pasture, 2,237 acres. Total area of land, 103,429 acres, of which 39,758 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing), and 13,335 woods and plantations. The live stock in 1910 was: Horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 1,050; unbroken horses, 326; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 1,967; other cattle, 4,063; ewes kept for breeding, 5,865; other sheep, one year and above, 7,323; under one year, 5,476; sows kept for breeding, 37; other pigs, 415.

The only minerals raised in 1909 were 200 tons of brick clay, 2,553 tons of igneous rocks and 3,520 tons of sandstone. The shire is entirely devoid of manufacture; but the fisheries—white, herring and salmon—are tolerably productive.

Rivers and Railways.—The county is crossed in its southern or hilly part by the river Findhora, which runs in a direction from south-west to north-east, through Elginshire to the Moray Firth; parallel with this rapid stream, about 8 or 9 miles to the west, courses the river Nairn, which also runs into the Moray Firth. Besides the rivers there are several small brooks and burnes, the banks of which are covered with woods and plantations; and there are some elegant seats scattered over the county. The only railway which passes through this county is the Highland railway, on which line Brodie and Nairn are stations. Small as this shire is, it possesses a distinct political and judicial establishment. It comprises four complete parishes, viz.: Ardcloch, Auldearn, Cawdor and Nairn, part of one parish (Croyand Dalcross), and contains one royal burgh, Nairn, which is the only town. This burgh, in conjunction with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres, sends one member to Parliament; and the county unites with Elginshire in returning another representative. The parliamentary constituencies (Elgin and Nairnshires) in 1911 numbered 5,931, inclusive of Nairnshire, 859.

ARDCLACH is a highland parish and village in the south-east of the county, bounded on the east by the county of Elgin, and is in general mountainous, covered with heath, and abounding in tracts of bleak and barren moss; the village is 6 miles west from Dava station on the Highland railway, and 6 south-east from Nairn, in Nairn poor combination and small debts court district, and is a very healthy and most pleasant resort in the summer; great improvements in agriculture have taken place, the effect of which is to increase every year the arable acreage of this parish. The river Fionhorn traverses the parish, and the scenery along its banks is of the most varied and interesting description. There is a considerable quantity of timber along the banks of the river, which in its course through the parish receives the Tomiachan, the Leonach and the Rhilean brooks. There are Established and United Free churches. Glenferness House is the seat of the Earl of Leven and Melville. The principal landowners are Capt. Ewen James Brodie J.P. of Lethen, the Earl of Leven and Melville, the Earl Cawdor D.L. and Lady Gordon-Cathcart, of Killochan Castle, Girvan. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary order No. 29, part of this parish has been transferred to Edinkillie parish in Elgin county. The area is 37,461 acres; rateable value, £5,880; population in 1901, 72.

AULDEARN (anciently called Erin) is a parish and village; the latter, a burgh of barony, is 2½ miles south-east from Nairn, with a station opened in 1895 on the Highland railway. It is in Nairn small debts court district and poor combination. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land, and the parish is bounded on the north-west by the Moray Firth, and the east by Elginshire. Here are Established and United Free churches, and the Dunbar Memorial Hall, erected at a cost of £800. In the immediate neighbourhood of the village is the scene of a victory gained by the Marquis of Montrose over the forces of the Covenanters in 1645. The principal landowners are Ewen James Brodie esq. of Lethen, Ian Ashley Moreton Brodie esq. D.S.O. of Brodie Castle, Lady Gordon-Cathcart, of Cluny, Sir Frederic George Dunbar bart. and Earl Cawdor. The area is 14,035 acres; rateable value, £9,867; the population in 1891 was 1,315 in the parish and 361 in the village, and in 1901, 1,292 in the parish and 313 in the village.

BELIVET, see ARDCLACH.

CAWDOR is a parish and village in the Nairn poor combination and small debts court district. The country around is hilly, with good agricultural land. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), boundary orders Nos. 49 and 133, the part of this parish formerly in Inverness-shire has been transferred to this county, and a part of Moy and Delarossie parish also added to the parish and a part of Cawdor added to Nairn. The village is 5 miles south-west of Nairn, the nearest railway station, on the Highland railway, and has Established, Free and United Free churches; and on the banks of the Cawdor burn is an excellent inn, frequented by tourists and families, who visit the spot to contemplate the scenery around and the towers of the ancient castle—the seat of the Thanes of Cawdor. The Castle, occupied in the shooting season by Earl Cawdor D.L. is an ancient and interesting structure; some of the apartments are hung with tapestry, and there are also vaulted chambers. From the summit of the castle one of the most extensive and lovely views in the county is afforded. This place, since 1796, has afforded the title of baron, and since 1827 that of Earl to the Campbell family, of Stackpole Court, Pemb. In the vicinity is one of the largest and oldest established distilleries in Scotland. Earl Cawdor and Hugh Francis Rose esq. D.L., J.P. of Holme Rose, Croy, Gollanfield, Inverness-shire, are the principal landowners. The area is 34,714 acres; rateable value, £7,706; population, 1901, 925.

NAIRN is a royal burgh of considerable antiquity, having been regalsied by William the Lion. It is the head of a poor combination and small debts court district, and has a station on the Highland railway, and is 185 miles north-north-west by rail from Edinburgh, 93½ north-west from Aberdeen, 128½ north by rail from Perth, 9½ south-west from Forres, and 15 north from Inverness. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part of the parish of Cawdor in this county has been added to this parish. It is supposed that the town derives its name from the river Nearn (amhuinn na'hearn), the alder river. The original charter of the burgh is not extant. It was granted by Alexander I. in the year 1100, and was renewed by King James VI. There is a harbour here with breakwater and pier. For a seaport town, Nairn enjoys certain advantages obtained from a fertile country, yielding various articles for exportation. The exports consist of timber, corn, potatoes, eggs, smoked haddocks, and herrings. The imports are groceries, hardware, lime, manure and coal. The white fishery is carried on successfully, and salmon fishing is also prosecuted. A sheriff court and a small debt court are held weekly. This burgh, together with Inverness, Fortrose and Forres, forms the Inverness parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The present parish church was erected in 1895 at the corner of Seabank road, on a site presented by the late Lieut.-Col. Clarke, of Achersaidh, from designs by Mr. John Starforth, architect, of 35 York place, Edinburgh, at a cost of £9,500; it is in the Early Gothic style, and consists of transepts, organ chamber, vestry and session house, with a large square tower and belfry, and contains 1,200 sittings. Adjoining is a hall for Sunday school purposes, holding 400 scholars. There are two New United Free churches, one of which, opened 1st January, 1882, is an edifice in the Early French Gothic style, and has a tower with spire containing a clock and bell; the church is seated for 1,200 persons; there are also Roman Catholic and Free and Congregational churches. The Episcopal church of St. Columba, built in 1857, has 214 sittings. There is an excellent museum, containing a valuable cabinet of minerals. The Public Hall, in the High street, erected at a cost of about £1,800, will hold 600 persons, and is much used for public entertainments. The Court House, near the centre of High street, is a spacious structure, erected about 1818, for the sessions of the town and county courts. The Post Office, in Cawdor street, was erected in 1904. Five branch banking establishments are settled here, and there is also a savings bank. Corn markets are held on Thursday weekly; feeing markets, Thursday preceding 26th May and 22nd November. Some years ago baths were erected by a public company, at a cost of about £15,000; the flooring is excavated out of the solid rock, and there is a graduated depth of water. The bathing facilities in Nairn are very good. There is now a golf course upwards of 3 miles in length, with 18 holes, another course of 9 holes, and a ladies' course of 9 holes. At the western extremity of the town is a monument to Mr. John Strath, forty years schoolmaster here. A bronze monument on a granite pedestal was erected in 1895, facing High street, at a cost of about £1,000, to John Grieg M.D. who left several legacies for the benefit of the people of the neighbourhood, and in 1897 a drinking fountain was erected near the Strath monument, in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. A hospital for 22 patients was built in 1906 on the lands of Millbank, Larkfield, adjoining Nairn, at a cost, including site of 4 acres, of £5,000, defrayed by Alexander Mann esq. of Guayaquil, Ecuador. The Nairn Hospital was built in 1846. The Northern Counties Convalescent Home is at Trades park, about 1½ miles from the town. Earl Cawdor, Lt.-Col. Hugh Rose J.P. of Kilmacrae Castle, Ian Ashley M. Brodie esq. D.S.O., J.P. of Brodie Castle, lord lieutenant of the county, Capt. Ewen James Brodie, of Lathen, Sir Frederick George Dunbar bart. of Torrington House, Chesham, Bucks., Lady Gordon-Cathcart, of Cluny, Thomas Charles Bruce Mackintosh-Walker esq. D.L., J.P. of Geddes, Donald A. Stewart esq. of Lochduh, and Mrs. Grant, of Househill, are the principal landowners. The area is 8,988 acres; rateable value, £35,425; including railways, £35,715; rateable value of Nairn parish landward, £8,223; Nairn burgh, £24,095; the population of the parish in 1891 was 5,222, and 1901, 5,732, the parliamentary burgh containing 4,337 of this number, and the royal burgh 5,105. CROY and DALCROSS form a parish partly in this county and partly in the adjoining county of Inverness; particulars will be found under the latter county.

DAVIOT and DUNLICHTY, a joint parish formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), transferred to Inverness-shire.

DYKE and MOY, forming together a parish, part of which was in this county, has been by the Act previously mentioned, transferred to Elginshire.

GLENFERNESS, see ARDCLASH.

MOY and DELAROSSE form a joint parish partly in Inverness-shire. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50), the part in this county has been annexed to Cawdor parish.

PETTY, a large parish, formerly partly in this county, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," added to the county of Inverness.

URQUHART and LOGIE-WESTER form a parish, formerly part of this county, but transferred to Ross and Cromarty by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act 1889."

THE ORKNEY ISLES

THESE islands, which form a county, were known to the ancients by the name of "Orcaades," and are situated in the North Sea, separated from Caithness-shire by the Pentland Firth, and lying between the parallels of 58 deg. 44 min. and 59 deg. 25 min. north latitude, and 2 deg. and 3 deg. 30 min. west longitude: from the mainland they are distant four leagues, and from the Shetland Isles about 15. The form of the islands is extremely irregular; and from these circumstances the dimensions of some of them are ascertained with difficulty. They are separated from one another by portions of the sea denominated "sounds," "firths," or "ferries," some of which are only a mile broad, whilst others are more than 5. The whole area covered is of considerable extent, for from south-west to the north-east they extend about 55 miles, and upwards of 30 in another direction. The aggregate area is 240,476 acres. According to a survey taken by Dr. Murdo Mackenzie in 1750, the whole number of the islands under the denomination of the Orkneys amounted to sixty-seven, of which the following thirty only are inhabited: Mainland (or Pomona), Auskerry, Gremsay, Hoy, Pharay, Cayay, Plotay, South Ronaldshay, Swona, Pentland, Skerries, Burray, Lambholm, Copinsay, Shapinsay, Stronsay, Papa-Stronsay, Eday, Sanday, North Ronaldshay, Westray, Papa-Westray, Egilshay, Ronsay, Wire, Gairsay, Holm, Hellyar Holm, Holm of Damsay, Hunda and Suile Skerry; the remaining thirty-seven which, in the primitive language of the country, are termed "holms," are much inferior in size and solely appropriated to pasturage. The population in 1891 was 30,453, and in 1901, 28,639, viz.:—14,027 males and 14,672 females; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 6,409, and in 1901, 6,056. The population in 1911 was 25,896.

Early History &c.—The earliest inhabitants appear to have been Celtic, who, at an unknown period before the Christian era established themselves in Scotland. Diodorus Siculus mentions Cape Orkas as one of the extremities of Britain; and the Orcaades are first named in 2nd century by Pomponius Mela, who states their number at 30; Pliny augments them to 40; but Ptolemy makes them only 30. Tacitus asserts that the Orcaades were discovered and subdued by Agricola, which seems to be corroborated by discoveries in the Orkneys of Roman coins belonging to the first century. The origin of the name is believed to be Celtic, and is probably derived from Orkin, a large marine animal—a term that has been applied to both whales and seals. Orkney therefore appears to mean "the land of whales," or "of seals." The Orcaades seem to have been esteemed of some importance in the time of Constantine, as they are especially mentioned, with Gaul and Britain, as the patrimony of his youngest son. Little is known of the Orcaades from that time until the convulsions in Norway, which ended in the elevation of Harold, "the Fair-Haired," to the undivided sovereignty of that country. About the middle of the 9th century Kenneth Macalpin obtained possession of the islands, and they continued with the Scottish throne until the end of the 11th century, when they were assigned by King Donald Bain to the King of Norway, to whom they were subject until the middle of the 13th century, when they were again transferred by Magnus, King of Norway, to Alexander, King of Scotland. But, although the islands were thus ceded, the Norwegians still asserted their right to them until the year 1468, when James III. of Scotland married Margaret, daughter of the King of Denmark, with whom they again passed, in lieu of her dowry, to the Crown of Scotland; and upon the birth of her son, James IV., they were finally ceded, which cession was confirmed when James IV. of Scotland married Ann, daughter of the King of Denmark. From the middle of the 16th to the beginning of the 17th century the islands were possessed successively by Earls Robert and Patrick Stewart—Robert being a natural son of James V. and half-brother to Queen Mary. Subsequent to this period the islands passed into the possession of the English Crown, and were bestowed by Charles I., and afterwards by Charles II., on the Morton family. In 1776 Lord Morton sold them to Sir Lawrence Dundas, and they have since remained in the family of his descendants. Having been so long and so repeatedly in the possession of the Norwegians, many names of persons, as well as of places, are derived from the Scandinavian language. It will be comprehended that the Orcaadians bear no resemblance whatever to the Celtic Highlanders in language, dress, appearance, or customs. Orkney has given birth to some individuals who have attained to eminence in science, literature and the arts. Of these we may mention Malcolm Laing (1762-1818), author of a well-known "History of Scotland;" Mrs. Brunton (1778-1818), authoress; Samuel Laing (b.1810), author of a "Tour in Norway;" his son, Samuel Laing, Finance Minister of India (1860-5) and M.P. Orkney, 1873-85; William Balfour Baikie M.D. the African traveller (1820-1864); Dr. Rae, the Arctic traveller; Thomas Stewart Traill (1781-1862), an eminent professor of medical jurisprudence in the University of Edinburgh; and Murdoch McKenzie, author of a "Survey of the Orkney and Lewis Islands." The grandfather of Washington Irving, the American writer, was born in the island of Shapinsay, and the eminent engraver of the 18th century, Sir Thomas Strange, was born in Kirkwall 1721, and died 1792.

Soil, Produce, Climate &c.—Compared with the sterile wilds in some of the sister islands of the Shetlands, or even with the lofty hills and bleak marshy plains of the mainland to the south, these islands gain in appearance that to the eye the surface presents a rich and pleasing variety. The hills composing the ridge that skirts the Western Ocean, as well as those that intersect the mainland, and occupy some of the other islands, for the most part are formed into ridges of some extent, with small intervening valleys; and their tops are generally either flat or rounded. Some few of them are almost entirely covered with verdure; at the base of many are cornfields, interspersed with patches of rich grass, affording excellent feeding for cattle; the soil is sandy or clay loam, and peat moss is found over a considerable portion of these islands. Much of the land under tillage is not regularly fenced, nor divided into separate fields. Numbers of cattle and sheep are raised, for the pasture of which this county is peculiarly well suited. According to the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," the chief crops are shown to be oats, 32,968 acres; barley or bere, 4,486; total of corn crops, 37,453 acres; turnips and swedes, 14,246 acres; potatoes, 2,762; vetches or tares, 248; total green crops, 17,292 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 3,974 acres; (not for hay) 26,080 acres; permanent pasture, 18,048 acres. The total area is 240,930 acres of land, of which 56,609 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing), and 11 only of woods and plantations. The live stock in 1910 comprised: 5,187 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,625; cows and heifers in milk, 8,421; in calf but not in milk, 1,409; other cattle, two years and above, 3,653; one year and under two, 8,213; under one year, 7,886; ewes kept for breeding, 14,335; other sheep, one year and above, 3,588; under one year, 17,519; sows kept for breeding, 284; other pigs, 1,906.

The only mineral raised in 1909 was 3,707 tons of sandstone.

The herring fishery is considerable; the principal "stations" are Papa-Stronsay, Deersound, Holm, Burray and South Ronaldshay. The markets are Ireland, Scotland and England, a few only being sent abroad from Orkney, except the produce of the early fishery, which is carried on in the neighbourhood of Stromness, and from that place the herrings are dispatched direct to Hamburg. The cod and ling fisheries are also prosecuted from almost all the islands, and in the curing of the fish many persons are engaged. Lobster catching is pursued with fair success, as is also oyster dredging. Particulars as to the number of fishing and other vessels belonging to the port of Kirkwall are given with that town.

The manufacture of kelp was at one time the staple of Orkney, but in consequence of the reduction of the duty on barilla, this trade suddenly collapsed, but latterly has shown signs of reviving, as it is now used in the making of iodine and other chemical substances. The distillation of whisky has long been established, there being two distilleries, one near Kirkwall and another at Stromness. Throughout the whole of the islands rain falls in considerable quantity, especially on the western coasts; and it is supposed that the annual amount falling in these islands averages 36.95 inches. Snows are neither so frequent nor so heavy, but they come with comparative violence, and generally from the north-west and south-east; but though what falls in the course of the year may not be much short of the quantity in other northern latitudes, it continues only a few days at a time on the surface of the earth. A peculiarity of the climate with respect to the season of snow and hail merits some attention. Some part of the month of June, which in Britain is well known to be of a pleasant and genial warmth, is here not only colder than the preceding months, but also as much so as any month of winter; for two weeks, and even sometimes more, about the middle of June, the wind blows from the north, strong and piercing, accompanied with snow and hail showers.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The Orkneys comprise 21 entire parishes; the only two towns are Kirkwall, which is the capital and a royal burgh, and Stromness, a burgh of barony. The isles of Orkney and Shetland form one sheriffdom, or stewartry, under a sheriff deputy, whose authority extends over all; but he has a substitute resident in Orkney, and another in Shetland, by whom the duties are principally performed. Combined they form one parliamentary district, under the title of the county of Orkney and Shetland, which returns one member to Parliament. Kirkwall, the capital of the Orkneys, is a representative burgh, joining with Wick, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain, and Cromarty in sending another member. The parliamentary constituency of the county in 1911 was 3,688.

KIRKWALL, the capital of the Orkney Islands and of the united parishes of Kirkwall and St. Ola, is a town of great antiquity, a royal burgh, and the seat of a synod and presbytery. It is 353 miles from Edinburgh by land and ferry, but considerably less by water: 58 north from Wick, 54 north-by-east from Thurso, 41 north from John o' Groats, Caithness-shire, and 14½ east from Stromness, and is situate nearly in the centre of the island, called by way of pre-eminence, Mainland, or Pomona, and on the south-east of the bay of Kirkwall. The town bears strong characteristics of antiquity; the principal street being exceedingly narrow, and in several places barely wide enough to afford passage for a cart; the houses are generally arranged with their gables towards the street, which gives the town a singular appearance. Many of these houses, both externally and internally, present striking features of old age—the doors and windows are small, the walls of great thickness, and the apartments narrow and gloomy. The modern dwellings are, however, an exception. The harbour of Kirkwall is safe and commodious, having two excellent piers, one, a massive and substantial structure, erected in 1885, at a cost of about £20,000, which enables steamers and other vessels to come to the pier head at all times of the tide; the other bay affords good anchorage. Two miles to the south, on the other side of the isthmus, is Scapa pier, erected in 1878, at a cost of £12,000, and here the mail steamer to and from Scrabster (Thurso) and Stromness calls daily. Altogether, the situation of the place is well adapted for the resort of shipping. The number of British and foreign sailing and steam vessels that entered the port in 1910 was 36 of 3,211 tons, and cleared 38 of 11,484 tonnage. In the general coasting trade 1,220 entered of 220,976 tons and 1,201 cleared of 216,963 tonnage.

HOY and GRÆMSAY are two islands in Stromness small debt court district. The civil parish is formed of Græmsay Island and part of Hoy Island; the remaining part of the latter being included in Walls and Flotta parish.

The island of Hoy, separated from the Mainland of Orkney by Hoy Sound and Græmsay Island, and the most interesting of the Orkney group, is about 11 miles long and from 3½ to 5 miles in breadth, and consists chiefly of three hills, the highest, Ward Hill, being 1,662 feet in height. In Hoy, to the north of the island, is an Established church, and in other parts of the island are many objects of interest, chief of which are the Dwarfie Stone, Hoy Head and the Old Man. The latter, on the north-west coast, is a stack or column of red sandstone, 450 feet in height. RACKWICK is a small village in the island, on the west coast. There is communication with Stromness by steamer three times weekly. Thomas Middlemore esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the entire parish is 15,183 acres; rateable value, £821; the population of the entire parish in 1901 was 485, viz.: Græmsay, 195 and part of Hoy, 290; the population of Hoy Island in Walls and Flotta parish in 1901 was 879.

GRÆMSAY is a small island on the north-east of Hoy Island, in Hoy sound, and has an Established church.

for the resort of shipping. The number of British and foreign sailing and steam vessels that entered the port in 1910 was 36 of 3,211 tons, and cleared 38 of 11,484 tonnage. In the general coasting trade 1,220 entered of 220,976 tons and 1,201 cleared of 216,963 tonnage.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered as belonging to the port under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," December, 1909, was 31 of 1,478 tons. The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the same Act, as belonging to the port, Dec. 31st, 1909, was 268 of 2,186 tons, employing 910 men and boys. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters "K. L." or "K." A small import trade is done, the total value in 1910 was £14,374. The export trade of British and Irish products amounted to £129,292 in 1910.

Kirkwall was created a royal burgh, in the first instance, by James III. and its charter was renewed by James V.; its government is confided to a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a dean of guild and seven councillors; it is a representative burgh, and together with Wick, Tain, Dornoch, Dingwall and Cronarty, forms the Wick parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. The quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October; the sheriff and small debts courts are held every Tuesday, except during the vacations. The Cathedral Church of St. Magnus, a Norwegian jarl or earl, canonised in 1135, was the seat of the see of Orkney, said to have been founded by St. Servanus in the 5th century, although the list of bishops does not begin till the reign of David I. (1124-53). After the revolution of 1688, the see was abolished, but was revived in 1733 under the title of Orkney and Caithness; in 1769 it was united to Moray and Ross, and is now held with Aberdeen. The cathedral, as originally built during the period 1137-60, consisted of apsidal choir with aisles, transepts, nave of seven bays with aisles and a central tower with spire; it was afterwards largely rebuilt and considerably extended, both eastwards and westwards, at different periods, and now consists of a choir of six bays with aisles, triforium and clerestory, transepts with eastern chapels, nave of eight bays, also with triforium and clerestory, and a central tower of two stages with a modern parapet and pinnacles, and a low pyramidal spire, the whole reaching a height of 133 feet; in the tower are four bells, rescued from the fire which partially destroyed the original steeple in 1671. The transepts, three bays of the choir and two of the nave, and the interior of the south doorway belong to the Norman church of 1137-60; during the Transition period (1160-1200) the piers and arches of the crossing were rebuilt and eastern chapels added to the transepts; during the period 1200-50, most of the nave piers and part of the walls of the aisles were rebuilt, and the entire nave and the centre of the choir vaulted in stone; the nave at this time appears to have consisted of six bays only, but after 1250 it was determined to lengthen the church, and the choir and its aisles were thereupon extended three bays, and a new west front erected, at a distance of about 30 feet from the then existing front, and somewhat obliquely to the axis of the nave, but this new front, probably from want of funds, was not united to the earlier structure, and the arcades completed, till the latter half of the 15th century, and the new part was never vaulted till 1850, when some plaster vaulting was put up. There were once many tombs in the church, but only one or two now exist, and include a mural tomb in the south aisle of the nave to Malise, Earl Palatine of Strathern and Earl of Orkney (d. c. 1330), and various inscribed floor slabs of the 17th and 18th centuries, but both the tombs and woodwork within the building were either destroyed or greatly injured in 1848, when the fabric underwent a considerable renovation; only the choir, shut off from the crossing by a glass screen, is now used; it is filled with pews, and has a gallery over the north aisle; a number of carved fragments, both of wood and stone, and including some figures and shields of arms, are preserved in a vaulted chamber above the south chapel. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 232 feet; width across the nave, 66 feet, or through the transepts, 100 feet; the height is generally 71 feet. A monument to Dr. John Rae, the Arctic explorer, best known as having been in charge of two expeditions (1848-1851 and 1853-1854) in search of Sir John Franklin, and having on his return in 1854 brought back many relics of that ill-fated explorer, was placed in the cathedral in December, 1855, and comprises a figure of Portland stone on a pedestal of granite, with an inscription; opposite to this is a monument to William B. Baikie M.D. the African traveller. To the south of the cathedral are the remains of the ancient palace of the Bishops of Orkney, in which King Haaco, of Norway, died after his defeat at Largs (3rd October, 1263), and here James V. slept in 1540; almost adjoining to these are the ruins of the Earl's Palace, built by Patrick Stewart, second Earl of Orkney of that name, beheaded at Edinburgh in 1614; the buildings have richly decorated turrets, mullioned windows and cross loops; they are built of grey freestone and as ruins have a fine effect. The ancient church of St. Ola, which is believed to have existed prior to the foundation of that of St. Magnus, and was then the only religious establishment, stood near the shore of the road, or bay, of Kirkwall, and from its situation the town originally obtained the appellation of Kirkjovauger, or the "Kirk on the bay," subsequently corrupted to Kirkwall. A short distance from the cathedral is a church belonging to the Patersons United Free church, and near it is the King street United Free church. There are also Congregational and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of St. Olaf, built in 1878, will seat 160 persons. The Municipal Buildings were erected at a cost of nearly £6,000, the foundation stone having been laid by the late Earl of Mar and Kellie, on August 20th, 1884; they are three storeys in height, and are built in the Scottish baronial style, the principal entrance being emphasised by a fine semi-classic doorway, surmounted by two statues of the ancient halberdiers of the burgh in full uniform; on the ground floor is the Post Office and the offices of the burgh surveyor and the town clerk; on the first floor, at the back, is the Town Hall, the front being occupied by the council chamber. The Carnegie Free Library, in Laing street, contains about 4,000 volumes. The County buildings, midway between the ruins of the Earl's and Bishop's palaces, were erected in 1877, at a cost of about £5,000, and are built principally of the freestone of the district; they contain apartments for the sessions of the local courts and the business of county officials, and committee rooms &c. and are connected with the gaol. Here are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and several hotels. Two newspapers are published here weekly, viz., the "Orkadian," on Thursday, and the "Orkney Herald," on Wednesday. The Poor House, built at a cost of about £3,000, is for the poor of the following parishes only:—Kirkwall and St. Ola, Orphir, Shapinsay, Cross Burness and North Ronaldshay, Lady, Stronsay, West-

ray, Rousay and Eriksbay, Eday, Holm, Birsay and Harry and South Ronaldshay and Burray. The Balfour Hospital was founded by John Balfour esq. of Trenabie, for the relief of the sick and as an asylum for a certain number of aged infirm persons, who are attended gratuitously by the faculty of Kirkwall; it contains 14 beds. A Fever Hospital was added in 1890, and contains 10 beds. The Kirkwall fair was at one time famed for the extent of its business and the number of merchants and others attending from various distant places, and it has been compared to the famous Leipzig fair on a smaller scale. It is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of August, and continues during that week and the one succeeding; but the business is now comparatively trifling. There is also a horse and cattle market held on the first Monday in every month. Opposite to the cathedral, on the west side of the street, once stood the ruins of a fortress called the "King's Castle." It was a place of considerable strength in 1581, when, or soon after, it was occupied by the Earl of Orkney, natural son of James V. The remains were cleared away during the latter part of 1865, and the street, called Castle street, formed, leading to Harbour street. The area is 11,088 acres; rateable value, St. Ola, £4,883; burgh of Kirkwall, £15,711; the population of Kirkwall and St. Ola in 1891 was 4,755, and in 1901, 4,522, viz.: Kirkwall parliamentary, royal and municipal burgh, 2,298; beyond parliamentary, royal and municipal, 1,413; St. Ola, 811. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 695.

SHAPINSAY is an island and parish, in Orkney poor combination and Kirkwall small debt court district; the parish contains the village of Balfour, 4 miles north from Kirkwall, and has Established and United Free churches and a Congregational chapel. Communication with Kirkwall is maintained by steamer daily. At Linto, on this island, stands a ruined church, about 27 feet in length, and there is also a rude column of whinstone, about 11 feet high, called "The Standing Stone of Shapinsay." The island is the property of Col. William Edward Ligonier
Balfour D.L., J.P. whose seat, Balfour
Castle, is an extensive and picturesque mansion, in the Scotch baronial style.
Fairs for horses and cattle are held here on the first Monday before Kirkwall Lammas market. The area is 6,733 acres;
rateable value, £2,062; the population in 1901 was 769.

HELLYAR HOLM, or Elhardholm Island, south of Shapinsay, is included in the parish, and has traces of a small chapel and a mound supporting a cairn.
The population in 1910 was 5.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Balfour; Miss
Elizabeth Williamson, sub-postmistress.
Letters arrive through Kirkwall. Delivery, 5.15 p.m.; in winter, 4.15 p.m.;

STROMNESS is a burgh of barony and seaport, also a parish, 14½ miles west from Kirkwall, and situated on Mainland (or Foronaa) Island, opposite to and north of Hoy Island, from which it is divided by the Sound of Hoy. The submarine telegraph crosses Hoy Sound and is continued from the south of Hoy to Krough, in Caithness. Stromness harbour is a fine natural basin, extending from south to north more than a mile, and is sheltered from the Atlantic on the west by a high ridge, the southern extremity of which forms the north side of Hoy Sound; while its entrance is protected partly by the island of Gramsay, which lies midway in the sound, and partly by a ness or point of land stretching from the westward. On the east side it is shielded by two small islands or holms, and even beyond these, in a kind of outer harbour or roadstead, there is excellent anchorage for shipping. Lobster and cod fishing are carried on to some extent. There is a patent slip, but the business now consists chiefly in the repairing of vessels. The pier, a substantial erection, was built in 1878, and extended in 1894, and in 1897 was again enlarged at a cost of about £14,000, and large steamers can enter at any state of the tide. Stromness was created an independent burgh of barony by a charter from the Crown, granted in 1817, when the government was vested in two bailies and nine councillors; it is now a police burgh under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892" and the "Town Councils Act, 1900," the corporation consisting of a provost, two bailies and six councillors. A sheriff small debt circuit court is held on the third Thursday of March, June and September and on the first Thursday of December. Stromness is a very irregularly built town, the habitations having been erected without any regard to uniformity of arrangement, and generally as near the sea as possible; some are even within flood mark, and protected by bulwarks, quays and jetties, which each individual appears to have constructed as suited his own convenience. The streets are paved and there are gas works in the town. There is an Established church and two United Free churches; the Episcopal Mission church of St. Mary the Virgin will seat 83 persons. The Rev. Arthur Moore Wylie has been priest in charge since 1908. There is a public library, supported by annual subscriptions. The market days are first Wednesday of each month. An annual fair is held on the first Tuesday in September. Branches respectively of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, are established here, and there are four hotels. The Orkney Natural History Society's Museum contains Hugh Miller's celebrated Asterolepis, and many other objects of much interest, and has been further enriched by assortments from the collection of the late Dr. Baikie. There is a 9-hole golf course. The area of the parish comprises 7,618 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £6,955, and of the remainder of the parish, £3,056; the population of the parish in 1891 was 2,383, and in 1901, 2,469; the population of the police burgh in 1901 was 1,742.

STRONSAY and EDAY, formerly a united civil parish, but under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1934," are now two separate parishes, in Orkney poor combination and Kirkwall small debt court district, and comprise the islands of Stronsay, Auskerry, Eday, Papa-Stronsay and Pharay, which are separated from the other islands of the group by Stronsay Firth. Stronsay Island is about 23 miles north-east from Kirkwall, and has Established and United Free churches. Communication with Kirkwall is maintained by steamer, three times weekly. The area of Stronsay is 8,607 acres; rateable value, £4,894, including special water district; population in 1901, 1,184.

AUSKERRY is a small island south of Stronsay, on which is a lighthouse. The population in 1901 was 9.

PAPA-STRONSAY is a small island to the north of Stronsay. The population in 1901 was 16.

EDAY is an island lying west-by-north of Stronsay, from which it is separated by Eday Sound, and is in the Orkney poor combination and the small debt court district of Kirkwall. There are Established and United Free churches and a Baptist chapel. There are several Pictish remains on the island. The area is 7,797 acres; rateable value is £1,480; the population of the island in 1901 was 643, and of the parish, 596.

Pharay or Faray is an islet west of Eday.

PEEBLES-SHIRE

THIS county, otherwise Tweeddale, in the southern part of Scotland, is bounded on the north and north-east by Edinburghshire, on the east and south-east by Selkirkshire, on the south by Dumfriesshire, and by the county of Lanark for almost the whole extent of its western border. In length, from its southern border to its extreme northern apex, it measures fully 30 miles; from east to west its breadth varies from 20 to 10 miles. Its form is exceedingly irregular, and it comprehends an area of 347.8 square miles, or 222,599 acres of land and 690 of water. In 1891 the population was 14,750, and in 1901, 7,129 males, and 7,937 females; total 15,066; the inhabited houses in 1891 were 2,989, and in 1901, 3,222. In size Peebles ranks the twenty-fourth, and in population the thirty-first of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1911 was 15,258.

Early History.—The shire derives its present name from the county town, and Tweeddale from being the district in which the Tweed has its source, and the vale through which it pursues its course to the east. The Gadeni tribe of Britons, who inhabited this secluded territory on the Tweed, have left innumerable traces of their occupation demonstrated in the names of places, Druidic and warlike remains, and sepulchral tumuli. About 80 A.D. the Romans subdued the British aborigines in the district. After the Abdication of the Roman power in 410, the Gadeni associated with the kindred Britons of Strathclyde, and the descendants of those early settlers continued here throughout the Pictish period; about 530 the Picts were defeated by King Arthur at Cademuir, near Peebles. Kenneth III. King of the Scots, obtained possession of the district about 974. From the epoch of the migration of the Strathclyde Britons, in the 9th century, the Scotch-Irish intermingled with the remaining Britons on the upper Tweed. The next and last class of intruders on the district were the Anglo-Saxons, from Lothian, who finally established a settlement in the shire. One of the chiefs of this people, called Eadulph, settled in the vale of Edleston water; in this manner those of Saxon lineage founded the families of rank in Peebles-shire. At different times the county suffered in a small degree from the inroads of marauders from the English side of the border, but these generally passed to the east, up the coast, or through Dumfriesshire and Lanark. At the defeat of Montrose, 13 September, 1645, at Philiphaugh, some of the heads of the best families fell, or were taken prisoners, fighting on the side of royalty, and Montrose retired to Traquair, in this county; but in the insurrection of 1679, in the west of Scotland, ended by the battle of Bothwell Bridge, there were few natives of Tweeddale; the troops in 1715 and 1745 also passed clear of this county. Since these stirring events the county has not been prominent in the scenes of history. When Scotland began to be divided into sheriffdoms, about the 12th century, Tweeddale was put under the jurisdiction of two sheriffs, one of whom was settled at Traquair, the other at Peebles. Peebles-shire, from its connection with the ancient kingdom of Strathclyde, became a part of the diocese of Glasgow, in which it continued till the abolition of episcopacy.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—The county is an uninterrupted series of hill and mountain ranges, so close upon each other that there is scarcely to be found a plain of moderate dimensions in the district, and not one of any kind unless upon the margin of the Tweed, or its tributaries. The elevations for so small a county are very numerous, and some of them of considerable altitude. The following are among the most conspicuous in height above the level of the sea:—Hartfield, 2,916 feet; Broad Law, 2,850; Dollar Law, 2,840; Scrape, 2,560; Gume Cleugh, 2,200; Dnndroich, Pykestone, and Hell's Cleugh, each 2,100; Cardon, 2,000; Cairn Hill, 1,800; Broughton Heights, 1,483; and Meikle, 1,480. Notwithstanding the attempts made by several individuals to encourage better modes of agriculture, till within the last century the management of arable farms was in a deplorably low condition; but in later years particularly, draining, ploughing and planting have been carried out effectually, and the general features of the county highly improved. The sides and summits of the hills are at the present time here and there clothed with plantations; and the great vale of the Tweed and its minor valleys are well cultivated, inclosed and divided; arable fields have taken the place of unproductive swamps, and are advancing up the sides of the hills. Oats is the chief corn crop; turnips are also raised largely, the soil being admirably adapted for the growing of this root, upon which large numbers of sheep of the Cheviot and black-faced breeds are fed.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," were: oats, 7,230 acres; barley or bere, 424; total corn crops, 7,659 acres; turnips and swedes, 3,712; potatoes, 371; rape, 491; total green crops, 4,609 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 2,494 acres; (not for hay), 14,369 acres; permanent pasture (for hay), 16,863 acres; (not for hay), 16,863 acres; total area of land, 222,240, of which 164,748 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing), and 11,326 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised: 929 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 212; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 1,967; other cattle, 4,362; ewes, kept for breeding, 30,187; other sheep, one year and above, 26,286; under one year, 87,226; pigs, 379.

Little can be said of the minerals of the county. At the north-east extremity of the shire coal is found; the production in 1909 was 1,009 tons. The other minerals raised in the county in 1909 were: igneous rocks, 3,154 tons; limestone, 3,672 tons. The shire is almost devoid of manufactures, except at Peebles and Innerleithen, where there are several mills for the production of tweeds and shawls. The district possesses in the purity and fall of its waters a superiority which makes it altogether advantageous for the establishment of paper and spinning mills, as well as general factories.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal river is the Tweed, distinguished as the fourth of Scottish streams. The upper sources of this beautiful water are found in the parish of Tweedsmuir, in this county; it is fed by many tributaries, and, after passing the ancient town of Berwick, falls into the German Ocean. The other rivers are the Lyne, the Leithen, and the Manow, all of which are subsidiary to the Tweed, and the Leggett, which runs into St. Mary's Loch, in Selkirkshire. In the rivers and small lakes there are salmon and trout, and a lake, called the West Water Loch, is noted for the quantity of eels with which it swarms. The North British railway enters the north of the county at Leadburn, and sending a branch via Broomelee (for West Linton) and Dolphinton, runs due south to Peebles, where it turns eastward to Innerleithen and Galashiels, while a branch of the Caledonian railway runs from Peebles westward, through the centre of the county to Biggar.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The shire comprises 14 parishes and 13 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 5 others; it contains one royal burgh, Peebles, but possesses no representative burgh; the county, in conjunction with that of Selkirk, however, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament; the parliamentary constituency in 1911 was 3,148.

BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM and KILBUCHO form a united parish partly adjoining and stretching along the east and south-east boundaries of Biggar, and in the small debt court district of Peebles. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 60, the part of Culter parish in this county has been added to Broughton. Broughton station, on the Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, is half a mile from the village, 4½ miles south-east from Biggar, and 10 miles from Peebles. There are Established and United Free churches. Henry Brown Marshall esq. of Rachan and Quarter, Sir James T. Naesmyth bart. John Rainier MacQueen esq. J.P. of Chaily, Sussex, Miss Dickson, of Hartree, Mrs. Arundel, of Auldgrith, Dumfriesshire, Duncan MacDonald, of Kilbucho, Alexander Welsh esq. of Mossnennan, and Richard Dunning Rarré Cuninghame esq. of Castle Douglas and Hensol, New Galloway, are the principal landowners. The area of the united parish is 19,799 acres; rateable value, £20,160; the population in 1891 was 676, and in 1901, 862 in the civil and 734 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DRUMELZIER (pronounced Drumel-er) is a parish on the east bank of the Tweed, in the south-western part of the county, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, 3 miles south-east from Broughton station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south-west from Peebles. The parish church stands on the Powsall rivulet, a little way above its junction with the Tweed. Drumelzier Castle, formerly a seat of the once powerful family of Tweedie, stands in beautiful grounds, and is the last of a chain of fortresses placed every two or three miles on the banks of the Tweed. By the side of the Powsay Burn, and a little below the churchyard, the famous prophet Merlin is said to have been buried. Dawyck House is the seat of Mrs. Jessie Balfour. Mrs. Jane A. White, of Netherurd, Sir Mitchell Mitchell-Thomson bart. of Polmood, Sir Basil T. Graham-Montgomery bart. of Stanhope, and Walter Stuart esq. of Kingledores, are the principal landowners. The area is 17,972 acres; rateable value, £3,333; population in 1901, 194.

EDDLESTON (or EDDLESTONE) is a parish and village in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, 4 miles north from Peebles, with a station on the North British railway. The Eddleston water, which takes its rise from various springs on the north and north-east boundaries of the parish, divides the village into two parts, and at Cowie's Lynn forms a cascade thirty-five feet high. The South Esk also has its source in a small lake within two miles of the village. Anciently the kirk and its small hamlet stood among the hills to the east, where some vestiges of them still exist. Lord Elibank, of Darn Hall; John Somerville esq. J.P., D.L. and James Morton Robertson esq. J.P. of Portmore, and Lieut.-Gen. Sir James Wolfe Murray K.C.B., D.L., J.P. of Cringletie, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 18,482; rateable value, £11,090; population in 1891, 571, and in 1901, 535.

INNERLEITHEN (or INVERLEITHEN) is a police burgh, in the small debt court district of Peebles, and a parish, near the mouth of the Leithen, within a quarter of a mile of the left bank of the Tweed, and environed on the east and west by high and partly wooded hills; a bridge across the Tweed connects the town with Troquair; here is a station on the North British railway, 32 miles south from Edinburgh, 16 north-west from Selkirk, 12 west from Gala-shiels and 6 east-south-east from Peebles. The burgh is governed by a provost and 9 councillors, and is lighted with gas. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the portion of Innerleithen formerly in Selkirk county has been transferred to Peeblesshire. The Roman Catholic church was built by benefactions left by Lady Louisa Stuart, of Traquair, the last of the direct line of that family, d. 1875. There is a branch of the Bank of Scotland, and a savings bank here. Upon the banks of the Leithen are several large woollen factories, the machinery of which is partly propelled by the stream, and the works employ a considerable number of hands. Tweed and other woollen goods are made here. Some of the prosperity of the village is derived from the number of visitors who resort here in summer for the benefit of the mineral springs, which possess properties similar to the waters of Harrogate and Strathpeffer, and are found beneficial in cases of scrofulous disorders, inflammation of the eye and various diseases originating in impurity of the blood, and also for dyspepsia and stomach disorders. Private furnished lodgings are obtainable, and there are likewise three hotels. A well-house was erected in 1826, which is now the property of the St. Ronan's Wells and Mineral Water Co. and a pump-house was built in 1896. About 1840 an association was instituted styled the "St. Ronan's Border Club," under whose auspices an annual festival was held for the exhibition of border games and gymnastic exercises. Though the club is extinct, the competitions still take place, and usually in August. About 3 miles west, situated on a knoll, are the ruins of Horsburgh Castle, an ancient border peel tower, said by Armstrong to have been habitable in 1775. Between Innerleithen and Walkerbarn are Purves Hill Terraces, which are planted with ash trees, but their contour may be easily made out; they vary from about 50 feet to about 120 feet in breadth, and the second in the ascent is over 900 feet in length; the depth between each terrace is about 14 feet. At one end of these terraces stood Purves Hill Tower, but only a few stones now remain to attest its site. This place is supposed to have furnished the scene of Sir Walter Scott's novel, "St. Ronan's Well." Glenormiston House is the residence of Michael G. Thorburn esq., J.P. Capt. John Miller-Cunningham, of Leithen Lodge, Major James Llewellyn Evans, of Holyeac, M. G. Thorburn esq., and Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq., of Scarthingwell Hall, Tadcaster, Yorks, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 24,021 acres; burgh, 359 acres; the population in 1891 was 4,161 in the civil parish, 2,775 in the ecclesiastical and 2,512 in the burgh, and in 1901 was 3,659 in the civil parish, 2,410 in the ecclesiastical and 2,181 in the burgh.

KILBUCHO, see BROUGHTON, GLENHOLM AND KILBUCHO.

KIRKURD is a parish in Peebles poor combination, on the western confines of the county, and is bounded on the north by the Tarth, a tributary of the Tweed. The Broughton brook, a tributary of the latter, flows through the parish. From the first-named river the land rises in cultivated and enclosed grounds, and then becomes hilly, with eminences covered with plantations; it is about 4 miles south from Dolphinton station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and on the Carsstairs and Dolphinton branch of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 north-west from Peebles. The ancient church of Kirkurd belonged at an early period to the bishops of Glasgow, one of whom gave it to the hospital of Soltre, and it remained the property of that charitable institution until transferred to the hospital of Trinity Church, Edinburgh. Castleraig is the property and seat of James Mann esq. J.P. Sir Thomas David Gibson-Carmichael bart. K.C.M.G. Mrs. White, of Netherurd, and James Mann esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. Acreage, 5,705; rateable value, £7,315; population, 1901, 293. Letters through Dolphinton, Peebleshire.

LEADBURN, see NEWLANDS.

WEST LINTON is a parish, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, with two stations, one at Broomlee, half a mile south-east from the village, and another at Macbie Hill, 3 miles east, on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway. The village is irregularly built, and is on the banks of the Lyne water. Besides this stream, the parish is watered by the North Esk, Tarth and West water, or Polin Tarf, and although the greater part of the district is hilly, it is fertile, and famed for its excellent sheep pasturage; it is 16 miles south-south-west from Edinburg, 14 north-west from Peebles and about 11 north-north-east from Biggar. Linton, from 1683, conferred the title of baron upon the family of Stuart, Earls of Traquair, but these titles have been dormant since the death of Charles, 8th Earl, in 1861. There is an Established church and three United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Mungo has 103 sittings; the rectory, net value £210, has been held since 1907 by the Rev. John S. Begg M.A. of Edinburgh University. A branch of the Bank of Scotland is established in the village. Macbie Hill lies partly in this and partly in Newlands parish, and was inherited by Amelia, third daughter of Sir William Montgomery, up to 1830, when it passed by marriage to the family of the Beresfords. Medwyn is the seat of John Houlton Forbes esq. J.P.; Garvald, of Mrs. Allan-Woddrop, and Spitalhaugh, of Sir James Ranken Ferguson bart. D.L., J.P. J. H. Forbes esq. Sir James R. Ferguson bart. and the trustees of the late W. Allan-Woddrop esq. are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 23,261 acres; rateable value, £19,118; population, 1901, 1,110 parish and 412 village.

CARLOPS, in West Linton parish, is a small village, on the northern verge of the county, about 3 miles north-east from West Linton. It originated in the year 1784, and takes its name from some localities in the neighbourhood called "Carlines louns." It stands at an elevation of 1,000 feet above the sea level, and is much frequented in the summer season. The falls of the North Esk at Patres Mill are specially attractive.

LYNE is a parish, in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district, on the left bank of the stream of that name, and has a station on the Symington and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway. Here is an Established church. The Earl of Wemyss G.C.V.O., A.D.C., V.D. is the sole landowner. The area of the original parish of Lyne and Megget was 17,227 acres; present area, 2,781; rateable value of Lyne only, £1,315; the population of Lyne in 1901 was 93, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 171.

MEGGET, formerly with Lyne a united civil parish, and still ecclesiastically annexed, has been, by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 56, transferred to Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire.

MANOR is a parish, bounded by Peebles on the north and Megget on the south, and its northern extremity abuts on the Tweed. The district is the vale of the Manor water, which rises in its southern hilly quarter, and falls into the Tweed about two miles west of Peebles, and from which the water supply for Peebles is taken. The parish, 3 miles south-west from Peebles station on the Caledonian and North British railway, is in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district. Here are the remains of a Roman camp, and in the parish is a tower raised on an eminence, probably a watch tower, and a huge upright stone, of great age, perforated with many holes. In the vale, near the public road at the farm standing called Woodhouse, stands the cottage once inhabited by David Ritchie, a deformed and eccentric dwarf, from whom it is said Sir Walter Scott drew the fictitious character of the "Black Dwarf," in his novel of that name. Sir James Tolme Naesmyth bart. the Earl of Wemyss, Thomas Inglis esq. J.P. of Glenternie Manor, and Mrs. E. S. Cunningham, of Hall Manor, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 16,634; rateable value, £4,657; population in 1901, 257.

MOUNTAIN CROSS, see NEWLANDS.

NEWLANDS is a parish, in Peebles poor combination, lying between West Linton and Edleston parishes, watered by the Lyne and the Polintarf, and is bounded on the north-east by the North Esk, and on the north-west by the Medwyn, all of which are good trouting streams. The surface is diversified with hill and dale, and the hills are mostly green, without heath. Trees thrive in most parts of the parish, and the greater part is enclosed by hedgerows and fences. Newlands church is about 4 miles south from Broomlee station on the Leadburn and Dolphinton branch of the North British railway, and about 6 north-west from Peebles. There are two stations in the extreme northern part of the parish on the same branch, one at Lamanacha, 5 miles north-east from the church, and another at Leadburn, 8 miles north-east. At Mountain Cross is a United Free Church. By the confluence of the Lyne water with the Tarth, stand the ruins of Drochill Castle, once a large structure, partly erected by James (Douglas), 4th Earl of Morton, and Regent of Scotland, and left unfinished when he was put to death on the scaffold 2 June, 1581. Lamanacha was a seat of the Earls of Dundonald up to the beginning of the 19th century, and is now the property and residence of James Mackintosh esq. The Whim, in this parish, a massive, gloomy and unpicturesque edifice resembling a hospital, once the property of the Argyle family, and afterwards of Sir James Montgomery, baron of the Exchequer, is now the seat of J. Maitland Thomson esq. M.A., LL.D. Maobie Hill is the residence of George Readman esq. Acreage of the parish, 12,531; assessable value, £7,575; population in 1891, 715, and in 1901, 564.

ROMANNO, in the parish, was at the end of the 17th century the property and residence of Dr. Alexander Pennycook, the author of some clever poems and a poetical "Description of Tweeddale," a district of which he was a native. It is now the property and residence of George Campbell esq. W.S.

PEEBLES is an ancient royal burgh, the capital of its county and parish, the seat of a presbytery, and the head of a poor combination, 22 miles south from Edinburgh, 22 west-by-north from Selkirk, 54 north-north-east from Dumfries and 47 east-by-south from Glasgow, situated in the centre of the parish, on a beautiful and large plain, having the Tweed running along its southern side and the Peebles (or Eddleston) water along its northern limit, surrounded by an amphitheatre of hills; the neighbourhood is adorned by numerous plantations and mansions. Among the latter, Kingsmeadows, Kerfield, Venlaw and Rosetta are the most conspicuous. Peebles has a station on the Galashiels and Dalkeith section of the North British railway, and is also the terminus of a branch line from Symington on the Caledonian railway. For a long period Peebles has consisted of two towns, respectively called New and Old; the former occupies the ridge of a peninsula projecting westward, along the northern side of which flows the Eddleston, over which is a bridge forming a communication with the Old Town. The Eddleston water, by a bend round the head of the peninsula, falls into the Tweed, here crossed by a bridge of five arches, which has been widened and improved. The streets and principal shops in the town are lighted with gas supplied by the corporation. It is not satisfactorily ascertained at what period Peebles was constituted a royal burgh; Alexander III. was a munificent patron, and its original charter is supposed to have been bestowed by that monarch. Succeeding kings recognised its right to the distinction, and James VI. by his charter granted to the burgesses a large amount of landed property and right of common in different parts, nearly the whole of which has been lost. The government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, seven councillors and town clerk. A sheriff court is held every Friday during session, a sheriff criminal court when required and a sheriff small debt court every alternate Friday; general meetings of the County Council take place here in the months of May, October and December, and the meetings of hieutenancy as occasion requires. The Established church, erected on the site of the former edifice, and opened March 24th, 1887, at a cost of about £10,000, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style of the 13th century, from designs by Mr. William Young, architect, of London, and contains upwards of 1,200 sittings. The Leckie Memorial United Free church was erected in 1877 by the surviving sons and daughters of the Rev. Thomas Leckie, the first pastor of the Associate Burgher Congregation, and presented by them to the congregation in memory of their father. A United Free church, for the west congregation, was erected at a cost of £4,000; it will seat 650 persons, and has a hall adjacent, to hold 200. The Baptist chapel is an edifice of red sandstone, and was opened in 1895. The Episcopal church of St. Peter, in Eastgate, built in 1833, has a fine stained window and will seat 220 persons; a new organ was provided in 1909 at a cost of £800. The incumbency, £200 net, has been held since 1908 by the Rev. Reginald Beavis le Breton Janvrin M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1858 by the exertions of the Rev. J. Clapperton, aided by numerous friends. The Town Hall is used for public assemblies and meetings. The Chambers Institution is a fine building in High street, containing a library of 13,000 volumes, a reading room, museum, and a gallery of art. Within the edifice is also a large hall for lectures and exhibitions, and a county museum. In 1907 it was partially reconstructed, and now contains the Chambers Town hall, municipal offices, police court and public reading room. This valuable property was presented to the burgh by the late William Chambers LL.D. founder, with his brother Robert, of the publishing firm of W. and R. Chambers, Edinburgh. He was born here in 1800, and in 1832 began publishing "Chambers' Edinburgh Journal," and subsequently numerous works for the popularisation of knowledge; in 1865 he was elected Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and died in 1883. The old Market Cross, which was in existence in 1320, was, by a resolution of the Council in 1807, ordered for site as being ruinous. The shaft was secured by the late Sir John Hay, and was preserved in his grounds at Kingsmeadows till 1858, when he handed it over to the burgh. In 1859 the late Dr. William Chambers then had it placed in the quadrangle of the Chambers' Institution, and it there remained till Major Thorburn, in 1895, restored it to its original position at the junction of High street, Northgate, and Eastgate. The Liberal Club, in Eastgate, opened in 1899, is a building in the Elizabethan style, and contains reading, billiards, and games rooms. Near the town are golf links. The Peeblesshire Unionist Club, in High street, was opened in October, 1895. Here are four woollen mills, which give employment to a large number of hands. There are several good hotels and a hydropathic establishment. The Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the British Linen Bank have each a branch here. Two newspapers are published here weekly, which have a good circulation. The market is held on Tuesday, and fairs on the first Tuesday in March (for hiring servants) and the second Tuesday in October. The Royal Company of Archers, or King's Body Guard for Scotland, come to Peebles from Edinburgh occasionally, to shoot for the old-established prize of a silver arrow, given by the burgh to the most successful marksmen. A poorhouse has been erected on the Rosetta road. The Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected by the local authorities of the county and the burghs of Peebles and Innerleithen, on the Kirklands, just opposite the poorhouse, and opened at the end of the year 1895, a new wing being added in 1909; the building is of wood and iron and has 24 beds. The ruins of the two ancient churches are still extant, one of which was dedicated to St. Andrew; the other, built by Alexander III. in the middle of the 13th century, was dedicated to the Holy Cross and St. Nicholas; the same monarch likewise erected a house contiguous to the church, which contained a royal residence until the accession of James VI. to the throne of England. Neidpath Castle, a noble ruin, stands in a romantic glen, about a mile distant. This locality is much resorted to in summer for its excellent trout and salmon fishing. Half a mile to the east of the town, on a hill called "Jaet's Brae," may be discerned the traces of two ancient British camps. The parish of Peebles has an area of 16,597 acres; rateable value, landward, £9,668; burghal, £33,667; the population in 1901, royal burgh 3,092, extended burgh 2,171, landward part 544; total, 5,810.

SKIRLING is a parish and small village in Peebles poor combination and small debt court district; the village is on the road from Biggar to Peebles, about 2½ miles east from Biggar station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway; the parish, which is about 3 miles long by 2½ in width, is bounded on the south by Biggar water, and west by Spittal brook, which separates it from Lanarkshire. The general features of the district are of the same hilly and undulating character noticeable throughout the surrounding country, but in a more advanced state of cultivation. The parish church is in the presbytery of Biggar; there is also a United Free church. The whole of the land in the parish belongs to Sir Thomas David Gibson-Carmichael bart. K.C.M.G. of Skirling House. The area is 3,423 acres; rateable value, £9,310; population in 1901, 230.

TRAQUAIR is a parish in the small debt court district of Peebles, and is on the south bank of the Tweed, and watered also by the river Quair; it lies opposite to Innerleithen, with which place it is connected by a modern girder bridge over the Tweed, erected at a cost of about £3,500. The Traquair, Fingland and Newhall brooks and the Bold barn, all tributaries of the Tweed, flow through the parish. The parish is generally mountainous, and includes Gums-cleugh and Minchnoor, two lofty eminences lying on the old road to Selkirk, and over which Montrose retreated after his defeat at the battle of Philiphaugh, 13 Sept. 1645. The church is 2½ miles south from Innerleithen station on the Peebles and Gala-shiels section of the North British railway, and 9 south-east from Peebles; there is also a station at Cardrona in this parish, on the same branch, 6 miles north from the church. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 59, a portion of Yarrow parish, in Selkirkshire, has been transferred to Traquair. This place, from 1683, conferred the title of earl upon the Stuart family, barona Stuart, Linton and Caberston, but all these became dormant on the death of Charles, 8th Earl, in 1861. Traquair House has a tower at the north-east corner, believed to have been erected before the year 900; large additions were made to this mansion by John, first Earl of Traquair. The chartulary of the family contains many ancient and important family and historical documents, some of which are dated as far back as the 9th century, and bear the signature of Malcolm III. The house is now the seat of Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. the present representative of the family, who acquired property through Lady Louisa Stuart, who died in 1875; it is delightfully situated on the banks of the Tweed, where that river and the Quair unite; and about a quarter of a mile to the west of the mansion-house is the "Rush above Traquair" (the subject of the celebrated ballad), now indicated only by a few birch trees, the remains of a thicket or arbour. The Glen, the seat of Baron Glenconner (Lord Lieutenant), is also in this parish. Cardrona House is the property and residence of Miss Williamson. The area is 18,489 acres; rateable value, £7,550; population in 1901, 618.

TWEEDSMUIR until about the middle of the 17th century formed part of the parish of Drumelzier, but was then erected into a separate parish. It is in the Peebles poor combination and is in the south-western corner of the county, with Lanarkshire on its western and Dumfriesshire on its southern border. Within the bounds of the parish the river Tweed is augmented by the Fruid, Talla and Cor waters and several brooks. The water scheme (1895) of the Edinburgh and District Water Trust included the formation of a reservoir in the valley of the Talla, with pipes to convey 24,000,000 gallons daily; a bridge of granite and steel has been erected for the railway to the reservoir, but the old bridge is still in use. The church is 8 miles south from Broughton station on the Symington and Peebles section of the Caledonian railway, and about 17 south-west from Peebles. There are several ancient and rude strongholds in the parish, some of them dignified by the name of "Castles," but having few of the features belonging to a fortress. The Earl of Wemyss and March A.D.C., G.C.V.O., V.D., LL.D. The Edinburgh Water Trust and the trustees of the late Sir Walter Thorburn kt. D.L., J.P. (d. 1908), are the principal landowners. WALKERBURN is a village, in the civil parish of Innerleithen, and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Innerleithen and Traquair; it is on the north bank of the Tweed. The village is supplied with spring water from the neighbouring hills, and has a station on the Peebles and Galashiels section of the North British railway, about 8 miles south-west from Peebles. In the village is an Established church, a Congregational church and a Public hall seating 400 people. The Ballantyne Memorial Institute was erected and endowed in 1903 by the late John Ballantyne esq. J.P. of Stoneyhill, in memory of his father, and consists of library and reading rooms. About 1855 this village consisted only of two cots and a farm house, but the late Henry Ballantyne esq. having secured the use of the Tweed as a motive power for the mills, established woollen factories here in conjunction with the late Robert Freer. Messrs. James Dalziel and Co. also have a woollen factory here. The two mills give employment to a number of hands. Population, 1901, 1,161.

PERTHSHIRE

THIS is one of the most extensive counties in Scotland, lying nearly in the centre of the country, and forming the south-eastern district of the Highlands. It is bounded on the east by the county of Forfar; on the south-east by the counties of Kinross and Fife—from the latter county it is separated for a considerable distance by the Firth of Tay; further on the south its boundaries are Stirlingshire and the small county of Clackmannan, which latter it embraces on both sides; on the south-west Dumbarton touches it for a short distance; on the west it is bounded by Argyllshire, and on the north-west and north by Inverness-shire and Aberdeenshire. The contour of the county is very irregular. From the Firth of Forth at Culross, on the extreme south, to the Forest of Athole, at the source of the Tilt, on the north, it measures 68 miles; and from Meikle on the east, to Argyllshire on the west, about 77 miles. The area of Perthshire is estimated at 2,493.4 square miles, or 1,595,802 acres of land and 37,036 of water. The population in 1891 was 122,185, and in 1901, 58,060 males and 65,223 females; total, 123,283; the inhabited houses being 26,688 in 1891, and in 1901, 28,106 inhabited, 2,583 uninhabited and 230 building. In size it ranks as the fourth, the three larger being Argyllshire, Inverness-shire and Ross and Cromartyshire, and in population as the ninth of the Scottish counties.

Early History.—The Romans appear to have extended their conquests into this county, though it lay north of their great wall between the Forth and Clyde; they are recorded to have settled a colony on the site where Perth now stands. One of the roads formed by the invaders, passing along the district of Strathearn towards Perth, may still be traced, and also from Perth along Strathmore, to the extremity of the county; the remains of several encampments, likewise, are at this day observable, particularly one at Ardoch, in the parish of Muthill, the largest and most conspicuous in Scotland. From 146, some 30 years after the Romans retired, until 843, when Perthshire fell under the Dalriadan rule, this portion of Britain was ruled by Pictish kings, and it was in consequence of a marriage between a daughter of this race and a king of the Dalriads that these latter gained the country, and they are believed to have transferred to Scone Abbey the "Stone of Destiny," about 850; in the next century the Danes penetrated here and were defeated by Donal IV. and Constantine III. at Forteviot, early in the century, and again in 961 at Lunenburg. In the 11th century the Northumbrians who were established in the Lothians penetrated in this county and defeated Mabeth, in 1056, at Dunsinane; and until the middle of the 17th century the clan feuds kept the country in a restless state. In August, 1650, Cromwell, after his victory at Dunbar, took Perth; and on 26 July, 1689, Viscount Dundee defeated General Mackay (William III.'s general) at Killiecrankie, in the north of the county, and, in August, William's forces gained a victory at Dunkeld. In 1715 Mar gained a doubtful victory at Sheriffmuir, and in 1745 Perth was occupied by Prince Charles Edward. Before the Reformation and during the domination of episcopacy, Perthshire formed the diocese of a bishop whose seat was at Dunkeld, as well as another bishopric at Dunblane.

Soil, Surface, Climate and Produce &c.—Perthshire is subdivided into districts, which, previous to the jurisdiction established in 1748, were stewardries under the power of different great landed proprietors; the names of these various districts (or feudalities) are Menteith, Gowrie, Perth Proper, Strathearn, Stormont, Breadalbanes, Rannoch, Balquhiddier and Athole. Little attention, however, is now paid to these divisions, and the county is arranged in the more natural divisions of Highland and Lowland, the uplands around the range of Grampians forming the line of demarcation. 18 parishes belong to the Highland portion, while that of the Lowland comprises 58, but though the latter comprise more parishes, the former covers the larger area, Blair Atholl parish having 181,114 acres and Forthingall, 196,833. The soil of Perthshire comprehends all the varieties known in Scotland—the coarse and loamy being prevalent on the banks of the rivers, and the sandy and tillable classes on the sides of the hills; in many places are extensive mosses, particularly in Menteith district, but with the progress of agriculture some of these have been partially reclaimed. Five-eighths of the area of the county consists of heath land and woods. The climate on the whole is mild and salubrious, especially in the south, but in the north and west the cold is more general, in consequence of the elevated nature of the country; these districts are, nevertheless, dry and healthy, being screened by the Grampians from the northern blasts. The mountains of greatest altitude in Perthshire are: Ben Lawers, 4,015; Ben Mare, 3,903; Ben a' Ghlo, 3,724; Schiehallion, 3,561; Ben Doarg, 3,550; Ben Vorlich, 3,224; Ben Ledi, 2,875; Ben Venue, 2,380; Ben Chonzi, 2,922; Farragon, 2,584; and Ben Tulachan, 3,093 feet above the level of the sea. Perthshire is famous for its extensive deer forests, and abounds with game of nearly every description, though the large species is now considerably diminished in numbers; the red deer inhabit the forest and mountain glades and are very wild; but the roe appears, even in the summer, in the woodlands and plantations of the valleys, down to the habitable places: Athole, the largest forest in area in Perthshire, being 50,000 acres; Tealan, 14,000; Glenartney, 15,000; and Rannoch, 10,000. The shootings form a considerable item in the revenue of the proprietors, being let for the season at large rentals to gentlemen, principally for pastime and sport; and in addition they afford employment to a number of persons in various capacities; other game besides deer comprise grouse, pheasants, woodcock, ptarmigan, capercaillie, hares &c. The lochs and rivers also provide good fishing for salmon, trout and pike. Within the last century there has been a great deal of planting in Perthshire. The late Duke of Atholl took a distinguished part in the rearing of plantations; it appears from returns published in 1830, that he planted 15,473 English acres, the plants amounting to the enormous number of 27,231,600; of these plantations, the principal portion, to the amount of about 8,600 acres, are of larch, about 1,000 of oak, the remainder being Scotch fir, spruce fir, a few acres of birch &c. The same nobleman exerted himself for the improvement of the roads of the county, which have been brought into excellent condition. During the last century a great change was effected in the agriculture of Perthshire, the low parts of which now vie in cultivation, wealth and beauty with any district in Scotland; the upper portion of the county is still devoted to the pasturage of sheep and cattle, which are mostly driven southwards for sale and consumption. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes and turnips are all cultivated. The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are:—Oats, 66,842 acres; barley or bere, 10,089; wheat, 5,502; beans, 1,572; total corn crops, 84,535 acres; turnips and swedes, 27,412 acres; potatoes, 14,163; vetches or tares, 314; rape, 344; total green crops, 42,419 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 32,492 acres; (not for hay) 60,282; permanent pasture, for hay, 14,978; not for hay, 97,506 acres; bare fallow, 833 acres; small fruit—strawberries, 527 acres; raspberries, 1,754 acres; currants and gooseberries, 148 acres; orchards, 560 acres, of which 332 were apples. Total area of land, 1,595,802 acres, of which 874,336 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 89,743 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised:—10,400 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 2,924 unbroken horses; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 16,574; other cattle—two years and above, 17,133; one year and under two, 20,815; under one year, 15,103; ewes kept for breeding, 276,583; other sheep—one year and above, 147,972; under one year, 244,897; sows kept for breeding, 936; other pigs, 5,866.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 941; above 5 and not exceeding 50 acres, 1,328; above 50 and not exceeding 300 acres, 1,809; above 300 acres, 173.

The minerals are not of sufficient importance to be worked as a commercial venture. The only minerals raised in the county in 1909 were, gravel and sand, 1,171 tons; igneous rocks, 56,650 tons; limestone, 50 tons; sandstone, 13,543 tons, and slate, 5,246 tons. Marble of a superior quality is worked near Glenfilit. About Callander the species of rock called "breccia," or more familiarly, "plum pudding stone," is not uncommon; and here also, as in other parts, are various kinds of slate. A chain of sandstone runs from Gartree to the vicinity of Crieff; upon the Tay is one of the most celebrated stone quarries in this country; the principal stones of which the Grampians consist is granite. The principal industry in the towns and villages of Perthshire is the weaving of linen goods; in connection with this branch of manufacture, flax spinning mills and a considerable number of bleach fields have been established. The manufactures of the county are not, however, wholly confined to that of linen—tweeds, winceys, blankets, and other woollen goods being produced. Cotton spinning works are in operation at Stanley and Doune; and considerable dye works, distilleries, breweries and tanneries, together with iron foundries, engineering works &c. are found in several towns and villages.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—Perthshire abounds with extensive lakes and rivers. The chief rivers are the Tay, the Earn, the Garry, the Bran, the Almond, the Teath, the Allan, the Dochart, the Tummel, the Bruar, the Erich, the Ardie, the Shee, and the Isla—besides innumerable third and fourth-rate rivers and streamlets of all sizes. The Forth, from the rising in Stirlingshire, is not considered a Perthshire river, though it flows along a large portion of its south-west quarter. The chief lakes of the county are Loch Kattine, Loch Achray, Loch Ard, Loch Vail, Loch Lubnaiz, Loch Dochart and Loch Earn. Those are in the south-west part of the shire; Loch Tay is in the centre of the mountainous district, and Loch Rannoch, Loch Erich, and Loch Lydoch, the two latter in part only in the north-west quarter. In the lower division there are some smaller and less important lakes. The most remarkable mineral waters in this county are those of Pitcaithly, near the Bridge of Earn, which have long been famed for their efficacy in curing scrofula and complaints of the stomach.

The railway system comprises lines belonging to the Caledonian, the North British and the Highland railways, which all centre in the city of Perth. The Caledonian enters the county from Aberdeen at Alyth Junction (from which place is a short line to Alyth), passing through Coupar Angus (with a branch to Blairgowrie) and Carcell to Perth, and thence, by a line through the Carse of Gowrie, to Dundee; one, via Auchterarder and Dunblane, to Stirling (a branch from Dunblane running to Callender and Loch Tay and on to Oban), and one from Crieff Junction to Crieff, where it joins a line from Crieff to Comrie, from which place is a line to Lochearnhead on the Dunblane and Oban branch; another from Crieff to Methven Junction (with a short line to Methven) and Almond Bank. The North British enters the county at Newburgh, from Ladybank Junction, and at Gleafarg, from Mawcarse Junction, both lines running to Bridge of Earn and thence to Perth. The Highland railway runs from Perth, via Luncarty, Dunkeld, Ballinluig (whence there is a branch to Aberfeldy), Pitlochry, Blair Atholl and through Glengarry to Kingussie, thence to Inverness.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Perthshire comprehends 71 entire parishes. The county is divided into 10 districts, Athole, Balquhider, Breadalbane, Glenshee, Gowrie, Monteith, Rannoch Strathardie, Strathearn and Stormont; each under the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace court and deputy-lieutenants; it is further divided into two sheriff-substitute districts, called Eastern and Western, and controlled from Perth and Dunblane. The shire contains one royal burgh, the city of Perth, which returns one member to Parliament, and the county for parliamentary purposes is now separated into two divisions, and sends one member for each. The parliamentary constituency for 1911 was: East Division, 8,089; West Division, 8,715.

ABERFELDY is a town and police burgh in the parish of Dull, and in the poor combination of Atholl and Breadalbane, with a terminal station on a branch from Ballintuig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, and is 18 miles north-west from Dunkeld, 9 west from Logierait and 6 north-east from Kenmore; the town stands on the south bank of the beautiful river Tay, on the Great Highland road, which crosses the river by an elegant bridge of three arches, constructed by the celebrated Maj.-Gen. George Wade, sometime M.P. for Hindon and Bath, and who, during the years 1725-6, superintended the formation of a number of military roads in the Scottish Highlands. The town, which is lighted with gas, and well supplied with water, was constituted a police burgh in 1887 under the Lindsay Police Act of 1862, and is now governed by a provost, who is ex-officio a justice of the peace for the county, two bailies, and six councillors. A sheriff small debt court is held in the Town Hall on the last Saturday of March, July and November. Here are Established, Free, United Free, Congregational and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Margaret, and the Rev. John Harrison has been priest in charge since 1906. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a woollen factory, owned by Messrs. P. and J. Haggart. The principal hotels are the Breadalbane Arms and the Palace and Station hotels, all of which are much patronised in the season by visitors, more especially the "Breadalbane," on account of the facilities it affords for fishing in the Tay and Loch-na-Craig, this hotel having the privilege of the loch and a joint right with the Aberfeldy Angling Club in the river. The celebrated 42nd Highlanders, commonly known, on account of their dark tartan, as "the Black Watch," were enrolled in this district, but consisted in the first instance of armed detachments of loyal clans employed during the period 1725-39 to watch the Highlands. In 1887 a monument was erected here, in the form of a cairn, at a cost of about £500, to commemorate the formation of the regiment; this monument was struck down by lightning, but has been re-erected. In the neighbourhood are the romantic falls of Moness. Several fairs were formerly held in the course of the year; but the only one now is on the last Thursday in October for cattle and sheep; weekly cattle sales are held on Thursday. The Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C., D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the burgh is 224 acres; rateable value is £9,746; population in 1891, 1,469, and in 1901 was 1,508 in the burgh and 1,066 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ABERFOYLE is a parish and village, in the small debts court district of Dunblane; the parish is bounded on the north by Loch Katrine, and on the south by the Duchray water, and is remarkable for its picturesque scenery, its fine lakes and numerous streams, and the marked direction taken by the Grampians through the lower part of it, as well as for producing a great quantity of rare plants, of much interest to the botanist. The village, or "clachan," of Aberfoyle has a station on a branch from Stirling, via Buchlyvie, of the North British railway, and is about 18 miles north-west from Stirling and 27½ from Glasgow. There is an established church and a reading room. The Episcopal mission church of St. Mary will seat 200 persons; the Rev. George Ernest Day M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, has been incumbent since 1903. A Home Hospital for Glasgow children suffering from tubercular diseases of the bones and joints was opened here in 1903, and contains 21 cots. This place is the scene of some incidents in Sir Walter Scott's novel "Rob Roy," and at the head of the valley or pass lies Loch Ard, a bright and placid lake, surrounded by woods, above which rises the lofty Ben Lomond, one of whose summits is 3,192 feet above the level of the sea. A wooded promontory here jutting out into the water is said to have been the spot on which the skirmish described in "Rob Roy" occurred, and where Helen Macgregor made her first appearance. Loch Ard and Loch Choo, near Aberfoyle, are considered the earliest fly-fishing lochs in Scotland, fish taking readily early in March. In this parish is Ben Venue mountain, 2,333 feet high. The well-known Baillie Nicol Jarvie hotel here, mentioned in "Rob Roy," provides excellent accommodation to tourists and visitors, and affords a good supply of boats. An old tree outside the hotel has hanging from its branches, by a chain, the conlter of a plough, used by Baillie Nicol Jarvie. About a mile north of Loch Chon is the source of the river Forth. There is a good nine-hole golf course, a mile from the hotel. Fairs are held within the parish on the 3rd Tuesday in April, the first Friday in August, and the third Thursday in October. The Duke of Montrose K.T., A.D.C. is the principal landowner. The civil parish of Aberfoyle contains an area of 26,810 acres; rateable value, £28,839; population in 1891, 1,023, and in 1901, 1,052, and 1,016 in the ecclesiastical.

ABERNETHY is a parish and village and police burgh, formerly in the counties of Fife and Perth, but now included entirely in the latter, by order of the County Council commissioners. The parish is bounded by the river Earn on the north, on the east by Newburgh and Abdie, on the south by Auchtermuchty and Strathmiglo, and on the west by Dron and Arngask, and is between 5 and 6 miles both in breadth and length. The village, said to have been the capital of the Pictish kingdom of Scotland, is scattered, and is about two-thirds of a mile south-west of the river Earn, 8 miles south-east from Perth, and 14 west from Cupar, in Fife, with a station on the Ladybank Perth branch of the North British railway. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Here are Established and United Free churches. In an angle of the burial ground of the Established church stands a circular tower, about 75 feet high and 24 feet in diameter at its base. The date of its erection is unknown, but tradition ascribes its origin to the Picts. On the outside of the tower is yet to be seen the jouga (a padlocked collar and chain), used for the detention of offenders in bygone days. The inhabitants are for the most part employed in salmon fishing and weaving. Abernethy is a small village about a mile and a half to the west. Glenfoot is a hamlet. A hill, a little to the north of Binn farm, commands one of the finest views in Scotland, comprising Strathmore, Strathearn, the Grampians, Ochils, Sidlaws, the Pentlands hills, the Firth of Forth, Lochleven Castle, Glen Farg &c. Mrs. Amy Balfour Hay-Neave, of Magdram and Carpen estates, and the Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield D.L. of Soane Palace, are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 9,233 acres; burgh, 45 acres; rateable value, landward, £9,706; burgh, £1,778; population in 1891, 1,550, and in 1901, 1,276, and burgh, 623.

ALYTH is a town and police burgh and parish in the poor law combination of Perth and in the small debt court division of Blairgowrie. The parish formerly extended into Forfarshire, and included a portion of Mount Blair, a conspicuous hill 2,260 feet above the level of the sea, but under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 40 to 50), boundary order 82, the Forfarshire portion has been transferred to this county. The parish is divided into two considerable parishes by the hills of Alyth, Loyal and Barry. The southern district lying in the strath is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and, as well as the tract of land towards the hills, is fertile and verdant, and watered by the river Tala and several smaller streams. The town, pleasantly situated at the base of a range of hills on the small river Alyth, is 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 20 north-north-east from Perth, 17 north-west from Dundee, 12 west from Forfar, 5 north-east from Blairgowrie, and 4 north-west from Meigle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, completed in 1861. The town is lighted with gas, and plentifully supplied with good water, and being within an easy distance of Dundee, receives a number of visitors from that neighbourhood during the summer months. A new and substantial stone bridge was erected in 1883 over the Alyth stream, at a cost of nearly £900. Alyth was created a burgh of barony by James III. but in 1862 the Lindsay Police Act was adopted and the town is now governed (according to the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Acts, 1892 and 1903") by a Town Council, consisting of a provost, two bailies and six councillors. A police court is held when necessary. The parish church is an imposing edifice of stone in the Norman style, with tower and lofty spire. There are two United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church of St. Ninian, built in 1856, will seat 150 persons; the rectory, net value £400, has been held since 1909 by the Rev. John Seymour Granville Hill M.A. of Cavendish College, Cambridge; attached is the church of St. Margaret at Meigle. There are two mills employed in the manufacture of linen, and another for making woollens &c. and the combined factories afford work for a large number of the inhabitants. Fairs are held for hiring, cattle and sheep, the third Tuesday in May and the first Wednesday after 12th November. Two newspapers are published here, "The Alyth Guardian," on Fridays, and "The Alyth Gazette," on Tuesdays. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. The Public Library was erected from a bequest of £300 left by the late Hon. William Oxley, of Loyal, who also bequeathed the interest of a further sum of £200 for its support, and it now contains several thousand volumes. There are also several other benefactions, including the Baldoch fund, a sum of £30 per annum, bequeathed by the late Gilbert Hay esq. for the education and clothing of six boys and six girls, those of the names of Hay and Halkett being preferred; now merged, along with the Duncan, Fleming and Robertson Mortifications, into a new scheme under the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Commission; the Fenton Mortification, being £800 left by Mr. John Fenton, for providing coals and clothing for the poor, and the Ramsay bequest, being the interest of £418 left by the late Dowager Lady Ramsay, of Bamff, to be distributed annually among the poor of the district. The late James Duncan esq. bequeathed a sum of £3,000, the income of which is to be applied to the assistance of deserving poor, being residents of the parish and burgh of Alyth, and not in receipt of parish relief. Bamff House is the residence of Sir James Henry Ramsay bart. M.A., D.L., J.P. The curators of the Earl of Airlie (a minor) are lords of the manor and the principal landowners. The entire civil parish contains an acreage of 23,296; rateable value, landward £17,095, burghal £8,492; population, 1891, 3,453, and in 1901, 3,025, of which the town contained 1,965; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,882.

Post, T. M. O. & Telephonic E. D. Office (letters should be addressed Perthshire); Charles F. Reid, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.45 a.m. & 5.45 p.m.; dispatches, 11.55, 2.30 5.15 & 9.50 p.m. No delivery on Sundays; letters to callers 10.45 a.m. to 11.10 a.m.; dispatch, 8.50 p.m. Telegraph office open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Post car is dispatched to Killy, Glenisla & Folda at 8.30 a.m.

ARDOCH, see BRACO.

ARNGASK is a parish containing the village of GLENFARG, formerly considered as in the counties of Kinross, Fife and Perth, but now under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), wholly in Perthshire, except on the occasion of parliamentary elections, when the ballot is divided between the three counties. The parish is about 4 miles in diameter, and included in the small debt court district of Perth, the church being half a mile east from Glenfarg station on the Mawcrae Junction and Perth branch of the North British railway, and about 6½ miles north from Kinross. The Farg, together with other streams in the vicinity, afford good sport to the angler, and present some beautiful scenery. The parish contains an Established church, in the churchyard of which is the grave of Major-Gen. John Agmondensham Vesey Kirkland D.L., J.P., F.R.G.S. of Forde, interred here 27 March, 1896; he raised the 2nd Battalion of the 5th Foot in 1857, and commanded it for 12 years; here also is buried Gen. Robert Bruce, of Glendouglie, late Commander of Her Majesty's forces in Scotland, who died Oct. 14th, 1891. There is also a United Free church and a Public Hall. Adjoining the village of Glenfarg is a 9-hole golf course, 600 feet above the sea level. Duncrieve and Dranzie are hamlets, about a mile from Glenfarg railway station. Acreage, 6,452; rateable value, £7,657; population in 1901, 593.

Post, T., M. O. & Telephone Call Office, Glenfarg (letters should be addressed Perthshire); Peter Anderson, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 8.20 p.m.; dispatched, 10.15 a.m. & 2.20 & 5.15 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters

AUCHTERARDER is a town and police burgh, the head of a presbytery, and a parish, in the small debts court district of Perth, and poor law combination of Upper Strathearn. The town stands on the high road between Perth and Stirling, and on the south of the river Earn, 14 miles south-west from Perth and 20 north-north-east from Stirling, and has a station, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Stirling section of the Caledonian railway. It was once a royal burgh, but under the provisions of the "Bargh Police (Scotland) Act, 1832," it is now governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 councillors. Under a special Act of Parliament the town owns about 200 acres of arable land, now vested in the Town Council. The town is lighted with gas by a private company, and an ample supply of excellent water is obtained from the Duchally and Crook of the Moss springs. There is an Established church, three United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Kessog will seat 200 persons; the Rev. John Greeson has been priest in charge since 1904. Aytoun Hall, which stands in the centre of the town, was erected in 1872 by the inhabitants as a memorial to the late Captain Aytoun. Glendevon, who in 1832 provided the town with its first water supply. The principal manufactures are fancy shirtings and woollen goods. The corn market is held on Saturday, and live stock sales every alternate Saturday. Auchterarder House is the residence of Andrew T. Reid esq. and Cloan, of Mrs. Haldane. Andrew T. Reid esq. of Auchterarder House; Robert Cairns esq.; the Earl of Camperdown; Lord Rollo D.L. of Dunning, and Viscount Haldane P.C. are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 11,181 acres; rateable value, £21,087; population in 1891, 3,494, and in 1901, 3,159, including 41 in Upper Strathearn Combination Poorhouse; the town population in 1901 was 2,276.

Post, T. & M. O. & Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office, Auchterarder, Perthshire; Regional William Barnard, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 3.20 & 6.45 p.m.; dispatches, 5 & 10.30 a.m. & 1.50, 3.35, 4.50, 5.5 & 7.30 p.m.; sunday delivery to callers only 9 to 10 a.m.; dispatch, 7.20 a.m. & 3.35 p.m.
 Post messengers for Findo Gask, Trinity Gask, Aberthvane, Cloanden, Coull, Duchally & Tullihardine, are dispatched at 7.30 a.m.

AUCHTERGAVERN is a parish, in the small debt court district of Perth, and lies on the south-west bank of the Tay, and on the south-east side of Birnam hill. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), parts of the parish were transferred to Moneydie and Monzie parishes, and a part of Methven added to Auchtergavern. There is an Established church and two United Free churches. In the parish are extensive linen works. The Duke of Atholl K.T. is the principal landowner. The acreage of the parish is 13,056; rateable value, £14,087; the population in 1891, 2,081, and in 1901, 2,018, of which Bankfoot contained 656; of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,250.

BANKFOOT village in this parish is on the road from Perth to Dunkeld, with a terminal station of the Bankfoot light railway, opened in 1906, from Strathrod station on the Perth and Dunkeld section of the Caledonian system, about 9 miles north-west from Perth and 6 south-east from Dunkeld. Here is an Episcopalian mission church, attached to St. Columba's, Stanley.

 LITTLE.

BALQUHIDDER is a Highland parish, in the western extremity of the county, among the Grampians, and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The village, situated at the east end of Loch Voil, is 3 miles from Balquhiddier station, and 12 north-west from Callander, and is remarkable as the last residence of the famous Rob Roy (Robert Macgregor Campbell), a highland chieftain, born in 1660, who became a freebooter in 1716, and died in 1735; his grave is pointed out in the churchyard, and was visited by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and Princesses Louise and Beatrice in 1869. The parish is mountainous and pastoral, and the numerous acclivities it contains have originated the popular reference to the "Braes of Balquhiddier"; among its mountainous peaks Ben Chabhair and Stobinan rise in conspicuous superiority, and the lakes include Loch Doine, Loch Voil (4 miles long), part of Loch Lubnaig, and part of Loch Earn, with others of minor celebrity. The rivers Lochlarig and Balvaig flow through the centre of the parish. Here is an Established church. Between Kingshouse and Balquhiddier is the family vault of the MacGregors, of Edinchip; James Carnegie esq. D.L., J.P. of Stronvar; Mrs. B. B. Hamilton, of Strathrye; Lady Helen L. MacGregor, of Edinchip; the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. and the trustees of the late John Stewart McDonald esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 51,674 acres; rateable value, £8,548; population, civil, in 1901, 605; ecclesiastical, which includes part of Comrie, 709.

LOCHEARNHEAD is a beautiful little village, standing at the head of Loch Earn, from which it derives its name, and has a station on the Crieff and Comrie section of the Caledonian railway. Here is a United Free church, serving also for Balquhiddier. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Angus, situated here, is served from Callander. The village was twice visited by H.M. the late Queen Victoria, the first time with the Prince Consort in 1842, and again in September, 1863, in company with the Princesses Louise and Beatrice, who stayed at the hotel while on a visit to the late Rear-Admiral Sir Malcolm Macgregor and Lady Helen Macgregor, whose seat, Edinchip, is within half a mile of the village. The loch, which lies at the foot of Glen Orle, a wild pass, or outlet, from the Breadalbane country and the north-western Highlands, is 7 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and said to be 100 fathoms deep. The beautiful situation and quiet character of the place, with the many objects of interest, and the fine scenery, attract many visitors, tourists and private families during the summer months. The views include the fine scenery about the lake, the upper part of Strathearn, and the mountains, one of which (Benvoirlich) rises from the shore to a height of 3,300 feet. There is a golf course of 9 holes in connection with the hotel, and excellent fishing, free to parties staying at the hotel, may be had in the loch. An omnibus meets the principal trains. Population returned with the parish.

STRATHRYE is a small village in the parish of Balquhiddier, 8 miles north-west from Callander, and has a station on the Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway. Here is a Mission church, a good hotel, an inn, and a temperance hotel. Population returned with the parish. The Strathrye and Balquhiddier districts of the parish, as well as Lochearnhead, are favourite summer resorts for visitors. The village is well sheltered from the east wind, and excellent fishing can be had in Loch Lubnaig, free to those staying at the hotels. In the village is a monument, erected by the inhabitants in 1883, to Dougal or Dugald Buchanan, a celebrated Gaelic poet, who was born here in 1716, and died at Kinloch Rannock, 2 July, 1768.

BIRNAM, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

BLACKFORD is a parish and village with a station on the main line of the Caledonian railway from Edinburgh to Aberdeen, and is 10 miles north-east from Dunblane and 5 south-west from Auchterarder. The parish extends 10 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 4 to 6 miles; it is in the Upper Strathearn poor combination and the small debt court district of Dunblane, and is bounded north by Trinity Gask, east by Auchterarder, south by Glendevon and part of Clackmannan and west by Muthill and Ardoch. Crieff Junction station on the North British and Caledonian railways, is also in this parish. Lying at the north-west end of the Ochil hills, the southern portion of the parish is hilly, the soil north of this being of sandy nature, with a rolling surface. In the village are Established and United Free churches, the Moray institute and a Public Library. Here also is a branch of the Bank of Scotland, two breweries, and two boot and shoe manufactories. South of the railway are Glenaeles, the seat of the Earl of Camperdown, and the ruins of old Kincardine Castle, once a stronghold of the Graham family, now Dukes of Montrose and Earls of Kincardine, while north of the railway are the ruins of Tullibardine Castle and chapel, the former a possession of the Murrays of Tullibardine, ancestors of the Dukes of Athol; the chapel was the burial place of the Drummond family, Earls of Perth and Viscounts Strathallan. Strathallan Castle, about 6 miles to the north of the village, is at present the residence of Sir James Roberts, and Machany House, in the same neighbourhood, is occupied by Viscounts Strathallan. Capt. W. A. H. Drummond-Moray D.L., J.P. of Tealing House, Dundee, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 20,991 acres; rateable value, £16,866; population in 1901, 1,531 parish, 697 village.

TULLIBARDINE is a scattered village, in this parish, 3 miles north-west of Auchterarder, with a station on the Crieff Junction and Comrie section of the Caledonian railway.

BLAIR ATHOLL,

WITH THE BRIDGE OF TILT, CALVINE AND STRUAN.

BLAIR ATHOLL is a parish and small village in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district; what is now designated the parish of Blair Atholl formerly consisted of four parishes, viz.: Blair, Lude, Kilmaveonaig and Strowan. The district of Atholl is 45 miles in length and 30 in breadth, and the parish is 24 miles from north-east to south-west, and 20 from north to south. It lies on the north-west Highlands of Perthshire, bounded on the south by Fortingal, Foss, and Moulis, and on the north by Inverness and Aberdeen-shire, and on the east by Kirkmichael and Moulis, and on the west by Rannoch, and contains a large tract of Highland territory, several of the mountains of which are covered with large and beautiful woods, interspersed with fertile vales. The valley of the Garry, from the pass of Killiecrankie to the point of Strowan, may be considered the nucleus of the parish. The principal lakes and rivers are Loch Garry and Loch Tummel, and the Tummel, Tilt, and Garry, all abounding with a variety of fish. The woods in the neighbourhood are very fine, some of the larches being the oldest in Scotland. Three miles to the west of the village are the Falls of Bruar, consisting of a succession of cascades in a ravine of romantic beauty. The banks are covered with woods, planted by former Dukes of Atholl. The mountains in the parish are Ben Dearg, 3,304 feet; Ben-a-Ghlo, 3,671 and Ben Uliaman, 3,306 feet in height. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1883" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Dull and Moulis have been added to this parish. The village of Blair Atholl stands on the north side of the river Garry, and on the road from Dunkeld to Inverness, 20 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 7 north-west from Pitlochry, and has a station on the Perth and Grantown section of the Highland railway; it is lighted with electricity, supplied from the castle at Old Blair since 1911, and there is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and two hotels. The parish church, situated between the villages of Blair and Bridge of Tilt, is a plain structure. The United Free church was erected in 1856. The old Episcopal church of Kilmaveonaig is an ancient edifice, dating from 1591: it was rebuilt in 1794 and will seat 100 persons: it is now a Mission church, the Rev. Canon C. J. K. Bowstead M.A. of Durham University, having been priest in charge since 1899. Tullibardine Institute, built in 1907, comprises a public hall, drill hall and reading, billiard and refreshment rooms. Blair Castle, the family seat of the Duke of Atholl K.T. is within a short distance of the village, and has been restored from designs by Mr. Bryce, architect, of Edinburgh. The Duke of Atholl K.T. and William M'Inroy esq. J.P. of Lude, are the principal landowners. The area is 187,926 acres; rateable value, £24,359; population in 1891, 1,808, and in 1901, 1,722; ecclesiastical, 1,501, of which Blair Atholl and Bridge of Tilt numbered 367.

BRIDGE OF TILT is a small village in this parish, separated only from Blair Atholl by the water of Tilt, which is here crossed by a bridge, as the name indicates. Here is a United Free church.

CALVINE is a hamlet in this parish. The scenery around is very charming, and includes Glen Tilt and the Falls of Fender. Here is an Established Mission church. The principal heritor of the parish is the Duke of Atholl K.T. Struan railway station is half a mile distant. Population returned with the parish.

STRUAN, or Strowan, is a small village in the parish of Blair Atholl, and 5 miles north, with a station on the Highland railway. Here is an Established church, and in the churchyard is a remarkable stone with a Runic inscription; there is also a United Free Mission church. Population returned with the parish.

BLAIR DRUMMOND, see THORN HILL.

BLAIRGOWRIE is a town and a parish in the poor law combination of Perth. The parish, about 11 miles in length and 3 miles wide, is beautifully situated, on the southern slope of the range of hills which bound the valley of Strathmore on the north, and at the mouth of the pass through which runs the great north road to Fort George, and is divided by the Grampian Hills, which rise immediately north of the town. By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1888, boundary order 72, parts of the parishes of Bendochy and Kinloch have been added to Blairgowrie, and part of Blairgowrie annexed to Bendochy. The town is 12 miles east from Dunkeld, 5½ south-west from Alyth, and 4½ north from Coupar Angus, with a terminal station on a branch from Coupar Angus, of the Caledonian railway, opened in 1855. The river Erlich passes close to the town, forming the eastern boundary of the parish, and propels the machinery of several flax-spinning mills; there are also engineering works and a brewery, and of recent years it has developed a very large fruit growing industry, principally raspberries. On account of its attractive surroundings, the salubrity of the air, and the numerous lovely walks in the environs, the town is much frequented in summer by families from a distance. Blairgowrie was created a burgh of barony in 1634, by a charter from Charles I. The government erected under the burgh charters has now been superseded under the "Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1895," and subsequent Acts, by a Town Council, consisting of a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A sheriff's small debt court is held for the disposal of cases not exceeding £20 on the second Saturday in January and the first Saturday in April, July and October. A police court sits when necessary. There are two Established and two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Congregational chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Catherine, built in 1842, will seat 150 persons; the Rev. Frederick William David, of St. Edmund Hall, Oxford, has been rector since 1870. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, as well as a savings bank. One newspaper, viz.: the "Blairgowrie Advertiser," is published here on Saturday. Fairs and markets are held here as follows: Whitsunday Feeing Market, fourth Tuesday in May; Martinmas Feeing Market, last Tuesday in November; After Martinmas Feeing Market, early in December; Fair of Blair, Tuesday following fourth Monday of July; cattle markets, alternate Tuesdays. In the vicinity are the remains of the castle of Glasclune, a strikingly picturesque ruin, situated on the precipitous bank of a narrow wooded glen, about 2 miles from the town. Excellent trout and salmon fishing is obtainable in the Erlich, the Tay, the Isla and the burns of the Lunan and Lorny (all within a moderate distance of the town), and capital perch and pike fishing may be had in the several lochs in the neighbourhood. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., P.C., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G. is the principal landowner, and Mrs. McPherson, of Blairgowrie House, is the lady of the manor and also a landowner. BRACO (otherwise ARDOCH) is a village in Upper Strathearn poor law combination and in the small debt court division of Dunblane; in the village is on the Knai- water and the road from Dunblane to Crieff, 1 mile north from Greenloaning station on the Dunblane and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and about 9 south from Crieff. Here are Established and United Free churches. In the parish are the remains of a Roman camp, forming an oblong of 140 yards by 125 within the lines; the Prætorium, or "general's quarters," which is a regular square of twenty yards on each side, rises above the level of the camp, and contains the foundation of a house ten yards by seven.
 Adjoining are two other encampments communicating with each other; various interesting relics recovered from these fortifications, including helmets, fragments of brides, and other articles, preserved for a considerable time at the house of Ardoch, were carried off by soldiers in the Duke of Argyll's army after the battle of Sheriffmuir in 1715. This place, since 1735, has afforded the title of baron to the Duff family, now represented by the Duke of Fife K.T., G.C.V.O., P.C. V.D.
 Braco Castle is the seat of Patrick Powell
 Nesa esq. Ardoch is the residence of A.
 R. Wilson Wood esq. and Orchill the property and residence of the Rev. Thomas Crawford B.D. Lieut.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond D.L. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner.
 Ardoch parish, in which Braco village is situated, was erected in 1885 from the parishes of Blackford, Dunblane and Mut-hill. The area of the parish comprises 20,715 acres; rateable value, £13,456; the population in 1891 was 959, and in 1901, 916 civil, and 964 ecclesiastical.

GREENLOANING is a hamlet in this parish, 6 miles south-south-west from Mut-hill, with a station on the Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway, and has a United Free church.

CALLANDER is a modern police burgh and a parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dunblane. The parish extends from the banks of the Teith to the Gramplains, and is about 18 miles in length by a breadth of from 4 to 8 miles. The village is situated in a beautiful valley on both sides of the Teith, here crossed by a bridge of three arches, and is 52 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 south-west from Perth, 45 north from Glasgow, 16 north-west from Stirling and 8 north-west from Doune, with a station on the Dunblane, Doune, Callander and Killin Junction branch of the Caledonian railway, and is completely sheltered on the north by a line of precipitous crags, 700 or 800 feet high, partly covered with wood. The streets are disposed on a regular plan and contain a number of buildings of some architectural merit. The village is lighted with gas by a company, and has a good supply of water brought from Loch Lubnag, which is in the parish, and 3 miles north-west, and conveyed to the town by gravitation. By the adoption of the "Police (Scotland) Act, 1862," the place was constituted a police burgh, and is now governed by a provost, two magistrates and six councillors; an approved system of drainage has been carried out, the sewerage being conveyed to a meadow a mile distant and there utilised. The scenery around Callander is uncommonly beautiful; immediately above the village is a lovely spot formed by the junction of two little rivers, issuing respectively from Loch Lubnag and Loch Vennacher, and unitedly forming the Teith. Two miles west of Callander is the pass of Leny, which affords access to a delightful range of mountain prospect; the bridge of Bracklin is another fine point in the scenery and the ride to Loch Katrine and the Trossachs, about 9 miles from the village, is extremely fine. Callander is generally a most convenient centre for a number of excursions through scenery of every variety, but owes its prosperity chiefly to the fame of the romantic scenery of the Trossachs, 9 miles distant, and reached during the season by coaches from the railway station; a great number of visitors and tourists come here during the summer. Loch Katrine is 9 miles long and nearly 1 broad, and at the east of it is Ellens Isle; Loch Vennacher, 4 miles long and 1 broad, is in this parish. From Loch Katrine the city of Glasgow obtains its supply of water, which is conveyed in a tunnel 6,975 feet long, through a range of mountains south of the Loch, to Loch Chon, thence in tunnels and aqueducts 26 miles long to Murdock reservoir, where-in is stored 500,000,000 gallons of water; it is then conveyed in double pipes to Glasgow. In the parish are four mountains, viz.: Ben Ledi, 2,875 feet; Stoba Chon, 2,833; Ben Vane, 2,655; and Ben Ann, 1,800 feet in height. There are established and United Free churches and a Mission hall. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Andrew, and the Rev. Henry Leonard Skinner has been rector since 1905. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The principal hotels are the Dreadnought, the Ancaster Arms, The Crown, and the Caledonian temperance hotel, and there is a Hydro-paathic Establishment. The Earl of Ancaster T.D. Viscount Esher G.C.B., G.C.V.O. the Earl of Moray, John Hamilton Buchanan esq. of Leny, Mrs. B. B. Hamilton, of Cambusmore, Donald McLaren esq. J.P. of Bracklin, and William H. Marshall esq. of Callander, are the principal landowners. The civil parish of Callander has an area of 51,186 acres; burgh, 273 acres; rateable value, £25,677; the population in 1891 was 2,273, and 1901, of burgh, 1,458, parish, 2,171.

The TROSSACHS is the name given to a mountainous district in the western portion of the parish, containing some of the most magnificent lake and mountain scenery in all Scotland. It is a quad sacra parish formed from the civil parishes of Aberfoyle, Callander and Port of Monteith (or Monteith), and has an Established church. There is an hotel here, on the bank of Lake Achray. The population in 1901 was 351.

The BRIDGE OF TURK, made famous by the couplet (vide Sir Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake," The Chase, Canto I).—

"And when the Bridge of Turk was won,
The headmost horseman rode alone," is a small hamlet in this parish, and contains the ruins of a very large and handsome hotel, unfortunately burned down some time ago. The nearest railway station is at Callander, 6½ miles east. The population in 1901 was 106.

CALVINE, see BLAIR ATHOLL.

CAPUTH is an extensive parish and small village, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 31, 32, 40, 72 and 74, parts of this parish have been transferred to the parishes of Clunie, Collace, Dunkeld and Dowally, Kinloch, Kirkonichol and Kinnetles in Forfarshire and a part of Clunie added to Caputh. The village stands on the banks of the river Tay, and on the road from Perth to Dunkeld, and is 5 miles east from Dunkeld, and 1 north from Murthly station on the Perth and Dunkeld section of the Highland railway. There are Established and United Free churches. A Parish Hall was erected in 1909 at the cost of Alexander Park Lyle esq.; there is also a Parish Library at Spittalfield. There are three small lakes in the parish, on the Lunan brook. Spittalfield and Meikleour are small villages in this parish, from 3 to 5½ miles distant. Delvine House, the property and residence of Charles George Ogilvie esq. is situated in an extensive park, stocked with deer. Stentan is the seat of Lord Dunedin P.C., K.C.V.O. Charles George Ogilvie esq. and the Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., P.C., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G. are the principal landowners. The area is 10,083 acres; rateable value, £10,222; population in 1891, 1,179, and in 1901, 1,005; ecclesiastical parish, 1,743.

CARGILL is a parish and village, in the vale of Strathmore, and in the poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; its extent from east to west is about 6 miles, and from north to south about 4 miles, and it is bounded on the south by Collace and Saint Martins, on the west by the river Tay, on the north-west by the river Isla, on the north-east by Coupar-Angus, and on the east by Kettins and Longfargan. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, a part of Some parish has been annexed to Cargill. The rivers Tay and Isla, flowing southwards, unite in this parish at a point a short distance north of the village, which is 4½ miles south-west from Coupar-Angus, and 9 miles from Perth, and has a station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway. The parish church, erected in 1832, is a plain but substantial edifice. The Earl of Ancaester is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The parish is purely agricultural, the soil varying from a heavy clay to a light sandy loam; it has an area of 10,216 acres; rateable value, £13,260; population in 1901, 1,411 civil and 1,342 ecclesiastical.

BURRELTON is a village in this parish, adjoining Woodside, where is the nearest railway station, which is called Woodside and Burrelton, and is 2 miles south-west from Coupar-Angus. The Public Hall here, opened in 1897, at a cost of £600, will hold 400 persons.

WOODSIDE is a village in this parish, 2 miles south-west from Coupar-Angus, on the main road from Coupar-Angus to Perth, with a station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway and a United Free church. The population of Burrelton and Woodside in 1901 was 510.

WOLFHILL is a hamlet in this parish, 3 miles from Cargill, the nearest railway station, and 6 from Coupar-Angus, and has a United Free church.

CARSIE, see BLAIRGOWRIE.CLIFTON, see KILLIN.

CLUNIE is a parish consisting of the hamlets of Craigue, Concraigie and Forneth, in the poor law combination of Logierait and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie. The parish includes part of the lower range of the Grampians, which are barren, and covered with heather. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, part of Caputh parish has been transferred to this parish. The village is 5 miles west from Blairgowrie, where is a station on a branch from Coupar-Angus of the Caledonian railway, and 5 miles from Murthly, which has a station on the Highland railway. There are Established and United Free churches. The loch of Clunie, one of the most beautiful of the smaller lakes in the country, is about one mile long by 800 yards wide and contains a small island, on which stands an ancient tower, the property of W. H. Cox esq. and supposed to have been the birthplace, in 1561, of James Crichton, better known as the "Admirable Crichton," whose father, Sir Robert Crichton, Lord Advocate of Scotland, was then proprietor of the barony of Clunie. The tower is still in good repair, and partly furnished, though rarely occupied, but is open to strangers desirous of visiting it. Marlee and Benachally lochs are also in this parish. The parish has an area of 11,869 acres; rateable value, £6,920; population, 1901, 561 civil and 493 ecclesiastical.

FORNETH (or Williamsburgh) is a small and scattered village in this parish, 5½ miles from Blairgowrie railway station and 7 from Dunkeld. James Speid esq. is the principal landowner.

Post Office, Forneth; Peter Roy, sub-postmaster. Letters through Blairgowrie arrive from all parts at 10.30 a.m. & are dispatched to all parts at 2.20 p.m. Letters also arrive through Dunkeld at 10.30 a.m. & are dispatched at 11.25 a.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order office is at Spittalfield & telegraph office at Butterstone, 3 miles distant COLLACE is a parish and village surrounded by the parishes of Cargill, St. Martins, Kinnaid and Abernety, and is 4 miles south from Woodside station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway and 8 north from Perth, and in the small debt court district of Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 31, part of Caputh parish and of Kettins parish in Forfarshire have been transferred to this parish. The parish church is a Gothic structure with a square tower, erected in 1813; there is also a United Free church. Freestone of good quality abounds in the parish. The hill of Dunsinane, 1,114 feet above the sea level, is in this parish. Upon this insulated site (rendered famous by Shakespeare ("Macbeth," Act v.), Macbeth, the Thane of Glamis, in 1043, erected a strong and lofty castle, for the purpose of keeping the surrounding country in subjection. In 1054 an overwhelming force under Siward, Earl of Northumberland, supported by Edward the Confessor, the reigning King of England, marched upon the stronghold on behalf of Malcolm III. son of King Duncan, whom Macbeth had previously murdered. Macbeth fled northwards, but was pursued and slain, according to tradition, at Lumphannan, in Aberdeenshire, in 1056 or 1057. The fortress was razed to the ground. John Mackay Bernard esq. of Dunsinnan, is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 3,494 acres; rateable value, £3,400; population in 1891, 419, and in 1901, 440 civil and 410 ecclesiastical.

KINROSSIE is a small village in the parish of Collace.

Post Office, Kinrossie; Mrs. Jessie Simpson, sub-postmistress. Letters through Perth. Deliveries, 9.30 a.m.; dispatch, 12.45 a.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Balbeggie, 2½ miles distant

COMRIE is a parish, in the Upper Strathern poor law combination and small debt court district of Crieff, and a village, with a station on a branch from Crieff to Balquhider of the Caledonian line: the parish is 58 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 24 west from Perth and 6½ west from Crieff, and lies in a beautiful and romantic valley at the foot of the Gramplians, and on the north bank of the Earn, at the junction of the Lednock. Loch Earn, 7 miles long and nearly 1½ broad, is on the western extremity of the parish, and from it flows the river Earn, alongside of which there is a public road through the valley of Strothearn. There is an Established and two United Free churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Serf, and the Rev. Harold Bayall B.A. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, has been priest in charge since 1904; attached to this church is Christ church, St. Fillan, which is only used during the summer months. Ben Vorlich Mountain, 3,224 feet high, is in this parish. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 59), boundary order 98, parts of Monzievaird and Strowan parish, with a population of 27, and Muthill parish, with 35, have been annexed to this parish. In the neighbourhood, on the plain of Dalginross, are vestiges of Roman encampments, where it is said the Roman general Agricola fought the Caledonians under Galgacus; there are also several stone circles, a monument of granite, 72 feet high, erected in 1815, to Henry Dundas, 1st Viscount Melville (d. 1811), and another memorial of the same material, 80 feet high, to General the Right Hon. Sir David Baird K.C.B., P.C. a distinguished military commander (d. 1823). Glenartney Lodge is the residence of the Earl of Ancaster, and Dunira of Sir George Whyte Melville Dundas bart. The Earl of Ancaster is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Comrie civil parish has an area of 82,303 acres; rateable value, £22,447; population in 1891, 1,591, and in 1901, 2,068; of this number the village had 1,118; the population of the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Comrie, Monzievaird and Strowan and Muthill, in 1901 was 1,609.

SAINT FILLANS is an ecclesiastical parish and village in the civil parish of Comrie, 5½ miles west-north-west from the village of Comrie, and 12 from Crieff, with a railway station on a branch from Crieff to Balquhider of the Caledonian line: the village lies, and is pleasantly seated, at the foot of Loch Earn, where boats are kept for fishing parties or other visitors attracted hither by the delightful scenery of this district. There are Established and United Free churches, and also an Episcopal Mission church: in the village is an hotel.

COUPAR-ANGUS

COUPAR-ANGUS is a police burgh and market town and parish, in the poor law combination of Perth and small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is pleasantly situated on the Isla, a few miles above its junction with the Tay, on the main roads from Dundee to Blairgowrie and from Perth to Forfar. A small stream, tributary to the Isla, divides the town into two parts. The town is 15 miles north-west from Dundee, 12½ east-by-north from Perth and 4½ south-south-east from Blairgowrie, on the main line of the Caledonian railway, and is the junction of a branch line from Dundee to Blairgowrie. The parish of Coupar-Angus, which is near the base of the Sidlaw Hills, extends for 5 miles along the east bank of the river Isla, and varies from one to two miles in breadth; the surface is arable and meadow land, and is well cultivated and enclosed. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 92, that part of Coupar-Angus formerly in Forfarshire, with a population of 273, has been transferred to this county for civil purposes, but remains in Forfar for parliamentary purposes. The town is governed by a town council, consisting of a provost, two bailies, and six councillors, and is well built and lighted with gas. A new drainage system was introduced in 1885 and completed in 1887, at a cost of about £4,500. The Town Council is the local authority for sanitary affairs, and under its auspices the town is plentifully supplied with good water from the estate of Hallyburton, about two miles south from Coupar-Angus. The church, a modern building erected on the old site, is an edifice in the Gothic style, surrounded by a large graveyard containing a number of ancient tombs and monuments. There are also two United Free churches and Evangelical Union and Original Secession churches. The Episcopal church of St. Anne, built in 1848, will seat 175 persons; the rectory, net value £190, has been held since 1902 by the Rev. J. H. Forrest-Bell. The Town Hall, a substantial building in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Mr. James Smart, of Perth, was opened in August, 1887, at a cost of about £3,500, defrayed by public subscription; the public hall is 64 feet in length by 38 feet in breadth, and is capable of seating 600 persons; there are also billiard, recreation and other rooms and a commissioners' hall. The venerable steeple in Queen street is used as a clock tower. The street formerly called Abbey street is now Queen street, to perpetuate the remembrance of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria having passed through Coupar-Angus in 1849. The market day is Thursday, and a fair is held on the third Thursday in March for cattle and horses. Early closing day, Wednesday. There are linen and jute factories and preserve works. In the town are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and the County and City of Perth Savings Bank. The "Royal" is the principal hotel. In ancient times this place was the seat of an abbey of Cistercian monks, founded by Malcolm IV. in 1164, and endowed with considerable revenues by that monarch; but at the Reformation the buildings were destroyed by a mob from Perth; the remains, consisting of little more than a single arch and the manse of the United Free church, occupy part of the site of a Roman camp, said to have been formed by the army of Agricola in his seventh expedition. James Carmichael J.P. of Arthurstone, Edward Collins-Wood esq. of Keithick, William D. Graham Menzies esq. of Hallyburton, Sir George Kinloch bart. of Kinloch, Col. William Clark, of Princesland, and the Hon. Morton Gray Stuart-Gray, of Kinfauns, are the principal landowners. Coupar-Angus civil parish has an area of 4,699 acres; burgh, 161 acres; rateable value, landward, £9,061; burghal, £8,818; the population in 1901 was 2,704, of which the burgh contained 2,064 and the ecclesiastical parish, 2,120.

CRIEFF

ORIEFF is a market town and police burgh under the "General Police (Scotland) Act, 1892," and is a parish in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination; a sheriff small debt court is held quarterly on the first Saturday in March, June, September and December. The town has a railway station on the Caledonian line and is 22 miles south from Stirling, 17 west from Perth and 6 1/2

 east from Comrie, in Upper Strathearn,
 one of the most delightful districts in Scotland, on the declivity of a hill, forming part of the southern range of the Grampsians, having the Earn and several other streams at its foot, and behind it the Knoea of Crieff and other eminences, all of a considerable altitude. Upper Strathearn includes the months of several important passes, the Sma' Glen being the site of a Roman station, and according to tradition, the burial place of Ossian. It extends also into the highlands of Perthshire, having a wild mountainous region on the one side and rich, soft vales on the other. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), part of Crieff parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Fowlis-Wester, a part with 12 to Muthill, and a part to Monzie and Strowan, without population, and by the same Act, by boundary order 98, a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 134, added to Crieff. The town is governed by a town council, consisting of provost, two bailies and nine councillors. St. Michael's church is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, with a tower on the south-west. Here is also the West parish church, two United Free churches, Congregational, Roman Catholic and Baptist chapels, mission halls and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal churches of St. Columba and St. Michael will hold 625 persons & 120 persons respectively; the Rev. Canon William Macdonald Meredith M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, has been rector since 1897. Morrison's Academy was endowed by the late Thomas Morrison, builder, Edinburgh, who bequeathed about £20,000 for this purpose, and the trustees purchased the site on which the academy is erected, and have since built a wing at the east end for the rector and for boarders. Taylor's Institution, now a board school, without endowment, was founded and endowed by William Taylor, of Cornton, who died in 1841, and left his whole fortune "for educating the children of the poor in the most useful branches of education." From funds left by the same benefactor, a Free Library and Reading Room was opened in 1891, and contains upwards of 7,800 volumes. The weekly market is held on Tuesday. There is a distillery and a preserve works in the town. The fountain, in James square, was erected in 1893, at a cost of £500, from designs by Messrs. Mossman & Co. of Glasgow, to commemorate the coming of age of Mr. William Keith Murray, of Ochertyre, and in recognition of the gift of a water supply to the town by his father, Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart.; it is 26 feet in height and 17 at the base, and is built of grey granite, relieved by red granite columns with Corinthian capitals, the whole being surmounted by four dolphins. The arms of the family and those of the burgh appear on different sides. MacRosty Park, to the west of the town, and extending over about ten acres, was presented to the townspeople in 1903 by ex-provost the late James MacRosty, a native of Crieff. The Crieff and District Cottage Hospital, erected at a cost of £2,000, by voluntary contributions, was opened in 1906.

Crieff is a thriving and increasing town, deriving no small advantage from the resort in the summer months of invalids and others, who are attracted here by the beauty of the scenery, and the salubrity of the air. The Strathearn Hydropathic Establishment, erected in 1867, at a cost of nearly £30,000, occupies a splendid site in front of the Knock, and overlooks an extensive landscape of varied beauty. Since the erection of the building extensions have been made, a winter garden and loggia having been added. Water of the finest quality is supplied at the rate of 20,000 gallons per day. There is accommodation here for over 300 visitors.

The Old Drummond Arms, in which Prince Charles Edward Stuart passed a night in 1745, was fened by the trustees of the late Lady Willoughby de Eresby to the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and premises for the bank and a large hotel have been erected. In the town are six branch banks and a savings bank. Two newspapers, the "Strathearn Herald" and the "Crieff Advertiser" are published here on Saturday and Thursday respectively. The Earl of Ancaster is the principal landowner and lord of the manor. The area of the civil parish is 11,965 acres; rateable value, £50,058; area of burgh, 763 acres; population in 1891 5,305, and in 1901, 5,706, and in the burgh 15,208; in the ecclesiastical parish, 2,999

INNERPEFFRAY is a scattered village in the parish of Crieff, 3½ miles south-east, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Here is a library, founded in 1691 by David (Drummond), 3rd Baron Maderty (d. 1684), and containing about 8,000 volumes, principally of a theological and classical nature, for the use of students. The old castle and church, built in the 16th century by James, 1st Baron Maderty, are now in ruins, and he himself was buried in the family burial place within the chapel in 1623.

MONZIE is an ecclesiastical parish, 3 miles north-east from Crieff railway station, on the south side of the Grampians. It was transferred to the civil parish of Crieff in 1895, and has an Established church. Monzie Castle is the seat of John T. Cargill esq.

CULROSS was, by an order of the Boundary Commissioners, dated Feb. 23rd, 1891, transferred to Fifeshire, which see.

DALGUISE, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

DEANSTON, see KILMADOCK.

DOUNE is a village and police burgh in the parish of Kilmadock and district of Monteith, and poor combination of Upper Strathearn, with a station on the Dunblane, Callander and Oban section of the Caledonian railway; it is 44 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 31½ south-west from Perth, 19 south-south-west from Crieff, 8 north-west from Stirling, 8 south-east from Callander and 4 west from Dunblane. The town occupies a pleasant situation on the north bank of the Teith, and consists principally of three streets, radiating from a centre, where the market cross stands. The old bridge which crosses the Teith a little above the castle was erected by Robert Smitall, a native of Stirling, who had amassed a fortune as tailor to Princess Margaret of England, afterwards queen of James IV.; this bridge was widened by three feet in 1866. The Burgh is lighted with gas, supplied by the Doune Light and Gas Company. The parish church, erected in 1822, is an edifice in the Gothic style with a tower, built by the late Earl of Moray, heritor of the parish, and owner of Donne Castle. In 1897 it was remodelled and reseated, and a new pulpit and reading desk provided. The United Free church was built in 1867 to replace that erected in 1843. There is also a United Free church at BRIDGE OF TEITH. The Episcopal church of St. Modoc, built in 1878, will seat 110 persons; the rectory, net value £180, is at present (1911) vacant. The Roman Catholic church, dedicated to SS. Fillan and Alphonus, was built in 1875 at a cost of about £3,300 and will seat 300. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday in May, the last Wednesday in July, the first Tuesday and Wednesday and the fourth Wednesday in November. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Doune Castle was formerly the family seat of the Earls of Monteth, and the ruins of this once noble castle stand in the immediate neighbourhood of Doune, upon an elevated peninsula formed by the junction of the Ardoch water with the Teith. To judge from the massiveness and extent of its remains, the castle appears to have belonged to that first-class order of Scottish fortresses of which those of Edinburgh, Stirling and Dumbaron afford entire specimens; the castle buildings form a large quadrangle, the hall and domestic apartments occupying the front or north side and about half the west side; the remainder surrounding the rest of the courtyard has a wall 37 feet high and 7 feet thick, and a tower 80 feet in height: this building was partially restored by the late Earl of Moray, who was hereditary keeper of the Castle; a considerable portion has been roofed in, and part of the interior, notably the baronial hall, has been restored to its original condition: the outer walls and battlements have also been repaired so as to show the original structure and extent of the edifice: James II. of Scotland, when an infant, was an inmate of this fortress, which formed part of the dowry of Margaret of Denmark, Queen of James III. and also of Margaret Tudor, Queen of James IV. who sometimes resided in the castle: Mary Queen of Scots also resided here occasionally, and her son James VI. made frequent visits to the castle: the last historical episode in which Doune Castle was connected, was during the rebellion of 1745-46, when it was garrisoned by the adherents of Prince Charles Edward. The area of the burgh is 209 acres; rateable value, £1,270; the population in 1901 was 950.

DRON is a parish and village, 5 miles south from Perth, in the south-western extremity of Perthshire, extending into the beautiful district of Strathmore, and is divided from Aberdeenshire on the east by the Farg rivulet. Although in some parts the surface is broken and irregular, in the lower portion the land is flat and fertile as belonging to the rich carse of the Earn. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of Dunbarney parish without population has been annexed to Dron. The Glenfarg section of the North British Railway Co. constructed in connection with the Forth Bridge, passes through the parish of Dron, and has a junction with the North British main line at Bridge of Earn. The church, a Gothic edifice, is a fine object on the rising ground to the left, on approaching the Bridge of Earn from the south. In the parish is an ancient castle, formerly the seat of the Murrays, of Balmanno. At the back of the hill opposite the church is a famous rocking stone. Near the village stands a ruined chapel, and there are traces of another where Pottie mill now stands. This parish has an area of 4,342 acres; rateable value, £4,228; population in 1891, 208, and in 1901, 232.

DULL is a large parish, in Atholl and Breadalbanee poor combination, and is 30 miles long by about 12 in breadth. The river Tummel bounds the district on the north, and the Lyon and Tay on the south, these rivers abound with excellent salmon, and the lakes (of which there are fifteen, large and small) contain fine trout, pike and eels. The military road from Stirling to Inverness passes through the entire length of the parish. The mountain Schiehallion, which has a height of 3,500 feet, is seen on the northern border. The village is about 4 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station, on a branch from Ballinluig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 23 north from Crieff and 20 north-west from Duakeld. Here is an Established church, and at Tummel Bridge a United Free church. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dull parish has been added to the parishes of Blair Atholl Logie and Weem, and by boundary order 73, parts of the parishes of Fortingall, Kenmore, Logierait and Weem have been added to Dull. Lady Menzies, of Castle

Menzies, is the principal landowner. The area is 56,194 acres; rateable value, £20,824; the population of the civil parish in 1891, 2,462, and of the ecclesiastical, 1,584, and in 1901 was 2,405 civil, of which 1,508 are in Aberfeldy police burgh, and 479 in the ecclesiastical parish.

FOSS is a quoad sacra parish in Dull and Weem civil parishes, and has an Established church. The population in 1901 was 197.

DUNBARNEY parish is in the south-eastern part of the county, occupying a rich portion of the Lower Strathearn district, about 2½ miles south from Perth; it is bounded by the hill of Moredun (or Moncreiffe) on the north, and on the west by Forgandanny, and is intersected by the river Earn, here crossed by a bridge which gives its name to the village mentioned below. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 30, a part of this parish, without population, has been transferred to Dron parish. The remains of a Pictish camp exist on the summit of Moredun, and there is a very complete stone circle a little to the west of Moncreiffe House. Moncreiffe House, the seat of Col. Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. V.D., D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion, the grounds of which are very extensive, and beautifully wooded. Easter Moncreiffe also belongs to Col. Sir R. D. Moncreiffe bart. The scenery around is beautiful and romantic. Kilgraston is the residence of Lady Watson. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Robert D. Moncreiffe bart. Lawrence Pullar esq. of Dunbarrie House and Capt. John Patrick Grant, of Kilgraston. This parish has an area of 3,906 acres; rateable value, £7,834; in 1891 the population was 829, and in 1901, 908.

BRIDGE OF EARN is a village in this parish, about 3½ miles south from Perth, with a junction station on the Glenfarg and Fife sections of the North British railway, and is lighted with gas by a limited company. The village has Established and United Free churches, and of late years has become a great place of resort on account of the celebrity of its mineral springs. Pitkeathly Wells and Spa, now leased by Pitkeathly Limited, are 1 mile from the station; the waters here have long been celebrated for their curative effect in cases of gout, rheumatism, affections of the stomach, liver, kidneys &c. &c. There are tennis courts and bowling greens, a curling club, and good shooting and fishing is to be obtained in the district. Population in 1901, 365.

The parish also contains the village of KINTILLO, where in the reign of Alexander III. the king held a court for testing the national weights and measures. Post, T., M. DUNBLANE is an ancient city, police burgh and parish, with which, in 1839, by an Order of the Secretary for Scotland, was incorporated the old parish of Le-cropt. It stands on the banks of the river Allan, which flows through a great part of the parish, and contains trout, besides salmon and grilse in their season. The country to the south of the town is very beautiful, and is finely diversified with plantations. The ride from Dunblane to Bridge of Allan by Glen road is justly admired. The vale of Strathallan, through which the river flows, lies to the north and east of the town. The fields on the banks of the river are fertile, but as the land approaches the hills it is of the character of moorland although excellently adapted for pasture, the dairy produce of this district being in high repute. At the lower end of the town is the romantic walk of Kippenross, near to the end of which is a plane tree, supposed to be the largest in Scotland, the circumference of the trunk in the smallest part being nearly 20 feet, where the branches separate fully 27 feet, and close to the ground 42 feet 7 inches. The height of the tree is 100 feet, and it is said to have attained the age of over 470 years. Sheriffmuir, a mountain 1,175 feet high, is in this parish. The Scottish Central section of the Caledonian railway passes through and has a station here, and the Dunblane, Doune and Callander branch commences in the town, which is the capital of the western district of Perthshire, and is 41 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 33 north-east from Glasgow, 28 south-west from Perth and 11 south-east from Callander. The town is a police burgh under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Acts, 1892 and 1903, and the Town Council (Scotland) Act, 1900. A sheriff court for the recovery of small debts and for ordinary business is held every Wednesday, and justice of peace courts occasionally. The court house and prison are modern buildings. That portion of the town which adjoins the church consists chiefly of old houses, and has much the appearance of the precincts of a cathedral. The good and learned Robert Leighton, Bishop of Dunblane (1661-74), bequeathed his valuable library to the clergy of the diocese, and it is now kept in a suitable building called the Leighton Library, to which the public have access on application to the librarian or the parish minister. The see of Dunblane was founded, it is believed, by King David I. in 1140, although St. Blane, a contemporary of St. Columba, is affirmed to have been bishop or prior of a monastery here as early as A.D. 600; this institution was afterwards occupied by the Culdees, and it was during their occupation that the establishment of the diocese by King David was carried out. Since the Reformation the cathedral has been used as the parish church, and ceased to be the seat of a bishop, except under its first and second Protestant Episcopates. The Cathedral, dedicated to St. Blane, stands on the bank of Allan Water: it dates from about 1230-50, and is a graceful example of Early English and Decorated work, with the exception of the tower, 128 feet in height, which stands partly within and partly without the south aisle and obliquely to the line of the aisle: the first four stages of this tower are Norman (c. 1190-10) and belong to the church reared by David I.; the two upper stages date from the 16th century, and the embattled parapet was added by Bishop William Chisholm II. (1564-75); from within it rises a short octagonal spire with vane. A chime of 9 bells has been added, and was used for the first time on the occasion of the visit of His late Majesty King Edward VII. on the 28th of September, 1908; the two old bells are preserved in the north aisle. The cathedral, as now existing, consists of a choir of six bays, with a vaulted north aisle of five bays, and a long chamber over it, used partly as an organ loft, and nave of eight bays with aisles, the easternmost bay of which has a gable, both on the north and south side, and appears like a small transept; there is no triforium, but the clerestory has an elegant traceried double arcading, with a passage way between, which is continued through the three similarly designed and graceful lights in the west front; the west doorway is recessed in five orders, and flanked by smaller blind arches, and in the western gable is a vesica window which has been specially noticed by Mr. Ruskin: the east window of the choir is of four lights, with geometric tracery in the head, and is curiously flanked by two narrow lancets of lesser height. The east and west windows have recently (1911) been filled with stained glass. Towards the close of the 16th century, the nave was allowed to become ruinous, and the choir alone was used for divine service. On this, at a later date, was much disfigured by the erection of galleries, one of which was built across the east window; in 1818 the galleries were for the most part removed, and an attempt was made to renew the tracery of the choir windows, a partial restoration of the church was carried out in 1870, but the complete restoration of the building was not effected till 1889-93, when, chiefly owing to the munificence of the late Mrs. Wallace, of Glassingall, the nave, so far as necessary, was rebuilt, all the old work being scrupulously respected, and the fabric generally renovated, at a cost of £25,000, under the direction of Sir R. Rowland Anderson LL.D. architect, of Edinburgh, and it was reopened 28 Oct. 1893, by Schomberg Henry, 9th Marquess of Lothian K.T., P.C. (d. 1900), when a special dedicatory service was held. Although much of the ancient woodwork is lost, the choir retains some richly carved canopied oak stalls, and has now a new open traceried screen of carved oak with panelled base, in a combination of the Gothic and Renaissance styles; the new pulpit, correspondingly designed, is octagonal, and has figures at the angles, under canopies, and there is a brass lectern; the nave has now a wagon roof of dark oak, the ribs of which are relieved by emblazoned shields. On the north side of the choir, within a recessed arch, is the altar tomb, with effigy, of Bishop Clement (1233-58), to whom the erection of the cathedral is chiefly due; there is also an effigy, under a triangular recess, of Bishop Ochiltree (1430-48); figures of Malise, 5th Earl of Strathberne, and his wife, ob. 1271, carved out of a monolith of gristone, and an arched tomb of Italian design, said to have belonged to the Drummonds, of Strathallan, to whom there are also some ledgers, now despoiled of their brasses, on the choir floor: there are also on the choir floor three stone slabs, each bearing a brass under which, according to tradition, Margaret Drummond and her two sisters were buried in 1501: in the north aisle stands a Celtic cross. The total length of the cathedral, measured externally, is 226 feet, width of nave 67 feet, and of the choir 57 feet. A Parish Hall, adjacent to the cathedral, was erected in 1904, under the direction of Sir R. Rowland Anderson. There are also two United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1845, will seat 245 persons; the Rev. Edward Martin Finchan Machugh B.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge, was been rector since 1908.

A Reading Room was erected in 1908, and a hall in 1910, the latter being in connection with the East United Free church, the site for both being given by James Templeton esq. of Holme hill. The Queen Victoria Military School, situate about one mile north, on the Perth road, was erected in 1908, at a cost of £60,000, for the sons of Scottish soldiers and sailors, as a memorial to the late Queen Victoria, and a chapel was built within the school grounds as a memorial to the Scottish sailors and soldiers who lost their lives in the South African war of 1899-1902; the cost of these buildings was defrayed by Scottish regiments, counties, burghs and individuals, and provide for 18 students and 275 boys. The school was opened on 28th September, 1908, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. who, on the same day, laid the foundation stone of the chapel; the latter was opened on the 18th June, 1910. By a minute of agreement between the Subscribers' Executive Committee and the then Secretary of State for War, dated 26th January, 1905, the former undertook to expend all sums subscribed toward the erection and completion of the school and chapel, and the latter agreed to take over the institution when completed, and thereafter to maintain and conduct it on educational lines similar to those obtaining at the Duke of York's Royal Military School, Regiments, counties, burghs, and individual subscribers are entitled to nominate boys (up to a maximum number of five each). A subscription of £250 in the case of regiments, and of £500 in other cases, gives the right to nominate one boy and to name one bed. Boys must be lawful sons of soldiers or ex-soldiers of Scottish regiments, or of Scotsmen serving, or who have served, in the army, navy, militia (now Special Reserve), or volunteer service companies. The school enjoys the distinction of carrying colours similar to those borne by infantry battalions. The King's colour is of the universal pattern; the school colour is of special design. These colours were presented by His late Majesty King Edward VII. to a detachment which attended at Balmoral Castle on the 4th October, 1909. A combined swimming bath and rifle range was added to the school through the generosity of Edmond Pullar esq. Coneylhill House, Bridge of Allan.

There are two public schools, and one belonging to the Episcopal church. Dunblane is a place of limited trade, and not conspicuous as one of manufactures, but worsted spinning is carried on very extensively. In High street are branches of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The city is much resorted to in the summer season as a watering place, there being an excellent mineral spring in the vicinity, on the property of Arthur William Henry Hay-Drummond R.N. of Cromlix. A market, as well as numerous fairs, were formerly held, but all have now fallen into disuse. A few miles from the town is Sheriffmuir, on which a severe, but indecisive, conflict took place 13 November, 1715, between the royal forces, under the Duke of Argyll, and the army of the Prince James Stuart, commanded by the Earl of Mar. Here on the summit of the hill are some large stones inclosed by iron rails, said to be placed where the standard was erected. Prince Charles arrived in Dunblane on the 11th of September, 1745, on his way to the Low Country, and remained overnight at the house of the Laird of Balhaldie. The room in which the prince held his levee, on the morning of his departure, is shown to visitors. Dunblane bestows the title of viscount on the Duke of Leeds. About half way between Dunblane and the Bridge of Allan is Keir House, the residence of Capt. Archibald Stirling D.L., J.P.; the grounds are laid out with great taste, and contain fine specimens of forest trees and ornamental flower gardens; they are thrown open to visitors from 2 till 5 on Fridays. Kilbride Castle, the property of Sir Alexander Campbell bart. is occupied by William Soltan Davidson esq.; Kippendavie Lodge, the property of John Alexander Stirling esq. is occupied by Robert Osborne esq. Cromlix is the residence of Arthur William Henry Hay-Drummond esq. John Alexander Stirling, of Kippendavie, is the principal landowner. Dunblane parish had an area of 22,873 acres before the reconstruction of the boundary; rateable value of burghal, £19,193; landward, £17,721; population in 1891, 3,200, of which the town numbered 2,186, and in 1901, 3,812, of which the town numbered 2,516.

On the river Allan, about 2 miles north of Dunblane, has been erected the small village of ASHFELD, where are situated extensive works belonging to the well known firm of Messrs. Robert Pullar and Sons, calico printers &c.

DUNKELD AND DOWALLY

DUNKELD and DOWALLY form a united parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Dunkeld and Dowally, with 74 persons, added to Logierait, and by Boundary Orders 73 and 74, a part of Caputh parish, with a population of 489, also the village of Butterstone, has been transferred to Dunkeld and Dowally.

Dunkeld is a small town and burgh of barony, with a station on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway (locally in Birnam), and is 57 miles north-north-west from Edinburgh (by rail 60), 24 east from Kenmore, 15 north-north-west from Perth and 12 west from Blairgowrie; it is delightfully situated in an amphitheatre of hills, at the spot where the Highlands and Lowlands appear to meet, and on the river Tay, here spanned by a fine bridge of seven arches, with a total span of 685 feet, completed in 1809 from the plans of Telford, the famous engineer, at a cost of upwards of £30,000. The scenery around Dunkeld has long been the subject of admiration, and the town is the resort of many tourists. Dunkeld, as a burgh of barony, is governed by a baron bailie, who is appointed by the Duke of Atholl. A justice of the peace court is held for granting publicans' certificates, game dealers' licences &c. The town is of great antiquity and was the capital of the ancient Caledonia. The see of Dunkeld may be said to have taken its rise from the Culdee monastery, founded here in or previous to the 9th century by monks from Iona, who also translated hither the relics of St. Columba, and preserved them here until their final transmission to Ireland: there are records of bishops from A.D. 849, and they then held precedence over all others in Scotland, a privilege continued to the prelates of Dunkeld until the creation of the Archbishopric of St. Andrews in 1470. In 1127, King David I. reconstituted the abbey as a house of canons regular, and appointed Gregory, then abbot, as bishop of Dunkeld, while retaining at the same time his monastic office; the abbey church of St. Columba naturally became the cathedral, and though now for the most part ruinous, it is yet a very stately structure, and its attractiveness is much enhanced by the beauty of its situation amid a grove of trees within the private demesne of the Duke of Atholl, and close to the river Tay; it consists of a long aisleless choir of four bays, with a vaulted chapter house of two bays on the north side, nave of seven bays with aisles and south porch, a tall octagonal stair turret on the south side of the west doorway, and a north-west tower completed in 1501, 25 feet square and 96 feet in height, with an open quatrefoil parapet, angle turret and dwarf pinacles; the total length, measured externally, is 240 feet, the width of the choir being 39 feet and of the nave and aisles 67 feet: the earliest existing portion of the fabric is the south wall of the choir, c. 1220-50; the rest of the choir is of later date and was the work of Bishop Sinclair in the first half of the 14th century: the choir was reopened in 1908, after restoration by the late Sir Donald Currie G.C.M.G. (d. 1909). The chapter house, begun in 1457, was finished in 1469, and has an upper chamber or muniment room; in 1380 the church was burnt by the English, and probably on account of the damage thus caused, the nave was rebuilt as it now stands, during the period 1436-47; the arcades have massive but short circular piers, with plain caps, carrying boldly moulded arches; the triforium openings consist in each case of a single semi-circular arch divided into two pointed arches; the clerestory is lighted by simply pointed windows with cusped tracery, but their interior splay is rudely plain; the great west window, singularly placed off the centre both of the gable and the entrance, still retains some fragments of its once elaborate tracered work; in the aisles the tracery of some of the windows is still perfect: the western doorway has its outer arch carried on square piers splayed at the base, and has within six orders of shafts and mouldings; on either side of it is a blind arch slightly recessed: in 1599 the cathedral again suffered great damage, the rood screen, stalls and many monuments being destroyed; after this the services were held only in the choir, the nave being dismantled and allowed to become ruinous: in 1689, after the battle of Killiecrankie, the victorious Highlanders attacked Dunkeld, and the cathedral, into which the troops of William III. had thrown themselves, was severely injured by fire and in other ways; but the choir was repaired by the Murrays in 1691 and again in 1762 by the Government at a cost of £300, and was rebuilt in 1820 by the Duke of Atholl, at a cost of £5,000: the chapter house, now serving only as a vestibule to the dual pew, contains a mural monument of the 17th century, and on the south side another in the Renaissance style displaying hercaldically all the principal alliances of the Stewart-Murrays, dukes of Atholl, and on the east side is a statue of John, 4th Duke K.T., F.R.S. who died 29 Sept. 1830, and is buried here; in the south-east angle of the choir is the fine tomb with recumbent effigy of Alexander, Earl of Buchan, 4th son of King Robert II. and commonly known from his rapacious character as "the wolf of Badenoch," d. 24 July, 1394; beside it lies the headless effigy of Bishop William Sinclair (1309-24), and here also stands part of a Celtic cross; on the opposite side are stairs leading to a gallery which extends along that side, and there are sedilia on both sides, but the east end of the choir is now partitioned off and merely serves as a vestibule to the remaining part: the south aisle of the nave, originally vaulted, contains the tomb with recumbent effigy of Bishop de Cardeny (1407-36); the front of the tomb is ornamented with figures of angels under canopies and holding shields, and over it is a low but much enriched recessed arch with elaborately carved crockets and finial; there is a piscina at the east end of this wall; the area of the nave has long been used as a cemetery, and the base of the tower, which is vaulted, is used as a tool house. The United Free church was erected in 1874, at a cost of upwards of £2,000, on the old site, and has a tower and spire, and a memorial window to a former Earl of Dalhousie; there is also a Roman Catholic church. James VI. made a grant for erecting a grammar school, called the Royal School of Dunkeld, which still exists. The City Hall, in Atholl street, is a building of stone, with a gallery, and holds 350 persons. The manufacture of linen goods was formerly the staple trade of Dunkeld, but has now become extinct. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and two superior hotels, the Duke of Atholl's Arms Hotel and the Royal Hotel. A fountain was erected in 1866 as a memorial to George Augustus Frederick John, sixth Duke of Atholl, who died 16 Jan. 1864. Dunkeld is the head quarters of the 1st Scottish Horse Yeomanry Territorial Force. Dunkeld House is a seat of the noble family of Stewart-Murray, Dukes of Atholl, and the gardens and extensive pleasure grounds present many attractive features, including Ossian's Hall, the Rumbling Bridge, and several falls of the river Bran; there are also two very fine trees called "the mother larches," being the first grown in Britain; they were planted in 1737 and are 100 feet high, one of them measuring 15 feet in circumference at three feet from the ground. The Duke of Atholl K.T. and the Marquess of Tullibardine M.V.O., D.S.O., M.P., D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish of Dunkeld and Dowally is 15,293 acres; rateable value, £7,000; the population in 1891, 613, and in 1901, 1,201 in the civil and 624 in the ecclesiastical parish, and 586 in the village.

DOWALLY is a large parish, united with that of Dunkeld, 1 mile south from Guay station (which is in the parish) on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and about 5 miles north from Dunkeld. The present church was built in 1818, nearly on the site of that erected by George Brown, bishop of Dunkeld 1384-1516: some of the materials of the old church were made use of in constructing the new building, and these include a block of stone bearing the arms of Bishop Brown, a tombstone to one of the Dalguise family and a stone fashioned like a bell. The Duke of Atholl K.T. is the landowner.

BUTTERSTONE is a small village about 1½ miles north-west from Dunkeld, formerly in the parish of Caputh, but has been transferred to Dunkeld.

KINDALLACHAN is a small village in this parish.

LITTLE DUNKELD, contrary to its distinctive appellation, is an extensive parish, in the Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, on the west or right bank of the Tay, near the confluence of the Bran with that river. The parish of Little Dunkeld is traversed by the military road from Perth to Inverness, and by the Highland railway, which intersects the parish throughout its entire length, about 14 miles. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (62 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, a part of Fowls Wester parish has been added to Little Dunkeld. The parish forms a kind of irregular triangle, and is disposed by nature into four districts, viz.:—Murthly, Birnam, the Bishopric, and Strathbraan. Birnam, Dalguise, Gellyburn, Inver, Meikle Trochry, Murthly, Drumour, Strathbraan and Torwood are small villages in the parish of Little Dunkeld, from one to six miles distant. The first district is that of Murthly, extending from Kinclaven to the "Pass of Birnam." It includes the villages of Gellyburn and Murthly, where there is a station on the Highland railway, about 10 miles north from Perth, and has an Established church. The Perth District Asylum, adjoining the station, is a fine square building, surrounded by beautiful grounds, which are kept in order by the patients. Pinel Lodge Convalescent House, opened in November, 1895, and Tuke Lodge, in November, 1896, together provide accommodation for 100 convalescent patients, and are carried on in connection with the main asylum. Murthly Castle, the seat of Walter Thomas James Scrymgeour-Stewart-Fotheringham esq. D.L., J.P. is a fine structure in the Elizabethan style, with grounds upwards of three square miles in extent, and containing avenues and terraces of the finest and rarest trees in the country. In this district is also Dalpowie House, and the charming shooting lodge of Rohallion. The soil of this district (all of which belongs to W. T. J. Scrymgeour-Stewart-Fotheringham esq.) is fertile and well cultivated: the surface of the country is beautifully varied, and the fields well enclosed. The second and central district of the parish is Birnam, in the midst of which Birnam Hill (rendered classic by Shakespeare's reference to it in "Macbeth," Act V.), rises in rude magnificence from the edge of the river. From the summit of Birnam Hill an unrivalled view is obtained in every direction, and its slate quarries have been wrought with profit from an early period. At the base of the hill are the villages of Torwood and Birnam, while about a mile to the west is the village of Inver, the birthplace, in 1727, of the famous Scottish violinist and musical composer, Neil Gow, who died in 1807; it is pleasantly situated at the confluence of the rivers Tay and Braan. Acreage of the parish, 41,268; rateable value, £22,190; population in 1891, 2,108, and in 1901, 2,116, including 24 officials and 354 inmates of Perth District Asylum; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,938.

BIRNAM is a beautiful modern village, about three-quarters of a mile from Dunkeld, and is well drained and supplied with gas and water, and contains the Dunkeld station of the Highland railway. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, situated here, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and has a tower containing one bell: the Rev. William Magee Tuke has been rector since 1905. Birnam Institute includes a reading room and library, recreation and refreshment rooms, and a public hall. The institute grounds are furnished with seats under the shade of spreading beeches. There is also an hotel here, which contains a public hall. Birnam is the head quarters of the Highland Cyclist Battalion Territorial Force. Erigmore is the residence of Col. J. Ludlow-Ferries. The population of Birnam village in 1901 was 389.

The third district of the parish of Little Dunkeld extends from Inver, along the banks of the Tay, to Grandtully, a space of ten miles; here the fields are level, and the whole has the appearance of an almost continued series of beautiful gardens. It includes a stretch of fine country called "The Bishopric," and contains the village of Dalguise, where there is a station of the Highland railway, and near which are the mansions of Dalguise House and Kinnaird.

BALNAGUARD is a village with an inn at the extreme end of the district.

The fourth district is STRATHBRAAN, a valley about 9 miles in length, through which flows the river Braan. In the lower portion the soil is fertile and well tilled, but the upper portion is poor and unproductive. In this strath is Drumour Lodge; the shootings attached are very extensive.

Near the centre of Strathbraan is the village of TROCHRY, containing a United Free church and the ruins of a famous old castle, once a seat of the Earls of Gowrie. At the upper extremity of the parish lies the village of Amulree.

DUNNING is a rather extensive parish, in the Upper Strathearn poor law combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village is near the centre of the parish, on the banks of the Dunning water (a tributary of the Earn), and on the road from Stirling to Perth, and is half a mile north from the base of the Ochil hills, about 2 south from the river Earn, 9 south-west from Perth and 5 east from Auchterarder, with a station on the Crief Junction and Perth section of the Caledonian line. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 12, a part of Auchterarder, without population, has been transferred to Dunning. There is an Established church with an ancient tower, and a United Free church. At Duncrub Park is a private Episcopal chapel, built in 1850, and seating 100 persons. This place was destroyed by fire in 1715, by the Earl of Mar's army, on the retreat from Sheriffmuir to Perth. A corn market is held on Wednesday. Here is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and of the County and City of Perth Savings Bank; there are Bowling and Curling Clubs and a Library and Reading Room. Duncrub Park, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Rollo D.L. who is the principal landowner and lord of the manor, is situated here. Kelty Castle, and Garvock House, the residence of Col. Charles de Jersey Graeme, are in this parish. The civil parish comprises 14,879 acres; rateable value, £12,815; population in 1901, parish, 1,141 and 701 village.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Dunning (letters should have Perthshire added); Miss Marjorie Drewitt, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.50 a.m. & 6.45 p.m.; dispatches, 1.40, 3.25, 5 & 10 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters

ERROL is a parish in the Carse of Gowrie 5½ miles in length and nearly 3 in breadth, stretching across the Carse from the foot of the hills to the banks of the Firth of Tay. The soil is rich and fertile and under most productive tillage; it is also highly favourable to the growth of fruit trees, and is intersected with small tracts of water called "pows," collected chiefly from the trenches opened for draining the grounds. The village, which is lighted with gas, has a station about one mile north on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway, and is 10 miles east from Perth, occupying a beautiful situation on a rising ground, embowered in trees, commanding a prospect of the Tay and Carse almost as far east as Dundee. A rivulet flows past to the Tay, and forms a small harbour at its mouth. This place, since 1453, has afforded the title of Earl to a branch of the Hay family, and from a date anterior to 1309, hereditary Lord High Constables of Scotland. The parish church occupies a commanding site, and its tower may be seen at a considerable distance. There are also two United Free churches. Megginch Castle is the residence of Captain Malcolm Drummond J.P., D.L.; Errol Park, of Sir William Ogilvy Dalgleish bart. D.L., J.P.; Marie House, of John B. Broun-Morison esq. D.L., J.P. and Fingask Castle, of Capt. William Murray Threipland. Acreage of the parish, 9,533; rateable value, £18,959; population, 1891, 2,158, of which the village contained 741, and in 1901, 2,070, of which the village contained 705.

FORTEVIOT is a parish, in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Perth, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is 7 miles south-west from Perth, in the district of Strathearn, the greater portion of the parish being in the vale of the Earn, that river passing through it. The middle portion is beautifully wooded and enclosed, and is intersected by the May, which joins the Earn nearly opposite Dupplin Castle, the seat of Sir John Alexander Dewar bart. M.P., J.P. The river May winds through the verdant knolls of the Ochills, and thence through the picturesque grounds of Invermay, flowing on and forming several beautiful falls, until it becomes lost for a time in the intricate course of the Hummel Bummel, a cataract at Muckersie Linn, with a perpendicular fall of 30 feet. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 39, a part of Forgandenny parish, with a population of 127, has been transferred to Forteviot. The village of Forteviot, which is on the right bank of the river Earn, was the ancient capital of the Pictish kingdom, and has an Established church; there is also a United Free church at Pathstruie. At BANKHEAD, near Dupplin Castle, is an ancient cross; and there is another on the opposite height of Dronoch, both supposed to mark the approach to Haly Hill, where, in the time of Charles I. vestiges of a palace were in existence. It was on the heights of Bankhead the battle of Dupplin was fought, 11 Aug. 1332, between the Scotch under the Earl of Mar and Edward Balliol, when the former were defeated, after which Balliol was crowned king of Scotland. Sir John A. Dewar bart. M.P., J.P. is the principal landowner. The parish has an area of 9,886 acres; rateable value, £7,217; population in 1901, 562 civil, and 527 ecclesiastical.

FORTINGAL is a parish, in the district of Breadalbane, Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and in Perth small debt court district. The village, situated on the left bank of the river Lyon, about 3 miles from its junction with the Tay, is about 10 miles west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch from Ballinlugg junction on the Perth and Grantown section of the Highland railway, and is 84 miles north-west from Edinburgh and 42 north-west from Perth. The parish lies in the midst of the Grampians, and the land is only useful for pasture. Including the abolished parish of Kitchonan, it is 37 miles in length by 17 in breadth, occupying a large tract of Highland territory in the north-west part of the county. The district abounds in lakes, rivers and woods, the chief of the former being Loch Rannoch, which is about 11 miles in length and 1 in breadth, with fine-wooded banks; the next largest in size is Loch Lydoch, about 6 miles long. In this district rises Schallion, a mountain 3,547 feet in height, on which Dr. Nevil Moskelyne (1732-1811), astronomer royal, made observations on the attraction of gravitation; other mountains in the parish are Ben Creachan 3,540, Ben Achallader 3,399 feet, Carn Maig 3,419 feet, Ben Venoch 3,125 feet, Craig Mhor 3,305 feet, Meall Phuil 2,882 feet, Ben Phiarlagan 2,886 feet, Ben Mbolach 2,758 feet and Carn Dearg 3,084 feet; here and at Glenlyon are established and United Free churches; in the burial ground is a yew tree said to be upwards of 2,500 years old. There are remains of a Roman camp on the Haugh of Fortingal. Fairs are held in the village in December. Garth is the seat of Lady Currie; Chesthill is the residence of Lieut.-Col. William James B. Stewart-Menzies J.P. and Invervar Lodge, of the Hon. Mrs. Stewart-Menzies. Lady Currie and Lieut.-Col. Stewart-Menzies are the principal landowners. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Fortingal parish was added to that of Dull, and parts of the parishes of Kenmore, Logierait and Weem transferred to Fortingal. The area of the civil parish is 231,034 acres;

rateable value, £27,615; population in 1891, 1,610, and in 1901, 1,584, and in the ecclesiastical parish 465.

Not far from the southern bank of Loch Rannoch are the barracks called GEORGETOWN.

BRAES OF RANNOCH is a small district and quoad sacra parish formed from Fortingal civil parish, and is at the upper end of Loch Rannoch, about 6 miles from Rannoch station on the West Highland section of the North British railway, and has an Established church. The Dalh estate, in the district of Rannoch, is the property of Capt. Bruce Canning Vernon-Wentworth J.P. of Wentworth Castle, Barnsley, Yorks. Lady Menzies, of Castle Menzies, is the principal landowner. The population in 1901 was 293.

KELTNEY BURN is a small village in the parish of Fortingal, and about 6 miles from Aberfeldy station. Population returned with the parish.

GLENDDEVON is a village and parish in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 4½ miles north-by-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Alloa and Mearns junction of the North British railway, 14 miles north-east from Alloa and 15 south from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 55), boundary orders 120 and 135, part of Blackford parish, without population, and part of Fossway and Tulliebole pariah, with a population of 32, have been transferred to this parish. The village is pleasantly situated in a glen, the Ochil hills bounding it on the north and south. The river Devon runs through the village, and creates in the neighbourhood some very beautiful waterfalls; the river also abounds in trout, and affords good sport to anglers during the season. The Established church here is about a mile from the village. The Dunfermline and Inverkeithing waterworks are in the parish. Glendevon Castle, now in a good state of preservation, was formerly an outpost of the Douglas family. The Earl of Camperdown, David C. R. Lindsay esq. of Glendevon House, Robert Haig esq. of Dollarfield, Dollar, William L. Lawson esq. Major James S. Robertson, of Erdraynate, and Col. John Bold Harvey, of Tormaukin, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 11,097; rateable value, £9,400; population of the parish in 1891, 103, and in 1901, 147 civil, and 109 ecclesiastical.

KELTNEYBURN, see FORTINGAL.

KENMORE is a parish and village in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth small debt court district, lying in the Highland district of Breadalbane, surrounding Loch Tay, which is 16 miles in length, and from one to two in breadth. The waters of the lake, which seldom or never freeze, abound with salmon and other fish. About midway down the Loch Tay rises Ben Lawers, a mountain 3,984 feet in height. The village of Kenmore occupies an eminence at the north-east end of the loch, close by the point where it becomes a river, over which is a bridge of five arches, and is 6 miles south-west from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway, 80 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-west from Perth and 24 west from Dunkeld. There are Established and United Free churches. At Taymouth, at the north end of the loch, is the private Episcopal chapel of St. James, the property of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. which seats 70 persons; attached to it is a Mission at Killin. At Ardeonaig, near the south-east point of the loch, and at Lawers, on the opposite side, are United Free churches. This is a favourite point in a tour of the Highlands, and is much visited in summer. In the parish is Meall Ghaordie mountain, which rises to the height of 3,407 feet, and Ben Dheichach, 3,074 feet high. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of this parish have been transferred to the parishes of Dull, Killin, and Fortingall, and a part of Killin and Weem annexed to Kenmore. In the vale below the village are the park and castle of Taymouth, the seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. who is the principal landowner. The mansion has been much enlarged and improved, and now ranks amongst the most elegant modern castellated mansions in Scotland. The Breadalbane hotel is a well appointed hostelry, picturesquely situated at the foot of Loch Tay. The parish contains an area of 57,273 acres; rateable value, £9,602; the population in 1901 was 1,271 civil and 1,174 ecclesiastical parish.

ACHARN is a small village in Kenmore parish, on the east side of Loch Tay, about 2 miles south-west from the village of Kenmore and 8 south-west from Aberfeldy railway station. Near the village, in a woody glen, are the celebrated Falls of Acharn. Opposite to the greatest fall, where the water suddenly precipitates itself over a projecting rock at a height of about 250 feet, is a grotto called the "Hermitage."

KILLIECRANKIE, see MOULIN.

KILLIN is a mountainous and extensive parish in the Highland district of Breadalbane, and is in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Dnublane small debt court district; the village occupies a delightful and picturesque situation at the west end of the celebrated Loch Tay, and near the confluence of the rivers Lochay and Dochart with the waters of the lake; it is 74 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 40 north-north-west from Stirling, 27 west-by-north from Crieff, 22 north from Callander, and 16 south-west from Kenmore. The Callander and Oban branch of the Caledonian railway is connected by the Killin line, by which Kenmore is brought into nearer contact through the Loch Tay steamers. This line is one of the finest in Scotland for grandeur of scenery. Anglers residing at the hotels have trout fishing free of charge in Loch Tay, which is one of the largest and most beautiful lochs in Scotland, and for salmon fishing, the season for which opens on the 15th of January, it is surpassed by none. The Falls of Lochy are about 3 miles from Killin, and are well worth a visit. The scenery between Killin and Kenmore can be seen to the best advantage from the deck of one of the Loch Tay steamers. The west, or Killin end, is grand and wild, the mountains rising to a great height, and their serrated ridges present many jagged and fantastic sky-lines. Some rare ferns and cairngorm stones are found here. In the parish are the peaks of Ben More, 3,843 feet, and Ben Laogh, 3,708 feet in height, and near the latter is the source of the river Tay. The village is noted for the picturesque beauty of its situation, and, like Kenmore, is a favourite point of tour of the central Highlands. To view the scenery to advantage the traveller is advised to take the road on the south-east side of the lake. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Killin parish, with a population of 122, has been transferred to Kenmore, and a part of the parish of Kenmore, with 61, and Weem, with 40 population, added to Killin. There are Established and United Free churches. The private Episcopal chapel of St. Fillan, built in 1876, will seat 150 persons; the chaplaincy, annexed to that of Taymouth, is in the gift of the Marquess of Breadalbane, and has been held since 1908 by the Rev. W. L. Lewis. In Killin village is a monument of polished granite, erected by the Gaelic Society of Perth, to the Rev. James Stewart, for 52 years minister of Killin, and the first translator of the New Testament into Scottish Gaelic. He was born in 1700, and died in 1780. Fairs are held on the third Tuesday in January, the 6th of May, the Friday before Donce Ist of November (old style). On a small island here, formed by two branches of the river, is the burial place of the clan M'Nab. On one of the trees of the island may be seen a branch, which, severed from its parent stem by a storm in February, 1806, attached itself to a neighbouring tree, and is now growing with its branches downwards. A small eminence in the neighbourhood of Killin is pointed out as the place of sepulture of the famed Highland hero Fingal. Auchmore House, a fine seat of the Marquess of Breadalbane K.G., P.C. is at the head of the loch on the south side, and opposite, on the north side, is the picturesque old burying ground and mausoleum of the family. The ivy-covered ruins of Finlarig Castle, one of the oldest seats of the Barons of Breadalbane, are close to the vault. In the gardens of Auchmore is a black Hamburg vine, covering 475 square yards of glass, and growing from a single stem which measures 22 inches at a height of 3 feet from the ground, and is the largest vine in Europe. The Marquess of Breadalbane, William Christie esq. the trustees of the late Edward Gordon Place and Col. Colin John Campbell are the principal landowners. The area of the civil parish is 116,176 acres; rateable value, £21,533; population, 1901, 1,423 parish, 537 village, ecclesiastical parish, 989.

CLIFTON is a small village in the western part of the civil parish, half a mile from Tyndrum stations on the West Highland section of the North British railway, and the Oban section of the Caledonian railway.

CRANLARICH and TYNDRUM are stations on the Callander and Oban railway, and the West Highland section of the North British railway, and each has an hotel and a bowling green, while at CRANLARICH there is also a 9 hole golf course.

STRATHFILLAN, 14 miles south from Killin, is a quoad sacra parish formed from Killin parish in Perthshire, and Glenorchy and Inishall parish in Argyllshire, and has Established and United Free churches; it includes the villages of Olfant, Cranlarich and Tyndrum. The population in 1901 was 600.

KILMADOCK parish, which is in Upper Strathearn poor combination and small debt court district of Dunblane, comprises a district of great fertility, the land upon the banks of the Forth and Teith producing abundant crops of every description of grain. From the level margin of the former river the ground rises gradually to the Grampian mountains, which form the northern boundary of the parish. The parish contains the burgh of Doune and the village of Deanston. There is a United Free church at Bridge of Teith. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 69, a portion of Kilmadock parish, with a population of 135, has been transferred to Kincardine, and a part of that parish, with 58 population, added to Kilmadock. Doune Lodge is the seat of the Earl of Moray. The Earl of Moray, Lieut.-Col. H. E. Stirling-Home-Drummond V.L., J.P. of Blair Drummond, John Strayan esq. D.L., J.P. of Lanrick Castle, Col. John H. Campbell of Inverardoch, and John George Grey Burn-Murdoch esq. of Gartincaber, are the principal landowners. The acreage of the civil parish of Kilmadock is 24,818; rateable value, landward £19,702, burghal (Doune) £4,681; population in 1891, 2,760, and in 1901, 2,705, Doune containing 930 of that number, and in Kilmadock ecclesiastical parish, 2,540.

DEANSTON, a village in this parish, is 1 mile from Doune station. There is a cotton mill here. Deanston House is the residence of Lady Muir. Population in 1901, 652.

Post Office, Burn of Cambus; Mrs. Margaret Grant, sub-postmistress. Letters through Doune, Perthshire. Delivery at 7.40 a.m.; dispatch, 1.5 & 6.55 p.m. Doune, 1 1/2 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

KINCARDINE-IN-MENTEITH is a parish, in the small debt court district of Dunblane, and is 2 miles south from Doune station on the Dunblane and Oban section of the Caledonian railway and 3 north from Gargunnoch station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 45 west-by-north from Edinburgh, 39 south-west from Perth and 6 miles west from Stirling. The parish lies between the rivers Teith and Forth, in the southern quarter of the county and in the vale of Menteith. It is bounded on the north-east by the river Teith and the south by the Forth; and is triangular in figure, one side being 12 miles in length, another 16 and a third about 7. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 69, a part of Kincardine parish has been added to Kilmadock and a part of that parish transferred to Kincardine. Here is an Established church. Adjacent to the Teith and on the road from Stirling is the estate of Blair Drummond, the seat of Lieut.-Col. H. Stirling Home-Drummond, vice-Lieutenant of Perthshire. Lieut.-Col. H. Stirling Home-Drummond and the Earl of Moray are the principal landowners. The area is 10,207 acres; rateable value, £13,470; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 1,277, and in 1901, 1,309, Thornhill containing 457 of that number, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 660.

BLAIR DRUMMOND is a large estate in the parish.

Thornhill, a village in this parish, will be found under a separate head.

Post Office, Blair Drummond; John McBeath, sub-postmaster. Letters should have Perthshire added. Delivery, 6.40 a.m.; dispatches, 10.30 a.m. & 6.30 p.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Doune, 2 miles distant

KINLOCH, see LEWIS AND KINLOCH.

KINLOCH-RANNOCH is a small village and quad sacra parish formed from Fertingall civil parish, and is 13 miles south-west from Struan station on the Blair Atholl and Grantown section of the Highland railway, 17 east from Rannoch station on the West Highland section of the North British railway, about 25 north-west from Donkald, and 40 north-west from Perth. Loch Rannoch, at the head of which the village stands, is a fine sheet of water, about 11 miles in length and about three-quarters of a mile in width. In the village are established and United Free churches, and the former, erected in 1829, was thoroughly restored and beautified in 1833, at a cost of £550. There is also an Episcopal church which is used during the summer months only. Here also is a granite monument to Dugald Buchanan, a noted Gaelic poet and schoolmaster of this place, where he died 2 July, 1768. Dall House is the seat of Capt. Bruce Canning Vernon-Wentworth, and Dunalastair House, of Mrs. de Sales La Terrière. Lady Menzies bart. of Castle Menzies, Aberfeldy, Capt. KINNAIRD is a parish and village in the case of Gowrie, and varying in distance from 11 to 12 miles east from Perth. This place affords the title of Baron Kinnaird of Inchture to the Kinnaird family, who are also, by a later creation, barons Kinnaird of Rossie. The church is about 5 miles north-by-west from Inchture station on the Perth and Dundee section of the Caledonian railway. Kinnaird Castle was built by Alexander, surnamed the Pierce, for the suppression of robbers who infested the Carse of Gowrie from the north, and remained in the possession of the Crown until 1172: James VI. in the course of his visit to Scotland in 1617, spent upwards of a week at Kinnaird Castle, arriving on the 22nd of May and leaving for Dundee on the 30th of May: the castle, now ruinous, belongs to Lieut.-Col. William Murray-Threpland, of Fingask Castle. The area is 3,498 acres; rateable value, £2,454; the population in 1901 was 217. Wall Letter Box cleared 1.10 p.m. Nearest telegraph & money order office Inchture, 3 miles distant

KINNOULL is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Perth, and has its western extremity on the Tay, opposite Perth, extending thence in an irregular manner for nearly 4 miles, with a general breadth of 1 mile. The surface is hilly, but romantic and exceedingly beautiful, being covered to a great extent with fine plantations. Many villas have been erected on the rising grounds to the east of the river, and now form a part of the burgh of Perth known as Bridgend and Barnhill. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 71, parts of Kinfauns and Scone have been transferred to this parish, and a part of Kinnauld added to the parishes of Kinfauns, St. Madoes, St. Martina and Scone. Kinnoull Hill is above 600 feet perpendicular, and affords an enchanting prospect of the surrounding country. The ancient church of the parish was a rectory, in the proprietary of the monastery of Cambuskenneth, and was dedicated to St. Constantine. The modern church, erected in 1826, stands on a bank overhanging the Tay. Near this once stood the old castle of Kinnoull. Kinnoull has given the title of earl to a branch of the family of Hay of Errall, Sir George Hay, lord chancellor, 1622, being ennobled in 1627 as Baron Hay of Kinfauns and Viseunt Dupplin, and elevated to the earldom in 1633 as Earl of Kinnoull. The Earl is the principal landowner. The area is 3,331 acres; rateable value, hundred £2,813, burghal (part of Perth) £22,784; population in 1891, 3,730; 1901, 3,795, of which 388 are included in the royal burgh of Perth. KIPPEN parish, formerly partly in Perthshire, has been by the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), transferred entirely to Stirlingshire.

KIRKMICHAEL is an extensive parish, forming a combination poor law district with Logierait, and is in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie. It is in the north-east corner of the county, adjoining Aberdeenshire on the north and the county of Forfar on the east. The parish, which is 17 miles in length and from 6 to 7 in breadth, comprises the greater part of Strathardle, and is intersected by the river Arde, which is crossed by a bridge of two arches at Kirkmichael, and along the left bank is an excellent road leading from Pitlochry to Blairgowrie. A military way from Coupar-Angus to Fort George traverses the northern part of the parish, by the Spital of Glenshee. The surrounding country is hilly and very beautiful. The village stands on the high road from Pitlochry to Blairgowrie, 12½ miles east from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 172 north from Edinburgh, 29 north from Perth and 13 north-west from Blairgowrie. By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 72, a part of Bendochoy parish, and of Caputh, and of Rattray, have been transferred to Kirkmichael parish. Here are Established and United Free churches. Arde Grave, near Durnane, 9 feet in length, has been preserved. There is also a rocking stone near Dalruizion, a supposed Druidical altar near Balvarron, and numerous circles and cairns. Ashintully Castle is the seat of David C. Rutherford-Lindsay esq. J.P. The area is 61,818 acres; rateable value, £17,579; population in 1891, 935, and in 1901, 920 civil and 508 ecclesiastical.

BALLINTUIM is a hamlet in this parish, 3 miles east from Kirkmichael.

LECROPT is a parish now incorporated for civil purposes with Dunblane. It was originally partly in Perthshire and partly in Stirlingshire; this latter portion containing a part of the village of Bridge of Allan, the other part of which was in Logie parish (Stirlingshire). By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary orders 124 and 127, the part of Bridge of Allan then in Lecropt was transferred into Logie parish, while the landward portion of Lecropt (Stirlingshire), then left, was transferred to this county, thus placing the parish of Lecropt wholly in Perthshire. The quoad sacra parish, embracing all the original parish, retains its old boundaries. The village, in which is the parish church, a building in the Gothic style, lies about half a mile south-west of Bridge of Allan, overlooking the carsa. Capt. Archibald Stirling D.L. of Keir, and the Earl of Moray are the principal landowners. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 560, included with Dunblane.

LETHENDY and KINLOCH form a united ecclesiastical parish, in the poor combination of Perth and the small debt court district of Blairgowrie.

Lethendy parish is 3 miles south-west from Blairgowrie terminal station on a branch from Coupar-Angus of the Caledonian railway, and about 15 north from Perth, and has an Established church. Tower of Lethendy, the property of Sydney J. Gemmill esq. D.L., J.P. of Aberdeen, who is lord of the manor and the principal landowner, is now the residence of Charles Gardiner esq. The area of Lethendy civil parish is 1,743 acres; rateable value, £2,220; the population in 1901 was 158 in the civil and 341 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Letters for Kinloch should have Blairgowrie added & the southern part of Lethendy should have Melkleuch, Perth Wall Letter Box, Church, cleared 12.55 & 4.15 p.m.; no Sunday collection

KINLOCH is 2 miles west of Blairgowrie railway station. By the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 72, a part of Caputh parish, with a population of 16, has been transferred to Kinloch, where there is an Established church. There are three lakes in the neighbourhood, viz.: Fingask Loch, Rae Loch and Marlee Loch, the latter being 3 miles in circumference and abounding with perch, pike and trout. The area is 4,091 acres; rateable value, £3,111; the population in 1901 was 193.

LOGIE, formerly partly in this county,
has been by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," transferred wholly into Stirling county.

LOGIEALMOND is now a civil parish created by Order of the Secretary for Scotland, dated Nov. 4th, 1895, and includes the greater part of what was formerly known as Monzie parish; it is in the poor combination of Upper Strathearn, and small debt court district of Crieff;
the parish is 4 miles north-by-west from Methven terminal station on a short branch from Methven Junction, on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, 11 north-east of Crieff and 10
north-west from Perth, and has an Established church. The surrounding country is mountainous, only about one-third being arable, the remainder being heather and moor. It is watered by the Almond and the Shochie, upon which are several romantic cascades. The only inhabited portions of the district are two valleys, separated from each other by an extensive stretch of moorland.

HARRIETFIELD is a village in the civil parish of Logiealmond, 5 miles from Methven, its nearest railway station, and 10 miles from Perth, and has a United Free church. The area of the parish is 14,416 acres; rateable value, £5,582;
population in 1901, 567 civil and 575
ecclesiastical.

LOGIERAIT is a parish in the northern part of the county and in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination. The village is about half a mile from Ballinluig station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 8 miles north-north-west from Dunkeld, and the like distance north-east from Aberfeldy. The principal part of the parish lies on the point of land formed by the junction of the Tay and the Tummel, extending along the banks of each for 7 miles. An iron bridge was erected in 1888 at a cost of £2,800, in place of the chain boat, previously the only means of communication between the two sides of the river. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 & 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, a part of Dull parish, and also of Dunkeld,

Dowally, Moulin and Weem, were added to Logierait parish, and parts of Kenmore parish added to Dull, Weem, Moulin and Fortingall. Here is an Established church, two Roman Catholic churches and a Baptist chapel. The parish is noted for the distillation of whisky. Here is a monument erected to the late Duke of Atholl (d.16 Jan.
1864), by the gentlemen of the county and his tenantry. A Combination Poorhouse was built in 1884 for Logierait and ten adjoining parishes. It was at Logierait that Prince Charles kept his prisoners after the battle of Prestonpans, 21 Sept. 1745.
Tulliemet is the residence of William Hutt Allhusen esq. The Duke of Atholl K.T.;
Major Frederic C. Foster, of Faskally;
the trustees of the late James Blair esq.
Middlehaugh; Capt. John Malcolm Stenart
Stenart J.P. of Ballechin; John Guthrie
Leurie esq. F.R.S., M.S.A., J.P. of Pit-castle; Walter T. J. Scrymgeour-Steuart-Fotheringham esq. D.L., J.P. of Murthly
Castle and the Marquess of Breadalbane
K.G., P.C. are the principal landowners.
The area is 30,671 acres; rateable value, £17,869 7s. 10d.; the population of the civil parish 1891, 3,730, and in 1901, 1,676, including 43 in Atholl and Breadalbane Combination Poorhouse, and ecclesiastical, 1,419.

STRATHTAY is a village and district in the parish of Logierait on the left bank of the river Tay and immediately opposite Grantully, with which it is connected by an iron bridge.

BALLINLUIG is a small village in the parish of Logierait, about half-way between Dunkeld and Pitlochry, with a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for Aberfeldy. Population returned with the parish.

LONGFORGAN is a parish in the Perth small debt court district, varying from one to 4 miles in breadth, and is 9 in length;
it forms the eastern boundary of the carse
of Gowrie, and extends along the Tay on its southern extremity for more than 4 miles. The village stands on a ridge at an elevation of about 130 feet above the Tay, of which, with the whole of the intermediate country to the east, and particularly to the south and south-west, it commands an uninterrupted prospect, and is 6 miles south-west from Dundee, with a station one mile south on the Dundee and Perth section of the Caledonian railway.
Near here, situated in a dell, are the ruins of a chapel, said to have been erected by Malcolm IV. in 1164, for a community of Cistercian monks. A fair is held every third Saturday in June (c. s.). There is an Established church, Castle Huntly,
now the residence of Lady Armitstead,
was erected in 1452, by Andrew, 1st Lord Gray, of Fowls, and is said to have been named by Patrick, the 3rd lord, after his wife, a daughter of the Earl of Huntly,
who had large possessions in the carse.
The castle walls are 10 feet thick, and the mansion includes a round tower, 116 feet in height, and commanding extensive and beautiful prospects of the Fife coast,
with the Ochills and other loftier mountains. Lord Kinnaird, of Rossie Priory; J. Martin White esq. of Balruddery; the trustees of James Brown esq. of Leochin;
William D. Graham esq. of Hallyburton;
Charles H. Watson, of Bullionfield, and Charles James G. Paterson esq. are the principal landowners. The soil of the parish varies in quality, but upon the whole is exceedingly productive. There is also an abundant supply of stone of good quality. Acreage of the parish, 11,248; rateable value, £15,548; population, 1901, 1,886 in the parish and 322 in the village.

MYLNEFIELD FEUS is a village in Longforgan civil parish. Population in 1901, 487.

LUNDY and FOWLIS form a joint parish formerly partly in Perthshire, but by the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), now entirely included in Forfarshire.

MADDERTY is a parish, in the Upper Strathgath poor combination and small debt court district of Crieff, 5 miles east from Crieff, with a station on the Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway, and an Established church. This place, since 1609, has afforded the title of baron to the Drummond family, Earls of Perth and Viscounts Strathallan. Dolerie is the seat of Anthony H. Murray. Lord Abercromby is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 4,861; rateable value, £5,769; population, 1901, 443.

MEIGLE, a parish in the district of Strathmore, is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Perth; the village, the seat of a presbytery, is on the banks of the Isla, with a station on the Alyth branch of the Caledonian railway, and is 61 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north-by-east from Perth, 13½ north-north-west from Dundee, 5 north-east from Coupar-Angus, and 4 south from Alyth; the parish, 4½ miles in length and 2 in breadth, is fertile and well cultivated, and, besides the Isla, is watered by the Dean, which is the northern boundary of the district. The parish church, erected on the site of the old one (destroyed by fire in March, 1869), at a cost of about £2,500, was opened in July, 1870. In a small museum are kept some ancient monuments, which were removed from the churchyard, one of which tradition asserts to be the grave of Queen Vanora, the unfaithful wife of King Arthur, but the figures on it, said to have once delineated the history of Vanora, are now all but indistinguishable. There is also a United Free church. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret, built in 1852, is attached to that of St. Ninian, Alyth, and will seat 100 persons. A cattle auction is held on alternate Saturdays. Belmont Castle is the seat of Mrs. Campbell; the gardens and fine plantations render it a most delightful residence. In one of the enclosures a tumulus is pointed out, where, it is said, Macbeth was deprived of his usurped power and his life in his fatal encounter with Macduff. A number of stones and monuments, supposed to be of Pictish origin, are also to be seen in the vicinity. Kinloch is the seat of Sir George Kinloch bart. and Cardean, of Edward Cox esq. D.L., J.P. Sir George Kinloch bart. Hugh Campbell esq. Sir Alexander Henderson bart. of Buscot Park, Berks. James Carmichael esq. J.P. and Thomas Wedderspoon esq. are the principal landowners, first being also the lord of the manor. About a mile north-east of the village, at the junction of the Isla and the Dean, are the remains of a Roman camp, called Cardean, or Caerdean, and noticed by General Roy in his work on the Roman antiquities of Scotland. The Kinloch Arms is a good hotel, and affords free fishing on the Isla and part of the Dean. Area of the civil parish, 3,980 acres; rateable value, £10,434; population in 1891, 660, and in 1901, 723 civil and 788 ecclesiastical.

Post, T., M. O. & Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office; Miss Agnes R. Lang, postmistress. Letters should have Perthshire added. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 12 noon & 2.30, 5.30 & 10 p.m.; sundays, 8.15 a.m. & 2 & 10 p.m. Post messengers for Ruthven, Ardler, Baradimony, Belmont, Cookstown & Ingliston are dispatched at 7.30 a.m.

MEIKLE TROCHRY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MEIKLEOUR is a village, in the civil parish of Caputh, poor law combination of Logierait, and small debt court district of Perth, and is 2 miles north from Cargill station on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, 4 south from Blairgowrie and 1½ north-east from Perth. The surrounding country is very beautiful, and the far-famed Beech Hedge, the chief attraction of this village, comprises trees reaching an average of 90 feet in height; the total length of the hedge being estimated at 580 yards. It is believed to have been planted in 1746, one year after the battle of Culloiden. In a field close to the road stands a pillar, and near to the top is a hole for receiving a beam whereon to suspend scales for weighing wool &c. the "tron or trone" of former days; it likewise has fixed to it the still existing joga in which offenders, civil and ecclesiastical, did penance for their offences. The original "trone" was destroyed by a fire which the zealous Liberals in the village and neighbourhood kindled in 1832 to destroy Toryism in the keenly contested election of that year; but it was shortly afterwards replaced. In the middle of the village stands the market cross, surrounded by an iron railing, and bearing the date 1698.

METHVEN is a parish, in the Upper Strathmore poor combination and the small debt court district of Perth, and is bounded on the north by the river Almond. The village is on the high road from Perth to Crieff, and is the terminus of short line from Methven Junction station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, 6 miles west from Perth and 11 north-east from Crieff. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Monzie parish, with a population of 115, has been transferred to Methven, and a part of Methven, with a population of 53, added to Auchtergaven. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. Here is the grave of Essie Bell and Mary Gray, whose beauty and seclusion from the world at the time of the plague, 1666, from which they ultimately died, have been recorded in Scottish song. About a mile from the village is Methven Castle, the property of Col. David Murray Smythe D.L., J.P. the principal landowner, but now occupied by John Dempster esq;

the castle is distinguished in Scottish history as the place where King Robert was defeated by the English army, under the Earl of Pembroke, in 1306. Trinity College, Glenalmond, on the banks of the Almond, is 10 miles north-west from Perth and 4 north-west from the Methven railway station; it was projected in 1841, and opened in 1847, for the double purpose of supplying a proper collegiate training to candidates for holy orders in the Scottish Episcopal church, and of establishing in Scotland a public school after the general model of those in England, but the theological department has long since been removed to Edinburgh. The site on which the College stands was presented by the late George Patton esq. (Lord Glenalmond) of the Cairnies; the funds for the buildings were raised by general subscription. The chapel, a building in the Decorated Gothic style, is 136 feet long by 52 wide, with a height of 70 feet, and was erected by the late Right Rev. C. Wordsworth, Bishop of St. Andrew's, at a cost of over £8,000. There are now (1911) 130 boys, all boarders. Council consists of sixteen members, namely, the seven Scotch bishops, two deans and seven laymen; the resident teaching staff consists of a warden, thirteen assistant masters and a medical officer; there is also an engineering side, with a well equipped workshop. The area is 10,848 acres; rateable value, £13,333; population, 1901, 1,699 parish; village, 659; ecclesiastical parish, 1,681.

ALMOND BANK is a village in Methven parish and small debt court district of Perth, about 4 miles north-west from Perth, and a station on the Perth, Methven and Crieff line of the Caledonian railway. Population, including Bridgeton, 1901, 372.

MONTEITH, see PORT OF MENTEITH.

MONZIE parish has been absorbed in the newly-constituted parish of Logiealmond.

MONZIEVAIRD and STROWAN form a united civil parish, in Upper Strath-arn poor combination and Crieff small debt court district. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, parts of the parishes of Crieff, Fewlis Wester and Monzie were transferred to Monzievaird and Strowan, and parts of Monzievaird and Strowan to Comrie and Muthill.

Monzievaird is 3 miles north-west from Crieff, its nearest railway station, on the Caledonian line, and has an Established church. The river Earn passes through the district from west to east; and in the neighbourhood of this stream the country is beautiful and well planted and inclosed. There are several small lakes in the parish, among which is the lake of Monzievaird, situated at the bottom of a wood in the pleasure grounds of Ochertyre, and well stocked with pike, perch and eels. On the bank of the lake a fine repeating echo is produced. Ben Cheuzie mountain, 3,048 feet high, is in this parish. Towards the close of the 15th century, the clan Drummond, in pursuit of the Murrays, found they had taken refuge along with their wives and children in the old parish church, to which the Drummonds set fire, when every soul was burned save one, who escaped by leaping out of a window. Ochertyre, the property of Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart. is the residence of Stamford B. Robinson esq.; Lawyers is the property and residence of Col. David Robertson Williamson D.L., J.P.; Strowan, the property of Capt. Carolus Home Graham-Stirling D.L., J.P. is now (1911) the residence of James S. Stenhouse esq. and Clathick House is the property and residence of Capt. William Campbell Colquhoun J.P. Col. D. R. Williamson J.P., D.L. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Acreage, 31,718; rateable value, £11,161; population of the civil parish in 1901, 588, and in the ecclesiastical, 508.

MOULIN is a large parish in the Highlands, extending towards the Forest of Athole, bounded on the north-east by the parish of Kirkmichael, on the south-east by Logierait, on the south-west by Dull, and on the west and north-west by Blair-Atholl. It is intersected by the Briarochan and the Fernate streams, which unite within the district, and form the Ardale. The nearest railway station is at Killiecrankie, on the Perth and Arvimore section of the Highland railway. The several lechs are well stocked with trout, particularly Loch Broom. The greater part of the parish is mountainous, but the vales of the streams are exceedingly beautiful. The village, which is very small, is half a mile north from Pitlochry station on the Perth and Blair-Atholl section of the Highland railway, about 8 south from Blair-Athell, and 25 north from Perth. Here is an Established church, and at Straloch is a Royal Bonny Mission church. Near the village stand the ruins of the old castle of Moulin. The Moulin hotel is an excellent hestelry. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, parts of Blair-Atholl parish, without population, and of Logierait, with a population of 63, have been added to this parish, and a part of Moulin parish, with a population of 9, added to Blair-Atholl, and with 13, to Muthill. The parish church was erected in 1832. A fair is held at Moulin annually on the first Tuesday in March. In this parish is the pass of Killiecrankie, noted for the battle fought there on the 17th of July, 1689, between King William's army, commanded by General Mackay, and a body of Highlanders under Viscount Dundee, where, after defeating the royal troops, the gallant Claverhouse met with his death. Faskally is the residence of Major Frederic C. Foster; Baledmund, of James Grant Ferguson esq. J.P.; Kindrogan, of Frank Balfour esq. and Urrard, of Aubrey K. Alston Stewart esq. J.P. The principal landowners are the Duke of Atholl K.T., the Marquis of Tullibardine, Major Frederic C. Foster, Charles A. J. Butler esq. G. A. Clarke esq. J. G. Ferguson esq. A. K. Alston Stewart esq. Major Alexander B. Stewart J.P. of Balnakeilly, and G. A. C. Sandeman esq. of Fonab. The parish of Moulin has an acreage of 44,862; rateable value, £28,485; the population in 1901 was 2,516; ecclesiastical parish, 2,372.

ENOCHDHU is a hamlet in the parish. Post Office, Moulin; Miss Eliza Scott, post-mistress. Letters received through Pitlochry. MUCKHART is a village and parish in the small debt court district of Dunblane, about 2 miles north-west from Rumbling Bridge station on the Glasgow and Perth main line of the North British railway, 11 north-east from Alloa, and 18 south-east from Crieff. It is triangular in shape, about 5 miles in length from east to west, its greatest breadth from north to south being about 2½ miles. The river Devon forms its principal boundary, separating it from Fossoway on the south and east, while on the north and west two small streams respectively divide it from Glendevon and Dollar. A branch of the Ochil hills runs east and west along the northern boundary of the parish, terminating on the east by a conical-shaped hill called "Sea-mab," 1,442 feet above sea level. The Devon in this neighbourhood creates a number of interesting waterfalls, amongst which are the falls of Rumbling Bridge, Devil's Mill and Caldron Linn. The water passes through fissures in the rocks, which in many places present the appearance of having been rent asunder. When viewed from the parapet of the Rumbling Bridge, 120 feet above the level of the river and over 500 feet above the sea level, the scenery beneath, on both sides, is very striking, and since the opening of the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway, for which there is a station at Rumbling Bridge, this locality has become much frequented. In 1645, every house in Muckhart parish, including the church, was burnt by the Marquess of Montrose, who he sacked and destroyed Castle Campbell, at that time belonging to the Earl of Argyll. Besides the parish church, situated in the small village of POOL, there is also a United Free church. Miss Christie of Cowden Castle; Alexander Price Haig esq. D.L., J.P. of Blairhill; John James Moubray esq. D.L., J.P. of Naemoor; John E. Kerr esq. J.P. of Harviestoun Castle, and James MacArthur Moir esq. of Lashill, are the principal landowners. The soil of Muckhart is in general light and gravelly, but in some parts it is more retentive. The area is 4,928 acres; the rateable value, £2,634; population in 1901, 475.

Post, Telegraph, Telephone Call & Express Delivery Office: Mrs. Elizabeth Fraser, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Dollar, Clackmannanshire. Delivery, 8.20 a.m.; dispatches, 1 & 4.25 p.m. Rumbling Bridge, 2 miles distant, is the nearest money order office

MURTHLY, see LITTLE DUNKELD.

MUTHILL is an extensive parish and village in Upper Strathearn poor combination and in the small debt court district of Crieff, on the borders of the Highland district, and on the right bank of the Earn. The village is on the great military road from Dunblane to Taverness by Tummel Bridge, 19 miles north from Stirling, 16 south-west from Perth and 3 south from Crieff, with a station on the Crieff branch of the Caledonian railway, one and a half miles east from the village. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 98, parts of Crieff, Monzievaird and Strouan parishes were transferred to Muthill, and a part of Muthill parish added to Comrie. In the parish are the ruins of a church, said to have been built in 1419, but the tower appears to be of earlier date. There are established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. James, built in 1836, will seat 150 persons; the Rev. John Francis Smith has been rector since 1908. Culdeea Castle, finely seated on a rock at the head of the vale of Strathearn, is the seat of Robert Thomas Napier Speir esq. D.L., J.P. Drummond Castle, the ancient seat of the family of Drummond, Earls of Perth, is now the residence of the Earl of Ancaster, who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Muthill parish has an area of 26,188 acres; rateable value, £12,687; population in 1891, 2,123, and in 1901, 1,401 in the civil, and 1,490 in the ecclesiastical parish.

PERTH

PERTH (Gadh. "barr-tatha," the height on the Tay) is an ancient city, royal burgh, the seat of a synod, conjointly with Stirling, and of a presbytery, and the capital of the county to which it gives its name; it is also a civil parish and head of a poor combination and is on the river Tay, about 10 miles from the Firth, 46 north from Edinburgh, 62 north-east from Glasgow, 22 south-west from Dundee, 15 south from Dunkeld, and 16 south from Blairgowrie. Perth is a railway centre, with a station used jointly by the Caledonian, North British and Highland railways; the Perth and Dundee line crosses the Tay by a bridge and a viaduct over Moncreiff Island, and the Perth and Crieff branch connects these places; the Highland railway places Perth in communication with Inverness and the extreme north. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 70, a portion of the parish of Tibbermore has been transferred to Perth, and a part of Perth parish added to Tibbermore. In 1910 the municipal boundaries were extended by the inclusion of several parts of the parishes of Tibbermore, Scone and Kinnoull. The city is situated at the opening of an extensive plain, nearly surrounded by picturesque hills, with the Grampians in the distance; it is bounded on the north and south by two fine meadows, known as the North and South Inches, and used as public recreation grounds, the former covering 100, and the latter 72 acres; both are ornamented with noble trees, and watered by the Tay, which occasionally overflows them. Traces of a fortification, called Cromwell's Fort, at one time visible on the South Inch, have now been built over. The approach to Perth by the Edinburgh road is very picturesque, and the descent to the South Inch terminates in a fine avenue of trees, extending to the town. The city itself is large and well built and the principal streets are long and well paved. The river Tay, on which the city stands, is crossed by a fine bridge, constructed from the designs of John Smeaton F.R.S. the eminent engineer. It was originally narrow, admitting of a footpath on one side only, but in 1871 was widened at a cost of over £2,000, by the addition of castiron footways, with Caithness pavement and balustrades. A new bridge was constructed in 1899, at a cost of over £30,000, from designs by Messrs. Blyth and Westland C.E. Edinburgh. Vessels of 200 tons burthen, owing to skilful dredging, can deliver and receive cargoes at the harbour; and two steamers pass frequently between Perth and Dundee. The number of fishing vessels registered under part IV. of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, on Dec. 31, 1909, was 7 of 139 tons, employing 14 men and boys. Fishing boats and their implements are marked with the letters "P. E. H."

Perth has long been noted for its dye works; the principal cleaning and dyeing works being Pullars', in Kinnoull street; it is also famous for the manufacture of inks and gauge glasses, of linen and jute, winceys, woollens &c.; brewing, iron founding, rope and sail making are also pursued, and the coal, corn and timber trades employ in the aggregate a large number of hands. Perth is also the centre of the live stock trade in Scotland.

The city is lighted both by gas and electricity, and supplied with water from the Tay, which is purified in a filtering bed, 300 feet long, constructed in the gravel, at the upper end of Moncreiff Island, with a branch of the river flowing on either side, and producing, at all seasons, an unlimited quantity of pure, soft and limpid water, which runs by gravitation to the Water Works at the east end of Marshall place, in the extreme south-eastern angle of the city, whence it is pumped into a number of reservoirs in the vicinity. By the "Perth Water Act," now in full operation, the present system has been extended to all parts of the city and suburbs. Both the gas, water and electricity undertakings are the property of the Corporation, who in 1903 also acquired the tramway system between Perth and Scone, now worked by electric power.

Perth was a burgh as early as 1106, but in 1210 was fortified, and constituted a royal burgh, with confirmation of all its former privileges, by William the Lion. Until 1482 it ranked as the capital of Scotland, although Edinburgh became the seat of government in 1437; in 1617 it was visited by James VI. (James

I. of England), who accepted the office of provost of the city. The city is now divided into six wards, and is governed by a lord provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen councillors. The council thus consists of twenty-six members, all of whom, with the exception of the dean of guild, are, since the passing of the "Reform Bill of 1867," elected by household suffrage. The dean of guild is a member of council ex-officio, and is chosen by the Guildry Incorporation; the lord provost and magistrates are elected by the councillors from amongst themselves. The council meets on the second Monday in every month; a sheriff court is held every Tuesday and Friday during session, and two courts at least in each vacation. The magistrates have also the power of inflicting summary punishment for petty offences.

Perth is in the eastern parliamentary division of the county and was constituted a parliamentary borough in 1833, in pursuance of the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. c. 45), returning one member.

The Episcopal Cathedral of St. Ninian, in Atholl street, built in 1850, from designs by the late M. W. Butterfield, is a large and lofty structure in the Early Geometric style, and consists of choir with vestries, transepts, clerestory nave of four bays, with aisles, erected in 1890, a western tower and attached to it on the north side a spacious porch with gabled parvise: above the roof of the crossing rises an open bellcote with spirelet. In 1901 a large rectangular chapter house was erected on the south side of the cathedral, designed by the late J. L. Pearson esq. R.A. completed by his son F. L. Pearson esq. as a memorial to the Rt. Rev. Charles Wordsworth D.D., D.C.L. bishop 1853-93, and connected by cloisters with the cathedral. At the same time the choir was lengthened 24 feet, and aisles added to it, an organ chamber and vestries built, new Episcopal throne, and canons' and choir stalls erected, and a new pulpit of stone provided, highly enriched with cervings illustrating the history of the Scottish church: the total cost was about £13,000. In 1908-9 a lady chapel was erected by Atholl Macgregor esq. in memory of his wife; it consists of a nave with an octagonal apse; on the north side is a tomb in memory of Bishop Wilkinson and bearing a bronze figure in a kneeling posture. In 1909-10 the west tower, which had not been completed owing to unsafe foundations, was taken down and the roof was carried through to the west end of the cathedral and terminated by a gable flanked by north and south turrets. Turrets have also been placed to the north and south of the east gable. The cathedral contains some good stained glass by Bullisnon and Grylls: there is a brass to the memory of the officers and men of the Black Watch who lost their lives in the war in South Africa. The cathedral is the head of the united diocese of St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane, formed in 1837, but accounts of these as separate dioceses, together with descriptions of their cathedral churches, will be found under the respective headings.

St. John's Episcopal church, Princes street, which stands on the site of a former chapel, is an edifice in the Early English style, and affords about 500 sittings. The Rev. George Ross Vallings M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford, has been rector since 1910.

The church of St. John the Baptist, originally cruciform, and called the Kirk of the Holy Cross of St. Johnstoun, is an ancient edifice of stone, consisting of choir, nave, transepts, and a tower with singularly designed spire, the pail of bells hanging outside the tower under a kind of shed. Originally the interior formed a single church, but it is now divided by screens so as to accommodate three separate congregations: the various divisions being known as the East, Middle and West churches; the choir, or East church, was re-opened in June, 1893, after restoration and the removal of the galleries: the transepts and part of the nave forming the Middle church, after being restored and renovated consequent on the fire which occurred about a year previous, were re-opened on the 15th March, 1895: the nave, three bays of which have been restored, forms the west church.

St. Paul's church, at the end of High street, in South Methven street, is a modern building of stone, with a steeple.

St. Leonard's church, in King street, was erected in 1835; the expense being defrayed by joint-stock shares and private subscriptions.

St. Stephen's church, Wilson street, Craigie, was erected in 1896, and is a building of red sandstone. A new session-house and vestry was added in 1908.

The United Free church and the different bodies of Presbyterian dissenters have numerous chapels. There is a Baptist chapel in Tay street, Wesleyan Methodist in Scott street, and a Roman Catholic chapel in Melville street.

The Roman Catholic church of St. Mary, Kinnoull hill, has attached a residence of the Redemptorist Fathers, erected from designs by the late Mr. Heiton, of Perth.

The Perth Academy was founded in 1553; the present buildings in Rose terrace, were erected in 1805, and are of freestone embellished with noble columns. The school is for both boys and girls, and since the passing of the "Scotch Education Act, 1872," the School Board has remodelled the interior of the buildings and substantially improved the capacity and equipment of the institution, more especially for the purpose of providing a complete scientific and technical training; the school is now arranged in three divisions—the preparatory, the lower, or elementary school, and the higher, or secondary school. The session commences in September and ends on 30th June. Since 1891 the modern side of the school has been largely developed, and brought into agreement with the latest requirements of the Scotch Education Department. Attached are 65 entrance scholarships, awarded in June. There are about 310 boys and 290 girls.

Sharp's Institution, in South Methven street, was opened in 1860, the founder, the late Mr. John Sharp, of Barhill, Perth, having left the residue of his estate in the hands of certain trustees, to be used by them as a fund for the promotion of education in connection with Perth and its neighbourhood. In 1882 the original scheme was extended so as to include a plan of technical instruction, and at the same time a workshop was built and suitably fitted up to carry out a scheme of manual instruction. In 1885 the course of instruction in science and art was re-organized, so as to enable it to fulfil the requirements of an organized science school. In 1890, under a scheme of the Educational Endowments, Commissioners, the Institution was placed under the management of the Perth Educational Trust, and the work of the school is now carried on in two divisions, known as the upper and lower departments. The Governors of the Perth Education Trust enlarged the original buildings so as to allow of complete courses of classical instruction, instrumental music and gymnastics. A portion of the west front, comprising class rooms for needlework and instrumental music, has been reserved and fitted up for the exclusive use of the girls' department. The cost of the extensions, the construction and equipment of laboratories for physics and chemistry, and of class rooms for the study of the various branches of art, was defrayed by Sir Robert Pullar LL.D., J.P. of Tayside, chairman of the Governors. The Institution was transferred to the School Board of the Burgh of Perth in 1910, under Section 29 of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1908.

The Municipal Buildings, at the east end of High street, erected in 1881, on the site of the old Town hall, at a cost of £13,000, are in the Tudor style, from designs by Mr. Granger Heiton, architect, of Perth, and have a frontage to the river. The council chamber, which occupied the principal portion of the building and was adorned with stained glass illustrative of personages in Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Fair Maid of Perth," was completely destroyed by fire in January, 1895, together with its valuable contents, as well as a portion of the public offices, but was restored in 1896 from the original plans by Mr. Granger Heiton. The buildings also contain the offices of the city clerk, chamberlain, registrar, assessor, police superintendent, burgh surveyor, sanitary inspector to the police department, and gas offices. The burgh court room, which has its principal entrance from Tay street, is on the first floor above the police office, and communicates therewith.

The County Buildings, in Tay street, on the bank of the Tay, were erected from the designs of Mr. Stuart, architect, and display, in the centre, an elegant portico with twelve massive fluted columns, supporting a pediment; the county hall, a fine room, 68 feet by 40, occupies the south wing; the centre contains a justiciary hall of semi-circular form, with a spacious gallery. The remainder of the building on the same floor includes the sheriff court and room, sheriff clerk's office, and an arched fire-proof room where the records of the town are deposited; above is a spacious ball room and a card room &c. In 1866 an additional building was erected in South street.

The foundation stone of a new city hall was laid in King Edward street, in June, 1909. When complete the building will comprise a large hall to hold 2,000 persons and a smaller hall capable of seating 500 persons. The estimated cost is £30,000.

The Marshall Memorial, at the end of George street and near the bridge, is a circular structure in the Classic style, with a portico of the Ionic order and a dome, and was begun in 1822, by private subscription, as a memorial to the late Thomas Hay Marshall esq. formerly lord provost. The interior contains apartments occupied by the museum of the Perth Literary and Antiquarian Society, a library, a collection of valuable coins, medals and manuscripts, besides a great variety of natural curiosities, amongst which is a cabinet of minerals, containing upwards of twelve hundred choice specimens.

The Perthshire Natural History Museum has, exclusive of the museum halls, a large lecture room, library and laboratory. These form a single building between 200 and 300 feet in length, in the Scottish baronial style, from the designs of Messrs. J. and G. Young, architects, of Perth. In 1894 and 1895 a large addition was made to the museum, and in June 1902, it was presented by the Natural History Society to the city, and is now under the management of the Town Council.

The Sandeman Public Library, Kinnoull street, was erected in 1896-8 by the Town Council, acting under the bequest of the late Archibald Sandeman, professor of Mathematics in Owens College, Manchester; the building, declared open by the Earl of Rosebery 22 Oct. 1898, is of red sandstone, in the style of the Italian Renaissance, from designs by Messrs. Campbell Douglas and Morrison, architects, of Glasgow. On the ground floor are the lending department, reading room (open from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.), juvenile reading room and librarian's room. The reference department, ladies' room and committee room are on the first floor, and a museum and picture gallery occupy the second floor. The reference department is open from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. and the lending department from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. On the 31st Oct. 1910, the reference department contained 15,256 volumes and the lending department 16,921 volumes.

The Freemasons' Hall, in Parliament close, High street, built on the site of the old Parliament house, in 1818, is the property of the Royal Arch Lodge of Freemasons.

The Perth Boys' and Girls' Religious Society Hall, erected in 1881, at a cost of about £3,200, will hold 800 children, and contains, besides the hall, a director's room, two large class rooms, lady workers' room and offices.

The Poorhouse, an extensive pile of buildings, on the Glasgow road, was erected by the Perth Parochial Board, at a cost of £8,000.

The barracks, built in 1795, at the west end of Atholl street, were originally intended for 200 cavalry, but are now occupied by the depot of Regimental District No. 42. The Black Watch (Royal Highlanders), which consists of three battalions, 1st battalion (42nd Foot), 2nd (73rd Foot), 3rd (Reserve Battalion), which also has head quarters in the barracks. Perth is also the head quarters of No. 1 Military District.

The Territorial Force stationed in Perth comprise the head quarters of the Highland Division, the Highland Divisional Royal Artillery, the Black Watch Infantry Brigade, and the battalion and A, B, and G Companies of the 6th Battalion The Black Watch (Royal Highlanders), the Highland Divisional Transport and Supply Column A.S.C. and No. 1 (Head Quarters) Company of the column.

H.M. Prison for Scotland, near the South Inch, built by Government in 1812, for the reception of prisoners of war, was wholly rebuilt and remodelled in 1842, and is now occupied as a convict prison for females and also as a prison for male and female prisoners undergoing short sentences, more extensive buildings having been erected for the detention of criminal lunatics.

The County and City of Perth Royal Infirmary, in York place, is a structure in a plain Italian style, two storeys in height, and consisting of a long block of buildings, with a projecting centre and wings and a spacious arched portico; the first stone was laid by George Willam, 9th Baron Kinnaird K.T. in 1836, and it was opened in 1838. The late Marquess of Breadalbane and Dr. Brown, of Perth, left liberal bequests to this institution: the west wing, containing additional wards for the treatment of infectious diseases, was erected in 1865, at a cost of £1,200, defrayed principally by subscription, and in 1869 an east wing for surgical cases was added. Various other extensions and improvements were made in 1873-4, 1885, 1893 and 1903, and during 1910 there were 1,041 house patients and 1,823 accident cases, and 109 patients were visited by the district surgeon; attached to the infirmary is a dispensary, at which, in 1910, 655 patients were treated, 69 received electrical treatment.

King James the Sixth's Hospital was founded by King James VI. in 1569, and charters were granted by that monarch in 1569 and 1587, and confirmed by Acts of Parliament in 1587 and 1592, "to provide by all honest ways and means an hospital for the poor, maimed, distressed persons, orphans, and fatherless bairns within our burgh of Perth," and for the endowment of which he gave "all the lands, biggins, tenements, kirks, orchards &c. which pertained to the chaplainries, altars, and prebendaries founded in whatever kirk, chapel or college within the liberties and privileges of the said burgh of Perth; all the lands &c. which pertained to the Blackfriars, Greyfriars and Carmelite monks at the Reformation—the profits of the same to be applied, in all time coming, to the hospital and sustenance of the poor." The pensioners now live out, and receive an equivalent of £6 and £12 a year; the hospital building is now for the most part converted into dwelling houses for the working classes.

Murray's Royal Asylum, on Kinnoull hill, erected from a bequest of Mr. James Murray, a native of Perth, and opened in 1827, is a building of the Grecian-Doric order, intended for private insane patients only; two wings have been added for acute cases, and two villas erected; attached are extensive pleasure grounds, surrounded by the fields of the Home farm and several villas under the same management. Pitcullen House and Seven Gables, Elie, have been acquired as Convalescent Homes. The Asylum is managed by a body of directors, who are incorporated.

The Perth and Perthshire Hospital for Incurables, situated on the Dundee road, usually contains from 40 to 60 patients. In connection with the hospital is a sanatorium, situated on the slope of Kinnoull hill, for the treatment of pulmonary consumption on the open air system, and having 22 beds.

A statue of H.R.H. the late Prince Consort, executed by Mr. Brodie, sculptor, of Edinburgh, was erected in 1864 on the North Inch and inaugurated by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, on the 30th of August of that year, on which occasion the late Sir David Ross, then lord provost, was knighted.

On the North Inch is also a granite obelisk, erected in 1895 by the County and City of Perth, and officers, past and present, to commemorate the deeds of the 90th Light Infantry (Perthshire Volunteers), originally raised in May, 1794, by Thomas Graham, of Balgowan, who was promoted to the rank of General in 1809 for his services in Italy, Spain and Holland, made a G.C.B. in 1812, and created Baron Lynedoch in 1814. This regiment, in July, 1881, was constituted the second batt. Cameronians.

A band stand has been erected on the North Inch at the cost of J. F. Pullar esq. of Rosebank; on the South Inch is also a statue of Sir Walter Scott.

The theatre and opera house, High street, erected from plans by Mr. William Alexander, architect, of Dundee, was opened in Sept. 1900, and will hold an audience of 1,300.

There are public swimming baths in Dunkeld road, with a bowling green attached.

The principal hotels are the Station, adjoining the General Railway station, and the Waverley, in York place.

The Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited have each two branches in the city, and there are also branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited, as well as a savings bank with a branch at County place.

The Royal Perth Golfing Society includes in its roll of members a great many of the nobility and gentry of the locality.

The weekly market day is Friday. The fairs, since the year 1822, have been altered by the magistrates and town council, on account of the general inconvenience resulting from the dates formerly appointed falling on the same days, or at the same time, with the fairs of Falkirk and other places; they are now, therefore, held on the first Friday in March, April, July and September, on the third Friday in October, the second Friday in December, and a sheep and wool fair the first Tuesday after Inverness wool fair, and a horse market takes place on the first Friday in May. There are now two great cattle and sheep markets in Perth, sales taking place on Monday and Friday.

Three newspapers are published here, viz.: the "Perthshire Advertiser" (Liberal), established in 1829, and published on Wednesday and Saturday; the "Perthshire Constitutional and Journal" (Conservative), established in 1832, and the "Perthshire Courier and Farmers' Journal," established in 1809, and Liberal in politics.

The population of Perth civil parish in 1891 was 26,744, and in 1901, 29,793. The population of the parliamentary and police burgh, 1891, was 29,899, and in 1901 was 32,866, viz.: first ward, 6,963; second ward, 8,850; third ward, 5,960; fourth ward, 11,093. The area of Perth parish comprises 2,653 acres. The rateable value is, burghal, £201,421; landward, £2,254.

Included in the total population was 33 officials and 72 inmates of the Royal Infirmary; 12 officials and 177 inmates of the Poorhouse; 156 in Feehney Industrial School for Boys; 238 military and 130 non-military servants &c. in the Barracks and 50 officials and 339 prisoners in the General Prison for Scotland.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was, East, 11,429; Middle, 700; St. Andrew's, 3,824; St. Leonard's, 3,704; St. Paul's, 2,572; West, 4,205.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 5,514.

Immediately adjoining the bridge is the suburb of Bridgend, leading to Kinnoull Hill, at the distance of a mile and a half, which can be ascended by various pleasant walks.

Craigie is a small hamlet on the Edinburgh road, 2 miles from and in the parish of Perth, and has a United Free church and a school.

PITLOCHRY is a thriving village in the parish of Moulin, parliamentary division of West Perthshire, Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination and Perth county court district, and has a station on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway; it is 13 miles north-west from Dunkeld and 28 north from Perth, on the banks of the Tummel, and is surrounded by some of the most beautiful and varied scenery to be found in the Highlands of Perthshire; it is also largely resorted to by tourists and anglers for the fishing in the river and Loch Tummel. Spout Dhu, or the black waterfall, Ben Vracky, one of the Grampians, the falls of Tummel and the Pass of Killiecrankie are all in the immediate neighbourhood. The Established church is a structure in the Gothic style, erected in 1884, on an elevated site, at a cost of upwards of £2,000. There is also a United Free church. Holy Trinity Episcopal church, built in 1858, and enlarged in 1891, is an edifice in the Gothic style, about half a mile east of the village; the Rev. Canon Charles Edward Cooke M.A. of Merton College, Oxford, has been rector since 1902. There is also a Baptist chapel. The Barbour Institute is a very fine building, erected in 1895, by the Barbour family, in memory of the late R. W. Barbour. There are two hydropathic establishments. Fairs are held annually on the Saturday before Amblee, in May; on the Friday after Falkirk tryst, in August (for lambs), and on the third Wednesday in October (old style). Messrs. MacNaughton's factory here is noted for the excellence of its Highland tweeds and plaids. Whisky is extensively distilled in this place and neighbourhood. There are several good hotels, and branches of the Bank of Scotland, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a branch of the Perth Savings Bank. Clachnafairste is the seat of Sir Francis Boyd Ornamart. Population in 1891, 1,230, and in 1901, 1,541.

PORT OF MENTEITH (or Monteith) is a parish in the ancient district of Monteith, in Dumbarton poor combination and Dunblane small debt court district, and is bounded on the south by the river Forth, which separates this county from Stirling-shire. The Goodie water, a tributary of the Forth, rises in the Lake of Monteith and flows through the eastern portion of the parish. The church stands on the high road from Dunblane to Dumbarton, 4 miles north from the Port of Monteith station on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 4½ north-east from Gartmore station and about the same distance from Aberfoyle terminal station, both on a branch from Buchlyvie on the same section, and 15 north-west from Stirling. The Lake of Monteith is a beautiful sheet of water near the centre of the district, adjoining the church and manse. It is about 9 miles in circumference, and contains the small island of Inchmaholme, where stand the fine remains of an Augustinian priory, or monastery, founded in 1238 by Walter (Comyn), Earl of Monteith, and dedicated to St. Colmc. the ruins include a considerable portion of the church, 161 feet in length, and the cloisters: on the north side of the nave are three pointed arches, two of which opened to a destroyed aisle or chapel, and the other to a north-west tower: the east window has five tall lancets, now blocked: the west doorway exhibits good mouldings, and has two blank arches on each side: part of the structure has been for ages the place of sepulture of many noble and ancient families. These ruins are sequestered in overhanging woods of considerable age and growth, and some of the trees are said to be upwards of three centuries old. In this vicinity, on a gentle eminence, are the remains of what is still known as "Queen Mary's Bower," where, after the disastrous battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, the young princess found a safe asylum till her departure for France. On a smaller islet, called Tala, a little distance from Inchmaholme, stand the remains of the principal residence of the Earls of Monteith. Dog Island, another islet, is the place where the Grahams had their kennels. The Established church here contains a very fine peal of 8 bells, presented by the Rev. Henry A. G. Sheppard, of Rednock. The Lake Hotel adjoins the loch. Henry David Erskine esq. C.V.O., D.L., J.P. of Cardross; the Duke of Montrose K.T.; the Rev. Henry Alexander Graham Sheppard M.A. of Rednock; Sir Charles Cayzer bart. of Garmora, and George Erskine esq. of Blairhoyle, are the principal landowners. Acreage of the parish, 22,238; rateable value, £10,595; population 1901, 1,088 civil, and 512 ecclesiastical parish.

GARTMORE is a village in this parish, but is given under a separate heading.

RANNOCH, see FORTINGAL.

RATTRAY—NEW and OLD form a police burgh and parish, adjoining Blairgowrie, its nearest railway station on a branch of the Caledonian railway, and approached by a bridge of four arches which spans the river Ercht. The surface is hilly and the land on the banks of the river arable and fertile, while the higher grounds are mostly suitable for pasture. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 41 to 55), boundary order 72, a portion of Rattray parish, consisting only of the Blean estate, and having a population of 20, has been transferred to Kirkmichael. The burgh is in the poor combination of Perth and in the small debt court district of Blairgowrie, and is governed by a police commission, consisting of a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. There are Established and United Free churches, and a Wesleyan chapel. On the banks of the river Erich are flax and jute mills. The Strathmore Hospital for Infectious Diseases, built in 1903, provides for 30 patients. Within the parish is Craighall, the seat of Col. Burn Clerk Rattray J.P. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner; the mansion is said to have been visited by Scott in 1793, and was one of the prototypes of "Tullyveolan" in Waverley; it is a modern mansion occupying the summit of a perpendicular rock about 250 feet above the bed of the river and is open free on Tuesdays and Fridays. To the south-east of the burgh is an oblong mound called the Castlehill, on which are vestiges of the ancient castle of Rattray. From Hatton Hill, on a clear day, Perth can be seen. At the Hatton of Rattray was born Donald Cargill, a Scottish covenanting divine, executed in 1681. Acreage, 5,382; rateable value, £12,000; population in 1891, 2,667 in the civil parish and 2,225 in the police burgh, and in 1901, 2,462, of which 443 were in the landward portion.

ST. MARTINS is a parish and village, 5½ miles north-east of Perth and 2½ south-west from Stanley station on the Cupar-Angus and Perth section of the Caledonian railway, and in the small debt court district of Perth. The parish is of an irregular shape, being about 5 miles in length from east to west and 2½ broad. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 41 to 50), by boundary order 71, a portion of Kinnoull parish (Balbeggie) was transferred to this parish. Here are Established and United Free churches. The soil is black moorland. Guildtown is a small village in this parish. At Cairn-beddie are the remains of a castle, once occupied by Macbeth, and from which, as tradition states, he removed to the celebrated hill of Dunainane, where he fortified another castle. About a mile from his old residence, a place called "The Witch Stone" (where a remarkable stone still stands), is pointed out the spot where he was met by the witches ("Macbeth," Act I, Scene iii.). William Montague McDonald esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,017 acres; rateable value, £9,074; population in 1901, 850 civil and 629 ecclesiastical parish.

SCONE is a parish and village, $2\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from Perth; the parish, which extends 5 miles from east to west by $2\frac{1}{2}$ broad, is in the small debt court district of Perth, the nearest railway station being in that city. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (62 and 53 Viet. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), by boundary order No. 71, a part of Kinnoull, with a population of 46, has been transferred to Scone, and a part of Scone, containing a population of 80, transferred to Cargill and to Kinnoull, with 39 population. A little westward of the village is the site of the Royal Palace, founded here by Kenneth II. when he removed the seat of the Scottish monarchy from Dunstaffnage Castle about A.D. 850, and deposited here the Stone of Destiny, which subsequently rested in the abbey until its removal to Westminster, London, by Edward I.; the abbey, which stood close to the palace, was founded by Alexander I. 1114; John (Ruthven) 2nd Earl of Gowrie, who lost his life at Gowrie House, 5 Aug. 1600, for the alleged attempt to imprison King James VI. (known as the "Gowrie Conspiracy"), began the palace which preceded the present fabric on the site of the old palace of the Kings of Scotland, and it was completed in 1606 by Sir David Murray, of Gospertie, cup-bearer of the king, who received the grant of these estates, together with the titles of Baron Scone and Viscount Stormont, for the effective support he rendered to James VI. in the conspiracy above mentioned; it was in a church on the Mote Hill, hard by, that King Charles II. was crowned King of Scotland in 1651; the present mansion, which is mostly modern, occupies the same site overlooking the Tay, and contains a little of the old furniture, including some bedhangings embroidered by Queen Mary: the old gallery, 160 feet in length, is included in the modern palace, now the seat of the 6th Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield J.P. who is also 11th Viscount Stormont and Baron Scone, and 9th Baron Balvaird in the Peerage of Scotland. Near the house stands the old market cross of Scone, surrounded by a wilderness of pleasure grounds, which have usurped the site of the ancient village; it has been aptly observed that "there are many instances of towns losing their market crosses, but this is the only cross which has lost its town." The Earl of Mansfield & Mansfield is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 6,963 acres; rateable value, £15,700; the population of the civil parish in 1901 was 1,943, of whom 700 were included in the royal burgh of Perth, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,407.

NEW SCONE is a village in Scone civil parish; population in 1901, 1,585.

TIBBERMORE (or Tibbermuir) is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Perth, bounded on the north by the river Almond, and is 1½ miles south from Almondbank station on the Perth and Crieff section of the Caledonian railway, and about 5 west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), a part of Tibbermore parish was transferred to Perth, and part of the latter parish added to Tibbermore. In 1910 there was a further transfer of a small portion from this parish to Perth. Here is an Established church and a Church Hall. The parish contains two extensive bleach fields belonging to Messrs. Lumsden and Mackenzie. Tibbermore has given its name to a battle fought here, 1st Sep. 1644, between the Marquess of Montrose and the Covenanters, though the conflict occurred more within the parish of Aberdalgie; in this sanguinary engagement the covenanting forces were totally routed. The ancient castle of Huntingtower, formerly known as Ruthven Castle, was formerly the seat of the Gowrie family, and the place where James VI. was confined by William Ruthven, Earl of Gowrie, and other conspirators, after the "Raid of Ruthven," in the year 1582; it is now the property of Major William Lindsay Mercer. The area of the parish is 7,131 acres; rateable value, £10,957; population in 1891, 1,692, and in 1901, 1,943, of which 700 are included in the royal burgh of Perth. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,522.

WEEM is an extensive Highland parish in the district of Breadalbane, and in Atholl and Breadalbane poor combination.
It is bounded on the north and west by the parish of Dull, on the east by Logierait and on the south by the river Tay. The church of Weem is about one mile north from Aberfeldy terminal station on a branch from Ballinlraig junction on the Perth and Blair Atholl section of the Highland railway, 74 north-north-west from Edinburgh, 34 north-west from Perth. By the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1883" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), boundary order 73, part of the parish of Dull, with a population of 156 and of Logierait, with 129, have been added to Weem, and a part of Weem, with a population of 81, transferred to Dull, a part with 55 to Fortingall, a part with 62 to Kenmore, a part with 40 to Killin and a part with 16 population to Logierait parishes. The private Episcopal chapel of St. David, an edifice in the Norman style, was erected in 1875 by Sir Robert Menzies, 7th bart. (d. 1903), and affords 160 sittings. Amongst the objects of interest in the immediate vicinity are Taymouth Castle, the ruins of Garth

Castle, Meggernie Castle, the Birks of Aberfeldy, the Falls of Moness, Acharn, Keltney Burn, and Glenlyon and its pass.
Castle Menzies, the seat of Lady Menzies,
is a handsome mansion with lofty terraces,
surrounded by fine plantations, pleasure grounds and orchards. Edradynate is the residence of Major James Stewart-Robertson D.L., J.P. The Weem Hotel is conveniently adapted for the reception of families and visitors generally. Lady Menzies, Major J. Stewart-Robertson, of Edradynate; Mrs. Douglas, of Killiechassie and D. F. Dempster esq. Derculich, are the principal landowners. The area is 7,490 acres; rateable value, £4,767; population in 1901, 406.

THIS county lies south of the Clyde, opposite to Dumbartonshire, and divided from Argyllshire by the Firth of Clyde, being bounded on the south by Ayrshire and east by Lanarkshire; it extends from north-west to south-east about 30 miles, by 10 to 15 broad, and comprises 153,332 acres, or 239.6 square miles of land and 2,794 of water; it is a large trading and manufacturing centre, and contained in 1891 a population of 230,812, and in 1901, 268,980, viz.: males, 130,407, and females, 138,573. Parts of the county have been transferred to Lanarkshire and Ayrshire, and part of Lanarkshire to Renfrewshire, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889." The county is size is the twenty-eighth, and in population the fourth, of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1911 was 314,594.

Early History.—When the Roman invaders advanced in A.D. 80 from the Solway Firth, this district was occupied by the "Damii," a British tribe; the principal Roman station was established near where Paisley now stands, and called Vanduaara, which was an outwork to the left flank of the great wall of Antonine. After the retreat of the Romans in 410, the Cumbrian Britons, with a capital city at Alclyde (Dumbarton), retained a hold on all the country west of the Lothians, which they held until 756, and in 1007 this part was regularly incorporated with the Scottish kingdom under Edgar. In the reign of David I. Walter, the son of Alan, fled from Shropshire during the troublous conflicts of Maud and Stephen, and settled in the district, where David I. made him steward and gave him lands to support the dignity of his office. Besides these possessions, he subsequently acquired the whole district of Strathgryfe and the western half of Kyle, in Ayrshire, which hence was called Kyle Stewart. Such was the manner in which the first of the royal family of Stewart settled in Scotland. In this period the country in this quarter was in a semi-barbarous state, but Walter the Stewart introduced new and civilised usages. He settled many of his military followers on his lands, and by founding the abbey of Paisley, introduced a body of instructed men, who taught the ancient people domestic arts and foreign manners. For several centuries this district formed a portion of Lanarkshire. In 1404 Robert III. created a principality, consisting of the barony of Renfrew and the whole of the Stewart's estates, with the earldom of Carrick and the barony of King's Kyle, all of which he granted, in a free regality, as a provision for his son James; and this principality continued, in after times, the appropriate appanage of the eldest sons of the Scottish monarchs. In consequence of these arrangements, the identity of the barony of Renfrew and the shire of Lanark was dissolved, and the former placed under the jurisdiction of a separate sheriff. Baron Renfrew is at the present time one of the titles of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales. At Langside, in the extreme east of the county, was fought, 1568, the battle so fatal to Queen Mary, and ending in her flight to England.

Soil, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is very much diversified. In those parts of the high grounds which are not covered by heath and moss, a fine light soil on a gravelly substratum is generally found. In the portion composed of detached hills the surface is a thin earth, bisected by gravel; and in the level districts the plough or spade sinks through a deep, rich brown loam. More than one-half of the shire, comprehending the west and south-east portions, is hilly, and devoted to pasture. The cultivated districts comprise the north, the north-east, and the centre of the county, and consist partly of low elevations, and partly of a level tract of rich loam between Paisley and the river Clyde. The hilly part varies in elevation from 500 to 1,250 feet; Misty Law, the hill of greatest altitude in the shire, is 1,663 feet high. Owing to the great demand in this county for dairy produce, and that also of the garden and the fold (arising from the vicinity of large and populous towns), nearly one-half of the land in the shire is kept under grass. Nevertheless the system of agriculture is of the most advanced kind, the crops in general being excellent, and comprising wheat, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes, of which latter great quantities are grown for Glasgow and the markets of other large towns.

The chief crops, as shewn by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," were: Oats, 10,164 acres; wheat, 1,802; beans, 179; total corn crops, 12,224 acres; potatoes, 2,863 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,088; cabbage, 243; vetches or tares, 26; total green crops, 5,284; clover, sainfoin and grasses for hay, 13,109, not for hay, 10,668 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 5,767, not for hay, 42,420 acres. The total area of land is 153,332 acres, of which 36,180 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 6,939 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised: 2,643 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 673; cows and heifers to milk, 12,975; in calf but not in milk, 3,841; other cattle, two years and above, 2,631; one year and under two, 3,068; under one year, 2,853; ewes kept for breeding, 17,928; other sheep, one year and above, 8,329; under one year, 16,753; sows kept for breeding, 153; other pigs, 1,205.

The minerals are of considerable value, coal, limestone, ironstone and sandstone abounding in various parts of it; the first-named being wrought principally in the neighbourhoods of Renfrew, Bishopston, Quarrelton, Nitshill, Neilston, and other places. The production of fire clay in 1909 was 163,138 tons, value £24,474; brick clay, 22,756 tons, value £1,526; of coal, 124,002 tons, value £39,296; of iron ore, 179,281 tons, value £67,230; the total quantity of coal used in the manufacture of coke was 106,269 tons, the amount of coke obtained being 36,589, entirely at gas works; other minerals raised in 1909 were barium (compounds), 1,021 tons; gravel and sand, 2,704 tons; igneous rocks, 68,392 tons; limestone, 16,254 tons; sandstone, 49,858. In point of commercial and manufacturing importance this county is second only to that of Lanark, and with it unites in constituting the great manufacturing districts of Scotland. The goods produced are chiefly of cotton and silk, including, amongst various articles and fabrics, shawls of infinite diversity in texture and price. Whilst Paisley is the head quarters of the trade in these articles, the business of weaving is pursued, to a greater or less extent, in almost every town, village and hamlet. Another important branch is the manufacture of sewing cotton, which is carried on very extensively at Paisley. Besides those already mentioned, there are numerous bleach-fields, calico and shawl-printing works, dyeworks, immense flax-spinning mills, linen thread, sailcloth, paper, starch and earthenware manufactories, large iron foundries, engineering, ship and boat building works, distilleries, breweries, sugar refineries, and many other branches of commerce of a varied and important character. The free export of manufactured goods is promoted by the different seaports on the Clyde, especially Greenock, by which also foreign produce is imported. The Forth and Clyde canal connects this county with many other shires. The fishing and general shipping trade is centred at Greenock, under which place particulars are given.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal streams are the White Cart, the Black Cart, and the Gryffe, all of which ultimately unite and fall into the Clyde below Inchinnan Bridge; that is, about half-way down the river between Glasgow and Port Glasgow. The White Cart (which, by way of distinction, is generally denominated the Cart) rises at Eaglesham, in this county, and in the high grounds of East Kilbride, in Lanarkshire; and, passing Paisley in its course, joins the Gryffe at Inchinnan Bridge. The Black Cart issues from the loch of Castle Semple, in Lochwinnoch parish, and flowing northward falls in with the Gryffe at Walkishaw. The Gryffe rises in the high grounds above Largs, and flows eastward until it meets the Black Cart; the Gryffe bestows the name of Strathgryfe upon the vale through which it flows. The lakes are Castle Semple Loch, Queenside Loch (in the parish of Lochwinnoch), two lochs in Neilston parish, and several smaller ones. The first-named (Castle Semple) is situate in the southern border of the county; its banks are beautifully wooded in some places, and it contains a small island, on which stand the ruins of a castle. The Glasgow and Kilmarnock branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway runs through the eastern portion of the county, via Barrihead, leaving it at Lagton, the Caledonian railway running a line over the same ground, as far as Pollokshaws and thence trending eastward to East Kilbride, while through the centre of the county, by Paisley, Johnstone and Beith to Ayr, runs the main line of the Glasgow and South Western, with a branch from Paisley northward to Renfrew, and one from Johnstone by Bridge of Weir to Greenock. The Caledonian railway runs a line through Paisley and along the south bank of the Clyde, to Port Glasgow and Greenock, with a branch via Upper Greenock to Wemyss Bay, and the line from Glasgow to Yoker cuts through the north-east angle of the county. The Caledonian Railway Company have a branch from Giffnock on the Bothwell and Pollokshaws section to Dunlop on the Kilmarnock branch, and one from near Giffnock to Houston on the Greenock branch.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Renfrewshire comprehends 14 entire, and parts of 2 civil parishes and 35 ecclesiastical parishes, with parts of 14 others. It contains two representative burghs—Port Glasgow and Renfrew—which join with Rutherglen, Dumbarton and Kilmarnock in returning one member to Parliament. Greenock and Paisley each send a representative, and the county, under the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," is separated into the East and West Divisions, and returns two members, instead of one as formerly. The Parliamentary constituency in 1911 was:—East Division, 21,314; West Division, 14,363.

ABBEY OF PAISLEY is a civil parish, a part of which is now included in the burgh of Paisley, the remainder comprising Elderslie and Lavern, quoad sacra parishes.

BALACLAVA, see KILBARCHAN.

BARRHEAD is a town, police burgh and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Neilston, and in Paisley small debt court district and poor combination, with stations on the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint railway, and on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 4 miles south-east from Paisley and 7 south-west from Glasgow. The town consists chiefly of one principal street, with several smaller ones diverging from it; it is lighted with gas by a limited company, and, together with the suburbs of Grahams-ton and Dunterlie, is the centre of a manufacturing and thickly populated neighbourhood. It was constituted a police burgh in 1891, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. There are established, Evangelical, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, a Wesleyan chapel, a Gospel hall and Salvation Army barracks. In the district are several large bleach fields, a number of extensive calico printing establishments and mills for cotton spinning and power loom weaving, besides collieries, engineering works and iron foundries. Here also are the sanitary engineering works of Messrs. Shanks and Co. Limited. There are branches in the town of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and also of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The trustees of Z. Heys esq. of South Arthurlie, Mrs. Glen, of Carlibar, Matthew Locke, of Barsharga, and Henry Barclay Dunlop esq. J.P., D.L. of Arthurlie, are the chief landowners. The area of the burgh is 529 acres; rateable value, £36,313; the population of the town in 1891 was 8,215, and in 1901, 9,855, viz.: first ward, 4,354; second ward, 2,048; third ward, 3,453. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 9,257.

BRIDGE OF WEIR is a village and quoad sacra parish, formed from the civil parishes of Houston and Kilbarchan, 1 mile from Houston and 3 from Johnstone, with a station on the Glasgow and Greenock section of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The old part of the village is situate in the parish of Houston, and the new part in the parish of Kilbarchan, through which flows the river Gryffe. The Established church here was erected at a cost of £3,000, and will seat 500 persons; there are also two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Mary is served by the diocesan staff. The Ranfurly Hotel is in the village. The New Orphan Homes of Scotland, erected under the superintendence of William Quarrier esq. at a cost of about £250,000, are about a mile and a half from the village. In 1903 the homes were enlarged by the addition of a school, erected at a cost of about £8,000, and two new homes costing £6,300; in 1910 extensive alterations were made in the church, at a cost of about £5,000, and several new homes were erected. A sanatorium for the open air treatment of consumption was opened in 1893, and will hold 80 female patients. The population of the village in 1901 was 2,242, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,316.

BUSBY, see MEARNS.

CATHCART is a town and parish, in the small debt court district of Paisley, 3 miles south from Glasgow, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Its original designation was Caer-Cart, i.e., the Castle on the river Cart; and the White Cart flows through the parish, which is of some extent, and though now wholly in this county, was formerly partly in Lanarkshire, its boundaries having been considerably modified by transfers made under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889," by boundary orders 137 and 140, by which the town (and police burgh) of Crosshills, now included in Glasgow, and a large portion of suburban Glasgow, was transferred to Lanarkshire. The parish church is an edifice in the Gothic style,

and will seat 550 persons; there is also a chapel of ease at Merrylee. The United Free church seats 650 persons. The Cooper Institute, a stone building erected in 1887, at a cost of about £6,000, was presented to the parish by the late Robert Cooper, of Millholm. The 3rd Highland (Howitzer) Brigade R.F.A. (T. F.) Ammunition Column is stationed here. The field of Langside, in this parish, is remarkable for being the scene of the last fruitless effort of the unfortunate Mary to regain her crown, 13th May, 1568; on the defeat of her army by the troops of the Regent
 Murray, she took to flight, and crossing the Solway Firth, landed at Workington, in Cumberland, on the 16th of the same month. An eminence is still pointed out where the queen stood during the engagement. The old castle of Cathcart, a conspicuous ruin, occupies a commanding position, defended on two sides by the Cart, to which there is a deep and almost perpendicular descent: it belonged to the Lords of Cathcart, but has been dismantled for over a century. Henry E. Gordon esq.
 and Sir John M. Stirling Maxwell bart.
 of Pollok, are the principal landowners.
 The area of the civil parish is 2,387 acres;
 rateable value, £260,798; population in 1891, 16,589, and in 1901, 28,358, of which 20,983 are in the town. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 18,831.

CLARKSTON is a rapidly increasing village in this parish, 2 miles south from Cathcart, with a station on the Glasgow and Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway. The population in 1901 was 424.

NEWLANDS, a new residential neighbourhood, adjoining the station of Lang-side, is also in this parish, and has a United Free church. The Episcopal church, which is only partially completed,
 is dedicated to St. Margaret. The Rev.
 Edmund James Petrie M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been priest in charge
 since 1908, and resides at Langside.
