DUNNICHEN, supposed to be derived from Duo Achen (the hill or foot of the valley), is a parish, extending 4 miles from north to south and from 2 to 4 in breadth, and containing the villages of Letham and Craichie; it is in the small debt court district of Forfar, from which town it is 4 miles distant, and is bounded on the north-west and west by Forfar parish, south-west by Ieverarty, north and east by Rescobie and south-east by Kirkden. The Caledonian railway from Dundee to Forfar passes through the north-west of the parish, the nearest station being at Kingsmuir, 2 miles distant. There is an Established church at Dunnichen and a chapel of ease at Letham, where there is also a United Free church. Dunnichen House, the property of Lady Dempster Metcalfe, is now occupied by Edmund C. Cox esq. The greatest elevations are the hills of Dunnichen, 800 feet. The medium elevation of the parish is 360 feet above the sea level, and consists of undulations of ridges running from west to east, the greatest descent being towards Vinney Water (the only stream which runs through the parish), on the south. Sandstone and freestone abound in the parish. The land, which is nearly all arable, is tolerably fertile. Lady Dempster Metcalfe, of 17 Stratton street, London W. and John Sharp Callender Brodie esq. of Idvies House, Kirkden, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,090 acres; rateable value, £6,628; population, 1901, 1,132 civil and ecclesiastical, 1,222.

Letters through Forfar arrive about 9.40 a.m. Wall Box, Craichie, cleared at 11.20 a.m. Letham, 1 1/2 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

EDZELL is a parish and village on the north-east border of the county, with a terminal station on a branch line from Brechin, of the Caledonian railway. The parish is bounded east and north by that county, north-west by the parish of Lochlee, west by Lethnot and south-west by Stracathro; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin, and extends 12 miles from south-east to north-west by 6 in breadth. The North water flows in a south-east course through the entire length and the West water along its lower border. The village is lighted with gas. The southern spurs of the Grampians occupy the upper part of the parish, which is an agricultural district with a fertile soil. There are Established and United Free churches. The Inglis Memorial Hall, presented to the village by Col. R. W. Inglis, and opened, July 22nd, 1893, is an edifice of stone, with a tower containing a clock and chimes; the building includes a large hall, seating about 500 persons, and a smaller hall for about 100; there is a good library of 6,000 volumes, and as an institution, the hall has an annual endow-ment of £120. The ruins of the Castle of Edzell, once the seat of the Lindsays of Glen Esk, form a prominent object. The Earl of Dalhousie D.L. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 18,959 acres; rateable value, £8,741; the popula-tion in 1891 was 700, and in 1901, 822 in the civil parish, 518 in the village, and 367 in the ecclesiastical, which extends into Kincardineshire.

FORFAR

FORFAR is a royal burgh, parish, seat of a prebysiter and head of a poor law combination, a small debt court district and a registration district; it is 57 miles north from Edinburgh, 15 north-west from Arbroath, 15 north-by-east from Dundee and 11 south-west from Brechin, and has a station on the Caledonian railway, whose line from Newtyle, Brechin, Broughty Ferry and Arbroath (the latter being a joint line with the North British) meet here, and there are two other stations in the parish, Kingsmuir and Clocksbriggs. The town is supplied with gas from works in North street, the property of the Corporation. Water was introduced from the Den of Ogil in 1881. The burgh, united with Montrose, Brechin, Inverbervia and Arbroath, forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted by the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. The original charters which constituted Forfar a royal burgh are lost, but the privileges were confirmed in 1669, in virtue of which the burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and ten councillors, a third of whom are elected annually. The revenue of the burgh, arising from lands, customs &c. may be averaged at about £2,700 yearly. A sheriff's court is held for the trial of civil and criminal cases generally; and a police court for the determination of local, civil and police affairs. The date of the erection of Forfar Castle, which stood upon an eminence to the north of the town, cannot be certified, but it is said to have been the place of meeting of the first Parliament, convened by King Malcolm Ceanmor, 1056-93, and his occasional seat of residence after the recovery of his throne from Macbeth. The magistrates of the burgh some years since removed the market cross from the street to the site of the old castle, to mark the spot where that monarch sojourned, as but few remains of the edifice are now extant. In the old churchyard lies the remains of George Don, a Scottish botanist, who died in 1856. Dr. John Jamieson, the compiler in 1809-10 of an "Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language," was minister of the Anti-Burgher congregation of this place from 1780 to 1797, when he left for Edinburgh, where he died 12 July, 1838. About 1 mile east are the remains of Restenecet Priory, which stood near Clocksbriggs. On the west side of the town is a fine loch, nearly a mile in length by half a mile in breadth. Upon a small artificial island, near the north end of the loch, anciently stood a nunnery, founded by Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling and queen of Malcolm III. surnamed "Ceanmor." During the partial drainage of the lake, many years since, weapons and instruments, conjectured to have been used by the murderer of Malcolm II. at Glamis, were fished up: a tradition asserting that the assassins, in attempting to cross the lake on the ice, fell in and perished. The Municipal Buildings are in Castle street. The chief trade of the town consists in weaving jute and linen and bleaching; there are eight factories and two bleach works, employing over 3,000 hands. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank and the Bank of Scotland; there is also a Savings Bank. The market is held on Saturday, for butter and grain, and cattle markets are held every Monday at the Auction Mart, two adjoining the Railway station. A fair is held on the Market Muir for horses and cattle on the second Wednesday in each month from April to November. Two weekly newspapers, "The Forfar Herald" and "The Forfar Review," are published on Friday. The principal hotels are the County and Commercial, the Royal, Castle street, and Jarman's Station Hotel, opposite the Railway station. A Public Hall, the free gift of the late Peter Reid esq. sometime provost of Forfar, stands near the Railway station, and a fine Public Park of about 15 acres, on the south side of the town, the gift of the same donor, was laid out in 1895. In 1899 a bronze statue of the late ex-provost, Peter Reid, modelled by Mr. G. Webster, of Edinburgh, was erected in Castle street, at cost of about £600, provided by public subscription. The Town and County Hall contains a spacious upper room for public meetings. The Meffan Institute, in West High street, and opened in 1898, was given to the town by the late Miss Meffan (daughter of a former provost of the burgh), at a cost of over £5,000, and contains a public reading room, lecture hall, museum and reference room, and here also is the Free Public Library, which has now (1911) upwards of 13,000 volumes; the "Public Libraries Act, 1855," was adopted in 1870.

The Territorial Force stationed in Forfar comprises the D Squadron, Fife and Forfar Yeomanry; B Co. 5th Battalion Royal Highlanders and D Co. Highland Cyclist Battalion.

There are two Established churches, three United Free churches, and Congregational, Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1881, will seat 600 persons; the rectory, net value £210, has been held since 1908 by the Rev. C. Gardyne M.A. of Aberdeen University. In the steeple of the parish church is a very fine bell, cast in 1656 by Gerdt. Meyer, and presented to the town in the 17th century by a native named Robert Strang, who, having amassed a large fortune at Stockholm, bequeathed a large sum of money for the benefit of the poor of the town. He died in Stockholm, 21 April, 1651. This bell was perfected and augmented by William Strang and his wife, Margaret Patullo, in Stockholm, 1656. The kirk session records date from 1693 onwards and are in a good state of preservation. The Forfar County Hospital for Infectious Diseases, situated in Whitehills, provides for 50 patients.

The Public Baths, built in 1910, erected on a site given by Messrs. Dow Brothers, Buist & Co. Limited, were presented to the town by Andrew Carnegie esq. at a cost of £6,000.

The Forfar Academy, now divided into higher and lower schools, commenced its instructive course in 1815, and there are seven other public schools.

There are also a Poorhouse and an Infirmary for the benefit of the town and the neighbouring portion of the county; the former contains 85 beds and the latter 25.

The Public Cemetery, formed in 1850, occupies 16½ Scotch acres on the south side of the town, and is laid out in tasteful walks, with ornamental shrubs &c. forming a pleasant promenade. On a mound at the top of the cemetery a statue was erected in 1852, by public subscription, to the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel P.C., M.P. who died 2 July, 1850. The figure stands upon a large pedestal, beneath a dome supported on eight pillars.

Lour is the property and residence of Lieut.-Col. Patrick A. W. Carnegie D.L., J.P., V.D. who is also the principal landowner.

The parish comprises 8,435 acres, and the rateable value is £56,585, including the value of the burgh, as given above; of the total £52,378 is general heritages and £4,207 for railways. The population of the civil parish was in 1891, 13,665, and in 1901, 12,879; the population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: parish church, 9,736, and St. James, 3,143.

FOWLIS EASTER, see LUNDIE.

FRIOCKHEIM is a village in the parish of Kirkden, and quoad aera parish formed from Guthrie, Inverkeillor and Kirkden parishes, and is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which town it is distant 6 miles north-west, 10 south-west from Mootrose, and 9 east from Forfar, with a station, $\frac{1}{4}$ miles west, on the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar section of the joint Caledonian and North British railway; the village is laid out on a regular plan, and was founded by the late Mr. Andson, who fenced it in small lots. The Established church is a building of stone, with a steeple containing a clock with two dials, presented by the late heritor, George Gordon Esq. of Melbourne; there is also a United Free church, a Church hall, and Assembly hall, and a Reading Room and Library. The chief trade of the place is bleaching of yaros and turning bobbins for the Arbroath and Dundee factories; there are also some paving stone quarries. Fairs are held for hiring on 28th May or first Thursday after, and 28th November or first Thursday after. The population in 1901 was, village, 991; ecclesiastical parish, 1,299.

GLAMIS (or Glammiss) is a parish 5 miles from north to south by 4 broad, bounded on the south by Auchterhouse, south-east and east by Tealing, north-east by Kinnettles, north by Kirriemuir, north-west by Airlie and west by Bessie and Nevy; it is in the small debt court district of Forfar, from which town the kirktown of Glamis is distant 6 miles south-west, the station, on the Newtyle and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, being $\frac{1}{4}$ miles distant. The river Dean runs along the parish through the Glen of Strathmore. In a park of 160 acres, a little north of the village, stands Glamis Castle, the seat of the Earls of Strathmore; it is an ancient mansion clustered round a massive tower 100 feet in height, with angle turrets and a newel stair which leads to the roof; the house has a fine hall and a private chapel, with good paintings: it was a royal residence, and the scene of the death of Malcolm II. in 1034; it subsequently became the property of Macbeth, after whose death it fell to the crown; Robert II. gave it to John Lyon, his favourite, who, on marrying the king's second daughter, became the founder of the family of Lyon (now Bows-Lyon), Earls of Strathmore, the eldest son of which bears the courtesy title of Lord Glamis: on the conviction and execution of the young and beautiful Lady Glamis for witchcraft, 17 July, 1537, the castle once more became royal property, and a residence of James V., but was afterwards restored to the family: it contains a valuable collection of pictures. Near the castle, on a pedestal, stand the figures of four lions rampant, life size, each holding a dial in the fore paws; from their heads rises a huge mass of stone, something like a pineapple in shape, with the protuberances upon it formed into dials, making in all eighty-four. In the manse garden stands a large stone obelisk, with carvings, said to mark King Malcolm's grave. Here is an Established church. The Episcopal church of St. Michael and All Angels, founded in 1638, is a private chapel, belonging to Lord Strathmore, and seats 65 persons: the chaplaincy has been held since 1900 by the Rev. Claud Williams GLENISLA is a parish in the north-west of the county, extending 20 miles from north to south and about 6 in breadth; it is bounded on the west and south-west by Perthshire and on the east by the parishes of Cortachy, Kirriemuir and Linlathen. The river Isla flows down the centre of the parish, and the kirktown stands on the left bank of this river, 10 miles north from Alyth. The parish is in the poor combination of Dundee and small debt court district of Forfar. The district is mountainous, and in the northern portion contains the large deer forest of Caanlochlan, near Fulchan. About 4 miles north-west of the village are the ruins of Forten Castle, belonging to the Ogilvies, and destroyed by Argyll in 1640. The curators of the Earl of Airlie (a minor) are the principal landowners. The area comprises 41,242 acres; rateable value, £10,613; the population in 1891 was 676, 1901, 669 civil and 409 ecclesiastical. Post, T. & M. O. INVERBROTHOCK, see ARBROATH.

INVERGOWRIE, which is now in Perthshire, will be found with the information in that County.

INVERKEILOR is a parish with a sea front of about 5 miles on Lunan Bay, and bounded north by the parishes of Lunan and Kinnell, west by Kirkcalden and Carmyllie and south by St. Vigeans; it runs inland for about 7 miles, and its kirktown is 5½ miles north of Arbroath; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, and has a station on the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. There are Established and United Free churches. The Lunan water runs through the northern part of the parish, and the Keilor burn through the south-eastern. On an eminence at the mouth of the Lunan river stands a venerable ruin, called "Red Castle," said to have been built by William the Lion, and used by him as a hunting seat. A short way to the south is the promontory of Redhead. The ridge of the coast at this point is very rocky and precipitous, being about 200 feet above the sea level. South-west of Redhead is Ethie House, the seat of the Earl of Northesk, and the residence at one time of Cardinal Beaton. About a mile from Ethie House, eastward, near the sea, stand the remains of St. Murdoch's chapel, formerly a cell of Aberbrothock. The Earl of Dalhousie, of Brechin Castle; the Earl of Northesk, of Ethie House, and Alexander Balfour esq. J.P. of Inchock, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,240 acres; rateable value, £14,550; population in 1901, 1,397 civil and 1,006 ecclesiastical.

KIRRIEMUIR is a town of considerable antiquity, a burgh of barony, police burgh, and capital of its parish, 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north from Dundee, 6 west-north-west from Forfar and 5 north from Glamis; with a station which is the terminus of a branch line of the Caledonian railway from Forfar. The town is situated near the foot of the braes of Angus, on the south-west side of the hill, along the northern brow of a glea, through which flows the Gairie burn. The prospect from the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the Vale of Strathmore is visible. The town council consists of a provost, two bailies and six councillors; a justice of peace court is held when required, and a sheriff's court six times a year, for recovery of small debts. The date of the barony of Kirriemuir is unknown, and it is only certain that the jurisdiction of its bailie once extended over a large tract of country. The Earl of Home K.T., V.D. is superior of the burgh. For a long period Kirriemuir has been the seat of considerable manufactures, giving employment to about 1,000 persons, comprising almost every variety of jute. Here are two Established and four United Free churches, and a place of worship for Original Seceders. The Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, built in 1905, has 250 sittings; the rectory, net value £260, has been held since 1899 by the Rev. John Anderson Philip M.A. of Aberdeen University. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland. The principal hotels are the Ogilvy Arms and the Airlie Arms. The library belonging to the Young Men's Christian Association contains about 3,000 volumes, and is open to the public. There are Public and Good Templars' Halls, a Parochial Almshouse and a public park. The endowed seminary, erected and endowed from a bequest made in 1829 by Mr. John Webster, writer and banker, is now a public school. A golf club was formed in 1903, at a cost of over £1,000. Two newspapers, "The Kirriemuir Observer" and "The Kirriemuir Free Press," are published weekly on Fridays. A little to the east of the town is the cemetery, situated on the sloping side of an eminence. Three miles to the north-east, within the boundary of the parish, over the small river Carity, stands the Castle of Inverquharly, formerly a stronghold of the Ogilvies, and still in a good state of preservation; 2 miles west are the ruins of Castle Balfour, erected by Cardinal Beaton. The principal seats are Kinnorady, the residence of Sir Leonard Lyell bart. D.L., J.P.; Lindertis, the residence of Sir Campbell Munro bart. D.L., J.P.; Logie, the residence of Major-Gen. Alexander A. A. Kinloch C.B. Fairs are held on the second Wednesday after the 26th May, the 24th July or the Wednesday after, the 19th October or the Wednesday after, the second Wednesday after the 22nd November, and on the first Friday after the 28th of May and the 28th November. Sir Leonard Lyell bart. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish (reduced by transfer of 20,573 acres to Cortachy and Clova parish) comprises 15,000 acres; rateable value, £31,662; the population in 1891 was 6,090, and in 1901, 6,902, of whom 4,096 are within the burgh. Area of the burgh, 316 acres. The population of the ecclesiastical parish (parish church) in 1901 was 3,547, and of South Church ecclesiastical parish, 2,355.

LIFF and BENVIE form a united parish, in which a portion of the city of Dundee is situated, and the landward portion lies to the west of that city, the kirktown of Liff lying 4 miles north-west; the parish is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and contains the villages of Liff, Birkhill, Muirhead and part of Invergowrie (Perthshire), which see. The Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway runs through the parish, and has stations at Liff, Lochee (West) and Lochee. Here is an Established church. The Dundee Royal and Dundee District Lunatic Asylums are at West Green, Liff, near the western boundary of the parish. At Bullionfield, in the parish of Liff, is a paper mill. Freestone, belonging to the old red sandstone formation, is found and extensively quarried in various parts of the parish. The Earl of Camperdown, Thomas Clayhills esq. of Invergowrie House, Earl of Moray, J. Martin White esq. J.P. of Balruddery, and Henry Scrymgeour, Wedderburn esq. J.P. of Birkhill, are the principal landowners. The population in 1901 was 1,830.

BIRKHILL and MUIRHEAD are small villages in the united parish of Liff and Benvie, situated on the Coupar-Angus road, and distant respectively 2 and 3 miles from Lochee, and 4 and 5 from Dundee, their post town. At Muirhead is a United Free Church and a Board school.

LINTRATHEN is a parish about 11 miles in extent from south to north and 5 broad, situated in the district known as the Braes of Angus, which lies between the Grampian range and the valley of Strathmore; it is bounded by Cortachy on the north and east, Kingoldrum and Airlie on the south-east and south and Glenisla on the west, and is in the small debt court district of Kirriemuir, and contains the hamlets of Pitmudie and Bridgend of Lintrathen, the latter containing the church, and being distant 12 miles north-west from Forfar, 7 north-east from Alyth, and 7 south-west from Kirriemuir station on the Caledonian railway. The loch from which the town of Dundee is supplied with water, adjoins the village of Lintrathen at Bridgend. The streams which intersect the parish are the Melgum and the Isla, the latter dividing the parish on the west side from Glenisla, and having two beautiful waterfalls, the Reeky Linn and the Slug of Achrannie, from the former of which arose the name of Lintrathen. The curators of the Earl of Airlie (a minor) are the principal landowners. The area comprises 22,624 acres; rateable value, £11,671; the population in 1901 was 559 civil & 498 ecclesiastical.

Post, M. O., T. & Telephone Call Office (for places within a limited distance); Mrs. Mary A. Gellatly, sub-postmistress. Letters through Kirriemuir arrive at 10.5 a.m. & are dispatched thereto at 3.5 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters

LOCHEE, see DUNDEE.

LOCHLEE is a parish and village on the northern border of the county and extending 9 miles from north to south by 13 in breadth, and is 12 miles from Edzell station, on the branch from Brechin of the Caledonian railway; the parish is bounded on the west and north by the county of Aberdeen, east by the parish of Edzell and south by Lethnot and Clova, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin; it is situated among the Grampians, a mountainous district, chiefly adapted for pasture, and bordering on the counties of Kincardine and Aberdeen. Some of the hills of this district vary from 2,000 to 3,000 feet above the sea level. The soil is light, and the crops are generally remunerative. The principal streams which traverse the parish are the Lee, the Mark and the Tarf, all tributaries of the North Esk, which enters the sea near Montrose. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal Church of St. Drostan, built in 1880, will seat 143 persons: the incumbency, in the gift of the vestry, net value £133, has been held since 1871 by the Rev. W. Presslie. Invermark is the residence of the Earl of Dalhousie, who is the sole landowner. The area comprises 58,382 acres; rateable value, £5,893; the population in 1901 was 326.

LUNAN is a small parish extending about 2½ miles from north to south, along the coast of Lunan Bay, by 2 miles in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which it is 7 miles north and 4 south from Montrose, and has a station (Lunan Bay) on the Dundee and Montrose section of the North British railway; its northern boundary is formed by the parishes of Craig and Maryton, the west by Kinnell, on the south the Lunan water, which separates it from Inverkeilor, and on the east by the German Ocean. Lunan Bay has a very picturesque coast line of about 5 miles, from Red Head to the northern headland, the cliffs rising direct from the shore to 100 or 150 feet. Here is an Established church. About a mile to the north of Lunan house, and standing on high ground, is a monument in the form of an obelisk 45 feet in height erected in 1850 to the memory of Brigadier James Blair (d. 12 Aug. 1847), father of the present proprietor; on a hill at the mouth of the river Lunan are the ruins of Redcastle, built, according to tradition, by William I. as a hunting seat. The Earl of Northesk, Capt. Hart F. Blair-Urrie, Sir Leonard Lyell bart. of Kinrordy, and George Bertram McPherson-Grant esq. F.R.G.S. of Craigo House, Montrose, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,851 acres; rateable value, £4,820; the population in 1901 was 302 civil and 219 ecclesiastical. Letters are received through Arbroath. The nearest post, money order & telegraph office being at Inverkeilor, 2 miles distant

LUNDIE and FOWLIS is a joint civil parish formed by the addition of Easter Fowlis to Lundie, in 1818, its boundaries being Liff and Benvie on the south-east, Auchterhouse on the north-east, Newtyle on the north and Kettins on the west; it is in the poor combination of Dundee, from which city the village of Lundie is distant 9 miles north-west, and is also in the small debt court district of Forfar. The nearest station is at Auchterhouse, on the Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway. There are two churches and both have been restored. In 1898 a stained window, designed by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones
bart. was placed in the church of Lundie.
To the churchyard lie the remains of Admiral Viscount Duncan, d. 4 August, 1805. The church of Fowlis was originally a Collegiate church, founded in 1149 by Sir Andrew Gray for a provost and pre-bendaries, and also contains a stained window erected in memory of John 16th Lord Gray, d. 31 Jan. 1867. The Earl of Camperdown and W. D. Graham Menzies
esq. of Hallyburton House, are the only landowners of Lundie: Sir Patrick Keith Murray bart. of Ochertyras, is the exclusive owner of Fowlia Easter. The area of Lundie is 4,188 acres; rateable value about £3,250; the population in 1901 was 268. The area of Fowlis Easter is 2,824 acres; rateable value about £1,550; the population in 1901 was 254. The population of Lundie and Fowlis parishes in 1901 was 522.

MAINS and STRATHMAR-TINE form a joint parish, with stations at Baldovan and Baldragon, on the Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway, 3 miles north of Dundee; the parish is intersected by the river Dighty, and extends 3 miles from north to south by 5½ from west to east; it is bounded by the parishes of Dundee on the south, Murrone on the east, Tealing on the north and Liff and Auchterhouse on the west, and is in the Dundee small debt court district. There are in the parish three Established and two United Free churches:
the Episcopal Church of St. Luke, Strath-martine, built in 1903, will seat 200 persons; the Rev. W. C. Wood B.A. of the Royal University of Ireland, has been priest in charge of the mission since 1901. Along the Dighty are several mills, and on the south-east the bleach ground of Claverhouse; the freestone quarries also afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The celebrated John Graham, Viscount Dundee, who was slain at Killiecrankie, 26 May, 1689, took his lairdship title of Claverhouse from a place in this parish. An asylum for the treatment of imbecile children, together with an orphan asylum, was founded at Strath-martine, in 1853, by Lady Jane Ogilvy, who died 28th July. 1861. The curators of Sir Gilchrist Nevill Ogilvy bart. (a minor), of Baldovan; John Sharp esq. of Balmuir; David Erskine Erskine esq. of Lilnethan, Monifeth; John Grant esq. of Craiz Mill, and the trustees of the late Thomas Cox esq. of Strathmartine, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,321 acres; rateable value, £48,334: the population in 1891 was 3,998, and in 1901 5,486, of which 1,888 are in Dundee burgh. Included in the landward population are 19 officials and 194 inmates of Baldovan Asylum for Imbeciles and 159 in the Industrial School.

MIDMILL, is a village; population in 1901, 356.

DOWNFIELD, transferred to borough of Dundee in 1910 (except for ecclesiastical and educational purposes), was formerly in Mains and Strathmartine
parish; population in 1901, 1,480.

MONIFIETH is a parish and police burgh with a station on the Dundee and Arbroath joint railway, and likewise a station at Kingennie, on the Dundee and Forfar branch of the Caledonian railway.
The parish lies on the shore of the Firth of Tay, extending about 4½ miles from north to south with a breadth of 1½ to 3½ miles, and is in the small debt court district of Dundee; it is bounded on the south by the Firth of Tay, on the east by the parishes of Barry and Monikie, on the north by Monikie and on the west by Murrões and Dundee, and contains a large portion of the town and police burgh of Broughty Ferry. The town of Monifieth is situated about 2 miles east from Broughty Ferry and 5½ east from Dundee, on a brae with a southern exposure, and within a short distance of the sea, and was made a police burgh in 1895; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners; it is lighted with gas from works belonging to the burgh, and supplied with water from the Dundee water works. There are machine works and foundries. The town contains an Established church and three United Free churches. There is also an Episcopal Mission church dedicated to the Holy Trinity; the Rev. Herbert Crosland Bell
M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge, has been priest in charge since 1910. The Cottage Hospital, erected in 1902, was built and endowed from funds left by the late Rev. J. Gerard Young D.D. and contains four beds. Seaview is the residence of William Low esq. J.P.; Ashludie, of Alexander Gordon esq. J.P.; Liniathen, of David Erskine Erskine esq. J.P.; Laws House, of Miss Neish, and The Grange, of

MONTROSE

MONTROSE is a royal burgh and seaport, and a parish with stations on the Caedonian and North British railways, and is 72 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 29 N.E. from Dundee, 24 S.S.W. from Stonehaven, 21 E. by N. from Forfar, 13 S.S.W. from Bervie, 12 N. from Arbroath and 84 E. from Brechin. The German Ocean, the rivers North Esk and South Esk, and a large expanse of water, 9 miles in circumference, filled by the tide at high water, and designated "Montrose Basin," constitute the site of the town a peninsula. It was anciently called "Ceurca," but the derivation of its modern appellation, Montrose is said to be from "moir" (marsh-land) and "ros" (a promontory), the town seal, however, bears the ornament of roses, with the motto "Mare ditat, Rosa decorat"—"the sea enriches, and the rose adorns," and two mermaids as supporters. Montrose is connected with many important events: in 980 the town was burned by the Danes, and many of its inhabitants killed. It is mentioned as the port from which Sir James Douglas embarked, in 1330, with a numerous and splendid retinue, on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, taking with him the heart of Robert Bruce. It also, frequently appears in history in connection with the wars of the Covenanters, and was sacked by the Royalists under Irvine of Drum in 1644. During the rebellions of 1715 and 1745 it was the head quarters of the rebels in Angus, and at its Mercat Cross the Chevalier was proclaimed by the Earl of Southesk in 1715. This was the first port made by the French fleet in December, 1715, with the Chevalier on board; and the Prince embarked at the same place in the month of February of the following year, accompanied by the Earl of Mar, the Earl of Melfort, Lord John Drummond, Lieut.-General Sheldon and a number of other gentlemen. It is distinguished as the first place in Scotland where the Greek language was taught, and at its seminary the celebrated scholar Andrew Melville was educated. James Graham, 1st Marquess of Montrose, the Royalist Commander, was born here in 1612, and the house in which he was born, although considerably altered, still stands, and was for some years occupied as an inn. In the same house the old Pretender spent his last night in Scotland. Part of it is still used as a private dwelling-house, and is known as the Castlesteads. This town is also celebrated as the birth-place, in January, 1777, of Joseph Hume, the statesman, who represented Montrose for a number of years in the British Parliament, and to whose memory a monument has been raised in High street; in the same street is a statue of the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Peel bart. P.C., M.P. Robert Brown F.R.S. the eminent botanist, was born here 21 Dec. 1773; Paul Chalmers, artist, & Sir James Duke bart. Lord Mayor of London, 1848-9; Lieut.-Gen. Sir Alexander Burnes kt. the diplomatist, massacred at Cabul, in 1841; Sir William Burnett K.C.H., M.D. F.R.S. of the Royal Navy, and Dr. William Hunter F.R.S. the learned Orientalist, were all natives of the burgh. The title of Duke of Montrose was bestowed by James III. in 1488, on David Lindsay, 5th Earl of Crawford, and this appears to have been confirmed to him in 1489 by James IV., but his successors did not assume the ducal title, which is now held by the family of Graham, created Earls of Montrose in 1504-5, who derived their title from their lands at Alt or Upper Montrose, now commonly called Old Montrose, although they do not now own any land in the parish.

The erection of Montrose into a royal burgh has generally been referred to the year 1352, in the reign of David II., but there is good reason for believing that the first charter emanated from David I. The parish and burgh of Montrose has been added to by the transfer of Rossie Island from the parish of Craig, under a Secretary of Scotland's order, which came into force December 6, 1808. The municipal government is vested in the provost, three magistrates, dean of guild, hospital master, treasurer and 12 councillors. The town is protected by a body of police, under the superintendence of the Town Council. A police court is held when requisite, a justice of the peace court on the first Monday in each month, and a sheriff court on the third Friday in the months of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. The burgh, united to those of Forfar, Brechin, Arbroath and Inverbernie, forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member. The town was first lighted by electricity in 1901.

The High street of Montrose, a broad thoroughfare, was widened in 1736 by the removal of a row of old thatched houses, which extended from the North fort to the Castle gate. The Town House, in High street is a plain building of two storeys, with an arcade below, erected in 1763, and here also is the Guildhall, built in 1819.

Passage across the river in olden times was obtained by a ferry boat, which plied between Ferryden and the Ferry-boatsna. This is still continued, but the traffic was greatly diverted by a timber bridge erected in 1791 between the island of Inchbrayock and the Constable hill. This bridge was pulled down in 1827, and the South Esk is now crossed by a fine suspension bridge, erected in 1828-9, from a design by Capt. Brown R.N. at an expense of upwards of £20,000. The distance between the points of suspension is 432 feet, and the total length, including the approaches, is 800 feet. The river at the bridge has 35 feet of water at spring tides and 20 feet at low water in ordinary tides, and during the ebb it frequently runs at the rate of six miles an hour. The harbour, formed by the river and an arm of the sea, is very commodious and a safe asylum for vessels. Two light-houses, one on each bank of the South Esk, mark the entrance of the river, while a tower, called the "Scurdyness," on the rock at the south entrance, provides another light. In the keeper's house provision is made for the reception and recovery of persons who have suffered shipwreck, and attached are two lifeboats. The quays are all on the Montrose side of the river, and have been considerably extended. The custom house at the port is now only a branch under the Dundee district. There is also a wet dock. In 1893 the Corporation purchased the island of Inchbrayock (or Rossie Island), in the middle of the river South Esk, which is now in the boundary of the burgh. The number of vessels entered during 1909: In the Foreign trade 47 vessels entered of 25,926 tonnage, and 4 cleared of 432 tons. In the general coasting trade 467 vessels entered of 39,669 tonnage and 499 cleared of 57,775 tons. The number of sailing and steam vessels entered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31st, 1909, was 17 of 895 tons. Fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the same, were 230 of 2,899 tons, and number of men and boys employed in the fisheries was 1,033. The shipping trade includes flax, corn, straw, timber, coal and cured fish. The value of the principal articles imported in 1909 amounted to £256,306, of which £209,713 was flax. The exports amounted to £9,914 in 1909. The principal manufactures consist of flax and jute spinning, but there are various other branches of trading industry, notably fish curing, carried on by Messrs. Joseph Johnston and Sons Limited, who are also the lessees of the salmon fishings on the seaboard, also the export of potatoes. The extent of the wood trade at this port deserves special mention. It is in the hands of the old and enterprising firm of Messrs. Robert Millar and Sons Limited, who export large quantities of dressed timber to Australia &c. Shipbuilding is carried on to a small extent, and there is a patent slip for repairs. There are six branch banks and a savings bank. The principal hotels are the Central and the Star. The Central is large and newly built, and is fitted with all modern conveniences. The Star hotel has been long established, and in all respects affords excellent accommodation. The Downs or Links, situated between the town and the sea, are the most extensive of any in Scotland, and include three well laid-out golf courses, comprehending a circuit of several miles, finely formed by nature and free to the public at all times for golf as well as for cricket. A large portion of the front Links has been tastefully laid out as public gardens, and contains a bowling green and fountains. There is an assembly room, various places of amusement, and numerous charitable, educational, scientific and social institutions. Two newspapers are issued weekly, viz., the "Review" and the "Standard."

The Territorial Force stationed in Montrose comprises No. 4 Co. North Scottish Royal Garrison Artillery, with an armory in Wellington street. The C. Co. 5th Battalion the Black Watch (Royal Highlanders) having head quarters at the Drill hall, in Mill street.

The parish church, founded in 1791, has a lofty tower with spire, reaching to a height of 220 feet; the church will seat 2,500 persons. There is also the Melville parish church, five United Free churches, Roman Catholic and other churches. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1878, will seat 365 persons. The Rev. José Fortescue Lawrence Gueritz has been rector since 1909. The public charities of Montrose are very numerous, the principal being a sum of £3,000, left in 1786 by John Erskine, of Jamaica, for the support of the grammar school, and since 1888, under the management of the Educational Endowment Trust. Another important charity is the ancient Hospital Fund, administered by the Town Council. The relief from this charity is distributed among about 144 persons, not being paupers. The Royal Lunatic Asylum, at Sunnyside, incorporated by Royal Charter in 1810, was first instituted in 1781. The present buildings, situated about 2½ miles from the town, consist of a main block, opened in 1859, for between 400 and 500 patients, store rooms and a new laundry, built in 1877, a spacious dining-room and recreation hall, erected in 1882, and a hospital for the sick and infirm insane, built during the period 1888-91, and available for over 100 patients. A private asylum, named "Carnegie House," after the foundress of the institution, was completed in 1899 at a cost of £25,000, and has 60 patients. Two new villas were erected in the grounds in 1909, to provide for 60 male and 60 female patients. The Royal Infirmary and Dispensary, in Bridge street, was opened in 1839, and is under the charge of the managers of the asylum. The Infectious Diseases Hospital, situate on the Links, was erected in 1909 for 20 patients. The Academy is a handsome building, surmounted by a dome, and there are many other educational establishments, and numerous societies, both religious and benevolent. The Free Public Library, in Castle place, erected in 1905 at a cost of about £6,000, is an edifice of brick and stone, and contains a general reading room, ladies' and juveniles' reading rooms, reference library and a lecture hall; there are 8,000 volumes in the lending and 1,890 in the reference department. Another library and reading room, in Museum street, was instituted in 1785, and contains over 30,000 volumes. The Museum, founded in 1837, is in Panmure place. The market is held on Friday, and hiring fairs are held on the Friday after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas. The parish of Montrose encloses an area of 4,181 acres; rateable value landward, £13,220. The population of the civil parish in 1901 was 13,027, viz.: burgh, 11,988; on Rossie Island, 160; landward, 1,600, and military in the barracks, 269. Included in the total population, 98 officials and 666 inmates of the Montrose Royal Asylum. The area of the burgh is 1,467 acres; rateable value, £58,732; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 8,956.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register for the year 1901 was 1,799, and in the entire district of Burghs, 8,383.

At Dabton is the junction station for Montrose, on the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian railway.

Hillside, which forms a suburb, is a quoad sacra parish in the parish of Montrose, about 2 miles distant from the burgh, and contains an Established church. The North British railway has a station here. Population, in 1901, of village, 315, and of ecclesiastical parish, 2,033.

Melville is a quoad sacra parish formed from Melrose, and has an Established church. Population in 1901, 2,878.

NEWTYLE is a parish and village, the latter being on the road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire), 11 miles north-west from the former town and 2½ south from the latter, with a station on the Dundee, Newtyle and Coupar-Angus section of the Caledonian railway; the parish extends 2 miles from north to south by ¾ in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Eassie and Nevay, west by Perthshire, south by Kettina and Lundie and east by Auchterhouse, and is in the poor combination of Dundee and in the small debt court division of Forfar. The established church, erected in 1872 upon the old site, at a cost of £3,000, is in the Transition Norman style, with a tower 83 feet in height, containing a two-dial clock, presented by Capt. D. C. Burman; the church affords 600 sittings. The United Free church was erected in 1901, has a peal of tubular bells and an organ; there are sittings for 225 persons. The Public Hall is managed by a board of trustees, Andrew Whitton, of Couston, treasurer; and there is a public library. The Home of Rest for Working Girls from Dundee, instituted in honour of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, occupies premises known as "Bannatyne House," purchased from Lord Wharndcliffe, and vested in trustees, for 40 girls. Near the village are the remains of the castle of Hatton, built by Lawrence, Lord Oliphant, in the year 1575; and contiguous to these ruins some vestiges are visible of the still more ancient castle of Balraig. Sir Charles William Cayzer bart. of Kimpurnie Castle; Andrew Whitton esq. J.P. of Couston, and Patrick Bell esq. of Davidson, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,197 acres; rateable value, £12,500; population in 1901, 818 in the parish and 401 in the village.

TEALING is a parish lying south of the Sidlaw range of hills, its kirktown being 6 miles north of Dundee; the parish is 5 miles in extent from east to west by a breadth varying from 1 to 3 miles, and is bounded north and north-east by Inverarity, east and south-east by Murroes, east and south by Mains and Strathmartine and west by Auchterhouse and Glamis; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee. In this parish are found grey slate, moorstone and freestone. John Glass, founder of the sect designated "Glassites," and born at Dundee 21 Sept. 1693, was educated at St. Andrew's, and subsequently became minister of Tealing previous to his deposition by the Church of Scotland; in England his followers were called "Sandemanians," from Robert Sandeman, who married Glass's daughter and became an elder in the sect; Glass died at Dundee in 1773. There are Established and United Free churches. The Earl of Home K.T., T.D. and Walter T. J. Scrymgeour-Stewart-Fotheringham esq. J.P. of Fotheringham, Forfar, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,982 acres; rateable value, £5,829; population in 1901, 615 civil, 641 ecclesiastical.

GALLOWAY

THIS is an ancient district in the south-west of Scotland, including the present counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown. The family of Stewart, Earls of Galloway and Barons Garies, take their title from this district, and it also gives a name to the second diocese in the united diocese of Glasgow and Galloway.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN, lies on the southern side of the entrance to the Firth of Forth, its north-western border being bounded by that estuary and its north-eastern by the North Sea, its northern angle lying due south from Craik and Fifeness, on the opposite shore of the Frith, Berwickshire bounding it on the south and Edinburghshire on the west. From east to west it extends 26 miles; from north to south, at the middle, 16; at the east end it is not more than 10 miles across, and at the west end about 12; its area comprises 267.2 square miles or 171,011 acres of land and 360 of water. The population in 1891 was 37,377, and in 1901 consisted of 18,839 males and 19,826 females; total, 38,665; the number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 7,981, and in 1901 was, inhabited, 8,398; uninhabited, 1,086, and building, 94. In extent this is the twenty-fifth, and in population the twenty-second of counties in Scotland.

Early History.—Forming part of the Pictish kingdom in 81, it fell under the dominion of the Romans, and for nearly 3½ centuries formed part of their province of Valentia, until 410, when the Romans quitted the country, their departure being followed by a century of war, at the close of which, in 647, Ida, a Northman, managed to concentrate all the country from the Tees to the Forth under his sway; his grandson, Aethelfrith, was slain by Eadwine, Prince of Deira (or the country between the Tees and Humber), who then formed from these provinces the kingdom of Northumbria, bounded on the south by the Humber and north by the Forth, which continued as an appanage of England under kings or earls, until 1057, when the portion north of the Tweed was incorporated into the Kingdom of Scotland under Malcolm II. This county, with Edinburghshire, Linlithgow, and parts of Stirling and Roxburghshire, formed the district known as Lothian or Lothian, which suffered severely from English forays, notably those under Edward I., 1296; Edward II., previous to Bannockburn; Edward III., 1356; Richard II., 1385. Bothwell owned its strongest fortress, Dunbar, and thither he brought Queen Mary in 1567; Cromwell also concentrated his army at Dunbar in 1650, to be near his supplies, and at Doonhill defeated Major-General David Leslie; in 1745, when Prince Charles Edward, out-flanking and out-marching General Cope, entered the capital Cope brought his forces by sea to Dunbar, and on the morning of the 22 September lay encamped on the level ground near the shore by Bankton House, in the parish of Prestonpans, when in the misty morning the small Highland army appeared on the hills towards Tranent, and swooping down on the English sent Cope to carry the news of his own defeat to the governor of Berwick. The old title of Earl of Dunbar is extinct, but those of Baron Blantyre, Earl of Haddington, and Baron Belhaven still remain.

Soil and Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—In point of soil, cultivation and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland, and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear comparison with the most favoured districts in England. The principal elevations in Haddingtonshire above the level of the sea are Traprain Law, 724 feet; North Berwick Law, 612 feet; Soutra Hill, 1,299 feet; Spartleton Hill, 1,534 feet; Gilston, 1,362 feet, and Mickle Says Law, 1,750 feet. The range of the Lammermuir hills occupy the south of the county, which may be divided into four districts. The northern is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil; south of this is a ridge of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river and partly towards the coast land, and comprehends a good proportion of the arable land of the county; the third tract is varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the Lammermuir hills, nearly the whole extent of the county; the fourth comprises this extensive range of mountains, commencing at the south-west extremity of the shire and terminating on the Berwickshire coast, by the high promontory called St. Abb's Head; the greater part of this tract is moor, but between the hills are lands under a regular rotation of crops. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in this county as early as the 12th century, and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the 13th; the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirlston Castle, having subsisted on the peas which grew in the adjacent fields. The fertility of East Lothian in the 17th century is ascertained by a passage in "Whitelock's Memoirs," where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland in 1650, were astonished to find in that district "the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw."

The chief crops as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," were:—Oats, 16,279 acres; barley or bere, 14,922; wheat, 6,431; beans, 365; total of all corn crops, 38,202 acres; turnips and swedes, 14,643 acres; potatoes, 8,934; cabbages &c. 913; total of green crops, 24,490; clover, sainfoin and grasses, 11,000 acres (for hay) and 16,455 (not for hay); permanent pasture, 1,346 acres (for hay) and 19,504 acres (not for hay). The total area of the county was 171,971 acres of land, of which 38,940 were mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 10,777 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 consisted of 3,280 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 411; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 1,961; other cattle, two years and above, 5,102; one year and under two, 2,053; under one year, 731; total, 7,886; ewes kept for breeding, 43,993; other sheep, one year and under, 28,288; under one year, 55,170; total 83,458; sows kept for breeding, 279; other pigs, 1,227.

The manufactures of this county are unimportant, and are carried on but to a limited extent; there are two woollen mills in the neighbourhood of the county town, whilst in other parts of the shire are brick and fireclay tile works, agricultural implement works, breweries and a distillery. Salt is manufactured in the vicinity of Prestonpans, coal also being wrought here and at Tranent, Ormiston and Pencaitland. So long ago as 1200, it is said, the monks of Newbattle worked a seam of this mineral at Prestoogrange. Limestone is common over the county, and clay and sandstone are to be found. The climate in the Lowlands is on the whole genial and favourable for agriculture, whilst in the Lammermuir district it is colder and more liable to falls of rain and snow. The production of coal in the county in 1909 was 1,048,499 tons, value £345,131, and of fireclay 34,564 tons, value £7,711; igneous rock, 26,584 tons; limestone, 18,611 tons; sandstone, 3,667 tons.

Rivers &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing from Ormiston on the south-west by Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay; the White Adder, Monymnt and Eye rivers, take their rise in the south of the county. The only railway in the county is the North British, which, entering the county a little north-west of Cockburnspath, runs close to the coast as far as Dunbar, thence turning westward it proceeds through Prestonkirk to Drem, where a branch goes north to North Berwick, and running to Longniddry, it sends a branch south-east to Haddington and another north-east to Gullane and passes out of the county near Inveresk, from which place a branch passes through Ormiston to Macmerry, and from Ormiston through Saltoun to Gifford. The southern portion of the county does not possess any railways.

Divisions, Representations &c.—Haddington comprises 24 civil parishes and 22 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of four others, the whole being included within the presbyteries of Haddington, Dunbar and Dalkeith, in the synod of Lothian: Haddington, Dunbar and North Berwick are royal burghs; these, with Lauder (in Berwickshire) and Jedburgh (in Roxburghshire), formerly joined in sending one member to Parliament, but by the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," were included in their respective shires. The county at large returns one representative. The parliamentary constituency for 1911 numbered 8,184.

ABERLADY is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, east by Haddington, south by Gladsmuir and west by the Firth of Forth; the village, which lies on the south side of Aberlady Bay, has a station on a branch line (opened in April, 1898) from Longniddry to Gullane, of the North British railway, and is 15 miles east from Edinburgh. James VI. by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant, it is said, was confirmed by Charles I. in 1663, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are now in abeyance. The parish church, rebuilt in the Gothic style, retains the ancient tower of the original church: there is also a United Free church. Bishop Gavin Douglas, of Dunkeld (d. 1522), granted to this parish the estate of Kilsplindie, and the ruins of the house attached to it are still to be seen. There is a fine old market cross. A monument has been erected in memory of the local men who lost their lives in the war in South Africa (1899-1902). About half a mile distant on the north-east, is Luffness, a mansion belonging to H. W. Hope esq. J.P., D.L. originally built in 1549, as a fortification, by the French general, De Thermes, as a protection against the garrison of Haddington, then in the possession of the English; near by stand the ruins of a Carmelite monastery founded by Patrick, 8th Earl of Dunbar, in 1286. The Earl of Wemyss and March G.C.V.O., D.L., J.P., V.D., A.D.C. who is patron of the parish, resides at Gosford House, nearly a mile south-west of the village; the mansion is surrounded by fine grounds, and contains a valuable collection of paintings. The area comprises 4,333 acres; rateable value, £11,818; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,063, including 505 in the village, and in 1901 950, with 442 in the village.

Post, T. & M. O. Office; John Smith, postmaster. Letters should have Haddingtonshire added. Deliveries, 8.40 a.m. from June 1st to September 30th, 9.15 a.m. from October 1st to May 31st & 5.45 p.m.; sundays, 10.20 to 11 a.m. (callers); dispatches, 7.45 a.m. & 1.15, 4.25 & 6.5 p.m.; Sunday, 8.10 a.m.

ATHELSTANEFORD is a parish and village in the East Lothian poor combination, and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, south and west by Haddington, and south and east by Prestonkirk; the village lies 5½ miles south from North Berwick, and 2 south-east from Drem station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway; there is another station at East Fortune. Here is an Established church. In the early part of the 18th century, two men of eminent poetical genius—John Home, author of the tragedy of "Douglas," born at Anorum, 22 Sept. 1723, and Robert Blair, born in 1699, and author of "The Grave," were successively ministers here. The manse occupied by the first mentioned stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard, and the site is now comprised in the garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On resigning his pastoral charge, which he did about 1756, Home retired to a mansion in the neighbourhood, and died 4 Sept. 1808: Blair died here 4 Feb. 1747, and in the centre of the village is a monument to his memory. The area comprises 5,061 acres; rateable value, £9,503; the population in 1891 was 741, and in 1901, 653.

DREM is a small village in this parish. Post & Telegraph Office. Athelstaneford; Miss Helen Grierson, sub-postmistress. Letters through Drem, which should be addressed Drem, Haddingtonshire. BARNES (EAST and WEST), see DUNBAR.

BELHAVEN, see DUNBAR.

NORTH BERWICK is a parish, seaport town, royal burgh and popular seaside resort, in the East Lothian poor combination; the town is the head of a sheriff district and small debt court, and up to 1885 was one of a group of 5 parliamentary burghs, when the representation was merged into the county; the boundaries of the parish are Dirleton on the west, Prestonkirk on the south, Whitekirk on the south and east, and the Firth of Forth on the north; the town stands on a bay, and is 23 miles north-east from Edinburgh, with a terminal station on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The town is lighted with gas from works the property of the Corporation, and is supplied with water by gravitation from works erected at a cost of over £70,000, the source of the supply being in the Lammermuir hills, about 14 miles south of the town. The beach affords excellent bathing facilities, and near the harbour is an open air swimming pool. There are golf links at the east and west ends of the parish, each with a course of 18 holes. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier, but the rocks at the entrance allow only small vessels to enter; these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. North Berwick was erected into a royal burgh in 1363-1366 by a charter of King David II. and it appears to have been at that time a place of some trade. As a port it dates from the time of Robert II., and was one of the seventy royal burghs in existence at the time of the Union in 1707. James VI. granted to it in 1568 a new charter confirmatory of all its former privileges. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and five councillors. The sheriff's small debt court is held on the fourth Wednesday in January, and the second Wednesday in May and July, and on the first Wednesday of October. There is an Established and two United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church; the Episcopal church of St. Baldred, built in 1859, will seat 780 persons; the incumbency, net value £450, has been held since 1898 by the Rev. Henry Sutherland Dashwood Gill M.A. of Kable College, Oxford. Fiddra roads, about 2 miles to the west, are considered a very safe anchorage. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens, and 3 miles to the east, within 2 miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, which is a mile in circumference, and rises 350 feet above the surface of the sea; the channel between it and the land is very deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides except by a narrow pass on the south-west, toward the land. A caverned passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then only be reached by ladders, or a bucket and chain; it existed as a stronghold for a long period, was a state prison during the reign of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III. for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. A lighthouse was erected in 1907 on the Bass, which is the resort of myriads of sea fowl, especially Solan geese. About 3 miles east of North Berwick are the interesting ruins of Tantallon Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of "Marmion." About a quarter of a mile south-west are the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by Duncan, Earl of Fife, who died in 1154, for a sisterhood of Cistercian nuns; and directly south of the town rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is 600 feet above the level of the sea. In the Harbour place stands a cross, erected in memory of Catherine Watson, who was drowned in the East Bay, 27 July, 1833, in attempting to save the life of a boy. Sir Walter Hamilton-Dalrymple bart. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. of Preston Grange, Prestongans, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,053 acres; rateable value, £48,484, including £38,336, the rateable value of the burgh of North Berwick; the population in 1901 was 3,649, of whom 2,781 were in the burgh, and in 1891 were 3,023, of whom 1,998 were in the burgh. Post, T., M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, High street, North Berwick; George T. L. Pennington, postmaster. Deliveries, 7 & 11 a.m. & 3.30 & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 8.15 & 10.30 a.m. & 1.15, 3.45, 6.15 & 9 p.m.; Sunday, 5 p.m.

BOLTON is a parish and small village, the latter 3 miles south-west from Haddington, at which is the nearest railway station. The parish, which is bounded north by Haddington, east by Yester, south by Humbie, and west by Salton, is in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington. The parish church is a building in a modern Gothic style, with a square tower: there is also a United Free church. About the close of the 15th century the lands of Bolton were seized by the Hepburns, one of whom, John Hepburn, was executed as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief, in the murder of Darnley. The principal seat in the parish is Eaglescarne, the residence of Miss Stuart. The area comprises 3,101 acres; rateable value, £3,362; the population in 1891 was 271, and in 1901, 298.

The nearest Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office is at Haddington, 3 miles distant

COCKENZIE and PORT SETON.

COCKENZIE is a fishing village and a quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Tranent, situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, and on the road to North Berwick, 1 mile north-east from Prestonpans station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. This place forms a police burgh conjointly with Port Seton, at which place a harbour, built at a cost of £11,000, mainly subscribed by the fishermen and aided by £2,000 from the late Earl of Wemyss and March (d. 1883), was opened in Sept. 1880, by Lady Elcho, late Countess of Wemyss and March (d. 1896). The small harbour at Cockenzie was constructed by Mr. Cadell. The school and master's house were presented to the village. Here are salt works. The principal landowners are the Earl of Wemyss and March G.C.V.O., V.D., LL.D. and the trustees of John Polson esq. Rateable value, £7,401; the population in 1901, including Port Seton, was 1,687; in 1891, 1,578; in 1901 the ecclesiastical parish had a population of 1,818, and the village 1,687.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Cockenzie; Mrs. Margaret J. Clark, sub-postmistress. Letters received from Prestonpans, Haddingtonshire. Dispatches, 9.30 a.m. & 1.30, 4 & 8 p.m.; sunday, 5.50 p.m.

DIRLETON is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of North Berwick. The parish is in the north-western extremity of the county, on the shore of the Firth of Forth, North Berwick lying to the east and Aberlady and Athelstaneford to the south, and is 20 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 7 north from Haddington, $\frac{1}{2}$ north-east from Aberlady, and nearly 3 south-west from North Berwick, with a station about a mile to the south-east on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The village is seated at the head of a low meadow, which extends about a mile and a half towards the sea, and the houses nearly surround an extensive triangular green interspersed with trees. On the south side of this space stands the ruins of Dirleton Castle, which belonged in the 9th century to a noble family, named De Vallibus or De Vaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious siege, by Edward I. in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century this castle and the estate bestowed the title of baron on the Haliburton family. The eventual heiress, Janet Haliburton, married William, 2nd Lord Rutherford, and her grandson, Lord Rutherford and Dirleton, was created Earl of Gowrie in 1581, but this title was forfeited in 1600. In 1646 Sir James Maxwell was created Earl of Dirleton, but the title became extinct on his death. From ancient documents it would appear that a collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Haliburton, but little is known of its character or site. The parish church, which stands a little below the green, bears date 1661; it was considerably enlarged in 1825. Archerfield is the residence of Mrs. Nisbet Hamilton-Ogilvy.

GULLANE is a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Dirleton, from which it is 2 miles west and near the western coast, with a station on the Gullane and Aberlady branch of the North British railway. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed by Act of Parliament to Dirleton. The links in the vicinity are the resort of numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren. The links have now become a favourite resort with golf players, and the village is attracting summer visitors; in the centre of the village are the ruins of the ancient kirk, dedicated to St. Andrew. A supply of water from a bore and deep well producing 70,000 gallons per day was provided in 1836. On the small island of Fidra, lying off the northern coast, are the remains of a building, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague, and also as a beacon, but a lighthouse has now been erected. A convalescent home in connection with the Edinburgh Royal Hospital for Children, occupies the house and grounds of Muirfield, left by the late Miss M. J. Meikleham. Fenton and Kingston are hamlets in the parish. Mrs. Nisbet Hamilton-Ogilvy, who is lady of the manor, Henry Wolter Hope esq. of Luffness, and John George Alexander Baird esq. D.L., J.P. of Muirkirk, are the principal landowners. The soil is fertile and produces excellent green crops; there are also some fine pastures. The area comprises 9,205 acres; rateable value, £29,162; the population in 1891 was 1,445, and in 1901, 1,810, including 7 on Fidra island, and 312 in the village. The population of Gullane in 1901 was 575.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Dirleton. Letters should have Haddingtonshire added; Mrs. Hannah Morrison, sub-postmistress. Deliveries (summer, 7.40 a.m.), 8.45 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 6 a.m. & 3.30 & 5.20 p.m.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Gullane. Letters should have Haddingtonshire added; George Cumming, sub-postmaster. Deliveries, 7.15 & 10.45 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 7.40 & 10.15 a.m. & 1.15, 4.15 & 6.10 p.m.; sundays, 5.45 p.m. Wall Box, Kingston, cleared at 12.15 p.m. week days only. Letters for Kingston should be addressed North Berwick.

DREM, see ATHELSTANEFORD.

DUNBAR (which includes Belhaven) is a seaport town, royal and police burgh, on the coast of the North Sea, with a station on the North British railway, 11 miles north-east from Haddington and 29 east from Edinburgh; it is the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Lothian, and head of a small debt court district, and is also a civil and ecclesiastical parish in the East Lothian poor combination, bounded south and east by Stenton and Spott, and west by Whitekirk. The town, which occupies a slightly elevated site, is considered a very healthy resort for invalids, and the principal street is a spacious thoroughfare. The Gas Works belong to the Corporation, and since 1896 a supply of good water has been obtained from springs in the Lammermoor hills, at a cost of £3,000; in 1897 filtering works were begun on a site about 1 mile south of the town, and completed in 1899, the total cost being estimated at about £3,000. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II. and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James VI. It was governed by a provost and three bailies, a treasurer, town clerk and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. A modern Act of Parliament has limited the number of corporate officers to a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors. A small debt court is held in the Town Hall on the third Tuesday in February, March, May, October and December, and first Tuesday in July. The Castle covered a considerable extent of ground, but the date of its erection cannot be ascertained. Being the key to Scotland on the east border, it came to be regarded as a fortress of strategic importance, and was therefore often besieged. In 1296 it was taken by Edward I. and being held for the English in 1314 by Patrick, 10th Earl of Dunbar, Edward II. sought refuge in it after the battle of Bannockburn, quitting it by sea for Retwick. Its most memorable siege was in January, 1337-8, when the Countess of Dunbar, "Black Agnes," defended it for nineteen weeks against an English army under William (de Montacute), Earl of Salisbury. In Queen Mary's reign it was in possession of James (Heppburn), Earl of Bothwell, and when the Queen became his prisoner, near Linlithgow, in 1567, he took her to this fortress, and the associated lords accepting the surrender of Mary at Carberry Hill, 15th June of the same year, it was on condition that Bothwell left her and retired to Dunbar. The castle was subsequently demolished by order of the Scottish Parliament, and nothing but fragments are now visible, some portion having been destroyed during the progress of the excavations for Victoria Harbour. The old battery is now used as a casual sick ward. At Doonhill, near the town, was fought (3 Sept. 1650)

the battle of Dunbar, when the Parliamentary forces, under Cromwell, Monk and Lambert, defeated the Scots, under Gen. David Leslie, who had incautiously deserted their strong position and descended to the lower ground. The parish church, in High street, erected on the site of the old kirk in 1819-21, at a cost of £8,000, is an edifice of dark red stone in the Perpendicular style, and has a square tower with pinnacles; in the church is a beautiful marble monument to Sir George Home, Earl of Dunbar K.G. and lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI, who died at Whitehall, 29 Jan. 1611, and was here buried. In 1898, a semi-octagonal apse was added, the roof repaired and the interior thoroughly renovated at a cost of £4,500. There are 1,800 sittings. There are also two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Anne, built in 1876, and restored in 1892, affords 250 sittings; the incumbency has been held since 1905 by the Rev. R. D. Bruce M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford.

The Harbour here was formed by Oliver Cromwell, and a portion of it now constitutes the east pier of the present harbour, which, in 1820, was improved by the addition of a dry and graving dock, afterwards filled up and large stores erected upon the site. In 1842 the Victoria Harbour was constructed at the joint expense of the town and Fishery Board; twenty years later it was greatly extended and now occupies a space of about five acres, and is frequented by vessels and boats for fishing purposes, the herring fishery having long been a very considerable source of wealth to Dunbar. Very many boats are frequently to be seen at this station, and large quantities of herrings are sent to the inland counties. A small number are also cured into white or red herrings. There is also good crab fishing, lobsters are caught to some extent, and the produce is mostly despatched to London. Several small boats are employed in deep sea line fishing. The chief exports are corn, fish and potatoes, and the imports coal and timber. The industries of Dunbar are now a diminishing quantity. There are several good hotels. A lighthouse was constructed in 1899 at East Barns. In High street are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland, and in Delisle street is a branch of the British Linen Bank. Dunbar House, formerly the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front, facing the sea, consists of a semi-circular centre and two extensive wings. The house is now used as cavalry barracks. St. Catherine's Hall, at the south end, was opened Jan. 5th, 1872, and contains a spacious room, available for balls and concerts, and three large rooms, used respectively by the Freemasons, Free Gardeners and Templars. The Burgh school, erected in 1878, consists of two wings, with a house for the master in the centre. In 1897 the Burgh and Lamer Street schools were amalgamated, and in 1904 a higher grade department was added, which is now recognised as a centre for the training of teachers. The market is held on Tuesday, and there is an annual fair on the first Tuesday in February. The soil is rich and dry, and produces crops as early as any in Scotland. The Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. and Rear-Admiral Sir George John Scott Warrander bart. C.B., C.V.O. of Bruntisfield House, are the principal landowners. The parish of Dunbar extends about 8 miles along the coast, and the area comprises 7,504 acres; rateable value, landward, £20,623, and burghal, £23,214; the population of the parish in 1901 was 5,031, which included 3,581 in the town, 320 being in the Belhaven portion, while the burgh population was returned as 3,357, and the ecclesiastical parish, 3,852.

BELHAVEN is a village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay of the sea, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of baron to a branch of the family of Hamilton, also barons Stenton. At a short distance are the remains of an ancient British cemetery. In the village, which is a quoad sacra parish erected from that of Dunbar, is a church in connection with the Church of Scotland, and also an Isolation Hospital, opened in 1904, and containing 22 beds. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 1,179.

EAST BARNs is a village in Dunbar parish, about 3 miles south-east from the town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

WEST BARNs, another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile from Belhaven. In this village there is a manufactory for agricultural implements. A Public Hall was opened in 1901, and here also is the landward school of Dunbar. Population in 1891 was 471, and in 1901, 370.

GARVALD is a parish, in the East
 Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded by the parishes of Morham and Whittinghame on the north and east, and by Yester on the west, and extends from near the centre of the county southward, among the Lammernoor hills, to the borders of Berwickshire. The village of Garvald, seated in a fertile valley on the banks of the small river Papana, which a little lower is called Biel water, is 22 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh, 8½ south-west from Dunbar, nearly 6 southeast from Haddington, 5 south from East Linton station or the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway, and about 4 miles from Gifford station on the North British railway. Here are Established and United Free churches.
 Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. Among the latter are the remains of the Nunnery of Nunraw, which have been restored and enlarged, and are now the property and residence of Lieut.- Col. Walter Wingate Gray D.L., J.P. The Marquess of Tweeddale K.T., D.L. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,442 acres; rateable value, £8,350; the
 population in 1901 was 628.

GIFFORD, see YESTER.

GLADSMUIR is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the north-west by the south shore of the Firth of Forth, on the west by the parish of Tranent, on the south by Peneaidland and Salton, on the east by Haddington and on the north by Aberlady. The village of Gladsmuir is 4 miles west from Hadding-ton, 3½ east from Tranent and 2 east from Maemerry terminal station on the North British railway. The parish church stands on the main road between Haddington and Tranent. George Heriot, the founder of the hospital at Edinburgh, is said to have been a native of this parish, and William Robertson D.D. author of a "History of Scotland," was minister here from 1743, but afterwards removed to Edinburgh, and d. 11 June, 1793. From the proximity of the hamlet of Gladsmuir to the scene of the battle of Prestonpans, that conflict was called by the Jacobite party
 "the battle of Gladsmuir."

LONGNIDDY is a village, near the shore of the Firth of Forth, and has a junction station on the Dunbar and Berwick line. Macmerry, also a village, is on the western border of the parish; here is the terminus of the Ormiston branch of the North British railway.

PENSTON, a decayed colliery village, is 1 mile south-west of Gladsmuir and 1 east from Macmerry railway station.

MACMERRY is a village in Gladsmuir
 parish. Population in 1901, 364.

SAMUELSTON, on the left bank of the river Tyne, is also a village in the parish, 3½ miles south-west from Haddington.

The Earl of Wemyss and March, G.C.V.O.
 and Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E.
 are the principal landowners. The area
 comprises 7,044 acres; rateable value, £14,981; the population in 1891 was 1,604,
 and in 1901, 1,481.

HADDINGTON, WITH NUNGATE.

HADDINGTON, the county town of East Lothian, is a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 17 miles east from Edinburgh, 38 north-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 west-by-south from Dunbar and 10 south from North Berwick, and has a terminal station of a branch line from Longniddry on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway; it is on the west bank of the river Tyne, which is here crossed by three bridges, giving access to the suburb of Nungate. The streets are spacious and are lighted with gas by a company formed in 1835. In 1893 the Longyester water supply to the burgh of Haddington was introduced at a total cost of over £8,000. The corporation of the burgh consists of a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors. The magistrates hold a court every Monday. A sheriff and commissary court sits every alternate Thursday, during the sessions; one for small debts every alternate Thursday, and a justice of peace court the second Tuesday of each month; a court of quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesday in March, third Tuesday in April, May and first Tuesday in August, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter sessions on the second Thursday in January.

The Town Building, in the High street, has a tower with spire 170 feet in height, added in 1831, at a cost of about £1,500; the buildings comprise the burgh council room, and an assembly room. The County buildings at the west end of the town, erected at a cost of £5,470, contain sheriff and justice of the peace court rooms, with offices and jury and witness rooms.

The Post Office, in Court street, was erected in 1908 at a cost of £5,000.

Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion), dated 1178, she styled it "Munn Burgum de Haddington." The suburb called Nungate is approached across the Tyne by three bridges: the Waterloo bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; another bridge, ancient and narrow, of three small arches, and also by the Victoria bridge, built in 1900: this suburb derives its name from a nunnery, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town, and in which a parliament was convened on the 7th of July, 1548, during the siege of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary to the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. The street from the West Port to the Town House, now called Court street, was of old named "King street," no doubt from the King's palace being situated therein. It was here that Alexander II. first saw the light, having been born in the palace on the 24th of August, 1198. At the east end of Nungate stands the roofless ruin of St. Martin's church, which has been but little used since the Reformation. The town has suffered severely at different periods by conflagrations and inundations. In 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1358 whole villages were swept away by the overflow of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, but did no damage. The 4th October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne to a height of eight feet nine inches, at which it continued for several hours, and a plate recording this occurrence is placed at the east corner of High street. John Knox, the reformer, born at Gifford, in 1505, received part of his education in this town. The trade of Haddington consists principally in agricultural produce; and it is also considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. There is a brewery, an iron foundry, a cloth mill, two corn mills, and several maltings. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The parish church, at one time the church of a Franciscan abbey, is supposed to have been erected about the 12th or 13th century. The nave, which is the only portion now used, was repaired in 1811, at a cost of nearly £6,000; the eastern portion and the old square tower are in ruins. A memorial window, the gift of Miss Aitchison, of Alderston, was erected in 1893. In one corner of the edifice is the burial place of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or "Lennox Love." The church of St. John, Newtonport, is now used as a parish hall. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1770, and consecrated in 1815, will seat 300 persons. The Rev. George Cuthbert Murdoch M.A. of Kable College, Oxford, has been rector since 1907.

In the centre of the town is a monument to George, eighth Marquess of Tweeddale K.T., G.C.B. and Field Marshal, d. 1876, and at West Port is another to Robert Ferguson, of Raith, M.P. erected in 1843. To the west, along the Edinburgh road, stands the village of St. Lawrence House, at which place King James V. built and endowed a leper hospital; a chapel dedicated to St. Lawrence also once existed, but the exact spot has not been identified. The county Lunatic Asylum, opened in 1866, stands a short distance from the town. There is a free library, and law and subscription libraries. Neilson Park, opened in 1910, was presented to the burgh by George Neilson esq.; it comprises about 13 acres. The charities are numerous, and several societies and clubs have been established for various objects. The Knox Institute, erected in 1873, at a cost of £7,000, in memory of John Knox, takes the place of the Burgh School. It is a secondary or higher class school, and provides a first-class classical, scientific, mathematical and English education for children of the district; the buildings include a workshop for teaching woodwork, and the institute is also a centre for training junior students. The Haddington and Salton Agricultural Societies were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums about £300. The old bowling green, between Elm House and the Nungate bridge, is now used as a playground. The Corn Exchange, in Court street, was opened 29th Sept. 1851. The weekly market is held on Friday; the sale of oats commences at twelve, barley at twenty minutes past twelve, wheat at twenty minutes to one, end beans and peas at one o'clock. A fortnightly auction for the sale of live stock is also held every alternate Monday. A cattle fair is held in October, and the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold their meetings here for the show of stock, implements, seed &c.; for the show of seed corn in February and October, of stock, poultry and implements in July, and roots in December. Two papers are published here weekly, the "Haddingtonshire Advertiser," with which is incorporated the "East Lothian Visitor" (Friday) and "Haddingtonshire Courier" (Friday). Lennox Love is the property and residence of William Arthur Baird esq.; Stevenson House, of Lady Sinclair; Clerkington and Amisfield House are now (1911) unoccupied. The area of the parish comprises 12,162 acres; rateable value, burghal £22,082, landward £19,456; the population (1901), 5,126 and in the town 3,992.

HUMBLE is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Haddington, with a station on a branch line from Ormiston of North British railway; it is in the south-western part of the county, and is bounded by the parishes of Salton and Ormiston on the north, part of Bolton Yester on the east, and Fala and Sotra on the west, and is chiefly on the Lammermoor range of hills; the highest points being Bleggie hill, 1,336 feet, and Ninecairn Edge, 1,473 feet above sea level. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Children's Village is a home maintained here by the Edinburgh Children's Holiday Fund, and at High Lea is a home for boys in connection with the Church of Scotland.

UPPER KEITH is a village in the parish, 2 miles from Humble station and 5 miles north-east from Tynehead station on the Edinburgh to Hawick and Carlisle section of the North British railway.

BLACKSHIELDS, a small hamlet in the detached portion of the parish, has been transferred for civil purposes to Fala, Edinburghshire.

The area comprises 8,797 acres; rateable value, £8,682; the population in 1891 was 823, and in 1901, 720 in the civil parish and 760 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Upper Keith.
Letters should have East Lothian added; James Stewart, sub-postmaster.
Delivery, 8 a.m.; dispatch, 3.15 p.m.

INNERWICK is a parish and village, in East Lothian poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Dunbar; the parish is bounded by Oldhaunstocks on the east, Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacans (in Berwickshire) on the south; it measures 10 miles in length, by a breadth varying from 2 to 3. The village has a station, about a mile north-east, on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway, and is 30 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 east from Haddington, and 4 south from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick. The Established church was built in 1784. In 1870 the interior of the church was thoroughly renovated. There is also a United Free church in the village. Thurston, about a mile west of the village, is the residence of James William Hunter esq. and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick are the remains of a castle of that name standing on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divides the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons of Innerwick, was besieged, taken and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance, by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. The remains of several military encampments can be traced in the neighbourhood. A life-boat station was erected at SKATERDAW in 1907. The Marquess of Tweeddale K.T. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy, of Biel, James William Hunter esq. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. of Preston Grange, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,424 acres; rateable value, £10,580; the population in 1891 was 761, and in 1901, 782.

Post, T. & M. O. Office. Letters should have East Lothian added; Miss Margt. Ford, postmistress. Deliveries, 9.30 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7.50 a.m. & 12.50 & 5.45 p.m.; Sunday delivery (callers only), 11.30 a.m. till noon; dispatch, 10.50 a.m.

MORHAM is a small parish in the centre of the county, about 4 miles south-east from Haddington station on the North British line, and in the Haddington small debt court district; it figured largely in the time of Queen Mary, whose third husband, James, Earl of Bothwell, was proprietor of Mainhill. At that time there was a comparatively large village, which has, however, long ago disappeared, and the parish is now wholly agricultural. The parish church is a plain edifice of stone. Here also is a Rescue Home for Women, controlled by the Church of Scotland. The area comprises 2,087 acres; rateable value, £2,502; the population in 1891 was 199, and in 1901, 201.

OLDHAMSTOCKS is a village, at the extreme east of the county, and near the shore of the North Sea, and is between 7 and 8 miles in length, by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north-west, west, and part of the south by Innerwick, and by Cockburn south on the east, and is in East Lothian poor combination, and small debt court district of Dunbar: the village stands in a valley on the road from Dunbar to Duns, 3 miles south-east from Innerwick and about 3 south-west from Cockburnspath station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. There is an Established church. Duglass, a modern mansion near the coast, now (1911) unoccupied, is built on the site of Duglass Castle, a fortress noticed in Scottish history: it was originally one of the many strongholds of the Earls of Home, and still confers the title of baron on that family. In 1640 the Earl of Haddington, and several others who had joined the Covenanters, took possession of the castle for the purpose of watching the garrison at Berwick. While here the Earl received a letter from General Leslie, and was standing in the court yard reading it to the company there assembled, when the powder magazine blew up, which, throwing down one of the side walls, overwhelmed his lordship, together with his auditors, who all perished in the ruins. The deed is said to have been perpetrated by one of the earl's faithless attendants, who ignited a barrel of gunpowder. The land is fertile on the sea coast, and rises gradually towards the Lammermoor Hills, which are chiefly pastoral. The area comprises 8,847 acres; rateable value, £4,906; the population in 1891 was 529, and in 1901, 429 civil and 491 ecclesiastical.

ORMISTON is a parish and village, on the western border of the county; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Tranent, on the east by Penciland, on the south-east by Humbie and on the west by Edinburghshire, and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; the village is in the northern part of the parish, 2½ miles south of Tranent, and consists of one spacious street, with a cross in the centre, and has a station on the Macmerry section of the North British railway. The parish church stands ½ mile south-west of the village: there is also a United Free church and two public schools. The Rev. Robert Moffat D.D. the South African missionary, was born here 1796; he died in 1873, and a monument has been erected to his memory. The parish abounds in coal of excellent quality. Ormiston Hall, the property of the Marquess of Linlithgow, 1 mile south of the village, is now occupied by Mrs. MacDongal. There are traces of a Danish camp on the summit of Dodridge Law, an eminence near the southern extremity of the parish. The Marquess of Linlithgow is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,443 acres; rateable value, £9,330 15s. 11d.; the population in 1891 was 1,178, and in 1901, 1,190 in the parish and 551 in the village. Post, T. & M. O. Office. PENCILAND is a parish and village near the western border of the county and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington, with a station (opened in 1901) on a branch line from Ormiston of the North British railway. The village is 2 miles east from Ormiston and 2½ north-west from East Saltoun, on the banks of the Tyne water, which runs in an easterly direction through the centre of the parish and is here crossed by a stone bridge. The district forms the easternmost limit of the great coal range of the Lothians; limestone and freestone also abound. The parish church is on the eastern side of the river. There is also a United Free church and the Trevelyan Temperance Memorial Hall. About half a mile north-west of the village is Winton Castle, an extensive and partly ancient mansion, formerly the residence of the Earls of Winton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715: it is now the property and residence of Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy, of Biel Fountain Hall, the property of Sir Thomas North Dick Lauder bart. is a mansion erected about the 17th century, but now partly in a state of decay and occupied as farm premises. Tynholm, the seat of James Reid esq. J.P. is also in this parish. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvy is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,075 acres; rateable value, £11,232; the population in 1891 was 1,125, and in 1901, 1,112. Post, T. & M. O. Office, Penciland. Letters should have Haddingtonshire added; James H. PRESTONKIRK is a parish in East Lothian poor combination and contains the village of East Linton (which see); the parish, which measures about 4 miles each way, is near the centre of the county, north-east of Haddington and is traversed by the river Tyne. The Established church here was built in 1770. Near the south side of the road to Haddington are the ruins of Hailes Castle. Traprain Law, a hill in the south part of the parish, reaches a height of 724 feet above the level of the sea. One mile north of the village of East Linton is Smeaton, the seat of Sir Archibald Buchan-Hepburn bart. D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour P.C., M.P. Sir A. Buchan-Hepburn bart. Sir Alexander Kinloch D.L., J.P. and the trustees of the late Thomas Mitchell-Innes. The area comprises 7,075 acres; rateable value, £10,178 (exclusive of East Linton); the population in 1891 was 1,802, and in 1901, 1,673, of whom 790 were in East Linton village.

PRESTONPANS is a market town, burgh of barony, and police burgh and parish in Inveresk poor house combination and the small debt court district of Tranent, 9 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 south-west from North Berwick, 9½ west-north-west from Haddington and 3 east from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, having a station on the Edinburgh and Dunbar section of the North British railway. The town consists principally of one long street running parallel with the Forth, and is much frequented during the bathing season by visitors from Edinburgh and different parts of the country. The harbour, situated a little to the westward of the town, and called Morison Haven, has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks and other articles, made from fire-clay, common bricks, tiles and salt; the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also a brewery and some soap works. Oysters are taken in the Forth, near the town, and considerable quantities are sent to the markets of Edinburgh, Newcastle, and even to London. The mines of coal in the neighbourhood are very rich; a seam is now being worked by the Summerlee Iron Co. Ltd. within 200 yards of the town, and there is a stratum of fire-clay underlain by ironstone. Coal is also now (1911) being worked by the Edinburgh Collieries Limited in a rich seam which runs under the sea. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter; a suburb called "Kuittle," or more properly "Cuthill," the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally by the abbey of Newbattle; this division is possessed by Sir G. Grant-Suttie bart. who is also patron of the parish. In the main street is a monument to Thomas Alexander C.B. late director general of the medical department of the British army. There are Established and United Free churches. The Public Library was erected in 1905 at a cost of £1,500, the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. Schaw's Hospital, at Preston village, is an extensive building erected in 1831 in the Old English style, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of funds bequeathed by Dr. Schaw, in 1781. The institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of 21 boys, children of indigent parents, those of the name of Schaw, McNeil, Cunningham and Stewart having a preference of entry. This trust has been modified at the instance of the Endowed Schools Commissioners, part of the fund being now devoted to giving free education to a large number of children in the public school, and another part is spent in bursaries open to the public school children, in Haddingtonshire. The house is now occupied by Miss Mary Murray's Institution—an establishment for educating and training girls for domestic service. About ½ miles to the eastward lies a hamlet called Meadow Mill, the site of the battle commonly known as Prestoopans, fought 21 Sept. 1745, between Prince Charles Edward and Gen. John Cope and the English troops, which had been collected to oppose the Pretender's advance south; the Highland army, marching from Duddingston, bivouacked at Tranent on the night of the 20th September, 1745, and in the early morning of the 21st were conducted in a mist by a path from Tranent to Cockenzie, which avoided the morass and enabled them to surprise the English, whose cavalry fled from either flank, leaving their infantry to be cut up by the Highlanders, who drove the survivors in a confused rout to the gates of Berwick, capturing guns, military chest, baggage &c. Col. James Gardiner, whose residence (Bankton House) still stands close to the battlefield, was killed on the field and interred in Tranent church, and a monument has been erected to his memory. The principal seats in the neighbourhood are Preston Grange, the residence of Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. and Drummorie, the residence of Col. William Aitchison J.P. Preston Tower, in this vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons of Preston, is now a ruin. Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. the Schaw bequest, Col. William Aitchison and James McNeil esq. are the principal land-owners. The area comprises 1,429 acres; rateable value, £21,208 (landward part); rateable value of the burgh, £6,626; the population in 1891 was 2,659, and in 1901, 3,382, including 1,721 in the burgh.

MORRISONSHAVEN is a village in Prestonpans parish; population in 1901, 332.

SALTON (or Saltonn) is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination, and small debt court district of Haddington; it lies chiefly in a fertile valley on the north side of the Lammermoor Hills bounded on the north, west and south by the Tyne and Salton rivers, and on the east by the parishes of Bolton and Had-dington, and contains the villages of East and West Salton, with a station (opened in 1901) on a branch line of the North British railway, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from East Salton and half a mile from West Salton. The village of East Salton is 15 miles southeast from Edinburgh, 5 south-west from Haddington and about 4 south-east from Winton station on the Maemerry section of the North British railway. The parish church, almost entirely rebuilt in 1805, is a cruciform edifice consisting of chancel, nave, transept and a tower and spire 90 feet high. Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury 1689-1715, had Salton for his first benefice (1685), and for four years performed the duties of parish minister but in 1669 was appointed professor of Divinity at Glasgow, and in 1673 settled in London, then becoming chaplain to the King, preacher at the Rolls chapel, and lecturer of St. Clement's; he bequeathed to Salton parish a sum of money, now producing about £5 yearly for the increase of the library, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing and apprenticing 30 poor children, and the proceeds of the bequests now amount to about £80 per annum. Andrew Fletcher, a political writer, and pupil of Bishop Burnet, was born in this parish in 1653, and was some time a member of the Scottish Parliament; he afterwards took part in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth (1685), for which he suffered exile, but returned in 1688 with William III. and was subsequently a bitter opponent of the union of the two kingdoms; he died in 1716. In East Salton is a fountain in the memory of John Fletcher esq. who died in 1903. Salton Hall, a mansion-standing in a fine park on the western border of the parish, is the seat of Andrew Mansel Talbot Fletcher esq. who is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,811 acres; the value, £5,090; the population in 1891 was 495, and in 1901, 431.

SPOTT is a parish and village, in the eastern side of the county; the parish, irregular in form, measures about 9 miles in length by 1 to 3 in breadth; it is in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt
 court district of Dunbar. The low country is well inclosed and cultivated, and the higher grounds afford good pasture. The village is 2 miles south from Dunbar station on the Edinburgh to Berwick section of the North British railway. Here is an Established church and a public school.
 Spott House, the seat of Miss Adelaide Watt, stands upon a rock, rising from a low glen, and surrounded with fine policies. The area comprises 7,834 acres; rateable value, £5,968; the population in 1891 was 475, and in 1901, 423.

STENTON is a parish and small village, in East Lothian poor combination and Had-dington small debt court district; the village is about 8 miles east from Haddington and 4 miles south-east from East Linton station on the Edinburgh to Berwick section of the North British railway, and has an Established church. This place gives the title of baron to a branch of the Hamilton family, Barons Belhaven.
About a mile south of the village is an artificial piece of water, serpentine in form, and nearly two miles in length, with an average breadth of about 400 yards, though in some places it is double this proportion, and in others much narrower;
the banks are high, steep, and well wooded. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvie, of Biel, who is the owner, grants permission to visitors to view the grounds and plantations on application at the estate offices at Ninewar. Mrs. Nisbet-Hamilton-Ogilvie and Mrs. Buchan Sydeserf
are the principal landowners. The area
comprises 7,530 acres; rateable value,
£5,855; the population in 1901 was 511.

TRANENT is a town and police burgh,
the head of a small debt court district and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 10 miles east from Edinburgh, 18 west-by-south from Dunbar, 7 west from Haddington, about 1 south-east from Prestonpans (the nearest) station on the Berwick and Dunbar section of the North British railway, and 2 west from Macmerly terminal station, near the eastern border of the parish.
The town occupies elevated ground on the main road from Edinburgh to Dunbar.
Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the adjacent collieries, which have been wrought in this quarter from the first discovery of coal in Scotland. The parish church, which stands at the foot of the town, is a plain edifice with a square tower, and here was buried Col. James Gardiner, who fell at the battle of Prestonpans, 21 Sept. 1745.
There are two United Free churches, one erected in 1814, the other in 1845, a Roman Catholic church, opened July 28th, 1892, and a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1870. The Town Hall was built in 1888, at a cost of £1,000, and is used for public entertainments. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland have branches here.
The park in Bridge street is 13 acres in extent, and was presented to the town by Mrs. Mary Shank Polson, in memory of her husband, the late John Polson esq.
Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinstone Tower, once a baronial residence; and in other parts of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton Castle, and the remains of a once collegiate church. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Polson esq. the Earl of Wemyss and March G.C.V.O., A.D.C., V.D. Henry Burn Callander esq. of Preston Hall, Dalkeith, and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. of Preston Grange. The area of the parish comprises 5,918 acres; rateable value of the parish, £38,038, and of the burgh, £11,789; the population in 1891 was 5,470,
of which 2,389 were in the town and police burgh, and in 1901, 6,117, with 2,584 in the town, and including 205 in St. Joseph's Industrial School for Roman Catholic boys.

ELPHINSTONE, a small village in the parish, is 2 miles south from Tranent, and has a Primitive Methodist chapel.
Lord Elphinstone is the principal landowner; the population in 1901 was 748.

MEADOWMILL is also a village; population in 1901, 366.

WHITTINGEHAME is an extensive parish, reaching from the borders of Berwickshire, a length of 11 miles northward, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Stenton, on the west by Garvald and Morham, and on the north-west by Prestonkirk; it is in the East Lothian poor combination, and Haddington small debt court district. The village is very small, and is near the northern extremity of the parish, 6 miles east from Haddington and about 3 south from East Linton station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. Here is a church of the Establishment. Whittingehame, a fine mansion on Whittingehame water, surrounded by pleasure grounds and plantations, is the seat of the Right Hon. Arthur James Balfour P.C., M.P. who is the principal landowner; the grounds are open to the public under certain restrictions on Wednesdays and Fridays. Little Saws Law, 1,569 feet, and Priestlaw, 1,349 feet above sea level, are peaks in the Lammermoor Hills, which cover a considerable part of the parish. The area comprises 15,471 acres; rateable value, £7,158; the population in 1891 was 586, and in 1901, 521.

Post Office, Mrs. Mary Samuel, sub-postmistress. Letters through Prestonkirk, Haddingtonshire. Delivery, 9 a.m.; dispatch, 4 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. The nearest money order and telegraph office is at Stenton, 2 miles distant YESTER is a parish in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Garvald, on the west by Bolton and Humbie, on the north by Haddington, and extends southward to Berwickshire; near the southern extremity is Lammer Law, a peak of the Lammermoor Hills, 1,733 feet above sea-level.

GIFFORD is a village on the Gifford water, with a terminal station on a branch from Ormiston of the North British railway, opened in 1901, and is 20 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh and 9 south-east from Tranent. The village is well built, and consists of two spacious streets of unequal length, one end of the longest having a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction, and terminates at Yester House, the mansion of the Marquess of Tweeddale K.T., D.L. This village was the birthplace in 1505 of John Knox, the Reformer, who instituted the Protestant worship in Scotland, and in 1556 preached against the existing bishops and clergy; in 1563 he was tried on a charge of high treason, but acquitted, and dying 24 Nov. 1572, was buried in St. Giles', Edinburgh. The parish church here, erected in 1708, stands at the eastern end of the shorter street, and contains a pulpit of oak of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called "Knox's pulpit." There is also a United Free church; the old parochial school is now used for lectures &c.

The Marquess of Tweeddale is the principal landowner. The area comprises 8,847 acres; rateable value, £7,034; the population in 1891 was 730, 305 being in the village of Gifford, and in 1901, 730, of which 509 are in the village.

THE INNER HEBRIDES

See ARGYLLSHIRE for MULL, JURA, ISLAY & Smaller Islands; and

INVERNESS-SHIRE for SKYE, Small Isles, &c.

THE OUTER HEBRIDES

THE Outer or Western Hebrides, so called to distinguish them from the inner range of islands, Islay &c., which lie closer in to the mainland, consist of those islands exposed to the Atlantic, and are outside the Little Minch, extending from north-east, at the Butt of Lewis, to the south-western point of Barra Head, and include the large islands of Lewis (with its southern adjunct of Harris), North and South Uist, Scalpa, Baleshare, Benbecula, Bernera and Barra, and the smaller ones of Mingalay, Scarpa, Sandray, Taransay, the two Pabbays, Boveray, Eriskay, Grimsay, Heikser, Watersay, Hecla and Scorp, besides the Monach and Shiant Islands and many still smaller islets. The four northern parishes (or Lewis proper) form part of the County of Ross, the remainder being in Inverness-shire. The entire length of this string of islands, which is sometimes known as Long Island, is about 130 miles, with a breadth varying from 1 mile to 30. The area is 715,912 acres, viz.: 311,499 of the county of Inverness and 404,413 of the County of Ross and Cromarty; in 1891 the population was 44,987; viz. of the County of Inverness 17,357 and of the County of Ross and Cromarty 27,590, and in 1901, 46,172, viz.: of the County of Inverness 17,223 and of the County of Ross and Cromarty 28,949. The St. Kilda group is also included in the Outer Hebrides; they lie 60 miles west from Harris. The Hebrides do not appear to have fallen under the Roman yoke, though known to Pliny as the Hebrides, but formed part of the Dalrydian Kingdom, and in the latter years of the 9th century, the Scoto Picts who occupied them were overrun by the Northmen, who established a viceroy on the Isle of Man, who had jurisdiction over Dublin, Man and the Western Isles, or Sudreys. The defeat of Hakon, at Largs, in 1263, ended the dominion of the Northmen, the Hebrides being finally separated from the Norwegian dominions and added to the Kingdom of Scotland, though the descendants of Somerled, a chief of Cantyre, who had held the lordship of the Isles, but was defeated and slain at Renfrew in 1164, continued to rule them as feudal chiefs, and appear to have acted as independent sovereigns in forming treaties &c. though nominally subject to the Scottish kings, but James V. suppressed the title, and subsequently the property passed to the Campbells; the chieftainship, however, continued to be a subject of dispute, and the Islands were in a very unsettled condition until, in 1748, regular sheriffs were appointed, and all heritable jurisdictions abolished. After the battle of Culloden, Prince Charles Edward fled to Moidart and sailed from Arisaig, landing on the 24th April, 1746, at Rossinish, Isle of Benbecula, and staying on these islands until 28 June; when he left for Isle of Skye. There are many tumuli and remains of round forts, also a fine stone circle at Callerish, in the Isle of Lewis, belonging either to the Stone or Bronze age.

Soil, Minerals &c.—The climate is mild, being surrounded by sea water, and the salt particles are inimical to the growth of trees; therefore the islands are destitute of wood, but there is a considerable extent of heath and peat lands and some large tracts of sand. In Harris the hills rise to between 2,000 and 3,000 feet above the sea level, but in other parts of the islands are dwarfed. Large quantities of kelp are collected along the coasts, and fishing is the staple industry. There are a good many sheep and a fine breed of black cattle.

The coasts are much indented by sea lochs, and Stornoway furnishes an excellent harbour. The communication is by steamer from Glasgow.

Fishing is carried on to some extent; the number of boats registered on December 31, 1909, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port of Stornoway was 554 of 4,587 tons, employing 2,941 men and boys regularly and 1,295 occasionally, and at Castlebay 278 of 1,466 tonnage, employing 1,028 men and boys.

These islands contain four parishes—Barra, Harris, North Uist and South Uist—in Inverness-shire, and four parishes—Barvas, Lochs, Stornoway and Uig—in Ross-shire, these latter forming the Island of Lewis. There are 12 ecclesiastical parishes, forming the presbyteries of Uist and Lewis, in the Synod of Glenelg. The parliamentary representation is included within those of Ross-shire and Inverness-shire. There are no royal burghs, and only one large town, Stornoway, which is a poice burgh and the seat of a sheriff court.

BARRA is a parish in the south of the Long Island, and in Long Island poor combination; it contains the village of Castlebay south of the island and the kirktown, known as Craigstone, both on the island of Barra, and besides it includes the islands of Fuday, Hellisay, Watersay, Sandray, Pabbay, Mingalay and Berneray. Fishing is carried on to a considerable extent. The total quantity of all fish landed in the Barra district in 1909 was 174,779 cwts. value £56,563; of this quantity, 165,558 cwts. were herrings. The value of the fish cured was £102,898. The number of boats belonging to the port in 1909 was 283, employing 1,502 men and boys. At Castlebay are the ruins of the old stronghold of the MacNeils; there are several small lochs with good trout fishing, and the shores afford fine cliff scenery. The island of Barra is about 10 miles long by 3 wide, and between its northern headland and Pollachar at the south end of Uist is the Sound of Barra, about 6 miles in breadth; at the north end of the island and a little above the landing place is the unenclosed burial ground of Kilbar, which contains three ruinous chapels, varying in length from over 18 to 42 feet in length; the largest has triangular-headed windows and a doorway of the same form within a semi-circular arch of very thin stones or slates; and the rest flat-topped windows. At BORVE, on the west coast, are traces of St. Michael's chapel, about 31 feet long. Berneray, or Bernera, is a smooth grassy island forming the extreme southern point of the Hebrides, and bordered by wild and lofty precipices; on it is Barra Head lighthouse, 550 feet above the sea. Watersay was a fishing station, but the curers have left for Castlebay. MINGALAY is a rough hilly island immediately north of Berneray, from which it is separated by a sound, less than a mile broad. On the island is a neglected burial ground, and a kind of kistvaen, called "The Cross," within a circle of loose stones, 42 feet in diameter; there is also a hill, known as Beinichorn, 882 feet in height. The area of the entire parish comprises 22,212 acres; rateable value, £2,640; the population in 1901 was 2,545. Lady Gordon Cathcart, of Cluny, the Congested Districts Board and Messrs. W. L. and M. N. McGillivray are the principal landowners of Barra.

BERNERA ISLAND, see UIG.

BERNERAY, see HARRIS.

CATTLEBAY, see BARRA.

ENSAY, see HARRIS.

HARRIS is a parish, forming the south end of Lewis Island, but is treated as a separate island, being in the county of Inverness, whereas the rest of Lewis is in Ross-shire; it extends from north to south for about 20 miles, by a width of about 8 to 15, and is in the Long Island poor combination, and small debt court district of Lochmaddy, and includes the islands of Bernera, Ensay, Killigray, Pabbay, Scalpa, Scarp, Scotasay, Soay, St. Kilda and Taransay, and other small isles. The kirktown, generally known as Tarbert-Harris, to distinguish it from the other Tarberts, stands on an isthmus between East Loch Tarbert and West Loch Tarbert, which nearly divide the parish in half. Near the southern point of Harris stands the church of the Augustine Priory of Rodel (or Rowdill); it was dedicated to St. Clement, and is a cruciform structure 60 feet 7 in. long and 15 feet wide, with a massive square tower of four storeys, a machicolated embattled parapet, and a low pyramidal spire: in the south wall is a recess, elaborately decorated with 12 pictured panels and containing a remarkable sculptured tomb with the effigy of a warrior in plate armour, and an inscription recording that the church was repaired in 1528 by Alexander Macleod, of Dunvegan (d. 1547); in 1787 it was rebuilt by Capt. Alexander Macleod, after its destruction by fire, and in the 19th century it was restored by the Countess of Dunmore. There are several large hills; Chesathal rising to about 2,600 feet above sea level. Five-eighths of the inhabitants of Harris are landless cottars who pay neither rent nor taxes; these reside in what are known as "black huts," and are most industrious in the manufacture of Harris tweeds. Sir Samuel Edward Scott bart. of Westbury Manor, Northamptonshire, is sole landowner of North Harris, including the village of TARBERT and the islands of SCARP and SCALPA.

Harris is famous for its excellent sea trout and salmon fishing, its numerous bays, lochs and streams being the natural home of such fish. The Hebridean Sporting Association Limited has a lodge both at Rodil and at Finsbay to which large numbers of sportsmen resort. Lord Dunmore V.C., M.V.O. is sole landowner of South Harris.

BERNERA is a quoad sacra parish formed out of that of Harris, and including its churches; the island of Bernera lies in the Sound of Harris, half way between the shore of North Uist and the isle of Pabbay. There are two Established and four United Free churches, one Presbyterian Free church, and sixteen public schools in the parish. Lord Dunmore V.C., M.V.O. is sole landowner. The area comprises 123,757 acres; rateable value, £6,143; population in 1901, 5,271.

ST. KILDA is the name given to a group of small islands in this parish, lying out in the Atlantic, 60 miles west of Harris; the northern point being a hill called Connacher, rising 1,400 feet from sea level. The little village consists of a narrow street or causeway, lined on one side by a number of cottages, and on the other by barns and fuel or bird houses, all rudely built of stone, and thatched with straw. On the island is one burial place, enclosed by a stone wall; the sites of the churches of St. Brendan and St. Columba, and several holy wells, one of which, called "Tobarrimbuadh" is a low square massive structure, with a deep recess into which the water rises, and thence flows down into the glen. The "House of the Female Warrior" is a low structure, rudely built of stone, and covered in with turf; within are three recesses in the thickness of the walls, and near the doorway a pillar. Norman Magnus Macleod of Macleod C.M.G. of Dunvegan Castle, Isle of Skye, is sole landowner; the island of Ensay is the property of the trustees of the late Major William Stewart, and Pabbay in Harris Sound belongs to Donald A. Stewart esq. Population in 1891, 71, and in 1901, 77.

SOA, or Soay, is a small islet near St. Kilda, rising out of the sea to a height of 1,031 feet.

Fairs are held near Tarbert Harris on the Thursday after the first Tuesday in July, and on the last Thursday in October.

THE ISLAND OF LEWIS

CONSISTS of the parishes of Stornoway, Barvas, Uig and Lochs in the county of Ross and Cromarty, while the fifth parish, Harris (which, though geographically part of Lewis, is considered almost a distinct island), is in the county of Inverness: the portion of the island known as "Lewis" is 40 miles from north to south, by 30 in breadth, and is bounded on the east by the Minch, south by Harris and west and north by the Atlantic Ocean. A large extent of moor or waste land on the island has been drained, and several hundred acres planted with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding Lewis Castle pleasure grounds and walks have been laid out, and drives formed. The principal eminences in the island are Monach, or Murnag, 800 feet; Ben Barvas, 900 feet; Mealashal, 1,750 feet; Ben Mheadhonach, 1,250, and Ben Mhor, 1,750. The area of the four parishes comprising the island is 405,413 acres; rateable value, £34,816; the population in 1901 was 28,949. The area of Barvas parish is 97,543; the population in 1901 was: civil 6,722, ecclesiastical, 2,872. The island was acquired by the late Sir James Matheson bart. of Achany, in 1844, from the representatives of the late Earl of Seaforth, for the sum of £190,000. Major Duncan Matheson is the present owner.

Stornoway, Uig and Lochs will be found under separate headings.

BARVAS is a parish in the extreme northern end of Lewis, with a kirktown, 12 miles north-west from Stornoway; it is 20 miles in length, with a breadth of about 8, and is bounded on the north and north-west and north-east by the Atlantic, the south and south-east by the parish of Stornoway and on the south-west by Uig, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches. The "Thrusel stone," a huge meuhir at Upper Shader, in this parish, is said to commemorate a victory gained here by the Morisons over the Macdonalds. At Bragar are remains of the church of St. John the Baptist, consisting of chancel and nave, and 32½ feet in length; at Mealabost Borve are remains of St. Bridget's chapel, 34 feet long, and at South Galson more perfect remains of the small chapel of the Holy Cross, about 19 feet long and 12 wide; near the Butt of Lewis, at Errappidie are two ruined chapels, one 30 and the other 44 feet in length, with north-east sacristy and south-east chapel. At Barvas are the remains of St. Mary's church, and at Lower Shader those of St. Peter's church. There is a Druidical circle of stones to the south-east of Loch au Duin at Lower Shader.

CROSS is a quoad sacra parish, formed from this parish, of which it constitutes the northern portion, and contains a group of villages known as Ness, extending along the road from Dell village to Port of Ness, and having a population in 1891 of 1,589. Shawbost constitutes the southern portion, and was at one time part of the parish of Lochs. There are Established, Free and United Free churches at Cross, and Established and Free churches at Shawbost. The Butt of Lewis is a singular detached rock off the northern point of the parish, and near it are a lighthouse and coastguard station. The area comprises 85,043 acres; rateable value, £3,033; population in 1891, 5,699, and in 1901, 6,736.

LOCHBOISDALE, see SOUTH UIST.

LOCHMADDY, see NORTH UIST.

LOCHS is a parish on the east coast of the island, bounded south by Harris, west by Uig, north by Stornoway and east by the Minch; its principal village, Luirbost, on the shore of a loch of the same name, is about 3 miles south of Stornoway; the parish extends for 20 miles from north to south with a breadth of 15 miles, the eastern coast being much broken by lochs, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination. The area comprises 133,104 acres; rateable value, £3,160; the population in 1891 was 4,717, and in 1901, 4,768.

The SHIANT or "Enchanted" islands form part of the parish, but have only a population of 8 persons. These islands lie off the south-east coast of Lewis, and are said to be unequalled for their wild and picturesque beauty. Rough Island, the largest, is about 1 mile in length, with a height of over 500 feet, and at its southern extremity lies House Island, which is united to it by a strip of shingly strand, and on part of this are traces of a chapel and a burial ground; the third island is about a mile eastward, and once had a chapel dedicated to the Holy Virgin.

STORNOWAY is a seaport and police burgh and parish in the island of Lewis, county of Ross and Cromarty. The town is 60 miles north from Portree, in the I. of Skye, and 45 from Poolewe, on Loch Ewe in Ross-shire, to which, from Stornoway, there is a submarine telegraph. It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 12 min. and in west longitude 6 deg. 18 min. 10 sec. at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, one of the safest and most commodious harbours in the north, and easy of access to vessels of any burthen at any time of the tide. The north side of the bay and harbour is formed by the peninsula of Eye, which projects into the Minch for about 6 miles, then turns to the north for another 6 and forms a large bay 7 by 5 miles, opening to the north-east. A lighthouse stands on Aroish point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights, and there is another lighthouse at Tiumpnasula, the extreme point of the Eye peninsula, erected in 1900. The parish, which is bounded east by the Minch, south by Lochs and west by Barvas, extends 17 miles by 8 from north-west to south-west. The town, which is the head of a sheriff court district and of a poor combination, is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre. A quay, with slips and landing places, has been constructed, and a sea wall erected round the basin of the harbour. Situated on the quay is the fish mart, built in 1894 by the Pier and Harbour Commission, at a cost of about £1,500.

The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which there are several salmon fishing stations in the district. Ling and cod are caught during the winter and spring months, and are dried and sent to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets. The months of May, June and July form the season for herring fishing, during which it is estimated that close upon 800 boats, with a complement of seven hands to each boat, are employed. The total quantity of white fish landed in 1903 was 388,763 cwt.; value £106,692. In 1903, 47,655 barrels were exported, about 90 per cent. going to St. Petersburg market, the remainder being distributed over the German ports. The quantity of white fish cured in 1904 was 8,461 cwt.; 1905, 7,344 cwt.; 1906, 6,903 cwt., and in 1909, 103,944 cwt. The value of all fish cured in 1900 was £112,193. Many steamers are employed in carrying the fish to the nearest railway stations at Kyle of Lochalsh, Oban and Fleetwood. At Stornoway a large quantity is prepared in a kippered state, and exported principally to the English markets, there being several establishments in full operation. In 1909, 354 fishing boats, of a total tonnage of 1,587, employing 4,086 hands, were registered at the port of Stornoway, and 14 other vessels, aggregating 651 tons, were also registered there.

A small import trade is done, the total value in 1909 being £28,045, of which £14,240 was fish, train, blubber and sperm oil.

The streets of the burgh are well lighted with gas, the works having been erected in 1848. Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. and by Charles I. it was created a royal burgh in 1628, but through the jealousy and opposition of the royal burghs of Scotland, the charter was eventually withdrawn. The General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, has been adopted by the burgh. A sheriff court sits every Wednesday during the session for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. There are Established churches at Stornoway and Cnoc or Knock in the Eye Peninsula and United Free churches at Stornoway, and at Garrabost, on the peninsula of Eye; there are also three Free churches, a Free Presbyterian church, and a meeting house in Francis street. The Episcopal Mission Church of St. Peter, built in 1838, will seat 120 persons. The Rev. Henry Anderson Meaden, of St. John's College, Oxford and Edinburgh University, has been incumbent since 1909. The Municipal buildings, erected in 1903, at a cost of £12,000, from designs by Mr. John Robertson, architect, of Inverness, stand facing the bay, and include a public library. In the church of Uí (Eye) is a rudely carved effigy of a warrior, life size, on a coffin-shaped slab, and now placed upright on a square base; the figure is habited in bascinet and camail, and a tunic with long sleeves, quilted vertically, and confined by a belt; the right hand holds a spear, the left grasps the handle of a broad straight sword; the effigy has been assigned to Roderick Macleod, of the late 15th century. Here also was buried William (Mackenzie) 5th Earl of Seaforth, who died in 1740. The Lewis Hospital, erected at a cost of about £2,200, is a substantial building of stone from designs by Mr. John Heaton Gall, architect, of Inverness. The Combination Poor House was erected in 1896-7, at a cost of about £10,000, from plans by Mr. James M. Thompson, of Edinburgh. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The hotels are the Lewis, the Royal, the Imperial and Caledonian. The Masonic Hall, a handsome structure, is used for assemblies, concerts and public meetings. The Nicolson Institution, Matheson road, founded by Alex. M. Nicolson esq. and now under the management of the School Board, was endowed by the late Sir James Matheson with £35 yearly for the teacher and with a site for the building and playgrounds, and has since been enlarged so as to serve as a centre for technical education in the island of Lewis. There are several societies for mutual improvement. Lewis Castle, a fine mansion in the Tudor castellated style, occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by the late Sir James Matheson, at an outlay of £60,000; it is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds, and is now the seat of Major Duncan Matheson D.L., J.P. On 2nd Sept. 1902, Stornoway was visited by His late Majesty King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, who were entertained at Lewis Castle by Major Duncan Matheson. In this parish the surface generally is flat and moorland, the shores partly sand and partly rock, and indented by a number of bays. Steamers ply frequently between Glasgow and Stornoway, and a mail steamer daily, via Applecross Sound, Kyle of Lochalsh and Mallaig, where there is a terminal station on the North British railway. The most remarkable ancient remains in the island of Lewis are the standing stones or Temple of Calleroish, for which see Uig. At GRESS, on Broad bay, north-east of the island, is a cave 200 feet in length, and frequented by seals; here also, in an open burial ground by the shore, stands the ancient and fairly perfect church of St. Anla, about 19 feet long and 14 wide: over the doorway is a stone bearing the date 1685, when it was probably repaired.

Major Duncan Matheson D.L., J.P. is proprietor of the Island of Lewis. The area comprises 63,224 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £19,235, and of the parish, £24,131. The population of the parish in 1901 was 12,983, of whom 3,852 were in the burgh. The total population of the town in 1901 was 3,852.

TRUMISGARRY, see NORTH UIST.

UIG is a parish in the western part of Lewis Island, with a kirktown near the coast, 34 miles west from Stornoway; it is about 24 miles in length with a breadth of about 18, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Barvas, on the east by Stornoway, south-east by Lochs, south by Loch Resort, and on the west and north-west by the Atlantic, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination; the parish includes the isles of Bernera, Oresay and Pabay. The famous Callernish stones on the northern shore of Loch Roag, in the parish of Uig, form a circle of 13 monoliths, 43 feet in diameter, and approached from the four points of the compass by avenues of monoliths, one of which is 173 feet in length; the monoliths in the circle vary from 4½ to 12 feet in height, and towards and almost touching the eastern point of the circle a circular cairn was discovered in 1858, containing a cruciform stone-lined chamber divided into two parts, with a passage leading to the outside of the cairn; fragments of burnt human bones and other animal matter were found, clearly showing that the circle was a grave enclosure; the late Sir James Matheson had the ground cleared and the accumulations of soil removed, thus opening up the monoliths, and surrounded the whole with a wire fence. Half a mile to the east is another smaller circle, and other detached specimens of these stones exist in various parts of the island. The sole right of fishing in the River Black Water and its tributaries, and all lochs connected therewith, belongs to the proprietor of the Garyvashine Temperance hotel. The parish contains an Established, two United Free churches and a Free church, and 9 public schools. At Mealastadh are some remains of a chapel, about 19 feet long, standing in a burial ground, and near by are traces of a nunnery of Black Sisters. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered upwards of 60 ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently very ancient. Near Gallonhead, in a small hollow, is a ruined chapel, called "Blessing House," about 15 feet long, built of rude masonry, with two doorways, a splayed east window, and a wall niche on either side. At Valtos are traces of another chapel of the same size; at the head of Loch Carloway slight traces remain of St. Michael's chapel, and at Dal Morr are the remains of a chapel 30 feet in length. The area comprises 129,109 acres; rateable value, £1,438; the population in 1891 was 3,660, and in 1901, 4,497.

NORTH UIST is an island and parish about 17 miles long by a width of from 3 to 13 miles, bounded on the east by the Little Minch, on the west by the Atlantic, north by the Sound of Harris, and south by Loch Raval; the parish is in Long Island poor combination, and includes the smaller isles of Baleshare and Ilceay, Boreray, Grimsay, Heisker, Kirkibost, Monach, Ronay and Valtay.

LOCHMADDY, the chief village in the parish, is situated on the eastern side of the island, at the head of Loch Maddy, which forms a natural harbour, the entrance being protected by three rocky promontories known as Maddy Mohr, Maddy Beg and Maddy Graamuch. Here is an Admiralty signal station. At Kilmuir and Bayhead are Established and United Free churches; at Carinish, on the south-west, an Established Mission and United Free church, and Mission halls at Lochmaddy and Sollas on the north-west. On the island is a Court House, a Combination Poor House, one hotel and two licensed inns. On the Monach Islands, off the south-west coast, is a lighthouse, and at the entrance to Lochmaddy is a revolving flash lighthouse.

TRUMISGARRY, a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parish of North Uist, is in the northern part of the island, and has an Established church.

Fairs are held in May, on the Friday before Portree; July, Friday after South Uist, and in September on the Friday week before Sligachan. There are waste-burying grounds, half covered with drifted sand, at various places on the north shore, and at Clachan traces of a chapel. On the island of Vallay is an open burying ground, with a fragment of a cross, 5 ft. 4 in. high, and having four round holes on the head. At HOUGARY, the westernmost point, is the ancient churchyard of Kilmuir, where are some much worn slabs, while inland on the main road is the modern parish church of Kilmuir. At CARINISH, on the south-west, are the remains of the ancient church of the Trinity, consisting of two rectangular structures, one about 62 feet in length and the other 23, connected by a low vaulted passage with a window on each side. The area of the entire parish comprises 75,431 acres; rateable value, £5,194; the population in 1901 was 3,891, and in 1901 Trumisgarry ecclesiastical parish, 903.

SOUTH UIST is an island and parish 7 miles south of North Uist and about 27 miles long, including the island of Benbecula, by a width of 7 at its widest part, bounded on the west by the Atlantic, on the east by the Little Minch, on the north by Benbecula Sound and on the south by the Sound of Barra; the surface in the northern part and on the western side is flat, but the remainder is hilly and mountainous, Heikle Hill rising 1,988 feet, Ben More 2,035 feet and Stielaval 1,297 feet above sea level. The parish is in Long Island Poor Combination, and includes the isles Benbecula, Eriskay, Flodday, Grim-say, Calvay and Winy. Scattered through the island are the ruins of several ancient castles: at Calvay Island, Ormiclate, and Borve, Benbecula, while more interesting still are many prehistoric lake dwellings. The salmon and sea trout fishings are excellent, and the shootings good, geese being in myriads on the machar lands along the Atlantic shore.

LOCHBOISDALE is a village near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, situated on a loch of the same name, and has a pier. Mail steamers call here six times weekly, and cargo steamers twice weekly. Here is a Marconigraph station.

The island of BENBECULA lies between North and South Uist. Prince Charles Edward, after his retreat from Culloden, landed at Rossinish Point in this island, 24 June, 1746, and remained here and in other parts of South Uist until the 28th June, when he left for Skye under the guidance of Flora Macdonald. At Bal-vanich, or Nuntown, on the north-west of the island, are the remains of a chapel, 56 feet long and 19 wide, with very narrow square-headed windows; within this are traces of another building about 30 feet long, and also, within an enclosed burial ground, a third chapel*25 feet long by 16 wide, with windows similar to the first and fragments of a cross.

Fairs are held in July, on the Wednesday after Inverness sheep and wool fair, and in September on the first Wednesday of the month. The area comprises 90,099 acres; rateable value, £6,260; the population in 1891 was 5,821, and in 1901, 6,070.

INVERNESS-SHIRE

THIS is the largest county in Scotland, though far from having the largest population; it extends from the Moray Firth to Loch Linnhe, at the head of the Firth of Lorn, a distance of nearly 80 miles, and from the borders of Banffshire, about 50 miles west of the North Sea, to the Atlantic Ocean, a distance, including Skye, of about 120 miles, and also includes parts of the Outer Hebrides. The whole surface comprises 4,211 square miles, or 2,695,037 acres, of land and 89,847 of water; only about one eighteenth part of the land is cultivated, and the moor and heath lands cover 1,526,521 acres. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badesoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Gleangay in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glenngay, Glenmoriston, Glenshiel &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Bigg, Muck, Rùm and Canna; besides a number of small islands. The Caledonian Canal intersects the county from south-west to north-east, running through the chain of lochs which lie along the Great Glen of Albion. The population in 1891 was 90,121, and in 1901 consisted of 43,762 males and 46,342 females; total, 90,104; the uninhabited houses in 1891 were 18,497, and in 1901 was, inhabited, 18,968; uninhabited, 1,047, and building, 110. This county is the first in Scotland in extent, though only ranking the eleventh in population. The population in 1911 was 87,270.

Ancient History.—This shire was held by the Picts, and Saint Columba is said to have visited their King. The Romans penetrated thus far and had a camp (Banatia) 8 miles from Inverness; for many years the county was the field of constant encounters between rival clans, the successful chief generally obtaining from the king the keepership of the city castle. Edward I. of England captured this fortress in 1303, but it was retaken by Bruce: from 1508 the Earls of Huntly held Inverness Castle until the year 1562. Montrose fought several battles here, and Cromwell erected (1657) a strong fort in its capital city. Prince Charles Edward landed at Arisaig, in the south-west angle of the county, in 1745, and left the same port next year on his return to France; Culloden having been fought on the north-east border in April of that year.

Surface, Soil, Produce, &c.—The greater part of the county is of a mountainous nature, especially on the western side; the most remarkable mountain being Ben Nevis, which rises 4,406 feet above sea level. This eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea, and from the summit in clear weather a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain; it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. One of its precipices is nearly 500 feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name, and at the opening of this valley the Marquis of Montrose achieved the brilliant victory of Inverlochy. On the summit is an Observatory, erected by the Scottish Meteorological Society, and about a hundred yards to the south of this is a hotel, which was opened in July, 1885. The other eminences in the county of considerable height are—Mellourvie, 3,600; Searsoch, 3,412; and Craig Padrig, 1,150 feet respectively. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts, by a valley running from south-west to north-east, called Glen-more-na-h' Alabin, or the "Great Glen of Albion": through the greater part of its length are a connected succession of lakes. On the eastern side of the county agriculture is carried on more successfully than in the interior and on the western coast. Along the whole of the western division the climate is more humid than on the eastern side. On account of these characteristics, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the breeding of black cattle and sheep, especially the former. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer; the alpine and common hare and other species of game are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers, and additional roads were formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of large forests: the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey are supposed to be more than all the other natural woods of Scotland if summed together. The indigenous trees are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, sycamore, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry, are in the north-east, or Lowland quarter, yielding good crops. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, an improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. For some years past, great disaffection has existed among the small farmers, or crofters, as they are termed, by reason of inability to subsist on the production of their small holdings, and for their relief the "Crofters Acts, 1886-7-8," have been passed. The exports of the county are cattle, wool and corn; the skins of goats, deer, foxes, hares and rabbits; salmon, herrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hampen and thread manufacturers. The spinning of flax and wool is the home occupation of the females over the whole county.

The only minerals raised in 1909 were:—Gravel and sand, 9,665 tons; igneous rock, 1,102 tons, and sandstone, 2,105 tons.

The chief crops, as shown from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are:—Oats, 30,512 acres; barley, or here, 6,663; rye, 768; total of corn crops, 38,003 acres; turnips and swedes, 19,419 acres; potatoes, 5,998 acres; total of green crops, 16,604 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 10,564; (not for hay), 19,563; permanent pasture, for hay, 6,415; not for hay, 58,946; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 1,491,828 acres; woods and plantations, 145,629.

The live stock in 1910 comprised 7,264 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 2,173; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 21,480; other cattle, two years and above, 6,162; one year and under two, 9,582; under one year, 12,810; total, 28,554; ewes kept for breeding, 245,966; other sheep, one year and above, 120,693; under one year, 182,243; total, 302,936; sows kept for breeding, 352; other pigs, 1,676.

Fishing is a staple industry of the county; the number of boats registered at Inverness in 1909 was 518, aggregating a tonnage of 10,380, and requiring 3,002 men and boys to work them, and there were also 497, aggregating 1,613 tons, employing 1,485 hands, registered at Broadford, Isle of Skye; 105 other vessels, equal to 3,812 tons, were registered as being owned at Inverness.

Rivers and Lakes, Canals and Railways.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Firth; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire; the smaller rivers are the Beaulie, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coiltire, the Glass, the Morriston, the Eueric, the Kionie, with others of still minor note; the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in one leap to the depth of 200 feet; a dense mist is continually seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The Caledonian Canal is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with each other and with the North Sea on one side, and the Atlantic on the other, by artificial watercourses and lochs, and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerly direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Firth, to Loch Eil; it was constructed at the expense of Government on a survey made in 1803-4, by Messrs. Telford and Jessop, engineers, showing the length of the combined lochs to be 37 miles 41 chains, and the requisite canals to be 21 miles 55 chains; it was finally opened in 1822; the highest level is between Lochs Orch and Lochy, 94 feet above high water at Inverness, and 90 above that at Fort William; the cost was close on £1,000,000, but it is only available for vessels of light draught. The county possesses several other lochs, the largest of which are Laggan, Arkaig, Garry, Treig and Eright and some sea lochs on the west coast, besides that of Beaulie, at the end of the Moray Firth. The railways are the Highland line, which runs through the eastern part of the county, by Boat of Garten to Aviemore Junction, where it is joined by a branch running up the bank of the Spey by Kinrossie and Dalwhinnie to Blair Athole and Perth; another branch coming in from Nairn enters the county near Fort George, runs to Inverness, where it crosses the canal and leaves at Beaulie; another line to Inverness comes from Aviemore Junction, and in the south the West Highland railway enters the county a little south of Loch Treig, and passing by Loch Laccan, Snean Bridge and Roy Bridge, trends south to Fort William and Banavie.

Division, Representation, &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends 32 civil parishes and part of one parish, and 35 whole and 15 parts of ecclesiastical parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being Inverness, which is a royal burgh; it joins with Fortrose (in Ross-shire), Nairn (in the county of that name) and Forres (in Morayshire), in sending one member to Parliament; and the county of Inverness returns another representative. The County parliamentary constituency for 1911 numbered 10,132.

ABERARDER, see DAVIOT WITH DUNLICHTY.

ABERNETHY is a large parish in the north-east angle of the county, 16 miles from north to south by 11 in breadth, and bounded on the north by Elginshire, east by Banffshire and north and west by Duthil parish, in Nairn poor combination. The village of NETHY BRIDGE, in this parish, 5 miles east of Duthil, has a station on the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the North of Scotland railway, which joins the Highland railway at the latter station, it is also 1 mile north-west from Broomhill station on the Highland railway. There are established and United Free churches. The southern portion is mountainous and contains many of the Grampian hills, the largest of which, Cairngorm, is 4,084 feet above sea level; there are several lochs, Loch Morlich being the principal; the river Nethy runs from the south through the parish to the Spey. Close to the church are the remains of Castle Roy, an old fortress of the Comyns. The area comprises 78,058 acres; rateable value, £14,964; the population in 1891 was 1,354 and in 1901 1,279.

KINCARDINE, in this parish, is 6 miles to the west, and has an Established Mission church.

NETHY BRIDGE is a village in this parish, with a station on the Strathspey section of the Great North of Scotland railway and a good hotel. There is a nine-hole golf course a quarter of a mile distant. Trout fishing is free in the district, and the pine forest of Abernethy is the largest in Scotland. Population returned with the parish.

ALVIE is a very mountainous parish and village in the eastern part of the county, intersected at its narrowest part by the river Spey and the Highland railway, the latter having a station at Kineraig in the parish, and one at Aviemore, on its northern border; the extent of the parish from north-west to south is about 23 miles, and its breadth varies from 4 to 8 miles. The principal inhabited portions lie along the rivers Spey and Feshie. The church and manse of Alvie stand on a peninsula, almost surrounded by the Loch of the same name, 10 miles south of Duthil; there is also a United Free church and a Mission hall at Kineraig, 3 miles farther south-by-west. Near the Mission hall stands a granite cross, erected in memory of Piper Peter Stewart and his comrades of the Cameron Highlanders, who fell in the battle of Atbara, on the Nile, 8 April, 1898. On the left bank of the Spey stands Kinrara, a residence of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. and which also gives the title of Earl to the Gordon Lennox family. In a private graveyard close to the Spey, and not far from the house, are interred the remains of Jane, Countess of Gordon, d. 14 April, 1812, and on a rock in the same vale is a monument of granite, 90 feet high, to her husband, Alexander 4th Duke of Gordon, d. 17 June, 1827: this was raised by subscription, amounting to about £1,200, and near by is a cairn, in memory of highlanders who fell at Waterloo. Three miles east of the village of Kingussie is Balavil, the seat of C. J. B. MacPherson esq. D.L., J.P. Near to the house and roadside is a monument to the "bard of Morven;" and half-way between it and the village, a little off the road, is a cave of some interest. Lynwilg Hotel, in this parish, is 2 miles south-west from Aviemore station. Alfred Donald Mackintosh esq. (The Mackintosh), Lord Lieut. of Moy Hall; Sir John W. Ramsden bart. of Ardvreckie; Sir John Macpherson-Grant bart. D.L., J.P. of Ballindalloch; C. J. B. Macpherson esq. of Balavil and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 86,613 acres; rateable value, £12,209; the population in 1891 was 636, and in 1901 was 533.

ARDERSIER is a large village and parish on the Moray Firth, in the north of the county and 11 miles north-east of Inverness, in the poor combination of Nairn and small debt court district of Inverness; the extent of the parish is only 4 miles by COMMERCIAL.

24, and its boundaries are the parish of Petty on the south, Nairnshire on the east, the Moray Firth on the north and Inverness Firth on the west. The village (formerly known as Campbelltown) is situated on a picturesque bay, at the foot of an eminence called "Cromwell's Menut," on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification. There are Established, United Free and Free churches. In the village is a strong chalybeate spring, much frequented by invalids. On a spit of land projecting from the north-west angle of the parish into the Moray Firth stands Fort George, a fortification built in 1746, which completely commands the entrance to Inverness and the line of lochs below it, and it contains quarters for a governor and about 90 other officers and 2,100 men. The Fort George Railway station is on the Highland line, the station being on a branch from the old Fort George station, now named Gollanfield Junction. At Fort George is the depot of No. 72 Regimental District, composed of the 1st Battalion (72nd Foot), 2nd Battalion (78th Foot) and 3rd Special Reserve Battalion Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, The Duke of Albany's). There is a ferry below the fort with a small pier. Capt. John Orr-Ewing, of Aidingbourne house, Chichester, the Earl of Cowdor P.C. and the Crown are the principal landowners. A fair is held annually on the 12th of August. The area of the parish comprises 3,824 acres; rateable value, £4,252; the population in 1901 was 1,594, including 566 military and 160 servants &c. in Fort George Barracks.

BEAULY is a large village, in the parish of Kilmorack, and small debt court district of Inverness, at the mouth of the Beaully river, where it debouches into the basin of the same name, which forms the head of Inverness Firth; it has a station on the Highland railway, and is 12 miles direct west from Inverness, on the edge of an extensive plain backed by hills, in the centre of which are the fine falls of Kilmorack. There is a small harbour, to which vessels of 150 tons can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consist of timber, grain and wool; the imports being principally coal and lime. Here are Established United Free & Roman Catholic churches. The Phipps Institute and Reading Room, erected in 1902-3, was presented to the village by Henry Phipps esq. of Pittsburgh, and includes a large hall and recreation room, a free site being given by Lord Lovat; adjoining is a bowling green. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and 3 miles north-east of the town is the Ord distillery. The Cistercian Priory here, founded in 1230 by Sir John Bissett, of Lovat, stands close to the edge of the river; the last prior resigned the lands and building to Hugh, Lord Lovat, and little now remains but the church, which is ruinous, and used as a burial-place for the Frasers, Chisholms and Mackenzies, of Gairloch. At BRIDGEND, near the village, is a mineral spring. Pairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they occur on the second or third Wednesday and Thursday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trusts. There is good salmon fishing in the Beaully, in the vicinity of the Kilmorack Falls, which are noted for the breadth of water falling over. Beaully is the head quarters of the Highland Mounted Brigade and the 1st and 2nd Regiments of Lovat's Scouts Yeomanry Territorial Force. The population of the village in 1891 was 879, and in 1901, 855.

Foyers, the famed Falls of Foyers, and the village of Fort Augustus (which see). The kirktown of Boleskine, on the east bank of the river Foyers, is 20 miles south-west from Inverness. Here is an Established church, and a Roman Catholic church at Croftbeg. There is a pier at Foyers and another at Inverfargiga, both on Loch Ness, at which David MacBryne's steamers from Glasgow call twice a week, except from June to October, when there is a daily service. A steamer from Inverness to Fort Augustus also calls daily all the year round. The pass of Inverfargiga is about two miles long, and at some parts is so narrow as to barely permit of the construction of a road. About a mile up the pass is a monument to Dr. Bryce, a noted geologist, who was killed here whilst in pursuit of his studies. The Falls of Foyers are about 3 miles from Inverfargiga, on the road passing along the shores of Loch Ness, and the Falls of Culachy and Garry are distant 2 and 8 miles respectively from Fort Augustus. Near the lower Falls of Foyers is the General's Hut, named after General Wade, who constructed most of the roads in the Highlands, but now known as the Foyers Hotel. At Foyers are the works of the British Aluminium Co. Limited. White Bridge is a small village in this parish, 12 miles north-east of Fort Augustus. The principal landowners are John Charles Cuninghame esq. D.L., J.P. of Johnstone, The British Aluminium Co. Limited, and Lord Lovat C.B., C.V.O., D.S.O. of Beaufort Castle. The area comprises 111,119 acres; rateable value, £14,938; the population in 1901 was 1,819.

CORPACH is a widely-spread but very populous village, in the parish of Kilmalie, on the north shore of Loch Eil, 3 miles north from Fort William, and is chiefly to be noticed as being the southern commencement of the Caledonian canal, which here enters Loch Eil by four locks, a little above are eight others, called Neptune's Staircase; these are capable of admitting vessels of 300 tons (not drawing above 12 feet of water), and each lock rises 8 feet. Kilmalie parish church, erected in 1784, is in the village, about half a mile from the end of the canal and near the church stands a pyramidal obelisk, of considerable height, with a large tablet of white marble at its base, to the memory of Colonel John Cameron, slain at the battle of Waterloo, 18 June, 1815, while commanding the 92nd Highlanders. At Corpach are United Free and Free churches. The road through Corpach leads to the district of Arisaig, about 35 miles distant, and to Moidart, Glenfionn and Loch Shiel. At BORRODALE, in Moidart, Prince Charles Stuart landed on the 25th of July, 1745. He sailed up Loch Shiel on the 18th of August, and on the following day landed and entered Glenfionn, where he was met by Cameron of Lochiel and Macdonald of Keppoch, with their clansmen. Commemorative of this circumstance, Macdonald of Glenaladale erected a monument at Glenfionn.

CROMDALE is a parish, see the adjoining county of Elgin.

CROY is a parish and small village, in Nairn poor combination and in the small debt court district of Inverness; the parish is partly in the county of Inverness and partly in that of Nairn, lying betwixt the river Nairn and the upper arm of the Moray Firth. The village is at the north-eastern extremity of the parish, 7 miles south-west from Nairn and 3 south from Gollanfield Junction on the Highland railway. There are Established and United Free churches. Cantray is the residence of Miss E. M. Davidson and Holme Rose, the residence of Mrs. Rose. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Arthur Forbes esq. of Culoden; Miss E. M. Davidson of Cantray; Alfred D. Mackintosh esq.; the Mackintosh of Mackintosh, Moy Hall; Hugh Francis Rose esq. D.L., J.P. of Holme Rose; Neil Donald Mackintosh esq. of Raigmore, and Col. Rose, of Kilravock. The area comprises 22,770 acres (of which 11,528 are in Nairnshire): rateable value, £3,060 (Inverness-shire portion) and £3,059 (Nairnshire portion); the population in 1901 was 1,149, of which 421 were in Nairnshire.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Croy; Mrs Christina Davidson, sub-postmistress. Letters from all parts arrive from Gollanfield at 11.50 a.m. & 2.30 p.m.; dispatches thereto at 9.10 a.m. & 12.40 & 5.30 p.m.

DAVIOT WITH DUNLICHITY form a united parish on the river Nairn, about 6½ miles south-east from Inverness by road and 11 miles by rail, on the line of the Highland railway from Inverness to Perth (via Aviemore): the parish is bounded on the north-west by the parishes of Croy and Dore, on the south-west by Boleskine and Abertarf, on the south-east by Moy and Dalrossie, and is about 25 miles in length in the small debt court district of Inverness; originally a part of the parish was in Nairnshire, but under a Boundary Order (Local Government (Scotland) Act 1889) it was transferred to this county. There is an Established church, and a Free church at Farr. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, at STRATHNAIEN, built in 1868, will seat 125 persons. Brin House is the residence of Capt. Charles Duncan Stewart. The principal landowners are the Mackintosh of Mackintosh of Moy Hall; Capt. C. D. Stewart; William Beardmore esq. of Flichity; Neil D. Mackintosh esq. of Raigmore; Harry S. C. Smithson esq. of Inverernie, and William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. of Farr. Aberarder, Farr and Croachy are hamlets in this parish. The area comprises 59,443 acres: rateable value, £10,912; the population in 1901 was 999.

DORES is a parish and village, on the eastern side of Loch Ness, bounded on the north by the parish of Inverness, on the south by Boleskine and Abertarf, and on the east by Daviot and Dunlichity; it is in the small debt court district of Inverness, and the village, which stands on the road skirting the loch, is 8 miles south-west from Inverness, the nearest railway station. There is an Established church, two United Free churches and a Free church. The remains of the vitrified fort of Dunyardill and Gorthleck, a small village, 15 miles north-east from Fort Augustus, are both in this parish. Steamers carrying mails and passengers leave Inverness daily (except Sundays), and call at Aldourie Pier, three-quarters of a mile from the village. A mail (motor) running between Inverness and Whitebridge leaves Dore at 8 a.m. and returns from Inverness at 1 p.m. Aldourie Castle is the residence of Major Edward Grant Fraser-Tyler J.P., D.L. The principal landowners are Major E. G. Fraser-Tyler, Lieut.-Col. James E. B. Bailie M.V.O., J.P. of Dochfour, and the trustees of the late Thomas Aitken esq. of Farraline. The area comprises 25,232 acres; rateable value, £6,638; the population in 1891 was 923, and in 1901, 835.

DUNLICHTY, see DAVIOT WITH DUNLICHTY.

DUTHIL is a village and parish, near the eastern extremity of the county, and the latter extending from Aberdeenshire, its southern boundary, about 20 miles northward to the counties of Elgin and Nairn; the parish of Moy and Dalrossie lies on the west, and Aberdeenshire on the east; a part of the parish of Cromdale was transferred by Boundary Order No. 112, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, to Duthil parish, which is in Nairo poe combination, and has four stations, viz.:—Aviemore, Carr Bridge, Boat of Garten and Broomhill, on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway; the Great North of Scotland railway also runs to Boat of Garten. The river Dulnan traverses the heart of the parish for nearly 12 miles, and the Spey flows along a considerable portion of the eastern border. The village, near the north bank of the Dulnan, and on the Inverness road, is about two miles east from Carr Bridge railway station.

ROTHIEMURCHUS is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Duthil: it is situated between the Cairngorm mountains and the river Spey, and is 1 mile south from Aviemore Junction station.

AVIEMORE is a district near the southwestern border of the parish, and has a junction station on a branch of the Highland railway to Inverness. Three miles from the station, near the foot of the Cairngorm mountains, is Loch-an-ellan, in the centre of which stands the remains of a castle once belonging to the Wolfe of Badenoch: although roofless, the walls are still practically intact. On a ruined turret in the western corner a pair of eagles have every season built a nest and reared a brood.

BOAT OF GARTEN is a small village on the river Spey, with a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Here is a public hall.

CARR BRIDGE, or "Bridge of Carr," is a small village in Duthil parish, and has a station on the main line of the Highland railway, from Perth to Inverness. Two and a half miles west of the parish church is the arch of the old bridge crossing the river Dulnan. Here is a public hall.

The principal landowners in the parish are Caroline Countess Seafield, of Cullen House and Castle Grant, and John Peter Grant esq. D.L., J.P. of Doune of Rothiemurchus. The area, including Rothiemurchus, comprises 78,693 acres; rateable value, £15,983; the population in 1891 was 2,431, and in 1901 was 1,788; in 1901 the ecclesiastical parish of Rothiemurchus had a population of 207.

FORT AUGUSTUS is a village and quoad sacra parish in the united parish of Boleskina and Abertarf, 30 miles north-east of Port William, and 33 south-west of Inverness, at the extreme south point of Loch Ness, and has a terminal station on a branch from Spean Bridge, begun in 1890 and completed in 1903, of the West Highland railway; the fort from which it took its name was built in 1729 by General Wade, as the central fort of three constructed along the line of lakes extending from Loch Linnhe to Inverness. Fort William, the southernmost, having been constructed some years before by General Monk; in 1745, Prince Charles Edward's forces took Fort Augustus, but in the succeeding year it was recovered by the Duke of Cumberland, and continued to be a military station until 1867, when it was sold to Lord Lovat, and shortly afterwards a Benedictine monastery was erected on its site; the moat and two of the bastions being left; the monastic buildings, including a cloister, were designed by Mr. P. P. Pugin, and include a church. There are also Established, Free and United Free churches. The Bathymetric survey of Loch Ness, completed in May, 1903, shows it to have a depth of from 300 to 750 feet, the descent on both sides being for the most part very steep, and the central portion flat; at one point a depth of 316 feet was reached at a distance of only 150 feet from the shore, the greatest ascertained depth being in the centre off Lower Lenie, where it is 751 feet from Glen Moriston, to within 2 miles of Abriachan, a stretch of about 12 miles; its general depth exceeds 700 feet, and an area of 500 feet in depth extends without a break from within a mile of Fort Augustus to Abriachan, the breadth varying from one-half to one-third of a mile; the bottom of the loch is nearly 700 feet below the level of the sea. The population in 1901 was 800.

FORT GEORGE, see ARDERSIER.

FORT WILLIAM is a town, port and police burgh in the parish of Kilmallie, in the Lorn poor combination, and is the head of a sheriff court; it lies a little south of the entrance to the Caledonian Canal, at the head of Loch Linnhe, 65 miles south-west from Inverness. The fort from which it takes its name, standing at the east end of the town, was originally constructed by Cromwell, in 1655, and rebuilt by William III. in 1690; it stood two sieges in 1715 and 1745, and up to 1854 was garrisoned by a company of a line regiment: after the Crimean war the 71st Highlanders and the Lancashire militia were successively stationed here, but in 1860 the fort was sold by the Government to Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Menzie; the former barracks were converted into dwelling houses, and the moat into gardens, but the whole has since been converted into a goods station for the West Highland railway. This place has been successively known by the names of Gordonsburgh, Duncansburgh and Maryburgh. The West Highland railway from Helensburgh has a station here, and a number of steamers ply daily to Oban, in connection with the railway there. Communication is also maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Orinan canals several times daily during the summer, and twice a week in winter. The chief industry is the distilling of whisky; the famous "Long John's Dew of Ben Nevis" being manufactured here, but the town is also the centre of a large sheep farming district. Fishing is carried on to a small extent, and the town is a place of very considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. A part of the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, affords good fishing. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834 by the Society for Promoting the British Fisheries, and by subscriptions, at an expense of about £1,500. The number of fishing boats belonging to the port in 1909 was 252 of 665 tonnage. The total value of fish landed in 1909 was £25,000. A suspension bridge of 250 feet span was erected over the river Lochy by the late Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000, but is now the property of the District Council. The town is lighted by electricity, and there is an abundant supply of excellent water. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. Fort William is governed by Police Commissioners. The sheriff substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session, and a justice of the peace court is held on the third Tuesday in April and the fourth Tuesday in October. St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, erected during the period 1875-84 on the site of the old church built in 1817, is an edifice of red granite, in the Early Gothic style, consisting of chancel, nave and a tower with spire containing 4 bells: all the windows are stained, and include memorial windows to Bishops Low, Ewing and Mackarness, of the diocese of Argyll and the Isles, and to Dr. Pusey, of Oxford: the church affords 250 sittings. The Rev. Kenneth Lyle Reid M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1904. The Established Church is a building in the Gothic style, with a manse and fine garden adjoining, and there is also a United Free Church with a manse. The Reading Room and Library were presented to the town by Mrs. Cameron Lucy as a memorial to her mother, Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Mezzie. On a rocky elevation known as "the Craigs" is an arch, once forming the entrance to the fort: here also within an enclosure is a fountain erected as a memorial to Daniel Stewart MacLaren esq. some time Procurator Fiscal, and on the summit of a rock stands a monument to Ewen MacLachlan of Lochaber, scholar and poet. In 1847 an obelisk of granite, 30 feet high, was set up by Sir Duncan Cameron bart. to his brother, Capt. Peter Cameron H.E.T.C.S. d. at Blackheath in 1843. In High street is a monument, erected in 1852, to the late William Kennedy esq. M.D.; in the garden of the Free Church manse is a marble statue of Dr. Chalmers, and on the Parade is a bronze statue of the late Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel. The Belford Hospital, erected and endowed in 1865, by the late Andrew Belford, of Glenfuitaig, for the inhabitants of Lochaber, is a plain but substantial building at the east end of the town, and will hold 30 patients. A Fever Hospital, for 8 patients, connected with this institution, was erected in 1894. The principal hotels are the Palace, Argyll, the North British Station, Caledonian, Imperial, Ben Nevis, Alexandra, and the West End. Markets are held at different periods throughout the year, and there are weekly auction sales of live stock. Fairs are held on the fourth Wednesday in March, the second Wednesdays in June and November, Tuesday after second Thursday in July, and Tuesday fortnight before Falkirk Tryst in October. Donald Walter Cameron esq. of Lochiel, Sir John M. Stirling Maxwell bart D.L. of Pollock House, Pollockshaws, Mrs. Cameron Lucy, of Callart, Mrs. Ellice, and the trustees of the late Lord Abinger are the principal landowners. The population in 1901 was 2,067; rateable value, £12,986.

GLENELG is an extensive parish on the coast, at the western extremity of the mainland, about 20 miles in length from north to south by a breadth of 10 to 15; it is divided into three districts, viz.—Glenelg, Knoydart and Morar by Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and is bounded on the north and north-west by the Sound of Sleat, on the north-east by the county of Ross, east by the parishes of Kilmornivaig and Kilmallie, and south by Arisaig and Moidart, and is in Lorn poor combination, and small debt court districts of Fort William and Inverness. The village is on Glenelg Bay, about 18 miles south-west from Stromie Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and about 16 miles by road and 8 by water south-east from Kyle of Lochalsh, the terminal station of the same line. The parish is hilly and mountainous; the most prominent heights are Ben Sreel (3,190 feet), The Saddle (3,317 feet), Drim Cosaidh (2,555 feet) and Daorben (3,341 feet). There are Established, Free and Roman Catholic churches. This place gave the title of baron in 1835 to the Rt. Hon. Charles Grant M.P., P.C. but it became extinct on his death, 23 April, 1866.

KNOYDART is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Glenelg; it lies between Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and contains the village of Inverie on Inverie Bay, 10 miles south-east of the Isle of Ornsay. Population in 1901, 960. Here is an Established church.

ARNISDALE is a village in the parish of Glenelg, situated about 13 miles south from the village of that name, on the northern shore of Loch Hourn.

MORAR is a district on the southern border of the parish; it lies between Loch Nevis and Loch Morar.

The principal landowners are Arthur Salvin Bowly esq. of Knoydart, James Evan Bruce Raillie esq. M.V.O., V.D., J.P. of Dalchour, Lord Lovat C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O., A.D.C., D.L. of Beaufort Castle, Rev. Robert Birkbeck esq. D.L., J.P. of Loch Hourn Head Glenelg, the trustees of the late J. L. Phinns and Sir Henry Hall Scott kt. of Ellenreach. The soil is various, some portions fertile, and agriculture and fishing are the chief occupations of the inhabitants. The area of the entire parish comprises 134,778 acres; rateable value, £7,983; population in 1901, 1,471.

INVERNESS

INVERNESS, the capital of the Highlands, and of the large county of its name, and the head of a poor combination, is situated on the banks of the river Ness, near to its confluence with the Beauty Firth, and commands the eastern approach to the Great Glen of Scotland (Glen-more-na-h'-Albyn). It is a great railway centre of lines from south, and to the east, north and the north-west. The distance by rail from Edinburgh is 195 miles N.N.W., via Fife, and 213 via Stirling; 108½ N. by W. from Aberdeen; 208 N. from Glasgow; 199½ N.W. from Dundee; 168 S. from Thurso; 144 N.N.W. from Perth; 25 S.W. from Forres; and 37 S.W. from Elgin. We learn from Richard's "Itinerary" (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170) that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the "Jus Latinatis;" only two others in Scotland are mentioned—Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Boethius assigns as the scene of Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect, and Shakespeare's play of "Macbeth" has served to make the place historically famous. It is supposed to have stood a short distance east of the town, upon an eminence called the "Crown," at the north-east corner of which there are still extensive remains. After the fall of Macbeth, Malcolm Canmore destroyed it, and erected a new castle, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up during the rebellion. The County Buildings now stand upon its site.

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, and in its great charter "its good and pleasant situation" is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh, for which it is said it received a charter in 1607 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. Its great, or, as it is called "golden" charter, is that which was granted by James VI. in 1591, and which confirms previous grants. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one, who have the management of considerable charity funds. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Nairn, Forres, and Fortrose, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail, with magnificence as a whole, uniting the characters of a rich, open, lowland country, with those of the wildest Alpine scenery, while to all is added a series of maritime views; the walks in the neighbourhood are picturesque, especially along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, along the sea shore, or by the margin of the canal; other points of interest are the singularly-shaped hill of Tomnahurich, or "hill of the fairies;" the summit of Craig Phadric; Druidical circles in the "Leys;" Clava, a literal "City of Tombs," and Drumossie Moor, where the last of the Stuarts, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," sustained his final defeat. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern part of the Ness—a broad, clear, and equably flowing stream—which is here crossed by a suspension bridge erected at the expense of the Government, and maintained by an annual assessment levied over the northern counties; this structure, costing £26,000, takes the place of the old stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1688, which, on the 25th of Jan. 1849, was carried away by the overflowing of the river. There are in addition two suspension bridges for foot passengers, the lower of which was opened on the 2nd of May, 1882: the stout wooden traffic bridge, erected in 1807 at the lower part of the town, which had done duty for nearly 100 years, was replaced at the end of the year 1895 by a modern lattice girder bridge 28 feet wide, the entire length being 350 feet, and costing about £7,000.

The principal streets in the business parts of the town are Union street, immediately opposite the railway station, High street, Church street, Academy street, Castle street, Queensgate, and Bridge street, which have fine public buildings and places of business. The Castle of Inverness was built in 1836 upon the site of the old castle erected by Malcolm Canmore, at a cost of £10,000, from the designs of Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh. It contains a court-room, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business. In the court house is a painting, by Raehurn, of the late Charles Grant, of Glenelg, long M.P. for the county; and in a niche of the staircase is a bust, by the late Patrick Park, R.S.A., of the late William Fraser-Tytler, of Aldourie, many years sheriff and convener of the county. The sheriff's ordinary court is held there every Thursday and the small debt court every Friday during session time, for the decision of claims for sums not exceeding £20. The County Council buildings adjoin the court house buildings, and are also in the Castellated style. His Majesty's Prison is in Porterfield road.

The Town Hall, which occupies the site of the old structure facing the Exchange, owes its origin to a bequest, in 1873, by Mr. Grant, of £5,000 for the purpose of aiding in its erection, which was accomplished between 1878 and 1882, at a cost of about £15,000; in 1905-6 an extensive addition was made at a cost of about £1,200. The style of architecture is Early Decorated Gothic, with details of a French character, and the building occupies an area of about 700 square yards, with a frontage of 73 feet to High street, and 120 in Castle street. It is mainly of two storeys in height, and has a richly ornamented central gable flanked by round towers, and surmounted by a spirelet; the main staircase is enriched with heraldic stained windows. The large Hall is 66 feet long, 35 feet broad and 33 feet high; the ceiling being panelled and richly decorated with heraldic emblems, and in the centre is an orchestral gallery with musicians' room behind. The hall is lighted by fourteen windows filled with stained glass bearing the arms of the Highland clans, and figures symbolical of Art, Science, Law, Agriculture, Education, Literature, as well as the Arms of the Corporate Trades of the burgh, and the Royal Arms of Scotland. There are also portraits of the late Prince Consort, Duncan Forbes, of Culoden, James Robertson, of Aultnaskiach, Sir Henry C. Macandrew, Alex. Ross LL.D., John Mackenzie, of Eilanach, Alexander Fraser, William MacBean, Arthur D. Ross and other former provosts; a fine copy of Ramsay's original portrait of Flora Macdonald, President Forbes, Hector Mungo, of Foulis, some time M.P. for the burgh, busts of the late Rev. Dr. Macdonald, the late Mr. A. Penrose Hay, some time chamberlain of the burgh, the late Dr. Carruthers, the late Major-Gen. William Macbean V.C. a native of the town, and Mr. William Mackintosh, a former provost. The colours of the now defunct 3rd Battalion Royal Regiment are suspended here. The building was formally opened by H.R.H. the late Duke of Coburg (Duke of Edinburgh) on the 19th Jan. 1882. A fountain, the gift of Dr. George Forbes, occupies the front of the Exchange. The time honoured palladium of the burgh—Clach-na-cuddin, and the ancient market Cross occupy a position in front of the Town Hall. Sir Walter Scott calls this stone the Charter Stone of the Burgh. The word is Celtic and means the "stone of the tubs," for it was here the young woman used to rest their tubs when coming from the river Ness, and around it the old burghers gathered for their social talk.

The Highland Club House is in High street. The Young Men's Christian Association, at the corner of High street and Castle street, was built at a cost of about £3,500, and consists of library, hall, and class rooms. The Theatre, in Bank street, was erected from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Lawrie, architects, late of Inverness. The Free Library, Museum, and Technical School, in Castle wynd, completed at a cost of £3,800, to which Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, contributed a donation of £2,000, was opened on the 14th October, 1881, by Joseph Mitchell esq. of Viewhill. The library contains 11,500 volumes, and is supported by a rate levied under the Libraries Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1887. The Northern Meeting held here annually in Sept. consists of noblemen and gentlemen in seven of the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands. This Association has rooms in Church street, and a pavilion and park: The Inverness-shire Farmers' Society, and numerous other institutions, hold their meetings in the town at stated periods.

The extensive range of military barracks, on the Hut of Health, about a mile to the north-east of the town, were completed in 1834, at a cost of about £50,000. Inverness is the depot of its territorial regimental district No. 73, the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders and the headquarters of the 3rd Special Reserve Battalion. The Territorial Force stationed in the town comprises the H Squadron 2nd Lovat's Scouts Yeomanry, the headquarters of the Inverness-shire Royal Horse Artillery Battery, the 4th Battalion Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders and A and C Companies of the regiment, the Highland Mounted Brigade Transport and Supply Column, and the Highland Mounted Brigade Field Ambulance Royal Army Medical Corps.

The Working Men's Club, in Bridge street, erected at the cost of the late Donald M'Dougall esq. has an extensive library, which includes books presented by H.M. the late Queen Victoria; it contains a reading room, billiard room and lecture hall, and is held in trust by the Town Council. The Northern Infirmary was erected in 1803, on the west bank of the river, between the Ness Islands and the town. The Inverness Forbes Dispensary for the sick poor, in Huntly street, is supported by voluntary contributions. The Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, in Ardenwell street, opened in March, 1881, at a cost of about £2,000, is available for 18 blind persons, who are taught to read and write, and do various descriptions of fancy and other work. The College, situated in Ardross street, on the west side of the town, was erected in 1873, at a cost of over £11,000, from designs by Mr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness. The Royal Academy, in Midmill's road, was established in 1792, for the purpose of supplying a higher education: the building, erected in 1894 at a cost of over £10,000, is of red sandstone, in the Elizabethan style. The Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's School, in Margaret street, was established in 1842, by a bequest of the late Dr. Bell LL.D. of Madras, and in 1888 transferred to the School Board. The High Public School, on Kingsmill's road, erected at a cost of about £8,000, is also managed by the local School Board.

The High Parish church, in Church street, is an ancient structure, rebuilt at the end of the 18th century, and having a tower and spire; St. Mary's Parish church is in the same street, and the West Parish church in Huntly street. The United Free High church, in Fraser street, is a modern edifice with a spire; North Free church, in Bank street, erected in 1893, is a building of stone, in the Gothic style, designed by Messrs. Ross and McBeth, of Inverness; East United Free church is in Academy street; West United Free church, in Upper Kessock street; the United Free church, in Ness bank; the Wesleyan Methodist chapel, in Inglis street; the Roman Catholic chapel, in Huntly street; St. John's Episcopal chapel, in Southside road, and the Episcopal cathedral, in Ardross street. The county of Inverness is divided between the sees of Moray and Argyll and the Episcopal cathedral of St. Andrew at Inverness has been constituted the head of the united diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness. The cathedral, finely situated on the west bank of the river Ness, was erected at a cost of over £20,000, the foundation stone being laid 17 Oct. 1866, by the late Dr. Longley, then Archbishop of Canterbury, and the edifice opened for divine service in Sept. 1869; it is built of light red sandstone from Conon quarry, near Dingwall, with dressings of Corveea freestone, in the Early Decorated style, from designs by Dr. Alex. Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of apsidal choir, transepts, clerestoried nave, aisles, octagonal chapter house and western towers; the length of the nave is 90 feet and of the choir and apse 60 feet; the width across the nave and aisles is also 90 feet, and the total length, measured externally, 166 feet; the towers, each 100 feet high, are arranged in four stages, with double buttresses at the angles, and the belfry storeys have a triplet of lights in each face; it was originally intended to add spires, but the towers are at present finished with a simple arcaded parapet; in the north tower is a fine peal, provided and hung by subscription, as a memorial to the Most Rev. Robert Eden D.D. Bishop of Moray, Ross and Caithness, 1851-86, and Primus of Scotland: there is a fine western doorway under a lofty triangular head, filled with open tracery and enriched with crocketing; the pinnacled buttresses on either side, as well as those of the tower, are ornamented with canopied niches, and some of these contain statues; the lower stage of the north tower forms a porch and has an elegant arched entrance, and the corresponding stage of the south tower serves as a baptistery, and contains a white marble font in the form of an angel holding a shell; the west end of the nave, between the towers, is enclosed by a stone screen, and above the crossing rises a graceful open lantern with crocketed spirelet. The choir stalls, erected in memory of the late Bishop Kelly, were completed in 1903 at a cost of £1,000, and are of Austrian wainscot oak.

Commerce, Trade, &c.—At the town harbour and Thornhush quay, and also at the Caledonian Canal wharves, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, potatoes, wool, timber, salmon, &c. The imports comprise timber, barley and oil seed cake. The total value of all imports in 1909 was £45,724, of which £19,189 was timber. The exports amounted in the same year to £9,207. In the foreign trade 31 entered of 8,338 tons and 3 cleared of 772 tonnage; the number in the general coasting trade during the year 1909 was 2,909 of 338,326 tons entered, and cleared, 2,974 of 352,220 tonnage. In the same year 105 vessels of 3,812 tons were registered and 518 fishing boats of 10,380 tonnage was registered as belonging to the port, requiring 3,002 men and boys to work them. There are ship and boat building yards, three manufactories for woollen cloths, a tobacco manufactory, two breweries, several abated water manufactories, two iron foundries, and three distilleries. The Canal basin has every facility for carrying on an extensive trade.

There are eight banking companies established in Inverness, and a savings bank. The premises of the Caledonian Bank, now (1911) the Bank of Scotland, erected in 1849, form a handsome building of freestone on the north side of High street. The following newspapers are published here: The "Inverness Courier," the "Northern Chronicle," the "Highland Times," the "Highland News" on Saturday, and the "Inverness Football Times."

The chief hotels are the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station; the Royal, opposite the railway station; the Caledonian, in Church street; the Waverley Temperance Hotel, in Union street; the Imperial, in Academy street; the Palace and the Alexandra, on Ness walk, the Union, in High street and the Queensgate (temperance) Hotel, in Queensgate. Inverness being the centre to which the principal lines of road in the Highlands converge—having the Caledonian canal on the one hand, and the Moray Firth on the other—maintains a rapid, frequent and easy intercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom. It is also the head quarters of the Highland Railway, whose large works afford employment to about a thousand artisans, besides numerous officials.

Markets and Fairs.—The Beauly, or Muir of Ord, are the most important cattle fairs, and are held on the Muir of Ord, on the third Thursday of January; on the third Thursday of February; the third Wednesday and Thursday of March; the third Wednesday and Thursday of April; the second Wednesday and Thursday of May; the third Wednesday and Thursday of June; the second Thursday of July, for half bred sheep; and the third Wednesday and Thursday for sheep and cattle; on the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in August; the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in September; the Wednesday and Thursday before Falkirk in October; the Wednesday and Thursday before Edinburgh Hollow fair in November; and the Thursday after the third Wednesday in December. At all the markets, Wednesday is the principal day for the sale of sheep and lambs, and is held exclusively for that purpose; and Thursday for the sale of cattle, horses, sheep, pigs, &c. The Inverness markets are held on Friday following the Muir of Ord markets.

ISLE OF ORNSAY, see SLEAT (ISLE OF SKY).

KILMALLIE is a parish, originally partly in Argyll, but altered by the Boundary Commission, and consisting of two portions, one on the east of Loch Linnhe, from Fort William south to Ballachulish, and the other westward of the Caledonian canal, from Achnacarry to Loch Quoich, the boundary parishes being Lismore and Appin on the south. Kilmonivaig on the north and Glenelg on the west; both are in the Lorn poor combination, and contain the burgh of Fort William (which see) and the villages of Ballachulish North and Onich. The parish church of Kilmallie is in Corpach village. The West Highland railway connects at Helensburgh with the North British railway.

Ben Nevis, the chief object of attraction in this district is the highest attainable point in the British Isles, being 4,406 feet above the level of the sea, and upon the summit the Scottish Meteorological Society erected an Observatory, opened in November, 1883, at a cost of nearly £6,000, but this is now closed. The ascent to the summit is rendered comparatively easy by a winding path or bridle road from the county road at Achintee, constructed and kept in repair by the directors of the Observatory. A charge of one shilling is made for each person who makes use of this path in ascending the mountain, and three shillings for each person on horseback. Those who wish to use the path are supposed to provide themselves with the necessary road-permits before starting, and to show them to the caretaker of the road. Many tourists ascend Ben Nevis at evening, in order to see the sun rising in the German Ocean. Should they be so fortunate as to attain the topmost region when it is fine, and unobscured by clouds or mist, the view will amply compensate for the toil. There are now upon the summit refreshment rooms, with sleeping accommodation, open during the tourist season.

Capt. Donald Walter Cameron of Lochiel D.L., J.P., Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. F.S.A., D.L. of Pollokshaws, and Mrs. Cameron Lucy, of Callart, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 205,482 acres; population in 1901, 3,797, of which 2,087 were in the burgh of Fort William; rateable value, borough, £12,074; and landward, £15,103.

BALLACHULISH NORTH is a village and quadraecra parish in the civil parish of Kilmallie, on the north shore of Loch Leven, about 12 miles south from Fort William. This place has a small Established church and also Free and Episcopalian churches. The population in 1901 was 466.

BANAVIE is a hamlet in this parish, terminus of a branch of the West Highland railway from Fort William, 3 miles distant, beautifully situated on the Caledonian canal, and steamers going north and south call here daily. The Lochiel Arms hotel here faces Ben Nevis, and is close to the pier. Population in 1891, 241.

ONICH is a village in this parish, one mile westward from Ballachulish North, at the entrance of Loch Leven, and contains several handsome residences. A steamer calls here daily.

ACHNACARRY is a hamlet on the west shore of Loch Lochy in this parish, and has an Established Mission church.

KILMONIVAIG is an extensive parish in the south-western part of the county, about 45 miles in length and varying in breadth from 5 to 25 miles; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ross and the parish of Glenmoriston and Urquhart, on the north-east by Boleskin and Abertarf, on the east by Laggan, south-east by Argyllshire, south-west by the parish of Kilmillie and east by Glenelg, and is in the Lorn poor combination. The kirktown is on the north bank of the river Spear, 9½ miles north-east from Fort William and close to Spear Bridge station on the West Highland railway, and has Established and Roman Catholic churches. Loch Lochy and Loch Oich form part of the Caledonian canal, which crosses the parish from Inverloch on the south-west border to Invergarry, at the mouth of Glen Garry, in the north-east. The parish is mountainous, the most prominent heights being Ceanna Mhaim, 2,203 feet, in the north; Ben Tue, 2,956 feet, and Ben Choire, 3,066 feet, below Glen Garry; Creag Meaghaiah, 3,700 feet, in the east; Agnach Beag, 4,060 feet; Stob Ben, 3,237 feet; Benna Lap, 3,066 feet, and Carn Dearg, 3,084 feet, in the north. A mile and a half north-east from Fort William is Inverloch Castle, rebuilt by order of the Scottish Government in the reign of Edward I. of England, by one of the Cumyn family, and the western tower is still called the Cumyn tower. The castle, as at present existing, comprises four large round towers, 30 feet high, connected by a wall, or screen, 20 feet high and 10 feet thick, the whole forming a quadrangle of large dimensions; the wall is in a fair state of preservation, but the towers are much decayed. Inverloch House is the seat of Helen, Lady Abinger. On the west bank of the river Lochy and east of the canal are the ruins of Tor Castle.

The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Lord Abinger (d. 1892), Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. F.S.A. of Pollok House, Pollokshaws, the Mackintosh of Mackintosh of Moy Hall, Inverness, and the trustees of the late Edward Ellice esq. M.P. (d. 1880). The area comprises 267,047 acres; rateable value, £29,651; population in 1901, 2,052.

GLENGARRY is a quoad sacra parish partly in this parish and partly in Glenelg and Boleskin and Abertarff, and is given under a separate heading.

KILMUIR, see ISLE OF SKYE.

KILTARLITY and CONVINTH, originally separate parishes, now form a united parish in the north-western part of the county, about 30 miles in length, bounded on the north-west by the parish of Kilmorack, on the east by Kirkhill and Inverness and on the south-east by Urquhart and Glenmoriston and is in the small debt court district of Inverness. The village is on Belladrum burn, about 5 miles south from Beaully station on the Thurso and Wick section of the Highland railway, and has Established, United Free, Free and Roman Catholic churches. Under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, Boundary Order 63, the parish now contains a part of Kilmorack. Beaufort Castle is the seat of Lord Lovat C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O. chief of the clan Fraser; and Ballindown, the property of Mrs. Clarke, is now occupied by Major F. Alhusen. Agriculture is the chief industry.

ERCHLESS is a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parishes of Kilmorack and Kiltarlity in this county and Kintail in Ross and Cromarty, and has an Established church.

STRUY, Hughton, Glackbea and Tomich are hamlets.

The principal landowners are Lord Lovat C.B., C.V.O., D.S.O. of Beaufort Castle, the Earl of Portsmouth, of Gaisachan, the Misses Chisholm, of Erchless, and Archibald William Merry esq. D.L. of Belladrum. The area comprises 64,947 acres; rateable value, £10,969; the population in 1901 was 1,919, and in the ecclesiastical parish of Erchless, 527.

KINGUSSIE and INSH form a united parish in the south-east of the county, at the head of Strathspey; the first mentioned is a small town and police burgh on the banks of the Spey, 740 feet above sea level, with a station on the Forres and Perth section of the Highland railway, 44 miles south-east by road, but 16½ by rail, from Inverness, and 25 south-west of Grantown. The parish extends 20 miles from north to south by about 3 to 10 in breadth, and covers an area of 104 square miles; some miles to the south-west is Tulloch station, on the West Highland railway. An iron bridge over the Spey, erected by the third or Badenoch District Committee of the County Council, was opened for traffic December, 1894. The Police Act was adopted by the burgh in 1867. Water is supplied by gravitation. An auction is held here by Messrs. Macdonald, Fraser and Co. Ltd. of Perth, in April and August, and two in October. The County Building here is used for the justices of peace courts for the district of Badenoch, and a sheriff small debt court is held in January, May and September. A newspaper called the "Kingussie Record" is published every Saturday. There are three burial grounds in the place, two of which are known to be of great antiquity, the walls of the churches to which they belonged still remaining. On the south bank of the river, opposite the village, stand the ruins of barracks erected by the English Government during the Scottish Rebellion, and burnt down in 1745, after being captured by Prince Charles Edward's forces. Here the clans, dispersed at Culloden, reassembled to the number of about 8,000 under Lord George Gordon. About five miles from Kingussie on the Perth road, is Invernahay Moor, celebrated for a hard-fought battle between the clans Macintosh and Cameron, and in which Cluny and the M'Phersons ultimately interfered. James E. B. Baillie esq. M.V.O., V.D., J.P. of Dechfour, who is the superior of the Burgh of Kingussie Sir John Macpherson-Grant bart. D.L., J.P. of Ballindaloch, Charles J. Brewster Macpherson D.L., J.P. of Balavil, and Albert C. Macpherson esq. J.P. of Cluny Castle, are the chief landowners.

NEWTONMORE is a village in this parish, 3 miles south of Kingussie, and has a station on the Highland line. There is an Established Mission church, and a United Free church, erected in 1897. The principal landowner is Charles J. B. Macpherson esq. D.L., J.P. of Balavil. Population in 1891 was 364, and in 1901, 478.

DALWHINNIE, 10 miles further south, near the head of Loch Erich, is partly in this parish and partly in the parish of Laggan, on the heights of the forest of Badenoch, and on the Highland road to Inverness from the south and 56½ miles from Inverness. There is a station here on the Highland line. The principal landowners are William H. Dunlop esq. J.P. of Doonside, Ayr, and Sir John W. Ramsden bart. D.L. of Ardverkie Lodge, Laggan.

The area of the parish comprises 114,379 acres; rateable value, £24,006, of which £7,256 is herbage; the population in 1891 was 1,914, including 740 in the police burgh, and in 1901, 2,194, with 989 in the burgh.

LAGGAN is an extensive parish and village in the district of Badenoch, extending from east to west, a distance of 13 miles and from north to south about 23, and bounded on the north by the parish of Boleiskine, Kingussie on the east, by the mountains of Perthshire on the south, and by Kilmornivaig on the west. The village is on the river Spey, 10 miles south-west from Kingussie, about 23 north-east from Fort Augustus, and 7 south-west from Newtonmore station on the Perth, Forres and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and has Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The river Spey, which takes its rise from a small lake of the same name in the western part of the parish, runs through in an easterly direction, receiving in its course the waters of the Mashie and Trium, both of which have their rise in the Grampians. Loch Laggan, a beautiful lake, extending about 8 miles in length by one in breadth, lies on the south-west extremity of the parish. Ben Alder, 9,757 feet, Ben Eibhann, 9,611 feet, and Beinn a' Chichain, 3,569 feet above sea level, are peaks in the Grampian Mountains. Dalwhinnie is partly situated in this parish and partly in that of Kingussie. Ardverrick Lodge, a shooting establishment on the south-eastern bank of Loch Laggan, is the property of Sir John W. Ramsden bart. D.L.; the lodge was erected by James, 1st Duke of Abercorn K.G. and was the residence of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria for about six weeks in the year 1847. Eight miles south-west of Kingussie, on the Fort William road, stands Cluny Castle, the seat of Albert C. Macpherson esq. J.P. The principal landowners are A. C. Macpherson esq. Duncan Macpherson J.P. D.L. of Glentruim, and Sir John W. Ramsden bart. D.L. of Ardverrick. The area comprises 151,000 acres; rateable value, £15,604; the population in 1891 was 857, and in 1901 was 738.

MOY and DALAROSSIE form a united parish in the north-eastern part of the county, 27 miles in length by a breadth of about 5 to 10 miles; bounded on the south-east by the parishes of Duthill, Alvie, Kingussie & Iush, on the west by Boleskine and Abertarff, north-west by Daviot and Dunlichity and north-east by the county of Nairn, and in the small debt court district of Inverness. A part of the parish formerly in Nairnshire has, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, boundary order 49, been transferred to the parish of Cawdor in that county. The village of Moy is on the south bank of Loch Moy, with a station at Moy, and another at Tomatin, both on the Aviemore and Inverness section of the Highland railway, and is 12 miles south-east from Inverness by road. There is an Established church both at Moy and Dalarossie, and a Free church at Findhorn Bridge. Moy Hall, a mile north-west of the village, is the seat of the Mackintosh of Mackintosh; Kyllachy House, of Lord Kyllachy, Glen-Kyllachie, of William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. D.L., J.P. and Tomatin House, of Lachlan McBean esq. and these, with Mrs. Mackintosh, of Balnespie and Clune, are also the principal landowners. Corrybrough House, Tomatin, is the residence of Herbert C. Malkin esq. The area comprises 105,939 acres; rateable value, £12,309; the population in 1891 was 730, and in 1901, 761.

ISLE OF SKYE

THE Isla of Skye is a large island off the north-western coast of the mainland of this county, from which it is separated by Sleat Sound and Kyle Rhea; Loch Aish, Kyle Aikie and the Inner Sound dividing its northern portion from Ross-shire. It comprises the parishes of Bracadale, Duirinish, Kilnair, Portree, Sleat, Snizort and Strath and the quad sacra parish and waterish of Stepehol. The village of Portree, on the east side, is the capital, and contains the sheriff's court, while the seven parishes form the poor combination of Skye. Its length from north to south is 45 miles, and its breadth varies from 5 to 20 miles; its shape is very irregular and its coast is deeply indented by sea lochs, the largest being Loch Snizort on the north, reaching about 8 miles into the land, Loch Eishart on the south-west, about 7 miles and Loch Duvegan on the west, about 6 miles; the first and last of these lochs divide the northern head of the island into 3 promontories, Duirinish Waterish and Trotternish, the latter and eastern being the district which is connected with the wanderings of Prince Charles Edward in 1746, and it also contains the two remarkable groups of mountains known as the Quirsing and the Storr Rock. The principal mountainous district in the island lies between Loch Eishart on the south of Broadford and a line drawn from Portree to Struan Inn, a little east of Loch Bracadale, and including in its south-eastern corner the Cuchallin Hills, which rise to 3,260 feet above sea level, and contain the celebrated wild fresh water loch of Cornisk, a sheet of water about 2½ miles long, entirely inclosed by lofty hills. There are many small rivers falling into the different bays and sea lochs (which latter include at least 16 large lochs). At Loch Slappin is the celebrated spar cava. The island was celebrated for its race of pipers, and a sort of college for pipers existed at Borreraig. Round the coast are a number of forts and castles, some of which are now ruins, but a few are still occupied, and of these the chief are Armadale, Duvegan, Duntuin, Knock, Castle Moll and Eilean Donan, while near the head of Loch Snizort stands the house of Kingsburgh, on the site of the old house to which Flora Macdonald, by the advice of Lady Margaret Macdonald, guided Prince Charlie when they landed from South Uist. The seven parishes (which include some small neighbouring islands) comprise an area of 428,966 acres, and the island is mostly in the hands of three large proprietors, who between them own about 300,000 acres. In 1901 the population of the seven parishes was 14,561.

The island is principally occupied as grazing farms, producing great numbers of sheep and black cattle and some small horses, but a large portion of the land is rented by what are termed crofters, who combine farming and fishing for a livelihood. Formerly great quantities of kelp were produced here; there are also marble quarries. The fisheries off this coast, especially in the sound between Skye and the mainland, are sometimes very productive. The coasts are indented with many fine and secure ports, the principal of which are Portree and Broadford on the east, the Isle of Ornsay on the south, and Duvegan and Stein on the north. At Broadford a stone pier, 700 feet long, was completed in 1892 by the Fishery Board at a cost of £10,000, and affords good accommodation. There is a steamer pier at Kyle Aikie and a ferry to the mainland, and a small harbour and pier at Uig in Loch Snizort. The fairs in Skye are held as follows:—May, Broadford cattle, Thursday after last Tuesday; Portree cattle, last Tuesday; August, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday; September, Broadford cattle, Thursday after third Tuesday; Portree cattle, third Tuesday.

BRACADALE is a parish, occupying the west side of the centre of this island, bounded west by the Little Minch, south by Loch Scavaig, east by Portree parish and north by Snizort and Duirinish; it is 20 miles in length from north to south by 10 in breadth and includes the islands of Soay and Wiay. Steamers from Oban call at Loch Scavaig with visitors for Loch Cornisk and Airis Cave. This parish is in the small debt court district of Portree and the Skye poor combination; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Struan, 10 miles north-west from Portree, and has Established, Free and United Free churches; in the parish are also the hamlets of Talisker, Drynoch and Carbost, at which latter place there is a distillery, but the principal occupation of the inhabitants is agriculture. At Kinlealey on Loch Eyoart is a burial ground, with ruins of two chapels, and at Trico, by the head of Loch Harport, are similar remains. The southern portion of the parish is occupied by the Cuchallin Hills, a group of mountains which rise to a height of 3,260 feet above the sea level, and enclosed in the irregular square formed by the inner sides of these hills, and about a mile from the head of Loch Scavaig, lies a sheet of water about 3 miles in length and half that in breadth, the hills surrounding which come down to the water's edge and show no signs of verdure or life, while an almost perpetual mist hangs over the tops and sweeps over the water, giving the whole a gloomy, deserted look; the struins waters fall over the edge of the hill into Loch Scavaig. Norman Magnus Macleod esq. C.M.G., D.L., J.P. (the Macleod) of Duvegan Castle, is sole proprietor. The area comprises 93,140 acres; rateable value, £4,088; the population in 1901 was 872.

DUIRINISH is a parish, in the north-west angle of this island, bounded south-west, west and north-west by the Little Minch, east by Loch Snizort and south by the parish of Bracadale; it extends 18 miles from north to south and its extreme breadth is 15 miles, but in the northern part it is cut into 3 headlands by the Lochs Follart (or Duvegan) and Bay. It is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree. The western portion of the parish is known as Duirinish, and has Established and United Free churches, and that to the east of Loch Follart is Waterish, which has also Established and United Free churches, and there is a Free Presbyterian church at Glendale; the former has some singular hills 1,500 feet high called McLeods' Tables and McLeods' Maidens. In the Waterish district there is a ruined church and burying ground, and at Trumpan, north of this, are the remains of a chapel, 51 feet long, with a burial ground, in which stands a roughly wrought pillar or shaft called the "Trying Stone of Trumpan;" here was buried the unfortunate Lady Grange, a Jacobite heroine. Edinbae and Duvegan are villages in this parish, and near the latter, which is 24 miles north-west from Portree, stands Duvegan Castle, the seat of the Macleod of Macleod C.M.G., J.P., D.L.; it stands on an elevated mass of rock on the shore of Loch Follart, and is said to date from the 9th century; the fabric was enlarged by Masdair Crochach in the reign of James VI. and contains some antiquities connected with the family. This parish was celebrated for its pipers, and young pipers were sent to study music under them. Kenneth Macleod Robertson-Macleod esq. J.P. of Gresheraish; the Macleod of Macleod C.M.G.; Nicol Martin esq. of Husabost House, Duvegan; Lord Napier of Magdala, Lyndale, Snizort, and Lient. Allan R. Macdonald, of Waterish, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 80,042 acres; rateable value, £5,663; the population in 1901 was 3,367.

KILMUIR is a parish, forming the north-eastern point of this island and the northern extremity of the district of Trotternish, and its kirktown is 18 miles north-by-east from Portree, and has Established, Free and United Free churches. The parish, which extends 12 miles from north to south, by a breadth of 4 to 7, is in the poor combination of Skye and the small dobt court district of Portree, and is bounded south by the parish of Skizort and on the other three sides by Loch Skizort and the Minch; a chain of hills runs down the centre of the parish, the northern portion, known as the "Quiraing," being remarkable for a collection of singular shaped peaks surrounding a turf platform, at the entrance to which is a tall needle-shaped rock; these hills lie 16 miles north of Portree and 5 miles to the north-west is Duntum Castle, the old residence of the Macdonalds, situated on a rock jutting out into the Minch and occupying, it is believed, the site of an old Viking fort. The Congested Districts Board of Scotland are the sole landowners. The area of the parish comprises 34,225 acres; the population in 1901 was 2,119.

PORTREE is a village, seaport and parish in the east centre of this island, and the head of a sheriff court and of the poor combination of Skye; it is the capital of the island and lies about 100 miles (via Invermoriston) west from Inverness, and 74 north from Tobermory; it is reached by steamer from Oban, or from Kyle of Lochalsh by railway steamer. The village is seated a little above the shore, at the summit of a somewhat steep acclivity, thickly planted with trees. There are three banking establishments, two good hotels and posting houses, the Portree hotel and the Royal, and a mill, built in 1850, for the manufacture of tweeds, plaids, yarns and carpets. The quay, erected in 1819, has been much improved by Lord Macdonald (who owns this part of the town), at a cost of £3,000, and is available for trading steamers and ships at all states of the tide, which rises from 12 to 16 feet; the bay is safe and spacious, having a depth of from 5 to 12 fathoms, and the anchorage is excellent. The exports are sheep, black cattle, wool, salt herrings, salmon (chiefly for London), and cod and ling, both salt and dry, principally for Glasgow and Liverpool. A sheriff court is held every Thursday during the session. On a high rocky promontory, projecting some distance into the bay, stands an octagonal tower, built in 1834, by Dr. Alexander McLeod, and affording a splendid view of the surrounding scenery. There are Established, United Free and Free Presbyterian churches. The Episcopal church of St. Columba is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, erected in 1884 as a memorial to the late Right Rev. J. G. R. Mackarness, Bishop of Argyll and the Isles, at a cost of about £2,500, and consists of chancel, nave, organ chamber, and a tower at the south-west angle containing one bell, and surmounted by a saddleback roof; there are 150 sittings; a rectory house was built in 1893, at a cost of £800. The Ross Memorial Cottage Hospital was erected in 1893 at a cost of about

RAASAY ISLAND is about 13 miles long and 2 to 4 broad, and lies to the east of Skye, opposite Portree, being separated from it by the sound of Raasay, which is about 4 miles wide. There are Free and Free Presbyterian churches. It is the property of Mrs. Evelyn A. Wood, of Raasay, who has a fine mansion in a bay near the south-western extremity of the island. To the north of a hill, called "Dun Caan," are the ruins of Brochel Castle, and at Clachan, on the southern point of the island, are the remains of the church of St. Moluac, a structure of Early Pointed date, with lancet windows and a square-headed doorway. The area is about 18,000 acres; the population in 1901 was 419.

RONA ISLAND lies off the northern extremity of Raasay, from which it is separated by a strait passable for small vessels. It is about 4 miles in length by 1 in breadth. The little arable ground which occurs in Rona surrounds a scattered village which lies at the bottom of the bay, and contains nearly all the population of the island. Mrs. Evelyn A. Wood, of Raasay, is sole proprietor of the island. There is a very fine lighthouse here. The population in 1901 was 161.

FLODDA, or Fladday, is a small island about 1½ miles long, lying off the north-west angle of Raasay. Mrs. Evelyn A. Wood, of Raasay, is sole proprietor of the island. The population in 1901 was 36.

SLEAT is a parish forming the south-east end of the island, and divided from the district of Moidart on the mainland by the Sound of Sleat and Kyle Rhea. The two villages in this parish are Ardvassar at the south end of the parish, and Isle Ornsay on the north-east, the latter being about 9 miles from Ardvassar. Its kirktown is about 10 miles south of Broadford, and has an Established church, built in 1681, and containing mural monuments to Donald Macdonald, of Armidale, d. 12 May, 1771, and Sir James Macdonald bart. d. 1766. There are also United Free and Free churches. The parish, which is in the poor combination of Skye and the small debt court district of Portree, is 21 miles in length from north-east to south-west by 5 in breadth, is bounded on the north by Loch Slapin and the parish of Strath. The small island of Ornsay, on the west side of the Sound of Sleat, is included in this parish. About 7 miles south of the village of Isle Ornsay, and half a mile from the shore, is Armadale Castle, the seat of Lord Macdonald, a large modern house standing in fine grounds, with a private pier close by, but only for small boats, and in a bay a little north of the village and 3 miles south from Isle Ornsay, are the ruins of Knock Castle. Lord Macdonald is the principal landowner. The area comprises 39,950 acres; rateable value, £3,194 14s. 4d.; the population in 1901 was 3,865.

SNIZORT is a parish and village on the east side of the island, bounded east by Raasay Sound, south by Bracadale and Portree parishes, west by Loch Snizort (a considerable arm of the sea to the west of the district of Trotternish), and north by Kilmuir parish; it is in the poor combination of Skye, and small debt court district of Portree; the kirktown lies at the head of Loch Snizort, 7 miles north-west from Portree, and has an Established, Free and United Free churches; and a Uig to the north west is a Mission church and an ancient burying ground. The Storr Rock, a remarkable pinnacle of rock about 3 miles from the east coast of the parish, standing 2,350 feet above sea level, can be visited either from Portree (7 miles) or Uig. On the west side of the parish, close to the shore of Loch Snizort, stood the old house of Kingsburgh, where Prince Charles Edward found shelter on his way from South Uist to Raasay. Kenneth L. Macdonald esq. J.P. of Skeabost, Lord Macdonald, of Armadale Castle, and the Congested Districts Board are the principal landowners. The area comprises 63,280 acres; rateable value, £3,843; the population in 1901 was 1,663.

STRATH (or Strathsworde) is a parish in the south-east portion of the island and contains the villages of Broadford, Kyleakin and Torrinn, the first of these being 24 miles south east of Portree, at the head of a small bay, and steamers call here as well as at Kyleakin; the parish is in the poor combination of Skye and small debt court district of Portree, and 16 or 17 miles in length from east to west, by 10 from north to south; it includes Pabbay and Scalpay Islands, and is bounded south by the parish of Sleat and north by Portree, the Inner and Cuchullin sounds forming the boundaries east and west. There are Established, United Free and Free churches, each with attached missions, and a Baptist chapel. A little east of Kyleakin are the ruins of Castle Moll; the kirktown is 7 miles north-west of Broadford, and there is a ferry from here to Loch Aish, on the mainland. A few miles south-west of Broadford is Kilechrist, where is a burying ground and the remains of a church of some size, a plain cross 5 1/2 feet long and several slabs. In the western part of the parish, on Loch Slapin, is Kilbride, where there are traces of a burial ground and a chapel, a rudely wrought shaft, 8 feet in height, and a well, called St. Annat's; at Ashig, between Broadford and Kyleakin, are similar remains, the well being covered in by a low structure formed of large stones.

Lord Macdonald, of Armadale Castle, R. L. Thompson esq. and Lady Currie, of Garth, Aberfeldy, Perthshire, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 71,411 acres; rateable value, £4,775; the population in 1901 was 2,152, of whom Scalpay Island had a population of 35.

BROADFORD contains valuable marble quarries. Fishing, as an industry, is now carried on to a very small extent.

THE SMALL ISLES

THESE isles, forming a parish, consist of the islands of Canna, Eigg, Muck, Rhum and Sandy; of these Eigg only was originally in this county, the other four having been transferred from Argyllshire by Boundary Order No. 91, under "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889;" these five islands lie off the coasts of Moidart and Skye in a curved line extending from north-west to south, and are divided from the large island of Skye by the Cuchullin sound. Rhum and Eigg can only be approached by boat from the eastern side, the heavy swell from the Atlantic rendering the western coasts inaccessible. The parish church is on Eigg Island, where there is also a Roman Catholic church and a Free Mission church; here also is the post office.

CANNA lies 5 miles to the north-west of Rhum, and is 18 miles in circumference;
it contains two open and neglected burial grounds, in one of which is a broken cross about 6 feet in height, and in the other some slabs and a column of red stone, and there are traces of the ancient church of St. Columba; at the east end rises Compass hill, a bold headland with perpendicular cliffs. The island is the property of Robert Thom esq. The population in 1891 was 40 and in 1901, 42.

EIGG is an island lying 4 miles southeast of Rhum and 7 south-west of the Promontory of Sleat, in the Isle of Skye;
the island consists of a mass of trap rock, slightly higher at the northern extremity and sloping to the south, where there is a singular conular rock of porphyry, about 1½ miles long,
runcing east and west, rising about 470 feet in height and narrowing at the top to 10 feet in width. There is also in this part of the island a cave, 225 feet long, in which in the 16th century the MacDonalDs, who then inhabited the island, took refuge when it was invaded by the Laird of Macleod, who by lighting fires at the entrance suffocated
the whole 200 to death; on the east side are remains of the ancient church of Kildonan, a rudely built structure, 56 feet in length, and containing a carved slab and an upright stone bearing a cross with squared centre and expanding arms within a circle. The area comprises 7,275 acres, and is wholly the property of R. L.
Thomson esq. Population in 1901, 211.

MUCK is a small island lying 4 miles southwest from Eigg and 15 miles north from Ardnamurchan point; it is about 3 miles long by 1 in breadth, is more level than the other islands and affords pasture for cattle; the principal occupation of the inhabitants is fishing. There are remains here of a small monastery, planted by St.
Columba early in the 7th century. This island is also the property of R. L.
Thomson esq. Population in 1901, 42.

RHUM island, the largest of the group, 8 miles in length and 6 or 7 in breadth, lies about 9 miles west of Sleat point and 15 north of Ardoamurchan point, and is wild and mountainous, the two principal peaks being Haskeval, 2,659 feet above sea level, and Benmore, 2,300 feet; at

Kilmory, on the north, is a small burial ground and traces of a chapel, a stone bearing an incised cross, and an upright slab of slate, inscribed to Catherine Henderson, d. 5 May, 1843, and her husband, Walter Cowan; the landing place is in Loch Sresort, on the eastern coast, and the island belongs to Sir George Bul-lough, of Kinloch Castle. The population in 1901 was 116.

SANDY, a small island lying to the south of Canna, close under Compass hill, is the property of Robert Thom esq.; the population in 1891 was 62, and in 1901, 44.

The area of the whole islands comprises
population in 1901 was 454.

URQUHART and GLENMORIS-TON form a united parish, on the western side of Loch Ness, about 28 miles in length by a breadth of 5 to 9, bounded on the north by the parish of Inverness, north and north-west by Kiltarity, south-west by the county of Ross, south by Kilmouivaig parish and east by Boleskine and Alhartarf and Loch Ness.

DRUMNADROCHIT is a village in this parish, near the mouth of Glen Urquhart, 14 miles south-west from Inverness and near to Temple pier, at which David Mac-Bryne's Royal Mail steamers, plying between Inverness, Fort William, Oban and Glasgow, call three times a week between October and June and daily during the season. At Urquhart are Established and United Free churches, and at KILMARTIN an Episcopal church.
The ruins of Urquhart Castle stand on a low rock projecting into Loch Ness, and Glen Urquhart, containing the estate of Balmacalan and its extensive deer forest, opens above the ruins; the mansion is now occupied by Bradley Martin esq.
The falls of DIVACH are about 2 miles south from Drumnadrochit.

MILTON and Lewiston are also villages in this parish, the former situated 1 mile west, and the latter one mile south from Drumnadrochit.

BALNAIN is a hamlet in the parish.

GLENMORISTON (or Invermoriston) is a quadra sora parish erected from the civil parish of Urquhart and Glenmoriston, 13 miles south-west from Drumnadrochit and 27 from Inverness, and has Established,
United Free and Roman Catholic churches.

The principal landowner in Urquhart is Caroline, Countess of Seafield, of Cullen House, Banffshire, and Ian Robert James Murray Grant esq. D.L. in Glenmoriston. The area of the entire parish comprises 122,705 acres; rateable value, £14,655; the population in 1901 was 1,828, and of Glenmoriston ecclesiastical parish, 329.

KINCARDINESHIRE

Occasionally called the Mearns (and improperly Mearns-shire) is a small county on the eastern coast, bounded on the north and north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the east by the North Sea, and the south and south-west by Forfarshire. Its form describes nearly that of a triangle, having its base resting on Forfarshire, with the apex at Girdleness, on the south side of the Bay of Aberdeen, from which to the mouth of the North Esk river is its longest side, being about 30 miles, while its greatest breadth (which is at the base) is 22 miles, narrowing to 1 mile at Girdleness; the north-west boundary line shows a projection occupying the middle third of the distance, and about 7 miles at its widest part. The area of the county comprises 3,812 square miles, 244,032 of land and 1,206 of water. In size Kincardine is the twenty-first of the Scottish counties, and in population the nineteenth; its population in 1891 was 35,492; and in 1901, 20,079 males and 20,844 females, or a total of 40,923. The inhabited houses in 1891 were 7,273 and in 1901 were, inhabited 8,743, uninhabited 728, and building 34. The population in 1911 was 41,007.

Name and Early History.—The shire takes its name from Kincardine, formerly a small town in the parish of Fordoun, and which was the seat of the county courts &c. until the year 1600, when they were removed to Stonehaven. Kincardine, which has dwindled to a mere hamlet, was formerly connected with an ancient seat of royalty called Kincardine Castle, of which only the foundation of the walls can now be traced. The phrase Mearns, before referred to, after strict investigation, is in all probability merely of local meaning; but it is generally said to have been affixed to this part of Scotland from its having become the property of Mernia, a brother of King Kenneth II., another brother called Angus conferring his name upon the neighbouring county of Forfar. In former times the hollow of the Mearns was the only passable access to the North of Scotland, owing to the hills occupying uninterruptedly all the rest of the breadth inland, except at this point, and it was the common passage for armies going to and fro since the earliest periods of history; yet, unless the great battle between Galgacus and Agricola took place here, as some historians aver, this county has not been the theatre of any extraordinary events, nor the scene of any great military achievements. The peasantry of the shire have always been considered a very able and industrious race of men; and the "men of the Mearns" is a proverbial expression of old date, implying trustworthiness and integrity.

Soil, Surface, Produce &c.—The county is almost exclusively of an agricultural character, for although it has the advantage of so extensive a range of sea coast, it possesses no harbour of any commercial importance. The soil of Kincardine is of a very productive kind, and is cultivated in a style nowhere surpassed in Scotland. The crops raised are oats, barley and turnips, and small fields of rye are to be met with. Attention is also devoted to the feeding of cattle, and on the hills numbers of black-faced sheep are reared. The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are oats, 27,955 acres; barley or bere, 11,147; wheat, 874; beans, 157; total of all corn crops, 40,224 acres; turnips and swedes, 16,690 acres; potatoes, 3,286; vetches or tares, 352; total of green crops, 20,355 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 13,218 acres; and (not for hay) 33,336 acres; permanent pasture, 12,169 acres. The total area of land is 244,032 acres, of which 48,992 are mountain and heathland (used for grazing) and 27,957 of woods and plantations. The live stock in 1910 included 4,199 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; 977 unbroken horses; 6,668 cows and heifers in milk or in calf; other cattle, 17,715; 18,514 ewes kept for breeding; other sheep, 29,332; sows kept for breeding, 440; other pigs, 1,846. The salmon fisheries yield a valuable rental, the fish being packed in ice and sent to the southern markets. The white or sea fishing employs many of the inhabitants, the species caught comprising whiting, cod, ling, halibut, turbot, soles &c. Herring fishing is prosecuted during July and August, and is a source of much profit, many persons being employed in the curing of the fish. There are no fishing boats registered in the county, but those used would come under the head of Aberdeen or Montrose. Manufactures as yet have not made much progress in this county, the principal being the making of woollens, flax and low spinning, and net rope and twine manufacturing. There are also one or two tanneries, breweries and distilleries. The county is destitute of coal, marl and limestone, all of which deficiencies bear hard upon agricultural improvement; these drawbacks, however, seem to have excited more strongly the spirit of enterprise amongst the agriculturists, who import lime in great quantities from other districts by means of the Firth of Forth. In Arbuthnot parish, and near St. Cyrus on the sea shore, beautiful pebbles and jaspers are found. The coast is partly flat and partly rocky, and at the north-eastern corner of the county terminates the chain of the Grampians, where they form what is called the Girdleness, which presents to the sea a bold face of rock from 60 to 80 feet high. The chief mountains and eminences are Mount Battoch, 3,465 feet in height; Clacknabue, 2,370; Clairiemount, 2,000; Kerloch, 1,890; the Hill of Fare from 1,500 to 1,700; Scolty Hill, 1,500; and Strathfanelia, a detached Grampian, from 1,200 to 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. The county in its more level parts is highly embellished by the country seats of its numerous resident proprietors, each amid its own thriving woodland.

Rivers and Railways.—In the south portion of the county the Luthar water and other smaller streams fed from the Grampians empty themselves into the North Esk, which debouches into the bay south of St. Cyrus; next come the Bervie, which has almost the nature of a loch and reaches the sea at Bervie town; then the Cowie, just north of Stonehaven, and the Carron issues at the same town; the Dee flows through the north-west corner of the county, and along the north boundary to Girdleness; the Dye water flows north to the Fensh at Strachan, and thus joins the Dee, and the Aven skirts the south-west border. There are no large lochs. The railways are two in number, both converging at Aberdeen, and passing through the county from south to north, and from west to north. The first is the Caledonian railway, which entering the county at Marykirk runs north-east to Stonehaven, and thence along the coast to the Dee, opposite Aberdeen. The second is the Deeside railway, which, leaving Aberdeen, skirts the north border and passes through the north-west corner, by Banchory on to Ballater.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Kincardineshire comprises 20 civil parishes; it contains within its limits a royal burgh—Bervie, and a police burgh—Stonehaven, besides many other smaller towns and villages. Bervie, in conjunction with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament, and the county one member. The county parliamentary constituency for 1911 is 7,169.

ARBUTHNOTT is a parish and village in Kincardineshire poor combination, the parish being nearly 5 miles in length; the village is 3 miles north-west of Bervie station, which is the terminus of a branch from Montrose of the North British railway, and is bounded on the west by Fordoun, and the great hollow of the Mearns, the streams of Bervie and Forthly forming the line of division, and on the north-west by Glenhervie and Kinneff. The present church of the Establishment was founded as early as the 13th century, and consecrated on the 3rd day of August, 1242, by Bishop de Bernham; the portion now in use comprises the nave and chancel of the old church; the chancel was for many years used as a place of sepulture by the Allardyce family, and a small chapel adjoining it, originally dedicated to the Virgin Mary, forms the burial place of the Arbuthnot family. The modern woodwork and galleries were consumed by fire in 1889, but have since been replaced. The celebrated Dr. Arbuthnot, the intimate friend of Pope and Swift, was the son of a former minister and a native of this parish. A district church was erected at FIDES in 1910. Here also is an Episcopal Mission church, served from Catterline. Arbuthnot has since 1641 given the title of viscount to a family of the same name which became distinguished in the 12th century, Sir Robert Arbuthnot, for his loyalty to Charles II., being created Baron Inverbervie and Viscount Arbuthnot by that monarch, and the present peer resides at Arbuthnot House. Acreage of the parish, 9,585; rateable value, £6,662; the population in 1891 was 795, and in 1901, 698.

Sub-Post Office, Arbuthnot; James Abraham Rainbird, sub-postmaster.

AUCHINBLAE AND FORDOUN

AUCHINBLAE, a village in the parish of Fordoun, is pleasantly situated on the banks of the Luthar water, 26 miles south-by-west from Aberdeen, 16 north from Montrose, 11 south-west from Stonehaven, 6 north-east from Fettercairn, 5 north from Laureneekirk, 3 west from Fordoun station on the Caledonian railway and in Kincardineshire poor combination. In consequence of the salubrity and pureness of the air and the many beautiful and romantic walks in the immediate neighbourhood, it is much frequented during summer by families from the sea-coast towns of Arbroath, Montrose, Stonehaven and Aberdeen. The town was lighted by gas in 1840, but the use of this is discontinued and paraffin oil substituted. The present parish church, erected in 1829, and standing on a high rock, is a large edifice in the Gothic style, with a western tower about 100 feet in height. The United Free church stands in the valley. The Episcopal church of St. Paladius, at Drumtochty, built in 1886, will seat 153 persons; the Rev. William Jennings M.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1910. A public hall was erected in 1870 by subscription, at a cost of £500. There is a distillery belonging to the Auchinblae Distillery Co. Limited, and branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited. A park, containing tennis courts, bowling green &c. on the Drumtochty estate, and close to the village, is open to the public. There is also a golf course of nine holes. Fordoun parish extends from east to west about 10 miles, and in breadth about 7. The southern part is level, but the north is mountainous, having a thin soil and inferior in fertility to the lower part. In the western part of the parish, about a mile north-east from Fettercairn, is Castleton farm and St. Catherine's burial ground, formerly part of the old town of Kincardine, which ceased to be the chief town of the county in the reign of James VI. when Stonehaven obtained that distinction. In the vicinity are the remains of the royal palace or castle of Kincardine, which appears to have been a royal residence previous to the death of Kenneth III. in 994; it stands on the termination of a small ridge at an elevation of about 60 or 80 feet above the adjoining plain, and affords a fine view of the most beautiful part of the Howe o' the Mearns. It was in this palace that John Balliol resigned his crown to Edward I. of England, July 2nd, 1296; in the 17th century the palace came into the possession of the Earl of Middleton, after whose decease it became ruinous, and was utilised as a quarry. Near to Fordoun House are distinct vestiges of a Roman encampment, and on the hill above Newlands are the remains of a pre-historic grave mound. About a mile west of Drumtochty Castle, in a retired and secluded glen, are the sites of several oratories and seven wells, one of which, a fine spring called "Brightwell," is considered to be among the most copious in Scotland. Paldy fair, for cattle and horses, is held third Friday in July, and an auction mart is held at Fordoun every Saturday for the sale of cattle &c. The population of the parish of Fordoun was in 1891, 2,004, and in 1901, 1,809, of which number 451 were returned for Auchinblae. The population of Fordoun ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,809; the area of the parish is 26,869 acres; rateable value, £18,918.

BANCHORY-TERNAN is a parish on the banks of the Dee, in Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehavan small debt court district. It is bounded by Durris on the east, Kincardine O'Neil on the west, Midmar on the north and Strachan on the south. The river Dee is here crossed by an iron truss bridge (1789-1829) of 175 feet span, and three stone arches. The village of Banchory, founded in 1805, stands on the north side of the Dee, 18 miles south-west of Aberdeen, and has a station about half a mile distant on the Deeside branch of the Great North of Scotland railway. In 1885 it became a burgh by adopting the police Act of 1862, and is governed by nine commissioners, with the usual officials under the Act. It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a Limited Company. The parish church, which stands at the east end of the burgh, was erected in 1824, and is in the Gothic style, with a tower and clock, and affords sittings for 1,250 persons. The United Free church, in the High street, erected in 1880, at a cost of £3,000, upon land given by Sir Robert Burnett, 11th bart. (d. 1894), is an edifice of pink and white granite, in the Early English style, with a tower 100 feet high, containing an illuminated clock; the church will seat 700 persons. There is also another United Free church. The Episcopal church of St. Ternan, built in 1851, will seat 166 persons. The Rev. William Watson Hawdon B.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1903. The Town Hall, a building erected in 1873, contains a large hall for entertainments. The Banchory Club and Library, held in the Town hall, was opened January, 1893; it contains over 1,000 volumes; a small annual subscription fee is charged to members. The Post Office is in the High street and was erected in 1910. There are branches here of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. A public park of about 16 acres was opened on the 3rd of August, 1887, the land for which was presented by the late Sir Robert Burnett bart.: it has been beautifully laid out, at a cost of about £800, and there is a large sheet of water, which in winter time is resorted to for skating and curling. On the road from the village to the railway station is an ornamental drinking fountain, erected in 1870 to the memory of Col. William Burnett Ramsay, of Banchory Lodge. The parish is finely wooded and contains several gentlemen's seats and residences. In the parish are two or three lochs, one of which was some time ago drained and brought under cultivation. The water supply for the city of Aberdeen is taken from the Dee at the western boundary of this parish, about 3½ miles above the village of Banchory. Inchmarlo House is the seat of Duncan Davidson esq. D.L., J.P.; Raemoir House, of Alexander E. Innes esq. D.L., J.P. and Riverston, of Miss Ramsay. About half-a-mile south of Banchory is the Bridge of Feugh, a place much frequented by visitors. The bed of the Feugh here is very rocky and the stream forms a picturesque cascade, and afterwards falls into the Dee. The cattle shows of the Deeside Agricultural Society are held at Banchory in July of each year. Auction sales for horses, cattle, sheep, pigs &c. are held fortnightly on Wednesdays. The parish contains an area of 20,079 statute acres; rateable value, £17,623, and of the burgh, £11,523; population in 1901, 3,449, the burgh containing 1,475.

CRATHES, 3½ miles east, is in Banchory parish and has a station on the Deeside railway. Crathes Castle is the seat of Col. Sir Thomas Burnett bart. D.L., J.P.

BRIDGE OF CANNY is 3 miles west.

BERVIE (or Inverberrie, as it is frequently written) is a parish and royal burgh in Kincardineshire poor combination, with a railway station on the Montrose and Bervie section of the North British line (there is also a station on the same line in the village of Gourdon); it is 13 miles north-by-east from Montrose, 10 south-by-west from Stonehaven and 25 south-by-west from Aberdeen, on the coast road from the last-named city to Dundee, and at the mouth of the Bervie, here crossed by a bridge of a single span of 103 feet. At the mouth of the river is a small basin, which opens into an extensive bay, navigable for vessels almost at any time. The principal trade of the town is the spinning of flax. The river is a fine stream, and in the driest season always has an abundance of water. The town is well lighted with gas, and the electric light has also been introduced into several of the public works. Bervie was constituted a royal burgh by charter from King David II. as a return for the kindness and hospitality with which he was received by the poor inhabitants, when he was forced in here by stress of weather, and the spot where he landed is still called Craig David. James VI. renewed the charter, confirming all the privileges and immunities granted by King David. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nine councillors. Together with Montrose, Arbroath, Brechin and Forfar, it forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted under the "Reform Act" of 1832, and returning one member. The sheriff small debt court, which used to be held in Bervie, is now removed to Stonehaven. Registration courts are still held once a year. There is a church of the Establishment and a United Free church. Gourdon is a fishing village, one mile from Bervie, and in 1901 contained a population of 1,197. The parish of Bervie comprises an area of 2,332 statute acres; rateable value: landward, £3,976 4s. 6d.; burgh, £4,658 16s. 8d.; and its population was in 1901, 2,523; of this number 1,207 were returned for the parliamentary burgh. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 200.

COOKNEY, including Netherley, Newton Hill and Muchalls, was created a quoad sacra parish and registration district in 1859 out of the northern side of Feteresso. The parish, bounded on the east by the German Ocean and on the south by Feteresso, is about 6 miles long from west to east and 4 miles broad, the soil along the coast being well cultivated and fertile, but there is much barren land to the west. Most of this was at one time common, but it was divided among the neighbouring heritors, and is now under cultivation and much improved. The parish church is 5 miles north-north-west from Stonehaven and about 3 miles from the village of Skateraw. There is also a United Free church at BOURTREBUSH. At Muchalls, which has a station on the Caledonian railway, is the Episcopal church of St. Ternan, built in 1831, and seating 276 persons; the Very Rev. William Hatt, who is also dean of Brechin and a canon of St. Paul, Dundee, has been rector since 1865. Here also is a coast guard station. Blackhills Cave here was explored in 1896, and found to consist of two large chambers. Muchalls Castle, formerly a residence of the Burnett family, but now the seat of Charles Morrison Pattullo esq. was built in the 17th century and is beautifully decorated. There are two fishing villages, Skateraw and Stranathro, in the parish. Population in 1891 was 1,984, and in 1901, 1,479.

Post & M. O. Office, Muchalls; William Watt, sub-postmaster. Letters from Stonehaven. Delivery, 9.30 a.m. & 3.35 p.m. (for callers only); dispatches, 2.50, 3 & 7.20 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. The telegraph office is at Muchalls station (8 a.m. to 7.30 p.m.; Sunday, nil)

Post Office, Netherley; Robert McLeod, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Stonehaven. Delivery, 10.15 a.m.; dispatch, 2.25 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. Muchalls is the nearest money order office & Stonehaven the telegraph office, 5 miles distant

DRUMLITHIE AND GLENBERVIE

DRUMLITHIE is a village in the parish of Glenbervie, 22 miles south-west of Aberdeen, 18 north from Montrose, 7 north-west from Bervie and about 7 south-west from Stonehaven, on the road to Laurencekirk, situated nearly in the centre of the east side of the county, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. Here also is a United Free church, and the Episcopal church of St. John the Baptist, to which is attached a Mission church at Arbuthnott; the Rev. George Laurence Bell, who is also priest in charge of and resides at Catterline, has been rector since 1895. The parish of Glenbervie, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, is upwards of 6 miles in length, by a breadth of 3 in some parts and 5 at others; it is bounded on the west by the Water of Bervie and Fordoun, on the east by Dunaanott and Feterresso, on the south and south-east by Arbuthnott and on the north by the hills of Strachan and Durris. The soil of the upper part of the district is of bluish clay, and in the lower a dry fertile loam. The northern portion of the parish lies partly among the Grampian Hills. The river Bervie bounds the district partly on the west, and the Carron has its source within it. The hamlet of Glenbervie, which stands in the vicinity of the former river, is a barony of the Douglas family, and has an Established church. In the churchyard are interred some of the ancestors of the poet Robert Burns. The parish of Glenbervie contains 15,041 statute acres; rateable value, £7,434, and had a population in 1901 of 871.

DRUMOAK, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Aberdeenshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

DUNNOTTAR, anciently spelt Dunfother, is a parish of an irregular form, the eastern side running from Stonehaven to the south, a distance of 5 miles, and from thence about 5 miles north; abutting on the parishes of Kinneff and Glenberrie, from thence descending to the Carron Water at the base of Carmont Hill, where Dunnottar and Glenberrie are met by the parish of Fetteresso. The seaward boundary of the parish is a continuous chain of rocks and cliffs containing many caverns, which render Dunnottar one of the most romantic places on the east coast. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination. The principal object of interest in the parish is Dunnottar Castle, within the walls of which formerly stood the parish church. It is seated on a perpendicular rock, 150 feet above the level of the sea, and about 3 acres in extent, and is almost separated from the land by a deep chasm. The oldest part of the present ruins, known as the Earl's tower, was built towards the end of the 14th century by Sir Robert Keith, whose ancestor led the cavalry at Bannockburn. During the Commonwealth the regalia of Scotland were placed for safety under the care of the Ogilvies, but the castle being attacked by General Lambert, the regalia, by the direction of Mrs. Ogilvie, were secretly removed to the manse of Kinneff, and then concealed under the flooring of the church, below the pulpit. After a siege by Cromwell's army of eight months' duration the castle was ultimately surrendered to the Cromwellians upon honourable terms in May, 1652; later it was used as a state prison, and the Convenanters' stone in Dunnottar churchyard preserves the memory of those who perished there. The castle was dismantled shortly after the rising of 1715, when its proprietor, George (Keith), Earl Marischal, was attainted for high treason. Since that period the castle became by purchase the property of Sir Alexander Keith, of Dunnottar and Ravelston, and is now the property of Alexander B. Innes esq. of Raemuir. The fabric is still fairly entire. Here is an Established church. The old town of Stonehaven is in this parish, which embraces an area of 7,783 acres; rateable value, 1910-11, landward, £7,644; burghal (Stonehaven), £5,164; the population of the parishes in 1891 was 2,739, and in 1901, 2,533. Letters are received from Stonehaven.

EDZELL, which is partly in Kincardineshire and Forfarshire, will be found with the information for the latter county.

FETTERCAIRN is a parish and village, the latter being 98 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 12 north-west from Montrose, 16½ south-west from Stonehaven, 11 north from Brechin, and 5 north-west from Laurencekirk, and situated on a small streamlet, a tributary of the North Esk. The parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Laurencekirk. The river is here crossed by the Bridge of Ganachy, which springs from the precipitous rocks on either side, at a great elevation above the water. The nearest railway station is Laurencekirk, 5 miles distant, on the main line of the Caledonian railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, at Fasque, built in 1847, affords 102 sittings; the living, value £200, has been held since 1903 by the Rev. Charles Frederic Arabin Wimberley M.A. of Durham University. In the village is a large public hall, containing a billiard room, reading room and library; here also is a branch of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and in the neighbourhood is a large distillery. In the village square stands the ancient cross of Kincardine. About a mile west is a ruin called "Fenella's Castle," in connection with which is a singular tradition concerning the murder of Kenneth III. by a powerful lady named Fenella, in revenge for the death of her son, who was slain by that monarch in rebellion. At one end of the village stands a graceful arch, erected to commemorate the visit of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and the Prince Consort, on the 21st September, 1861. There is also a fountain erected to the late Sir John Stuart Forbes, of Fettercairn, d. 27 May, 1886. The parish of Fettercairn lies at the foot of the lower range of the Grampians, and extends considerably into the Mearns; the soil on the west is light and sharp, with a small mixture of moss; on the east it becomes deeper and of a fertile clay loam. The name of the parish is derived from the said Fenella cairn or castle and the eminences or moraines in the vicinity. The principal landowners are Capt. Sir John Robert Gladstone bart. of Fasque, the Lord Clinton, of Fettercairn House, Col. Charles Melroy C.B. of The Burn, and the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. The parish incloses an area of 14,837 statute acres; rateable value, £11,254. Population, 1901, parish 1,390 and village 319.

FETTERESSO is a parish about 10 miles in length and between 5 & 6 in breadth, bounded on the south by the parish of Dunnottar, on the west by the parish of Durriss and Maryculter, on the north by Maryculter and Banchory-Denwick, and on the east by the German Ocean. There are two quoad sacra parishes within Fetteresso, Rickarton on the west and Cookney on the north; these parishes will be found under separate headings. The principal streams are the Carron and the Cowie, which run from west to east; the former divides the parish from Dunnottar for about 5 miles, entering the sea at Stonehaven; the latter has a similar course and termination. The parish church is within the borough of Stonehaven. An Isolation Hospital for the county was erected in 1903, and contains 19 beds, 16 cribs and 3 cots. The salmon fishery is carried on here. Fetteresso Castle is the seat of R. W. Duff esq. D.L., J.P. and was once the ancient abode of the Earls Marischal, but has since been altered. Urie House, a fine modern building, is the residence of Sir Alexander Baird bart. lord lieutenant of Kincardineshire. The greater part of the town of Stonehaven and also the village of Cowie are in this parish. The area of the parish is 27,535 statute acres; rateable value: landward, £24,215; burgh (Stonehaven), £18,041; the parish contained in 1901 a population of 5,409, of which 2,808 were in Stonehaven Police Burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,552. The total population included 9 officials and 120 inmates of Kincardineshire Combination Poorhouse.

GARVOCK is a parish south-east of Laurencekirk, its post town, which is about 2½ miles distant from the centre of the parish. Its length south-westward is fully 7 miles and its greatest breadth is about 4, embracing an area of 7,966 acres. It is bounded on the south by Marykirk, on the west by Laurencekirk and Fordoun, on the north by Arbuthnott, and on the east by Benholm and St. Cyrus, and is in the Laurencekirk small debt court district. The nearest stations are Laurencekirk, on the Caledonian railway, and Lauriston, on the North British railway, distant 2 miles. The parish church, a plain building, situated in about the centre of the parish, was erected in 1778. About two-thirds of the parish is under cultivation. On the summit of Garvock hill there are two large Druidical cairns. The parish of Garvock had, in 1891, a population of 415, and in 1901, 368; area, 7,966 acres; rateable value, £4,120.

JOHNSHAVEN AND BENHOLM

JOHNHAVEN is a seaport village, in the parish of Benholm, 14 miles south-west from Stonehaven and 4 south-west from Bervie, situated at the bottom of a hill between the coast road and the sea, and a little off the main thoroughfare between Aberdeen and Montrose, 29 miles south-west from the former town and 9 north-east from the latter, in the small debt court district of Stonehaven, with a station on the North British railway. It contains a sacking manufactory, and a flax tow spinning mill. The parish of Benholm, which is in Kincardineshire poor combination, forms a square of nearly 3 miles, lying on the shore of the German Ocean, bounded on the north by Bervie and on the south by St. Cyrus. The land is level on the coast, and the interior consists of hill and dale, and beneath the surface is deposited good freestone and limestone. There is an Established church, a chapel of ease and a United Free church; here also is a Masonic hall, and coastguard, lifeboat and police stations. The old tower of Benholm is still standing. The principal landowners are Miss Scott, of Brotherton Castle, the trustees of the late Lady Cranstoun, of Culver Lodge, Shanklin, Isle of Wight (d. 1899), and John Rust esq. of Benholm Castle. The area of the parish of Benholm is 4,891 acres; rateable value, £7,652; the parish contained a population of 1,552 in 1891, of which number 1,040 were returned for Johnshaven, and in 1901, 1,426 and 987 respectively.

LAURENCEKIRK is a parish and burgh, 93 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 10 north from Montrose and 14 south-west from Stonehaven, situated on the main road from Perth to Aberdeen, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. A sheriff small debt court is held three times a year, and the parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination. Formerly a mere hamlet, seated amidst an uncultivated tract of country, it is indebted for the consequence it enjoys at the present day to Lord Gardenstone, a judge of the court of session, who, in the year 1772, took it under his fostering care and patronage. In 1779 he procured for the place the privileges of a burgh and barony, with the right of holding a weekly market. The town contains a main street, nearly a mile in length, another parallel to it, and several smaller streets branching from these, the whole being well lighted with gas. It is governed by a burgh council and police commission, consisting of 9 members. A police court has been established and is held when occasion requires. The branches of the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited are established here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The parish, formerly called "Conveh," is 4 miles in length and 3 at its greatest breadth. A ridge of hills stretches through the whole extent, from east to west, sloping gradually to the north and south; the small river Luther passes through the district and numerous brooks intersect it. The name Laurencekirk is derived from the dedication of the old church to St. Laurence.

There are Established and United Free churches and a Congregational chapel.
The Episcopal church is dedicated to St.
Laurence, and the Rev. James Garden
Troup Weir M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been incumbent since 1910. In 1866
a public hall was erected by subscription, at a cost of some £1,400, called St.
Laurence Hall. There is a brewery here, and an extensive cattle auction mart. A fair is held on the first Wednesday in March (St. Anthony's fair—old style).
Horse market on the Monday before the first Friday in March. Cattle and grain markets are held every Monday throughout the year. The principal landowners are the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. and Mrs. Pearson, of Johnston Lodge.
The parish of Laurencekirk has an area extending over 5,612 statute acres; rate-able value, landward £4,566, burghal £5,383; in 1901 the population of the parish was 2,011 and the town 1,512.

KINNEFF, with which is incorporated the abrogated parish of Catterline, lies on the sea coast south from Dunnottar, and is bounded by Arbutnott on the west and Bervie on the south. It is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and extends from the Water of Bervie to the northern point, about 5 miles along the coast, which is exceedingly bold and rocky. The parish church is about 3 miles north-east from Bervie terminal station on a branch from Montrose of the North British railway; here also is a United Free church. At Catterline is the Episcopal church of St.
Philip, built in 1848, and seating 182 persons; attached is the Mission at Bervie-com-Gourdon; the Rev. George Laurence Bell, who is also rector of Drumlithe, has been priest in charge since 1910.
Upon the margin of the sea, not above 100 yards distant from the church, are the ruins of a castle. The old castle of Fiddes, also in this parish, and in a good state of preservation, is famous as the scene of the legend of Thrummy Cap, a poem written in broad Scotch, in 1796, by John Burness, a cousin of Robert Burns.
A lighthouse was erected on Tod Head in 1897. In Kinneff church the regalia of Scotland were deposited from 1651 to the Revolution, being ingeniously conveyed out of the Castle of Dunnottar, while besieged by General Lambert, by the direction of Mrs. Oglvie, and secreted under the flooring of the church, beneath the pulpit.
The area is 7,130 acres; rateable value,
£7,124; population in 1901, 899.

Post Office, Catterline; Miss A. Masson, sub-postmistress. Letters through Stone-haven arrive at 10.5 a.m.; dispatched at 2.35 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters.

LUTHERMUIR, see MARYKIRK.

MARYCULTER is a parish and village on the south side of the Dee, extending from that river to the Grampians, and is about 8 miles southwest from Aberdeen, and 1 1/2 south from Milltimber station on the Great North of Scotland railway; the parish is in Kincardineshire poor combination, and of an oblong form, being 6 miles in length by 2 in breadth, and containing an area of 7,826 statute acres. There are established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The land adjacent to the river is partly low and fertile, but southward it is uneven and rocky and stony. The district is well wooded, and here and there are some thriving plantations. The population of the parish in 1891 was about 1,024, and in 1901, 951. The area, as altered by the Boundary Commissioners, is 7,826 acres; rateable value, £7,854. St. Mary's Roman Catholic College, Blairs, was founded & endowed by Mr. Menzies, of Pitfodells, in the year 1829; the college has since (1903) been entirely rebuilt, and the Chapel of St. Mary added at a cost of nearly £40,000; there is an average of 100 students; Right Rev. Mgr. James McGregor, rector; Rev. John McKee, Rev. Alex. Bennett, Rev. Robert G. Russell, Rev. Frederick Pirrie, Rev. James Hughes & Rev. John Noonan, professors; Alex. NETHERLEY, see COOKNEY.

NIGG is a parish and village situated near the termination of the ridge of the Grampian mountains and bounded on the north by the river Dee, which separates the parish from Aberdeen, and on the south and west by Banchory-Devenick. It extends 4 miles in length by 2 in breadth. The village is distant 2 miles south from Aberdeen, and about 2 miles north from Cove station on the Caledonian railway, and has an Established church. The coast is bold and rocky, the north-east point, called "Girdiness," being a remarkable promontory, on the south side of the estuary of the Dee, and having a lighthouse. Near the small bay of Nigg are the ruins of the old parish church, dedicated to St. Fitticks. The district comprises the fishing village of Torry, which has a small harbour and a pier. Torry is now included in the city of Aberdeen for municipal, school board and parochial purposes, but for parliamentary purposes is in Kincardineshire. The Victoria Bridge, a granite structure, now spans the Dee and connects Torry with Aberdeen. Cove is also a small fishing village in the parish, 4 miles south from Aberdeen, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and has an Episcopal Church dedicated to St. Mary, which is served from Aberdeen; there is also an East Coast Mission Hall. The parish has an acreage of 3,982; rateable value, £14,142; population in 1891, 1,561, and in 1901, 1,513 in the civil and 10,914 in the ecclesiastical parish (which includes part of Aberdeen).

Post Office, Nigg; Mrs. Alexandrina Summers, sub-postmistress. Letters from Aberdeen arrive at 6.50 a.m. & 2.65 p.m. (callers only); Sunday, 6.50 a.m. & 10 to 11 a.m. (callers only); dispatched, 2.50 p.m.; Sunday, 10.50 a.m. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Victoria road, Aberdeen.

Post, T., M. O. & Telephone Call Office, Cove; John Mowatt, sub-postmaster. Letters from Aberdeen arrive at 7.50 a.m. & 1.45 p.m. (callers only); dispatched at 2.15 p.m.

ST. CYRUS, sometimes called Ecclesgreig, is a parish and village, the latter being 4 miles south-west from Johnshaven, between the coast and the road from Montrose, and having a station on the Montrose and Bervie railway. The parish, which measures 7 miles in length and 3 in breadth, lies partly on the sea shore, having Benholm on the east, Garrock on the north, and Marykirk on the north-west and the North Esk river washes part of its western boundary; the parish is in the small debt court district of Stonehaven. There are Established and United Free churches. General Siratton, a hero of the Peninsula and Waterloo, left legacies for the poor of the district. The charities also include the interest on £1,000, left by Col. Orr, and distributed as follows:—one-fifth to the poor, the other four-fifths for the oldest, youngest, shortest and tallest brides married in the Established church here. The principal landowners are Frederick Grant Forsyth Grant esq. D.L., J.P. of Ecclesgreig, the Earl of Kintore P.C., G.C.M.G. David Scott Porteous esq. D.L. J.P. of Lauriston Castle, James B. Grahame esq. and the trustees of the late Barron Grahame esq. of Morpie. The sea salmon fisheries along the coast of the parish are very valuable; the yearly rental amounting to about £2,800, and of the river fishings to about £1,500. The surface of the parish is pretty level, but is intersected with several glens and rivulets, and elevated in some places to little hills. More than three-fourths of it is arable. The burn in Den Finella forms a beautiful cascade by falling over a rock 63 feet in height. On a peninsular rock, the base of which is washed by the sea, stand the ruins of the Kame of Mathers, formerly the residence of the Barolay family. The Castle of Lauriston is also an ancient building. The parish, which contains limestone quarries and plenty of excellent freestone, has an area of 8,249 statute acres; rateable value, £13,957; and had a population in 1891 of 1,327, and in 1901, 1,223.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, St. Cyrus; Miss Jessie Cathro, postmistress. Arrivals, 7.10 & 11 a.m. & 5.10 p.m.; dispatches, 12.5 & 7.5 p.m.; sundays, 10.10 a.m. Letters from Montrose STONEHAVEN (or Stanehive) is a seaport and the county town of Kincardine and a police burgh within the parishes of Dunnottar and Fetteresso, 110 miles north-by-east from Edinburgh, 68 north-east from Perth, 66 south-south-east from Banff, 35 north-by-east from Arbroath, 23 north-east from Montrose, 15 south from Aberdeen and 10 north-north-east from Bervie. It is a favourite summer resort, being situate on a beautiful bay of the sea, within three-quarters of a mile of a station on the Caledonian railway, on the coast of the North Sea, at the mouth of the Carron stream, and flanked on both sides by lofty hills. The place, though not a royal burgh, is of considerable importance, and comprises the old and new towns; the former lies on the south bank of the Carron, adjacent to the harbour, in the parish of Dunnottar; the other on a peninsula, or angle, formed by the Carron and the Cowie, in the parish of Fetteresso, the two being connected by a bridge, forming a continuation of the road from the south to Aberdeen. The new town is laid out on a regular plan, having broad streets, with a square in the centre, in which stands a good market house, erected in 1827, and surmounted by a tower with spire 130 feet in height. The town hall, in Allardie street, opposite the market house, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £4,000; it is vested in the Council, and contains news, billiard and reading rooms. The harbour is a natural basin, sheltered on the south-east by a high rock which projects into the sea, and having on the north-east a quay that affords every facility for loading or unloading vessels. The shipping of the port is chiefly employed in the coal and lime trade, and occasionally in exporting grain. During the season herring fishing is carried on. The celebrated Royal Glenury Distillery is in the vicinity, and the manufacture of woollens is extensively carried on, besides which there is a tannery, where a large quantity of leather is produced, a brewery, and several net and rope and twine factories. Here also are two banking houses, two savings banks, and several good hotels. The sheriff ordinary court is held every Wednesday in time of session. A newspaper, the "Stonehaven Journal," is published here every Thursday. The Established Church of Dun-nottar is situated near the town, that of Fetteresso being within the borough boundary. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches in the town. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. James, and the Rev. William Leslie Christie M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1890. There are cemeteries at Fetteresso and Dunnottar, both about one mile distant. A weekly grain market and cattle sale is held on Thursday. Fairs: May 27th, feeing; November 27th, feeing. Annual holidays: Second Monday in May, last Friday in June and second Monday in September. The principal landowners are Sir Alexander Baird bart. D.L. of Urie; Robert William Duff esq. D.L. of Fetteresso; Rev. W. D. Innes, of Cowie; W. H. Ritchie esq. of Dunnottar; H. O. Ritchie esq. of Netherley, and Lieut-Col Lewis L. Nicol, of Newton hill. The population of Stonehaven was in 1891, 4,500, and in 1901, 4,577; rateable value, £23,205.

STRACHAN parish is bounded on the east by Durris, Glenbervie and Fordoun, on the south also by the latter parish and Fettercairn, on the west by Lochlee and on the north by Banchory Ternan, in the Kincardineshire poor combination and Stonehaven small debt court district. The village is distant $\frac{3}{4}$ miles south from Banchory. The parish is 11 miles in length, by from 7 to 9 in breadth, containing an area of 41,672 statute acres, and is for the greater part a mass of hills, some of which belong to the range of the Grampians. Clochnabane, more than 2,300 feet high, rises within the parish, the land of which is low towards the north, on which quarter it is bounded by the Dee, where it is tolerably well cultivated and some of it planted, strawberries being extensively grown. The river Feugh passes through this parish and falls into the Dee at Banchory. The village is 4 miles from Banchory railway station, and has Established and United Free churches. Population in 1901, 626; rateable value, £6,048.

KINROSS-SHIRE

THIS small inland county formed the north-western quarter of Fifeshire up to the year 1426, and at the Revolution (1689) was enlarged by the addition of Orwell, Cleish and Tulliebole, which parishes before that period formed a portion of Fifeshire; Perthshire being its northern boundary, and Clackmannan on the western border. In figure the county takes the form of a square, although the line of its boundary is very irregular. It extends from east to west about 13 miles; and from north to south about 11 miles. The total superficies of the county amounts to 81.9 square miles, or 52,410 acres of land, and 3,439 of water; in the county are seven lakes; of cultivated land there are 35,350 acres, and of uncultivated 3,093 acres. This is the smallest of the Scottish counties except Clackmannan, and in population numbers the least. Its name is significant of its local situation, importing the "Head of the peninsula." The population in 1891 was 6,280, and in 1901, 6,981 (3,342 males and 3,639 females), and the inhabited houses in 1901 were 1,752, against 1,705 in 1891.

Soil, Surface, Produce, &c.—The boundaries or outskirts of the county are generally hilly; and the shire may be described as an open vale or plain, environed by uplands and hills. The Ochil hills, which separate the district from Strathearn, are the northern boundary; the Lomond hills are the eastern; Benarty hill the south-eastern, and Cleish hills the south and south-western. These eminences are generally adapted for pasture and the rearing of cattle; but they are likewise in several places suited to cultivation. In the Ochil range, Slungie hill is 1,354 feet, and Tillery 1,787, while Benarty is 1,131 feet above sea level, and Dumglow, in the Cleish range, 1,241. The original condition of Kinross resembled that of the contiguous county of Fife, having been of a moory, mossy nature. Up to a comparatively recent epoch the lands were bleak and unreclaimed—a circumstance partly attributable to a certain local characteristic—namely, the remarkable peculiarity in its proprietary of being much divided into farms, each owned in feu by its tenant; there are, in consequence, more resident lairds in proportion to its extent in this part of the country than are to be found in any other division of Scotland. The farms, it appears, were feued about the commencement of the 18th century from the house of Kinross to the tenants then in possession, whose descendants inherit the properties, paying for them an exceedingly trifling duty or quit-rent. The marches of the various farms not having been accurately defined, and being more confused by the practice of "runrig," it was long before the county manifested any very active signs of improvement. Within the recollection of persons still living, few districts were worse cultivated, or less profitable than Kinross-shire; but the prime minister Pitt's institution of rack-rent taxation, in conjunction with other circumstances (among which undoubtedly may be included the good example exhibited by neighbouring agriculturists), ultimately induced a spirited change; and now the progress of agriculture—the mode of draining, inclosing and planting—can compete with those of Fife and most other districts. Drainage, on an extensive and effectual system, has been carried into operation on the Carse, east from Loch Leven, and on its margin; in all directions in this particular quarter productive arable fields present themselves, in place of desolate moors and sombrous moosa. Oats and barley are the crops most cultivated, but great attention is paid to the growing of turnips and potatoes. The chief crops as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are oats, 6,187 acres; barley or bere, 364; total of corn crops, 6,710 acres; turnips and swedes, 2,486 acres; potatoes, 793; total-green crops, 3,406; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 3,126 acres, not for hay, 9,190; permanent pasture, for hay, 795 acres, not for hay, 12,316 acres. The total area of land is 52,410, of which 12,094 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 2,022 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 was: horses, used for agriculture and brood mares, 835, unbroken horses, 76; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 1,456; other cattle, 5,123; ewes kept for breeding, 14,177; other sheep, 19,158; pigs, 650.

At this day many good roads intersect the shire, and various parts of it are sheltered by thriving plantations. The manufactures of the county are only of moderate importance, and consist chiefly in the weaving of linen fabrics, and the making of plaids, tartan shawls, and other woollen goods. The only mineral raised in 1909 was coal, 85,640 tons (which includes Peebles-shire), and 13,001 tons of igneous rock.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—There are no rivers of magnitude in this county; the only ones that can be named are the Gairney, on the southern boundary of Kinross parish; the South Quelch, that runs below the town of Kinross; and the North Quelch, on the northern border of the parish—all which, and a few rivulets besides, discharge themselves into Loch Leven. This beautiful and noble expanse of water (for which see Kinross town) lies at the east end of a wide vale, and nearly in the centre of the county; the small river Leven issues from it, and pursues an easterly course through Fifeshire. Besides Loch Leven there are a few minor lakes, or (as they are properly termed) tarns, on the eminences above Cleish. The railways (part of the North British system) consist of a line coming from Alloa and entering the county near Rumbling Brig, which at Kinross is joined by another line which runs up north from Dunfermlie through Keltie and Gairny Bridge, and the united line sweeping round the north end of Loch Leven, leaves the county at Burnside.

Kinross-shire contains only five complete parishes, and has only two towns, Kinross, with a population in 1901 of 2,138, and Milnathort, with 1,052 persons. The county, which has no parliamentary burgh, joins with Clackmannanshire in returning one member to parliament. The parliamentary constituency of Kinross-shire in 1911 numbered 1,758.

BLAIRINGONE is a hamlet and a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parishes of Fossoway and Tulliebole in this county. Clackmannan and Dollar in Clackmannanshire and Muckhart in Perthshire, and is 2½ miles south-east from Dollar station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. The church is a plain edifice of stone, built in 1836, and the interior has since been refitted at considerable expense. It was chiefly owing to the liberality of the late Mr. Wylee, of Ardean, that the parish was endowed, and at his death he bequeathed a further sum to increase the value of the living. The population in 1901 was 469.

Post Office, Miss Margaret McDonald, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Dollar, Clackmannanshire. Delivery, 8.45 a.m.; dispatches, 9.55 a.m. & 2.30 p.m.; no delivery on Sunday. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Dollar, 3 miles distant.

CLEISH is a parish and village; the parish on the southern border of the county, is oblong in form, about 6 miles in length by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north by the parish of Kinross, on the east and south by the county of Fife, and on the west by Perthshire, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross; the village is 3 miles south-west from Kinross, 7 north from Dunfermline, 2½ south from Balado (Cleish road) station on the Devon Valley and Stirling section, and 2½ north-west by west from Blairadam station on the Dunfermline and Perth section of the North British railway.

MARYBURGH is a hamlet 4½ miles south from Kinross; the mining village of Kelty Bridge is at the southern end of this parish, but the village of Kelty is entirely in the parish of Beath, county of Fife-shire.

BLAIRADAM is a railway station and a hamlet on Kelty water, 4½ miles south-east from Kinross. There are quarries of freestone in the parish, and coal is extensively wrought on the estate of Blairadam, which occupies a large part of this parish and of Beath and Dunfermline, and is the seat of Sir Charles Elphinstone Adam bart. D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are Sir C. E. Adam bart. and William Young esq. A range of hills, called Cleish hills, runs along the western end of the parish, affording fine pasturage for sheep. The rest of the soil is under tillage, which is the chief employment of the inhabitants. The area comprises 6,403 acres; rateable value, £9,895; population in 1901, 631.

CROOK OF DEVON, see FOSSOWAY.

FOSSOWAY and TULLIEBOLE form a united parish in the western part of the county, bounded on the north by the parish of Forquardenny on the east by Orwell and Kinross, south by Cleish and the county of Fife and on the west and north-west by the counties of Clackmannan and Perth; it is in the small debt court district of Kinross and has two stations, Crook of Devon and Rumbling Bridge, on the Devon Valley and Stirling section of the North British railway. A part of the parish was formerly in Perthshire, but under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889 (boundary order No. 120), a large portion was transferred to this county; the remainder was retained in its original county, but attached to the parish of Glendevon. The parish contains two small rural villages, named Blairingone and Crook of Devon; the latter is on the river Devon, 6 miles west from Kinross, and has a railway station. There are Established and United Free churches. POWMILL and CARNBO are hamlets in the parish. At Powmill is a Public Hall, erected in 1910 by Mrs. Moubray, of Naemoor, Rumbling Bridge. About 2 miles from Crook of Devon, following the course of the river, and about 7 from Kinross, is the celebrated Rumbling bridge, and a little further on is the equally famous Cauldron Linn, noted also for the picturesqueness of the surrounding scenery, and since the opening of the Devon Valley railway the locality has become much frequented by tourists. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.M.G. P.C. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 15,796 acres; rateable value, £14,231; population in 1901, 1,046.

KELTY BRIDGE, see BEATH (FIFE-SHIRE).

KINNESSWOOD, see PORTMOAK.

KINROSS is a town and police burgh, nearly in the centre of the county, and a parish, extending 6 miles from east to west by 5 from north to south, and is bounded south by Fifeshire, north by the parish of Orwall, east by Portmoak and west by Fossoway. The town, which has two stations (Kinross junction and Loch Leven) on the North British railway, is 27 miles north-west from Edinburgh (via Forth Bridge), 19 south-west from Cupar-Fife, 17 south from Perth and 10 north from Dunsferriess, and is the head of a sheriff court district, courts being held every Tuesday during session; it stands at the foot of the vale of Kinross, on the shore of Loch Leven, with the North road running through it, and formerly consisted of one main street and several ancient looking lanes, but has been partly rebuilt and much improved. The Town Hall was built in 1868. The County Buildings, in which the courts are held, were erected in 1826, at a cost of £2,000, and a police station has since been added. The parish church is a modern building in the Gothic style; there are also two United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected in 1875 and consecrated in 1881, and affords 150 sittings; the incumbency has been held since 1910 by the Rev. Edward William Millar B.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. The public Free Library, the gift of Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. was erected, with museum attached, in 1905, on a site presented by Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. and has a reading room and lending department of upwards of 3,000 books. The Isolation Hospital is situated at a little distance from the town. A golf course has been laid out near the Kinross Junction Railway station. The Royal Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Co. Bank have branches here. There is a woollen spinning mill and a linen power loom factory in the town, and shawl weaving is carried on. The "Kinross-shire Advertiser" newspaper is published here every Saturday. At the bamlet of Tillyochie, in the parish, and 3 miles distant from the town of Kinross, there is a woollen spinning mill. Kinross House, the property and residence of Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. is a mansion designed and built by Sir William Bruce, the architect of the modern part of Holyrood House; it stands near the northern entrance to the town, and close to the landing place from Loch Leven Castle, the ruins of which occupy a prominent position on an island at the north-west end of the loch; this castle is best known as the prison of Queen Mary, who owed her escape from it to the devotion of George Douglas, a son of Lady Douglas, who as wife of the custodian of the castle was virtually the Queen's jailer; George Douglas arranged a series of signals with the Hamiltons and her other adherents, and bringing her by boat to the landing place near the churchyard, threw the castle keys into the loch, and placed the Queen, 2nd May, 1568, in the care of her friends; in 1805, a number of keys, supposed to have been those thrown into the loch, were found near this landing, and eight small keys of antique make were also discovered nearer to the castle. The first mentioned are now in the possession of the Earl of Merton, the others being in the Antiquarian Museum at Edinburgh. The loch is twelve miles in circumference, and contains four islands, the largest of which occupies nearly 100 English acres; upon this latter stood the ancient priory of St. Serf (or St. Servanus), and there are still remains of a church, apparently of Romanesque character, with an internal length of 21 ft. 6 in. and 14 ft. 6 in. wide. There seems to have been a still earlier monastic foundation, and an abstract of the chartulary of this house is in the register of the priory of St. Andrew's, to which David I. about 1145, granted the island of Lochleven. The loch is stored with trout of a red colour and first-rate quality, besides eels, perch, pike &c. The excellent sport obtained, and the other attractions of the locality, draw a yearly increasing number of visitors. The fishing season begins on the 1st January and closes on the 31st August. Rod fishing begins generally in April, for which there is an ample supply of boats on the loch. The general appearance of the country is hilly and for the most part agricultural. Sir Basil T. G. Montgomery bart. of Kinross House, and Alexander Percy Haigh esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,582 acres; rateable value, £16,114 (not including railway rate); the population in 1901 was 2,656, including 2,136 in the burgh.

MILNATHORT is a large village in the parish of Orwell, and a station on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline to Perth section of the North British railway; it is on North Queich water, 2 miles north from Kinross and 9 north-west from Leslie.
 The local government is carried on by a committee of the inhabitants. There are two places of worship, the parish church and a United Free church; the latter, erected in 1868, at a cost of £3,000, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and has a tower with spire 125 feet high. The Public Hall, standing in the centre of the village, also has a tower with spire and containing a clock. A weekly sale of live stock is held on Monday at the auction mart, adjoining the railway station, and a corn market is also held on the same day. A feeling market is held here in October.
 The Clydesdale Bank Limited has a branch here. The Reid Memorial School was founded by Mrs. Reid, of Thomanean, in memory of her late husband; there is also a public school. The population of the village in 1901 was 1,052.

ORWELL is a parish, on the northern border of the county, about 7 miles in length by a breadth of about 4; it is bounded on the south by the parish of Kinross and Loch Leven, on the west by Fossway and Tulliebole, north by Perth-shire, and east by the county of Fife and the parish of Portmoak, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross.

The parish contains the large village of Milnathort (which see), 2 miles northeast from which is the Mawcarse Junction station, on the Edinburgh and Dunfermline and Perth section of the North British railway, for the Kinross and Lady-bank branch. Middleton, Dalquhich and Seggie are hamlets in the parish, from 1 to 2 miles distant from Milnathort. The parish is bounded on the north by Forgardenny and Arngask, on the east by Strathmiglo and Portmoak, on the south by Fossway and Kinross, and by Fossway on the west. Here are Established and United Free churches. The greater part of Orwell is fine arable land, well inclosed and planted. The Ochil Hills Sanatorium, an establishment for the treatment of consumption and other forms of tubercular disease, has been erected at a cost of £40,000, on an elevated plateau 800 feet above the sea level, and about 3 miles north-west from Milnathort. It stands on a dry and gravelly soil and is protected on the north, north-east and northwest by wooded hills, the principal front being directly south. The building comprises 60 bedrooms for patients, all with a southern aspect, dining, drawing and writing rooms, a library and various apartments for medical treatment. Baths of different kinds are provided on each corridor. The attached estate includes miles of beautiful walks amid sheltering pine trees, and within walking or driving distance there are many places of great historical interest and natural beauty.
On the low ground, towards Loch Leven, stands the ruins of the ancient castle of Burleigh, formerly the residence of the Lords Balfour of Burleigh. Hattonburn is the seat of Henry Purvis-Russell-Montgomery esq. D.L., J.P. Mrs. Purvis Russell, of Warroch, and John Horn esq. D.L. of Thomanean, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,133 acres;
rateable value, £18,684; population in 1901, 1,822, of which 1,092 were in the village of Milnathort.

PORTMOAK is a parish on Loch Leven, extending 6 miles north to south by a breadth of 2 to 4 miles; it is bounded on the north by Strathmiglo, on the east by Leslie and Kinglassie, on the south by Auchterderran and Ballingry, and on the west by Kinross and Orwell, and is in the small debt court district of Kinross. Kin-nesswood is a village in the parish, on the east side of Loch Leven, 5 miles east from Kinross and 2½ south-east from Mawcarse Junction station on the North British railway. The village is famous as the birthplace, 27 March, 1746, of Michael Bruce, a Scottish poet of note; the house in which the poet was born, and in which he died, 6 July, 1767, has been restored. Scotlandwell is also a village in the parish, 5 miles west from Leslie and 3 south-east from Mawcarse Junction station. Balgedie is a hamlet 3 miles south-east from Milnathort. Besides the parish church, there are also two United Free churches, one at Portmoak and the other at Easter Balgedie. Bishophill, the western peak of the Lomonds, is in this parish, and occupies a large portion of the area in the north-east. This hill is 1,150 feet above Loch Leven and 1,492 feet above sea level, and contains lime and freestone.
Wells of pure water are numerous on the west side of the hill, and in one place, near Scotlandwell, there are three, with a copious flow of water. Andrew Winton, the chronicler of Scotland, was a native of this parish, which, for twenty-eight years was under the charge of the Rev.
Ebenezer Erskine, one of the founders of the Secession church. Sir Basil T.
Graham-Montgomery bart. of Kinross House, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 9,957 acres; rateable value,

KIRKCUDBRIGHTSHIRE,

A COUNTY in the south-west of Scotland, on the Solway Firth, and the only remaining "stewartry," or district, once governed direct by the king by means of his steward (or steward); the name, however, is all that exists of this ancient jurisdiction, the district being treated in all respects as the other counties, the county occupying the eastern portion of the ancient district known as Galloway; Wigtownshire being the other part on the west. It is bounded by Dumfriesshire on the east and north-east; on the south by the Solway Firth; by the county of Ayr on the north and north-west, and by Wigtownshire and Wigtown Bay on the west. In extent it measures, from south-east to north-west, about 44 miles, by a breadth varying from 20 to 30 miles; the narrowest part being on the north and towards its north-western limits; it comprises 8,993 square miles, or 575,565 acres of land and 6,665 of water. About 192,100 acres is under cultivation. This shire in point of size is the eighth, and in population the nineteenth of the counties of Scotland. The population in 1891 was 39,985, and in 1901 consisted of 18,753 males and 20,630 females, total 39,383; the inhabited houses being 8,432 in 1891, and in 1901: inhabited, 8,576; uninhabited, 764; building, 34.

Early History.—After being overrun by the Strathclyde Britons, who appear to have dislodged the Picts and Scots, who originally came to this district from Ireland, it was colonised by the Romans in 79 A.D., when they crossed the Solway Firth; these retired in 410 and the Cumbrian Britons took possession of all the west country, with their capital at Dumbarton; this connection with Cumbria continued for some time. In Kirkcudbright town Edward I. spent some time during the warfare of 1300, when he subdued Galloway, of which this stewartry then formed a part, and in 1455 it was visited by James II. in the course of his march through Galloway. A few years later, in 1461, Henry VI., with his queen and court, fled thither after his defeat at Towton; and in 1508 James IV. was hospitably entertained in the town. Queen Mary spent her last night in Scotland at Dundreunan Abbey.

Soil, Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—The soil of the county is principally composed of loam mixed with sand, incumbent sometimes on gravel, and in many places on rock. Four of the most northerly parishes—Carsphairn, Dalry, Kells and Balmacellan—are commonly designated the district of "Glenskens." If a line be drawn from the centre of Kirkpatrick-Irougray parish to Gatehouse-of-Fleet, all to the north-west, with little exception, is mountainous; while the south and east parts exhibit a fine champaign and cultivated country. The principal eminences in the shire are Criffell (or Crawford), 1,867 feet; Cairnsnuir, 2,331; Cairnsmore, 2,612; Corscreeve, 2,663, and Merrick, 2,764 feet above the level of the sea. The ancient forest formerly covering this district can now only be traced in trifling remnants on the banks of the streams. It appeared that, so early as the 12th and 13th centuries, this hilly territory was under a productive process of agriculture, originated and improved by the monks of the different abbeys in the district; and it is upon record that in the memorable year 1300, when Edward I. subdued Galloway, he caused considerable quantities of wheat to be exported from the harbour of Kirkcudbright to Cumberland, and even to Dublin. In these times the staple products were wheat and oats, the culture of barley, peas and beans being very limited. In the 18th century measures were adopted to improve its agricultural capabilities, and the inclosure of the land with fences was the first attempt; but this judicious preliminary was encountered by a riotous opposition from the population, who rose in considerable numbers, under the title of "levellers," and proceeded to demolish the newly formed boundaries; and they were not subdued until the most energetic measures were employed. The county subsequently steadily advanced, and towards the close of the century the district could compete with adjacent shires in agricultural prosperity. Planting has been introduced by several noblemen and gentlemen of the stewartry, and much has been accomplished in reclaiming moss lands. The principal cereal grown is oats, and turnips and potatoes are also cultivated.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are oats, 25,631 acres; total of all corn crops, 25,736 acres; turnips and swedes, 11,359 acres; potatoes, 1,506 acres; rape, 725 acres; total of green crops, 13,794 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 10,002 acres; (not for hay), 43,384 acres; permanent (for hay), 13,915 acres; (not for hay), 85,816 acres. The total area of land is 575,565 acres, of which 339,273 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 19,708 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised 4,066 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 2,534; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 18,523; other cattle, two years and above, 11,487; one year and under two, 13,348; under one year, 8,636; ewes kept for breeding, 164,336; other sheep, 227,353; one year and above, 72,806; under one year, 156,675; sows kept for breeding, 732; other pigs, 8,793. The number of horses, cattle and sheep reared in the county is moderately large, and the breed of horses known as Galloways has given way to others of a large and stronger variety; while for dairy purposes the Ayrshire cattle are gradually superseding the black Galloway cow. Sheep and swine have considerably increased in numbers.

The district is very nearly destitute of coal, which, as well as the greater part of the lime used, is brought from Cumberland. In 1909, as shown by the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics," 41,626 tons of igneous rocks (which includes granite) were raised, value £19,650; brick clay was also raised to the extent of 7,100 tons. Marl is found in great plenty, especially in the loch of Carliuark, which contains an inexhaustible store of the best shell marl. The mineral wealth of the county consists chiefly in its granite, which is extensively wrought in the neighbourhood of Dalbeattie and Creetown, and for the polishing of which there are works at both places. Besides the salmon fishings at the mouths of the rivers, the Solway Firth affords good fishing; the boats employed in which are registered in the adjoining county of Wigtown. The manufactures are of small value, and consist principally in the making of woollen goods.

Rivers, Railways, &c.—The stewartry is intersected by numerous streams, which, uniting, form four considerable rivers; these are—the Dee, the Ken, the Cree, and the Ure. The Ken is considered the largest, joining the Dee below Loch Ken and then debouching at Kirkcudbright Bay. All these rivers rise in the north, and empty themselves into the Solway Firth or the Irish Sea. The smaller streams are the Fleet, the Tarf, the Deogh, and the Cluden. The Solway Firth, in a circular form, washes the coast of the stewartry, from the Nith to the Cree, a space of 45 miles; and along the shore of this estuary the coast is bold and rocky, the cliffs in some instances rising to a great height. The Glasgow and South Western railway work this county, running a line from Dumfries, via Dalbeattie and Castle Douglas, to New Galloway, with a branch line from Castle Douglas to Kirkcudbright. From Castle Douglas the Portpatrick and Wigtownshire Joint railway runs to Newton Stewart, Stranraer and Portpatrick, which connects with the steamers for Ireland and Stranraer.

Divisions, Representation, &c.—The shire, or stewartry, comprises 23 civil parishes, and 32 whole and 3 parts of ecclesiastical parishes; these latter being included in the presbytery and synod of Dumfries and the presbytery of Kirkcudbright (with a few in that of Wigtown), synod of Galloway. There are 2 royal burghs, Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, and 5 police burghs (Castle Douglas, Dalbeattie, Gatehouse, Maxwelltown and New Galloway). Kirkcudbright and New Galloway, in conjunction with Stranraer, Wigtown and Whitburn (in Wigtownshire), formerly sent one member to Parliament, but under the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," these towns were included in the counties to which they belong. This county returns one representative. In 1911 the parliamentary constituency numbered 5,963.

NEW ABBEY is a parish and village, in the stewartary and poor combination of Kirkcudbright, and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated near the mouth of the Nith, is 6 miles from Killywhan station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 80 miles south from Edinburgh, 12 north-east from Dalbeattie, 30 north-east from Kirkcudbright, and 7 south from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded on the east by the Solway Firth, originally called Kirkindeer, takes its modern name from the Cistercian abbey, founded here in the 13th century, by Devorgilla, daughter of Alan, Lord of Galloway, and wife of John Balliol, of Barnard Castle, co. Durham, the founders also of Balliol College, Oxford, and parents of John Balliol, King of Scotland. The ruins, which occupy an area of 240 by 150 feet, include the piers and arches of the church: the area being used as a burying ground. The extreme outer walls, or precincts, enclose about 14 acres. On the north and south lie the woods of Shambellie, and on the south Loch Kinder, and the dark braes of Criffel, the lofty hill of which rises to the height of 2,000 feet above the sea, from which it is a mile distant. Besides that of Kinder, there are two other lakes in the parish, namely, Lochend and Lochaber. The old parish kirk, built with part of the material of the abbey, stood on the north side of the ruins. The present parish church, built in 1876, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and about 1836 was redecorated at the expense of the congregation. On the Glen Hill, a continuation of the Criffel Range, is a monument, erected in commemoration of the battle of Waterloo, 18 June, 1815. It is 50 feet in height, enclosing a winding stair, and on the base is an inscription. The St. John's Lodge, No. 162, of Freemasons, New Abbey, and the Sweetheart Lodge of Odd-fellows, also of New Abbey, hold monthly meetings here. Kinharvie House, the residence of the Duchess of Norfolk, and Shambellie House of William Stewart esq. are in this parish. The Duchess of Norfolk, Richard Alex. Oswald esq. of Auchincroive D.L., J.P. and vice-lieut. of Ayrshire, and William Stewart esq. of Shambellie, are the principal landowners. The parish of New Abbey comprises an area of 13,175 acres; rateable value, £3,347; the population in 1891 was 866, and in 1901, 957.

BESWING is a small hamlet in the parish, about 6 miles north-west of New Abbey village, and 3 from Lochanhead station, on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it contains an United Free church.

AUCHENCAIRN is a quoad sacra district, in Rerrick parish, the village being 8 miles south from Dalbeattie station on the Dumfries and Castle Douglas section of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 3 south from Castle Douglas, 10 east from Kirkcudbright, and 21 south-west from Dumfries, on the main road between the two last-named towns. It is much frequented during the summer months for its excellent bathing. Mines of barytes, copper and ironstone were at one time worked here with success. In the village are two hotels, which afford excellent accommodation. At the mouth of Auchencairn Bay lies the small and lofty island of Heston, which affords excellent pasture for sheep, and also harbours a great number of rabbits. There is an Established church and a United Free church, erected in 1844, and re-constructed in 1876 at a cost of £1,400; it now seats 460. The principal landowners are Mrs. E. N. Mackie, of Auchencairn House, William Douglas Robinson-Douglas esq. of Orchardton, and John Fortune esq. of Bengain House. Population in 1901 was 720.

BORGUE is an agricultural parish and small village in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, on the west side of Kirkcudbright Bay, and is bounded on the west by Wigtown Bay. The village is about 5 miles south-west from Kirkcudbright station on the Glasgow and South Western railway and 6 from Gatehouse, and has Established and United Free churches. A flower show is held annually in August; president, Rev. William J. Pennell. This was the birthplace of William Nicholson, a Galloway poet, to whom a monument was erected in the village in 1901. Sir Charles Edw. Gordon bart. of Earlston, East Crescent street, North Sydney, N.S.W.; Capt. John Hope R.N., D.L., J.P. of St. Mary's Isle; James Brown esq. of Knockbrix, and Andrew Pringle esq. are the principal landowners. The island of Ross, which stands at the mouth of Kirkcudbright Bay, belongs to this parish, and has a lighthouse. Acreage, 13,503; rateable value, £12,388; population in 1901, 1,045.

BUTTLE is a parish in the poor combination of Kirkcudbright, 5 miles from Dalbeattie station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 18 south-west from Dumfries, 14 north from Kirkcudbright, and 6 south of Castle Douglas. The parish is bounded on the east by Urr, on the south by the Solway Firth, and on the west by Kelton, and is a fertile and agricultural district, 8 miles in length and 3 in breadth. Palnackie (or Garden), the principal village in this parish, is on the Water of Urr, where there is a good harbour, having at ordinary spring tides a depth of 30 feet of water, and capable of receiving vessels of 200 tons. The parish church, built in the year 1819, is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a Norman tower; the ruins of the old church still remain. William Douglas Robinson-Douglas esq. of Orchardton House, Auchencairn; William Jardine Herries Maxwell D.L., J.P. of Munches; Wellwood Maxwell esq. J.P. of Kirkennan; Major William Francis Maitland-Kirwan and Major John M'Kie D.S.O., D.L., J.P., of Ernespie, are the principal landowners. The parish contains an area of 11,442 acres; rateable value, £11,437; population in 1901, 870.

CARSETHORN, see KIRKBEAN.

CARSPHAIN is a parish and village on the river Deugh, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district. The village is 10 miles south-east from Dallmellington terminal station (in Ayrshire), on a branch from Ayr of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 13 north of New Galloway and 32 north of Kirkcudbright, and has Established and United Free churches. The parish is somewhat extensive, but mountainous and thinly populated, and is bounded on the east by the Ken water, on the north by Ayrshire and on the west by the Polmaddie Burn and Loch Doon, and is chiefly devoted to grazing. This parish, together with the parishes of Dalry, Kells and Balmaclennan, forms the district of Glenkens—famed for its true breed of black-faced sheep and black cattle, as well as for good horses of the Galloway breed. Mrs. McAdam, of Craiggillan, and Col. the Hon. Augustus Munray Cathcart, of Kirkby Malzeard, Ripon, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 54,742; rateable value, £9,524; population in 1901, 351.

CASTLE-DOUGLAS is a quoad sacra parish, town and burgh of barony in the parish of Kelton, and poor combination and Commissary Court of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western and Portpatrick and Wigtonshire railways, 90 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 18 west by south from Dumfries, 15 north-east from Gatehouse, and 10 north-north-east from Kirkcudbright. The town is situated on the road between Gatehouse and Dumfries, in a pleasant, fertile district, on the banks of the Carlingwark loch, and derives its chief importance from its weekly markets and extensive auction sales; it was originally a village, but in 1792 was erected by the proprietor, Sir William Douglas, into a burgh of barony, and is now governed by a Town Council. Castle Douglas and its vicinity appear to have been the arena in ancient times of many hostile encounters, when the ancient Douglasses dwelt in the castle of Threave, and were lords of the district; and on the west side of the town are remains of encampments and breastworks, thrown up against the castle; on the south-west bank of the loch is a spot termed the "gallows lot," or "plot," said to have been the place of execution in former times. Near the head of the lake lived, it is said, a blacksmith named M'Kim, or M'Min, and his sons, who, according to tradition, made the large cannon called "Mons Meg," shown at Edinburgh Castle, forged by them at Buchan Croft, near Carlingwark House. Threave House is the residence of Col. William Gordon D.L., J.P. The Town Hall, in St. Andrew street, is a building of red sandstone erected at a cost of £1,200, and was enlarged in 1907; and here a police court is held on the first Tuesday in each month. The Diamond Jubilee Cottage Hospital in Academy street, erected by public donations, amounting to over £2,000, was opened in 1899 and is available for 12 patients. In the town are branches of the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited; there is also a Savings Bank, established in 1840. Castle Douglas parish church, near Carlingwark loch, built in 1868, and enlarged in 1881, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and affords 720 sittings. The Episcopal church of St. Ninian, erected in 1874, is a building of whinstone and granite, in the Early English style, and will seat 150 persons. The United Free church in King street has a steeple of red sandstone. The principal public school, in Cotton street, is a building of red sandstone, erected in 1910 at a cost of £8,000. A market for cattle, sheep and grain is held on Mondays. Fairs: February 13th, or the following Monday, for horses; the last Monday in March, for hiring servants; September 23rd, or the following Monday, for hiring and for horses, and November 13th, or the following Monday, for horses. The population in 1901 was 3,039; rateable value, burghal, £17,901.

COLVEND, a parish adjoining Kirkbean, is in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district; 5 miles north from Dalbeattie station on the Dumfries and Castle Douglas section of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The parish, which is on the Solway Firth, is entirely agricultural, and remarkable only for its scenery. Along the coast of Colvend and Southwick are several large caves, and three of the hills in the united parish exceed 1,300 feet in height. Near Craighneuk Point is a heap of stones called "Coulthart's Cairn," supposed to be connected in some way with the ancient Galloway family of Coulthart, of Coulthart. Kippford, Rockcliffe and Douglas Hall are popular bathing places, visited during the summer by families from many parts of Scotland. An Established church is now (1911) in course of erection. Sir Mark Macgart-Stewart bart. V.D., M.A. of Southwick, Col. Edward Philippe Mackenzie, of Auchenskeoch, R. A. Oswald esq. of Auchincruive, the Hinton trustees and the Hilton trustees are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 18,144 acres; rateable value, £9,654; population in 1901, 1,170.

Post Office, Colvend; Mary Raleigh, sub-postmistress. Letters through Dalbeattie. Delivery, 7.30 a.m.; dispatch, 3.35 p.m.; no delivery on Sunday. The nearest money order office is at Rockcliffe, and the nearest telegraph office at Kippford, 2 miles distant

CROCKETFORD, see URR.

CROSSMICHAEL is a parish and village in the poor combination and small debts court district of Kirkcudbright, with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire Joint railway and is 5 miles north-east from Laurieston, 3 1/2 north-west from Castle Douglas, 9 1/2 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 19 south-west from Dumfries and 6 south-south-east from New Galloway, pleasantly situated on the east banks of the Dee, which river is crossed, about a mile and a half from the village, by an elegant stone bridge, over which passes the high road leading to Laurieston. The parish lies nearly in the centre of the stewartry, having the Urr water on the east, and the Dee on the west. Two small lakes, which have an outlet to the latter river, furnish good perch and pike fishing. The parish church stands in the village, but of the cross from which the place derives its name there are now no remains. There is a hospital for infectious diseases, erected in 1904 for 21 patients, at a cost of £4,000. Greenlaw, in this parish, was formerly the residence of Robert, 4th Viscount Kenmore, who died in 1663 at the old fortress of Greenlaw, the remains of which still exist. Robert Gordon, son of William, 6th Viscount, who was benedicated on Tower Hill, 24th February, 1716, succeeded to the estate in 1737, and began the erection of the present house, which he had not completed at his death, 10th August, 1741. The estate of Greenlaw continued in the possession of the Gordons till 1830, when it was sold to John Ross Coulthart, of Ashton-under-Lyne, in the county of Lancaster, banker, but the present owner is John Ross Coulthart McGuffie esq. Besides the remains of the old fortress of Greenlaw, there are also in the parish the foundations of a monastery. The Barony Isle of the river Dee is said to have been a consecrated spot, where the Druids had a temple in the midst of a grove of oaks. There is also a Roman burying place, several Pictish cairns, in which human bones have been found; and British encampments, near which stone weapons of various descriptions have been discovered. Mollance is the residence of John Neilson esq. D.L., J.P. and Auchendolly, of Col.

Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. John Ross Coulthart McGuffie esq. Sir G. W. Abercromby bart. of Fogden House, Turfiff, Aberdeenshire, Allen Rutherford Bell esq. Col. Archibald Hume D.L., J.P. of Auchendolly, the Misses Duncan, of Danevale, and Mrs. Stewart, of Culgruff, are the principal landowners. The area is 9,931 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,286; burghal (Castle Douglas), £1,433; the population in 1901 was 1,231, of which 115 are in Castle Douglas town.

Post, M. & T. O. Office, Crossmichael. Letters should have Kirkcudbrightshire added; Miss Agnes Locke, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 7.5 a.m.; dispatch, 9.35 p.m.; sundays (to callers) 10.20 a.m.; dispatch, 2.45 p.m.

 Douglas, on the Dalbeattie burn, a tributary of the Water of Urr, which is here navigable for vessels of 150 tons. The harbour, called Dub-o'-Hass, is about five miles from the Solway Firth. The harbour and river are now under the care of the Urr Navigation Trust. The burgh has communication by sea with the western ports, and by railway with many large inland towns, and has also several considerable falls of water, which are utilized for the working of various paper, hobbins and corn mills, and timber sawing works; in the neighbourhood are granite quarries. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, who are elected by the ratepayers of the three wards into which the burgh is divided under the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862. A police court is held on the last Wednesday in each month. The town is lighted with gas. The Established church, in Craignair street, occupies a site presented by the late Mr. Maxwell, of Munches, and was built in 1879 at a cost of £3,876 (exclusive of the spire, erected by Mr. Maxwell), from the plans of Messrs. Kinnear and Peddie, architects, of Edinburgh, and opened 27th January, 1880. There are five stained windows in the apse, placed as memorials to Mr. Stewart, and the church affords about 850 sittings. The Evangelical Union chapel (Mount Zion), was erected in 1866, and seats 350. The United Free church, Mill street, built in 1843, was rebuilt in 1882 in the Romanesque style, and affords 560 sittings. The United Free church, John street, was erected in 1861.
 Christ Church (Episcopalian) is a Mission church, erected in 1875, in the Early English style, and will seat 164 persons.
 St. Peter's Roman Catholic church is in Craignair street. There is an auction mart held every other Saturday for the sale of cattle and sheep. There are Conservative and Liberal clubs, and branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. About four miles north-east from Dalbeattie are the ruins of Corra Castle, formerly the residence of Lord Herries, but now the property of the Maxwells, of Terreglea. Mary, Queen of Scots, it is said, passed a night here after the battle of Langaide Moor, 13th May, 1568. Three miles north-west is the moat of Urr. William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. M.A., D.L., J.P. of Munches, Miss E. M. Copland, of New Abbey, Dumfries, and the trustees of the late John William Hutchison esq. are the principal landowners. Rateable value of burgh, £11,326; population in 1901, 3,670.

DALRY (or ST. JOHN'S) is a parish and village on the east bank of the river Ken, bounded on the north-east by Dumfriessshire and south-east by the Garple Burn, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and small debt court district, 9 miles north from Parton and 3 miles north from New Galloway stations on the Portpatrick and Wig-townshire Joint line, 3½ miles north of New Galloway, the same distance from Balmacellan, and 24 north of Kirkcudbright. The southern portion of the district lies in a beautiful valley of rich arable land; the high grounds are pastoral, and graze considerable numbers of cattle and sheep. The village is surrounded with delightful scenery, and there is a good hotel (the Lochinvar). Here is an Established church and a United Free church, and there is another at Bogue.
St. John's Public Hall was erected in 1858, at a cost of nearly £400, and enlarged and remodelled in 1867, at a cost of £700, and is used for public meetings, lectures &c.; there is also a Public Library. In the churchyard is a stone erected to the memory of two Covenanters,
with a long inscription in rhymed couplets.
Fairs are held on the first Friday in July. In the parish are several lakes;
the largest, Lochinvar, covers an area of 50 acres, and within it stands the remains of an ancient castle, formerly belonging to the Gordons, Knights of Lochinvar, and subsequently, from 1633, Viscounts of Kenmore and Lords Lochin-var, but these titles became dormant on the death of Adam, 8th Viscount, 1 Sept.

DUNDRENNAN, see RERRICK.

NEW GALLOWAY is a small town and royal burgh, in the parish of Kells, and poor combination of Kirkcudbright and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, with a station 5 miles distant on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire Joint railway, 84 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 24 west from Dumfries, 18 north-east from Newtown-Stewart, 14 north-west from Castle Douglas, 8 north-west from Parton and 20 north-west from Kirkcudbright. The town is pleasantly situated on the west bank of the river Ken, over which an elegant stone bridge of five arches was erected in 1821. The business of the place is confined to local handicraft. The burgh charter was conferred by Charles I. and the municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. The inhabitants attend the parish church of Kells. The Town Hall stands in the centre of the town, and has a public clock; there is also a reading room. A fair is held on the first Thursday in October. The population in 1901 was 376; rateable value £1,531.

GATEHOUSE is a modern town and burgh of barony, partly in the parish of Anwoth, but chiefly in that of Girthon, and is 6 miles south-by-east from Dromore station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian system, 8 north-west from Kirkcudbright terminal station, 8 west from Tariff station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway, 105 south-west from Edinburgh, 50 east of Portpatrick and 33 south-west from Dumfries. The town is charmingly seated at the head of Fleet Bay, in a romantic and fertile vale, embosomed by hills and lofty eminences, some of which are clothed with woods, interspersed with rich pasturage. The town is well and regularly built, the streets running in straight lines and crossing each other at right angles. Gatehouse was erected into a burgh of barony in 1795, and is governed by a provost, magistrates and Town Council, under the "Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1900." At the foot of the High street flows the river Fleet, which is here crossed by a good stone bridge, and at this point the river meets the tide, and becomes navigable for vessels of 60 tons burthen. The navigation was considerably improved by the late Mr. Murray, who, at a cost of £3,000, cut a canal in a straight line, which, besides deepening the river, reclaimed many acres of land, since which a commodious quay has been constructed. The exports of Gatehouse are principally grain, timber, and wood, and its imports lime and coal. There are some saw mills propelled by water power. Mines of lead and copper were some years since wrought to advantage, and specimens of copper from the Enrick mine, shown at the London Exhibition of 1851, were then pronounced to be the richest in Europe; arrangements are now (Dec. 1910) being made to reopen and work the copper mines. In High street stands a square tower of grey granite, 75 feet high, which had its origin in a sum of £30, left by Andrew Findlay, watch maker, in 1867, for the purpose of erecting a public clock; the tower was erected in 1871, at a cost of £300, raised by public subscription, and the fine clock was presented to the town by the late H. G. Murray-Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. of Call, at a cost of £100. The public hall, in High street, built at a cost of £1,400, contains a fine oil painting, by the late John Paed R.S.A. of Ardmore. The parish church of Girthon, erected in 1817, in place of an ancient church at the "Clachan" of Girthon, now in ruins, was greatly improved, and a new tower erected in 1896, at a cost of more than £1,000. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches, a masonic lodge, a library, and a reading room well supplied with newspapers and periodicals. On a hill near the town stands a plain, monumental or column of stone, erected to Samuel Rutherford, an eminent Scotch divine and for some years minister of Anwoth. The column, which overlooks the church where he preached, was struck and thrown down by lightning in 1847, but rebuilt soon after. The chief hotel is the Murray Arms, in which it is said Burns wrote the well-known "Scots wha hae." The market day is on Saturday, the cattle markets on the second Saturday, monthly; and the fairs are held on the Saturday before the 29th of June and the last Saturday in September. The population in 1901 was 1,013; rateable value, £3,513.

GIRTHON is a parish, in Kirkcubright poor combination and small debts court district; bounded on the east by the Airie brook, north by the river Dee, and west by the Fleet water, it is 7 miles from Dro-more station on the Portpatrick branch of the Caledonian railway, and 8 west-by-north from Kirkcubright terminal station on a branch of the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish church is locally in Gatehouse. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches,
and a private Episcopal chapel at Cally House. Barley Mill, a short distance from Gatehouse, is the birthplace of the brothers Thomas Faed R.A. (1826), John Faed R.S.A. (1820) and James Faed, the well-known artists. There are traces of three Roman encampments in the parish of Girthon. Cally, the only mansion in the parish, is the property of the trustees of the late Col. J. W. Murray Baillie, who are lords of the manor, and is now (1911) unoccupied. The area is 33,364 acres; rateable value, landward, £6,932; burghal (Gatehouse), £2,475; the population in 1901 was 1,209; of this number 725 were in the town of Gatehouse.

KELLS is a parish, in the poor combination district of Kirkcubright and small debt court district of Kirkcubright, and contains the town and railway station of New Galloway (which see); the parish is bounded east by the Ken water, north by Palmaddy burn, and west and south-west by the river Dee.
Loch Ken, which adjoins the town, is 4½ miles long and in many places more than a mile broad, and abounds with pike and perch. The parish church, built in 1822, and serving also for New Galloway, is an edifice of stone with a square central tower. In the churchyard is an ancient tomestone carved with the arms of the Coultharts and Macturks, and a monument to a covenantant. The ancient castle of Kenmure, which stands a short distance south, was once a place of considerable strength, and here, it is said, Mary Queen of Scots lodged one night, on her way from this country to England. James Charles Maitland Gordon esq. D.L., J.P. of Kenmure Castle, William Forbes esq. J.P. of Callander House, Falkirk, Capt. Sir Arthur John Henniker-Hughan bart. R.N. of Airds, and the Hon. Gilbert T. C. C.
Hastings-Campbell are the principal landowners. The area is 48,528 acres; rateable value, landward, £7,735; burghal
(New Galloway), £1,531; the population in 1901 was 878, of which number 359
were returned for New Galloway.

KELTON is a parish, in the southern part of the county, bounded on the south by the parishes of Kirkcudbright and Tongland, and containing the greater part of the police burgh of Castle Douglas; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Kirkcudbright; from Castle Douglas, Kelton kirk is 1½ miles south, and half a mile further south is the small village of Kelton Hill, or Rhonehouse. Gilston, or Geleton, is a village 3 miles south-east. The ruins of the ancient castle of Threave, formerly the stronghold of the Douglas family, stand on an island in the Dee, a mile north of Kelton. Gelston Castle, a modern mansion, formerly the residence of Sir William Douglas, founder of Castle Douglas, is at present (1911) occupied by C. Lawrie Johnstone esq. Carlinwark loch, south of Castle Douglas, is upwards of a mile in length, and has an area of 118 acres; it contains a number of small islands, and is plentifully stocked with pike and perch. The parish church, a plain structure with a belfry, affords about 520 sittings. The extensive horse fairs formerly held at Kelton Hill have been transferred to Castle Douglas. Col. William Gordon D.L., J.P. of Threave House, Castle Douglas, Sir G. W. Abercromby bart. of Fodgen House, Turiff, Aberdeenshire, William Campbell esq. of Auchlane, Major Francis William Maitland-Kirwan, of Gelston, Charles A. Phillips esq. Diddand, Capt. John Hope R.N. of Kirkcudbright, Lieut.-Col. John M'Kie D.L., J.P. of Bargaly, and W. Robinson-Douglas esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 11,204 acres; rateable value, landward, £16,453; the population in 1901 was 3,734, including 2,903 in Castle Douglas.

KIPPFORD, see COLVEND.

KIRKBEAN is a small parish and village, in Kirkcudbright poor combination and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; the village, situated in the northern part of the parish, about a mile from the sea, is 10 miles from Southwick (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 5 south of New Abbey and about 10 south-east from Dumfries. The parish is bounded on east and south by the Solway Firth. This little place possesses some notoriety, if not distinction, from having been the birthplace of John Paul Jones, a "sea adventurer," and a commodore in the United States navy, who was born 6 July, 1747, and was the son of a gardener in the place; from 1775 to 1779, as captain of the "Providence," he did much damage to English shipping, and died at Paris, 15 July, 1792. The conspicuous mountain called Criffel stands partly within the parish and partly within that of New Abbey; there are also slight traces of the castles of Cavan and Wreath, both of which were the property and occasional residence of James, 4th Earl of Morton and Regent of Scotland, 1572-8. Southerness is a small village situated at the extreme point of the coast, which runs to the Solway Firth, and is resorted to for bathing purposes. On the point is a lighthouse. Carsethorn and Preston Mill are small hamlets also in this parish, both about a mile distant from the village of Kirkbean; the former is a favourite resort for bathers during the season. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. of Auchencruive, Ayrshire, and Mrs. Blackett, of Arbigland, are the principal landowners. Acreage, 8,995; rateable value, £7,030; population in 1901, 682.

KIRKCUDBRIGHT (G. Circ Cudbright, Cuthbert's kirk) is a royal burgh, the capital of the stewardry, a parish and the head of a poor house combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 100 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 55 east from Dumfries, and 28 south-south-west from Dumfries. The town occupies a peninsula on the east side of the Dee, about 6 miles from the confluence of that river with the Solway Firth, and is of considerable antiquity; it is regularly built, and consists of six or seven distinct streets, at right angles with each other, and the houses have a respectable and comfortable appearance. The harbour is the best in the south; at the ordinary spring tides the depth of water is 30 feet, and at the lowest neap tides 18 feet. The river is navigable for two miles above the town, to the Tongland bridge, designed by Thomas Telford, the famous engineer, and consisting of a single arch of 110 feet span. The iron bridge, erected across the Dee here during the period 1865-8 at a cost of £10,000, and opened 8 July, 1868, is of the bowstring lattice construction, and is 500 feet long by 23 feet broad, consisting of five fixed spans of 71 feet each, and a compound span of 98 feet, which latter turns on a cast iron cylinder filled with concrete, to allow of the passage of vessels of considerable burthen; on the parapets is a reproduction of the burgh seal, together with the names of persons concerned in the erection of the bridge. A small fort erected here by the lords of Galloway, was afterwards superseded by a castle belonging to the Crown, and governed with the town, by a constable. During the lordship of the Douglasses in Galloway, Kirkcudbright became a burgh of regality under their influence, and on the forfeiture of their rights, James II. erected the town into a royal burgh by charter dated at Perth, 26th October, 1455. This grant was renewed and confirmed by Charles I. 20 July, 1633, and the burgh has since been under the government of a provost, two bailies, and fourteen councillors, with a treasurer and chamberlain; together with Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar and Lochmaben it forms the Dumfries Parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The Sheriff Court House, erected, at a cost of £8,583, on the site of the old Stewardry building, under the Sheriff Court House Act, is a castellated structure with a tower in the centre; the old tower now stands in rear of the new building. On the ground floor are the offices of the procurator fiscal, the county clerk's office, and police office; the second storey contains the clerk's room, seated for 150 persons, sheriff clerk's, sheriff substitute's and Justice of Peace clerk's chambers, faculty, library &c. From the old tower an extensive view is obtained of the beautiful environs of the town, including the ruins of the castle of Kirkcudbright, built about 1630, by Sir Robert Macellan K.T. 1st Baron Kirkcudbright, a title which became dormant or extinct on the death of the 9th baron, 19 April, 1832. The former gaol and court house is an ancient and curious building, supposed to date from about the middle of the 16th century, and has a market cross on the outside stair leading to the tower. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The Royal, Commercial and the Selkirk Arms are the principal hotels. The Established church, erected in 1858, is a building of stone, consisting of nave, transepts and a tower with spire, and stands in the centre of a plantation, through which are public walks, and will seat 1,500 persons. A portion of the former church, erected in 1730, still remains, but is now used as a school. It contains a monument with recumbent effigy in fine preservation, to one of the Barons Kirkcudbright. The Church Hall was erected in 1891 at a cost of over £2,000. The Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert is a building of iron, erected in 1880 at a cost of £200, and containing nave, chancel, porch and vestry, and will seat 100 persons. The United Free church, erected in 1872-3 on the former site, at a cost of over £5,000, is a building of whinstone, with red sandstone facings, in the Gothic style, with good traceried windows, and has a square tower, with spire reaching a height of 122 feet; there are sittings for 712 persons; attached to the church are a number of halls and various offices, the total cost of the whole being £7,000. The United Free church, in St. Cuthbert street, opened in 1880, at a cost of £3,300, will seat 400 persons. In rear of the church is a hall used for the Sunday school and various church purposes. The Roman Catholic church of St. Cuthbert is in High street. The Johnston Free school is a building of stone, consisting of a central block, with wings and a tower. The Town Hall, erected in 1878, at a cost of £5,300, is a building of freestone in the Classic style, and contains a library, reading room and lecture hall. The Academy, re-organised in 1893, is now carried on as a higher class school, and recognised as the junior student centre for the stewardry; the building was remodelled in 1901 at a cost of £2,000 for the purpose of giving instruction in applied science. William Bruce M.A. rector. The Museum was erected in 1892, at a cost of £1,550. The Mackenzie Hall, founded by Mr. John Mackenzie, of this town, is used for lectures, concerts &c. The market day is Friday. St. Mary's Isle, a beautiful spot, a mile from the town, and formerly the seat of the late Earl of Selkirk, is now the residence of Captain John Hope R.N., D.L., J.P. Balmie is the residence of the Countess of Selkirk. Captain Hope R.N. and the town council of the burgh are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,280 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,556; burghal, £10,894; population in 1901, parish 3,309, burgh 2,386.

KIRKPATRICK-DURHAM is a parish and small village in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, 5 miles north from Castle Douglas station on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire Joint railway, 85 south-south-west from Edinburgh, 14 south-east from New Galloway, 13 west-south-west from Dumfries and 7 east from Parton. The parish, which is skirted by the Urr water on its western side, on the north by Dumfriesshire, and on the south-east by Urr parish, derives its name from the old church, dedicated to St. Patrick, and from the Durham family, the ancient lords of the manor. The parish church, erected in the year 1848 on the site of the old church, is a building in the Gothic style, and has a tower. Auchencroch Loch, a sheet of water about a mile in length, is in this parish, and on Larg Hill is a monument to the Covenanters. Capt. Henry Liston Murray Dunlop D.L., J.P. of Corsock, John Beaumont Nelson esq. of Croys, Robert W. Fergusson esq. J.P. of Kilkenny, James M'Queen esq. J.P. of Crofts, and James Bone esq. J.P. of Brooklands, are the principal landowners. KIRKPATRICK-IRONGRAY is a parish with a station on the Dumfries and Moniaive Cairn Valley light railway, and is bounded on the north by the river Cairn or Clouden, which separates it from the parish of Holywood, in Dumfriesshire, on the east by Terregles, on the west by Kirkpatrick-Durham and Urr, and on the south by Lochrutton, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. Here are Established and United Free churches. In the churchyard is a monumental sarcophagus of Craigleith sandstone, erected by Sir Walter Scott bart. to Helen Walker, the prototype of Jeanie Deans, the heroine of the "Heart of Midlothian," who was a native of this parish, and whose remains are interred here; there is also a tombstone near the church to two martyrs, who were hanged for their religion, and on Skeoch hill is a granite monument, erected to commemorate the celebration of the communion by 3,000 Presbyterians, who objected to Episcopacy. The parish contains the village of Shawhead, which is about 7 miles west from Dumfries. Richard Alexander Oswald esq. D.L., J.P. of Cavens, the trustees of the late Samuel Adamson esq. the trustees of the late James E. Blair esq. of Drumpark, Maxwell Hyslop Maxwell esq. J.P., V.D. and S. Williamson Wallace esq. of Kelton, are the principal landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. Chief crops are oats, roots and turnips. The area is 13,655 acres; rateable value, £9,443; in 1901 the population was 701. Post & Telegraph Office, Shawhead; Miss Jane Kerr, sub-postmistress. Letters received from Dumfries. Crocketford is the nearest money order office, 4 miles distant. Delivery, 8 a.m.; dispatch, 3.5 p.m. week days only

LOCHFOOT, see LOCHRUTTON.

LOCHRUTTON is a parish at the north eastern extremity of the stewartry, 5 miles south-west from Dumfries, its greatest length being 5½ miles and breadth 4½ miles; it is bounded on the north by the parishes of Kirkpatrick and Terregles, east by Troqueur, south by Kirkcubright and west by Urr, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcubright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. At the base of a range of hills in this parish lies the village of Lochfoot, which is 2 miles north-west from Lochanhead station on the Castle Douglas and Dumfries section of the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has an Established church; the Lochrutton lake is a fine sheet of water, 1 mile long by half a mile broad, and provides the inhabitants of Dumfries and neighbourhood with an unfailing supply of water. On one of the hills here are the remains of a Druidical circle. Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. D.L. of Scarthingwell Hall, Tadcaster, Yorks, and Lady Ardwall, of Ardwall, are the principal landowners. The soil is of a light loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes. The area comprises 7,739 acres; rateable value, £ ; and the population in 1891 was 534, and in 1901, 497.

MAXWELLTOWN, which forms part of the parliamentary burgh of Dumfries, is a burgh of barony and town in the parish of Troqueur, in the stewartry of Kirkcubright, and is divided from Dumfries town by the river Nith, over which are three bridges, one of which is an ancient structure coeval with the Franciscan Monastery, to which its bridge tolls once belonged. The observatory and the gaol are both in this suburb. Full particulars and lists of residents are given with Dumfries (see Dumfries-shire).

MINNIGAFF is a large parish, in the western part of the stewartry of Kirkcubright, 17 miles in length by 11 in breadth; it is bounded on the north by the county of Ayr and the parish of Carsphairn, on the north-east by Kells, south-east by Girthoch and Kirkmabreck, and on the west by the river Cree, over which there is a bridge uniting it to the parish of Penningshame and the town of Newton Stewart. The parish is in the small debt court district of Castle Douglas, and has a station at Palnure, 3 miles south-east from Cree Bridge, on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire joint railway. There are Established and United Free churches. In the lower parts the land has been a good deal improved, especially towards the margin of the Cree, which is navigable for several miles and produces excellent fish of various kinds, including an abundance of salmon. The major portion of the parish is devoted to pasturage, and sustains large flocks of sheep and numerous herds of black cattle. The parish includes part of the town of Newton Stewart, Wigtonshire. Kirroughtree, the seat of Arthur C. Armitage esq. D.L., J.P. within a mile of Newton Stewart, but in the parish of Minnigaff, is beautifully situated on the side of a hill, surrounded by fine woods, and intersected by pleasant winding paths. Cumloden is the seat of the Earl of Galloway. Palnure is a village with a station on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire Joint railway, and a small quay, near the confluence of the Palnure burn with the river Cree, 3 miles south-east from Newton Stewart and 4 north-west from Creetown. The area comprises 87,922 acres; the population in 1901 was 1,309; of this number Newton Stewart contained 394. Letters for Minnigaff are received through Newton Stewart

Post Office, Palnure. Letters should have Kirkcubrightshire added; Miss Jessie McGowan, sub-postmistress. Delivery, 6.10 a.m.; dispatches, 4.20 & 7.20 p.m. from October to May & 9.20 p.m. from June to September. The nearest telegraph office is at Palnure station (Sunday, oil) & money order office at Newton Stewart, 3 miles distant PARTON is a parish and village, in Kirkcudbright poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Kirkcudbright, and is bounded on the west by the Dee, the river Urr forming its eastern boundary; the parish extends from 6 to 7 miles in length, its breadth varying from 4 to 6. A large portion is hilly, especially in the northern quarter, but towards the Dee the land is flat and arable, and under cultivation; the village, which contains only a few houses, was practically rebuilt in 1901, by the late Mr. B. Rigby Murray. A drinking fountain has been erected to his memory, with a suitably inscribed tablet. There is a station here on the Portpatrick and Wigtonshire Joint railway. The church was erected in 1834, and with the manse belonging to it is about 3 miles from Crossmichael. George Rigby Murray esq. J.P. of Parton House. Mrs. Sanderson of Glenlaggan House, and Robert Armstrong Yerburch esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Barwhillanty, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 15,816 acres; rateable value, £8,050; the population in 1901 was 613.

PRESTON MILL, see KIRKBEAN.

RERRICK is a parish on the Solway Firth in Kirkcudbright poor combination and is 6 miles south-east from Kirkcudbright (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South-Western railway. The abbey church, many of the piers and arches of which are still standing, was a cruciform building with a central tower and spire rising to a height of 200 feet. The nave and choir were 120 feet in length, and on the south side of the church were the cloisters, enclosing a garth. The remains now standing are almost entirely covered with a pale grey-coloured moss. The abbey afforded a temporary shelter to Mary Stuart during the last hours she spent in Scotland, after the defeat at Langside, 13 May, 1568, and previous to her embarkation for England. She arrived here in the evening, and spent her last night within the walls of the monastery. The spot where she took boat next morning for the English side of the Solway is at Burnfoot, the nearest point to the coast, situated in a little creek and surrounded by vast and precipitous rocks. Dundrennan is a small village in this parish, 6 miles south-west from Kirkcudbright station. The ruined Abbey of Dundrennan, the remains of which stand about a mile and a half from the sea, was founded by Fergus, Lord of Galloway, in the year 1142. John M'Dowall esq. J.P. of Girdstingwood, William Brown esq. of Netherlaw, Miss Ella Cutlar Ferguson, of Craigdarroch, and David Maitland esq. of Cumnston, Twynholm, are the principal landowners. The area is 20,010 acres; rateable value, £15,304; population, 1907, 1,500.

TERREGLES is a parish near the confluence of the rivers Nith and Cluden and 2½ miles west of Dumfries, in the small debt court of Kirkcudbright, occasional courts being held at Maxwelltown. The Maxwell Memorial Hall here, the gift of Mrs. Lloyd as a memorial to her late husband, was erected in 1906.

The abbey of Lincluden, the ruins of which occupy an elevated and sequestered site about a mile from Dumfries, was founded about the middle of the 12th century by Uchtred, eldest son of Fergus, Earl and Lord of Galloway, for nuns of the Benedictine order, and is assumed to have been colonised from the monasteries of Clugny or Marmoutier in France. The spot was anciently known as "Tir-eglwys" (Terra Ecclesia) now corrupted into "Terregles," but the name "Lincluden" signifies the "linn" or "pot" of the Cluden, a tributary of the Nith. In the autumn of 1174, Uchtred, the founder, was surprised in his castle at Loch Fergus by his brother Gilbert, and after being inhumanly tortured was put to death, but his mutilated remains, according to tradition, were interred within the abbey. In 1296, Alianore, prioress of Lincluden, did homage at Berwick-on-Tweed to Edward I. but in the 14th century, Galloway became the possession of Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas, and the abbey was shortly thereupon suppressed, the sisterhood expelled, and its endowments appropriated by this powerful chieftain, and the last prioress, Blanche, is believed to have died in 1440 at Dundrennan Abbey, where her tomb still remains. The Earl subsequently refounded the institution as a college for 12 canons and a provost, and erected new buildings, including a fine church, and he appears also to have liberally endowed his foundation, afterwards enlarged so as to consist of 8 prebendaries, 24 bedesmen and a chaplain; he died at Thrieve Castle, 3 Feb. 1400-1. Archibald, his son, 2nd Earl of Douglas and Duke of Touraine, married the Princess Margaret, daughter of King Robert III.; she died in 1440 and was buried with great pomp in the collegiate church, where her splendid tomb, though much mutilated, still remains. The college was eventually dissolved about 1565, Robert Douglas, the last provost, being pensioned, and the secularization of the college property was completed by the Annexation Act of 1587. The estates were subsequently granted to the Murrays of Lochmaben and to the Maxwells of Carlaverock, Earls of Mithsdale, now represented by the Duchess of Norfolk. Of the original abbey, scarcely more than traces of its foundations now remain, but of the collegiate buildings, considerable portions are still standing, and include the choir of the church with the sacristy and provost's lodging on the north, which formed part of the east side of a quadrangle adjoining the church on the north; there also remains the south aisle of the nave, with a transeptal chapel. The vaulting of the choir, entire in 1775, fell in at the beginning of the present century, and in 1851, a heptagonal tower, which stood south-west of the church, also fell, and the buildings were left to decay until, in 1882, Capt. Alfred Constable-Maxwell, the late owner of the Terregles estate, repaired the fabric generally at very considerable expense, and erected a cottage for the residence of a caretaker. During the process of clearing and excavating the site, various relics of much interest were recovered, including a portion of the panelled rood screen, with figures, the coffin slab of Alexander de Carnys, provost, c. 1410-13, and others. The splendid tomb of the Princess Margaret, highly enriched with carved shields of arms and ornamental work, remains on the north side of the choir, and during the work of renovation the recumbent effigy which once lay within it was recovered, though in a much mutilated condition; on the south side of the choir are sedilia and a piscina, and the interior of the church generally is much ornamented with heraldic shields and carved foliage. In later days, Lincluden was a favourite resort of the poet Burns and beside its ruined walls he composed several of his pieces, including the "Vision of Liberty." Terregles House is the property of Herbert Constable Maxwell-Stuart esq. D.L. of Scarthingwell Hall, Tadcaster, Yorks, who is the principal landowner, and is occupied by Charles Edward Galbraith esq. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes. The area is 3,828 acres; rateable value: landward, £5,799 12s. 9d.; burghal (Maxwelltown), £189; the population in 1901 was 454.

Post Office, Terregles; John Bryden, sub-postmaster. Letters through Dumfries arrive 6.35 a.m.; dispatched 12.30 & 4.30 p.m. week days only. Dumfries is the nearest money order office, 2½ miles distant; New Bridge & Maxwelltown Station the nearest telegraph office, 1½ miles distant.

on the east by the river Tarff, on the west by Borge parish, and extends on the south to Kirkcudbright Bay. There are Established and United Free churches.
In 1897 a public hall was erected at a cost of £400, defrayed by public subscription, and is available for concerts and entertainments. There is a small woollen mill here. The old castle of Comptonne is pleasantly situated on an eminence near the junction of the rivers Dee and Tarff. Barwhinnock, the seat of Robert Watson Laidlay esq. is in this parish. Captain John Hope R.N., D.L., J.P. of St. Mary's Isle, and David Maitland esq. D.L., J.P. of Cumstoun and Dundrennan, are the principal landowners.
The soil is fertile, and the surface of the district rises into many small hills, partly arable. The area is 10,484 acres; rate-

URR is a parish, a little to the north-east of Castle Douglas, in the Kirkcudbright poor combination, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Lochrutton, north by Kirkpatrick-Irongray and north-west by Kirkpatrick-Durham, and contains the town of Dalbeattie (which see).

HAUGH-OF-URR is a picturesque village on the east bank of the Water of Urr, and about 3½ miles north-east from Dalbeattie station on the Kirkcudbright branch of the Glasgow and South-Western railway. In the neighbourhood is a waterfall called Spottes Lynn, a ferruginous well, and a romantic glen, interesting both to the botanist and geologist. On the bank of the river, about a mile from the village, is the Moat of Urr, an artificial mound, surrounded by elevated circles and supposed to have been used in primitive times as a place for public meetings. The Established church was erected in 1815. Here is a hall used for entertainments and a library.

CROCKETFORD (or Nine Mile Bar), a small village about 3 miles north-east from Kirkpatrick, on the road from Dumfries, was begun towards the close of the last century by a sect known as the Buchanites, so called from their foundress and leader, Mrs. Elspeth Buchan, who established the sect about 1779, but died in May, 1791, when her followers were dispersed.

HARDGATE is a small village, half a mile from Haugh, and has a United Presbyterian church.

SPRINGHOLM is a small village one mile east from Kirkpatrick, on the road from Dumfries. In the neighbourhood is a woollen manufactory.

James Laurie M'Kie Hutchison esq. John Gordon Birney esq. and William Jardine Herries Maxwell esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners.

The area comprises 15,428 acres; rateable value, landward, £12,699; burgh, £9,084; the population in 1901 was 4,729, with 3,462 in Dalbeattie burgh.

LANARKSHIRE

A POPULOUS county situated south of a line drawn from the Firth of Clyde to the Firth of Forth, and containing in its northern, or Lower ward, the City of Glasgow. At an early period this extensive district was, for convenience, divided into two wards, called the Over Ward and Nether Ward, Lanark being the chief town and seat of justice of the former, and Rutherglen of the latter; this arrangement was altered during the last century, when the county was divided into three wards, namely, the Upper, the Nether or Lower, and the Middle Wards, the chief towns being Glasgow, Lanark and Hamilton. The central part of the county throughout is termed Clydesdale, or the Vale of Clyde, from being the basin of that beautiful river. In the reign of James I. a portion of the county was made into the county of Renfrew. The three wards roughly correspond to the differences in the conformation of the country, as commencing from the south of the county the hilly portion may be said to correspond with the Upper ward; the plain country with the Middle; the Lower or Northern ward being the smallest, though having the largest population, as it includes the City of Glasgow. The county is bounded south by Dumfriesshire, west by Ayr and Renfrew, north by Stirling, east by Linlithgow, Edinburghshire and Peebles. Its extreme length (from south-south-east to north-north-west) is somewhat more than 50 miles, and its greatest breadth in the middle (from east to west) is about 31 miles; it includes within its area 8,794 square miles; 562,821 acres of land and 4,170 of water. In 1891 the population of the county was 1,105,839. By Boundary Orders Nos. 137 and 140, under the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict.), that portion of the burgh of Glasgow which up to 1891 was included in the county of Renfrew, was transferred to Lanarkshire; the population in 1901 was 674,163 males and 665,164 females; total, 1,339,327. The inhabited houses in 1891 was 220,880, and in 1901 was, uninhabited, 266,671; uninhabited, 11,862; building, 3,414. In size Lanark is the tenth of the Scottish counties, and in population the first. Population in 1911, 1,447,113.

Early History.—Held by the Strathclyde Britons, it was in 79 overrun by the Romans, who built their wall between the Clyde and Forth just north of this county; in 410 the Britons returned possession, but were ousted by the Irish Scots, who in their turn gave way to the Northumbrians. Throughout the arduous struggle for Scottish independence, Lanarkshire was the theatre of many military excesses. At a subsequent date the turbulence of the Douglases, with the intrigues of the first Lord Hamilton, involved Lanarkshire in the various calamities consequent upon intestine warfare; it subsequently became subject to a thirty years' civil commotion, stimulated by the prosecution of the more zealous Presbyterians of this district by Charles I.

Soil, Produce, Manufactures, Climate, &c.—The upper division of the county is very mountainous; from Tinto, looking northwards, the face of the country shows only gentle elevations. The Upper Ward, which may be deemed three-fifths of the county, is mostly hilly and moorish; the Middle Ward, though esteemed a good agricultural district, is nearly one-third moss land. The Lower Ward is of very limited extent. The commencement of improvement in soil and cultivation in this part of Scotland was not apparent until about the middle or nearer the end of the 18th century; from this period draining, planting and inclosing took place.

The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are: Oats, 37,697 acres; wheat, 1,738; beans, 299; barley or bere, 373; total of corn crops, 40,170 acres; turnips and swedes, 9,582 acres; potatoes, 4,725; cabbage &c. 988; rape, 1,130; total of green crops, 16,425 acres; hay, 47,894 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, 44,147 (not for hay); permanent pasture, 102,611 acres; small fruit, 2,102 acres and bare fallow, 213 acres. The total area of land is 562,821 acres, of which 212,041 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing), and 21,341 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised: Horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares, 6,769; unbroken horses, 1,953; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 38,462; other cattle, 31,926; ewes kept for breeding, 100,851; other sheep, 146,316; sows kept for breeding, 833; other pigs, 6,294.

Some flax is grown, which is spun by females, who dispose of the yarn in the markets of Lanark, Biggar, Caruath and other places. Orchards occupy 824 acres. In the neighbourhood of Carlnke strawberries are also grown in abundance. The inhabitants of the inland and upland districts rear great numbers of black cattle and sheep and the Clydesdale breed of horses is of a useful character. The climate, although varying considerably in different situations in the low-lying districts, in the vicinity of the Clyde is mild and temperate; but in the uplands in the south-south-west, and south-east the weather is more severe. In mineral productions, Lanarkshire is, perhaps, the richest in Scotland. Gold, to an important amount, was, at an early period, found in this county, and in later days, on the sides of a rivulet called the Wenlock, small pieces of that precious metal, in a pure state, have been picked up from among the sand and soil brought down by the torrents from the precipices and slopes of the mountains; particles of gold have also been found in Crawford Mair, with some large pieces of lapis lazuli. At present supplies of lead may be had in the parish of Crawford; and coal, ironstone, limestone, freestone, sandstone, whinstone, fire-clay and a variety of other metallic, mineral and fossil substances are to be obtained abundantly in different districts of the county. The lead mines belonging to the Earl of Hopetoun, at Leadhills, afford employment to a large number of workmen. Owing to the discovery of large quantities of bituminous shale, the manufacture of paraffin oil has been extending very rapidly in the neighbourhoods of Airdrie, Lanark and other places.

In 1909, 4,768,134 tons of coal, valued at £1,569,511, was raised in East Lanark, and 12,530,931 tons, valued at £4,176,977, was raised in West Lanark; 321,602 tons of fire-clay, value £89,844; brick clay, 167,546 tons, value £20,114; 13,710 tons of iron ore, value £3,488 in East Lanark; West Lanark, 111,712 tons, value £58,649; lead ore, 1,987 tons, which gave 1,567 tons of lead and 6,954 ounces of silver.

The number of persons employed in the collieries in 1909 was; underground, 44,760 and above ground, 54,881.

There are 10 iron works in the county, containing 67 blast furnaces, of which an average of 54 1-12th were in work in 1903, producing (with the four furnaces of the Carron Co. at Carron, Stirlingshire) 963,505 tons of pig iron. The total iron ore used in the manufacture was 1,998,924 tons and coal (coal converted into coke), 1,768,923 tons.

There is also a large production of oil shale, the quantity raised in 1903 being 66,753 tons, value £18,357. The quantity of stone raised in the same time was 37,277 tons of limestone and 154,323 tons of sandstone; gravel and sand was raised to the extent of 180,427 tons; igneous rocks, 201,955 tons.

The fishing industry is small, the number of boats registered in 1909 are included in the Greenock returns; of other vessels the number registered was 1,733, with an aggregate tonnage of 2,031,745, and new vessels built were 132; net tonnage, 104,481. In addition, 49 vessels of 18,240 tons were built for foreigners.

The cotton goods, for which Glasgow is the market, are to a very considerable extent woven in different villages and parishes in the county, and this branch of manufacture supports a large proportion of the dense population; and there are extensive works in several places in the shire for the manufacture of pig and malleable iron and steel tubes and boilers, besides which there are large engineering, brick, tile and terra cotta, paper, and many and various other kinds of works.

Rivers, Mountains and Railways.—The principal river is the Clyde, which rises on the north of the watershed which separates Lanarkshire from the counties of Peebles and Dumfriesshire. The chief tributaries are the Powtrait water, the Grook burn, and the Even and Elvan waters, Glengonair water and the Dunaton water. The Clyde flows in a longitudinal direction, in a winding course of more than 60 miles, dividing the county into two nearly equal parts, and ultimately falls into the Firth of Clyde, opposite the Isle of Bute. It ranks amongst the largest rivers of Scotland, and is navigable for vessels of 1,000 tons as far as the City of Glasgow. The most prominent of the secondary rivers within the shire are the Douglas water, the Mouse, the Nethan, the Avon, the Calder, the North Calder and the Kelvin. There are other streams, of less magnitude, as the Elwin, the Little Clyde, the Cotten and the Logan. The greatest elevations of this county, with their altitude above the level of the sea, are:—The Lowther Hills, 2,403 feet; Tinto, 2,335; Culter Fell, 2,454; Winterleugh Fell, 1,804; Goodbush, 1,556; Dnngavish, 1,502; Hagshaw, 1,540; and Hawkwood, 1,251. The railways consist of the main line of the Caledonian line, which enters the county in the south-east and passing by Symington, where a branch goes off east to Biggar and Carstairs Junction, proceeds to Glasgow through Motherwell; at Carstairs Junction one branch goes north-east to Edinburgh, with a short branch from Auchengray to Wilsontown, and another to Dolphinston, a third proceeding south-west to Muirkirk, on the way to which it connects at Douglas with a line running through Lesmahagow and Ayr road—whence a branch goes to Stonehouse—to Hamilton, which is the centre for lines to Strathaven, East Kilbride and Pollockshaws on the west and Uddingston to the north; this latter line being continued through Shettleston to Glasgow; from the Muirkirk section is a short line to Lanark; from Motherwell, on the main line, a branch runs through Coatbridge and Gartsherrie to the North of Glasgow, and another from Law Junction to Airdrie. The Caledonian Company have also a line through Coatbridge to Stirling and the north. From Strathaven a line is now (1907) in course of construction to Newmills and Troon, and from the same town to Lesmahagow. The North British enters the county a little west of Slamaon, and proceeds through Coatbridge and Airdrie (North) to Glasgow, also from Bathgate, through Caldercruix and Airdrie (South) to Coatbridge and Glasgow, and the same railway comes in at Lenzie Junction, and it works the Glasgow City and District railway to and from Maryhill, and has a line from Glasgow to Uddingston and thence to Hamilton. The Forth and Clyde Navigation canal and the Glasgow Union canal both pass through the northern divisions of the county.

Divisions, Representation, &c.—Lanarkshire comprises (including the city parishes of Glasgow) 123 parishes and 24 parts of ecclesiastical parishes, which are included in the Presbyteries of Hamilton, Lanark and Glasgow, in the Synod of Glasgow and Ayr; there are 33 entire and 2 parts of civil parishes, and it contains five royal and parliamentary burghs—Glasgow, Airdrie, Lanark, Rutherglen and Hamilton. Previous to the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," the county returned two representatives to the Imperial Parliament, but on the passing of that measure was apportioned into six divisions, and was given four additional members. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was:—Govan division, 18,504; Mid division, 18,484; North-East division, 22,554; North-West division, 21,398; Partick division, 21,617; South division, 10,756. Glasgow, which up to 1885 had sent but two members, was also separated into seven divisions, with the privilege of electing one representative for each. The royal burgh of Lanark, in conjunction with Hamilton and Airdrie in this county, Linlithgow, in the county of that name, and Falkirk, in Stirlingshire, comprising the Falkirk district of burghs, also contribute another member.

AIRDRIE is a market and post town and a burgh of barony, in the Middle ward, and a quoad sacra parish formed from the parish of New Monkland and including the villages of Clarkston, Rawyards and Drumgelloch. The town has stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and is 13 miles north-north-east from Lanark, 32 west from Edinburgh and 11 east from Glasgow. The Monkland canal runs within a mile and a half from the town, which is regularly built and consists of several principal streets with smaller streets diverging from them; it is lighted with gas and electricity, and well supplied with good water by a public trust. The burgh is governed by a council consisting of a provost, four bailies, and ten councillors, with a treasurer and town clerk; and together with Falkirk, Hamilton, Lanark and Linlithgow forms the Falkirk parliamentary district, constituted by the Reform Act of 1832 and returning one member. The Municipal Building has a tower and contains a clock. The County Buildings are used for the sheriff court, held on Tuesday and Friday, and for the justice of the peace court, held on Monday and Thursday. The offices of the sheriff clerk, the clerk of the peace, the procurator fiscal and the superintendent of the county police are also in the building. The New Monkland parish council chambers, in North Bridge street, were erected at a cost of about £2,000. There are Established and United Free churches and several mission halls. The Free Public Library, in Anderson street, erected at a cost of over £3,000, from the designs of the late G. Arthur, architect, of Airdrie, is an edifice in the Classic style, with Roman Doric pilasters, and contains general and ladies' reading rooms, library, lecture room and museum. The original Airdrie Academy, situate on the south side of the town, is now utilised as an elementary public school, and has been re-named the Alexandra Public School. The old school was erected in 1848, at the sole expense of the then proprietor of Airdrie estate, Mr. A. J. Alexander, at a cost of upwards of £2,500. It was acquired by the School Board after the passing of the 1872 Education Act, and was enlarged in 1887. It was soon found, however, to be inadequate for the needs of the district, and accordingly the Board erected, at a cost of £8,000, a new school at Mavisbank, which was used for some years as a secondary school. This building in time proved insufficient for the growing needs of higher education, and in 1908 the School Board opened a new higher grade school, at a cost of over £13,000. The old building is now used for supplementary classes. Amongst the chief industries may be mentioned the extensive boiler and engineering works of Messrs. Gibb and Hogz Limited and Messrs. G. Inglis and Co. Limited, and the sanitary engineering works and brass foundry of John Spence and Sons; there are also other firms engaged in various branches of engineering and iron and brass founding, besides an extensive cotton mill, railway wagon works, and several coal pits. Hand-loom weaving, which at one time occupied a large number of hands, is now almost extinguished owing to the introduction of steam power. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the British Linen Bank, as well as a savings bank. The "Royal" is the principal commercial hotel and posting house in the district, and here all the principal local clubs and associations hold their meetings. Fairs are held on the last Tuesday in May and the third Tuesday in November. The local newspapers are the "Airdrie, and Coatbridge Advertiser" and the "Coatbridge Express," printed and published here weekly by Messrs. Baird and Hamilton. Airdrie House is the residence of Sir John Wilson bart. D.L., J.P. and Cairnhill, of A. K. McCosh esq. J.P. The rateable value of the burgh is £89,872 15s. 11d.; the population of the parliamentary burgh in 1891 was 15,133, and in 1901, 16,283, and of the municipal burgh, 19,135 in 1891, and 22,288 in 1901. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910-11 was 2,661, and on the municipal register, 4,560.

AVONDALE is a parish and village in the Middle ward and in Hamilton small debt court district, and contains the town of Strathaven; it is bounded on the east by the Kype water, on the south by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the Avon water, which flows through the centre of the parish, and on the north-west by East Kibride. The battlefield of Drumclog (1 June, 1679) is in this parish. The reservoirs for the supply of the Middle ward of the county with water, begun in 1896, were completed at a cost of more than £250,000; the water is of excellent quality. The district, the air of which is pure and salubrious, is recommended by many medical men as a summer resort.
 The Duke of Hamilton is the principal landowner. The area is 37,666 acres;
 rateable value, £58,727; population in 1901, 5,773, including 4,676 in Strathaven
 Town.

BAILLIESTON is a large village, in the civil parish of Old Monkland and in the quoad sacra parish of Crosshill and small debts court district of Airdrie; the village is on the Edinburgh and Glasgow road, with a station on the Caledonian railway, about 5 miles south-east from Glasgow and $\frac{3}{4}$ west from Coatbridge, and has established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist will seat 140 persons, and attached to it is a mission at Shettleston. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. In the vicinity are several collieries, which furnish employment to a number of the inhabitants. Bredisholm is now used as a golf club. Mrs. Young, of Calder Bank, and Thomas S. Findlay esq. of Springcroft, are the principal landowners. The rateable value is included in Old Monkland parish; the population in 1901 was 3,784.

BELLSHILL is a large and increasing village in the parish of Bothwell, 1 mile west from Holytown, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways;
 the village consists chiefly of a single street about 1½ miles in length, and derives its chief support from the ironworks and numerous collieries in the vicinity. There are Established and United Free churches, besides Baptist, Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. The Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. The population in 1891 was 3,330, and in 1901, 8,786;
 the rateable value is included with Bothwell.

BENHAR, see SLIOTS.

BIGGAR is a small town and burgh of barony, and parish, in the Upper ward, Peebles poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Lanark; the town, situated on the road between Peebles and Lanark, has a station on the Symington and Peebles branch of the Caledonian railway, opened in 1858-9, and is 23 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-east from Glasgow, 16 west from Peebles, and 12½ south-east from Lanark. It consists principally of one spacious main street and was created a burghal burgh by charter of James II. to Sir Robert Fleming, of Biggar, created Lord Fleming, c. 1445; it is governed by a town council, and is lighted with gas by a company formed in 1839, and well supplied with pure water, conveyed from a source five miles distant. The parish is bounded on the east by Peebleshire, west by the parish of Liberton, and north by Walston. The parish church is an ancient cruciform structure, in the Gothic style, enlarged and endowed in 1545, by one of the Flemings, a collegiate church for a provost, eight prebends, four singing boys and six poor men, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary; the nave was probably built in the 12th or 13th century. There are also two United Free churches, a Corn Exchange and a Public Library. The weekly market is held on Monday, and fairs in February and November, also on the eleventh day from the last Thursday in October (old style) and one on the last Thursday in July. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. In this parish there are some remains of Bognhall Castle, once the feudal stronghold of the Fleming family, and the principal residence of the successive lords, until late in the 16th century, when John, 6th Lord Fleming, was advanced, 19 Mar. 1605-6, to the revived dignity of Earl of Wigton, a title which ceased on the death of Charles 7th Earl, but is perhaps only dormant. Its next possessors were the Elphinstones, through whose neglect it fell into decay. At a comparatively recent date its walls were pulled down, and the materials carried off to form drains and dykes in the neighbourhood. Tradition reports that an engagement took place near this town between the Scots, under Wallace, and the English army, when the Scottish leader drove the invaders into a morass, where most of them perished. The trustees of the late James Dennistoun Mitchell esq. D.L., J.P. the trustees of the late William Allan-Woddrop esq. D.L., J.P. and James Joseph Stenton Maclaren esq. of Biggar-shiels, are the principal landowners. The parish is 6 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, embracing 9,272 statute acres; rateable value, £17,118; population in 1901, 1,897, of which 1,366 are in the burgh.

BISHOPBRIGGS, a large village and suburb of Glasgow, is in the parish of Cadder. For further particulars and names see Glasgow section.

BLACKWOOD, see LESMAHAGOW.

BLANTYRE is a parish, in the north-western part of the county and Middle ward, about 6 miles in length, with a coast line to the Clyde of about 2 miles and a half; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Hamilton, south by Glassford and west by East Kilbride and Cambuslang, and is in Hamilton poor combination and small debts court district. The parish has two stations, Blantyre and High Blantyre, on different sections of the Caledonian railway, and contains three villages, High Blantyre, Low Blantyre and Stonefield, all situated in a rich and fertile district. High Blantyre, the first of these, is 8 miles south-by-east from Glasgow, and between 2 and 3 west-by-north from Hamilton, on the road between the last-named town and East Kilbride. Low Blantyre, rather more than a mile distant in a north-easterly direction, was originally built and owned by Messrs. Henry Mouteith & Co. dyers, but that firm is now extinct and the village gradually falling into decay. Mr. David Livingstone, the distinguished African explorer and missionary, was born in a small house in this village, March 19, 1813, his father having kept a small shop at Hamilton, while he himself was employed in the mills; he was admitted a Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery in 1838, and his African labours and travels, in connection with Dr. Moffat, and at a later period with Sir H. M. Stanley G.C.B. extended from 1840 to 1872, after which Livingstone continued his explorations alone, but died at Hala, 4th May, 1873; his remains, carried to Zanzibar by his native servants, were transferred to England and interred in Westminster Abbey, 18th April, 1874. Stonefield, formerly a separate village, but now included in Blantyre, is entirely the creation of the coal trade, and is principally inhabited by the miners employed in the numerous pits in the neighbourhood belonging to Messrs. Merry and Cuninghame Limited and Messrs. Dixon Limited; it was in one of the pits belonging to Messrs. Dixon, at High Blantyre, that the great explosion of 22nd October, 1877, took place, causing the death of over 200 men and boys. This place, from 1606, afforded the title of Baron to a branch of the Stewart family, but on the death (17 Dec. 1900) of Charles, 12th Baron Blantyre, the title became extinct. At Blantyre are established two United Free churches, a Parish hall and a Mission hall, and at Stonefield, established and United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, Congregational and Methodist chapels, a Gospel hall and Salvation Army barracks. The Cottage Hospital was erected in 1910, at a cost of £3,000. A branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited is established here. The ruins of Blantyre priory, founded early in the 13th century, stand on a rocky eminence on the south bank of the Clyde. At the Reformation, the priory was demolished, and its revenues, with the patronage of the parish church, given by James VI. to Walter Stewart, afterwards lord treasurer of Scotland, who was created, 10th July, 1606, Lord of Blantyre. South of High Blantyre, near the farm of Park, and in a very picturesque locality, is a spring strongly impregnated with sulphur; the water is of similar quality to that of St. Bernard's well, near Edinburgh; it was formerly much resorted to, and is still efficacious in the cure of scrofulous and scorbutic cases. The trustees of the late Lord Blantyre, A. Millar Bannatyne of Millheugh, the trustees of the late John Craig esq. of Bellsfield, James Nelson Scott, John Jackson esq. of Bardykes, and the trustees of the late Col. J. Clark-Forest, are the principal land-owners. The area comprises 3,954 acres; rateable value, £55,978. The population in 1891 was 11,352, and in 1901 was 14,146.

BOTHWELL is a parish and ancient village in the Middle ward, and Motherwell poor combination, and in the small debt poor district of Hamilton, about 9 miles south-east from Glasgow, and 2 miles north-west from Hamilton, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways. The parish is about 8 miles and a half long by a broad; the great roads from Edinburgh to Glasgow, and from Glasgow to Carlisle, passing through it; and besides the river Clyde, it is intersected by the two Calder streams, which are beautifully wooded. Bothwell bridge, which spans the Clyde, is famous in Scottish history as the scene of an encounter between the royalist forces under the Duke of Monmouth K.G. and a formidable army of Covenanters, on the 22nd of June, 1679, in which the latter were totally defeated. The barony of Bothwell was conferred, in 1482, on Sir John Ramsay; the subsequent Earldom was held from 1483 to 1569 by the Hepburns, and from 1581 to 1592 by Francis Stewart, who forfeited it by treason. The ancient church of Bothwell was founded by Archibald "The Grim," Earl of Douglas, in 1398, as a collegiate church, with an endowment for a provost and eight prebendaries. The present parish church, erected by the heritors of the parish, is a conspicuous edifice in the Gothic style. There is a branch here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The "Clyde" is the chief hotel. The Kirkland Joint Lunatic Asylum, formerly conducted as a private asylum under Dr. Dean Fairless, was bought by the Glasgow District Board of Lunacy in 1878, and opened in 1881 as a district asylum for pauper patients, and contains over 200 beds. The James Donald Institute, opened in 1910, was a gift to the village by the late James Donald, of Bothwell. Bothwell Castle, the seat of the Earl of Home K.T., V.D., D.L., J.P. (Lord Lieutenant of the county), is a modern mansion, standing in the midst of shrubberies and plantations, and near it, on an eminence, is the magnificent ruin of old Bothwell Castle, once an important Scottish fortress. Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. of Wood Hall, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,595 acres; rateable value, £206,016; the population in 1901 was 45,904, including 24 officials and 193 inmates of Kirkland Asylum; population of Bothwell village, 3,015.

CARNBROE is a small village in the parish of Bothwell, a mile and a half from Coatbridge. The works in the neighbourhood afford employment to a large number of the inhabitants. The nearest railway station is at Whifflett, about a mile distant, on the Glasgow and Airdrie section of the Caledonian railway. The population, including Brewsterford, in 1901 was 834.

FALLSIDE is a hamlet in the parish of Bothwell, about 1 mile north-east from Rothwell village, with a station on the Carstairs Junction and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway.

The parish also contains the townships of Holytown, Newarthill, Carfin, Mossend, Bellshill, Uddington, Tannoohside, Thornwood and Nackerty.

Post, T., M. O. & Telephone Call Office, Bothwell; Mrs. Mary Foster, postmistress. Letters should have Lanarkshire added to them. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 1.30 & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 8.45 a.m. & 12.40, 4.20, 5.15, 5.50, 7.20 & 7.50 p.m.; Sunday, 5 p.m.

Post & M. O. Office, Carnbroe. Letters from Coatbridge; no delivery on Sunday. Coatdyke, 1 mile distant, is the nearest telegraph office BUSBY, see EAST KILBRIDE.

CADDER is a parish, in the Lower ward, small debts court district of Glasgow, extending along the northern boundary of Lanarkshire, with Kirkintilloch and New Monkland on the east, New Kilpatrick on the west, Campsie on the north, and the parish of Glasgow on the south, and has stations at Gartcosh, Garnkirk, Steps Road and Robroyston on the Caledonian railway, and at Bishopbriggs on the North British railway, and is about 5 miles north from Glasgow. The great canal between the Forth and the Clyde passes through the parish for 5 miles and the river Kelvin washes its northern boundary to the extent of 6 miles. There is an Established church at Cadder, and Established and United Free churches at Stepps. Coal has been found on the estate of Cadder, and coal and very valuable fire clay on that of Garnkirk. Cadder House, the property of Archibald Stirling esq. D.L. of Keir, is occupied by Mrs. Stirling.

CHRYSTON is a compact little village pleasantly situated on a considerable elevation about 6½ miles from Coatbridge, and has Established and United Free churches. The inhabitants are chiefly engaged in agricultural pursuits. Bedlay Maor is the residence of Mrs. Christie. The nearest railway station is at Garnkirk, over a mile distant. The population in 1891 was 495, and in 1901, 1,100.

MOODIESBURN is also a small village in this parish.

GARTCOSH is a somewhat scattered village in this parish, about 4½ miles from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. Here is the Episcopal Mission church of St. Andrew, attached to Baillieston. Woodaenk House is the residence of Peter Hurl esq. The population in 1901 was 802.

BISHOPBRIGGS is another village in the parish, 3½ miles north-east from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. The population in 1891 was 934, and in 1901, 1,138. For further particulars and names see Glasgow.

GARNKIRK is a village in the parish of Cadder, about 6 miles east-north-east from Glasgow and 3½ north-west from Coatbridge, with a station on the Glasgow and Coatbridge section of the Caledonian railway. The Heathfield and Cardowan Fire Clay Works here form one of the largest manufacturing of fire clay in Great Britain, and employ about 300 men. The quality of the fire clay on this property is quite equal to that of Stourbridge in Worcestershire, and bricks, furnace blocks, retorts and crucibles are exported in large quantities to all parts of America, Germany, Holland and Russia. The manufacture of glazed pipes for water and sanitary purposes and of ornamental articles, such as chimney cans, vases &c. is also extensively carried on at this establishment. The population in 1891 was 971, and in 1901, 885.

MURHEAD is a small village about 6 miles from Coatbridge, lying between Garnkirk, which is the nearest railway station, and Chryston. The population is included with Chryston.

Archibald Stirling esq. D.L. of Keir, Dunblane; the Duke of Montrose K.T.; William D. Cleland esq.; Mrs. Christie, of Chryston; John Fall esq.; Peter Hurl esq.; Col. Alexander Sprot; Henry R. Taggart esq.; Timothy Warren esq.; the trustees of Thomas Warren; Robert K. Gray esq. of Lessness Park, Abbey Wood, Kent, and the Corporation of Glasgow are the principal landowners.

The area of the entire parish comprises 13,569 acres: population in 1901, 10,474, including 84 officials and 533 inmates of the Glasgow District Asylum.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Chryston; Miss Elizabeth Anderson, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 7.10 a.m. & 3.30 p.m.; dispatches, 10.15 a.m. & 1.50 & 7 p.m.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Gartcosh; Mrs. Mary Blincoe, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 6.45 a.m. & 2.45 & 7.10 p.m.; dispatches, 10.35 a.m. & 12.20, 4.20 & 7.20 p.m.

Post Office, Muirhead; Duncan M. Lindsay, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Glasgow. Dispatches, 10.25 a.m. & 2 & 7.10 p.m. No delivery from this office. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Chryston

CALDECRUIX, see NEWMONKLAND.

CALTON, see GLASGOW.

CAMBUSLANG is a town and parish in the Middle ward, and small debts court district and poor combination of Hamilton; the parish contains the large mining villages of Hallside and Newton (which see), Flemington, Spittal Colliery, Newton Colliery, Westburn and Halfway and is bounded on the east by the North Calder water, north by the Clyde, west by Carmunnock parish and south by East Kilbride parish; the town stands on the road from Glasgow to Hamilton, on the banks of the Clyde, and includes the suburbs of Kirkhill Coats, Silverbanks and Wellshott Hill; it has a station on the Glasgow and Lanark section of the Caledonian railway, and a station also at Kirkhill, and is 4 miles south-east from Glasgow; in 1872 it was supplied with water by gravitation. The "Auld Kirk," as it is termed, prior to the Reformation, belonged to a prebend of Glasgow Cathedral; there was also at that time a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary; in 1666, the chaplain, Sir John Millar, made grants of the property endowed for its support, and these lands are still called "chapel lands." There is another Established church at West Cambuslang, besides United Free and Roman Catholic churches; the Episcopal church of St. Cuthbert is in Broomside road; the Rev. Edward Archibald Forbes M.A. rector of Hamilton, has been in charge since 1910. There are also Baptist and Congregational chapels and a Plymouth Brethren Mission hall. There is a Cemetery at Westburn in this parish. The Cambuslang Institute and Library, erected in 1891, at a cost of £3,000, has a library of upwards of 4,000 volumes. The inhabitants are for the most part engaged in the collieries and large iron and steel works of the neighbourhood. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited. Two halfpenny newspapers are published here weekly. The annual agricultural show of the Cambuslang Blayrs and Rutherglen Agricultural Society is held at Cambuslang on May 24th. In the south-east portion of the parish lies the famous "Dechmont Hill," referred to by Sir Walter Scott in the lines:—"Wight Wallace stood on Dechmont Hill, and blew his bugle round, till the wild bull in Cadzow wood had started at the sound." The Duke of Hamilton, Allan Graham-Barns-Graham esq. D.L., J.P. of Craighallan, and J. B. H. Montgomery esq. 3 Mount street, London W, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,160 acres; rateable value, £149,741; the population of the parish in 1891 was 15,364, including 8,323 in the town, and in 1901, 20,211, including 12,232 in the town.

HALFWAY is a mining village with a population in 1891 of 928, and in 1901, 1,749.

FLFEMINGTON, another mining village, lies close to Cambuslang town, and had in 1891 a population of 796, and in 1901 a population of 335.

NEWTON COLLIERY, with a population (1901) of 964; Spittal Colliery Rows, population 483, and Westburn, population 629, are all hamlets in this parish.

Post, M. O. & T. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Main street, Cambuslang; George Thomson Stevenson, post-master. Letters received through Glasgow. Deliveries, 6.45 & 11.45 a.m. (callers only) & 1.20 & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.10 & 10.50 a.m. & 12.55, 2.50, 4.20, 5.5, 6.35, 7, 8.25 & 10.15 p.m.; sundays, 5.35 p.m.

Post & M. O. Jessie, Gilbertfield, Halfway; Miss Jessie Jamieson, sub-post-mistress. Letters through Cambuslang, Glasgow. Dispatches, 8.15 a.m. & 2.45, 7.15 & 9.25 p.m.

CAMBUSNETHAN is a parish and village in the Middle ward, and in Cambusnethan poor combination; the village is about a mile east from Wishaw, with which burgh it is now incorporated, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish is bounded on the east by Linlithgowshire and Edinburghshire, north by the Calder water, and south by Cambusnethan parish. The ancient parish church, now an ivy-grown ruin, has long been disused, but interments still take place in the graveyard, which has been greatly extended, and is tastefully kept. The present church is situate on Kirk Brae, in the burgh of Wishaw, and is a modern edifice with square tower. Here also is a United Free church. The staple trade of the district is coal, and upwards of one million tons are sent from Wishaw annually. Cambusnethan House is the seat of Alexander Campbell esq.; Garrison Tower, of James Scott esq. J.P. and Murdostoun Castle, of Robert King Stewart esq. D.L., J.P. The area of the parish is 16,798 acres; rateable value, landward, £127,847; burghal (Wishaw), £108,179; the population in 1901 was 25,871, which includes 2,489 in Newmains, 2,513 in Cambusnethan village, and 20,869 in Wishaw.

BONKLE is a village in Cambusnethan parish, 3 miles east from Wishaw and has a United Free church. The nearest railway station is at Newmains, on the Motherwell and Morningside section of

CARLUKE (formerly a burgh of barony) is now a small town, and is a parish in the Upper ward, small debt court district of Lanark, with a station on the Caledonian railway, 32 miles south-west from Edinburgh, 20 south-east from Glasgow, 10 south-east from Hamilton, and 5 north-west from Lanark. The parish is bounded on the east by Carstairs parish, south by Lanark parish, west by the river Clyde, and north by the parish of Cambusnethan. The town contains several regular streets, Kirkton street, High street and Hamilton street, each having a number of fine stone buildings, and the shops are lighted with gas. There are established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, an Original Secession church, Congregational and Baptist chapels and two Mission halls. The Rankin Memorial Hall in High street, is a modern building, erected on a site given by James Brownlie esq. Glasgow, who also contributed £1,000 towards the erection. The district is rich in coal, ironstone and limestone, all being of the best quality. The trade of the town and neighbourhood is chiefly confined to mining and agriculture. The banks of the Clyde have long been famous for the culture of fruit trees. Apples, pears, strawberries and gooseberries are produced in great abundance, and in higher perfection in this district than in any other in Scotland. The growing of strawberries and tomatoes now form prominent features in the industry of the district. A large portion of the produce is usually purchased by preserved fruit manufacturers, and great quantities are also forwarded to Glasgow. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a Savings Bank. There are also two steam corn mills, two steam saw mills, several brick works, a preserve factory, two engineering works, an iron foundry, boot and shoe works, two timber merchants, several large cabinet makers' works and a newspaper. The drill hall and armoury in Market road was erected for the Volunteers in 1895. There is a fever hospital at Roadmeetings, under the control of the County Council of the Upper Ward of Lanarkshire. Major-General William Roy, an eminent mathematician, employed on the Ordnance Survey of Scotland and Great Britain, was born in this parish, 4th May, 1726, and died 1st June, 1790. Major Weir (the Wizard) was born, 1599, at Kirkton. A cattle show is held here yearly on the second Saturday in June. Mauldsle Castle is the seat of Lord Newlands, Vice-Lieutenant, and Milton Lockhart, of Mrs. Lockhart. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O. of Leet; Lord Newlands; Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E.; Mrs. Lockhart; Major James Stevenson-Hamilton D.L., J.P. of Kirkton; the Earl of Home K.T., V.D. of Douglas Castle, and the trustees of Sir Windham Frederick Carmichael Anstruther bart. of Carmichael House, Thankerton. The parish has an area of 15,313 acres; rateable value in 1910 was £58,344; the population in 1891 was 8,058, and in 1901, 8,966, the town of Carluke containing 4,740 of that number.

BRAIDWOOD is a small village in the parish of Carluke, 2 miles south-east from the town, and about half a mile to the right of the road to Lanark. Here is a steam saw mill and brick and tile works. Braidwood House, the seat of John Finlay esq. is a handsome mansion of stone, and about half a mile nearer to the Clyde are the remains of a fortified structure, apparently of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, known as "Hall Bar," and consisting of a tower and kept in good preservation; it was thoroughly repaired some time since. Besides Braidwood there is a hamlet of Kincadzow, at which place there is a board school. The population in 1891 was 439, and in 1901, 439.

CARMYLE, see OLD MONKLAND.

CARNBROE, see BOTHWELL.

CARNWATH is a parish, small town and burgh of barony, on the main road between Lanark and Edinburgh, with a station on the Edinburgh and Carstairs section of the Caledonian railway, and is in the Upper ward, and the small debts court district of Lanark, 25 miles south-south-west from Edinburgh, 30 south-east from Glasgow, 7 north-west from Biggar, and the same distance east from Lanark. It consists of one street, nearly three-quarters of a mile in length, in the middle of which stands the tolbooth, a plain old building, and in front of it an obelisk, on which the distances from Edinburgh to various places in Clydesdale and Ayrshire are indicated. This place, since 1628, has given the title of Earl to the Dalzell family; the peerage was forfeited by the 6th Earl, in 1715, but was restored in 1826 to Robert Alex. Dalzell, who then became 7th Earl of Carnwath. Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O. of Lee and Carnwath, is superior of the burgh. The estate is held of the Crown, on payment of a pair of red hose, which are run for annually on the day succeeding the August fair, and followed by athletic games, to the successful competitors for superiority in which are awarded medals and prizes in money. The remains of the ancient church stand at the west end of the town, and a portion of the building is used as a sepulchre for the Lockhart family; it contains the remains of the Somervilles, former lords of the manor, and includes a tomb of the 15th century, with the effigy of one of these in complete armour, and another of his wife in the costume of the period. Close to Carnwath House and adjoining the Gallows' Hill is an old sepulchral mound. The present church, erected in 1866, on the site of the former one, erected about 1798, is a building of freestone, in the Gothic style, and will seat 1,000 persons. There are also United Free churches. About a mile to the north-west of Carnwath are the scattered ruins of Cowthally Castle, in former ages the seat of the Somervilles. Carnwath House is the seat of Col. Sir Simon Macdonald Lockhart bart. M.V.O., D.L., J.P. In one of the rooms here Prince Charles Edward remained for two entire days on his retreat from Derby to Culloden in 1746. Kersewell is the residence of Frank Warrack esq. and Westsidewood, of James Williamson esq. D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are Col. Sir S. M. Lockhart bart. James Williamson esq. William Bertram esq. Robert J. Logan esq. J.P. James Hamilton esq. of Woodfords, and John Purdie-Somerville esq. of Ampherlaw. The parish is bounded on the east by Dunsyre parish, north by Edinburghshire, west by the Monse river, and south by the river Medwin.

 district of Lanark, on the road from Edinburgh to Lanark, about a mile east from Carstairs Junction on the Caledonian railway, 4 north-east from Lanark and 3 west of Carnwath. The Mouse water flows through the centre of the parish, which is bounded on the east by Carnwath parish, south by the river Clyde, west by Lanark and Car-luke parishes. The three fairs formerly held here, having gradually declined, are now altogether discontinued. From the number and magnitude of the architectural and other Roman remains which have been discovered here, it is assumed that the place must have been one of importance during the Roman period. There are Established and United Free churches. Carstairs House is the seat of Sir James King bart. D.L., J.P.
 The principal landowners are Sir James King bart. William Elliott-Lockhart esq.
 D.L., J.P. of Cleghorn, Col. Sir Simon

COATBRIDGE is a populous town and municipal burgh in the parish of Old Monkland, as altered by order of the Secretary of Scotland, and in the Middle ward and small debt court district of Airdrie, on the Glasgow and Edinburgh road, with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, 8 miles east from Glasgow and 2 west from Airdrie. The burgh includes the quoad sacra parishes of Coats, Garturk and Gartsherrie, in Old Monkland parish, and is divided into five wards. The Monkland canal passes through. There are four Established and seven United Free churches, three Roman Catholic churches, and an Evangelical Union church. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1843, will seat 368 persons; the rectory, net value £220, has been held since 1905 by the Rev. J. M. Johnston; there are also Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, two Mission halls, and Salvation Army barracks. The Municipal Buildings, at the top of Dunbeth road, form a fine stone structure, elaborately fitted and furnished and including a Town Hall. The Technical School was erected by the Monkland School Board, at a cost of about £7,000, and opened in 1891. The Theatre Royal, a substantial building of stone, is open from August to May and will hold 2,000 persons. The Institute at Gartsherrie, erected at a cost of £5,000, was the gift of William Weir esq. of Kildonan, and is a building of stone, containing spacious reading and billiard rooms, swimming and private baths. The Alexander Hospital, at Blairhill station, erected by the late John Alexander esq. first provost of Coatbridge, at a cost of £9,000, and opened in March, 1893, is intended for the reception of accidents of all kinds; it contains male, female and private wards, and is fitted with all the latest improvements needed for such an institution. The building was designed and carried out under the supervision of Mr. Alex. McG. Mitchell, architect, of Coatbridge. The Carnegie Free Public Library, in Academy street, is a substantial building with reading rooms and a reference library. The Stewart Institute, situate in the main street, was erected by the Stewart family, and handed over to the Town Council; it comprises billiard, reading and recreation rooms. At Gartsherrie, Calder, Carnbroe, Langloan and Summerlee are iron works on an extensive scale, affording employment to large numbers of the inhabitants. Coatbridge is an important centre for the manufacture of iron tubes, malleable iron and steel, and there are several large engineering and iron founding establishments. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Ltd., the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Ltd., the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Mercantile Bank of Scotland Limited. Drumpellier House is the residence of Lady Carrick-Buchanan; Gartsherrie, the residence of Ronald Sherwin Holden Stuart Rae Colt B.L., J.P. Douglas Support (Rosehall), the seat of Major-Gen. Barrington Bulkeley Douglas Campbell Douglas C.V.O., C.B., D.L., J.P. is a mansion of stone in the Scottish baronial style, in an estate of about 1,600 acres, and is beautifully situated on the banks of the North Calder. The house is surrounded with undulating and well laid out pleasure grounds of about 100 acres, richly timbered and containing some very fine beech trees, and a "Weeping Hornbeam," believed to be the only specimen of its kind known. The residence can be traced back to the early 17th century, when it originally formed part of the estate of Dalziel, and was purchased by Margaret, Duchess of Douglas, who, by her testament, left the estate to Archibald Douglas, of Mains, Dumbartonshire, from whom the present holder is directly descended. Coal is the chief mineral worked. The rateable value, burghal, £202,000; landward, £207,732 3s. 4d. The population in 1891 was 30,034, and in 1901, 36,991.
