EARLSTON (anciently "Ercildoune") is a parish and village, with a station on the North British railway, 31 miles southeast from Edinburgh, 11 west-by-north from Kelso, 18 south-west from Duns, 15 north from Jedburgh, 10 south-west from Greenlaw, 8 1/2 north-east from Galashiels and 7 south from Leader; is Kelso poor combination and the small debt court of Leader. The village is seated in a rich valley encompassed by hills of a moderate height, interspersed with thriving plantations; the Leader river flows on the west of the parish, and the Eden on the east.
The manufacture of woollens and gingham is carried on here, and the latter have a high reputation for excellence of quality.
At the west end of the village, on the bank of the Leader, are the ruins of an old tower, once the residence of Sir Thomas Learmonth, commonly called "the Rhymer," who flourished in the 13th century. A stone in the wall of the church bears the following inscription in ancient characters, "Auld Rhymer's race lies in this place." Cowdenknowes, the residence of Colonel Charles Hope J.P. is an ancient building, standing on the side of a hill. Mellerstein is the seat of the Earl of Haddington K.T. and Col. Lord Binning C.B., M.V.O. and Carolside, the seat of the Right Hon. Lord Reay P.O., G.C.S.I., G.O.I.E. There are two fairs—on the 29th of June and the third Thursday in October, for cattle and horses, and a cattle and sheep market and also a corn market every alternate Monday. Redpath is a village in this parish. The area comprises 9,988 acres; rateable value, £13,850; the population in 1901 was 1,677.

ECCLES is a parish and village, 6 miles from Kelso station (the nearest) on the North Eastern railway, nearly 6 miles north-west from Coldstream, in Kelso por-combination; the parish is nearly 8 miles in length by 6 in breadth, lying to the west of Coldstream, and bordering on the river Tweed. The surface of the country is in general level; the soil is rich and the grounds are well inclosed. Antonshill is the residence of James Hunter esq. J.P. and Stairrigg House, the residence of Jack Little esq.; both are in Leitholm.
 Eccles House is the residence of James Lewis Greig esq. J.P. There was once a gunnery here of considerable size.
 "Deadriggs," on Crosshall Farm, in this district, was formerly the scene of a battle, and a stone which rises due feet above the surface of the ground is said to mark the grave of one of the Percys, who fell in the contest. The area comprises 12,418 acres; the population in 1891 was 1,446.

BIRGHAM, formerly called Brigham, from a bridge once existing here, is a small village in this parish, 2½ miles south-east of Eccles village.

LEITHOLM is a considerable village in this parish, 5½ miles north-west from Coldstream. In the village is a United Free church and a Board school.

EDROM is a parish and village, with a station about half a mile distant on the North British railway, and about 3½ miles north-east from Duns, on the banks of the Whitadder, in Kelloe poor combination and Duns small debt court district. The parish is 10 miles in length by 6 in breadth, and is watered by the Blackadder and Whitadder streams. Much of the soil is fertile, and produces excellent corn. Sir George Reginald Houstoun-Boswall bart. of Blackadder House, Lord Sinclair D.L., J.P. of Nisbet, Mrs. Hay, of Duns Castle, William Miles Logan-Home esq. of Edrom and John Lulif Campbell Swinton esq. V.D., D.L., J.P. of Kimmerghame, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 9,545 acres; rateable value, £16,246; the population in 1901 was 1,290.

ALLANTON is a small village in the parish of Edrom, 1½ miles from Chirnside and 7 north-east from Duns, at the confluence of the Blackadder and the Whitadder, and a neat stone bridge crosses the mingled streams. Blackadder House, the seat of Sir George Reginald Houstoun-Boswall bart. is in the centre of the village. The nearest station is Chirnside, 2 miles distant, on the North British railway.

EYEMOUTH is an ancient seaport and burgh of barony and a parish, with a terminal station on a branch of the North British railway, and is 50 miles east from Edinburgh, 21 north-east from Greenlaw, 21 south-east from Dunbar, 20 north from Coldstream and 8 north-north-west from Berwick, on the estuary of the Eye. It was known as a port as early as the reign of Alexander II. (1214-49). Shipping can lie at anchor in the haven secure from all winds except the north and north-east, or when the passage cannot be effected up the Frith of Forth. The herring fishery is a source of profitable employment to the greater part of the inhabitants, there being 100 boats and steam drifters belonging to this port employed during the season. The number of boats employed in Eyemouth district in 1905 was 158 of 3,325 tonnage, employing 633 resident fishermen. The value of the fish cured in 1905 was £315,809. The trustees of the harbour obtained the sum of £25,000 from the Public Works Loan Commissioners for improvements of the harbour, completed in 1887, and a further sum of £10,000 has been advanced by the Fishery Board of Scotland for the improvement of the entrance. The port was added to the Berwick-on-Tweed Customs port in August, 1847. The St. Ebbe Lodge of Master Masons and the Land o' Cakes Royal Arch Chapter hold their meetings here in a lodge room established in 1757; it was in this room that Burns, the poet, was made a Royal Arch Mason. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. Ebba has Ayton mission annexed. The Rev. George Frederick Rickard B.A. of Durham University, has been priest in charge since 1900. There are also Evangelical Union Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels. On a small promontory on the coast there are the remains of a regular fortification, supposed to have been constructed by a French officer entrusted with the command of the troops of the Queen Regent. The principal landowners are Lieut.-Col. David W. Milne-Home, of Wedderburn and Caldra; Mrs. Sandison and Mrs. Margaret Mickle, of Hallydown. The area comprises 1,004 acres; rateable value, £3,950; the population in 1901 was 2,465, including 2,389 in the town, and in 1891 was 2,670, including 2,376 in the town.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Eyemouth. Letters should have Berwickshire added; George Black Sinclair, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.10 & 10.10 a.m. & 6.50 p.m.; dispatches, 6.35 a.m. & 12.10, 3.10 & 7.20 p.m.; sundays, delivery (to callers only), 9 till 10 a.m.; dispatch, 7.5 a.m.

FOGO is a parish and village, to the south of that of Polwarth, in the small debt court district of Greenlaw, 3½ miles distant from Greenlaw station and 1½ miles distant from Marchmont station (by footpath), both on the North British railway; the parish is intersected and watered by the Blackadder, upon the right bank of which the village stands, and about a mile further up the river is the ancient hamlet of Chesters, occupying the site of a Roman encampment. The parish is 6 miles in length by between 3 and 4 in breadth, and the land is chiefly arable and fertile. The Established church here is an edifice of some interest, and contains in the Har-case aisle part of a pre-Reformation tom-estone. Major Algernon Richard Trotter D.S.O., M.V.O., J.P. of Charter Hall, who is lord of the manor, the Hon. Mrs.
 Asker-Robertson, of Ladykirk; Sir John Hulme Campbell bart. of Marchmont House, and Lieut-Col. David William Milne-Home D.L., J.P. of Wedderburn and Calder, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,652 acres; rateable value, £5,732; the population in 1891 was 420,
 and in 1901, 445.

GORDON is a parish and village, in Kelsee poor combination and in the small debt court district of Duns, 5 miles south-west from Greenlaw, on the road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and about a quarter of a mile from Gordon station on the North British railway. The river Eden intersects the parish, which extends 7 miles in length by from 2 to 4 in breadth. There are Established and United Free churches. Upper Huntlywood and Nether Huntlywood, the names of two farms in the parish, each claim the honour of giving the title of Marquess and Earl of Huntly to the Gordon family, and until 1836 Dukes of Gordon. Greenknowe Tower, a venerable structure (the property of Arthur Dalrymple Forbes Gordon esq. of Klimna House, Argyleshire), was frequently used in ancient times by the inhabitants as a place of refuge from incursions of the English. There is a small library containing about 300 volumes, supported by subscription. A Fever Hospital for 20 patients was erected in 1910. A. D. Forbes-Gordon esq. who is lord of the manor, and Col. Lord Binning C.B., M.V.O. of Mellerstain, Kelsee, who is Lord-Lieutenant of Berwickshire, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 9,713 acres; rateable value, £9,644; the population in 1901 was 791, and in 1891, 843.

Post, M. O. & T. Office. Letters should have Berwickshire added to them; Miss Jane Bratherson, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.35 a.m. & 7 p.m.; dispatches, 9.45 a.m. & 4.40 p.m.; no Sunday delivery.

GREENLAW is a parish and town, in Kelsee poor combination, with a station on the North British railway, 37 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 20 west from Berwick, 12 east from Lauder, 7½ south-west from Duns and 10 north-west from Coldstream. It is situated in a valley, on the north bank of the Blackadder, which is here crossed by two bridges; the town consists of one long street, with a large square or green. Old Greenlaw was 1 mile to the south, but of this place no traces now remain. Greenlaw was constituted the head burgh of the county by a royal charter, granted in 1596, and confirmed by Act of Parliament in 1696. There is an Established church; the town is governed by a Parish Council, and the County Buildings, standing in the Market square, which were erected in 1831, and presented to the shire by the late Sir W. H. Campbell, now belong to the Parish Council and are used as a Town Hall. The justices' court sits at Duns. The surface of the land is for the most part level, rising occasionally into a slight detached eminence. Sheep walks, moorland, and soil adapted to turnips are the main characteristics of the land. Sir John Home-Purves-Hume-Campbell bart., of Marchmont, Frank B. Marjoribanks esq. The Misses Nisbet, of Lambden, and Mrs. Bromfield, of Old Greenlaw, are the principal landowners. Area, about 12,149 acres; the population in 1901 was 1,015. Post, T. & M. O. Office. Letters should have Berwickshire added to them; Mrs. Margaret Lindsay, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 5.15 p.m.; dispatches, 6.35 a.m. & 1.30 & 4.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery.

HOUNDWOOD is a quoad sacra parish and district forming the southern portion of the large civil parish of Coldingham, and contains the villages of Reston, Auchencrow and Grant's House. The Berwick and Dunbar section of the North British railway runs through the centre of the parish, and has stations at Reston and Grant's House. Here is an Established church, erected in 1831, to seat 400 persons.

RESTON is a village pleasantly situated on the banks of the Eye, in the parish of Coldingham, 3 miles south from Coldingham village and about 9 north-west from Duns, with a station on the North British railway and junction of the line to St. Boswells. Live stock sales are held every alternate Monday.

AUCHENCROW is a village lying between Reston and Chirside and about 2½ miles from each place. The nearest railway station is Reston Junction, 2½ miles distant, on the North British railway.

GRANT'S HOUSE is a village or hamlet in the parish and on the road to Edinburgh, with a station on the North British railway, and is 7 miles from Coldingham, 8 from Ayton and 5 from Cockburnspath. The place derives its name from a person named Grant, the contractor for making the high road to Edinburgh, who erected a cottage for himself, now called Grant's House Hotel. There is a United Free church here, opened in March, 1888.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 1,360, and in 1901, 1,308.

Post Office, Auchencrow: Thomas Laing, postmaster. Letters received through Reston, Berwickshire. Delivery, 10 a.m.; dispatch, 12.35 p.m. No Sunday delivery or dispatch. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Reston, 2½ miles distant.

HUME is a small village, 3 miles south from Greenlaw, and is a portion of a parish which with Sticheb (Roxburghshire) forms a joint civil and ecclesiastical parish, in the small debt court district of Duns. The nearest railway station is Greenlaw, on the North British railway, 3 miles distant. The remains of Hume Castle, a noted fortress during the Border wars, stand on a bold eminence commanding extensive and picturesque views over the greater portion of the Merse and Roxburghshire. The soil is very rich and fertile and in a high state of cultivation. There is a burial ground in the village, but no place of worship, the church being at Sticheb; little more than grass-grown mounds mark the site of a church which was in ruins in 1637. Sir John Hume-Purves-Hume-Campbell baronet of Marchmont, is lord of the manor and also owns most of the land. The area of the parish comprises 6,898 acres (4,099 in this county and 2,799 in Roxburghshire); rateable value, £4,163; the population of the entire parish was 680 in 1891, including 366 in this county, and in 1901, 615, including 311 in this county.

Post & Telephone Office & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Hume; Isaac Leitch, postmaster. Letters arrive through Greenlaw. Delivery, 8.30 a.m.; dispatch, 12.15 p.m. No Sunday delivery. HUTTON is a village and parish, at one time Hutton and Fishwick, but now merged in one parish, in the district of Merse, and in Kelso poor combination and small debt court district, to the west of Berwick bounds, from which the parish is partly divided by the river Whiteadder; the village is situate about 7 miles west from Berwick and 5 south-west from Chirside station, on the North British railway. The Tweed, which bounds the parish on the south, is here crossed by an elegant suspension bridge known as "The Union Bridge," and the only one between Coldstream and Berwick. The Rev. P. Redpath, the erudite translator of Boethius, and author of a "Border History," was at one time minister of this parish. Mrs. Anne Macbrat is lady of the manor, and Lieut.-Col. David William Milne-Home R.F.A., D.L., J.P. of Paxton House, Berwick. Lord Tweedmouth M.V.O., D.S.O. William Compton-Lundie esq. of Spital House, Exmouth, Devon, and A. P. Hope esq. of Sunwick, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,516 acres; the rateable value is £7,784; the population in 1891 was 815.

PAXTON is a small village in this parish, 5 miles from Berwick; it contains a reading room and library of about 900 volumes.

Post Office, Hutton; Miss Margaret Wilson Whittle, postmistress. Letters received through Berwick. Delivery, 8.5 a.m.; dispatch, 4.35 p.m. week days only. No Sunday delivery. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Paxton, 2 miles distant LADYKIRK, anciently called "Upsetlington," is a parish and village in Kelso poor combination and the small debt court district of Duns, with a railway station at Norham, about 1½ miles distant, on the North Eastern system: the soil of the district, which is naturally good, has been greatly enriched by careful cultivation, and the parish is celebrated for its breeds of cattle and sheep; the parish lies on the north bank of the Tweed, with that of Hutton on the north-east and Whitesome and Swinton on the west, and it has a breadth of from one to two miles; a stone bridge, constructed at the expense of the Tweed Bridges Trust, here spans the Tweed between Ladykirk and Norham. The church, a venerable building, standing near the Tweed, is said to have been erected by James IV. (1488-1513) in gratitude for his preservation from the violence of the flood when fording the river here at the head of his army, and dedicated by him to "Our Lady;" hence it was denominated "Ladykirk," a name subsequently extended to the village, in which stands a fountain given by Lady Marjorie-banks, in commemoration of the fiftieth year of the reign of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, 1887. The small village of Hordean belongs to this parish. Ladykirk House is the seat of the Hon. Mrs. Askew-Robertson. Mrs. Askew-Robertson, Berwick J. Black, jun. esq. and the trustees of the late Alexander Wellwood Rattray are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,380 acres; rateable value, £4,471; the population in 1901 was 316, and in 1891, 339.

Post Office; Mrs. Mary Bolton, sub-postmistress. Letters through Norham, Northumberland, arrive at 7.45 a.m.; delivered at 7.50 a.m.; dispatched at 2.40 & 5 p.m.; sundays, 10 a.m. (for callers only); dispatched, 1.5 p.m. Norham, 2 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

LANGTON is a parish, in the small debt court district of Duns and in Kelso poor combination, and contains the village of Gavinton, which is 2 miles south-west from Duns station, on the North British railway, and half a mile south of the site of the old village of Langton, which has entirely disappeared; Gavinton village, which is regular in its form, obtained its name from Mr. Gavin, the late proprietor of the Langton estate. The parish church, locally in Gavinton, and standing on an eminence, has a tower with spire, and was restored in 1873, at a cost of about £2,000; there is also a United Free church. Upon the top of the hill called Racleughhead are the vestiges of an ancient British camp. Langton House, which has been rebuilt, is a mansion in the baronial style, and is the seat of the Hon. Mrs. Robert Baillie-Hamilton, of Langton Duns, lady of the manor and the chief landowner. The area comprises 7,189 acres; rateable value, £5,912; the population in 1901 was 398, and in 1891, 417.

LAUDER

LAUDER is an ancient royal burgh and the capital of the district of Lauderdale, and a parish, in Kelso poor combination, with a railway station on the Lauder branch of the North British railway, 25 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 35 west of Berwick, 21 north of Jedburgh, 22 south-west of Coldstream, 20 south-west of Duns, 17 south-west of Kelso and 12 west of Greenlaw. The town is situated in the vale of the Leader, on the main road from Edinburgh to Kelso, and consists principally of a single thoroughfare, at the west end of which is the town house, and it is lighted with gas by a company. The charter constituting Lauder a royal burgh was renewed in 1502, and the government vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, chosen annually by the electors of the district. A justice of the peace court is held as occasion requires, and sheriff small debt courts on the last Wednesday of February, first Wednesday of July, and on the Saturday before the first Monday of October. By the Reform Act of 1832, Lauder was joined with Haddington, Dunbar, North Berwick and Jedburgh in returning one member to Parliament, but, under the provision of the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885" (48 and 49 Vict. c. 23), the representation has been merged in that of the county. The trade is chiefly local and domestic, and there is a branch here of the Bank of Scotland. The principal inns are the Black Bull and the Eagle, and there is also a temperance hotel. The Established church, a cruciform building standing on the south of the town house, was erected in 1673, when John (Maitland), first and only Duke of Lauderdale, removed the more ancient church from the vicinity of his residence; there is also a United Free church. Thirstane Castle, a massive and spacious mansion, surrounded by a park and some fine woods, is the seat of the Earl of Lauderdale; the castle, which stands between the Leader and the town, on a fine lawn, is fitted and decorated in the style of the time of Charles II., and contains a number of elaborately carved marble chimney-pieces and a collection of valuable paintings, chiefly portraits. The parish of Lauder contains 34,898 acres; rateable value, £17,433; the population in 1901 was 1,461, including 803 in the royal burgh, and in 1891, 1,588, including 763 in the royal burgh.

Post, T. & M. O. Office. Letters should have Berwickshire added; John H. Scroggie, postmaster. Deliveries, 9 a.m. & 6.30 p.m.; dispatches, 7.50 a.m. & 2.30 & 10 p.m. also 6.45 p.m. during summer months; sundays, delivery at 10.45 a.m.; dispatches, 7.50 a.m. & 4.50 p.m.

LONGFORMACUS is a parish and village in the Lammermoor district and in the small debt court district of Duns and 7 miles from Duns station, on the North British railway; the parish, about 12 miles in length and 6 in breadth, is hilly, and for the most part pastoral, but the low grounds are well cultivated. Two strikingly fine conical hills, called the "Derlington Laws," rise in this parish, and form conspicuous objects in the distance. Longformacus House is the residence of Col. Alexander M. Brown J.P. Ellemford is a small place in this parish, and is 3 miles from Longformacus; the surrounding district is much frequented in the summer season by anglers and sportsmen. Col. Alexander M. Brown J.P. who is lord of the manor, Charles H. Holme esq. and Andrew Smith esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 19,532 acres; rateable value, £5,894; the population in 1901 was 228.

MERTOUN is a parish in Berwickshire, abutting on Roxburghshire and extending 6 miles along the banks of the Tweed, and is in Jedburgh poor combination and in Duns small debt court district. Clintmains is a small village in the parish, and about 2 miles from St. Boswells village, and 3 from St. Boswells station, on the North British railway. The parish church and manse are locally in Clintmains. The famous ruins of Dryburgh Abbey, situated in this parish, are much frequented by tourists as being the burial place of Sir Walter Scott, who was here interred 26 Sept. 1832. There was a monastic house here in the 6th century, but the later structure was built during the period 1150-52, by Hugh de Merville, constable of Scotland, and Beatrice his wife, for Premonstratensian, or White Canons, and was colonized from the abbey of St. Mary, at Alnwick; the original Norman is intermixed with Early English and Early Decorated work, and there remains portions of the cruciform church, the chapter house, the chapel of St. Modanna, and fragments of the domestic buildings, including a fine gable of the refectory. At a short distance from the abbey is a temple of the Ionic order, built by David, 11th Earl of Buchan, about 1817; surmounting the dome is a bust of James Thomson, the author of the "Seasons," who was born at Ednam in 1700; here also is a colossal statue of Sir William Wallace, erected by Lord Buchan in 1814. The modern Dryburgh Abbey, the property of George O. H. E. Biber Erskine esq. J.P. of Newmains, Dryburgh, is at present occupied by the Dowager Lady Orr-Ewing; Bemersyde House by Joseph W. Baxendale esq. and Dryburgh House by the Misses Baillie. Mertoun House is the seat of Lord Polwarth L.L. (Selkirk), who is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 6,374 acres; rateable value, £11,727; the population in 1891 was 622, and in 1901, 576.

Post Office, Clintmains; Miss Mary Ann Scott, postmistress. Letters received through Newtown St. Boswells, Roxburghshire. Delivery, 8.30 a.m.; dispatch, 1.20 p.m.; no delivery on Sundays. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at St. Boswells, 2 miles distant MORDINGTON is a parish and village in the south-eastern part of the county, and about 1 mile from Foulden. In the mansion house here, Cromwell established his quarters on passing the Tweed for the first time. There are Established and United Free churches. At Lamberton Toll, on the boundary of the parish, is a hamlet in which, but within the Scottish border, marriages were solemnized in the same summary manner, and on precisely the same principles, as at Gretton. Edrington Castle is the name given to a camp situate on the top of a steep rock overlooking the river, Whiteadder; on the "Witches' Knowe," an eminence 649 feet in height, several unfortunate women were at one time burned for witchcraft. Ironstone has been discovered in the parish, and coal on the estate of Robert Charles Campbell-Renton esq. J.P. of Mordington House, who is lord of the manor and also the chief landowner. The area comprises 3,070 acres; rateable value, £4,317; the population in 1901 was 284, and in 1891, 324. Letters received through Berwick. Telegrams through Foulden

PAXTON, see HUTTON.

POLWARTH is a parish and village, in the district of Merse and in the small debts court district of Duns; the village is $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from MARCHMONT on the North British railway, 40 south-east from Edinburgh, 4 south-west from Duns, and about $3\frac{1}{2}$ north-east from Greenlaw, on the road between Greenlaw and Edinburgh. On the green of Polwarth, in the centre of the village, an ancient custom prevailed for every newly-married pair, with their company, to dance round an old thorn tree, and the custom is still kept up to a great extent. This place now gives the title of baron to the Hepburne-Scott family. The parish church, an ancient building, stands about a mile south-east of the village, and on the front is a Latin inscription, affirming that it was erected anterior to the year 900. In a vault below the church Sir Patrick Hume, or Home, of Polwarth, created in 1697 Earl of Marchmont, and sometime Chancellor of Scotland, found an asylum from the fury of his persecutors, when a price was set upon his head, till arrangements were made for his escape to Holland. The estate of Polwarth formerly belonged to Sinclair, of Hermandston, whose family, so far back as the 15th century, terminated in two co-heiresses, who married two brothers of the Home family, and the lands of Polwarth were then divided between the two Homes. The mansion, together with the estate, is now the property of Sir John Home-Purves-Hume-Campbell bart. of Marchmont, who is lord of the manor and the chief landowner. Area, about 3,000 acres; rateable value is £3,006; the population in 1901 was 203.

Post & T. O. Office, Marchmont; Mrs. Alison M. Scott, sub-postmistress. Letters arrive through Greenlaw, Berwickshire, at 9.20 a.m. & are despatched at 2.30 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters. Duns is the nearest money order office SWINTON is a parish to which that of Simprim was united in 1761; it is in the district of Merse, and in the Duns small debt court district; the parish is intersected by the small river Leet, near to which stands the village of Swinton, which is 6 miles from Duns (the nearest) station, on the North British railway; about 45 miles south-east of Edinburgh, 12 south-west of Berwick and 6 north from Coldstream. There is a Free Library in the village and on the village green stands an old market cross. Simprim is a small village in the south-east part of the parish. The Rev. Thomas Boston, an eminent Scottish divine and author of "Human Nature in its Fourfold State," was born at Duns, 17 March, 1676, and was for some time minister of Simprim, but in 1707 removed to Ettrick, where he died 20 May, 1732. Here is an old disused graveyard. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John McNab esq.; the Hon. Mrs. Susan A. Ives, of Moyrs Park, Essex; Major Algernon Rd. Trotter M.V.O., D.S.O., J.P. of Morton Hall, Liberton; the representatives of the late Lord Marjoribanks (d. 1873), and Walter Fairbairn esq. The area of the parish comprises 5,561 acres; rateable value, £8,112; the population in 1901 was 791.

BUTESHIRE is composed of the islands of Bute, Arran, Great and Little Cumbrae (or Cumbrae), Holy Isle, Pladda, and Inch-Marnoch, covering 139,658 acres of land and 794 of water. In point of size it ranks as the twenty-ninth, and in population as the thirtieth of Scotch counties. Though far separated from the properly denominated Western Islands, those of Bute statistically constitute a portion of the Hebrides. Bute, the most northerly of the islands, lies in a bay formed by the lower end of the district of Cowal, Argyllshire, from which it is separated by the narrow straits known as the Kyles of Bute, its southern part lying between the northern portions of Ayrshire and Cantire. Arran occupies the southern part of the Firth of Clyde, south-west of Bute and opposite to the east coast of Cantire, from which it is divided by the Kilbreunan sound; the Greater and Lesser Cumbrae lie between the island of Bute and the coast of Ayr. Inch-Marnoch is off the west coast of Bute and Holy Island and Pladda off the coast of Arran. The coast line is for the most part rocky, and has comparatively few harbours. The population of the county in 1891 was 18,404, and in 1901, 18,787, viz.: males, 8,409; females, 10,378. The number of houses was: inhabited, 4,263; uninhabited, 1,735; 63 building.

Early History.—The islands formed part of the Norwegian kingdom until 1263, when Alexander III. recovered these islands and Ayrshire from Haaco, whom he defeated at the battle of Largs. Robert Bruce came to Arran from Ireland previous to his descent on Ayrshire. Robert II. created his eldest son Duke of Rothesay, and James II. conferred Arran with the title of Earl on his favourite Lord Boyd, and afterwards transferred it to Sir James Hamilton, his daughter's second husband. Bute gives the title of Marquess to the family of Stuart, a branch of the royal family of Scotland. The Marquess of Bute is descended in a direct line from Sir John Stuart, a son of Robert II., who by his father's grant became possessed of the island of Bute, with the heritable jurisdiction of the county, in which he was confirmed by a charter of his brother, Robert III. The family was elevated to an earldom in the person of Sir James, a privy councillor of Queen Anne, in 1703. The island of Bute at one time contained ten or twelve parish churches, and about thirty hermitages of religious men; the island has now but three parishes, and the shire altogether only six. The soil is chiefly red sandstone and trap, the former showing along the coast, where it is surrounded by a belt of gravel.

The climate of Buteshire is eminently salubrious; neither mists nor noxious fogs, so prevalent in the east of Scotland, infest it; snow rarely lies on the hills, and the only qualification to its general genial character is a liability to severe and sudden rains. In the interior, in a secluded situation, the celebrated tragedian, Edmund Kean, erected a cottage, to which he purposed retiring from public life. The island has for many years been the place of summer resort for sea-bathing.

The interior of Arran has a lofty chain of hills, but Bute is more flat in surface.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910" are:—Oats, 4,679 acres; barley or bere, 21; total corn crops, 4,803 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,355 acres; potatoes, 1,925; total of green crops, 2,364; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 2,159 acres; not for hay, 4,451; permanent pasture (for hay), 632 acres; not for hay, 10,981; bare fallow, 332 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing, 51,886 acres; plantations and woods (1905), 3,912.

The live stock in 1910 included 966 horses, solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 288; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 3,553; other cattle, 5,501; ewes kept for breeding, 18,311; other sheep, 24,914; sows kept for breeding, 38; other pigs, 646.

The only minerals raised in 1909 were 7,139 tons of igneous rocks and 300 of sandstone. Some portion of the inhabitants are employed in fishery, 131 boats, equal 399 tons, being registered at the port of Rothesay, December 31, 1909, and employing 320 men and boys, but the pursuits are mainly pastoral.

The rivers are none of them of any magnitude, the largest being the Forss and Machry in Arran, both debouching on the west coast after a course of five or six miles; the principal fresh water lochs are Loch Fad in Bute and Lochs Iorsa and Tanna in Arran; there are no railways, but there is regular communication by steamer with Glasgow.

The shire comprises six parishes, and there are eight ecclesiastical parishes and part of one parish; there is only one town, the Royal burgh of Rothesay. The parliamentary representation consists of one member for the county. The constituency for 1911 was 3,522.

THE ISLE OF ARRAN is divided into two parishes, Kilmory and Kilmory; it embraces an area of 106,084 statute acres, and contained in 1891 a population of 4,824, and in 1901, 4,837. Arran is lofty and mountainous, some of its peaks exceeding 3,000 feet in altitude. A small portion of the lower grounds is cultivated, but the whole is essentially and characteristically pastoral. The island is noted for its herring fishery, but this industry is pursued by only a comparatively small portion of the inhabitants, and chiefly at the north end. The staple industry of the island is agriculture, which, under the care of the Arran Farmers' Society, has attained to a degree of comparative excellence. The majority of the inhabitants are occupiers of small plots of land. The smaller tenants find house letting a ready source of income during the summer season. As a summer resort the island is held in high reputation, for, besides possessing a highly salubrious climate, it presents ample opportunities for boating, sea and trout fishing, botanical and geological researches and kindred outdoor pursuits. All the streams, many of which afford tolerably good sport to the careful angler, are free to all comers, except two in the neighbourhood of Dubhgaradh Shooting Lodge. Game is abundant, being scrupulously preserved by the trustees of the 12th Duke of Hamilton, but excursionists are allowed to ramble, and prosecution for trespass is unknown on the island. A good road runs along the shore for the whole circuit of the island, a distance of 5½ miles, and two roads run across from shore to shore—one from Lagg to Lamhsh and the other from Shiskine to Brodick; of the shore road 24 miles are within the limits of Kilmory parish, and the remaining 3¼ miles within Kilmory parish. Plantations of considerable extent and growth, created by the Duke of Hamilton, form a special feature of attraction in various localities, the beautiful and wooded glen of Lagg, in Kilmory parish, and other sequestered spots, presenting a combination of varied and attractive scenery. The island is copiously watered by the numerous streams issuing on either side from the great rocky range extending from north to south, and has some considerable eminences, including Ben Bharrain, 2,393 feet; Ben Tarsuain, 2,706 feet; the Peaks of the Castles, 2,735 feet, and Goatfell, 2,866 feet. On the south-west coast are several caves, including the King's Cave, which is 120 feet long, 60 high and 48 feet wide. The parish of Kilmory occupies rather less than one half of the island on the east side, extending 19 miles in length by a breadth of from four to six. This parish, and others of the same name, derived their designation from Saint Bride, or Bridget, a saint whose fame extended over the whole of Britain. The ruins of the old church of Kilmory still remain, and in the east wall is a slab bearing the coronet of a marquis, and the date 1618: in the churchyard lie a number of mutilated slabs; the present parish church is locally in the village of Lamhsh, and was erected in 1784, and rebuilt in 1835 at the cost of the 12th Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895). Lamhsh Bay is one of the best in the west of Scotland, and affords a secure anchorage to vessels driven by stress of weather from the Irish Channel. The haven forms a natural basin, protected by the rocky islet of Holy Island lying at its mouth. The village lies on the inner side of the bay, and has a branch of the Bank of Scotland, a good inn, called the Lamhsh Hotel, and a golf club. In the parish are some tall monoliths, which are supposed to be fragments of stone circles. Fairs are held here in the months of April and October. The area comprises 38,985 acres; rateable value, £16,295; the population in 1891 was 2,331, and in 1901, 1,835.

WHITING BAY is on the south-west of the island, and has Established and United Free churches, an inn and a temperance hotel.

BRODICK is a village and a quoad sacra parish, separated for ecclesiastical purposes from that of Kilmory, and has Established and United Free and Free churches. A new pier has been erected, and in the village is a good family hotel, built by the 12th Duke of Hamilton, and facing the pier; it has spacious grounds, and af-forwards a splendid view of Brodick Bay, Goatfell mountain (2,866 feet), and Glenrosa, together with the coasts of Ayrshire and Argyllshire; here also is a public hall and a sub-branch of the Bank of Scotland. Brodick Castle, the property of the trustees of the 12th Duke of Hamilton K.T. (d. 1895), stands on a rocky bank which rises from the north side of the bay, and is the residence of the Marquis of Graham C.V.O.; this bank forms a part of a peninsular elevation, or shoulder, projecting from the base of Goatfell mountain. The trustees of the 12th Duke of Hamilton are superiors of the island. Fairs are held at Brodick on the first Tuesday after the 20th of June. The population in 1901 was 1,183.

CORRIE is on the north-east of the island, and has an Established church and an hotel.

The parish of Kilmory ("Cill Muire," i.e. "Mary's Church,") occupies fully more than half the island of Arran on its western side. The land in this parish is extremely productive. Dairy produce is abundant, and fair crops are obtained from large fields well laid out, with good fences. The hills are of moderate height, and so accessible to culture that every spot is convertible to use. The church, situated on an eminence, about half a mile from the hamlet of Lagg, was rebuilt on or near the old site by the 12th Duke of Hamilton K.T. at a cost of £1,300; there are remains of a font and some ancient slabs. At Clachan, on the west side of the island, are traces of a chapel and in the burial ground is a slab carved with the figure of a bishop within a trefoil-beaded canopy, and a chalice and pastoral staff, and said to mark the grave of St. Mollo. There is a good inn called the Lagg Hotel. THE ISLAND OF PLADDA, which lies off the south of Arran, and has a lighthouse on it, is in this parish. Area of the parish comprises 67,099 acres; rateable value, £12,590; population in 1901, 2,319.

SHISKINE and BLACKWATERFOOT are places on the south-west of the island, and have Established and United Free churches.

LOCHRANZA, on the extreme north-west, has Established and United Free churches.

KILDONAN is on the south-west, and has a United Free church and an inn.

ASCOG, see ISLE OF BUTE.

THE ISLE OF BUTE

THE ISLE OF BUTE consists of the parishes of Kingarth, North Bute and Rothesay, in the latter of which is the royal burgh of Rothesay, the capital of the island and county; the island lies south of the main portion of Argyllshire, a little below the mouth of the Clyde, and is bounded on its eastern side and southern point by the Firth of Clyde, on the west by the mouth of Loch Fyne and the Sound of Bute; it is about 18 miles in length, with an average breadth of 5 miles. Towards Cowal it is bleak and mountainous, but in the southern parts it consists of green fertile eminences or low hills, either affording excellent pasture or capable of being cultivated so as to produce fine crops of potatoes, oats &c. The parish of KINGARTH occupies the southern and south-eastern portion of the island, and extends about 9 miles from north to south, by 4 in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Rothesay and contains the village of Kilchattan and the hamlets of Kerrycroy, Piperhill and Kingarth, and at Kingarth is a Public Library. Mount Stuart, about 5 miles south-east of Rothesay and 4 north from Kilchattan, is the seat of the Marquess of Bute, who is the principal landowner.

KILCHATTAN, or Kilchattan Bay, is a village, beautifully situated on a bay, in the parish of Kingarth and in the Rothesay small debt court district, about 8 miles south of Rothesay, and has a pier. The parish church of Kingarth, situated here, was built in 1826, and has sittings for 450 persons. Here also is a United Free church and a hotel, and near the village a cluster of monoliths. Half a mile from the east shore are the remains of a stone circle, and towards the west shore, and also near the north-east shore of the bay, are several other interesting remains: on the north-west, at the southern point of St. Ninian's bay are traces of a chapel, and at Blair's ferry stand the remains of St. Michael's chapel, about 25 feet in length, with a burial ground; and south of it a group of seven large stones, called "St. Michael's grave." At St. Oalmaig stands a tall slab, nearly 5 feet in height, carved near the top with a cross potent in a sunk circle, the stem being simply incised. Off the west coast is the island of Inch Marnoch, about 2 miles in length, which once also had a chapel and cemetery. In the neighbourhood of Kilchattan is the curious promontory of Garrochthead, and about a mile to the north-west of it, in a quiet romantic dell, stands the remains of the chnroh, or chapel of St. Blane, a structure of the Late Norman and Early Gothic periods, consisting of chancel and nave, together about 77 feet long internally; the west end is gone, and the side walls much reduced, but the east end retains its gable and has two lancet windows, and on the south side of the chancel is a similar window, a piscina and an ambury: the chancel arch has shafts with cushioned caps, and zigzag ornament both on the inner and outer faces; attached is an ancient and interesting churchyard.

ASCOG, situated on a fine bay, about 3 miles south-east from Rothesay and in the parish of Kingarth, contains many elegant mansions and villas, and on a point of rock jutting out into the water stands a United Free church, in the burial ground of which rest the remains of Montague Stanley, a Scottish painter, who died in 1844. At the extreme south end of the island, above Dunnagoil Bay, 1 mile south-west from St. Blane's chapel, there stands an extensive vivified fort.

KERRYCROY is a hamlet 4 miles south-east from Rothesay, pleasantly situated on Scoulag Bay, the village forming a crescent round the strand, and having a Public Library. The entrance to Mount Stuart policies commences here, and in the village is a Board school.

The area of the parish comprises 8,995 acres; rateable value, £10,403; the population in 1891 was 1,061, and in 1901, 1,056.

NORTH BUTE. This parish occupies the northern portion of the island, bounded by the Kyles of Bute, and extends 7 miles from north to south, by 3 to 4 in breadth; it contains the village of Kamesburgh, or Port Bannatyne, and the hamlet of Straad, and also the small island of Inch Marnock.

PORT BANNAITYNE, the popular name for Kamesburgh, is a port and village, in the parish of North Bute, and 2½ miles north from Rothesay. The port possesses a small quay and pier, and there are several furnished houses, occupied principally by families who make this place a summer retreat. The church of North Bute, nearly a mile west, was erected in 1836 at a cost of £1,000, defrayed by John, 2nd Marquess of Bute K.T. and there is also a United Free church. St. Ninian's chapel of ease, in connection with the Established church, was opened in July, 1886, at a cost of about £5,000. Half a mile distant is the ancient castle of Kames, the property of the Marquess of Bute, now (1911) unoccupied. Here is an hotel. The Marquess of Bute is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 14,756 acres; rateable value, £16,175; population (1901), 1,747, including Port Bannatyne.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Port Bannatyne; Miss Mary McCunn, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Rothesay. Deliveries, 8 & 10 a.m. & 2.30 & 7.30 p.m.; dispatches, 9.30 a.m. & 12.25, 1.30, 2.20, 3.40, 5.20 & 7.50 p.m. No delivery on Sundays

THE ISLES OF CUMBRAE

THE ISLES OF GREAT AND LITTLE CUMBRAE. These islands lie off the coast of Ayrshire, in the Firth of Clyde, between the parishes of West Kilbride in Ayrshire and Kingarth in the island of Bute, and comprise the parish of Cumbrae. MILLPORT, in Cumbrae parish, is a burgh, constituted in 1864, under the Act 23 and 24 Vic., cap. 96. It is chiefly resorted to for sea bathing, being charmingly situated on the south side of the greater Cumbrae, about 4 miles from Largs, in Ayrshire, between which town communication is maintained by means of a regular service of steamers. There is an excellent harbour here and a good pier, affording complete facilities for the landing or embarkation of passengers. The town is lighted with gas, and is governed by nine councillors and a senior and two junior magistrates. The landward part of the parish is governed by the Cumbrae district committee of the County Council of Bute. A sheriff and small debts court is held in March and September. The Established church here is plain in style, but has a fine square tower. The Episcopal Cathedral and College of the Holy Spirit, situated on an eminence overlooking the town and bay, were founded and partially endowed by the late Earl of Glasgow, and opened in 1850-51; the college is not now used as such, the students attending the Theological College in Edinburgh. The small Episcopal church of St. Andrew, in George street, Millport, was built in 1848, and is served from the cathedral; there are also two United Free churches, and Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels, a Town Hall and a Masonic Lodge. Millport Marine Biological Station, Keppel pier, built and opened in 1897, has been erected and equipped at a cost of about £3,000 for the study of marine biology; the station contains a suitable working laboratory for the use of students and a museum to illustrate the invertebrate fauna of the district, formed by the late David Robertson LL.D. of this parish, and presented to the Station by his widow. There is a public library in the Town hall, presented by James Coats esq. Ferguslie House, Paisley. A new 18 hole golf course has been laid down and there is also a double bowling green. Some parts of the greater Cumbrae are well cultivated, and here and there may be seen some thriving plantations. On the western side of the lesser Cumbrae is a lighthouse. The greater island of Cumbrae belongs to the Marquess of Bute, who has here a marine pavilion; the smaller island is the property of the Earl of Eglinton and Winton. The area of Cumbrae parish comprises 3,514 acres, including 673 acres in Little Cumbrae; the population in 1901 was 1,754, including 1,668 in the burgh of Millport, and in 1891 was 1,765, with 1,668 in the burgh; rateable value, landwards, £1,689; burgh of Millport, £28,794.

ROTHESAY is a royal burgh, parish and town, and much frequented watering place on the east coast of the island of Bute, and is the head of a small debts court district; it is 96 miles west from Edinburgh (by Mid-Caldar), 40 south-west from Glasgow, 18 south-west from Greenock, 22 north from Lamlash, in the Isle of Arran, 12 north-west from Cumbrae, and 9 north-west from Largs. The first mention of it in history is in 1228, when Rothesay Castle was besieged by Hushac, the Norwegian, in conjunction with Olave, King of Mao, and taken after a stout resistance. Although recovered from these northern invaders, it was again taken by them about the year 1253 and retaken by the Scots shortly after the battle of Largs, 3 Oct. 1263, in which Alex. III. finally defeated Haco of Norway. During the reign of John Baliol it was seized by the English, but in 1311 surrendered to Robert Bruce. In 1334, Edward Baliol retook the castle, and fortified it; but soon afterwards it capitulated to Bruce, then steward of Scotland. King Robert II. visited the castle in 1376, 1381 and 1392, and subsequently created his eldest son, Prince David, Duke of Rothesay, and this has ever since been the principal Scottish title of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales; the Marquess of Bute is hereditary keeper of the castle.
 The town, finely situated at the head of Rothesay bay, is the capital of the island of Bute as well as of the shire, and is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works, the property of the Corporation; the bay is very spacious, and the anchorage ground excellent. A good esplanade has been constructed, and is now lighted by electricity; the pier, erected in 1882, has been since enlarged, and the harbour greatly improved at considerable expense. The number of fishing boats belonging to the port in 1899 was 132, employing 157 resident men and boys. The value of the fish landed in 1909 was £16,516. The Bute Agricultural Society has done much for the agriculture and farm stock of the island, premiums and prizes for excellence in which are awarded at the annual show of the Society, held at Rothesay on the 1st Tuesday in May. Rothesay was constituted a royal burgh by Robert III. by a charter dated 12th Jan.

1400; and its privileges were confirmed and extended by James VI. in 1584. The government of the town is now vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and twelve councillors. The sheriff and commissary courts are held every Thursday, and quarter sessions on the first Tuesday in the months of March, May and August, and the last Tuesday in October, and all criminal cases for the circuit court judiciary are tried at Glasgow. There are four Established churches, five United Free churches, a Free church, a Roman Catholic church, a Baptist chapel and Salvation Army barracks. The Episcopal church of St. Paul, built in 1838, will seat 232 persons: the Rev. Charles Tindall Beale B.A. of Durham University, has been rector since 1909. The Town Hall and County Buildings, rebuilt at an expense of about £12,000, form a handsome pile, and include an elegant embattled tower containing a bell and a clock, with four illuminated dials, presented by the late Marquess of Bute. The edifice comprises a spacious court room, in which the sheriff, burgh and justice of peace courts are held, the town and sheriff clerks' and procurator fiscal's offices, and other apartments. At the east end of the court room is a painting of John, 2nd Marquess of Bute K.T. (d. 1848), by Mr. Graham Gilbert. The Palace Halls form a block of buildings facing Prince's pier, and are used for concerts, lectures and meetings; the rooms will seat upwards of 1,350 persons. The Pavilion was opened on June 11th, 1910, by Mr. Harry Hope M.P. and is used as a skating rink and for variety entertainments, also public meetings and dances; the building will accommodate about 5,000 persons. The Norman Stewart Institute, in Montague street, opened 4th July, 1885, by Provost Sharp, was erected at a cost of £10,000, derived partly from funds bequeathed by the late Mr. Norman Stewart, of Richmond, Virginia, but mainly contributed by his nephews, Messrs. John, Daniel and Bryce Stewart, of America, and natives of Rothesay. There is a large refreshment room on the ground floor, and on the other floors are reading and writing rooms, a billiard room and recreation and smoking rooms. There are also Masonic and Good Templars' Halls, two hospitals, bathing huts and sea water swimming baths, and golf, yachting and bowling clubs, and there is a public park. In front of the east pier stands an elegant fountain, erected as a memorial to H. R. H. the late Prince Consort, who died 14th Dec. 1861, and another fountain stands in Guildford square. The Rothesay Academy, on the hill overlooking West Bay, was erected and partially endowed by the trustees of the late Duncan Thomson esq., and is a structure in the Gothic style. It is now under the control of the School Board. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland; also several hotels. A nominal weekly market is held on Wednesday, and fairs on the Thursday before 27th May (hiring), third Wednesday and the following Thursday in July (horse), Thursday before 23rd November (hiring) and Tuesday before Kilbarhan December fair (horse). Three newspapers are published here—the "Buteman," the "Rothesay Chronicle," and the "Rothesay Express." About a mile to the east of the town is a salutary mineral spring. On an eminence, called "Chapel Hill," rising above Argyle street, once stood an ancient chapel, dedicated to St. Bride. The Marquess of Bute is the principal landowner. About 2 miles south-west, and at the end of the Chapelton road, is Woodend, or (as it is more generally denominated) "Kean's Cottage," from having been built by Edmund Kean the eminent tragedian; the house stands in a retired spot, a little above the western shore of Loch Fad. The parish of Rothesay extends over an area of 6,083 statute acres; rateable value, £82,727; the population of the parish in 1891 was 9,306, including 9,108 in the burgh of Rothesay, and in 1901, 9,378.

CAITHNESS-SHIRE

THIS is the most northerly county of Great Britain, lying on the north-eastern extremity of Scotland. It is bounded on the east and east-south by the German Ocean, on the south-west and west by Sutherlandshire, while on the north the Atlantic Ocean, bringing with it a portion of the Gulf Stream, after passing along two-thirds of the coast, sweeps at the rate of ten miles an hour through the Pentland Firth, the strait dividing the eastern portion of the coast from the Orkney Islands, and forms to the west of Duncans Bay Head the whirlpool known as the Boars of Duncansby. Its figure the county approaches to that of a triangle, being from the Ord of Caithness to Dunnet Head, the northern cape, about 37 miles, and from near Reay to Auchingill on the east coast (its widest part) about 27, the entire coast line being 100 miles; altogether it comprehends an area of 438,878 acres of land and 7,130 of water. This county in point of size ranks as the thirteenth, and in population as the twenty-second, having in 1891 a population of 37,177 and in 1901, 33,870, viz.—Males, 16,072; females, 17,798; the number of houses in 1901 was—Inhabited, 7,146; uninhabited, 382; building, 29.

The county contains a large number of forts or castles (chiefly ruins now) along its coast, it having been from an early period subject to the attacks of the Northmen and other enemies coming seaward.

The Early History of this county is of little or no interest, owing to its distance from the central part of the kingdom. It was anciently inhabited by the "Catinii," from whom the present appellation is supposed to be derived. The names of various places and the monumental remains indicate its having been the theatre of numerous petty exploits of the Danes and Norwegians. The ruins of Castle Sinclair and Girnogo, the remains of old chapels, and other relics of antiquity combine to prove that this district was inhabited at an early date. Caithness is an earldom in the family of Sinclair. This peerage is of remote antiquity; before the year 1450 it was enjoyed by three successive families, who lost it either by forfeiture or extinction. At length it was renewed, in the person of William Sinclair, Earl of Orkney, a great-grandson, by the female line, of Robert II.; he was made Chancellor of Scotland in the reign of James II. and received a grant of the earldom of Caithness. The earldom of Orkney having been derived from the King of Norway, though confirmed by a Scottish monarch, was resigned to the Crown in the reign of James III. After a long period the title was revived, but not in the family of the Sinclairs of Caithness.

Soil, Surface, Produce, Climate &c.—The county is in general level, with a few mountains on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and some eminences of trifling altitude throughout. The soil is chiefly devoted to tillage, and in the centre and along the sea border is moderately fertile. This district is nearly destitute of wood, and the few enclosures are but of a rude quality. The greatest elevations in this county above the level of the sea are, Morven, 2,313 feet; Maiden Pap, 1,580 feet; Scarry Ben, 2,054 feet; and Ord of Caithness, 1,250 feet. Although improvements have certainly been effected, much remains to be done to raise the condition of Caithness-shire to that of the adjacent counties. Since the year 1800 a better system of farming has been introduced, and the number of roads throughout the county has been augmented. Though black cattle form an article of consideration, this is rather an agricultural than a grazing county; clover and turnips are pretty broadly cultivated; the crops of grain are mostly limited to oats and barley.

The crops as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are:—Oats, 32,337 acres; barley or bere, 379 acres; total of corn crops, 33,341 acres; turnips and swedes, 13,035 acres; potatoes, 1,546 acres; vetches or tares, 318 acres; total of green crops, 14,953 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses under rotation for hay, 9,104 acres; not for hay, 24,969 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 1,950 acres; not for hay, 27,496 acres; bare fallow, 127 acres. The total area of land is 438,833 acres, of which 225,979 acres are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 1,033 acres woods and plantations (1905); the water area is 7,139 acres.

The live stock in 1910 comprised 4,383 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,215; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 7,306; other cattle, two years and above, 2,471; one year and under two, 6,067; under one year, 5,663; ewes kept for breeding, 51,973; other sheep, one year and above, 24,891; under one year, 54,527; sows kept for breeding, 217; other pigs, 1,225. Besides cattle and corn, kelp, salmon, cod, herrings, bacon, with some butter and cheese, and a considerable quantity of wool, comprise the articles of exportation; the imports being foreign timber, coal, salt, flour and general merchandise. The mountains abound with red deer and various kinds of game, and the district throughout with hares, rabbits, grouse, plovers &c. In the caverns along the coast seals form their harbours; the hunters enter in small boats, with torches, and with loud shouts alarm the animals, which they kill with clubs as they attempt to pass into the sea. This county has no coal, and the principal fuel of the inhabitants is peat. According to the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics for 1900, Part III." the only minerals raised were: gravel and sand, 500 tons, and sandstone, 9,914 tons.

The white and herring fishery is prosecuted with success, and the curing of fish is another branch of trade in which many persons are engaged. The number of fishing boats registered December 31st, 1909, at the port of Wick, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act," was 407, with an aggregate tonnage of 5,395, and employing 1,950 men and boys, besides 350 other persons who are occasionally employed. The climate, though by no means genial and mild, is temperate, considering its high latitude (fifty-ninth degree), where the duration of the night at one period of the year is 19 hours.

Rivers, Lakes, Railways &c.—In the interior there are upwards of thirty small fresh water lakes, from which flow a number of streamlets and some waters of greater magnitude; the principal being the Isnald, Forss and Thurso rivers on the north-west, the latter formed by the junction of the Moore and the Beg, which rise on the borders of Sutherlandshire, and the Wick, Dunn and Berrydale on the south-east. The most extensive loch is the Watten, a fine sheet of water, about 3 miles in length, from which issues a branch of the river Wick. The only bays of note are Sinclair Bay, on the north-east, and Dunnet Bay, on the north. The Highland Railway, which after running close to the east coast of Sutherlandshire as far as Helmsdale has to make a detour of nearly 25 miles to the north before it can find a way through the hills which form the border of Caithness, passes into the county a little east of Forsinard station, and runs north-east to Georgemas junction, north-west of Spittal Hill, where it divides into two branches, one running north to Thurso, the other east to Wick and Lybster. In connection with the railway steamers run to the Orkneys.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Caithness-shire was anciently a bishopric, the earliest traces of which refer its origin to the 12th century; at present it contains ten parishes, which constitute a presbytery. The shire contains one royal burgh—Wick, and a police burgh—Thurso. The county sends one member to Parliament, and Wick, joined with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty (Wick District of Burghs), elects another representative. The number of the electors entered on the county register in 1911 was 4,220.

CASTLETOWN is a small village at the foot of Dunnet Bay, in the parish of Orlrig, poor combination and small debt court district of Thurso, and is 15 miles north-west from Wick and 5½ east of Thurso station on the Highland line. There are Established, United Free and Free churches, a chapel for Original Seceders, and five board schools. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited each have a branch here. In the immediate vicinity of the village is the estate of Castlehill, from which is quarried an excellent kind of stone, adapted to the purposes of flooring and flagging footways &c.; it lies in beds of from three-quarters of an inch to six inches in thickness; blocks have often been raised measuring 100 superficial feet, hence they are carried to the shore, where they are prepared and dressed, previous to shipping, to facilitate which a small and convenient harbour has been formed. Orlrig House, under Orlrig Hill, an eminence of 465 feet in the south-west of the parish, is the residence of James Smith esq. D.L., J.P. The trustees of the late Hon. Mrs. Madelina Palham Sinclair (d. 1910), of Murkle, the trustees of the late James William Traill esq. of Battar, and James Smith esq. of Orlrig, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 44,905 acres; rateable value, £5,927; population in 1891, 1,837, and in 1901, 1,555; the population of Castletown in 1901 was 767.

HALKIRK is a parish adjoining that of Thurso on the south with a village of same name, 6 miles south of Thurso town, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Thurso. The parish extends 20 miles from north to south and 13 from east to west at its widest part (Ben Challeg to Balach Begg); it contains 24 small lakes, abounding in trout, and has the Thurso water running through nearly its entire length. Besides the station of same name, a mile south of Halkirk village, there are three other railway stations (Altnabreac, Scotscaider and Georgemas Junction) in this parish, all on the Highland line. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free Presbyterian church, and nine public schools. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. The parish contains several ruined towers and camps, and a few lofty hills—Cnoc Maol-dhunn, 1,358 feet, and Cnoc Mhadadh, 1,040. Sir John George Tollemache Sinclair bart. of Thurso Castle; trustees of the late James Sinclair, Forse, and Capt. William M. Thrieland, Pingask and Toffingall, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 102,623 acres; rateable value, £17,638; the population; in 1901 was 2,355 in the parish and 471 in the village.

LYBSTER is an ecclesiastical parish and village at the mouth of the Reisgill burn, in the parish of Latheron, in which poor combination it is included, and is in the small debt court district of Wick; it has a station on the Highland railway, and is 14 miles south-by-west from Wick town. The "Brothers Port" was the name bequeathed to the haven here by the Scandinavians, who settled in Caithness in the 8th and 10th centuries, and it appears to have been much resorted to by these "sea-kings, or pirates. A sheriff court is held 10 times a year. The population in 1901 was 2,394 in the ecclesiastical parish and 609 in the village.

The parish of LATHERON extends along the coast from the Ord of Caithness to Bruan, in the south angle of Wick parish, and is 27 miles in length with a breadth varying from 10 to 15, and has a good road along the coast for its whole length. It contains the villages of Berriedale, Bruan, Dunbeath and Lybster. The parish church stands about half way between Lybster and Dunbeath, and there is also one at Lybster and four United Free churches and three Free churches in the parish. A cattle fair is held at Lybster twice yearly; also an auction mart every fortnight. Cattle fairs are also held at Dunbeath in March, June, August and November, dates not fixed, but usually on the second Tuesday in the month. Dunbeath Castle, garrisoned by Montrose in 1650, formerly belonged to a branch of the Sinclair family, now represented by Sir John R. G. Sinclair bart. D.L., J.P. of Barrack House, Wick. The mansion is the residence of Commander Edwyn S. Alexander Sinclair R.N. D.L., J.P. Forse House is the residence of Edward William David Baird esq. and Latheronwheel of Arthur S. M. Smedley esq. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. is the principal landowner. The area of Latheron civil parish is 19,539 acres; rateable value, £17,721; the population in 1901 was 5,223 civil, and 1,832 ecclesiastical.

REAY is a parish, lying to the west of Thurso and Halkirk parishes; the village of Reay, which is situated at the bottom of Sandside Bay, being 11 miles west-by-south from Thurso town, in the poor combination and small debt court district of which it is included. It is 11 miles from north to south and about 8 miles wide, and contains some hills (Ben Ratha, 793 feet, being the highest), besides several lochs, of which Shurrery is the largest; from this flows the Forse water, the other rivers being the Reay and Sandside. The nearest stations are those of Thurso; in the northern part of the parish; Scotscaider in the centre, and Altnabreac in the south, all on the Highland railway. The parish contains lime, granite, millstone, with traces of lead and iron, mineral springs &c. This place has afforded the title of baron to the MacKay family. There are two Established churches, one United Free church, one Free church and five schools in the parish. A fair is held on the first Monday in September. Achvarasdal Lodge is the residence of Lady Sinclair, and Sandside House the residence of Thomas Pilkington esq. D.L., J.P. Lady Lennox-Sinclair and T. Pilkington esq. are the principal landowners. The area is 44,905 acres; rateable value, £6,944; the population in 1901 was 974 in the civil, and 1,827 in the ecclesiastical parish.

THURSO is a parish, market town and burgh of barony, situate on the bay of same name, 20 miles north-west from Wick, with a terminal station on a branch from Georgemas junction of the Highland railway, and is the head of a poor combination and seat of a small debt court. The original name of Thurso, and that by which it is still called in the Gaelic language, is "Inverhóra;" invar signifying the mouth of a river, and the latter word being a modification of "Thor," so that Thurso is "Thor's river," the Danae being the earliest possessors of Caithness. The bay, sheltered from the north-east by Dunnet Head and to the west by Holburn Head, is commodious, but near the town becomes very shallow, so that the larger vessels and steamers have to discharge and load in Scrabster Roads, about 2 miles down the west side of the bay, but vessels of any burthen may find shelter in the bay in all weathers. A considerable trade is carried on in May and June in connection with the herring fishery, but the boats employed are not on a separate register, but come under that of Wick. A promenade has been constructed facing the sea, at the expense of the inhabitants of the town; it is upwards of 300 yards in length. The town is situated on the left bank of the Thurso river, here crossed by an elegant stone bridge, erected in 1887, and large quantities of salmon are sometimes taken. It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company, and supplied with water from the Loch of Calder. Near the harbour are the ruins of the ancient church of St. Peter, built about the 14th century, and half a mile north-west are the remains of the old palace of the bishops, destroyed by fire in 1222, when the bishop, Gilbert de Morsy, was burnt by the populace because he had displeased them in reference to tithes. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is a Justice of Peace Court held every alternate Wednesday, and a Sheriff Court ten times a year. The Established church is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower containing a clock, presented by the late Henry Miller esq. of London, a native of Thurso. The Episcopal church of St. Peter and the Holy Rood was built in 1884, and will seat 200 persons. There are also two United Free churches, a Reformed Presbyterian church, and Original Secession and Congregational chapels, and at Scrabster is a Mission chapel. The Town Hall is in High street. The Public Free Library, in High street, adjoining the Town Hall, was erected in 1910 at a cost of £2,000, provided by Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle; the library contains 7,800 volumes. The Museum, opened in 1895, has a very fine and large miscellaneous collection, including the botanical collection of the late Mr. Robert Dick. Dunbar's Hospital was erected at a cost of about £6,000, the necessary funds for this purpose having been bequeathed by the late Mr. Dunbar, of Scrabster; the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. the late Duke of Edinburgh K.G. in 1881, and the building opened for the admission of patients in May, 1885; there are 12 beds for the reception of incurable persons who have not been in receipt of parochial relief, and also six cottages adjoining for 12 aged persons who have been in better circumstances, preference being given to natives of Thurso. The Thurso Combination Poorhouse is situated at Halkirk. In Sir John square stands a finely-carved ornamental stone drinking fountain, erected in 1894 by his son, the present baronet, to the memory of Sir George Sinclair bart. of Ulbster, and formerly M.P. for Caithness (l. 1868). There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank and a Savings Bank. A little to the east of the town stands Thurso Castle, the seat of Sir John George Tollemache Sinclair bart. D.L., J.P. of Ulbster, which has been greatly enlarged and modernized. Scrabster House is the seat of John Miller esq. D.L., J.P. Richard Oswald esq. one of the plenipotentiaries from the Court of St. James for settling the peace of 1783, was a native of Thurso parish, as was also the late Sir John Sinclair bart. M.P. of Ulbster, born here in 1754, and whose name is associated with the "Statistical Account of Scotland," collected and published by his exertions; he died 21 Dec. 1835, and to his memory a very elegant monument of freestone, presented to the town by the late Alexander Miller esq. has been erected on a square piece of ground fronting the Established church. The late Robert Dick, an eminent botanist and geologist, was a resident of this town, and his collection now forms an important part of the Thurso Museum. A newspaper, "The Caithness Courier," is published here weekly on Friday. A cattle market is held every Wednesday, and the annual fairs on the second Tuesday in July and the first Friday in September. The area of the parish comprises 21,692 acres; rateable value of landward, £10,272; population in 1901, 5,406 civil and 5,431 ecclesiastical; these figures include for the burgh—rateable value, £11,911; population 1901, 3,815, including 92 on board ships in the harbour.

WATTEN is a parish and a village, in Thurso poor combination and Wick small debt court district, situated about 8 miles west-north-west of Wick: the parish is bounded on the north by Bower and on the east by Wick, on the south by Latheron and on the west by Halkirk, and has a station on the Highland railway, 1½ miles from the village. In the north-west part of the parish, which measures 11 miles north to south by 6 broad, there is a fine sheet of water, about 3 miles in length, called Loch Watten, from which issues a branch of the river Wick, which also receives the Acharole Strath and Cumster Burns, which flow through this parish. There are Established, Free and United Free churches, and three Board Schools. Sir R. W.
 Anstruther bart. of Balcaskie, Fifehire, Miss Henderson, of Thurso, and John Robson esq. of Lanegar, are the principal landowners. The parish of Watten comprises an area of 30,579 acres; rateable value, £6,591; population in 1891, 1,390, and in 1901, 1,230.

WITH LOUISBURGH AND PULTENEYTOWN.

WICK is a parish and royal burgh, situated on the east coast of Caithness, with a terminal station on the Highland railway, and is in Latheron poor combination and Wick small debt court district. The town, which is the largest in the county, is 290 miles from Edinburgh and 20 south-east from Thurso, and is divided into two parts, viz., Pulteneytown and Wick, Wick being on the north side of the river and bay and Pulteneytown on the south. The old town, or rather Wick proper, consists of two streets, High street and Bridge street; the former runs from the bay along the curvature of the river, and is flanked on either side by several lanes.

Wick was erected into a royal burgh in the year 1539, and is the county town of the shire, a parliamentary burgh and the returning station at elections, and joins with Kirkwall, Dornoch, Dingwall, Tain and Cromarty in returning a member to the Imperial Parliament. The government of the town is vested in 15 councillors, from whom are chosen a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer; their jurisdiction, however, is confined to narrow limits, and the amount of their revenue inconsiderable, being confined to the rental of market dunes and some curing stations. There is a Justice of the Peace Court and a Sheriff's Court, the former sitting when required, the latter every Tuesday and Friday, with power to appoint a sitting when and where required within the county.

The town is lighted with gas by a company, and has a good supply of water, which is conveyed from the Yarrow Loch, the works for that purpose having been finished in 1882, at a cost of £7,500.

The port of Wick consists of two harbours of fair dimensions, which have been greatly improved by dredging, so that the fishing fleet can enter at all states of the tide. A new harbour is now (1911) in course of construction at an estimated cost of £90,000. The breakwater, constructed at a cost of about £120,000, was demolished by a storm. The harbours, formerly under the care of the British Fisheries Society, were in 1879, by special Act of Parliament, handed over to the Wick Harbour Trust. The revenues of the harbour for the year ending October 31st, 1910, amounted to £11,949 6s. 8d.

The herring trade is the staple industry, and in the season commencing at the end of May and ending in September the home fishery is prosecuted to a very large extent. From April to May a few fishermen are busily engaged with the summer fishing at Stornoway and other places in the Western Hebrides. During the home fishing the population is increased by a large influx of Highlanders, men and women, who come as "hired hands." About 400 boats, manned by seven men each, set sail every evening for the fishing ground, the distance to which varies from 1½ to 60 miles, and return next day. The gutting and curing of the herrings gives labour to hundreds of men and women, and on a busy day the quay presents a scene both animated and picturesque. The winter herring, cod and ling fishing, also carried on extensively, brings to the town fish buyers from the principal towns in England. The total value of all fish landed in 1909 was £143,962. The value of fish exported from Wick during a year is computed at about £200,000, the benefit from which is diffused over a wide district. The railway transports the whole winter catch to the southern markets, while the vessels belonging to the port and a large contingent from other Scotch ports, and also foreign vessels, are busily engaged in taking the summer fish to Dantzic, Hamburg, St. Petersburg and other places on the continent, and to various ports in Ireland. The number of vessels employed in the general coasting trade that entered the port and were cleared in 1910 was 248, of 22,767 tons. In the British and foreign trade 97 entered and were cleared of 29,075 tonnage. The number of fishing boats registered at this port under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," on Dec. 31st, 1909, was 407; aggregate tonnage, 5,365, and employing about 1,950 men and boys, besides about 350 extra hands. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters "W. K."

The Customs collection extends from Meikle Ferry to Cape Wrath, with substations at Thurso, Helmsdale, Orkney and Shetland; the amount of Customs revenue collected in 1909 was £1,370. Different foreign states are represented by resident vice-consuls.

Ship building has entirely ceased, but the business of boat building is carried on to a small extent, and with the manufacture of herring barrels and nets is the principal source of employment for the non-fishing class.

There are two Established and four United Free churches, Roman Catholic and Presbyterian churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels and a Mission Hall. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, in Francis street, was built in 1870, and will seat 120 persons.

An Institution for Higher Grade Education is now (1911) in course of construction at an estimated cost of £8,000.

The Town and County buildings, in Bridge street, are of freestone, and have a turret with cupola containing a public clock. The Town Hall, a spacious apartment, contains portraits of the late Sir John Sinclair (d. 1873) and other local celebrities, and is used both as a council room and for the meetings of the Commissioners of Supply for the county; here also are the town clerk's and other offices. The County Court House is also in Bridge street. The Temperance Hall is used for public meetings and entertainments, and will hold 1,200 persons.

The Free Libraries Act was adopted in the parish of Wick in 1857, and a library and reading room was opened in Union street, Pulteneytown, November 16th, 1888, which is now in Sinclair terrace; in 1897 a new library, containing reading, ladies', recreation and reference rooms, was erected at a cost of over £5,000, towards which Andrew Carnegie esq. contributed £3,400, the site being given by the late Sir John Usher, 1st bart., of Norton House, Ratho (d. 1904); the library contains over 11,000 volumes. The Rhind Institution is in West Park.

There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank. There is also a Security Savings Bank.

The local Chamber of Commerce consists of the principal business men in the district, and meets on the first day of January every year.

Three newspapers, the "Northern Herald," "Northern Ensign" and the "John o' Groat Journal," are published here every week.

Cattle markets are held at Wick on the 2nd and 4th Thursday of each month, and the Caithness Agricultural Society holds an important annual cattle and sheep market at Georgemas on the second Tuesday of August, and an annual show in August at Wick and Thurso alternately.

The principal residence of the Earls of Caithness was at the strong castle of Girdgeog, situated about 2 miles north of Wick, on Sinclair Bay, and of this fortress the greater part of the walls are still standing. Adjoining is Sinclair Castle, a structure of almost equal antiquity; and near by stands Ackergill Tower, which has been recently restored. Another interesting ruin, on the southern shore of Wick Bay, is Wick Castle, known as the "Old Man of Wick," which, as well as the lighthouse on Ness Head, forms an excellent landmark to seamen. There are numerous remains of Pictish dwellings in the district; five stone coffins and a number of weapons and a collection of pottery have been found in different parts of the parish.

The principal seats are Ackergill Tower, the seat of Sir George Duff Sutherland Duubar bart. and Stirrke House, the seat of Edward William Horne esq. D.L., J.P. The area of the parish comprises 47,264 acres; rateable value, £39,940; population in 1901, 12,250, including 29 on board ships in the harbour; the burgh (parliamentary) rateable value, £29,659; population in 1901, 7,882. The number of inhabited houses in 1901 was 1,462. In 1901 the burgh of Wick had a population of 2,774, that of Pulteneytown, 5,137, and that of the landward, 4,220; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 6,189.

The number of electors on the Wick parliamentary register in 1910 was 1,349.

STAXIGOE, Boathaven and Sarclet are suburban villages, populated principally by fishermen, and have each a separate harbour.

PULTENEYTOWN, part of the royal burgh of Wick, contains the harbours, and may be reckoned the seat of the manufactures, commerce and fisheries of Wick; it was purchased when a mere waste by a society formed in London for extending British fisheries, but their undertaking was transferred in 1879 to a body of trustees. In 1892 the estate of Pulteneytown was purchased from the society by Sir John Usher bart. of Norton, who died in 1904, and his trustees are the present proprietors. Pulteneytown has been from the first laid out on a settled plan, and has regular streets, squares and terraces. The place is supplied with water from the Loch of Hempriggs. The Wick Public Library and Reading Rooms are situated in Sinclair terrace and Francis street. The Pulteneytown Academy, founded and endowed by the British Fisheries Society, is now under the control of the Burgh School Board. The cooperages, net, rope and woollen manufactories, saw mills and a distillery, employ two-thirds of the whole population. The area is 510 acres; population in 1901, 5,137.

THIS county, the smallest in Scotland in point of size, and the twenty-sixth as regards population, is bounded on the south-west and west by the Firth of Forth and Stirlingshire, and on the north and east by Perthshire; and on the south-east it joins the county of Fife. Its figure, which is five-sided, and is extremely irregular, does not exceed ten miles at its greatest length, nor more than eight at its extreme breadth, and it has an area, which in 1891 was increased by the addition of the parish of Alva, of 34,927 acres of land and 287 of water. The population, including Alva, in 1891 was 33,140, and in 1901, 32,029, viz.: males, 15,195 and females, 16,834. Inhabited houses in 1891, 6,769, and in 1901, 6,957.

Anciently the whole of the valuable territory lying between the rivers Forth and Tay, and bounded on the north-west by the chain of the Ochil Hills, was called Ross, as being a sort of peninsula, terminating at Stirling. In course of time the district of Ross was divided among the shires of Fife, Kinross and Clackmannan, with the introduction of a slip of Perthshire, on the edge of the Forth, in which is situated the town of Culross. Among the ancient structures of the county are three old towers; one of them, near Clackmannan, is said to have been erected by Robert Bruce; another, contiguous to Tillicoultry, is supposed from its similarity of architecture to have been built by the same person, or about the same period; the third, or the Alloa tower, is more particularly noticed in the description of that town. At Dollar are the ruins of Castle Campbell, standing on a lofty eminence, which are also particularised in the description of the village.

Soil, Climate &c.—From the shores of the Forth the surface of the county rises gradually to the Ochil Hills, the highest of which, Benclough, attains the height of 2,360 feet above the level of the sea, and is in the parish of Tillicoultry. The higher grounds are partly pastoral, but the whole of the lower parts adjacent to the Forth are rich, arable, and beautifully enclosed.

Manufactures, Produce &c.—The manufacture of woollen goods, in shawls, plaidings, tartans &c. has been for many years established in the parishes of Tillicoultry and Alva with complete success, and the towns belonging to them have become thriving places in consequence, and furnish employment to many hundreds of persons. At Alloa and Clackmannan wool spinning is carried on very extensively, the former place being likewise noted for the excellence of the ale brewed there and also for the distillation of whisky. Throughout the whole county coal is worked, and at various times valuable ores of silver, lead, copper &c. have been found in the Ochils. The produce of coal in 1905 was 384,230 tons, valued at £110,466, and fireclay was extracted to the extent of 4,200 tons, valued at £1,207; other minerals raised were igneous rock, 12,608 tons, and sandstone, 12,328 tons. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," were—Oats, 3,022 acres; beans, 400 acres; barley or bere, 322 acres; wheat, 295 acres; the total corn crops being 4,079 acres; turnips and swedes, 816 acres; potatoes, 346 acres; total green crops, 1,235 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 2,110; not for hay, 1,506 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 879; not for hay, 5,572 acres.

The entire area of the county is 34,927 acres, of which 11,962 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 3,715 woods and plantations. Of live stock there were 701 horses; 3,623 cattle; 15,177 sheep and 823 pigs.

There is a small fishery industry, 24 boats of an aggregate of 421 tons, and employing 49 men and boys, being registered at Alloa, December 31, 1909.

Rivers, Railways &c.—Besides the Forth the county is watered by two other streams, namely, the Devon and the Black Devon, and there is one large loch, Gartmore. Four branch railways centre at Alloa, one coming from the south-west from Larbert, on the Caledonian line, another from the south-west from Duffersline, via Clackmannan; a third proceeding to the north-east, passing through Tillicoultry and Dollar to Kinross, and the fourth, which runs direct east to Stirling, with a branch to Alva. These three latter lines belong to the North British railway.

This shire contains five civil parishes and seven entire and part of two ecclesiastical parishes; its only towns are Alloa, Clackmannan, Dollar, Tillicoultry and Alva. The county possesses neither royal nor parliamentary burghs, but it unites with Kinross-shire in returning one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency (county of Clackmannan) in 1911 was 6,432.

ALLOA

ALLOA, a town of considerable commercial importance, the leading one of the county, and in Stirling poor combination, is 30 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-west from Perth, 7 east from Stirling, 6 south-west from Dollar, 3 west from Clackmannan and 10 north from Falkirk. The North British railway has a junction here of lines to Stirling, Dufermline, Kinross and Kincardine, the line crossing the river by a bridge constructed in 1882, which is opened for traffic of vessels. The word "Alloa" is from "Ath Luath" (pron. "Ah-looah"), meaning the swift ford or ferry. It is situated on the north bank of the river Forth, at the point where the river ends and the Frith begins. At this spot, and for 10 miles above it, the water is deep enough to admit vessels with 10 to 11 feet draught. The quay stretches along the bank and large vessels or steamboats can thus lie close up to the thoroughfare, to the great convenience of passengers, and this is the only port on the Frith at which such can be accomplished with perfect ease and safety at any tide. A dock was constructed in 1863, which is 600 feet long and 195 feet broad, with 21 feet depth of water on the sill. Till 1854 Alloa was a burgh of barony, under the management of trustees, but in February of that year the inhabitants adopted the Burgh and Police Act, and in 1863 the Commissioners under that Act unanimously adopted the General Police (Scotland) Act of 1862, known as "Lindsay's Act." The burgh is now governed under the Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1900, by a corporation, consisting of a provost, four magistrates and seven other councillors. An ordinary meeting is held on the second Monday in each month, and a statutory meeting on the second Friday of November. The ordinary and small debt courts for the county are held weekly, a sheriff court once a week, and a justice of the peace court at stated periods, and a fairs court annually.

The town is supplied with gas from works up to 1878 the property of a private company, but now belonging to the Town Council, having been acquired at a cost of £23,250. Electric light is also supplied by the Town Council. Until 1822 the town was very badly supplied with water, but in that year a supply was obtained from a large artificial loch, known as Gartmore Dam, which covers 160 acres of ground; in 1867, the supply being again inadequate, two large filtering beds were constructed, and in 1891 the Town Council acquired the whole works and added a new reservoir and two filters at a greater elevation to supply the higher districts of the town; the total cost of this water works up to 1910 was £55,509.

The parish church of St. Mungo, a fine Gothic edifice, built in part with the materials of the old church, was opened 24 June, 1819, and has a tower with spire containing a bell and a clock presented by the Earl of Mar; the church was renovated in 1895, and affords 2,000 sittings. The ancient church of St. Mungo stood in the churchyard, where the tower still remains, and has a quaint figure of the patron saint within a niche. St. Andrew's, in Mar place, a chapel of ease to the parish church, is an edifice in the Early English style, and was opened 26 Nov. 1882. There are also four United Free churches and a Baptist chapel: the Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, erected in 1869, has a tower with a peal of bells, and sittings for 300 persons; the incumbency, net value £300, has been held since 1903 by the Rev. David Moir M.A. of Aberdeen University; there is also a Roman Catholic church, and three cemeteries—the old parochial burying ground in Greenside street, and the new cemeteries at Sannyside and Tullibody, the property of Alloa Parish Council.

The County Court House, in Mar street, a building in the Flemish style, erected at a cost of £8,700, was opened Dec. 8, 1865. Further additions are now (1911) being made at a cost of about £6,000. The Exchange Hall, in High street, was built in 1862, at a cost of £1,150, and is available for entertainments, auction sales &c. The Archaeological Museum and Hall, in Bedford place, erected in 1874, at a cost of about £2,000, contains a collection of antiquities, a library and a meeting room, and is also used for public meetings. The Burgh school occupies the site of the Old Assembly Rooms and Parochial school; it was built at a cost of about £5,000 and opened in 1876, and will hold 500 scholars. The Greenside Mission chapel was built by D. Paton esq. and placed by him under trustees for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association. The Municipal buildings, in Back street, erected in 1872, at a cost of about £4,000, are in the Classic style. Adjacent to these is the Post Office, a building in a similar style, opened 13 Nov. 1882. The Town Hall and Free Library, in Mars hill and Church street, was the gift of the late John Thomson Paton esq. and is a structure in the Gothic style, designed by the late Mr. Alfred Waterhouse R.A. of London, the large hall being capable of holding 1,000 people. Mr. Paton also presented an organ, at a cost of about £1,700, and fully equipped the library, the ratepayers having adopted the Free Libraries Act, 22 June, 1886; the building also contains two reading rooms, reference, and lending libraries, comprising about 16,000 volumes.

The Public Baths and Gymnasium, in Primrose street, erected 1895-8, form a building of stone in the Scottish style, also the gift of the late John Thomson Paton esq. J.P.; the baths include a swimming bath, with a gallery on three sides, holding 500, and extending over dressing boxes; the bath itself is 75 feet long by 32 feet wide and from 3 to 7 feet deep; there are also Turkish and Russian baths and a billiard room.

In 1871 an Act was obtained giving powers for the construction of new works, under which the Harbour Trustees greatly extended the dock, and also obtained a powerful steam dredger. The harbour has now been acquired by the North British Railway Company. Besides the brewing and yarn trades, for which the town is so noted, there are iron, copper and brass foundries, extensive bottle works, a pottery, including glass engraving machine works, cooperages, saw mills, a dry dock and shipbuilding yard, electrical works, brick and tile manufactories, including enamelled sanitary goods, flower pots &c. The collieries around Alloa are very numerous, and the export trade of the port depends to a large extent upon them. In 1909 182,146 tons of coal were shipped from this port; in the same year 221 vessels from foreign ports were entered inwards, aggregating 80,473 tons, and 252 were cleared outwards, aggregating 90,609 tons. A small fishing trade is also maintained; 24 boats of an aggregate tonnage of 421, and employing 49 men and boys, were registered at Alloa, Dec. 31, 1909, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894." Fishing boats and their implements are marked with letters A. A. Large quantities of whisky are manufactured here, and much ale is brewed. The exports comprise ale, whisky, glass bottles, coals, wool and woollen goods; the imports are timber, oak, bark, hides, butter, cheese and large quantities of grain for malting. A ferry steamboat crosses every hour to South Alloa, on the opposite side of the Forth, to the terminus of a branch of the Caledonian railway. A free shipping tidal port is formed at this part of the Forth through the great depth of water, together with the facility of railway transit. The Clackmannan County Hospital, founded Oct. 1868, mainly through the liberality of Walter, 12th Earl of Kellie, is designed for the medical and surgical treatment of persons in the county of Clackmannan suffering from disease or accident; it is under the management of a committee, annually appointed from the subscribers, and is supported by voluntary subscriptions. A new building, the gift of Miss Forrester Paton, was erected in 1898-9, at a cost of £10,000. The Clackmannanshire Combination Fever Hospital, situated to the north of the town, near Sauchie, was erected in 1895, and has 70 beds, but is available for 100 patients if necessary. The Alloa Day Home, formerly a ragged school, was instituted 29 Jan. 1884, to aid in securing the elementary education of poor and neglected children in Alloa, by providing superintendence and one or more meals a day; since 1894 the children have been educated at the Lindgate school. There are four schools under the Burgh School Board, viz.: the Academy, the Burgh and Lindgate school, the Grange school, and the Sannyside school; and three under the Parish School Board, viz.: the Alloa parish school, Fairfield school, and Tullibody school, besides which there are also Roman Catholic and Episcopal schools. In 1894 a secondary department was established in the Academy, and a new building, the gift of A. P. Forrester Paton esq. was opened in 1897; it is thoroughly complete, and the curriculum is intended to meet the requirements of the leaving certificates of the Scotch Education Department in the lower, higher and honours grades, and also the preliminary examination of the Scotch Universities; two laboratories for science work, chemistry and physics are attached. In the town are branch establishments of the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland, together with a bank for savings. Three newspapers are published in Alloa weekly—the "Advertiser," the "Circular" and the "Journal." In winter three curling clubs meet on their respective ponds.

The town is extending principally to the north, at Greenfield and Claremont, and eastward along the Clackmannan road. Villas are also rising to the west in rapid succession. Norwood, the residence of John Graeme Thomson esq. is a mansion in the Scottish Baronial style; Arusbrae House is the residence of James Younger esq. J.P.; Inglewood, on the Tullibody road, is the residence of Alexander Paton Forrester Paton esq. J.P.; Greenfield House, of David Thomson esq. J.P.; and Schaw Park, of Graham Paton esq. In 1877 land was acquired by the Commissioners, as a feu from the Earl of Mar and Kellie, which has been laid out as a public park. It extends over 20 acres, is triangular in shape, and generally level, with the exception of a slight elevation at the north-east corner; it was opened on the 1st May, 1878.

Alloa, in its immediate neighbourhood, presents scenery at once beautiful, bold and picturesque. On the north side is the range of the Ochil hills, covered with verdure to their very summits, and which are, perhaps, unrivalled in Scottish landscape; on the south the Forth, with Stirling Castle on the west and the Alloa and Clackmannan Towers on the east. The noble old ancient family of Erskine, Earls of Mar, were long the proprietors of this place. They forfeited the earldom by their participation in the rebellion of 1715, but the title and privileges were restored in June, 1824; and in 1855, in order to remove doubts as to whether the ancient dignity of Mar had not been by some means surrendered or merged in the Crown, an Act of Parliament was passed, 6 Aug. in that year, confirming the old title to the present Earl of Mar, as fully as if no such supposed surrender had taken place, while at the same time an Earldom of Mar, hitherto unheard of, but supposed to have been created in 1565, was awarded to the Earl of Kellie, in accordance with a decision of the House of Lords, 25 Feb. 1875. Alloa Tower, built previous to the 13th cent. and anciently the residence of the Erskine family, was a quadrangular building, but destroyed by fire in 1800, and the only existing portion is a square tower with walls 11 feet thick and a turret 89 feet in height. The beautiful and unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots here spent a portion of her youth and maturity; her son James also passed many of his youthful days in this place, under the care of John, 17th Earl of Mar, and his son, Prince Henry, received a part of his education in this building under the celebrated George Buchanan. The prospect from the summit of the tower is beautiful and extensive; it is now uninhabited. Alloa House, now the residence of the Earl of Mar and Kellie, stands a short distance eastward from the Tower, and was erected in 1834, but has since been much added to and improved. Alloa market was formerly held on Saturday, but is now discontinued. A hiring fair is held on the second Saturday in October. The parish of Alloa is in the presbytery of Stirling, and embraces an area of 5,499 statute acres; rateable value, landward, £33,445; burghal, £69,712; in 1891 the population of the parish was 15,862, and in the burgh, 10,754; in 1901 the parish population was 16,858, and of the burgh, 11,417; the number of inhabited houses in the parish was 3,520, and in the burgh, 2,384.

CAMBUS is a small village, situated on the Forth, in the old parish of Tullibody, 2 miles west from Alloa and 5 from Stirling, with a station on the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and is the junction of the branch line to Alva. The river Devon at this point discharges itself into the Forth, and there is a pier where small vessels are enabled to discharge and load. Brewing and distilling are extensively carried on here.

TULLIBODY parish was united to that of Alloa on 21st March, 1600; the village is 2 miles west from that town, the nearest railway station being at Cambus. The old church of Tullibody was unroofed in 1559 by the French troops of Mary of Guise in their retreat from Scotland, in order to repair the bridge over the Devon, which had been broken down by the inhabitants of the district to hamper them in their retreat; services continued to be held in the church until after 1833: the building having again fallen into disrepair, a new church of stone, in the Norman style, from designs by Mr. Macgregor Chalmers, of Glasgow, was opened in 1904, at a cost of £2,000, and consists of apsidal chancel, aisle and choir transept: there are sittings for about 350 persons. The charge is now a Home Mission Station of the Church of Scotland under Alloa. There is also a United Free church, erected in 1845, adjoining the old kirk. Tullibody House, the property of Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. is now the residence of Mrs. Forrester. Population in 1901, 720; the rateable value is included with that of Alloa.

ALVA, a thriving burgh in the parish of same name, Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, is a station on the Alva branch of the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, 7 miles north-east from Stirling, $\frac{3}{4}$ north from Alloa, 2 west from Tillicoultry and 5 west from Dollar; it is situated at the foot of the Ochil, whence issues a stream that turns several mills, and forms, in its course through the romantic Glen of Alva, three beautiful cataracts. The largest of these falls issues from an aperture in the rock above and tumbles from a height of 40 feet in one unbroken mass into a naturally formed basin below. An excellent pathway has been formed through the glen. This parish, formerly connected judicially with Stirlingshire and physically with Clackmannanshire, has been enlarged by the Boundary Commissioners of Scotland to nearly double its former size, and is now wholly situated in the county of Clackmannan. It affords excellent pasture, is well cultivated, and the hills abound with valuable ores, such as silver, copper, iron and lead. Sir John Erskine, of Alva, about the year 1715, assisted by some miners from Leadhills, discovered a very rich vein of silver in a romantic glen about midway between Alva House and the town; some of it was so rich that 14 ounces of ore yielded 12 ounces of silver, and during the space of a little more than three months it is said that ore was obtained from which Sir John drew from £40,000 to £50,000. After this was exhausted the ore became scarce, and hence the enterprise was abandoned. In the year 1767, James Erskine, laird of Alva, and nephew to Sir John Erskine, caused a pair of communion cups to be made, for the use of the church of Alva, from some of the remains of that ore then in his possession. On these the following inscription is engraved: "Sacris in Ecclesia S. Servani, apud Alveith, A.D., MDCCCLXVII., ex argente indigena, D.D.Cq.—Jacobus Erskine."

The manufacture of woollen goods, consisting of shawls, tweeds, tartans &c. is carried on in the town and its neighbourhood very extensively, and numerous hands find busy employment in the different mills; these, with their tall chimneys, exhibit an interesting contrast with the lofty Ochil and the surrounding plain. In 1876 the inhabitants adopted the "Police and Improvement Act, 1862," and in 1880 the "Burgh Gas Supply Act, 1876." The Town Hall, a plain structure erected about 1840 by public subscription, and enlarged in 1871, will seat about 1,000 persons. In the town is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a Savings Bank. In 1874 Public Baths and Washhouses were erected at the west end of the town, at a cost of about £4,000, the gift of the late Laird of Alva, James Johnstone esq. who also, about the same time, presented the inhabitants with a public park; and in 1873 a cemetery was provided by the Parochial Board. The House of Alva, the property of Miss Johnstone, and now occupied by John Turner esq. stands on an eminence, projecting from the base of Woodhill, about 220 feet above the bed of the Devon, which flows westward to join the Forth in the valley below, and 1,400 feet below the apex of the mountain. From the summit, which rises to an elevation of 1,770 feet above the sea level, the eye sweeps over an immense range of picturesque scenery, stretching from the German Ocean on the east to the Campsie Hills on the west, and including the Lammermoor Chain, the Bass Rock, Edinburgh, Arthur's Seat, the Pentland Hills, and the lovely windings of the Forth. The most interesting object, from an antiquarian point of view, is the well of St. Serf, or Servanus, the tutelary saint of the district, which is situated in the minister's glebe at a little distance from the parish church.

There are an Established church, two United Free churches, a Baptist chapel and a Christian Institute. The parish church, originally built in 1631, retains a stone on the west side of the church bearing a coat of arms with this date above it: in 1815 it was wholly rebuilt, and in 1854 it was considerably extended at the cost of the late James Johnstone esq.: the belfry contains one bell, with the inscription:—"They who me giveth are David Johnkin, William Bell to Alva Kirk; curs'd be that wretch who me perverteth from sacred use or else doth sell. Anno 1633." Miss C. E. M. Johnstone is lady of the manor and sole proprietress of the land. Alva parish is in the presbytery of Stirling, and contains an area of 5,458 acres, and had in 1901 a population of 5,641, the burgh containing 4,528 of that number; the rateable value, landward £3,950; burghal £13,382.

CLACKMANNAN, WITH THE HAMLET OF KENNET.

CLACKMANNAN, the capital of the county and parish of that name, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district of Alloa, was at one period a town of some consequence, but since the improvement of Alloa, and the superior facilities for commerce possessed by that place, it has sunk into comparative insignificance. The name is probably derived from the Gaelic "Clachan-Mannan," i.e. the stone circle or hamlet of the district called "Mannan." It has four stations, two on the Stirling and Dunfermline branch and two on the Alloa and Kincardine branch of the North British railway, both which lines pass close to the town, and is 32 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 10 east from Stirling and 2 southeast from Alloa, situated on an eminence gently rising to a height of nearly 200 feet above the level of the Forth. The surrounding scenery is very fine, and is viewed to great advantage from Clack-mannan Tower, which occupies a commanding site a little west of the town.

 Tradition states that this tower was built by King Robert Bruce, close to which he had his palace, not a vestige of which later now remains. The tower is 80 feet high, and contains a variety of apartments, reached by means of a novel stair.
 The sword and helmet of Bruce were formerly kept in the tower, but in 1796 they were bequeathed to the late Earl of Elgin by the widow of Henry Bruce, of Clackmannan, and are now preserved at Broomhall, Fifeshire. This venerable lady, who was a devoted adherent of the Sturats, with the sword of King Robert in her hands, was wont to assume the privilege of conferring knighthood, and when Burns the bard visited her he was honoured in this way, the old lady observing that "she had a better right to make knights than 'some folk.'" She died at the advanced age of 95 years. In the centre of the town is a square tower, and a portion of the west gable of an old building, formerly the county court-house and gaol, and which in 1865 was restored and furnished with a new illuminated clock by the late Francis Horne esq. Close to the tower is the market cross, which is in a good state of preservation, and near it is a winestone, upon which King Robert Bruce is represented to have frequently sat. To save this stone from spoliation, a number of gentlemen were at the expense of placing it on a stone pillar 10 or 12 feet high. The public hall was erected in 1888, at a cost of about £1,500, and a library and recreation room has since been added by Mr. John Thomson Paton, of Alloa, at a cost of about £2,500, to which Mr. Andrew Carnegie added £1,200 for the augmentation of the library; the hall will seat 450 persons. The principal trade of Clackmannan is that derived from the coal mines, which find employment for a large number of the inhabitants. There is also a woollen factory. Tun and vat building is carried on here, and at Kilbagie, a short distance from the town, is a paper mill. The soil of the parish in the carse is considered the richest arable in the shire, and under the best state of cultivation. Kennet House, the residence of Lord Balfour of Burleigh K.T., G.C.M.G., P.C., D.L., J.P., a short distance east from Clackmannan, is a fine modern mansion occupying a commanding site. The places of worship are the parish church and two United Free churches. The first mentioned, erected in 1814, at an expense of £4,500, is a spacious and handsome structure, having seats for 1,200 persons. The Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. who is lord of the manor, Lord Balfour of Burleigh K.T., G.C.M.G., P.C. the Earl of Mar and Kellie (lord-lieutenant), John Ernest Kerr esq. J.P. of Harviestoun Castle, Dollar, and the Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield, are the principal landowners. The parish of Clackmannan is in the presbytery of Stirling. Acreage, 9,427; rateable value, landward, £15,776; the population in 1901 was—parish, 2,494; town, 1,504; ecclesiastical parish, 2,364; inhabited houses in town, 513.

DOLLAR

DOLLAR is a burgh and parish in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, situated at the base of the Ochil hills, near the eastern extremity, on the road from Stirling to Kinross, 8 miles north from Clackmannan, 7 north-east from Alloa, 12 north-east from Stirling and 12 south-west from Kinross; it has a station on the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway. The climate is very mild and salubrious. The burgh is under the control of a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A great proportion of the importance of this place is to be ascribed to its Academy, which was erected and endowed by the munificent bequest of John Macnab, a native of this parish, who, though originally a herd boy, acquired by industry and perseverance a large fortune. He died in January, 1802. By his last will be directed that one half of that fortune (about £90,000) should be vested in the public funds, or some such security, in order that it might yield an annual income "for the endowment of a Charity or School for the Poor of the Parish of Dollar." The bequest was made to the minister and elders of the parish, for the time being, as trustees. The sum thus bequeathed so far exceeded the requirements of the case that the trustees wisely laid the foundations of the institution on a broader basis. After a protracted litigation in Chancery a very handsome edifice was erected in 1819, and masters appointed to give a classical and modern education. The building, designed by Mr. W. H. Playfair, architect, and to which extensive additions have subsequently been made, is in the Classic style, with a pedimented portico, supported by six massive columns of the Doric order. In the centre of the building is a large hall, containing a library of upwards of 6,000 volumes, lent to pupils and residents in Dollar free of charge. The number of pupils at the present time (1911) is about 370, including over 100 boarders: boys are prepared either for the universities, the army, the Indian police, commercial pursuits, or for civil engineering, and the general administration of the institution is carried out in accordance with a scheme prepared under the Educational Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882: the institution is recognised by the Scotch Education Department as a centre for Clackmannan, Kinross and Perthshires for the training of junior students. There are separate departments for boys and girls: twelve scholarships are annually offered for competition, and there are three leaving scholarships of £30, tenable for three years. The Board of Governors consists of 11 representatives—viz., one elected by the minister and kirk session of the parish of Dollar; two by the County Council of Clackmannan; one by the County Council of Kinross; three by the School Board of Dollar; one by the Senatus of Edinburgh University; one by the Senatus of St. Andrew's University; one by the School Boards of Alloa Burgh and Tillicoultry, alternately; and one by the School Boards of Clackmannan and Alva, alternately. Prof. P. R. Scott-Lang M.A., B.Sc. chairman; Charles Shirra Dougall M.A. head master, with a staff of 21 assistant masters and mistresses. In the town are also board schools and a private educational establishment, for younger children, which prepare pupils for the Academy.

The burgh is lighted by both electric and gas lamps, supplied by private companies.

There is an Established church, erected in 1841, and having a square tower, a United Free church and a Mission Hall. The Episcopal church of St. James the Great, built in 1883, will seat 200 persons: the rectory has been held since 1806 by the Rev. W. C. Gwyther M.A. of Keble College, Oxford. Here is a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. About a mile from the village are the venerable ruins of Castle Campbell, once one of the chief residences of the Campbell family, Dukes of Argyll, and captured in 1645 by the Marquis of Montrose. The remains occupy the summit of a high and almost insulated rock, and in the hill itself is a remarkable chasm, called "Kemp's Scere," which still bears some marks of a stair. Originally called "Castle Gloom," the name was changed by Act of Parliament in 1489 to its present designation. The view from the top of the ruins is singularly beautiful and extensive, and includes some of the loftiest of the Ochil hills, which rise to a height of over 2,000 feet above the sea level. The name of John Knox, the Scottish reformer, is intimately associated with Castle Campbell, and a ruined archway, forming one of the out-works of the castle, is popularly, though erroneously, known as "John Knox's pulpit." In 1864, by permission of the late Sir Andrew Orr, then proprietor of the estate, a new footpath, making access to the ruins more easy, was constructed at a cost of £300, and opened in May, 1865. It is fully a mile and a half in length, and affords views of several fine waterfalls. Harviestoun Castle is the seat of John E. Kerr esq. J.P. Half-yearly fairs are held here on the second Monday in May and third Monday in October. The parish of Dollar, which has an area of 4,773 acres, is bounded on the north by Glendevon, on the east by Muckart and Fossoway, and on the west by Tullincoultry; a portion of this parish forms ecclesiastically a part of the quad sacra parish of Blairingone; rateable value, burghal, £8,723: landward, £4,446; the population in 1901 was 2,042; there were 478 inhabited houses. The principal landowners in the parish are William H. Dobbie esq. J.P. of Dollarberg; Col. Robert Haig J.P. of Dollarfield; John Millar, of Sheardale House; J. Ernest Kerr esq. J.P. of Harviestoun Castle, and James Macarthur Moir esq. J.P. of Hillfoot.

Fishcross, on the Stirling and Kinross branch of the North British railway. There is an Established church here, built in 1842, and the district is now formed into a quoad sacra parish. A number of colliers, employed by the Alloa Coal Company, reside in these villages, and there is a Sunday school for their children, maintained by an endowment known as Lady Charlotte Erskine's.

FISHCROSS is a village adjoining Sauchie to the east, and contains Sauchie railway station and a United Free Mission church.

HOLTON is a hamlet at the other end of the district.

In the three villages of Sauchie, New Sauchie and Fishcross, the population in 1901 was 2,135, and in the quoad sacra parish of Sauchie, 3,304.

MENSTRIE is a village, situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar, 5 miles north-east from the former, 5 east from Bridge of Allan and 2 west from Alva, in the small debt court district of Alloa, and having a station on the Alloa and Alva branch of the North British railway; it was originally in the parish of Logie (Stirlingshire), but on the transfer of Alva parish from Stirling to Clackmannanshire, this village was, by Boundary Order No. 124, transferred into Alva parish, where it still continues for civil purposes. The Established church here was enlarged in 1897, and the parish was then constituted a quoad sacra parish. There is also a United Free church. Here is a large distillery, extensive wood carving and moulding mills, and a furniture manufactory. The County Council have constructed a reservoir here, at a cost of £20,000, for supplying the villages of Tullibody, Cambus, Fishcross and Upper Sauchie with water. An old house in the village is pointed out as having been the birth-place of Sir William Alexander kt. a statesman and poet during the reign of James VI. subsequently created by Charles I. Viscount Canada, and first Earl of Stirling, at the coronation of Charles I. at Holyrood, in consideration of his services and of having been the founder of the colony of Nova Scotia: the estates at a subsequent period passed into the possession of the Abercrombie family, and here in 1738 was born Maj.-Gen. Sir Ralph Abercromby K.B. who died of wounds received at Alexandria, Egypt, 28th March, 1801, his widow being subsequently raised to the peerage as Baroness Abercromby of Aboukir and Tullibody. Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. Population 1901, 898; rateable value, £5,755.

TILlicOUNTRY, WITH COALSNAUGHTON.

TILlicOUNTRY is a parish and police burgh, in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, on the road from Stirling to Kinross, south-east of the Ochil hills, 3 miles north-east of Alloa, 2 east of Alva, 9 north-east from Stirling and 13 south-west from Kinross, with a station on the main line between Glasgow and Perth of the North British railway. Ben Clench, the loftiest of the Ochil range, rises to 2,369 feet above the sea level, a few miles to the north of the town, and the view from the summit of this mountain is one of the most extensive in Scotland, stretching from the German Ocean on the east, to Goat Fell, in the Isle of Arran, on the west, and including the Lammarmoor Chain, the Bass Rock, Edinburgh, Arthur's Seat, the Pentland Hills and the river Forth. The Devon river winds along the north border of and through the parish. The inhabitants adopted the "Police and Improvement Act (1862)" in 1871, and the town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. In 1901 the parish council made a splendid road over the hills immediately to the north of the town, at a cost of about £200. The town is well supplied with water from a stream which comes from the hills on the north. The name of the parish is supposed to be derived from the Gaelic, "Tillich-cul-tir," signifying the hill at the back of the land. There are several woollen manufactories established here and at Devonside, chiefly for making shawls, fancy plaids, tweeds &c. The parish abounds in coal, and the hills to the northward are said to contain various kinds of minerals, and about a century ago a silver mine here was wrought by a London company; but from the thinness of the seams the works were abandoned. The Poplar Institute, on the north side of the town, has a tower with spire, erected with a sum of £1,500, presented by the late James Archibald esq. and an illuminated clock and bell. The orphanage, founded by the liberality of the late James Paton esq. who bequeathed £5,000 towards the endowment, stands on the north side of the town; it was opened 21st March, 1879, and is available for 30 inmates. The principal antiquities at the ruins of a circular building on a steep and rugged basaltic eminence which rises to the north of the town, and the remains of a Druidical circle on the south end of a rising ground lying to the east of it, called "Cuninghar." In 1862 two urns, each about 18 inches in diameter and the same in height, containing human bones, were found in making excavations within this circle; and again in 1894 another urn was discovered, as well as a very complete grave of the Stone period containing a food urn. There is a Parish church, three United Free churches, Baptist, Evangelical Union and Congregational chapels, and a Christian Fellowship room. Board schools were erected in the centre of the High street, in 1875, at a cost of about £3,000. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited are established in the town. Tillicountry House is the residence of Daniel R. Garner esq. The principal landowners in the parish are Robert G. Wardlaw Ramsay esq. J.P. of Whitehill, Lasswade, J. Ernest Kerr esq. J.P. of Harviestown Castle; Charles Blair esq. J.P. of Glenfoot; Miss C. E. Johnstone, of Alva, and the Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield, of Scone Palace, Perth

The parish of Tillicountry is in the presbytery of Dunblane, and comprises an area of 6,946 acres; rateable value, burghal, £10,846; landward, £6,510; in 1901 it had a population of 4,956, the burgh containing 3,338, and 833 inhabited houses.

DUMBAR T O N S H I R E,

ANCIENTLY designated Lennox, and subsequently Dun-bartonshire (which letter, though not the most popular, is the proper appellation), is a small county in the west of Scotland, and considered as within the boundary of the Highlands. From Inver-anan Hotel, Perthshire, in the north, it runs trending eastwards from near Dumbarton to Maryhill, a little north of Glasgow, being a length of 39 miles, by a breadth varying from 2 miles at Arrochar, between Lochs Long and Lomond, to 9 between Dumbarton and Kilmarnock; its boundaries are, north Argyllshire and Perthshire, west Loch Long, south the Clyde, east and north-east Stirlingshire and Loch Lomond; the parishes of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, however, are not inclosed in this measurement, being detached from the main portion on the south-east, and lying between the counties of Lanark and Stirling. This severed portion of the county is twelve miles long by from two to four and a half broad, and was annexed to the district in the reign of Robert I. The entire shire embraces an area of 157,433 acres of land and 13,489 of water. The population of the county in 1901 consisted of 56,598 males and 57,267 females, total 113,865. The number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 18,309; in 1901 the number of houses was, inhabited, 22,490; uninhabited, 1,527; and building, 222. In point of size this county stands as the twenty-eighth, and in population as the tenth.

Name and Early History.—In ancient times the name of the shire was "Levanach," signifying "the county of Leven," which was corrupted in the course of years to "Levenax," and more latterly to "Lennox." Originally this district was the residence of a British tribe designated the "Atacotti" or "Eithacacti," a word importing "dwellers along the extremity of the wood." The descendants of this people were not enslaved or expelled from their hunting grounds by the Romans, who erected a wall or dyke from near Duglass Point, in this county, to the Firth of Forth, some remains of which can be traced at Cumbernauld and in the town of Kirkintilloch; they became known as the Britons of Strath-Clyde, and, though almost perpetually at variance with their neighbours, they remained a distinct race till the reign of Malcolm IV. From these people the name of Dumbartonshire is said to be derived, and taken from the appellation of the castle, signifying "the hill of the Britons." This region, until the early part of last century, continued to be the ready prey of certain lawless Highland clans, who lurked in the recesses of its interior, and were finally extirpated or reduced to quiescence and subordination only by the most vigorous measures that could be adopted by the civil government of the country. It was at one period the property of a powerful family of Saxon origin, one of whom, called Alwyn, the son of Arkil, was elevated to be Earl of Lennox in the reign of William the Lion, and his descendants for several centuries were at once heritable sheriffs of the county and chief possessors of its lands. The Earldom of Lennox was raised to a Dukedom in 1581; but Charles, the sixth Duke, dying without issue in 1672, the honours of the family, including the Earldom of Darnley, developed upon Charles II. as nearest male heir, who bestowed them on his natural son, Charles Lennox, after whose demise the estates were sold.

Soil, Produce &c.—The soil is various, consisting in the north and west of mountain and moor, and south and east of Loch Lomond of deep black loam, clay, gravel and bog peat. The climate generally is good; along the vale of the Leven and the Clyde it is mild, but on the Kilpatrick Braes and among the mountains of Arrochar and Luss the cold is rather severe, and stormy weather is experienced. A large part of the county is planted with wood, the soil and climate having been found favourable to the growth of timber. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," are: Oats, 7,025 acres; wheat, 568; barley or bere, 123; total of corn crops, 7,839 acres; potatoes, 2,110 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,383; cabbage, 138; total of green crops, 3,728; clover sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 6,418 acres; not for hay, 8,071 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 2,287; not for hay, 20,733 acres. Total area of land, 157,433 acres, of which 78,228 are mountain and heath land (used for grazing) and 8,663 woods and plantations.

The live stock in 1910 comprised 1,441 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 415; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 8,140; other cattle, two years and above, 2,114; one year and under two, 1,881; under one year, 1,624; ewes kept for breeding, 31,325; other sheep, one year and above, 11,791; under one year, 26,861; sows kept for breeding, 189; other pigs, 908. The cattle of the shire are chiefly of the West Highland breed, some of which are reared in the county. The roads throughout have been greatly extended and improved of late years. A century has elapsed since the manufacturing industry was introduced into this part of Scotland—bleachfields about that period making their appearance on the banks of Loch Lomond and the Leven. About 1768 the first printworks were established on the Leven, but now calico printing and Turkey-red dyeing are very extensively pursued at several places. Ship building, both iron and wood, is a branch of some importance, as is also the manufacture of chemicals. Dumbartonshire does not contain numerous minerals, but it has some clay, sandstone, limestone, coal and iron ore. The production in 1909 was: Brick clay, 7,781 tons, value £341; coal, 477,850 tons, value £209,059; gravel and sand, 30,024 tons; igneous rocks, 10,848 tons; iron ore, 1,020 tons; limestone, 4,309 tons, value £1,185; sandstone, 2,620 tons.

Mountains, Lakes, Railways &c.—Of hills, most of which lie in the northern part of the county, between Loch Lomond and Loch Long, the chief are those of Arrochar, Luss, Row, and Roseaeth, which are inaccessible to the plough, and abound with moors, mosses and woods; the hills of Kilpatrick, on the south, are of much less height, Ben Vorlich, adjoining Perthshire, having the greatest altitude, rising 3,300 feet above the level of the sea. The other principal elevations are Ben Vane, 3,004 feet; Ben Bich, 2,302 feet; Ben Breach, 2,233 feet; Ben Reoch, 2,168 feet; and Tullich, 2,075 feet. The precipitous and rugged summits of these mountains, constituting the Highland district, are frequently capped with snow, and in the finest weather hid amidst the clouds; some of these eminences are apparently volcanic, particularly the rock on which Dumbarton Castle stands. There are about ten lakes or lochs, among which are Loch Long and Loch Gare, projecting into the Highland territory from the Firth of Clyde; but the most extensive is that of Loch Lomond. It lies at the foot of the Grampian mountains, which terminate here, but seem to rise in many islands that appear a continuation of them. These islands, thirty-two in number, are lofty and picturesque. On Inch Calloch (or the island of Nuns) are the remains of a conventual church, and on Inch Murrin (or the island of St. Murrinus, two miles long, and converted into a deer park) are the ruins of a house once belonging to the Lennox family. This loch is thirty miles long, in some places eight broad, and covers a surface of 20,000 acres; the depth varies from twenty to one hundred fathoms. It abounds with delicious trout, and the southern part has salmon. The lake discharges its waters into the Clyde by the river Leven, which is the only stream of any note in the district. The Forth and Clyde Canal, about 35 miles in length, extends from Bowling on the Clyde to Grangemouth on the Forth. The North British railway enters the county from Glasgow, a little west of Maryhill, throwing off a branch to Bearsden and Milngavie, and continuing on to Dumbarton, where it divides, one branch going north to Balloch on Loch Lomond and north-east to Drymen, the other passing on to Helensburgh, where it joins the West Highland line: this latter runs by Garelochhead, Arrochar and Ardui (head of Loch Lomond) to Fort William; the two detached parishes of Kirkintilloch and Cumbernauld, lying north-east of Glasgow, are traversed by the North British and the Caledonian railways, and the last named have a line by the north of the Clyde to Dumbarton &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Dumbartonshire is divided into 12 parishes, 10 of which are in the presbytery of Dumbarton and 2 in that of Glasgow; it contains but one royal burgh—Dumbarton—and four burghs of barony. The only contributory burgh belonging to the county is Dumbarton, which unites with Renfrew, Rutherglen, Kilmarnock and Port Glasgow, styled the Kilmarnock Burghs, in returning one member to the Imperial Parliament. The county sends one member, the constituency numbering in 1911, 18,758 electors.

ALEXANDRIA is a town and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Bonhill and in Dumharton small debt court district and poor combination, on the west side of the river Leven, here crossed by a fine girder bridge, erected in 1897-8 by the County Road Board, at a cost of £8,000, in place of the former suspension bridge of 1836, and opened 2nd July, 1898. The town is 3 miles from Dumbarton, 17 from Glasgow and 64 from Edinburgh; it contains several well-built streets, and has a station on the Dumbarton & Balloch joint railway. The trade consists largely in the printing and dyeing of fabrics, and there are several extensive print works on the banks of the river. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches and various chapels. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Mungo, will seat 228 persons; the Rev. John Eldon Ellisen M.A., B.D. of Trinity College, Dublin, has been rector since 1910. The Public Hall is centrally situated at the bridge end. The Ewing Gilmour Institute, presented to the town by W. Ewing Gilmour esq. at a cost of about £12,000, consists of library, reading and recreation rooms. The Scottish Girls' Friendly Society occupies premises erected, with an endowment, at a cost of upwards of £20,000, entirely defrayed by W. E. Gilmour esq. of Woodbank, and opened 21st May, 1891. The public drinking fountain in Main street was erected in 1870, in honour of the late Alexander Smollett esq. of Bonhill, by his friends and tenants. The Vale of Leven Young Men and Women's Christian Association has premises in Bridge street. Tullichevan Castle is the residence of Adair Campbell esq.; Cameron House, of Lt.-Col. Charles Edward Drummond Telfer-Smollett J.P.; Auchendennan, of William James Chrystal esq. and Auchinbegish, now (1911) is unoccupied. The area comprises, with Bonhill and Jamestown, 8,373 acres; gross rateable value, £73,794. The population of the town in 1901 was 8,007, and the ecclesiastical parish, 8,392.

BALLOCH is a village in the parish of Bonhill, at the south end of Loch Lomond, and about a mile north-west from Bonhill, and has a terminal station on the Dumbarton and Balloch Joint railway. In 1842, Sir James Colquhoun bart. of Luss, erected an elegant suspension bridge across the Leven water, in place of the ferry previously in use. The old bridge has been superseded by a substantial iron girder bridge, supported from the bed of the river by stone pillars, and opened for traffic in 1888. The bridge toll ceased on May 15, 1895. There are two hotels: the Balloch hotel at the foot of Loch Lomond, and the Tullichevan temperance hotel, both adjoining the station. Balloch Castle is the residence of the Misses Dennistoun-Brown. A fair is held at Balloch on the 15th of September, for horses.

The children here attend the Board School at Jamestown BEARSDEN, or New Kilpatrick, is a town in the parish of New or East Kilpatrick, 5 miles west from Glasgow, and having a station on the Milngavie and Glasgow section of the North British railway; it consists principally of villa residences with some shops, and has a branch of the Bank of Scotland. It closely adjoins the kirktown of New Kilpatrick, and the united villages bear the name of Bearsden or New Kilpatrick. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches; there is also an Episcopal church dedicated to All Saints. St. Peter's Roman Catholic College (for advanced students), opened in March, 1892, was the gift of the Archbishop of Glasgow to his diocese and is a building of stone, erected at a cost of upwards of £30,000. The Buchanan Retreat, completed in 1891, was erected by the Misses Buchanan, of Bellfield house, Kilmarnock, at a cost of about £30,000, for the reception of aged men. The Schaw Convalescent Home, opened in 1895, at a cost of £48,000, was the gift of Miss Margery Shanks Schaw, in memory of her brother, A. Schaw esq. The population in 1901 was 2,705, including 61 in the House of Refuge for Girls.

Post, T. & M. O. & Telephone Call Office, Bearsden; James M. Aitchison, postmaster. Letters arrive through Glasgow. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 2 & 6.15 p.m.; dispatches, 9.5 a.m. & 1.15, 5.5, 7.25 & 9.10 p.m

BONHILL is a parish and small town, in Dumbarton poor combination and small debts court district, 1 mile from Loch Lomond. 64 west from Edinburgh, 17 north-west from Glasgow and 3 north from Dumbarton, on the east side of the Leven, and connected with Alexandria by a girder bridge, constructed in 1897-8 by the County Road Board, at a cost of £3,000, and opened 2 July, 1898. The nearest station is at Alexandria, on the Dumbarton and Balloch Joint railway. The parish church, which stands nearly in the centre of the town, on the margin of the Leven, was erected in 1835-6, at a cost of nearly £3,000, and is a fine building in the Gothic style, with a square tower containing a clock, and affords about 1,000 sittings. The United Free church, erected in 1844, is an edifice of red freestone, with a tower and tapering spire, and was enlarged in 1885, and again in 1892. The United Presbyterian (now the United Free) church was built in 1830. Col. Charles Edward Drummond Telfer-Smollett J.P. of Cameron House, Alexandria, and Alexander Crum-Ewing V.D. of Strathleven, are the principal landowners. The area comprises, with Alexandria, Jamestown and Balloch, 8,380 acres: rateable value, £73,794; the population in 1901 was 14,379, including 8,007 in Alexandria town and 3,333 in Bonhill town; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,922.

CASTLECRARY, see CUMBERNAULD.

CLYDEBANK, a district in the parish of Old Kilpatrick, was constituted a burgh 21st Dec. 1886, and includes Dalmuir, Kilmboe, Yoker and Radnor Park. A branch line of the North British railway from Clydebank to Partick was opened in Dec. 1882, and continued to Yorkhill, Feb. 1885, and at Stobcross junction this line joins the underground railway for Glasgow (Queen street). The station here on the Caledonian railway was opened in Oct. 1897. Here are a ship building yard and engineering works, which give employment to a number of men. The municipal government is vested in a provost, 4 bailies and 10 commissioners. The burgh is supplied with water by the Clydebank and District Water Trust. There is an Established church, the Hamilton Memorial United Free church, erected in 1884, the West United Free church, built in 1887, and two others, a Roman Catholic church, built in 1903, a Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1886, Baptist and Congregational chapels, Mission halls and Salvation Army barracks. St. Columba's Episcopal Mission church will seat 600 persons; the Rev. William Henry Jenkins B.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham, has been priest in charge since 1906.

The Town Hall and Municipal buildings, erected in 1899-1902, at a cost of about £50,000, are of stone in the Renaissance style, and include a large council chamber with gallery, committee rooms, a concert hall, seating about 1,600 persons, police department, with 13 cells and a house for the superintendent, and a clock tower, 109 feet in height, the upper part of which forms an open balcony. The main entrance and corridors are paneled and finished in oak. Behind is a lesser hall, with a gallery, seated for 400 persons, and beyond this is the burgh court room, with magistrates' and fiscal's rooms, witness rooms, lavatories &c. Public baths and a fire station were erected on the opposite side of a new street to the west of the Municipal buildings, and include a bathkeeper's house and eight houses for the firemen. There is a Public Library for Clydebank, Dalmuir and Yoker at Clydebank school.

DALMUIR is about 7 miles east from Dumbarton, in the parish of Old Kilpatrick and partly in the burgh of Clydebank, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways. The village occupies an elevated site commanding fine views of the Clyde and the surrounding country, and has an Established church, built in 1903, and a Masonic hall. There are engineering works and a ship building yard, as well as gas works and an electric power station. Population in 1901, 2,203.

RADNOR PARK is a village about three-quarters of a mile from Dalmuir and Kilbowie stations on the North British and Caledonian railways, and has Established and United Free churches. Population in 1901, with Dalmuir Hill, 1,897. It is now annexed to the Burgh of Clydebank.

At KILBOWIE is an Established church, and here also are the extensive works of the Singer Manufacturing Co. Limited. Kilbowie cemetery of 8 acres was opened in January, 1897. The population of Kilbowie in 1901 was 7,312.

YOKER is a village about 4 miles south-east from Old Kilpatrick and 6 north-west from Glasgow, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways; the eastern portion of the village is in the county of Renfrew, and has an Established church, built in 1897, and a Mission Hall. Here is a distillery and the extensive works of the Clyde Trust Dock, covering about 8 acres and completed in 1908. Population in 1901, 4,336.

The population of the police burgh in 1891 was 9,998, in 1901, 18,670, 21,591 in the town and 18,023 in the ecclesiastical parish, which extends into Renfrewshire; in 1881 Clydebank was returned as having only 1,634; area of burgh, 1,424 acres; valuation, £210,140. In 1911 the population was 38,000 and the rental was £199,294. The burgh as now extended has a population approximating to 40,000.

CUMBERNAULD

CUMBERNAULD is a parish and ancient village on the main road between Glasgow and Edinburgh, in a detached portion of the county and in the small debt court district of Dumbarton, 33 miles west from Edinburgh, 29 east from Dumbarton, 14 north-east from Glasgow, 13 south from Stirling, 9 west from Falkirk, 7 east from Kirkintilloch and 7 north from Airdrie, with a station at Dullatur on the North British railway, and one (Cumbernauld) on the Caledonian railway, about 2 miles from the village. The staple business of the district is mining, there being several coal and lime works and many quarries of good freestone in the neighbourhood, as well as several fire-clay works. The parish church stands on an eminence embosomed in trees at the west end of the village; there is also an Established church at Condorrat, two United Free churches, a Mission Hall and a Roman Catholic church, a good Public Library and a subscription news room. Cumbernauld House is the property and residence of Alan Burns esq. J.P. The annual fair is held on the second Thursday in May, for cattle, horses &c. Alan Burns esq.: Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartshore; The Carron Company; John Motherwell, Walter Stewart, William Rankin, John Duncan, Thomas Duncan, George Campbell, John Drysdale, James Legzate esqrs. and Henry Brown Marshall esq. of Waterhead, are the principal landowners. The population in 1891 was 4,283, and in 1901, 4,905 in the civil parish, including 1,170 in the village and 3,352 in the ecclesiastical parish, which extends into Stirlingshire. The parish has an area of 11,075 statute acres; rateable value, £23,319.

CONDORRAT is a small village in this parish, and about 3 miles west from Cumbernauld. Here is an Established church. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal and ironstone mines and quarries here. The population of the village in 1901 was 737, and of the ecclesiastical parish, which extends into Kirkintilloch parish, 1,860.

DULLATUR is a hamlet in this parish, on the borders of Stirlingshire, and has a railway station on the North British railway, about 1½ miles distant.

CASTLEARY is a small hamlet in this parish, about 1½ miles north-east of Cumbernauld, but in the county of Stirling. CROY is a small village in this parish, and distant from Cumbernauld about 3 miles; each of these two places has a station on the North British railway.

AUCHENSTARBY (population in 1901, 587), Molliburn and Smithston (population in 1901, 375) are mining villages in this parish.

DUMBARTON

DUMBARTON ("dun Bretann," the Welshmen's fortress) is a town and royal burgh, the capital of the county, head of a poor combination and a parish, 59 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 north-west from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Helensburgh and 3 south from Alexandria, with a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint line of the North British and Caledonian railways, and another at the east end of the town on the Caledonian railway. The town is principally built on low ground, nearly encompassed on its western quarter by the river Leven, about half a mile from its junction with the Clyde, and almost secluded from the view of persons on the latter river by the intervention of Dumbarton rock, a huge rocky eminence on the edge of the Frith, and about half a mile from the town. From 1675, Dumbarton gave the title of Earl to a branch of the Douglas family, but it became extinct on the death of George, 2nd Earl, some time after 1716. The present town, which stands at a short distance up the river Leven, is chiefly composed of one main street, disposed in a semicircular form around the head or north end of the peninsula; there are, however, some beautiful avenues lined with detached houses, and an extensive suburb on the west side of the Leven leading to Renton and Helensburgh, which is connected with the town by a good stone bridge of five arches, 300 feet in length. The waters of the Leven form a commodious harbour, and an excellent quay and private dock have been constructed. The pier, which belongs to the corporation, was erected at a cost of £12,000, and opened in May, 1875, but is now in ruins. The Clyde Navigation is controlled by a body of trustees. The principal trade, and that on which the prosperity of the town now chiefly depends, is comprised in shipbuilding and engineering, both of which are carried on extensively, and in ordinary times about 5,000 men are employed at the different works. Brewing, ironfounding, and rope making are also pursued to a limited extent, but the manufacture of crown glass, once an important craft here, ceased in 1848. Dumbarton was erected into a royal burgh by Alexander II. in the year 1222, and its privileges (including the right of fishing in the Leven) were confirmed by a charter of James VI. The municipal government is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and eight councillors. The sheriff ordinary court and the commissary court are held every Tuesday and Friday during session, the sheriff small debt court every Tuesday during the session, and on vacation court days, and the debts recovery court every Friday. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Dumbarton, together with Kilmarnock, Renfrew, Rutherglen and Port Glasgow, forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member; the boundaries of the district were extended under the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885" (48 & 49 Vict. c. 23). Kilmarnock is the returning burgh. The town is lighted with gas and electricity from works in the hands of the corporation. A plentiful supply of water is obtained from the Long Craigs and Loch Humphrey, and the drainage of the town is being gradually completed. An electric tram service was opened February 20, 1907.

The County buildings and Court house, completed in 1825, at an expense exceeding £5,000, were reconstructed and two spacious wings added in 1863, at a cost of £5,170, in 1896 a sum of £2,200 was expended in enlarging the court house, and in 1898 a further sum of £6,000, for additions to County buildings. The buildings comprise court rooms, various offices, and a gaol, but prisoners are now sent to Glasgow. The Sheriff and Commissary Courts, and the meetings of the Commissioners of Supply and County Council are all held here; and here also is the Justice of the Peace office. The County Police offices, in rear of the County buildings, were completed in 1896, at a cost of £2,700. New Municipal and Police buildings were erected in 1899-1903, on the site of College Park, presented to the burgh by Lord Overton; the buildings are of red freestone, in the Scottish Baronial style, and the cost, exclusive of the site, was £19,000. The main building contains on the ground floor the town clerk's offices, burgh chamberlain's offices, magistrates' room and police court room, witnesses' rooms &c.; the front entrance hall is paved with marble and the walls are lined with richly coloured tiles: on the first floor is the council chamber, 41 by 23 feet, committee and waiting rooms, provost's room and the offices of the burgh surveyor: at the north end of the main building is the police section, containing a court room, charge room, superintendent's room, inspectors' and muster rooms and cell for prisoners. The grounds surrounding the building have been enclosed and tastefully laid out at a cost of upwards of £3,000, defrayed by Lord Overton: in the grounds is a fine bronze statue of the late Peter Denny LL.D. shipbuilder and engineer, died 1895, erected by friends and fellow townsmen; there is also a granite cross, erected to the memory of the officers and men of Dumbarton who fell during the South African war, 1899-1901. The Post Office, in College street, is a stone building erected in 1907-1908 at a cost of about £4,200. The William Denny Memorial Institute, in Church street, a fine edifice of stone, was opened on the 26th January, 1892, at a cost of upwards of £7,600, as a memorial to William Denny esq. who died at Buenos Ayres, 17th March, 1887. The Dumbarton Free Public Library, in Strathleven place, is a building of stone, erected in 1909 at a cost of £6,000, provided by Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. The School of Art occupies a portion of the burgh buildings; there is also a Literary and Philosophical Society. In High street are branches of the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and in Church street the Bank of Scotland. The principal hotel is the "Elephant." Two weekly newspapers are published here—the "Dumbarton Herald" and the "Lennox Herald." The New Joint Infirmary Hospital for the county and burgh, erected in 1899-1901 at a cost of about £25,000, exclusive of the site, occupies an elevated position on the Cardross road; the buildings are of stone, and consist of three wards with pavilions, an administrative block, steam laundry, disinfecting and washing houses &c.; there is also a Cottage Hospital at Braehead. The combination poor house, at Townend, was completed in 1865, at a cost of about £7,000, and is situated on the outskirts of the town, in a healthy and pleasant locality. The Territorial Force stationed in the town comprise the 3rd Co. Clyde Royal Garrison Artillery, having a Drill hall in Risk street, and the C Co. 9th (Dumbartonshire) Battalion Princess Louise's Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, which have their head quarters at the Drill hall, in Maclean place, Church street.

The parish church, at the east end of High street, erected in 1811 at a cost of £6,000, is a handsome edifice, with a fine spire and clock. There are also five United Free churches; the Episcopal church of St. Augustine's, in High street, erected in 1873, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, and affords 530 sittings; the incumbency, net £230, has been held since 1901 by the Rev. C. R. Robertson B.A. of Durham University. The Mission hall, in Church street, was built at a cost of £1,500, and there are also Wesleyan Methodist, Evangelical Union and Baptist chapels and a Roman Catholic church. Of the ancient collegiate church, founded in 1450 by Isabella Duchess of Albany and Countess of Lennox, and dedicated to St. Mary, all that now remains is one of the tower arches, which was removed and placed at the entrance to the rectory of the Episcopal church in Church street, from whence it was taken in 1908 and placed in front of the main entrance to the Municipal buildings; the Dumbartonshire railway now passes over the site of the church. The Dumbarton Academy, an institution of long standing, has been rebuilt in the French Gothic style of the 13th century, and has a frontage of 132 feet, with a central tower 140 feet high. The upper floor is in part assigned to the Dumbarton School of Art, inaugurated Nov. 25th, 1884, and in the rear is a large public hall, capable of holding about 750 persons. The interior of the school building was entirely destroyed by fire in 1882, but has since been refitted and furnished. The cost of both buildings was about £6,000. A site has been obtained for a new Academy to be erected at Braehead at an estimated cost of £26,000, to supersede the existing building in Church street. In the elementary and secondary departments there will be sixteen classrooms, as well as various special rooms; there will also be a large assembly hall, and detached from the main building there will be a gymnasium. The plans are now (1911) with the Education Department for approval of details. There are five Board schools, including the Dumbarton Academy, and a Roman Catholic school. Levensgrove Park, covering about 35 acres, was presented to the town by the late Peter Denny esq. of Helenslee, and the late John Macmillan esq. of College Park, and was opened as a public park 30th May, 1885. It is pleasantly situated, and bounded by the Clyde and Leven, and the grounds have been tastefully laid out at a cost of about £20,000. A cattle market is held on Monday, and is well attended; a large cattle fair is also held on Carman Moor on the first Wednesday in June.

The rock of Dumbarton, the most striking and famous feature of this town, is an isolated mass of basaltic rock, on the margin of the river Clyde, a mile in circumference at its base, but diminishing in breadth near the top, which is cloven into two summits, one higher than the other; these are almost perpendicular, and rise to a height of more than 300 feet above the level of the stream. It has been occupied by defensive works of varied character for many centuries, but of the ancient castle no remains now exist. In Bede's time it was deemed almost impregnable; but it was reduced by famine in 706, and in 1291 was surrendered to Edward I.; John Balliol regained it in 1292, and Bruce held it in 1309; in 1481 it was besieged by the English, and having been taken, was annexed to the Crown in 1485; in 1540 it was visited by James V. and in 1547-8 served as a place of refuge for Queen Mary; in 1571, May 2, it was invested and captured by the troops of the Regent Lennox; from 1639 to 1640, it was alternately held by the Covenanters and the king, but in 1652 fell into the hands of Cromwell. On the union of the kingdoms in 1707, it was named as one of the four fortresses agreed to be kept in repair. The buildings now forming what is called the Castle comprise a guardhouse and lodging for the officers, from whence there is an ascent by some flights of steps to the part where the rock divides; here is a strong battery, now obsolete, barracks for the garrison, and other necessary buildings; above these are several batteries which command a most extensive range, especially up and down the Clyde; but the castle is not now fitted for defensive purposes. The governor's house, a modern structure, is placed in the cleft of the rock, some parts of which are magnetic.

Overton is the seat of Lady Overton; Dalnoak Castle is the seat of James Aikoin esq. J.P. and Strathleven of Alexander Crum-Ewing esq. V.L., J.P., V.D. Col. John McAusland Denny J.P. of Helenslee; Dr. Douglas White and Alexander Crum-Ewing esq. V.L., J.P., V.D. of Strathleven, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,746 acres; rateable value, landward, £5,053; burgh, £73,891; the population (1901) of royal burgh, 15,406; police burgh, 18,984 (which includes 4,901 in Cardross parish and 137 in Old Kilpatrick parish), and 18,836 in the parliamentary burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 10,137. The population of the municipal wards in 1901 was:—First, 4,901; Second, 2,793; Third, 3,545; Fourth, 3,596; Fifth, 5,056; total, 19,864. Included in the population of the parish are 8 officials and 229 inmates of the Dumbarton combination poorhouse.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911 was 3,443.

DALREOCH is a quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Cardross, within the burgh of Dumbarton, but separated from it for ecclesiastical purposes, and has a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint railway. The parish church was erected in 1873, at a cost of £3,000. Population in 1901 was 4,935.

KNOXLAND is a quoad sacra parish within the burgh of Dumbarton, but separated from it for ecclesiastical purposes. The parish church, erected in 1883-4 at a cost of £4,500, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 800 persons. The Rev. James Little B.A., S.T.D. has been minister since 1910. Population in 1901 was 5,030.

DUNTOCHER is a considerable village and quad sacra parish in the civil parish of Old Kilpatrick, 2 miles north from Kilpatrick, 52 west from Edinburgh and 9 from Glasgow. The principal part of the village is lighted with gas supplied by the corporation of Glasgow, and is governed by a landward committee of parish council of Kilpatrick. Here is an ancient bridge over the Duntocher Burn, a small river issuing from Loch Cochno; the bridge is said to have been built under the auspices of the Emperor Hadrian by Quintus Lollius Urbicus, his lieutenant; it was restored by Lord Blantyre in 1772, and near it is a stona with a Latin inscription recording these things. The Established church here was erected in 1836, at an expense of £1,700; there are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The population in 1901 was: town, 2,122; ecclesiastical parish, 3,230.

GARELOCHHEAD is a village and quoad sacra parish in the parishes of Row and Roseneath, prettily situated at the head of a loch, a screen of hills rising behind separating the Gare Loch from Loch Long; it is about 6 miles from Row and has a station on the West Highland section of the North British railway. The interesting and beautiful spot called "Glenfruin" is approached from this place. There are Established and United Free churches. The village has a good pier, at which pleasure steamers arrive and depart, and facing it is the Gareloch-head Hotel. There is a motor car service between Helensburgh and Garelochhead, the cars running at frequent intervals daily. About a mile and a half on the road to Arrochar, on an eminence called "Whistlefield," splendid views may be had of Lochs Gail and Long and the Gare Loch. There are many seats of gentry, and this neighbourhood is a favourite resort from June to September. Population in 1891 was 557; 1901, ecclesiastical parish, 836; village, 578.

Post, T. & M. O. & Telephonic Express Delivery Office, Garelochhead. Letters should have Dumbartonshire added; Miss Jeanie McPhun, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.15 & 10.30 a.m. & 6.40 p.m.; dispatches, 7 & 10.45 a.m. & 2.55 & 6.25 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters

HARDGATE, see KILPATRICK.

HELENSBURGH is a modern town, burgh of barony, police burgh and seaport in the civil parish of Row, 22 miles west-north-west from Glasgow, 9 south from Luss, 5 from Greenock and 8 north-west from Dumbarton, with a terminal station on the North British railway, and one half a mile north of the town is a station on the West Highland section of the same system. The town, which lies on the Firth of Clyde, and is a perpetual feu from the trustees of the late Sir James Colquhoun bart. of Luss, was commenced in 1777, and is now the most agreeable watering place on the Clyde. Helensburgh was elevated to the rank of a burgh of barony in 1802; its municipal government is vested in 12 police commissioners, being three for each of the four wards into which the town is divided. A Police Court is held every Monday, and at other times when required. The town is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works the property of the Corporation. The original pier is now called the Old pier, another having been erected by the North British Railway Co. in 1882, at Oraigendoran, about one mile east of the town, in connection with the station there, which is the starting point of the West Highland railway, opened in 1893, to the Western Highlands. The quay, erected in 1817, was greatly enlarged in 1872 and reconstructed in 1898, and extends from the centre of the town into the river for a considerable distance. Helensburgh was created a quoad sacra parish in 1862, and a west quoad sacra parish was formed in 1872. There are two Established and three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and Baptist and Congregational chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Michael and All Angels, built in 1867, will seat 500 persons; the Rev. Charles Bernard Beard M.A. of Glasgow University, has been rector since 1905. The Municipal Buildings, in East Princes street and Sinclair street, form a handsome modern edifice, embracing a court hall, council chamber, and general public offices, with police station and cells in the rear. There is also a Fire Brigade. The Victoria Hall, in Sinclair street, was built at a cost of £6,000, and there are Town Mission, Masonic and Oddfellows' Halls, reading rooms and circulating libraries. The Victoria Infirmary and the Fever Hospital are both in North King street; the latter, built at a cost of £3,000, is for infectious diseases. There is also a Children's Convalescent Home in Glasgow street. The Territorial Force stationed in the town comprise No. 2 Company, Clyde Royal Garrison Artillery, with a Drill hall in Lemon street, and the head quarters of the 9th (Dumbartonshire) Battalion, Princess Louise's, Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, and a Company of the corps, whose Drill hall is in East Princes street. The Bank of Scotland, in West Clyde street, is a fine stone building in the Baronial style, and was erected at a cost of £3,000; the Union Bank Limited, in Colquhoun square, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in James street, are also both substantial buildings of stone, and there is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, in West Clyde street. The chief hotels are the Imperial, opposite the old pier, and the Queen's some distance east of the town. On the Esplanade stands an obelisk, erected as a memorial to Henry Bell, the engineer, d. 14 Nov. 1830. Kidston Park, presented to the town by William Kidston esq. and the late Sir James Colquhoun bart. is situated at the foot of the Gare Loch, and commands an excellent view of the surrounding scenery. There is also a public park and recreation grounds in East King street. In the neighbourhood of Helensburgh resided for 25 years the celebrated Henry Bell, millwright and engineer, to whose fertile and persevering genius Europe is indebted for the first successful application of steam to the propelling of vessels by his production of a steamboat of 25 tons, called the "Comet," in which he made a trip from Port Glasgow to Helensburgh, in Jan. 1812, at a speed of 7 miles an hour. Mr. Bell was born in the parish of Torphichen, county of Linlithgow, April 7th, 1767, and died at his house (now the Queen's Hotel), in Helensburgh, Nov. 14th, 1830, and was interred in the parish churchyard of Row, where there is a memorial to him. The area of the burgh is 1,033; rateable value, £76,357; the population of the ecclesiastical parish of Helensburgh in 1901 was 5,763, and that of West Church (Helensburgh), 2,791; the population of the town and police burgh in 1901 was 8,354.

KILMARONOCK is a parish in Dumbarton poor combination, at the foot of Loch Lomond, lying north of Bonhill parish, and its kirktown is situated about 6 miles north-east of the village of Bonhill; it contains Established and United Free churches and two Board schools. Ross Priory is the seat of Captain Sir Alexander Wellesley G. T. Leith-Buchanan bart.
D.L., J.P. The small island is Inchmurrin is in this parish; it is well wooded and at one end stand the ruins of an old castle of the Lennox family. The Duke of Montrose K.T. Sir Alexander Wellesley G. T. Leith-Buchanan bart.
D.L., J.P. Robert Mackenzie esq. and Robert H. Findlay esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,339 acres; rateable value, £10,600; the
population in 1901 was 874.

GARTOCHARN is a hamlet, in the parish of Kilmaronock, 2½ miles from Caldarvan railway station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 5 from Bonhill and 8 from Dumbarton.

CROFTAMIE is a district in the parish of Kilmaronock, and about 1½ miles from the village of Drymen: the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway runs through it, and Drymen station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of that system, is locally in Croftamie. A Cottage Holiday House was erected here in 1898 by William Ewing Gilmour esq. of Bal-loch, as a memorial to his daughter; it is intended for the benefit of girls who are members of the institute at Alexandria. Population returned with the parish.

KILPATRICK

KILPATRICK (O.d. or West) is a parish and village in Dumbarton poor combination, 53 miles west from Edinburgh, 10 north-west from Glasgow, and 5 east-south-east from Dumbarton, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways. The water works at Cochna, constructed in 1874, supply Duntocher, Dal-muir and Clydebank, the area of the water district being 2,560 acres. The parish church, a neat edifice of stone, erected in 1812, has a square tower with a clock.
At DALNOTTAR is a cemetery of 10 acres, opened in 1911. Auchintorlie is the seat of Lieut.-Col. George J. Ferguson-Buchanan D.L., J.P.

BOWLING is a small village about three-quarters of a mile west from Kilpatrick, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways, and a landing stage for passengers and goods on the Clyde. The Forth and Clyde canal (now owned by the Caledonian Railway Co.) begins at Bowling Bay, and extends along a course of 35 miles to the Forth at Grangemouth. The canal, begun in 1768, and opened throughout on the 28th July, 1790, is available for vessels drawing 8 feet of water, having a 19 feet beam and a 73 feet keel. An outer basin, admitting vessels drawing 19 feet of water, has been constructed for the discharge and shipment of cargoes for transit by the canal or rail. The Trustees of the Clyde Navigation have also a harbour here, for vessels laid up during the winter, or for sale. The United Free church in Bowling was erected in 1869. The Buchanan Institute, presented to the village by the late Andrew Buchanan esq. of Auchintorlie, at a cost of about £1,000, and opened Dec.
13th, 1884, comprises a library and reading and recreation rooms.

At LITTLEMILL is a distillery and shipbuilding yard. The population of Bowling and Littlemill in 1901 was 1,018.

At DUNGLASS, half a mile west of Littlemill, are the ruins of some defensive works known as "Dunglass Castle," and in the grounds stands a memorial column, erected to Henry Bell, the eminent engineer, who ran the first steamboat on the Clyde in 1812.

MILTON and Dumbuck are places on the road to Dumbarton. Milton House, the residence of Henry M. Napier esq. is pleasantly situated on a declivity, commanding an extensive and beautiful view of the Clyde. The population of Milton in 1901 was 500.

HARDGATE is about a quarter of a mile east from Duntocher, and fairly about the same distance north. The population of the two villages in 1901 was 965.
William Baird esq. Lieut.-Col. G. J.
Fergusson-Buchanan D.L., J.P. of Auchin-torlie, and W. G. Black esq. of Auchentochan, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,609 acres; rateable value, landward, £50,946; burghal (Clydebank), £210,139. The population in 1891 was 17,775, and in 1901, 27,448, viz.:—Clydebank police burgh, 18,670; Clydebank town, beyond police burgh, 1,703; Dumbarton burgh, 137; Duntocher town, 2,122; landward, including 44 shipping, 4,816. The population of O'd Kilpatrick village in 1901 was 1,533.

The population of Old Kilpatrick ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 7,304.

NEW (or EAST) KILPATRICK is a parish in Dumbartonshire a poor combination, formerly partly included in Stirlingshire, but in 1891 wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton; it is upwards of 7 miles in extent from north to south, with a breadth of about 6 miles, and has a station, called Bearsden, on the Glasgow and Milngavie section of the North British railway. The Forth and Clyde canal intersects the south-western part of the parish, entering it on crossing the Kelvin by a stupendous aqueduct. The district was separated from Old Kilpatrick, which bounds the parish on the west, in the year 1649. The parish church was erected in 1807. The village of New Kilpatrick adjoins that of Bearsden, and is sometimes called by that name. The Reformatory for Girls at East Chapelton is a fine building of stone, and was erected in 1882. Garscube House, the seat of Sir Archibald Spencer Lindsey Campbell bart. D.L., J.P. is pleasantly situated on the west side of the Kelvin. Canniesburn is about a quarter of a mile south from Bearsden station. Garscadden is a district about 2 miles north-west from New Kilpatrick. Garscadden House, the residence of the Rev. John Erskine Campbell-Colquhoun D.L., J.P. is a fine old mansion, standing in a well-timbered park. The area comprises 12,243 acres; rateable value, landward, £135,169; burghal (Milngavie), £25,299; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 8,300, and in 1901, 10,815, of which 3,481 are in Milngavie police burgh, and 2,705 in Bearsden town. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 4,405.

DRUMCHAPEL is a village in this parish, with a station on the North British railway, 7 miles west from Glasgow.

GARSCADDEN is a village in the parish; the population in 1901 was 423.

KIRKINTILLOCH is a police burgh, a parish and an ancient town, situated in a detached portion of the county, 40 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-west from Stirling, 16 east from Dumbarton, 16 west from Falkirk, 7 north from Glasgow, 7 west from Camburnauld, 5 south-west from Kilsyth, 4 south-east from Campsie and 5 south-east from Campsie Glen, with a station on the North British railway. The town is situated on the verge of a ridge by the water of Luggie, near to its junction with the Kelvin, and is lighted with gas from works originally erected by a private company, but acquired by the town under the Burgh Gas Supply Act, 1876. The Forth and Clyde canal, which passes through the town, affords a speedy and certain transit to the east or west coast of Scotland. The Monkland and Kirkintilloch railway, which extends to Airdrie and joins the Ballochnie railway about a mile from that town and also unites with the Garnkirk and Glasgow railway, has a terminal station here. The Edinburgh and Glasgow line passes over the Monkland and Kirkintilloch, a mile south of the town, and near this is Lenzie Junction station, from which the North British line runs through Kirkintilloch, and then branches off to Kilsyth and Aberfoyle. The weaving of lappet muslin is still carried on here, but the inhabitants are now chiefly employed at the different chemical and iron works on the canal bank. There are also nickel works, where the ore brought from New Caledonia is melted, and in the vicinity are coal and ironstone mines. Kirkintilloch is a free burgh of barony, its first charter, dated from Forres, having been conferred by William the Lion (1165-1214), when it was granted to William Cumyn, of Camburnauld and Kirkintilloch, and this charter was subsequently confirmed and its privileges enlarged. The town was formerly governed by a senior and a junior magistrate, otherwise bailies, ten councillors, a treasurer and a town clerk, but in 1871 the inhabitants adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, and their affairs are now administered by a provost, four bailies and seven councillors. Burgh police courts are held fortnightly, or more frequently if occasion requires. The magistrates act also as dean of guild; justice of the peace courts are held only as may be required, and the sheriff's small debt circuit court on the fourth Mondays of January, July and October, and on the second Wednesday in May. The Town Hall, in Union street, erected in 1906, from designs by Messrs. Walker and Ramsey, architects, of Glasgow at a cost of nearly £10,000, is a good building of freestone, and has a large hall seating 1,200 persons. The Court House, a substantial building at the cross, has a tower with spire, containing a clock with four dials. The police office is in Cowgate street, and there is a Fire Brigade station in Kerr street. The Conservative Association occupies a building of red sandstone in East High street, erected at a cost of £2,000. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland, and the Royal Bank of Scotland, and a local Savings Bank. The B Company, 9th (Dumbartonshire) Battalion Territorial Force, Princess Louise's (Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders) is stationed here, and has a drill hall in Cowgate street. The Broomhill Home, for the relief of incurables in Glasgow and the West of Scotland, besides maintaining 116 patients in the home, affords relief to many others at their own residences; the original building, formerly the residence of the late R. J. Bartholomew esq., has been enlarged from time to time, and will now hold 116 patients, and a nurses' wing, opened in May, 1895, by the Duchess of Montrose, was enlarged in 1906. The Lanfine Home for Consumptives, provided through a bequest by the late Miss Martha Brown, of Lanfine, Ayrshire, stands within the grounds of the Broomhill Home, and is under the same management; it was opened in May, 1904, by the Duchess of Montrose, to hold 18 patients; in 1910 a new wing was opened, giving accommodation for 26 additional patients. On the bank of the Luggie, and near the bridge, stands an inscribed monument of red Aberdeen granite, erected by public subscription, to Mr. Hazleton Robson, of Glasgow, who, in endeavouring to save the life of a child who had fallen into the river, failed in the attempt and lost his own life. About a mile to the east of the town, on the Inchbely road, is the Martyrs' stone, erected as a memorial to John Wharry and James Smith, two Covenanters, who having been captured at Stevenson Wood, Inchbely, and taken to Glasgow, were there tortured and then executed and their remains afterwards carried to Inchbely Wood and buried in the moss. The parish church, built in 1644, is a cruciform structure, and stands near the centre of the town. St. David's is the church of a quad sacra parish at TWECHAR, where there is also a new church, erected in 1903, at the cost of Messrs. Baird and Co. Limited. Adjoining the church, two halls, to seat 300 and 100 respectively, are now (1911) in course of erection, at a cost of £1,000. There are four United Free churches, Roman Catholic, Baptist and Wesleyan chapels, several Mission Hall, and Salvation Army Barracks. The Vallum Antonini, or wall of Antoninus, a rampart of earth and turf, now called Graham's or Grime's dyke, was constructed about A.D. 140 by the Proprietor Lollius Urbicus, in the reign of Antoninus Pius, 138-161, on the line of an earlier series of defences, raised by Agricola; it passed through this town and one of the principal forts stood on the summit of a hill, a little west of the parish church; the site of this fort, now commonly called the "Peel," is still traceable by the deep moat which surrounded it, and was in 1893 converted into a public park. In 1893 (Aug. 28), a workman at the Lion foundry, which stands near the line of the wall, while engaged in digging sand, at a depth of about 15 feet from the surface, came upon over 50 Roman coins of the Emperors Augustus (B.C. 31 to A.D. 14), Vespasian (A.D. 69-79) and Hadrian (A.D. 117-138), the whole being in a remarkable state of preservation; on further search more were discovered and also the steel head and part of the shaft of a spear. Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. of Gartsshore; James D. G. Dalrymple esq.; John Inglis esq.; Alexander Macfarlane esq.; the Glasgow Parish Council; the trustees of the late Capt. William McFarlane esq.; Alexander Frew Wallace esq. of Solsgrith, and the trustees of the late Charles G. H. Kinnear esq. of Edinburgh, are the principal landowners. The boundaries of the burgh were a few years ago extended. The entire parish of Kirkintilloch comprises an area of 7,156 statute acres; rateable value, £63,405; gross rental, £79,006; the population in 1891 was 12,427, and in 1901, 14,401, including 10,502 in the burgh and 142 in Broomhill Home for Incurables; area of burgh, 841 acres; the population of the ecclesiastical parish (parish church) in 1901 was 7,519, and of St. David, 4,813; the population of Twechar village in 1901 was 1,143.

WATERSIDE is a village in Kirkintilloch civil parish; the population in 1901 was 500.

KNOXLAND, see DUMBARTON.

LENZIE is a residential district and quoad sacra parish, 6 miles north-east from Glasgow and about 1 mile south of Kirkintilloch, with a junction station on the main line of the North British railway, which divides it into two parts—North and South, the northern portion being in the parish of Kirkintilloch and county of Dumbarton, and the southern portion in the parish of Cadder and county of Lanark. The northern portion of Lenzie forms part of the police burgh of Kirkintilloch. A new reservoir for the supply of water to Lenzie, Kirkintilloch and Waterside was constructed about 1906 in the parish of Kilsyth, at a cost of £24,000. The parish church, situated near the railway station, was built and endowed in 1874, and has a tower with spire; about 1907 it was renovated, when a chancel with suitable fittings was added, and a bell, font and other gifts have been made: the church will seat 500 persons, exclusive of the choir stalls. Attached is a suite of halls, capable of holding 300 persons, a vestry and a session room, and connected with the church are Sunday schools, young men's and women's guilds and a bible class. The United Free church was erected in 1875, at a cost of £4,000, for a congregation originally formed 23 Sept. 1873, and until Oct. 1900 was known as the Lenzie Union Church: in 1906 the church was enlarged by the addition of a north transept, from designs by Mr. John Keppie, architect, of Glasgow, at a cost of about £1,300, and will now seat 618 persons: in 1887 an organ was provided at a cost of £640. The Episcopal church of St. Cyprian, built in 1873 at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of stone in the Early English style, from designs by Dr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of chancel and nave under a single roof, south porch and a tower on the south side, with pyramidal broach spire, and an octagonal turret at one angle surmounted by a spirelet; the stone altar was presented by the Rev. Francis Patrick Fleming LL.D. rector 1873-4, and the font, of Caen stone, by Lady Edmonstone, of Duntreath Castle, Stirlingshire; several of the windows have been filled with stained glass by members of the congregation, and include a memorial window to Major and Mrs. Graham Stirling, presented by their daughter, Mrs.

Miller-Stirling, of Craigharnet, Campsie Glen: the church affords 200 sittings. The value of the living is £200, with a house, situated at a short distance from the church; the Rev. Henry Williams Kirby, the present rector, was appointed by the vestry in 1876. The Lenzie Public Halls, situated opposite the Academy, and opened 31 Aug. 1892, are in the Conventional Scottish style, with stepped gables and mullioned windows, from designs by Mr. William Tennant, architect, of Glasgow, and comprise a large hall, holding about 600 persons, two smaller halls, kitchen, cloak rooms and offices: the total cost, including furnishing, was £3,448, and the management is vested in six trustees. The Glasgow Lunacy District Asylum, at Woodilee, Lenzie, in connection with the parish of Glasgow, erected in 1874-5 at a cost of £150,000, and opened 22 Oct. 1875, is a structure in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Messrs. James Salmon and Son, architects, of Glasgow. The buildings include a recreation hall, about 90 feet square, with a ceiling panelled in Kauri wood, and a stage for musical and dramatic performances, a dining hall, recently enlarged, 120 single rooms, dormitories for 1,160 patients, an administrative department, and a chapel with a stained window, and an elegant fleche on the roof, and seating 400 persons. The estate, comprising 800 acres, was purchased by the Barony Parochial board for a sum of over £42,000, and the various additions and improvements made to the buildings, including a sanatorium for consumptives and a separate department for children, have brought their total cost up to £350,000. The Glasgow Convalescent Home, situated here, about half a mile to the south-east of the railway station, is available for 87 patients, 30 of whom are received from the Glasgow Royal Infirmary, 47 from among residents in Glasgow and neighbourhood and 10 from the Western Infirmary of Glasgow: the board of management consists of members selected by the subscribers and various public and charitable bodies in the city of Glasgow. Lenzie Academy is under the management of a combination board, the members of which represent the two parishes of Kirkintilloch and Cadder: the new buildings, erected in 1910, at a cost of about £6,000, comprise a central hall, class rooms, science laboratory, art room, cookery room, drill hall, workshops, music rooms &c. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland; there is also a local Club, and Cricket, Golf and Tennis Clubs. The population of Lenzie inside Kirkintilloch burgh in 1901 was 827, and outside, 178. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1891 was 2,805, and in 1901, 1,936 in Kirkintilloch parish and 1,323 in Cadder parish (Lanarkshire): total, 3,300; this number included 121 officials and 1,019 inmates in Glasgow Lunacy District Asylum.

LITTLEMILL, see KILPATRICK.

LUSS is a parish and small village, in the Dumbarton small debts court district, 69 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 28 north-west from Glasgow, 12½ north-north-west from Dumbarton, 10 north-north-west from Bonhill, 9 north-north-east from Helensburgh, 8 from Tarbet station on the West Highland section of the North British railway and 8 from Balloch station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint railway. The village is delightfully situated on the western margin of Loch Lomond, and during the summer is much visited by tourists and pleasure parties. A fine view of the loch, with its numerous islands, is obtained from Strone hill, a considerable elevation about half a mile north of the inn. The only business of any importance carried on here is the quarrying of slata at the Camstradnan and Luss slate quarries, from which considerable quantities of both blue and green slata are obtained, and conveyed to distant parts of the country by means of steam lighters on Loch Lomond to Balloch, and thence by rail. The parish church was dedicated to St. Mackessog, a native of Lennox and a bishop and confessor, who suffered martyrdom about the year 520, at a place below Luss, on the side of the lake, where a large cairn of stone was raised to his memory; he is said to have been buried in the church. Here is also a United Free church. This place was sometime the residence of the learned Alexander Stewart D.D. a Gaelic scholar, who translated the Bible into the Gaelic language, and died in May, 1821. Rosdhu House, about 2½ miles south of Luss, the seat of Sir Ian Colquhoun bart. who is the principal landowner, is a mansion, with a fine portico, seated on a low point of land and surrounded on three sides by Loch Lomond. The area comprises 24,236 acres; rateable value, £7,383; the population in 1891 was 633, and in 1901, 572.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Luss (letters should have Dumbartonshire added to them); Miss Kate M. Wilson, post-mistress. MILNGAVIE, a town and police burgh (generally called Millguy), is a quoad sacra parish, erected out of that of New (or East) Kilpatrick, in the small debt court district of Dumbarton, and formerly partly included in Stirlingshire, but in 1891 was wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton. The station here is the terminus of a branch line of the North British railway. The town is 12 miles east from Dumbarton, 5 north-east from Duntocher, 21 south-west from Stirling, 7 north from Glasgow, 51 west from Edinburgh and 2 north-east from New Kilpatrick, and is governed by a provost and town council. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches and an Episcopal mission room. In the town is a paper mill, and in the neighbourhood are two bleach fields and dye works. Archibald C. Douglas esq. D.L., J.P. of Maina House, and Thomas R. Ker esq. D.L., J.P. of Dougalston, are the principal landowners. The area of the burgh is 340 acres; rateable value £25,298; the population in 1901 was 3,481 in the burgh, and 3,984 in the ecclesiastical parish.

RENTON is a large village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Cardross, one mile south-south-west from Bonhill, like distance south from Alexandria and 2 north from Dumbarton, with a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint line of the North British and Caledonian railways. The village is on the west bank of the Leven, and contains part of the extensive print works of the United Turkey Red Co. Limited. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free Church of Scotland and a Roman Catholic church. The Victoria Institute, in Lennox street, was built in 1887, at a cost, including the library, of about £2,000, as a memorial of Queen Victoria's Jubilee, and opened on the day of that commemoration; it consists of a library of from 3,000 to 4,000 volumes, lecture hall and recreation rooms, and also comprises a working men's club. The Public Hall, in Main street, was erected in 1882. In the village stands an ornamental stone column, 60 feet in height, on a square base and erected as a memorial to Tobias Smollett M.D. the famous author of "Roderick Random," "Peregrine Pickle" and other productions. He was born here in 1721 and died near Leghorn, 21 Oct. 1771. The population of the town of Renton in 1901 was 5,067, and the ecclesiastical parish in 1903 had a population of 5,091; rateable value included with Cardross.

ROSENEATH is a village and parish, in Dumbarton poor combination, occupying the peninsula of Roseneath, and extending for about 7 miles from east to west, and from 1 to 4 broad, and is about 3 miles west from Helensburgh station (by ferry across Gare Loch) on the West Highland section of the North British railway. The parish church, a small Gothic edifice, stands within a quarter of a mile of the ferry and pier. There is also a United Free church in the neighbourhood, and another at Clynder, which latter place and Rahane are districts in this parish, the former one mile and the latter 3 miles north from Roseneath village. The mansion of Roseneath, the property and residence of the Duke of Argyll K.T., P.C., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., V.D. and the Princess Louise, is the principal object of interest. Kilcreggan is a village about 2 miles distant from Roseneath, over the hills, and has Established and United Free churches. COVE is a village a mile farther west, at the entrance of Loch Long; both are resorted to for sea bathing, and consist of a series of villas and manorons extending for 4½ miles along the shore; at each is a pier for the convenience of passing steamers. These two villages were formed into a police burgh in 1865, and are ecclesiastically in the quoad sacra parish of Craigrownie, which is separated from Roseneath and includes the whole burgh of Kilcreggan and Cove; the parish extends about 3 miles beyond Cove, and has an Established church. The area of Roseneath parish comprises 8,467 acres; rateable value of landward, £9,896; the population of the civil parish in 1891 was 2,064, and in 1901, 1,923, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 675; the population of the ecclesiastical parish of Craigrownie in 1901 was 1,145. The police burgh of Cove and Kilcreggan has an area of 447 acres; rateable value, £11,852, and in 1901 had a population of 942.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Roseneath (letters should have Dumbartonshire added to them); Miss Julia S. Maclean, postmistress. Deliveries, 7.30 & 9.30 a.m. & 8.20 p.m.; dispatches, 9.50 a.m. & 2.55 & 4.45 p.m. (summer only) & (summer only) 6.40 p.m. to Clynder only; no Sunday delivery of letters

Row is a parish and small village, in Dumbarton poor combination and small debts court district, about 2 miles west from Helensburgh, with a station on the West Highland railway. The parish of Row is chiefly of a hilly and pastoral character, and the low grounds are fertile and beautiful. Ardencaple Castle, on the north-west bank of the Gare Loch, was the birthplace (30 April, 1823) of the late Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C. (d. 1900). A portion of the castle is of ancient date, but the greater part is comparatively modern; it commands a good view of the Clyde and the Gare Loch, to a distance of 7 miles into the mainland, and is now the residence of Frederick Graham esq. The parish, exclusive of a narrow strip on Loch Long, is about 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth, bounded by Luss on the east, Helensburgh on the south-east, on the west by Gare Loch, and its south end is washed by the Firth of Clyde. The parish church stands in the village, near the ferry across the Gare Loch to the peninsula of Roseneath. Acreage of the parish, 20,120; rateable value of landward, including Shandon and Garelochhead, about 255,436; population of the parish in 1891, 11,172, and in 1901, 11,187, of which 8,554 are in Helensburgh police burgh and 395 in the Industrial School "Empress." The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,900, and of the village, 954.

SHANDON is a district in the parish of Row, and about 3 miles north from the village of Row, with a station on the West Highland railway. A sea-side home for city children was erected here by the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing bart. (d. 1893), and here is also the "Agnes Wilson" home for city children. Here is a United Free church. Faslane, a little to the north, contains the ruins of an ancient chapel, surrounded by a burial ground. The population in 1901 was 485.

TARBET is a small village on Loch Lomond, in the parish of Arrochar, about 8 miles north from Luss, with a station on the West Highland section of the North British railway, and is much visited by tourists on account of its attractive and romantic features. There is a United Free church and a good hotel, and Ben Arthur, or the "Cobbler," is best seen from near the hotel, with Ben Lomond in front of it. The distance between Loch Lomond and Loch Long is here about a mile and a half.

DUMFRIES-SHIRE

THIS is a large and important county in the south of Scotland, bounded on the east by the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk, on the north-west by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the stewartry (or county) of Kirkcubright, and on the north by the counties of Laoken, Peebles and part of Selkirk; its south and south-eastern boundary is washed by the Solway Firth, and its south-eastern base is skirted by Roxburghshire and the English county of Cumberland. The length of the county, from north-west to south-east, is nearly 55 miles, and its extreme breadth, from the south to where it touches Peebles-shire on the north, is nearly 30 miles. According to the latest and best surveys it embraces an area of 1072.3 square miles, or 686,302 acres of land, and 3,992 of water. The population in 1901 was 34,362 males and 38,209 females; total, 72,571; there were 15,630 inhabited houses in 1891, and in 1901—inhabited, 15,809; uninhabited, 1,131; and building, 132. In size Dumfries is classed as the eighth and in population as the fourteenth of the Scotch counties.

Early History.—At the epoch of the Roman invasion under Agricola, in the year 80, this part of Scotland was inhabited by a race called the "Selgovæ," who spread themselves as far as the banks of the river Dee, in Galloway. These people continued independent till the year 875, when they were overpowered by the Northumbrian Saxons, who retained the ascendancy for two centuries. During the lapse of this time, however, numbers of adventurers from Ireland and Cantyre effected a settlement, and from these intermixtures sprung the Picts, who progressively acquired the paramount sway. At this period Dumfries-shire is understood to have formed part of Cumbria, which district Edgar bequeathed to his youngest brother, David, who encouraged many opulent Anglo-Norman barons, and the county was then divided into extensive baronies. The almost interminable border warfare was a frightful calamity to the inhabitants of Dumfries-shire, who for centuries were subjected to all the horrors attendant upon barbarous incursions and feudal hostility. When the civil war broke out in the reign of Charles I. the common people entered heartily into the Covenant, and the shire was disturbed by the exertions made by loyal noblemen and gentlemen in quelling the insurrection, and attachment to the house of Stuart ruined several of the great families. The Maxwells were completely ruined by the attainder of the Earl of Nithsdale, in 1715. The Douglasses of Queensberry and the Johnstons of Annandale have merged in other families, and out of the general wreck the noble house of Scott, Dukes of Buccleuch, has risen to great influence. From being thus so frequently subjected to early invasion and predatory warfare, the shire exhibits, to this day, the remains of some important castles and places of security. It gives the title of Marquess to the family of Scott.

Soil and Surface, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The lower parts of Dumfries-shire are based with brown, red, yellow or white sandstone, which dips generally to the Solway; a considerable body of limestone also lies in this quarter, and beds of ironstone are occasionally found to accompany the other strata. Coal prevails in great plenty in the upper portions of Nithsdale and lower parts of Eskdale, the two extreme points of the county. The limestones of the shire have been of great value to improving the land; marl likewise abounds in various tracts, and of freestone and whinstone there is a sufficiency in all directions; marble is also procured for different useful and ornamental purposes, and near the northern confines of the county, at Waulockhead, there are inexhaustible mines of lead. As in most districts in the south of Scotland, there is a general mixture of arable and pasture land. The soil is of great variety, that in the south being a light covering over a rocky and gravelly subsoil, producing thin crops; but in the north, where the subsoil is peaty, vegetation is rank. This county is famed for agriculture, its capacities in this respect being highly developed. The land is well tilled and drained, strongly fenced, and produces good crops of oats, potatoes, turnips and hay. About 260,000 acres are under cultivation. Though changeable and moist, the climate is upon the whole mild and salubrious. The principal hills are Hartfell (near Moffat), 2,629 feet; Eterick, or Phawhope Penn, 2,220; Cair-Kennou (near Drumlanrig), 2,080; Queensberry hill, 2,250; Black Lag (border of Ayrshire), 2,890 and Lowthers (near Waulockhead), 3,150. The chief crops in 1910, as appears from the Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, "were—Oats, 11,333 acres; barley or bere, 590; the total of corn crops being 42,023 acres; turnips and swedes, 17,280 acres; potatoes, 3,450; cabbage, 226; mangold, 305; total green crops, 21,629 acres; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 19,847 acres and (not for hay) 66,379 acres; permanent pasture (for hay), 18,745 acres and (not for hay) 93,755 acres; total area of land, 686,302 acres, of which 82,112 are mountain and heath (used for grazing) and 30,275 woods and plantations. The live stock in 1910 comprised 5,878 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,868; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 21,628; other cattle, 49,730; ewes kept for breeding, 43,369; other sheep 313,619; sows kept for breeding, 1,096; other pigs, 7,450. In Annandale the improvement in the breed of cattle has been most apparent; at the Highland Society's meeting some of the choicest specimens of the pure breed of Galloway cows, heifers and bullocks are exhibited.

The minerals raised in the county in 1909 were—dressed lead ore, 1,793 tons, producing 1,355 tons of lead and 8,915 ozs. of silver; limestone, 17,096 tons; sandstone, 90,104 tons; brick clay, 7,781 tons.

The fishing boats are included with the returns for Ballantrae, Ayrshire. Of other classes of vessels registered at the port of Dumfries on 31st December, 1909, there were 17, with a tonnage of 895. As regards trade, the number of oxen, sheep and pigs reared in this county is usually more than adequate to the demands of its population; and exportation, therefore, of the excess product takes place; and the same may be observed of corn, wool, hides and skins. Dumfriesshire cannot be ranked as a manufacturing county; the principal branches under this head are the production of hosiery goods and tweeds, the chief seat of these being its capital. There are also distilleries, agricultural implement works, dye works, tanneries &c. This county is also noted for bacon curing, a large number of carcases of pork being cured annually.

Rivers &c.—The chief, indeed the only, rivers of consequence are the Nith, the Annan and the Esk. From these streams the principal divisions of the county obtain their names; from each of these greater divisions diverge vales, which likewise have denominations taken from the waters that are poured through them, such as Moffatdale, Dryfesdale and Ewesdale. The Nith, 60 miles in length, rises in the eastern hills of Ayrshire, enters Nithsdale by the foot of Carsoncone hill, in the parish of Kirkcubright, and descends into the valley of Sanquhar; having forced its way through the hills which surround this valley, it receives the Crawick water from the north, and the Euchar from the south. The river Cairn, which forms the western boundary of the county, unites its stream with the Nith a little above Dumfries, a short distance southward from which the latter river empties itself into the Solway Firth. Near to Jarborough Castle, on the banks of the river Cairn, are to be seen those earthen mounds called "Bowbutts," where the barons of Glencairn, with their vassals, used to practice archery. The river Annan, the length of which is 40 miles, takes its rise in the mountains above Moffat, and runs through the flat part of Annandale for upwards of 23 miles; in its course it receives the Euan and the Moffat waters and the Wamphray stream, which irrigates a pleasant valley of that name. Passing Johnstone, some other tributary rivulets increase its volume: at Lochmahon it is enlarged by the Ae, and a little lower by the Dryfe, which courses through the vale of Dryfesdale, considered the termination of the vale of Annan. The higher part of Eskdale, for nearly twenty miles, is mountainous. The Esk, in its progress through the district, is joined by the Black Esk, the Maggot, the Ewes, and the Wanchope. After reaching Broomholm the river traverses a flat country, and a part of Cumberland, before it reaches the Solway Firth; during this portion of its course it receives the Liddel from Roxburghshire, and the Line water from the county of Cumberland; its entire length is about 43 miles, thirty of which are in the shire of Dumfries. The Solway differs very materially from other estuaries receiving in Scotland the appellation of "Firths;" its waters are shallow, and have long sandy reaches at the ebbing of the tide. The ebbs and flows of the Solway are proverbial for the rapidity of their action, and that is particularly the case during the spring tides and the prevalence of gales from the south-west, and borderers have, in numerous instances, been overwhelmed and drowned when returning from the Cumberland fairs, in crossing the bed of this estuary—the most experienced persons being liable to be overtaken by the tides even when they have the best expectation of fording it in safety. The navigation of the Solway Firth is closed above Bowness and Annan by the Solway Viaduct. Railways from the south enter the county at three points from Bowness; across the Solway Firth to Annan and Kirkebridge, from Carlisle to Gretna Junction (Caledonian line), whence it runs through the county northward, via Lockerbie and Beattock, where there is a branch to Moffat, one from Lockerbie, going to Dumfries, and thirdly a short line on the North British system from Riddings via Canonbie to Langholm. From Gretna Junction a line leaves the Caledonian system and runs on the Glasgow and South Western line via Annan to Dumfries and on to Thornhill and Sanquhar to Ayrshire, the line of the same railway to Castle Douglas, Wigton, Stranraer and Port Patrick leaving the county at Dumfries.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The whole county is now popularly apportioned into three districts, namely—Eskdale on the east, almost the whole of which belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch; Annandale in the middle, and Nithsdale on the west. It is ascertained that Dumfries-shire was placed under the government of a sheriff in the 13th century, at which period it included the stewartry of Kirkcubright. The district of Annandale, however, continued to be a stewartry from the period when it merged in the Crown by the accession of Bruce, till the abolition of the heritable jurisdiction. Up to the era of the Reformation, Dumfries-shire formed part of the extensive diocese of Glasgow, and was divided into the two deaneries of Nithsdale and Annandale; it now possesses 47 entire parishes and parts of two others, the whole being included in the five presbyteries which form the synod of Dumfries. There are four royal burghs in the county—Dumfries, Annan, Sanquhar, and Lochmahon; and six burghs of barony—Moffat, Lockerbie, Langholm, Ecclefechan, Thornhill, and Moniaive. The county is formed of 43 entire civil parishes. The shire at large sends one member to Parliament, and the royal burghs before named join with Kirkcubright in returning another representative (Dumfries District of Burghs). The county parliamentary constituency for 1911 numbered 9,757.

5th (Dumfries & Galloway) Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers; head quarters, Dumfries. Staff:—Lieut.-Col. Commanding, R. F. Dudgeon V.D. (hon. col.); Major, Hon. Lieut.-Col. F. J. C. Carruthers V.D. (supernumerary), P. M. Kerr & W. L. Comrie; Adjutant, Capt. T. W. Youngson; Quartermaster, Hon. Capt. J. MacKeechie Dumfriesshire Companies, stationed as follows:—A, Dumfries; B, Annan, Canonbie & Langholm; C, Ecclefechan & Lockerbie; D, Sanquhar; E, Maxwelltown

ANNAN is an ancient royal burgh, a parish and town and the seat of a presbytery, 79 miles south of Edinburgh, 87 south-east of Glasgow, 43 north-east of Kirkcubright, 27 south of Moffat, 16 south-east of Dumfries and 6 from Ecclefechan, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and another about 1/4 mile from the town, on the Caledonian system, situated on the east bank of the river Annan. The old bridge, consisting of five arches, was removed in 1826 and a new and substantial one erected on the same site, towards which a grant of £3,000 was obtained from Government, and the remainder supplied by the county. Annan was a Roman station, and is supposed by some to have been identical with the northern station, Veromum. After the departure of the Romans it seems to have been held by the Britons, till they were subdued by the Saxons of the Northumbrian kingdom. It afterwards became a principal port, and was granted with the territory of Annandale and the port of Lochmaben to the ancestors of Robert Bruce, by some of whom a castle was erected, and in part used as a church, but this fortress afterwards went to ruin, some fragments of its walls being incorporated with the gaol and the old town hall. Upon the death of David II. 22 Feb. 1371, the castle of Lochmaben and the lordship of Annandale came to Agnes, sister of John (Randolph), 3rd Earl of Moray, whom she succeeded as Countess of Moray, and having married Patrick (Dunbar), 10th Earl of Dunbar and March, carried it into that family; after their forfeiture it was bestowed upon the Douglasses, Archibald Douglas, 3rd son of the 7th Earl of Douglas, being created Earl of Moray; he fell at Arkinholm, 1st May, 1455, and was attainted, and his possessions thereupon reverted to the Crown; this lordship was subsequently granted to Alexander, Duke of Albany, 2nd son of James II. who, for rebellion against his brother King James III. and for plundering the fair of Lochmaben in 1484, also forfeited it; the castle thereupon again reverted to the Crown, and became the great key to the western border. In September, 1547, the town was attacked and partially destroyed by Thomas, 1st Baron Wharton, who, with Lord Dacre, had marched a force into Scotland to effect reprisals. The port, or harbour, of Annan is free, and vessels of 250 tons can come within half a mile of the town, but vessels of much larger burthen can enter the river at its confluence with the Solway, rather more than a mile from the town; at this place are wooden wharves, or jetties. The local industries comprise stone quarrying, nursery work and corn milling, which furnish employment to a large number of hands; there is also a distillery situated about a mile north of the town. Limestone and freestone are abundant in many parts of the parish, and are worked at the Corschill Quarries by Messrs. J. Murray and Sons. The town was constituted a royal burgh on the accession of Robert Bruce to the throne at the beginning of the 14th century. The existing charter, dated July 10th, 1612, was granted by James VI. of Scotland, and confirms previous charters, particularly reciting one conferred by James V. dated 1st March, 1538, which stated that Annan had with other towns been burned and destroyed by sieges and the inroads of the English, especially in 1298, when they entered Annandale and burned the town with its churches. The burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and nine councillors, a treasurer, a dean of guild and town clerk. Together with Dumfries, Sauchbark, Lochmaben and Kirkcubright it forms the Dumfries parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member to Parliament. A small debts court is held four times in the year. The town is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from a reservoir on the farm of Purdomstown, in the parish of Middlebie, about 7 1/2 miles from Annan, with a capacity of 32,000,000 gallons. The filter bed and supply tank are behind Landheads toll bar, 2 miles from the town, and are capable of passing 150,000 gallons per day. The waterworks, built and laid out at a cost of about £12,000, were opened by Lady Augusta Noel, wife of Ernest Noel esq. then M.P. for the Dumfries district, July 21st, 1881; duplicate pipes were laid to the filters in 1901 at a cost of £7,200. The Town Hall, in High street, erected at a cost of upwards of £4,000, occupies the site of the former hall. The Post Office, in Bank street, was erected in 1898. The Combination Hospital, built in 1892, contains 24 beds. The Lesser Victoria Hall, in Downie's wynd, is the meeting place of the Lodge Caledonian, No. 238, and Robert Bruce Royal Arch Chapter, No. 243. The Public Library, in Bank street, a building of red sandstone, was erected in 1906 at a cost of £3,000. The parish church is a fine building of stone, with a tower and spire, and there are Episcopal, Roman Catholic, United Free and other churches. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here, and there is also a bank for savings, founded in 1835. A newspaper, the "Annandale Observer," is published every Friday by Messrs. William Cuthbertson and Son. The Rev. Edward Irving M.A. the founder, in 1832, of the Catholic Apostolic Church, was born here, 16th August, 1792, and a marble statue has been erected to his memory in front of the Town Hall; he died at Glasgow, 6th December, 1834. Hugh Clapperton, the African traveller, was also born here in 1788; he died on his second expedition at Sacatoo, 11th April, 1827. Mount Annan is the property of Patrick Alexander Pasley-Dirom esq. J.P. and the residence of Robert Walker Hall Woodburne esq. William Dalziel Mackenzie esq. J.P. of Fawley Court, Henley-on-Thames, Oxon, is the chief landowner. The market is held on Friday, and at the two cattle marts large quantities of stock are sold. Fairs are held on the first Friday in May, the first Friday in August, and the third Friday in October. The area comprises 10,915 acres; rateable value, burghal, £21,720; landward, £21,659; the population of the parish in 1901 was 7,073, including 4,302 in the town.

GREENKNOWE is a quoad sacra parish, formed from Annan; population in 1901 was 1,612.

BRYDEKIRK is a village in the small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, 3 miles north of Annan, on the west bank of the Annan river, and was constituted a quoad sacra parish in May, 1836, from the three parishes of Annan, Cummertrees and Hoddam. The remains of the old parish church are still extant, but a new church was built in 1835 by the late Mrs. Magdalen Dirom, wife of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander Dirom; she died 23 Oct. 1853. At Corsehill is a quarry, originally opened by Mrs. Dirom, and now giving employment to over 100 men. Patrick Alexander Pasley-Dirom esq. J.P. of Cleughhead, Annan, and the Earl of Mansfield are the principal landowners. Rateable value, £3,828; the population of the village was 340 in 1901, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 832.

CAERLAVEROCK is a parish, occupying a kind of peninsula formed by the Solway Firth, the river Nith and Lochar water, and is 7 miles south-east of Dumfries, the nearest railway station. The magnificent ruins of Caerlaverock Castle, which stand on a level plain, between 8 and 9 miles from Dumfries, form a massive and picturesque triangular structure, including the gate-house, flanked on either side by drum towers with machicolated battlements; in Murdoch's tower, a principal feature of the ruins, Murdoch Stewart, 2nd Duke of Albany and Earl of Lennox, was confined in 1425; a wet ditch still encompasses the site. The castle anciently belonged to the Maxwells, once a powerful family in this part of Scotland, Earls of Nithsdale and wardens of the western Marches. It was besieged and captured by Edward I. in July, 1300; a metrical and contemporary account of the siege was written in Norman-French by Walter, of Exeter, a Franciscan friar who accompanied the English army, and contains, inter alia, the blazonry of the arms of about 100 of the knights engaged in this expedition, forming the earliest roll of arms at present known. The poem was edited and published by Sir Harris Nicholas in 1828. Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, of Closeburn, was murdered in his bed in the castle in 1357 by Sir James Lindsay; Cromwell took it in 1651, after which it was allowed to fall into decay.

BANKEND is a pleasant village about 6 miles south-south-east from Dumfries.

GLENCAPLE QUAY is a small village on the banks of the Nith, and about 5½ miles south from Dumfries, where in former times numbers of coasting traders discharged and took in their cargoes, and passengers from Liverpool usually landed here. It is now chiefly frequented as a bathing place, and for its salmon fishery. Conneath House is the property and residence of Robert Young Pickering esq.

KELTON is a small village on the Nith, and about 4 miles south from Dumfries.

The Duchess of Norfolk, Robert Young Pickering esq. and the Rt. Hon. A. Akers-Douglas P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P. are the chief landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, potatoes, roots and pasture. The area comprises 5,684 acres; rateable value, £7,051; the population in 1901 was 841.

CANONBIE is a parish and village, half way between Longtown and Langholm, 6 miles from either town, and on the southern border of the county, in Hawick poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Langholm, with stations on the North British railway; the parish is separated on the south-east from England by the river Liddel, and on the south-west by the "Scotch Dyke;" the river Esk and the high road from Edinburgh to London intersect the parish, which is about 9 miles long and 6 broad. There are coal mines and lime quarries supplying minerals of excellent quality. The parish church is a large edifice of stone, and will seat 1,500 persons. The scenery along the Esk is considered to be some of the finest in the South of Scotland. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. is sole proprietor of the parish. The hamlets of Hollows, Bowholm, Claygate, Gleuzier, Forgebrashhead, Evertown and Rowanburn are in this parish. The area comprises 24,156 acres; rateable value, £13,321; the population in 1901 was 1,959.

CLOSEBURN is a parish and village, about 2 miles south-south-east from Thornhill, and 12 miles north of Dumfries, in the district of Nithsdale, and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it includes the parish of Dalgerno, and is about 10 miles in length by about 1½ in breadth. Part of the ancient church, an edifice of the Norman and later periods, is still standing within its churchyard, though now ruinous, and includes a tower in which hangs a bell dated 1607; near the church is the mortuary of the Kirkpatrick's, of Closeburn, over the entrance to which is their crest, a hand holding a dagger dripping with blood, and the motto "I mak siccar; " here is buried Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, whose murder of John (the "Red") Comyn, at Dumfries in 1305, gave rise both to the motto and crest; his second son, of the same name, was murdered in his bed in Caerlaverock Castle by Sir James Lindsay in 1357. The present church, which adjoins the old churchyard, was erected by the heritors in 1878, at a cost of nearly £5,000, and is a building in the Gothic style; all the windows are stained, four being memorials. In the churchyard is at least one covenanting stone. Here is also a United Free church. Closeburn Hall is a large and splendid mansion in the Classic style, and is at present (1911) unoccupied. The ancient Castle of Closeburn, for a long time the seat of the Kirkpatrick's, and afterwards held by the Stuart Monteiths, is now in the hands of trustees, and forms an interesting object in the scenery here, which derives additional beauty from some romantic waterfalls. Near Closeburn Castle is a strong sulphurous spring, of the same character as that of Moffat Well, and there is another called "Townslough Well," which is chalybeate. Crichepe Linn, in this parish, is a very singular ravine worn out of the soft sandstone by a small rivulet. Sir Walter Scott describes it as the hiding place of Balfour of Burleigh. This spot, as well as almost every glen in the district, has associations connected with the times of the persecuted Covenanters. The Wallace Hall Academy, near the church, was established in 1793, and is one of the five selected schools of the county, and has now about 230 pupils. A new academy is now (1911) in course of erection. A recreation hall was opened here in 1902 by the Closeburn Unionist Association for the use of the parish.

AULDGIRTH is a small hamlet in the parish of Closeburn, distant 8 miles north-north-west from Dumfries, and 6 south from Thornhill, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has a public hall.

The Closeburn Estates Trustees, viz. the trustees of Mrs. Villiers and the Countess of Enniskillen, the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. and Miss Copeland, of Collieston, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 29,158 acres; rateable value, £13,975; the population in 1901 was 1,275. Post & T. O. Office, Closeburn; David Gibson, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Thornhill. Delivery, 6.45 a.m.; dispatches, 4.15 & 6.40 p.m.; no sunday delivery or dispatch. The nearest money order office is at Thornhill. Post, T. & M. CUMMERTREES is a parish and village, 4 miles west from Annan, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish, which is about 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth, is bounded on the north-east by the river Annan, and on the south by the Solway Firth. It is a flat, fertile and well cultivated district, and is now well enclosed. The parish church stands in the village. The new Public Hall was erected in 1895, on a site given by the Marquess of Queensberry, at a cost of £500. About a mile south-east of Cummertrees is Powfoot, a fishing hamlet, situated on the shore of the Solway, and now the property of Charles Brook esq. J.P. of Kinmont. The late Edward Brook esq. of Hoddum Castle (d. 1904), did much to improve Powfoot as a summer resort by making artificial lakes for boating and fishing, as well as a swimming pond on the foreshore; there is an excellent golf course, with club house. Glen Stuart is the residence of Sir Alexander Beaumont Churchill Dixie bart. The area comprises 9,473 acres; rateable value, £11,724; the population in 1901 was 969.

DALSWINTON, see KIRKMAHOE.

DALTON is a parish and small village about 6 miles south-west from Lockerbie and 4 north-east from Ruthwell station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish, which now includes the ancient parishes of Meikle Dalton and Little Dalton, is 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth; its general appearance is that of high cultivation, which has been extended over once unprofitable moors and commons. The parish church, erected in 1895, in part by a grant from the Baird Trust, on a site given by Mr. Arthur J. Steel, of Kirkwood, is an edifice in the Norman style, from designs by Mr. J. M. Dick Peddie, architect, of Edinburgh, and consists of chancel, nave, north porch and a low square tower on the north side with an octagonal spire; the lower stage of the tower forms an entrance. In the churchyard are several ancient tombstones to the Ross family, descendants of the ennobled house of Ross, Barons Ross, of Halkhead, in Renfrewshire, who were long residents in this parish, but the title became extinct on the death of William, 14th baron, 19 Aug. 1754. There is also a United Free church, Dormont House, beautifully situated within a deer park on the banks of the Annan, and about a mile from the village, is the residence of Major F. J. Carruthers J.P. Rammercales is the seat of Major William Bell Macdonald J.P. Carrutherstown is a small village in this parish, about 2 miles south-west from Dalton and the same distance north-east from Ruthwell station. Area, 6,891 acres; rateable value, £5,819; the population in 1901 was 563.

DORNOCK is a parish and small village, on the high road from Annan to Carlisle, and about a quarter of a mile from the shore of the Selway Firth, in the district of Annandale, and small debts court district of Annan and Dumfries, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 84 miles south of Edinburgh, 18 south of Langholm, 17 south-east of Dumfries, 12 south-east of Lockerbie, 7 south of Ecclefechan and 2½ east of Annan. The parish, which is about 2½ miles square, is washed on its southern border by the Selway, Hobgill Tower, formerly belonging to the Irvings of Robgill, but now the property of the trustees of the late Robert Paterson esq. is now (1911) unoccupied. Stapleton Tower, an ancient structure on the estate of Stapleton, in this parish, is now the residence of Major John A. Critchley J.P. At a short distance from the village are the remains of a Roman military road and a Druidical circle. In Dornock churchyard are two coped gravestones, each 6½ feet long and two broad, with hitherto undeciphered inscriptions. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C.; the Earl of Mansfield; Sir Frederick John W. Johnstone bart. D.L. of Westerhall, Langholm, and Major J. A. Critchley are the principal landowners. Area of the parish, 4,788 acres; rateable value, £6,866; population, 1901, 871.

DUMFRIES WITH MAXWELLTOWN

DUMFRIES (Gaelic, "dún Fris," the Frisians' fortress) is a parish, town and royal burgh, the capital of the county and the seat of the synod and presbytery of Dumfries, 333 miles from London (via Manchester), 72 south of Edinburgh, 75 south-east of Glasgow, 180 south-by-west of Aberdeen, 60 south-east of Ayr, 34 north-west of Carlisle, 17 north-north-west of Annan and 9 south-west of Lochmaben, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, forming an important junction as connecting the Midland system from Glasgow to London, the Caledonian main line at Lockerbie for Glasgow, Edinburgh and the north of Scotland, and the London and North Western for London. It is also a junction for the Castle Douglas, Newton Stewart, and Stranraer railways, worked in connection with the mail steamers from Stranraer, in Wigtownshire, to Larne, on the east coast of co. Antrim, which is the shortest sea passage between Scotland and Ireland. Dumfries is seated on the left bank of the river Nith, about 9 miles above its confluence with the Solway Firth, and is navigable for vessels of light tonnage, the tide flowing as high as the weir. It was undoubtedly a place of considerable size long before the days of William the Lion, and in his reign (1165-1214) it was erected into a royal burgh.

Three bridges connect the town with Maxwelltown on the west bank of the river: the new bridge, built in 1795, in continuation of Buccleuch street, was widened and greatly improved in 1892-3 at a cost of over £4,000, defrayed by the late Miss McKie, of the Moat House, Dumfries; there is also a foot suspension bridge, opened in 1875; and the "Old Bridge," built towards the end of the 13th century by Devorgilla, daughter of the Lord of Galloway and wife of John Baliol, which is a steep and narrow structure of stone, of six arches, though formerly, when it spanned part of either shore, it is said to have had nine. It is now only used by foot passengers.

Along the river Nith are quays at which vessels load and discharge; those at the town afford a depth of water of 8 to 9 feet at high water; at New Quay, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles lower down, the depth is 12 feet, and at Glencaple Quay, 5 miles below the town and $\frac{2}{3}$ from the mouth of the river, 15 feet.

Under the provisions of the "Customs Act, 1846" (9 and 10 Vict. c. 102), the port of Dumfries was limited in Sept. 1847, so as to extend from Kirkcaldrews Burn to Southern Point, and then to the river Sark. The creeks attached to Dumfries are Annan, Carsethorn, Dalbeattie, Palnackie and Kirkcubright. The Customs District was constituted a Court of Survey District in October, 1876, and a Wreck Receiver's District was defined in October, 1876, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854" (17 and 18 Vict. c. 104). The value of imports in 1910 was £9,579. During the same year 17 vessels were registered as belonging to the port, with an aggregate of 995 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters D.S. The number of British vessels entering the port in 1910 with cargoes and in ballast was 11, of an aggregate registered tonnage of 1,376.

The town is lighted with gas and electricity and supplied with water from works the property of the Corporation, the former having been purchased by them in 1878 from the Dumfries Gas Co. for a sum of £21,000. Various additions have since been made at a cost up to 1906 of £60,201.

The municipal government of the burgh is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and nineteen other councillors. Dumfries, together with Annan, Lochmaben, Sanguhar and Kirkcubright, comprise the Dumfries Parliamentary District, formed in 1708, and returning one member to Parliament. Circuit courts of justice are held in April and September for Dumfriesshire and the stewardry of Kirkcubright and Wigtownshire; there are also ordinary and small debt, sheriff's and insolvency burgh courts. There is a Burgh police force, with offices in Buccleuch street, and a Fire Brigade. The Court house and County buildings are large, elegant erections, in Buccleuch street. There is also a Court house and Bridewell in Terregles street, Maxwelltown, where also is H.M. Prison.

St. Michael's, the mother church of Dumfries, was rebuilt in 1745 on the site of a pre-Reformation church, and is a rectangular structure with a massive and lofty tower and spire; the interior has stone arcades dividing it into nave and aisles, and many of the windows are filled with stained glass: under the entrance and on the walls there are numerous marble monuments, including one to Allan Cunningham, author, biographer and poet, who died 29 Oct. 1842: the pew in which Burns sat is distinguished by a brass tablet. The cemetery attached to the church contains numerous elegant and curious monuments, and particularly the fine mausoleum raised to the memory of Robert Burns, who died at Dumfries on the 21st July, 1796, aged 37 years: the design for the mausoleum was by F. Hunt esq. of London, and the sculptured work by Turnerelli; here is also the ruined monument of Provost Corsane, and tomb of Francis Irving, M.P. for the burgh in 1617. Near the gate is buried Bailie Paterson, to whom the Dumfries Academy is indebted for its endowments: and within an enclosure surrounded by iron rails lie the remains of more than 420 inhabitants of Dumfries, who died of Asiatic cholera, from 15 Sept. to 27 Nov. 1832: in the churchyard are also inscribed stones to William Grierson, William Welsh and James Kirk, three martyrs who suffered death on the Whitesands—the two former on Jan. 2nd, 1667, and the latter June, 1685: there is also a lofty pyramidal memorial of granite, erected in 1834, to these and other Nithdale Martyrs. The parish has a population of 8,000.

Greyfriars is the second charge of the parish of Dumfries. The church, originally erected on the site of the old castle during the period 1722-7, and then called "the New Church," was built from the Burgh funds, and is the property of the town: in 1866-9 it was rebuilt, at a total cost of over £7,161, in the Decorated style, and renamed "Greyfriars' Church;" it has a tower with spire 164 feet in height, and a fine entrance doorway, copied in part from a doorway in Melrose abbey; there are memorial windows to Robert Scott and Jane Lindsay, his wife, placed in 1867; to William H. Cairns M.A. late rector of Dumfries Academy, erected in 1872; William Gordon, c. 1890; and to Mr. Barker, erected by his wife: the colours of the 2nd Batt. 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, carried during the period 1858-78, were deposited here 10 Sept. 1873, and are now suspended in the church: there is also an inscribed brass, erected by Col. John Talbot Coke, commanding 2nd Batt. the King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th foot), to his comrades who died in Egypt during 1888-9, and another erected by the officers and men to those who died in the South African war, 1900-1902: the church will seat 1,000 persons. Population of the parish, 3,589.

The church of St. Mary, on the north side of English street, affords about 860 sittings and has an attached burial ground containing several well executed monuments. The population of the parish is 6,557. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, erected in 1867-8, is a fine building in the Gothic style, from designs by Mr. W. Slater and Mr. R. H. Carpenter, architects, of London, and has tower and spire 120 feet high: it affords 460 sittings, and attached is the Mission church of St. Ninian, at Maxwelltown; the Rev. Colin Campbell im Thurn M.A. of Merton College, Oxford, has been rector since 1907.

This town is the head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Galloway, comprising the counties of Dumfries, Kirkcubright and Wigtown, and most of Ayr. The Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral, in Shakespeare street, is a large and handsome edifice, with sittings for 800 persons.

There are also five United Free churches, one Free Church of Scotland, a Catholic Apostolic church, Baptist, two Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and various Mission halls.

The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Observatory, on Corberry Hill, on the Maxwelltown side of the river, and formerly a windmill, was converted to its present use in 1835 by a local scientific society, at a cost of about £1,050, and is a building of four storeys, containing a varied and interesting collection of statuary, pictures, geological, natural history and other collections, relics of the poet Burns, and globes and mathematical instruments: in the upper storey is a camera-obscura. A large hall with gallery was erected in 1862, from the designs of Mr. Nawall, architect, at a cost of £800. The grounds, extending over an acre, were enlarged in 1897, and are laid out with much taste, and planted with flowers and shrubs, and here stands a life-size group of Robert Paterson (the "Old Mortality" of Scott) and his pony.

The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Ewart Public Library, in Catherine street, is a building of red sandstone in the Classic style, begun in 1899, and erected by Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, at a cost of £10,000, the site having been presented by the late Miss and Mr. Thomas McKie, of Moat House: it was opened in 1903 and contains a reference library of 4,000 volumes, a lending library of 9,000 volumes, and reading rooms.

The Dumfries and Galloway Club, known as the "County Club," occupies the Old Assembly rooms.

Dumfries and Galloway Royal Infirmary, founded in 1776, is still the only one in the south of Scotland, and in 1897 a new fever house was added to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. Medical advice and medicine are gratuitously afforded to every applicant who is an object of charity. There are 120 beds. The Infirmary is supported by annual subscriptions, legacies, donations, benefactions &c. and is under the management of a body of governors.

The Crichton Royal Institution was endowed by the late James Crichton esq. of Friar's Carse, and incorporated by Act of Parliament, dated 3rd July, 1840, as a hospital for the insane and a home for mental and nervous invalids of the higher and middle classes: the attached church, erected to the memory of the founders, James and Elizabeth Crichton, at a cost of £30,000, was opened and dedicated in 1897. The grounds, about 780 acres in extent, are pleasantly situated on an elevation overlooking the valley of the Nith, and have a south-western aspect and an extensive and varied prospect. Crichton hall, and the buildings near it, are devoted to the reception of patients of the wealthier classes; a second group of houses is appropriated to the care and treatment of less affluent patients, and a third group of houses has been erected for the reception of parochial patients belonging to the district; the total number of patients is about 850. The institution has its own water system (artesian well) and electricity station, and a farm.

Moorhead's Hospital, in St. Michael street, founded in 1753 by Messrs. J. & W. Moorhead, merchants, is intended for the support of the aged and indigent poor. It is governed by a body of directors elected from the magistrates, the town council, the kirk session and ratepayers, and is supported by benefactions, donations and annual subscriptions.

Carruthers' Almshouses, in Brooms road, were founded by Mrs. Carruthers. The Johnstone Almshouses, in Johnstone park, were erected by the trustees of the late David Johnstone, solicitor, for ladies in reduced circumstances.

The public halls are St. George's Hall, Buccleuch street, to seat 700 persons; the Drill Hall, in Newall terrace, to hold 5,000 persons; the Town Hall, in Buccleuch street, reconstructed in 1910; a Freemasons' Hall, in George street, the Greyfriars' Hall and the Mechanics' Hall, in Irish street; Dickson's Hall, in Irish street, Queensberry Hall, in Queen street and St. Mary's Hall, to seat 900 persons, in English street.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited.

The Post Office, in Buccleuch street, is an edifice of Dumfries-shire red stone, and was opened in 1889.

The Public Baths and Washhouses, in Greensands, were erected in 1898, at a cost of £3,800, as a gift to the Corporation, by the late Miss McKie, of the Moat House, Dumfries.

The Dumfries Academy, in Academy street, established under its present designation in 1804, superseded the Grammar school and the Commercial school. The date of the foundation of these schools is unknown, but mention is made of the Grammar school in the sessions clerk's records for 1688. In 1722 the masters in both schools were endowed by Bailie Paterson, of Dumfries, who bequeathed 15,000 merks to the magistrates and ministers of Dumfries for the benefit of the teachers; and in the following year by John Raining, of Norwich, to the extent of £500. The Bell bequest of £100, left in 1789, was assigned to the English master. The old structure was built in 1803, mainly by private subscription, and for some years the subscribers took a share in the management of the academy, but in 1814 it was handed over to the town council, and in August, 1872, by the operation of the Education Act, it was transferred, as a Higher Class public school, to the management of the Dumfries Burgh School Board. The new building, erected in 1896-7, at a cost of about £20,000, and opened in 1897, is an edifice in the Classic style, with a dome 62 feet in height, surmounted by a figure emblematic of Learning. New buildings for junior pupils were erected in 1910 and additions were made to the block devoted to technical instruction. The academy is available for 600 pupils, and is now recognised as a centre for the training of junior students.

The Industrial school is intended for 125 boys, drawn from many different parts of Great Britain, who are taught shoe making, tailoring, net making, carpentering &c. Attached to the school is a band of pipers, known throughout Scotland, and often engaged to play in the large centres, by which a considerable addition is often made to the revenue. The house in which Robert Burns died (21st July, 1796) adjoins the school and is part of its property.

The 3rd Special Reserve Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers are quartered at a camp at Hannahfield; the 5th (Dumfries and Galloway) Territorial Force Battalion King's Own Scottish Borderers has its head quarters at the Drill hall, Newall terrace, erected from designs by Mr. A. B. Crombie, architect, of Dumfries, and seating 5,000 persons.

The Queensberry Memorial consists of a fine Doric column raised by the county of Dumfries to the memory of Charles, 3rd Duke of Queensberry, who died 22 Oct. 1778. In Church place, close to Greyfriars church, is a fine statue of the poet Burns, unveiled by Lord Rosebery 6th April, 1882; the figure, of Sicilian marble, was executed at Carrara, from a model designed and prepared by Mrs. D. O. Hill, and is placed on a plain pedestal of dark grey granite, at a height of about nine feet from the ground.

The ancient monastery of Greyfriars, in this town, was the scene of a remarkable tragedy about the middle of the 14th century, when John Comyn, known as the "Red Comyn" (a powerful chieftain who formerly held the regency of Scotland) was assassinated by Robert the Bruce and Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, of Closeburne, and Lindsay, two of his adherents.

Two newspapers are issued bi-weekly, viz.:—the "Dumfries and Galloway Courier and Herald," and the "Dumfries and Galloway Standard," both of which have a large circulation.

The principal hotels are the King's Arms, the Commercial, the Station, the Queensberry, the Woodbank, and the Waverley; at the Globe inn, commonly known as Burns' Howff and the Hole-i-th-Wa', Burns spent many of his leisure hours, and numerous relics of him are still preserved.

The butter and egg market is held in the New market, Loreburn street. Wednesday is the market day. The two principal half-yearly markets take the name of the Candlemas and Road fairs. Besides the usual commodities that change hands at these periods, many thousand head of cattle are bought and sold, and vast quantities of pork also find purchasers in Dumfries from the beginning of December to the end of February. The principal fairs are held on the 12th and 13th of February if Tuesday and Wednesday, if not, Tuesday and Wednesday following; hiring, 13th if Wednesday, if not, Wednesday after; in March, hiring, last Wednesday; April, hiring, last Wednesday; May, horse, Wednesday before 26th; hiring, Wednesday 26th or first Wednesday after; June, horse, Wednesday after 17th (O.S.); September, horse, 24th if Tuesday, if not, Tuesday after; horse and hiring, 25th if Wednesday, if not, Wednesday after; October, hiring, third Wednesday; November, horse, Wednesday before 22nd; hiring, 22nd if Wednesday, if not, first Wednesday after; pork every Wednesday in months of January, February, March, November and December.

There are two auction marts for the sale of cattle, sheep &c. through which pass very large quantities of stock every week, and are frequented by dealers from all parts of England and Scotland, Dumfries being the centre of a large agricultural district.

The principal imports are agricultural produce, coal, slata and iron; and the exports being wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, wool and freestone, the latter worked at Locharbriggs, 3 miles distant. The manufacture of woollen tweed is very extensively carried on here, and considerable business is also done in hosiery, gloves and neckties. Dumfries was for many years the leading market for bareskins in Scotland, and even regulated the price of home fur in England; and it is still regarded as the arbiter of prices in this respect. The numerous nursery grounds lying near the town also afford employment to the working classes.

The principal landowners are the Right Hon. Aretas Akers-Douglas P.C., M.P., D.L., J.P. of Craigs; Capt. Campbell Johnstone, of Carnsalloch; the Directors of the Crichton Royal Institution and John Howat esq. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes.

The civil parish of Dumfries comprises an area of 10,084 acres; rateable value, £108,957; the area of the burgh is 569 acres; rateable value, £81,517; the population in 1891 was 17,878 and in 1901, 18,146; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 12,947 and in 1901, 13,092, viz.:—First ward, 1,945; second ward, 1,623; third ward, 3,487; fourth ward, 6,487; the population of the royal burgh in 1901 was 17,081 and of the parliamentary burgh, 18,685. Included in the total population of Dumfries is 149 officials and 998 inmates of the Crichton Royal Institution for Insane and Southern Counties Asylum and 7 officials and 118 inmates of the Industrial School. The Burgh is now divided into eight wards, the former four wards having been converted into seven, and the eighth consists of a portion of the landward part of the parish, taken into the municipal area in 1905. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was:—St. Mary's, 6,557; St. Michael's, 8,000; Greyfriars, 3,589. The area of Maxwelltown burgh (Kirkcudbrightshire) is 677 acres; rateable value, £26,662; the population in 1891 was 4,961, and in 1901, 5,789, viz.:—North ward, 2,284, and South ward, 3,512; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 2,313.

MAXWELLTOWN is a burgh of barony, police burgh and quad sacra parish formed from the parish of Troqueer, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and is connected with Dumfries by three bridges across the Nith. The charter for the creation of the burgh was obtained in 1810, and since that time it has considerably improved both in character and population; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, and twelve commissioners, distinct from Dumfries, of which it is virtually an extension, and is partly comprised within that parliamentary burgh. A small debt court is held on the last Thursday of each month by the sheriff substitute, resident at Kirkcudbright. Here is an Established church, a United Free church and Mission Hall. St. Ninian's Episcopal Mission church will seat 300 persons, and is served from Dumfries. Among the trading establishments are saw mills, tweed, hosiery, glove and necktie factories and dye works. The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Observatory, which stands on Corberry hill, in this burgh, was converted to its present use by a local scientific society, and is a building of four storeys, the uppermost of which has a camera-obscura. About a mile along the Maxwelltown bank of the Nith are situated the ruins of Lincluden Abbey, locally in the parish of Teregles and county of Kirkcudbright (which see). His Majesty's Prison for Dumfries and Galloway, situated here, is a large building, opened August 15th, 1883.

DUNSCORE is a parish and village, in the district of Nithsdale and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination and Dumfries small debt court district, 4 miles south-west of Auldgrith station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 9 north-west from Dumfries and 7 south-east from Moniaive, is bounded by Glencairo and Keir on the north, and Holywood and Kirkcudbrightshire on the south, and is 12 miles in length and from 1 to 4 miles wide. A light railway from Dumfries to Moniaive was opened March 1st, 1905, and has a station here about half a mile from the village. The land is arable on the banks of the Nith, which irrigates its eastern part; it is also intersected by the Cairn. There are Established and United Free churches. Sheep and cattle are reared off these lands for the southern markets. Thomas Welsh, an eminent per-

DURISDEER is a parish and village, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in the Dumfries small debt court district; the parish is bounded on the south and south-east by Morton, on the north and north-east by the parish of Crawford, on the south and south-west by Pentpott and on the north-west by Saughar; it is 8 miles in length and 6 in breadth. The village is about 6 miles north of Thornhill and 2 from Carronbridge (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. Drumlanrig Castle, the noble mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry K.G., K.T. who is the principal landowner, is beautifully situated about 4 miles from Thornhill, on the right bank of the river, and occupies an elevated site overlooking the whole district. The castle was rebuilt by William, first Duke of Queensberry, between the years 1679 and 1689. Within the last half century the woods around the castle have been greatly extended, and now cover a large portion of country. The beautiful gardens and pleasure grounds of the castle are kept with great care, and are free to the inspection of visitors on Tuesdays and Fridays. In 1776, when Mr.
Pennant visited Drumlanrig, there existed in the woods a breed of wild cattle described as being of a milk-white colour, with black ears and finely curved horns.
They were removed, it is said, to Chil-ingham Castle, in Northumberland, the seat of the Earl of Tankerville, where

ECCLEFECHAN WITH HODDAM

ECCLEFECHAN is a considerable village and principal place in the parish of Hoddam and in the small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, 71 miles south of Edinburgh, 75 south-east of Glasgow, 20 north-west by rail from Carlisle, 12 east of Dumfries, 6 north of Annan, and 14 west-south-west from Langholm, lying in a fine situation near the foot of Annandale, and on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, with a station 1 mile distant on the Caledonian railway. A few of the inhabitants find employment in weaving woollen skirting goods for the Glasgow manufacturers. De Laitte petrol gas plant has been set up in the villages by E. J. Brook esq. of Hoddam Castle, who makes a nominal charge for the gas supplied. The Established church at Hoddam is a small edifice of stone, consisting of nave and north aisle, with a turret and one bell. There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland. Fairs are held for cattle &c. on the Tuesday after the 11th of June, and the Tuesday after the 20th October. Hoddam Castle, finely situated on the river Annan, about 2½ miles west from Ecclefechan, is the seat of Edward J. Brook esq. J.P. who, as principal landowner and superior, claims certain customs for all standings and for all cattle exposed for sale. Here was born, 4 Dec. 1795, Thomas Carlyle, now world renowned as a moral philosopher and historian. His father, James Carlyle, was by trade a mason, and sent him first in 1805, to the Grammar school at Annan, and afterwards, in Nov. 1809, when only 14 years of age, to the University of Edinburgh. Carlyle subsequently became mathematical tutor at Annan school, and in 1816 was appointed master of the school at Kirkcaldy, on leaving which in 1818, he went to Edinburgh, and in 1822 was tutor there to the sons of Mr. Buller; in 1825 he took a farm at Hoddam hill, and in 1826 married Jane Baillie Welsh, daughter of the laird of Craigenputtock, to which place he removed in 1828, but in the summer of 1834 he established himself at the now famous house, 5 Cheryne row, Chelsea, where he resided until his death, 4 Feb. 1881, and here several of his works, including his "Life of Frederick the Great," completed in 1865, were written; in 1866 he was chosen Lord Rector of Edinburgh University, but in the same year lost his wife, a blow from which he never rallied. The remains of the great philosopher were brought from London, and interred in the parish churchyard here, and both the cottage in which he was born and his house in Chelsea are now religiously preserved, and are open to the inspection of visitors. Within a short distance of the village are the remains of two camps, one of which is said to be one of the most complete in Scotland. The land in Hoddam parish is of the best quality, and is under a superior system of cultivation. The area of the parish of Hoddam comprises 7,514 acres; rateable value being £11,768; the population in 1901 was 1,521, including 785 in the village of Ecclefechan.

GLENCAIRN is a parish, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in the Dumfries small debt court district, and is 15 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and distant 9 miles from Thornhill station, and 17½ miles from Dumfries station, both on the Glasgow & South Western railway. The western and northern divisions are mountainous and pastoral. Several small rivulets meander through the parish, on the south-west verge of which is Loch Urr, whence issues the river of that name. The parish church (St. Cuthbert's) is at Kirkland, with a mission church (St. Ninian's) at Moniaive.

MONIAIVE, a considerable and pleasant village in this parish, 16 miles north-west from Dumfries, and 8 south-west from Thornhill, is a place of some antiquity, and was created a burgh of barony by charter in the reign of Charles I. Here are two United Free churches and a library and reading room. Maxwellton House was the home of Annie Laurie. On an eminence near the village stands a monument erected by subscription in 1828, and inscribed to the Rev. James Renwick, the last person who suffered death in Scotland as a Covenantor; he was born at Moniaive, 15th February, 1682, and executed at the Grass Market, Edinburgh, 17th February, 1688. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch in the village.

DUNREGGAN, now a suburb of Moniaive, is situated on the north bank of the Dalwhat water, here crossed by a bridge.

Captain George Laurie Walker J.P. of Crawfordton; the Rev. Sir J. R. L. Emiliaus Laurie bart. B.D., J.P. of Maxwellton; Miss Fergusson, of Craigharroch; Major William McCall, of Caitloch, and Capt. G. L. Walker J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 30,083 acres; rateable value, £14,336 13s.; the population of the parish in 1901 was 1,490, including 528 in Moniaive and Dunreggan GLENCAPLE QUAY, see CAER- LAVEROCK.

GRAITNEY (or Gretna) is a parish and village in the south part of the county, small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, and poor combination of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, and on the west side of the small river Sark. The present parish comprehends the old parishes of Graitney and Redkirk, which were united in 1604.
 The village of Graitney, or Gretna Green, is on the road from Annan to Carlisle, 8 miles east from the former and 9½ from the latter town, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western Railway. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish.
 The river Esk, which flows to the south, discharging itself into the Solway Frith, is now spanned by an iron bridge erected from the designs of Thomas Telford, the eminent engineer; previously the Solway was crossed by a ferry boat. An extensive salmon fishery is carried on in the Solway.
 This place was long noted for the celebration of clandestine or runaway marriages.
 Any person could perform the ceremony, which merely amounted to a declaration before witnesses that the parties were man and wife, such an acknowledgment being sufficient to constitute a valid marriage in Scotland, and on a certificate being subscribed by the person officiating and by the witnesses the union became quite in-dissoluble. The fee charged varied according to circumstances and the social position of the parties—from half a guinea to £40, or even £50. The first person who celebrated these marriages is said to have been one Coulthard, a fisherman, who also conveniently owned the ferryboat; another was John Paisley, a tobacconist, though termed a blacksmith; he officiated from 1760 at Megg's Hill, but in 1782 removed to Springfield, and died in 1814; later, the officiating principal was a man named Elliott. During the period 1850-55, the average of marriages here amounted to 747 yearly, but under the provisions of an Act of Parliament passed 29th July, 1856 (19 and 20 Vict. c. 96), these marriages were declared illegal, unless one of the persons married had been resident in Scotland for 21 days previous to the marriage. The following was the form of the marriage certificate, which, if required, was furnished:—

KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND, COUNTY OF DUMFRIES, PARISH OF GRETNA.

"These are to certify to all whom these presents may come, that A. B. from the parish of —, in the county of —, and C. D. from the parish of —, in the county of —, being now here present, and having declared themselves single persons, were this day married after the manner of the laws of the Church of England, and agreeable to the laws of Scotland.
 "As witness our hands at Gretna Hall, &c. &c."

RIGG is a small village in this parish, 2 miles from Gretna station.

SPRINGFIELD is a village a quarter

HOLYWOOD is a parish and village, on the road from Dumfries to Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and Irongray, Newtonairs and Stepford stations on the Cairn Valley light railway, about 3½ miles north from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded by Dunscore on the north and west, extends for 3 miles along the right bank of the Nith and 10 miles along the right bank of the Cluden or Cairn, its breadth being from 2 to 3 miles, and is in the small debt court of Dumfries. The district derives its name from a sacred grove, to which, it is said, the Druids resorted to perform their rites. Here was once a monastery of the Premonstratensian order, founded at the beginning of the 12th century by an Irish recluse named Congal, and the ruins formerly standing in the churchyard were supposed to be the remains of the buildings. The church stands in a delightful part of the country. Henry Keswick esq. J.P. of Cowhill Tower; William Glen Airston esq. of Broomrigg; Peter Carruthers esq. J.P. of Portrack; Miss Gilchrist Clark, of Speddock; the trustees of Henry Lamont esq. of Gribton; Norman E. Douglas-Menzies esq. of Newtonairs, and Maxwell Hyslop Maxwell esq. of Liverpol, are the principal landowners. Near Stepford station are extensive whinstone quarries. The soil of the upper part of the parish is clay, lower part light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops, oats, potatoes, roots and pasture. The area comprises 8,805 acres; rateable value, £11,651; the population in 1901 was 938.

Post Office, Holywood; Joseph Gass, sub-postmaster. Letters through Dumfries. Delivery, 7.20 a.m.; dispatch, 3.55 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Dumfries, 4 miles distant, & the nearest telegraph office at Newbridge, 1 mile. No Sunday delivery of letters

JOHNSTONE is a parish in the district of Annandale, adjoining Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Kirkmichael; it is 6 miles in length and 3 in breadth. The nearest market town is Lockerbie, 7 miles distant from Johnstone Bridge, and the nearest railway station is Dinwoodie, 1½ miles distant, on the Caledonian railway main line. There is a library in the parish containing over 1,800 volumes. The remains of Lochwood tower stand at the northern end of the parish, in the centre of a venerable and picturesque wood, surrounded by impassable bogs. In the 16th century, Robert, natural brother to the chieftain, John, 7th Lord

Maxwell, of Nithsdale, burnt it, during the clanish quarrel which resulted in the battle of the Dryfte Sands. Raehills House, the seat of John James Hope-Johnstone esq. D.L., J.P. of Annandale, chief landowner, was begun by the Earls of Hope-toun, the ancestors of the present proprietor, in the 18th century; in the park is a fall on the river Kinnel, called Wallace's Loup. The area comprises 13,490 acres; rateable value, £6,930; the population in 1901 was 800.

KIRKMICHAEL AND GARREL form a parish about 10 miles long and 4 broad, bounded on the north by the parish of Kirkpatrick-Juxta, by Johnstone on the east, Lochmaben on the south-east, Tin-wald and Kirkmahoe on the south, and by the B river and Closeburn on the west; the parish is in the small debt court of Dumfries, and Parkgate village is 3 miles from Shieldhill station on the Caledonian railway, 8 from Dumfries and 9 from Lockerbie. Many remains of ancient fortifications and Roman roads are visible in this district, and a number of ancient coins and other small antiquities have been found. There are Established and United Free churches. More than half of the parish belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. and the rest is distributed amongst several proprietors. The soil is heavy loam; subsoil, gravel. The crops are oats, turnips, potatoes, chiefly pasture. The area, which is hilly, comprises 17,033 acres; rateable value, £8,349; the population in 1891 was 808,

and in 1901, 748.

KIRKPATRICK-FLEMING is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, and the head of a poor combination, bounded on the east by Graitney, or Gretna, and has a station on the Caledonian railway, 13 miles from Carlisle. Here are Established and United Free churches. In the churchyard are several ancient tombstones, amongst others a sarcophagus, bearing a Latin inscription and eight shields of arms, to William Coulthard, chief of his name, who was resident in the parish till near the end of the eighteenth century.

Moss Knowe, the residence of William Fergus Graham esq. is a fine and stately mansion about a mile from the village. The Victoria Hall was erected by subscription in 1893. Lime and freestone abound in this district, and there is an extensive freestone quarry on the property of the Hon. Mrs. Greville-Nugent, of Cove; there are likewise several mineral springs, possessing medicinal properties similar to those of Hartford spa, near Moffat. Springkell, about 2½ miles east from Ecclefechan, is an estate, the property of Sir Jabez Edward Johnson-Ferguson bart. J.P. Sir J. E.

Johnson-Ferguson bart. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 11,382 acres; rateable value, £10,563; population in 1901, 1,468, including 2 officials and 23 inmates of Kirkpatrick-Fleming Combination Poorhouse.

KIRKPATRICK-JUXTA is a parish formerly partly in Lanarkshire, in the upper district of Annandale, bounded on the north by Moffat, on the east by Wamphray. At BEATTOCK, a village in this parish, is a station on the Caledonian railway, about 19 miles north from Dumfries. The parish church is a plain building of stone with a tower. In the parish is the celebrated Garpel Linn; and here also is the ruined castle of Auchencass, the remains of which cover a considerable extent of ground. It was erected by Randolph, Earl of Murray, during the minority of David Bruce, and was subsequently held by Douglas of Morton. The old tower of Loch-house is supposed to have been rebuilt by James Johnstone, of Corehead, chamberlain to Walter Whiteford, bishop of Brechin (1635-43), whose daughter he married, and thus obtained possession of extensive lands in Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Moffat. Loch-house is now inhabited by a cottier or herd. Queensberry, 2,270 feet in height, lies to the west of the parish. A little to the north-west of Moffat is an ancient chapel said to have belonged to the Knights Templars and the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The modern mansion called Auchencastle, the residence of Sir William Younger bart. J.P. is a large house situated on rising ground, near the Evan water. John James Hope-Johnstone esq. D.L., J.P. of Raehills, is the principal landowner. About one-third of the land is under tillage; the larger portion is unimproved and pasture, though it is being rapidly subdued to the plough. The area comprises 22,335 acres; rateable value, £9,532; and the population in 1901 was 980. The small portion in Lanarkshire was transferred to Dumfries since 1839 by Local Government Board Order No. 2.

CRAIGIELANDS and HOPPERTOOTHIE are hamlets in Kirkpatrick-Juxta.

KIRTLEBRIDGE, see MIDDLEBIE.

KIRKTON, see KIRKMAHOE.

LANGHOLM is a town and police burgh and parish in Hawick poor combination and the seat of a presbytery, 73 miles from Edinburgh, 80 south-west from Glasgow, 30 east-by-north from Dumfries, 21 north from Carlisle, 18 north-north-east from Annan and 12 north from Longtown, Cumberland, with a station on the North British railway; the town is delightfully situated on both sides of the Esk, over which there is a suspension bridge, and also a stone bridge of three arches, affording a view of the confluence of the Ewes and the Wauchope with the Esk. The town is supplied with water from a copious spring known as "Whita Wells," and lighted with gas from works the property of a company. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Sheriff small debt courts and justice of peace courts are held as required. The parish church, a modern structure, contains a splendid organ, provided at a cost of £1,200. There are also three United Free churches, an Evangelical Union church and a Mission Hall. There is also here a private Episcopal chapel belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch.

The Town Hall, in the Market place, has a tower with spire, and an illuminated clock. The Public Library, richly endowed by Thomas Telford esq. F.R.S. the celebrated engineer, a native of the district (d. 2 Sept. 1834), occupies a substantial building in High street, erected at a cost of about £3,380, of which sum £1,000 was a bequest of the late Alexander Reid esq. The Hope Trust Hospital was erected in 1898, after designs by Messrs. Wood and Ainslie, architects, of London, from a bequest of the late Mr. Thomas Hope, of New York, a native of Langholm, who left the residue of his estate, amounting to over £100,000, for this purpose. There is a Masonic hall, at which the meetings of the Eskdale Kilwinning lodge, No. 107, are held. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. A newspaper, the "Eskdale and Liddesdale Advertiser," is published in the town. The B Company, 5th Territorial Force Battalion (Dumfries and Galloway) King's Own Scottish Borderers has its head quarters here, and a drill room in the Temperance Hotel buildings. The market day is Wednesday; fairs are held on the 1st Wednesday in March (for the lambing season), 16th April (for seeds), the last Tuesday in May (old style), 26th July (for lambs and wool), 18th September (for sheep), and 5th November (for cattle); there are also two hiring days—one in May and the other in November. A sale of cattle, sheep &c. is held fortnightly, and the Eskdale and Liddesdale Agricultural Society hold their show of stock in September, at which premiums are awarded. The local industries comprise the making of tweeds, blankets and other fabrics, both for home markets and for exportation, and there are several factories, giving employment to many hands, besides which there are distilleries, dye-houses and a tannery. On the hill behind the town stands a monument to General Sir John Malcolm G.C.B. who died 30 April, 1833, erected at a cost of £1,300; and near the Town Hall stands a monument to his brother, Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm G.C.B., G.C.M.G. a distinguished naval officer, d. 20 July, 1838. The border house or tower of Langholm, formerly the property of the Armstrongs, is now in a state of ruin. Wanchope Castle, the earliest seat of the Lindsay family, which stood in the immediate neighbourhood, was another example. The tower of Gilnockie, still standing about four miles below Langholm, on the right bank of the Esk, was renovated by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.G. and is now open for the inspection of visitors. Eskdale derives more than common charm from the memory of Johnnie Armstrong, a border chieftain, whose name was associated with many incidents belonging to this locality. He was eventually executed at Carlenrig, a place not far distant from Moss Paul, on the road between Langholm and Hawick, together with some of his companions, by order of James V. about 1529, and the graves of the whole band are to be seen in a deserted churchyard at Carlenrig, Roxburgh. Alexander Peden, one of the most famous of Scottish worthies, is also associated with this neighbourhood, and a "knowe," or small hill, commanding a delightful view of the valley, is still named "Peden's View," and at its foot is "Peden's Well." Langholm was the birthplace, 29 Sept. 1734, of William Julius Meikle, or Mickle, translator of the "Lustad" of Camoens (1775), and author of the song "There's nae luck about the house;" he died at Forest Hill, Oxon, 23 Oct. 1788. In the neighbourhood of Langholm is a copious mineral spring, called "Bloch Well," which is efficacious in the cure of cutaneous diseases, but owing to the limited accommodation which exists in its immediate neighbourhood, it is less known than it should be. Langholm Lodge, the residence of the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. stands just outside the town, in a beautiful park, and in the grounds is a private Episcopal chapel, to which the public are admitted. The area comprises 16,971 acres: rateable value, of landward, £6,016; burghal, £13,251; the population in 1901 was 3,500, including 3,142 in the town of Langholm.

LOCHMABEN is a town, royal burgh, parish and the seat of a presbytery, with a station on a branch from Lockerbie of the Caledonian railway, 65 miles south from Edinburgh, 70 south-east from Glasgow, 33 south-east from Sanquhar, 30 north-west from Carlisle, 21 south-east from Thoruhill, 15 south from Moffat, 13 north-west from Annan, 10 west-north-west from Ecclefechan, 8 1/2 north-by-east from Dumfries and 4 west from Lockerbie; in the summer months it is a popular place of resort for tourists and other visitors, and it is lighted with gas by a company.
 Lochmaben was constituted a royal burgh at a very early period; its present charter was granted by James VI. and dated 16th of July, 1612, and was a renewal of charters granted by his predecessors; from this charter it also appears that the town was more than once destroyed during the civil wars, its public edifices plundered, and its ancient records &c. totally lost. The municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and four councillors. Lochmaben, together with Dumfries, Kirkcudbright, Anson and Saquhar, form the Dumfries parliamentary district, constituted in 1703, and returning one member to Parliament: it is in the small debt court of Dumfries, but occasional courts may be held at Lockerbie. The Parish church, erected at a cost of £3,000, is a building in the Pointed style, with a bold square tower, containing 2 bells: the foundation stone was laid April 10th, 1818, and the church opened for divine worship in July, 1820: it will seat about 1,400 persons. The previous church stood in the centre of the old churchyard, and the burial ground is still used for burial purposes. The United Free church, built in 1843 at a cost of about £800, has 350 sittings. There are also two other United Free churches, one of which is at Hightae, 2 1/2 miles from Lochmaben. The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the principal street, has a tower with a clock, and above the entrance is a statue, placed by public subscription, to the Rev. William Graham, a former minister of Newhaven, who died in 1887: opposite the Town Hall is a statue of King Robert Bruce. A Freemasons' lodge meets at the Masonic Hall and Club, in High street, and there is also a curling club, a bowling green, tennis courts, and various associations.

 The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here, and there is a Savings Bank for the town and neighbourhood.
 Lochmaben Castle, a fortress of great strength, was the chief residence of the Bruces, Lords of Annandale, till the end of the 13th century; it was built on a peninsula on the south-east of the loch, which adjoins the town, and with its outworks covered about 16 acres. In 1487 it was annexed by Parliament to the Crown, and is now the property or in the keeping of James J. Hope-Johnstone esq.
 J.P., D.L. of Raehills. Some of the existing walls are of great thickness, and the whole presents a gloomy yet interesting mass of ruins overshadowed with fir trees. In 1897 a bridge was erected over the moat by public subscription, to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. In the High street is a drinking fountain, erected in memory of His late Majesty King Edward VII. The Castle Loch, which flows very near the south side of the town, is about three miles in circumference; the Mill Loch, of somewhat less dimensions, lies on the north side of the town, and at times extends up to the doors of the houses. Both these lochs contain a fish called the vendace, or vendise, which is peculiar to these waters, and is said not to be met with anywhere else in Britain, although not uncommon in Sweden. It is of the salmon family, is delicately formed and about six inches long. How it came here is not exactly known, but some suppose it to have been brought from La Vendee, in France, when Bruce's castle was a royal residence, and hence they derive the name "vendace." These lochs, as well as four others of considerable extent, are much resorted to by boating and fishing parties, and they afford agreeable recreation both to the inhabitants and to many tourists and visitors.
 Within the parish of Lochmaben are four villages known as the "four townes," viz.: Smallholm, Greenhill, Heck and Hightae, and remarkable as holding their lands by a peculiar tenure. The proprietors of lands in these baronies are called "the King's Kindly Tenants," and by successive Royal warrants and protections granted in 1592, 1602 and 1664, have the right to continue in undisturbed possession of their respective holdings at the old rent, so long as they can continue to pay the same. These baronies are said to have been conferred on the retainers of the Bruce, and many of the present holders can trace back their ancestry for centuries. Son succeeds father, and the title is completed by the entry of the name in Lord Mansfield's rental book, and the usual solemnities of service and infeftment, otherwise common to the law of Scotland, are here unknown.
 Sir Robert William Buchanan Jardine bart. of Castle Milk, Lockerbie; David Jardine Jardine esq. J.P. of Jardine Hall, Applegirth, Lockerbie; John Johnstone esq. William Bell Macdonald esq. and Theodore E. D. Byrne esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots, potatoes and pasture. The area of the parish comprises 10,813 acres; rateable value, landward £13,334, burghal £3,551; the population in 1901 was 2,388, including 1,051 in the burgh of Lochmaben; in 1891 it was 2,522, including 1,038 in the burgh.

The number of electors on the Burgh parliamentary register in 1911 was 177.

LOCKERBIE WITH DRYFESDALE

LOCKERBIE is a small market town and police burgh in the parish of Dryfesdale, 67 miles south of Edinburgh, 12 east of Dumfries, 11 north-west of Annan, 6 north-west of Ecclefechan, 4 east of Lochmaben, 72 south-east from Glasgow and 26 1/2 north-west from Carlisle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, which is also the junction of a branch to Lochmaben and Dumfries. There is an active trade in articles of general and domestic consumption. The town is well lighted with gas from works at Townfoot. The municipal body consists of a provost, two bailies, 9 councillors, a town clerk and treasurer. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of £12,500, is an edifice in the conventional Scottish style, containing a large hall, committee rooms and a lesser hall, and in the basement a large market hall, for the use of farmers and others attending the markets. At the Town Hall is a public free library, to which a donation was made by Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. of Skibo Castle, Sutherlandshire. Connected with the town is a Masonic Lodge, and there are numerous philanthropic societies for the relief of the poor. The Parish church stands near the High street, and is centrally placed in relation to the parish generally; there are two United Free churches, and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal Mission church of All Saints, built originally in 1891, was rebuilt in 1903, at a cost of £2,500; the Rev. Herbert McNaught M.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham, has been in charge since 1903. The Parish Church Hall, formerly the Mechanics' Hall, High street, erected with a considerable sum of money left by Mr. George Easton, of Chester, for this purpose, is a building of stone. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and also a bank for savings, opened in 1824. The "Annandale Herald and Moffat News" is published here every Thursday and in Moffat every Friday, and the "Lockerbie News" every Wednesday. The following fairs, the dates of which are subject to alteration by the Town Council, are held here: in January, every Thursday, pork market; February, pork market on each Thursday and at Candemas horse fair; March, pork market 1 and 2 Thursday, lamb, pork and seed market 3 Thursday; April, fair for hoggets on 2 Thursday and for hiring on last Thursday; May, cattle market last Thursday; June, cattle 3 Thursday; July, cattle 3 Thursday; August, annual holiday 2 Friday, lamb fair and hiring 2 Thursday; September, cattle and sheep 4 Thursday; October, cattle and sheep 3 Thursday, counting from the September market, hiring last Thursday; November, cattle market 2 Thursday; Martinmas fair and the first pork market of season on 3 Thursday; December, pork market every Thursday during the month.

north-east to south-west is about 7 miles, the average breadth of the upper part is about 3 miles, and of the lower half about one and a half; about two-thirds of the parish is lowland and the rest is hilly. There is also a considerable extent of heath land towards the junction of the Annan and the Dryfe. Of the whole extent of the land in this parish, about 8,000 acres are either cultivated or have occasionally been in tillage, the remainder being in moor and pasturage. The point which assumes the greatest height is Qhlytewoolen hill, an old beacon, the elevation of which is 650 feet above the level of the sea.

The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. and Miss Jardine, of Dryfeholm, are the principal landowners.

The area of Dryfesdale parish is 10,231 acres; rateable value, landward £10,357, burghal £13,775; population, 1901, 3,130; these figures include 2,358 in the town of Lockerbie.

MAXWELLTOWN, see DUMFRIES.

MIDDLEBIE is a parish and small village in the small debts court district of Dumfries and Annan, and poor combination of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, on the road between Langholm and Ecclefechan; the village is about 2 miles east from Ecclefechan, 12 south-west from Langholm, and 2 from Kirtle-bridge station on the Caledonian railway; the parish is about 7 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and abounds in red freestone; it is also valuable for its lime quarries, but much of the land is of rather poor quality. In October, 1895, a Roman altar, erected by the 2nd Cohort of Tungrians, was found at the Roman camp of Birrens, in this parish, at the bottom of a well 16 feet deep; it weighs 17 cwt. and bears an inscription and various carvings; another altar, erected by the same cohort, to the goddess Minerva, and discovered here many years since, is preserved at Burnfoot House. The 2nd Tungrian Cohort was also stationed at Castlsteads, in Cumberland. The parish church at Middlebie is a small building of stone, with turret and one bell. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. Sir Frederick John William Johnston bart. D.L. of Westerhall, and E. J. Brook esq. J.P. of Hoddon Castle, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,542 acres: rateable value, £14,693; the population in 1901 was 1,823.

KIRTLEBRIDGE and EAGLESFIELD are small villages in this parish, the former 3 miles south-east, and the latter 2½ south from Ecclefechan. In the immediate vicinity are the famous salmon and trout fishings of the Annan, the Esk and the Kirtle. At Kirtlebridge is a station on the Caledonian railway. Kirtlebridge church, built in 1840 and restored in 1897, consists of nave, chancel, and tower containing one bell.

WATERBECK is a village in this parish, about 4 miles north-east from Ecclefechan, on the road to Langholm, and sends cured bacon to the different markets. Kirtlebridge, 3 miles distant, on the Caledonian line, is the nearest railway station.

MOFFAT is an inland spa, town and police burgh, and a large parish in the district of Annandale, 51 miles south of Edinburgh, 57 south-east of Glasgow, 14 north of Lockerbie, 41 north-west of Carlisle and 21 north of Dumfries, with a terminal station on a branch of about one mile and a half in length, constructed in 1882, from Beattock station on the Caledonian railway. A small part of the parish is in Lanarkshire. Moffat is an ancient town, being named in documents of the 13th century, when it was a manor held by the Bruce, Lord of Annandale, and ancestor of King Robert I. The town commands a fine and extensive prospect of a delightful valley, stretching towards the south, and interspersed with hedge-rows, meadows and corn fields, and pleasingly diversified by the windings of the river Annan. High Street, the principal street of the town, is a wide and spacious thoroughfare, laid down upon the principle of road making invented by John Loudon M'Adam, and is lined with excellent shops. It is lighted with gas by a local company. Moffat was instituted a burgh on the adoption, in 1864, of the Police Act, and now possesses a council invested with powers for sanitary and road improvements, the holding of monthly courts and other matters. The Public baths, in High street, include a hall, need for concerts and lectures, and during the summer a band plays here.
The Cottage Hospital, in Selkirk road, was erected in 1905-6, partly from funds provided by the trustees of the late William Prondfoot esq. the wards being furnished by Mrs. McMillan. The Prond-foot Working Men's Institute, founded by the late William Prondfoot esq. of Craigiebarn, is an elegant structure in the Scottish style, with reading and recreation rooms, baths and an excellent library of over 3,000 volumes; above the entrance is a bust of the founder. Here also is a Freemasons' Hall. An ornamental drinking fountain, consisting of a pedestal of rough sandstone surmounted by the figure of a ram cast in bronze, was erected in the centre of the town in November, 1876, at the cost of the late William Colvin esq. of Craigielands. The Parish church was built and presented to the parishioners in 1796 by James, 3rd Earl of Hopetoun, inheritor of the Annandale estates, on the site of one of the churches of Annandale transferred to the Bishop of Glasgow, and was constituted one of the prebends of that see, but the present structure, the foundation stone of which was laid in August, 1885, was opened for public worship in September, 1887; it is a cruciform building, Gothic in style, and consisting of chancel, nave, transepts and a tower 107 feet in height. The pulpit, of carved pitch pine, is set on seven pillars of polished red sandstone, and some of the principal windows are filled with stained glass. At the west end of the church is a hall, with a vestry on the south and a session house on the north. The church and hall together with an adjoining manse, cost between £12,000 and £13,000, £6,000 of which was subscribed by the congregation and friends, and the remainder provided by the heritors of the parish. The church will seat 1,150 persons. The United Free church, in Academy road, erected at an expense of £6,000, is a building of red sandstone and blue whinstone, in the Decorated Gothic style, and has a fine barrel roof. A hall has since been added. The Episcopal church is an iron structure erected in 1872. The United Free church, in Old Well road, erected at a cost of about £3,000, was opened in July, 1862, and a Church hall was added in 1895. The Roman Catholic church, a structure of wood, is open for worship only for a few weeks during the summer season.

Moffat has long been a fashionable summer resort, on account of the medicinal virtues of its mineral waters. The springs are three in number, one sulphurous and two chalybeate. The sulphurous spring, distinguished by the name of "Moffat Well," is about a mile from the town, and during the summer is reached by omnibuses. The "Fons Moffettensis" was described by Matthew Mackaila in 1659 as a spring possessing great healing virtues; it is said to have been first made known by Rachel, daughter of Walter Whiteford, bishop of Brechin, who married the Laird of Corehead (1633), and it was first analysed by her descendant Dr. Milligan Johnstone, in the last century. During the period which has elapsed since the discovery of the valuable qualities of this spring, it has been much frequented from all parts of Scotland, as well as by visitors from England and Ireland; in all scrofulous and scorbutic cases it is a powerful remedy, being seldom known to prove ineffectual when the lungs are not diseased; it is also eminently successful in the removal of bilious complaints, as well as in creating an appetite and promoting digestion, and is an excellent specific for gravel and rheumatism, but is so volatile that it can only be drunk in perfection at the fountain. Hartfell spa was first discovered in the year 1748, by a man named John Williamson. The spring issues from a rock of alum slate, in the side of Hartfell mountain, near Moffat, and is bottled and sold by local chemists.
The other chalybeate is obtained in a very curious manner—namely, by pouring water upon a rock in the side of a dell, near the town, called "Garpel Linn." The surface of this rock being strongly impregnated with sulphate of alumina and iron, the water is much more powerful than that of Hartfell, and is consequently taken in smaller quantities. The Linn, or valley, has been laid out in walks by Sir William Younger bart. M.P. of Anchen Castle, and is freely open to the public.
Loch Skene, on the mountain range, north-east of the town, at an elevation of upwards of 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, contains the finest trout in the south of Scotland. The waters of this lake are discharged over precipitous rocks in a lofty and magnificent cascade called the "Grey Mare's Tail," computed to be about 300 feet above the level of the vale, and which appears from the opposite side of the glen to be one unbroken fall; the stream is thence known as Moffat water, and flowing on through a narrow pass, sweeps through the domains of Dumorieu, the property of Lord Rollo, and falls into the Annan. About four miles north-west is a petrifying chalybeate spring, and there are others attracting less attention. The principal hotels are the Annandale Arms, the Buccleuch Arms, and the Star. There is also a Hydropathic Establishment. The "Moffat News," published here on Friday, contains a visitors' list. During the season omnibuses ply from the Annandale and Buccleuch Arms hotels, to St. Mary's loch on the Selkirk road, and are met at St. Mary's Cottage (Tibbie Shiel's) by conveyances from Selkirk, where there is a railway station. Daily excursions are made to places of interest in the district during the summer months. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The weekly market is on Friday. There are two half-yearly hiring markets; the first is held on the last Friday in March, the second on the last Friday in October.

There is also an annual sheep and cattle market called the tap fair, in September, on the Friday after the Falkirk tryst, at which time a flower, sheep and cattle show—or rather a combination of shows, is held, to which and by its excellence great crowds are attracted. The district is noted for the breed of chevots.
Moffat House is the residence of Alfred Horsfall esq. John London M'Adam, well-known as the inventor of a system of road-making, and born at Ayr, 21 Sept.
1756, died in this town, 26 Nov. 1836, in his 81st year; a great portion of his early life had been spent in this neighbourhood, to which he was much attached, but it was as a magistrate of Ayrshire that his attention was first directed to the question of road-making; for his public services in this respect he received from Government £10,000, in two separate instalments, and was offered the honour of knighthood, which he declined on account of age and infirmities, and it was, instead, conferred upon his son, Joseph Locke F.R.S. an eminent engineer (born at Attercliffe, near Sheffield, in 1805), and the assistant and pupil of George Stephenson, and from 1847 to 1860 M.P. for Honiton, died here 18 Sept. 1860. Nicholans de Moffet, Bishop of Glasgow (1268-1270); Robert Johnstone LL.D. author of "A History of Scotland," &c.; Walter Boyd, banker, of Boyd, Ben-field and Co.; William Dickson, a writer on slavery; William Murray, the chrono-metrist, and Dr. D. Welsh, moderator of the first Free Church Assembly, and author of the "Life of Dr. Thomas Brown, a Church History," were all born at Moffat.
Dr. William Carruthers F.R.S. late of the Nat. Hist. Dept. British Museum (1871-95), was also born here in 1830. John James Hope-Johnstone esq. of Raehills D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 43,088 acres; rateable value, burgh, £15,875; landward part, £12,116; railway burgh, £173; landward, £1,103; the total population of the parish in 1901 was 2,799, which included 2,153 in the police burgh and 646 in the landward part in this county.

MORTON is a parish about 12 miles north west of Dumfries, bounded on the north and north-west by Durisdeer, east and south by Closeburn and south-west by Penpont, and extends 7 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and contains the village and railway station of Thornhill (which see); it is in the Upper Nithdale poor combination and Thornhill small debt court district; the land is both pastoral and arable, and, where cultivated, it is well inclosed and fertile. In addition to the Nith, the Carron and the Cample streams pass through the parish, the whole of which belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T. Morton Castle, about 3 miles from Thornhill, and now in ruins, was held during the minority of David Bruce, by Sir Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, as Regent of Scotland, and guardian to the king. Of the House of the Hassock, an ancient building, on the site of which the present castle was erected, some remains may still be traced. Traces of Roman camps and, in the high grounds, of ancient British camps, are very numerous over the whole district, and at one time there were many cairns of stones. The parish church, erected in 1781, on a site about a mile and a half from Morton Castle, was taken down in 1840-1 and the present edifice erected at Thornhill, by the 6th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1834), at a cost of £3,550: it will seat 1,200 persons.

At GATELAW BRIDGE, about 2 miles from Thornhill, is the Union Poorhouse, which serves for the nine adjoining parishes.

CARRON BRIDGE is a village in the parishes of Morton and Durisdeer, on the river Carron and on the road from Saughar to Dumfries, about 2 miles south from Carron Bridge station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and 1½ north-west from Thornhill.

The area comprises 6,047 acres; rateable value, £11,380; the population in 1901 was 1,872, including 1,132 in Thornhill.

Post Office, Carronbridge; Edward Kerr, postmaster. Letters received through Thornhill. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & 8.45 p.m.; dispatches, 4.20 & 8.45 p.m. No sunday delivery or dispatch. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Thornhill, 2 miles distant MOUSWALD is a parish and village on the road from Dumfries to Annan, about 6½ miles south-east from Dumfries, 10 north-west from Annan and 2 from Ruthwell and Racks (the nearest) stations, both on the Glasgow and South Western railway. It is in the small debt court district of Dumfries. The kirk, which stands on an elevated site close to the village, contains a dilapidated effigy of Sir Simon Carruthers, a former laird of Mouswald. At Mount Kedar, about 2 miles from Ruthwell, but in this parish, stands a monument erected to the Rev. Henry Duncan D.D. sometime minister of Ruthwell and founder of the system of savings banks; he was born in 1774, and died in 1846, after being minister of Ruthwell parish for 44 years. The memorial, which is of stone, consists of an arched base, surmounted by a pyramid 40 feet in height. In 1837, William P. Carruthers esq. of Dormont, provided a supply of water for the village by a system of gravitation. Brocklehurst, the seat of James Jardine Paterson esq. is a handsome modern residence in the midst of a small park. James Jardine Paterson esq.;

Robert Corrane Reid esq.; Sir Alexander Davidson Grierson bart. J.P. of Paragon House, Blackheath, London S E, and Major Francis John Carruthers are the principal landowners. The soil is light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots, potatoes and pasture. The area comprises 5,887 acres; rateable value, £7,702; population in 1901, 475.

Post Office; Miss Elizabeth Tweedie, sub-postmistress (letters should have Ruthwell, Dumfriesshire, added. Delivery commences at 7 a.m.; dispatch, 4.30 p.m. week days only. No sunday delivery. The nearest money order & telegraph office is at Ruthwell, 3 miles distant

PENPONT is a parish and village, in Upper Nithdale poor combination, and in Dumfries small debt court district; the parish is an extensive agricultural district, of irregular form and uneven surface, the only low land being found chiefly upon the verge of the rivers which flow through the parish; the village is about 2 miles south-west from Thornhill and 3 from Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The church, rebuilt in 1872, is a handsome edifice of sandstone, and has a tower with spire and a clock; there are also three United Free churches and a Reformed Presbyterian church. Tibber's Castle, the ruins of which stand within a mile of Drumlanrig Castle, were excavated by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1834); this fortress, referred to in Blind Harry's metrical history of Sir William Wallace, appears to have been destroyed during the reign of King Robert the Bruce (1306-29). The Glenquhargen Craig, which rises to a great height, is in this parish, and there are likewise remains of Roman encampments, causeways &c. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. owns nearly the whole of the parish. The area comprises 21,998 acres; rateable value, £8,218; the population in 1901 was 923, the village being 407.

RUTHWELL is a parish and village about 7 miles west from Annan and 10 south-east from Dumfries, in the small debt court district of Annan, with a station about 2 miles distant on the Glasgow and South Western railway; the village being also a barony, is privileged to hold markets and fairs, but it is long since the inhabitants availed themselves of these rights. The kirk and manse of Ruthwell stand about a quarter of a mile from the village. In 1887 the ancient and famous Bannic monument here, formerly in the grounds of the manse, was removed and placed in the church. About a mile from the station is Comlongon Castle, in part an ancient border keep, and the property of the Earl of Mansfield, but now the residence of Arthur Henry Johnstone-Douglas esq. his lordship's commissioner, D.L., J.P. Clarendelfield is a village in this parish, about a mile from Ruthwell station. The Public Hall was erected in 1891, by subscription, in memory of the late Rev. James McFarlan, and enlarged in 1899 by Robert Halliday Guaning esq. M.D., LL.D. The area comprises 8,686 acres; rateable value, £6,865; the population in 1901 was 766.

SAINT MUNGO is a parish in the district of Annandale, about 3 miles west from the village of Edelefechan and about the same distance south from Lockernie station on the Caledonian railway. The Established church, erected by the late Sir R. Jardine bart. at a cost of £5,000, and opened 7th Jan. 1876, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, and contains an organ presented by Sir R. W. B. Jardine bart. at a cost of over £500. Castle Milk, the seat of Sir Robert William Buchanan

Jardine bart. is a fine mansion romantically situated in the bosom of a delightful valley and surrounded by beautiful grounds. The house was originally the seat of the ancient lords of Annandale; much later it belonged to the Maxwells and to the Douglas family, but was eventually purchased by the Jardines from George

Armstrong esq.; during the minority of Edward VI. it was besieged by the Duke of Somerset, and some of the halls fired on that occasion were found in 1771, on a spot afterwards called "The Cannon Holes."

The area comprises 4,901 acres; rateable value, £6,675; population in 1901, 563.

SANQUHAR is a town and royal and parliamentary burgh on the left bank of the river Nith, and a large parish in the district of Nithsdale and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, 56 miles south-south-west of Edinburgh, the same distance south-by-east of Glasgow, 32 east-south-east of Ayr and 26 north-north-west of Dumfries, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The town, which is a favourite summer resort, consists chiefly of one main street, and is the principal coal mart in the county. The town is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works belonging to a local company. The town was made a burgh of barony in 1484, and advanced to the dignity of a royal burgh in 1596 by charter of James VI. and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and four councillors. Sanquhar, in conjunction with Dumfries, Annan, Kirkcubright and Lochmaben, forms the Dumfries parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. There is an Established church, erected in 1823, with a square tower, three United Free churches and a Congregational Union church. The Town Hall stands at the end of High street, and has a tower with a clock. In 1882 a handsome Public Hall was erected at a cost of £1,500. There is a Subscription Library at the Town hall. The British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here, and there is also a District Savings Bank. The Free school, founded by a bequest of £2,000, left by the late James Crichton, of Friar's Carse, in this county, and a native of Sanquhar, was discontinued in 1883, by an order of the Educational Endowment Commissioners, and the net proceeds of the endowment are now applied, through the School Board, to the purposes of higher education. The Castle ruins, which stand on a high bank overlooking the river Nith, a short distance south-east, were excavated by the late Duke of Buccleuch, and many interesting objects were then found, including several human skeletons and a well of great depth with a bucket suspended in it. The fortress, originally a building of great strength, had towers at the angles, and was surrounded by a ditch. It formerly belonged to a branch of the family of Crichton, ancestors of the Marquess of Bute and Lords Crichton of Sanquhar, a title still held by the present marquess: the castle was acquired from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1894, and considerably restored in 1897 by the 3rd Marquess of Bute K.T. A drinking fountain of marble was erected at Towhead in 1897, by public subscription, as a memorial of the reign of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. At Elicock, now the residence of James Irving McConnell esq. J.P. James Crichton, generally known as the "Admirable Crichton." is said to have been born in 1561, but was assassinated at Mantua in 1593. There is a spode and shovel factory at Crawick, iron and steel and two brick and tile works. Fairs are held on 1st Friday after the 12th of February and November (old style); and there is one for lambs, sheep and wool on the 17th July, or the first Friday after. The Sanquhar Farmers' Society's show for horses, sheep and cattle is held annually on the second Friday in May. Crawick and Mennock Bridge are small hamlets in this parish. The Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. is the chief landed proprietor. The area of the parish comprises 40,905 acres; rateable value, landward, £14,695; barghal, £5,274; the population in 1901 was 2,809, including 1,375 in the town; royal burgh, 1,375, and parliamentary burgh, 1,375.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 254.

THORNHILL is a considerable village in the parish of Morton, 86 miles south-by-east of Glasgow, 48 north-west of Carlisle, 40 north-east of Newton Sturt, 44 south-east of Kilmarnock, 30 north-west of Annan, the aama distance south-east of Cumnock, 22 north-east of New Galloway, 14 north-north-west of Dumfries and 12 south-south-east of Sanquhar, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is charmingly situated towards the centre of the extensive amphitheatre of hills which include Middle Nithsdale, the river Nith winding through the valley. The streets are wide and lighted with gas. The district is largely agricultural. There are two freestone quarries in the neighbourhood and a large bacon curing and sausage factory. Here is the parish church of Morton, erected by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1884) at a cost of £3,550, and seating 1,200 persons; there is also a United Free church and a Congregational chapel. The Museum of Natural History and Antiquities, endowed by the late Dr. Grierson, who originated it and formed the collections, was erected in 1869, and is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds, planted with shrubs and trees, and containing a statue by the late Mr. Currie, sculptor, of Dumfries, of Richard Cameron, a noted Covenantant hero who fell fighting at Airdmoss, Ayrshire, when his head was cut off and conveyed to Edinburgh, and there placed on the Nether bow. In the museum is a public reference library of about 1,000 volumes.

Near the school is a monument, erected in 1897, to the late Joseph Thomson F.R.G.S. an African traveller, who was educated at Penpont and Morton schools.
The Freemasons' Hall is in South Drumlan-rig street. There are several benevolent societies. Here is a Conservative club, besides musical, bowling, curling, lawn tennis and cricket clubs; there is also a society for public lectures. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank.
The chief hotels are the Buccleuch and Queensberry and the George. The Nithsdale Auction Company Limited hold sales for live stock at their mart adjoining the railway station weekly, on Saturday. The Nithsdale Agricultural Society's Show is held on the third Tuesday of September annually. Population in 1901, 1,132.

TINWALD is a parish on the rivers Lochar and Æ, with stations at Amisfield and Shieldhill on the Caledonian railway, and is 4 miles north-east of Dumfries, 6 from Lochmaben, and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; it is triangular in form, each side being about 4½ miles long, and for the most part the land is arable.

SKIPMYRE, in this parish, was the birthplace, in 1655, of William Paterson, the original projector of the Bank of England, founded in 1694, and also the originator of an unsuccessful scheme for the colonization of the Isthmus of Darien. Paterson returned before the arrival of the second expedition, and died after great losses and sufferings, 22 Jan. 1719.

AMISFIELD is a village in this parish, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Amisfield Tower, once the seat of the Charteris family, is now the property and residence of William Johnstone esq.

The Right Hon. Aretas Akers-Douglas P.C., M.P. of Craigs; David Jardine Jardine esq. of Jardine Hall, Lockerbie; Morden Carthew-Yorston esq. J.P. the trustees of the late Robert Stuart Dalzell, and William Johnstone esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is gravelly; subsoil, light clay and gravel. The crops are oats, potatoes and roots, but chiefly pasture. The area comprises 10,312 acres; rateable value, £10,647; population, 1901, 741.

Post Office, Amisfield. Letters through Dumfries; John Wright, sub-postmaster. Delivery, 7.20 a.m.; dispatch, 4.40 p.m.; sundays, arrive 10.30 a.m.; dispatched, 4.40 p.m. The nearest money order office is at Parkgate, 4 miles; the telegraph office is at Amisfield railway station (open 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.; sunday closed)

TORTHORWALD is a parish and village near the foot of Nithsdale, with a station called "Racks," on the Glasgow and South Western railway; the parish is in the small debt court district of Dumfries and presbytery and synod of Dumfries, and is bounded by Tinwald on the north, Lochmaben on the north-east, Mouswald on the south-east and Caerlaverock on the south-west, and is separated on the west from Dumfries parish by the Lochar water; it is 7 miles in length from north to south, by a breadth, at the northern extremity, of about 2½ miles, tapering to a point on the south. The village, in the north part of the parish, is about 4 miles south-west from Lochmaben (where there is a station on the Caledonian railway), and 4 east from Dumfries. There is an Established church, and a Public Hall was built in 1902. In the vicinity are the ruins of the ancient castle of Torthorwald, supposed to have existed since the 13th century, and there are also traces of British camps. David Jardine Jardine esq. of Applegirth, Lockerbie, and Sir Alexander Davidson Grierson bart. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is light sandy loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are oats, roots, potatoes and pasture, about 2,000 acres of land is not under cultivation. The area comprises 6,827 acres of land and 12 acres of water; rateable value, £6,672; population in 1901, 779.

COLLIN is a village 3½ miles east from Dumfries, on the road to Annan, and has a public hall, built in 1896. Roucan is another village, and both are in this parish.

TUNDERGARTH is a parish and village, 4 miles east of Lockerbie station on the Caledonian railway; the parish, in which a great number of sheep are pastured, is bounded on the west by that of Saint Mungo, and south by Hoddam and Middlebie and is nearly 13 miles in length, by a breadth of only about 2 miles at its widest part. The parish church is a small plain building of stone, consisting of nave, north aisle and a turret containing one bell. Tundergarth Castle, now in ruins, was formerly the residence of the Johnstones, Marquesses of Annandale, the last of whom, George Johnstone, 3rd Marquess, d. 1792, and the property has now descended to John James Hope-Johnstone esq. D.L., J.P. of Rachiels, Lockerbie. A conspicuous hill called "Burnswark" overlooks the district from the south. Sir Robert W. B. Jardine bart. of Castle Milk, is the principal landowner. Area comprises 10,486 acres; rateable value, £6,604; the population in 1901 was 403.

Post Office, Bankshill; Mrs. Elizabeth Henderson, sub-postmistress. Letters dispatched 1.25 p.m.; no Sunday delivery. Letters are received through Lockerbie at 8.10 a.m. which is the nearest money order office. Corrie Common is the nearest telegraph office.

TYNRON is a parish in the Dumfries small debt court district, and lies 6 miles south-west from Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, between Peapont on the north and north-east, and Glencairn on the south, and extends 9 miles in length, by a breadth of from 2 to 3. The parish is partially watered by the Shinnel river, along the banks of which there is some pleasing scenery. Here is an Established church. Near the eastern extremity of the parish rises the Doon of Tynron, a conspicuous pyramidal hill, near the summit of which is an ancient castle. The principal landowners in the parish are the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C.; Capt. George Laurie Walker J.P. of Crawfordton; Mrs. Frank of Appin; James J. Mein Austin esq. of Dalmaekerran; Lieut.-Col. John Kennedy J.P. of Kirkland, and Donald Macdonald MacRae esq. of Stenhouse. The area comprises 15,708 acres; rateable value, £3,067; population (1901), 334.

WAMPFRAY is a parish adjoining Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Johnstone, 8 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish church stands in a deep wooded recess, by the side of Wamphray water, and over the heltry door is a fine sculptured stone, probably part of an ancient cross, which has been imitated in a monument erected to Mr. Charteris, late teacher here, by his son, Professor Charteris, of Edinburgh. Wamphray water, a tributary of the river Annan, brows and thunders through a most romantic and picturesque glen, formed on both sides either by high steep banks clad with thriving plantations, or by lofty basaltic columns, mantled with ivy, and saplings of ash springing from their interstices. Sir Robert William Buchanan-Jardine bart. of Castle Milk, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,136 acres; rateable value, £5,228; population (1901), 386.

WANLOCKHEAD is a village and quoad sacra parish, at the eastern extremity of the parish of Saunquhar, and near the foot of the Lowther Hills, about 9 miles north-east from the burgh and 7½ from Elvanfoot station on the Caledonian railway, from whence a branch line was opened July, 1904; it is said to stand at a greater elevation above the sea level than any other village or town in Scotland. The houses are scattered on the hillsides, without regard to regularity. The extensive and valuable lead mines in this neighbourhood, belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. are worked by the Wanlockhead Lead Mining Company Limited, and furnish employment to a considerable number of miners, artisans and others. The Fraser Memorial Institute, erected in 1908 by Messrs. John, William and Archibald Fraser, of Glasgow, in memory of their parents, who were both natives of the village, comprises a hall to seat 350 persons and billiard and reading rooms. The population in 1901 was 624.

EDINBURGSHIRE

THE county of Edinburgh (or Mid-Lothian, a name which occasionally is applied to a small portion, being that part, excluding the burgh, which is represented by the county member) lies in the southern division of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Forth (an arm of the German ocean), by Linlithgowshire, or West Lothian, on the west, by the counties of Lanark, Peebles and Selkirk on the south, and by Haddingtonshire, or East Lothian, with small portions of Berwickshire and Roxburghshire, on the east. The length of the county, from east to west, is about 36 miles, and its breadth, from its extreme apex on the south, to near Musselburgh on the north, where the eastern extremity of the county shuts on Haddingtonshire, is about 24 miles. In figure it is very irregular. Its sea coast only extends for about 17 miles, and has no bays or lochs. The area of the county is 234,340 acres of land and 2,198 of water; the population in 1891 was 434,276, and in 1901 was 488,736, viz.: males, 230,455, and females 253,341; the number of inhabited houses in 1891 was 85,190, and in 1901 was, inhabited 100,827; uninhabited, 6,071, and building, 850. This county in size ranks as the twenty-third, and in population as the second, mostly due to it containing the capital.

Early History.—In common with other portions of the country, the part now forming Edinburghshire was under the control of the Picts and other Celtic tribes, and it was not until A.D. 81, when the Romans under Agricola, who 2 years previously entered the country by the Solway Firth, having constructed a wall across the Isthmus between the Clyde and the Forth, took possession of what was for many centuries known as part of Northumbria, though then called by them the province of Valentia, which appears to have extended from the Forth southward to the Tyne, and this district was held by the Romans until 120, when they fell back to the line of the Tyne, returning in 139 and holding the country until about 410, when they evacuated it, leaving behind them many indications of their occupation. Shortly after this the Saxons seem to have pushed forward from the north-east of England and to have sustained for nearly a century a fierce struggle with the ancient inhabitants, to whom the Romans had handed over the country, a struggle which in 547 was decided in favour of the invaders, who under Ida, a Scandinavian chief, obtained a firm hold over a district extending from the Tees to the Forth, and called by them "Bernicia," while the portion now including Linlithgow, Edinburghshire, Haddingtonshire and part of Roxburghshire and Stirling became Loathne, or subsequently Lothian, a name even now called by the natives Loathian, and it is not until 617 that we meet with any designation resembling Edinburgh, when Aethelrith, grandson to Ida, having been slain by his nephew Eadwine, a prince of Deira (or Yorkshire), the latter founded on the rock, on which a Pictish castle had already stood, a town and castle, to which he gave the name of Eadwinesburgh, and as King of Northumbria ruled the country from the Humber to the Forth, and it was only in the reign of Malcolm II. 1057 to 1093, that Lothian became an integral part of the Scottish kingdom. In the struggle which Edward III. maintained for the restoration of the Balliol dynasty, one of the most sanguinary battles was fought on the Boroughmuir of the metropolis. In 1385 Mid-Lothian was subjected to the horrors of pillage and conflagration, in the expedition of Richard II.; and a century and a half later it suffered much from the invasion of the English, on account of the treaty of marriage between the son of Henry VIII. and the young Queen of Scots. The county was, soon after, the scene of many of the insurrectionary movements against the authority of Queen Mary, and in 1650 Cromwell passed through in pursuit of Charles II. but falling back to Dunbar, fought there, in September, the well-known battle in which he defeated General Leslie, and in 1745 Prince Charles Edward passed through to his victory at Prestonpans.

Surface, Soil & Climate.—The greater portion of the county is, if not mountainous, hilly, and in many places wild and pastoral; the portion under woods and plantations is only 12,336 acres. The most prominent hills are the Pentland Hills in the centre of the county, and the following, with their altitude above the level of the sea:—Blackhope Scar, 2,136 feet; Dodlaw, 1,550; Blackhill, 1,628; Moorfoot Hills, 1,850; Caerketton (Pentland range), 1,555; Spittal Hill, 1,360; Arthur's Seat (from its base, 700), 796; House of Whim, 884; Woodhouselee, 729; Dalmahoy Hill, 680; summit of Braid Hills, 630. By the close of the 11th century, agriculture had made some progress in the district of Mid-Lothian. During the last and present century much has been accomplished in this part in rearing plantations; but it is to the society of "Improvers," formed at Edinburgh about the year 1723, that this county is mainly indebted for its advancement in agriculture. In 1744 potatoes were first raised in fields, and in about thirty years afterwards their cultivation was completely established in the county. Agriculture is vigorously prosecuted in the valleys of the rivers; the upland districts being unsuitable for agriculture, thus causing more attention to be devoted to sheep farming. The system of leases here, generally for nineteen years, gives the tenant farmers of Scotland an independence which tenants at will, or from year to year, cannot have, and encourages them to expend money on the land. The climate is, upon the whole, salubrious, and not unfavourable to vegetation, its greatest drawback being its variability. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain," 1910, are oats, 20,477 acres, barley or here, 5,684; wheat, 5,657; total of corn crops, 32,054; turnips and swedes, 10,639 acres; potatoes, 6,368; cabbage, 574; rape, 538; vetches or tares, 190; total of green crops, 18,383; clover, sainfoin and grasses (for hay), 13,044 acres; (not for hay), 16,254; permanent pasture (for hay), 2,682 acres; (not for hay), 43,432; small fruit, 227 acres; orchards, 73 acres; mountain and heathland used for grazing, 74,837 acres; woods and plantations, 12,336 acres.

The live stock in 1910 comprised 3,932 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 773; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 11,554; other cattle, 7,049; ewes kept for breeding, 71,322; other sheep, 115,533; sows kept for breeding, 1,669; other pigs, 9,081.

Minerals, Manufactures and Commerce.—The county abounds in several valuable minerals, especially coal, sandstone, limestone and whinstone. The production in 1909 of coal was 2,634,355 tons, value £867,142; of iron ore, 37,772 tons, value £12,433; fireclay, 9,584 tons, value £2,574; brick clay, 50,692 tons, value £5,952; gravel and sand, 30,204 tons; igneous rocks, 6,518 tons; limestone, 162,862 tons; oil shale, 639,035 tons, value £175,735; sandstone, 32,986 tons. In the western part is an extensive coal field, and the eastern contains inexhaustible and rich beds of this valuable mineral, extending from the shore at Musselburgh, on both sides of the North E.K. about fifteen miles inward, to the head of that stream at Carlops, on the confines of Tweeddale. The number of collieries at work in 1909 was 29. In the parish of Calder are extensive beds of rich bituminous shale, from which paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted. Mid-Lothian possesses sandstone of different kinds, and of an excellent quality. The quarries of Edinburghshire have long enjoyed a pre-eminence which cannot be so effectually indicated by anything as by the appearance of the New Town of Edinburgh. The works of Craigleith and Hales, near the city, are objects of curiosity. Almost all the houses of the New Town, besides other buildings, have been reared from the former mine. There are several other quarries of inferior note throughout the county. Lead was, in former times, found at the head of the North Esk, on the south side of the Pentland Hills. A vein of copper is said to exist in the parish of Currie, but it has never been worked. The manufactures of Edinburghshire cannot be traced to a remote date, and have never been remarkable for their extent. It is but little more than a century since that the fabrication of linen was known in the county. In Edinburgh, Leith, and Musselburgh there are now numerous manufactures of goods of different kinds. The principal articles manufactured in the shire for exportation, either by out-ports or inland, beside linen, are glass, soap, salt, candles, refined sugar, ale, whiskey, leather, bricks, tiles, pottery, iron, chemical preparations, printing ink and materials, paper and books. The manufacture of paper became first known in Scotland in this county, and the district still possesses large establishments employed in this industry, chiefly at Penicuik, and in the neighbourhood of Colinton and Lasswade. Paraffin oil has also become an important manufacture at Mid and West Calder.

The maritime traffic of the county, which is very considerable, is concentrated at Leith, the only port suitable to the entrance of large vessels, and indeed the only one of any kind except those of Fisherrow, or Musselburgh, Newhaven, and the rising port of Granton. The number of fishing boats registered in 1909 at the port of Leith was 317, with an aggregate tonnage of 5,471, requiring 1,681 men and boys to work them, while 218 other vessels, aggregate tonnage, 153,021 tons, were registered at the same port; 8 steamers, net tonnage, 2,207, were built at Leith in 1909. The number of fishing boats registered at the port of Granton in 1909 was 58, of 2,315 tonnage. Of other vessels, 66, of 2,635 tons, were also registered.

Rivers and Railways.—This county does not possess any large rivers. This deficiency, however, is of little or no importance, in consequence of being placed on the margin of a broad and navigable firth. Next the Forth, the Esk may be said to be the chief river; it is composed of two streams, which unite their waters below Dalkeith, and glide into the Forth at Musselburgh. The Leith, a valuable small river, takes its rise on the north side of the Pentland Hills, and after receiving several rivulets, discharges its waters, after a course of nineteen miles, into the Forth. The Almond, the most westerly stream, rises in the high grounds on the borders of Lanarkshire; it is joined by the Brierch Burn, in its way to the Forth, which it enters at Crumond. The Union canal, 31 miles in length, proceeding to the west from Edinburgh, conveys large quantities of coals and various kinds of goods to the city. Several railway centres in the county; beginning at the north-east we have the North British line, from Berwick, via Dunbar, entering it at Wallyford, a little east of Musselburgh, joined after a few miles at Inveresk by the branch from Macmerry, and proceeding thence by Joppa and Portobello to Edinburgh; the next line towards the south is that known as the Waverley route, North British railway, entering the county at Bowland station and running north to Millerhill, Portobello and the city, with branches to Leith, Arthur's Seat and Murrayfield; another branch of the North British from Galashiels enters the county on the south at Leadburn, where a line from Dolphington joins it, and proceeds north to Bonnyrigg and Portobello into Edinburgh, and there are branches to Dalkeith, Glencorse, Polton and Penicuik. The Caledonian railway enters the county from Carlisle at Cobinshaw station and runs through Meadowbank, where the Glasgow branch joins it, to Edinburgh. The lines of the North British from Airdrie and Lighthgow come into the county at Ratho Junction, and are joined there by the line from the Forth Bridge, while small branches from Leith and Granton run into the north of the city.

Divisions, Parliamentary Constituency &c.—The county is divided into 27 complete civil parishes, including 3 in Edinburgh city and 2 in Leith, and parts of 2 others, and for judicatory purposes is divided into 6 districts. There are 76 ecclesiastical parishes (including 35 in the city and two in Leith) and parts of four others, the whole being in the presbyteries of Edinburgh and Dalkeith and synod of Lothian and Tweeddale. This district became subject to the government of a sheriff prior to the reign of David I. The office of sheriff of Edinburgh seems to have been at all times an appointment of great trust and dignity; and from the 13th to the 18th century was filled by the heads of families of note in the shire and its vicinity. Besides Edinburgh, the shire does not comprise any royal burghs, but possesses three of regality, namely, Musselburgh, Canongate and Portsburgh and the town of Leith. Its only burgh of barony is Dalkeith. The contributory burghs belonging to this county represented in Parliament are Leith, Musselburgh and Portobello, forming together the Leith District of Burghs. The county at large sends one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency of the county numbered in 1911, 17,633.

BONNYRIGG is a town and police burgh in the parishes of Cockpen and Lasswade, 6 miles south from Edinburgh and 2 south-west from Dalkeith, and has stations at Bonnyrigg and Broomieknowe, both on the North British railway. Carpet weaving is carried on to a very considerable extent, and employs many hands. There is a Public Library, erected in 1910 at a cost of £2,800, and a Public Hall, which will hold about 600 persons. Broomieknowe, an outlying part of the village in Lasswade parish, much resorted to by summer visitors, has a station on the Esk Valley section of the North British railway. The area of the burgh, part of which is in Lasswade parish, is 127 acres; rateable value, £12,300; the population in 1901 was 2,476.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Bonnyrigg. Letters should have Midlothian added; Robert McBay, postmaster. Deliveries, 7.30 a.m. & 12.15 & 4.50 p.m.; dispatches, 9.50 & 11.45 a.m. & 3. 5.10, 6.30 & 8.20 p.m.; sunday dispatch, 5.15 p.m.

BORTHWICK is a parish in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, about 12 miles south-east from Edinburgh, on the Carlisle road, and has stations at Gorebridge and Fushiebridge, both within the parish, on the North British railway. The village of Gorebridge (which see) is in this parish. Borthwick gives the title of baron to an ancient family of the same name, and though no official record of its creation exists, this peerage, certainly in existence before 1455, is stated to have been bestowed by James II. of Scotland, in 1452, on William Borthwick, son of Sir William de Borthwick. This parish was the birthplace, in 1721, of William Robertson D.D. author of the "History of Charles V." and other works: principal of Edinburgh University in 1722, and in 1764, historiog-rapher for Scotland; he died 11 June, 1793; here also was born in 1685, Robert Dundas, an eminent Scottish advocate, raised to the judicial bench in 1737 as Lord Arniston, and in 1743 president of the court of session; he died 26 Aug. 1753. In the parish and about 2 miles west from Crichton is Borthwick Castle, erected in 1430 by Sir William Borthwick, afterwards first Lord Borthwick. It is an imposing battlemented structure, 115 feet in height, with walls of hewn stone, varying in thickness from 17 feet at the base to about 12 feet at the top, and still bears traces of its siege by Cromwell. The mills of James Pendreigh and Son Limited, which have been established here for over a century, are famed for the production of oatmeal, pearl barley, split peas and all feeding meals. The Arniston Colliery Library was founded by the late Sir Robert Dundas, 2nd bart. (d. 1910). The Castle, a ruin until 1833, has since been renovated, and is now the residence of Henry Borthwick esq. Vogrie is the residence of Mrs. Janet Chalmers; Harrieston, of Joseph Y. Trotter-Cranstoun esq. J.P.; Currie House, of Walter Brown esq.; Arniston House, of Lady Dundas, and Middleton Hall, of Sir Horace Edward Moss D.L., J.P.

FUSHIEBRIDGE is a village about 1 mile from Borthwick and 5 south from Dalkeith, with a station on the North British railway.

The area comprises 19,375 acres; rateable value, £20,492; the population in 1901 was 2,763, including 1,379 in the village of Gorebridge, and of Borthwick ecclesiastical parish, 241.

Letters should be addressed Gorebridge, Midlothian. The nearest money order, telegraph & telephonic express delivery office is at Gorebridge.

MID-CALDER is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish is bounded north and north-east by Uphall, east by Kirknewton, south and west by West Calder and north-west by Livingstone. The village, pleasantly situated on an eminence between the water of Linnhouse and the river Almond, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, is 12 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh, and 8 1/2 east from Whitburn, and has a station about 2 1/2 miles distant, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway. Calder wood, which is of considerable extent, overhangs the village. The soil in the northern district is light, dry and fertile, in the southern the surface undulates towards the Pentland hills. About one-third of the entire area of the parish is under tillage; in the remaining portion there are several beds of rich, bituminous shale, from which a large quantity of paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted at the different works. Coal abounds in the parish, and on the estate of Calder House, the property of Lord Torphichen, is an extensive bed of freestone of excellent quality. Pairs are held on the second Tuesday in March, and on the Friday after the second Tuesday in October. The parish church, originally founded by Duncan, Thane of Fife, in the early part of the 13th century, was rebuilt on the ancient site by Peter Sandilands, a scion of the noble family of Torphichen, in 1541, and has since been enlarged and restored at a cost of over £3,000. There is also a United Free church. Calder House is the seat of Lord Torphichen J.P.; John Knox, in the hall of this mansion, first dispensed the sacrament of the Lord's supper after the Reformation, and his portrait hangs in it. In the vicinity formerly stood the house of Greenbank, the birthplace, in 1565, of John Spensiswoode, Archbishop of Glasgow (1603-15), and of St. Andrew's (1615). Lord Torphichen is the principal landowner. PUMPHERSTON is a village in the north of this parish, in connection with the Shale Oil works. The area comprises 12,100 acres; rateable value, £28,337; the population in 1901 was 3,132, including 703 in the village of Mid-Calder, and in the village of Pumpherton, 1,462. Post, T. & M. O. Office, Mid-Calder; Mrs. Elizabeth S. Hislop, postmistress. Lett. (which should have Midlothian added) arrive from all parts at 7.30 a.m. & 6.30 p.m. & are dispatched at 11.20 a.m. & 5.10 & 10 p.m. Telegraph office open 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Post, T. & M. O. WEST CALDER is a parish and village, in Edinburgh small debts court district, the parish being about 8 miles in length and 8 in breadth; the village is about 5 miles south-south-west from Mid-Calder, 1½ south-west from Edinburgh and 3½ east from Glasgow, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Public Library here, founded at the cost of Dr. Andrew Carnegie, was opened Nov. 24th, 1904, by the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rosebery P.C., K.G., K.T. lord lieutenant of the county, and contains about 4,500 volumes.

The Paraffin Oil Works, established in this parish in 1866 by Mr. James Young, the patentee, who purchased several large properties here, containing some beds of rich bituminous shale, have created a new village, called Addiewell. In the immediate neighbourhood, at a place called Castle Craig, are traces of a Roman encampment. A newspaper called the "Midlothian Advertiser and West Lothian and Lanarkshire News" is published every Saturday. The Right Hon.
Aretas Akers-Douglas P.C., M.P. of Craig, Dumfries, Mrs. Barr, of Harburn, Mrs. Mary Walker, of Limfield, and Young's Paraffin Oil Co. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 21,981 acres; rateable value, £39,351; the population in 1891 was 8,456, and in 1901, 8,092, including 2,652 in the town, and 1,591 in Addiewell. The population of West Calder ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 5,038.

ADDEWELL is a manufacturing village and ecclesiastical parish, about 1½ miles west from West Calder village, and sprang up in 1866 in connection with the paraffin oil works established here by Mr.
James Young. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,054.

COBBINSHAW is a village, with a population in 1901 of 348. Gavieside village had a population in 1901 of 411.
Mossend is also a village; the population in 1901 was 657.

COBBINSHAW, see WEST CALDER.

COCKPEN is a parish, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, 2½ miles south from Dalkeith, and about 4½ long by 2 in breadth; there are two railway stations in the parish, at Bonnyrigg (which see) and Broomieknowe, on the Esk Valley section of the North British line; and there is a bowling green and a large public park. Dalhousie Castle, in this parish, formerly the residence of the late Marquess of Dalhousie, lord clerk registrar of Scotland and gov. gen. of India, 1847-56, is now the residence of Charles William Cowan esq. J.P.; the grounds include those of the famous "Laird of Cockpen," well known in Scottish song. The Esk Valley, which is admired by all who visit it, can be seen from here to great advantage, and the view is open for miles around. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,950 acres; rateable value, £36,485; population in 1901, 4,805, including 2,476 in the town of Bonnyrigg and 273 in Lasswade, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,720.

COLINTON, or Collington, is a village and parish about 4 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Balerno branch of the Caledonian railway, and in the Edinburgh small debt court district; the parish lies at the base of the Pentlands hills, part of which it includes, and is traversed by the water of Leith, the scenery on the banks of which is delightfully wooded. There are two Established churches. The Established church at Craiglockhart was originally built in 1890 as a Chapel of Ease to Colinton parish, but in 1897 the chapel with certain lands in the parishes of Colinton and St. Cuthberts was erected by the Court of Teinds into the church and quoad sacra parish of Craiglockhart. The building was completed in 1898, and a handsome tower erected by Sir Alexander Oliver Riddell, of Craiglockhart, and his wife. The new parish includes the villages of Slateford, Inglis Green, Angle Park and Loogstone (near Slateford road). There is also an Episcopal church, dedicated to St. Cuthbert, of which the Ven. William Arthur Grant Luckman M.A. of Keble College, Oxford, has been rector since 1911. Within the parish are the Edinburgh Hydropathic, the Edinburgh City Poorhouse, and A. and J. McNab's dyeing and bleaching works. The population of the parish is about 3,500. The late R. L. Stevenson, the well-known novelist, spent many years of his youth at the manse here, which was the birth-place of his mother. Eastwards, on the lands of Comiston, are vestiges of an extensive encampment, near which is a rude and massive block of whinstone, called "Camustone," said to indicate the burial place of a Danish chieftain. Allermuir Hill is a considerable eminence, rising upwards of 1,500 feet above the level of the sea. Dreghorn Castle is the residence of Miss Clark, and Colinton House of John Erskine Guild esq. The manufacture of paper is carried on extensively, and the district abounds with limestone and freestone. Sir Archibald Charles Gibson-Craig bart of Riccarton, Currie, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,605 acres; rateable value, £51,484; railways and waterways, £6,957; the population of the civil parish in 1901 was 5,499; village, 782, and ecclesiastical parish, 3,331.

By the Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 34, dated Dec. 17, 1895, that part of Edinburgh, landward, adjoining Colinton, was annexed to it May 15, 1898.

LONGSTONE or Angle Park is a village in the parish; population in 1901, 524.

Post. T. & M. O. & Telephonic E. D. Office (Letters should have Midlothian added); Miss Jane Clark, postmistress. Letters from all parts arrive (from Edinburgh) at 7.5 a.m. & 1 & 5 p.m. & are dispatched thereto at 8.30 & 10.5 a.m. & 12.10, 3.5, 6.10, 7.5 & 9 p.m.

CORSTORPHINE is a village and parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish, which begins about 2 miles to the west of Edinburgh, is generally level, the only eminences being the Corstorphine hills, which have an altitude of 470 feet above the level of the sea. The whole parish consists of rich arable land, part of which is cultivated by market gardeners, and there are also many dairy farms. The village of Corstorphine is 3 miles west from Edinburgh, on the high road to Glasgow, and has a station on the North British railway. The church, attached in 1429 to a provosty or college, was founded and endowed by Sir Adam Forrester, his widow and their son, Sir John Forrester: it bears their arms on the outer wall in several places, and within are several life-size stone effigies of members of this family, occupying niches in the chancel. The plans have been prepared for a new church to be erected at an estimated cost of £6,250. At the Public Hall is a free library of over 2,000 volumes. Millburn Tower, the property of Sir William Liston-Foulis bart. J.P. is occupied by James Wishart Thomson esq. Heatley Dickson esq. who is lord of the manor, the Earl of Morton and Mrs. M. Ramsay Steel-Maitland are the principal landown'rs. The area comprises 3,654 acres: rateable value, £12,050; population in 1901, 2,725, including 1,327 in the village; of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,816. GOGAR, formerly an independent parish, is a pleasant hamlet in this parish, on the banks of the Gogar burn, and 5 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station, three-quarters of a mile distant, on the North British railway. The present church occupies the site of a church existing here previous to the Reformation.

CRAMOND is a parish and village, 4½ miles from Edinburgh, and has a terminal station on the Edinburgh and Cramond Brig branch of the Caledonian railway: it is in the small debt court district of Edinburgh: the parish lies on the south shore of the Firth of Forth, and is bounded on the west by the river Almond; the village of Cramond, on the east side of the creek into which the river falls, is known to have been an important Roman station. Opposite the mouth of the Almond, at a short distance from the shore, is Cramond Island, the property of the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. which rises with a gentle slope into a hill of moderate elevation, and part of it is cultivated. This place, from 1628, gave the title of baron to the Richardson family, of Norfolk, of which was Sir Thomas Richardson kt. lord chief justice, and speaker of the House of Commons (d. 1634); the peerage is supposed to have become extinct on the death of William, 5th earon, 28 July, 1735, but this is quite open to doubt. The parish contains the villages of Cramond Bridge and Davidson's Mains, which see. Cramond Bridge, where is the terminal station of the Caledonian railway, is situated on the Almond river, here crossed by a fine stone bridge, connected with a road from Edinburgh to South Queensferry, 5 miles from the city. Silver Knowe is a seat in this parish. Mr. William Davidson, Lieut.-Col. J. C. Craigie Halkett J.P. Mrs. Steel Maitland and the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish is 4,783 acres; rateable value, £30,221; the population in 1891 was 3,168, and in 1901, 3,815, viz.: Mainland, 2,727 and Edinburgh, 1,088. The population of the ecclesiastical parish, which extends into Linlithgowshire, in 1901 was 2,224.

By the Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 34, dated Dec. 17, 1897, that portion of Edinburgh landward adjoining Cramond was annexed to it, May 15, 1898.

CRANSTON (or Cranston) is a parish, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debts court district, 5 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and intersected by the river Tyne, with Dalkeith and Newbattle on the north and west, and Crichton on the south, and is 3 miles north from Dalkeith (the nearest) station on the North British railway. The land is high and undulating, but well cultivated. This place, from 1609 to 1863, gave the title of baron to the Cranston family of Creeling. The last peer died 28 Sept. 1869, when this peerage became either dormant or extinct. The church is an edifice of white freestone, in the Gothic style. Oxenford Castle is the seat of the Earl of Stair, who is also Baron Oxenford of Cousland. Edgehead, Cousland and Preston are small villages in this parish. At Cousland are the extensive works of the Caledonian Portland Cement Co. Limited, which employs a number of hands. The area comprises 5,100 acres; rateable value, £6,360; the population in 1901 was 846.

CRICHTON is a parish, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, 5 miles south from Dalkeith and 3 miles from Tynehead (the nearest) station on the North British railway. Ford and Pathhead (which see) are villages in this parish. Crichton Castle is a ruin situated on the right bank of the Tyne, the oldest part remaining being the keep, probably built by Thurstan de Crichton, one of the witnesses to the charter of the foundation of Holyrood Abbey (1128); the south and west wings were added by Sir William, 1st Lord Crichton, High Chancellor of Scotland during the reigns of James I. and II.; the north wing is attributed to one of the Earls of Bothwell, probably the first Earl Patrick, 1490. Within the hall of this fortress, Queen Mary feasted on the occasion of the marriage here of her natural brother, Sir John Stewart. The Castle was purchased by Alexander Callender esq. in 1786, and is now the property of Henry Burn Callander esq. D.L., J.P. of Westerton and Preston hall. Sir Walter Scott in "Marmion" makes reference to Crichton castle, and the place affords the title of Viscount to the Crichton family, Earls of Erne. The area comprises 5,594 acres; rateable value, £7,317; population in 1901, 810. Letters through Dalkeith. Ford is the nearest post, money order & telegraph office

CURRIE is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh, bounded by Corstorphine and Ratho on the north and Colinton on the west, while the Pentland Hills skirt it on the south. The village, situated on the north bank of the water of Leith, is 6 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Balerno branch of the Caledonian railway, and is also a quarter of a mile from Currie Hill station on the Glasgow line. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Mungo, and the Rev. Percival Wood Hulbert M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, has been priest in charge since 1907. The manufacture of paper is largely carried on, and snuff is also manufactured. The water of Leith was purified about 9 years ago, and is now a favourite trouting stream; the Edinburgh Corporation ponds, also in the parish, are well stocked with trout, and liberty to fish may be had from the Corporation, or from Lord Rosebery. The Baberton Golf club, founded in June, 1893, has an excellent course of 18 holes, opened by the late Sir J. H. Gibson-Craig bart. (d. 1908) on Christmas Day, 1893; the club house, built in 1895 at a cost of £1,200, from the designs of Messrs.

MacArthy and Watson, architecta, is a building with gabled wings, and contains a club room, dining and ladies' rooms, kitchen and lavatories. Lennox Tower, on the estate of Maleny, beyond Currie, was anciently the seat of the Lennox family, as well as the occasional residence of Mary Queen of Scots. At a short distance from it, on the opposite bank of the river, are the ruins of another ancient edifice, once the mansion of the Skenes of Currie hill. The house of Baberton, also in this parish, was used as a hunting seat, first by James VI. of Scotland, previous to his accession to the English throne, and secondly by Charles X. of France, after his expulsion from his dominions in 1830. The area comprises 13,031 acres; rateable value, £32,338; population, 1901, 2,513 in the parish and 338 in the village.

Sir Archibald Charles Gibson-Craig bart. of Riccarton, the Earl of Morton and the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. are lords of the manor and the principal landowners.

BALERNO is a village in the parish of Currie, on the water of Leith, and about 8 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway. In the village are paper mills. Hermiston, Glenbrook and Maleny Mills are hamlets in this parish. Population in 1891, 694, and in 1901, 695. At Maleny Mills a considerable industry in wood turning and the making of hungs for barrels is carried on.

DALKEITH is a parish, market town, a burgh of barony and the head of a poor combination, 6 miles south-east from Edinburgh, with a station on a branch from the Waverley section of the North British railway; there is also a station at Eskbank on the same section. It occupies a dry and exceedingly pleasant site, in a fertile district, diversified with hill, dale and wood, with the North and South Esk flowing around it. This place gives the title of Earl to the Douglas-Scott family, Dukes of Buccleuch. The immediate locality abounds with coal of excellent quality, which is worked to a great extent. Midlothian is famous for the excellence of its oatmeal, and Dalkeith mills have long been identified with its production. There is also a brush factory, carpet works and a brewery. The town is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company, formed in 1827, and also, since 1904, with the electric light by another company. An ample supply of excellent water was obtained in 1888, within the burgh bounds, by boring, the yield amounting to 65,000 gallons every 24 hours. The municipal body consists of a provost, two bailies and six members of council, constituted under the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act, who have the power to assess and regulate local taxes. A sheriff court is held in the Foresters' Hall, for cases under the Small Debt Act and Certain Debts Recovery Act, on the third Thursday in January, April, July and October respectively, and a police court at the Police barracks, on the second and fourth Monday of every month, and other days as occasion may require. There are two Established churches, three United Free churches, and St. David's Roman Catholic church; the Episcopal church of St. Mary, in Dalkeith park, built in 1845, affords 112 sittings; the chaplaincy has been held since 1900 by the Rev. Lancelot Floyd Andrews M.A. of University College, Oxford. There are also Baptist, Congregational, Evangelical Union and Wesleyan chapels and a Mission Hall. Branches are maintained here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, opened in 1810; the National Bank of Scotland Limited, in 1825; the Royal Bank of Scotland, in 1836; the Edinburgh & Glasgow Bank, merged in the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in 1858, and a branch of the Bank of Scotland, opened in 1896. In 1839 a National Society

Savings Bank was established. The Dalkeith Combination Poorhouse was erected in 1849, at a cost of £4,058, and enlarged in 1897 at a further cost of £800, for the poor of four parishes, but there are now twelve parishes in combination. The building is available for 120 inmates. The Corn Exchange and Market Hall is a fine covered building, opened in 1854, is 172 feet long, 50 feet wide and 45 feet high, and was erected at a cost of nearly £4,400. The corn market is held weekly on Mondays. Fairs are held annually on the third Tuesday in October for cattle &c. last Thursday in February, first Thursday in April, and second Thursday in October for hiring. A newspaper, the "Dalkeith Advertiser," is published here on Thursday. A drill hall for E. Co. 8th Territorial Force Battalion Royal Scots (Lethian Regiment) was built in 1911. Dalkeith House, the seat of His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch K.G., K.T., P.C. the principal landowner, stands on the south bank of the Esk adjoining the town and occupies the site of an ancient castle, long in the possession of the family of Douglas, and afterwards the frequent residence of the Regent Morton during the minority of James VI. when it was commonly and significantly called "the lion's den." The present mansion, erected by the Scott family, about the close of the 17th century, is a substantial mansion in the Classic style, consisting of a centre with wings, the ornamental features being of the Corinthian order. The hall, the grand staircase, and the several suites of apartments within are spacious, elegantly furnished, and enriched by a valuable collection of paintings. George IV. sojourned here; and Her late Majesty, Queen Victoria, likewise repeatedly honoured the house with her presence, and in 1903 His late Majesty King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra occupied Dalkeith House during their State visit to Scotland. The park contains about 800 Scottish, or 1,000 English acres, surrounded by a stone wall; it is adorned with much fine timber, and traversed by the streams of the two rivers Esk. The Public Park, situate on the north side of the town, was formerly leased from His Grace the Duke of Buccleuch, but upon the celebration of his golden wedding in November, 1909, it was presented by him to the town. The parish area is 2,321 acres; rateable value, £43,116; the population in 1891 was 7,704, and in 1901, 7,297, including 6,753 in the town of Dalkeith. Area of the burgh, 252 acres. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1901 was: East Church, 2,972; West Church, 4,243.

DUDDINGSTON is a parish, in Invereck poor combination and the small debt court district of Edinburgh and containing a portion of the burgh of Edinburgh, and is bounded by the parish of Canongate, a part of the metropolis on the west, South Leith on the north, the sea and part of Inveresk on the east, and Liberton on the south; Duddingston and Craigmillar stations on the Edinburgh Suburban and Southside line of the North British railway, is near the southern border of the parish. The superiority of the barony of Doddinestoun, with the church, was granted to Kelso Abbey, founded by David I. in 1128, and remained in the possession of that house till the Reformation, when the barony came into the possession of the Thompson family, the last of whom was made a baronet by Charles I. in 1636.
The barony of Duddingston became, in 1674, the property of the notorious John (Maitland), Duke of Lauderdale, from whom it passed with his step-daughter, Elizabeth (Tolemache), to her husband Archibald, 1st Duke of Argyll. In 1745 it was sold by his successor to James, 8th Earl of Abercorn, whose present representative, the Duke of Abercorn K.G., P.C., C.B. still holds a large portion of it. Easter and Wester Duddingston are both villages in this parish. Wester Duddingston is charmingly situated near the base of Arthur's Seat, and at the east end of Duddingston Loch and round Arthur's Seat is a noble thoroughfare, known as the Queen's Drive. The church, which stands on a small eminence rising from the verge of the water, is an edifice of Norman origin, built in the first part of the 12th century, but has been modernised externally. Duddingston House is the residence of Col.
Hugh Montgomerie Sinclair C.B., R.E.
Duddingston Loch, a beautiful sheet of water, is about a third of a mile in length, and not more than half a mile from the southern outskirts of Edinburg.
There is an excellent road between Duddingston and Portobello. The Duke of Abercorn K.G., P.C., C.B. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The area comprises 1,571 acres; the population in 1891 was 9,643, and in 1901, 11,203, including 622 in Edinburgh and 9,180 in Portobello; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901, 4,328. WESTER DUD-DINGSTON is a village in the parish;
the population in 1901 was 403.

Post Office, Duddingston; Thomas Collier, postmaster. Letters received through Portobello, Midlothian, at 8.15 a.m. & 4.10 & 7.45 p.m.; Sunday, 10.25 a.m.; dispatched at 9 a.m. & 4.35 & 8.10 graph office is at Craigmillar, 1 mile

FALA AND SOUTRA, anciently distinct parishes and partly in Haddingtonshire, now form a united parish, which under the Boundary Order 89 is wholly in Edinburghshire: the kirktown and the hamlet of Fala-dam were formerly in the first-named county, the united parish in the small debt court district of Haddington. The village of Fala lies on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder, 11 miles south-west from Haddington, and 3½ miles north-east from Tynehead station on the North British main line from Carlisle to Edinburgh, and Soutra old church is 5 miles north-east from Heriot station on the same line. The western extremity of the Lammermuir Hills is in this part of the parish, terminating in Soutra Hill, 1,209 feet above sea level and the detached peak of Gillston, 1,362 feet. The area is 6,579 acres; rateable value, £3,259; the population in 1901 was 300 civil, 279 ecclesiastical.

BLACKSHIELDS, a small hamlet, originally a detached portion of the parish of Humberie, has been transferred by Boundary Order 89 to Fala and is about 3 miles north from Tynehead station.

GLENBROOK, see CURRIE.

GLENCORSE (or Glencross) is a small parish in the small debt court district of Dalkeith, containing about four square miles, and is 6 miles south from Edinburgh, having in it the terminal station of the Roslin and Glencorse section of the North British railway. The road to Dumfries, Biggar, Moffat, Peebles and Penicuik passes through the parish. The present church was erected in 1886 at a cost of £3,000, in place of the earlier structure, which occupied an eminence half a mile north-west. At Glencorse is the 1st Regimental depot of the Royal Scots. Glencorse House is the residence of Archibald Pitman esq.

MILTON BRIDGE is a small hamlet in the parish. The area comprises 4,246 acres. The rateable value is £10,241; population in 1901, 1,347, including 168 in the barracks.

AUCHENDINNY is a small village in the parish of Glencorse, 7½ miles south from Edinburgh, on the road to Peebles, and is situated in a romantic dell, through which flows the North Esk, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Penicuik section of the North British railway. This place has been long known for the manufacture of paper, and there is still a paper mill in operation, contiguous to the village. Auchendinny House is the residence of Miss Newham. The population in 1901 was 377.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Milton Bridge (Letters should have Midlothian added); Miss Agnes Webster, sub-postmistress. Deliveries, 7 a.m. & (to callers) 6 p.m.; sunday (to callers), 9 a.m. to 10 a.m.; dispatches, 6.40 & 11.10 a.m. & 2.25 & 7.45 p.m.; sundays, 4.35 p.m

GOREBRIDGE is a populous village in the parish of Borthwick, and in the small debt court district of Dalkeith, about 10 miles south-east from Edinburgh and 4 south from Dalkeith, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick branch of the North British railway. The place is lighted with gas from works the property of a company. The Public Hall belongs to Lady Dundas, of Ariston, widow of Sir Robert Dundas, 2nd bart. (d. 1910), who founded the Dundas Library and Reading Room. Ecclesiastically Gorebridge is in the quoad sacra parish of Stobhill, which was formed from Borthwick, Cockpen, Newbattle and Temple parishes. The church, at Stobhill, was erected in 1885 at a cost of £2,200; 100 sittings were added in 1910. The population of the village in 1901 was 1,379, and of Stobhill ecclesiastical parish, 3,514. The village of Stobb's Mills, transferred from Borthwick, is now part of the village of Gorebridge.

HERIOT is a parish in the Dalkeith small debt court district, 10 miles in length and 6 in breadth; it is 16 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick branch of the North British railway. The Gala and Heriot waters are two streams which take their rise in the Muirfoot hills here, and afford sport to the angler. In the neighbourhood are remains of several ancient fortifications, chiefly circular. Borthwick Hall is the residence of David J. Macfie esq. J.P. The area comprises 15,038 acres; rateable value, £6,678 (land, £5,662; railways, £1,116); the population in 1891 was 443, and in 1901, 417 civil and 359 ecclesiastical.

The portions of Hangingshaw and Kirklands farms, including the hamlet of Stagebank, were transferred from Stow to this parish for all purposes, Dec. 6, 1898, by the Secretary for Scotland's Order No. 34, dated Dec. 17, 1897.

Post & M. O. Office, Heriot (Letters should be addressed Midlothian); John Patterson Linton, postmaster. Delivery, 7.50 a.m.; dispatch, 3.50 p.m.; no delivery of letters on sundays. The nearest telegraph office is at Heriot station (sunday oil)

INVERESK is a parish and village and the head of a poor combination, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh, and has a junction station on the North British railway. There is also a station at New Hailes in this parish. The parish includes the town of Musselburgh and the villages of Inveresk, Cowpits, Deantown, Wallyford, Monktonhall, Smeaton and Old and New Craighall. The pleasant village of Inveresk consists chiefly of mansions and villas, surrounded by attractive grounds. The parish church, which occupies the summit of the hill of Inveresk, is a large square edifice in a plain style, and has a tower with a lofty and elegant spire. Several of the windows are stained: the oak pulpit is a copy of one at Santa Croce, Florence. There is a communion table of carved oak, a brass lectern, and some monuments. In the churchyard is the grave of David Macbeth Moir, surgeon, poet & littérateur, born at Musselburgh 5 Jan. 1798, died 6 July, 1851. Pinkie House, anciently the country house of the Abbots of Dunfer-line, and now the residence of Sir Alex. Hope bart. J.P. is delightfully situated in extensive policies, with fine old trees. Its turreted tower and much admired Gothic fountain are of high antiquity and great interest. The site of the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, is about a mile south of Pinkie House, and overlooking it, a mile and a half further off is Carberry hill, celebrated for the surrender of Queen Mary to the confederated nobility 15 June, 1567, and her final parting with Bothwell. Near is the fine mansion of Carberry Tower, the seat of Lord Elphinstone. New Hailes, a fine mansion half a mile south-west from Fisherrow, now the property and residence of the Rt. Hon. Sir Charles Dalrymple bart. J.P. was formerly the seat of Sir David Dalrymple bart. appointed in 1766 a lord of session, as Lord Hailes, a distinguished Scottish historian and antiquary, who died in this mansion 29 Nov. 1792, where his valuable library is carefully preserved. Near the house is a monument to John, 2nd Earl of Stair K.T. Field Marshal, and ambassador to France, d. 1747. In this parish are found limestone, freestone and coal, the latter particularly in abundance. From the higher grounds to the south very extensive views are to be obtained, reaching from Ben Lomond, Ben Ledi and Ben Voirlach on the west to the German Ocean, and from the Grampians, Ochils, and Lomonds to the Pentlands, Moorfoots, the Lammermuirs, the Firth of Forth, and Fife coast, forming the foreground of the panorama. The area comprises 5,169 acres; rateable value, including Musselburgh, £100,239, of which £69,424 is for the burgh; population in 1901, 14,650, of which 11,706 were in Musselburgh; ecclesiastical parish, 6,882.

MONKTON HALL is a small village and BRUNSTANE, or Brunstane Mills, a hamlet, both in the parish of Inveresk, the latter being about a mile from Musselburgh. NEW CRAIGHALL, or Niddrie, is a mining village, 1 mile west from Fisherrow, and has a station at New Hailes and a goods station on the North British railway at Niddrie. Here are Established and Wesleyan Methodist churches. The colliery works of the Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. Limited are near here. Smeaton, Deantown and Cowpits are colliery villages further south. At Wallyford and Carberry the Edinburgh Collieries Co. Limited have several pits.

NEW CRAIGHALL is an ecclesiastical parish formed from the parishes of Inveresk, Liberton and Newton; the population in 1901 was 3,836 in the ecclesiastical parish and 1,633 in the village, which includes Wanton Walls. NORTH ESK is an ecclesiastical parish formed from Inveresk; the population in 1901 was 7,212. WALLYFORD is a village in the civil parish and contains a Public Hall, the cost of which, about £700, was subscribed by the influential people and miners of the district. The population in 1901 was 673.

KIRKHILL, see PENICUK.

KIRKLISTON is a parish and village partly in Edinburghshire, but chiefly in Linlithgowshire. Particulars will be found under the latter county.

KIRKNEWTON, about 10 miles west from Edinburgh, is a parish and small village, in the sheriffdom of Mid-Lothian and small debt district; the parish includes the ancient parochial division of Calder Clere, now East Calder; it is bounded on the west by Mid-Lothian, on the east and south by Currie and Ratho, and on the north by Kirkliston and Uphall. The nearest station is at Mid-Lothian, half a mile distant, on the Caledonian railway. The parish contains the village of East Calder, which see. The Oakbank Shale oil works, together with a few limestone quarries, afford employment to a considerable number of the inhabitants. The present parish church, built in 1750, stands half a mile from the village, and was renovated in 1871 at a cost of £2,300; within the walls of the old church, standing in the burial ground in the village, was interred the celebrated physician, Professor William Cullen M.D. who was born in Lanarkshire, 11 Dec. 1712, and died 5 Feb. 1790; his son Robert, appointed a lord of session in 1796, as Lord Cullen, and a lord of justiciary in 1799; he died 23 Nov. 1810, and was buried in Kirknewton churchyard. Meadowbank is now the seat of J. A. Macnochie-Welwood esq. J.P.

WILKIESTON is a village in the parish, 3 miles east from Mid-Lothian. Here is a United Free church.

OAKBANK is also a village in the parish; the population in 1901 was 933. The principal landowners are the Earl of Morton, John A. Macnochie-Welwood esq. J.P. Lient.-Col. James Hare and the trustees of William Wilkie esq.

The area comprises 9,380 acres; rateable value, £25,653; the population in 1901 was 3,221, of which the village contained 361.

Post, T. & M. O. Office, Kirknewton (letters should have Midlothian added); Robert Moffat, postmaster. Letters arrive from all parts and are delivered at 7.30 a.m. & 5 p.m. & are dispatched at 11.35 a.m. & 5.30 & 8.15 p.m. No deliveries on Sunday, but letters are dispatched at 5.30 p.m.

LASSWADE is a town and police burgh within the parish of that name and in the Dalkeith poor combination and small debt recovery. The burgh, which extends into the parish of Cockpen, is 6 miles south of Edinburgh and 2 south-west from Dalkeith. There are six railway stations in the parish, viz.: Lasswade and Poiton (the terminus) on the Polton branch, Hawthornden and Rosslynree on the Peebles and Dalhousie section of the North British railway, and Roslin and Loanhead. The North Esk runs through the whole length of the parish. The town has been greatly improved by the erection of many substantial dwellings, and the opening of various manufactories, including several paper mills. The parish church is an ancient structure, and to the attached cemetery lie the remains of William Drummond, of Hawthornden, the poet, who died 4 Dec. 1649, and to whom a memorial was unveiled in 1897: one aisle contains the burial vault for the noble family of Dundas, and here was interred Henry (Dundas), 1st Viscount Melville P.C. and secretary of state during the administration of Mr. Pitt; he died 29 May, 1811: the stained east window was erected in 1898 by Mrs. Moffat, of Edin., in memory of her husband. The organ was built in 1897. There are traces in the village of two religious foundations, St. Ann's and St. Leonard's; there is also a United Free Church. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Leonard, and the Rev. John Murray Ballard M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford, has been rector since 1909. Melville Castle, on the bank of the Esk, is the property of Viscount Melville V.O. and is now (1911) the residence of Violet Viscountess Melville. Near here, on the same river, is Polton House, once the residence of Constable, printer and publisher, and now the residence of Capt. Sir Henry Herbert Philip Dundas bart.: here also is Hawthornden, the home of Drummond, the poet and historian, the property of Col. Sir James Hemylyn Williams-Drummond bart. C.B., J.P. and residence of Hugh W. Drummond esq. Sir Walter Scott spent the first years of his married life in a neat cottage a little apart from the village. John Clerk, of Edin., author of a famous work on naval tactics (d. 10 May, 1812) and his son, also John Clerk, a learned lawyer, appointed a lord of session, as Lord Eldin, in 1823, both resided at Lasswade; and Thomas de Quincey, the author of the "Confessions of an Opium Eater," and many other works, lived in a cottage at Polton, during 1840-41. Below Hawthornden are three caves, which in troublous times afforded shelter to fugitives; the largest is 90 feet in length and 12 feet wide at the entrance, gradually tapering inwards, and 6 feet in height, with a shaft cut for the admission of the light and air, and in a recess there is a well, several feet deep. Broomieknowe is partly in the town and police burghs of Bonyrigg and Lasswade. The area comprises 10,035 acres; rateable value, £65,113, which includes Loanhead burgh and parts of Lasswade and Bonnyrigg burghs; the population in 1901 was 9,708, divided as follows:—Bonnyrigg burgh, 448; Lasswade burgh, 596; Loanhead burgh, 3,011 and landward, 5,653. Lasswade burgh extends in Cockpen civil parish, total population in 1901, 869. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,044. Area of the burgh, 40 acres.

A portion of the parish, with population of 466, was transferred to the parish of Penicuik in March, 1904.

ROSLIN is a quoad sacra parish formed from Lasswade; the population in 1901 was 1,808.

LEITH. see EDINBURGH SECTION.

LIBERTON is a parish in the small debt court district of Dalkeith, including three villages of its name—Upper (or Over) Liberton, Liberton Kirk and Nether Liberton, with Gilmerton (which see), and Greenend. The kirk town is about 3 miles south from Edinburgh and 3 north-west from Dalkeith and Lasswade. The station is Duddingston and Craigmillar, on the North British Suburban railway, which encircles the outskirts of Edinburgh, but Newington, also on this line, is the nearest station to Liberton parish church. The town is near the northern border of the parish, and Gilmerton, on the Roslin and Glen-corse line, is close to the south-easterly boundary. Water is supplied by the Edinburgh and District Water Trust. The old church of Liberton was removed in 1815; the present structure, erected on its site, is a building in the Gothic style, with turrets and pinnacles; the massie adjoins. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and the adjacent collieries. Large quarries of limestone are worked at Burdiehouse and Straiton, and the freestone and whinstone quarries also employ many persons. There are seven breweries, a malting, a creamery and a margarine factory. Major Sir David Baird bart. D.L. of Newbyth, Col. Robert Gordon Gordon-Gilmour C.B., C.V.O., D.S.O. of The Inch, Major A. R. Trotter M.V.O., D.S.O. of Morton Hall, Mrs. Wauchop, of Niddrie, John Welsh of Moreland, and John L. More Nisbett, of Drum, are the principal landowners. The celebrated cave in Gilmerton, dug by George Paterson, a blacksmith, out of the solid rock, and finished in 1734, after five years' toil, contains several apartments with bedsteads, and a table with a large punch bowl, all hewn out of the same material, and also includes a smith's forge, a well and a washing house. Here Paterson lived for several years, and here he died about 1737. Craigmillar Oastle, sometime a favourite residence of Queen Mary, stands on rising ground of moderate elevation, and commands a beautiful and extensive prospect over the surrounding country. The area comprises 6,326 acres; rateable value, £80,941; the population in 1901 was 7,233 of which 74 were in Edinburgh Royal burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 4,016, and of the village, in 1907, about 1,000. JEWEL COTTAGES form a village with a population in 1901 of 390. LIBERTON DAMS and BRAESIDE also form a village in the parish, the population of which in 1901 was 320. GREENEND is a village, 4 miles north from Eskbank, on the road to Edinburgh, with a population in 1901 of 313. CRAIGMILLAR is also a village, and has a church of the Established Church of Scotland, built and opened in 1905, and a Methodist chapel. The population in 1901 was 281. STRAITON, another village, had a population in 1901 of 327.

MUSSELBURGH is an ancient town, a burgh of regality and contributory parliamentary burgh, in the parish of Inveresk, and in Inveresk poor combination and Edinburgh small debt court district, 2½ miles east from Portobello, 4 north from Dalkeith, 5 east from Leith and 6 east from Edinburgh, with a station at Inveresk on the North British railway and another on a branch from Newhailes Junction of the same line. The town occupies a level expanse upon the south shore of the Firth of Forth, generally acknowledged to be an ancient sea level. The river Esk flowing through, divides it into nearly two equal parts, that on its western bank being known, up to 1896, as Fishermuir, but now all is included in the one designation, Musselburgh. The town consists of two streets, lying nearly due east and west along the eastern bank; the main, or High street, extending from the bridge over the Esk on the west to Loretto and Pinkie on the east, and being on the great road from Edinburgh to Berwick and London. The approach to High street from the station is through a fine avenue of trees called the Mall. The streets generally are of good width and well paved with whinstone blocks, and the two portions of the town are connected by six bridges across the Esk. The old bridge, a venerable structure of three arches, and incorporating remains of a Roman bridge, was built by Lady Janet Hepburn, wife of George, 3rd Baron Seton, and grand-aunt of the notorious James (Hepburn), 4th Earl of Bothwell, so unhappily associated with the history of Mary Queen of Scots. The roadway is high and narrow, and is approached by a flight of steps at either end, being now used only by foot passengers, although in ancient times it was the chief thoroughfare to the south. Across it the Scottish army passed after the battle of Pinkie (10 Sept. 1547), when Lord Graham, eldest son of the Earl of Montrose, and others were killed on it by cannon shot from the English fleet anchored at the river mouth. Victoria Bridge, near the mouth of the Esk, erected in 1888, in commemoration of the jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, is for foot passengers only. There is also a stone bridge of five elliptical arches, designed by John Rennie F.R.S., the famous engineer; an iron girder railway bridge for the North British railway, a stone bridge carrying the main line of the North British railway, two iron bridges and others. The small harbour on the western bank of the river is under the control of commissioners. A large sum has been expended in erecting and improving the piers, but the access to the harbour is shallow, and does not admit vessels of any considerable tonnage. The custom house, connected with that of Leith, is now at Prestonpans. A portion of the inhabitants around here are fishermen, and the produce of their industry is conveyed by rail to Edinburgh and disposed of by their wives and daughters. Contiguous to Fishermuir Links are the public slaughter houses, constructed upon the most approved plan.

An effective system of drainage has been carried out, and the water supply is derived from the Edinburgh & District Water Works. The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1831, whose works are at the north-west corner of the Links, near the river mouth. Thomas, 9th Earl of Mar, in 1340, granted to the town its first charter, and in 1354 all the ancient rights and privileges of the town were confirmed anew by King David II. After the disastrous battle of Pinkie, in 1547, the whole of the burgh records were ruthlessly destroyed by the Duke of Somerset K.G. lord protector, but in 1562 Robert Pitcairn, commendator of Dunfermline, executed a fresh charter, reaffirming all the ancient rights and privileges previously enjoyed. This charter is still extant, and has been ratified and confirmed by various subsequent charters and Acts of Parliament, more particularly by one from John, Earl, and subsequently Duke of Lauderdale K.G. lord high commissioner in Scotland, dated 1670, in which all former grants in favour of the burgh are acknowledged. In 1632 Musselburgh was erected into a royal burgh by charter under the great seal, an act which excited the jealousy of the magistrates of Edinburgh, who contrived to obtain a reduction of the charter in the same year. The burgh is, however, still represented on the convention of royal burghs, founded in 1150. Musselburgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors, elected according to the provisions of the Burgh Reform Act. Their jurisdiction extends two and a half miles along the shore, from the Magdalen bridge rivulet on the west to Ravenshaugh streamlet on the east, which at that locality is the boundary with Haddingtonshire; but they possess no jurisdiction over Inveresk village, which is included within the county. Musselburgh, together with Leith, Newhaven and Portobello, forms the Leith parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act, 1832 (2 and 3 Wm. IV. c. 45) and returning one member. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Peter, and the Rev. Thomas Hannan M.A. of Glasgow University, has been rector since 1891; there is also a Congregational chapel. The Town House, which occupies an angle in the High street, is a substantial edifice, including an Assembly room, council chamber, offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain, burgh surveyor, and quarters for the constabulary. Attached to the building is a tower with a slated spire of quaint Flemish design, and containing the mechanism of a clock, presented to the town by the Dutch States in 1496, and still preserved, though the clock has been replaced since 1902 by a new one. Connected with the Town House is the goal, said to have been erected about 1590, from the materials of the ruinous chapel of Loretto; it has recently been reconstructed to meet modern prison requirements. The Town Cross, which stands opposite the municipal offices, consists of a square base, supporting a disused pant or basin, from the centre of which rises a stone pillar surmounted by the figure of a lion bearing a shield with the borough arms, az. three anchors, in fess, or, and as many muskells, two in chief, and one in base, ppr. A drinking fountain was erected in 1895, at the top of High street, at a cost of over £500, by Mr. David T. Wright, merchant, of Riddie's close, Leith, and a native of Musselburgh, who has presented it to the town; the fountain, which stands on a circular base of two steps, is an octagonal structure in the Renaissance style, four of the sides having arched recesses with basins of grey granite; it is finished above with a frieze and cornice, and a ribbed ogee shaped dome, and also bears the arms of the town, of the Regent Randolph, Earl of Moray, and those of the donor, and another shield, charged with the emblem of St. Michael; the total height is 18 feet. In the same street, and opposite the fountain, is the memorial erected to David Macbeth Moir, the celebrated poet and litterateur, best known by his contributions to "Blackwood's Magazine," under the name of "Delta"; he was born here 5 Jan. 1798; died 6 July, 1851, and was buried at Inveresk. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Ltd. and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The manufactories here include fishing net works, paper mills and a steel wire manufactory. Besides these industries there are two large breweries, maltings and seed crushing works, and the manufacture of confectionery, potteryware, salt, skin mats, and boat building are all carried on. There are several literary, benevolent and religious societies; and golf, bowling, cycling, tennis, cricket and football clubs. The Infectious Diseases Hospital was opened 17th May, 1907, at a cost of about £8,000, and consists of six wards in three pavilions.

The extensive common, known as Musselburgh Links, has long been in deserved repute as a golfing ground, and the Royal Musselburgh Golf Club have erected club-houses adjoining it. His late Majesty King Edward VII. when Prince of Wales, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught K.G. have both played on these links. The Royal Company of Archers also come here once a year to compete for the Musselburgh silver arrow. This competition is said to have been instituted in the 16th century, and is an event of great local interest. Attached to the arrow are many gold and silver medals, added by successive winners, and it is annually returned to the town that it may again be offered for competition. The Edinburgh race meeting is also held here annually, and the races of the Royal Caledonian Hunt at intervals of three years. A race meeting and horse and cattle show is also held annually on fair day, in August. Cromwell, before the battle of Dunbar 3 Sept. 1650, quartered his infantry on Musselburgh Links, his own tent being pitched on an elevated spot nearly opposite Linkfield House, and his cavalry quartered at Inveresk. Skirting Musselburgh Links on the south are many attractive residences, and at the eastern extremity is the suburb of Levenhall, now a popular seaside resort. The Romans, after their invasion of Britain, established themselves in this locality, planting a colonia upon the rising ground at Inveresk. Where the church now stands an altar was erected to Apollo, various buildings once stood in the adjacent grounds of Inveresk House, and towards the close of the last century the remains of a Roman villa were discovered here. Musselburgh, in the Saxon chronicle, is mentioned as the "Eskmuth" of the Northumbrians, whose territory extended from the Humber to the Forth, and this name is the exact equivalent of Inveresk, i.e., mouth of Esk, the present name of the parish. In the earliest Scottish records mention is made of the two manors of Little Inveresk and Great Inveresk. Malcolm III. surnamed Ceannor or Canmore (1058-93), and his consort, Queen Margaret, gifted the manor of Little Inveresk to the monks of Dunfermline, and their son, David I. confirmed this, and gave in addition Greater Inveresk, which included the burgh and port of Musselburgh. In 1206 the Scottish nobles assembled at Musselburgh to take the oath of fidelity to Alexander II., infant son of William the Lion. Until the Reformation it continued a burgh of regality, belonging to Dunfermline Abbey; Lord Maitland, of Thiristane, and lord chancellor of Scotland, then became the Superior, and the burgh still pays a small annual sum in name of feu duty to the Duke of Buccleuch, whose ancestress, Anne, Duchess of Monmouth, acquired rights thereto about the beginning of the 18th century. The latest attempt to extort feudal homage from the magistrates, as representing the townspeople, in 1702, at the instance of Sir Robert Dickson, of Smerton, was successfully resisted upon the ground that the charters granted to the burgh freed them of any such acknowledgments. Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, His late Majesty King Edw. VII. when Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught have at different times honoured Musselburgh with their presence. The area of the burgh is 548 acres; rateable value, 1910, £69,424; the population in 1901 was 11,711. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1910 was 3,035.

SCHOOLS.

Loretto School. At the east end of Musselburgh, near the Links, are the scattered buildings and fields belonging to the now well-known school of Loretto, which is the property of the trustees of the late Dr. H. H. Almond, late head master. The school house occupies the site of a monastery, originally an offshoot from the castle of Our Lady of Loretto in Italy, and became a cell to the abbey of Dunfermline during the 12th century; subsequently the property fell into the hands of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, whose monogram may still be seen over the door of an old vault, and it was afterwards bought by the celebrated Lord Clive, who erected a considerable part of the present building. In 1829 it was converted into a preparatory school by the late Rev. Dr. Loughorne, but gradually changed its type, and eventually took rank as a public school, being especially noted for its proficiency in athletic games and choral singing. There are one or two musical scholarships up to 80 guineas a year and foundationerships for the sons of gentlemen in need of such help, but no competitive scholarships. Prizes are given for absolute, not relative merit. The school choir is probably the most powerful in Scotland, and is now heard to advantage in the beautiful chapel, erected in 1893 by past and present scholars, from designs by Mr. John Homeyman R.S.A. and containing a fine organ. The chapel, with the surrounding ground and approaches, was conveyed to trustees in May, 1893. There are now (1911) 134 boys, all boarders. Allan R. Smith M.A. Oxon. head master; F. M. Marzials M.A. master of science side; Rev. G. N. Price M.A. master of junior school; F. C. Lemmey M.A., J. Kennington B.A. Rev. Adam Forman B.A., W. E. Kirby B.A., G. Fyson B.A., C. C. NEW CRAIGHALL, see INVERESK.

NEWBATTLE is a parish and small village in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district; the village is situated about a mile to the south of Dalkeith, and is watered by the South Esk.

NEWTON GRANGE is a considerable village in this parish, with a station on the North British railway. The parish church is a plain building, but several of the windows are stained. In 1895 it was enlarged and restored, when an ancient aisle, for many years walled up, was re-opened, and named "Lord Ancram's aisle," as a memorial to Walter William Schomburg (Kerr), Earl of Ancram, who died 16 June, 1892. Robert Leighton, afterwards Bishop of Dnbnlane and Archbishop of Glasgow, was minister of Newbattle from 1641 to 1662, and the pulpit in which he preached is still in use. In the church is a mural tablet, erected in memory of the archbishop, who died 1 Feb. 1684. The parish abounds in valuable coal mines, worked by the Lothian Coal Co. Limited. Newbattle Abbey, the property of the Marquess of Lothian D.L. who is also Baron Ker of Newbattle, but now (1911) the residence of William John Kirk esq. occupies part of the site of the ancient Cistercian abbey, and it is surrounded by grounds containing some of the oldest and largest trees in the kingdom, including a beech of extraordinary dimensions. The mansion has a collection of valuable paintings, both ancient and modern. The abbey of Newbattle, or Newbottle, was founded in 1140 by David I. for the monks of the Cistercian order. The buildings were burnt by Richard II. of England in 1385, and again by the Earl of Hertford in 1544. The architecture is chiefly Early English, and has been assigned to the middle of the 13th century. The foundations of the Abbey Church, accidentally discovered, have now been disclosed throughout, and show that it consisted of a long nave with aisles, choir and a central tower. In 1892 some workmen in digging, came upon the foundations of the north transept and side chapels; the excavations were continued in 1893 and 1894, and revealed the bases of piers, in line with those now remaining in the crypt, and connecting them with the south transept. An immense open chimney (12 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft.) was also discovered. The piers of the crypt are octagonal, the plain shafts measuring 3 ft. 6 in. in height and carrying circular arches; some finely carved bosses were also found, one of which is placed in the crypt, which, so far as at present opened, is 100 feet long by 27 ft. 7 in. wide. The Great Hall and the Chapter house have also been examined, and from the east end of the church towards the south, the foundations of other buildings were met with, including a portion of the stair from the dorter (dormitory), and an entrance to the cloisters; the walls are of ashlar, and on the south of this entrance was a groined chamber with the bases of four columns, and extending east and west, a stone built arched culvert of ashlar work; the line of the walls and position of the piers of the church have been carefully marked with brown glazed fire-clay edging, specially made. In course of the work a number of stone coffins were found, principally outside the choir and north transept, and one of polished stone near the entrance to the church from the cloisters. The area of the parish comprises 5,186 acres; rateable value, £20,449; the population in 1901 was 4,557; viz.: landward, 2,151 and Newton Grange Town, 2,406, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,836.

EASTHOUSES is a village in the parish; the population in 1901 was 327.

A portion of this parish, with an estimated population of 80, was transferred to Borthwick by an Order of the Secretary for Scotland, dated Sept. 18, 1896.

PENICUIK is a parish and police burgh, on the borders of Peeblesshire, in Peebles poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Dalkeith; the parish is from 11 to 12 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and is watered throughout by the North Esk. The town, seated on high land, on the north bank of the North Esk, and on the road from Edinburgh to Peebles, is about 9 miles south-west from the former, 13 north from the latter and 9 south-south-west from Dalkeith, and has three stations on the North British railway, one in the town, the terminus of the Penicuik line, and another at Esk Bridge (half a mile north east) on the same section, and one on the Peebles branch, about a mile east of the town. Along its northern border, the parish includes a considerable part of the Pentland Hills, on which are pastured numerous flocks of sheep. The southern portion is more level, and the soil is various, but dairy farming is carried on to a considerable extent on several of the farms. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors. There is an Established church and three United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. James the Less, consecrated in 1835, will seat 250 persons; the incumbrency, net yearly value £131, has been held since 1884 by the Rev. C. A. Ellington B.A. of Merton College, Oxford: there is also a Roman Catholic church. The principal industry is the manufacture of paper, carried on at Valleyfield Mills by Messrs. A. Cowan and Sons Limited, and at Esk Mills by Messrs. J. Brown and Co. Ltd. At Valleyfield Mills, the largest in this part of the country, both printing and writing papers are manufactured. In the beginning of this century these mills were acquired by Government for the reception of 5,000 French prisoners of war, of whom 300 died here and were buried in the grounds, and in 1860 a handsome monument was erected to their memory, near the spot, by some of the inhabitants. A list of these deceased exiles can be referred to in the Cowan Institute. The Esk Mills, the first mills in Scotland devoted to the manufacture of cottons, were afterwards used as cotton and paper mills, but are now paper mills only. There is abundance of coal and limestone, the latter occasionally so hard as to admit of a fine polish, and containing a variety of petrifications. Whinstone and freestone are also plentiful, and in Carlope Hill lead and iron ore have been discovered. Ironstone mining was at one time an important industry. At Penicuik is a detachment of F Company of the 8th Territorial Force Battalion Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment). The Cowan Institute, in the High street, was erected in 1894 by the late Alexander Cowan, at a cost of £4,500, and additions have since been made at a further cost of £2,500. The building contains a free reference and circulating library of 4,000 volumes, reading and billiard rooms with three tables, games room, baths, a public hall and a gymnasium. A small museum has also been added, to which several of the local gentry have contributed. There are 40 members. "Habbes Howe" is a romantic glen here, and there is another of the same name in the adjoining parish of Glencorse. There are several chalybeate and petrifying springs in this district, and on the banks of the North Esk, near Spittal Hill, is a well, the waters of which have a bitter taste, and are drunk by the country people for bowel complaints. In the locality are several ruined castles and vestiges of encampments. Penicuik House, built about 1761 by Sir James Clerk, 3rd bart. (d. 1782), is now the residence of Col. Sir George Douglas Clerk bart. D.L., J.P. The original mansion was burned down in 1899, and the present house was erected out of the former stables: south of the house is an obelisk erected to Allan Ramsay, the poet, who frequently resided here, and died 7 Jan. 1758, and the grounds of New Hall, another mansion in the parish, are supposed to be the scene of his fine pastoral comedy, "The Gentle Shepherd," published in 1728. The area comprises 18,786 acres; rateable value, £42,045; the population in 1891 was 4,914, and in 1901, 5,097, viz.: police burgh, 2,776; town beyond police burgh, 777; landward, 1,551.

A portion from Lasswade parish, with population of 466, was transferred to Penicuik March 14, 1904.

KIRKHILL is a village in the parish; the population in 1901 was 517.

RATHO is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and lies midway between the Pentland Hills and the Firth of Forth; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Kirkliston, on the north by Kirkliston and Corstorphine, south-east by Currie, and south-west by Kirknewton; the village is about 8 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a junction station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway. The country in the eastern part of the parish is flat, and the soil fertile, but the ground rises gradually towards the south. The parish church, originally erected in the 12th century and restored in the 17th and again in the earlier part of the 18th century, is an irregular structure, incorporating work of each of these periods, but is not without features of interest. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1833. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Mary, and the Rev. John Clement Holden M.A. of Oxford University, has been rector since 1908; there is also a Baptist chapel.

 Dalmahoy, the property of the Earl of Morton, and Hatton House, formerly belonging to the Maitlands, Earls of Lauderdale, but now the property of James McKelvie esq. are both in this parish.
 Hatton is one of the oldest and most substantially built houses in Scotland, and its massive walls contain hiding places used in the old trouhous times.
 William Wilkie D.D. a poet, sometimes called the "Scottish Homer," and formerly professor of philosophy at St.
 Andrews, was born here, or at Dal-meny, 5 Oct. 1721. Robert Liston F.R.S. an eminent surgeon, is said to have been born here, 28 Oct. 1791, but Eccles-machan, co. Linlithgow, has also been assigned as his birthplace. Sir W. Fettes is also believed to have been a native of this parish. There are vestiges of two Danish camps, one on Kalmes Hill, and the other on South Platt Hill. The Earl of Morton is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,142 acres; rateable value, £17,584; the population in 1901 was 1,946, of which 755 were in the village.

ROSLIN is a small village and quad sacra parish in the civil parish of Lasswade, and in the Duke of Edinburgh's court district, 7 miles south from Edinburgh, 2½ south-west from Lasswade and 2 south-west from Loanhead, with three stations, one on the Edinburgh to Glencorse branch of the North British railway, another called Roslyn Castle on the Edinburgh to Penicnik branch of the same railway, and a third, Roslynlee, on the Dolphinton and Peebles line of the same system, but on the other side of the valley. Rosebank House is the seat of Major George Frederick Villiers, and Woodhouselee of James Francis Fraser-Tytler esq. J.P. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in agricultural pursuits, but there are also gunpowder mills and extensive carpet works. Roslyn chapel, which stands on an eminence at the east end of the village, overlooking the remains of the castle and the romantic valley of the Esk, was founded in 1446, by William St. Clair, or Sinclair, 3rd Earl of Orkney of that family, as a Collegiate church, and dedicated to St. Matthew the Apostle. It was, however, left incomplete, and the existing structure represents only the eastern arm of the projected building, the nave and transepts of which, uncovered in 1881, were found to have been carried nearly to the floor level. At the period of the Revolution, the chapel was attacked, 11 Dec. 1688, by a fanatical mob, who destroyed much of the external ornament, including the numerous figures of apostles and martyrs which adorned the canopied niches of the exterior: the fabric is, nevertheless, in a singularly perfect condition, and the judicious restorations and repairs carried out by the later Earls of Roslyn have to a large extent removed the traces of its former maltreatment. It consists of a lofty choir with clerestory, a lady chapel beyond, and continuous aisles, supported by bold pinnacled buttresses; behind which are tall square pinnacles, rising from the aisle wall, and carrying the flying supports of the choir. Architecturally, this famous edifice is confessedly unique as an example of the Gothic style, for it combines the massive character of Norman work with even more than the elaborate and profuse ornamentation which distinguishes that of the Tudor period. The choir and aisles are divided by arcades having seven clustered piers on either side; two others standing in the centre at the east end: the clerestory has five large windows on either side, and the lofty roof is divided into as many compartments by ribs springing from the arcade below; the lady chapel, only 15 feet in height, opens by arches to the side aisles, and has a groined roof of florid design. One of the most interesting and striking features of the interior is the celebrated "Prentice's pillar," a clustered pier, wreathed round diagonally with bands of varied and finely sculptured foliage, and several of the arches bear inscriptions or symbolical figures. Beneath the east end is the lower chapel, erected by the Lady Elizabeth Douglas, wife of John (Stewart), Earl of Buchan; it is reached by a descent of 24 steps at the south-east angle; it is 36 feet long, 14 wide, and has a height of about 15 feet; the groined vaulting displays the arms of St. Clair—arg., a cross enrailed, sa.—and at the east wall is an altar. In the north aisle is a monument to George (Sinclair), 4th Earl of Caithness, and hereditary justiciar of Caithness, who died at Edinburgh 9 Sept. 1582; on the floor of the same aisle is a large flat stone, incised with the figure of a man in armour, his feet on a greyhound, and on each side of his head a small shield, charged with a rampant lion; this stone is supposed to indicate the burial place of Sir William St. Clair of Roslyn, an ancestor of the founder, who lived during the early part of the 14th century; there is also on the north side a large slab said to cover the entrance to the vault of the Sinclairs, lords of Roslyn, ten of whom, previous to 1690, were here interred, and according to the ancient custom of the family, in complete armour and without any coffin, a traditional practice alluded to by Sir Walter Scott in his "Lay of the Last Minstrel." James, 3rd Earl of Roslyn in 1861-2, effected a considerable restoration of the chapel, and Robert, 4th and late Earl, in 1879, erected a new baptistery with organ loft over, from designs by Mr. A. Kerr, architect, of Edinburgh, enclosing it with screen work and providing a font; he also renewed a number of the destroyed figures formerly adorning the interior, and filled many of the windows with stained glass, including the east window, a memorial to his sister, Harriet Elizabeth, wife of George Heriott, Count Musster of Dernburr, and German ambassador to England; she died at Dernburr, Hanover, 29 Nov. 1867. In the burial ground attached to the chapel is a memorial of various coloured stone, erected in 1893 by his countess, at a cost of £1,000, to Robert Francis, 4th and late Earl of Roslyn, who died in 1890; the monument, 19 feet in height, includes six figures emblematical of certain Christian virtues, and is surmounted by a cross. The chaplaincy has been held since 1886 by the Rev. John Thompson, who is also chaplain to the barracks, Glencorse. Roslyn Castle, now a ruin, stands on a lofty and almost isolated cliff, overhanging the wooded and picturesque glen through which flows the river Esk. It is believed to have been originally erected by one of the Norman St. Clairs, an adherent of the Conqueror in the 12th century, but in 1447 was partly destroyed by fire, and afterwards rebuilt by William St. Clair, the founder of the intended collegiate church: in Sept. 1544, it was again burnt by an English force, under the command of Sir Edward (Seymour), 1st Earl of Hertford, but must have been subsequently repaired, for in 1650, when Cromwell crossed the Tweed (22 July) with an army of 11,000 men, it was held for the Royal cause by commission from Charles II. who had previously landed in Scotland, June 23rd. After the battle of Dunbar (3 Sept.), in which the Scots, under Gen. David Leslie, afterwards Baron Newark, were signally defeated, Gen. Monk invested Roslyn Castle, which shortly surrendered and was plundered by the Roundheads, and in 1688 it was much injured by the same mob that attacked the chapel; the ruins, now inconsiderable, are reached by a bridge thrown across a deep ravine; some fragments of the north side of the fortress, with walls 9 feet thick, are standing, and to the south is a mansion of the Early 17th century, erected on the site of part of the ancient structure, which includes several vaulted chambers; the dining room of this has a panelled ceiling, with ornamental work in plaster, enclosing shields of arms of the St. Clair family, and over the principal entrance are the initials S.W.S. 1622. Near the castle are the remains of the ancient chapel and cemetery of the village, close to which is a copious spring of excellent water called St. Matthew's well. Omnibuses ply during the summer from Edinburgh, and the walk by the valley of the Esk to Hawthornden is exceedingly picturesque. The population of the village in 1891 was 730 and ecclesiastical parish 1,630, and in 1901, ecclesiastical parish, 1,805; village, 1,129.

STOW is an extensive parish and village, in the southern extremity of the county, nearly 12 miles in length and 8 broad; it is in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district. The village is 2 1/2 miles south-east from Edinburgh and has a station on the North British railway.

The village is well lighted with gas, supplied by the Stow Gaslight Company. An augmented water supply has been provided from Sell Moor hill, at a cost of over £1,200, the villages of Stow and Killochryett having been constituted a special district alike for water supply, drainage and lighting. There are established and United Free churches. The Town Hall is in part occupied by a Literary Institute and library with reading and news rooms, and also includes a large room for lectures and public meetings. There is a woollen manufactory here. Hirings for servants are held on Friday before the last Monday in February and the second Tuesday in March. The fast days are Wednesday before the first Sunday of May and the second Sunday of November. Caitha is a small hamlet in this parish, 4 miles south-west from Stow village and near the Bowland station on the North British railway. Fountainhall is also a hamlet in this parish, about 4 miles north-north-west from Stow village, with a station on the North British railway. Bowland is the residence of William Ramsay esq. J.P.; Crookston, of William Henry Borthwick esq. and Torsonce House, of Miss Milroy. The area comprises 26,138 acres; rateable value, £15,045; the population in 1901 was 1,560 in the civil parish, 1,656 in the ecclesiastical parish (the latter extending into Selkirkshire), and 557 in the village (including Killochryett).

The portions of Hanzingshaw and Kirklands farms, including the hamlet of Stagebank, within the parish of Stow, were transferred to Heriot, for all purposes, Dec. 6, 1898, by the Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 34, dated Dec. 17, 1897.

STRAITON, see LIBERTON.

TEMPLE is a parish and village, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district; the parish is bounded on the east by Borthwick, on the south by Heriot, on the west by Edleston and Penicuik, and on the north by Carrington. The village, situated on rising ground on the banks of the Gladhouse water, which falls into the South Esk, is about 10 miles south from Edinburgh and 3 miles from Gorebridge (the nearest) station on the North British railway. The land is chiefly hilly, but contains a good deal of moor and pasture land. The old church, an edifice in the Gothic style and now in ruins, was founded by King David I. for the Knights Templars; the new church, also in the Gothic style, was built in 1830. Rosebery House is the seat of the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. who with Lady Evelyn Henrietta Dundas, of Arniston House, Gorebridge, is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,633 acres; rateable value, £17,495; the population in 1891 was 1,646, reduced by the transfer of 1,191 persons to Borthwick parish to 455, and in 1901, 385.

Post Office, John Currie, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Gorebridge, Midlothian. Delivery, 8.30 a.m.; dispatch, 2.55 p.m.; no Sunday delivery of letters. Gorebridge, 3 miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

(Or MORAY)

So designated from the name of its capital, Elgin, and sometimes Morayshire, from being the central division of the "Province of Moray," is one of the northern counties of Scotland; bounded on the north-east by the North Sea, and on the north-west by the Moray Firth, on the east and south-east by Banffshire, on the south and south-west by Inverness-shire, and on the west by the county of Nairn. It has about 30 miles of coast line indented by several small harbours. The figure of Elginshire is very irregular, being intersected in several places by districts of the counties which form its boundaries; with Nairn it is so intimately connected that, in speaking of its shape, that small county is not unfrequently included in the description. Thus conjoined, the district is somewhat of a triangular figure—with the apex pointed inland—and in this quarter partaking of the wild, rocky and mountainous character of the Highlands. The county comprises 435 square miles, or 305,119 acres of land and 3,381 of water, and extends from north to south 30 miles, and from east to west 25 miles. In point of size Elgin ranks as the eighteenth and in population as the eighteenth amongst Scottish counties, having a population in 1891 of 43,471, and in 1901, 44,800, viz.: males 21,101 and females 23,699. In 1901 the number of houses was, inhabited, 9,304; uninhabited, 592, and building, 73.

History.—In ancient times the limits of the county were much more extensive than at present, comprehending all that tract of country which lies between the river Spey on the east, the Beuly on the north-west, and in the northern confines of Argyllshire on the south-west. The remains of antiquity are numerous, of which the cathedral of Elgin, the Bishop's palace at Spynie, the priory of Pluscardine, the estates of Lochindorb and Dunphail, and the "dun" of Relugas, are the chief. Of the struggles of the natives with the Danes, who infested the district in former ages, there are various testimonials, such as "cairns," monumental pillars &c. &c. The "Province of Moray," anciently so important and extensive, in the present day is without any political distinction, and is divided into three, several shires of Banff, Moray (or Elgin) and Nairn. On the east it is separated from Aberdeenshire by the Deveron; on the west it is bounded by Inverness-shire, and on the north it has the large arm of the sea, designated from it the Moray Firth. So late as the time of Charles I. the Highlanders considered Moray as a sort of neutral land, where every man was at liberty to take his prey. The province of Moray suffered more, perhaps, than any other district in Scotland by the civil wars. The people were then generally attached to the covenant, and, as Montrose made it one of his principal scenes of action, it is easy to conceive that its peaceable farmers were not permitted to have both their opinions and their goods undisturbed. Montrose, in his descent upon Moray, in 1645, after his victory of Inverlochy, destroyed all the houses of such as did not join his standard, and gave up the towns of Banff, Cullen and Elgin to indiscriminate pillage.

Soil, Surface, Climate, Produce &c.—The soil of this county, though less uniform than that of Banffshire, is for the most part a sunny loam—in some places a sandy gravel; considerable tracts are of very fertile clay, and of the most genial mould. The low country may be pictured as a large plain, extending from the Spey westward, between the shore and a range of mountains, for the whole length of the district, nearly 40 miles, but of unequal breadth, from about 5 to 12 miles or more, measured in a straight line from the hills to the shore; this plain, however, is diversified over its whole extent by ridges of lower hills in general nearly parallel to the shore; beyond these are valleys of great fertility and beauty, near the sources of the rivers Spey, Lossie and Findhorn, with the lesser vales along the banks of the tributary streams which pervade the intervening hills. Within the range of the mountain district the county may be described as chiefly pastoral; the arable land, in most instances, hanging upon the acclivities of the valleys, or stretching out in narrow plains upon the banks of the waters which wind among the hills—the wideness of the valley bearing a relative proportion to the size of the river. The upper part of the county is popularly termed "the Brae of Moray," and is mountainous and woody, and abounds in beautiful lakes. Agriculture is pursued in a spirited manner, and the land in general yields a higher rent than that of the neighbouring shires; and the greater portion of the waste land is now either brought into cultivation or planted with forest trees. In the lower part of the county the Duke of Fife and other proprietors formed plantations to so great an extent that almost every part of the land inaccessible to the plough has been covered with different species of forest trees. The south of this county produces principally oats, but the north is unsurpassed for the quantity and quality of the crops of turnips, potatoes, barley and wheat. The chief crops, as shown by the "Agricultural Returns for Great Britain, 1910," were: oats, 24,107 acres; barley or bere, 10,218; wheat, 519; rye, 475; total of corn crops, 35,356; turnips and swedes, 14,852 acres; potatoes, 1,871; vetches or trasses, 294; total of green crops, 17,058; clover, sainfoin and grasses, for hay, 6,056 acres; not for hay, 32,957 acres; permanent pasture, for hay, 404 acres; not for hay, 7,864. Total area of land, 304,931 acres, of which 77,455 acres are

To the breeding and rearing of cattle much attention is devoted, the polled Aberdeenshire and the pure short-horned being the breeds most highly prized. The live stock in 1910 comprised 3,802 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 1,104; cows and heifers in milk or in calf, 6,637; other cattle, two years and above, 4,374; one year and under two, 7,257; under one year, 5,136; ewes kept for breeding, 21,549; other sheep, one year and above, 12,768; under one year, 20,489; sows kept for breeding, 381; other pigs, 1,924.

Little can be said respecting manufactures; woollen stuffs are made to a small extent, which, together with grain, cattle, salmon, hewn freestone, wood and whisky, comprehending the principal exports; the chief imports being coal, iron, timber and manures. There are also ship and boat building yards, breweries, tanneries &c. The minerals raised in 1909 were brick clay, 6,750 tons; gravel and sand, 7,968 tons; igneous rock, 6,518 tons and sandstone, 23,688 tons. Herring fishing is prosecuted at several villages on the coast, and fine salmon fishing at the mouths of the Spey and Findhorn, and all along the sea coasts. The coast of this district, although within the fifty-eighth degree of north latitude, has ever been distinguished for the mildness of its climate; the hardier kinds of fruit, all the varieties of the apple, and almost all of the pear and of the plum, by a little attention may be abundantly produced on every farm; whilst flowers and fruit of the more rare species are brought to perfection in the gardens and orchards of this county. With respect to the winds, the most prevalent gales are from the north-west. This part of the county presents no object so elevated as to attract the clouds or impede their course; and from this cause, it is concluded, falls of snow are comparatively infrequent and of small depth, as they are drifted over the subjacent levels inasmuch that the operations of husbandry are but little interrupted by the inclemency of the weather. It is asserted that in the lower parts of Moray the climate is as warm, and the atmosphere at least as dry, as in any district in Scotland; in the higher quarter the weather is more mild than in the adjoining county of Banff, at the same distance from the sea coast—a natural consequence of its local position, the progress of cultivation and the inherent warmth of the soil.

Rivers, Lakes and Railways.—The principal rivers are the Spey, the Findhorn and the Lossie, all flowing in a northerly direction and each teeming with the finest salmon; the Spey and Findhorn rise in Inverness-shire, and reach the sea at Garmouth, the end of an estuary on the east of the county and Findhorn bay on the west near Forres, and the Lossie, which is smaller than the former rivers, rises in the hills near Dallas and Strathapey and debouches at Lossiemouth. There are many delightful lakes, of which Loch Spynie is most deserving of notice; it is 3 miles in length and 1 in breadth, and appears to have been formerly a firth of the sea, though it is now shut up at the east and west by a long extent of valuable ground. In accordance with this appellation, the land between the lake and the sea still retains the appellation of Ross Isle; and a corroborative proof of the accuracy of the popular designation is exhibited by the sea shells (particularly those of the oyster) that are found on the margin of the lake, several feet below the surface of the earth. Loch Spynie produces several kinds of fish, but none in such abundance as the perch and the pike. The railways in this county are the Great North of Scotland and the Highland lines, the former entering at the north of Tillynaught Junction (Banffshire), from which place is a branch to Banff; the line running westward by the coast branch, via Cullen, Buckie &c. runs to Elgin, where it is joined by a branch from Keith, via Craigiellachie Junction, and Rothes, the branch from Craigiellachie to Boat of Gartan, running through the south-east of the county from Elgin; there is also a branch to Lossiemouth. The Highland railway enters the county from Keith, via Mulben and Orbliston, from which place there is a branch to Fochabers, runs to Elgin, thence to Alves, with a branch to Burchhead and Hopeman on the north coast, and turning west proceeds to Forres, and north-east to Nairn, and south to Grantown and Kingussie, Perthshire.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Elginshire comprises nineteen parishes; it contains two royal burghs—Elgin and Forres; the former unites with Cullen, Banff, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead in returning one member to Parliament, and the county in conjunction with Nairnshire returns one member. The Elgin parliamentary constituency for 1911 was 5,172.

BURGHHEAD,

DUFFUS PARISH, HOPEMAN, CUMMINGSTON, NEW DUFFUS AND ROSEISLE.

BURGHHEAD is a police burgh, situated on a bold headland jutting out into the Moray Firth, in the parish of Duffus, 9 miles west from Elgin and about 10 north-east from Forres, in the Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district, and has a station on the Alves and Hopeman branch of the Highland railway. It was constituted a burgh in 1895 under the Burgh Police of Scotland Acts, 1892-93. It possesses a pier and a safe and commodious harbour, well protected from the north and east winds; at high water steam or other vessels may enter with perfect safety. Here are Established and United Free churches. Burghhead was anciently a Roman as well as a Danish station; the remains of a fort are still visible, and there is a well dug out of the solid rock, known by the name of "The Roman Well." The inhabitants are chiefly employed in fishing. There is a coasting trade for the supply of the neighbourhood. In 1901 the population was 1,671, against 1,428 in 1881, and the inhabited houses numbered 318.

Duffus parish extends along the shore of the Moray Firth to the north of Elgin, from which the church is about 5 miles distant. Hopeman railway station is 2 miles from the village. The parish is about 9½ miles in length, by about 4 in breadth, and includes beside Burghhead, the villages of Cummingston, Hopeman, New Duffus and Roseisle. In the parish is an Established church, and there are Mission halls at New Duffus and Cummingston. It is a 'rat district, chiefly agricultural. Duffus House is the seat of Lady Dunbar, and Gordonstoun House the seat of Sir William G. Gordon-Cumminghart. The trustees of the late Sir A. Hamilton-Dunbar bart, Sir W. G. Gordon-Cumminghart, George Ross Mackessack, of Ardgry, Edward Mortimer esq. J.P. of Invergie, and Thomas Duff Gordon Duff esq. are the principal landowners. The area of Duffus parish is 9,560 acres; rateable value, £15,291; population in 1901, 4,065, of which 1,559 are in the burgh. Area of burgh, 387 acres. The population of the village in 1901 was 1,531, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 2,125.

CUMMINGSTON is a small village, situated on the road midway between Burghhead and Hopeman, and has a Mission hall.

HOPEMAN is a village, situated 2 miles east of Burghhead, on the coast of the Moray Firth, with a neat harbour, which in 1888 was greatly improved, but the shipping of the port is not extensive. It is a rising bathing place and has a nine-hole golf course and also the terminus of the branch line from Alves, on the Highland railway, being the centre of the parish of Duffus. School Board and Parish Council meetings are held here. There are United Free and Baptist churches. The population in 1901 was 1,409.

NEW DUFFUS is a small village near the parish church of Duffus, prettily situated, and entirely agricultural, and has a Mission hall. Hopeman, 2 miles distant, is the nearest railway station.

ROSEISLE is a hamlet near Burghhead. 4½ miles north-west of Elgin. COLT-FIELD, about 1½ miles distant, is the nearest railway station. Population returned with the parish.

Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. Office, Burghhead. Letters should have Morayshire added; John Cumming, postmaster. Deliveries, 8.10 and 11.40 a.m. & 3.50 p.m.; dispatches, 6.30 a.m. & 12.55, 2.25 & 3.55 p.m. No Sunday delivery of letters.

Post, T., M. O., S. B. & A. & I. Office, Hopeman; Mrs. Jane McIntosh, postmistress. Letters should have Morayshire added. Deliveries, 8 & 11.45 a.m. & 6 p.m.; dispatches, 7.50 a.m. 12 noon & 2.15 & 3.55 p.m.; Sunday, dispatched 6.55 a.m.

Post & T. Office, Duffus; James McDonald, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Elgin. Delivery, 1 p.m.; dispatch, 7.50 a.m. The nearest money order office is at Hopeman, 2 miles distant.

CROMDALE is an extensive parish in the Strathspye district, and 4 miles north-east of Grantown (which lies in the south of this parish) is the village of Cromdale, where is the parish church; it is in the Nairn poor combination and Grantown small debt court district. Two railways run through the parish, the Highland to Forres and the Great North of Scotland to Rothes and Elgin; these have stations at Grantown and Cromdale respectively, and the latter railway also has one at Advie (which see). In the village are Established and United Free churches. At Balmenach, about a mile from the village, is the old established distillery of the Balmenach-Glenlivet Distillery Limited. The area of the entire parish comprises 63,354 acres; rateable value, £18,014 (including Grantown burgh); population in 1901 was 3,222, of which 1,568 were in Grantown-on-Spey burgh, and the population of Cromdale ecclesiastical parish, 695.

DYKE and MOY is a parish, bounded north-west by the Moray Firth and east and south-east by the Findhorn bay and river, and west by Nairnshire, now wholly in this county under an Order of the Boundary Commissioners, in Nairn poor combination and Forres small debt court district, and measures from north to south-west 7 miles, by a breadth of 3½. The village of Dyke is 4 miles west-by-south of Forres. The branch of the Highland railway from Nairn to Forres passes through the parish, and has a station at Brodie, 2 miles south of Dyke. The southern portion of the parish is occupied by part of Darawaay Forest, and the castle of the same name lies close to the border. There are two churches, an Established and a United Free, also a public school. The Earl of Moray, Ian Ashley Moreton Brodie esq. D.S.O. of Brodie Castle, Forres, Ian R. J. Murray Grant esq. Lieut.-Col. Norman MacLeod, of Dalvey, and the trustees of R. W. E. Grant esq. of Kincoth, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish, as altered, comprises 13,579 acres; rateable value, £3,882; the population in 1901 was 1,049.

EDINKILLIE is a parish south of Forrae and Rafford parishes, in the Nairn poor combination and Forres small debt court district. The river Divie, a tributary of the Findhorn, flows through the parish. The Dorboch, which unites with the Divie before its junction with the Findhorn, rises in Loch an Dorb in the south of the parish. The Highland railway passes from north to south through the parish, with stations at Dava and Dunphail, and crosses the Divie by a viaduct of seven arches, the height from the surface of the water to the rails being about 110 feet. There are several hills on the east side of the parish ranging about 1,500 feet. The woods of Darnaway on the west, and Alytre and Logie on the east, are very extensive. The church, which is in the centre of the parish, and about 9 miles south from Forres, stands on the banks of the Divie. Dunphail House, the residence of the Hon. Robert Bruce, stands a little north of the church, and near are the ruins of the old castle. The ruins of a castle also occupy an island in the loch. The Earl of Moray, Sir W. G. Gordon-Cumming bart. of Alytre, Forres, the Hon. Robert Bruce, of Dunphail, Mrs. Smith-Cumming, of Logie, and Major Alastair Bruce Murray are the principal landowners. The area comprises 35,322 acres; rateable value, £6,655; population in 1901 was 869 in the civil and 827 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ELGIN is a city and royal burgh and the capital of the shire, parliamentary burgh, a pariah and the seat of a presbytery in the synd of Moray, and is the head of a small debt court district, and within the Morayshire poor combination, 189 miles north of Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen and Huntly and 153 by way of Perth and Forres, 33 north of Brechin, 64 west of Aberdeen, 37 north-east of Inverness, 12 east-by-north of Forres and 9 west of Pochabers; pleasantly situated on the right bank of the river Lossie, about 6 miles above its mouth, and surrounded by hills clad with pine, beech, oak and elm trees. Railways from five different points meet here, viz.:—from Rothes on the south, Keith and Banff on the east, Lossiemouth on the north and Forres on the west; the lines from Keith and Forres being part of the Highland railway, the others Great North of Scotland. It is the general supposition that the town was originally a settlement of Helgy, a general of the army of Sigurd, the Norwegian Earl of Orkney, who, about the year 927, conquered Caithness, Sutherland, Ross and Moray, and it is said that from this person the name of Elgin is derived; and as the word "Helgyn" is still used in the inscription upon the seal of the town, it is probable that this etymology is correct. So early as the reign of William the Lion a castle was built here, the ruins of which are still visible on an eminence called Lady hill, on the north-west side of the town. A monumental column, erected by public subscription, in memory of the last Duke of Gordon, now stands on this hill. The royal burgh consists of parts of the parishes of Elgin, St. Andrews Lbanryde and New Spynie. The government is vested in a lord provost, four bailies, and 12 councillors, and the burgh, together with those of Banff, Cullen, Inverurie, Kintore and Peterhead, form the Elgin District of Burghs, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, returning one member to Parliament. The water supply, under the control of the Council, is obtained from Blackbills, 5 miles distant, and Eastertown, 2 miles.

The cathedral of the Holy Trinity, Elgin, now a majestic and beautiful ruin, belonged to the see of Moray, founded by Malcolm III. surnamed "Canmore," and for many years seated at Spynie, but in 1224 transferred to Elgin, which by that time had become a place of importance; in the same year also the cathedral was dedicated, but about 1240 received some damage, and in 1270 was injured by fire, and the necessary repairs involved various additions; in 1390 the fabric again suffered by fire at the hands of Alexander Stewart, Earl of Buchan, known as "The Wolf of Badenoch," and in 1402 was plundered by another chieftain: portions of the building were subsequently restored or rebuilt, but in 1658 the work of spoliation began, and the lead was stripped from the roofs in order to provide ammunition for the Scottish soldiers then campaigning in the Low Countries; in 1594 it was only in partial use, but up to 1640 services continued to be held within the ruins. The church, when complete, consisted of a choir of seven bays, with aisles of five bays, an octagonal chapter-house, approached through a vestibule from the north choir aisle, transepts, nave of six bays, with double aisles, south porch and central and western towers; the total length is 300 feet; the width across the nave, 98 feet, and through the transept, 114 feet. The earliest existing portions are the ends of the transepts, now only fragmentary, but representing the Transitional church of the 12th and early 13th centuries; the choir and the earlier part of the chapter-house date from 1270; the former is an extremely elegant example of Early English, the dog-tooth ornament being very freely employed; the chapter-house was restored in 1462, and still retains its clustered central pier and vaulting and the Gamboyant tracery of one window: the central tower was begun during the period 1397-1406, but in 1506 it fell, and its re-erection was not completed till 1538; in 1711, owing to the weakness of the later piers, it again fell, destroying or seriously injuring the north transept and the nave arcades adjoining: of the nave nothing is left but some of the bases of the piers, most of which have been restored: the western towers are now reduced to the belfry stage, and reach a height of 84 feet; between them is the western entrance, a fine and deeply recessed portal of eight orders, with much carved work, and enclosing a double doorway of later date with a vesica panel in the tympanum, the whole being highly enriched; over the entrance are three panelled gables, and the great west window above is an insertion of the early 16th century: another striking doorway is that of the south transept: in the choir and transepts are remains of a number of tombs of bishops and others, some of which retain more or less mutilated effigies: the sedilia are almost entirely destroyed, but piscinæ exist in several parts of the fabric, and in the choir stands part of the shaft of a Celtic cross, discovered in the town in 1823. In the graveyard to the south are the steps and shaft-base of a cross, and to the north-west stands the episcopal palace, built c. 1535-73, and till 1899 almost intact. The remains of the cathedral are now in charge of the Commissioners of Woods and Forests and are well cared for.

High street is about a mile in length; in the centre stands the Parish Church, a building in the Classic style, with a lofty tower at the east end: it will seat nearly 2,000; west of this, on the market pavement, is a fountain, and in the middle of the High street stands the "Muckle Cross," originally erected in 1650, destroyed in 1790 and rebuilt at the cost of William Macandrew esq. of Westwood, Essex, in 1888: it is hexagonal, with a centre shaft, from which all proclamations are made; there are several other places of worship.

The Academy, in Moray street, a building in the Classical style, with Roman-Doric portico, from the plans of Messrs. A. and W. Reid, of Elgin, was built in 1886, at a cost of £8,000, and a new wing for science teaching was added in 1901 at a cost of £2,500.

Anderson's Institution, constituted under the bequest of Major-General Andrew Anderson H.E.I.C.S. who left between £70,000 and £80,000 to found and endow an institution in his native town, for the support of old age and the education of youth; the existing structure, a fine building of stone in the Classic style, was erected at a cost of nearly £12,000, including furnishing; the school is now under the control of the School Board. Gray's Hospital, a fine building of stone with portico and dome, was founded under the will of Dr. Alexander Gray, of India, at a cost of £20,000, and was presented, about 1836, with £1,000 by Mr. John Munro, of The Knoll, Bishopmill, and in 1905, with £10,000, by the late James Shepherd esq. of Rossend Castle, Burntisland, while the estate of Flemington, in Inverness-shire, with a rental of about £240 per annum, was bequeathed by the late Dr. Urquhart, of Elgin, for the benefit of the hospital; there are 40 beds and 4 cots. Another fine building is the Elgin Club House, in Commerce street; this is in the Italian style, and contains some good rooms.

In North street are several fine buildings, including the Episcopal church of the Holy Trinity, built in 1829, and improved and enlarged in 1876: it affords sittings for 300 persons. Here also are the Trinity Lodge Rooms.

On the south side of the town stands the Town Hall, a building in the Jacobean style, with lofty tower, erected from plans prepared by Mr. A. Marshall Mackenzie, of Aberdeen. The Free Library, in Cooper Park, was founded in 1892, Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, presenting £500 for the purchase of books. The Mansion, in Cooper park, is now the library building, and the park, extending to about 70 acres, has been laid out for football, cricket, bowls and hockey, and also contains an artificial pond used for skating: both were presented to his native city by Sir George A. Cooper bart. of Hursley Park, Hants, and The College, Elgin, who also fitted up the interior. The reading room, lending and reference libraries, and the librarian's room are on the ground floor. The second floor comprises the museum and art gallery, and on the third floor are apartments for the librarian. The library now contains over 8,000 volumes.

The leading hotels are the Gordon Arms, in High street; the Station Hotel, facing the Great North of Scotland railway station, and Austin's Grand Hotel, in South street. Two newspapers are published here, the "Elgin Courant and Courier" and the "Northern Scot and Moray and Nairn Express." In High street are branches of the British Linen Bank, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, Bank of Scotland, North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, Bank of Scotland (formerly Caledonian Banking Co. Limited), Union Bank of Scotland Limited and Royal Bank of Scotland, and there is also a Savings Bank. The old and new court houses, also in High street, were built at different periods, the former about 1843, and the latter about 1861. The church and convent of the Greyfriars, long in ruins, was partly rebuilt by the late Marquis of Bute K.T. The Victoria School of Science and Art, erected as a memorial of the Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, is a building in the late Romanesque style, from a design by Mr. George Sutherland, Elgin, and cost about £3,000.

The trade of Elgin has been greatly increased by the opening up of railway communication. There are two woollen manufactories, which employ many hands, and two iron foundries and three saw mills. Of the other branches, a trade in corn, wool and timber is of some consequence, and there is a large tannery, while in the neighbourhood are the famous distilleries of Milton Duff, Glenlossie, Glen Moray, Coleburn, Linkwood, Glen Elgin and Longmorn, also several stone quarries. Alexander II. in 1224, granted to the burgesses of Elgin a guild of merchants, which still continues though the funds of the corporation were, for a considerable period, merged in the common good: connected with the guildry there is a flourishing charity fund from which decayed members and their families derive substantial pensions. There are several mineral springs in the vicinity of Elgin. The weekly corn markets are held on Friday: cattle auctions are also held every Friday. The feuing markets are 26th May, if Friday, if not, Friday before, the first Friday in July (harvest) and the Friday before the 28th November. The area of the parish comprises 19,166 acres; population in 1891, 9,285, and in 1901 was 10,277; royal burgh 8,260 and parliamentary burgh 8,407, including 22 officials and 185 inmates in the District Asylum. The total population of the police burgh drawn from three parishes (Elgin, St. Andrews Lhanbryde and New Spynie) was 8,407, and the number of inhabited houses, 1,608 in the former and 1,670 in the latter. The rateable value of the borough is £56,882; landward, £16,284. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1911, 1,286. The land in the city is chiefly freehold. In the parish and about 6 miles south-west of the town, on the left bank of the Lochy or Black Burn, are the ruins of Pluscarden Priory, partially restored in 1899 by the late Marquis of Bute K.T.

NEW ELGIN is a village in Elgin civil parish: the population in 1901 was 874.

FINDHORN, a small village seaport, lying on the northern headland of Findhorn bay, in the parish of Kinloss, Morayshire poor combination and Forres small debt court district, is virtually the port of Forres, from which it is distant in a northerly direction about 5 miles; it is the centre of the fishery trade of this portion of the coast, and has also a small coasting trade, chiefly in pit products, which are shipped to Newcastle and Sunderland. The harbour is well sheltered. Kinloss station, on the Highland railway, is distant about 3 miles, the line constructed from that station to Findhorn is now closed. There is a United Free church in the village, and also a Public library. The population in 1901 was 486.

KINLOSS is a parish on the Moray Firth, 3 miles from north to south, and the same in width, with a station on the Highland railway, and is in Morayshire poor combination and Forres small debt court district; the village is 2 miles north of Forres, and has an Established church and a school. Here, a short distance from the church, are the scanty remains of the Cistercian Abbey of Kinloss, founded in 1141 by King David I., and confirmed to the monks by papal bull in 1174; it was colonised by monks from Melrose in 1303, and the abbot was mired and sat in Parliament. King Edward I. once stayed at the abbey for nearly a month. Sir John Macpherson-Gunbart, of Ballindalloch Castle, Mrs. Dunbar-Dunbar, of Seapark, the Rt. Hon. R. C. Munro Ferguson M.P. of Novar, John Mackessack esq. J.P. of Kinloss, Alexander Brodie esq. of Lethen, Alexander Mathieson esq. J.P. of Lower Langoot, the trustees of the late William Mathieson esq. of Minton House, Montagn James Grant Peterkin esq. of Grange Hall, and R. H. Mackessack esq. of Woodside, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,184 acres: rateable value, £7,618; population in 1901 was 929.

Post Office, Kinloss; Mrs. Isabella Smith, sub-postmistress. Letters through Forres. Deliveries, 7.35 & 11.30 a.m.; dispatches, 7.45 a.m. & 2.30 p.m.; no saturday delivery of letters. Forres is the nearest money order office, & the nearest telegraph office is at Kinloss station

FOCHABERS is a small town and burgh of barony, in the parish of Bellie, Morayshire poor combination and Elgin small debt court district, 52 miles east of Inverness, 12 south-west of Cullen, 9 east of Elgin and 8 north-west-by-north of Keith, with a terminal station on a branch of the Highland railway from Orbiston, and another at Fochabers Spey, locally in Banffshire, and 4 miles north-east, on the Great North of Scotland Railway; situated on the north road from Aberdeen to Inverness, and lying in a deep valley, through which the Spey runs at a little distance to the west of the town, and is crossed by a stone bridge. The streets diverge from a square, on the south side of which stands the parish church. The water supply to the burgh was provided at the sole expense of the late Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., P.C. and the inhabitants have erected a fountain in the square to commemorate the gift. The streets are lit by electricity supplied from works at Oldmills, the property of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. and an electric lamp was erected in 1906 to the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. in appreciation of his Grace's generosity in introducing the electric light to the town. The burgh is governed by a baron baillie appointed by the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G. There are Episcopalian, Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. A new United Free church was erected in 1900, at a cost of about £3,000, left for the purpose by the late William Pringle esq. of Inverness, a native of this place. The Public Institute and Free Library was erected in 1905, at a cost of about £2,600; it is a fine building of stone, and contains a concert hall with stage scenery and fittings, a reference library, and reading and billiard rooms. At the west end of the town is a gate leading into the policies of Gordon Castle, the seat of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O. The Castle is a fine modern mansion, standing in an extensive deer park of over 1,200 acres: the present building is grafted on to the old tower of the Earls of Huntly, who held it from 1450 to 1684; it then stood in a gloomy morass (known as Bog of Gight), over which a stone causeway was the only means of access: this tower, which is 90 feet in height, now forms the most conspicuous feature in a large quadrangular building of four storeys, flanked by lower wings which are connected to the main building by long galleries; the interior contains many valuable pictures and some furniture. The Public baths here were the gift of the late Duchess of Richmond and Gordon. The Free school of the east end of the town, founded by Alexander Milne esq. a native of Fochabers, is a building in the Elizabethan style, erected at a cost of £4,338; by his will, dated New Orleans, 17th October, 1836, the founder bequeathed to the parishes of Bellie and Ordiquhai the sum of 100,000 dollars for establishing a free school; and a balance of about £17,000 was eventually invested in heritable security, and yields an annual income of about £550, by means of which 300 children are educated. A memorial fountain was erected in October, 1895, to Major Wilson, slain during the Matabele war of 1893. The population in 1901 was 981, and number of inhabited houses, 260.

BELLIE parish was formerly partly in Banffshire, but by an Order of the Boundary Commissioners it is now wholly in Elginshire; it is a flat agricultural district, bounded on the west by the river Spey, and extends about 5 miles from north to south and 9 from east to west; it is in the Morayshire poor combination. The Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O. and the Countess of Seafield, of Cullen House, are the principal landowners. The area of the entire parish comprises 12,927 acres; rateable value, £4,576; the population in 1901 was 2,102.

FORRES

FORRES is a royal burgh, in Morayshire poor combination, the head of a small debt court district, capital of the parish of its name and the seat of a presbytery; 201 miles north-by-west from Edinburgh by way of Aberdeen, 165 by way of Brechin and Huntly, 75 north-west of Aberdeen, 27 north-east of Inverness, 21 west of Fochabers, 20 east of Fort George, 12 west of Elgin and 11 east of Nairn, with a station on the Highland railway. It is a neatly-built, clean town, and stands on rising ground; at a distance of about 5 miles is the village of Findhorn, which is its seaport.
Forres possesses one of the most remarkable stone obelisks of ancient date in Britain; this interesting object stands at the east end of the town, and is supposed to commemorate a pacification concluded here between Malcolm II. and Sweno, a Danish invader, about the beginning of the 11th century: it is an enormous slab of grey stone, upwards of 20 feet in height, supported by a socket which conceals at least three feet more, and the shape resembles that of a very long wedge, or, as some fancifully describe it, a highland broadsword; the figures upon the obelisk, which are presumed to represent a battle and subsequent treaty, are wonderfully distinct, considering that they must have withstood the assaults of wind and weather during the last eight centuries. At the western extremity of the town, on an eminence, once stood a castle, wherein Duffus, one of the early Kings of Scotland, was perfidiously killed by Donald, governor of the fortress, which circumstance, it is said, Shakespeare has made use of in his dramatic version of the murder of King Duncan by Macbeth; and it was on the waste in the neighbourhood that that hero, along with Banquo (according to the old historians) met the "weird sisters," who gave him so many fatal promises. The exact spot on which that meeting is asserted by the country people to have taken place is marked by a small clump of trees, about 200 yards north from the post road between Forres and Nairn, near the toll bar, 5 miles from the former of these places, 1 1/2 miles from Brodie station and nearly on the confines of the two counties of Moray and Nairn. On the castle eminence is a granite obelisk to the memory of Dr.
Thomson, who sacrificed his life by over-exertion in his attention to the wounded

Russians after the famous battle of Alma.
Upon an eminence to the south-east of the town stands a tower, erected by the inhabitants of Forres in honour of Lord Nelson, the walk to which, as it winds round the hill, is extremely pleasant; from its elevated situation, a fine view is hence obtained, and the tower is conspicuous for a considerable distance. Sloping to the north, where the river Findhorn sweeps round from the south-west through the Forest of Darnaway, is a modern mansion, the seat of the Earl of Moray; adjoining it is the old Castle of Darnaway, in which is a fine hall, built by Earl Randolph, regent of Scotland during the minority of David Bruce, and capable of holding 1,000 men under arms. Here Mary Queen of Scots held her court in 1566. Altyra is the residence of Sir William G. Gordon-Cumming bart.; Brodie Castle, of Major Ian A. M. Brodie D.S.O., D.L., J.P. and San-quhar House, of Alexander Edward esq.
About 2 miles below the castle, the river, which debouches into Findhorn bay, is crossed by an elegant suspension bridge, which was erected by a joint stock company, in shares of £10 each. Forres is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 11 councillors, and unites with Nairn, Fortrose and Inverness in returning a member to Parliament, the present representative of the Inverness burghs being John Annan Bryce esq. M.A. A sheriff small debt court sits once in every two months for the recovery of debts not exceeding £20. The trade of Forres is not of an extensive character.
Dye works, manufactories for woollens, artificial manures, boots and shoes and bobbins, chemical works and flour mills being the principal branches. Three-quarters of a mile from the centre of the town is situated the Leucholl Hospital, erected in 1891, at a cost of between £6,000 and £7,000, for the burgh of Forres and the six adjoining parishes. The North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here. In the centre of the High street stands the Town House, a substantial structure, with a tower in the Scottish Baronial style surmounted by a spire; the building comprises the gaol, a court house, a council room &c.; and near to this stands a handsome Gothic market cross of four storeys, the lower one having eight pointed arches with angle brutresses surmounted by finials. A newspaper, the "Forres, Elgin and Nairn Gazette," is published every Wednesday.

Owing to the configuration of the country round about Forres, the burgh enjoys a remarkable immunity from rain, the rainfall for the past few years having been ascertained from accurate observations to be about the lowest in Scotland, and this circumstance, and the soil being porous, mark out Forres as an excellent health resort. Cluny Hill House, on one of the eminences in the vicinity of the town, was built for a hydropathic establishment.
There are two masonic lodges in the town.
There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free church, and others for Episcopalians and the Evangelical Union. Anderson's Institution, founded by Jonathan Anderson esq. a native of Forres, for educating children of the humble class from the parishes of Forres, Rufford and Kinloss, was built in 1824, and adjoins the institute; this school is now placed under the Forres School Board.
The Forres Public school stands opposite.
A Drill Hall for the A. Co. Morayshire Battalion of the Seaforth Highlanders was erected in 1910. The Mechanics' Institute, also in High street, possesses a library, a reading room and two public halls; the large hall will seat 1,000 persons. A corn market is held every Tuesday; cattle sales are also held in the auction mart every Tuesday. Feeding markets for hiring servants are held on the Saturday before the 28th of May (called Whitsunday market) and the Saturday before the 28th of November (called Martinmas market). The area of the parish comprises 5,440 acres; rateable value, of landward, £6,509; burghal, £21,794; the population in 1901 was 5,241, of which 4,313 are in the burgh. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1903 was 596, and in 1906 was 577. The Earl of Moray, Sir William G.
Gordon-Cumming bart. of Altyra, Montagu James Grant Peterkin esq. of Grange Hall, Kinloss, Mrs. Roney Dougal, of Ratho, Alexander Edward esq. of Sanquhar, Alastair Macpherson Grant esq. of Drum-dnan, the marriage contract trustees of the late R. D. Grant esq. of Thornhill, and Mrs. Grant are the principal land-owners of the parish.
